Loser of Duel Threatens To Shoot Wife, Then Turns Gun on Officer

HUGO, Okla., Feb. 6 (AP)—J. L. Jacks, 50, of Hugo, was killed and Monroe Taggart, deputy sheriff from Daingerfield, Morris county, Texas, was wounded in a gun duel today in the lobby of a hotel here.

Officers said the shooting apparently resulted from efforts of Taggart, staying at the hotel while on special work, to protect Mrs. Mattie Jones, divorced wife of Jacks, from him.

Physicians corroborated Taggart's statement that Jacks fired the first shot, declaring that he was paralyzed by the bullet from Taggart's gun, which struck him in the neck, and could not have fired after he had been wounded.

Jacks had broken in the door of his former wife's room and threatened to shoot her, witnesses said.

A charge of murder will be filed against Taggart, the county attorney said. Taggart's wound, in the right shoulder, is not serious.

SNOW TODAY IS 'POSSIBILITY'

Temperature Drops Sharply Wednesday Night

With cold, cloudy weather predicted for Thursday, the thermometer dropped below the freezing mark at 6 o'clock Wednesday evening and continued on the downward path to an early hour Thursday morning. Snow is also forecast as a possibility in this region.

Temperatures of seven degrees above zero at Texline, 10 at Amarillo, and 15 at Childress were reported by the Fort Worth and Denver dispatcher at 9 o'clock Wednesday evening. Snow flurries were reported near Texline and a cold north wind also reported from that part of the state.

Toward Abilene and Fort Worth the weather was reported practically the same as in Wichita Falls. The thermometer reading here at 5 o'clock Wednesday afternoon was 33 degrees. An hour later the freeze set in, and by 7 o'clock the heavy mist was freezing on the windshields of automobiles.

The heaviest drop in temperature came between 7 and 8 o'clock when the thermometer droped to 26. Soon after that the heavy mist cleared away but the sky remained cloudy. Between 8 o'clock and midnight the thermometer dropped to 24 degrees and was still slowly going down at an early hour Thursday.

YOUNG COUNTY SENATOR'S PEN BILL LOSES

Cousins' Measure Reported Favorably Over McFarlane's Plan

STORMIEST SESSION

Holbrook and Graham Lawmaker Engage in Hot Word Clashes

AUSTIN, Feb. 6 (AP)—In the session's stormiest senate gathering the committee on state penitentiaries voted today to report the Cousins prison reform bill favorably with the request that the Holbrook and McFarlane measures be printed on minority reports.

The vote for the Cousins measure was 7 to 6, with supporters of the Holbrook administration bill voting no.

The measure provides that the prison system be centralized on the Darrington farm in Brazoria county, retention of the southern farms, sale of the northern farms and for a main prison at Huntsville.

Russek Vote Protested

Russek registered his "aye" on the motion over the protest of Holbrook who said "you promised me you'd support my bill."

This climaxed two hours of heated discussion in which each faction strove to take advantage of preliminary tactics and the Cousins moves, engineered by Wirtz, were successful.

Holbrook charged that McFarlane, chairman of the committee, was ineligible for that post because he was an "interested party." McFarlane overruled the objection. Holbrook moved to override McFarlane's decision and the Graham senator held a ruling of the chair could not be upset.

At one point, Holbrook declared "I have the votes and I want a fair chance to register them."

"Fair Play" Assured

Another time he warned McFarlane that he demanded "fair play."

"By the eternal gods you shall have it," McFarlane replied.

The final vote showed Williamson, Deberry, Miller, Russek, Small and Wirtz voting with Cousins; Hornsby, Stevenson, Witt, Woodul, Beck and Holbrook voting "no."

No support, other than that of the author, was offered the McFarlane plan which would retain the penitentiary and two of the northern farms as well as the southern farms, which Cousins would keep.

Wirtz's assertions caused Holbrook to take the floor.

"The gentleman from Seguin can't dominate the legislature," Holbrook said. "The people must be heard. Governor Moody ran on the platform of concentrating the system as my bill provides and he was elected by an overwhelming majority."

MURDER RANCH CASE TO JURY

Northcott Called Most Fiendish Slayer

RIVERSIDE, Calif., Feb. 6 (US)—Gordon Stewart Northcott, 21-year-old Wineville rancher, heard himself characterized as the most fiendish slayer ever to be brought before a bar of justice as the state made its opening argument to the jury late today.

Northcott, in the role of his own attorney, will follow the prosecution and declares that he will take at least three hours tomorrow in telling the jury why it should not hang him for the alleged murder of the four young boys on his poultry ranch.

Deputy District Attorney Earl Redwine will then deliver the state's closing argument, and it is expected the case will go to the jury some time late tomorrow.

Special Prosecutor I. C. Hutton, in his statement to the jury, outlined in detail the state's charges against the accused youth. He told how Walter Collins had disappeared from his Los Angeles home and was killed on Northcott's farm. He told of the disappearance of Lewis and Nelson Winslow, Pomona boys, and how they, too, had been slain by Northcott; and he also told how the body of an unidentified headless Mexican boy was found near Puenta.

Kelley charged Northcott with slaying this boy also.

Kelley also declared in his address that Mrs. Sarah Louise Northcott, the accused youth's mother, aided him in killing many of the allegedly murdered boys.

Judge Freeman charged the jury there were only three verdicts they could return, as follows:

Not guilty, guilty with recommendation, guilty without recommendation.

CRABB FEARS DEATH

Schemer Stayed in Jail To Avoid Possible Violence From Defendant

DALLAS, Feb. 6. (AP)—Ben C. Richards, Jr., prominent Dallas business man on trial for forgery here, today heard himself accused of engineering a $2,000 fraud, and then attempting to throw the blame on a friend killed because of the scheme.

A. A. Crabb, as Clyde R. Vest, the mystery man of the Mathews election bet slaying here last September, whose story had never been told, held the stand all day and kept the spectators on edge as he unraveled a tale of an amazing intrigue that backfired.

Slaying Resulted

The state charges that Richards, after losing an election bet on the Connally-Mayfield senatorial race to V. Ray Adams of Bartlett and W. T. Ramsey, Jr., of Belton, "welched" the bet by sending Crabb, carrying forged credentials, to Orville Mathews, stakeholder, to collect. When Adams appeared later to collect the bet and Mathews explained that the money had been paid, an argument ensued which ended in Mathews being shot to death on a busy downtown street corner. Adams was tried for murder, the jury disagreeing.

Crabb admitted today that he was the "Clyde R. Vest of Waco" who collected the stake from Matthews. He said Richards and he had fabricated the credentials which purported to come from Ramsey and that he had collected the money and given it to Richards. He charged that after Mathews' death Richards had persuaded him (Crabb) to write three letters, two to members of the district attorney's staff and one to Richards, indicating that he got the money for

Job 'Created' by Governor Is Financed by Fund For Executive Clerk

OKLAHOMA CITY, Feb. 6. (AP)—Mrs. C. O. Hammonds, confidential secretary to Henry S. Johnston, suspended governor, about whom Oklahoma political storms have resolved for two years, announced her resignation tonight.

The announcement came as the house investigating committee was inquirinig into her activities in the governor's office along a line that recalled a purported impeachment charge voted by the house against Johnston in December, 1927, in connection with Mrs. Hammonds' employment.

Paid by Appropriation

At that time Johnston was charged with creation of an office for which there was no statutory provision. The title borne by Mrs. Hammonds was coined in the governor's office. Mrs. George Wray, clerk in the governor's office, told the committee tonight that Mrs. Hammonds received her pay from an appropriation made for the employment of an executive clerk.

Anticipating the announcement, Rep. H. Tom Kight, implacable prosecutor of the administration, said it probably would be made as an attempt to restore confidence in Johnston, and charged that Mrs. Hammonds would be re-instated as soon as the legislature adjourned.

She's Out for Good

The suspended governor issued a statement saying Mrs. Hammonds would not return to his office "in any capacity whatever" if he is acquitted of 11 articles of impeachment which have been filed against him.

Mrs. Hammonds made her resignation effective at once. In her letter surrendering her position, she declared evidence adduced before the investigating committee proved that no honest and fair investigation was desired.

She characterized investigation disclosures as misrepresentations intended "to throw a smoke screen"

Road Engineer's Pique Comes Near To Breaking Up Highway Inquiry

AUSTIN, Feb. 6 (AP)—The charge of an engineer with the state highway department that an "unwarranted" attempt was being made to besmirch his character, almost broke up this afternoon's session of the legislative investigation of the department and board of control.

The reference to the engineer was couched in a question propounded by Representative Gerron, author of the investigation resolution, to Joe P. Neal, equipment engineer of the department. It concerned a personal meeting between two engineers and another man.

The engineer mentioned in the question, rose, his face red, his body trembling, and addressing the chairman, suggested that it was unwarranted.

"I would like to have it expunged from the record, because if it gets into the newspapers it will besmirch my character, and it certainly is unwarranted," he said.

Senator Woodul wanted to know of Gerron who asked him to propound that question. He gave the name of Don Biggers, who he said published the Radio Post.

"The party who asked that question ought to be 'burnt up' in the report," Woodul said.

Supreme Court Grants Writ of Error In Ouster of Nicholson by Demos

A writ of error in the case of J. W. Nicholson, ousted Wichita county Democratic executive committeeman, against Edgar Scurry, county chairman, was granted Wednesday by the supreme court of Texas, according to associated press notices received here.

The suit was brought against Scurry after Nicholson had been ousted from his seat as a committeeman on the grounds that he had refused to sign a pledge to support the Democratic nominee in the presidential election last November.

When Nicholson refused to sign the pledge he was unseated along with a number of other committeemen and Joe Hatchitt was appointed by Scurry to succeed him.

An injunction restraining Scurry from ousting Nicholson was granted in the 89th district court by Judge P. A. Martin, but on appeal by Scurry and Democratic leaders to the Fort Worth court of civil appeals, the injunction was dissolved and the executive committee proceeded with its plans to insure loyalty to the party among its own members.

The case then was appealed to the supreme court by Nicholson after the reversal in the court of civil appeals. The writ of error

BET PLOTTER TALKS ALL DAY

Crabb Tells Whole Story Of $2,000 Fraud

Mathews. Richards, he said, remarked after the letters were written that he (Richards) would be able to collect more than $100,000 in damages from newspapers on the strength of them, and sent Crabb to Mexico.

Crabb Fears Reprisal

Crabb testified, on cross-examination, that he had remained in jail voluntarily since his return from Mexico fearing that Richards "or some of his henchmen" would kill him. Richards formerly was a high local klan official and had been prominent in politics here.

Crabb's narrative was long. Much of his testimony was objected to, and all telegrams, letters and other documents he identified as having played a part in the alleged plot met strenuous defense objection.

Crabb said he was out of work and needed money when he was called to Richards' office and offered $100 if he would help Richards with a "proposition." He said Richards suggested the name Vest, helped him prepare telegrams purporting to be from Ramsey to Richards and Mathews, and furnished him with a letter of authority bearing Ramsey's name.

Sent to Waco

Richards, he said, sent him to Waco to dispatch the telegrams, and then sent him to the bank to collect, coming to the bank himself to indorse the checks and assure Mathews that he, Richards, believed Vest "all right." He said that he gave the $2,000 to Richards and received in return two $50 bills.

Not until the Mathews slaying did Crabb know that it was a bet he had collected, he testifed, admitting, however, that he had known there was "something wrong" about the transaction. The day after the slaying, he said he spoke to Richards, saying, "Now Ben, see what you have done."

"Yes, it is mighty bad," he quoted Richards as replying, "but it makes it that much better for us."

Letters Dictated

The letters blaming Mathews, he said, were written at Richards' direction on the last day of the Adams trial after Richards had informed him that Crabb's part in the plot was known. Crabb testified. He identified among others a letter to Assistant District Attorney Andrew Priest the sentence:

"You know, Andy, I have been a fairly good fellow, but I let Mathews work me."

Defense counsel attacked Crabb's testimony from all angles in cross-examination, but did not change his story in important detail.

They obtained admissions, which the witness already had made, that he had been arrested for bootlegging and that he had served one term.

Crabb also admitted, on cross-examination, that he had told Hilliard Brite in Nuevo Laredo that Richards was innocent.

Tomorrow the state will continue to present its case and there was a chance that prosecutors would close by nightfall. So far it has not been announced whether V. Ray Adams will testify. Ramsey, his betting partner, already has appeared and denounced the credentials on which the bet was paid as spurious. Should Adams appear, the question of immunity on the murder charge still pending against him might arise.

Wichita Judges Draft Bill To Speed Work of District Courts

A bill proposing to expedite and equalize the work in the three district courts in Wichita county, giving them an organization similar to that already in effect in Dallas, Tarrant, Bexar and Harris counties, has been framed by the presiding judges here and been mailed to Austin for the action of the present legislature.

The changes called for in the proposed new law were outlined after a conference between Judge P. A. Martin of the 89th, Judge Allan D. Montgomery of the 30th and Judge W. W. Cook of the 78th district courts. The actual bill which will be laid before the legislative body was drawn by Judge Montgomery.

Procedure Changed

The bill, which contains two sections and 19 subdivisions, would alter present procedure only in reference to civil cases. One of its principal changes calls for an answer in civil cases within a certain number of days after the filing of a suit, rather than having all such answers due on the first day of the next term of court. Its purpose is to make the courts more quickly available to all litigants and to distribute the work more evenly through the year and between the courts.

The proposed new law would require that the papers in all civil suits remain at all times in the custody of the district clerk, a provision enthusiastically welcomed by Miss Eunice Jackson. At present the papers may legally be removed from the office upon the signing of a card left in their place.

The judges have included in the proposal provision for the election among the three of a presiding judge who may distribute the work among the courts and judges. The exchange of benches and districts and the transfer of cases is put within the jurisdiction of the magistrates.

Attorneys Support Plan

The entire proposal reorganizes, to suit conditions here, the law already in effect in the counties named. The new law would fit the courts of McClennan and El Paso as well as Wichita counties.

All local attorneys who have been given a copy of the proposed bill are supporters of the measure, and the leaders in the local bar expect its passage before the end of the present session, Judge Montgomery said Wednesday.

Gerron answered, "these are not my charges," and to substantiate his claim he read the resolution calling for the investigation, pointing out that it was stated tha reports of things allaged had come to the legislature.

"I did not put myself in the place of a prosecutor. I merely invited the highway commissioners to come and bring the records," Gerron said.

"I am trying in my feeble way to prove the charges."

"Very feeble," Senator Woodul retorted.

"That is not for you to say, sir," Gerron shot back.

Alfred McKnight, Fort Worth attorney, representing the Pierce Petroleum company, and Neal were the only witnesses used. McKnight's testimony was in corroboration of what Roy I. Tennant, member of the board of control, testified to yesterday concerning the awarding the contract for gasoline and oil.

McKnight's company was given the contract on its assertedly low bid over recommendation of the highway department that the business go to the Texas company.

McKnight was the first witness before the legislative investigating committee when it resumed the hearing.

He said his information was that 98 per cent of the gasoline used by the department was delivered to road construction camps in drums and that only 2 per cent was taken at service stations

He said that the only complaint received by the company bearing on inadequate facilities was from Gibb Gilchrist, state engineer, who said Pierce gasoline could not be obtained in Wichita Falls.

"We made arrangements to supply their needs at Wichita Falls," he said.

ARCHER OIL SUIT PASSED

Delay Granted in Trial Of Claim to Lands

By agreement of both sides, trial of the suit in which alleged heirs of A. M. Nelson, Alamo hero, seek to recover a one-sixth interest in Archer county oil lands valued at $65,000,000 has been passed without an order to the next term of the 30th district court, Judge Allan D. Montgomery said Wednesday.

The suit, which names 33 plaintiffs and 44 defendants, was set down for the February term in Archer county. It involves a one-sixth interest in 1400 acres of land, alleged to have been given to A. M. Nelson by the Republic of Texas. The suit is styled William Castiller and others against Luke McCrory and others. Mr. McCrory is named as trustee for the 27 Luke Wilson heirs, a large part of the land involved having made up a part of the famous old Luke Wilson ranch.

Plaintiffs and defendants alike are scattered all over the United States. A number of the defendants named are residents of Wichita Falls.

Title to the land, recovery of $10,000,000 for oil already produced, a receivership and their share in oil production while the suit is pending are asked in the plaintiff's petition.

Nicholson Wins Writ of Error

granted Wednesday indicates that the supreme court has found error in the decisions already rendered, according to A. V. Grant, Nicholson's attorney.

The case may be reviewed, a new trial may be granted or the supreme court may render a decision on it as it stands, Mr. Grant asserted. What action will be taken from the grant of the writ of error had not been ascertained Wednesday night either by Nicholson or Grant.

Edgar Scurry declared Wednesday night when he was notified of the action of the supreme court that he had practically dropped the matter from his mind, and that the grant of the writ of error simply meant that the supreme court would review the case.

Long Prepares Substitute For Oil and Gas Bill

Special to The Record News.

AUSTIN, Feb. 6—Representative Bob Long of Wichita Falls has announced that he has prepared a substitute for his oil and gas conservation bill which he will offer in lieu of the original measure.

He has eliminated all of the objectionable features contained in the original bill. Certain independent operators had strongly objected to certain features of the bill.

Section 4-J, which provided that the railroad commission on its own motion would be authorized to issue proration orders, is eliminated in the substitute. This was the section on which much of the opposition of the independents centered.

The commission still has full authority to take the necessary steps to prevent waste of oil or gas, also to enforce its orders. Not much opposition is now presented and it is expected that the bill, which is approved by the commission, will have comparatively easy sailing in the house and senate.

Final hearing will be held on the substitute bill on next Friday afternoon, said Long.

COURT CANCELS $3,500 NOTE

Parents Signed to Save Son From Pen, Judge Told

Claiming that they had given a note for $3,500 to their son's employer to keep the boy from being prosecuted on embezzlement charges, parents of a youth Wednesday appeared before Judge P. A. Martin in the 89th district court asking cancellation of the debt.

Ruling that the note was illegal, Judge Martin granted the plea of the plaintiff, ordered cancellation, and gave the parents judgment in the sum of $453, the amount already paid on the note. The court awarded the defendant a $253.95 judgment on another debt, for which a cross action had been brought.

The plaintiffs told the court that the note had been obtained from them under duress and by fraud, claiming that they had accepted the obligation in the belief that they were saving their son from the penitentiary. The boy, his parents said, had embezzled the funds from his employer by giving fictitious names of purchasers of the goods he sold for the employer. When the legitimate buyers paid, he kept the money, claiming that the imaginary clients had failed to remit, according to the testimony.

Both parents went on the stand, the mother weeping as she admitted her reason for signing the note.

The other bill provides that on petition of 25 per cent of the tax payers in a water improvement district, 50 of such tax payers, to call an election to elect directors for the district.

WARSHIP BILL GOES TO HOUSE

Plans to Speed Building Of Cruisers Made

WASHINGTON, Feb. 6. (UP)—As the cruiser bill started its journey to the house and the White House on the way to becoming law, congressional leaders today discussed plans for speeding through an appropriation which would enable the navy department to lay from two to five keels within a few months.

The house will accept all of the senate amendments to the cruiser bill, Chairman Britten of the house naval affairs committee told the United Press today.

This probably will be done tomorrow, Britten said, permitting the bill to go to the president within 48 hours.

Then it is planned to insert an appropriation for the first five cruisers and the aricraft carrier in the pending naval appropriation bill. About $12,000,000 will be asked to start work on the program, Britten said.

Bearing a 65 to 12 sanction by the senate the bill was signed this afternoon by the senate enrolling clerk and dispatched to the house, where it will lie over a day before being taken up for ratification of the minor senate amendments.

Box Immigration Bill Given Favor

WASHINGTON, Feb. 6. (INS)—The Box bill limiting present rights of foreigners to enter the United States temporarily was reported favorably by the house immigration committee today.

Committee members said it would not prevent Canadians from entering at will, but would restrain entry of other foreigners from Canada.

KNOWS HIS BIRDS

Coolidge's Accuracy on Florida Nightingales Stands Test

WASHINGTON, Feb. 6. (US)—President Coolidge aroused the ire of some unnamed ornithologist when he eulogised the song of the nightingale in his recent Florida address at the dedication of a bird sanctuary.

This student of bird life and habits has protested to the president for declaring that the voice of the nocturnal songsters would mingle with that of the chimes of the "singing tower." Quite an impossible situation, the president was told, since there are no nightingales in Florida.

The president scored a victory for accuracy, however, when he replied that the owner of the sanctuary had imported hundreds of the birds and that consequently there are nightingales in Florida.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 6. SUGAR AID TO ADEQUATE DIET

Encourages the Eating of Healthful Fresh Fruits and Vegetables

It is high time that the public became aroused about the craze for dieting. Medical authorities warn us that nourishing foods are necessary to everyone, and especially to growing children.

Undernourishment is a peril to health. Good feeding is necessary as a protection against tuberculosis and other diseases. Children should be kept overweight for their age and height.

"How is sugar a benefit both to the youth and the adult?" we asked an eminent scientist recently. Sugar in the diet is the fuel preferred by the body. Within a few minutes after eating, sugar appears in the muscles, the fire-box of the body. Think how children and all active people need this perfect fuel in their diet.

Not only that, but sweetening so improves the taste of the maintenance foods that it makes eating them a pleasure.

In addition to milk and milk products, young people and adults should eat a varied diet of cereals and fresh vegetables and fruits. Sugar makes these healthful foods palatable and enjoyable. Modern candy, containing fruits, nuts, milk, chocolate and sugar, is perfect for dessert. Most foods are more delicious and nourishing with sugar. The Sugar Institute.

Business Defined as Constant Threat to Happiness of Wife

Is a Wife a Handicap or an Inspiration to an Ambitious Young Man?—When Is the Sacrifice of Personal Happiness Justified?

Dear Dorothy Dix—For three years I have been engaged to a young man who told me the other day that he wanted to wait at least two years more before he got married. The reason he gave was that he wanted to get a better start in his business before he married. He said: "As you are now, you are an inspiration to me, but as a wife you would be a handicap."

I am a competent business woman, making as much almost as he does, and have a splendid chance to advance myself, so I would not be a financial burden on him. I have had a better education than he, and have been wondering how I could possibly handicap him in his ambitions. Do you think he is afraid of the altar?—JANE Q.

Answer—It looks that way. At any rate it does not take a Sherlock Holmes to deduce from his actions the fact that he is not a very ardent suitor, and that if you marry him you will always have to play second fiddle to his business.

Business is the fatal rival of many an American wife, and while it may monopolize more of her husband's time and interest than any other woman would, the wife has, at least, the consolation of reaping the rewards of the liaison. For while her husband's infatuation for business may put her nose out of joint, it hangs ropes of pearls upon her.

The fact that you are a business woman, able and willing to support yourself after marriage, seems to nullify your fiance's contention that you would be a millstone about his neck as a wife. There are, however, many cases in which a wife is a handicap to the ambitious young man who is girding himself up for the race of life.

It is a fatal mistake, for instance, for a poor young man who wishes to get along in the world to burden himself with a family, because in these days of the high cost of living it would take all he could make and more to support them. He cannot save anything and the door of opportunity opens only to those who have a golden key. He must let his chances pass by because he has not the money to make a good investment, or to go into some business in which he knows he could make a fortune.

Worse still, he is nailed to whatever poor job he has. With hungry little mouths to feed, with restless feet to shoe, he cannot afford to take any chances. Nor can he follow his luck if it beckons him to distant places, for he cannot drag wife and children with him about the globe. He must stay put and grind at his mill because it turns out the grist upon which wife and children subsist.

Generally speaking, a wife is a handicap to a young professional man, especially to a clergyman or a doctor. The success of these two depends largely upon the favor of women, and women look much more kindly upon an unmarried man than they do upon a married man. The unmarried preacher or doctor is an object of interest to every woman, and he is invited to dinner, and petted, and made much of, and has the opportunity to make the social contacts that are invaluable to him, whereas the married doctor or preacher is a matter of no concern to women and has no feminine hand held out to pull him up the ladder.

Observation shows that nothing so stimulates the religious zeal of the sisters in the congregation as having an unmarried pastor, and no bachelor doctor ever lacks for feminine patients. Therefore, the doctor and preacher are wise not to marry until they have gotten well established in their professions.

Whether as a general proposition, however, a wife is a handicap or an inspiration depends entirely upon the woman in the case, and upon how much her husband loves her. A wife who is a wet blanket and who kills the morale of her husband by her whinings and complaints; an extravagant wife, a nagger; a wife who is blundering and tactless and who makes enemies for her husband instead of friends, is a handicap so great that only a man of superhuman ability and talent can overcome it.

On the other hand, an overwhelming love for his wife and the determination to give her every luxury has been the inspiration that has led many a man to achieve success.—DOROTHY DIX.

Dear Miss Dix: I am a girl 21 years old. Work regularly and contribute most all of my wages to my aunt, with whom I live. Should I be allowed the privilege of entertaining a gentleman friend in my home without the danger of his being insulted by my aunt? Should I be allowed to attend the theater, dances and social entertainment without being continually nagged at by my aunt? I do not want to do anything wrong, only to have a little reasonable freedom and wholesome amusement. H. E.

Answer: Whoever pays the piper has the right to call the tune. If your aunt was supporting you and you were a parasite upon her, she would have the right to refuse to let you entertain company in her house, and to regulate your outgoings and in-comings. That is the price that one must pay for being dependent.

You, however, are a self-supporting, financially independent woman, and as you pay the bills of the house you have a right to entertain anyone you please in it, and you also have the right to go to any decent place of amusement without your aunt's offering any criticism of it.

Your aunt is a bully and all bullies are cowards, so turn the tables on her by reading her the riot act and telling her that unless you can have liberty to do as you please you are going to leave and withdraw your support. That will bring her to terms, pronto.

DOROTHY DIX.

Crockett School Sponsors Exhibit Of Masterpieces

By MRS. LUTHER HOFFMAN
Written for The Record News

Modern science has given to the art world the ability to produce prints that are exact reproductions in both drawing and color of our masterpieces, both old and new. This industry makes possible the appreciation of our greatest pictures which have been only available to those living in the art centers heretofore.

The public schools of our own city are developing an unusual appreciation and ability for good art among the pupils of even the elementary grades. Crockett school, with Miss Ida Moore as principal, has for the past several years been especially striving toward this development of art appreciation and study among its pupils. Each spring this school holds an exhibit of the best "facsimile" prints to be had of both the old masters and our modern artists. The children enjoy so thoroughly these splendid prints that they are loathe to pack them off for their next destination. Each class has special hours for spending at the study of the pictures under the direction of an art instructor of the school.

Not only do the children have the opportunity for studying and enjoying these facsimile prints but the public is invited to enjoy them after school hours. A small charge is made to cover the expense of hanging the exhibit.

Matchless flavor . . . many choice coffees BLENDED

APPRECIATION of the special blend of coffee flavors that is the glory of Maxwell House began years ago in the Old South.

A Southern gentleman, with the expert's interest in flavor, determined to find the perfect coffee flavor. He "tasted" hundreds of coffees and decided that no single coffee—however choice—would do. So he combined and re-combined them until he achieved a blend with so rich and mellow a flavor that it completely satisfied him.

Guests of the famous old Maxwell House at Nashville heartily concurred in his judgment. And whoever since then has tasted this "different" flavor has wanted Maxwell House Coffee in his own home. Your grocer has it, sealed in tin to preserve its fine flavor.

FOR FINE FLAVORED COFFEE—have the pot always very clean. It should be thoroughly scrubbed with a stiff brush and clean soapy water after each using, then thoroughly rinsed in scalding water and dried. Leave the top off of the pot between usings.

ONE-MAN ARMY WINS RENOWN

Reckless Daring of Young Marine Recalled

WASHINGTON, Feb. 6. (UP)—First Lieut. Herman Henry Hanneken of St. Louis, the U. S. Marine corps' one-man army, is in action again.

Lieutenant Hanneken, at the head of an elated band of Nicaraguan constabulary, is en route over the mountain trails of Jinotega, Nicaragua, to constabulary headquarters with a rope around the neck of Gen. Manuel Maria Jiron Runano, rebel leader and chief of staff of Sandino.

By the capture of Rumano, the shy, blonde, six-foot marine has rightly won the title, "Terror of bandits," and accomplished single-handed, a short month after his arrival in Nicaragua, what hundreds of other marines failed to do.

Killed Haitian Chief

Previously Lieutenant Hanneken killed Charlemagne Peralta, supreme bandit chief of Haiti, and Osiris Joseph, the notorious bandit leader of northern Haiti.

While marine headquarters here awaited an official report of Hanneken' latest achievement, fellow officers who served with him in this country and Haiti told glowing stories of the young lieutenant's bravery.

His knowledge of French and the Creole tongue aided him in the killing of the two Haitian bandits and fellow officers said his ability to speak Spanish undoubtedly aided him in the capture of Jiron.

Reckless Bravery

"Lieutenant Hanneken's bravery borders on recklessness," Col. Douglas C. McDougal, who was the young officer's superior in Haiti, said, "but at the same time all of his great achievements have been carried out calmly and carefully.

"When he killed Charlemagne and lone-handed broke up the bandit group, every detail had been planned three months in advance."

In 1919 the bandit Charlemagne had long been a dart in the vanity of the marines who were attempting to clean up Haiti.

Word was passed through natives that the garrison at Grande Riviere would be left unguarded on Nov. 1 because of an American fiesta. Charlemagne, hearing the rumor, decided to attack and fell into Hanneken's trap.

Disguise Employed

Hanneken, Corp. William R. Button and 20 of the native gendarmerie disguised themselves as bandits and started for Charlemagne's camp, which scouts had located several miles from Grande Riviere. For three hours the two marines, with faces blackened, and their native companions passed several thousand bandits on the mountain trail en route to attack the village.

By imparting information he was carrying important news to Charlemagne, Hanneken successfully passed through five lines of the bandit guard.

The immediate attack on the bandit chief is best told in the official report of Josephus Daniels, former secretary of the navy, in recommending Hanneken and Button for the congressional medal of honor, which both received:

Attack Succeeds

"The sixth outpost was the immediate guard over Charlemagne, being about 30 paces from the person of the bandit chief. Advancing rapidly toward Charlemagne, who apparently had been led to believe that the persons approaching him were members of his band with reports of the assault upon Grande Riviere, Hanneken, armed with two revolvers, and Button, armed with a light machine gun, were suddenly halted by two bandits, who handled their rifles in a threatening manner. Believing no further time was to be lost, Hanneken opened fire upon Charlemagne and Button with equal promptness turned his machine gun upon the remaining bandits. The surprise attack was a complete success and the dead body of Charlemagne and nine of his body guard were found in camp."

HONOR STUDENT CAMERA THIEF

Oxford Scholar Held for Burglary Trial

NEW YORK, Feb. 6. (US)—On the eve of sailing for Oxford to take honors in scholarship, George Kaplan, 19, brilliant member of Columbia's graduating class in 1928, and son of a wealthy family, stood in the lineup at police headquarters. He was charged with burglary.

Young Kaplan was arrested when Joseph Booth, manager of the Bell and Howell company, camera dealers in the 12th floor of the Salmon building, surprised him on the premises with a suitcase containing lenses and cameras valued at $750.

Kaplan admitted his guilt in court. Magistrate Ewald fixed the bail at $25,000, on learning from Assistant District Attorney William Schwartz that the youth already had a passport to enable him to sail for England next week.

Chamberlain Refuses Sea Law Discussion

LONDON, Feb. 6. (AP)—Sir Austen Chamberlain, secretary of state for foreign affairs, today refused to discuss in the house of commons the proposal for a British-American conference of immunity of private property at sea during hostilities. He was pressed by Col. Josiah C. Wedgewood, Laborite member for Newcastle-Undertyne, but rigidly declined to express any opinion of the Borah-Reed amendment to the American cruiser bill.

OIL PROXY LAW FIGHT CERTAIN

Stewart - Rockefeller Loser Sure to Counter

CHICAGO, Feb. 6. (INS)—That a gigantic legal battle will follow the present "battle of proxies" between John D. Rockefeller Jr. and Col. Robert M. Stewart over control of the Standard Oil company of Indiana, was predicted here today.

Close followers of the fight between Stewart, chairman of the board of directors of the company and the oil magnate, who has demanded Stewart's resignation, declared it seemed certain a bitter court battle will follow the meeting of the stockholders of the company at Whiting, Ind., March 7, when the re-election of Stewart will be decided.

The point of argument at the election of directors and the board chairman by the stockholders will revolve around the undated proxies received by Stewart and Rockefeller, leaders in Chicago finance said today. They pointed out that since the proxy bearing the latest date is the one that counts, and since, in many instances, the same persons have sent undated proxies to both Colonel Stewart and Rockefeller, conflict at the election March 7 which will lead directly to the courts was regarded as inevitable.

If both the Rockefeller and Stewart factions produce proxies, both undated, for the same blocks of stocks, the question will at once be raised as to which will be the valid ones.

Should Stewart be re-elected, it was believed here that the Rockefeller faction will challenge the validity of many of the Stewart proxies. And Stewart, it was thought equally certain, would challenge Rockefeller proxies in the event of his defeat.

Settlement Reached On Mrs. McCarthy's Will

GREENWICH, Conn., Feb. 6. (AP)—Settlement of the legal battle over admission to probate of the will of Mrs. Margaret Huntington Smith McCarthy, heiress to Standard Oil millions, was announced in probate court today by Homer S. Cummings, of counsel for the executors. Under the settlement, Miss Peggy Gowen, daughter of Mrs. McCarthy by a former marriage, will receive 30½ per cent of the residuary estate, estimated at more than $7,000,000, all of which under the will would have gone to Dr. James F. McCarthy, husband of Mrs. McCarthy. The will left Miss Cowen $200,000.

Amount of War Payments to Be Exacted of Germans Will Be Fixed 10 Years After War

By WEBB MILLER
United Press Staff Correspondent

PARIS, Feb. 6.—Financial experts from seven nations are moving towards Paris this week to undertake settlement of the world's outstanding financial problem, the world war reparations tangle, which involves the transfer of billions of dollars or its economic equivalent. The experts represent the United States (unofficially), Great Britain, France, Belgium, Italy, Japan and Germany.

At present there is no fixed total of reparations which Germany, under the charge of responsibility for the war, pledged to pay the former allied nations on the installment plan. The work of the committee of experts, on which two Americans will serve as unofficial delegates, will center on the problem of setting a definite total of reparations and the manner in which it shall be paid.

This final settlement—10 years after the war which cost a sum which is beyond the power of estimate—will be but part of the committee's problem and will hinge on various political and economic factors in Europe and America.

Young and Morgan for U. S.

These factors have been roots in the treaty of Versailles and the subsequent agreements leading up to the creation of the Dawes plan of payments four years ago. Owen D. Young, who with J. Piermont Morgan, is now en route to Paris where both will represent unofficially the interests of United States on the experts committee, was largely responsible for the present and successful Dawes plan.

Revision of this plan, however, is now necessary in order to establish a total sum due from Germany and permit completion of European stability on that basis. As long as such a vastly important financial problem is unsettled, Germany and the nations dealing with Germany are uncertain of their ultimate financial position.

At Versailles Germany agreed—there was no alternative—to pay for the war in so far as that was possible. Complete reparation was beyond the thought of even the most severe of the conquerors. Too much had been destroyed; too great a sum had been spent.

Although no total was fixed at that time, later conferences between allied representatives and Germans resulted in the suggestion of a total of more than 125,000,000,000 marks. No careful observer ever anticipated that such an amount—approximately $30,000,000,000 at the present rate of exchange—would be paid.

Amount Unfixed in Treaty

As a result, the amount of total payments and the number of years in which Germany must pay were open until the aftermath of war had passed.

It was more than five years after the peace conference that the Dawes conference was called. Those years had been marked by threats and disputes and endless arguments as the allied nations sought to extract from Germany the money which they had expended in four years of war. The French, dissatisfied with the situation, invaded the Ruhr valley and seized valuable territory to insure indemnity. That was but one of the incidents which marked the early post-war years with heavy scars. Meanwhile, the German mark became almost worthless and the problem of transfer of money grew more and more perplexing.

After months of rather stubborn resistance on the part of Germany, whose financial condition had reached low ebb, the Dawes conference was called and out of it grew a plan based on severe American business principles.

Then, as now, it was a problem with ramifications extending all over the world and touching directly the citizens of the United States.

The Dawes plan—it bears the name of Gen. Charles G. Dawes of the American delegation—set up machinery for economic recovery of Europe, primarily by establishing a sliding scale of annual payments by Germany based on the nation's capacity to pay. But Germany was in no position to pay after the terrific strain of war and post-war revolution and so the Dawes plan also provided for establishment of a new bank of issue, a gold currency, and opened the way for the establishment of credit abroad, and economic restoration.

A complete system of checks on revenues and industry was established in Germany and, over the small army of officials, was placed the agent-general for reparations, S. Parker Gilbert, a young American.

Up until 1924, when the Dawes plan was established, Germany had by voluntary or confiscatory methods, paid the allies about $2,000,000,000. Most of this sum was in ships, coal, property in ceded territories and supplies.

After the inauguration of the Dawes plan, Germany started paying on a scale which increased every year until it reached the maximum, or standard Dawes year, payment last fall. The present, or standard, payment is approximately $625,000,000.

During the four years in which the plan has been in operation, the allied nations themselves—which means principally the United States—have financed Germany's payments. This has been arranged by the extension of credit, from which Germany has borrowed to pay back to the allies her reparations installments. In 1924 American interests alone purchased German 7 per cent bonds to the amount of $110,000,000.

This system of borrowing, however, has permitted Germany to rise from the depths of economic depression and rebuild her resources.

"I sure was right—I lit a Lucky"

"So many people have made a fuss over me because in rowing back to the 'America,' after we had picked up the 'Florida' survivors, I was smoking a Lucky Strike. I can't see why there should be any excitement about this—it was the natural thing for me to do. Before we started out from the 'America' I made sure that my pack of Luckies was with me—I wanted the comfort and pleasure of Luckies no matter what happened. I sure was right. I'll have to admit that after we picked up the 'Florida' crew and started back, my nerves were completely let down. So I did the thing I always do at such times—I lit a Lucky. As long as I live, I'll never get another kick as I did from the sweet old toasted flavor of that Lucky as we were tossing about on the old Atlantic. I'm a hundred percenter when it comes to 'reach for a Lucky instead of a sweet.' I lay off the things that would make me flabby and light up a Lucky instead. There's too much action going on in my life to have me moving around with a lot of excess weight which I don't need. There's another thing about Luckies. The toasting process, in removing the impurities, is a blessing to us who follow the sea. It prevents throat irritation which is a constant nuisance to those who are regularly exposed to salt air."

Death for Dynamiters

A MISSOURI legislator has introduced a bill providing the death penalty for the bomber and dynamiter.

In former years this was an almost unknown type of crime. The rise of the "racket," however, has made it a commonplace. It is a peculiarly vicious act, as it often takes the lives of innocent people. In addition, it is a crime that is often very hard to trace to the perpetrator, who can be miles away when the explosion takes place.

Any law that will put fear into the heart of the bomber is to be praised. Here, however, as in other cases, it is possible that what is needed is not so much stiffer penalties as a tightening up of police and court procedure that will make punishment more speedy and more certain.

Jack Rabbits' Speed

HOW FAST does a jack rabbit travel when he really puts his mind to it? Mark Twain used to assert that the jack rabbit could outdistance a desert gale if he chose to. Of all the animals of the plain, he said, only the coyote could give the jack rabbit a race. The ease with which one of these picturesque, long-eared rovers outdistanced one of Mark Twain's best dogs apparently left a deep impression on the famous humorist's mind.

A westerner recently was driving along a country road in an auto when a jack rabbit popped up in front of him and began loping just ahead of his car. For several miles it kept this up, staying in front without effort even when the car reached a speed of 35 miles an hour. At last it turned aside—not winded, but simply satiated with the game.

So we have that much of a gauge, at least. Thirty-five miles an hour, for a rabbit, is no mean speed. And evidently the creature had more in reserve.

'In Appreciation of Grand Old Texas'

(An Editorial Taken From the Denver Post)

DO YOU know that Texas is one of our best neighbors and friends—this wonderful state to our south with about a thousand miles of sea coast.

Do you know that during the summer three-fifths of our tourists to Colorado—that's over half—are from Texas?

Do you know that Texas is our best customer for our fruits and vegetables, and that carload after carload of celery, apples, potatoes, etc., are shipped into that state from Colorado?

And do you know that for a warm, winter climate it is unexcelled in the United States, and that Brownsville, Texas, is the farthest southern point in the United States with the single exception of Key West, Fla.?

Do you know that the hotels in Texas are unusually good, the rates unusually cheap and the service excellent? And Texas is full of the best fellows in the world. They are big people, a generous people, have plenty of money and love to spend it in a hospitality that is as broad as her domain. And Texas lies a thousand miles north and south, a thousand miles east and west from extreme points?

Do you know that vessels sail almost daily from Houston, Galveston, Brownsville, Port Arthur and Corpus Christi to all points in the world, and that these ports are our nearest seaports?

Now, let's reciprocate and be just as good to Texas as Texas is to us. There are a world of the finest, warmest, winter resorts on this continent in Texas: Corpus Christi, San Antonio, Port Arthur, Galveston, Houston, Brownsville, Austin, Fort Worth and Dallas, and all up and down that wondrous citrus and tropical valley of the Rio Grande.

If you are thinking of going to a warmer climate this winter, run down and pay Texas a visit, don't let them be more generous to us than we are to them.

Texas has everything down there that we haven't up here, and we have everything up here they haven't down there. Texas is nearer us than any other warm, winter resort.

Let's be just as hospitable and generous to them as they are and have been to us for years.

A COMMON DOCKET FOR DISTRICT COURTS

The fact remains that some lawyers prefer certain judges all the time, and that some prefer certain judges some of the time.

That means that some courts are busy all the time, and that some courts are busy part of the time.

It is assumed that any lawyer elected to the position of a civil judge is capable of administering justice in any kind of civil litigation.

We do not elect certain judges as divorce judges and others as libel judges and others as receivership judges.

We elect them to try any kind of a case.

In theory—and so far as I know in fact—our judges are capable of handling any kind of a case that comes up.

The establishment of a common docket then would not interfere with adequate and efficient justice.

The Day Book of a New Yorker

Broadway Chatter by Grant Dixon

NEW YORK, Feb. 6.—Novelists in search of material might find the police courts of New York perfect laboratories of the emotions. Grim and dingy as they are and situated, some of them, in unbeautiful sections of the city, they are the hoppers into which are poured every day the sins and peccadilloes of our mixed population.

The late O. Henry, indeed, was a frequent visitor to these minor courts and found some of his most entertaining material in them. Edward W. Townsend, author of "Chimmie Fadden" and other tales of the city, liked to drop in casually at some court, like Essex Market, and let his imagination find refreshment in the variegated humanity that went drifting past the tribunal.

One of the most competent magistrates in New York is Judge Joseph E. Corrigan, who has spent years on the bench of the magistrates' courts, but who is now presiding over the homicide court. Possessed of a great fund of quiet humor and very observant, Judge Corrigan has seen them come and go—the petty sinners of the six million—for almost twenty years, and has accumulated a great store of amusing experiences. His long service has taught him to size up the average offender almost instantly, and the customary and timeworn alibis and excuses fall to pieces under his keen glance or at a single terse question.

To know life in New York one must sit upon the bench of a police court. Judge Corrigan thinks, and probably with truth. Nowhere else in the whole city is there such a parade of comedy and tragedy.

Magistrates differ greatly, of course, in their personality and their methods. Old offenders who have tracked through the police courts time and time again come to know the various judges—to know what to expect from them. Some are regarded as soft-hearted and impressionable. Others are ticketed as hard boiled. Some have a keen sense of humor, others appear to be quite devoid of it. One of the best known of magistrates admits that he always looks forward hopefully to some case that will provide a laugh and relieve the deadly monotony of judging the offenses of dull evildoers, such as pickpockets, bootleggers, shoplifters, sneak thieves and plain drunks. Probably the average magistrate, being human after all, must have some good story to take home to his wife.

All New York laughed the other day at the amazement of the magistrate who questioning a negro as to why he felt it necessary to go around with a six-inch knife in his pocket was assured very seriously that the knife was used only for cutting its owner's toenails. The prisoner offered to give a demonstration then and there, but rapid reflection by the magistrate decided to dispense with the exhibition. He kept his face, but ordered a recess after he had sent the negro to the workhouse. He had to retire to his chambers for a good laugh.

Fortune tellers—and New York throngs with them these days—are brought to the court in shoals, many of them with the most fantastic explanations of their illegal trade. The magistrates deal with these gentry pretty severely because of the fact that usually they prey upon the poor.

A day's experience in almost any magistrate's court would convince the average New Yorker that superstition and even a belief in witchcraft is as widespread in his own city as it is in the rural districts of Pennsylvania or in some sections of the South.

One of the most interesting and amusing cases that got into a magistrate's court in the last few month was the case of the subway beggar, Sam Ansell. When he was hauled out of his lair in the subway and taken before Magistrate Brodsky in the Harlem court he admitted that he collected an average of $500 a week and that he owned $40,000 worth of first mortgages and that he had $1,500 cash in the bank. He said that he frequently made deposit as much as $100 a day.

Rich beggars are not uncommon in the stream of humanity that pours through these courts. Only a little while ago there was a case of a mendicant who admitted he owned an apartment house and that his average income from panhandling was around $10,000 a year.

This particular specimen was reminiscent of Blind Berkowitz who used to "flop," as the expression goes, outside the old Herald Square theater at Broadway and Thirty-fifth street. He was not blind to begin with, but after years of rolling his eyeballs upward and simulating blindness nature took its revenge and he actually lost his sight. When he died it was found that he was the owner of two apartment houses. He was actually a rich man.

Judge Corrigan is heading a movement to abolish the district courts and to concentrate all magistrates' courts in a central building. It is a movement which, for reasons of municipal economy and judicial administration, is being given a great deal of consideration. The city pays an enormous sum for the upkeep of antiquated buildings, many of which are unsanitary and inconvenient. If Judge Corrigan's crusade succeeds some of the peculiar and picturesque characteristics of magistrates' courts may disappear. As it is, they can furnish plenty of amusement and interest for any modern Haroun al Raschid.

"There were two Irishmen, with the unusual names of Pat and Mike, who came to America as immigrants in the same steerage," Miss Dooley said. "Mike later prospered as a contractor and became quite wealthy. He had a town home, country estate, automobiles and an army of servants. But poor old Pat was only moderately successful.

"One day the two met on the street; and, after expressing the joy of seeing each other again after so many years," Mike said to Pat: 'Won't ye come up in the country with me for a couple o' days, and we'll have some sport—some fishin' and huntin'?'

"Pat consented, and the two went to the big country estate. Mike loaned Pat a fine shotgun, and they went for a hunt. Soon Mike spied a bird perched on a fence-rail. 'Take a shot at 'im, Pat,' he said.

"So Pat took the shot; and, after the smoke had cleared away, they went over to the fence and looked for the bird, but it wasn't to be found. Presently Pat discovered a frog in the grass. He made a dive for it. Then holding it in the air by one leg for Mike to admire, said: "'Sure and ye were a foine bird before I blew all the feathers off of ye!'"

The VICARION

The Astounding Story of an Invention Greater Than the Movies

Copyright by Gardner Hunting

By Gardner Hunting

Serialized by Ledger Syndicate

In the year 1935 Radley Brainard has invented the Vicarion, a device with which it is possible to re-create scenes out of the past. The invention is a sensational success, with all the theaters installing it in place of motion pictures. Complete Illumions, Inc., which at that time controls all the improvements on the movie, faces ruin, but when Ferdinand Mortimer and Jerry Ballard, heads of the company, call on him, Brainard refuses to make terms.

Brainard's records of the past are contained in "bombs," which hold liquid air and while he is projecting one of the "bombs," which was unnoticed, he sees a beautiful gossamer-clad girl, with whom he falls in love, although he is engaged to Phyllis Norman. During the first demonstration of the Vicarion, with Phyllis and her family looking on, a stranger lurches in the studio. He is unable to tell who he is and Brainard names him Van Winkle, and makes him his aide.

Brainard calls in the operator who made the unseen record, but gains no information from him. He greets Van Winkle to investigate the musing of the bomb. Brainard projects one of the three remaining bombs containing the woodland scene in which the girl with whom he is infatuated appears, and decides the records were made by Jerry Honer, a criminal whom he has employed. Honer dies of fright while listening to the voice of his dead brother which Brainard projects by means of the Vicarion and Honer's secret of the "bomb," which contains the "sunrise nymph" passes into the hands of Mortimer and Ballard.

As if at a signal, as the iron gate went down, the crowd swept forward. Thousands upon thousands of them could not hope to force their way near to the entrance of the building which they were mad to loot; but they rushed and strove none the less. They drew in past the girl on the shivering horse as if sucked from the edge of the bowl by outflow at the farther side. They left her standing like an equestrian statue of some ancient heroine fixed on a pedestal there.

For a moment she sat stricken as if death had laid his chill hand on her breaking heart. Then, as if drawn by the same impulse that ruled the mob, she leaned slowly over the horse's neck. She could go to him! There was a way! See that packed mass of men! Given the rein, the mare could leap their outer ranks like a trifling barrier, and gallop—gallop on their packed heads! She would crush them down, kill them, take a frightful toll in revenge for what they had done! And reach the place where he lay! To die there with him, under their feet in turn! She did not want to live!

She loosed her rein. "Betty!" she whispered, touching the mare's sides with her heels. The alert animal started, crouched for the forward jump.

Trickery

But a man leaped, and caught her bridle. With his weight thrown on the rein he checked the mare. Her hoofs scoured the gravel bank, sending the tiny stones spurting like water far and wide. With a heave that almost unseated her rider she gained her balance and came pounding upright upon her feet. The girl, dazed, half blinded by the sudden dashing of her madly envisioned deed, bent to look at her assailant's face. He turned and looked up at her, his eyes thrusting through her like knives, his lips a hard gray line, the planes of his face sharp edged as if with a tool.

In the revulsion of the moment, the thread of consciousness seemed to break. Her heart contracted as if its very fibers had received a blow at which it gasped and could not recover. She tottered, wilted. She stretched out her hands to him. He reached up and caught her in his arms as she fell.

He lifted her up and set her on her feet. "Don't be frightened," he said. "Don't be frightened," again. "You thought I was over there in that lighted stairway—where the mob thought I was—pleading with them not to kill me!"

"Radley! Oh, my God!" she breathed, her hands on his face.

"Well," she said, "I was there—three weeks ago! When I foresaw some such night as this, and laid my plans for self-defense! Tonight, when they flocked to see me murdered here, I walked out the unguarded side door!"

He turned from her an instant and looked off at the howling crowd.

It was as though a cold wind swept her brain. Then he had not been there on those glittering stairs, facing the mob and murder—in that fine, terrible, beautiful moment of proud courage, bitter, cruel, but somehow redeemed by the sweet tang of death! A record of him!—a mere record from his machines, made weeks ago, when there was nothing to face—no mob and death! A bit of crafty forethought—forethought of the trickster! Pierced with anguish as she had been at belief that she had seen him struck down, with her arms now clasping him, with his voice now gentle in her ears—gentle, as it had not been for months to her—she yet felt cheated! Cheated of what? Heroics? Climax? Drama? Surely such things could not weigh with her besides the saving of his life. What had there been in that tragic instant when his life seemed forfeit, that was itself forfeit now that his life was saved instead?

But he had caught her arm and turned her toward the grassy bank. "Ushigi has the car waiting on the other side," he told her. Then as he walked beside her, "You look as if you were disappointed that I did not die."

For a moment she was wild to start away from him—break away from his hand, his touch. To run, to escape, hide away—and see what strange thing was this that clutched her heart. But they reached the car. He swung open the door and almost thrust her in.

"Drive for Pasadena, first," he said to the Jap behind the wheel.

Phyllis stretched out her hand. "Oh, they've gone to Aunt Relief's place, in the hills above Altadena," she said. "Go there!"

He repeated the instructions to the Jap; then he stepped in and sat beside her.

The car turned and scudded away. Phyllis sank back in its luxurious cushions and shut her eyes.

Safety

"I suppose you will be glad to know," she heard him say, "that your father and mother are safe—at the country club. They telephoned me just now."

The very commonplaceness of his words brought back overwhelmingly the awful sense of catastrophe world wide! What was the safety of country clubs, of isolated houses, of distant hills? Where was escape from the terror of which she had that night seen the merest gesture? True, the mob that had directly tried to lay violent hands on the body of the man it thought to kill would find itself baffled, fooled, and would spend its wrath and strength in mere destruction of his tools. But the forces involved were greater than the mob, as the mob was greater than those men who were its hands! The man who had eluded it had those forces to face. He had dodged a thrust, side-stepped a blow; but the great reckoning remained.

With a sudden terrified sense that she had once more tried to set up her little measuring stick beside events of which she did not recognize the scope, she turned and looked at him under the dome light burning unnoticed in the car. His profile against the black window at his side was like a relief in bronze. The thing through which they had just passed was an incident; it had not touched him! It was not in scuffles with mobs that his struggle lay. And suddenly she realized that she possessed that very boon for which she had been willing to sell her life. She was at his side!

He glanced at her. His eyes widened slightly. He touched a button and the light went out. But he did not speak.

The girl sat still. Outside, dark streets were running by. The car was climbing, climbing. It turned into a wide boulevard and picked up speed. Presently it was flying through the night. Over low hills it sped, rising and dropping like a skiff on a heavy sea. The yellow light of fire grew and grew. It filled the interior of the car at times, at the tops of the little hills' crests, till the two passengers could see each other as by day. But the jap had chosen the hill road, which drew away and away from that along which the mammoth, burning studios lay. Once or twice they came out on shoulders of the hills from which Phyllis caught appalling glimpses of leaping flames. Again they swung away around heights that shut them off into a dim world of peaceful night. It was like running over an endless fabric in stripes of orange and black!

At scorching speed they ran through the now sleeping thoroughfares of the Hollywood Van Winkle remembered. And out once more, and climbing again, into another boulevard. Then a stretch of smooth concrete on which the hum of tires rose shrill, as the great machine put forth her strength.

Past long, shadowy stretches of hillside market gardens, past gilding miles of roadside stands, through belts of fragrance from orange groves, hedges, roses, poppy fields—suddenly out of a cleft in the rocks and down over the long, curved, lighted bridge into Pasadena's drowsing streets!

She lost account of time then. She only returned to consciousness of it when the car drew up at last in a high still place among mountain pines. The smell of resinous needles greeted her. Lamplight glowed, far back there beyond the dark, shaggy trunks and the deep overhang of a roof. Voices were calling. Radley was climbing from the car; he fetched up a hand to her.

Relief Brainard came running to them, crying out thankfulness, marveling at their escape, urging them in, trying to tell them of the condition of Carol and John, bemoaning a useless telephone, praising young masters, sobbing with relief and exhaustion.

And presently Phyllis stood beside the bed in which her brother lay, with the man Van Winkle sitting watchfully beside him. The bandage they had put around the boy's head was already stained through with blood; below it his face was so still and white that she thought at first he was dead. She dropped down beside him with a moan, calling his name. But Van Winkle stood up quickly and leaned against the headboard of the bed—with a movement at once of approaching her and holding aloof.

"He's asleep," he said, looking down at John. "I wouldn't wake him up; it will cure most anything, sleep will."

Phyllis drew back her hands. On her knees, she looked at the young face as if she had not seen it for weeks. Was it changed? Were its hardening lines deepened—or softened? What make the faces are which we think we read! How we try to look through them—how we try to see in them the things we want to think belong to the moment were more at most than a single chisel-stroke of the portrait we try to see.

In truth, he was only still and white, and young and tired and hurt. But he was not a boy any more—not the little boy of whom she had been so tender. Grown up, Carol had said! Grown up, to the ability—and to the right—to take care of himself! With a right even to his own hurts! And a right to sleep them away, untouched—and unobserved.

The girl rose to her feet, glanced at the man by the head of the bed and went out. He followed her. In the screened porch Phyllis found Carol in a hammock, covered with an Indian rug. The younger girl was awake, and put out a hand as Phyllis stood beside her.

"Phyl!" she said. "You're such a peach! You're always the one we find when we have to find somebody!"

Her slender fingers gripped Phyllis' hand.

"To think that I had the nerve to try to tell you!" she went on. "I talked about playing my own cards—but I think I'd have died tonight if I hadn't known you were sticking around.

"You're not a bit picturesque, Phyl, because you don't go in for a pose. You just—stick around."

Her hand dropped and she closed her eyes. Phyllis stood breathless. But it was scarcely a moment before Carol was asleep. As if her mind were set at rest by what she had said.

Phyllis found her way to the steps where Van Winkle stood. She leaned against the rustic pillar.

"Is she asleep, too?" asked the man.

"Yes—now she is."

"Lucky children!" Van Winkle said. "It's always open to them—the great empire of silence!"

Exit Van Winkle

He was quiet a moment; then he turned toward her.

"May I say good-by to you now?" he asked.

"Good-by?" she repeated, startled.

"Yes," he answered. "I've found out where I belong."

He hesitated, then went on.

"I have learned," he said, "that I wandered away—from a place where I should have stayed—from something I had to do. I needn't tell you what it was—just one of those duties men sometimes have, unbeautiful, unwelcome, undramatic. But I've a notion that if I go back to it, I shall find—what I've lost!"

He paused again. It seemed a painful recital to him—and he did not seem to have any notion of clearing himself in her eyes.

"That's why," he continued presently, "that's why I envy the youngsters who can drop off so easily to sleep. I can't. Did you ever hear any one propound the theory that it is not the body that sleeps?"

Breathless she stared into his eyes. And once more he looked back into hers. And it was as if she were looking through windows that gave no prospect—mere panes, which baffled vision because there was nothing beyond!

"I say," said Van Winkle, "that I've found out where I belong. But the Vicarion didn't show me. It merely showed me that I am not a footloose young man, who simply came out here a year ago and fell in love with a girl—who forgot me. It is only an incident that I was found hurt and off my head one night after that last dance with you—by the man Honer and his gang. They thought I had property; they intended to make me ransom myself. But when they found that I'd lost my memory, they couldn't do anything with me, of course; so they conceived the little joke of taking me out and burying me in the sand, so that I might burst upon an astonished world as 'Rip Van Winkle.' I don't know what had—happened. But I've a notion that Providence may have undertaken to illustrate to us what an empty thing the mere body of a man can be!"

He looked up at her, but did not smile.

"I've been temporizing—Phyllis. But I couldn't help overhearing what Carol said to you just now. I've been thinking some of the things that Carol has—about you. I've watched you till I begin to understand—what to do to find myself."

He stopped, and she saw that he had his cap in his hands.

"Good-by, then," he said.

She stretched out her hands to him. He did not touch them. He simply turned and started down the steps.

"But aren't you—aren't you going to let me know—who you are?" she cried.

"Why should I?" he returned. "It's not that that matters. When I see you again—it will be time enough—when I see you."

He said good-by again, walked down the low steps and off through the dark arches of the trees. Suddenly his figure was gone!

Then he was not a traitor—nor anything else that was false. What was he—that was real? A slow chill crept over her. His going was—more ghostly than his coming had been. What was he—that was real?

She had turned back at last to go into the house. She found a dark figure opposing her entrance. It was Brainard. He stepped down into the porch.

"I've been listening," he said. "Naturally, eh? Eavesdropping being part of my calling!"

He walked to the top of the steps. He did not invite her to accompany him or to join him. But she followed him; she could not help it. As she stood beside him, he turned and looked down at her: that unbending quality was in him—that quality that made no concessions, that demanded of others that they come to him, all the way. But the girl was not repelled by it now. It was only his stubborn, unflinching front, turned toward hostility. She was not hostile to him. She loved him. Never more than now had she loved him. Through all his indifference, his flouting, his deep anger toward her, she had loved him. She knew she would love him, always, no matter what he did or was. She wanted to put her arms around him now, in all his stubborn hardness, and cherish him.

"Are you pitying me?" he asked, a bitter smile curling his lips. "Because if you are, I will show you that you are wasting your time."

He regarded her narrowly, almost sneering. But there was something about his tone that robbed his words of their effect upon her. They were like hammer blows—but they were not even aimed at her. They were aimed to harden some yielding, weakening thing in himself! He was sufficiently aware of her; she understood that he was trying to keep her from seeing that something had cut into him to the depths. He was intensely aware of her and trying to cover it. Perhaps he hated her, but she was suddenly important in his eyes. He seemed to need to justify himself in hers!

"In the car," he said, "I have a condenser. Shall we go and take a look at what we left behind?"

The idea startled her. With all the experience of that awful summer to create a habit of expecting to look easily upon events distant both in time and space, she had not even thought of the possibility here. Yet here was this new factor in life, even now at hand, like a new sense—telaplastic—endowing them with powers near to omnipresence!

He had started down the steps, taking her acquiescence for granted. She followed him again. Heartsick weariness filled her; after a crisis, taking up mere obligations again!

"I suppose you think that because they could mob me they can crush me," he said. "You saw what happened when they thought they had."

They walked together down the pinenneedle carpet toward the one car that now remained in the mountain road.

"It has been shouted at us frequently lately," he went on, "that no tyrant has ever succeeded in holding down the mob for long. But let's overlook the fact that the mob never rules even as long as the tyrant does."

Still she was silent.

"I should think you might realize, by now, that they cannot touch me."

Did this mean that he recognized her concern for him?

"Are you sure?" she asked him.

He turned to her and smiled again, with that look of steel upon his mouth and eyes. "My enemies have made better tries to get me than they did tonight. Not so spectacular, that's all. This was just—fireworks!"

Fireworks! Ending doubtless in foolish smoke because of a stratagem—a trick! Her mind rushed back to the vision of a man descending a glittering staircase to face a mob. Fireworks!

GEORGE MILLER BURIAL HELD

Throngs, Including Indians, At Ranchman's Rites

PONCA CITY, Okla., Feb. 6. (UP)—Telegrams and cables from people of all walks of life poured into the 101 Ranch "white house" here today where funeral services for one of the owners, Col. George Miller, were held at 2 o'clock.

Messages of condolence came from persons whom Miller had befriended, bank presidents he had known, national politicians, railroad and oil magnates, newspaper men, circus folk, motion picture stars, cowboys, and rough riders, all bespeaking a wide acquaintance among many classes.

Colonel Miller was killed early Saturday when his skull was crushed in an automobile accident on icy pavement on the highway near here.

City in Mourning

Ponca City was in mourning for the funeral. Flags at half mast and shops were closed. The city was filled with out-of-town friends who represented many parts of the country.

Groups of Indians who called Miller their best friend gathered silently under the dull gray sky shortly before the funeral and went into the white house to view Miller's body. They were but a small part of the crowd that passed his bier as the body lay in state from 12 noon to 2 p. m.

There was no ceremony by the Indians. They were subdued and attracted no more attention than did representatives of the state legislature who attended as a mark of respect to a world-wide figure.

The services were conducted by the Rev. G. Frank Sanders, a Christian minister.

Plane Scars Over

The funeral procession was led by a body of Knight Templars and a squadron of police.

An airplane piloted by Earl Rockwood, airmail pilot, roared a requiem overhead as the funeral cortege moved slowly from the ranch home to the mausoleum where Miller's remains were buried between those of his brother, Col. Joe Miller, and their mother, Mrs. Mollie Miller. Rockwood dropped flowers in front of the procession, and dipped his plane's wings as a tribute to the dead ranchman.

The empire-like ranch, known everywhere, containing 110,000 acres, will be held intact, and probably will be managed by Miller's nephews, George W. Miller Jr., and Joe C. Miller Jr., sons of Colonel Joe, beside whose body Colonel George now lies.

HEARING POSTPONED

STURGIS, Mich., Feb. 6. (UP)—The examination of Ralph C. Wood and Cecil Holt, charged with complicity in a bank robbery here Dec. 17, was postponed until Monday and their bond reduced from $80,000 to $5,000. Assistant Prosecutor Sloan said charges may be dismissed against the two men, whose arrest climaxed the "Wood murder mystery" in Detroit.

From University's Select Group to 'Pineapple' Chemist, Prisoner's Story

CHICAGO, Feb. 6. (US)—Anthony Di Giovanni, 31, a protege of Hull House, tonight was in jail charged with being the chief chemist for a "pineapple" syndicate.

Di Giovanni was graduated from the Allendale Military academy, where he was a crack military student and the University of Chicago where he received the Potter Palmer scholarship from Hull House, and was a brilliant chemistry student.

The man related his war experience and his success with things mechanical and chemical. He told of his marriage and life following the war. Then came "the first hard luck."

He was arrested charged with operating a "hot" car; his wife left him and he became associated with a "hard" crowd on the Northwest side and later into the liquor "racket."

Di Giovanni told of his acquaintanceship with Miss Jessie Binford and Miss Jane Addams of Hull House and their interest in him and his work at Allendale and the University of Chicago.

He claimed that he was caught with his first bomb though the authorities allege he has been making them for four years as chief chemist for the "Dago Lawrence" Mangano gang. He said a plumber cut his pipe and made caps for him, a blacksmith drilled the holes while the fuse and powder was purchased at Fox Lake.

RIVERA SPIKES REVOLT TALK

Loyalty Reigns Throughout Spain, Premier Says

MADRID, Feb. 6. (UP)—Primo De Rivera, Premier-dictator of Spain, denied tonight all reports of fighting or serious military uprisings in Spain and described briefly the present situation resulting from two abortive outbreaks at the Ciudad Real and Valencia garrisons within the last week.

"Not a single shot has been fired," Primo De Rivera told the United Press correspondent, "either by the rebels or the loyal forces—and I may say that all troops are loyal with the exception of the few artillery chiefs and officers who ordered their men out.

"It is only against these officers who are now rejected and despised by the country, that we will proceed with rigour.

"The failure of Sanchez Guerra (former prime minister arrested as leader of the nation-wide plan for revolt) has been notorious, but as the captain general of Valencia, Castro Cirona, did not act diligently and arrest him, we have dismissed Cirona and will bring him to trial," the premier continued.

"The army, navy, civil guard, carabineers and police have not for one moment left the side of the government. Malcontent elements do not amount to more than 1000 in the whole country in addition to a few conspiring politicians."

Meanwhile, General Sanjurjo, who went to Valencia to put down the uprising there, was en route to Madrid to report to the government, and rumors that there had been an outbreak of mutiny on the naval vessel Don Jaime were officially denied. The entire country, including Valencia, was reported calm.

REVOLT DENIED

NOGALES, Sonora, Mexico, Feb. 6. (INS)—Rumors of a new revolutionary outbreak in Northwestern Mexico were denied here today by Gilberto Valensuela, reported leader of the revolt and candidate for the presidency on the revolutionary ticket.

PRIMO POSTS REWARD

MADRID, Feb. 6. (UP)—Gen. Primo De Rivera tonight offered a reward of $5,000 to anybody who could prove that there was shooting and people killed or injured in the recent troubles. The reward also applied to anyone who could identify a victim as either killed or injured.

Triangle Murder Trial Resumed

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Feb. 6. (UP) The trial of Walter L. Liggett, wealthy grain dealer, for the murder of Turney M. Cunningham, whose wife he courted for yedrs, was resumed here today after interruptions caused by illness of several jurors.

The defense opened its case with a surprise witness, John D. Quinn, who claims to have been an eyewitness to the fatal meeting between Cunningham and Liggett in an alley back of the Cunningham home last October.

Liggett admittedly had just left Mrs. Cunningham when he met Cunningham and shot him down. He claims he fired in self defense, and that Cunningham was unfortunate in being "too slow on the draw."

Cattlemen Meet At San Francisco

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 6. (AP)—Cattlemen of the nation, "representatives of the West's oldest industry," as they were described by Gov. C. C. Young in his address of welcome, are here for their 32nd annual convention.

L. C. Brite of Marfa, Texas, president of the national association, in his annual report, was optimistic over the outlook of the industry for the future.

"For the first time in a long while the cattleman is receiving a fair price for his commodity," he said. "Four years the price paid the stockman was not sufficient to pay the cost of production. I feel the organization has been responsible for this improvement in the condition of cattle raisers."

Girl Saved by Oxygen Recipient of Trinkets

PERRY, Kan., Feb. 6. (UP)—Balloons, candy, gum and valentine cards poured in today upon 7-year-old Margaret Brown, who has practically won her fight for life after being kept alive for 12 days by firemen administering oxygen. Persons in all parts of the country, who read of her struggle, have sent her letters and gifts.

STEAMERS SALVAGED

KEY WEST, Fla., Feb. 6. (UP)—Two grounded ships were floated today by tugs from here and resumed their voyages. The British steamship Maresfield was pulled off shoals near Dry Tortugas and the American steamer Alaukan was refloated off Casal Isle, Bahama bank.

BRANSON FAST ON DECISIONS

Three-Year Case Ruled on In Three Weeks

OKLAHOMA CITY, Feb. 6. (UP)—A case in the supreme court three years in which the court had acted four times in favor of one litigant was overthrown in three weeks by an opinion by Fred P. Branson, former chief justice; Louis W. Trapp, Tulsa attorney, today testified before the house supreme court investigation committee.

The case was filed in the city of Tulsa against Weston. Ten paving districts were involved. Property owners alleged they were denied a hearing on levy protests and engineering and the 50 per cent bond finance levy were illegal.

The trial court upheld the property owners, Trapp testified, an opinion by Justice Cochran without a dissenting vote after oral argument affirmed the case. A petition was denied and until March 1924, two other efforts to open the case failed.

Settlement Offered

A settlement was offered by the paving company in this case by Gus Paul, Oklahoma City, paving attorney. E. J. Franklin, southern surety company representative, wrote Trapp for settlement of about 15 other similar cases, Trapp testified.

Trapp said he agreed to a 30 per cent reduction of cost settlement before the settlement was made, the offer was withdrawn by Franklin, Trapp testified.

In the meantime, Trapp testified, Justice Cain had died and J. D. Lydick was appointed. Justice Kennamer resigned to go on the federal bench and was succeeded by Justice Warren.

Justice Cochran, who wrote the original opinion, resigned effective May 1, 1924. Justice Gordon succeeded him.

On May 6, Irs A. Underwood, partner R. C. Allen, who had participated as one of a long list of attorneys for contractors including Rittenhouse & Rittenhouse and McPherren & Hanna, Oklahoma City, asked leave to file a motion to vacate the Cochran opinion.

Oral Argument Asked

Oral argument was asked, Trapp testified.

Ten days were allowed for response in a court order of May 13, 1924, the response was filed May 22. On May 27 Branson presented at 41-page opinion holding against the property owners on the protest hearing and levy for bond financing. It was concurred in by Lydick, Warren, Gordon and Johnson, Trapp testified.

No oral argument was had, as requested by Underwood, Trapp testified, nor was his response taken from the clerk's office in preparation of the opinion, Trapp testified.

The mandate was ordered forthwith, without allowing the five days under the rule of the court, Trapp testified.

When Trapp's clients won their fourth and final motion in the supreme court in March 1924 the mandate was stayed by order of Branson.

Allen is a former law partner of Former Justice Branson.

Mexico Stabilizes Bonding System

MEXICO CITY, Feb. 6. (US)—Another long step forward in making Mexican internal finances sound was seen here today in the government's announcement that all land bonds issued as well as those issuable in the future, will have the status of negotiable securities quotable on the stock exchange, instead of being redeemable, as now, by lot.

It is believed this will go a long way towards eliminating complaints of persons whose lands have been expropriated.

HUBBY STABS OPERA SINGER

Hotel Owner Sought While Rival Fights to Live

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 6. (UP)—Carl Bengstrom, 21, who daily trods the boards contributing his songs to the romantic atmosphere of the Beggar's opera, was in a sanitarium here tonight suffering from a knife wound, after a harsh experience with the realities of off-stage life.

Meanwhile Walter J. Sutliff, Los Angeles hotel man, was sought by police on a charge of assault with intent to commit murder, a charge growing out of the series of incidents which sent the comic opera singer to the hospital where it was said he had only "a fighting chance" to live.

Bengstrom was found in a room with Mrs. Pearl Sutliff, the hotel owner's wife, according to a report made to police by two private detectives who said they accompanied the husband to the room. The woman made a dash for an adjoining room when the detectives, C. O. Colly and A. L. Shore, and the husband entered, according to the police report, and the detectives followed her after the husband had cried: "Stop her, she's after a revolver."

When the operatives returned to the bedroom in which they had left Sutliff and Bengstrom, they reported finding the opera player lying on the floor, stabbed. Sutliff returned with them to the detective agency and left without being noticed, it was said.

Sage Tea Puts Color in Gray Hair
By LOIS PAIGE

I am heartily in favor of the woman who refuses to be aged by gray hair. It is every woman's right, even her duty, to retain her youthfulness and attractiveness as long as she can. When a woman asks me about coloring her gray, faded or streaked hair I say, "Go ahead," and tell her the secret of sage tea and sulphur.

A brew of common garden sage tea and sulphur has the power to restore gray or faded hair to full life and color. You can either prepare the mixture at home or buy it already prepared and ready to use. The name of the prepared article is Wyeth's Sage & Sulphur, and since it costs only 75c a bottle at any drug store, there is really no need to go to the bother of preparing it yourself.

You simply moisten a comb or soft brush and draw it through your hair, one strand at a time. Done at night, morning sees the gray hair gone; another application or two and your hair is once again of the color and lustre of youth and you appear years younger. The whole effort is one of perfect naturalness.—Adv.

FRIENDS NOW TALK OF HER RECOVERY, MRS. BAZINET SAYS

"To think that in three weeks time Sargon has rid me of troubles that had defied other treatments for ten years. It seems almost too good to be true; yet it is a fact.

MRS. ALEX BAZINET

During all this ten years I can hardly remember a time when I didn't suffer terribly from indigestion and nervousness. Sometimes gas would press up around my heart and cause such severe pains that I did not dare even to take a long breath. I had no desire for food and I suffered so badly from constipation that I had to be taking laxatives continually.

Every few days I had a splitting headache and my nerves were so upset that I would roll and toss most all night unable to sleep and in the morning I would feel so exhausted and miserable that I couldn't do my housework without stopping every now and then to rest. I tried every medicine and treatment I heard of but it was no use.

"Then Sargon was suggested to me and just three bottles of this wonderful medicine has put my stomach in perfect condition. Nothing I eat hurts me and my appetite is so good my husband jokingly says I will eat him out of house and home. My nerves are steady as a clock. I sleep the whole night through and get up feeling so rested and strong that I get through my housework without ever thinking about resting.

"I have gained six pounds in weight and I just preach Sargon to my friends."

The above statement was made a few days ago by Mrs. Alex Bazinet, of 2210 Twenty-second Ave., Minneapolis.

Sargon may be obtained in Wichita Falls from the Renfro Drug Co., Eighth and Scott streets, No. 1, and Seventh and Indiana, No. 2 and in Electra from Lough's Drug store.—Adv.

Beware of Colds
NOW!
whether you've had the FLU . . . . or not

This is the time of year when serious cold troubles, such as deep chest colds, bronchitis, and pneumonia are always at their worst.

Just now, with so many people in the weakened condition that follows a flu attack, it is more important than ever to heed every cold as a danger signal and check it promptly before complications can set in.

Quick Direct Treatment

At the first sign of a cold, melt some Vicks in a bowl of hot water and inhale its healing vapors. Also place some up each nostril and snuff well back. This quickly opens the air passages.

At bedtime, rub Vicks vigorously over throat and chest and cover with a warm flannel. Most colds yield overnight to Vicks two-fold action:

Acts 2 Ways at Once

(1) Its medicated vapors, released by the warmth of the body, are inhaled direct to the inflamed air passages, loosening the phlegm and easing the difficult breathing.

(2) At the same time, Vicks acts through the skin like a poultice, "drawing out" tightness and soreness, and thus helping the vapors to break up the congestion.

Mothers especially appreciate this simple external treatment because it cannot upset children's delicate stomachs, as too much "dosing" is so apt to do.

REVIVED RAIL PLANS TALKED

Grandfield and Vernon See Possibility of Line

By C. W. ROGERS
Record News Staff Correspondent

VERNON, Texas, Feb. 6—"The published announcement in the Wichita Falls Record News of plans to send a delegation of Grandfield citizens to Wichita Falls to endeavor to enlist the aid of Frank Kell in the construction of a projected rail line from Ardmore, Okla., through Grandfield to a connection with the Frisco at Davidson, Okla., has had the effect of stirring up all the people of Grandfield," was the substance of a telephonic conversation today with Editor Tom Patterson of the Grandfield Enterprise.

"We are enlarging the committee and expect to establish contact with Mr. Kell and fix a definite time for the conference, which probably will be the latter part of the present week," Mr. Patterson added.

The announcement of revival of plans to promote construction of the railroad, originally chartered as the Ardmore, Vernon and Lubbock railway, was a topic of general conversation in Vernon today.

In the Texas charter granted the company in 1926, Les K. Johnson, R. H. (Dick) Coffee, Harry Mason, R. M. Fielder and O. T. Warlick of Vernon were named in the list of incorporators and as subscribers to the capital stock, each to the extent of $15,000.

Damage Suit Against Sheriff Goes to Jury

The suit of W. H. Burgess, asking $10,000 damages from Sheriff W. G. Bralley for alleged false arrest, went to the jury in a Tarrant county district court at 5 o'clock Wednesday afternoon. No verdict had been returned late Wednesday evening, and the jury was excused until Thursday.

Witnesses for the defense Wednesday, including Sam Spence, district attorney, and Dick Morris, deputy sheriff, testified that a man named W. H. Burgess was indicted by the 30th district grand jury last January. Attorneys for Mr. Bralley sought to show that the sheriff had information that the man indicted was working at a packing house in Fort Worth and that he acted in good faith in making the arrest.

around the purpose of the investigators.

Charges Called False

"There is not a single charge of insinuation from any witness against your integrity nor any statement made against me that I cannot prove false when I am given an opportunity to testify," her letter to Johnson said.

"In tendering my resignation I want you to know that I have full confidence in the justness of your cause, that I believe in you and that I am standing squarely back of you in this trying hour."

After the resignation, the investigating committee heard other reports about Mrs. Hammonds.

"Eavesdropper" Reports

Jack Wheeler, Oklahoma City attorney, testified he overheard a conversation between Mrs. Hammonds and her husband, in which the health commissioner advised his wife to retire from public life.

"We're getting too much criticism about the way you're acting," Wheeler quoted Dr. Hammonds as saying. "You'd better quit and get out."

"Mrs. Hammonds replied, 'Shut your mouth. We'll only be here a short time and we had better get ours while we can. We'll be politically dead in two or three years.'" Wheeler testified.

The attorney said he was discovered by Dr. Hammonds, who asked him what he had heard. Mrs. Hammonds immediately took him into her office and suggested that he apply for a job in the state highway department, Wheeler said.

Little Theater to Make Social And Dramatic Debut Tonight

"Dulcy," Three-Act Comedy, First Production of Season Scheduled at Woman's Forum Auditorium

Promises of a brilliant social premiere were held in the unusual success of the Wednesday evening dress rehearsal of "Dulcy," the initial presentation of the reorganized Little Theater, to be given at the Woman's Forum Thursday evening. The comedy under the direction of James Daly, will be offered both Thursday and Friday nights.

On the eve of the first performance, in which the Little Theater will make both its social and its artistic bow to its public both in Wichita Falls and neighboring cities, tickets to the Thursday evening presentation were practically sold out. Demands for seats for the second performance were increasingly heavy all through Wednesday.

Social Event

Leaders in the organization laid their plans that the new Little Theater might make its debut during National Drama Week. The occasion has been planned as one of combined social and dramatic significance. Members of the committees who have worked to make the project a success will act as hostesses Thursday evening, serving coffee and wafers between the second and third acts.

The curtain will rise promptly at 8:15. It was emphatically stated Wednesday that no person will be allowed to enter the auditorium after the opening of act 1, until the intermission, so that the presentation will be in no way disturbed.

The curtain will rise on scenes and sets painted and designed by local talent. Miss Alice Welty, chairman of the stage craft committee, working with Miss Dorothy Campbell and Henry Harton, has painted the scenes and worked out the plans for the sets. Mrs. Guy R. Raley, assisted by Mrs. E. A. Bebb, assembled all the properties, and Mrs. J. T. Harrell and Mrs. J. E. Shipley have worked with the casting and the costuming.

Three Act Comedy

Music between the acts, all incidental music, will be furnished by Eithel Allen Nelson, who has agreed to act in that capacity for all the productions of the Little Theater this year.

"Dulcy" is a three act comedy, written by Kauffman and Connelly, with its entire action staged in the living room of a reasonably prosperous American home. It deals laughingly, but with kindness with the ludicrous efforts of an ambitious young wife to help her husband achieve success by inviting a business associate and all his family into Dulcy's own suburban home.

Miss Gretchen Comegys, a visiting Little Theater artist from Tulsa, carries the title role of the well-meaning but mistaken young wife, playing opposite Jerry Moffet as the discomfited husband. The part of Mrs. C. Roger Forbes will be taken by Mrs. A. D. Duck. Mrs. Ruth M. Henry will play Angela Forbes. Paul Bassett, C. Roger Forbes himself; Louis Bond will be William Parker; Edward Smith will impersonate Schuyler Van Dyke; Frank Bain will play Tom Sterrett; J. C. Straus Jr., Vincent Leach; W. D. Bent of Burkburnett, Blair Patterson; and Frank Sehman, Henry.

In complete costume and make up Wednesday evening, the cast worked together with remarkable smoothness and the rehearsal moved off with an almost professional finish. The work has been enthusiastically sponsored by Baldwin Montgomery, president, Mrs. P. Bowen, vice-president and business manager, Miss Alice Welty, secretary, Mrs. W. H. Caldwell, treasurer, and Mrs. Maurice Williams, auditor.

75 Attend Party Of Wichita Firm

Approximately 75 architects, painters and interior decorators of Wichita Falls, Burkburnett, Vernon, Iowa Park and Electra were present at a stag party given at the Kemp hotel Wednesday night by the Sherwin-Williams Paint company, which was featured by a demonstration of paint applications by Elmer Evenson and Fred Osterfield of the Sherwin-Williams factory at Cleveland, Ohio.

The purpose of the lecture-demonstration period, according to A. M. Howard, local manager of the paint company, was to acquaint local tradesmen with new types of paint, particularly for interior use, modern methods of application, various color schemes and combinations for finishing wood trim, and to emphasize the importance of using the highest quality of materials in any painting job.

Panels of fiber board were used by Mr. Osterfield in illustrating the mixing and application of various kinds of flat wall paint and enamels as they were discussed by Mr. Evenson.

Following the demonstration, short talks were given by Adolph Jackson and other local painting contractors, after which the party enjoyed an elaborate Dutch lunch in the grill room.

Stops Suffering From the Ills of Indigestion

You Can Eat What You Like and as Much as You Want

Which of These Men Do You Feel Like After Eating?

Are you one of those fortunate people who can partake of a hearty or even moderate meal without some after-feeling of distress or do you have to avoid certain foods because they disagree with you?

Do you have that hard, uncomfortable feeling in your stomach, or that miserable tired or sleepy feeling after eating?

A spoonful of Gordon's (formerly Gordon's Antiseptic) after meals, will, in a few days, make it possible for you to eat what you like and as much as you want without any after-feeling of discomfort. You will notice a difference after the first dose. Try it and see.

Gordon's stops fermentation (souring of food matter). It exercises an antiseptic as well as digestive effect, dissolves the excess acid, absorbs the gas that is present, and prevents more forming. It soothes and heals the irritated or inflamed condition of the stomach—the delicate membrane lining—made raw by acid.

It will bring quick relief in cases of indigestion, dyspepsia, constipation, gas, bloating, sour stomach, heartburn, excess acid, "that tired feeling," bad breath, sick headache, nervousness, when caused by faulty divestion, tone up the digestive organs and stimulate the stomach and bowels to their normal functions.

Gordon's is made in liquid form. A large 8-ounce bottle, price $1.00—less than 3 cents a dose. At druggists.

Are You Ready

When your Children Cry for It

Baby has little upsets at times. All your care cannot prevent them. But you can be prepared. Then you can do what any experienced nurse would do—what most physicians would tell you to do—give a few drops of plain Castoria. No sooner done than Baby is soothed; relief is just a matter of moments. Yet you have eased your child without use of a single doubtful drug; Castoria is vegetable. So it's safe to use as often as an infant has any little pain you cannot pat away. And it's always ready for the cruelest pangs of colic, or constipation, or diarrhea; effective, too, for older children. Twenty-five million bottles were bought last year.

DEVOL, Okla., Feb. 6—After more than two years without home banking facilities, residents of Devol were rejoicing today in the formation of the Citizens State bank of Devol, its directorate and officers including a number of the leading financiers and business men of Oklahoma and Texas.

Charter Approved

Charter for the institution has been approved by Graves C. Shell, Oklahoma state banking commissioner, and the new institution is expected to open within a short time. A capital stock of $15,000 was announced for the institution.

Officers of the new institution are B. R. Stephens, president, who is also president of the Bank of Elgin, Okla.; H. H. Carson of the City National bank of Wichita Falls, cashier; W. H. Clift of Lawton, Okla., and W. W. Manley of Devol, Okla., vice presidents.

Directors include B. R. Stephens, H. H. Carson, W. H. Clift, Lawton, Okla., banker and cotton man; P. A. Cope, Lawton, Okla., grain dealer; W. W. Manley, Devol, Okla., farmer and stockman; D. F. Odom of Devol, farmer and stockman, and Charles W. Crooks of Walters, Okla.

Strong Backing

Other leading stockholders in the institution include H. G. Ridings, Devol, large property owner; James Houston of Devol, owner of gins at Devol and Martha; J. W. Johnson of Fort Worth, lumberman and director of the First National bank of Fort Worth.

The directorate and list of stockholders in the institution presents an unusually strong financial background for an institution of its size, leaders said. A statement issued by officials invited the cooperation of citizens of Devol and community, with assurances that the institution would be ready to handle the business of this section in a capable and conservative manner.

CARSON FOUR YEARS WITH BANK HERE

Hoyse H. Carson, 2119 Broad street, manager of the collection department of the City National bank here for the last three and a half years, is to become cashier of the new Citizens State bank of Devol, Okla., according to information received from that town Wednesday.

Mr. Carson has been connected with the City National bank since 1924, working in the bookkeeping department until his appointment to his present position. Prior to his coming to Wichita Falls, he had three years of banking experience with the Bank of Elgin, at Elgin, Okla., and the First National bank of Comanche, Okla.

Mr. Carson stated that he and his family will continue to reside here until the opening of the new bank in Devol, which will probably take place this spring.

Oklahoma to Consider Bill Reducing License Fee for Red River Hunters

Copies of a bill written by Ben G. Oneal, president of the local chapter of the Izaak Walton league of America, which would extend to licensed Texas hunters the privilege of hunting ducks, geese and brant in the Red River bed under a special $2.00 license, have been forwarded to Judge Frank B. Burford of Oklahoma City for presentation to the Oklahoma legislature, it was learned Wednesday evening.

The proposed bill is regarded by sportsmen of Texas and Oklahoma, Mr. Oneal said, as the first step in a movement to establish comity between the two states in the matter of enjoyment of general privileges in the river bed between the two commonwealths. Under the present laws, Texas citizens are forbidden to hunt beyond the cut bank of Red River without a non-resident hunting license issued by the State of Oklahoma upon payment of a $15 fee. Penalty for violation of this law is a fine of not less than $100, or six months in jail. A recent case in which a young man living in Burkburnett was reported to have been charged with violation of the law, and fined $100 plus heavy costs, has served to hasten efforts both in Oklahoma and Texas to provide more equitable hunting rights in the mooted territory. The present law, which has been on the Oklahoma statute books for a long period, was said to be based upon the treaty of 1819 between Mexico and the United States, which was used in the original determination of the boundary line between the two states.

Through the efforts of Representative Cecil Storey, members of a delegation of Oklahoma legislators who were in Austin last week on business pertaining to settlement of title to a large section of Red River bed land, were interested in the need for some adjustment of the restrictions now imposed upon Texas hunters. Their efforts, together with those of national directors of the Izaak Walton league who live in Oklahoma, resulted in a request being made to Mr. Oneal for the drafting of a proposed bill to improve the situation.

A telegram from Judge Burford Wednesday stated that a number of Texas legislators are to be in Oklahoma City Thursday, and the bill was asked for in order that an effort may be made at this time to obtain consideration of its provisions.

As drafted by Mr. Oneal, the bill provides that qualified Texas hunters be permitted to hunt in the Red River bed during regular hunting seasons by payment of $2.00 for a special Red River license. The provision is similar to that included in the present fishing law in this state, which originated with the local Izaak Walton chapter, and which permits a non-resident five days of fishing privileges for a fee of $1.10. Sportmen living in counties bordering on and near the Red River are actively supporting the effort being made by Mr. Storey. Mr. Oneal and Oklahoma citizens to obtain for them the right to carry their pump guns over the river bank.

FIRST BASEMAN NEEDED TO COMPLETE SPUDDER PERSONNEL

THREE-I ROOK ONLY ASPIRANT

Experienced Right-Hander Could Be Added

By LARRY DAILEY
Record News Sports Editor

Jim Galloway must be figuring on playing first base for our Spudders. Jeems was a corking good first sacker and slashing hitter in his playing days, which ended only a couple of years ago. Running a bowling alley here with Pete Turgeon has kept him fit, and while he has played baseball for a score of years, the skipper isn't a decrepit old man by any means.

No more than Dempsey was a hollow shell when he fought Tunney at Chicago.

If pinned right down to it, I probably would admit that Galloway's day as an active player is over. But on looking over the Spudder roster one is struck by the scarcity of first basemen listed. Indeed, of a first baseMAN. For there is nary an experienced tosser who is a first sacker by trade listed among the 31 athletes on the Wichita Falls' reserve personnel.

A youngster named Dallas Clements is the only first baseman now possessed by the Spudders, and he seems removed from class A skill. At least, the young man's batting averages when he played in the Three-I league and Western association indicate he needs more work in loops of lesser classification before he is ready for the fast Texas wheel brand of ball.

Solutions to Mystery

There are two possible solutions to the Mystery of the Missing First Baseman. One is that Buck Stanton will be returned by the St. Louis Browns. The other is that a new first baseman will be acquired. Either is feasible.

My guess, entirely unofficial and merely conjecture, is that Stanton will be returned. But on the other glove, he may not. Like all rookies breaking into fast time, the Virginian's status is doubtful. He played great ball the last half of the 1928 campaign here and looked like a potential big leaguer. But he may be a year or two away from that class. However, since the disposal of Guy Sturdy to Birmingham the Browns have only Stanton as an understudy to Lu Blue. It may be that he will show such form down in Palm Beach that the St. Louis club will retain him.

Even if Buck isn't kept by the Brownies he might be sent to Milwaukee or Tulsa, instead of back to Wichita Falls.

Except for first base the Spudders are about set to open the season. At least one more right-hander who can step right in there and win ball games seems to be needed, however. Again a former Spudder, now a Brownie is to be considered for that place. Herb Cobb, from Pine Top, N. C., suh, is the gentleman in question. Perhaps the Brownies will return Herbie for further seasoning.

Payne and Steen Return

George Payne, the screw-ball artist, and Milt Steengrafe are the only veteran holdover chunkers. Both are righthanders. Harold Wiltse, acquired from the Browns, a lefthander, is figured as the successor to Mike Cvengros as the southpaw ace. In fact, Mike was THE Spudder southpaw. He was the only portsider we had last season.

Of the new slab additions, save for Wiltse, the most promising seems to be Ed Taber, purchased from New Haven of the Eastern loop, which like the Texas is a class A circuit. There are three other southpaw hurling candidates, including Chick Galeria, the bespectacled Californian, who played at the Spudder farm in Abilene. The roster of the Spudders:

Lapan, now a Dallas policeman, is figured to be the first-string catcher. There are worse receivers in the league than the veteran and not an athlete in the circuit is a more dangerous hitter than the pugnacious Pete. Jack Crouch, who led the Western association in batting last season and who is said to be a capable catcher, doubtless will be the other maskman retained. The other two receivers are semi-pros from California.

Kids Vie With Veterans

Three veteran infielders, Turgeon, Swenson and Benton, will find more or less opposition from promising rookies. Turgeon, of course, is practically assured the second base job. For several years he has been one of the greatest keystoners in the Texas league; one of the best in minor league baseball, in fact.

Swenson had an indifferent season last campaign after a brilliant Spudder debut in 1927. Late in reporting last year, Wally was beset with illness and injury throughout the campaign. He is going to be one of the first arrivals at camp this spring, he says. Wally will find opposition for the hot corner berth from Milton Gordon, a highly-touted fellow from the class B New York-Pennsylvania league.

Rabbit Benton will play shortstop or will be untility infielder. Debs Garms, the kid from Abilene, looked like a sweet prospect in a few games here last fall. Another promising shortstop is George Spiers from the South Atlantic league.

Two veteran outfielders will return, with one certain to play regularly. They are Howard Fitzgerald, who occupies a place in the garden similar to that of Turgeon in the infield. One of the best, is Howard. Red Bennett, purchased from Milwaukee, but who played the past two seasons for Tulsa, doubtless will be the left fielder. A terrific hitter is the stocky Arkansan.

Four outfielders probably will be carried and several kids will vie for the fourth berth, including Garland Orr and Dick Sullivan. These lads showed sufficient promise in a few appearances here last year to warrant more extensive looking over.

Knockouts Mark Boxing Program

Hall Wins in First Round And Scott in Third

Knockouts marked the boxing show last night at Alex Rose' gym, 821 Indiana avenue. Both the windup and semi-windup ended in kayos.

Cyclone Hall, the Childress middleweight, stopped Russell Backwith of Leedy, Okla., in the very first round. A few punches to the face and body by Hall, a clinch, some swings by Beckwith, some more socks to the midriff and the Sooner stretched his length on the canvas for the 10-count.

Howard Scott also continued his string of victories in a ring here by knocking out Corporal Barnes of Fort Sill, Okla., in the third round. Barnes was floored twice before the starry Electra feather administered the coup de grace.

Jimmy Wilson of Oklahoma City and Virgil Oden of Wichita Falls fought six slashing rounds in the feature bout of the show. Wilson landed frequently to the jaw with his right. Oden did his greatest damage at close range. The scrap got a big hand from the ringsiders.

A bout between a pair of paperweights was stopped in two rounds. Frenchy LeFevre failed to show up for his bout with Battling Sturdivant.

Another full house saw the bill.

GENE'S TROPHY STARTS DEBATE

Tommy Burns' Name Left Off as Champion

By DAMON RUNYON
(Copyright, 1929, by Universal Service, Inc.)

NEW YORK, Feb. 6.—Great is the gabble over the omission of the name of Noah Brusso, otherwise Tommy Burns, from the list of heavyweight champions of the world, on the Muldoon-Tunney trophy. It has revived a general discussion of the trophy, and its purposes.

This trophy was conceived by Mr. James Joseph Tunney, formerly Gene, when he announced his retirement from the sour science. The name of Muldoon was appended as a compliment to the noblest Roman of them all, William Muldoon.

The idea of the trophy, in a general way, is that it shall be awarded to that heavyweight who, in the opinion of the Muldoon-Tunney trophy committee, shall have established himself at the end of a period of pulling and hauling, as the best of the current heavies; the thought being, I presume, that the committee selection may be recognized as Mr. Tunney's successor.

The trophy committee is made up of New Yorkers, and some of the critics complain that this is wrong, that the committee should have been drawn from the country at large. I do not see why, inasmuch as most of the heavyweight competition takes place in New York, and the committeemen can view it here without undue travel and exertion. And with the competition close at hand, the committeemen will view it in person, rather than taking someone else's opinion.

High Class Sportsmen

Certainly no one can say that the committeemen are apt to be influenced by sectional prejudice. They are high class sportsmen to begin with, and my operatives who have been investigating the matter tell me that most of them originated outside New York, anyway. I think we can dispense with this criticism as wholly trivial, and of no consequence.

Other critics contend that the committee has no right to elect a successor to Mr. Tunney. That titles are won in the ring. And so forth. And so on.

To which my answer is that while the committee may not have the right aforesaid, it at least has the might. And while the winner of the Muldoon-trophy committee may not receive general recognition as Mr. Tunney's successor, he will at least be recognized as such in New York.

As for the omission of the name of Noah Brusso, otherwise Burns, from the list that includes John L. Sullivan, James J. Corbett, Robert Fitzsimmons, James J. Jeffries, John Arthur Johnson, Jess Willard, Jack Dempsey and Mr. Tunney, there is assuredly ground for debate as to whether the Canadian was ever the lawful heavyweight champion of the world.

How Burns Won "Title"

James J. Jeffries went into retirement. Marvin Hart of Kentucky, licked Jack Root in a bout that Jeffries refereed, and Jeff pronounced Marvin the heavyweight champ. Burns out-scuffled Marvin in a 20-round bout, and on the strength of that claimed the heavyweight title.

Hart had previously snatched a decision over John Arthur Johnson, although the old timers who remember the bout out on the west coast are still laughing merrily over the award. Philadelphia Jack O'Brien was a fellow-claimant of the title with Burns, and Burns beat him in 20 rounds in Los Angeles, so Burns came to be recognized as about the best of the heavies of the day.

But his allegation that he was the heavyweight champion was not seriously accepted in every quarter. Jeffries certainly had no license to will his title to anyone. Other champions had tried the same thing without success. I grant you that Mr. Tunney has no license to bequeath his title either. But that isn't the purpose of the Muldoon-Tunney trophy. By no means.

Hart Has Claim

Mr. Tunney has nominated no individual, but has thrown the thing open to general competition. The committee errs only in attempting to limit that competition. If Burns was heavyweight champion of the world, so was Marvin Hart of Kentucky.

John Arthur Johnson beat Tommy Burns in Australia and claimed the title. But not until Johnson beat Jeffries at Reno was Lil' Artha generally recognized as the heavyweight champion of the world. Between his defeat of Burns and his defeat of Jeffries, there were many dissenters to his claim.

Under legalized, commission-controlled boxing, the game has changed since the days when boxers could claim titles. The Muldoon-Tunney trophy is in line with the regulation of things. Mere claims mean nothing.

Sammy Mandell is lightweight champion of the world through a victory over Rocky Kansas, who won his title from Jimmy Goodrich, the winner of a lightweight elimination tournament that followed the retirement of Benny Leonard. No one now questions Mandell's title, though there was much squawking when Goodrich was pronounced champion by New York state.

Consider your transportation solely from a standpoint of cost. The cost of taking a taxi will average 35c a mile without tips. Or driving your own car (on a basis of conservative statistics considering only medium priced cars) the average cost of mileage is found to be close to 20c per mile.

Compare this with street car fare and figure the difference in cost of a year's transportation.

Aside from safety, comfort and convenience isn't economy, alone, a reason why you should prefer street car transportation?

Tex Rickard, the Lone Wolf, Died As He Lived, Playing Winning Hand

Death in Prosaic Surroundings Ended Career of Greatest and Most Picturesque Sports Promoter

By JACK LAWRENCE
(Copyright, 1929, by the New York American, Inc., and Universal Service, Inc.)

NEW YORK, Feb. 6.—Tex Rickard again talked of retiring at the Dempsey-Firpo fight at the Polo Grounds in September, 1923. He even hinted that he might return to Texas and buy the ranch that had been the dream of his youth. But old Madison Square garden was beginning to prosper and the place held Rickard's interest.

Finding a profitable use for the garden during the summer months was a problem for the promoter, but he solved this by installing a gigantic swimming pool. Despite the fact that a young man was drowned in this pool the day it opened, it proved to be a highly successful enterprise from a financial standpoint.

The opening of the pool gave Rickard his first vision of a huge arena designed for a wide variety of sports. It was the vision that materialized in the construction of the huge sports palace on Eighth avenue, which stands as a monument to Tex Rickard's memory.

Rickard wanted to install an ice rink in the old garden and revive hockey in New York as a winter sport, but he found that the cost of putting in the necessary machinery was prohibitive. Despite pessimistic predictions from his friends, Rickard always believed that professional hockey would pay in New York. The Rangers and the New York Americans offer ample proof of how correct he was.

The heavyweight division experienced a slump after the Dempsey-Firpo battle. With the exception of Harry Wills, the negro heavyweight champion, there did not seem to be an outstanding challenger in sight.

Wills and his venerable manager, Paddy Mullins, were hurling daily challenges at Dempsey. And the champion and his manager, Jack Kearns, kept firing back the same reply:

"Find a reliable promoter to put the show on and we'll fight."

Tex Rickard was not interested.

Gene Tunney at that time was hardly regarded as any better than a good second-rater. Under the management of "Doc" Eagley he was meeting light heavyweights and heavyweights with fair success. It was not until his contract was purchased from Bagley by Billy Gibson that Gene actually started his climb to fame. Rickard and Gibson cooperated in building Tunney into a formidable challenger for Jack Dempsey for the title. And it can be said here that the business for professional pugilism has seldom known more adroit manoeuvering than that which led up to the Philadelphia fight in which Tunney became the champion. It was so adroit that it verged on the scandalous.

Jack Dempsey and Tex Rickard had decided upon Gene Tunney as the next challenger. Dempsey, I believe, thought that Gene would be a setup and a much easier opponent that Wills. He fooled himself in that respect.

Rickard and Gibson made just two moves that made Gene Tunney the outstanding challenger for the title. No further moves were necessary.

Tom Gibbons, of St. Paul, a brilliant boxer with a punch, had gone 15 rounds with Dempsey at Shelby, Mont., in a bout for the championship of the world. That achievement made him an impressive figure in the heavyweight division. That was in 1925.

About the same time, at the Queensboro stadium in Long Island City, an Irish battler named Bartley Madden went 15 rounds with Harry Wills and made a fair showing. He was on his feet and fighting victoriously at the end.

Messrs. Gibson and Rickard faced a situation that was obvious. If Gene Tunney could knock off both Tom Gibbons and Bartley Madden, it would put a complete crusher on Harry Wills' claim to recognition as the outstanding challenger. Gibson made those two matches and in each one Gene Tunney scored a knockout. Many fingers of suspicion were pointed at those two fights, and the fistic atmosphere was rife with ugly rumors, but nothing was ever proved.

Tunney knocked out Tom Gibbons in 12 rounds at the Polo grounds under the most unimpressive circumstances and then he polished off Bartley Madden in three rounds in a bout that took place in the middle West. This affair left a particularly annoying aroma. But the two victories won Gene Tunney his chance with Dempsey. And they also eliminated Harry Wills.

What happened after that is too recent history to need repeating. In the battle of the Sesqui-Centenniah staged in Philadelphia, Sept. 23, 1926, Tunney won the decision and the title in 10 rounds. The fight drew the record-breaking gate of $1,894,223.

In Chicago a year later almost to a day, Tunney won again, and this time the gate established the record that still stands. The receipts amounted to $2,650,000.

After that colossal affair, Tex Rickard again talked of retiring, but the roar of the crowd was still sweet music to his ears. He bought a yacht, married again and made some attempt to tear himself away from the life of turmoil and excitement that he had known for so long. But when death struck him down he was again engaged in the old racket that had always fascinated him. He was in Florida planning the Sharkey-Stribling battle which was to pave the way for Dempsey's return to the ring.

Today all that remains of Tex Rickard lies in Woodlawn cemetery, in the Bronx, among prosaic surroundings. It seems as though his romantic career should have had a more dramatic ending.

Rickard was a man with a million friends, but without intimacies. He died as he had lived, hiding his true feelings behind a poker face, a visage that was as mystifying and unreadable as the portrait of Mona Lisa.

His was a lonely figure in the midst of a milling throng. There was something almost pathetic about the loneliness that seemed to surround the man. Those who thought they knew him best invariably discovered that they didn't know him at all. The spirit that lay behind that inscrutable face seemed to be sealed in a fathomless melancholy.

He was a lone wolf roaring a lone but winning hand.

Boston Baseball Report Delayed

BOSTON, Feb. 6. (UP)—A split in the Boston finance commission, over the strength of the language which should be used in the report of its finding may delay publication of the report several days.

Charged by President Emil Fuchs of the Braves that he had been approached by a member of the city council, who wanted a bribe of $55,000 to expedite action on the Sunday sports bill were the basis of the investigation. Counter-charges that the Braves violated the corrupt practices act growing out of testimony made at the same hearing, are being investigated by Attorney General Joseph E. Warner.

Herman Paid Purse for K.O. Of Sid Terris

NEW YORK, Feb. 6. (UP)—The investigation of the recent Sid Terris-Babe Herman bout ended today when the New York state athletic commission gave Terris his check which has previously been held up.

Terris entered the ring a 6 to 1 favorite over the California lightweight only to be knocked out in the sixth round after leading all the way.

"Was Herman really trying," Commissioner James Farley asked Johnny Keyes, Herman's manager.

"Well, he knocked out Terris," Keyes answered.

Farley couldn't get around that answer and the investigation ended.

Max Schmeling, German heavyweight, received two-thirds of his purse—about $8,700—for knocking out Johnny Risko in the ninth round last Friday night. The other was held by the commission because of an attachment on Max Bulow, Schmeling's German manager.

DAILY DOPE

By LARRY DAILEY

WHILE WAITING with what patience one can muster these dreary wintry days for spring, spring, beautiful spring, and the start of baseball training, that which is jokingly referred to as my mind keeps turning to the old game. And of its great players of history; not merely great, but the superstars of the diamond. I spent a sleepless night recently in picking my all-star, all-time nine. Here it is:

Pitchers—Christy Mathewson and Rube Waddell.
Catcher—Roger Bresnahan.
First base—Hal Chase.
Second base—Eddie Collins.
Third base—Jimmy Collins.
Shortstop—Hans Wagner.
Left field—Ty Cobb.
Center field—Tris Speaker.
Right field—Babe Ruth.

THERE, MY readers, is a team. I don't believe its equal in modern baseball could be found. However, one might dispute the naming of some of those athletes. I have named a righthand and a lefthand pitcher. Walter Johnson and Herb Pennock might well supplant Matty and the eccentric Rube. There is little to choose. Nothing, in fact. A mere matter of opinion.

Ray Schalk of Johnny Kling likewise might be fancied over Bresnahan. There are only two outstanding first basemen of all time: Hal Chase and George Sisler. Another tossup.

BASEBALL has known many great second basemen. Nap Lajoie, Rogers Hornsby and Frankie Frisch, all immortals of the keystone sack. But I believe Eddie Collins was the greatest all-around second sacker who ever made a pivot on a double play.

There doesn't seem much argument over the left side of the infield. Jimmy Collins, of a score years ago, and Hans Wagner, the flying Dutchman, stand out as the foremost of all third basemen and shortstops.

Nor is there any argument over the outfield. Cobb, Ruth, Speaker, the greatest all-around gardeners in the history of the sport.

HOW ABOUT your idea of such a team, Mr., Mrs. or Miss Fan? Perhaps you think Johnson a greater pitcher than Matty. Maybe there are other players you prefer to my selection. Write them in and let me print them in this column. I need fuel for these last weeks of the Hot Stove league!

Major Out to Shatter Own Record in Florida

NEW YORK, Feb. 6 (AP)—Major H. O. D. Segrave, first racer ever to drive an automobile faster than 200 miles an hour, arrived from England today to attempt to regain the world speed record at Daytona Beach, Fla.

With him he brought his new car, the Golden Arrow, which has a sight on it like a rifle to help the driver hold a straight course.

The race against time will be held between the first and fifteenth of March. The present record, established by Ray Keech in April of last year, is 207½ miles an hour.

The Golden Arrow is 27 feet eight inches long with a wheel tread of five feet. It has a 12-cylinder 900-horsepower airplane motor. Low gear is 81 miles an hour and second speed 160.

CURING CROSSED EYES

There are several types of crossed eyes, the most common being the condition in which one eye turns in toward the nose. This is called convergent strabismus or squint, and as this is the most common type of crossed eye, I will explain in as simple a manner as possible how this condition can often be corrected without surgical means.

It is of the utmost importance that the proper treatment be started in time in order to insure good results. The first symptoms of crossed eyes usually appear in children between the ages of 18 months and four years. As soon as the parents notice any deviation in the child's eyes, this condition must not be ignored or only lightly considered as only something that the child will outgrow. As the days go by the case becomes increasingly more difficult to cure without surgical measures. As I explained yesterday, an operation can accomplish only one effect and that is to make the eye straight, but curiously the patient is only able to use in either one of the other of his eyes afterwards.

The non-surgical treatments of crossed eyes will succeed if started in time, and the results accomplished come from the simple plan of exercising the weakened eye muscles so that finally all of these muscles function normally as nature intended. The mother will first notice that the eye occasionally turns toward the nose. If she will observe carefully, she will find that this happens when the child is especially tired or when he becomes overly excited. When he has thus wasted his general energy there will be less vitality for the eye muscles or any other special part of the body. The fact is that the weak muscles are unable to move the eyes normally, although after a good night's sleep the general strength of the body will be sufficiently restored so that no squint is noticed until the child again becomes tired.

At the first sign of the squint the child should be taken to an optometrist for a careful eye examination. It will be found that one eye has a poorer vision than the other. Glasses will be advised for improving the vision of the poorer eye. The good eye is bandaged at given intervals so that the poorer eye will be forced to see better. It takes a great deal of time and patience, but finally after a few months have elapsed, both eyes begin to see at the same time and diplopia of double vision occurs. That is, the two eyes for perhaps the first time in the child's life can see at the same time, but each eye is a separate picture causing everything to be double. Do not think that the child's eyes are ruined at this stage for this condition is exactly what the optometrist is trying to produce. The next step is to create perfect fusion where the child sees only one object. To accomplish this the doctor uses such instruments as the amblyoscope, the kratometer and myoculator. It is usually only a short time from the stage of double vision to single vision and no crossed eyes, and a distressing lifelong handicap is removed.

Let me repeat that the success of a cure depends upon early observation and treatment.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Massage for Broken Hip

Question: Mrs. P. A. asks: "What about massage for a broken hip that has been in a cast for a long time? It is very painful."

Answer: The massage, which should be given while the broken hip is mending, is sometimes rather painful if it is necessary to break down adhesions. Otherwise, there should be little discomfort felt and in fact the treatment usually has quite a pleasant effect.

Mayonnaise and Arthritis

Question: Mrs. P. D. asks: "Can one have mayonnaise on the salad vegetables mentioned in your cleansing diet, and also can anyone with arthritis have creamed vegetables or put butter over them when cooked?"

Answer: I do not advise the use of the mayonnaise on the salad vegetables while following the cleansing diet. With arthritis one may use butter over the vegetables but it is better to avoid cream and milk until the painful symptoms have subsided. Never use flour for thickening the vegetables.

Normal Temperature

Question: Mrs. F. V. asks: "Is a temperature of 99 degrees considered a fever temperature? I have been told that 98.6 is the average normal temperature and that a person in good health may have a temperature of 99 degrees. Is this correct?"

Answer: It is undoubtedly possible that some people have a normal temperature of 99 degrees. However, if this temperature only comes on from two to four in the afternoon it may be a sign of some inflammatory process going on in the body.

Two Black Crows

MORAN AND MACK

MORAN: Big boy, what's become of all them customers what used to patronize this lunch waggin'?

MACK: They is patronizin' in local cemetery.

MORAN: Is we run out of clients?

MACK: They is now all vegetarians.

MORAN: Whatsa vegetarian?

MACK: Thatsa man what objects to worms in his chestnuts.

MORAN: How about trading this lunch wagon for somethin'?

MACK: I'm willin' to trade it for a Chinese lantern without a candle in it.

MORAN: Why don't yo' trade it for a bicycle?

MACK: I ain't gotta pump.

MORAN: Does yo' know anythin' about th' garage bizness?

MACK: No, but I kin play a trombone.

MORAN: I'm wild about music.

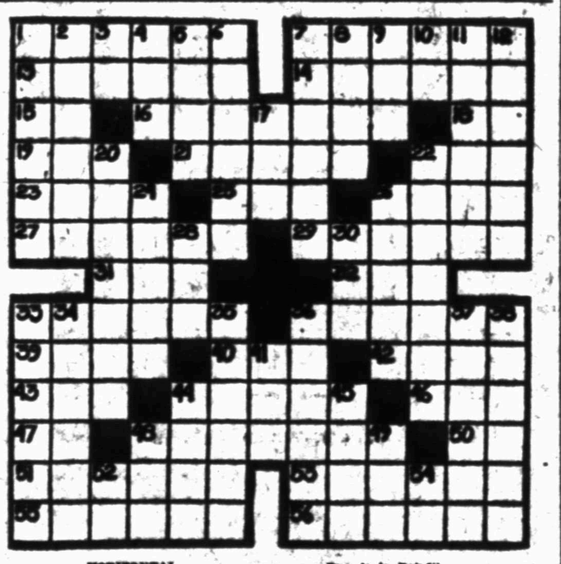

MACK: So is an organ-grinder's monkey.

The Two Black Crows are on their way out of the lunch-wagon industry. Egghead's cooking turned a big town into the Deserted Village. Big Boy lost two fingers, one in the meat grinder and the other in the cash register.

A temporary injunction, restraining Young county from the collection of taxes on oil leases held by the Panhandle Refining company, granted by Judge Allan D. Montgomery last week, has been continued until the March term of the 30th district court. A hearing on the original order, set for Wednesday, was waived by the county and the present status of the matter continued for another month.

The injunction chiefly involves the McCluskey lease, a tract of 167 acres of Archer county oil land, valued according to the Young county assessments at more than $700,000. The company claims that the valuation is excessive, putting its own figure at a little more than $167,000.

Spot Gasoline Mart Shows Little Change

Special to The Record News.

TULSA, Okla., Feb. 6—Oklahoma refiners reported the spot gasoline market unchanged Monday. Rumors of some U. S. motor being quoted as low as 6½ cents developed the fact that it was "off specifications," and all motor fuel that met specifications is still at 7 cents a gallon in tank cars.

Refiners are slowing up crude runs to stills and thus helping the situation, but further curtailment in this line is needed before any real improvement in the market can develop. Gasoline stocks are too high.

Gas oil is still scarce, the 32-36 grade commanding 3 cents in tank car lots. Kerosene distillate, the 33-40 grade, is bringing 4 cents, and 41-43 grade of kerosene is at 5 to 5¼ cents.

No more tankwagon disturbances have been reported.

Mariand Production company is resuming drilling at 3825 feet at No. 1 Lockhart, in the northwest corner of 31-21s-36e, which made from 75 to 100 barrels a day at 3822 feet. It was accompanied by 1,000,000 feet of gas.

The Mid-Kansas also will take over the pipeline and the 40-acre loading rack now under construction by the Ramsey company.

OKLAHOMA CITY—Sunray Oil and others have set a five-inch casing at 3780 feet in No. 1 Quier, in the southeast of the southeast of the southwest of 33-15-3w, in Logan county, and will resume drilling soon on the wildcat which was started several months ago.

TULSA.—A Maud pool gusher averaging 125 barrels per hour from the Misener sand, or at the rate of about 3,000 barrels daily, was brought in yesterday by the Pure Oil company, in its No. 4 Wiley, in 8-8-5. Misener sand was topped at 4037 feet and drilled but eight feet into 4045 feet. It put 1,962 barrels of oil into the tanks the first 16 hours gauge.

Gypsy Oil company has completed for 900 barrels daily on the air lift its No. 1 Coker in the northeast corner of the southeast of 10-8-5, Maud pool. Simpson sand was drilled from 4236 to 4263 feet. NEW YORK COTTON

NEW YORK, Feb. 6. (AP)—A somewhat irregular opening was followed by advances in the cotton market today. The advance was accompanied by reports of better trade demand and a firmer technical position. May contracts sold up from 19.65 to 19.80 and closed at 19.79. The general market closed very steady at net advances of 12 to 14 points.

The opening was steady at an advance of 3 points to a decline of 5 points. Near months were relatively steady on some overnight buying orders. Later deliveries appeared to be sold on the relatively easy ruling of Liverpool. Old crop positions sold back to a shade under yesterday's closing quotations right after the opening, but the selling was comparatively small and the market soon turned steadier on covering and trade buying.

No particular news factor was stressed in connection with the slow rally which followed. Brokers said the market looked as if it had been well liquidated. July advanced to 19.48, new October contracts 19.23 and closing prices were at about the best of the day on active positions. Trading was very quiet during the greater part of the day, but became a little more active on the late rally when the covering appeared to be more general. March liquidations continued, but consisted largely of switching from March to later deliveries, while the March-May difference widened to about 9 points at one time, it was 7 points at the close of yesterday.

Reports from the South complained of delays in coming crop preparations as a result of recent unfavorable weather, but the new crop months just about held their own with the rest of the list after a relatively easy opening. Private cables said that continental buying of distant months had been supplied by Bombay liquidation in the Liverpool market and that sales of cotton cloth and yarns were unimportant, with production normal. Port receipts today, 16,745 bales. United States port stocks, 2,167,909. Exports today, 31,233, making 5,808,568 this season.

NEW ORLEANS COTTON

NEW ORLEANS, Feb. 6. (AP)—The cotton market was moderately active today and advanced under good trade buying and shorts covering, which developed a scarcity of contracts. May, after opening at 19.06, advanced to 19.20 and closed one point under the latter figure for a net advance of 13 points. The general market closed very steady at net gains of 14 to 15 points.

Liverpool cables were lower than due, but the local market ignored this influence and opened steady at an advance of 1 to 3 points. There was some additional buying after the start and March traded to 19.02, May 19.07 and July 19.08, or 3 points above yesterday's close.

There was some selling by scalpers after an initial bulge and the market receded to around yesterday's level, but the continued unfavorable weather in the belt which traders believed would further hamper crop preparations brought out a good demand, which around noon carried March to 19.04, May to 19.13 and July 19.14, or 7 to 9 points above the previous close.

Demand tapered off around the advance and prices reacted a few points, but in the early afternoon expectations of a bullish fertilizer statement by the Fertilizer Association increased renewed trade buying and some covering with offerings of contracts scarce. As a result active positions advanced to new highs for the day, with March at 19.14, May at 19.21, July 19.27, or 15 to 16 points above the previous close. Final prices were within one point of the top.

Bay State Welcomes Return of Sea Hero

BOSTON, Feb. 6. (INS)—A former Massachusetts newsboy came home to his native state today acclaimed as a hero of the sea. State and city joined in paying tribute to Capt. George Fried, hero of the Italian freighter Florida rescue.

The gallant commander of an ocean liner, who once sold newspapers on the streets of Worcester and who saw his first ship in Boston, was the central figure in an almost continual round of feting. And it will continue tomorrow in his "old home town," Worcester.

Guesswork on Federal Reserve Reports Causes Steady Selling

By BROADAN WALL

NEW YORK, Feb. 6. (UB)—Conflicting reports of what the federal reserve would announce tomorrow caused steady selling that closed the stock market lower today. Prices were advancing early under influence of easier money conditions when report reached the street that the reserve would have an important statement on "credit." None knew what it would be but all guessed. As a result continued liquidation and quite heavy short selling was experienced.

Drop in the call rate from 7 to 6 per cent failed to stem the tide and the decline continued until the last hour when better support was evidenced. Airplane stocks lost most, with Wright dropping 15 and Curtiss 6½. Combustion and Vanadium were the outstanding features of strength, both gaining over 5 points for the day. Steel lost over 2 points, Montgomery Ward 3, and declines of from 1 to 2 points were frequent. Rails and oils were quiet but irregular throughout.

Support given the market in the final trading was due to belief that the statement from the reserve authorities would not prove bearish. Those familiar with banking affairs and international financial conditions read with interest the Washington advices telling of conferences of Sir Montagu Norman with Secretary Mellon and the reserve heads. Knowing business conditions in England it was realized how vital it was for the Bank of England to refrain from raising its rate if at all possible. An advance in England would mean similar action here soon after, but as the Washington advices, both private and otherwise, came through there was stronger hope that there would be no increase abroad. The ease in the call rate represented the definite end of the period of Feb. 1 tightness, so that if the fear of a higher rediscount rate were removed for the time being the main bearish influence would be dispated.

Late support in Steel was regarded as significant, particularly in view of recent rumors that directors were planning stock dividend declaration for the April meeting. General Motors directors meet tomorrow and are expected to declare regular dividend at the annual rate of $3 a share on the new stock. Quarterly earnings figures are likely to be held on a day or so. Favorable action of the senate on the cruiser bill helped Bethlehem Steel with the most important interests in the stock holding to their position despite the unsettlement in the market as a whole.

Bearish feelings raised by the conflicting reports of what the reserve board would announce were enhanced by advices circulated by several brokerage firms concerning reputed banking syndicate. One Broadway firm even mentioned the name of the most powerful banking firm as among those who recently liquidated some holdings.

Continental Can stood in early strength by reason of the new sponsorship told of here yesterday. The next phase will be issuance of special analysis of the company's position now being prepared by a leading stock exchange firm. There was some quiet absorption of General Cigar due to favorable reports of earnings that indicated it was selling behind most other industrial stocks on the basis of income to stock market valuation. Texas Gulf also enjoyed good demand for a while. Important interests who liquidated several months ago have been quietly reaccumulating the stock.

W. C. Durant et al. celebrated in International Combustion. They have struggled with the stock for many months and now think they see daylight. A special train leaves this city shortly after noon tomorrow for New Brunswick, N. J., taking Mr. Durant and a party of about 70 to visit the new plant of Combustion, where operations will be conducted in conjunction with Public Service of New Jersey. Opening of this plant, it is expected, will mark the turning point in Combustion earnings.

MIDWESTERN REVIEW

KANSAS CITY, Feb. 6. (AP)—(United States Department of Agriculture)—Fresh receipts of cattle, estimated at 30,000, were 12,000 less than last Wednesday and 8,000 under the same day a year ago. Lighter supplies as a rule reflected a stronger feeling in the beef steer and yearling trade and values were strong to 25c higher, with the lighter weight offerings given the best action. Strictly choice grades were lacking and the day's top heifer at $14.40 on best heavy steers at Chicago. All classes of she stock met a better outlet at steady to strong prices. Trade in stocker and feeder steers continued slow, but the limited receipts at about steady prices.

Trade in hogs was somewhat uneven. Opening sales were mostly 10c to 15c under Saturday's levels, but a broad shipping demand at the close resulted in an active trade, and the early loss was fully regained. Some markets reported slightly higher levels on the finish. The top at Chicago reached $9.90 at the close. Offerings totaled around 132,000, as compared with 134,122 a week ago and 94,654 a year ago.

Sheep trade met a slow trade with price weak to 25c under Tuesday's levels. Closely sorted lots brought $17.15 at Chicago for the top, but the bulk of desirable grades sold from $16.00 down. Mature sheep held steady, with best fat ewes going at $9.75 at Kansas City. Total arrivals were 44,000, against 46,067 a week ago and 41,188 a year ago.

CRASH VICTIM ASKS $41,000

Suit Follows Collision Of Auto With Truck

Damages in the sum of $41,000 are sought from Samuel L. Green and others in a suit filed by E. J. Jenkins in the office of the district clerk Wednesday afternoon.

The plaintiff claims to have been permanently injured in an automobile accident on the Electra-K. M. A. highway on Oct. 2, 1928. According to his petition, the car which he was driving collided with a truck belonging to the defendant and loaded with a protruding iron tank. Mr. Jenkins declares that the tank crushed his car, knocked him away from the wheel, and caused him to lose control of the machine.

The plaintiff suffered injuries which resulted in concussion of the brain and left his eyes weak and his mind affected, his petition says. He lay unconscious for six weeks after the accident, he allages, and is now subject to epilepsy and paralysis as a result of his injuries.

He asked $1000 damages for his car and $40,000 for his own injuries.

How To Get Rid Of Catarrh

A Simple, Safe, Inexpensive Method that Clears Out Head, Nose, Throat

There is no disease more offensive or disagreeable, or no disease that will lead to as much serious trouble as catarrh. You can now get rid of it by a simple, safe, pleasant home remedy discovered by Dr. Blosser, a catarrh specialist.

Dr. Blosser's Remedy is composed of medicinal herbs, flowers and berries which you smoke in a small pipe or cigarette. The warm smoke-vapor is inhaled into the air passages of the head, nose, throat and lungs and carries medicine where sprays, douches and salves cannot possibly reach. Its effect is soothing and healing. It contains no cubebs or tobacco, and may be used by children as well as adults.

If you suffer from any catarrhal trouble, catarrhal deafness, asthma, hay fever, bronchial irritations, or are subject to frequent colds, get from any druggist a pocket-size package of Dr. Blosser's Cigarettes, and prove for yourself their pleasant, beneficial effects.

The time for hearing and seeing "Interference." Paramount's first all talking motion picture, is rapidly nearing its end. This remarkable picture closes at the Strand Saturday.

There is a show coming to the Strand Sunday that is deserving of more than a few words.

A woman named Anne Nichols, known to only a few persons, had a manuscript for a show. She had done enough theatrical work that she could attract the kindly interest and advice of her friends but not their money. Such notable western actors as Gladys George and her husband, Ben Erway, turned down Miss Nichols' offer of considerable stock in the show if they would play the leading roles on a basis of "depend on the box office receipts for your pay—no receipts, no pay—big receipts, big pay."

At last she got about $5,000 together, and a large part of it was from stage hands who will fall for anything.

The actors in that cast were generally what is known as "hams," and they were glad to get any kind of work if it paid or not.

The rest of the history of "Able's Irish Rose" is known to the entire world, for since that day, almost 10 years ago, it has broken all the major world records for long runs and for cash receipts in the box office. Boys who were freshmen at New York university when "Abie" started at the old Republic theater in New York, were graduated, married and had children when it finally closed.

If the show goes over in the movie world like it did on the legitimate stage, these children may be old enough to see the show on the talking movies, while it is still a major attraction.

An odd thing in connection with the major characters listed by Paramount for this play is the absence of Jewish actors. With the Jolsons, the Fanny Brices, the Talmadges and so many of the Jewish race appearing in the films, this seems as odd as the recent announcement of the casting of Dolores del Rio, the Mexican star, as the fair haired Evangeline in Longfellow's immortal poem which is being filmed.

LIONS GIVEN SCIENCE TALK

Cordell Shows Work Of Microscopic Bodies

A motion picture film entitled "Beyond the Microscope," produced in the laboratories of the General Electric company, was shown before the weekly meeting of the Lions club at the Y. W. C. A. Wednesday noon by P. M. Cordell of the Texas Electric Service company.

The picture attempts to portray for the comprehension of laymen the functions of microscopic bodies, known to science as electrons and atomic nuclei, in the formation of the molecules of which water and other physical elements are composed. The division of water into hydrogen and oxygen gases was shown, and the symmetrical arrangements assumed by the tiny particles of water when turned to ice or snow were demonstrated on the screen.

Ernest Reeves, tenor, with George Kerner at the piano, entertained with "In the Garden of Your Heart" and "Silver Moon," the latter featuring Mr. Reeves' noted yodeling. E. F. Bohmfalk led the members in a singsong.

REPAY CALIFORNIA

WASHINGTON, Feb. 6 (AP)—The senate voted today to retain in the war department appropriation bill an item of $4,370,000 to reimburse the state of California for flood control work done by the state on the Sacramento river.

City Tax Payments Aroupd "Zero" Point

City tax collections fell off Wednesday to almost nothing, it was learned at the office of the city tax assessor and collector.

This was believed due at the office to a lack of knowledge on the part of the public that the city taxes may still be paid without a penalty.

Those who wish to avoid the payment of the 10 per cent tax penalty on their 1928 taxes were urged to make their payments immediately.

Rotary Club to Hear Talk on "Liquid Gas"

Members of the Rotary club will hear a classification talk on "Liquid Gas" by Samuel R. Hord in their regular weekly meeting Thursday noon at the Kemp hotel, according to R. E. Shepherd, program chairman.

A singsong and other musical numbers will comprise the entertainment for the meeting.

KGKO Program

The Honey Boy and Sassafras KGKO minstrel, comprising a personnel of about 25 members, and directed by George Hodgins, interlocutor, will present its initial performance Thursday night as the closing feature of the program to be given at the local radio station.

Rehearsals have been held during the last several days, it was announced, and a number of road engagements have been accepted tentatively by the new amusement organization.

Thursday evening's program was announced as follows:
7:00 to 7:20—Bob and Jerry.
7:20 to 8:30—Little Rovers' orchestra.
8:30 to 9:00—Three Deuces, from Lawton, Okla.
9:00 to 10:00—Honey Boy and Sassafras KGKO minstrel.

Postoffice Seeks Owners of Variety Of Unclaimed Christmas Packages

Christmas may be ended for some people but the presence of damaged and unclaimed Christmas packages makes the memory linger on with postal officials here, according to Postmaster O. P. Maricle.

The greater part of the packages that are still being held here were unable to pass through the mails because of damage to their wrappings which made the addresses illegible, Mr. Maricle said.

The parcels will be held at the postoffice for three or four more days and will be forwarded to the "dead letter office" in Washington if they are not claimed within that time. The postmaster urged that Wichitans who mailed packages during the Christmas season which were not received by the addressee inquire about them at the postoffice before they are sent to the dead letter office.

Among the articles which are being held at the postoffice are a silver cigaret case, a toy iron, a pin cushion, a lunch cloth, a box containing a bed spread addressed "to mama" and two neckties addressed to "Tom and Henry," another box containing some ladies underwear marked "to Nellie," a pair of sox labeled "for Raymond," a handkerchief and tie rack marked "to Owen," and a pair of pants addressed "to Goodwin;" a box of Manorda stationery labeled "from Charles to Mary" and an artificial flower covering a telephone receiver which was mailed to some person in Wichita Falls from Iuka, Miss.

Just Like An Ostrich

A medical authority says that a person who tries to cover up skin blemishes and pimples with toilet creams and powders is just as foolish as an ostrich that buries its head in the sand to avoid danger. Skin eruptions are nature's warning that constipation is throwing poisons into your blood stream and weakening your whole constitution. Remove the constipated condition and you will strengthen your system against disease and clear up your disfigured skin. The best way to do this is with a course of Herbine, the vegetable medicine that acts naturally and easily, which you can get at Miller Drug Store.
