Staff Photos by Paul Gilbert

Taking sides

Don Sparks, left, presents the oil industry's side in a public hearing on proposed changes in drilling of oil and gas wells within the city limits. The industry argued the changes would be too costly and the distance for drilling too restrictive. Hal Brockett, above, says all the residents want is peace and quality of life.

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Assistant City Editor

In the beginning it was one oil company versus the neighborhood.

On Tuesday it was the petroleum industry versus the residents in 349 Ranch Estates as the two forces took opposing sides on a proposed ordinance for allowing oil and gas wells to be drilled within city limits.

The City Council, during a regular meeting in City Hall, backed away from adopting any changes and decided a committee first should pound out the differences. But no indication was given when a committee would meet or who would be on it.

Initiating the afternoon hearing was a request by Parker & Parsley in October to drill an oil well in 349 Ranch Estates. Under the current ordinance, the company complied with requirements and the council approved the permit even though residents in that subdivision protested. The company asked for a permit to drill a second well in December and that also was granted.

But at that Dec. 13 meeting the council considered adopting a proposed ordinance change that would make the requirements more stringent. Instead of voting on the change, the council decided it would study the proposal and make a decision Tuesday.

In the meantime, some more changes had been made in the proposal, which one city councilman and an attorney for the residents indicated in Sunday's Reporter-Telegram were acceptable. The major point was requiring the drilling operation to be fenced and that it be at least 660 feet from the fence to the edge of a homeowner's property.

That distance, along with some other points, stood like a rock barrier between the industry representatives and the homeowners. The arguments boiled down to the industry contending it would be too costly to drill if following the proposed requirements and the residents wanting to feel safe in their homes.

Martin Allday, who has been the attorney for Parker & Parsley through the months of council meetings, headed the opposition. "I do understand your concern to protect homeowners and landowners," he began. "This proposed ordinance is unworkable. If you want to ban drilling in Midland, just say so."

MISD suspends teacher indicted on heroin charges

By HALLYE JORDAN
Staff Writer

A fourth-grade teacher indicted last week by the grand jury for delivery of heroin was suspended without pay or benefits by Midland school board members Tuesday afternoon.

The suspension of Maria Rosario Flores Luna, 26, a teacher at Jane Long Elementary School, is effective from the time of her arrest pending the outcome of the investigation. Ms. Luna was arrested at about noon Friday at the school.

She was one of nine defendents named in 15 sealed indictments returned last week following a felony drug probe conducted by Department of Public Safety narcotics agents.

The decision, recommended by Superintendent Dr. Joseph Baressi Jr. following an executive session, was approved unanimously by members of the Midland Independent School District board of trustees during a regular meeting. No other comments were made.

In other action, trustees approved the promotion of Jack Tayrien, Lee High School assistant varsity football coach, to that of head football coach. He replaces Spike Dykes, who resigned after leading the Rebels to the state championship game to accept a coaching position at Texas Tech University.

A summary of Preliminary Scholastic Aptitude Tests (PSAT) for 1983 was given, indicating 25 Midland High School students and 27 from LHS made the top selective index scores. The students were identified by record numbers.

Of the MHS students, 13 were sophomores and 12 were juniors. Ten LHS sophomores, 16 LHS juniors and a Lee Freshman High School student were among the top 52 scorers.

Twenty-one of the high-scoring students were female, while 31 were male.

Seven students scoring in the 99 percentile may be eligible as national semi-finalists, according to Assistant Superintendent Dr. Duane Moore, who noted while the scores were above average nationally, they were the norm for the Midland school district.

Unanimous approval was given to a curriculum guide for secondary mathematics, following a five-year study, and to a 15 percent increase in per student allocations for the 1984-85 school year budget. The increase represents 2.2 percent of proposed total operating budget.

Trustees are expected to take official action on budget allocations and estimated costs at the next board meeting.

About $17,000 for the purchase of computers was accepted from individuals and companies, with another $3,500 committed for May. According to Dr. James H. Mailey, MISD advisor, the funds represent 20 percent of the $100,000 needed to match a grant from an anonymous foundation for an expanded instructional computer program.

Trustees also approved the low bid of $41,800 for a telephone system at LHS, bids for athletic equipment and the appointment of Geren & Associates/CRS, to draw the architectural designs for the last of four new elementary schools.

Midlanders divided on Vatican diplomacy

By PATRICK DEAREN
Staff Writer

On Tuesday, the United States broke a long-standing policy and established full diplomatic relations with the Vatican, and this morning both local Catholics and Protestants were divided concerning the impact.

It was an occurence which stirred lifebloods — some hailing it as a landmark step toward peace, others condemning it as giving one church precedence over all others.

"Whether I'm a Catholic or not, there's no doubt about it — the pope is probably the outstanding figure today for bringing about peace in the world," said Father Cliff Blackburn of St. Ann's Catholic Church. "I think closer ties between this man, who is a great leader for peace, and this country will have a great impact on this country...I see this as kind of an offshoot of the ecumenical movement, which has had great impact on relations between the Catholic Church and Protestant churches in the recent past. One specific instance would be this pope's visit to a Lutheran church in Rome lately and recognizing Luther as a great man."

■ Political role of papal embassy explained; Related story — Page 3C

But even among Catholics, said Blackburn, are those who feel Tuesday's action "will be more favorable to the State Department than to the Catholic Church. They think that a U.S. ambassador to the Vatican might try to influence the political activities of the U.S. (Catholic) Church."

On the Protestant side of the line, however, were persons who regretted the Reagan Administration's diplomatic move.

"I was very sorry to see the President do this," said Grace Lutheran Church pastor Donald V. Hafemann. "I truly believe that it is an infraction against the principle of separation of church and state. I truly recognize the influence that the Pope has as a religious figure, but he's just a religious figure and not a state power that we ought to be having official relationships with."

Hafemann added that he believed the action should be contested in the judiciary, "or, if not contested, then at least tested."

D. Aubrey Knight of Calvary Baptist Church also felt it violated the idea of separation of church and state. "If we're going to have a representative from our government in the Vatican, then being Southern Baptist, we need a reprresentative from the government in our work — which I do not want. But if you do it for the Vatican, I believe you should do it for all the other churches."

Knight said he did not believe the Pope would interfere immediately with the U.S. government, "but on the other hand there is the possibility that on down the line somewhere this could happen."

Reda Shoemaker places a flower in the grave of her mother, Kate Rich.

Kate Rich finally buried

RINGGOLD, Texas (AP) — Kate Rich lived 80 years, gave birth to 11 children and knew more than 60 grandchildren and great-granchildren before her murder made her known outside this rural community 85 miles northwest of Fort Worth.

Tuesday, almost 16 months after her killing, Mrs. Rich's ashes were buried in a little foam box at a country cemetery near here.

Her death, police say, helped end the eight-year killing spree of Henry Lee Lucas, a drifter she befriended in the early summer of 1982.

Lucas told investigators in June of 1983 he stabbed Mrs. Rich to death on Sept. 16, 1982, and later burned her body.

"It's very hard to see a little bag of ashes put in the ground. Most people get to see their parents buried in a nice suit or dress, not in a little plastic box," said Reda Shoemaker of Terral, Okla., one of Rich's daughters.

"Every time I see him (Lucas) on TV it brings back the memories. I will be glad when they put that beast — he's not a man — when they put him away," she told the Fort Worth Star-Telegram. "It's very hard to see him on television in his white shirt, grinning ... bragging and gloating over it."

Reagan seeking Chinese help with Korean initiative

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan is seeking Chinese Premier Zhao Ziyang's backing for a four-nation conference to pacify the Korean peninsula and put an end to the tense three-decade stalemate of "two armed camps facing each other."

The president disclosed the proposal to reporters at a White House state dinner Tuesday night at which the 64-year-old Chinese head of state sharply criticized the United States for its tenacious loyalty to Taiwan, calling it the "principal obstacle" to the growth of closer relations between Washington and Peking.

Reagan told reporters he would like both North and South Korea to be joined at the conference table by China and the United States, adding that such an initiative would be "just wonderful."

■ South Korea blocks overture; Chinese premier honored — Page 2A

He said he is not interested in a three-way conference to reunify the peninsula that would omit China, as the North Koreans have proposed.

North Korea's official Radio Pyongyang reported Wednesday that North Korea has suggested a conference with the United States and South Korea.

Although the communist regime has long demanded reunification of the two Koreas, it was the first time it was known to have suggested that South Korea be included in talks.

However, in Seoul today, South Korea effectively rejected the North's proposal by demanding an apology from North Korea for the Oct. 9 terrorist bombing in Burma that killed 17 South Koreans.

Pronounced dead on arrival at Midland Memorial Hospital was 25-year-old Jimmy Joseph Mowles of 2902 Lockheed. He suffered a fractured skull and multiple injuries, according to a hospital spokeswoman.

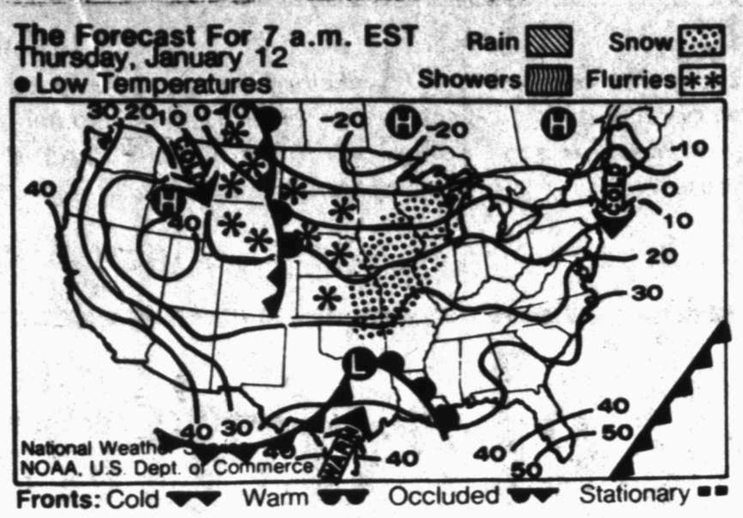

Police said Mowles was northbound on Loop 250 when his 1982 Oldsmobile went out of control and skidded 200 feet before hitting a traffic light as he attempted to make a right turn onto Wadley Avenue about 2:20 a.m.

In satisfactory condition at MMH with facial lacerations and a broken right shoulder was a passenger, 25-year-old Craig Aldridge of 4301 Raleigh.

Released following emergency treatment was another passenger, 25-year-old Mark Samules of 3813 Suncrest. Police said two other passengers, 23-year-old Michael Edwin McGahn of 4213 Greenbriar and 23-year-old Christopher Sapyta, no address available, were not injured.

Services for Mowles are pending at the Ellis Funeral Home.

South Korea demands apology

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — South Korea today demanded North Korea apologize for a terrorist bombing before any efforts to unify the two nations can begin — effectively rejecting the North's proposal for multinational talks on unification.

North Korea, in a surprise move, Tuesday proposed a three-way conference involving its government, South Korea and the United States in efforts to reunite the two Koreas, with each maintaining its own political system.

President Reagan, at a state dinner Tuesday night in Washington honoring Chinese Premier Zhao Ziyang, suggested a four-way conference that would include China.

"In order to create conditions for peace and provide the foundation for national reconciliation, the North Korean authorities must, first of all, officially or unofficially, admit, apologize for and punish those responsible for the Burma incident," South Korea's unification minister, Sohn Jae-shik, told reporters today.

Sohn said North Korea had refused to accept responsibility for a terrorist bombing on Oct. 9 in Rangoon, Burma, that killed 17 South Koreans, including Cabinet members. Two North Korean officers have been convicted in Burma in the attack, and appeals of their death sentences were filed today.

The minister's statement was South Korea's first official reaction to the North's proposal.

He said there was "no sincere posture for dialogue" by North Korea.

Sohn reiterated South Korea's position that unification talks involve only the leaders of the South and North. Yet, without specifically referring to Reagan's proposal, he raised the possibility of a much broader conference.

If it would help create a favorable international environment for unification, he said, "we think it is desirable to have talks participated in by nations concerned who were directly or indirectly responsible for the partition of the Korean Peninsula and the Korean War."

According to an announcement today on state-run Radio Pyongyang, North Korea suggested steps leading to a joint North-South confederation.

North Korea, in what it termed "an epochal initiative," proposed a three-party conference to seek agreement on a permanent peace and lay groundwork for eventual reunification of the peninsula.

In separate letters to the South Korean government, to the U.S. Congress and to the Reagan administration, North Korea's communist regime broke a long-standing position that only it and the United States — but not South Korea — could have a proper role in any such negotiations.

Once reunification was achieved, said the letter to Washington, "the United States would be able to wash its hands of the Korean question with honor ...."

North Korea, saying it was "looking squarely at the strained reality of the Korean Peninsula where tensions are growing," proposed talks to forge a non-aggression pact between North and South Korea and effect the withdrawal of U.S. forces. Next would be a joint North-South conference to establish a "confederal state" in which both Koreas would retain their existing political systems.

Under such an arrangement, it said, both Koreas would be strictly neutral, joining no military or political blocs.

The proposal, in clear, diplomatic language and free of the vitriolic hyperbole that normally characterizes the North Korean regime's rhetoric, was reported in detail today by the official Korean Central News Agency, monitored in Tokyo.

U.S. Ambassador Richard L. Walker told reporters there were three possible reasons North Korea might be making such a proposal:

—To seek to present a different image to the world in view of its "general international embarrassment" after the Burma bombing.

—To disrupt ties between South Korea and the United States which improved after Reagan's visit to Seoul in November.

—To take advantage of the current visit to Washington by Zhao.

According to the Radio Pyongyang report, monitored in Tokyo, North Korea's Central People's Committee and the Presidium of the Supreme People's Assembly adopted the three-way conference proposal Tuesday at a joint session in the North Korean capital.

The broadcast said North Korea decided on a proposal to let "the South Korean authorities, another party responsible for the increase of tensions in Korea today, participate in the talks between us and the United States."

South Korea refused to sign the armistice that ended the fighting in the 1950-53 Korean War, but China, which fought with North Korea, did sign.

South Korean President Chun Doo-hwan has proposed several times that high-level unification talks be held between North and South Korea.

Korea was divided at the end of World War II when Soviet troops entered the area north of the 38th parallel and U.S. troops the south in what was to have been a temporary division while the Japanese military and administrative machines were dismantled and a Korean government was established.

Efforts to bring the two parts together bogged down quickly, resulting in a deeper division that climaxed when North Korean troops struck south in an attempt to unify the peninsula by force.

With the United States playing the key role, a United Nations force came to the aid of South Korea during the war.

There are about 40,000 U.S. military personnel now in South Korea, and an American general heads a combined forces command.

China's participation in talks on Korean unity encouraged

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan proposed Tuesday night that a four-way conference, including the United States and China, be held in an attempt to stabilize the Korean peninsula and help settle the matter of "two armed camps facing each other."

Speaking to reporters at a state dinner honoring Chinese Premier Zhao Ziyang, the president said he was not interested in a three-way conference that would omit China, as the North Koreans had proposed in an attempt to reunify the peninsula.

The official Radio Pyongyang reported Wednesday that North Korea had suggested a conference with the United States and South Korea. Although the communist regime has long demanded reunification of the two Koreas, it was the first time it was known to have suggested that South Korea be included in talks. Previously, it demanded direct negotiations with the United States to replace the armistice agreement with a permanent peace treaty, excluding any role for the Seoul government, which Pyongyang contends is illegitimate.

When Reagan was asked about the report at the dinner, he acknowledged the matter came up during his earlier discussions with Zhao. But he said no details had been worked out.

There was no immediate official comment on the report from the Blue House presidential office in Seoul, the foreign ministry or other official sources. Well-placed sources said, however, that South Korea would stand by its past position that the Korean issue should be settled by the Koreans themselves in talks between the south and the north. They added that four-party talks including China would be considered the next best procedure.

Reagan didn't seem too interested in a three-way conference, but said: "I think it would be just wonderful if there would be a four-way conference with China, and both Koreas and the United States."

But he quickly added, "We have not got into any details at all." However, Reagan, who visited South Korea last year and peered out from the DMZ into North Korea, said he would like to see "stability on the peninsula."

The idea of a conference that included China was much more appealing, Reagan said, adding that "your two principals" would be North and South Korea."

He suggested such a face-to-face meeting could help them stop being "two armed camps facing each other."

Zhao gala features own intrigue

By MAUREEN SANTINI
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — In one corner of the Blue Room, Chinese Premier Zhao Ziyang stood chatting through an interpreter. In the other, Nancy Reagan tried to rescue Burt Reynolds from reporters.

Reynolds and his former girlfriend, Dinah Shore, showed up together at the state dinner honoring Zhao on Tuesday night. Of course, that prompted speculation about whether they were getting back together.

"A rumor, is a rumor, is a rumor," was the way Miss Shore dismissed it.

Speaking to reporters separately, Reynolds wouldn't say much more, except to explain that although they came to the state dinner together, they were invited separately.

At that point, reporters asked the first lady's press secretary, Sheila Tate, whether Mrs. Reagan was playing matchmaker. "Small world," the press spokeswoman deadpanned.

When Mrs. Reagan spied a cluster of reporters surrounding Reynolds, she brought him into her circle, saying, "I think they've got you cornered."

While President Reagan talked to Washington Redskins quarterback Joe Theismann, Zhao greeted Chinese-Americans. Though he once created a stir when he became one of the first Chinese leaders to don a Western business suit, Zhao wore the traditional collared Mao jacket to the black-tie affair. Reagan wore a tuxedo, and his wife wore an Oriental-style jade green silk sheath.

President Reagan applauds Chinese Premier Zhao Ziyang following toasts during Tuesday's state dinner in the visiting leader's honor.

Following after-dinner entertainment by violinist Isaac Stern, the Reagans escorted Zhao to his limousine at the snow-covered North Portico.

The U.S. Marine Dance Band struck up, "Shall We Dance," when the Reagans walked back into the mansion, and the president twirled his wife around the Grand Foyer, in what is becoming their state dinner tradition.

The elaborate Christmas decorations, including huge pots of poinsettias, green boughs and evergreen trees, that graced the state floor just a couple weeks ago, had all been removed. In their place stood pots of spring flowers arranged in a large circle.

Other guests included such Hollywood stars as E.G. Marshall and Gregory Peck, as well as Americans with ties to China, such as NBC anchorwoman Connie Chung and Anna Chennault, who was a longtime leader of the Taiwan lobby. Currently, she is president of TAC International, Inc.

Other guests were author Joseph Alsop, child star Shirley Temple Black, restaurant owner Joyce Chen, and architect I.M. Pei.

Lily Lee Chen, the Chinese-American mayor of Monterey Park, Calif., was invited. So was J. Rufford Harrison, the leader of the first U.S. table tennis team to visit China in 1971.

The Reagans selected a menu of American foods, including poached turbot, sauce aurora, sesame seed twists, beef farci en croute, truffle sauce, potatoes souffle, carrot ring, garden green salad with walnuts, pomegranate sorbet with fresh fruit, and petit fours.

The American wines served were Pine Ridge Chardonnay 1981, Silver Oak Cabernet Sauvignon 1978, Schramsberg Cremant Demi-Sec 1981.

About 120 of the guests were seated in the State Dining Room.

Southern Baptist leader criticizes papal diplomacy

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — The national president of the Southern Baptist Convention has sharply criticized President Reagan's decision to establish diplomatic ties with the Vatican, saying the action "establishes a bad precedent."

James Draper of Euless, Texas, said at an Albuquerque news conference Tuesday, "I am disappointed and very concerned. (The decision) singles out a religious group and gives it favored status."

Draper, leader of the 14 million-member denomination, said he earlier had written Reagan about his opposition to the move. He said he called a White House aide on Monday to reiterate his stand.

"This represents a tremendous departure from American policy concerning the separation of church and state and establishes a bad precedent," he said.

Draper said a congressional decision last year lifting an 1867 ban on spending federal funds to support a diplomatic mission to the Vatican was a warning of what would happen.

The United States has maintained unofficial ties with the Vatican through personal presidential representatives since the administration of Franklin D. Roosevelt. Past attempts to establish official diplomatic ties with the Vatican have met harsh opposition.

Draper said the federal government shouldn't give official recognition to any religious group.

"I would be just as opposed to the appointment of an ambassador to the Southern Baptist Convention," he said. "Why establish diplomatic relations with an non-political entity?"

Draper was in Albuquerque to address the Baptist Convention of New Mexico evangelism conference.

Instead of the 660 foot requirement, he asked for 300 feet. The current ordinance lists a mandatory 250 foot limit if the drill site isn't situated on 10 acres.

Other points of disagreement included furnishing names and addresses of all landowners within the area, setting the noise limit at 65 decibels, requiring logging be done only during daylight hours, demanding steel slush pits, asking for concrete block fences rather than chain link and requiring a watchman.

Digging into more reasons for opposing the ordinances changes was Don Sparks, owner of Discovery Energy. After citing his dissenting reasons, he added, "Sounds like we're in New Jersey. Let's don't ...ssyfoot around and say we can't ...l in Midland. Then, I have a question about the liability of this community."

In the oil and gas business 47 years, J.C. Williamson pointed to other area oil towns and noted oil wells exist in all of them. "You have an obligation to let this place be drilled."

Not unless there are some rules, according to Hal Brockett, attorney representing landowners in 349 Ranch Estates east of Big Spring Street.

"I'm saying the distance has to be 660 feet because 300 is too close," said Brockett. "They're saying 300 feet from the well bore to the edge of the structure (house), and the ordinance is asking 660 feet from the fence to the property line." He cited one homeowner whose back yard is only 112 feet from the sludge pit at the first well. That same homeowner "can sit beside his swimming pool and watch the pumping jack behind his house."

Hydrogen sulfide, a poisonous gas, had been mentioned in a city memo as one factor to consider. The only petroleum spokesman to mention it was Williamson. In addressing the issue, Brockett said, "I don't see why someone has to be killed or hurt before we do something about it. Any safety or monitoring systems that could be added would be appropriate.

"There are some rough edges the council needs to smooth out on this ordinance," said Brockett. "Those folks are saying it's going to cost more money (to drill). My clients are saying they want quality of life. I'm not saying oil is not important to this town. But people want to live in peace."

One landowner said she had no sympathy for the oil spokesmen. Stephanie Fuller, said that as an engineer for an oil company, "I don't see where this is unworkable."

In making appointments to the committee, she told Mayor G. Thane Akins the oil industry was already "amply represented" by the council. "I believe you work for the industry and others (on the council) are associated with it."

Midlanders' reaction to decision on Vatican diplomacy mixed

St. Paul United Methodist Church pastor James Holman acknowledge the positive aspects of the action — "some political good can come out of it" — but also noted the infringement on separation of church and state. "We're dealing with churches, and the Roman Catholic Church is a church...I believe many Catholics would share this view."

David Wallace, minister of North A and W. Tennessee Church of Christ, feared that the move gives the Catholic Church precedence over others in the nation.

"Frankly, it seems to me to give credibility to a religious party or group or sect," he said, "and if that's the case then we probably ought to have representatives to major denominations in this country. The Vatican does act as a political vehicle, but I personally resent the United States government recognizing a religious party over and above other religious parties on a political basis."

Jerry Miller, pastor of Calvary Tabernacle United Pentecostal Church, also cited a violation of separation of church and state, saying he was "totally against...the United States having diplomatic relations with the Vatican or the Vatican having a diplomatic voice in American affairs."

But John Danhof of Trinity Presbyterian Church saw more good coming out of the occurence than evil.

"I certainly have no objection," he said. "I think that the Catholic Church in some sense represents a public Christian orientation, and for us to know what this is and to be in dialog with it is good." He added that he believed it might further efforts for world peace.

Ray Smith, a deacon for the Catholic Diocese in San Angelo, concurred. "I think this is a great thing," he said, "because the Pope does have ties with almost every country in the world and it's good to have someone there as a mediator and help bring about world peace."

Woman's death led to capture of Lucas

Lucas confessed to Mrs. Rich's murder after he had been arrested on a firearms charge by officers who had suspected him of the slaying since shortly after Mrs. Rich disappeared.

He led authorities to the culvert where he had hidden her body, and then to the stove outside his home in nearby Stoneburg, where her ashes and charred bone fragments were found.

After confessing to Mrs. Rich's murder and to that of his 15-year-old companion, Freida Powell, Lucas told officials that he had killed at least another 100 women around the country, most of them during the past eight years. He has since increased that estimate to 150.

Lucas pleaded guilty to killing Mrs. Rich and received a 75-year sentence. He later was sentenced to life for the murder of Miss Powell.

He has been charged in eight other cases in Texas, including three capital charges, and authorities are convinced he was the murderer in as many as 100 other documented cases.

Lucas, who is awaiting trial in Georgetown for the murder of an unidentified hitchhiker, fills his days talking to law enforcement officers from around the country about his crimes.

Rich's family held a memorial service for her in June. Her remains were kept as evidence in the Montague County case until Lucas was convicted and a motion for new trial was denied. The order releasing the remains was signed Friday.

Mrs. Rich was buried beside her husband, Hiram, who died in 1948, and near her son Julian "Bo" Rich, who suffered a heart attack a few weeks after Lucas' confession and died on Aug. 11.

Valley provided with free meals

SAN JUAN (AP) — An additional 1,000 farmworkers could be in need of the free meals provided by the U.S. Department of Agriculture as two juice processing plants shut down operation today, laying off employees hired to fill temporary jobs.

The processing plants have been converting citrus to juice since a devastating Christmas freeze destroyed the $30 million orange and grapefruit crop and put thousands of seasonal laborers out of work.

The economic devastation and unemployment from the freeze led to President Reagan declaring four Rio Grande Valley counties a disaster area last week.

Part of the emergency relief offered to the Valley is the mass feeding program which is in its third day today.

Tuesday evening, volunteers waited to feed 1,000 hungry, unemployed farmworker families at the Shrine of Our Lady of San Juan Pilgrim House. But only 250 people showed up.

The Rev. Manuel Villarreal said the reason for the poor turnout may have been that people were more tired than hungry.

"People have been standing in lines all over town trying to find help," he said. "At City Hall, at the Texas Employment Commission, at Catholic Charities, at the food stamp office there are long, long lines."

Officials with the USDA and Texas Department of Human Resources were prepared to serve 1,000 meals to the families of farm laborers. On the first day of the program Monday, more than 450 meals were served in about three hours.

John Smith of the USDA said despite the small turnout Tuesday they would give the mass feeding program a little more time to determine if there is a need.

The four Rio Grande Valley counties that have been designated for disaster relief are Cameron, Hidalgo, Starr and Willacy.

Hidalgo is the largest, with a population of about 300,000.

"And a third of this county was under the poverty level before the disaster," said Rick Gresser of the TDHR. "Now we have no idea how many may be under the poverty line."

state

An average of 700 to 1,000 people per day have been applying for unemployment benefits at the Harlingen office of the Texas Employment Commission this week. Officials believe as many as 30,000 people may join the jobless ranks because of the freeze.

Gresser said the mass feeding program is the first such emergency relief project for an economic disaster in Texas.

National guard trucks were used to transport food to the Valley for the Monday and Tuesday meals of powdered eggs, raisins, grapefruit juice, milk and bread and butter.

More trucks are scheduled to arrive today, bringing canned meat, vegetables and fruit from warehouses in Fort Worth.

About two-thirds of those served Monday night were children. Villarreal said an average family in Hidalgo County had eight to 10 children.

Meanwhile, Gov. White's administrative assistant Gerald Hill requested that national guard armories in eight Rio Grande Valley counties be opened to provide emergency shelter.

Villarreal said this year's economic disaster is the worst he has seen in 42 years.

He said the unemployed will need to find ways to get by until April when most will leave to work fields in the north.

"Let's hope this winter's weather does not affect Ohio and Michigan and the places where these people will go in the spring," he said.

Dallas schools check out food program

DALLAS (AP) — Dallas public schools are participating in a nationwide crackdown on eligibility for subsidized school meals with spot checks to make sure students getting the free or reduced-price food are entitled to it.

School officials said the crackdown was a response to new regulations issued by the U.S. Department of Agriculture, which administers the national school lunch and breakfast programs.

The department said a recent study it conducted showed that as many as 20 percent of the applications for participation in the food programs contained false information. The department has asked school districts to verify applications of at least 3 percent of the students in the programs.

Marjorie Craft, director of food services for the Dallas Independent School District, said Monday that family income levels will be checked for about 2,000 of the more than 58,000 students who receive federally subsidized meals.

Children in a family of four can get free meals if the family's income is less $12,870 a year. The reduced-price rates are available if the annual income is less than $18,315.

"In the past, we have verified less than half a percent of our applications, so this will be a major undertaking," Mrs. Craft told the Dallas Morning News.

Those families asked for verification will have 10 days to provide documentation of their eligibility — either a paycheck stub or a form signed by a food stamp program official, since criteria for both programs are the same.

"They will be taken off the meal program if we receive no response," said Charlotte Stone of the food services program.

The random checks will continue through January, she said.

The American School Food Service Association has criticized the new requirements, saying tougher verification procedures could erode community support for the breakfast and lunch programs.

Shrimpers want boat seizure investigated

BROWNSVILLE (AP) — Texas shrimpers want the federal government to determine if the Mexican Navy seized two U.S. shrimp boats in international waters and, if so, how to compensate boat owners for "acts of piracy."

Ralph Rayburn, executive director of the Texas Shrimp Association, said Tuesday that he had sent a letter to the U.S. State Department on Jan. 5 requesting an investigation of the seizures.

Shrimp boat owners and captains at the Port of Brownsville, who met Tuesday to discuss the seizures, said the boats were in international waters when they were stopped by a Mexican gunboat.

Owners of the Miss Charmaine and Santa Monica estimate that together they lost $150,000 in fines, damage to their vessels and loss of fishing gear and catch.

The shrimpers want the state department to investigate the role of the U.S. Coast Guard in the incident.

Boat owners are angry at what they feel was indifference on the part of the U.S. Coast Guard during the Dec. 5. seizure.

"The Coast Guard does not have a clear policy of how to protect U.S. vessels," said Bill Zimmerman, owner of the Santa Monica.

He said the Coast Guard should have stopped the Mexican Navy from seizing the American boat and towing it south until an investigation could be conducted.

The Coast Guard has said it has a cooperative agreement with the Mexican navy to help them just as the Mexicans help the United States in arresting drug runners at sea.

Besides, all 58 of the shrimp boats seized by the Mexican government in the last three years have admitted they were fishing illegally, the Coast Guard said. So the Coast Guard accepted the word of the Mexican captain who told them the two boats had been fishing in Mexican waters.

The shrimp boats were held for more than 20 days in Tampico with four other U.S. boats. Captains of the other boats admit they were fishing illegally in Mexican waters when they were seized.

Rayburn said that if the Mexican government will not reimburse the boat owners for their loss, then shrimpers will ask the U.S. government to impose sanctions on the importation of Mexican seafood.

Charles Burnell, president of the 125-member local chapter of the Shrimp Association, said he has advised the captains of his boats to fish in fleets.

"The Mexicans seem to pick on the lone boats rather than those fishing in groups," Burnell said.

He has also advised his crewmen to head inshore for U.S. territorial waters if pursued, rather than running north into international seas.

"The bad part is that a lot of captains have armed themselves since this thing occured and someone is liable to get hurt. They don't think they can depend on the Coast Guard to defend U.S. flag vessels, and it's hard to argue with them," Burnell said.

Water's nitrate levels worry town

FORT STOCKTON (AP) — A spokeswoman for residents in the West Texas town of Coyanosa said they would continue to haul water until they are convinced that high levels of nitrates found in area water wells poses no threat to their health.

Jed Barker of Midland, a registered sanitarian for the Texas Department of Health Department, and Wes Elliot, a Balmorhea water system engineer, reported Monday at a county commissioner's court meeting that wells in the Coyanosa area contained nitrate levels in excess of the 10 milliliter per liter maximum set by the state.

Rose Hoelscher, a spokeswoman for the residents, said she was concerned that the water might not be safe for pregnant women.

"I assure the court the people are afraid to use this water and will continue to haul water in spite of the inconvenience until we know it is safe," she told commissioners.

Recent diagnoses of three cases of Giardia, caused by a parasite frequently found in contaminated water, led to the sampling of the well water.

Barker said tests indicated that the level of nitrate in the water was increasing. He said the contamination could have been caused by fertilizer used by area farmers, septic tank leakage, naturally occurring nitrates in the ground or inadequately sealed oil wells.

Barker said nitrates can cause a low level of oxygen in the bloodstreams of elderly people and infants under six months of age.

Board to be notified of secret testimony

DALLAS (AP) — Dallas County District Attorney Henry Wade has agreed to notify the Dallas Citizens/Police Review Board when secret grand jury testimony contradicts the board's findings on shootings by officers, the agency's chairman says.

The board, empowered by the city to review 29 shootings by Dallas police officers last year that included 15 fatalities, was previously denied a request to obtain transcripts of grand jury proceedings on the shootings.

Wade said investigative reports and other materials compiled by the police review board could help his office determine if any witnesses who testified before the grand jury contradicted other, earlier statements to police.

Car chase forces autos off road

HOUSTON (AP) — A 120-mph chase which forced about 100 cars off the road ended in a fiery collision and an arrest inside a grocery store, law officers said. There were no injuries.

A stolen Chevrolet Camaro smashed into the rear of a station wagon, which piled into a van and exploded in flames Tuesday morning, said deputy constable Larry Todd.

Alan Dwayne Griffin, 20, was arrested atop a meat locker in a grocery store near the crash. He was held without bond on a charge of auto theft.

The chase began when deputy constable M.H. Price tried to pull over the stolen Camaro. He estimated 100 vehicles were forced off the pavement during the 40-minute high-speed episode which took place in north Harris County and was joined by about 70 law officers from seven agencies.

Cardiologist to train for shuttle

DALLAS (AP) — A cardiologist has received official word from the National Aeronautics and Space Administration that he will begin training in Houston for a 1986 space shuttle mission.

Dr. Drew Gaffney, an assistant professor of internal medicine at the University of Texas Southwestern Medical School, was officially notified Monday that NASA had chosen him as one of four specialists to train for the mission.

NASA officials said the flight would be devoted to biological and medical experiments. Among the experiments Gaffney will perform will be one designed by Southwestern colleague Dr. Gunnar Blomqvist to measure the effects of weightlessness on the heart and circulatory system.

Mattox's hearing postponed again

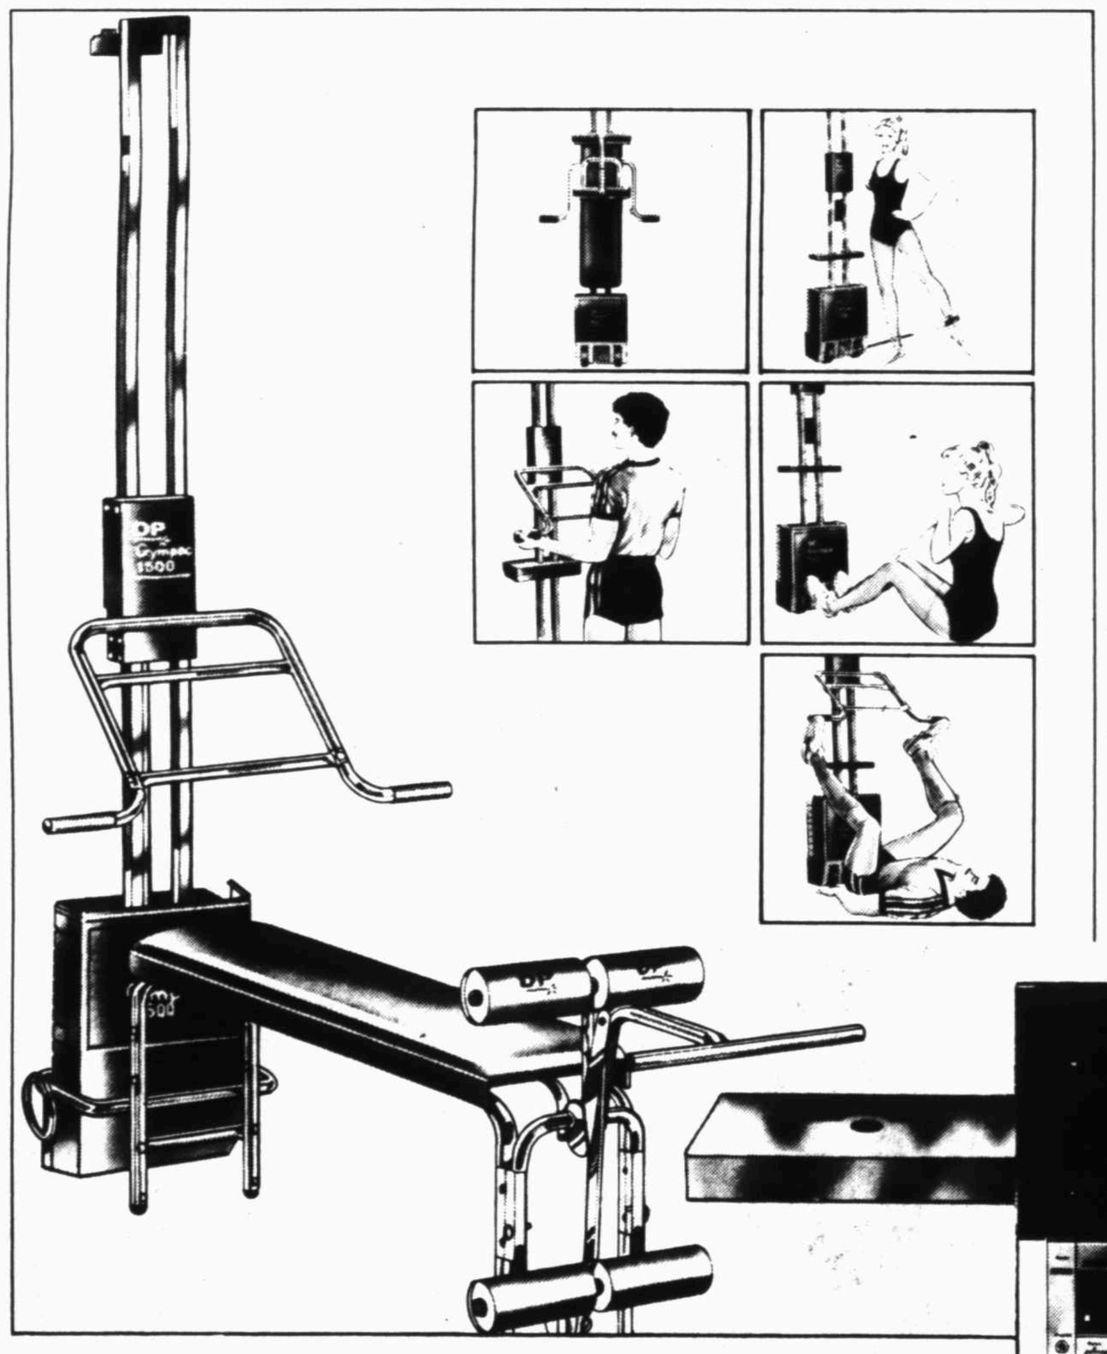

AUSTIN (AP) — A pretrial hearing to be held Thursday in the state's commercial bribery case against Attorney General Jim Mattox has been postponed for the third time until Feb. 16 to give the state time to study the 17 motions filed by Mattox's defense lawyers.

Most of Mattox's pretrial motions ask District Judge Mace Thurman to throw out the indictment. The first one argues the alleged offense does not fit the statute Mattox was charged under and another complained the indictment was faulty because it did not specify the means the alleged bribe was conveyed — whether in person, by mail, wire, phone, or other means.

Prosecutors said Monday they may decide to ask a grand jury to re-indict Mattox to specify that he was accused of making the alleged bribe by telephone.

Hunger proposals would 'make tragic problem worse'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Many of the nation's largest religious charities, as well as civil rights and other groups, say recommendations by President Reagan's task force on hunger would "make this tragic problem yet worse."

They said a proposal to allow states to drop out of federal nutrition programs and fashion their own with federal block grants would be "nothing short of a disaster for the nation's poor."

"We are disappointed and dismayed at the report," the groups said in a statement late Tuesday. "After working for four months and spending the taxpayers' money, the task force tells us little more than that hunger exists — and then proposes recommendations that would, on balance, make this tragic problem yet worse."

President Reagan accepted the report of the task force Tuesday and said he has directed administration officials to examine the recommendations closely and "determine what can be done to incorporate them in our policies."

"God has blessed our great country with rich abundance," the president said in a statement. "By reminding us that in this land of plenty, there can be no excuse for hunger, the Task Force on Food Assistance has presented us with a challenge. We will meet that challenge through public and private resources — and we will do so with intelligence, prudence and compassion."

The critics said the block grant proposal would "start the dismantling of the federal anti-hunger efforts that have been painstakingly built on a solid bipartisan basis over the past 15 years...The current system — under which a poor family is assured of receiving food aid regardless of which state it lives in — would end."

The groups included the National Conference of Catholic Charities, the American Baptist Churches, the Lutheran Council, the Episcopal Church, the American Jewish Congress, the League of Women Voters, the National Council of Senior Citizens and the League of United Latin American Citizens.

Judge orders mistrial in rape case

ROANOKE, Va. (AP) — A judge ordered a mistrial for a man accused of raping his girlfriend's 13-year-old daughter, partly because of the ABC-TV broadcast of "Something About Amelia," a movie about incest.

Circuit Judge Kenneth E. Trabue, scheduling a new trial Feb. 9, on Tuesday cited the previous night's showing of the movie, publicity surrounding the trial and news accounts about a California sex abuse case which involved a 34-year-old Roanoke man.

The trial started Monday but had been continued until Tuesday because the mother didn't bring her daughter to court to testify.

During the continuance, ABC broadcast "Something About Amelia."

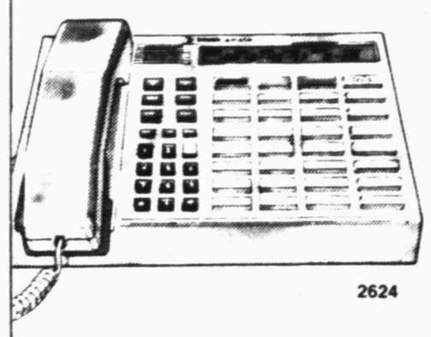

Together with coverage of the trial itself, the movie and the coverage of the California case prejudiced the jury, said defense attorney Randy Leach, who asked for a mistrial or dismissal.

Your horoscope

By JEANE DIXON

Thursday, January 12, 1984

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: The great British statesman-orator Edmund Burke, author Jack London and artist John Singer Sargent were born on this date. Also sharing your birthday: boxer Joe Frazier, broadcast journalist Martin Agronsky and football's Drew Pearson. New career opportunities arises in the months ahead. Look them over very carefully while also weighing the advantages of staying in your present position. A former flame returns. Very little has changed. Refuse to be painted into a corner. Financial gains give you new peace of mind.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) A wise investment can be the start of a substantial nest-egg. Give a youngster greater freedom of choice. Consideration and attentiveness will save a relationship that has been deteriorating.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): A good time for forming partnerships. You achieve better financial results when you let an expert handle trust matters and investments. The competition is keen in romance.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Set deadines and meet them. Those in top management and the arts get lucky. Accept a proposal. An unexpected check proves very welcome. Financial advice is expensive but worth every penny.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Mixing business with pleasure could be dangerous now. Keep your own counsel. Someone you love may be indiscreet. Give children plenty of praise and encouragement. A friend deserves a second chance.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Exercise your clout while you have it. Power can disappear if not used judiciously. A tantalizing invitation is the source of great excitement. A blind date results in a new friendship.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Money from an old partnership or business venture gives you new options. Set a good example for your children. You feel ambivalent about a personal relationship. Give it time.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): A business function should go according to plan. If a competition is arranged, you are the sure-fire winner. Partnerships and legal affairs require careful thought. A blind date could prove lucky.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Keep everything confidential until you are ready to make an announcement. Others will be surprised at how thorough you are. A marriage-minded single meets an attractive newcomer.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Postpone making a choice until you have more information. You may be overestimating someone's involvement in a romance. Go slow to avoid embarrassment. Your indecision drives certain people up the wall.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Problems could arise related to distant interests. Do not rely on others to complete important tasks. The responsibility is yours. Your co-workers and relatives are engrossed in their own affairs.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): A wonderful day for negotiating new contracts. Go slow when making personal decisions. Attention to detail saves both time and embarrassment. The social scene is lively. Have fun!

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Involvement in a community project proves very fulfilling. Doublecheck timetables if planning a trip. The weather could cause delays. Loved one shares a delicious secret. Celebrate over dinner.

Actors together on NPR

NEW YORK (AP) — Wally Ballou and Biff Burns are back. So is Ronnie Westerfield. Not to mention further episodes of "Garrish Summit."

To fans that means only one thing: Bob and Ray are on the air again, wreaking their familiar havoc, this time in a new series on National Public Radio.

That's Bob Elliott (he's the shorter one) and Ray Goulding (he's the one with the booming voice). And their cast of characters, including:

—Sportscaster Biff Burns, "live from mike-side."

—Ronnie Westerfield, who's putting together the Inter-American Hide-and-Go-Seek League, "a sports promoter's nightmare."

—And "unlikeable, young Rodney Murchfield" who arranges to fake his own kidnapping to collect the ransom on the soap-opera parody "Garrish Summit."

To the accompaniment of schmaltzy organ music, Ray delivers the verbose intro for the show within a show. "Garrish Summit: the endless story of intrigue among the socially prominent. There, in stately splendor, far removed from the squalid village below, they fight their petty battles over power and money. ... "

Bob and Ray fight no petty battles between themselves; they are inseparable to most of their fans. No one ever thinks of Bob without Ray or Ray without Bob. They play all the parts, male and female, although Ray admits he sounds a "little grizzly" as a woman.

They were making their name in radio about the same time television was making its debut in American living rooms. But then, Bob and Ray have made a career of being out of sync.

In the early days at Boston radio station WHDH, Ray the serious newscaster and Bob the serious disc jockey would ad lib on the air to fill the gaps between songs. So developed their long-winded style. It deflates every pompous announcer you've ever heard and is about as subtle as a whoopie cushion.

One of their signature characters is roving reporter Wally Ballou, whose self-introduction is always abbreviated so we hear "-ly Ballou speaking," an inside joke that pokes fun at the technical goofups broadcasters make.

Wally and Biff and the rest are sponsored by "Einbinder Flypaper, the flypaper you've gradually grown to trust over the course of three generations," and by the Monongahela Metal Foundry, "makers of steel ingots for home and office use."

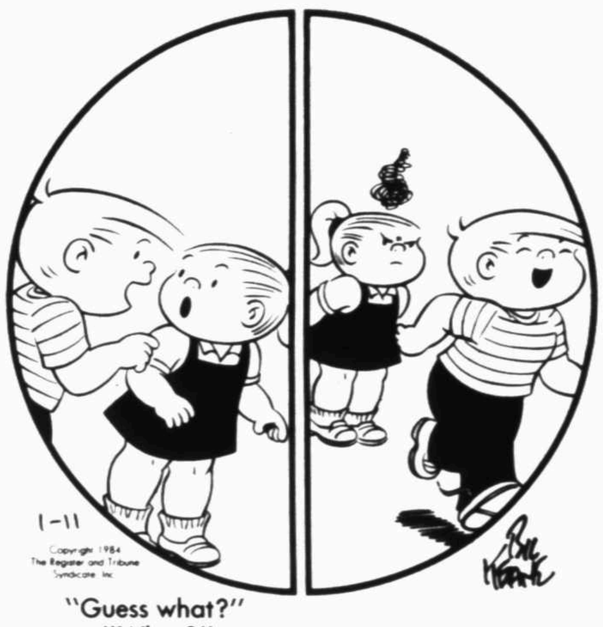

Their wordplay requires close attention and a well-developed sense of silly. But it's always clean, droll humor with no "blue" or ethnic jokes.

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
3 NT	Pass	6 ♠	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Jack of ◇.

Periodically, we are taken to task by a reader for being old-fashioned. Specifically, we are accused of ignoring all modern conventions. That is not quite the case. We do ignore some conventions because of their complexity; and we don't write about others because we doubt their worth. To illustrate, here's an example of a convention that we feel we can do without — the gambling three no trump opening bid.

This hand is from the 1983 Asia and Middle East Bridge Championships.

North's opening bid of three no trump is typical of the convention — it shows a solid, seven-card minor suit and not more than one stopper outside the suit. South judged well that his hand was suitable for slam, so he bid six clubs — the suit he knew belonged to his partner.

Observe that, as the cards lie, six clubs by North cannot be defeated. But after the jack of diamonds lead, most of those players who declared from the South hand found the contract too much for them. The opening lead was covered by the queen and king and won by the ace. Most declarers led a high heart and, when the queen dropped, they first cashed one high club before leading a second heart. That would have worked had West held a singleton trump as well as a singleton heart, but on the actual distribution the contract quickly went down two.

Actually, the hand can be made even with the jack of diamonds lead. Declarer wins the ace, cashes one high heart and then runs all his clubs, reducing the hand to:

NORTH
♡ 5
◇ 2

WEST	EAST

◇ 9	◇ 7 4

SOUTH
♡ A J 9
◇ 8

Now declarer simply throws West in with a diamond. West is forced to lead a heart into declarer's tenace, and he takes the last three tricks.

Stopping violence

School isn't supposed to be a war zone. Violence and knowledge aren't compatible.

But all too many of the nation's schools are suffering from outbreaks of violence that are making the educational process much more difficult than it should be. Just this past weekend President Reagan alluded to the problem when he urged Americans to help teachers regain control of their classrooms, adding that public schools are filled with "rude, unruly behavior and even violence."

A lot of school administrators may take exception to the President's generalization. They'll point out that "their" school doesn't suffer from the discipline problem to which Reagan referred. That's ridiculous and those administrators are being overly defensive. Every school suffers a discipline problem. It's how a particular school responds to that problem that's important.

Education Secretary Terrel Bell made sense this weekend when he addressed school violence on the CBS News television program Face the Nation. The nation needs a more "attractive school environment," said Bell, rather than "brute force and enforcement."

What is needed is more motivation, Bell said. "We need to strengthen our teachers and we need to persuade parents to do more to support the schools."

Bell added, "Often when a student is involved in a disciplinary problem, a teacher is put on the defensive. Many teachers are afraid of court action and many have been hurt by that."

Both President Reagan and Secretary Bell are correct. Discipline problems are handicapping educational efforts in the schools and creative steps have to be taken to reverse that development.

The No. 1 step is to regain control of the classrooms. All educational efforts are in vain unless that step is taken. That may necessitate action on the part of local school boards and, if that's the case, that action should be forthcoming. Give teachers the guidelines under which they are to operate and then allow them to do their jobs.

But the action of the school boards should not stop there. When questions arise about a teacher's disciplinary actions, that teacher should be fully supported as long as the action met the board's approved guidelines.

Youngsters spend only a portion of each day in school and when they're at home discipline becomes the responsibility of the parents, as it should. In this day and time, it's unfortunate that too many parents can't spend the time that's needed with their siblings. In a number of other cases, parents can spend time with their youngsters but neglect to do so. Chances are if all parents could and did spend more time with their children, the nation's schools wouldn't be encountering discipline problems.

The fact is they are, however, and now the nation's schools have to act. A good education is, excuse the phraseology, worth fighting for.

Another View:

Barbarism in Iran

Iran under the Ayatollah Khomeini seems to recognize no limits in its holy (by its lights) war against all infidels, chief among them the United States. Its acts range from the relatively unharmful kind — like making scathing speeches in the United Nations in violation of that body's rule against insulting other member states, and publishing a postage stamp depicting the takeover of the U.S. Embassy in Tehran ("the American spy den") — to the decidedly harmful, like sending children into battle, taking a hand in international terrorism and, perhaps worst of all, persecuting its own minorities.

According to Amnesty International, whose credentials are as good as any, at least 144 members of the Bahai faith in Iran have been executed or assassinated by the government or its agents. Their principal "crime"? Adherence to their faith, and their refusal to convert to Islam.

Last June, 16 Bahai women were hanged after they refused to recant and convert. Another 130 were disposed of their property, confined for three days without food or water, then released to the fury of a mob. They escaped death only by hiding in a forest outside their village. Bahai leaders have been executed on trumped-up spying charges. Even children have been among those executed for what is officially condemned as heresy in Iran.

And why are the Bahai — in contrast with other religions and sects, which may be discriminated against but are officially tolerated — so detestable in the sight of the fanatical mullahs who rule in Tehran? Presumably because their faith, an eclectic one founded in Iran some 140 years ago, preaches the kind of tolerance that is so at odds with the Khomeini brand of Islam: Equality of all races and religions, the equality of men and women, intellectual freedom, universal education and — heresy of heresies — world peace. Obviously such a doctrine, if widely followed in Iran, would undercut the regime's efforts to keep the populace in a constant state of fury and hate for all that is alien to the official line.

Pleas for an end to persecution of the 300,000 Iranian Bahai have been made to Khomeini by world leaders, including President Reagan, and by a number of international organizations, including the U.N. Commission on Human Rights in Geneva — but not, notably, the U.N. General Assembly in New York. Efforts to bring the issue to the Assembly floor for debate have failed even to turn up a single government willing to offend Iran by sponsoring such a move.

The Bahai are not the only ones to suffer in Iran, of course. Amnesty International has received reports of more than 5,000 executions, which it regards as an "absolute minimum." But the barbarous treatment the Bahai have received is so monstrous that it demands a special response from civilized nations, whose the only recourse is to focus greater attention on what amounts to no less than genocide.

ART BUCHWALD

Call Jesse — on Air Force One!

"Hello, this is Jesse Jackson's campaign headquarters. No, the candidate is not here just now. He's in Moscow trying to persuade the Soviets to come back to the disarmament talks in Geneva. No, I'm sorry, Mr. Shultz, I don't know how to reach him ... I believe he has an appointment with Mr. Andropov this afternoon, and is dining with Mr. Gromyko tonight before taking off for Peking to discuss the China-Taiwan dispute with Deng Xiaoping. Yes, Mr. Secretary, he fully understands he's not speaking for the United States, but is only acting as a concerned citizen. I'll tell him that you called.

Art Buchwald

"Jesse Jackson's headquarters. The candidate is not here. Who is calling, please? Mrs. Thatcher ... Margaret Thatcher? It's so nice to talk to you. Unfortunately the candidate is out of the country. Can I be of help? Yes, he does plan to stop in Northern Ireland. I'm sorry you feel this is an internal matter for Her Majesty's Government. But Mr. Jackson believes you haven't given enough attention to the problem, and if he can get the British troops out we'll all be better for it, won't we? Please don't shout, Mrs. Thatcher. You should be happy that someone with Mr. Jackson's statesmanlike qualities is willing to get involved. Yes, Ma'am, I'll tell him what you said, but I doubt if the candidate will cancel his trip.

"Jesse Jackson's campaign headquarters. I'm sorry, the candidate is still out of the country, Monsieur Mitterrand. Yes, I did see his press conference with the Corsican separatists. But Mr. Jackson was just speaking about the moral justification for a free Corsica, and did not go into the political issues. I regret you're upset, Mr. Mitterrand. No, I don't think you can talk to him now. He's flying to Cyprus to talk to Turkish and Greek officials about the partition of that island ... No, Mr. Jackson doesn't expect France to give up Corsica without being compensated for it. He made his position on Corsican liberation very clear to Barbara Walters on ABC. We'll send you a tape of it. Au revoir.

"Jesse Jackson's headquarters. Oh hello, John. Thanks for calling. Tell Jesse things are going really well. The candidate has been on the three major news shows every night for the past month. He got four minutes on his visit to El Salvador, three when he visited Khadafy and five when he went to Brazil to renegotiate their loan with the United States. Ted Koppel has had him on "Nightline" all week explaining his plan to settle the Israeli-PLO problem, and Time magazine put him on the cover three weeks in a row. Where are you now? You're at the Vatican talking to the Pope about Poland? Did they let in the camera crew? Great. The Mondale and Glenn people are going crazy. And the White House is fuming. The president called a news conference the other night on foreign affairs and nobody came.

"Where are you going from Rome? ... You don't know? Jerry thinks you ought to hop over to Iraq and then stop off in Tehran and see if you can bring about a cease-fire between those two countries. But don't go unless you have assurances you'll meet with Khomeini. Tell the candidate we're holding down the fort here.

"Jesse Jackson's headquarters. The candidate is not here. Who's calling? Oh hello, Mr. President. Yes sir, I did give him your message that you wanted him to call you, but he's been terribly busy. Yes sir, I did tell him what you said — that the American president, according to the Constitution, is in charge of foreign policy, and that Mr. Jackson is making your job much more difficult by negotiating with all the world's leaders. But he wanted me to assure you that he is not making any promises to them which will be impossible for you to keep. Oh, there was one other thing he told me to ask you if you called. Is it possible for him to use Air Force One while he's traveling abroad? Some of the Third World countries are very difficult to get to by commercial plane."

Tragedy shows need for bomber

WASHINGTON — The Soviets' air defense forces in the Far East are surprisingly incompetent. This is the conclusion of intelligence analysts who have studied the circumstances surrounding the destruction of a Korean airliner last September after it violated Soviet air space.

Jack Anderson

The incident has convinced some former advocates of the B-1 bomber that this $30 billion program may no longer be needed. The whole purpose of the B-1 is to give the United States the ability to penetrate Soviet air defenses.

The tragic odyssey of Flight 007 showed that an unarmed civilian airliner — its lights on and its radio sending out a frequent signal, flying at a sitting-duck 35,000 feet — was able to penetrate Soviet air space for more than two hours before it was finally tracked down and destroyed.

According to top-secret intelligence analyses, the Russians never even succeeded in identifying what kind of plane they were chasing over some of their most vital military areas.

The best of the Soviet interceptor forces never got within 20 miles of the Korean airliner as it flew over the Kamchatka Peninsula, which is home base for the Soviet Pacific Fleet's ballistic missile submarines. The airliner continued in a straight line over the Sea of Okhotsk and Sakhalin Island, heading toward the Soviets' principal base of Vladivostok.

The Soviets scrambled eight fighters, which could fly twice as fast as the lumbering airliner. Yet only one fighter even came close to the intruder — and then only as it was leaving Soviet air space for a second time.

Intelligence sources, citing top-secret reports on the tragedy, described the Soviet failure to my associate Dale Van Atta. There was an abysmal lack of coordination, they said, between the Soviet radar facilities on Kamchatka and Sakhalin.

After first confusing the Korean 747 with a U.S. reconnaissance plane that had been in the area earlier, the Kamchatka radar controllers failed to "hand over" the intruder to their comrades on Sakhalin. Crucial time was lost before anyone realized it was the same plane.

When the single Su-15 fighter finally locked onto the airliner and fired two missiles at it, only one hit the target. The Su-15's heat-seeking missile found the airliner; its radar-guided missile missed.

What does all this have to do with the B-1 bomber? Simply this: The Soviets' inept performance against a civilian airliner was dramatic evidence that they would do even worse against U.S. B-52 bombers.

These old bombers were considered virtually obsolete. But they emit no radio signal or blinking light, can fly low and take evasive action to avoid radar and interceptors, and have super-sophisticated electronic equipment to foil Soviet radar.

It now seems certain in light of the September incident that our B-52s are capable of penetrating Soviet airspace. Then why spend $30 billion on a new plane designed to do the same thing?

Instead of wasting time and money on the B-1, some defense analysts recommend concentrating on the Stealth bomber. One secret Pentagon report says the Stealth could be ready by 1991. Meanwhile, the United States can safely depend on its B-52s, with their air-launched cruise missiles — each of which is 1,000 times harder for even competent air-defense forces to spot than a 747.

DRUG UPDATE: Both Johnson & Johnson and the Food and Drug Administraton have mishandled the controversy over the painkiller Zomax. I've already reported misleading statements the drug firm made in a "briefing paper" it circulated on Capitol Hill and inside the FDA.

Now investigators for an FDA oversight subcommittee, headed by Rep. Ted Weiss, D-N.Y., suspect that the company misrepresented several FDA positions on the drug's cancer-causing potential. The investigators also found that seven months after Zomax was OK'd for general use, the FDA had failed to analyze adverse data on the drug, which has been linked to at least 15 deaths and 2,200 allergic reactions, 500 of which were life-threatening.

The subcommittee sleuths analyzed the FDA data and found that only 14 percent of the patients, who had mild-to-serious allergic reactions to Zomax, had experienced similar reactions from taking the drug earlier. This means a doctor usually has no clue that the drug being prescribed could cause problems.

Rescue workers treat one of the 15 schoolchildren injured Tuesday when the bus they were riding in collided with a tractor-trailer truck in Rehobeth, Mass. The drivers of both vehicles were killed in the mishap.

Truck collides with school bus, killing drivers, injuring children

REHOBOTH, Mass. (AP) — A truck apparently careened across a roadway Tuesday and collided with a school bus filled with kindergarteners headed home from school, killing both drivers and injuring 15 children, two critically.

The bus was thrown onto its roof by the impact.

"I saw the truck and the bus in the air spinning, then they came to a halt, the truck against the bus. Then we heard the kids screaming and ran to help," Andy Colt, of Dighton, said of the noontime accident.

State police Cpl. Jerry Murphy said investigators believe the truck first hit a car being towed by a wrecker.

"From that first collision it appears as though this vehicle (the truck) may have lost control, and come across the roadway and struck the bus," he said.

Police Chief George Warish said the force of the crash tore seats free in the bus, scattering them around the vehicle.

Diana Dumin, a spokeswoman for the Rhode Island Hospital in Providence, said the hospital received 10 children, two of them in critical condition.

Elderly woman steals banana

NORFOLK, Va. (AP) — A 90-year-old woman has been convicted of stealing a banana, an apple and a 50-cent bag of peanuts from a supermarket.

General District Judge Joseph A. Jordan Jr. found Leona R. Mould guilty Tuesday, sentenced her to 30 days in jail, then suspended the term for one year, conditional upon her good behavior.

Mrs. Mould was charged with taking the food, worth less than $1, from a Farm Fresh Supermarket. The maximum penalty would have been a $1,000 fine and 12 months in jail.

Carrying a cane and wearing a yellow scarf, the bespectacled woman told Jordan she did not mean to take the items without paying. They were in her bag while she paid for other items collected in a shopping cart.

But Jordan was skeptical.

"It doesn't really add up that she forgot those items and not the others," the judge said. He said the woman apparently was supplementing her fixed income of $409 a month.

Temple member to be retried

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Prosecutors plan to retry former Peoples Temple member Larry Layton after obtaining favorable court rulings in the use of evidence against him.

Layton is the only person prosecuted in the 1978 slaying of U.S. Rep. Leo Ryan in an airstrip ambush outside Jonestown, Guyana.

His first trial ended Sept. 26, 1981, after the jury failed to agree on charges of conspiracy to murder Ryan, a California Democrat, and U.S. diplomat Richard Dwyer.

The 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals since has ruled in favor of prosecutors on the use of tapes and other evidence excluded from the first trial by Chief U.S. District Judge Robert Peckham.

Murder suspect held on bond

FORT WAYNE, Ind. (AP) — A man identified by police and prosecutors as a suspect in the bludgeoning deaths of a newspaper editor and his family has not been charged in those slayings, but has been ordered held under maximum $200,000 bond on an unrelated burglary charge.

He may be linked with 13 other crimes, including rape, robbery and battery, police said.

Calvin D. Perry III, 18, of Fort Wayne, was arraigned Tuesday in Allen Circuit Court on a burglary charge for the Jan. 5 burglary and beating of a 78-year-old woman. Authorities said Perry has made admissions against himself in connection with the Sept. 19 slayings of Dan Osborne, 35, editorial page editor of the Fort Wayne News-Sentinel; his wife, Jane; and their 11-year-old son, Ben.

Nuclear arsenals overwhelming

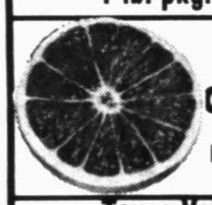

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nuclear arsenals of the United States and the Soviet Union are so large and powerful that "mortal damage" could be suffered on either side if less than 1 percent of the bombs slipped through a defense system, a study says.

Rescue workers speak with a wounded officer at the Orange County courthouse in Orlando, Fla., Tuesday following a shooting incident which left one dead and three wounded.

Man shoots up courtroom, killing one, wounding two

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — A judge says he believes he was the intended target of a man who pulled out a gun in the county courthouse and killed a bailiff and wounded two other officers before being shot in the chest.

But the sheriff refused to speculate on the motive.

Thomas Harrison Provenzano, 34, who was reported in stable condition in a local hospital, began shooting Tuesday shortly before he was to be arraigned by Judge Lee Conser on resisting-arrest charges, said Orange County Sheriff Lawson Lamar.

Bailiff William Arnold Wilkerson, 60, was killed by a shotgun blast in the hallway outside a fourth-floor courtroom. In critical condition with head wounds were bailiff Harry Dalton, 53, and county corrections officer Mark Parker, 19.

Conser told reporters he believed he was the gunman's intended target and that upon hearing the first shot, "I got behind the bench and heard at least another five or six shots."

The judge said that before the incident began he had called Provenzano's case "and he came through the swinging doors. But I told him he would have to wait for his attorney." The judge said Provenzano had a hand in his pocket, "and I mentioned it to a bailiff."

That's when Dalton asked to frisk the defendant, and Provenzano pulled the gun on him and fired, officials said.

"We do not know" what caused Provenzano's action, said the sheriff. "This is the kind of tragedy that can and will take place...as long as you have open trials and open courtrooms."

The sheriff said he was "not going to speculate on a motive at this time."

Democrats offer Reagan the boot

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) — Four Democratic presidential contenders, discussing civil rights issues in politically important Iowa, gave one another the kid glove treatment and offered President Reagan the boot.

But it was the Rev. Jesse Jackson, absent from the multi-candidate forum Tuesday night, who drew a cheer as loud as any won by the four who came.

Declaring a need to install blacks in important foreign policy positions, California Sen. Alan Cranston said that "Jackson has just demonstrated you don't even have to be president to do more than a president can do."

In Chicago on Tuesday, Mayor Harold Washington honored Jackson with the city's highest honor, the Chicago Medal of Merit, for the achievement Cranston was referring to — the freeing of Navy flier Robert Goodman from Syrian detention.

Jackson then said he would not field his own Democratic national convention slate in the March 20 Illinois primary, but would back Washington's slate.

He said Washington has not promised to endorse him, but "it would be quite detrimental to me if he endorsed someone else and quite uplifting if he endorsed me."

When Cranston mentioned Jackson's name the largely black and Hispanic audience in Des Moines responded enthusiastically.

For the most part, the four presidential hopefuls who attended the forum — Cranston, Sens. John Glenn of Ohio, Gary Hart of Colorado and former Sen. George McGovern of South Dakota — sharply criticized Reagan's policies but offered few specific proposals of their own.

They carefully refrained from criticizing one another, and the atmosphere was friendly enough for Hart to slap Cranston on the back afterwards and say, "Happy trails."

But Cranston twice referred to Walter F. Mondale as the "alleged, absent and temporary frontrunner," and in another clear gibe at Mondale, pledged that his delegates to next summer's Democratic National Convention would not be made up of influential union leaders, party officials and "fat cats."

Hart, Glenn, Cranston and McGovern were attracted to the forum because Iowa is the state that will elect the first delegates to the convention next summer. Mondale is considered the frontrunner six weeks before the caucuses scheduled for Feb. 20, with Glenn generally assumed to be running second. But Cranston is also given credit for having a strong organization in the state, and most of the field has been working aggressively in Iowa for months.

It was Hart who set the tone for the event, sponsored by the Brown and Black Coalition, when he opened it by declaring the country "faces two crucial necessities in 1984. One is the necessity to remove Ronald Reagan from office."

Missing men may have been trapped in copter

MIAMI (AP) — Four men who survived a helicopter crash in heavy seas could not tell whether the five other people aboard were able to get out of the aircraft before it sank, the Coast Guard said.

The U.S. Air Force helicopter was on a drug interception mission when it went down in heavy rain Monday night north of Nassau in the Bahamas.

Bad weather forced U.S. and Bahamian authorities to call off a search for the missing men at 8:30 p.m. Tuesday but Petty Officer David Kayfus said a sweep of the area — known to boaters as "The Tongue of the Ocean" — would resume "at first light" today.

Four men were plucked from the waters by the Coast Guard and the USS Koelsh, a destroyer that was in the area when the pilot's distress signals were broadcast, said Francis M. Mullen Jr., administrator of the Drug Enforcement Administration.

Initial reports indicated the helicopter landed upright, but soon sank in an estimated 6,000 feet of water. The survivors were uncertain whether the five missing men were able to get out, Mullen said.

Jack Tayrien

Tayrien named Lee coach

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

The Board of Trustees for the Midland Independent School District stayed within the school system Tuesday by naming Jack Tayrien as the head football coach for Midland Lee's Rebels during a regular school board meeting.

Tayrien, 45, has been an assistant football coach at Lee for the past four years under former head coach Spike Dykes.

Dykes resigned that position in December after guiding Lee to a 13-3 record and a berth in the state Class 5A football finals to become defensive coordinator at Texas Tech University.

The board decision to name Tayrien as the new coach was unanimous. The school board met about 45 minutes with Tayrien Tuesday before presenting him to media representatives.

Dr. Joe Baressi, MISD superintendent, said, "I think we are fortunate to have a coach of his caliber in our system and we were happy to recommend that he become the new head coach at Lee."

Bill Jackson, board president, added, "We appreciate what Jack has already done for Midland Lee and I'm sure that this move will be a benefit to the school. We're happy to present Jack Tayrien as the new Lee football coach."

The formal announcement ended the coaching void at Lee. It was a short wait and came as no secret.

Gil Bartosh, Midland athletic director, was for hiring a Midland coach since Dykes resigned.

"We have such a veteran staff at Lee that it would be foolish to go outside the system for a coach. Most of the coaches at Lee have head coaching experience. It's going to be a move that should build on what has already been built.

"The period of adjustment will be much shorter and we can continue the continuity that has already been developed from the seventh grade on up. Jack is famaliar with the whole system and that should be a tremendous asset for him and Lee."

Tayrien received a two-year contract by the board, which is standard in most cases with new coaches. According to Bartosh, Tayrien's salary will "be around $40,200." Coaching salaries for head football coaches in District 4-5A range from around $37,000 to $43,500, according to Scholastic Coach magazine.

For Tayrien, the decision was like a dream come true. He is a West Texan at heart, having grown up in Odessa and playing his high school football in the same district that he will now be coaching in.

"My wife Ann and I love West Texas. This is our home and that's the major reason I came back to coach with Spike (Dykes) when he asked," said Tayrien.

Head job no new experience for new boss

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

Even though Jack Tayrien has been an assistant coach under Spike Dykes for the last four years, being Lee's head football coach will not be a new experience.

Tayrien has previously been a head coach at three schools (Lockney, Frenship and Bishop). Tayrien's combined head coaching record is 72 victories, 45 losses and two ties, a winning percentage of .615.

Tayrien's athletic career started in West Texas in District 4-5A and that is one of the major reasons the Lee job is so special to him. He was a three sport letterman at Odessa High from 1955 through 1957.

In football, Tayrien was an All-District guard for the Bronchos and played under Cooper Robbins and Hayden Fry. He was also All-State in track and played basketball for three years at OHS.

Tayrien played two years of football at Oklahoma State from 1958 to 1959, playing in the Blue Grass Bowl with an 8-3 record his sophomore year.

He finished his college career at the University of Corpus Christi in 1960-61 and stayed there as an assistant coach through 1962.

Donald Robbins, son of Cooper, hired Tayrien as a seventh grade football coach in Big Spring in 1962. In 1966, Tayrien became head track coach at Big Spring and coached under Dykes for the first time in 1967 at Big Spring.

Tayrien's first head coaching job came in 1968 when he took over the reigns of then Class 2A Lockney. Lockney had a 2-18 record the previous two years, but Tayrien turned the program around, compiling a 14-6 record at the school.

Tayrien then became head coach at Frenship, another 2A school, in 1970. Tayrien compiled a 19-10-1 mark at Frenship and it was there that Tayrien hired Van Tom Whatley as an assistant. Whatley is currently on the Lee staff.

In 1973, Tayrien entered private business for a year, selling sporting goods out of Lubbock. He came back to coaching in 1974 as head coach of Class 3A Bishop, which was in the same district as football power Gregory-Portland.

Rooker hits 28 in MHS win

By BRUCE CASTLEBERRY
Sports Writer

After Midland High's Bulldog basketball team had finished off the Abilene Cooper Cougars 65-61, the reason for an MHS victory seemed outwardly apparent.

After all, it had been easy to speculate why MHS had stumbled in an opening-night district loss at Odessa Permian. Chris Rooker, Midland's automated scoring wizard, had been held to a season-low seven points against the Panthers, and against Big Spring last week Rooker turned in his second-worst total, 11 points.

So, the lanky MHS senior only ripped Cooper for 28 points, terminating the brief slump and making the critical baskets in a toughly fought battle.

BUT THAT wasn't the only reason MHS moved to 2-1 in the district 4-5A title chase and within one win of a 20-win year. MHS is 19-4, and further reasons they are so are defense better late than never.

"We were lucky to win," said MHS coach Jack Stephenson after the hair-raiser. "Cooper's not bad. I think when you don't play well and win, well, some people call it character. I think we're a pretty good basketball team."

For three quarters, Cooper was also a pretty good basketball team. But Cooper revealed something about their character: without super guard Bob Estes, the Cougars are cats without claws.

Estes burned a litter of Bulldogs from everywhere on the floor. Outside, inside, left side, right side, through three quarters, Estes had totaled 27 points, and entering the final frame Cooper led,55-52.

Estes finished with 27 points. MHS simply smothered him in the fourth period, and then Estes went cold and couldn't score from anywhere, at one point missing three straight cribs.

As a result, Cooper's offense disappeared like a mirage in the West Texas dust, and MHS turned the Cougars into pussycats. Midland allowed a measly six points to Cooper in the crunch.

"ESTES IS an all-state golfer and a great athlete. We knew he was good," said Stephenson, "Our whole game plan was to guard him."

Guard him Midland did, but stopping Estes didn't come until the fourth quarter. "We were changing defenses a good bit. I feel good, I think I'm about over the Permian game.

"I feel a lot better now that Chris' shot is back."

Rooker's mini-slump came at a bad time, what with the start of the district schedule. But against Cooper, Rooker once again provided the spark that lead the Bulldog charge.

In the first quarter, Rooker came off the bus shooting. Rooker scored ten straight MHS points after Fred Franklin got the ball rolling. MHS and Cooper were even at 12-12 after one. Rooker cooled down a bit in the second quarter and finished the half with 14 points.

Cooper and Estes refused to surrender, however. Trailing 34-29 at the start of the second half, Estes and the Cougars couldn't shake the Bulldog press and the relentless pressure Rooker applied with his shooting touch. At 50-42, MHS appeared to be taking control.

In most games this year, once MHS started to tighten the screws, opponents have been getting blown away. But Estes canned a 22-foot bomb, and then center Joe Melson got inside for a three-point play. Derrick Turnbull and Tim Jackson added two quick buckets and the 'Dogs found themselves down by three going into the fourth quarter.

BAD TEAMS crumble at that point, but good teams play harder. MHS got nasty on defense, and the Coogs faltered. Twice after MHS regained the lead, Cooper had chances to go back on top. Jackson missed a bonus try, and MHS wouldn't let go of the ball at 62-61 until Rooker was fouled by Estes with 16 ticks left. Rooker converted both throws and the Bulldogs survived an off night.

"I bet Chris has spent 15 extra hours this week on his own. That's the kind of person he is. I knew he was going to make those free throws. We already had our defense set, that's how confident I was," said Stephenson.

MHS returns to action Friday at Chap Center against the Odessa High Broncos.

Abilene puts squeeze on Rebels

ABILENE— The Lee Rebels could not overcome Abilene's press and dropped a 64-58 district 4-5A battle here.

Abilene swamped the Rebs 8-2 early on, forcing two backcourt violations from Lee in the first two minutes of play alone. Lee coach Paul Stueckler went to Tyrone Thurman, a late starter due to the Rebels' football exploits, and Thurman had some success in breaking the Abilene pressure.

Lee pulled to within one by the end of the quarter, and a jumper by Tim Hill early in the second frame gave Lee their only lead at 16-15.

Lee gave a little ground in the second and third quarters, but the hot shooting of Rebel Alvin Henry (17 points) kept Lee hopes alive.

Ray Morney scored two quick baskets in the third quarter to pull Lee back within range at 52-48, but the Rebs traded hoops until Morney was whistled for a walk that disallowed another basket with the score 60-54.

Morney had a season-high nine points.

For Abilene, Ruffus Brooks and Tom Simmons lead the way with 15 and 17 points, respectively.

ELSEWHERE in the district, the Permian Panthers took control of the standings and moved into undisputed first place with a 71-56 win over San Angelo on the road.

Rocky Hendrix had a dozen points and Paul Logan added 13 for Permian. High scoring Terry Williams was held to eight. The win leaves the Panthers with the only unbeaten mark in district 4-5A play at 3-0. San Angelo drops into a three-way tie for second at 2-1 with Midland and Abilene.

In Odessa, hapless Big Spring was the perfect foil for the Bronchos of Odessa High to nab their first district win.

Odessa, the pre-season favorite in the loop, blasted the 2-17 Steers 65-49. OHS stifled the Steers to single-digit scoring in the first and third quarters to coast to their thirteenth win of the season.

No doubt, Fix was on

The Fix in pro football...you are aware it has got to be a possibility. It lingers there in the back of the mind, although the noble inclination is to push it aside as possible, perhaps, and tempting, but far fetched.

Every time the Cowboys came from behind to win a game last fall, which must have been the first eight weeks, the Mrs. wondered aloud, "Do you think the games are fixed?"

Her fears would be allayed, temporarily, by the assurance, "Do you really think anyone would conspire to lose to the Cowboys. They may be America's Team, but there's no team in the league that other NFL teams would rather beat."

STILL, ALL the ingredients to invite tampering are there...the big money paid to the players, the drug habits that take even bigger money and, most of all, the huge amounts bet weekly on the games.

Combine all this with a Jack Anderson column last week that revealed the FBI had league game officials under surveillence for possible involvement in fixes and you can understand why every close call in Sunday's Redskins-49ers game was viewed with suspicion. That's a terrible way to be, but it's only human.

This corner was convinced early in the game that the Fix was on. I think that lateral pass off a punt that the Redskins turned into a touchdown was the convincer. The officials called it back and I nodded, "We know who's going to win this game."

That was surprising, since the bookies figured to lose Las Vegas, not to mention the cities of San Francisco and Los Angeles if Seattle kept winning, it seemed the Fix would be on the Raider-Seahawks game."

IT WAS SOON evident that our worst fears were not only substantiated, but compounded by an unexpected development. The warring factions of the underworld had not only gotten to one official, but another was involved as well.

After the punt return was nullified, it wasn't three plays before Washington had a flag thrown in its favor on a close play. It continued that way all afternoon, point-counter point. As John Madden would say, "Zip, then Zap".

THE 49ERS' Bill Walsh complained on one of the interference calls that set up the Redskins winning field goal, that it was a highly-irregular call. On the Redskins possession immediately previously, it looked as though the zebra shirts had let the 49ers get away with an interference that should have been flagged.

It was a game filled with close calls, many of which left lingering doubt even after the replays. In some cases, the unblinking eye of the camera could come up with a decision so shrouded in doubt that you wondered how the Zeebs made any call at all.

ON THE PUNT return-lateral-touchdown, it was so close I'm still not sure after seeing it several times from several angles. The official got one shot and probably decided it was too close to let the Skins get away with it.

The other fixed official probably said, "If you aren't going to let us get away with that, we're not going to let you get away with this,"....flutter "Will someone pick up my yellow hanky."

The distressing point of all this is that if they are going to "fix" officials, some terms must be agreed upon as to which way the game is supposed to go. After all, under Sunday's conditions, how's a guy going to know how to bet. They might as well have played it on the level.

Three to join Hall of Fame

NEW YORK (AP) — Luis Aparicio, Harmon Killebrew and Don Drysdale, who thrilled baseball fans in three different ways, are the newest elected members of the Hall of Fame.

Killebrew made his mark as a home-run hitter, Aparicio as a slick-fielding shortstop and baseststealer and Drysdale as a pitcher, but they each carried their own area of strength to a spot in the Cooperstown, N.Y., shrine. Formal induction will be Aug. 12.

In balloting by the Baseball Writers Association of America, which released the results Tuesday night, Aparicio was named by 84.6 percent of the voters, Killebrew by 83.1 and Drysdale, who made the Hall in his 10th year of eligibility, by 78.4. A player has to be named on 75 percent of the ballots to be elected.

KILLEBREW, IN his fourth year on the ballot, is the first member of the Minnesota Twins, who started in 1961, to make the Hall of Fame. Aparicio, in his sixth year of eligibility, is the first Venezuelan.

A total of 403 members of the association voted in the election, so 303 votes were required. Aparicio got 341 votes, Killebrew 335 and Drysdale collected 316, only 13 more than he needed.

"It's a great moment," said Drysdale just as he was leaving a golf tournament in Rancho Mirage, Calif. "I really don't know how to react. But I'm just very happy that so many of my friends were around when I heard about it."

He said he was able to share the news with former teammates Duke Snider and Sandy Koufax and former major league manager Gene Mauch.

Relief specialist Hoyt Wilhelm, who appeared in more games than any other pitcher in baseball history, missed election by 13 votes.

"If you miss by only 13 votes, there's always a chance next year," said Wilhelm, 60, contacted in Sarasota, Fla. "What the heck, it's up to the writers, and if they don't vote for you, they don't vote for you."

Aparicio, Killebrew and Drysdale represent the largest group of players elected by the writers since 1972, when Yogi Berra, Sandy Koufax and Early Wynn were inducted.

KILLEBREW, 47, began his career in 1954 with the Washington Senators, as a 17-year-old out of an Idaho High School. He stayed with the team — later the Twins — for most ox his career, playing his final season, 1975, with the Kansas City Royals.

He finished with 573 homers, more than any right-handed batter in the American League, but his lifetime batting average was only .256.

Aparicio began his career in 1956 with the Chicago White Sox, with whom he played for seven years. He played five years with Baltimore, returned to the White Sox for three more seasons, and finished his career with the Boston Red Sox.

While Killebrew is the prototype of a Hall of Famer, Aparicio is the antithesis. Many standouts at the shortstop position — Pee Wee Reese, Phil Rizzuto and Marty Marion — have been ignored in recent voting.

Aparicio was both a brilliant fielder and a potent offensive force during his 18 major league seasons that ended in 1974.

He never played a position other than shortstop in any of his 2,581 major league games; stole 506 bases and had a lifetime batting average of .262.

Drysdale played his entire career with the Dodgers, both in Brooklyn and Los Angeles.

His 209 victories, a Cy Young Award in 1962, when he was 25-9, and his six consecutive shutouts and 58 straight scoreless innings in 1968 were career highlights.

Lewis named 83's top athlete

NEW YORK (AP) — Sprinter-long jumper Carl Lewis, The AP Male Athlete of the Year for 1983 who has been compared to the great Jesse Owens, thinks this will be an even better year for him.

"I am looking forward so much to this season," Lewis said Tuesday after becoming the first track and field athlete since decathlete Bruce Jenner in 1976 to win the honor.

In the balloting by a nationwide panel of sports writers and broadcasters, the 22-year-old Lewis received 37 votes to 22 for runnerup Wayne Gretzky, the high-scoring center of the Edmonton Oilers who was named the named the National Hockey League's Most Valuable Player for the fourth straight year after winning the scoring title for the third year in a row with 196 points, including a record 125 assists.

Center Moses Malone, who led the Philadelphia 76ers to the National Basketball Association title, finished third with 19 votes, followed by Atlanta Braves outfielder Dale Murphy, the National League's MVP for the second consecutive year, with 13 votes.

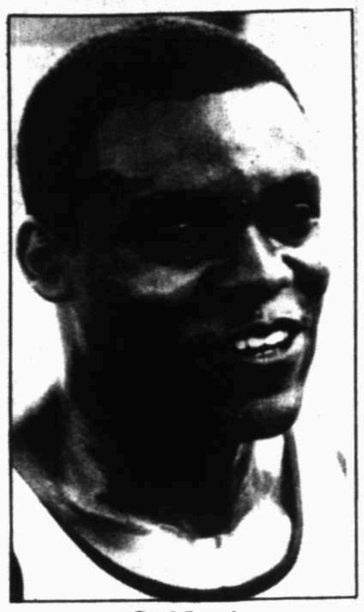

Lewis, winner of three events in both the World Track and Field Championships and the USA Championships in 1983, will be gunning for four gold medals in this year's Summer Olympic Games at Los Angeles — and perhaps some world records.

"I'm four inches away in the long jump, one tick from the world record in the 100-meter dash and three ticks from the 200," said Lewis. "They're all within reach."

Lewis long-jumped 28 feet, 10¼ inches last year, 4¼ inches short of the world record set by Bob Beamon in the 1968 Olympics in the rarified air of Mexico City.

He ran the 100-meter dash in 9.97 seconds last year, the fastest-time ever at sea level but actually .04 of a second off the world record of 9.93 set by Calvin Smith of the United States in the high altitude of Colorado Springs, Colo. in 1983.

And Lewis ran the 200 in 19.75 seconds last year, an American record, the fastest-clocking ever at sea level and exactly .03 off the world record of 19.72 set by Pietro Mennea of Italy at Mexico City in 1979.

Carl Lewis

"I plan to compete in all three events in the (U.S. Olympic) Trials (at Los Angeles in June)," said Lewis.

If he makes the American team in the 100, placing among the top three finishers in the Trials or even finishes fourth, he also would qualify for the 400-meter relay team — his fourth event at the Olympics. Last year, Lewis ran a blazing anchor leg on the United States relay team that set a world record of 37.86 seconds in the World Championships at Helsinki, Finland.

In addition to capturing a gold medal in the relay, he led a 1-2-3 United States sweep in the 100, winning in 10.07 seconds, and paced a 1-2-3 American sweep in the long jump, leaping 28-0¾.

His first "triple" of the year had come two months earlier in the National Championships at Indianapolis. There, he broke Tommie Smith's American record in the 200 by .08 of a second, captured the long jump with his sea-level best and won the 100 for the third consecutive year in 10.27.

Rooney explains blast after Steelers loss

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Steelers President Dan Rooney's unprecedented blasting of Coach Chuck Noll and the Steelers after their 38-10 playoff loss to the Los Angeles Raiders was not a sign of panic at the team's late-season disintegration, Rooney says.

"We're far from a panic situation," Rooney said. "We have the people and we have the commitment. The Steelers will continue to play well."

In an interview published Tuesday in The Pittsburgh Press, Rooney said Noll's job is not in jeopardy even though he said immediately after the Raiders' loss that Noll's team played "the worst offense I've seen" and used a "very poor offensive approach."

"We can't get anybody better than Chuck. He's perfect for Pittsburgh," Rooney told The Press. Noll coached the Steelers to Super Bowl championships in the 1974, 1975, 1978 and 1979 seasons.

"Everything I said was calculated. It was not said in a fit of anger. I just felt it was my responsibility to voice the opinion of the organization," Rooney said.

"I thought we played that game offensively in a way we couldn't win it. I don't think we were ready and I thought that was a mistake. As head coach, Chuck, of course, is responsible for that, but I did not say those things with the idea of mentioning his name or saying he was doing a terrible coaching job."

Rooney, like Noll, refused to pin the blame for the Steelers' late-season offensive problems — losing five of their last six games — on struggling quarterback Cliff Stoudt.

Stoudt, who can become a free agent Feb. 1, has not yet said whether he will return to the Steelers next season or jump to the rival United States Football League.

"He (Stoudt) got his dobber down and that was a problem, but it wasn't all his fault," Rooney told The Press.

UIL approves third umpire

EDINBURG (AP) — District 32-5A high school athletic directors and the University Interscholastic League rules committee have approved a plan to put a third umpire on the field when play begins this spring.

Southwest Baseball Umpires Association president Adrian Flores said the vote by Rio Grande Valley Class 5A schools late last week will make the district the only one in the state with a three-umpire system, instead of the two men now used to referee.

"Valley umpires are excited about it," Flores said. He said there would be no problem covering the extra assignments. "We have plenty of umpires," he said.

Edinburg baseball coach Joe Vasca said, "I think three-man mechanics will benefit the Valley high school teams, especially on the close calls. When you have two men on base, the men on second and third will be covered."

LCC forced to surrender seven of its 10 cage wins

LUBBOCK (AP) — School officials said it was just an oversight, but the mistake will cost the Lubbock Christian College seven of its 10 basketball victories this season.

Reserve guard Coby Beckner, a transfer student from Amarillo College, was ruled ineligible because he failed to sit out 16 weeks. Because he was ineligible, LCC must forfeit victories in games in which Beckner played.

"Of course, it really hurts. It's a real shock. It's just a freak deal because if he had laid out, he'd be eligible," said LCC Head Coach John Copeland.

The college was notified Monday by NAIA District 8 eligibility chairman A.C. Sharp of McMurry College that Beckner was ineligible.

Beckner, a 6-3 junior from Clayton, N.M., first attended Ottawa University in Kansas before moving on to Amarillo College, a two-year school. Since he did not graduate from the Amarillo school, he was supposed to wait 16 weeks before competing for the Chaparrals.

The Chaps, who were 9-3, dropped to 2-10 entering Tuesday's game against Dallas Baptist, which they won 67-62. LCC's recent victories against Belmont College and Austin College were not affected.

"Coby filled out all the forms right," LCC Assistant Athletic Director Walt McAlexander told the Lubbock Avalanche-Journal. "His coaches at Amarillo College told him he didn't have to graduate to transfer to an NAIA school and start playing, but that's wrong.

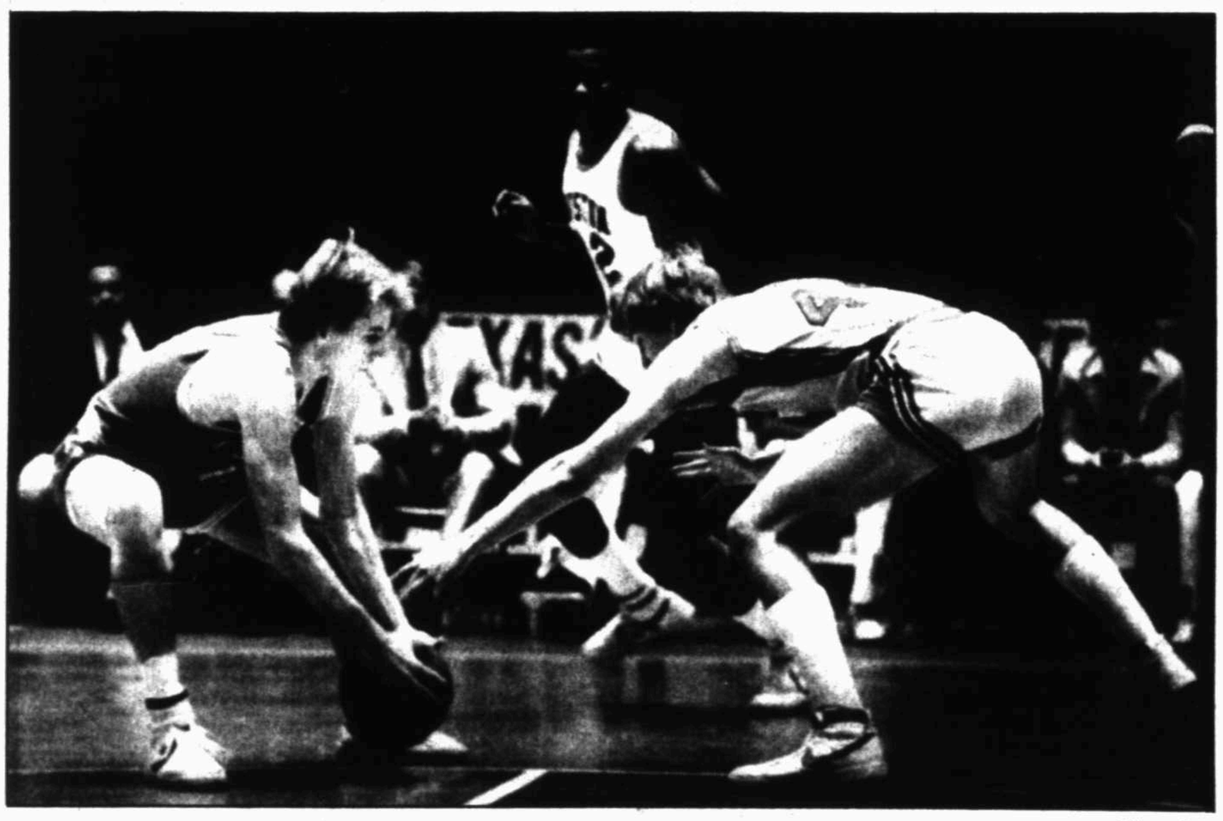

"Three of us looked at his transcripts. But no one noticed it," said McAlexander.

"Usually, when something like this happens, it's because you don't have all the information," Athletic Director Larry Hays added. "But Coby put it all down and it was all right."

"I don't think it will have that much of an effect on us. Our goal is the same as it always was ... to make the playoffs and hopefully host a playoff game," said Copeland.

The decision does not effect the Chaps' position in the Dunkel ratings, which are used to seed teams for post-season play.

"This is one of those things that always looms over you and you never expect it to happen. But there's always a first time," said McAlexander.

Houston's Reid Gettys lunges for loose ball against Texas' Karl Willcock in SWC game at Houston Tuesday night.

Gettys ignites Cougars, 69-58

By Associated Press

When Akeem Olajuwon and Michael Young are off their games for the Houston Cougars, Coach Guy Lewis doesn't have to worry too much. He can always look to Reid Gettys for leadership.

"I've said all along we're not a two-man team," said Lewis Tuesday night after watching Gettys take over the starring role as the Cougars defeated Texas 69-58.

The junior guard scored 12 points as the seventh-ranked Cougars extended their Southwest Conference record winning streak to 27 games.

"Michael (Young) has been carrying us all year long," said Lewis, "but he didn't have one of his better games tonight."

Young had only 10 points, well below his average of 22.4 points a game.Gettys' 6-of-9 shooting from the field broke the Texas zone which collapsed three defenders inside on the 7-foot Olajuwon, who also was limited 10 points.

In other games involving the nation's ranked teams, No. 6 UCLA beat Stanford 71-63, No. 10 St. John's trimmed Connecticut 68-65, No. 11 Louisiana State was upset by Tennessee 70-69 and No. 15 Georgia walloped Mississippi 70-51.

Top Ten

Lewis had only praise for Olajuwon despite his less-than-stellar showing.

"I thought Akeem played well. I thought he held his poise in there when they were leaning and holding him," Lewis said. "All I want out of him are rebounds and a few slams. We don't need him to score many points to win."

Olajuwon grabbed 13 rebounds.

Freshman forward Rickey Winslow and reserve guard Eric Dickens matched Young's 10 points as well as leading a pressing defense that rallied Houston from a 12-12 tie to a 32-23 lead at halftime.

Winslow and Dickens also triggered the same defense in the second half that opened up a 20-point spread at 69-49. The defense netted 13 steals and forced 22 turnovers altogether.

Kenny Fields scored a game-high 19 points and Reggie Miller added 12 to lead UCLA over Stanford.

The Bruins continued their hex over Stanford by winning their 36th straight game over the Cardinals in Southern California. Stanford's last victory in Los Angeles was in 1952. Overall, the Bruins have won 32 of the last 35 meetings with Stanford.

Willie Glass converted a pair of free throws with 1:32 remaining to break a 59-59 tie, leading St. John's over Connecticut. Chris Mullin had a game-high 21 points for the Redmen, 11 of them in the second half when St. John's wiped out a 38-28 disadvantage at the intermission.

St. John's Coach Lou Carnesecca obviously delivered the right message in the locker room during the halftime break.

College basketball

"Two things happened," said Mullin. "First of all, we stopped their fastbreak. Connecticut seemed to run it with ease in the first half, but we finally set the tempo in the second half. Secondly, we got the ball inside and took easier shots. In the first half, we were relying on jump shots from too far out."

Second Ten

Willie Burton scored a game-high 21 points and hit a 30-footer with two seconds remaining to lead Tennessee over Louisiana State.

"The release felt good and I watched it," said Burton. "When it went in I didn't know what to think. It wasn't until my teammates piled on me that it really hit me."

"He just made the biggest play he has ever made as a Tennessee player," said Vols coach Don DeVoe. "He allowed us to be seven games above .500 and put us in the first division of the SEC."

Vern Fleming scored seven of his 17 points in a second-half surge as Georgia beat Mississippi. Fleming scored seven of his points to help the Bulldogs pull away to a 55-43 lead after Mississippi had moved within three points. The Rebels never got closer than 10 thereafter.

Others

In other action, Stark Langs scored 23 points and Todd Murray added 19 to lead Brown to a 67-64 victory over Hofstra, Robert Turner scored 21 points to pace Canisius College to a 62-44 victory over Colgate, Kevin Mullin scored 19 points and Howard Levy added 17 to lead Princeton to a 80-66 victory over the University of Hartford, Stanford Strickland and Willie White scored 17 points apiece to lead Tennessee-Chattanooga past Appalachian State 69-59 and Kelly Blaine hit a foul shot to break a tie with two seconds remaining to lift South Alabama to a 59-58 victory over South Florida.

Greenwood sweeps pair

Greenwood opened District 11-A play with a 73-36 romp over Grady to raise its record to 12-4 for the season and the Greenwood girls had an equally easy time with a 67-15 win over Grady. Greenwood's girls are now 14-3 and 1-0.

Sims defies contract law

HOUSTON (AP) — Star running back Billy Sims has threatened the basis of contract law by signing to play for two football teams, then suing in an attempt to get out of one of them, a part-owner of the Houston Gamblers says.

Jerry Argovitz said Tuesday he was "hurt" by Sims' lawsuit, filed against him Monday.

Sims signed with the Detroit Lions in December, six months after he agreed to play for the Gamblers of the United States Football League.

Hegman, Cowboys agree

DALLAS (AP) — The Dallas Cowboys have agreed on a new contract with starting strong side linebacker Mike Hegman, Cowboys officials said Tuesday.

From wire reports

BASEBALL—Former Midland Cub Dennis Lamp, a right-handed reliever-spot starter for the White Sox last year, has signed with Toronto. Lamp, 31, was 7-7 record with a 3.71 ERA in helping Chicago White Sox capture the AL West Division title. Lamp broke into the majors in 1977 and spent four years with the Cubs before being traded to the Sox for Ken Kravec in March 1981. In three seasons with the White Sox, bouncing back and forth between the starting rotation and the bullpen, Lamp has posted a 25-21 log...

Tayrien also sees the shorter transition period at Lee as a plus for him.

"It's a definite plus to have been here for four years," he said. "I'm already famaliar with the administration and policies. I know who to go to when I need things done and all those things are to your benefit. The transition period will be much shorter than moving into a strange situation."

Lee is coming off its most successful football campaign in the school's history and Tayrien is realistic about what the future holds, but maintains a hearty approach.

"It's going to be a challenge to step in and follow the act that we had this season," said Tayrien. "It hurts when you lose 55 seniors. That doesn't leave many people coming back.

"However, just having 55 seniors on a team is a great credit to Gil Bartosh and Spike Dykes. That's why there were so many seniors and the enrollment at Lee is almost the lowest in the district. The foundation has been laid by them and it is up to us to keep that approach.

"We had good junior varsity and sophomore teams and it looks like there is a lot of talent coming in the lower grades. It's going to be a tremendous challenge, but Midland is a great place to coach. The program is started and we must build on that and keep the continuity."

Tayrien says that he does not intend to fill the shoes of Dykes. He says, "I will have to be my own man. Besides, I don't know of anyone who wears a 9½ shoe like Spike anyway. I will do some things differently than Spike, but I will do some of the things the same. After all, I've coached with Spike on two different occassions and you can't help but have some of the same philosophies."

Tayrien plans no major changes in the way of staff.

"Obviously, I must replace myself, but I would hope that the current staff remains intact. Much of the success we had this season was because of the association we had among the coaching staff. We all respect each other and know what each of us can do.

"I would hope that they would all stay. I know that all of them will have the opportunity to stay if they want. However, after a season like we had, the stock is up on this staff. I would understand and even help any of them if they wanted to move on to a head job of their own. I just hope we can keep everything intact. That would make things even easier," said Tayrien.

Tayrien, and wife Ann, have two daughters, Shawn, 24 and Elslea, 21.

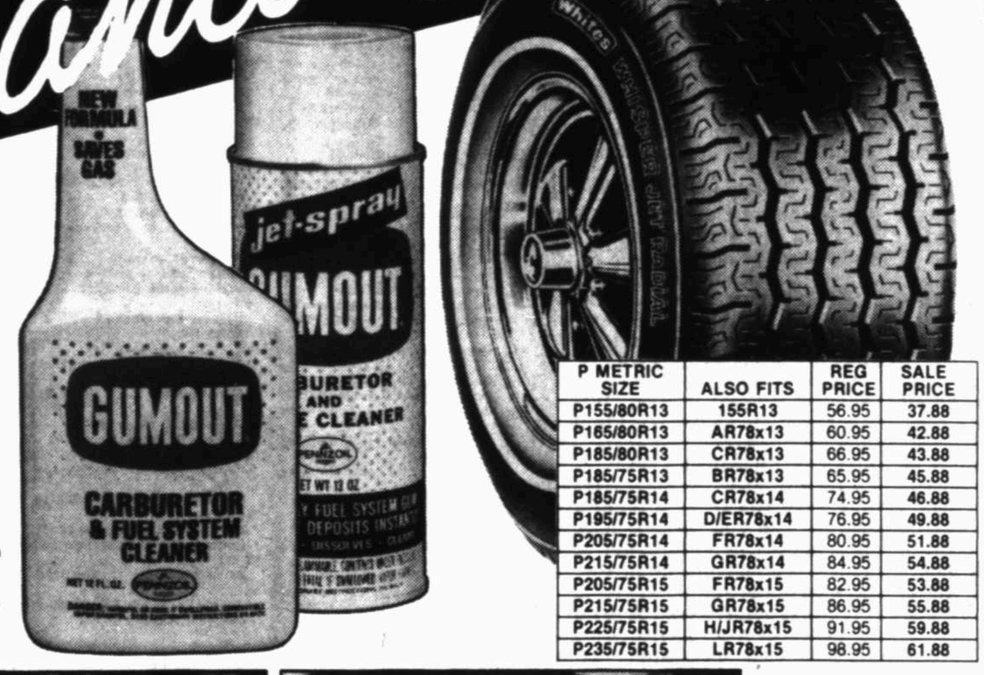

Tayrien has a B.S. degree from the University of Corpus Christi with a double major in history and physical education. He taught world history at Lee, but will not have any teaching responsibilities now that he has been promoted to the position of head coach.

Chaps back in action Thursday at Howard

A post-holiday doubleheader at Howard College in Big Spring Thursday and Friday will allow the Midland College Chaparrals to get organized before returning to conference action.

The Chaps play the Lubbock Christian College junior varsity at 6 p.m. Thursday and the Angelo State University JV at 6 p.m. Friday.

"These games have some question marks for us," said MC coach Jerry Stone. "If the other coaches decide to bring along some of their juniors who don't see action regularly on the varsity, they could be pretty tough. But we really just need the action, regardless of who is opposing us."

Howard's Hawks will play the 8 p.m. game both nights at Dorothy Garrett Colisemon the HC campus.

All of Stone's players remained academically eligible, so Jerry's primary concern is the number of high-caliber teams in the thick of the WJCC running for Region V playoff berths.

MC is tied for third with a 3-1 record, losing to Clarendon, while Howard is 4-0 and Odessa College 3-0 on the eve of resumption in WJCC warfare.

Soccer history made

Soccer history was made over the weekend when players representing Midland High and Midland Lee High met in a Midland Soccer Association match. Lee, coached by Joe Bryant and Jim Metz, won 1-0 on a penalty shot.

Midland High was coached by Paul Breitzman and Chris Williams.

Teams were formed under club status at both MHS and Lee encompassing grades nine through 12. Tryouts were held in December and teams organized. The program is supervised by the MSA with Mike Conaway the liason between the MSA and MISD AD Gil Bartosh.

Registration for the regular MSA seasons is scheduled for Feb. 4, 11, 18 with the $20 player fee including a uniform.

Terrorists prep for Games

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Terrorists are selecting targets and working daily on plans to disrupt the 1984 Olympic Games, particularly where Israeli athletes are concerned, says the Israeli consul to Los Angeles.

"There's no question in my mind that terrorist organizations are working daily," said Jacob Even, a former Israeli Army general who fought in the 1973 Yom Kippur War and is in his first diplomatic post.

In an interview in today's Los Angeles Daily News, Even didn't specify what threats have arisen, if any, or what specific knowledge he had on planned terroristic acts. He also declined to speculate on what country the terrorists may represent.

However, he referred to "the lessons from Munich," a reference to the 1972 Olympics in which 11 Israeli athletes were slain when Palestinian terrorists seized a compound occupied by the Israel team.

Even, 50, was named by Yitzhak Shamir, Israel's former foreign minister, to the consular post in Los Angeles, which covers a six-state region.

He met recently with Los Angeles Police Chief Daryl Gates, county sheriff Sherman Block and other law enforcement officials planning security for the Summer Games at Los Angeles.

"They're taking it seriously. They are very careful and they know their business," Even said.

He said the purpose of the meetings was to ensure that authorities recognized that the Israelis "could be targets" of terrorists.

Cmdr. William Rathburn, the LAPD's Olympic planning coordinator, said that security for the Israelis would be a top priority.

A security force from Israel will help safeguard the Israeli Olympic team and will work with U.S. law enforcement officials, according to Rathburn, who has traveled to Tel Aviv to study Israeli security at Olympic-style competitions.

"History itself is sufficient reason in our minds to make the Israelis a top priority," Rathburn said.

He added that he believes there will be no major terrorist incidents during the Games.

Super Bowl rebates

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — Rebates for visitors to Tampa's Super Bowl?

That's what the owners of one hotel promise.

While many businesses are out to cash in on Super Bowl XVIII, operators of the Causeway Inn have decided to lower room rates and give cash rebates to those who have paid in advance.

According to Rick Dumas, managing partner in Causeway Inn Partners Ltd., the decision could cost the hotel $10,000.

Dumas' group bought the hotel on Courtney Campbell Causeway for $4.75 million and took it over Dec. 15. The previous owner, Bahama Inn Inc., had operated it since 1963.

Dumas said he believes the $125 a night charged by the previous owner for Super Bowl was "too steep." The new owners talked it over, he said, and decided to charge the normal rate of $69 a night for two. There will still be a four-day minimum stay.

Jazz make presence felt; Suns slip below horizon

By Associated Press

Surprisingly, the Utah Jazz have become a force in the NBA his season. Even more surprisingly, the Phoenix Suns are not.

The Jazz won their 13th straight home game and moved their record up to 23-12 for the season with a 107-98 victory over the setting Suns, who have lost have five in a row. Phoenix was expected to challenge in the Pacific Division but has fallen to 15-21, ahead of only San Diego in the sector. Utah is four games ahead of Dallas in the Midwest.

Darrell Griffith scored seven points in the final 4:17, including a pair of dunks off steals, and led the Jazz with 22 points. Utah staved off a Phoenix rally with solid defense.

"They made a run at us," said Griffith. "In the past, we would have struggled, but now we know we can hold people back and we did."

The Jazz won despite being outrebounded 56-49.

"The reason we can win without rebounding is steals and blocked shots," said Layden. "Those things can make up for rebounding."

NBA

Lakers 136, Rockets 132

Los Angeles, which trailed by as many as 20 points in the first half, used a Magic Johnson 12-foot hook shot to grab the lead for good in overtime. Host Houston's Lewis Lloyd had forced the extra session with two free throws just three seconds from the end of regulation.

For the second straight game, star center Kareem Abdul-Jabbar of the Lakers was pitted against rookie Ralph Sampson. Abdul-Jabbar fouled out with 2:18 left in regulation, finishing with 21 points and three rebounds. Sampson, who fouled out 13 seconds later, had 20 points and 11 rebounds.

Hawks 103, Warriors 101

Dan Roundfield, returning to the lineup after a five-game absence with a wrist injury, scored 18 points and pulled down 11 rebounds. Johnny Davis also had 18 points, while Glenn Rivers' free throw with three seconds left clinched it.

Purvis Short led the visiting Warriors with 30 points.

Cavaliers 116, Bucks 104

World B. Free poured in 34 points as the visiting Cavs handed Milwaukee its fourth loss in a row. After Cleveland staged a 13-5 rally in the third period, the Bucks could get no closer than 10 points.

Bulls 105, Pacers 104

Orlando Woolridge hit an eigh-foot shot with one second remaining to lift the hometown Bulls to their 10th victory in 13 games. Woolridge led the Bulls with 26 points, three more than Indiana's Herb Williams, who pulled down a rebound and put it in with five seconds to go to give the Pacers a one-point edge.

Kings 112, Mavericks 102

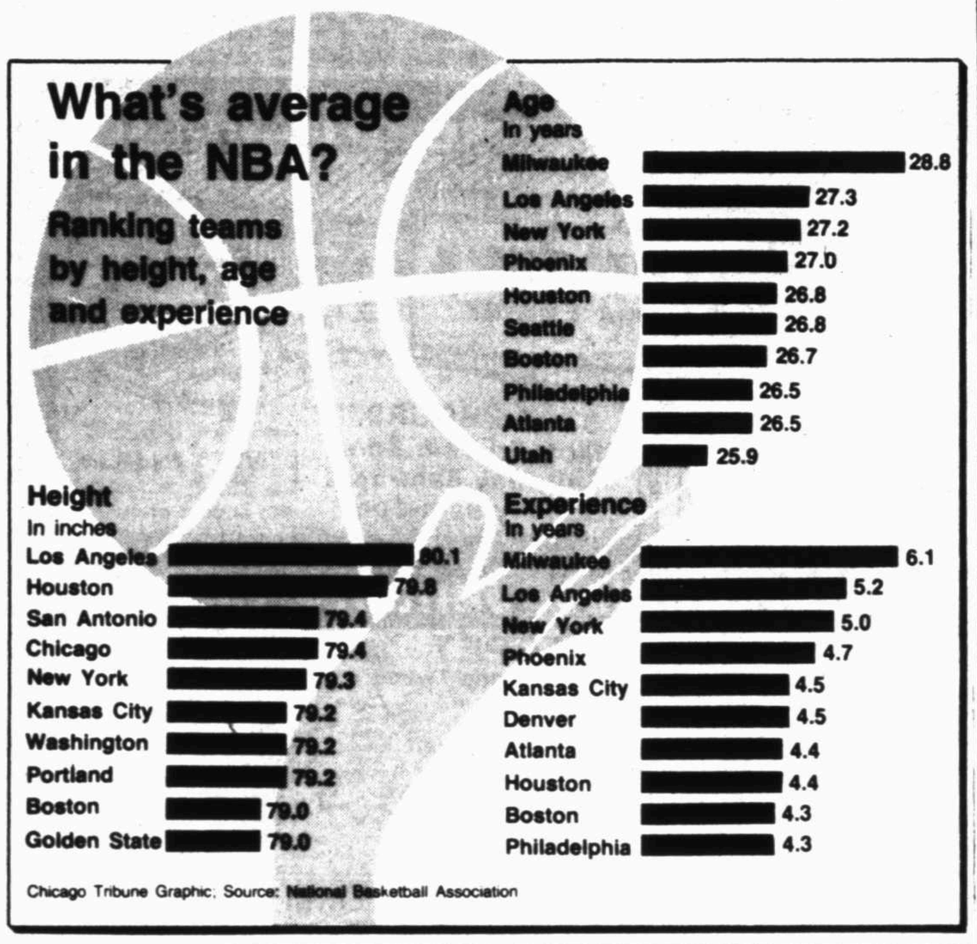

Mike Woodson came off the bench for the host Kings and scored 27 points, while Larry Drew added 19. Mark Aguirre, with 24 points, and Roland Blackman, with 23, led the Mavs.

Sonics 111, Clippers 106

Trail Blazers 133, Spurs 120

Portland stayed atop the Pacific Division behind Wayne Cooper's 22 points and a tough defense which caused 27 Spurs turnovers. George Gervin scored 12 points in the first period and then was held to 10 the rest of the way.

Leigh-Walters in lead

Bowling

Midland's Donna Leigh and Odessa's Gayle Walters teamed to take a commanding lead in the Miller National Doubles State Qualifying tournament, which heads into its final weekend at Fairmont Lanes.

Leigh, a 147-average bowler, rolled scratch games of 211-233-205—639, her first ever 600 series. Walters, 150 average, rolled 186-228-187—601. The combined 1,240 scratch and 206 average, 58 pins better than their combined average, gave the team a 1,572 (with handicap), 159 poins better than Scott Bowers and Carl Johnson, the opening-day leaders from Conroe.

Walters-Leigh earned the right to compete in the state at Fairmont. They also were the top qualifiers at Regal Lanes (formerly Super Bowl). Walters and Randy Higgins, who qualified at Odessa Busby's, were in sixth place in the state qualifying tournament.

The tournament will bring 280 teams from throughout Texas to Midland over two weekends. The top eight will return to Midland Jan. 28. The winner in the playoffs will earn a trip to Reno, Nev., to compete against the winning teams in 50 states for the $50,000 first place prize. The national purse is $150,000. The state purse is $12,500 and will be distributed among 35 teams.

Midland teams earning berths in the state tournament are: Randy Higgins-Gilbert Rodriquez; Bob Love-Mike Sawyer, Debbie Braswell-Billy Sedatole; Marilyn Jones-Gilbert Rodriquez; Nanci Mann-Ann Dunham; Lynn Cooke-Tammy Williams, Ricky Wright-David Wright; Nanci Mann-David Griffin; Celena Fawks-Gilbert Rodriquez; Rosie Urias-David Wright; Susan Nix-Patsy Smith; Ricky Wright-Ruben Urias; Jan-Ricky Wooten; Randy Higgins-Karen Tye; Pete Zepeda-Charles Mitchell, all from Dellwood.

Braves' Perez jailed

SANTO DOMINGO, Dominican Republic (AP) — Atlanta Braves pitcher Pascual Perez is in jail, charged with possession of cocaine, and has asked that a team official come to the town of San Luis to help him.

Perez, reached in jail by Atlanta's WSB-TV after being charged Tuesday, said he had "a small problem" and that "it would be helpful" to him if a Braves' coach or team official came to the Dominican Republic, rather than a lawyer.

Perez, 24, was charged with possession and with the intent to distribute a half-gram of cocaine.No details of the arrest were given other than that Perez was taken into custody Tuesday in Santiago, the second largest city in the Dominican Republic.

Police Col. Ovando Gerardo said a friend of Perez', identified as Sergio Agustin de Leon, also was arrested and charged.

Gerardo said Perez had been jailed previously on a drug charge, but no further details were offered. However, Perez told WSB-TV that this was his first offense and that he had less than one-half gram in his possession.

If convicted, Perez, who said he has a hearing scheduled for today, could be sentenced from two to five years in jail and fined between $500 and $2,000.

"I'm handicapped in that it's hard to get information out of the Dominican Republic," Braves General Manager John Mullen said from Atlanta. "I'll go down there if I need to, if it would make any sense, but right now we're just trying to find out what the devil is going on."

Perez, a 15-game winner for the Braves in 1983, returned to the Dominican Republic Sunday from Atlanta after he signed a contract for the 1984 season.

During the off-season, he had been pitching for Aguilas del Cibao, a winter league team based in Santiago. His record for the season was 4-1.

"If something hapens so that he can't pitch, it would be devastating," said Braves Manager Joe Torre. "But before I start worrying about it, we better stop and see what happens."

Asked if he had anything to say to his fans, Perez told the television station: "I would ask that they not be alarmed and realize that we (ballplayers) are only human and we make mistakes."

Sims sues Houston Gamblers

HOUSTON (AP) — Star running back Billy Sims has threatened the basis of contract law by signing to play for two football teams, then suing in an attempt to get out of one of them, a part-owner of the Houston Gamblers says.

Jerry Argovitz said Tuesday he was "hurt" by Sims' lawsuit, filed against him Monday.

Sims signed with the Detroit Lions in December, six months after he agreed to play for the Gamblers of the United States Football League.

"If Billy Sims is allowed to sign and perform for a second contract he signed six months later because he will personally gain $1 million more, then all contracts will not be worth the paper they are written on," said Argovitz, Sims' former agent.

Sims is asking for $775,000 in damages from Argovitz, the Gamblers and Argovitz's business.

The Lions, of the National Football League, has also sued Argovitz and the Gamblers. Both federal court suits are scheduled to be heard Jan. 25, said Sims' attorney, Elbert Hatchett.

Sims is seeking to recover $175,000 Argovitz charged for handling a $3.5 million, 5-year agreement with the USFL team and $600,000 damages because the agent failed to negotiate the option year of Sims' contract with the Lions of the National Football League, Hatchett said.

"Billy originally took the position that he did not want to become involved in any suit, but it has become clear that he was a victim of all victims," Hatchett said. "Argovitz signed Billy to his own team and then charges him $175,000 for doing so."

Tayrien shows 72-45-2 record

Whatley again joined Tayrien at Bishop where they posted a 31-28-1 record through 1979. In 1977, Bishop won a district championship with an 8-1-1 regular season record and the team gained a regional berth in the playoffs for an overall mark of 9-2-1.

In 1980, Tayrien was asked to rejoin Dykes at Lee. Jack left his head coaching job at Bishop to become an assistant at Lee..

"Ann and I wanted to stay in Bishop until we had our two daughters (Shawn and Elslea) raised and we did," said Tayrien. "But we wanted to be back in West Texas and Spike gave us that opportunity. I know the Midland-Odessa area because that's where I was raised. This is where we want to be."

Bank's proposal heard

By BILL KIDD
Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Lack of industrial development in northwest Midland has resulted in a lack of growth at Midland American Bank, which seeks to move its home office to downtown, says bank president Sarah Carter, who testified Tuesday on the proposed move at the Texas Department of Banking.

A hearings officer with the department said the State Baking Board could consider Midland American Bank's application for a domicile change as early as February.

The bank seeks approval from the board to move its offices from 4415 Northgate to 401 W. Texas.

"Our particular area has not developed as was anticipated," Carter said. "The downtown area will be a better central base for deposits."

A proposed office building development by Texaco in northwest Midland did not materialize because of the "slump in our economy," noted Carter, who told hearing officer O. A. Cassity III that Midland American Bank lost money every month but one in its first seven months of operation. "We did show a profit in November (1983)," she said, "then showed a loss in December."

The bank opened in July 1982, with Carter coming on as president last September.

Carter said the downtown location would be successful because of its central location and because "a lot of people are still shopping for a bank" since First National Bank of Midland was declared insolvent Oct. 14. "People have not really accepted RepublicBank (which opened Oct. 17 in place of First National)," she said. "It's an out-of-town bank."

Upon returning to Midland, Carter told the Reporter-Telegram she was pleased with the hearing. "It did go well, very smoothly," she said. However, she was not able to predict what the outcome will be. "I have no feeling as to the decision they will make."

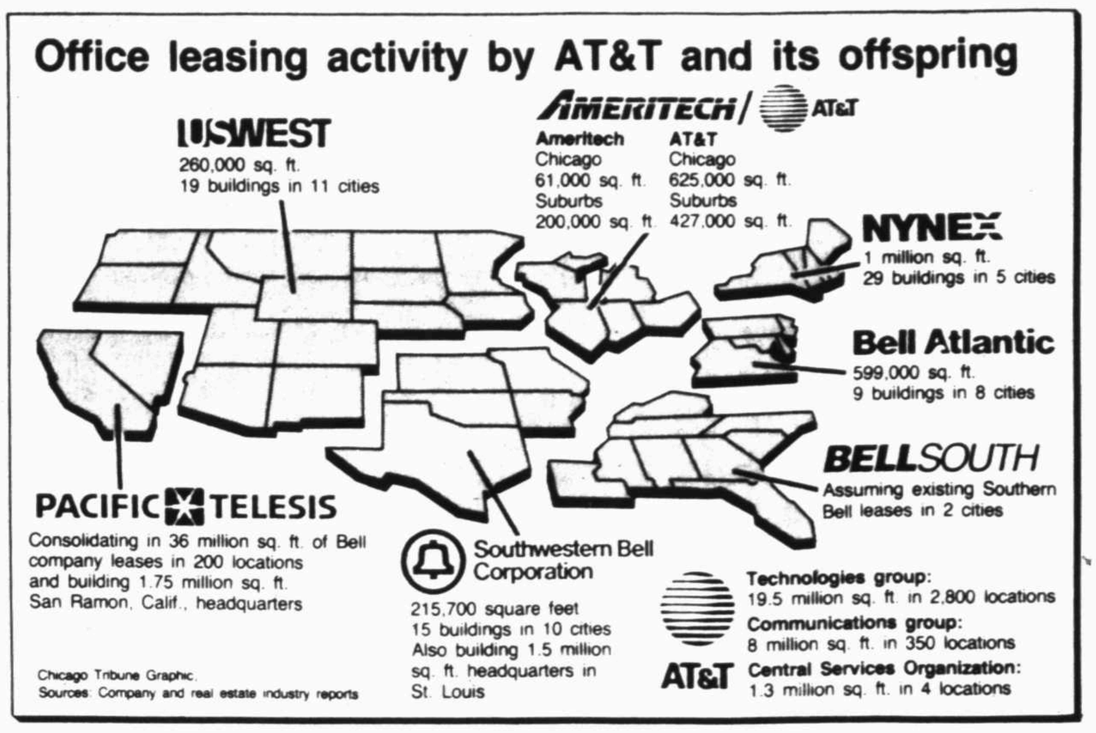

Carter said she expects the board to decide on the bank's application at its next regularly scheduled board meeting Feb. 5.

Lawrence Hahn, a Midland oil operator who is attempting to acquire ownership of the bank, said additional deposits have occured since the announcement of the bank's intention to move downtown was made. "About 90 percent of banking in Midland takes place in the downtown area," he said. "A lot of people don't have time to go from downtown to the ouskirts — it takes an hour."

The bank with total assets of more than $8 million, has about $730,000 in capital, Hahn said, who noted they anticipate increasing the capital as the bank grows at the new location.

Austin consultant George W. Berry, whose specialty is the field of economics said the change of location would not constitute an abandonment of the community in nothwest Midland since another bank operates there.

"It certainly behoves the bank to move to a better location in order to better serve their customers," Berry said, adding the new location in Midland's central business district is more convenient to a majority of the bank's customers.

ATM operator agreement will allow card holders to use two systems

DALLAS (AP) — A joint agreement between operators of the two largest shared, automated teller machine networks in the nation, PULSE and MPACT, will allow cardholders to use either system, officials say.

The announcement was made Tuesday by Houston-based Financial Interchange Inc., operator of PULSE, and Dallas-based Mercantile Texas Corp.'s subsidiary, Affiliated Computer Systems, operator of the MPACT program.

The agreement will give MPACT members access to the PULSE network and PULSE cardholders access to the MPACT system, officials said.

The combination of the two networks would provide about 4.5 million cardholders access to more than 2,100 automated teller machines (ATMs) in Texas, Louisiana, New Mexico and Oklahoma.

"We mutually feel that the consumer is the big beneficiary," said Stan Paur, executive vice president of Financial Interchange.

"We've been hoping for this day for a long time," said Doug Kirk, Affiliated Computer System's senior vice president for corporate communications. "It will enhance everything we've hoped for in electronic banking."

Kirk said the agreement could help pave the way for point-of-sale purchases at retail locations, where consumers could make purchases that are immediately debited to their bank accounts.

"One of the things that has inhibited this (point-of-sale) is that there hasn't been a large enough homogenous card base," Kirk said. "This should move it along at a much greater pace."

Discussions between Mercantile Texas and Financial Interchange began in December, officials said.

Operational ties between the two systems should be complete in six months, the time required to make the software and hardware accomodations, the companies said.

Any service charge to the cardholder for using the ATM network is left up to individual member banks, Kirk said.

Clark hints at lease plan changes

WASHINGTON (AP) — Interior Secretary William Clark is hinting that he plans to make changes in one of James Watt's most controversial programs — his push to offer virtually the entire U.S. coastline for oil and gas drilling.

Clark said "the basic policy will remain the same" but that some changes will be made in the process by which the leases are offered.

Watt's ambitious program has spawned widescale opposition among coastal states, environmental groups and Congress. Last October, Congress imposed a 20-mile buffer zone along the Southern California coast, which would put the area off limits to leasing in the 1984 budget year.

Congress also approved limitations on the Interior Department's ability to sell drilling rights off the coasts of Florida and Massachusetts.

Clark, in a speech Tuesday to the National Association of Manufacturers, said the leasing program had become stalemated because of the congressional moratoriums.

He promised more consultation "with all interested parties" in an effort to break the deadlock and said the department would proceed with future leases on a "more selected basis."

Clark said the need for greater consultation with coastal states was one of the reasons he postponed taking action on two scheduled lease sales this year in the North Atlantic and off the Southern California coast.

In his speech to the business group, Clark pledged to renew administration efforts to launch new water projects in the West and said he was abandoning Watt's near-moratorium on new park land purchases.

Weather chills decontrol efforts

WASHINGTON (AP) — Record cold temperatures last month will increase pressures in Congress to roll back natural gas prices rather than decontrol them as President Reagan wants, Energy Secretary Donald Hodel said Tuesday.

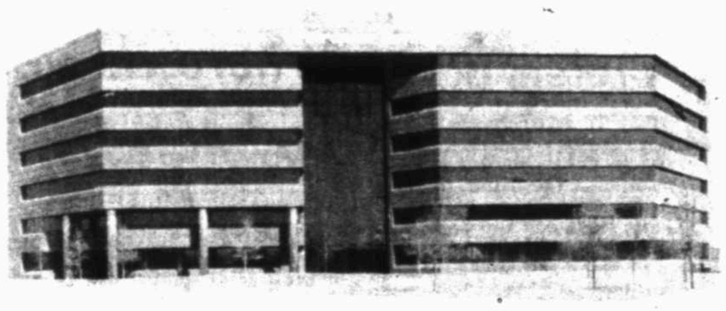

An attempt by liberal Democrats in the House to temporarily roll back government price ceilings on natural gas failed just before Christmas despite a 17 percent increase in home-heating costs in 1983 amid a supply glut.

But the Senate also overwhelmingly rejected a White House-endorsed package to go just the opposite way and gradually remove the remaining government controls on gas prices over the next three years.

Both sides vowed to return in January and try again. Hodel, however, acknowledged that the holiday cold snap has put a big chill on any additional support the administration may have garnered, particularly in an election year.

"Tens of thousands, perhaps millions, of Americans will be receiving their gas bills this month and next month at a very much higher level than they've ever experienced in the past," he said.

Pipeline fire report casts doubt on Soviet claims

By The Los Angeles Times — Washington Post News Service

PARIS — An explosion and fire late last month caused serious damage to the pipeline under construction to carry gas from Soviet Siberia to Western Europe, sources here and in Washington said Tuesday. The reports cast doubt on Soviet claims that the controversial project has been completed ahead of schedule.

A French expert associated with the $10 billion venture said that in his view the pipeline was unlikely to become fully operational until at least the end of 1985 — meaning that the project is roughly a year behind schedule rather than a year ahead as depicted by Moscow.

French experts involved in the construction of the 2,800-mile pipeline disclosed that a fire devastated the control center at the head station in the Siberian town of Urengoy. The experts, who did not wished to be identified for fear of damaging France's economic ties with the Soviet Union, said the fire occurred shortly before Christmas.

U.S. sources in Washington said they also had reports of a fire in Urengoy that caused "serious damage" to pipeline facilities.

There have been no accounts of such an accident in the Soviet press and the report runs counter to optimistic Soviet accounts of progress on the project, the completion of which has become an issue of enormous prestige for the Kremlin. Soviet authorities are determined to show that President Reagan's attempts to block construction of the pipeline through economic sanctions have been a failure.

THE PIPELINE EMBARGO, which created a political storm on both sides of the Atlantic after it was extended to include Western European firms exporting American technology to the Soviet Union, was eased at the end of 1982. But the project itself, the biggest East-West trade deal in history, has remained a symbol of Soviet pride and ability to resist U.S. pressures.

The official Soviet news agency Tass announced Jan. 2 that the gas pipeline "has started functioning" and that the first exports of natural gas from Urengoy had reached France a year ahead of schedule — a contention that French and U.S. officials have disputed. Soviet officials claimed in September that the pipeline had been built "three times faster" than originally planned, although they acknowledged that some of the 41 compressor stations remained to be completed.

The Soviet announcement was carefully worded and, while striving to create the impression that the entire project has been completed, leaves open the possibility that only a small portion of the pipeline is actually in use.

U.S. sources said flatly that while there is "no doubt that gas is being delivered" from Urengoy to France, "no deliveries are being made through the (new) pipeline" because "none of the compressor stations are operating yet." Other pipelines carry gas from Urengoy to the western Soviet Union for domestic use, and portions of this gas can be diverted into export lines going to Western Europe, one source said.

A French oil industry official said he believed the Soviets were publicizing the flow of gas to France to emphasize that the Kremlin is capable of fulfilling its contracts. He said it was possible that the gas, which the Soviet information agency Novosti insisted Monday originated in Urengoy, had reached France via the network of older pipelines.

WESTERN EXPERTS HERE and in Moscow say that, out of 41 compressor stations being built along the route of the new export pipeline to pump the gas, only four have reached the testing stage.

The Soviet contractors, meanwhile, are reported to be attempting to play their Western European partners off against each other in an effort to speed the work along.

"They tell the Italians that the French are completing their share of the project much faster while telling us that we are being outstripped by the Italians. Well, that's business, I suppose," a French expert said.

Among the foreign firms taking part in the project are John Brown of Britain, Creusot-Loire and Alsthom Atlantique of France, and Mannesman of West Germany. It is envisaged that by 1990 gas from Siberia will meet a third of France's total natural-gas requirements.

Such reliance on the Soviet Union for energy was one of the reasons behind the strong U.S. opposition to Western European participation in the project. In a compromise earlier this year, Western industrialized countries belonging to the International Energy Agency agreed to avoid "excessive" energy dependence on Moscow, but no precise limits were set.

IT WAS UNCLEAR what impact the reported accident will have on the pipeline project, which has run into a number of other technical snags. French experts said the fire at the Urengoy control center would obviously create some delays but were unable to provide details about the extent of the damage.

Asked about the reported incident, a senior French Foreign Ministry official refused to comment. The Soviet Union routinely denies Western reports of industrial accidents unless they involve Westerners.

The government newspaper Izvestia contained a vague account last summer of an accident in which a passenger bus driving over a poorly welded section of the pipeline was enveloped in flames when gas pumped into the pipe in a test ignited. The account indicated that the number of casualties was high, but it gave no details.

Pennzoil sues to halt Getty takeover

By The Los Angeles Times — Washington Post News Service

LOS ANGELES — Spurned corporate suitor Pennzoil Co. filed suit as expected Tuesday in an effort to halt the $9.9 billion takeover of Getty Oil Co. by Texaco Inc. or, failing that, to recover unspecified damages caused when Pennzoil's own deal with Getty Oil was pre-empted by Texaco's higher bid.

Houston-based Pennzoil filed the action in Delaware, where all three companies are incorporated, and asked the state court there for a preliminary injunction to block the Texaco deal while it prosecutes its suit.

Meanwhile, trustees of the J. Paul Getty Museum in Malibu, Calif., formally approved the sale of its stake in Getty Oil to Texaco at a late afternoon meeting in Los Angeles. Although no announcement was made, it was learned that the trustees approved the sale unanimously after hearing the sale terms.

Texaco will pay the museum trust almost $1.2 billion in cash for its 9.33 million shares of Getty Oil stock.

The Pennzoil deal, which was announced publicly early last week but never sealed in writing before Texaco stepped in, would have allowed Pennzoil to acquire 43 percent of Getty Oil's shares for about $112.50 per share, or about $2.6 billion. The Sarah C. Getty Trust, which owns 40.2 percent of Getty Oil's shares on behalf of the heirs of late oil magnate J. Paul Getty, would have owned the other 57 percent.

The preliminary agreement between Pennzoil and Getty Oil also granted Pennzoil an option to buy 8 million unissued Getty Oil shares for $110 each, which would have given Houston-based Pennzoil a $120-million pretax profit if it sold those shares to Texaco for the $125-a-share price Texaco offered last week for all Getty shares.

The Pennzoil lawsuit named as defendants Getty Oil, Texaco, the Sarah C. Getty Trust and the J. Paul Getty Museum. A preliminary hearing has been set for Jan. 25.

Anticipating the legal challenge, Getty Oil had filed its own legal action Friday in Delaware asking the court to declare that Getty never had a binding agreement with Pennzoil and that any attempt to enforce the tentative deal would be "against public policy and contrary to the fiduciary policies of the Delaware general corporation law."

Gulf board unanimously rejects Pickens' plan

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Gulf Oil Corp. said Tuesday its board of directors unanimously rejected a plan by Mesa Petroleum Corp. Chairman T. Boone Pickens Jr. to spin off part of Gulf's domestic oil and gas reserves into a royalty trust.

The rejection was expected, since Gulf management has steadfastly opposed the royalty trust idea. The proposal is at the heart of a campaign by a Pickens-led investor group to restructure Gulf, which is the nation's fifth-largest oil concern.

Under a royal trust arrangement, income from oil and gas properties is sent directly to the owners of the trust's shares rather than to the corporation. Pickens contends Gulf shareholders would benefit by an increase in the value of Gulf stock.

Gulf management contends a royalty trust would divert cash needed to finance expensive petroleum exploration and create new tax liabilities for shareholders.

"We are satisfied that the royalty trust concept, as it might be applied to Gulf Oil Corp., has been thoroughly studied and thoroughly discredited and that your continuing public advocacy of it is a disservice to our shareholders," the Gulf directors said in a letter to Pickens.

The directors said a royalty trust would create new tax burdens for individual shareholders and force them to sell shares to pay the taxes. Such "forced selling" would jeopardize the value of Gulf shares, they said.

The company won a Dec. 2 shareholder election authorizing it to reincorporate under Delaware laws.

ARCO targeted

DENVER (AP) — At the same time the Oil, Chemical and Atomic Workers International Union reached agreement with two companies on a two-year contract, the union announced that Atlantic Richfield refineries in two states have been targeted for strike action.

OCAW announced it had accepted a contract offer from Gulf Oil Corp. on Tuesday, averting a nationwide strike by 50,000 refinery workers. The agreement with Gulf at its Port Arthur, Texas, plant, where the union represents about 2,400 workers, was expected to stand as a model for negotiations with other oil companies.

"Now that a pattern has been established for the industry, we anticipate other companies will follow suit," said union spokesman Jerry Archuleta.

Indeed, the union subsequently announced it had reached agreement on an offer similar to Gulf's from Ashland Oil in Kentucky, affecting 840 union members. The contract was to be extended to other Ashland units in Ohio and Pennsylvania, affecting another 350 workers, union spokesman Rod Rogers said.

Hours later, however, union president Joseph M. Misbrener said he has authorized strike action for noon today against Atlantic Richfield facilities at Houston, Texas, and at Watsonville, Calif. Misbrener charged that ARCO has "blatantly refused to apply the Gulf monetary settlement equally to all classifications."

Misbrener said there also was a dispute over local issues being insisted on by the company. About 1,020 workers are affected at Houston and 850 at the California facility.

"Unless a settlement is reached beforehand, the strike will begin or or after 12 noon, Wednesday," Misbrener said in a statement.

Meanwhile, the OCAW was continuing to seek settlements with other companies.

Oxy to cleanup

By The Los Angeles Times Washington Post News Service

ALBANY, N.Y. — Occidental Chemical Corp. has agreed to spend $30 million to $40 million to clean a toxic waste dump in Niagara Falls that is adjacent to the treatment plant that provides drinking water to the area, government and company officials announced Tuesday.

The agreement, which would ensure monitoring for 35 years, would end more than three years of litigation between the company and city, state and federal officials. If approved by U.S. District Court Judge John T. Curtin, it would settle federal and state lawsuits filed in 1979 against the company.

Administration given freer hand offshore

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court, in an important ruling on the environment, today gave the Reagan administration a freer hand in leasing tracts off the California coast for oil exploration.

In a 5-4 ruling, the court overturned a 1982 appeals court decision that said then-Interior Secretary James Watt illegally leased 29 offshore tracts to oil companies.

The 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in San Francisco ruled in August 1982 that Watt could not lease the offshore areas until he determined the sale is consistent "to the maximum extent practicable" with California's coastal zone management plan.

But the Supreme Court said today that the sale of the leases is exempt from review under the state plan.

Justice Sandra Day O'Connor, in her opinion for the court, said outer continental shelf leases "involve submerged lands outside the coastal zone" governed by the state plan.

Also, she said, the lease authorizes companies "to engage only in preliminary exploration. Further administrative approval is required before full exploration or development may begin."

The ruling is a big victory for the administration which had claimed the 9th Circuit ruling "invites chaos for the activities of the federal goverment as a whole."

The Justice Department had argued that the appeals court decision "obliterated the difference between a direct and indirect" impact that the leasing of offshore land may have on the environment.

The state of California, local governments and environmental groups lined up against the administration.

They contended that once the leases are approved it is too late, as a practical matter, to control exploration and development which might damage coastal areas.

At issue are 29 tracts, worth hundreds of millions of dollars, in the Santa Maria Basin off central California.

Meanwhile, Interior Secretary William Clark, who succeeded Watt, said Tuesday he was currently reviewing Watt's five-year offshore leasing program and would soon be announcing certain changes.

Clark said Watt's basic progam would "remain the same" but that he planned to make revisions in the leasing process. He said this would include greater consultation with coastal states.

Watt's program, which set a goal of offering virtually the entire U.S. coastline for lease by 1987, has drawn strong criticism from states, environmentalists and members of Congress for opening up too much offshore acreage.

Last October, Congress imposed a 20-mile buffer zone along the Southern California coast, which put that area off-limits to leasing through September of this year. Congress also imposed similar restrictions off the coasts of Massachusetts and Florida.

Honda investing in Ohio assembly plant

By The Los Angeles Times — Washington Post News Service

Honda Motor Co. of Japan said Tuesday that it will invest another $240 million in its auto assembly plant in Ohio and hire 500 more employees in order to double its U.S. car production.

Honda said that the investment over the next four years would give it the capability to produce 300,000 cars a year at the plant, equivalent to 75 percent of its current U.S. sales volume and by far the largest assembly operation of any foreign auto manufacturer in the United States.

Honda also said that it is considering building an engine plant near its Marysville, Ohio, assembly facility to supply engines for one of the two Honda models that will be built at the plant.

Honda began producing its Honda Accord model at the Ohio factory, about 30 miles northwest of Columbus, in November 1982 and will build the Civic model there when the expansion is completed, a spokeswoman said.

Japan's auto industry, which accounts for nearly 20 percent of U.S. car sales, has been under intense pressure for several years to build cars in the United States rather than export them from Japan. Honda has been the most willing of the companies to comply, and its decision to expand operations here could increase congressional and United Auto Workers criticism of Japanese companies that have been reluctant to open U.S. assembly plants.

Before you talk to anyone about telephones, talk to the people who invented telephones.

"I was talking to a friend the other day and he said, 'Andy, what are you going to do about your telephones?' Well, I didn't think I had to do anything about my telephones, but I called AT&T's special toll-free number (1-800-555-8111) to find out for sure."

The telephone in your home comes with options no one can match.

"I was right, I don't have to do anything about the phone in my home. In fact, there are some mighty nice ways to keep it right there doing the good job it's always done.

"I can continue to lease my phone from AT&T and they'll fix it at no extra charge. Or I can buy it."

Keeping your AT&T telephone means keeping AT&T service.

"I can't think of a single thing in my home that's given me more service with less trouble for a longer time than my AT&T telephone. And when you back that with over a hundred years of experience with telephones and telephone service, you may come to the same conclusion I did. My AT&T telephone is a value I don't want to get talked out of.

"If you're going to talk to friends about your telephone options, talk to your friends at AT&T. No one knows more about telephones than the people who invented the telephone."

Teen given probation in manslaughter case

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

The 17-year-old high school student who pleaded guilty to involuntary manslaughter in the death of a 1-year-old child was given a 10-year probated sentence and was fined $5,000 Tuesday by a six-man, six-woman jury in Midland's 238th State District Court.

The sentence was the maximum allowed by law for the offense without the youth, Lonnie Vick Williamson, serving time in the penitentiary.

"I appreciate the 12 jurors believing in Lonnie and the people (witnesses) who got up to testify," said Ted McVey, who considers himself Williamson's "Midland father" and who employes Williamson as an electrician. "He not the type of person that kills people." He said Williamson was "just like a son. We believed in him."

Williamson's parents live in Grand Junction, Colo.

Williamson was charged in the death of the 1-year-old Heather Lynn Pickens while he was driving while intoxicated shortly after midnight last June 12. The baby's 20-year-old mother, Diana Kim Pickens, was severely injured in the pickup truck-car crash at Andrews Highway and Midkiff Road. She was in a coma for 10 days.

Mothers Against Drunk Drivers (MADD) monitored the two-day trial, which was presided over by Judge Vann Culp.

MADD President Cynthia Grubb this morning said she was "pleased" with the verdict, though "Basically we are against probation in DWI (driving while intoxicated) cases. We would have liked to see mandatory jail time, even if it were only for 30 days."

THE MADD PRESIDENT said probation is handed down "too much" in DWI cases in Midland County.

"In this particular case, we were pleased. This was a very unique case because of his age" and his lack of a criminal record. Had Williamson been sentenced to the penitentiary, he "would have come out a more hardened criminal. We're glad he got probation...Of course, we can't bring the child back."

Ms. Grubb, who noted that Williamson was "under age" for consumption of alcoholic beverages, was critical of adults who had provided the youth with beer at a Saturday night party prior to the accident. "They had the responsibility; this is not uncommon."

"We do not term it as an 'accident,'" she said of the wreck. "We felt he made a choice to get drunk; it was no accident, and he intoxicated himself."

District Attorney Vern Martin said he wasn't "really surprised with the verdict." He said the jury's rendering in the case "will not have a dramatic impact" on his office's prosecution of DWI-related offenses.

He noted that his staff uses jury's findings as representing the mores of the community "in making decisions about plea-bargaining."

However, he said that the Williamson case will not have that much impact on plea-bargaining "due to the age of the kid."

Williamson, a Robert E. Lee High School senior and a vocational agriculture student there, admitted on the witness stand that he had drunk "six or eight beers" on the afternoon and night prior to the accident. Williamson who appeared remorseful and occasionally in tears, said he did not recall the crash in which his speeding (at least 45 mph in a 30-mph zone) pickup truck ran a red light and collided with the car driven by Mrs. Pickens. Both she and her daughter were thrown from the car.

Prosecutors David Joers and Jim Frazier asked the jury to send the youth to prison.

"HE'S GOT TO PAY the price; he's got to pay his dues," said Frazier, "...for taking this horrible risk of driving while drunk...He drove drunk, took that risk, got in an accident, and somebody was killed."

Frazier told the jurors "that could have been any of you in that car, any of your loved ones. It could have been any of us." Whenever a person drives while drunk, he takes the risk of going to prison. "You play with fire, you're going to get hurt. You play Russian roulette, you're taking a chance."

Williamson had been characterized as honest and responsible by friends, his parents and teachers, and as a "thoughtful, reflective person" by Dr. David Koch, a psychologist retained by defense attorneys Sandy Torres and Karen Carr.

Man found not competent

By LAWRENCE BUDD
Staff Writer

ODESSA — Different role players participated Tuesday in the mental competency hearing of Michael Oscar Bradbury, found competent to stand trial on Dec. 6. This time, the jury came back with a not-competent verdict.

Bradbury, who refers to himself as Immanuel Prince and Prince Michael, was found competent in District Judge R.L. McKim's court in December as a psychiatrist at the Permian Basin Mental Health and Mental Retardation Center in Midland testified that the defendant had been competent in an August interview.

Prosecutor Anthony Foster told the previous jury that Bradbury had "sufficient present ability" to stand trial, despite the man's strange courtroom behavior. Defense attorneys Bill Bowden Jr. and Marc May argued to no avail in December that their client was incapable of discussing his case and chose instead to speak on his religious beliefs.

But Tuesday, prosecutor David Rosado agreed with the defense. District Judge Gene Ater did not allow Bradbury to testify.

The jury deliberated for less than 30 minutes before finding Bradbury incompetent to stand trial, signaling his recommitment to Rusk State Mental Hospital.

In the December hearing, the defense showed Bradbury spent 270 days in this hospital where he was treated for sehizophrenia. He was treated and released from there to Montgomery County in March 1983 where he was tried for aggravated assault and given a probated sentence.

Should he be found competent again after receiving treatment, Bradbury would stand trial on charges of rape, aggravated kidnapping and burglary, all alleged to have been committed on July 7, 1983.

Bradbury was taken fromthe courtroom in handcuffs after an outburst when the defense asked the jury to have their client committed to the mental institution. The defendant testified against the advice of his attorneys in December and questioned why the state had not issued 900 subpoenas needed to bring witnesses he felt necessary to his defense.

Foster, the previous prosecutor, told the December jury that Bradbury was using the hearing as a "soap box" for publicizing his religious beliefs. He pointed out that Bradbury, 36, was knowledgeable about his crimes and understood the workings of the court.

Bradbury has a long history in mental hospitals and prisons.

While Bradbury had praised the jury for finding him fit to stand trial in December, he left the courtroom unhappy at the verdict which keeps him from standing trial until he is found competent.

Changes made at school crossings

Council also approves change to peddling law

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Assistant City Editor

School zones, crossing guards and flashing lights will be added to Midland streets for the spring semester after the Midland City Council approved changes Tuesday.

The changes were proposed by the Traffic Department after looking at results from the fall school crossing study.

Approved were:

—Removing the flashing light from Neely and Lanham intersection;

—Relocating a crossing guard at DeZavala Elementary to the Mineola and Kansas intersection and extending the school zone.

—Adding a crossing guard to Indiana and Tilden for Washington Elementary.

—Establishing a school zone at Oaklawn Park Baptist School on North A Street.

—Adding a flashing light at Fairgrounds and Oak roads for Pease Elementary.

"This isn't going to put a padlock on the city and say these people can't come in. I haven't come across any other town's ordinance that controls it better..."

— Joe Nuessle, city attorney

The council also approved changes to the ordinance pertaining to peddlers, canvasers and solicitors which should make it easier to enforce. City attorney Joe Nuessle said of his staff which rewrote the law, "After 25 years, they decided they didn't understand it. I think it will be more enforceable."

Some council members voiced their concern over people coming into Midland, setting up shop on a street corner for a few days and moving on to another town.

"This isn't going to put a padlock on the city and say these people can't come in," Nuessle said. "I haven't come across any other town's ordinance that controls it better than what we've got here, if we were enforcing what we've got."

The hydrology firm of Ed Reed & Associates was hired to evaluate water in and around the city-owned T-Bar Well Field about 60 miles west of Midland. The city has been considering a trade of land with an area rancher. Councilman Tom Sloan, however, warned the city staff about the trade.

"We'll only trade grazing rights, not surface," he said to Deputy City Manager Fred Poe. "If you trade surface rights, I'll do everything to block you. You'll live to rue the day if you make that trade."

Explaining the purpose of the study to Sloan, Councilman Steve Davidson said, "We're not at the point of making a trade; we're just seeing if the city should swap in our best interests."

In other action, the council agreed to being annexation procedures on a half-section piece of land on the west side of Loop 250 between State Highway 191 and Wadley Avenue extended; approved liquor permits for Murray's Delicatessen on Midkiff Road, Gardski's Loft, Chili's and a restaurant at Andrews Highway and Midland Drive; added items to be studied by J.T. Dunkin & Associates in the comprehensive master plan; and agreed to renovate the Doug Russell pool.

Trustees OK funds for new building

By HALLYE JORDAN
Staff Writer

For the first time since the beginning of the school more than 10 years ago, Midland College trustees voted to finance $1.35 million in revenue bonds for the construction of a new building.

While original revenue bonds were used for the construction of the initial campus, including the Student Center, the amount approved during a special board meeting Tuesday afternoon will finance a 21,000-square-foot Health Sciences Building.

The financing will be done without increasing taxes or student fees, according to President Dr. Jess Parrish.

New construction is estimated to cost $1,390,000; building costs are expected to run at $94,000, architectural fees at $150,000, and furniture and equipment at $139,000.

Trustees propose to keep a minimum of 10 percent of the current operating budget in the operating fund balance, which presently has $1,283,835. About $273,000 will be taken out of the operating fund balance, leaving the 10 percent. About $70,000 is expected to be earned in interest while paying off the 14-year bond.

Another $80,000 will be taken out of the construction fund, which presently stands at $157,179, for financing.

"With the amount of money we have coming in and with no student increases, we'll have enough money available to pay off the bonds over the next 14 years," said H.A. Tuck, director of public relations.

The proposed one-story building, designed by Geren & Associates/CRS, will house the vocational nursing, associate degree nursing and respiratory therapy programs.

In addition, the radiology technology program, to be in effect Fall Semester 1985, and a child care and development program will be located in the building. Presently, child care centers throughout the city are used for classes.

According to Tuck, lab work and observation will be done on campus in "a break-even deal." Preference will be given to the children of faculty and staff, with the children of students and then the public admitted as space allows.

A 100-seat multi-purpose lecture room, to be available to the public, will be housed in the building which will be located north of the Learning Resouces Center and east of the Science Building.

A 258-seat recital/lecture hall is the only facility available for public use after the renovation of the Roadrunner Room into administrative offices, according to Tuck.

MC financial advisor Bob Davis, of Kidder, Peabody and Co., Inc., of San Antonio, will seek bond ratings. Bids are expected to be received at 3 p.m. Feb. 21. They will be opened during a regular meeting of the trustees at 4 p.m.

First City National Bank of Austin was selected to be the paying agent/registrar.

Bills for water expected to increase

Council OKs increase to base rate

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Assistant City Editor

Water bills for the average Midland customer should go up about 10 percent after Feb. 1.

During Tuesday's meeting in City Hall, Midland City Council voted to increase the base rate from $6.50 for the first 2,000 gallons used to $7. For each additional 1,000 gallons, the rate structure was changed from one that declined to a set price. That rate will be $1.20 for each additional 1,000 gallons.

The change was precipitated by a projected loss of income this year, which translated into operating in the red, according to Finance Director Troy Gifford.

The water department budget this year is pegged at $8,540,000 based on 26,800 accounts.

Deputy City Manager Fred Poe told the council the city consumed 7.1 billon gallons of water in the last fiscal year. The budget projects 6.5 billion will be used this year and "there's a question if we will reach that. Last year was an exceptionally dry year. A wet month in the summer could drop us below the 6.5 billion gallons. The summer has a tremendous effect on our income in the water department."

Using the pessimistic forecast of six billion gallons for the year, Gifford projected that at the current rate, the department would show a loss of $1.07 million by the end of the fiscal year on Sept. 30. With the new rates, the department should see an increase of $139,360 in revenues over last year.

If the residents use the projected 6.5 billion gallons, the revenues would be up by as much as $739,360.

However, Gifford pointed out these revenue figures were based on 12 months, not the eight months remaining in the fiscal year.

"We're just trying to maintain the level of revenues that were budgeted," he said.

A moderate user might be someone whose bills average about $50 to $60 a month. With the 10 percent hike, the bills would range from $55 to $66.

Extremely high users, he added, might see a 20 percent increase in their bills because of restructuring the rates on gallons used past the first 2,000.

Blood donations are requested for Laura Michelle Perez, 15-year-old daughter of Jesse and Julia Perez.

Michelle, who has been fighting leukemia since 1980, was sent back to M.D. Anderson Hospital in Houston Dec. 21, when her condition worsened. Her father brought her home for Christmas, but she was forced to return Dec. 31.

It costs less than flowers but it does a whole lot more. Your donation of a unit of blood can help save a life.

January has been designated National Blood Donor Month. Giving blood doesn't hurt and there is no effect on a normal, healthy person. In fact, doctors say giving blood regularly is actually good for the donor, stimulating his or her system to replace old blood.

It is a precious gift that only one human can give to another.

'Walking encyclopedia' of Texas dies

AP Laserphoto

Frank X. Tolbert, known as the "walking encyclopedia" of Texas, died Tuesday morning at the age of 72.

DALLAS (AP) — Frank X. Tolbert, the "walking encyclopedia" of Texas, has died at age 72.

The long-time columnist for the Dallas Morning News "died peacefully in his sleep between 10:30 Monday night and 8:30 Tuesday morning. I think his heart just stopped," said Kathleen Hoover Tolbert, his wife of 40 years.

Tolbert officially retired from the newspaper in 1978 to devote more time to his Dallas chili restaurant, "Tolbert's," which he ran with his wife, son Frank Jr. and daughter Kathleen Jr. But he continued to write his weekly column, "Tolbert's Texas," for the News.

His friend, the late Paul Crume, also a Dallas Morning News columnist, had once called Tolbert "a walking encyclopedia of the state."

Joe M. Dealey, chairman of the board of A.H. Belo Corp. and a close friend of Tolbert, said Tuesday that Tolbert "in many ways epitomized all that is Texan. Tolbert and Texas are synonymous, if not redundant."

"Frank will be widely remembered through the Dallas community and the state," said Dealey. "He will be sorely missed by us all."

Tolbert was born in Amarillo. He worked on the sports desk of the Lubbock Avalanche-Journal while attending Texas Tech University where he received a degree in anthropology.

After working on the sports desks of the Amarillo Globe-News and the Wichita Falls Times, he joined the Fort Worth Star-Telegram, where he covered sports from 1935 until 1941.

During World War II, Tolbert was a U.S. Marine Corps combat correspondent and edited the Marines' magazine "Leatherneck."

He joined the Dallas Morning News in 1946, but also wrote articles for national magazines such as The Saturday Evening Post, Colliersand True.

In the 1960s, when the big magazines began to fold, he turned to writing books. His first was "Neiman-Marcus, Texas," an account of the Dallas department store. Next was "Bigamy Jones," a cowboy novel.

Members elected to hospital foundation board

From Staff Reports

Four new members were elected to the Board of Governors during the annual Midland Memorial Foundation meeting.

Frank Cowden Jr., Betty Dean, Dr. Henrie Mast and Tom Sealy were appointed to the board, which is committed to raising a total of $3 million for the radiology campaign.

Under Chairman John J. Redfern, the board also approved the appointments of Betty Sumner and Pete Snelson to fill the unexpired terms of Martin Neill and George Veloz on the hospital's Board of Trustees. Dr. James Humphreys was approved as head of the medical staff, and Margaret Purvis, John Dorn and Dan Mendell were elected to four-year terms as trustees.

Following a tour of the Radiology Department, where they viewed renovations and new equipment, the governors received a report from Doris Tompkins, president of the MMH Auxiliary, which has contributed almost $70,000 and volunteered more than 33,000 hours of service this year.

MMH President Ray Branson told governors preliminary reports indicated MMH showed a profit from operations in fiscal year 1983. He cited the important work of governors in developing a source of funds policy that would insure that the hospital meet its obligations without significantly burdening the taxpayer.

"If your hospital's only support comes from the tax dollar, you have a very mediocre hospital," said Governor L. Decker Dawson. "Community support is what makes this community hospital a first-class hospital.

The Governing Board of the Foundation is dedicated to keeping it going as long as we're alive and to train our kids to keep it going. Average just isn't good enough for Midland."

Teen put on probation for manslaughter

"He's guilt-prone," Koch had said. "He accepts responsibility for his actions...He appears to be a person who profits from his experiences." Koch said Williamson suffered from "reactive depression" and seemed "despondent, self-critical" when he was tested. The pyschologist said Williamson exhibited no signs of alcoholism.

"I hope," said the prosecutor, "there is no one so callous who does something like this and cannot feel remorse. I hope they are few and far between."

"That remorse, no matter how genuine, is not the full price," said Frazier. "To put him on probation for that would be an injustice."

Rather than asking the jurors to have mercy on his client, Torres asked that they have the courage to place his client on probation.

"It takes a lot of courage...to send a young person to the penitentiary," he said. "It takes more courage not to send Lonnie to the peniteniary."

JOERS CHARACTERIZED the case as "the most flagrant involuntary manslaughter case you can imagine. Oh," he said, "you can imagine 50 people getting killed."

Joers referred to Williamson's remorse and loss of sleep over the fatality and to his near-collision with other vehicles while he was driving on Midkiff Road.

"This baby lost her life. It's all over as far as baby is concerned," Joers said.

"You can't give him (Williamson) points or gold stars because these people in the other vehicles weren't killed. It's just a miracle these people weren't killed."

Joers, who noted that Williamson initially told officers that he wasn't drunk on the night of the crash, registered 0.17 blood-alcohol content on the Intoxilyzer about an hour after the accident. Under Texas law, a reading of 0.10 is considered legally drunk.

"You were rather severely mistaken about that (not being drunk)," Joers had asked Williamson.

"Yes, sir," he replied.

Mike Abrams, a witness to the crash, said he by happenstance was driving alongside Mrs. Pickens on the Andrews Highway when the crash occurred. He said they had stopped for a red light and, when it changed to green, began moving though the intersection.

"THE TRUCK WAS flying in the intersection, striking her car," he said. Abrams said he heard an "enormous sound," and a "monstrous puff of smoke."

After the wreck, he said he spotted the mother and her baby on the pavement. "The baby's head was busted open. She (the mother) was screaming 'Baby' and trying to get up. Her face was covered in blood. She was digging into it, trying to get up."

Abrams said Williamson was still seated in his pickup truck.

"He kind of bowed his head," Abrams said. "He either looked like it was half asleep or drunk."

Williamson said he had been drinking beer and working on a swimming pool for friends prior to the accident. A barbecue-beer party followed.

He said doesn't remember driving on Midkiff Road or the crash.

"I wasn't sure who I was or where I was," he said. Williamson said he suffered a bump on the head and an arm injury.

"My heart stopped," Williamson said after he had learned of the death of the child. "I wish it had been me instead of the little baby. I feel like a murderer...I cry," he said. "I'd do anything to bring her back; I know I can't...I can't sleep at night."

Williamson said he and McVey's 18-year-old daughter, Shelly, plan to get married and plan on having children.

"We did (discuss children)," he said. "Now, it makes me wonder. If I had a child, it wouldn't be fair."

Defense opens case in gun suit

DALLAS (AP) — Attorneys for the seller of a handgun said they would begin presenting their case today in a multi-million-dollar lawsuit that seeks to make them responsible for damages from an accidental shooting that left a man paralyzed.

David Clancy, 21, of Amarillo, was the final witness for his side Tuesday, testifying from his wheelchair that he expects to be dependent on others for the rest of his life.

Clancy was left paralyzed from the shoulders down after he was accidentally shot by another youth in the parking lot of an Amarillo school in 1977. His lawsuit seeks to make the sellers and manufacturer of the gun responsible for his injury.

Attorneys for the Zale Corp., which owned the store that originally sold the gun in 1971, said their first witness would be the woman who first purchased the .22-caliber pistol.

The attorneys said they would show that the gun changed hands many times before it was involved in the shooting of Clancy.

Windle Turley, the Clancy's Dallas attorney, rested his case after Clancy told jurors Tuesday that he sometimes becomes depressed because of his condition.

Turley played for jurors a 40-minute videotape showing Clancy's dependency on a full-time aide.

Former Secretary of State Henry Kissinger, chairman of President Reagan's commission on Central America, speaks to reporters in Washington, D.C. He is to deliver a report on U.S. policy toward El Salvador to the president today.

Nicaragua blames U.S. for Honduran skirmish

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — Nicaragua's Foreign Ministry says Honduran troops recently crossed the border with rebel fighters as part of a U.S. plan to provoke war between Nicaragua and Honduras.

In Costa Rica, meanwhile, a group of several thousand Nicaraguan rebels based there called for a formal alliance with their counterparts based in Honduras. Both rebel forces are trying to topple Nicaragua's leftist Sandinista government, but in the past they have not coordinated their efforts.

Elsewhere in Central America, a Western diplomat in El Salvador said Tuesday the army there is cracking down on activity linked to death squads.

In Nicaragua, Foreign Minister Miguel D'Escoto alleged that an attack Sunday on a Nicaraguan border patrol was proof of Honduran "complicity" in rebel attempts to overthrow the Sandinistas.

"These actions show in an irrefutable manner the complicity of the Honduran authorities in the acts of aggression that originate from their territory," D'Escoto said in a protest note to Edgardo Paz Barnica, the foreign minister of Honduras.

"But the attack also shows the direct participation of the Honduran army in ... an American plan to start a confrontation between the two countries, making it possible for the United States to intervene in Central America," the note said.

The United States aids the Honduran-based rebels, and Nicaragua has claimed repeatedly that a U.S.-backed invasion is planned.

In San Jose, Costa Rica, leaders of anti-Sandinista rebels called for "unification" with rebels based in Honduras to "to accelerate the downfall of the totalitarian Nicaraguan regime."

The Democratic Revolutionary Alliance, based in Costa Rica, has about 4,000 fighters, while the Nicaraguan Democratic Force, based in Honduras, has about 10,000 troops.

Some leaders of the Costa Rica-based group have accused the Nicaraguan Democratic Force of having too many ties to rightist dictator Anastasio Somoza, who was overthrown by the Sandinistas in 1979.

In El Salvador, a Western diplomat said the Salvadoran military ordered army commanders and police officials to curtail arrests by plainclothes agents and notify the Red Cross in all arrest cases.

The diplomat, who requested anonymity, said in an interview that the order came after Vice President George Bush visited El Salvador on Dec. 11 and called on the U.S.-backed government to curb the activities of armed plainclothesmen, who are often suspected in cases of disappearances, torture and death.

Also in El Salvador, a defense department spokesman said the commander of an army garrison which was overrun by rebels last month has been removed from active military service.

In Washington, sources said the Kissinger Commission on Central America is recommending in its report today to President Reagan that military aid be increased to El Salvador.

Papal diplomacy also political

By VICTOR L. SIMPSON
Associated Press Writer

VATICAN CITY — An elite corps of 200 church diplomats serve as the pope's eyes and ears in 107 countries around the world, combining a political mission with religious duties.

The United States on Tuesday became the 107th nation with formal diplomatic relations with the Holy See. The countries range from Communist Yugoslavia to fundamentalist Moslem Iran, from heavily Protestant Britain to predominantly Roman Catholic Brazil.

Like other diplomats, the Vatican envoys represent their head of state, in this case the pope, in political affairs.

But as representatives of the Roman Catholic Church and the Holy See, they also give voice to the special concerns of church teaching, religious liberty and other theological and humanitarian issues.

Thus, the papal envoy in Iran, acting on papal instructions, made appeals to Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini for the release of the U.S. hostages seized in November 1979.

Particularly in Catholic countries, the Vatican envoys often have access to sources that other diplomats might not have. Vatican observers say the expanded relations with the Vatican could open up for Washington new channels of information from sensitive areas, such as Latin America and the Middle East, where churchmen have been active in the search for peace.

Papal diplomats in Chile and Argentina laid the groundwork for Pope John Paul II to mediate the territorial dispute over the Beagle Channel that brought the two predominantly Roman Catholic countries to the brink of war. Vatican specialists are continuing efforts for a solution.

John Paul has said the Vatican seeks "to promote and to maintain a climate of mutual trust and of dialogue with all the living forces of society, and, therefore, with the authorities who have received the mandate of fostering the common good."

While the sons of Roman nobility once made up the backbone of the Vatican's diplomatic corps, today's envoy is a graduate of a rigorous two-year course at the Pontifical Ecclesiastical Academy.

The potential diplomats, who must be priests under the age of 35, take courses in the history of Vatican diplomacy, diplomatic protocol and international law. They must be proficient in two foreign languages as well as Latin, the language of the church.

They aim to work their way through the Vatican's foreign service system to the top-level, ambassadorial posts.

The diplomatic corps in still heavily Italian, although the Vatican has moved since the 1960s to make it more international. There are seven Americans among the group.

The envoys report to the Council of Public Affairs, the Vatican's equivalent of the State Department, which has a staff of 40 diplomats.

One of the most important and time-consuming functions for men in the field is to advise the Vatican on candidates for bishops. Ambassadors themselves automatically gain the rank of archbishop.

Vatican diplomats this century have included two men who later became pope, Pius XII and John XXIII. Pope Paul VI also served briefly in the Vatican's foreign service.

Although the Vatican has increased its diplomatic ties in recent years with the addition of such countries as Britain, Sweden, Norway, Denmark, Nepal and the United States, it has no formal ties with such countries as the Soviet Union, China, Israel, Jordan and the pope's ntive Poland.

Yitzhak Minervi, a former diplomat in Rome and now the Israeli Foreign Ministry's inspector general, said in a television interview last week that it was important to have relations with a body that has more than 790 million followers, "and we should strive to have relations" with the Vatican.

Diplomatic nominee sees peace as goal of president, pontiff

William Wilson

SAN DIEGO (AP) — William Wilson, nominated as U.S. ambassador to the Vatican, says the re-establishment of full diplomatic relations with the Holy See should strengthen America's ability to counter oppressive regimes.

"From my position I see two world leaders fighting communism — the pope and the president," Wilson said Tuesday in an address to a group of law students at the University of San Diego, a private Catholic school.

A millionaire real estate developer who lives in Bel-Air near Los Angeles, Wilson has served as President Reagan's special envoy to the Vatican since 1981. Reagan nominated Wilson to the ambassadorial post Tuesday, subject to Senate confirmation, after deciding to resume formal relations with the Vatican following a break of 117 years.

Noting that Pope John Paul II is outspoken in his defense of democracy, Wilson said, "His Holiness is, in my opinion, a great statesman. He and others in the Vatican are also pragmatic and realize that peace without freedom is not the peace of which Christ spoke."

Wilson, 69, said formal relations with the Vatican, which were severed in 1867, were important because "the Vatican is not like any other sovereign state. It is only 200 acres, but its influence is immense.

"This president is heavily concerned with opposing communism," Wilson added. "The pope is a world statesman who also feels the results of oppressive regimes."

Prior to Wilson's address, Dennis Howerton, who said he represented Americans United For Separation of Church and State, passed out pamphlets claiming the action was a "cynical election year maneuver by a president who has been unable to deliver on his promises to the American Catholic heirarchy in the areas of tuition tax credits, abortion and school prayer. We decry this abominable disregard of the separation of church and state."

At an earlier news conference, Wilson said, "I have read carefully the First Amendment. I personally do not see a problem. This really makes official what has been unofficial."

Former Argentine ruler held in disappearances

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP) — Former President Reynaldo Bignone, who as military leader oversaw the return to civilian rule, was in jail today on charges he played a part in the disappearance and presumed murder of two communists.

The retired general is the second prominent figure from the recent military dictatorship to be arrested on charges involving the disappearance of people in the years following a March 1976 coup.

Former navy commander Emilio Massera, also once a member of the ruling military junta, has been jailed since last June on charges he had a hand in the in the 1977 disappearance and presumed murder of a Buenos Aires businessman.

Human rights groups say as many as 15,000 people vanished and were presumed killed, most by security forces, during the military's seven-year reign.

Bignone, who served as president from July 1, 1982, until the inauguration last Dec. 10 of the elected civilian president, Raul Alfonsin, was jailed Tuesday night on the orders of Capital District Judge Carlos Oliveri.

The ex-president is charged with illegal deprivation of liberty, abuse of authority and false testimony. The last charge stems from written testimony he provided previously.

Oliveri told reporters at the downtown Palace of Justice that Bignone, 55, would be held at an unspecified military installation. The judge did not say when he would continue hearing Bignone's testimony.

Oliveri is investigating the August 1976 disappearance of Luis Garcia and Luis Steimberg, both members of the Communist Youth Federation. They had been drafted by the military and were serving at the National Military College, where Bignone was director.

Bignone, who was secretary general of the army at the time of Giorgi's disappearance, had been summoned by a federal judge to testify in that case Wednesday. But his arrest was considered likely to postpone his testimony in that case.

Bignone, who was rarely seen in uniform during his presidency and praised democracy in many public speeches, was congratulated last month by President Reagan for leading the country back to civilian rule.

Alfonsin, a lawyer and leader of the center-left Radical Civic Union, has promised that those guilty of human rights abuses under the dictatorship will be tried and punished.

The new president last month ordered the prosecution on rights abuse charges of nine retired generals and admirals in three successive juntas that ruled the country from the coup until Bignone took over in 1982. Bignone was not among those in Alfonsin's prosecution order.

Bignone assumed the presidency 2½ weeks after the June 14, 1982, surrender of Argentine troops to British forces in the disputed Falkland Islands off the southern Argentine coast.

The defeat, after 74 days of battle, cost the wartime rulers their jobs and obliged the military to begin the transition to civilian rule.

Denmark's prime minister sees vote as 'clear endorsement'

COPENHAGEN, Denmark (AP) — Prime Minister Poul Schlueter said today voters in parliamentary elections gave his four-party minority coalition a "clear endorsement" to stay in power and pursue tough economic policies.

Schlueter, leader of the Conservative Party, prepared to notify Queen Margrethe II that his center-right coalition will remain in control as the result of elections Tuesday for members of the 179-member Folketing, or Parliament.

But to do so, he will have to win support from other parties.

The Conservatives, Liberals, Center-Democrats and the tiny Christian Party in Schlueter's "Four-Leaf Clover" coalition won 11 new seats to boast its total to 76 in the 179-seat Folketing, or Parliament.

The left-wing camp of Social Democrats, Left-Socialists and the Socialist People's Party will command 83 seats. But Schlueter's coalition has the pledged support of the centrist Social-Liberals, who gained one seat for a total of 10.

Social Democrats lost two seats, dropping to 57 and taking 39.6 percent of the vote, according to complete but unofficial returns. They remain Denmark's biggest party.

Fire exchanged in Beirut hills

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Artillery exchanges flared in the hills above the U.S. Marine base at Beirut airport today, and Lebanese troops were called off from enforcing a plan to separate the country's warring factions.

A Marines spokesman, Maj. Dennis Brooks, said the artillary exchanges north of the airport camp lasted an hour this morning but did not involve the Marines. "It was very heavy for a while. It's quieted down now," said Brooks.

State radio reported that sporadic fighting near Beirut's Shiite suburbs and around the Druse-inhabited hills above the Marine base.

Guam worried by vagrants

AGANA, Guam (AP) — Guam's warm weather and hospitality have made the Pacific island a tropical tourist center, but the same factors are luring unwanted vagabonds from the mainland United States, authorities say.

Although the 30 to 40 vagrants living in the island's beach parks are pitied and fed by the local Chamorro people, police and tourist officials are worried that the number will increase and give the booming tourist industry a black eye.

Surinam power plant seized

PARAMARIBO, Surinam (AP) — The military government says its troops have seized control of a power plant that had been shut down by striking workers.

The country's strongman, Lt. Col. Desi Bouterse, said in a television interview Tuesday night that workers were being "terrorized" by a small group of strikers who wanted to continue a walkout in protest of government policies.

Striking workers at the Suralco power plant in the town of Paranam in the mountains south of the capital, Paramaribo, shut off the energy supply from the Brokopondo hydroelectric dam Tuesday.

The military moved into the Surinam Energy Co. Central Power Station in the capital and Bouterse said soldiers would begin guarding the Paranam power plants today. He said the Suralco managers asked the government to keep the plants open.

Jordan's leader hospitalized

AMMAN, Jordan (AP) — King Hussein, hospitalized for what is described as a bleeding ulcer, has accepted the resignation of his prime minister and appointed a new Cabinet.

The high-level personnel changes came Tuesday, one day after Hussein reconvened Jordan's Parliament following a 10-year suspension.

The new Cabinet includes seven Palestinians, compared with five in the outgoing government, and one woman.

Hussein, who has been in a military hospital since Monday, accepted the resignation of Prime Minister Mudar Badran and appointed in his place Ahmed Obeidat, 45, a former chief of security and a member of Badran's government.

Obeidat also will be defense minister.

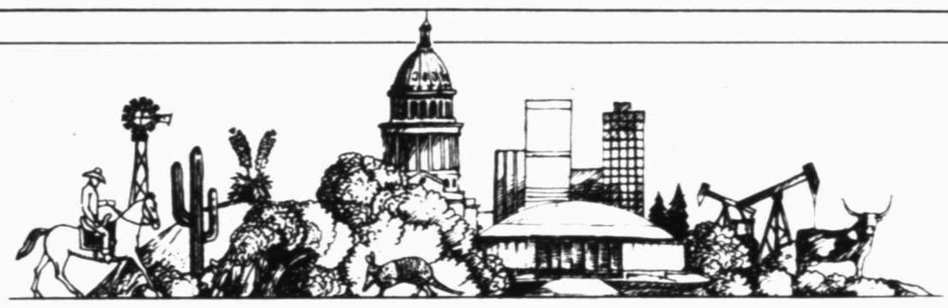

Radio frequencies discussed

GENEVA, Switzerland (AP) — Delegates from about 120 countries are meeting to decide how to divide the world's shortwave radio frequencies. Diplomats predict battles over radio jamming and Third World efforts to obtain a larger share of the airwaves.

The World Administrative Radio Conference, organized by the U.N.'s International Telecommunications Union, is the latest of a series of attempts undertaken since 1945 to reallocate the world's limited shortwave frequencies.

Radio is the most pervasive of the mass media; there are more than 1,600 high-frequency transmitters broadcasting 25,000 hours of programs each day, said the secretary general of the ITU, Richard Butler, in his opening speech Tuesday.

Butler said it is virtually the only medium through which developing countries can reach most of their population.

Texas is Conoco Country.

Part VI

In June 1981, a muddy abandoned air field on the west side of Houston began a remarkable transformation. A task force of architects, construction workers, and landscape experts surveyed the field, charted man-made lakes, and laid the foundation for Conoco's new world petroleum headquarters.

Since then, up to 700 people a day have been working to turn the barren area into a spectacular office complex surrounded by woodlands and water. Because of its low-rise campus-style design, the 16-building complex will be barely visible from the surrounding roadways. Yet, it will contain over 1.2 million square feet of office space—and serve as the new home for 2,500 employees of Conoco's petroleum operations.

The modern look of the buildings will be complemented by verandas and overhangs, typical of more traditional Houston architecture. And when the landscaping is completed, native live oaks will shade the complex and enhance its natural setting.

The new headquarters bolsters the area in other ways as well. To construct the office complex, we are spending more than $100 million—and much of this money is going to purchase supplies and services from Texas businesses. And in 1984, our property taxes on the headquarters alone will add more than $2 million to the community's revenues.

Our new world petroleum headquarters is just one example of Conoco's commitment to the Texas communities where we operate. We're proud to make the Lone Star State home, because Texas is Conoco Country!

Celebrities invited to aid New York City's homeless

Hoffman

NEW YORK (AP) — Dustin Hoffman and other celebrities have been invited by the mayor to tour city shelters for the homeless and use their talents to help the poor this winter.

The 46-year-old Hoffman, actress Meryl Streep, historian Arthur Schlesinger Jr., actor Richard Widmark and actress Patti LuPone had written Mayor Edward Koch asking him to do more for the homeless who wander the streets and often sleep on heating vents or in church doorways.

Koch's invitation was offered in a Jan. 4 letter to Anabel Nichols, wife of director Mike Nichols.

"I invite you and your colleagues to devote some of your great talent and resources to aid us" in sheltering the homeless, Koch said in the letter he made public Tuesday.

"I urge you and your group to visit a few shelters to convince you that they are indeed a humanitarian and decent response to emergency conditions, and may make clear the many opportunities for you and your group to help," Koch added.

A secretary to Ms. Nichols said she had not yet received the letter, and a check showed the mayor's office had sent it to the wrong address. The secretary said Ms. Nichols could not be reached immediately for comment.

WHITE PLAINS, N.Y. (AP) — Actress Jennifer O'Neill's ex-husband says he feels good now that a weapons possession charge against him has been dropped.

State Supreme Court Justice Lawrence Martin ruled Tuesday that there was insufficient evidence that John Lederer, 36, owned the gun with which Miss O'Neill accidentally shot herself on Oct. 22, 1982, in the bedroom of the couple's home.

The ruling came on the third day of Lederer's non-jury trial in which Miss O'Neill, star of "Summer of '42," was a key witness.

Lederer was charged with possessing the .38-caliber Smith & Wesson revolver and had admitted he owned the gun. However, a legal technicality prevented prosecutors from entering his admission at the trial.

Miss O'Neill, 35, who has fully recovered from her wound, pleaded guilty last March to a weapons possession charge and was given a conditional discharge.

"I feel good," Lederer said after the ruling. "I've been in the Twilight Zone about this. I don't feel as if I've beaten something."

SAN RAFAEL, Calif. (AP) — George Lucas' plan to reorganize his ranch has been approved by county planners, but the filmmaker's bid to enlarge his staff from 185 to 300 had to be dropped.

The creator of "Star Wars" says he will continue living at the 1,735-acre Skywalker ranch in San Marin County.

"My entire film career has been in Marin," Lucas said. "I moved here right after college. Other areas have been wooing us and me, but I'm not interested. That's not going to change."

Members of the Marin County Planning Commission said Monday they were concerned about the effects of any expansion of the ranch 45 miles north of San Francisco.

Approved were plans to relocate a special effects building, add an archives building, change roads and put up an electric fence.

BRONXVILLE, N.Y. (AP) — The king of Morocco, Hassan II, has a new castle in the United States.

Documents filed in the Westchester County Clerk's office reveal that Hassan has purchased a 2.65-acre estate with a 23-room house and four-car garage in Bronxville, but it's not known whether the king will live there or use the house for the diplomatic mission based in New York City.

The deed shows the purchaser as "H.M. Hassan II, King of Morocco, co-Consulate General of Morocco" in Manhattan.

Joan Spencer, the real estate agent who handled the sale, said Tuesday that she could not disclose any information.

Attorney Carlo R. Caffuzzi, who represented the 54-year-old monarch, refused to discuss his client's affairs or the purchase price of the estate, which has an estimated market value of $950,000.

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — Souvanna Phouma, a Laotian prince and former prime minister who tried to forge a Laos independent of both East and West, died Tuesday at the age of 82.

Film's producer never mentioned explosives, child's father testifies

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A bereaved father said the associate producer of the movie "Twilight Zone" vowed to treat his 6-year-old daughter "like my own" and did not mention that explosives would be used during filming of a scene in which the child died.

"I didn't know things happen like that," said Mark Chen, the father of Renee Chen, who was killed in a helicopter accident which also took the lives of 7-year-old Myca Dinh Lee and actor Vic Morrow.

"Even if they pay me the whole money, I would never let my children be in that kind of film," said the father, his heavily accented voice choked with emotion.

Another relative sobbed during Chen's testimony, which came at a preliminary hearing Tuesday to determine whether associate producer George Folsey Jr., director John Landis, production manager Dan Allingham, special-effects coordinator Paul Stewart and helicopter pilot Dorsey Wingo should face trial on involuntary manslaughter charges in the July 23, 1982, deaths.

The case has raised questions about labor practices on movie sets using children, and the prosecutor, Deputy District Attorney Gary Keselman, focused on alleged violation of labor laws in having children work after dark and without permits.

The filmmakers have been fined $82,000 in civil penalties by state labor and health agencies for the alleged violations.

Chen told how he agreed to let his only child appear in the film for $500 a day, but said Folsey never mentioned possible danger.

"He said the actor would carry the two children across the river," Chen said. "He said, 'We will pay you $500 to let the children be in the film.'"

"Did he tell you anything about explosives?" Kesselman asked.

"No," said Chen.

"Was anything mentioned about a helicopter?" he asked.

"No," Chen said firmly.

A federal investigation concluded the three deaths occurred when a helicopter filming a Vietnam War scene crashed on the three victims after being disabled by a special-effects explosion.

Another witness, Dr. Harold Schuman, husband of a production secretary in the Landis office, said he recruited the children through Renee Chen's uncle, Peter Chen. Although Schuman said he knew explosives would be used, he said he was told, "They would be nowhere near the children and they would be completely safe."

Peter Chen also testified Tuesday that there was no mention of explosives when he was told of the chance for two Asian children to appear in the film.

Mark Chen recalled the cold night he, his wife and daughter spent at the remote Franklin Canyon set where "Twilight Zone" was filming near Magic Mountain, about 40 miles northwest of Los Angeles. He said they waited past midnight and were finally taken to a trailer where the child actors fell asleep until they were called for work. They filmed then until 3:30 a.m., he said, and then were told by Folsey they would be needed the next day.

Noted Chicago columnist forsakes Murdoch paper

Royko

CHICAGO (AP) — Chicagoans could read columnist Mike Royko in either of the city's major newspapers today, as the town's legendary print wars took a new twist.

The Pulitzer Prize winner forsook his contract with the Chicago Sun-Times and joined the Chicago Tribune on Tuesday, a day after international publisher Rupert Murdoch's News America Publishing Inc. officially took over the Sun-Times, a tabloid daily.

"He puts out rather frivolous newspapers," Royko, 51, said Tuesday of Murdoch, adding that he moved to the Tribune because "Mr. Murdoch doesn't own this paper."

However, the Sun-Times said Royko's contract was "binding and valid" and that it will "vigorously" seek to enforce it. "Further, the Tribune's malicious interference into our business is intolerable," said Robert E. Page, the Sun-Times' new president and publisher.

Royko took an "indefinite" leave of absence from the Sun-Times on Dec. 20. For two weeks, the newspaper has been publishing his old columns with the note that Royko "is on vacation." Today's column appeared on page two, as it has since 1978.

Royko signed a three-year contract with the Tribune and the newspaper said his column will appear Monday through Friday, beginning today. His first column appeared in the first column of page three, the same location where it appeared for almost 10 years in the now-defunct Chicago Daily News.

"I'm not starting a war," Royko said at a news conference in Tribune Tower. "I just want to write my column...I've been writing a column in Chicago for 20 years. I want to continue writing a column in Chicago."

"There has been tough newspaper competition going on since this town began," said Tribune Editor James D. Squires. "I don't expect it to cease."

A Chicago native, Royko joined the Chicago Daily News in 1959 and went to the Sun-Times in 1978 when the Daily News folded. He won the Pulitzer Prize for commentary in 1972 and is the author of "Boss," a biography of the late Mayor Richard J. Daley, and four other books.

Small U.S. television stations hurt by Canadian decision

AP Laserphoto

Edward Winchester, general manager of the Maine Public Broadcasting Network in Orono, Maine, is concerned over new Canadian regulations governing satellite television communications. Winchester says it could mean a loss of revenue for his network.

AUGUSTA, Maine (AP) — After cultivating Canadian television markets for more than a decade, small public and commercial television stations from Bangor to Seattle say they are in danger of losing those audiences — along with the revenues they generate.

Decisions by Canadian regulators, intended to open the airwaves to broader programming, have created a handful of U.S. "superstations" that can send network programs half a continent via satellite, say station managers on this side of the border.

The long-distance programming could push aside regional stations just below the border, said Hope Green, general manager of Vermont Educational Television and chairwoman of a loose consortium of Public Broadcasting Service affiliates across the United States.

PBS stations "have developed a great following in Atlantic Canada," Ms. Green said. "Those people love us."

But six PBS affiliates in North Dakota "are really suffering" and financial problems are looming in Seattle as Canadian cable companies switch to satellite programming, Ms. Green said.

"It's a terrible danger to our consortium" financially, she said. But the greatest threat is to regional, cross-border broadcasting, "which does a tremendous amount of good as far as international understanding."

Margo Cobb, general manager of Bangor's WLBZ, said, "I would think that overall, there is going to be an impact on any (border) station."

The U.S. stations' fears date back two years, when the Canadian Radio-Television and Telecommunications Commission ruled that Canadian Satellite Communications Inc., or CanCom, could transmit Canadian — and later American — programming via satellite. The idea was to expand programming into remote corners of Canada.

Last year, the CRTC said CanCom, a government-licensed private carrier, could provide programming from four network affiliates in Detroit and Seattle to cable companies in remote areas — or to those allowed under CRTC rules to pick up more American programming.

What constitutes a "remote area" is not always a black-and-white issue, said CRTC spokesman Jeffrey Atkins, so more and more cable companies want to substitute feeds from the Canadian satellite for the programs offered by regional U.S. stations.

CanCom's service in some areas is cheaper than regional programming, say Canadian officials, and some Canadian cable operators are asking to drop regional telecasts for satellite feeds.

Meanwhile, "virtually all" microwave contracts with Bell of Canada, through which many cable companies receive U.S. programming, expire in 1987, said David Colville, director of communications policy for Nova Scotia.

This expiration will give many Canadian cable operators a chance to switch to the superstations' programming, potentially leaving the regional stations out in the cold.

It all translates into fewer viewer dollars for PBS and less advertising revenue for their commercial counterparts.

"The potential loss of revenue is significant," said Edward Winchester, general manager of the Maine Public Broadcasting Network in Orono.

Elevator man sees ups, downs of life in Park Avenue building for 53 years

NEW YORK (AP) — For more than half a century, 2 Park Ave. was a second home to William Carville, the elevator man whose clientele glittered as brightly as the gold leaf ceilings in the art deco building.

It was in the ornate lobby where Carville greeted every New York City mayor from Jimmy Walker to Abe Beame. It is where he met Basil Rathbone, Henry Cabot Lodge and Eleanor Roosevelt. He saw Babe Ruth and Lou Gehrig pass through the portals. It is where he met his wife.

The streetcars are gone from Park Avenue. So are the lovely residential brownstones and the 35-cent lunches. William Carville remembers them all. Now, he too must leave Park Avenue.

"My doctor tells me to keep off my feet. Fifty-three years is a long time," said Carville, 76, of the Woodside section of Queens, a native of County Down, Ireland.

Carville, who is retiring Jan. 20, will be honored at a retirement dinner tonight. He began working as a "temporary" elevator operator at 2 Park Ave. on June 1, 1931, four years after the 30-story office building was completed.

Now the elevators are automated, and Carville works as the chief starter. Few people are more dedicated to their task.

"During snowstorms, I slept in the building. During the blackout in '68, I slept here. During the subway strike, I thumbed my way in. I felt I had an obligation to the building," he said.

"Some mornings I get up and feel miserable," he continued. "I take the bus in. I stop and get a container of coffee and a roll. I sit down at my desk, have it and feel a lot better. Then I come upstairs and talk to the people. Meeting the people is the best part. This is a second home to me."

The building once housed the U.S. Mission to the United Nations, and Carville often spoke to Adlai Stevenson, Henry Cabot Lodge and Eleanor Roosevelt.

Of Lodge, Carville said: "He couldn't have been a nicer person. My wife, daughter and I met him one Sunday in Central Park. He stopped and said hello and introduced us to his family."

Zoo nixes 'Gorilla My Dreams'

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Four judges considered "Who Dat," "Tarzan," "Bananas Foster," "Gorilla My Dreams" and 118 other entries before picking "Auduborne" as the name for the lowland gorilla born two months ago at Audubon Zoo.

Runners-up were "Chicory" and "Beignet," said zoo public relations director Carol Lentz.

"Amy" and "Jane" also were submitted, even though the baby gorilla is a male, said Ms. Lentz. Some people suggested "Tiger" and "Bear."

The spokeswoman said Andrew Green, the 9-year-old who submitted the winning entry, will get a lifetime Friends of the Zoo membership. The runners-up will get a year's membership and a $50 gift certificate for use at the Zootique.

Former Sen. Church of Idaho 'gravely ill'

NEW YORK (AP) — Former Sen. Frank Church of Idaho, described as "gravely ill," will be operated on for an undisclosed ailment at the Memorial Sloan-Kettering Cancer Center later this week, the hospital has confirmed.

Church, 59, a four-term Democrat, former presidential candidate and ex-chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, was listed in fair condition, hospital officials said early today.

He was admitted Sunday.

Gov. John Evans in Boise, Idaho, said Church was "gravely ill."

"About all we can do is pray for his recovery," Evans said.

Hospital spokeswoman Nancy Czaja said Church would undergo surgery after tests were completed. She said there was "no emergency" but gave no details.

Church was "concerned for his health, but generally his spirits are pretty good," said Penny Gross, Church's secretary.

Before being hospitalized, Church had "been carrying on his usual schedule of his law practice and speaking engagements," she said.

There had been no "firm diagnosis" by doctors, said a Church spokesman who asked not to be identified.

Church was stricken with cancer in the late 1940s while attending Harvard University and underwent successful surgery. An aide said that in recent years he has also suffered from diabetes.

A Boise native, Church first was elected to the U.S. Senate in 1956. He served for more than two decades until losing narrowly to Republican Steve Symms in 1980.

EASY COOKING FOR TWO, Four or More

The American household is changing — and getting smaller. According to the Census Bureau, more than half our adult population lives in single or two-person households. In fact, one and two-person households comprise the fastest growing segment of the population.

Food companies and cookware manufacturers are well aware of these demographics and have responded with products that make life easier because they fit present day lifestyles. Frozen foods are a good example. They meet both small and large family needs. The choice is yours. You can buy prepared entrees and vegetables in one or two-serving sizes. But you can also buy fish and chicken products, for example, in family-size packages that let you use just a portion and put the rest back into the freezer for another time. Many fruits, potatoes and other vegetables come in polybags. You can pour out what you need or use the whole bag, a good example of value and convenience. In either case, there are no cooked leftovers unless you want them.

Individual-sized cook-and-serve ware in the form of new, "Little Dishes" is just right for small family meals. Perfect for one or two servings, they can go directly from conventional or microwave oven to the table, where they take on the role of dinnerware. Now, that's convenience... fewer dishes to clean because you can cook and serve in the same Little Dish.

Here's a suggestion for a light, easy supper that can be ready in minutes, thanks to frozen foods and "Little Dishes."

Start with a Creole Fish Bake of fish kabobs and white and wild rice with green beans, cooked with a zesty Creole sauce, prepared and served in the same cookware to minimize cleanup.

Herbed Broccoli Florets and a colorful dessert, Easy Fruit Trifle, complete the meal which can be prepared and served within 20 minutes.

Creole Fish Bake

1 (1 pound) package frozen batter-dipped, French-fried fish kabobs*
1 (8 ounce) can tomato sauce
1/4 cup frozen chopped onion
1/4 cup frozen chopped green pepper
1/8 teaspoon garlic powder
1 (10 or 11 ounce) package frozen rice with French-style green beans and wild rice, thawed
Parsley

Remove 18 fish kabobs (1/2 pound) and the envelope of "Sauce Makings" from package of fish kabobs. Seal package and return remainder to the freezer. Blend half the "Sauce Makings" with tomato sauce, onion, green pepper and garlic powder in small bowl to make Creole Sauce.

To assemble, spoon 1/3 cup of the Creole Sauce into each of two 6-inch "Snack-It" Little Dishes. Top each with half of rice mixture. Arrange 9 fish kabobs in diagonal rows on rice in each dish. Bake, uncovered, in preheated 350°F. oven for 15 minutes. Spoon remaining Creole Sauce over fish kabobs; continue baking 5 minutes or until mixture is thoroughly heated. Garnish with parsley. Serves two.

Note: For 4 servings, use entire package of fish kabobs and double remaining ingredients. Arrange ingredients in one 2-1/2 quart oval French White Casserole. Bake in preheated 350°F. oven 20 minutes; top with Creole Sauce and bake 5 minutes longer or until thoroughly heated.

*Variation: Use frozen chicken nuggets in place of fish kabobs. Replace "Sauce Makings" with dash of paprika and dash of pepper for Creole Sauce; proceed with above recipe.

Herbed Broccoli Florets

1 (10 ounce) package frozen broccoli florets, thawed
2 tablespoons butter or margarine
1/4 teaspoon basil
1/8 teaspoon oregano
Dash pepper

Arrange broccoli florets in 14-ounce oval "Casser-ette" dish with cover.

Melt butter in small saucepan. Stir in remaining ingredients. Spoon butter mixture over florets; toss. Cover and bake in preheated 350°F. oven 15 minutes or until broccoli is thoroughly heated. Serves 2.

Note: For 4 servings, double the above ingredients. Arrange broccoli in 1-quart casserole with cover. Cover; bake as given above, increasing baking time 5 minutes.

Easy Fruit Trifle

1 (10 ounce) package frozen quick-thaw mixed fruit
1/2 cup vanilla or plain yogurt
2/3 cup cubed (1/2-inch) frozen pound cake, thawed.

Thaw fruit according to package directions; drain off syrup and reserve. Set aside 2 tablespoons of fruit.

Spoon 1/4 cup yogurt into each of two dessert glasses. Spoon remaining fruit over yogurt. Top with pound cake cubes; drizzle with reserved syrup. Garnish with reserved fruit. Serves 2.

Note: For 4 servings, double the above ingredients and prepare in 4 dessert glasses.

No crash dieting in January — this is for life

By The Los Angeles Times Washington Post News Service

It is the start of a new year, but what you are about to read is not the expected crash diet for the month of January. What we have here is a year-round, lifetime approach to prudent eating; the beginning of a low-fat, low-sodium, low-cholesterol and low-sugar diet in the form of both delicious and easy recipes that can't help but be low calorie.

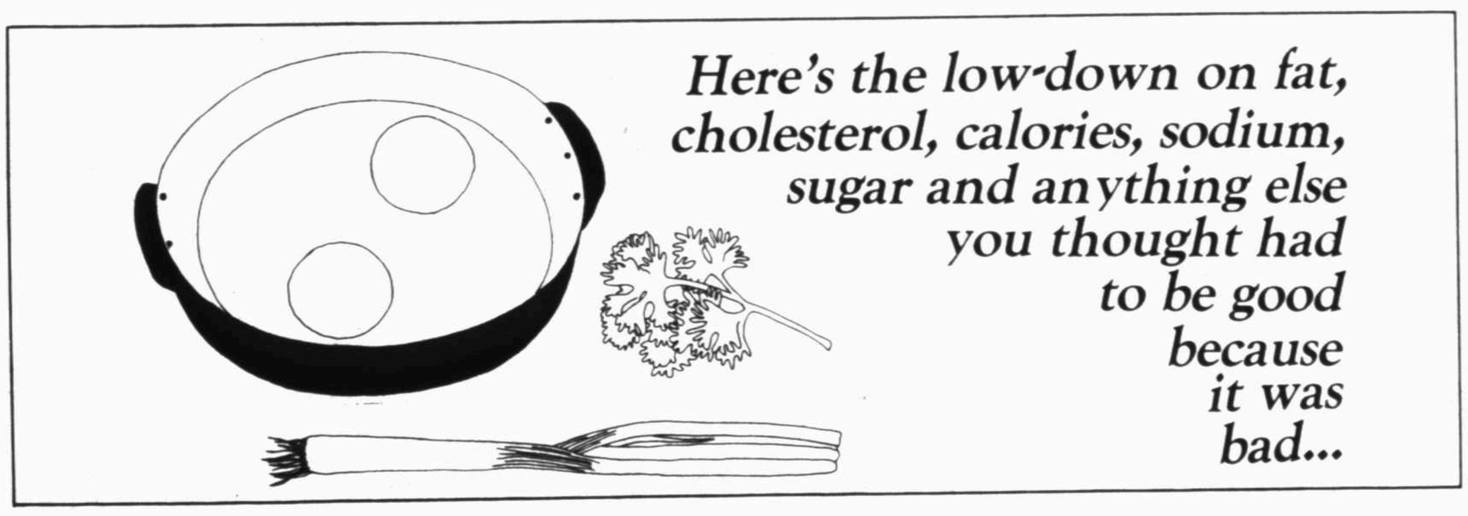

Too hefty a resolution to exterminate all those health hazards at once? Not according to Harriet Roth and Harriett Paine. Both are home economists and together they can count more than 50 years experience as cooking teachers. But both have shifted their style of cooking because their husbands developed heart problems.

Their books, "Deliciously Low" by Harriet Roth (New American Library) and "Cooking for the Health of It" by Harriett Paine (CHEC Publications) have similarities as well. Recipes in both books are followed by nutritional data and both authors followed the U.S. Dietary Guidelines for Americans in developing prudent recipes.

The guidelines, developed by a joint committee of the U.S. departments of Agriculture and Health and Human Services make the following recommendations: 1) eat a variety of foods, 2) maintain ideal weight, 3) avoid too much fat, saturated fat and cholesterol, 4) eat foods with adequate starch and fiber, 5) avoid too much sugar, 6) avoid too much sodium and 7) if you drink alcohol, do so in moderation.

But Roth, a former director at the Pritikin Longevity Center Cooking School, follows a somewhat stricter regime than Paine, who does use some salted products, oil, margarine and sugar in her recipes. Roth's recipes are nearly void of added fats and she uses no sugar or salt, rinsing any products, when possible, that may contain salt.

Here is a sampler of Roth's recipes as well as Paine's to get your 1984 diet resolutions off to a delicious and easy start.

'Time-in-motion expert' authors 'superwoman' cookbook

By JUDY SHEPARD
Hearst Feature Service

As you read Pat McMillen's "The Working Woman's Cookbook and Entertainment Guide," it becomes obvious there can be no such person as McMillen — or so we ordinary mortals want to believe, confronted with such a superwoman.

As the jacket flap coolly informs us, McMillen is a glamorous and "perpetually busy woman who continues to stay as calm and collected as she looks. Her method of efficient house-running and food preparation enables her to fix dinner in 10 minutes, feed unexpected guests, and entertain after a hectic day at the studio.

"An experienced cook, Pat McMillen hosted a weekly TV cooking show for several years. She is an Emmy Award winner and co-author of the best seller 'Donohue.'"

This daunting description is preceded by an equally daunting cover photograph of this superwoman looking fiercely cheerful, crushing a bag of groceries in one hand and hefting a briefcase in the other.

We all know that any normal (read slightly disorganized) working woman is perfectly capable of putting dinner on the table in 10 minutes or less — I mean, how long does it take to make hot dogs and beans? This, however, is not what McMillen is talking about. She is talking about real food, not convenience foods, take-out or all the other ways wily working women have of getting around the six o'clock crisis.

McMillen has a system. She cooks enormous batches of food all at once, using two ovens, a crockpot and the stovetop simultaneously, and freezes the results. It's what you would expect if a time-and-motion expert got loose in the average American kitchen.

And you'll never catch McMillen pawing through her freezer like a dog after a bone. She wraps the results of her cooking storms carefully, labels them correctly with a code to protect the goodies from forays by hungry children, packs them carefully and in an orderly fashion in her freezer, and records in a small notebook the items, date frozen and number of servings.

This is also a woman who informs us she never reads a newspaper without a pair of scissors nearby. She sorts her coupons. Plans her meals.

If this isn't depressing enough, consider this: During a 4 1/2-hour cooking session she:

— Made chicken salad for two lunches.
— Baked chicken in chicken sauce for dinner guests.
— Baked chicken in chicken sauce for a family dinner with mashed potatoes.
— Made chicken and potatoes baked in sauce for a family dinner.
— Made chicken, noodles and mashed potatoes for a family dinner.
— Made chicken-filled pasta shells.
— Concocted plain strawberry jello.
— Made two cups of broth for later use and one baked potato for use in hash browns and eggs.
— Phoned two friends long-distance.
— Read three magazines.
— Fixed lunch for two.
— Paid bills.
— Cleaned out the potato basket.

And then she made notes on the cooking session.

By this time, you probably are longing for a guest appearance by Erma Bombeck, informing us she doesn't even have a potato basket and wouldn't know one if it fell on her head.

I guess it is just another indication of McMillen's formidable talent that the queen of domestic chaos does turn up in a later chapter entitled "Some High-Powered Working Women." This chapter is the result of a questionnaire Mrs. McMillen sent to 16 women about how they organize their meals and cooking time.

As usual, Bombeck delivers, reporting it is a myth to expect children to perform chores while you are traveling on the job. "This only happens on 'The Brady Bunch,' when it is scripted and kids are getting $1,500 to do the segment for TV."

About half the book is recipes; the first half is devoted to an explanation of her cook-ahead-and-freeze method, shopping, supplies and equipment suggestions, menus, and entertaining expected and unexpected guests.

The three chapters on the McMillen Method leave nothing to chance. She explains how a cooking session works, what to cook when, what to buy, how to freeze it, and how to work it in with the results of other cooking sessions for a varied diet.

The recipes are standard fare, with a steady reliance on canned soups and other foods. I suspect you wouldn't buy this book for its recipes alone; you would have to be a devotee of the McMillen Method. A sampling follows:

CREAMY BROCCOLI SOUP
(Serves eight):
Two 13-3/4-ounce cans chicken broth
Two pounds fresh broccoli, stalks trimmed and scraped
Three cups milk
One cup finely diced ham
One teaspoon salt
Pinch of onion salt
One-quarter teaspoon black pepper
One-quarter teaspoon dried thyme
One cup half-and-half
One-half pound swiss cheese, shredded
One-quarter cup butter or margarine, softened

Put the chicken broth and broccoli into a large saucepan. Bring to a boil and cook for seven to eight minutes, or until the broccoli is tender.

Strain the broth into another saucepan. Puree the broccoli in a blender or food processor and set aside.

Add the milk, ham, salt, onion salt and pepper to the broth. Bring to a boil, lower the heat, and simmer for five minutes. Stir in the remaining ingredients and the reserved broccoli puree. Cook until just heated through, but do not boil. Serve hot or cold.

PECAN PIE
(Six servings):
One cup granulated sugar
One-quarter cup butter or margarine, softened
Pinch of salt
One-half cup light or dark corn syrup
One teaspoon vanilla extract
Three eggs, well beaten
One cup chopped or whole pecans
One unbaked nine-inch pie-shell

Preheat the oven to 400 degrees F. Mix sugar, butter, salt, and corn syrup until a smooth batter is formed. Add the vanilla and beaten eggs and mix well. Stir in the pecans and pour the filling into the prepared pie shell.

Bake the pie in the preheated oven for 10 minutes. Then lower the oven temperature to 300-F. and bake for 35 minutes minutes longer.

Spoiled seafood signaled by tag color changes

By The Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

A shipment of fresh flounder is left on the loading dock longer than anyone realizes. A three-hour refrigeration malfunction goes unnoticed in a truckload of oysters and clams.

In both cases the seafood is later rechilled and placed in the supermarket cooler, where neither the fish-department manager nor the shopper has detected the deterioration in its condition.

Sophisticated measuring techniques at various points along the route from sea to store may have indicated that the flounder and shellfish had been kept at the proper temperatures. But no mechanism indicated the cumulative effect of undetected or unmeasured fluctuations in temperature.

Until recently none could. There was no inexpensive and effective way to monitor the effect of time and temperature — the crucial partners in food deterioration — on a product.

NOW THERE ARE time-temperature monitors (TTMs): small, chemical-containing stickers that are affixed to shipping crates or cartons, indicating — by color alteration — that the product has undergone conditions that could cause change.

The monitors are not yet designed to appear on consumer packages, although plans are in the works. But they are already on some wholesale products, and thus even now the public stands to get a better quality-controlled fish.

Besides both fresh and frozen seafood, the devices are applicable to other perishables, such as cut flowers, milk, fresh fruits and vegetables, that are particularly susceptible to temperature change, and a wide range of frozen foods.

The monitors are even being tested for the medical field, for maintaining the quality of vaccines, X-ray film and blood.

IT IS THE seafood industry, though, that "faces a serious challenge" to upgrade its products, wrote John Farquhar, vice president of science and technology at the Food Marketing Institute, in a paper on TTMs.

"Seafood sold in United States supermarkets still suffers from a high degree of inconsistent quality," wrote Farquhar, who has been working to educate the seafood and supermarket industry about the devices.

The inconsistencies, Farquhar said, are in most cases "a direct result of poor temperature control." Diminished quality is "broadly based at all levels of harvesting, processing and distribution" of seafood, the paper noted.

Federal fish inspection is a voluntary program administered by the Department of Commerce's National Marine Fisheries Service, in which processors pay the government to approve their plants on either a full- or part-time basis. According to Farquhar, government-mandated quality standards have been "strongly resisted by all segments of the (seafood) industry."

ELIZABETH KISSEL, National Marine Fisheries Service consumer and trade specialist, said that an "uproar" for mandatory inspection "crops up after a crisis." She said about 20 to 25 percent of U.S. seafood processors are under contract for some phase of inspection.

Processors that are not federally inspected are supposed to have their own in-house quality-assurance programs, said Kissel.

Pilot projects done by the agency showed that retail sales "skyrocketed" when buyers were offered Grade A (the best grade) inspected fish, even though the product was costlier, according to Kissel.

Time-temperature monitors are a "logical advancement," she said, and along with educating retailers about fish-handling, the devices could be a real benefit to the seafood industry.

At least three companies are manufacturing TTMs, and a handful of fish processors is buying them.

Jim McLandisborough, manager of product-care systems of 3M Co., said that MonitorMark, the name of 3M's device, consists of a heat-sealable sticker containing chemicals that move down a paper wick as they are exposed to changes in time and temperature.

I-POINT TECHNOLOGIES Ltd., a Washington, D.C. company, is manufacturing a Band-Aid-size TTM with an oval window on the strip surrounded by four different colored segments. After pressure is applied activating the device, a fatty acid combines with an enzyme in the packet compartment so that the color in the oval window will change to reflect changes in conditions.

The monitors are pre-programmed depending on the time-and-temperature ratio required for the individual product. A fatty fish, such as mackerel or tuna, may keep for nine days at 28 degrees, while a leaner fish may go for 14 days at that same temperature.

In one program, for instance, the color in the oval window may indicate green when the product is in excellent condition, gold when 80 percent of shelf life is used up, brown when 100 percent of shelf life is used up, or red if the product has gone 30 percent beyond shelf life.

Another company, Allied Chemicals, is experimenting with time-and-temperature-sensitive ink that could be used on perishable shipping labels.

Barbara Ettinger, consumer-affairs adviser for Safeway, said the monitors don't measure the internal temperature of the seafood, nor do they indicate the time span between boat and processor, since the monitors can't be placed on wet fish. But, she said, they are a "step in the right direction."

Pappas International Foods Inc. in Boston, a full-time federally inspected seafood processor that ships over 65 fish species to supermarket warehouses around the country, has been using I-Point monitors for over two years.

VICE PRESIDENT Edward Lombardo said that although the company puts the devices in the refrigerated trucks and not directly on the fish, there is a correlation between the temperatures. If the cooler is set at 25 degrees, for example, "I automatically know that the core of the fish will be 32 degrees," said Lombardo.

As for the trip from boat to processor, Farquhar said that a monitor such as I-Point's could be adjusted to "tighten up" that time.

There is some concern in the industry that the monitors would too clearly identify mishaps, placing the blame on one link in the distribution process.

"We're not trying to pinpoint a bad product, just trying to prevent a good product from going bad," said Silvester DeThomasis of I-Point.

Chicken high in protein but low in cholesterol, fat

By OLIVIA and PAUL BENSON
Copley News Service

For a number of good reasons, chicken has greatly increased in popularity with many Americans over the last several years. It is very high in protein, has much less fat and cholesterol than red meat and is a best buy, as well.

Many people, though, serve chicken less often than they might because they think only of the few basic ways of cooking it — fried, baked and broiled. In fact, there are hundreds of excellent recipes for chicken, and today we're featuring two of our favorites.

The sauteed chicken breasts with artichoke hearts are reminiscent of Italian or French cooking, and would be excellent served with either pasta or rice. The Chicken Piccata is an adaptation of one of our favorite veal recipes, with chicken breasts substituted for the veal. Chicken may be used very successfully for veal in almost any veal recipe. This is especially appealing since chicken breasts cost only about one-fourth as much per pound as veal scallops.

The question of which is better for cooking — hens or roosters — has been argued almost as much as that of which came first — the chicken or the egg. In France, young hens are considered much more of a delicacy than roosters. Central Europeans greatly prefer young roosters to any hens. Most Americans blithely consume young roosters, under the misapprehension that they are eating the female of the species.

In fact, almost all the "chicken" in our supermarkets are young roosters. The hens are kept busy laying eggs, and then are sold after their egg-laying days are over as "fowl" (a polite term for hens more than 10 months old).

As a general rule, "fryers" are young roosters, from 1 to 2½ pounds in weight. "Roasters" are large roosters, up to 5 pounds.

Roosters generally are more tender than hens, and capons (neutered males) are more tender than either. Any chicken over 1 year old is satisfactory only in stews or other recipes that call for long cooking to tenderize the meat.

When you shop for chicken, look for light-colored, unblemished skin and not too much hard, yellow fat. Perhaps most important of all, the breastbone should be flexible. The tip of the bone should bend easily under pressure. If it doesn't, you're dealing with a fowl that's long past its prime.

SAUTEED CHICKEN BREASTS WITH ARTICHOKE HEARTS

6 half chicken breasts, boned and skinned
1 (6 oz.) jar marinated artichoke hearts
6 scallions, cut in ¼-inch slices
2 medium tomatoes, peeled, sliced and finely chopped
8 ozs. mushrooms, thinly sliced
4 tsps. fresh lemon juice
¼ cup dry white wine
Rind of ½ lemon grated
2 tbsps. minced fresh parsley, for garnish
3 tbsps. butter
5 tbsps. olive oil
Flour for dredging
Salt and pepper to taste

With back of heavy wooden spoon or wooden mallet, pound chicken breasts between two sheets of waxed paper until they are about ¼-inch thick and uniform.

Remove artichoke hearts from jar and slice. Leave enough marinade to dampen artichoke hearts. Set slices aside in small bowl and prepare other vegetables.

Melt 3 tablespoons butter and 3 tablespoons oil over medium-high heat. While butter and oil heat, dredge chicken breasts in flour, shaking off excess. Saute chicken until golden brown and slightly crisp on both sides, being sure breasts are cooked through. When chicken is done, remove to platter and keep warm.

With spatula, remove any brown or burned particles from frying pan. Reduce heat slightly. Add remaining olive oil, then add all vegetables. Cook, stirring, until vegetables begin to soften. Mushrooms should just begin to brown and give off some moisture.

Add lemon juice and wine, stir until mixture is heated through; spoon vegetables and sauce over chicken. Garnish with chopped parsley and serve.

CHICKEN PICCATA

4 half chicken breasts, boned and skinned
Flour for dredging
Salt and pepper to taste
5 tbsps. butter
5 tbsps. olive oil
5 tbsps. dry white wine
4-8 thin lemon slices
5 tbsps. fresh lemon juice
1 tbsp. chopped fresh parsley

Pound chicken breasts between two pieces of waxed paper to ¼-inch thickness. Dredge chicken pieces in flour, shaking off excess, and sprinkle liberally with salt and pepper.

Heat oil and butter over medium-high heat in large frying pan. Saute chicken breasts until browned on both sides and cooked through. Remove chicken breast to platter and keep warm.

Pour off most of the fat from frying pan; return to heat and add wine and lemon juice, stirring to dissolve any brown particles. Pour sauce over chicken; garnish with lemon slices and parsley and serve.

Hearty homemade raisin bread delicious for meals, snacks

Nothing heartens the appetite like the rich aroma of bread in the oven. And nothing enriches an autumn meal or snack like wholesome homemade raisin bread.

Raisins, apples, and honey lend natural sweetness, fiber and texture to this nutritious recipe. The hearty good grains of whole wheat and bulgur enhance the crusty texture of this fruit and fiber-packed bread.

As lightly buttered morning toast, this raisin bread is a champion breakfast in itself. In the lunch box, it's a natural match for traditional peanut butter or cheese sandwiches.

For trouble-free storage, wrap the loaves tightly in foil or plastic and then store at room temperature. This bread will stay fresh for two to three days thanks to the added moisture from raisins and apples. For long term storage, place a tightly wrapped loaf or two in the freezer for as long as four months.

Harvest the moist goodness of raisins and apples in this wholesome wheat and bulgur bread.

Fall is the raisin harvest time of year. With an abundant raisin supply it's easy to have raisins on hand as a natural ingredient for a variety of your favorite fall and winter baked goods. Raisins are a nutritious, convenient solo snack as well.

Harvest this hearty raisin bread and enjoy the wholesome goodness of naturally sweet, flavorful and nutritious raisins.

RAISIN APPLE WHEAT BREAD

⅔ cup milk
¼ cup cracked wheat bulgur
2 packages active dry yeast
½ cup warm water (110 to 115 degrees)
1 egg
2 tablespoons vegetable oil
2 tablespoons honey
2 teaspoons salt
1 cup chopped tart apple
1½ cups whole wheat flour
2½ cups all-purpose flour
1½ cups raisins

Heat milk to lukewarm in small saucepan. Stir in bulgur; set aside. In large mixer bowl dissolve yeast in warm water. Add egg, oil, honey, salt, apple and milk mixture.

Beat just to blend. Add the whole wheat flour and 1 cup all-purpose flour. Beat at low speed just to blend, then beat at high speed for 2 minutes. With wooden spoon mix in ½ cup of remaining flour and the raisins. Turn out onto floured board and knead 8 to 10 minutes, working in enough of the remaining flour to make a smooth, non-sticky dough. Place in greased bowl. Cover and let rise until doubled, about 1-1½ hours.

Punch dough down, divide in half and form into 2 loaves. Place in 2 greased 8x4-inch loaf pans. Cover and let rise in warm place until dough rises just above tops of pans, about 45 minutes to 1 hour. Bake in 350 degree oven 30 to 40 minutes until tops are browned and loaves sound hollow when tapped. Cool in pans 5 minutes. Turn out onto racks. Cooled loaves may be wrapped and frozen. This bread makes excellent toast. Makes 2 loaves.

With the holidays past we're all looking for an easy way to shed those extra pounds we put on at those festive dinners.

Keep your conscience clean with The Yogurt Way to Diet. Just reading this comprehensive little 60-page booklet may make you lose weight. To begin with, it covers the five essential parts to successful weight loss: motivation, proper diet, eating behavior, self-discipline and exercise. It's nice to know what to do now that it's time to make New Year's resolutions.

Each of the chapters is a commonsense approach to dieting, including discussions on temptation, night-eating, premenstrual eating and cravings. The text answers such question as how much should you weigh, how long should the diet take and why you may have stopped losing weight.

To top off the package, the booklet includes a week-long menu for men and women and a calorie guide to common foods. Offer good through Feb. 29, 1984.

Chicken curried

CURRY CHICKEN

3¾-lb. roasting chicken, cut up
1 large Spanish onion (peeled, quartered and thinly sliced)
1 large (½ pound) McIntosh apple (peeled, cored and thinly sliced)
16-ounce can stewed tomatoes
1 teaspoon salt
3 teaspoons curry powder
Paprika

Wash and dry chicken. In an oblong 3-quart baking dish stir together onion, apple, tomatoes, salt and curry powder. Top with chicken, skin side up, in a single layer; sprinkle with paprika. Bake, uncovered, in a 400-degree oven until chicken is tender and skin crisp — about 1 hour. Serve hot with rice. Makes 4 to 6 servings.

Soups cover wide variety

Copley News Service

Soup is an American favorite, served as an invigorating hot lunch, in a mug for an afternoon pick-me-up or as the first course to a meal. The lighter chilled soups are popular during summer months and Northern European recipes for cold fruit soups can make a cool and unusual dessert.

But a winter such as this one calls for steaming bowls of extra-hearty "pottage." A good soup can be a meal in itself; serve with fresh bread and a robust wine for a gourmet winter repast.

Some soups are better prepared conventionally, simmered slowly over a low fire — but some, like those listed below, are well adapted to microwave methods. And leftover soup heats up in a flash when microwaved, so that a piping hot mug or bowl can be ready whenever you need a comforting bowl to warm your body and spirit.

HEARTY FISH CHOWDER

3 tbsps. vegetable oil
1 medium onion, minced
1 clove garlic, minced or crushed
2 cups boiling water
1 (1 lb.) can stewed tomatoes
½ cup white wine
¼ tsp. salt
⅛ tsp. each pepper, paprika, thyme, sweet basil
2 tbsps. fresh chopped parsley
2 lbs. assorted raw fish fillets (cut in chunks) and shellfish
6 to 8 slices toasted buttered French bread

In a 3-quart glass casserole, microwave oil, onion and garlic for 2 minutes Add boiling water, tomatoes, wine, seasonings, fish and seafood. Cover and microwave 10 to 12 minutes, stirring occasionally, until fish flakes easily with a fork. Place a slice of bread in each individual serving bowl; ladle chowder over bread. Serves 6 to 8.

CREAMY POTATO SOUP

3 cups scrubbed, cubed potatoes
¼ cup diced carrot cubes
¼ cup sliced leeks (including white roots)
¼ tsp. salt
Dash garlic salt
1½ cups water
2 tbsps. all-purpose flour
2 cups milk

In a 2-quart glass casserole, combine potatoes, carrots, leeks, salt, arlic salt and water. Cover and microwave 12 to 15 minutes until potatoes and carrots are tender. Blend flour with a small amount of milk to form a smooth, runny paste. Add remaining milk to paste gradually, stirring to blend evenly. Stir flour/milk mixture into soup and microwave, uncovered, 4 to 5 minutes, or until thickened. Serves 4.

QUICK 'N' EASY BARLEY SOUP

4 cups water
4 beef bouillon cubes
½ cup quick barley
2 tbsps. bacon bits
¼ tsp. celery seed
¼ tsp. freshly ground pepper

Place water in a 2-quart glass casserole and microwave until boiling, about10 minutes. Add bouillon cubes and stir until dissolved. Mix in barley, bacon bits and seasonings. Microwave for 5 minutes, stirring halfway through cooking time. Let stand, covered, for 10 minutes before serving. Serves 4.

Recipes in this column are tested in 625 to 700-watt microwave ovens. Foods are cooked on HIGH (100 percent power) and uncovered unless otherwise specified.

Relish made with sauerkraut

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor

KRAUT RELISH

It's been popular for some years.

8-ounce can sauerkraut, undrained
¼ cup sugar
¼ cup finely chopped onion
¼ cup finely chopped celery
¼ cup finely chopped green pepper
¼ teaspoon celery seed

Stir together sauerkraut, sugar, onion, celery, green pepper and celery seed; cover tightly and refrigerate for several hours or overnight to allow flavors to blend. Drain lightly, if you like, before serving.

Meal-o-gram makes feast portable

BETHLEHEM, Pa. (AP) — A fragrant serving of stuffed grape leaves STOP A sublime salad of greens, homemade cheese and black olives STOP Flaky layers of baklava glistening with honey STOP.

No, don't stop!

The friends and associates of Bethlehem's Rose Douvanis have a seemingly unstoppable appetite for her homemade specialties, and now the unstoppable cook has come up with a new way to satisfy them: the Meal-O-Gram.

For a moderate fee, Mrs. Douvanis will prepare a homemade meal to order, package it steaming hot and have it ready for pickup at her home.

The idea was born recently during a telephone conversation with her sister, Helena Yacoub, now living in Oregon.

"Helena used to work in Allentown City Hall with Jacqueline Poe, and she wanted to do something different for her birthday," Mrs. Douvanis said. "She wanted to treat her to a Middle Eastern meal."

The Bethlehem cook volunteered to act as the substitute good fairy and to prepare a special menu for Mrs. Poe.

"I called up Jackie, wished her a happy birthday and told her that, courtesy of Helena, she was to be treated to a Meal-O-Gram."

The pair agreed upon a date and the menu.

And so, Mrs. Douvanis packaged a feast of baba ghanough (eggplant with sesame paste), hors d'oeuvres, charcoaled kibbe patty, stuffed grape leaves, Syrian bread, tossed salad with homemade cheeses, baklava and ma-mool (pastry with date filling) for the birthday celebration.

And it was even prepared so that Mrs. Poe could reheat the leftovers.

"It was like heaven," said Mrs. Poe. "It was so good. She really is the best cook."

Although Mrs. Douvanis excels in Middle Eastern food, she also offers menus with Greek and Italian themes.

"I'm an adventurous cook," she said, "and I'll try anything."

Candy can be recycled, used

What good are leftover holiday sweets?

For one thing, they can actually be recycled, according to Family Circle magazine.

Old-fashioned hard candy melted in boiling water can make a tasty liquid for use in gelatin desserts.

Leftover peppermint candy canes can be crushed in a plastic bag. The swirls of red and white candy then can give a festive taste and look when stirred into vanilla pudding or ice cream.

This table is set with roast lamb and attending wines — elements of a food and wine compatability dinner, during which all wines can be enjoyed with all foods.

Menu strives for compatability

Copley News Service

Throw away those "wine go-with" charts so popular from the '50s through the '70s. The world of good food is raising a toast to the new art of wine and food compatability.

Until now, wine has been judged in isolation, without its usual accompaniment, food. And even at the table, most diners held to the "red wine with meat, white wine with fish and poultry" dictate. Those suggestions resulted from the wine industry's post-Prohibition zeal to reacquaint wine drinkers with the fruit of the grape, mingled with the desire to create a new market of knowledgeable wine drinkers.

But, trends at the table are changing, with the move toward tasting all wines with all foods as not only an experiment but a growing standard. Experts and novices alike are enjoying the pleasures of mixing and matching wines with foods.

One of the harbingers of this recent move is food/wine compatability specialist Shirley Sarvis, who regularly conducts taste explorations. Stanford Court in San Francisco is home base for an active life presenting her tastings on the road nationally.

Recently she designed a "compatability" meal and chose wines to accompany it. Awaiting each guest at table was a battery of six wine glasses along with the standard place setting. During the meal, guests were invited — in fact, encouraged — to drop their preconceived matches for each course.

Sarvis proposed three foundations for such a tasting meal: "The premise is that wine and food go together. The purpose is pleasure. The procedure is to try each wine with each food and see what appeals to you. What matters is your pleasure and taste, not your host's and not that of anyone else at the table."

She directed guests to "take a bite of food, swallow it, then take a sip of wine and swallow it."

The menu consisted of ham canapes and oysters on ice; poached salmon with a Chardonnay and chervil sauce; rack of lamb with fresh green beans and new potatoes; a salad of limestone lettuce and mache; a selection of French cheeses and an apricot almond pastry.

The following recipes are suggested to complement wine with your meals.

PIMIENTO PASTA

Three and one-third cups semolina flour (all-purpose flour can be substituted)
4 (4-oz.) jars sliced pimientos, pureed
1 egg yolk
2 tbsps. Chardonnay
½ tsp. salt
2 to 3 tbsps. olive oil
½ cube butter

Combine flour, ¾ cup pureed pimiento, egg yolk, Chardonnay and salt, usig preparation method of your choice, in any shape desired.

To cook, drop into 4 quarts boiling water to which have added 2-3 tablespoons olive oil. Cook until al dente, keeping the water on low boil. (Al dente is the stage when the noodle is just firm enough to be springy, not so firm that its core is hard, yet not mushy to the tooth.) Warm remaining pimiento puree. Toss cooked pasta with ½ cube butter and top with warmed puree. Makes 4-6 servings.

LEG OF LAMB

Cover leg of lamb with red table wine, add 1 onion (sliced), 2 cloves garlic (halved) and 2 bay leaves. Marinate several hours. Drain, reserving marinade. Sprinkle lamb with salt and freshly ground pepper. Place bacon strips over lamp. Roast in 325-degree oven 30-35 minutes per pound, basting with reserved marinade.

Variation: Make slits in meat, insert rosemary and garlic. Sprinkle with salt and pepper, top with strips of salt pork. Roast as above, basting with white wine.

SHERRY-CRAB SOUFFLE

2 tbsps. butter
2 tbsps. flour
1½ cups hot milk
Salt, pepper, hot pepper sauce
1 cup sliced mushrooms, canned or fresh
½ cup sherry
4 eggs, separated
2 cups crab meat (fresh, frozen or canned)

Make white sauce by melting butter in upper part of double boiler and binding in flour. Add milk, stirring briskly to avoid lumping. Season with salt, pepper and pepper sauce. Remove from heat. Stir in mushrooms and sherry. Add beaten egg yolks and blend well. Fold in crab meat. Beat egg whites until stiff and fold in gently. Pour into 1½-quart casserole, place in pan half-filled with water, and bake in preheated 350-degree oven 30-40 minutes or until golden. Serve with cold tomato soup and steamed zucchini. Makes 4 servings.

Baking Hint: The next time you bake a cake, substitute wine for a portion of whatever liquid is called for in the recipe.

Hors d'oeuvres easy, not routine

By OLIVIA and PAUL BENSEN
Copley News Service

Most people, when they are planning a dinner or cocktail party, try to come up with hors d'oeuvres that are something different from the old nuts and chips routine, but will not take all day to prepare. Our recipes for today are for several out-of-the-ordinary dips and spreads which will, we hope, make your entertaining more fun and less hassled. The recipe for taco chips, made from corn tortillas, takes just a few moments to prepare, and produces chips that are magnitudes better than any that come out of a bag.

When you are planning hors d'oeuvres for a dinner party, remember that the term means "outside the main works" — avoid the tastes and textures that will be part of the meal that follows. A dish served at dinner that echoes the taste of one of your hors d'oeuvres can only be anticlimactic.

Until recently, many people purposely served hors d'oeuvres which are rich in fat or have an oil or butter base, to buffer the impact of pre-dinner drinks. Today, though, most people prefer lighter, less filling and less fattening snacks with drinks.

Any of today's dips or spreads would be delicious served with cut, raw vegetables. The vegetables themselves make a beautiful centerpiece for a table of hors d'oeuvres.

SPINACH DIP

1 (10-oz.) package raw spinach
½ cup sour cream
¼ cup mayonnaise
¼ cup minced fresh parsley
¼ cup finely chopped scallions
1 small clove garlic, finely minced
¼ tsp. pepper
¼ tsp. salt
¼ tsp. celery salt
1 small pinch nutmeg

Remove the stems from the spinach and wash it. While the spinach is still wet, place in a saucepan and steam it over medium-high heat until it wilts. Remove and drain in a colander, then squeeze out remaining moisture by wrapping spinach in paper towels.

Chop the spinach, combine it with remaining ingredients and chill.

Makes about 1½ cups.

DILL DIP

1 cup sour cream
One-third cup mayonnaise
1 tbsp. fresh chopped parsley
1 tbsp. minced onion
1 tsp. dill weed, dried (or 1 tbsp. fresh)
1 tsp. Beau Monde seasoning

Combine all ingredients and blend well. Refrigerate. This dip has an even better flavor if it is served a day after it is made.

GUACAMOLE

2 ripe avocados
¼ medium onion, minced
3-4 cherry tomatoes, finely chopped
2 cloves garlic, minced
Salt and pepper to taste
1 small pinch hot red pepper (or more to taste)
1 tsp. fresh lemon juice
1 tsp. olive oil

Scoop the flesh from the avocados and mash it with a fork until nearly smooth in texture. Add the remaining ingredients and refrigerate at least one hour before serving.

TACO CHIPS

6 corn tortillas
Vegetable oil
Salt

Cut each tortilla into eight pie-shaped pieces. In a large frying pan, heat about ¼ inch of oil over medium heat. Fry the tortilla pieces, a few at a time, turning until crisp and beginning to brown. Remove and drain on paper towels and sprinkle with salt.

Serve with guacamole or other dips.

THE IMPORTANCE OF PERSONAL DEVELOPMENT AND IMAGE PROJECTION IN TODAY'S BUSINESS WORLD

A personal development course can pave the way for smoother human relations by teaching the techniques and proper attitudes for getting along with others.

A personal development course can provide self-awareness of one's strengths, weeknesses, desires, and the knowledge to acquire the traits of personality and appearance that lead to success in the business world.

The proof of the value of personal development training is evident in the biographies of prominently successful people who have made the most of themselves and who have lived up to their potential. Many have had the kind of assistance that you will receive in your personal development course-assistance that has helped them to look at themselves objectively. Once aware of how their appearance and personality affected others, they have made a genuine effort to improve their "image projection." This simply means that they have designed their appearance and personality for success. You can do the same.

The clothes you wear have an affect on others. You will learn how to select the styles, colors, fabrics, and accessories that are appropriate and becoming for you and for the business environment in which you will work. Awareness of lines, color, fabrics and accessories will make it possible for you to discriminate and to select the apparel that is right for the image you wish to project.

Personality has been described as the total effect one person has on another. If this is true, your success demands that you learn and practice good manners, good speech and good interpersonal relations. Your personal development course contains lessons on voice improvement, how to use the businss telephone to greatest effect, and the twelve steps to a winning personality.

Summed up, your personal development course is more than a dress for success course, more than a good grooming course, more than a personality pays course In essence it is a "how-to" course to increase your self-awareness and to enhance your chances for success in the job market by teaching you how to project an image that potential employers will like so that their response to your application for employment will be: "You're hired."

Appetizers in Soviet Union's cuisine especially appetizing

By TOM HOGE
AP Wine and Food Writer

Some time ago, I wound up a description of the hors d'oeuvres served in various countries with a brief paragraph on those that lead off the meal in the Soviet Union.

Recalling the visit I once paid to Russia, I think their delicious assortment of appetizers deserves a more complete description.

Zakuska, the Russian name for hors d'oeuvres, ranges from simple smoked fish to costly caviar.

In the small country homes it usually consists of herring bits on black bread. But those who are more affluent or are observing a special occasion may add sliced sausage, pickled mushrooms and a salad. The larger spreads also feature pickled grapes and salted cucumbers, as well as tomatoes — either ripe or green — mixed with vine leaves, dill, peppercorns, garlic and salted water placed in an earthernware jar and kept for about a week before serving.

The supreme Russian delicacy, of course, is caviar, which costs a good deal less in the Soviet Union than in America, but is still beyond the reach of the average worker.

The most luxurious of these sturgeon eggs is the large-grain, lightly salted beluga, which is slightly smoked.

Many caviar buffs like the delicacy atop blini, the Russian version of pancakes. Here is a recipe.

1 cup buckwheat flour
1 teaspoon baking powder
1 teaspoon sugar
⅛ teaspoon salt
1 egg, slightly beaten
Dairy sour cream
1 tablespoon butter, melted
¾ cup lukewarm milk
Black caviar

Sift flour, baking powder, sugar and salt three times. Mix egg, 2 tablespoons sour cream, butter and milk. Add to first mixture and beat well. Drop by tablespoon onto hot, greased griddle, making each cake no larger than 2 inches in diameter, and brown on both sides. Place on warm platter and top each cake with 1 tablespoon sour cream. Then top that with 1 teaspoon caviar. Makes about 2 dozen blini.

Drunk drivers drive wine lovers to distraction

By NATHAN CHROMAN
The Los Angeles Times — Washington Post News Service

A cardinal classic rule among wine lovers is that the grape and intoxication do not blend. Fifty years after the cessation of Prohibition, the question of drunken driving remains unresolved and a good argument for the return of national abstinence.

The nub of the problem is that no one seems to agree as to what is a safe amount of alcohol, wine or spirit, to consume before driving. Reasonable experts differ, and, indeed, regulations throughout the nation vary as to so-called reasonable limits and standards.

Most serious wine fanciers are not likely to overconsume, nor drive in an intoxicated condition since taste is the indicia, not alcohol intake or mood alteration. If possible, they would not object to a divorce between the grape and alcohol, although enologically, alcohol is an apparent necessary ingredient.

In recent years, with wine's escalating popularity, the grape has become legitimatized, fashionable and an object of status. More people have become aware that wine is one of the oldest beverages known to man, and with strong current physician and media interest, there has been a renewed interest in the medicinal values of wine.

Still one thing is apparent, the grape can kill if abused prior to driving. But wine lovers are not likely to blame the grape for traffic fatalities; better to target booze and beer than to believe the grape culpable. That may be, but there is no doubt that the grape can claim a fair share of responsibility, particularly with many young people whose only perception of wine is as a rather cheap form of alcohol, mood alteration and dependency.

Concern for drunken driving, especially by America's youth, is now being impacted by various social organizational programs. By way of example, an innovative national student program to reduce drunken driving was launched through the office of California's Superintendent of Public Instruction Bill Honig, wherein a unique effort between parents and students is calculated to reduce drunk-driving fatality and injury. Known as Students Against Drunk Driving, the key aspect is a reciprocal contract between parent and teen-ager wherein a written promise is exchanged not to drive after drinking and to otherwise seek a safer way home. More than 6,000 SADD chapters already exist throughout the United States.

Young people of junior high school age or even younger need to understand the pleasure of wine as a family, dietary, table beverage in much the same way as European societies, where the grape is accepted as a matter of incidental daily life. No, this is not an attempt to increase wine sales nor wine consumption but rather it would be an opportunity to inform as to the virtues and beauties of wine, to learn to distinguish a good from a poor wine and emphasize the reprehensibility of overindulgence.

Like all wine lovers, I am aware that the quality of taste is more important than quantity. A glass of wine provides ample pleasure and is likely to be safe within any state chart values, but few of us, however, will limit ourselves to one glass from the fine nuanceful bottle. Inasmuch as there is no national agreement of safe consumption limits, I feel the best answer is total abstinence prior to driving, or at the least, drive after 8 hours from the last glass.

My suggestion of abstinence before driving may meet with resistance from some vintners, restaurateurs, hotel operators and overall good-time imbibers, but in the final analysis, it is the only safe answer and permanent resolution. It would indeed solve many problems, to wit, the high cost of enforcement, reduction of fatalities, nullify expensive adversarial proceedings in drunken driving cases and inform the public once and for all that with the price of grape pleasure must come societal responsibility.

Trendy, elegant grande finale: Rice pudding?

The Los Angeles Times — Washington Post News Service

Rice pudding suffers from a lack of prestige. One thinks of it as a cafeteria dessert or penny-pinching dish to serve the family. Comfort food to some, it is as exciting as oatmeal to others, and definitely not the sort of thing to serve company.

Right? No, very wrong. In Los Angeles, rice pudding has become a special dish, more elite than white chocolate mousse or Grand Marnier souffle in some circles. Trend-setting restaurants have adopted it. Ethnic cooks have endowed it with unsuspected character.

Those who have sworn never to touch the bland mush again might eat their words given a chance to see what an inspired chef can do with the small white grains. Scouring the city for its best rice puddings yielded several outstanding desserts. They range from a beautifully perfumed Pakistani Kheer to a rice pudding-tart that is part of the experimental new California cuisine.

The chefs interviewed use a variety of rice — short, long and medium grained, Italy's arborio rice and the uniquely flavored basmati rice that comes from India and Pakistan. They draw upon pistachios and almonds, Chinese litchi wine, lemon and orange peels, almond extract, cardamom and cinnamon for seasonings and texture. Toppings include fruit, nuts, fruit sauces and whipped cream.

HENRY HAUPT'S RISENGROD
(Danish Rice Porridge)

1 cup pearl rice
1 quart milk
Butter
Sugar
Cinnamon

Cook rice in milk to consistency of soft porridge, stirring often to prevent rice from browning on bottom of pan. Spoon into individual bowls. Place large pat of butter in center. Sprinkle with sugar and cinnamon to taste. Makes 4 servings.

SHALIMAR'S KHEER
(Pakistani Rice Pudding)

¼ cup basmati rice
¼ cup shelled unsalted pistachio nuts
2 quarts milk
2 teaspoons green cardamom pods
¼ cup sugar
¼ cup toasted unsalted blanched almonds, finely chopped
Additional chopped almonds and pistachios for garnish

Rinse rice well. Soak in cold water 2 hours. Drain. Grind in food processor or blender until rice is coarsely chopped. Rice should not be finely ground. Meanwhile, soak shelled pistachios in cold water 2 hours. Peel soaked nuts and chop. Place milk in large saucepan. Bring to boil. Reduce heat and bring to boil again. Add rice, stirring constantly. Boil and stir until milk becomes off white in color and appears slightly thicker, about 30 minutes.

Remove seeds from cardamom pods and crush lightly. Add seeds, sugar, pistachios and almonds to rice mixture. Lower heat to a simmer. Cook and stir 30 minutes longer, or until thickened but still fluid. (Mixture will thicken further when chilled but will remain soft.) Chill pudding. Serve sprinkled with additional chopped almonds and pistachios. Makes about 8 servings.

LARCHMONT DELI'S RIZOGALO
(Greek Rice Pudding)

Dash salt
½ cup medium grain rice
1 quart milk
4 egg yolks
½ cup sugar
Grated peel of 1 orange or lemon
1 teaspoon vanilla
Canned white seedless grapes, optional
Cinnamon

Place water in saucepan. Cover and bring to boil. Add salt and rice. Cover and cook about 4 minutes over medium heat. Remove from heat. Keep covered.

Scald milk in large pot. Add parboiled rice and stir. Cook over low heat, stirring occasionally, about 35 minutes. Remove from heat. Beat egg yolks with sugar until creamy. Slowly stir egg yolk mixture into rice, mixing well. Add orange or lemon peel. Place over low heat and cook and stir constantly until creamy and thick. Pudding will thicken further when cool.

Remove pudding from heat. Add vanilla and mix well. Spoon into individual dessert bowls. If desired, mix a few grapes into each bowl before cooling. Place 1 grape on top. Sprinkle with cinnamon and cool. Makes 6 servings.

CHINOIS' RICE TART

2 cups water
½ cup arborio rice
2 cups half and half
Grated peel of 2 oranges
1 vanilla bean, split and scraped
½ cup sugar
½ cup butter, softened
4 egg yolks
¼ cup litchi wine
¼ cup Grand Marnier
1 cup lightly whipped cream
8 individual tart shells
Sliced poached pears, apricots or peaches
Additional sugar for topping
Fruit Sauce

Place water in saucepan. Bring to boil. Add rice and boil 1 to 2 minutes. Drain. Return rice to saucepan. Add half and half, orange peel, vanilla bean, vanilla scrapings and sugar. Bring to boil. Cover pan and bake at 350 degrees about 30 minutes, or until rice is cooked and liquid is absorbed.

While rice is cooking, whisk softened butter with 1 egg yolk. When well mixed, add another egg yolk. Repeat process with remaining yolks. Mixture should look satiny. Return rice mixture to top of range. Remove vanilla bean. Add butter mixture and cook, stirring, until thickened. Let cool.

Mix in litchi wine and Grand Marnier. Fold in whipped cream. Line tart shells with poached fruit. Spoon in rice filling. Chill until set, about 30 minutes. Before serving, sprinkle tops with additional sugar and place under broiler about 1 minute, or until browned. To serve, nap large individual serving plates with Fruit Sauce. Place tart in center. Garnish plate with additional poached or fresh fruit, if desired. Makes 8 servings.

Fruit Sauce

2½ cups litchi wine
½ cup sugar
Juice of 1-2 lemon
2 peaches, peeled
1 cup dried apricots

Combine litchi wine, sugar and lemon juice in saucepan. Add peaches and apricots and cook in wine mixture until soft. Puree in food processor or blender. If necessary, thin puree with additional litchi wine. Sauce should be thin enough to flow easily onto serving plate. Makes about 2 1-2 cups.

Note: Litchi wine is available in Chinese markets. Pears may be substituted when peaches are not in season.

BETTER BUSINESS

Chains nothing to stamp around with

By LINDA TRUITT

This week I received a letter in the mail offering to help make me a fortune. As the letter explained, all I had to do was send $5 cash to the four addresses listed in the letter. For my money I would receive four reports on how to get-rich-quick.

Next, I was instructed to add my name to the top of the list and drop the last name. After making the necessary changes I was told to have the letter printed and mailed to 200 or more business associates, friends and relatives.

Obviously, this was a chain letter, one of the oldest cons around. To keep the chain going I would have to send one of the money-making reports to the people who sent me their $5. The letter claimed that with only a 5 percent response rate, by the time my name progressed to the fourth position I would make $55,500. Of course the more letters I mailed the more money I would make. The letter estimated that if I sent 1,000 letters the least I would make by the time my name is dropped off the list is $200,000.

To get involved in a chain letter is to violate state and federal laws. While many people may not see the harm in participating in a chain letter, if examined carefully it can be seen that chain letters are fraud from the beginning. To start a chain letter fictitious names and addresses must be listed so the originators can reap the greatest rewards. The originator will probably put his address on the list four or more times, thus guaranteeing he will make a good return on his investment.

Also market saturation will occur very quickly and with the expense of printing and postage, those farther down the line will lose their investment. In a scheme where each person is supposed to involve six additional people, a "perfect" particiption score would exceed the population of the U.S. before round 11 was completed. The letter I received suggested involving 200 to 1,000 people which would cause a much more rapid market saturation.

In Texas, organizers and participants of illegal chain letter schemes can be prosecuted by the U.S. Postal Service fraud division, the County Attorney's office and the Consumer Protection Division of the Attorney General's office. If mail services are used to perpetuate the scheme, the persons involved are subject to a $1,000 fine or two years in prison or both for the first offense, and up to five years in prison for a succeeding offense.

Even if the mail services are not used, the county attorney has the power to prosecute under the Texas Penal Code: "a person commits an offense if he contrives, prepares, sets up, proposes, operates, promotes or participates in an endless chain." Such an offense is a Class B misdemeanor and may be punishable by a $1,000 fine or 180 days in jail or both.

The Consumer Protection Division of the Attorney General's office may also prosecute participants of the scheme under the Texas Deceptive Trade Practices and Consumer Protection Act. This Act declares chain referral sales and pyramid sales unlawful.

Recipients of a chain letter requesting its receiver to send something of value such as cash, money orders or bonds, should contact the Better Business Bureau. The scheme is illegal and if the decision is made to participate, the chances are high that the participant will lose.

Potatoes tagged 'tempting'

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
AP Food Editor

ANCHOVY POTATOES

In Sweden this is called "Jansson's Temptation."
2 tablespoons butter
Medium (4 ounces) onion, thinly sliced (1 cup)
4 medium (1½ pounds) potatoes, peeled and thinly sliced (4 cups)
2-ounce can flat anchovy fillets, drained and cut crosswise into ½-inch pieces
1 cup (8 ounces) heavy cream

In a 10-inch skillet melt butter; add onion and cook gently, stirring often, until golden brown. In an oblong 1½-quart baking dish (10 by 6 by 2 inches) arrange half the potatoes, overlapping as necessary. Top with onion, then anchovies; layer with remaining potatoes. Dribble cream over top. Cover tightly with foil. Bake in a preheated 400-degree oven for 30 minutes. Remove foil and continue baking, uncovered, until potatoes are tender and browned around sides — 20 to 30 minuts longer. Serve hot. Makes 4 servings.

Note: For more pronounced anchovy flavor, save the oil from the anchovies (about a scant tablespoon) and sprinkle over the onion and achovies when you are preparing the dish.

LIVING TODAY

Class series scheduled

By SHARON A. HILLIS

The Midland County Extension Service Home Economics Associations, in cooperation with Midland Community College, will present a series of workshops and classes beginning Jan 17.

The first program, "World of Work for Women," will be presented 7-10 p.m. Jan. 17, 18 and 19 at Midland College. Each session is designed to provide detailed information on women entering, re-entering, advancing or changing careers including topics such as problems, opportunities, successes and failures; self-concept; self-assessment and skill identification; career wardrobe; time savers; and starting a business. Registration for the workshop may be made with Dr. Deana Lusk, Midland College, 684-7851.

"Busy People on the Go" is designed for women who want nutritious but attractive meals in a hurry for their families and for entertaining. The workshop will be 7-9 p.m., Feb. 2 at St. Mark's United Methodist Church Fellowship Hall. For more information contact the Midland County Extension Service office at 682-9481, Ext. 437.

To enhance creativity in sewing, "Sew Smart Seminar," lead by Clotilde, will be Feb. 18 at the Midland Holiday Inn Country Villa. To register for the workshop, contact the Midland County Extension Service office, 682-9481, Ext. 437.

Creating new clothing by sewing at home can be a way to extend the clothing dollar — or to cost money. Whether home sewing is a way to save money or not depends on several factors.

In times of economic difficulty, "does it pay to sew?" is asked more often. But other questions have to be asked first:

— Is it satisfying to make the garment and to wear it?

— Does sewing make you a better dressed person?

— Do you have fitting problems that make it difficult to alter ready-to-wear garments?

— Do you have proper sewing space, tools and equipment?

— Do you realize the actual cost of sewing? Patterns, fabrics and notions are not the only costs. Electricity, time and wear and tear on equipment are part of it too.

— Can you produce a higher quality garment than a ready-to-wear garment you could buy for the same dollar investment?

If you answer yes, then sewing could save money.

If sewing is a drudgery; if you never wear any garments you have made or never complete them, and if working with your hands doesn't appeal to you, then the answer is no.

If you have aready made the decision and are proudly wearing garments that you made at home, you are adding to the family resources.

DEAR ABBY

Ancient law sparks new controversy

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: This is in response to "Stuck in Louisiana," who complained because in Louisiana, children automatically fall heir to their parents' inheritance whether they are deserving or not. As a third-year law student at Tulane University in New Orleans, I have studied this subject under the direction of several legal scholars who are expert in this area of law.

Louisiana's forced heirship laws are derived from ancient Roman law in existence before the birth of Christ. They are virtually identical to those found in almost every modern country today with the exception of the United States and Great Britain.

The purpose of forced heirship was based on the concept that a parent who brings a child into the world must ensure that the child is adequately cared for. Our laws simply place the burden on the parents rather than society.

I see no unfairness in this. — KALISTE J. SALOOM III

DEAR KALISTE: Read on for a copy of a letter sent to Louisiana State Sen. Fritz Windhorst:

'Dear Fritz: I attach a Dear Abby column that I found rather interesting. This law affects me personally and has been sticking in my craw for quite a while. I really think forced heirship in any form is unjust, and even though the regulations were relaxed somewhat, it is not enough.

"As Abby stated in her column, no one should be told to whom he or she must leave hard-earned dollars.

"Is there any chance of this law being struck down in the near future? That we are the only state that has it says something for its validity.

"Happy New Year! — (Signature Withheld)"

And now a Baton Rouge attorney has his day in court:

DEAR ABBY: "Stuck in Louisiana" is partially correct. Louisiana law does exalt the family unit with some consequent diminution in property rights, by requiring that when parents depart for the next world, a portion of their estate goes to the children they left in this one unless the parents have good cause to disinherit them.

Article 1621 of our Civil Code lists the following 11 just causes for disinheriting one's children:

1. If the child has struck the parent or even raised his hand to do so.
2. If the child is guilty of cruelty, crime or grievous injury toward the parent.
3. If the child has attempted to kill the parent.
4. If the child has accused the parent of a crime that bears the penalty of capital punishment — with the exception of high treason.
5. If the child has refused to feed a hungry parent.
6. If the child neglects to take care of an insane parent.
7. If the child has refused to ransom the parent while he or she was held captive.
8. If the child has used an act of violence or coercion to hinder a parent from making a will.
9. If the child refuses to bail his parent out of jail.
10. If the son or daughter is a minor and marries without the parent's consent.
11. Conviction of the child of a felony carrying a possible sentence of life imprisonment or death.

It is a shame that with 50 states in which to live, this disgruntled person did wind up in the only state with forced heirship. Very truly yours, ROBERT H. HODGES, ATTORNEY-AT-LAW

NOTE: These exemptions from the inheritance law were originally written in 1825 — and derived from the French (Napoleonic) Code of Law — with the exception of the 11th exemption, which was added in 1982.

(If you put off writing letters because you don't know what to say, send for Abby's complete booklet on letter-writing. Send $2 and a long, stamped (37 cents), self-addressed envelope to Abby, Letter Booklet, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.)

Baked Potato Filling traditional dish

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor

If you visit the annual Pennsylvania Dutch Festival held in Kutztown, Pa., at the beginning of July, you may taste an utterly delicious (but plain and simple) dish that, in my opinion, is just right to serve at home in the winter.

The dish is Baked Potato Filling and it is part of the help-yourself-to-as-much-as-you-like dinners served in great field tents on the huge grounds of the festival.

BAKED POTATO FILLING

3 medium (about 1 pound) potatoes, peeled and quartered
¼ cup milk
2 large eggs
1-3rd cup finely chopped parsley
Salt and pepper to taste
5 tablespoons butter
2 medium-large onions, finely diced (1⅓ cups)
4 slices (each about ½-inch thick) firm-texture bread, cut into ½-inch cubes (about 3 cups)

In a heavy 2-quart saucepan cover the potatoes with about 1 inch of boiling water; boil, tightly covered, until tender-firm — 20 to 25 minutes. Drain well and mash until smooth. Beat in milk, eggs, parsley and salt and pepper.

In a 10-inch skillet heat 2 tablespoons of the butter; add the onion and cook gently, stirring often, until golden brown. With a slotted spoon, remove the onion and add to the potatoes. In the 10-inch skillet over low heat, melt 2 more tablespoons of the butter; add the bread cubes and toss to coat with the butter. Spread bread cubes on a large cookie sheet and bake in a preheated 300-degree oven until crisp and lightly browned — 20 to 30 minutes. Fold into the potato mixture.

Turn into a buttered 1-quart baking dish and smooth the top. Melt the remaining 1 tablespoon butter and drizzle over the potato mixture. Bake in a preheated 350-degree oven until top is golden and crusty — 35 minutes.

Makes 6 servings.

Low-salt recipes spice up meal plans

Copley News Service

Spicing-up food with seasonings other than salt can help cut down sodium in the diet. As well as trying some of these recipes, experiment with other spices, too. Lemon juice, onion, garlic and pepper are versatile basic ingredients which add tang to meats and vegetables and soups. Dozens of spices and herbs are available to inspire the creativity of any cook.

VEGETABLES ORIENTAL

2 tbsps. onion flakes
½ tsp. instant minced garlic
Water
1 (1-lb.) bunch broccoli
3 tbsps. salad oil
1 cup thinly sliced carrots
2 cups coarsely shredded cabbage
2 tbsps. cornstarch
2 tsps. sugar
1½ tsps. ground ginger
⅛ tsp. ground black pepper

Combine onion flakes and minced garlic with 2 tablespoons water; let stand 10 minutes to soften. Meanwhile, cut broccoli in flowerettes; trim stems; cut crosswise into thin slices (makes 6 cups); set aside. In large skillet or wok heat oil until hot. Add onion and garlic; saute 3 minutes. Add carrots and reserved broccoli; cook and stir 10 minutes. Add cabbage; cook and stir 2 minutes. Mix cornstarch with sugar, ginger and black pepper; blend in 1½ cups cold water. Stir into skillet. Cook and stir until mixture boils and thickens.

Makes 6 servings.

About 83 milligrams sodium per serving. (Sodium in seasonings about 1 mg. per serving.)

BROWNED RICE

6 (¾ stick) tbsps. unsalted margarine
1 cup raw white rice
2 cups water
¾ cup chopped onion
¼ tsp. sage

Heat unsalted margarine in saucepan. Add rice and cook, stirring constantly over low heat until rice is lightly browned. Remove from heat. Gradually stir in water; add chopped onion and sage.

Return to heat and bring to boil. Cover; simmer 12 to 15 minutes or until all liquid is absorbed. Serve hot.

Makes 8 servings.

About 1.4 mgs. sodium per serving.

BAKED FISH CONTINENTAL

2 tbsps. instant minced onion
2 tbsps. water
½ tsp. basil leaves, crushed
½ tsp. paprika
⅛ tsp. garlic powder
2 tbsps. salad oil
1½ tsps. lemon juice
1 lb. cod fillets
1 tsp. parsley flakes

Preheat oven to 350 degrees F. Combine minced onion and water; let stand 10 minutes to soften. Stir in basil, paprika, garlic powder, oil and lemon juice. Place fish fillets in greased 10x6x2-inch baking pan. Pour herb mixture over top. Bake until fish flakes easily with fork, about 15 minutes. Sprinkle with parsley flakes just before serving.

Makes 4 serving.

About 83 mgs. sodium per serving. (Sodium in seasonings about 3 mg. per serving.)

By deferring income taxes on a portion of your income until retirement — with an Individual Retirement Account at Petroplex Savings. You can begin your IRA at Petroplex with as little as $100 and deposit at least $100 as often as you like up to a maximum of $2000 per year for each eligible person.

That could mean as much as $4000.00 each year — tax deductible — you file a joint return! Even better, the daily compounded interest your IRA earns at Petroplex also accumulates tax-free until you retire.

You can open an IRA at Petroplex at any time. We can even lend you the money to start your account. But, to claim the deduction on your 1983 tax return, the IRS gives you until April 15th.

Communist critics snipe at Orwell's vision of future

Orwell

BERLIN (AP) — Communist critics are sniping at "1984," George Orwell's famous novel about life in the ultimate totalitarian state — and a book banned in the Soviet Union and Eastern bloc countries.

But the modern British classic is widely known in Eastern Europe from smuggled copies and translations published by underground presses.

Loyal Communists never liked "1984" because Orwell's super-state "Oceania" — where "Big Brother is watching" and governmment critics disappear as "unpersons" — has been compared to life under communism.

Recent commentaries in East Germany, Hungary and Poland suggest that authorities are concerned that the revival of Western interest in Orwell's novel might spill over into the Soviet bloc.

EARLIER THIS month, an East German newspaper charged that the new wave of interest in "1984" may have been fueled by people who wanted a "rebirth of the Cold War."

The Volkszeitung (Peoples' Newspaper) of Leipzig branded the book "the best seller of the Cold War" when it was published in the West in 1949.

"It remains to be seen whether the expectation will be fulfilled of those who want to provide the ideological background for the rebirth of the Cold War with an Orwell renaissance."

A sales manager at East Berlin's international bookstore said, "The book has never been published here, and consequently we don't carry it."

Nor is the book — or other Orwell novels — on sale in the Soviet Union.

In 1977 at the Moscow Book Fair, the Soviets confiscated an English-language copy published by the New American Library.

Customs officials allowed a copy of "1984" into the country for the 1979 fair, but banned Orwell's "Animal Farm" — a satire widely interpreted as a slap at Communist officialdom.

AMERICAN PUBLISHERS have since stopped trying to bring in literature that might offend Soviet officials.

"1984" was mentioned last January in Literary Gazette, the organ of the Soviet Writer's Union. Vitaly Korbish claimed that Orwell's "vision of the future is becoming a reality — in the United States."

Orwell books aren't sold in Czechoslovakia, Romania and Hungary. But literary critics and some members of the reading public are very familiar with his name and works.

The Budapest literary and cultural weekly Uj Tuekor (New Mirror) carried a page-long article on Orwell in its New Year's issue.

Of "1984" it said: "Orwell still had time to live to see that in the period of the increasingly frigid Cold War, an effective weapon had been forged from his work toward the ideological fight against communism."

The Hungarian weekly contended that the novel "can be hardly related accusingly to the present-day realities of socialism (communism)."

The Leipziger Volkszeitung took a similar tack. It claimed "Nineteen Eighty-Four" is "infinitely remote from real socialism."

This is a recent picture of Barnhill Farm, a stone cottage on the isle of Jura, Scotland, where George Orwell wrote the frightening satire on totalitarianism, "1984," forty years ago.

GOING ONE step further, the newspaper added, "It cannot be overlooked that Orwell's '1984' has parallels with the real world of imperialism...through the increasingly total surveillance of citizens (in the West) by computers."

A long official silence on "1984" was broken in Poland with a commentary on Orwell in the December issue of Zdanie (Opinion). Poles said it may have been the first time the book was ever mentioned in a state publication.

Orwell should "not be held responsible" for the "myth" created by right-wingers that he was an "instrument of anti-communism and ant-Sovietism," the Polish magazine said.

"All kinds of definitions and yardsticks were applied to the 'black anti-utopia' which is '1984,'" it said, adding that Orwell himself "deplored the primitive reception" given to his novel.

Western paperback copies of "1984" and "Animal Farm" were sold at some Polish bookshops in the 1960s, but are rarely seen today. As elsewhere in the Soviet bloc, there are no official translations, although underground copies are read avidly.

WESTERN COMMUNIST Parties have also criticized the book.

Last week in a front-page review of "1984," Humanite, the official newspaper of the French Communist Party said Orwell was a "pretty good connoisseur of literary things," but neglected to mention that the futuristic satire is banned in the Soviet Union.

Terming the message of Orwell's novel "absurd," the newspaper accused Western "merchants of despair" and "other media types" of whipping up an "international publicity campaign" to discredit Maxism-Leninism by linking it to the bleak nightmare Orwell invented.

"The book's greatest merit for those who equate communism and fascism is to imply that this fraudulent idea could someday become real," Humanite declared. "This is ideological confrontation, using the field of culture."

Man's round-the-world voyage ends in record time — eight days

LONDON (AP) — Eric Peters set off in his little barrel-shaped boat on a round-the-world voyage on New Year's Eve. He was back in record time — a mere eight days.

Peters, a 44-year-old salt who had already sailed across the Atlantic in the 5-foot-10½-inch Tonicky-Nav, put out from London's Putney pier. He had gone only as far as Chelsea, a few miles downstream, when the boat's engine coughed and cut out.

Enter the Port Of London Authority, which decreed that without proper equipment, Peters could not use the river as his starting point. So river police escorted him Sunday night back to Putney, where a mobile crane lifted the boat out of the water.

Scotland Yard offered only a terse statement on Peters' foiled plan.

"We do not know what he will do next," a spokesman said. "Perhaps he will try and start from another stretch of water."

Police read body language

SHEFFIELD, England (AP) — The South Yorkshire police are adding a new weapon to their arsenal of crime-fighting techniques: the ability to read clues hidden in body language.

The idea, Chief Inspector Brian Mordew of the community relations department said, is that learning how a person is thinking or behaving by his movements, posture or speech could help police improve their performance. So, a behavioral psychologist has been recruited to teach the officers what those signals mean.

"It may be an officer will find a person more responsive if he takes a certain approach or way of speaking, and we may also learn how a policeman can offend members of the public without intending to do so," Mordew said.

Now, presumably, if a masked man runs from a bank with cash spilling from a suitcase and stops to rub his chin suspiciously, officers will know something strange is indeed in the works.

Freeze hurts Mexican crops

ECATEPEC DE MORELOS, Mexico (AP) — Recent freezes that reached deep into Mexico killed about one-fourth of the corn and beans planted in an agricultural area northeast of Mexico City, a state of Mexico farm labor official said.

Javier Garcia Beltran, director of the State of Mexico Farm Labor Center, said peasant farmers in the area estimated the damage. The area covered was not available.

Garcia Beltran said the crops were to be harvested in late February.

Regency Cleaners, 1117 Andrews Hwy. in Midland, offers you the very best quality and service available for your dry cleaning. Come by Regency today, or call 689-8338.

Regency:Quality more thanslogan

From the moment your garments are brought in to Regency Cleaners, Midland's only total fabricare center, they receive the very best treatment available. This is because at Regency Cleaners, quality is a matter of pride.

When you first bring your garments in to Regency Cleaners, individual tickets are made and the garments are placed in individual drawstring bags. From there, they go to the marking department. It is here that all garments are tagged and examined thoroughly for stains or spots, missing buttons, rips, etc. After all, what is the worth of a clean garment if it has buttons missing, seams ripped, or stains on the collar?

Next, the actual cleaning process can begin. Regency Cleaners is the only dry cleaner in Midland to use Valclene, the safest cleaning chemical in the industry. Valclene is much better than ordinary solvents because of the much lower drying temperature than perc or petroleum. As a result, your garments will wear much better in the long run. Higher temperatures, of course, damage any material, and leave your clothes much stiffer than lower temperatures. Valclene also dries much faster than the other chemicals, and leaves no residue. Chemical residues in household items such as pillows, drapes, quilts, and bedspreads can be health hazards.

After the cleaning process, your garments are once again examined for spots which may not have come out the first time. These spots are given special attention to get them out, and then these garments are recleaned.

Next, your garments are taken to the pressing area to be pressed. Regency Cleaners has different presses for different garments, such as pants, coats, and dresses, because different garments require different equipment.

After pressing, your garments are once again inspected for any type of deficiency: missing buttons, double creases, improper press, etc. Head of the inspection department is Soila Flores, who says, "Our inspectors make sure that everything looks perfect, from the creases to coat collars."

Now, your garments are bagged. There will be no more than four garments in any one bag to insure that they do not wrinkle. This also insures that the garments will retain the freshness from the cleaners up until the time the garment is needed for wear.

Bagged orders are placed on the conveyor, which holds up to 3000 orders. " We have ordered a second conveyor because the first filled up faster than we expected," explains Ally Tejani, manager of Regency Cleaners. "Our business has been much better than we anticipated due to the fact that we maintain our high quality always. Quality is a matter of pride at Regency Cleaners."

Regency is also the only cleaner in Midland that does every bit of their cleaning on the premises. This includes laundering of shirts and jeans, cleaning of leathers, furs, and suedes, drapes, bedspreads, quilts,... the list goes on and on. They also offer their customers a full-fledged alteration department, and you can even fill your car up with gas at Regency Cleaners. Regency believes in giving the very best service to each and every one of their valued customers.

They now have a fine line of beautiful tablecloths. These are perfect gifts for the hard-to-please relative, as they are hand-made and come in a variety of materials and designs. Come by Regency and see some of these really gorgeous tablecloths, hand-made in Italy and France.

Regency Cleaners invites any group to tour the facilities they have. Ally is "very proud to show our plant to anybody because it is the best there can be." Give Regency Cleaners a try, Midland, next time you have any cleaning to do. See the difference quality can make, you will be pleasantly surprised. You can find Regency Cleaners at 1117 Andrews Highway in Midland, or call for more information at 689-8338.

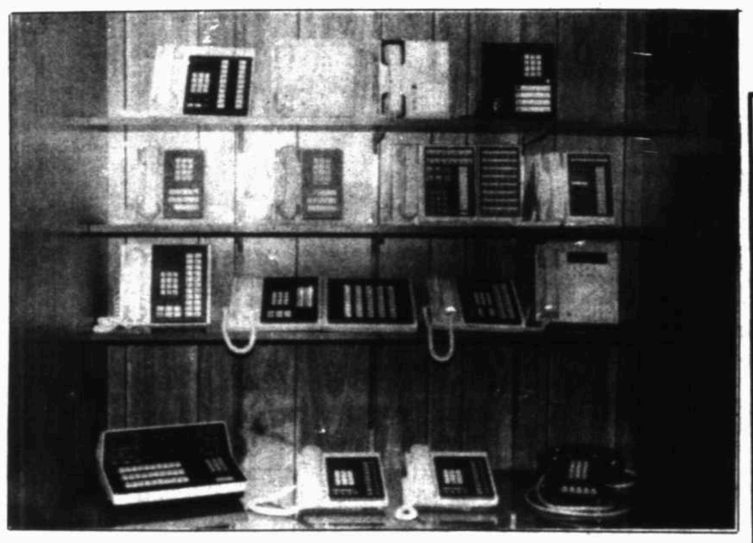

Telephone Professionals save you time and money

Telephone Professionals, inc., was formed in July, 1979, by a group of San Angelo businessmen who felt the need for a locally owned and operated interconnect company in the West Texas area. After celebrating their fourth anniversary recently , they are proud to say that they are still 100% owned by West Texans, for West Texans. In this time, the company has grown over ten times the number of employees and have enjoyed the list of growing loyal customers. Most orders still come from customer referrals. Telephone Professionals believes in the best in friendly and personal service, and they can help you to choose a system to fit your exact needs and save you money.

Just what are the advantages of owning your own system? For most companies, the phone bill is the fastest growing major expense. Owning your own telephone system turns a never ending increasing cost into a valuable asset. Also, with the lease/purchase method of payment, you have steady, non-increasing payments which easily fit into your budget. And while the average increase in your phone bill is 12% per year, many times the lease/purchase payment is actually lower than what you are currently paying the telephone utility company for equipment rental.

Other benefits of owning your own system include the ability to cut down on employee abuse of long distance calls. A phone may be restricted totally from long distance calls, or even restricted to certain area codes on most systems. You may also conduct a long distance usage study to find out where most of your calls are going and then determine what percentage of your calls can be routed on less expensive and more cost effective lines. Station Message Detail Recording (SMDR) allows you to record each and every station and then periodically evaluate your phone calls. Even things such as speed dialing or memory dialing will save you money, time and flaring tempers. Other features available include automatic call back and line privacy.

Telephone Professionals, Inc., handles several different lines of telephone systems, some of which are NEC, Harris Digital, Mitel, Tie, Toshiba and ITT. Telephone Professionals is proud of their service to the people of West Texas. They are owned by West Texans, for West Texans. Telephone Professionals is setting goals throughout the company and encouraging a genuine commitment to keeping priorities in the proper perspective. The most important thing to the staff at Telephone Professionals is a sincere commtiment to each and every customer. By purchasing your telephone system from Telephone Professionals, you placed your trust not only in the equipment, but in the service of the company. You, as a customer, are the most important aspect of their business. After purchasing your system, if you ever have any trouble, however minor, please feel free to contact one of their employees immediately. Let Telephone Professionals show you the advantages of owning your own system and help you to choose the one that will fit your exact needs. Telephone Professioals, Inc., is located on 1305 County Road South. They may be reached at 563-5201.

Telephone Professionals, Inc., offer a free, no obligation survey of your telephone system and your needs. From that survey they can recommend the telephone system that is right for you. For more information, give them a call at 563-5201.

EDGEMONT, S.D. (AP) — While many communities are battling to keep nuclear garbage out, businessmen in this small ranching town are fighting to bury up to 1 million cubic feet of low-level nuclear waste each year under the rolling grasslands of southwestern South Dakota.

The businessmen say a nuclear waste dump could mean up to 300 new jobs for the area, almost doubling employment in this community of nearly 1,500 people. Local opposition to the site is hard to find, but opponents in other parts of the state are campaigning to prevent creation of the dump without voter approval.

"The closer you get to here the less opposition you get to it, and the farther away you get the more opposition you have," said Edgemont banker Don Hanson. "There's not a person in this county that would support this issue if it would be harmful to the environment or the water supply."

Hanson is a spokesman for a Chamber of Commerce committee that has invited Chem-Nuclear Systems Inc. of Columbia, S.C., to build a nuclear waste dump at Igloo, an abandoned U.S. Army bomb storage depot eight miles south of Edgemont.

Chem-Nuclear officials have said they'll seek permission to build at Igloo if geological conditions are suitable. They estimate the dump could generate $5 million to $8 million a year in state taxes and fees.

A coalition of groups concerned with the environment, including the Black Hills Alliance and the Farmers Union, has started a petition drive for a statewide vote in November on the nuclear waste issue.

If the petition gets on the ballot and passes, voter approval would be required before South Dakota could allow a dump site in the state or join a nuclear waste disposal compact with other states.

At Igloo, cattle and sheep graze near old buildings and military barracks with broken windows and faded paint while farmers raise hogs in concrete-lined bunkers where bombs were once stored.

Dick Rood, who has raised hogs in the bunkers at Igloo for 11 years, said he'd like to continue living there if the nuclear waste dump is built.

"I can't see where it would be any danger really," Rood said, "The sooner the better."

Hanson said the 12,500-acre abandoned munitions depot appears to be a perfect site for a nuclear waste dump. The water supply is more than 3,000 feet below the surface and a thick layer of shale would prevent radioactive material from getting into the water, he said.

The plan to create a nuclear waste dump hasn't stirred much emotion in Edgemont because the town's residents are used to living with radioactivity, supporters of the dump said.

"People who live here a while know they're not going to turn green or glow or come down with cancer tomorrow," said Chamber of Commerce President Harold Wyatt, who sells insurance and real estate.

Hundreds of thousands of tons of radioactive tailings still sit on the edge of town near a uranium mill that closed in 1974. The federal government considers the tailings a potential health hazard and plans to bury them several miles outside town within the next several years. It also is cleaning up radioactive tailings from private property around town. Uranium ore still lies under the countryside surrounding Edgemont.

The low-level nuclear waste that would be buried near here comes from hospitals, industries and nuclear power plants. It includes radioactive material that decays within 300 years and longer-lived material that is greatly diluted.

But Edgemont residents qualify their support for the proposed nuclear waste dump, saying they would welcome it as long as they can be convinced it would be safe.

"I really haven't talked to too many people who are dead set against it. They have some questions is all," said Bret Fox, who works at the idle uranium mill.

"There's a lot of unanswered questions," Fox said. "I'm not completely convinced, but I'm not afraid of it."

Wyatt said the Chamber of Commerce support for a nuclear dump doesn't mean Edgemont is willing to rush into something dangerous.

"We're not just grasping at anything to bring in hordes of people or industry," Wyatt said. "It would be nice if IBM would put an electronics plant here, but we really can't count on that."

Businessmen said Edgemont's economy has gone boom and bust repeatedly as the uranium mill opened and closed, the Army bomb depot was built and abandoned, and the fortunes of area ranchers and the railroad fluctuated with the rest of the economy.

"You've got to admit, there's not too much going on in Edgemont," said Eddie Anderson, who works oil fields in nearby Wyoming.

"The economic benefits are self-evident," Hanson said. "If it isn't safe, then the jobs aren't worth it."

New test could reduce common sexual disease

PITTSBURGH (AP) — A new test for diagnosing the nation's most common sexually transmitted disease will dramatically reduce the number of sufferers who in some cases risk sterility and blindness, researchers say.

"I think it can be controlled," said Dr. Antonio J. Amortegui, a pathologist at Magee-Womens Hospital who has pioneered the test for nongonococcal urethritis.

"A lot of people never got a confirmed diagnosis because the (old) test was expensive and not available everywhere. Therefore, doctors didn't confront the disease. Now, it can be confirmed everywhere," he said Tuesday.

An estimated 3 million Americans suffer from nongonococcal urethritis, a venereal disease caused by Chlamydia, an intra-cellular parasite that's neither a virus nor a bacteria, said Wil Whittington of the Centers for Disease Control.

That's more than three times the number of reported gonorrhea victims, and the ratio could be even higher, according to Whittington.

For two years, Amortegui has been studying Chlamydia, an infection which affects women more seriously than men.

The National Institute of Allergies and Infectious Diseases estimates Chlamydia is responsible for about 20 percent of diagnosed cases of pelvic inflammatory disease. In many cases, women can become sterile if the infection isn't treated promptly with tetracycline.

The disease is not life-threatening, but it is responsible for trachoma, a chronic illness resulting in blindness which occurs most often in Africa, Asia and parts of the Southwest.

In addition, 180,000 babies are born each year with the disease, due to infected mothers, according to Whittington. The infants develop conjunctivitis — inflammation of the mucous membrane lining the eyelids — and sometimes pneumonia.

Part of the problem in dealing with Chlamydia, according to Amortegui, is the disease's similarity to gonorrhea. Nearly half of all people suffering from gonorrhea also have Chlamydia.

The infection's symptoms — frequent, painful urination in men and unexplained discharges in both sexes — can go unnoticed or be mistaken for gonorrhea, Amortegui said. The illness often is treated with penicillin, which controls gonorrhea but has no effect on Chlamydia.

Due to an accurate but costly and prolonged diagnostic test involving tissue culture, the infection until recently attracted little attention among the public and health professionals, according to Amortegui. The original test often lasts up to 72 hours and costs $60 to $70.

To improve the diagnostic process, a Chicago laboratory developed a cheaper, three-hour method, using regular laboratory instruments such as spectrophotometers.

Anti-smoking campaign not as successful as hoped

WASHINGTON (AP) — The physician who released the first surgeon general's report on smoking 20 years ago today says the anti-cigarette campaign hasn't been as successful as he'd hoped — about one-third of the adult population still smokes.

"My hopes were that we would have a greater impact than we did," said Dr. Luther L. Terry in a telephone interview from Philadelphia. "Nevertheless, I've been pleased, if not satisfied, with the success we obtained."

The Public Health Services identifies cigarette smoking as "the most important public health issue of our time."

According to the most recent surgeon general's report, released in November 1983, "Cigarette smoking is a major cause of chronic obstructive lung disease and a variety of cancers as well as cardiovascular disease and it remains the largest avoidable cause of death and disability in the United States."

Yet, the American tobacco industry maintains that there isn't a proven cause-and-effect relationship between smoking and a variety of illnesses.

The 10-person advisory committee which developed the first surgeon general's report expected the document to be a catalyst for action by the federal government and the private sector, said Terry, professor emeritus at the University of Pennsylvania.

"We didn't expect that to be a one shot thing to settle all the problems. We expected the report to lay the groundwork for a comprehensive scientific study of the subject. We hoped action would be taken by various groups."

Terry said the federal Office of Smoking and Health doesn't receive enough money to carry out its mission of sponsoring research and heightening public awareness about the problems associated with smoking. The office has a budget of about $3.5 million.

New guidelines for implantation of artificial heart gain approval

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Doctors moved a step closer to the world's second artificial heart implant as the University of Utah approved guidelines allowing the next patient to be someone healthier than the first recipient, Barney Clark.

The Food and Drug Administration is expected to approve within 30 days the guidelines adopted Tuesday by the university Institutional Review Board, university spokesman John Dwan said.

Besides allowing for a healthier patient to receive the mechanical heart, the standards differed from the guidelines in Clark's operation by permitting the use of a portable heart-drive system.

Clark died of multiple organ failure on March 23 after 112 days on the device.

The Seattle-area dentist was 62 and suffering from inoperable degenerative heart disease before the implant Dec. 2, 1982. Doctors have said the advanced state of his disease may have led to damage to his other organs.

DR. NEIL SOLOMON

Milk-sensitive young may tolerate traces

Dear Dr. Solomon: If a child has a sensitivity to milk, does that mean that he should absolutely not get anything that contains milk? — Mrs. W.A., Detroit.

Dear Ms. A.: Children who are sensitive to milk tend to vary in their degree of tolerance. In most instances, for example, it would not be necessary to withhold a slice of commercial bread from a mild-sensitive child simply because it contains a trace of milk.

Dear Dr. Solomon: As a long-time reader of your column, I know that you always include exercise with dieting when discussing programs of weight control. I believe that sexual relations are a form of exercise. How many calories can a person lose during sexual relations? — Leslie, NYC.

Dear Leslie: Dr. Quentin R. Regestein of Harvard Medical School in Boston says that the energy expenditure during sexual activity amounts to about four to six calories a minute.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I am now pregnant and it makes sense to me that I will require more vitamins and minerals when I breast-feed my baby. Will you please list which supplements you recommend and the amount of each that I should be taking? — Mrs. W.I., Madison, Wis.

Dear Mrs. I.: I urge all women who are either pregnant or breast-feeding to check with their physicians before taking any supplements. A blanket recommendation is not feasible.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I know that you have often written about vitamins, but I'm not clear about what they actually do. I've heard some people say that taking extra vitamins gives them pep, but when I ask them what they mean, they can't explain it. I am also not clear about what is meant by the recommended allowance for vitamins. Who decides what is recommended? Any information about this subject would be appreciated. — Mrs. K.S., St. Petersburg, Fla.

Dear Mrs. S.: Vitamins are organic compounds that are needed by the body for growth and maintenance. Vitamins by themselves do not provide energy; however, they transform food into energy. Some vitamins also play a role in the formation of blood cells, hormones, and certain chemicals that are found in the nervous system. Each vitamin is responsible for one or more specific functions.

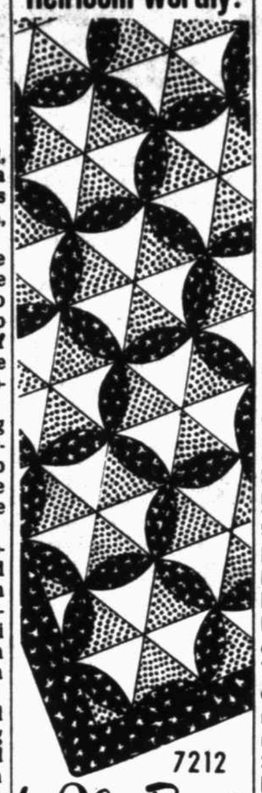

The Recommended Daily Allowance for vitamins is established by the National Research Council and forwarded to the Food and Drug Administration. People who eat nutritious, well-balanced meals generally satisfy their vitamin requirements without having to resort to supplements. However, a person's health or lifestyle might change the requirement for certain vitamins and make increased doses necessary.

For Emily, Raleigh, N.C.: Diet does appear to be associated with certain painful syndromes. Some migraine patients find it helpful to avoid coffee, tea, chocolate and alcohol. Similarly, some reports link dysmenorrhea (painful menstruation) with increased salt intake.

(If you have a medical question write to Neil Solomon, M.D., 1726 Reisterstown Road, Baltimore, Md. 21208. Dr. Solomon cannot give personal replies but will answer as many questions as possible in his column.)
