THE JUNCTION EAGLE

Volume XL. Junction, Kimble County, Texas, Friday, December 21, 1923. Number 35.

HENRY FORD.

In all the history of the world of finance, no man has ever even approached the phenominal success of the Detroit Automobile manufacturer.

Born at Greenfield, Michigan, 1863, he early showed an interest in manufacturing, but not until he was past forty did he organize his own business for carrying out his ideas. He was for a number of years chief engineer of the Edison Illuminating Co., and is today one of the closest friends of Thos. A. Edison.

In 1903, he organized the Ford Motor Co., and since that time has built and sold more than five million cars. More than 75,000 people are employed by him; his employees are the highest paid workers in the world; he maintains free medical, legal and social service bureaus for his employees and recently built the Henry Ford Hospital at a cost of $5,000,000.

He probably receives more personal mail than any other living man. Requests for charitable donations alone total more than 10,000 letters each week and the total amount solicited during the past year was around four million dollars.

His ideas of charity are very simple. He believes that the only way to help is to provide a means for them to help themselves. Carrying out this idea, he has continued to build factories, for many other lines besides the manufacturing of automobiles, that he may give employment to more men and women.

MRS. REBECCA MAINS DIED LAST TUESDAY.

Mrs. Rebecca Mains, for the past eighteen years a resident of this county, died at her home here last Tuesday, and was buried at the Junction Cemetery Wednesday afternoon.

Funeral services were conducted at the Methodist church by the pastor, R. E. Parker.

Deceased was born in Georgia, June 1, 1842, and came to Texas with her parents when a young girl. For many years the family lived in Bastrop County.

Four children, Wallace Mains and Mrs Lou Smart of Menard, and Mesdames Kate Cottle and M. E. Highsmith of Junction, and an adopted daughter, Miss Minnie Hill, survive her.

All the children, except Mrs. Smart were with her during her recent illness; Mrs. Smart was here until last Sunday when she returned to Menard. She and her little daughter became ill and were unable to be here for the funeral services.

Sympathy is extended.

Misses Willie Holdsworth and Nan Swayze, teachers in the school here, are in Kerrville to spend the holidays with home folks.

MRS. ANNIE HERBST FLEMING SUCCUMBS.

As reported elsewhere, Mrs. Annie Fleming was shot Tuesday at the O. B. Fleming ranch west of Telegraph. Although it was known that the wound inflicted by the .38 calibre automatic pistol bullet was a very serious one, it was thought until Thursday morning that she would recover. Prompt medical aid was given her and the physician was in attendance constantly until her death. She was conscious and talked freely with those about her until shortly before her death.

The body was embalmed Thursday afternoon and brought to Junction that night. The funeral procession left here at nine o'clock this morning for London where interment was made. Rev. R. E. Parker conducted the funeral services.

A large crowd from Telegraph Roosevelt and Junction, accompanied the body to London, where a still larger number were waiting to pay the last sad respects to this good woman who had been known and loved by them from childhood.

Deceased was daughter of Mrs. Theo. Herbst, of the Red Creek community, who, with three sons and five daughters, survive her. Her father died several years ago. She is also survived by a little son about three years old.

Few women had as many real friends as she; few had the kind and lovable disposition that she possessed; and only a few could be missed as she will be.

The Eagle joins her many friends in extending condolence to the bereaved relatives.

LOCAL DEALER DELIVERS FORDS.

The Junction Hardware Co., local Ford dealers, report the following sales and deliveries of cars and trucks:

W. H. Nethery, Four-door Sedan; Jim Stephen, touring car; Ben F. Simon, Roosevelt, truck.

They are receiving a shipment of Ford cars from Menard this week.

Wal Mains and family of Menard, were here the first few days of the week. Mr. Mains was called here when his mother became critically ill.

LOCAL MERCHANT IS PECAN ENTHUSIAST.

Some three or four years ago J. A. Heyman purchased about ten acres of land near the power dam, and has, during this time, done a considerable amount of improving on this tract.

This land had a number of large pecan trees, as well as many small ones. The small ones have been cut out until only a proper stand is left. Of those that are left, all but a few have been budded with the fancy paper-shell varieties, and within the next few years, will be producing a fine lot of extra fancy pecans.

During the past few days H. D. Henderson has been setting a tract of five or six acres with native trees, that will be budded next year. Some fifty trees have been set in this ground that will also be set in alfalfa and irrigated. Besides the natives that will later be budded, Mr. Heyman has bought a few of the Halberts, Success and Delmas varieties, and has had them set out among the small native trees.

This experimental work on the part of Mr. Heyman and several others who are becoming interested in growing fancy pecans, will prove profitable and it is predicted that within the next few years, many pecan orchards in this section yill be improved in a like manner and extra fancy pecans will be produced and sold at a considerable increase in price over the native pecans.

WEATHER PREVENTS ROOSEVELT PROGRAM

On account of the bad weather and muddy roads, the program of speaking, game and canning demonstration to be held at Roosevelt last Saturday was postponed to some future date, which will be announced.

Two games of basketball were played. One between the Junction and Roosevelt girls, resulting in a score of 19 to 21, and one between the Roosevelt regular boy's team and a mixed team of Roosevelt and Junction boys.

The girls' game was a very hard fought and interesting one and was played through without a mishap or squabble.

CHAMBER OF COMMERCE ELECTION POSTPONED.

The meeting called for Tuesday night for the purpose of electing officers for the coming year, had a rather light attendance, and it was decided to postpont the election until after the first of the year, when it is hoped representatives of all business concerns in the town will be sufficiently interested in the present an dfuture of the town and community to attend.

Although a number of unexpected circumstances arose to prevent a number of interested persons from attending, it was eviden tthat the spirit of "Let John do it, but let us have the benefit," was the attitude of a goodly number.

The teachers from the Institute attended the meeting.

Sandwiches and coffee were served, and a prospective military school for this county was discussed.

Mr. Hensley and Miss Katie Wilson entertained the members and visitors with a number of songs.

TRAGEDY OCCURS NEAR TELEGRAPH.

Word was received here about two o'clock Tuesday afternoon that Mrs. Annie Fleming of the Telegraph community was in a critical condition. Numerous rumors were heard about town.

Later in the day it was learned that Mrs. Fleming had been shot in the left shoulder with a .38 caliber automatic. The bullet entered just to the left of the neck and ranged downward.

No details of the tragedy were available.

Homer Fleming came to Junction Tuesday night and surrendered to the officers. A complaint charging assault to murder was filed against him.

He is being held at the county jail without bond. Up to time of going to press, no examining trial had been requested by his attorneys.

D. Q. Adams and family were in Junction on business Thursday from their ranch near the head of North Llano.

W. H. Kelley, Sutton County Commissioner, was a business visitor here the first of the week.

JOHN D. ROCKEFELLER

The world renowned oil magnate's full name is John Davidson Rockefellow. He was born at Richford, New York, and is now more than eighty-four years of age. He had only a common school education and started life a very poor boy. His first business venture was as a member of the firm of Clark & Rockefellow, Commission Merchants, at the age of nineteen years.

A few years later the firm entered the oil refining business, which was the foundation of the enormous fortune which he accumulated. The Standard Oil Trust was formed in 1882 and separated into a number of divisions in 1892, with Mr. Rockefellow at the head.

In 1911 he retired from active association with the oil industry and since then has given his time to philanthropic work. Until the rapid rise of Henry Ford in the financial world, he was generally recognized as the rich est man in the world.

It is estimated that up to 1921 he had given to charitable and philanthropic work more than $500,000,000, about four-fifths of which went to four charitable corporations, viz.: Rockefellow Foundation, General Education Board, the Laura Spellman Rockefellow Memorial and the Rockefellow Institute of Medical Research.

His son, John D. Rockefellow Jr., is now active head of these institutions.

MRS. F. M. CHASE DIES AFTER LONG ILLNESS.

Mrs. Hattie Scoggin Chase, wife of F. M. Chase, and for sixteen years a resident of Junction, died at a sanitarium in San Antonio, at 11:00 o'clock a. m., December 19t. The body was brought to Junction Thursday. Funeral services were conducted at the Methodist church by her pastor, R. E. Parker, and interment made at the local cemetery Friday afternoon.

Mrs. Chase was born in Killeen, Texas, January 11, 1882. At the age of seventeen, she became a member of the Methodist church. In 1899, she married F. M. Chase at San Angelo.

For nearly two years she has been seriously ill and on many occasions all hope of her recovery were lost, but a few months ago she seemed to improve and was brought back to her home here after several months in a San Antonio hospital.

On Friday of last week she was again taken to the hospital where she died Wednesday.

She is survived by her husband, a daughter, Irene, her mother, Mrs. L. F. Alexander, of Kirkland, a sister Mrs. P. M. Kennedy of Quanah, and a half sister, and two step-brothers.

Sympathy is extended to the bereaved relatives.

E. P. Furr, London grocery merchant, was here on business Wednesday.

MAYFIELD IS GIVEN FULL ENDORSEMENT.

In equally ardent adoption of motions the Democratic State Executive Committee of Texas Saturday indorsed Pat M. Neff, Governor of Texas, for the Democratic nomination for the presidency and the position Earle B. Mayfield occupies as junior United States Senator from Texas.

There was only a brief flurry when Governor Neff was indorsed at the morning session. There was tension when at an unexpected moment toward the close of the seesion Charles B. Metcalfe of San Angelo offered a resolution indorsing Earle B. Mayfield as Democratic Senator from Texas.

Judge Barry Miller of Dallas, close friend for many years of former United States Senator Charles A. Culberson and bitterly opposed to the Mayfield candidacy until the last vote had been counted in the general election, urged the committee in an impassioned address of few words to let the committee "remain free from entangling difficulties of an expression on the status of Earle B. Mayfield as member from Texas in the Senate of the United States."

Waco was selected as the meeting place of the State convention to select delegates to the national Democratic convention. There was no opposition to that city.

THE RING IS FILLING UP WITH SOMBREROS.

(By Will Rofer in the San Antonio Express.)

As I go to press away out here in the mortgaged spaces where every man is either in jail or the movies or in Escrow, I pick up my morning paper and start in to review the political situation, as it effects the honest man. Talk about Hats in the Ring! Why, yesterday it just rained hats.

Senator Hiram Hearst Johnson, late of California, just yanked his old sombrero off and, after brushing the second choice dust of various Campaigns from its wrinkled folds, decided that it would be able to weather another convention defeat. The dull thud of its landing in the Political Soup had hardly sounded around the world when William Jiggs McAdoo decided that he was bareheaded from now until the Democrats meet next June to pick their worst man.

So, as I go to press, I am the only Resident of glorious sunburned California that still has his hat on.

Mind you, this was not all the days gathering of hats. This was only California's contribution to our National Rubbish pile. Other States have littered the entire premises of the Garbage Ring with every known and unknown form of headgear from Senator Underwood's old black flopped brim (nearly beaver) with the scent of the julep fresh on its crown to the Radiator capped slopes of Michigan, where they are ready to contribute the one Man top of their Favorite Son.

We spend Millions of dollars every 10 years trying to collect the Census of this Inglorious Commonwealth of America, when all we would have to do is to wait until a Presidential year, and then count the candidates.

Mr. Cox of Ohio is the only name in America that has gone through this entire year without the smirch of a Presidential insinuation.

This having been a year of Prehistoric unearthings even the roofing of William Darwin Bryan has been again cast asunder and lit just casually on the edge of the enclosure, where it will await the verdict next June of some 5 thousand uninstructed Chimpanzees.

Kareful Kal Koolidge, with the usual New England thrift, throws nothing into a Ring, not even a Hat, until he is sure it will be returned with 75 thousand a year interest. He got so used, as Vice-President, to have no one pay attention to what any of them said, that he can't realize that we might listen to him now.

I thought for a while the way Lloyd George was complimenting us over here, that he might possibly be considering tossing that old Welsh Cap of his onto the White House Lawn. But, I, along with other various slow thinking citizens of our land, find that he didn't come here just to put wreathes on England's Foes of former days out of any particular love for them. He knew that we are the Champion Yap Nation of the World for swallowing propoganda.

He read the life of Lincoln coming over on the boat, and we marveled at his knowledge and admiration of our great Commoner. Perhaps he used the same Adjectives that he had many times applied to Cromwell in England. His next jump was direct to Mount Vernon to the Tomb of Washington.

Now, You know what he thought of Washington. You know what Firpo thinks of Jack Dempsey.

He is a Superior Politician. Instead of going through the country doing the old Gag and kissing the babies of the Voters he pulled a new one. He visited the graves of our departed Heroes who he knew were dear to us, and he complimented them and told what they would do for civilization if they were alive today. He knew they couldn't raise up and deny it. You didn't hear him complimenting any of our living, did you?

He is a wonderful little man; a marvelous personality and the greatest Salesman that England ever sent over here. He is so good that he nearly sold us another war.

England is always sending some Big Man over here claiming they come just sightseeing and only want to see the country. But you can't see this Country from a Speaker's Platform inside a Hall.

Now, for some unknown reason we had Ambassador Harvey returned to us. I look for Ex-Ambassador George to tear off his powdered wig which he used on State occasions over around the King, and cast it into the Political Mud Hole. Mr. Harvey would make us a good social President. He could tell you at what hour tea should be served.

I am glad Mr. McAdoo has come out in the open and declared himself. I had a very pleasant evening over at hos Home in Los Angeles just before he went east the last time. I thought I would get all the political news from him and find out if he was really going to run. He showed me all over the house. He seemed to be more interested in how cheap he had gotten it than in who was to be President. We had a lovely dinner, and here is one of the Drys. He had nothing to even offer for drinks. Well, that was such a Novelty I feel that it is worth mentioning.

After seeing how modest he lived and the way he talked as though a Dollar was really a Dollar, I related conversations I had heard during his Term in office that he would "after holding all the authority, and controlling all that money, retire the richest man in the country." It was not political enemies but people that really thought—here is a man that has a chance to clean up.

He laughed and told me the real story of how he had to retire from the Cabinet because he simply had no more money to maintain his position on. Here he was, handling and paying out the most colossial sums ever dreamed of during the war, and he had to borrow money on his small insurance policy to keep his children in school.

I sai dto him: "Why, if I handled all that dough I would manipulate around someway to raise my Salary privately or casually sweep out a couple of Billion Dollar Bills." "No, Will, there is so much red Tape you can't get a cent—even the Secretary of the Treasury."

Maybe that is the true story of why he resigned. Now he wants another office where there is not so much Red Tape.

He is back lawing for his living. That's one thing these Politicians, when they can't make politics pay, can always fall back on—the honorable practice of law.

Whatever we can say about graft and the thousands of Millionaires that was made by the war, you can rest assured that the Treasurer who handled all the Money come out broke. So, if Bill is lucky enough to get back into Washington, I want to see him get a position this time where he will be able to get a hold of something.

I asked him about the Railroads. He said all he got out of that was his name on the Towels.

So from what I learned from him the Cabinet Jobs don't look so good to me. These U. S. Senators look to be about the best graft, as there is no one to watch them. Guess the people figure that the class of men they send to the Senate would get caught if they took anything, whetether they had any one watching them or not.

SUCCESSFUL SETS FOR WOLVES AND COYOTES.

The following article by Chas. N. Tunnel appeared in last week's Mason County News and will be of interest to those who are bothered with wolves and who expect to trap for them:

"Various methods and devices have been used to trap the cunning wolf and coyote, but only the best sets will prove available. In the first place, all trace of human scent must be destroyed by wearing gloves at all times while making the sets and handling the traps. These gloves and the trappers' shoes must be rubbed well with tallow or beeswax and occasionally fresh blood from birds, rabbits or some butchered animal.

"One of the best sets and the easiest to make is the trail set. In order to make this set, take a fresh killed rabbit or any fresh killed meat, and slit a few times with a knife, then when you are within a mile of the place you wish to make the set, drop the bait to the ground and drag it along with a strong cord or wire. Make a large circle circle around the the place you are make the set and lead the trail between bushes and clumps of grass so if the wolf trails the bait he will be forced to pass between such places. This is an ideal place to make a set, but never set the trap directly in the trail, as the wolves will not walk on the trail, but always to one side of it. Hollow out a small place the size of the trap, and after setting it, then cover it lightly with grass or leaves, but it is better if the ground is nearly bare to place a piece of paper just larger than the trap jaws over them, and cover with dirt. Take care not to leave the set looking fresh, and if fresh dirt is around, carry it away. Sprinkle a little blood around the set, then leave it as natural as possible.

"Another good way of making a trail set is to drag the bait up a hole or a den, and drop a small piece into the den, scrape a little dirt over the part of the bait which is in the den and set the trap in the mouth of the hole. The wolf will try to scratch out the bait and get caught. After making the circle, and setting about two traps on the trail, then select the place to make the main set. A bush is a good place; set the bait back into the bush, and set the trap several feet in front of the bait. Lay a small cup or something on either side of the trap to make a path for the wolf or coyote to step into. Directly in front of the set trap place a very small twig about the size of a match, so the wolf will step over it into the trap, as they will not step on anything if placed in their way. Do not leave a freshly broken twig or they will become suspicious and shy off from the trap set for them.

"Wolves are close observers, and like to look over the surrounding country, therefore a good place to make sets for them is on some high knoll where they hunt to watch around them. Any kind of a fresh meat bait is good for such a set, but do not place it out of its natural order. If a bird or rabbit is hung high up on a pole or tree, then the traps should be a considerable distance from the bait, as wolves will not approach the bait, but will circle around it, and get caught while doing this. Such a place as this is especially desirable to make a set is just before a snow storm, for wolves will go to the high snowdrifts to look about them. If the trap is covered in snow, so much the better, for then all trace of human scent is gone, and if the bait is covered up they will scratch it up, or if fresh bait is desired it can be dragged up to the place without disturbing the set trap.

Campers often attract wolf packs, and after the camp is deserted wolves come pilfering around picking up scraps and scratching in the old camp fire. Trappers who cook their dinner while on the trap line can make a very successful set by setting a trap under the ashes of the camp fire after the heat has left, but never make the set before, for heat will draw the temper from the trap. Meat scraps placed under the trap will cause the wolves to dig into the ashes and hence into the trap.

Wolves usually have a certain range and they stay with it pretty well, and also set habits. By a detailed study of their habits they are easy to outwit, but skill and care must also be used in skinning and stretching their furs after the catch.

"Wolves must always be skinned whole, and it is best to stretch fur side out. Steel stretchers are preferred, but if not available, good ones are easy to make from soft board shaped the size of the wolf's body. After the furs have been dried for three weeks in a suitable place, they are ready for the market."

GREETINGS

Nineteen hundred and twenty-three years ago there was born in Bethlehem of Judea, a child who was destined to exert a more profound influence on the people of the world than any one who had ever lived before or who would live after him.

This birth was heralded as an event of "Glad Tidings of Great Joy," and ever since that time, those who follow the teachings of Christ, have much to make them glad and they have passed this spirit of gladness on to others. The Christian world is about ready to observe this time of gladness and good cheer. Christmas is near at hand and in keeping with custom and our convictions, we take this occasion to feel glad—glad that we are priviledged to live in this great free country; glad that we are among friends whose loyalty and encouragement is an inspiration; glad to be well and happy and to see a bright star in the future that we know will guide us on; glad to have this opportunity to thank our subscribers and advertisers for the business given us in the past, and to wish for one and all

As a newspaper, we appreciate this splendid array of greetings from these good customers of our to their customers, and we believe our readers will think more kindly of those who have shown their customers and friends that they appreciate the business given them.

HOLIDAY GREETINGS

The Eagle is a day late this week on account of an extra amount of word, and to the fact that the local light plant had a break-down Wednesday, which prevented use of the current for operating machinery in our plant. By hard work the break was repaired at the plant as quickly as possible and the current on again Wednesday night.

We are publishing the Edwards County Leader for a few weeks, until Mr. Dollahite gets his plant in operation, and in order to get his paper to Rocksprings for mailing this week, we had to take time to print them Thursday.

This will be the last issue of The Eagle for 1923. As has been our custom, we will take next week off to do numerous repairs at the plant and catch up with numerous details that have had to be neglected for several weeks.

While we will not issue a paper, some one will be at the office most of the time to take care of any emergency printing. The next issue will be on January 4th, and will begin the 41st year of newspaper history in Kimble County. During the years the paper has weathered many storms and changed hands often, until 1919, when the Junction Publishing Company was organized and the name "The Junction Eagle" given the paper, which has been published regularly since that time, and with very little changes in the stock of the corporation.

The current issue of the Kerrville Mountain Sun, which is a big 24-page Christmas edition, is the beginning of its forty-first year of service to the Hill Country. According to the statement in this issue, there has been more than a score of editors at the helm at different times, but it has always retained the same name.

For many years the paper was owned and edited by J. E. Grinstead of Grinstead's Graphic fame, then more recently by Messrs. C. E. Salter and J. L. Tullis. Last year Mr. Salter and a brother, W. A., purchased the plant and have since been its editors and publishers.

They are giving the people of Kerrville and Kerr County a newspaper that is in every way meeting their needs and we congratulate Messrs. C. E. and W. A. Salter on this, the fortieth birtday of the paper, and upon the splendid edition that marks the beginning of another year.

We should like to have report of all ivestock transactions. When you buy or sell something phone or write us. Livestock news is interesting to home people and will benefit the county in showing the outside traders that there is some livestock activity here, and will help to bring buyers here. When you sell or buy livestock, let us know. Prices and terms may be omitted if desired.

MAN ACCIDENTALLY SHOT WHILE HUNTING.

While hunting with a party of other men, in the Alfred Hodges pasture about 8 miles up South Llano, R. E. Knox, of Leander, Texas, was mistaken for a turkey and shot about 3 o'clock Wednesday afternoon.

He and his son-in-law, Howard Ragsdale, had left the camp together and had been out only a short time when they saw some turkeys. They separated and each were looking through the underbrush for the turkeys and attempting to get a shot. Only a few minutes after they separated, Mr. Ragsdale fired at what he thought was a turkey, and on going to the spot found Mr. Knox in a dying condition. He spoke only a few words and died before help could be called.

The bullet entered the body just behind the left shoulder and ranged toward the center of the body, probably breaking his back. The other men, one of whom was a doctor, were still in camp and were quickly called to the scene.

Justice of the Peace E. Holekamp and County Attorney F. E. Knetsch, were called and held a coroners inquest, and Mr. Holekamp pronounced the death due to accidental gun shot.

Mr. Knox is a former citizen of this county. About a year ago he and his family moved from the Cedar Creek community to Leander, where he had lived before coming here.

The body was carried to Leander Thursday for burial.

AS Children we come again to Christmas ---to the Spirit of "Peace on Earth, Good Will Among Men"---to a big brotherhood

This hallowed day is short---too short; but it is our merriest, because we are experiencing the joys of giving---that creed brought to us nearly two thousand years ago, when the Star of Bethlehem shined forth above a mager-cradle in the land of Judea.

Why the Sober Man Did Smile

By MARTHA B. THOMAS

Boarding House Christmas Party Had a Very Happy Ending for Two

What He Asked and Her Answer Should Be an Easy Guess

IT WAS Christmas Eve at Mrs. Cummings' boarding house. In the interval between two string beans, Miss Billings observed to the rest of the diners that it was nice to have friends at this season. No one denied it. Of the seven places at the table one was vacant, that belonging to Vesta Blaine.

"Miss Blaine," continued Miss Cummings a little wistfully, "always has such a delightful time at holidays. She has so many pleasant acquaintances. And of course," she hesitated to give emphasis to what was coming, "she is getting a good deal of attention from that young man."

No one had any comments to make. But a serious-faced man at the other end of the table seemed to be very grave indeed; he bent a concentrated regard upon his plate, as though the contents might yield some secret which he hunted.

"A real Christmas Eve!" chanted Vesta Blaine. Her eyes were like stars; her cheeks bright with color; she looked like a flower set down in a vegetable garden. The other boarders were a bit older, a bit more tired, a bit disillusioned; they drank their sunshine from the exuberant girl, and wondered how she could come home at night still bubbling with high spirits and fun.

"It's snowing!" continued Vesta, darting a smile at the sober man, who apparently was not aware of his good fortune, for he never looked up. "That soft sift of feathers that comes down like . . . like"—she hunted for an adequate simile—"like prayers of the angels! Only prayers are supposed to go up, aren't they!" she laughed at her own conceit. "The trees are like dreams behind white veils, and the street lamps are orange moons! I love it. Do pass me the butter, somebody. I'm hungry enough to eat shredded hairpins!"

Everybody did their best to make Vesta comfortable, even the scrap of a maid who waited on the table. Miss Blaine offered her pepper and salt twice, and the landlady asked if she preferred her roast beef well or medium done.

"I'm going to a party tonight!" announced Vesta after a few mouthfuls to fortify her wants, "the very best party ever perpetrated."

Miss Billings smiled her interest and asked where.

"Oh, not very far from here; and"—she paused, looking around the table with a curious glance—"you're all invited! That's why it's the best party—because it's got the nicest folks coming to it!"

Vesta Blaine Went to the Front Door, Opened It.

What a hubbub there was then! Everybody asked five questions at once and none found out the answer. Miss Billings quivered with excitement. Mrs. Cummings waved the carving knife and nearly took off a slice from the sober man's nose. Finally, Vesta stood up, commanded silence, tapped importantly on the table with a silver spoon, and began:

"Ladies and gentlemen, you are earnestly requested, cordially invited and definitely ordered to clothe yourself in radiant raiment after dinner, and then wait for me in the hall. No one shall be allowed to say 'no.' Penalty for disobedience is so horrible I can't even mention it!"

And ready they were as soon as they could jump into their best and assemble in the hall. The sober man was the last to appear. He looked as though he did not dare stay away. That's the best that could be said about him. But the rest were laughing and talking in happy expectation.

Vesta Blaine went to the front door, opened it, made strange signs with her hands, and in there tramped a big, blustering giant of a fellow dressed like Santa Claus. He had a nobby pack on his back, and appeared to have every intention of unloading it at Mrs. Cummings' boarding house.

"This way," said Vesta and led him into the parlor. The rest followed.

"For mercy's sakes!" exclaimed Miss Billings.

"Gracious me!" breathed Mrs. Cummings. She did not know her own parlor—and no wonder. There was a big Christmas tree standing in the middle. It reached to the ceiling and blazed with small electric bulbs. More than that, there were seven single stockings suspended in a row from the mantle. Everybody squealed when they discovered their own.

Santa heaved down his pack and out tumbled a bushel of gifts, each wrapped up in paper and marked with a name.

"Each person pick up seven parcels and put them in the stockings. You'll find the names to correspond!" called out Vesta Blaine. "No lagging! A fine for being the last one!"

That parlor full of boarders resembled a small army of squirrels scrambling about in a heap of nuts. Everybody got in everybody's way; everybody laughed—even the sober man was guilty of a happy look around his eyes.

At last the seven stockings were bulging with gifts; they swayed gently back and forth in all the energy of their recent filling.

"Select your own stockings!" shouted Vesta Blaine like a general ordering his troops into battle, "and open your presents!"

It just happened by the merest chance that Vesta and the sober man

"How Did Anyone Know I Wanted That Book?"

were seated on the sofa together. They shook out their stockings into a mutual heap and began to untie the strings and rip off the seals.

"Look here," said the sober man sternly, "how did anyone know I wanted that book?" and he held out a thin, leather-bound volume toward Vesta.

"You said you did, once last summer," answered Vesta a little shyly.

"Caesar's ghost!" he whistled, "and you remembered?"

"Yes," nodded Vesta.

This affirmation seemed to concern the sober man very much.

"Why?" he asked after a moment's consideration.

"Oh," replied the girl, "I just wanted you to have what . . . you wanted to have!"

This afforded the sober man more food for thought.

"I didn't even know you were aware of my existence. I used to bet with myself that if it came to a pinch and you had to introduce me, you could not tell my name. You're so popular, and that sort of thing, that I thought—" he was unable to finish.

Vesta made a gesture as if she threw caution to the winds. "Listen to me," she said. "You're the most interesting person here; I hated not ever having a word with you about books. That's one reason I had this party. I hoped you'd talk to me a little. You always looked so bored when I came in, and I was sorry. I'm not so frivolous as I seem. My father—the man playing Santa Claus—is owner of the London Book Shop here; I'm working there just to learn something of the business. It's Dad who's really back of the party. I just did the suggesting. He's a perfect old dear. I wanted to try being a regular shop girl, so I came here to board, and it's been the greatest fun. I did not mean to deceive people too much, but really"—here she permitted herself a tiny gurgle of mirth—"Miss Billings got so frightfully interested in a man who was paying me such attention, and of course it was no one but Dad, who came now and then to give me some pleasure at the theater or a concert . . ."

She stopped from lack of breath.

The sober man beamed. You would never believe that an expression could change the way his did. It was like a dawning, a new light spread upon his face.

What happened after this is almost too confusing for description.

Santa unmasked and was introduced to everybody. Such a thanking and explaining! Such a happy, laughing group! Miss Billings discovered she could play the piano and Mr. Blaine swung out first with Mrs. Cummings, who fluttered like a girl at her first party. The rest whirled in with great fervor.

If anyone had been looking sharply for the happiest couple, I think Vesta and the sober man would have been selected. What he said to her is nobody's business, but what she answered—and [illegible] settled soon.

Severe Indigestion

"I had very severe attacks of Indigestion," writes Mr. M. H. Wade, a farmer, of R. F. D. 1, Weir, Miss. "I would suffer for months at a time. All I dared eat was a little bread and butter. . . consequently I suffered from weakness. I would try to eat, then the terrible suffering in my stomach! I took medicines, but did not get any better. The druggist recommended and I decided to try it, for, as I say, I had tried others for two or more years without any improvement in my health. I soon found the Black-Draught was acting on my liver and easing the terrible pain.

"In two or three weeks, I found I could go back to eating. I only weighed 123. Now I weigh 147—eat anything I want to, and by taking Black-Draught I do not suffer."

Have you tried Thedford's Black-Draught? If not, do so today.

TEACHERS' INSTITUTE ADJOURNS WEDNESDAY.

The Edwards-Kimble County Teachers' Institute turned out to be only a Kimble County Teachers' Institute, as the teachers from Edwards County did not attend on account of bad roads between Junction and Rocksprings.

The Institute opened Monday morning, County Attorney Fred Knetsch presiding. The program was carried out as completely as was possible under the circumstances, as practically half the assignments were to teachers from Edwards County.

Monday night the chairman of the State Board of Examiners delivered an address, directing most of his remarks to an explanation and approval of the Free Textbook law. He came instead of State Superintendent S. M. N. Marrs, who was scheduled to be here.

Although the attendance was light and the time cut short, those attending derived much of benefit from the association with other teachers and from the numerous subjects discussed

HENRY FORD IS BACKING COOLIDGE.

Detroit, Mich., Dec. 19.—Henry Ford on Wednesday, said that he, "like a great majority of the American people," feels that the country is safe with Coolidge, and that he himself would never consider running against Mr. Coolidge on any ticket.

"I believe it is the wise and natural thing for the people to agree on the nomination and election of Mr. Coolidge," Mr. Ford said. "I am satisfied that 90 per cent of the people feel perfectly safe with Coolidge, and I feel, too, that the country is perfectly safe with him. And if this is the feeling of the country, why change?"

"Mr. Coolidge has shown in these months of service a great many qualities that should please his countrymen. I think they all feel that Mr. Coolidge means to do right. And when a man means to do right, so far as I have observed, it is usually quite easy for him to find the way to do right.

"Some people seem disturbed over the conditions which business will face during the presidential election year. Of course there must be an election. But there is no reason why business should be disturbed by it, if the people by common consent agree they will hold to a good man while they have him. Public sentiment can be so formed long before the election that there need be no doubt about the election.

'In addition to considering the interests of the people, we should consider the interests of the President, as head of the American Government. Presi- Coolidge has a position of the highest responsibility. He should not feel compelled to take any of his time or strength for any sort of political campaigning, and for the sake of the country as well as for his own sake, he should not have to do so."
