McFarlane 'retiring'

Who will be next security adviser?

By MICHAEL PUTZEL
AP White House Correspondent

WASHINGTON — Robert C McFarlane is quitting as White House national security adviser, President Reagan said today.

Speculation on his successor focused on reports that the job would go to McFarlane's deputy at the NSC, Vice Adm John M Poindexter. Republican congressional sources said one reason for McFarlane's decision was friction with White House Chief of Staff Donald T Regan.

"He's retiring," Reagan told reporters who asked about McFarlane's future. The president leaving the White House to board a helicopter for a speaking engagement near Baltimore, did not elaborate.

Arriving at the White House this morning, McFarlane was asked by reporters if he had anything to say. "Sorry. I have no comment," he replied.

Asked if he would have an announcement later in the day, McFarlane replied only that "I'll have to talk to the president."

The Washington Times and CBS News quoted sources as saying McFarlane, a soft-spoken ex-Marine, would be replaced by Poindexter, whom McFarlane credited with proposing and managing the successful military operation to intercept an Egyptian airliner carrying the accused hijackers of the Achille Lauro cruise ship.

Also being mentioned as potential successors were former National Security Adviser Brent Scowcroft, who served President Ford, former Undersecretary of State Lawrence S Eagleburger, and David Abshire, U S ambassador to NATO.

Congressional sources tossed in the names of arms control chief Kenneth L Adelman, former Defense Secretary Donald Rumsfeld, Navy Secretary John Lehman, Assistant Secretary of State Rozanne Ridgway, former U N Ambassador Jeane J Kirkpatrick and Assistant Defense Secretary Richard Perle.

The Republican leaders of both the House and the Senate commended McFarlane today.

"I think he's an outstanding public servant," said Senate leader Robert Dole. "He's very well respected in the Congress by Republicans and Democrats."

Robert Michel, leader of the House Republicans, said he had had "a good working relationship from a legislative point of view."

Rumors that McFarlane would be leaving circulated for months. He was reliably reported to have been weighing a lucrative job offer in New York and there have been suggestions he was considering ambassadorial posts in Tokyo, Israel and Moscow.

But the rumors took on added credence this week when no one denied a speculative report in Newsweek magazine that McFarlane was seriously thinking about becoming the U.S. envoy to Japan, a post now filled by former Senate Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield, who is 82.

Presidential spokesman Larry Speakes, asked on Tuesday about the reports of McFarlane's departure, said, "I don't have anything on Bud ... I can't confirm or deny."

Speakes deliberately left the door open for McFarlane, however, saying Reagan values his service but would abide by his wishes.

McFarlane's own spokeswoman, Karna Small, didn't return telephone requests for comment Tuesday.

McFarlane, a retired Marine Corps field officer, is Reagan's third national security adviser, having moved up from the deputy's slot two years ago when Reagan's longtime California friend and adviser William P Clark left to become interior secretary.

McFarlane also served as Reagan's special envoy to the Middle East.

During his first months in the key post of national security adviser and director of the National Security Council staff, McFarlane was credited with successfully mediating the often heated policy disputes between Secretary of State George P Shultz and Defense Secretary Caspar W Weinberger.

In the process, his own public profile rose from that of a quiet, even plodding professional analyst to one of a key adviser with the president's ear at any time of day or night. That position was tempered with the arrival of Regan, who effectively pushed McFarlane a step away from the Oval Office.

That was apparent during last month's U.S.-Soviet summit meeting in Geneva, where photographs showed Regan and Shultz — not McFarlane — sitting next to the president. And it was Regan standing just behind Reagan and Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev as the two leaders finally agreed on their joint appearance and statement that ended the formal talks.

As the key choreographer of Reagan's preparation for the summit, McFarlane nonetheless got much of the credit for the meeting going the way the administration wanted — and as McFarlane had predicted.

Though both Regan and McFarlane are ex-Marines, they are almost opposites in style. Regan, the tough, impatient no-nonsense corporate executive. McFarlane, the slow-talking, professorial lecturer determined to explain the logic of every policy issue.

Among McFarlane's strongest supporters has been Nancy Reagan, whose influence is keenly felt, though rarely openly expressed, in the White House. She was said to have been surprised and upset by reports the national security adviser was considering the job in New York.

Donnie's success honors handicapped education act

By GARY RASP
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — In the words of his father, Donnie Rettberg Jr. is "a success story."

Donnie is one of about 250,000 handicapped children who receive special education in Texas public schools. For two to three hours a day, Donnie, who has Down's Syndrome, gets extra help on subjects he has trouble with. He spends the rest of the school day learning reading, writing and arithmetic with the other third-graders at Wooten Elemetary School in Austin.

"He's on grade level in every class he's taking," says his father, Don Rettberg. "And, by the way, he's the best speller in his class."

Don and JoAnn Rettberg acknowlege they would have ensured that Donnie received the special education he needs, even if Congress had not enacted The Education for All Handicapped Children Act 10 years ago. But, they add, the law has made things a little easier.

"Some people can afford (special classes), or sacrifice to pay for them," said Donnie's father. "But you've got to have the resource system available, and if it's not there, no amount of money can buy it. This has provided that system."

Secretary of State Myra McDaniel hosted a 10th anniversary of the act Tuesday at the Capitol. She read a proclamation from Gov. Mark White naming Tuesday Special Education Day in Texas. Advocacy Inc., a federally funded organization that works to assure the rights of disabled children, sponsored the event.

The law established a funding mechanism for states to provide disabled children "special education and related services" so they can meet the unique needs of disabled children.

Since 1977, when funding first became available under the Act, the federal government has spent $8.1 billion on special education for handicapped children. Nationwide, one student in 10 in the public schools is now covered by the law.

Donnie, who says his favorite subject is math, wore a nifty plaid tie and blue blazer for the ceremony. He seemed to enjoy the attention.

After clapping for Ms. McDaniel's speech, Donnie presented her with a corsage. The perfect gentleman, he saw to it that Ms. McDaniel had a piece of the anniversary cake before anyone else.

"We never focused on what he couldn't do," says his mother JoAnn. "We looked at his strengths instead.

"Our idea," she added, "is 'let's let him try.'"

The key ingredient to Donnie's success, Don Rettberg says, is his self-esteem. "For a handicapped child, as with any child, the most important thing is what they think of themselves," Rettberg says. "Donnie thinks that he's the best guy in the world — and he is."

Every day he surprises me with the things he does," Donnie's mother adds. "I feel that he'll grow up doing something he really wants to do, and that makes me very happy."

Moslem groups releases pair

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Moslem rebels today released an American and a German they had held hostage in the wilderness of the southern Philippines for more than a year, the U.S. Embassy said.

A brief embassy statement telephone to news agencies in Manila said John Robinow, a native of New York, and Helmuth Herbst of Munich, West Germany, were flown to a hospital at the United States' Clark Air Base immediately after their release on Jolo Island to Pakistani Ambassador Aftab Ahmad Khan.

Robinow and Herbst, both residents of Munich, were kidnapped Nov. 19, 1984, near the town of Indanan on Jolo, 600 miles southeast of Manila, by guerrillas of the Moro National Liberation Front.

That guerrilla group has been fighting for Moslem rule in the southern Philippines for more than a decade.

The kidnappers demanded a ransom of $25,000 that both the American and West German governments refused to pay. Khan said the hostages were released today "without conditions."

The U.S. Embassy announcement did not give any details about the release, except that it was made to Khan, who traveled to Jolo on a similar mission last January, but failed.

The embassy did not say anything about the physical condition of the men, reporting only that they were taken to the hospital at Clark Air Base 50 miles north of Manila. It said they were "resting, recuperating and receiving appropriate medical attention."

Khan told The Associated Press in a telephone interview they "did not appear too good when you consider that they have been in captivity for a year."

Pressed for details, Khan replied, "They're all right," and put down the telephone.

Little is known about Robinow or Herbst except that the American is in his 20s and the German in his 30s. An American physician who they befriended in Zamboanga near Jolo had said the two were "looking for what to do in life."

The kidnappers dropped their ransom demands and agreed to release the two captives last January, but changed their minds when Khan, accompanied by some journalists, arrived.

The rebels, who surrounded their camp with at least 700 armed guerrillas, then told Khan he did not have with him documents proving he was a representative of the Islamic Conference, a 43-nation organization. The rebels said they only would release their captives to an emissary from the conference.

Hobby will seek re-election

By STEVE LEVINE
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — After dropping hints for months, the state's most powerful Democratic officeholder made it official Wednesday. Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby will run for re-election next year.

Hobby made the announcement in a terse, undated, 45-word press release, adding that he will file formally for the office sometime in 1986. One relatively unknown Democrat — David E. Young of Austin — has filed to oppose Hobby in the May primary. In deference to the lieutenant governor's political strength, no Republicans have announced for the office.

Texas Republican Party Chairman George Strake, who lost to Hobby in the 1982 general elecction, said the GOP is sticking to its plans to leave Hobby unopposed for strategic reasons. "I can't say there won't be someone to run against him, but we aren't out recruiting," he said.

Strake said an active Hobby could hurt Republican chances for ousting Democratic Gov. Mark White. "I would tend to think he would stay in low gear if he doesn't have an opponent, and he would probably crank it up if he did have an opponent," he said.

Analysts feel that during the 1982 elections, the active political machines of Hobby and U.S. Sen. Lloyd Bentsen helped the Democrats sweep all the top state offices — particularly White's come-from-behind ouster of incumbent Republican Gov. Bill Clements.

Perry Bradley, vice chair of the Texas Democratic Party, said Hobby's presence on the ballot will help all Democratic candidates — even if no Republicans challenge him. "He's been one of the outstanding public officeholders in the history of this state," Bradley said.

Cool weekend to follow Basin's warming trend

From Staff and Wire Reports

Warmer temperatures will continue in the Permian Basin area through Friday but are expected to cool slightly over the weekend as a Pacific front moves in from the west, according to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport.

Tonight's forecast calls for partly cloudy skies with a low in the middle 30s warming to a high in the upper 50s Thursday. Winds will be from the northeast at five to 15 mph tonight, shifting to the east at five to 15 mph Thursday.

Conditions will be partly cloudy and mild Friday, turning cooler with a chance of showers Saturday and Sunday, as the Pacific front moves into the area.

"This is a Pacific front moving in from the west. The last one came from the north, from the arctic, so it will not get as cold," a weather service spokesperson said.

Lows will be about 35 through the end of the week with highs warming to the 60s Friday, cooling to the 50s by Sunday, the spokesperson said.

Tuesday's high of 56 was 27 degrees below the record set in 1954. This morning's low was 12 degrees above the 1934 record of 20 degrees.

STATE

Moist tropical air produced widely scattered rainshowers early today in Southeast Texas and the middle to upper Gulf coast and forecasters expected the rainfall to continue.

Showers were occurring offshore east of Brownsville in the northwest Gulf. The National Weather Service said light drizzle along with fog reduced visibility over parts of South Central Texas and the Hill Country to less than one mile in some spots.

Panel to try to work out differences in farm subsidies

By PEGGY ROBERSON
Washington Correspondent

WASHINGTON — The long-running battle over farm policy will crank up again on Thursday when House members and senators sit down to work out differences in massive new farm legislation approved separately by the two chambers.

Most of the fireworks are anticipated over the difficult question of how to set farm income subsidies.

That was the question that kept the Senate in a stalemate for almost a month, before a four-year reauthorization of farm programs was approved Nov. 23 after an all-night session.

Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., chairman of the Senate Agriculture Committee, named his conferees after Congress returned Monday from a Thanksgiving recess.

Helms, who fulfilled a prophecy he made earlier this year that he would become the first Agriculture chairman to vote against a farm bill, will head Senate conferees.

Helms also named as conferees Sens. Robert Dole, R-Kan.; Richard G. Lugar R- Ind.; Thad Cochran, R-Miss.; Rudy Boschwitz, R-Minn.; Edward Zorinsky, D-Neb.; Patrick J. Leahy, D-Vt.; John Melcher, D-Mont., and David Pryor, D-Ark.

Rep. E Kika de la Garza, D-Mission, Texas, chairman of the House Agriculture Committee, had promised to name House conferees Tuesday, but missed his self-imposed target date.

In order to move a bill out of the Senate, Dole — who is Senate majority leader — was forced to compromise on a multi-year extension of farmer income subsidies, known as "deficiency payments."

STATE

Deficiency payments make up the difference between actual market prices for major commodities and higher "target" prices set by Congress.

The House bill reauthorizes farm programs for five years. It freezes target prices at their current level for two years, then allows 5 percent yearly reductions only if the agriculture secretary certifies that farmers' production costs also have decreased by 5 percent a year.

The Republican-controlled Senate passed its bill by 61-28, calling for a one-year freeze on current target prices for wheat, corn, cotton and rice, followed by yearly reductions of 5 percent. That is close to the formula favored all along by Dole and the Reagan administration, but opposed by Democrats and farm-state Republicans.

The compromise requires that the 5 percent reductions in the second year (1987) be made up to farmers by payments-in-kind of government-owned commodities, which farmers would be permitted to sell.

In 1988, target prices would decrease another 5 percent to drop cash payments to 90 percent of current levels and payments-in-kind would keep total payments at 95 percent of current rates.

In 1989, target prices would be reduced another 5 percent, down to 85 percent of current rates, but no payments-in-kind would be allowed.

The Senate Agriculture Committee had reported a bill that would have frozen target prices for four years. The administration had warned that President Reagan would veto such a measure.

The Senate and House bills both give similar treatment to price-support loans, the other major tool designed to protect farmers of wheat, feed grains, cotton and rice. The government issues the loans at harvest to farmers who, using their crops as collateral, may forfeit their crops and keep the loan principal if crop prices fall below certain levels.

In the past, Congress has set those levels based on production costs for each crop, setting an effective floor on domestic prices.

Those rates have been high enough to crowd U.S. farmers out of world markets, forcing the government to buy and store more surplus grain crops that farmers had expected to export but were unable to sell.

A new method spelled out in each bill would reduce loan rates by 25 percent in 1986 and by 5 percent a year thereafter. That is designed to trim U.S. prices to make them more competitive in world markets, despite the fact it also would widen the gap between actual prices and target prices.

'Racehorse' Haynes testifies he can't be lawyer's child's father

CORPUS CHRISTI (AP) — Houston defense lawyer Richard "Racehorse" Haynes has testified that he can't be the father of psychologist-attorney Margaret Covington's 4-year-old child because he had a vasectomy 17 years ago.

Haynes appeared Tuesday as a defense witness in Ms. Covington's trial. She is charged with burglary with intent to commit aggravated assault in connection with the Nov. 2, 1981 shooting of Cage Wavell, a Corpus Christi lawyer.

Testimony is scheduled to resume at 9 a.m. today in Judge Mike Westergren's 214th District Court.

Wavell said two men hired by Ms. Covington shot him at his law office four days after he refused to sign an affidavit saying he was the father of her son. He later acknowledged paternity. The men shot Wavell in the arm, leg and chest and beat him in the head.

Earlier in the trial, Wavell named Haynes as one of 16 men who might have fathered Ms. Covington's child.

But Haynes said Tuesday he couldn't be the father of a 4-year-old because of the vasectomy.

> "There was nothing to suggest to me she (Margaret Covington) had wanted something physical done to him (Cage Wavell). She was concerned for the child. There was frustration when he denied being the father's child, even when two blood tests showed he was."
>
> — Richard 'Racehorse' Haynes

Ms. Covington, a psychologist and attorney now living in Sweetwater, worked for Haynes during the murder-for-hire trial of millionaire Fort Worth industrialist T. Cullen Davis. Haynes gained attention in 1969 when he successfully defended Dr. John Hill, a Houston plastic surgeon who was accused of killing his socialite wife. Haynes said Ms. Covington helped him pick a jury.

In his testimony Tuesday, Haynes described receiving a frantic phone call from Ms. Covington the night Wavell was shot.

"It was an inquiry of a woman in love concerned about her boyfriend," Haynes said.

He said she told him she had hired two men to watch Wavell and said the men might be able to help police investigating the shooting.

"There was nothing to suggest to me she had wanted something physical done to him. She was concerned for the child," he said. "There was frustration when he denied being the father's child, even when two blood tests showed he was."

Earlier in the trial, Terry Michael Noah of Phoenix, Ariz., testified Ms. Covington hired him and his half brother to sexually incapacitate Wavell.

Minorities claim test discriminatory

Legality of test for education students to be tried

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Hundreds of minority college students could be denied a chance to become teachers if a controversial state test they failed is declared legal, the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals was told.

An attorney for those students on Tuesday asked the court to uphold a lower court ruling temporarily halting the Pre-Professional Skills Test.

State law requires students to pass the test, which measures high school level reading, writing and math skills, before enrolling in education courses.

"The state of Texas has intentionally discriminated against minorities with this test," Albert Kauffman, legal counsel for the Mexican American Legal Defense and Educational Fund.

Kauffmann said about 70 percent of minority students fail the test.

The three judges hearing the case raised sharp questions about whether the minority groups went "judge-shopping" in the case.

U.S. District Judge William Wayne Justice of Tyler ruled in August that state officials must allow students to take advanced courses even if they fail the test, pending a full-scale trial on the validity of the test, now set for February.

The ruling had been sought by minority groups, including the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, the League of United Latin Americans Citizens and the GI Forum. The Mexican-American Legal Defense and Education Fund filed the suit for the three groups in July.

They said the test discriminates against minorities.

The state has asked the appeals court to lift the restraining order so the test can be used to weed out students lacking basic skills.

All three members of the appeals court panel — Homer Thornberry, Alvin B. Rubin and E. Grady Jolly — interrupted Al Kauffman, MALDEF attorney, during his explanation of why the groups sought jurisdiction in Tyler.

At one point, Thornberry dismissed Kauffman's reason for not seeking an alternative plan with the comment: "Except then it wouldn't have gone where you wanted it to go."

Plaintiffs have no right to "shop" for a favorable judge to handle their case.

Other questions at the hearing centered on whether "impact" of the test was the same as its "intent."

The judges wanted to know from Texas state attorney Kevin O'Hanlon about charges that the test intended to discriminate against minorities.

The results of previous test sessions showed that significantly higher percentages of Hispanics and blacks failed the tests compared to their white counterparts.

"The question is whether the state took no steps whatsoever to ameliorate the impact" of the test, said Jolly.

"The test is designed so that the people make the same scores over and over again," Kauffman said.

Usually the test is given at the end of the sophomore year, before advanced education courses.

Students cannot enroll in those courses unless they pass the test.

"There is no question that there is gross statistical disparity among the students," O'Hanlon said in admitting that the test had a discriminatory impact.

However, he said the test in itself was not found discriminatory.

Rubin countered that the judge's ruling did find it discriminatory.

That the test clearly had an impact on minorities was not the same as what its intentions were, the judges repeated.

"Intent and impact are not equivalents," Rubin said.

The three judges took the case under consideration. There was no indication when they might rule.

Judge Justice is scheduled to hear the trial in the case in February, when the validity of the test itself will be argued.

At one point in the arguments about the restraining order, Rubin asked why not wait until then.

Greenville officers countersue Geter, five other engineers

DALLAS (AP) — The Greenville police chief and another officer have filed a $57 million countersuit against Lenell Geter and five other black engineers who sued the department in connection with its investigation of a series of 1982 armed robberies.

Chief Leon Powers and Lt. James Fortenberry claim in a suit filed in U.S. District Court that they suffered mental anguish and irreparable loss to their reputations as a result of a $28 million civil rights suit filed Nov. 8 in Dallas by Geter and the five other plaintiffs.

Geter and the others are seeking compensation for damages they claim were inflicted during an investigation of a series of armed robberies in Greenville and Dallas County in 1982, and the subsequent prosecution of Geter and Anthony Williams.

Geter was sentenced to life for an armed robbery in the Dallas suburb of Balch Springs and served more than a year in prison before the charges were dropped in early 1984 following national publicity concerning his plight.

The National Association for the Advancement of Colored People led the fight to exonerate the young engineer, claiming he was the victim of racism.

Dallas County District Attorney Henry Wade announced he was dropping the charges after another man was identified as the robber.

Williams, Geter's roommate in Greenville, was also charged with an armed robbery in Dallas County but was acquitted.

Geter, Williams and the other four plaintiffs are described in their civil rights suit as "six young black men, who were recent graduates of college in South Carolina and who were recruited to work as engineers at E-Systems Corporation.

Duarte seeks help from U.S. mayors

EL PASO (AP) — El Salvador President Jose Napoleon Duarte is asking for help in his nation's civil war, but the mayor of El Paso, for one, says he doesn't know how his city can do that.

Letters sent to an unspecified number of officials in the United States appeal directly to American communities for fire engines, hospital beds, wheelchairs and other items that are in short supply.

Duarte, a former mayor of San Salvador, says in the letter that he shares a kinship with other mayors.

El Paso Mayor Jonathan Rogers was one of dozens of U.S. mayors who received the letters. Rogers said the letter arrived last week.

"Normally I will not get involved in dealing with a foreign country. I feel that's the State Department's responsibility," Rogers said.

Before getting involved, I want clearance from the State Department," he told The El Paso Times.

There is a "special bond between us, for it was during my terms as mayor of San Salvador, 1964-1970, that I became acutely aware of the social problems of my people," Duarte writes.

Maj. Alvaro Salazar Brenes, Duarte's personal secretary and the director of the letter campaign, refused to give details and said through the presidential press office in Washington, D.C., only that the letters seek aid on a "person-to-person" level.

It is believed that hundreds of letters were sent.

Brenes would not say what the results have been, contending that some people might try to politicize the issue.

The U.S. government, which supplies economic aid of about $1 million daily, took no part in the letter campaign, a U.S. Embassy spokesman said.

"It seems to be strictly a project of the (Salvadoran) presidency," the spokesman said, asking not to be identified for protocol reasons.

Pat Pappas, the mayor of Parkersburg, W.Va., said last week her city was unable to help El Salvador, "but we can all help as individuals."

William Owens, mayor of nearby Vienna, W.Va., said he was amazed by the four-page letter. He added that Vienna probably wouldn't be able to help.

"I'll have to sit down and see what he is asking for," Owens said. "But isn't that something?"

Six years of war between the U.S.-supported government and leftist rebels have worsened an economy already weak from low world prices for its main exports of coffee and sugar.

The letter, in addition to money, seeks such items as buses, motorcycles and garbage-collecting equipment. Rebels have burned an estimated 900 buses since 1979 as part of an economic sabotage campaign that has cost an estimated $1 billion in direct damages.

The letter sent by Duarte refers to the estimated 400,000 displaced persons in El Salvador, most of whom have fled the countryside to the cities to avoid the fighting.

It asked for garbage-collecting equipment, saying that the overcrowded cities cannot be kept free of filth.

Piles of garbage and the rats and flies that go with them, are visible throughout the capital and its surrounding area.

Sicknesses traceable to sanitation problems are a major cause of infant deaths, health authorities say.

Former mental patient standing trial in murder

SHERMAN (AP) — A former mental patient is on trial here in the slaying of a Sherman woman shortly after he was released from the state mental hospital in Rusk.

David Joe Benson of Marshall is pleading innocent by reason of insanity in the slaying of Sueann Chapin, 50. She was shot in October 1984 as she strolled with a friend near Denison Dam and died three months later.

Mrs. Chapin's family is suing the state for $2 million, alleging Rusk State Hospital officials were negligent in releasing Benson. The civil case is pending.

A jury of seven men and five women was sworn in Monday in the murder trial. If they convict Benson, he could go to prison for life. If they find him innocent by reason of insanity, it will be up to state District Judge Joe Joiner to decide if he goes free or is committed to a mental hospital.

Last year, Rusk State Hospital officials told the court Benson was mentally competent to stand trial. However, a Grayson County grand jury disagreed and said at the time Benson was not competent.

Product liability trial starts

WACO (AP) — Testimony is underway a $3 million product liability lawsuit brought by a West Texas cowboy who said he got leukemia from an antibiotic he used on sick cattle.

Clois Osburn, 44, of Stratford, and his wife, Anita, are suing Rachell Laboratories Inc. of Long Beach, Calif. in federal court here. Osburn claims the company is guilty of gross negligence for failing to warn of the dangers of handling the chemical chloramphenicol.

Chloramphenicol is a powerful antibiotic used extensively in the U.S. until it was taken off the market in March 1984 after a warning issued by the Food and Drug Administration. The lawsuit was filed in August 1984, the Waco Tribune-Herald said.

On Tuesday, pharmacologist Dr. Neil Benowitz of San Francisco and toxicologist Dr. Eric Comstock of Houston testified the chemical is known to cause leukemia when there is a high degree of exposure to human skin.

Osburn gave cattle an oral solution of chloramphenicol which was manufactured, sold and distributed by Rachell Laboratories Inc. and Anchor Laboratories Inc.

Corn causes geese's deaths

BAY CITY (AP) — Fungus-infested corn caused the deaths of about 600 migrating geese at the South Texas Nuclear Project cooling reservoir in Matagorda County, a federal official says.

The geese that died at the 7,000-acre reservoir had eaten corn infested with alfatoxin, a fungus that develops on drought-stressed corn, David Lobpries with the Texas Parks and Wildlife department in Wharton, said Tuesday.

Tests on bird carcasses sent to labs at Texas A&M University and in Madison, Wis. confirmed the deaths, Lobrpies said.

Lobpries said most of the dead birds were snow geese. No other birds or small mammals that live near the reservoir died, he said.

Alfatoxin is produced by a fungus that grows on drought-stressed corn, peanuts and cottonfeed, county extension agents said. The fungus grows when temperatures are warm and moisture is present on the corn, agents said.

Hotel begins celebration

AUSTIN (AP) — The Driskill Hotel in downtown Austin began a year-long celebration of its 100th birthday Tuesday.

Members of the Texas Sesquicentennial Commission joined with hotel officials in a street-corner toast to the laying of the cornerstone in 1885 by its builder Col. Jesse Driskill.

Christopher Bush, general manager of the hotel, said the ceremony would usher in a series of community oriented activities which will highlight the hotel's year-long 100th birthday celebration.

Lincoln Hotels acquired the hotel several years ago and completed a restoration program.

Nuclear power plant starts

BEAUMONT (AP) — The River Bend nuclear plant transmitted power to utility customers for the first time early Tuesday then shut down for routine adjustments, officials with Gulf States Utilities said.

The plant near St. Francisville, La., produced power at about 60 megawatts — less than 6.4 percent of its generating capacity — for about 40 minutes before it was shut down, Beaumont-based Gulf States said.

The plant will continue to be tested at different power levels building up to 100 percent of its transmission capacity of 940 megawatts, Gulf States said.

The $3 billion project will generate power for use by Gulf State's 555,000 customers in Texas and Louisiana.

Gulf States owns 70 percent of the plant and the Cajun Electric Power Cooperative in Louisiana owns the other 30 percent.

Manges' ranch included in foreclosure sale

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Most of a Starr County ranch owned by South Texas businessman Clinton Manges has been sold in a foreclosure sale, officials of an insurance company say.

Robert Wehmeyer Jr., an attorney representing Travelers Companies of Hartford, a Manges creditor, said 2,754.41 acres of a 3,078-acre ranch were sold on the Starr County Courthouse steps Tuesday.

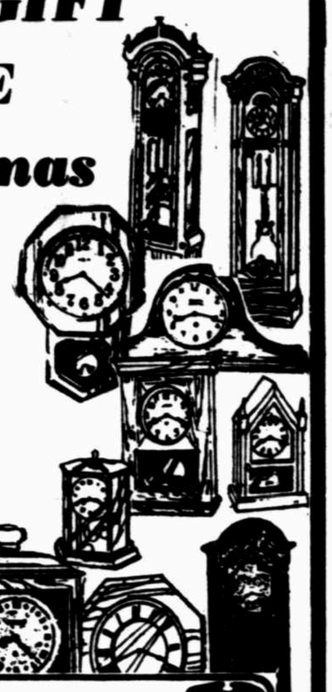

Travelers bought the Falcon Ranch for $1.75 million, Wehmeyer said.

"We hope this will satisfy a debt that had gone unpaid," he said.

THIS CAN BE THE BEST YEAR YOUR CHILD EVER HAD IN SCHOOL.

JUST TWO HOURS A WEEK CAN BRING OUT THE CLASSROOM WHIZ THAT'S HIDING IN YOUR CHILD.

Sylvan Learning Centers are located in major cities across America. We teach reading and math. An independent study by clinical psychologists shows that Sylvan students gain an average of more than one school year in reading or math in the first 36 hours of instruction.

AT SYLVAN YOUR CHILD DOESN'T HAVE TO COMPETE TO LEARN.

There are never more than three students per instructor, so your child receives constant individualized attention. Experienced, certified teachers use innovative teaching methods and modern technology. This, combined with continuous praise, encouragement, motivation and rewards, builds your child's confidence and desire to succeed.

ENROLL YOUR CHILD NOW.

Remember, because we hold the line at just three students per instructor, enrollment is strictly limited. And the sooner your child begins, the sooner you'll see positive results reflected in his classroom work.

Sylvan offers flexible after school hours and requires no contracts or long-term commitments. You simply pay monthly tuition. Don't let this learning opportunity pass your child by.

Teens recall hostage situation

By DAVID TIRRELL-WYSOCKI

CONCORD, N.H. (AP) — One high school student used a promise to escape and another jumped out a window as police shot and critically wounded a shotgun-wielding former classmate who held them hostage for 20 minutes.

Authorities said Louis Cartier Jr., 16, who dropped out of Concord High School a month ago, went back to school shortly before 8:30 a.m. Tuesday carrying a double-barreled shotgun, a bandolier of ammunition and a bottle of wine.

He took Scott Hayes, 16, and Pat Lena, 18, hostage in a stairwell before two police shot the boy when he leveled his weapon at a football coach. Wounded in the head and chest, Cartier was listed in critical condition today at Concord Hospital.

"I was thinking about jumping off the stairs," said Hayes, recounting his ordeal.

"That's what I was thinking too," added Lena, "but I figured he'd lean down and shoot us."

They thought Cartier was joking at first. "He walked into the assistant principal's office and we said, 'Oh, he's going to shoot Mr. (Mark) Roth today; that's nice,'" Lena said.

Roth closed the door on Cartier and called police.

"He came out and walked down the hall and came toward us and seemed really upset," said Lena. "When he pulled the wine bottle out and started pointing the gun, that's when I knew he was dead serious."

When Cartier saw police outside he told the two he was taking them hostage, the teen-agers said.

Lena said he tried to find out what was troubling Cartier, but got no answer.

"I said, 'Lou, you really don't want to go and shoot somebody,' and he didn't say anything. I said, 'Hey Lou, remember some of the times we had last year in gym class?', and he didn't say anything," Lena said.

Lena said Cartier let him go when he promised to arrange a ride to a nearby town. "I walked away very calmly because I knew he would think it was a lie (if I ran) and probably shoot me," Lena said.

When Lena left, Hayes was alone with Cartier and the shotgun.

"I was just scared," he said. "I didn't know what to do next. I didn't know what he was going to do; he had been drinking."

Cartier walked back toward the principal's office with Hayes, where Principal Charles Foley, football Coach Don LeBrun and others tried to talk him into giving up the gun.

Cartier leveled the shotgun at LeBrun when the coach approached and Officer Michael Russell, 27, shot Cartier in the head, Police Chief David Walchak said.

The youth looked back at the officer and said, "Why did you hit me?" and fired once or twice, Hayes said.

Sgt. John Clark, 33, then shot Cartier in the chest, said Walchak. During the gunfire, Hayes ran across the hall, through an office, and jumped out a window about six feet to the ground.

Officer Stephen McDonnell, 36, was treated and released at a hospital after being hit in the chin by a shotgun pellet, police said.

Concord High School was thrust into the national spotlight this year when social studies teacher Christa McAuliffe was selected to be the first teacher to ride on the space shuttle.

Concord student John Dukette, a neighborhood friend of Cartier's, said he spoke to the youth on Monday.

"He said the teacher was giving him a hassle, and he said something about the principal, but I didn't understand him," Dukette said. "I asked him what his mom said when he quit and he said, 'She don't care.'"

Dukette said Cartier had a girlfriend who moved to Vermont recently.

"Louis didn't know where she was," Dukette said. "I think that started it right there."

"He was real silent," said Lisa Clark, 17, who had an English class with Cartier. "He didn't talk to anyone. He sat in the back of the room in the corner and stared out into space."

Congress prepares to approve spending

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House, under the threat of a presidential veto, is moving toward approval of a $480 billion catch-all spending bill needed before Congress can go home for the holidays.

The legislation, cleared by the House Rules Committee for action today, would keep government agencies operating while most permanent appropriations bills are still awaiting final action.

The current temporary spending bill, already the second so-called continuing resolution needed for fiscal 1986, expires at the end of next week.

While covering the expenses of a wide range of government agencies, the bill would also provide financial relief for farmers, end a moratorium on oil development off the California coast, provide money for a highway in California and provide $45 million requested by the administration for refugee aid.

Reagan warned Republican leaders Tuesday he will veto the bill if it exceeds in any area the spending limit imposed by Congress in its own budget resolution.

"Once again the Congress is going to fund the government by continuing resolution and try to roll their excess spending into one bill, hoping that they can avoid a veto," Reagan said, according to spokesman Larry Speakes. "If there is excessive spending in any area, I intend to veto that bill."

The new continuing resolution, which would last through the end of the fiscal year on Sept. 30, contains legislation already vetoed separately by the president — the appropriations bill for the Treasury, Postal Service and some independent agencies.

Reagan has signed three of the 13 regular appropriations bills, vetoed one, and has not acted on a fifth measure. The rest await final congressional action.

While Reagan has been speaking out against excess spending under the current year's budget, congressional negotiators say they are receiving little guidance from the White House on a separate measure designed to force balanced budgets by the end of the decade.

Republican leaders who met with the president Tuesday said he repeated his general support of cutting the deficit — but he continued to seek exemption of the Pentagon from any across-the-board spending cuts.

Sen. Pete V. Domenici, R-N.M., chairman of the Senate Budget Committee, said he and other Senate Republicans were willing to give the president more leeway on defense matters "to where it will be satisfactory to the president."

In the current spending year, the president could be given some discretion on where to cut defense, Domenici said, so long as Congress' general priorities were protected.

But House Democrats, pressing to limit presidential authority, have not agreed to the presidential request.

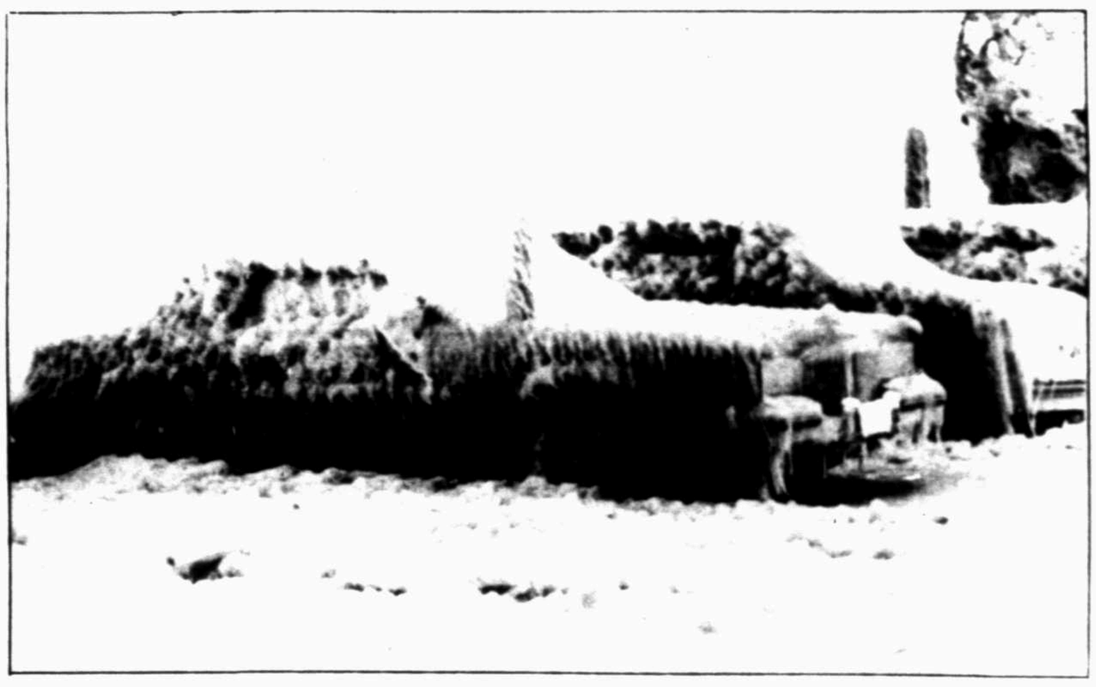

And negotiators on both sides have also agreed in principle that defense would have to be cut along with domestic programs — a concept Reagan has not endorsed.

The president said he was aware that members of Congress were nearing agreement on a measure calling for a balanced budget by 1990, but he was "concerned that you will be forcing our national security interests to accept an unacceptable reduction in funds," Speakes said.

"I wouldn't want to say there's a real definitive position emerging from the White House," said Rep. Delbert Latta, R-Ohio, the ranking Republican on the House Budget Committee.

The negotiators remain divided over how deeply health programs could be cut under the balanced budget plans. The House has sought to protect Medicare, Medicaid and other health plans from cutbacks, while the Senate has favored spreading the cuts evenly over all programs except Social Security.

The House and Senate each passed balanced budget plans using automatic cutbacks to enforce strict deficit ceilings.

Judge stays Johnson's execution

HUNTSVILLE (AP) — Elliot Rod Johnson was back in his Death Row cell after a federal judge spared him from the Texas death chamber about 10 hours before an execution that was scheduled for early today.

Johnson, 26, of Port Arthur, faced lethal injection after midnight for the execution-style slaying of Joseph Granado, 67, during a robbery of Granado's downtown Beaumont jewelry store in 1982. Arturo Melendez, 45, of Beaumont, who worked with Granado, also was killed in the robbery.

Johnson's attorney, Sam Dunn, who was given the case by the American Civil Liberties Union, filed the appeal Tuesday with U.S. District Judge Howell Cobb in Beaumont after the state Court of Criminal Appeals rejected a similar request for a reprieve.

Cobb issued the stay after Attorney General Jim Mattox's office agreed to not oppose the application for the order.

"The attorney general of Texas has stated to this court that he 'concedes that' petitioner is entitled to the stay of execution," Cobb said in his brief decision.

Dunn, who had never spoken with his client, argued that Johnson did not have adequate defense counsel at his trial.

"I've handled other capital murder cases but I haven't gone this far before," Dunn said.

Johnson had spent about 5½ hours in a small holding cell just outside the death chamber at the Walls Unit in Huntsville when he received word of the stay from assistant warden Robert Ott.

"Johnson nodded his head and appeared relieved," Ott said. "He made no verbal comment."

The prisoner then was returned to Death Row at the Ellis Unit, about 15 miles away.

Today's execution date had been Johnson's first. Since Texas resumed the death penalty in 1982, only one of the 10 inmates put to death was executed on his first date. In that case, Stephen Peter Morin, 37, had requested no efforts be made to spare him from execution March 13.

A Jefferson County jury deliberated six minutes before returning a guilty verdict at Johnson's capital murder trial in April 1983, then took about three hours to decide on the death penalty.

Besides Johnson, Maurice Andrews, 27, of Port Arthur, also was convicted in the slayings and is under a death sentence. Two other Port Arthur men who served as alleged lookouts in the robbery are imprisoned for terms ranging from 30 years to life.

Granado and Melendez were shot in the head at close range while they lay on the floor.

Johnson was among three Texas inmates scheduled to die this month. Three other prisoners have January death dates while a fourth has a February date.

Airing filmed robbery brings new leads

DALLAS (AP) — The televising of a videotape of a convenience store robbery and shooting that critically injured a teen-ager has prompted almost 200 tips and two dozen leads in the case, police say.

"With the volume of information we've got, I'm confident that we'll have some arrests pretty soon," said Dallas Police Lt. Ron Waldrop.

In an unprecedented move to generate information in the case, police provided local television stations with a videotape of the Nov. 21 robbery at the PDQ Food Store in the Dallas suburb of Carrollton.

The film shows one of the three robbers shooting 17-year-old Matt McKay of Oklahoma City, who came in the store to get a soda.

McKay remained in critical but stable condition today, a Parkland Memorial Hospital spokeswoman said.

Carrollton Police Lt. Pete Cole said some of the tips received from people who saw the film have been "just shots in the dark."

Police say they suspect the same three men in four other November robberies, including one at a hotel where an 18-year-old woman was shot and killed.

Kidnappers held; Victim rescued

AUSTIN (AP) — Officers watched Tuesday as a $500 ransom was paid in a kidnapping case, then moved in, arrested two people, and rescued the victim unharmed.

A third suspect fled on foot.

Charged with aggravated kidnapping were Rosa Benitez, 17, and Abdias P. Dominguez, 24, said Travis County Deputy Curtis Weeks. They were arraigned before Hays County Justice of the Peace Macel Sullivan, who set bail at $100,000 each.

Weeks said Travis and Hays county deputies were searching for the other suspect, a 22-year-old man.

Weeks said the kidnapping was reported Monday evening after three people — one armed with a gun — came to the residence of Imador Reyes Lada, 31, a citizen of Mexico, in Kyle, south of Austin, and demanded $500. They said they wanted the money for helping to bring Lada to Texas from Mexico, Weeks said.

When Lada could not pay, the three kidnapped him, Weeks said. Lada's uncle was called Monday night and was told to bring the $500 to the parking lot of a nightclub in Austin, Weeks said.

Beggs to take leave of absence

NATION

WASHINGTON (AP) — NASA Administrator James M. Beggs plans to announce a leave of absence as sentiment emerges in Congress that he resign before fighting charges he defrauded the government in a previous job at General Dynamics Corp.

Rep. Don Fuqua, D-Fla., who has authority over the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, said Tuesday that Beggs "is relinquishing his duties during the period in which the courts will judge the charges made in the indictment."

Fuqua, chairman of the House Science and Technology Committee, said "he informed me of his decision to step aside." An aide to Fuqua, Bill Rossi, said Beggs probably would announce the leave of absence starting today.

Earlier Tuesday, an administration source close to Beggs who spoke only on condition of anonymity said the NASA administrator still might decide before his announcement to go all the way and resign, "but I doubt it."

Nevertheless, one fellow Republican with responsibility for space programs seemed to be urging a resignation. Sen. Slade Gorton, chairman of the Senate subcommittee on Science, Technology and Space, said, "I am not convinced that this uniquely important federal agency can adequately pursue its mission with an administrator who is under attack, or for that matter under an acting administrator who might be appointed to serve while the charges against Mr. Beggs are resolved."

Beggs' views may have undergone a rapid shift since the federal indictment was returned in Los Angeles on Monday. He told The Associated Press during a brief interview Tuesday: "I've been put through more wringers than you can put me through in 17 hours."

Just hours after the Monday's indictment, Beggs had said, "I am innocent of any criminal wrongdoing." He vowed to "vigorously defend the case" and said he wouldn't resign from NASA.

But Tuesday morning at the White House, spokesman Larry Speakes told reporters that President Reagan, who appointed Beggs in 1981, "believes Mr. Beggs will do the right and proper thing as far as his government service is concerned."

Within hours after Beggs learned of the Speakes statement, the administration source said Beggs would step aside because he "felt he should follow the policy established by the White House in the Donovan case."

That was a reference to former Labor Secretary Raymond Donovan, who conducted a long defense in office against allegations that his former construction company had ties to organized crime. However, Donovan went on unpaid leave in October 1984 after he was indicted by a New York state grand jury.

This administration source said, however, that Beggs had had no direct contact with the White House by the time he made his decision.

Speakes also said that neither Reagan nor Chief of Staff Donald Regan had talked with Beggs and, to his knowledge, no one else from the White House had either.

An administration and a congressional source said the acting NASA administrator would be Dr. William R. Graham, a California research executive who became deputy administrator only last week.

Monday's indictment named Beggs and three other former or present General Dynamics Corp. officers on charges they tried to hide cost overruns on an Army project by shifting the costs from a non-reimbursable category to one in which the government would pay the firm.

As a result, the federal government on Tuesday suspended General Dynamics, the nation's third-largest defense contractor, from receiving any new government contracts for at least 30 days.

Beggs is the fifth high-ranking Reagan administration official to face criminal charges involving his work before entering government service. He is the second Reagan appointee indicted over activities involving General Dynamics. The others

Navy pilot dies in crash

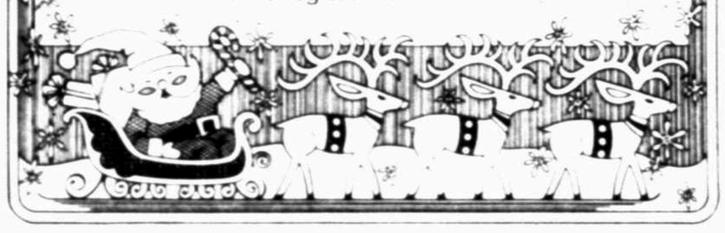

SAN DIEGO (AP) — A Navy pilot who led the squadron that shot down two Libyan warplanes in a 1981 air battle died when his fighter jet skidded off a wet runway, flipped over and pinned him underneath, officials say.

Rescuers worked for 30 minutes to free Capt. Henry Kleemann from the wreckage of his FA-18 Hornet, which crashed Tuesday morning while landing at the Miramar Naval Air Station.

Atlantis Commander Brewster Shaw with daughter Jessica and Brandon greet space workers in Houston.

Atlantis mission flawless, except for 'a few dings'

EDWARDS AIR FORCE BASE, Calif. (AP) — The space shuttle Atlantis sustained "a few dings" on the nose and near the landing gear, but its heat-shielding tiles appeared intact following its 2.8-million-mile flight, NASA officials say.

The flawless finish of the week-long mission, in which spacewalking astronauts practiced space station construction methods, has made NASA confident it can keep launching monthly shuttle flights over the next 13 months.

"We had a great time," mission commander Brewster Shaw Jr. said after Atlantis and its seven crew members landed Tuesday, ending the mission that also flawlessly deployed three communications satellites.

"It's great when you can go up and fly a spacecraft and never get the malfunction book out of its locker," Shaw added. "That's a good mission."

Mexico's first astronaut, Rodolfo Neri, was aboard Atlantis as it completed its second flight as the newest of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration's four-shuttle fleet.

About 6,700 spectators watched the shuttle land at 1:33 p.m. on the single concrete runway at this Mojave Desert military base. The runway was used because the normally dry, unpaved lake bed landing strips were waterlogged from rains.

Preliminary inspection showed Atlantis received only minor damage.

"We did not notice any (heat-shielding) tiles missing," said Jesse Moore, NASA's space flight chief.

"I noticed a few dings — a couple on the nose of the orbiter and a couple around the landing gear areas. And there was a place on the elevon (which controls the shuttle's attitude and roll) that looked like it might have gotten a little damage."

Shuttle tiles have previously been damaged during re-entry, but the problem has been diminishing. The brakes, also damaged on other shuttles, "looked reasonably good," Moore said.

"We and the whole shuttle program are extremely delighted," said Moore.

Based on eight shuttle flights in the past eight months, Moore predicted NASA "can sustain that (monthly) flight rate."

NASA said it plans 16 shuttle flights during the next 13 months, including the first West Coast launch from Vandenberg Air Force Base, now scheduled for mid-July.

Moore expressed confidence in NASA's ability to continue launching monthly missions, but acknowledged "the schedule is very, very tight" for two flights planned in May.

Atlantis' astronauts also conducted successful drug-manufacturing and crystal-growing experiments, and took photographs to help locate underground water in drought-stricken Africa and earthquake faults near Mexico City, which was struck by catastrophic temblors in September.

Neri, who conducted bacteria and plant growth experiments, held a brief news conference in Spanish.

"I'd like to send my warmest greetings to all the people of America," Neri said later in English before the astronauts boarded two jets Tuesday night for a trip to Houston.

Astronaut Charles Walker, a McDonnell Douglas Astronautics Co. engineer, used a zero-gravity electrical process to purify samples of a hormone that eventually will be used to treat millions of people with anemia and other red blood cell ailments.

The samples were flown to St. Louis, where McDonnell Douglas scientists will further process the hormone before the substance is used in animal experiments.

"From all indications, we are expecting very fine results," said James Rose, McDonnell Douglas's manager of the program.

Moore said all three satellites deployed by Atlantis were "doing very well."

Voyager 2 close to photographing mystery of Uranus

WASHINGTON (AP) — Uranus, the mysterious blue-white planet surrounded by dim moons and dark rings, looks like a bullseye in the sky as America's Voyager 2 spacecraft speeds toward its target.

Initial images of the planet, the only one in the solar system tilted on its axis so that its north pole and belt of satellites face the Earth and the oncoming Voyager, show only a fuzzy, whitish blob.

But scientists working for the National Aeronautics and Space Administration said Tuesday that when Voyager 2 races past the giant planet at 45,000 miles per hour next month, it should send back pictures as good as those it took of Jupiter and Saturn several years ago.

Launched from Earth in 1977, the 1,819-pound robot spacecraft with 11 scientific instruments onboard is working perfectly as it approaches Uranus for mankind's first visit to the distant planet, NASA officials said.

"The Voyager 2 encounter with Uranus will be at least as significant as Voyager's contacts with Jupiter and Saturn," Burton I. Edelson, NASA associate administrator, told a briefing.

Because so little is known about the seventh planet from the sun, scientists will learn more during Voyager 2's six-hour closest approach on Jan. 24 than they have found out in the 200 years since Uranus was discovered, Edelson said.

When it gets to Uranus, a gaseous planet 32,000 miles in diameter with a solid core estimated to be about the size of the Earth, Voyager 2's cameras and instruments will send back data on the planet, its thin ring system and five known moons.

The Uranus system is unique in the solar system in that the planet and its satellites are tipped 95 degrees on their vertical axis, making the system appear to lie on its side compared with the orientation of the other planets.

The planet is surrounded by a system of at least nine thin rings made of a substance as dark as charcoal and scientists are expecting the first pictures of these nearly invisible rings during the flyby.

Bradford A. Smith of the University of Arizona, head of the Voyager Imaging Team, said scientists hope to get about 6,000 pictures of Uranus and its environs during the mission, including 1,000 close-ups of the planet.

Because Voyager 2 will be almost 2 billion miles from Earth when it passes within 50,600 miles of Uranus' cloud tops, researchers have developed a way to compress imaging data in one of the craft's computers in order to return about 200 images a day on its weak, distant radio beams, he said.

To capture the weak signal, which, traveling at 186,000 miles a second, will take two hours and 44 minutes to reach the Earth, NASA engineers have tied together several receiving antennas at each of three sites around the globe to act as one big receiver at each location.

Experts debate feasibility of SDI computers

WASHINGTON (AP) — American scientists agree that a "Star Wars" anti-missile defense would need an enormously complex computer system to aim and fire U.S. weapons at attacking missiles.

What they don't agree on, however, is if it ever will be possible to build and have confidence in the "software" instructions that would control such a system.

"Can such a system be designed? I believe the answer is yes," Dr. Solomon Buchsbaum, a computer scientist at Bell Laboratories, told a Senate subcommittee Tuesday.

But another computer expert, Dr. David Parnas, who consults for the Navy, said, "We should not trust it because we will never know for sure if it will work."

The testimony before a Senate Armed Services subcommittee epitomized the ongoing debate over President Reagan's proposal for a futuristic defense shield.

When Reagan proposed his multi-billion dollar Strategic Defense Initiative in 1983, he said he wanted to see if American scientists could invent a system to knock down a Soviet nuclear strike and thus make atomic weapons obsolete.

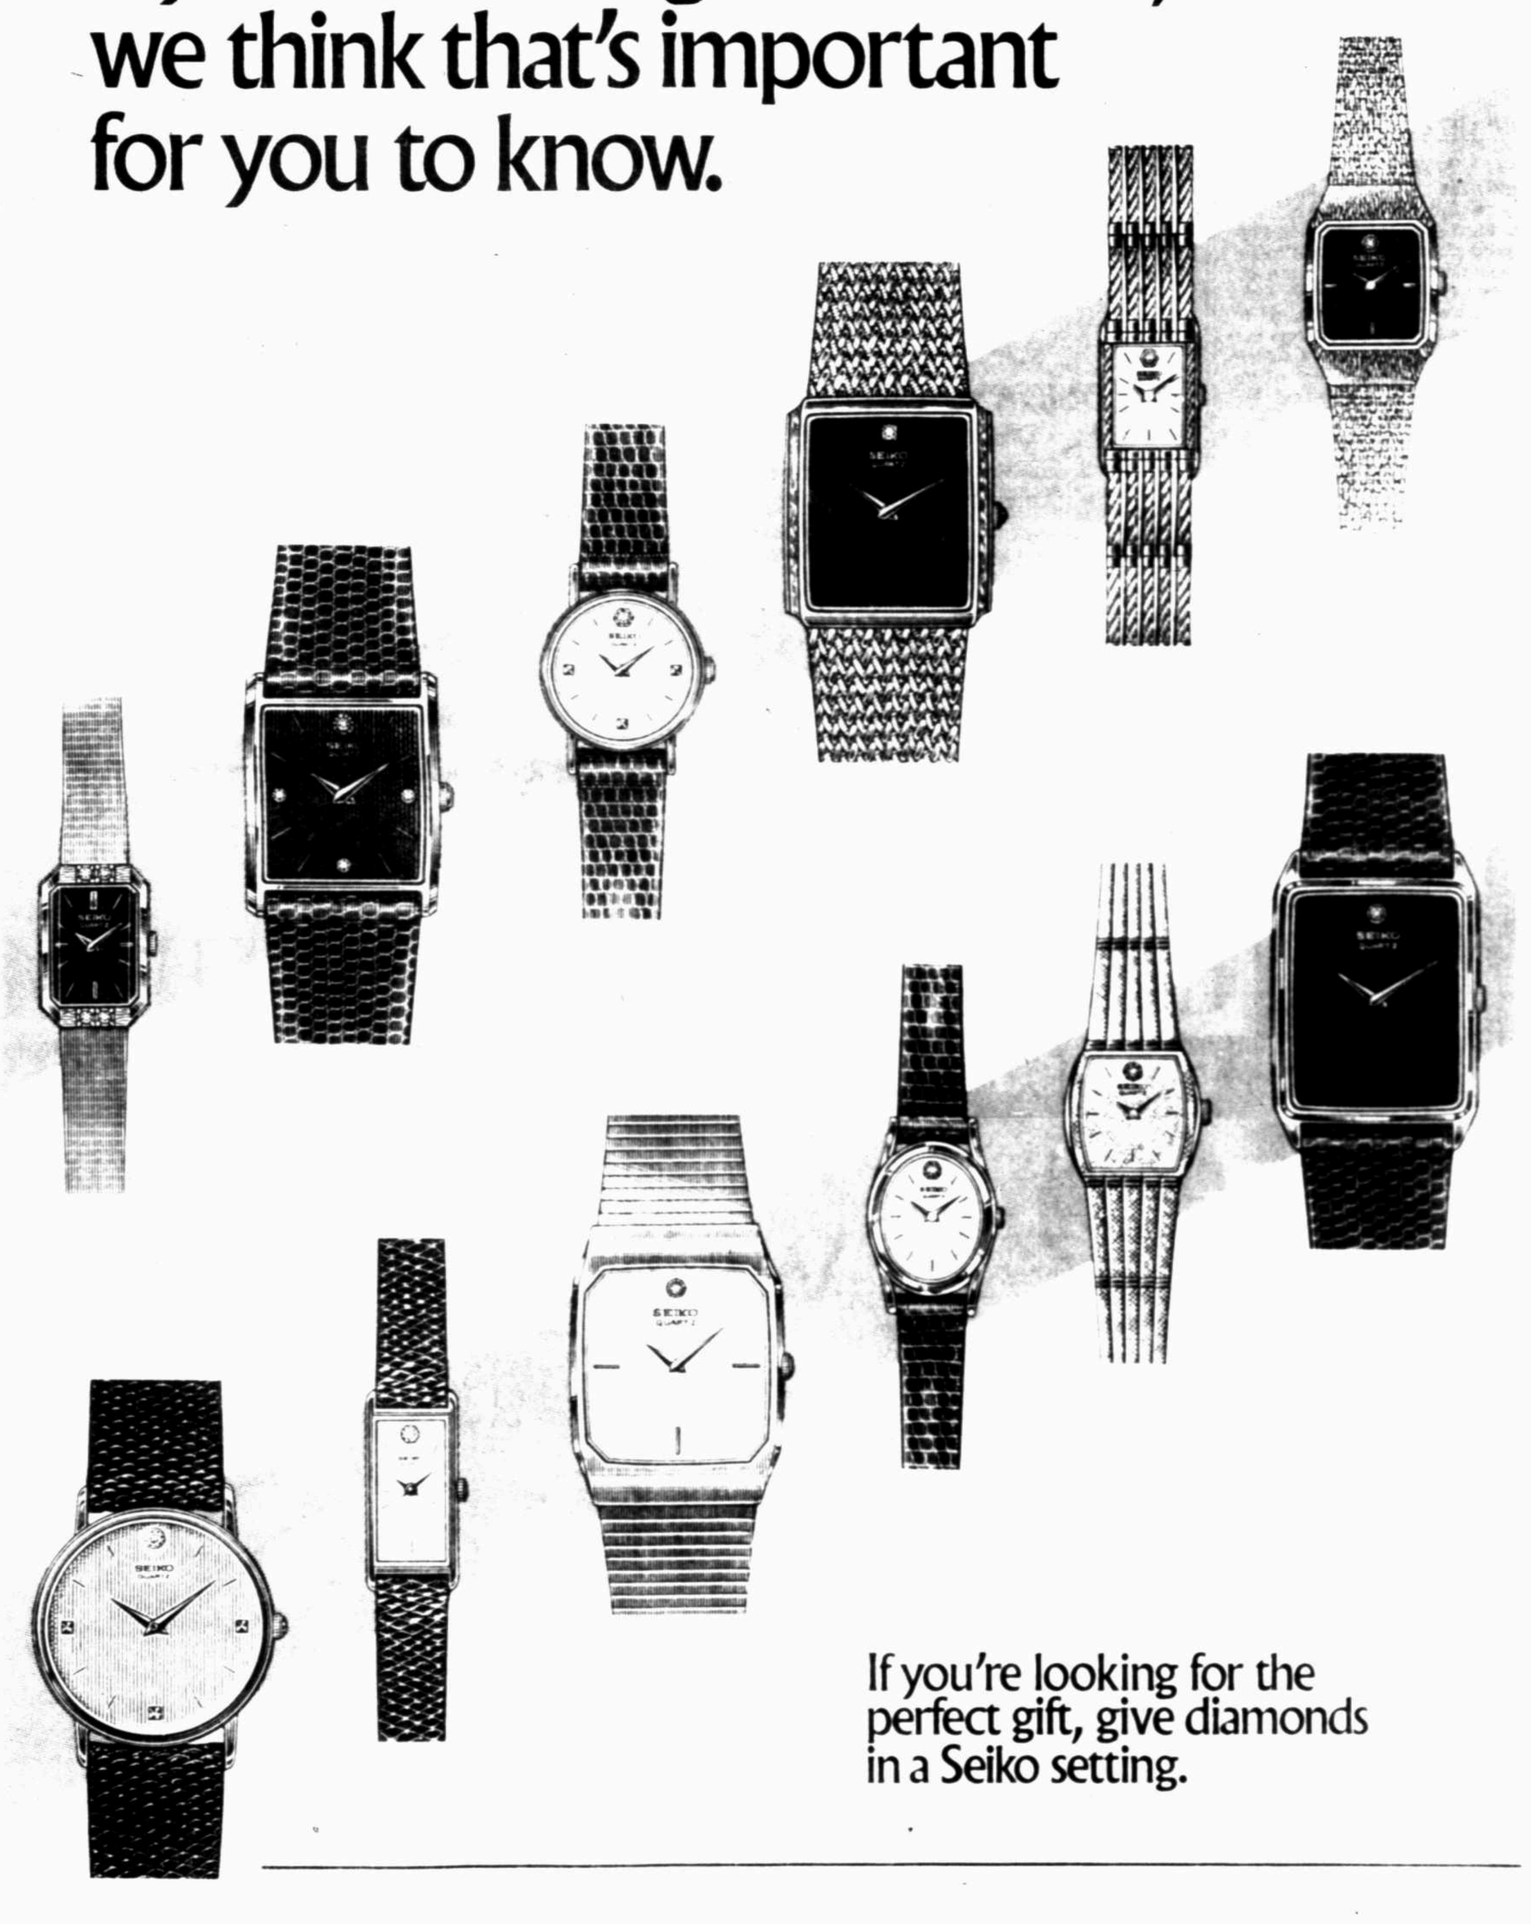

But the plan immediately set off a debate among scientists about whether it was technically feasible, in addition to a parallel discussion over whether the plan would be good defense policy.

While no system is near deployment, Pentagon planners say they are exploring a number of promising research avenues for weapons.

Tax bill needs Reagan nod to pass

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Democratic-controlled House Ways and Means Committee, wrapping up work on the biggest tax overhaul in history, is looking to President Reagan for a kind word that could push the 1,362-page bill through the House before Christmas.

"There's no way this can pass without the president's support," Rep. Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., chairman of the committee, said Tuesday after the bill was approved on a 24-12 vote. "I don't see how the president can be lukewarm...I'd certainly like to see him on board as quickly as possible," Rostenkowski added.

The president, who has his own tax plan, isn't ready to tip his hand. Aides said he will study reports from the Treasury Department and his economic advisers before taking a stand on the committee bill or a substitute backed by most Republicans on the panel.

Time is drawing short. The Democratic bill is scheduled to go to the House for consideration late next week — probably the last major item on the House agenda before Congress adjourns for the year.

After meeting with Reagan at the White House Tuesday, senior GOP leaders said they anticipate a lukewarm endorsement.

House leaders say if Reagan lends his support to the bill, the House is likely to pass it, sending it to the Republican-run Senate for action next year. But if the president withholds an endorsement, the tax-overhaul movement — which Reagan has labeled the top legislative initiative of his second term — could die.

AP Laserphoto

Rep Dan Rostenkowski gets a sledge hammer to replace the gavel he wore out during committee sessions on the tax overhaul.

The committee's bill was written in two months of closed-door sessions that often were marked by bipartisan cooperation. But after looking at the final product, most GOP members of the panel decided it was so far afield from Reagan's proposal that they could not support it.

Those Republicans put together a package of their own — one that Rep. John Duncan of Tennessee, the senior GOP member on the committee, said would do more for the family, savings, the retirement system and business investment than would the Democratic bill.

However, that substitute was unacceptable even to five GOP members of the committee and was rejected, 28-8.

On the final vote for the committee plan, Rep. Ray McGrath of New York was the only Republican siding with the prevailing Democrats.

The committee bill would cut individual taxes by an average of 8.5 percent, a reduction worth about $140 billion over five years. The measure would raise taxes on corporations by the same $140 billion. The GOP plan that the committee defeated would have given individuals about $104 billion at the expense of corporations.

The Democratic verison would cut individual tax rates, boost the personal exemption (now $1,040) to $2,000 for people who don't itemize deductions and to $1,500 for those who do, and raise the standard deduction. Corporations also would get lower rates but would have to give up all or part of some deductions and credits, including the investment credit and a share of the write-off for depreciation.

There are several sticking points between Reagan's and Rostenkowski's bills. Reagan wants a top individual rate of 35 percent, not the committee's 38 percent; he likes a top 33 percent rate for corporations, rather than the 36 percent in the committee bill. He wants a $2,000 exemption for everybody. Also, Reagan favors less of a reduction than the panel voted in special oil industry benefits.

The Democratic measure picked up crucial support by retaining the full deduction allowed for state and local taxes paid and by exempting most worker fringe benefits from taxation. Reagan wants to repeal the deduction and to tax some benefits. But in doing so, the committee raised the corporate tax burden in ways that cost some GOP votes.

On one point in the battle for major tax changes, committee Republicans and Democrats and Reagan agree: Rich investors and profitable corporations should pay some tax regardless of how many deductions and credits they claim.

Any of the bills would attack that problem by toughening the existing individual and corporate "minimum taxes," which are special levies that, in effect, take back part of some key deductions.

Because of that part of the committee's bill, Rostenkowski said, "people won't feel like they're chumps on April 15" when they file their tax returns.

Gov. Edwards lashes out in trial

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Gov. Edwin Edwards, in a long-awaited courtroom showdown with the chief prosecutor at his federal racketeering trial, used a burst of anger and his well-known sense of humor to deny wrongdoing in a $10 million business deal.

On the stand for a second day Tuesday, Edwards heatedly accused U.S. Attorney John Volz, a longtime adversary, of gathering "truckloads" of documents and witnesses in a futile effort to prove a non-existent crime.

"You have all the documents, all the witnesses, all the authority in the world," an angry Edwards said as Volz cross-examined him. "Produce somebody to contradict what I've said."

Volz and Edwards will pick up where they left off when the 12-week-old trial resumes today.

Edwards and seven others are charged with racketeering and fraud. Prosecutors say the men used their political clout to rig state certification for hospital and nursing home projects in which they held interests. They sold five of the projects to large corporations for about $10 million.

Edwards said the state certification program for hospitals was a silly waste of time.

"Was it silly that you made almost $2 million off of it?" Volz asked.

"No, it was smart," Edwards shot back.

"I'll have to agree with that," Volz said.

Bush subject of debated GOP poll

WASHINGTON (LAT) — The Republican National Committee has commissioned a major poll "to assess personal and job-related perceptions of" Vice President George Bush, provoking angry protests from his probable competitors for the 1988 GOP presidential nomination.

Senate Majority Leader Robert J. Dole (R-Kan.) charged Tuesday that the poll, which cost an estimated $40,000 to $60,000, violates GOP rules that the RNC be completely neutral.

"I didn't know that the RNC had become a Bush headquarters," Dole said.

Former Senate Majority Leader Howard H. Baker Jr., a prospective candidate, said, "I'm surprised and, if this is true, someone ought to be fired."

William Greener, the committee's political director, said that the RNC and Bush entered into a complex arrangement under which the committee will pay only for those portions of the poll that relate to general issues and job performance.

Kennedy runs for O'Neill's House seat

BOSTON (AP) — A third-generation member of the Kennedy clan has quietly made it known he plans to run for the congressional seat that set his uncle, John F. Kennedy, on the road to the presidency.

Joseph Kennedy

Joseph P. Kennedy II, son of the late Sen. Robert F. Kennedy, D-N.Y., was expected to announce his candidacy today for the 8th Congressional District post being vacated by House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill.

The 33-year-old Kennedy has already told local politicians he plans to enter the district's Democratic primary next September, and was tagged as the overnight front-runner even before his announcement.

There was no official confirmation from Kennedy or his family on Tuesday, but his uncle, Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., said he thought Joseph "would make a great congressman."

"The senator is enthusiastic and supportive and delighted that Joe, of whom he has been very proud, is choosing to take the contributions that he's given in the private sector to the public sector," Kennedy press secretary Robert Mann said in Washington.

The younger Kennedy sent a jolt through Massachusetts politics on Monday when word began circulating that he will run for the seat.

"He's a very likable, successful young man," said O'Neill, who is retiring and has made no endorsement. "He'll be a strong candidate."

An attorney, James Roosevelt, is among seven other expected candidates in what promises to be a tough, expensive campaign for the Democratic nomination. His grandfather, Franklin D. Roosevelt, named the younger Kennedy's grandfather as ambassador to Britain.

Joseph Patrick Kennedy II is one of 11 children born to Robert and Ethel Kennedy, named for his eldest uncle, a Navy flier killed in World War II.

An inheritor of his family's great wealth and good looks, he also bears a family legacy of high political achievement and tragedy. Joseph was 11 when his uncle John was assassinated and 15 when his father was murdered while seeking the Democratic presidential nomination in 1968.

His brother David died of a drug overdose in a Florida hotel last year.

In the summer of 1973, when Joseph was 20, he was driving a jeep loaded with friends and relatives on the island of Nantucket when the vehicle overturned. The accident left passenger Pamela Kelley partially paralyzed. Kennedy was found guilty of a negligent driving misdemeanor and fined $100.

A graduate of Milton Academy and the University of Massachusetts, Kennedy founded Citizens Energy Corporation in 1979. The non-profit company has won praise for delivering low-cost heating fuel to the needy and helping poor families insulate their houses.

The same year, he married Sheila Brewster Rauch, the daughter of a Main Line Philadelphia banking family. They have twin sons named Joseph and Matthew and live in a farmhouse in Marshfield, about 20 miles from the 8th district.

Reagan's judicial picks face scrutiny

By LARRY MARGASAK

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan's judicial nominees, once they are confirmed, could leave a conservative mark on the federal judiciary for decades. But for now they face testy Democrats who are escalating their rhetoric and their tactics against the nominees.

Democrats, unaccustomed to being the minority party in the Senate, are accusing Republicans of relentlessly rushing candidates through the confirmation process.

They have threatened to block all judicial nominees, have used a parliamentary move to abruptly halt a confirmation hearing, and have given individual candidates a rough time.

The nominees themselves have remained humble and subdued, cautiously showing off their calm judicial temperament. But the Reagan administration has been more than willing to jump into the fray on their behalf.

"They don't like the idea that Ronald Reagan is nominating judges," said Grover Rees, Attorney General Edwin Meese III's special assistant on judicial nominations. "They're looking for phony process (procedural) issues, saying that somehow this is a railroad. They don't like the way the '84 election turned out."

The outcome of the dispute will last far longer than election results. Reagan has named 233 of the nation's 761 federal judges, 28 candidates are in the background-check pipeline and prospects are being sought for 29 other vacancies. Add normal attrition, and it is likely Reagan will have appointed a majority of the federal judges by the time he leaves office.

WITH THE Stakes so high, Democrats refuse to play dead. Recently, Sen. Joseph R. Biden Jr. of Delaware, ranking Democratic on the Judiciary Committee, told the panel:

"Not a single judge will get out of my committee or off the floor, if we can help it, unless we agree to an orderly procedure by which we can process these judges and investigate them fully and fairly."

Biden is demanding at least five weeks' time between a candidate's return of a committee questionnaire and a committee vote, a limit to three nominees in one day's confirmation hearings, and inclusion of additional questions posed to the nominees.

The new information sought by Democrats includes a nominee's public statements and speeches, details of political contributions received for those who ran for office, how much time they spent serving the disadvantaged, and whether they belong to any organization that discriminates on the basis of race, sex or religion.

Democrats also demand to know whether the nominee gave assurances to anyone involved in the selection process regarding their position on any issue — an obvious response to those who believe there should be a conservative litmus test for judicial candidates.

AN ATTEMPT at peacemaking will be scheduled soon, with a delegation of Democrats led by Minority Leader Robert C. Byrd meeting with Republicans headed by Majority Leader Robert Dole.

But until the meeting, neither side is taking any steps to cool the dispute. On the contrary:

— On Nov. 7, Democrats led a charge on the Senate floor that almost scuttled the nomination of Alex Kozinski to the 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals. The mainly partisan vote came after Sen. Carl Levin, D-Mich., said Kozinski misled the Senate and mistreated employees while heading the Office of Special Counsel to the Merit Systems Protection Board.

— While five nominees and their family members, including restless children, appeared for a joint confirmation hearing, Judiciary Committee Democrats invoked a time-limiting rule to end the session. The rule often is waived.

— Sen. Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., chairman of the Judiciary Committee, refused Biden's request to postpone a hearing for the nomination of Jefferson B. Sessions III, the U.S. attorney in Mobile, Ala., to be a U.S. district judge.

Biden wants time to send Democratic investigators to the state to check complaints by civil rights groups that Sessions mishandled the prosecution of black voter registration activists. Sessions has denied the allegation.

— Sen. Howard M. Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, accused Thurmond of trying to rush Sessions' nomination through the Senate while delaying the nomination of Stanley Sorkin, general counsel of the CIA who was nominated 17 months ago for a federal judgeship. Sorkin is popular with the Democrats.

SORKIN'S nomination has been held up while Sen. Jeremiah Denton, R-Ala., pursued allegations that the nominee obstructed an FBI investigation into a leak of classified information.

— Biden ripped into Albert I. Moon Jr.'s nomination for a federal judgeship in Hawaii after one of the state's two Democratic senators, Daniel K. Inouye, complained that Moon bypassed the senators' selection commission and had his name submitted by state GOP leaders.

"In other words, state party hacks are better qualified to determine who should be recommended than U.S. senators?" Biden said.

Sen. Paul Simon, D-Ill., who has been screening judicial candidates for Senate Democrats, said in an interview that more time is needed because "there is a concern, particularly as it relates to the quality of nominations

Gary Hart finds 'beef' at center

By PATRICK YACK

Walter Mondale: "When I hear your new ideas, I'm reminded of that ad, 'Where's the beef?' "

Gary Hart: "Fritz, if you'd listen for just a minute."

— 1984 Democratic presidential debate.

WASHINGTON — In 1985, Gary Hart says the beef's right here at The Center for A New Democracy.

The center is a non-profit, non-partisan organization set up by the Colorado Democrat to continue harvesting "new ideas," a Hartism for modern and possibly unorthodox political solutions.

It's not your typical think tank of resident academics cranking out monographs and scholarly papers. Washington is checkered with such groups.

No, The Center for A New Democracy is more a kind of intellectual brokerage house and traveling road show of politicians, economists and "new wave" thinkers who periodically meet in public and brainstorm about economic issues.

During these round-table discussions, the central topic is how the United States must modify its economic policies to meet the demands of the remainder of the century.

"You can't go back to the '50s and address the problems of the 1980s and '90s," says the center's executive director, former Kansas Rep. Martha Keys.

If the words sound familiar, they should. The quote echoes the theme of the senator's 1984 presidential campaign in which he called for "new ideas" to address the country's problems.

But Hart, a potential presidential candidate in 1988, denies that his center is simply an extension of the 1984 race and a vehicle to continue campaigning for the White House. He's always been interested in shaping policies, Hart says.

"I SPENT a year and half of my life being written off as a serious national leader, because, among other things, I was only interested in ideas," Hart said recently.

"I have always stressed issues and policies and ideas. I've never tried to be a media phenomenon and I never was."

The center is just another method for trying to harness the political winds that are sweeping over the country, Hart says.

Hart also rejects the notion that he is using the center to avoid federal campaign finance laws, as has been suggested in some news accounts.

The center got its financial start from the contributions of 10 Hart supporters who gave $25,000 apiece. The center is not subject to federal campaign laws, which limit individual contributions to $1,000 per election.

The seminars are sponsored by an assortment of backers ranging from United Airlines to the University of California at Los Angeles.

"I can travel anywhere I want to," Hart said, responding to questions about the center's finances. "I can get somebody to pay my way or I can pay my own way. I didn't need to go to all the trouble to start an institute to do that."

The founders, directors and advisers of the center are a diverse sort and include novelist Stephen King and his wife, Tabitha; lawyer-businessman Joel Hyatt; Denver Mayor Federico Pena; former presidential speech writer Ted Sorensen; writer John Naisbitt; Denver businessman Mickey Miller, and economists Lester Thurow and Robert Reich.

"I THINK it's a tremendous clearinghouse for ideas for the Democratic Party," said Susan Williams, a partner in her own Washington public relations firm and a center adviser.

"These are a pretty complex range of subjects that he is looking at," Williams said. "But he is really spending some time looking at them."

Unlike other prospective presidential contenders such as Vice President George Bush and Arizona Gov. Bruce Babbitt, Hart has not formed a political action committee to help finance the campaigns of other politicians.

While the Babbitt and Bush PACs are pushing candidates, the Hart foundation is pushing ideas.

What distinguishes The Center for A New Democracy from similar foundations set up by other would-be presidential candidates is its open invitation to a broad spectrum of perspectives, Keys said.

"If any one person had all the answers then, of course, there would be no effort to create this kind of process," Keys said.

The center is not worried about trying to appease the different constituencies of the Democratic Party, either. Any organization that tries that "can't be on the cutting edge of anything," Keys said. "They have to try to coalesce their differences. We are trying to be a cutting-edge institution," Keys said.

DURING ITS first seminar in Washington, the center's panelists focused on what to do to revitalize the nation's economy.

Recently, in Atlanta, the group zeroed in on international trade and commerce. About 100 showed up for the presentation at the Atlanta Historical Society.

The debate was intellectual, but not without its lighter moments. Thurow, one of the most articulate economists of his generation, charged up the crowd when he called the Japanese "drug addicts. Their drug happens to be exports."

Future seminars on unemployment, plant modernization and the federal deficit are scheduled in Dallas, Cleveland, Detroit, Nashville and New York next year.

Veterans' exposure high in atomic tests

...Film badge readings at Operation Crossroads (in 1946)showed radiation levels ranging from .10 rems to 2.0 rems....today the federally acceptable dosage for individuals is .5 rems per year.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Thousands of military personnel were exposed to greater radiation than previously thought when they took part in a pair of 1946 open-air test explosions of U.S. atomic weapons, a congressional study says.

The study, released today by Sen. Alan Cranston, D-Calif., disputed a 1984 Pentagon report which said the military personnel were exposed to only low levels of radiation. The Veterans Administration, citing the Pentagon study, has refused to pay claims to participants who have claimed health problems resulting from the exposure.

Cranston, in releasing the 16-month-long investigation by the General Accounting Office, asked President Reagan to order the Defense Department to conduct a new review to try to determine just how much radiation the participants received.

Release of the report was the latest round in an ongoing dispute over the radiation exposure of a group of military personnel known as "atomic veterans."

From the time of the first U.S. bomb test in New Mexico in July 1945 until open-air tests were banned by a 1963 treaty, the United States set off 235 nuclear tests in Nevada and the southern Pacific Ocean.

About 220,000 military personnel took part in those tests, including 42,000 at two July 1946 blasts in the lagoon at Bikini Atoll. Those two tests were known as Operation Crossroads.

Of the 42,000, about 41 percent, or 17,000 people, probably were hit with heavier doses of radiation than previously thought, the GAO study said.

The study said film badge readings at Operation Crossroads showed radiation levels ranging from .10 rems to 2.0 rems. There were no federal standards for radiation exposure in 1946, but today the federally acceptable dosage for individuals is .5 rems per year.

However, the GAO study said that because the entire field of nuclear radiation and its effects was so new in 1946, the film badges worn by participants probably were inaccurate. And it noted that only about 15 percent of the service personnel who participated wore such badges.

Many of the participants wore no protective gear, Cranston noted.

"Though the Defense Department has thousands of pictures taken during Operation Crossroads, not one shows decontamination crews wearing protective clothing," he said.

The study found that the most serious risk was run by those who tried to decontaminate some of the 80 target ships put inside the atoll during the blast to see what would happen to the vessels.

Cranston noted that the report said "a column of water a mile high and nearly half a mile wide threw large masses of highly radioactive water onto the decks and into the holds of the target ships, making them highly radioactive."

Water in the lagoon was still radioactive down to eight feet deep for up to two weeks after the blasts but it was still used by nearly 2,000 Navy personnel daily to "scrape, scrub and wash the ships in an effort to get them down to acceptable radiological levels," Cranston said.

Even nine days after the decontamination efforts began, there was some evidence found of plutonium, one of the elements that go into producing atomic bombs, remaining on some of the target ships, Cranston noted. He added that "if deposited in the body, even a microscopic amount of plutonium could prove lethal."

In a response that was part of the GAO study, VA Administrator Harry Walters said, "It does appear that service personnel were exposed to more radiation during the course of Operation Crossroads and the subsequent clean-up than they would have been after safety precautions were better developed and used as in later trials."

About 500 veterans who were part of Operation Crossroads have claimed injury, citing radiation exposure. But none of their claims has been approved by the VA.

The Pentagon, in another letter that was part of the GAO study, said the average exposure during Crossroads was .39 rems.

The letter, signed by Donald A. Hicks, undersecretary of defense for research and engineering, concluded that "at Crossroads, the radiation exposures were low."

Cabbage Patch Koosa collars could endanger pre-schoolers

WASHINGTON (AP) — Children who try to wear the collar from a popular Cabbage Patch doll may be endangering themselves, and the collars should be replaced by the doll manufacturer, a Washington consumer group says.

The collars on some Cabbage Patch Koosa dolls are potentially dangerous because they are long enough to go around the neck of a pre-schooler, and have an unusual catch that is hard to unlatch once on the child, warned Ann Brown of the Consumer Affairs Committee of Americans for Democratic Action.

"Koosa itself is not dangerous. The problem is the collar. And kids will put it around their neck, that is just kids' nature," Ms. Brown said Tuesday during the committee's 14th annual pre-Christmas toy safety survey news conference.

Tamara L. Pickart of San Rafael, Calif., cited the example of her 6-year-old daughter Amy, who placed one of the collars on her neck while playing. The tot panicked when the collar proved too tight, Ms. Pickart said, and was kicking and fighting as adults tried to help her. The collar had to be cut off, Ms. Pickart said, warning of the danger should a similar problem occur with no adults around to help.

Ms. Brown said that by the end of November, Koosa dolls with a redesigned collar — shorter and easier to remove — had begun appearing in stores. But older models are still available and should be replaced by the manufacturer, Coleco, she said.

Coleco officials responded that the company had received no reports of problems with the collar.

NATION IN BRIEF

Playboy, blind group sue Library of Congress

WASHINGTON (Hearst) — The Library of Congress is being sued to resume its longstanding practice of producing Playboy Magazine in Braille for blind readers.

Groups representing the blind and Playboy Enterprises Inc. will file suit today against the Library of Congress in federal court for allegedly censoring the publications it "translates" for the blind and for arbitrarily cutting part of a federal program.

Under a federal program that pays for the production of books for the blind and handicapped, the Library of Congress has produced a Braille edition of Playboy every month since 1970. No other public or private agency in the United States produces a braille edition of the magazine.

In July, however, the House and Senate approved an amendment introduced by Rep. Chalmers P. Wylie (R-Ohio) cutting the $103,000 necessary for the annual production of Playboy from the Library's budget. Production stopped shortly thereafter.

The bill did not specifically state that the Library could not produce Playboy and the plaintiffs' lawyers argue that when Congress cuts funds from a program, it may not discriminate on the basis of viewpoint.

Naked boy frostbitten

GOOD THUNDER, Minn. (AP) — A "very frozen" 6-year-old boy was hospitalized in serious condition after he got out of a bathtub and ran outside naked in sub-zero temperatures for more than half an hour, authorities said Tuesday.

Forest Gregory was being cared for by a teen-aged babysitter at his aunt's house when the incident occurred Monday night, said Police Chief John Rimolde. He refused to comment on why the boy ran outside, saying the matter was still under investigation.

A motorist found Forest lying by the side of the road three-quarters of a mile from the house, Rimole said. There were 18 inches of snow on the ground, the temperature was about 8 degrees below zero, and a brisk wind was blowing.

"He was very frozen," Rimolde said, estimating the boy was outside for 30 to 45 minutes. "The hospital said a few more minutes out in the snow and he wouldn't have made it."

Bombs mailed to clinics

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — Police on Tuesday said they defused four similar bombs that had been mailed to four area agencies that perform abortions or provide birth control information.

Three bombs were found in packages in the main post office, and one had been delivered Monday to the Portland Women's Feminist Health Center, said police spokesman Jay Decker.

Staffers at the center became suspicious of the package and called police, said the center's executive director, Geri Craig.

Allies criticize Dutch for dropping NATO tasks

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) — Allies criticized the Netherlands' unilateral decision to drop two of its nuclear defense tasks for NATO, a move the Dutch government said was necessary to pacify domestic opposition to the deployment of 48 cruise missiles.

At a one-day meeting of NATO defense ministers Tuesday, allies urged the Dutch to retain 36 F-16 jets that can carry nuclear weapons and atomic naval depth charges.

But Defense Minister Job De Ruiter, referring to strong objections to the basing of cruise missiles in the Netherlands, said his government had "done what it could." The removal of the aircraft and depth charges, coupled with deploying the missiles in 1988, was "in the best interest of NATO," he said.

"We have decided to stick with the decision," the defense minister said, adding that the Netherlands now has a "heavier stake in the nuclear defense than before."

The 48 missiles slated for the Netherlands are among 572 missiles NATO is deploying to counter what it says is the threat of Soviet missiles aimed at Western Europe.

Ministers applauded the deployment decision, but U.S. Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger said he and other delegates voiced their concern of what one NATO source termed the "unparalleled" unilateral move to end the Netherlands' two NATO-assigned nuclear responsibilities.

Weinberger said the F-16s and the depth charges were of "vital" importance for NATO, the military alliance whose aim since its founding in 1949 is to safeguard the Atlantic community, particularly against the Soviet bloc.

"We see that point," De Ruiter told reporters. But he stressed a package deal was required to get the missiles approved by Parliament.

NATO officials would not comment on the potential harm of the Dutch move to the allied defense posture. They said it was too early to decide which allies would take over the two tasks.

Members of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization are Belgium, Canada, Denmark, France, Great Britain, Greece, Iceland, Italy, Luxembourg, the Netherlands, Norway, Portugal, Turkey, West Germany and the United States.

Despite "serious concerns about the Dutch position," NATO Secretary General Lord Carrington called the meeting a success. He said it revealed "the first signs of progress" in NATO efforts to upgrade allied conventional defenses.

The ministers said in their statement they will continue to improve NATO's conventional defenses and step up arms cooperation to save money and cut NATO dependence on nuclear arms.

Mitterand warns terrorists before visit to islands

PARIS (AP) — President Francois Mitterrand today begins his first visit to France's two Caribbean islands since his election in 1981, warning that pro-independence terrorists there will be dealt with harshly.

Mitterrand is scheduled to arrive in Fort-de-France, capital of Martinique, today and visit 10 towns on the island before flying to the island of Guadeloupe on Thursday. He will visit an equal number of communities there, and leave for Paris on Friday.

His visit comes three months before national legislative elections. Polls indicate that Mitterrand's Socialists, who won only about 20 percent of the vote on the islands in the 1981 presidential election, are trailing badly.

Mitterrand will be accompanied by Georges Lemoine, secretary of state for overseas departments; Interior Minister Pierre Joxe, who is responsible for law and order; and Joseph Franceschi, secretary of state for the aged.

In an interview with France's overseas radio service before the three-day visit, Mitterrand said the islands' status could only change "with the consent — what am I saying? — with the will of the people in question."

Mitterrand said his government did not oppose "democratic debate" on the future of the islands, which as departments are integral parts of France represented in the National Assembly and Senate.

But he said France would not be intimidated by violence and by "organizations which wish to settle political problems by terrorism."

Terrorists will face "the force of the law — and thus repression," he said.

Mitterrand is expected to announce some measures to improve the economy of the islands, where unemployment is near 30 percent. The measures may be part of the government's recently announced proposal to reform housing financing in overseas departments.

Common Market leaders wrangle over simpler rules

LUXEMBOURG (AP) — The Common Market's leaders spent 15 hours trying to agree on simpler rules to make it more efficient, but President Francois Mitterrand of France said early today that the final accord was diluted.

One difficulty in making such fundamental reforms as getting rid of the requirement for unanimous decisions was that the leaders of the 12 countries need unanimity to do it.

Mitterrand told reporters that some members, including Italy and Denmark, had withheld formal approval of some revisions generally agreed upon.

Full details of the accord were to be disclosed at a news conference later by Prime Minister Jacques Santer of Luxembourg, the summit's host.

It was the first time in the history of Western Europe's trading bloc, the world's largest, that changes have been considered in its charter, the 1957 Treaty of Rome.

A British official, speaking on condition of anonymity, said earlier that revision efforts during the second and last day of the summit proceeded at "a snail's pace" and sometimes not in a single direction.

During the complicated negotiations, Mitterrand made what his spokesman Michel Vauzelle called a "very strenuous intervention."

He said Mitterrand said during the session that if the tone did not improve, "We will be risking failure. If we don't reach agreement there will be great disappointment."

The 10 member states of the Common Market plus Spain and Portugal, which formally join Jan. 1, had hoped to amend the treaty to make the market more efficient and effective.

The list of proposed reforms include:

— Changing the voting system to provide for a greater number of majority votes instead of unanimous decisions. The present system, allowing each nation a veto, has often delayed or prevented decisions on important issues.

— Making the community a true common market by knocking down many remaining barriers to free trade and movement of people across Western Europe.

— Granting additional powers to the market's popularly elected Parliament, now largely an advisory body.

Sakharov's stepson accuses Soviets of misleading West

Bonner

ROME (AP) — The stepson of Soviet dissident Andrei Sakharov accused Soviet officials of trying to keep the world from learning that Sakharov was on a hunger strike in the closed city of Gorky by editing telegrams and releasing a misleading videotape.

Alexei Semyonov spoke to reporters Tuesday after being reunited with Yelena Bonner, his mother and Sakharov's wife. Mrs. Bonner, who arrived in Italy on Monday, is on her first visit to the West in six years seeking treatment for eye and heart ailments.

Semyonov, who lives in Newton, Mass., appeared at the news conference with Mrs. Bonner's son-in-law, Efrem Yankelevich.

The 62-year-old Mrs. Bonner, who suffers from glaucoma, was scheduled to visit an eye specialist in the central Italian hill town of Siena today.

Semyonov said the Sakharovs, who have been living in internal exile in the closed city of Gorky, 250 miles east of Moscow, tried to inform family and friends of the situation.

None of those cables reached the people they were intended for in their original form. On the contrary, each of these was changed or forged in such a way as to create an impression that everything was normal in Gorky," Semyonov said.

As an example, he cited a telegram his mother sent citing a line from a poem: "I have friends, thank God," in the hope the friend would know the preceding line, "The solitude is driving me from door to door" to show she was separated from her husband.

Instead, he said, the cable arrived at its destination reading "everything is all right, thank God."

He also challenged a videotape sent to a West German newspaper by "Soviet sources, presumably related to the KGB," that showed Sakharov, 64, eating in a hospital.

"We know this was not so. Indeed in June he was on hunger strike. The tapes, we can only presume, were the ones made a year before," he said.

The New York Times reported today that for 207 days of the past 18 months Sakharov has been force-fed with his nose clamped shut to make him open his mouth.

Killing pens

The statistic isn't too impressive unless the history of violence in Texas prisons is known, but the fact the Texas Department of Corrections hasn't experienced a homicide in the last two months is reason for optimism. Conditional optimism.

While the average person may willingly agree that prison is a literal house of violence, it's still appalling to realize 52 inmates have been killed by other prisoners during the last two years. That's more than one inmate a month and a definite black mark against the image of prison as an institution of rehabilitation and recovery for society's wayward souls.

There are probably few people who would deny that prison officials have a tough job reducing violence behind bars. After all, with more than 38,000 men and women in the prison system — and with a large degree of unavoidably idle time on their hands — it would be naive to imagine no crime occurring, no gangs being formed, no escapes being attempted. The public fully realizes — or should, at least — that inmates' good deeds and mild manners were not responsible for them being locked up.

But this is the age of enlightenment, isn't it? How can any society that considers itself just put 38,000 of its fellows behind bars and allow them to kill each other at the shocking rate of more than one every month for two years and still demand that some of these individuals be released back into society as the byproducts of rehabilitative programs? Can meaningful rehabilitation take place in such an environment?

Prison Director Lane McCotter's get-tough approach, which has included crackdowns on prison gangs and other assaultive inmates, obviously has had a dramatic effect on curbing prison violence. So have efforts to beef up guard details at previously understaffed prisons and the institution of more frequent searches for weapons.

These changes appear to be pointing the way to greater reduction of Texas prison violence and should be continued and expanded in the future.

Sure the changes undoubtedly will mean a larger prison system budget, but what does society want: Rampant violence in prisons with no hope of rehabilitation for those unfortunate enough to end up there or greater costs and also greater hopes for rehabilitation for all prisoners capable of being returned to society?

Prison has to be more than just killing pens for human animals.

Another View:
Covert meddling

Spies and secret agents, at least successful ones, are "covert." Presidents are not. That banal distinction is necessary now that President Reagan openly proposes yet another "secret" but undeniable American intervention, this time in Africa.

When asked the other day why Secretary of State Shultz opposed aiding anti-communist rebels in Angola, Reagan replied, "I'm glad you asked me that. He isn't ... We all believe that a covert operation would be more useful to us and have more chance of success right now than the covert proposal that has been made in the Congress."

What the president meant was that the administration opposed open intervention against the Marxist regime as counterproductive to its diplomacy. It seems to have concluded — and wisely so — that this would only cast the United States as the ally of South Africa's effort to exploit the Angola war to perpetuate its illegal occupation of Namibia. It also implies a recognition that no amount of American aid to the Angolan rebels could outweigh the aid the Soviet Union and Cuba can give for the defense of the regime.

But Reagan seems to want things both ways. Now that Congress has repealed the decade-old Clark Amendment barring covert operations in Angola, he thinks he can negotiate with Angola's government on one level while furtively aiding Jonas Savimbi's Unita insurgents on another. Calling such aid "covert" may temporarily avoid a full-scale congressional debate. But what can be covert — "concealed, secret, disguised" — about a policy proclaimed by the commander in chief?

The advantage in moving covertly is that a government can sometimes pretend it isn't doing what it is. The technique is much favored by the Soviet Union, which aids revolutionaries while maintaining formally correct relations with the governments it seeks to overthrow. It's a technique much envied by some Americans and has been emulated with often-disastrous results.

As France has rediscovered in New Zealand, open societies cannot long sustain a controversial or sizable covert operation. That America aids the rebels in Afghanistan has become common knowledge; calling the aid "covert" can no longer help Pakistan's denial of complicity in the arms flow. And not even an ally's sensitivity can be claimed for the CIA's widely discussed "covert" aid to the "contra" army attacking Nicaragua.

In the case of Angola, the untenable now becomes ludicrous. Having advertised his intentions, Reagan could never deny involvement, even if prudence prevails and he finally decides against it. The laudable objective of getting 30,000 Cuban troops out of Angola requires making the Luanda regime more secure, not less so. Occupying Namibia and attacking Angola to "save" both from Marxism is South Africa's way of using a Red scare to make the United States its ally in the defense of apartheid.

A president should be able to see through that overt ploy. And though he may envy the Kremlin's most deceitful successes, he should be able to calculate the cost of imitating them — at the expense of America's freedoms and reputation.

TODAY IN HISTORY

On this date:

In 1816, James Monroe of Virginia was elected the fifth president of the United States, defeating Federalist Rufus King.

In 1875, William Marcy Tweed, the "Boss" of New York City's Tammany Hall political organization, escaped from jail and fled the country.

In 1918, President Woodrow Wilson set sail for France to attend the Versailles Peace Conference. He thus became the first chief executive to travel outside the country while in office.

In 1942, President Franklin D. Roosevelt ordered the liquidation of the Works Progress Administration, which had been created in 1935 to provide work for the unemployed during the Depression.

In 1942, U.S. bombers struck the Italian mainland for the first time in World War II.

In 1945, the Senate approved U.S. participation in the United Nations.

In 1965, the United States launched Gemini 7 with Air Force Lt. Col. Frank Borman and Navy Cmdr. James A. Lovell aboard.

German terror group back from dead

WASHINGTON — The bomb blast last week in the parking lot of an American PX in Frankfurt provided further proof that West German terrorist groups, supposedly eradicated five years ago, are definitely alive and active.

Jack Anderson

The group believed to be responsible for the latest outrage had also set off a car bomb at the U.S. Air Force base outside Frankfurt last August. The terrorists call themselves the "Red Army Faction," and their resurgence, like some malignant phoenix, has been described in an internal Pentagon intelligence report as "a serious threat to U.S. military interests into the foreseeable future."

The report, a "special assessment," confirms observations made by our associate Lucette Lagnado on a recent trip to West Germany. The report concludes that the group has begun a "new phase" of operations, and warns that "attacks on U.S.-related targets by both the hard-core RAF (Red Army Faction) and its militant supporters can be expected" in coming months.

American service personnel and their dependents were way ahead of the Pentagon analysis. They've been expecting the worst ever since the Aug. 8 air-base bombing. In numerous conversations, servicemen and their wives expressed concern over their vulnerable situation in West Germany, and frustration at the inability of either the Army or West German authorities to deal effectively with the threat.

The Red Army Faction can be traced back to the 1960s and West Germany's radical leftist groups, particularly the Baader-Meinhof gang. By 1972, the first generation of the faction's leadership had been imprisoned and the rank-and-file apparently dispersed.

Five years later, though, a new generation emerged, went into action and was beaten down by West German police. There was another comeback in 1980, and another defeat. The West German authorities then announced that the Red Army Faction was extinct.

Now it's back again, possibly stronger than ever, and certainly just as virulent in its hatred of West Germany's ties to the United States. The first eruption was the Aug. 8 bombing in the parking lot of the U.S. airlift wing at Rhein-Main Air Base.

"The bomb was timed to go off during a period when there were likely to be a large number of people in the parking lot," the Pentagon report noted. One American GI and a military wife were killed; 20 others were wounded. The car, driven onto the base in the morning rush hour, when security checks were perfunctory, was purchased at the same dealership as the car that carried last week's bomb into the PX parking lot.

"The Marxist-Leninist oriented Red Army Faction has proved, over the past 15 years, to be both a dangerous and persistent opponent of the social order in Western Europe," the Pentagon report stated, adding ominously: "There is no end in sight for this continuing cycle of violence."

The group's members are "veteran terrorists," the report warns, adding that "the current crop of hard-core leaders is at least the fifth group to control the gang." The group is "fiercely opposed to the current political situation in West Germany ... (and is) stridently anti-American," the report says.

Noting that "the demise of the Red Army Faction has been trumpeted several times by West German authorities," the Pentagon analysis concludes that the most alarming feature of the terrorist group is "its ability to absorb debilitating punishment from the security forces, regenerate its strength and emerge once again as a serious security threat."

CONSUMER REPORT: Is the government about to lower the maximum it will insure in an individual bank account? Probably not, because of political considerations, but some officials of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. would dearly love to lower the present $100,000 limit to at least $75,000. They reason that without the federal guarantee, big depositors might be a little more careful about what banks they put their money in. The agency has found that wealthy depositors now tend to put their money in badly managed banks most likely to collapse, because they offer higher interest rates to attract depositors.

MILKING THE TAXPAYERS: Federal dairy subsidies continue to climb. In 1979, a mere $247 million was spent paying dairy farmers to produce less, preventing an oversupply that would cause prices to tumble. Today, the program's cost tops $2 billion a year. What's really outrageous is that huge sums go to purported dairy farmers for not producing milk in the Sun Belt, where dairy farming is obviously not significant. Arizona is No. 1 among all the states in average per farmer payments, at $226,978, followed by Florida ($216,590), Nevada ($215,262), California ($125,044) and New Mexico ($110,919).

JAMES RESTON

Reagan's thoughts on his place in history

WASHINGTON — Sometimes you can tell how the political winds are blowing around here, not by reading the front pages but by watching the book notes.

James Reston

President Reagan chose his official biographer the other day. And Vice President Bush and Rep. Jack Kemp, among others, have already published their stories and political ideas well in time for the next presidential election.

So it's clear that we've already come to a fork in the road between the past and the future. Reagan still has three more years to go, but is beginning to think about his place in history: what he has done and what he'll leave behind. And the leaders of both major political parties are wondering what to do after he's gone.

The Democrats met the other day at Disney World in Florida, of all places, to try to puzzle this out, and came away in dizzy confusion about whether or not to attack Reagan in the congressional elections of 1986 for control of the Senate, and how to plan for the presidential election of 1988. They couldn't get their history straight. And no wonder.

Who will write the history of the Reagan Era, with all its tests and turns on domestic and foreign policy, its triumphs and disasters of economic and social policy? This we would like to know.

But what we do know on the side is that, unlike the men who have preceded him in the White House in this century, Reagan has at least chosen a serious historian in Edmund Morris, the author of "The Rise of Theodore Roosevelt," and has promised to give him access to the records of the last five years, permit him to attend Cabinet meetings in the next three years, and answer his questions.

Maybe we won't know the answers until the president has finished his second term, but his choice tells us something about Ronald Reagan.

In his first four years in the White House, he worked against his ideology on domestic and foreign affairs. He did not produce a counterrevolution against the welfare state but merely a correction to it.

Nor did he carry on for long his crusade against the Soviet "evil empire," but compromised in the Congress and at Geneva. The NATO allies had a lot to do to change his mind.

For they argued that ideology was failing all over the world — communism in the Soviet Union, socialism in Western Europe, capitalism in America — everything was changing in the first world economy. And everybody had to adjust to the new realities.

The Reagan of his first four years has been adjusting to the facts of his second — to his alarming budget deficits at home and to his spectacular trade deficits abroad, and to the cost of the arms race.

He has been compromising with the Congress on the budget, not much but some; he talked quietly to Mikhail Gorbachev in Geneva on human rights, in the belief that more dissidents could be liberated by quiet diplomacy than by loud propaganda.

Nothing was settled but everything was discussed, and there was at least agreement at the summit that they should talk again, in Washington next year and in Moscow the year after.

The main point, or so it seems in this corner, is that something important may be happening: that instead of arguing about the past, people are beginning to talk about the future — not only on Capitol Hill but between the White House and the Kremlin.

One of the important things about the Reagan-Gorbachev meeting in Geneva was not only that they agreed that a nuclear war "cannot be won and must never be fought," but that they had to keep in touch not only next year and the next, but all the time on wars elsewhere in the world. And they agreed that the spread of nuclear weapons to other nations and even to terrorists must be controlled.

In short, the hopeful thing is that maybe there is a realization both here and in Moscow that officials should be thinking about what they have in common instead of what has divided them since the end of the last world war and beginning of the nuclear age.

Reagan, in choosing a biographer must be thinking about what he will leave behind after his spectacular political successes. He has three more years to go, and the guess here is that like most presidents, and particularly like most actors, he wants a happy ending in the last act.

This kind of thinking drives his conservative supporters up the wall. For the first time, Reagan is beginning to think of history, not heretofore his favorite subject, and probably he hasn't chosen Professor Morris to write that he failed to balance the budget and produce a reasonable balance of military power in the world.

ART BUCHWALD

Tongas cheap — with a little 'extra' cash!

The old 1970 Super Tonga gave out on me the other day. It just gasped once and then died on Canal Road. Several impatient drivers helped me push it into the Potomac River.

Art Buchwald

I went down to Long John Silver's, "The Largest Dealer of Super Tongas on the East Coast — One Price for Everyone," to replace my loss. I was surprised to discover the sticker price on the window of a new Tonga was the same as what I had paid 16 years ago.

If there is one thing I know it's how to talk to car dealers, so when Long John asked me for $5,900 for a showroom Tonga I stared him down.

"I'll give you $4,900."

"I see I've met my match," Long John said. "That will teach me to try and fool someone who lives in Northwest Washington. We have a deal."

"Can I drive it right off the floor?"

"Of course you can. Let's go into this office and I'll write it up."

I walked into the cubbyhole where Long John started to tap numbers into a computer.

"Do you want my check?" I asked.

"In a moment...." Tap, tap.

"That will be $4,900 for the car and an extra $1,500 for the windshield wipers."

"Suppose I don't want windshield wipers?"

"You have no choice since they come with the car, just like the wheel lip moldings which I also have to charge you for."

"How much?"

"Two thousand dollars. That's exactly what they cost me."

"I don't like wheel lip moldings."

"No one does. Here's one you won't object to – the installation of rubber floor mats. You get one free and the other one for $1,600."

"Forget the mats."

"Federal safety regulations require all Tongas to be equipped with rubber floor mats," he said.

"What else do I have to pay for?"

"Four tire rims to keep stones from bursting the gas tank. The cost to you is $999 per wheel. Then there is the rustproof undercoating for $2,250, the front and sideview mirrors for $500, and the windshield for $2,500."

"Is that it?"

"Those are the major items, except for dealer car care, $2,500, and the dealer markup which is $2,000."

"Why the dealer markup?"

Long John said, "That's to make up for the discount I gave you at the beginning."

"This is much more than I intended to spend."

"I assure you you won't be sorry. Once you own a 1986 Tonga you will never have to worry again. The Tonga has a five-year warranty and a 50,000-mile guarantee. Its repair rate is the lowest in the industry. The minute you walked in I said, 'Here comes a Tonga man. He and this car were made for each other.'"

"As long as you put it that way, I guess I'll take it."

"Did you want to purchase a $2,500 service contract?"

"You just told me it has a five-year warranty. Why do I need a service contract?"

"If you have a gasket or seal go on you it will wreck the engine, and your regular warranty will leave you high and dry. I wish I'd had a service contract on the last three Tongas I owned."

"You're very persuasive, but the extras are killing me."

"Don't give up on me, man, just after I stuck my neck out to get you a thousand dollars off on this car."

Liberation theology hot topic at synod

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Latin American bishops gathered at the Vatican are pressing sharply divergent views of liberation theology, with liberals saying it is indispensable to the Roman Catholic Church and conservatives arguing it has had some "very sad" results.

Participants in a synod convened to assess the work of the Second Vatican Council say one reason for the differing opinions is the failure to agree on a precise meaning of liberation theology, whose roots date back to South America in the 1960s.

It has become a loosely used term describing highly theoretical studies, clerics' left-wing politics, and even the activities of gun-toting priests.

Proponents often use the Gospel to justify political action on behalf of the poor. But some use the Marxist idea of class struggle in assessing social problems — a practice repeatedly condemned by Pope John Paul II and the Vatican.

The Vatican Tuesday said a group of Latin American cardinals at the synod had signed a statement applauding the Vatican's criticism of the Marxist elements in liberation theology. It provided no details.

Some priests inspired by the principles of liberation theology have been helping to organize fishermen in southern India, while others are using the principles as a basis for opposing apartheid in South Africa.

"When I see a church with a machine gun, I cannot see the crucified Christ in that church," a leader of the conservative wing of the church in Latin America told a news conference last week.

The prelate, Colombian Bishop Dario Castrillon Hoyos, secretary-general of the Latin American bishops conference, said some lines of liberation theology "have generated some very sorrowful and very sad fruit for the people and for the church."

"We can never use hate as a system of change," he added. "The core of being a church is love."

On the other hand, liberal bishops have told the synod that liberation theology is among the positive results of the 1962-65 Second Vatican Council.

"It represents not the product of a few isolated and more audacious theologians, but the fruit of the totality of the Latin American church's life," Bishop Jose Ivo Lorscheiter, president of the Brazilian bishops conference, told the synod.

The synod, a two-week assembly of bishops, was convened by the pope to assess the state of the church since the end of the council 20 years ago.

Liberation theology has taken firm hold in Brazil, one of the most populous Catholic countries. Church officials there say about 4 million advocates of liberation theology belong to some 70,000 groups.

Lorscheiter said liberation theology is "indispensable to the church's activity and to the social commitment of Christians, even if it carries with it risks such as those recently indicated" by the Vatican.

Delegate-observers praise work of synod

Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

VATICAN CITY — In the first official statement ever made by non-Catholics at a Roman Catholic synod, 10 delegate-observers Tuesday praised the work of the worldwide assembly and said that interfaith talks are essential to bridge church divisions.

"The synod has made it very clear that ecumenism is an essential part of the way forward, and it does not involve a betrayal of divine truth and faith," said a five-page statement issued by the observers, who represent religious bodies in theological dialogue with the Catholic church.

While not glossing over the doctrinal differences that remain between Catholicism and other branches of Christianity, the observers noted that "some questions which were once divisive have come in time to be seen in a different perspective — not now as church-dividing."

Father Diamuid Martin, a spokesman for the Extraordinary Synod of Bishops, said that when the non-Catholic observers' statement was read, "it was the only one so far to be greeted with universal applause" from the 165 cardinals and archbishops attending the two-week gathering.

The synod was called by Pope John Paul II to celebrate the 20th anniversary of the Second Vatican Council, a series of sessions from 1962 to 1965 that inaugurated modernization at every level of the church. Cordial relations and discussions with other religions were an important outgrowth of the council.

This is the first time, however, that official observers from other faiths have been invited to any of the eight synods held since Vatican II. Another innovation at this synod, which ends Sunday, is an ecumenical worship service in which the interfaith observers will participate.

"Observers are not detached spectators," said the statement, read by Prof. Henry Chadwick, an Anglican clergyman who is a member of the Second International Anglican-Catholic Commission. "We are deeply engaged in your discussions."

Other religious traditions represented by the observers include Greek Orthodox, Coptic, Lutheran, Methodist, Disciples of Christ, Baptist, Pentecostal and Reformed, as well as a spokesman for an ecumenical agency.

"We have been reminded how much of fundamental importance we have in common," the observers said. "We admire the fearless courage with which the synod looks into the future, especially in the places where Christians are few, poor or persecuted. Listening to persons who have spoken from places like this, we have heard echoes of our own situation, too."

Runcie: Church of England not full of Marxists

LONDON (AP) — The archbishop of Canterbury expressed amazement Tuesday that some Conservative Party politicians think the Church of England is full of Marxists because of a report it issued on poverty in English cities.

The 400-page report blames the tight-money policies of Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher's Conservative government for the decay of urban housing, social deprivation and record unemployment of 13.5 percent, also stressing that similar problems existed in the 19th century.

Archbishop Robert Runcie, spiritual leader of the state church and of the world's 70 million Anglicans, commissioned the study by a commission of 18 bishops, clergy and lay advisers after riots in 30 English cities in 1981.

"I'm surprised by the violence of the criticism," Runcie said after official publication of the report "Faith in the City," some details of which were leaked over the weekend.

On a more hopeful tone, he added: "There's a sense of overkill in some of these attacks that can make people think they ought to read the report."

"As for the charge that we are Marxists, that is so fantastic as to make people wonder why the critics are trying to hit quite so hard," the archbishop told a news conference. "None of the commission are Marxists and everybody knows, I hope, that an archbishop chooses a commission which enables him to do his work better as a Christian leader."

Runcie, chosen as archbishop by Mrs. Thatcher, said it was wrong to call the report an attack on her policies. He said people must recognize the magnitude of the social and economic deprivation that has overtaken some parts of England in the last decade.

Government ministers and lawmakers denounced the proposals for more state spending to clear slums, create jobs and boost welfare as "Marxist theology" and meddling.

Scottish lawmaker Nicholas Fairbairn, referring to internal church disputes over biblical accounts of miracles and Christ's resurrection, said the commission members "do not understand the kingdom of God" and so could not be expected to understand the kingdom of England.

County forecasts

Midland, Ector, Glasscock, Upton, Reagan, Crane, Gaines, Andrews, Dawson, Borden, Martin and Howard: Tonight: partly cloudy with low in the mid 30s. Wind northeast 5 to 15 mph. Thursday: fair. High in the upper 50s. Wind east 5 to 15 mph.

Sterling, Coke, Irion and Tom Green counties: Tonight: partly cloudy. Low near 40. Wind northeast 5 to 15 mph.

WEATHER

A Pacific cold front moved into far West Texas. Skies were clear over the High Plains and Trans Pecos while the return of Gulf moisture produced mostly cloudy skies over the rest of the state.

Winds were southerly across most of North and West Texas at 5 to 15 mph, while north to northwest winds were the rule across much of the south.

Low temperatures were in the 50s over parts of South Central and South-East Texas and lower Rio Grande valley. Readings in the 30s and 40s were common across the rest of the state.

Extremes were 30 degrees at Marfa in the Davis Mountains and 56 degrees at McAllen in the lower valley.

Widely scattered showers were expected mainly over Southeast Texas. It should be generally fair in the west with decreasing cloudiness over the rest of the state through Thursday.

Highs were expected in the 50s and 60s except in the 70s over the Big Bend and extreme South Texas.

NATION

Light snow dotted the West and Midwest today and fair skies prevailed over the lower half of the nation while the East had below-normal temperatures.

Snowshowers were accompanied by gusty winds in northern Colorado and southeast Wyoming. Cheyenne, Wyo., had wind gusts of more than 50 mph and Boulder, Colo., had gusts of up to 60 mph.

Light snow, freezing rain and rain spread across western South Dakota and Nebraska while light snow ranged across much of Minnesota, Wisconsin and northern Michigan.

Rain was scattered across western Washington and northwest Oregon while gale warnings were posted for the Washington Coast.

Much of the southern half of the nation had fair skies although clouds covered sections of the southern Plains and lower Mississippi Valley.

Temperatures were slightly below normal over much of the eastern half of the nation.

Early-morning temperatures were mostly in the teens to 20s across the Northeast and freezing temperatures reached as far south as northern sections of Mississippi, Alabama, Georgia and South Carolina.

Today's forecast called for rain showers scattered over much of the lower Mississippi Valley and south Florida, snowshowers over the upper Great Lakes region, light rain and snow mixed over parts of the Ohio and mid-Mississippi valleys, rain spreading inland along the central and northern Pacific Coast changing to snow at higher elevations, and mostly sunny skies over the central and southern Rockies.

Bulldogs defeat Seminole, 88-74

By BOB BRUNDAGE
Sports Writer

Midland High postman Anthony Deande was slow finding his touch, going 2-for-5 in the first quarter, but when he did, it was points on the board for the Bulldogs and eventually an 88-74 victory over Seminole Tuesday at Chaparral Center.

Deande found his range at the end of the first quarter — a range that seemed to have few limitations — when he hit a 20-footer that pulled the Bulldogs within two of the Indians at the break, 18-16.

At the start of the second quarter, Deande scored four of Midland's first five baskets from 20-foot land and his first three shots kept tying the game, at 18, 20 and 22.

Seminole countered with David Williams working free underneath the bucket and Randy Jones hitting from outside to put the Indians on top 29-26 with 4:14 left to play in the frame.

But, Deande wasn't through yet, adding another long bomb to cut the lead to one and, after Jones made it 30-28 with a free throw, Elvin Mackey got into the act with a pair of close-in buckets.

Mackey's first shot tied the game for the final time, 30-30, and his second gave the Dogs a lead they would never relinquish. Midland High ran on to a 40-32 lead at the half, led 68-51 after three and only gave back three points in the final frame.

In all, Deande's hot hand was good for 28 points from 11 of 16 field goals and perfection at the line in four tries. Sears led the Bulldogs in scoring with 28 points, but his percentage was off, hitting 11 of 27 from the field and six of six from the line. Mackey also broke into double figures with 11 points.

For the Indians, Williams led all shooters with 32 points and also had a respectable percentage, hitting 12 of 18 two-pointers and 8-of-10 free throws. Jones added 20 points and Kirby Brooks another 16.

Offensively, the big difference between Seminole and Midland High came from depth. While two other Indians combined for six points, the Bulldogs had seven players contribute to the scoreboard.

THROUGHOUT the night, the referees' whistles were playing a constant medley as the two zebras called 58 fouls, including two technicals. MHS coach Jack Stephenson was hit with the first T in the second quarter and Seminole coach Scott Byerly the T in the third.

In all, five players finished the game on the bench with five personals. Bulldog Ben Grimes, who scored eight points and was also perfect from the line in six tries, was the first to sit when he picked up his fifth with 6:46 left to play.

Mackey, Damon Thorpe and Seminole's John Johnson were each sent to the bench during a 38-second with more than half of the quarter left to play. Jones was the final player to be ousted, picking up his fifth personal with 1:05 to go.

The Bulldogs improved to 8-0 with the victory and have a week before their next game. On Tuesday, they'll place their perfect record on the line against Snyder in Snyder at 6:15 and 8 p.m.

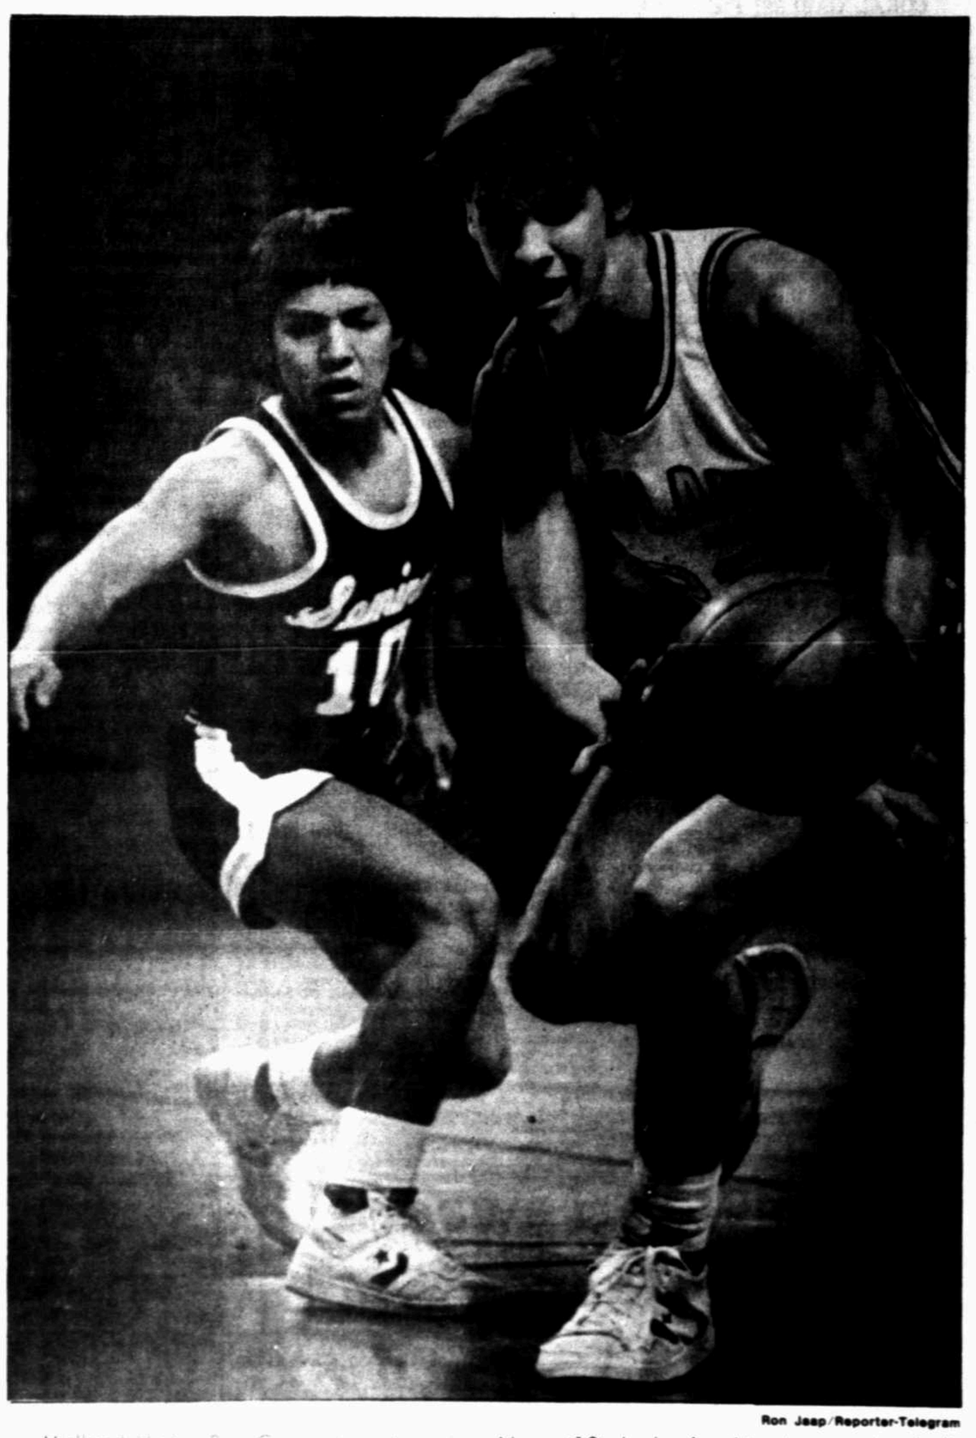

In junior varsity action, Midland High came up with a 29-point effort from Michael Ball and Clyde Gowan added 11 enroute to a 65-57 victory.

KC's Brett, alas, lands elusive Golden Glove award

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Third baseman George Brett of the world champion Kansas Royals, capturing the one major award that had eluded him during his 12-year big league career, Tuesday was named one of four first-time selections to the American League Gold Glove Team.

Third baseman Tim Wallach of the Montreal Expos and pitcher Rick Reuschel of the Pittsburgh Pirates were first-time winners of the Gold Glove Award in the National League.

Brett, 32, won the Gold Glove that has been claimed for the previous six years by Buddy Bell, who was traded in the middle of the 1985 season from Texas to the Cincinnati Reds in the NL.

Winning big one for the Flipper

By DAVE ANDERSON
New York Times News Service

MIAMI — He needed to win a big one. Not to prove that he could, but to remind everybody that he did.

Don Shula's stature as the National Football League's most respected current coach is secure. But he hasn't had a Super Bowl champion since his Miami Dolphins won their second consecutive title nearly 12 years ago. When the Dolphins went to the Super Bowl twice in recent years, they lost, including the embarrassing 38-16 rout by the San Francisco 49ers early this year.

"The hype around this last Super Bowl was bigger than ever," Shula was saying, "but we disappointed that day."

And if the Chicago Bears were to go undefeated through Super Bowl XX next month with a 19-0 record, the 1972 Dolphins treasured 17-0 record would be reduced to an afterthought.

"I don't know when we've had a bigger regular season game," Shula added, "as far as people being excited."

BUT BEFORE and after the Dolphins' stunning 38-24 victory Monday night, nobody was more excited than their coach.

"In the locker room before the game," Shula said, "I told our players, 'The important thing is what happens here and now, but there's a lot of Dolphin history on the line, things that are important to the coaching staff and to the organization. I would never ask them to win one for the Gipper, but I wanted them to know what was at stake.'

And so this Dolphin team went out and won one for the Flipper — the name of the real dolphin that splashed in a tank at one end of the Orange Bowl during the franchise's early years.

Two old Dolphins from both the Flipper years and the 17-0 team, Larry Csonka and Bob Kuechenberg, visited Shula before Monday night's game and then stood on the sideline along with Jim Kiick, another former teammate.

"That was something," Shula was saying, "seeing Kuech worried and having Zonk hitting you on the shoulder."

As the game wound down, Csonka remembered how "it wasn't so bad" when last year's Dolphin team opened with an 11-0 record.

"But when I was a little kid," he added, "I didn't want to share my favorite toy even with my own brother."

After their triumph Monday night, the Dolphins also touched another member of that 1972 team — Nick Buoniconti, the middle linebacker of the No-Name Defense, whose son Marc is hospitalized. Marc, who played high school football with Michael Shula (the Alabama quarterback who is Don Shula's son), recently was paralyzed while playing football at the Citadel.

"We're sending Marc a game ball," Shula said. "We wanted him and his family to know we're thinking of him and that we remember what his father meant to this organization."

IN MUZZLING the Bears' defense, Dan Marino completed 14 of 27 passes for 270 yards and three touchdowns against coverages that finally showed the cracks that Buddy Ryan, the Bears' defensive coordinator, had feared.

"I'm scared of this game," Ryan said Monday morning. "Their strengths are our weaknesses."

Ryan meant the strengths of the Dolphins' wide receivers (Mark Duper, Mark Clayton and Nat Moore) in operating against the weaknesses of the Bears' cornerbacks (Mike Richardson and Leslie Frazier) who would be covering them. Throughout the Bears' 12-0 record, their pass rush was so devastating, opposing quarterbacks never had time to exploit their cornerbacks as the Dolphins did.

"Anytime you let Marino get outside," said Mike Singletary, the Bears' middle linebacker, "I don't care who his receivers are, they're going to have time to get open. And that's what happened."

Marino rolled out by design rather than by desperation, as Shula had planned. He wanted to keep the Bear pass-rushers guessing not only as to what Marino would do next, but where he would be doing it.

"Dan has such great vision," Shula said, "and with his arm, boom, it happens like that."

Shula began talking about the skill involved when a quarterback drops back, searches for a receiver and then completes a pass.

"It's the toughest job in all of sports, and Dan Marino makes it look easy," Shula said.

But if the Dolphins were to oppose the Bears again in Super Bowl XX, their defensive strategy would be different if the more daring Jim McMahon were to start at quarterback instead of suddenly appearing like he did in the final quarter Monday night when the more conservative Steve Fuller hobbled off on a damaged ankle. After having missed three games because of a sore shoulder, McMahon completed three of six passes for 42 yards with two sacks.

"With McMahon and Fuller," Shula said, "their personalities enter into what they do."

To qualify for Super Bowl XX, the Dolphins must emerge again as the champion of the American Conference that has five teams with 9-4 records — the Dolphins, Jets and Patriots in the East, the Raiders and the Broncos (who play Sunday in Denver) in the West. With the Central Division winner, no matter what its record, assured of one of the five playoff berths, one of the current 9-4 teams won't qualify. But when Shula was asked if the Dolphins appeared to be peaking at the right time, he smiled.

Ball takes right bounce for forgotten Testaverde

By MALCOLM MORAN
New York Times News Service

CORAL GABLES, Fla. — Vinny Testaverde was watching Joe Montana talk on television the other day. The subject was the odd shape of a football, and the unpredictable directions it can take. "He said the ball is shaped kind of funny," Testaverde said. "Sometimes it bounces to you and sometimes it bounces away."

As much as any college player in the nation, Testaverde understands that in football more than any other sport, one's fortunes can be as unpredictable as those bounces. In his fourth year at the University of Miami — his third season of eligibility, with one to go — he has at last had the opportunity to extend the line of successful Hurricane quarterbacks.

Testaverde will lead the Hurricanes into the Sugar Bowl game against Tennessee on New Year's night with the conviction that a victory could allow his team to emerge with the top-ranking in the news-agency polls. He has passed for 3,238 yards this season, including 356 in the 58-7 victory over Notre Dame last Saturday. The Heisman campaign, which now apparently requires a season of national exposure as preparation before the serious candidacy begins, has been a success.

THE PRIMARY results have been convincing. In his first season with any significant playing time, Testaverde is 404 yards and four touchdown passes from the school records Bernie Kosar set last year. He has thrown for 295 yards or more in four of the last five games. He passed for 298 yards in the victory over Maryland at Baltimore. He threw for 339 yards and four touchdowns in the come-from-behind victory at Florida State. In the victory over Oklahoma, at Norman, Testaverde had 17 completions in 28 attempts for 270 yards and 2 touchdowns.

And to think that a year ago this month, Testaverde was beginning to wonder if it was time to leave. Of course, Kosar was thinking the same thing. The two quarterbacks were thinking similar thoughts at the same time, but their circumstances were not similar at all.

Testaverde had not heard about Kosar when the two were being recruited early in 1982. Testaverde had gone from Elmont, N.Y., and Sewanhaka High School to Fork Union Military Academy in Virginia to improve his grades. He scheduled visits to Miami, Syracuse and North Carolina, but after one trip here he canceled the other trips. "They said they were recruiting another quarterback," Testaverde remembered, "but I felt I was as good as anybody. I didn't care who they recruited. I took my chances."

And quickly, his chances began to look very good. Before the start of the 1983 season, the second season Testaverde and Kosar spent here, the two were considered equals for the starting position. About a week before the season, the teams' three quarterbacks — Testaverde, Kosar and Kyle Vanderwende — were called to the office of Coach Howard Schnellenberger. Testaverde remembered having a good feeling about his chances when he entered the room.

"I thought my practices went well," he said. "I thought I had a fair chance of starting as each of the others."

THEN CAME the news.

"He told us he was going to go with Bernie for the first game, see what happens and take it from there," Testaverde said. "As soon as he said it, it was kind of cold and lonely for a minute."

The first game was a 28-3 loss to Florida. Eventually, the nation saw what happened. Kosar, who had sat out his first season, completed his first season of eligibility by throwing for 300 yards in the spine-tingling Orange Bowl victory over Nebraska that gave the Hurricanes their number one ranking.

Testaverde was on the sideline that night, in uniform. All at once, he was in the middle of a lifetime memory, and not a part at all. The decision had been made, when Kosar won the starting job, to hold Testaverde out of the 1983 season to save the year of eligibility. He could do and see everything his teammates could — except cross the sideline. As the delirium built in Miami that year, Testaverde felt a wider range of emotions. "I was angry and mad and sad and all those things," he said.

A year ago this month, Testaverde's career college statistics were 22 completions in 46 attempts. He had two more years of eligibility, but so did Kosar. Finally, Testaverde thought about looking elsewhere.

But when he returned from the holiday vacation, Testaverde learned there was a chance that Kosar might leave. If Kosar could earn his diploma within three years, he could make use of a degree in finance and economics with National Football League dollars.

Which is just what happened. Kosar received his wish — the opportunity to live in Cleveland after the NFL held a supplementary draft. Testaverde has nearly equaled Kosar's finest college season, and has another year to go. After many, many bounces, Testaverde has no plans to stand on a sideline on New Year's night.

McCamey finds foe, win in cage opener

From Staff Reports

IRAAN — Up until noon Tuesday, McCamey didn't have a game to play. Rankin was forced out of the game by the eight-hour rule and it looked like the Badgers were going to have to put their season-opener on hold.

But, Sanderson was also looking for an opponent and the two teams got together here Tuesday and the result was a 45-36 victory for McCamey.

The Badgers took a first quarter 6-4 lead and increased it by two at the half, 20-16, and to 36-28 after three. The Badgers outscored the Eagles 9-8 in the final frame to insure the victory.

For McCamey, Vivian Garza and Adam Arana led the scoring with 17 and 13 points respectively while Brent Schlinke led Sanderson with 12 followed by Ray Sias at 10.

"Our kids moved well for the first ball game," said coach Spencer Dunlap. "This being the first game, we've got to do a better job defensively and blocking off, the main two points. But, we shot the ball pretty well."

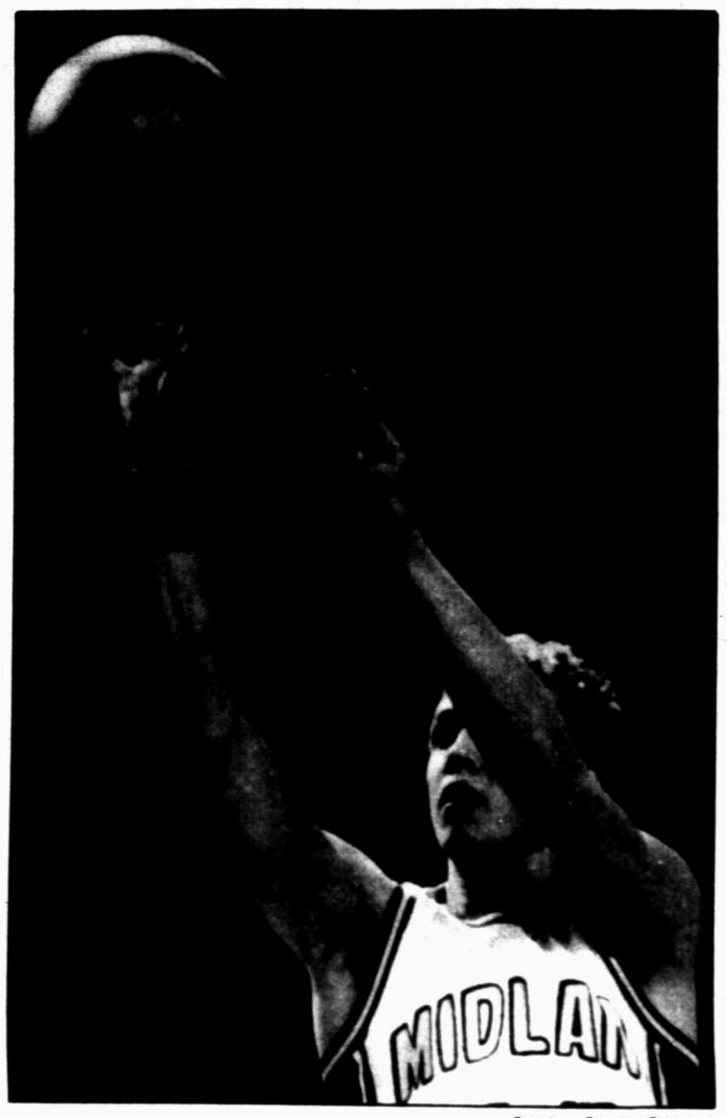

While the Badgers are perfect at 1-0, the loss drops Sanderson to 1-2 on the year.

Michigan moves into second spot

Associated Press

The first tipoff that Michigan might be moving up in The Associated Press college basketball poll came in the Tip-Off Classic, when the Wolverines knocked off second-ranked Georgia Tech.

On Tuesday, a nationwide panel of sports writers and broadcasters made it official, giving Michigan 12 first-place votes and 1,165 points — not enough to seriously threaten North Carolina's hold on first place but enough to move the 4-0 Wolverines up from third to second.

In fact, the Stumbling Wrecks from Georgia Tech, who sat atop the preseason poll and slipped to second a week ago, are fifth this week following Saturday's nationally televised 49-44 loss to Michigan in Springfield, Mass., that put their record at 2-1.

North Carolina, 5-0 and the winner of the Great Alaska Shootout last weekend, received 45 of a possible 63 first-place votes and 1,239 points.

Duke also rode a tournament triumph northward in the rankings, receiving four first-place votes and 1,112 points to jump from sixth to third.

The Blue Devils won the inaugural Big Apple National Invitation Tournament last weekend in New York, defeating then-fifth-ranked Kansas 92-86 for the title. And on Monday night, Duke, playing its second game in less than 24 hours and third in four days, routed East Carolina 98-66 to run its record to 6-0. "Quite frankly it was a long night," Coach Mike Krzyzewski said. "We didn't get back here until five in the morning."

Syracuse, 3-0, remained fourth in the poll with 1,054 points, followed by Georgia Tech with 910. Georgetown, unbeaten in its first two games, received one first-place vote and 908 points for sixth, up two spots from a week ago. Kansas, 3-1, fell to seventh with 830 points.

Oklahoma, 5-0, made a big jump from 12th to eighth place with 753 points. Kentucky and Notre Dame each moved up one notch — Kentucky, 3-0, to ninth with 693 points and Notre Dame, 2-0, to 10th with 636 points and the remaining first place vote.

This week's Second Ten starts with Louisiana State, 5-0, with 585 points followed by Illinois, Memphis State, Nevada-Las Vegas, St. John's, Louisville, Alabama-Birmingham, Iowa and, in a tie for 19th, Auburn and Indiana. Louisville remained in the Top Twenty — albeit down from ninth to 16th — despite losing to Kansas and St. John's in the Big Apple NIT.

Greenwood sweeps; Reagan bows, 55-41

Ozona (Fierro 17, Sanchez 12) defeated Reagan County (Bitner 12, Martin 11), 55-41, to boost its basketball record to 4-0. The Owls slipped to 1-2. In girls action, Reagan (Gooch 24, Everett 20) ran by Ozona, 77-33.

Greenwood (Groeschel 17, Lawson 14, Longley 10) upped its record to 2-1 with a 47-35 win over Coahoma (Calaway 8, Arguello 8). Coahoma is now 1-2.

Greenwood's girls (Smith 15, Martin 8) also went to 2-1 for the season with a 45-28 win over Coahoma (Fowler 10).

Irion County (Childress 17) took the measure of Garden City girls (Holdamph 14, Hunter 19) 47-44, in overtime.

Forst Stockton (Mesa 16, Bernal 11) won over Alpine, 89-78.

Indiana, St. John's, Arkansas win

NEW YORK (AP) — Junior forward Walter Berry scored 25 points and pulled down a career-high 20 rebounds Tuesday night as 15th-ranked St. John's easily defeated Wagner 85-55.

Berry had 15 points and 13 rebounds in the second half as the Redmen pulled away from 37-24 lead at intermission. St. John's, 4-1, substituted liberally in the second half and maintained at least a 25-point lead through the last 10 minutes of play. The final margin was St. John's biggest.

Junior guard Terrance Bailey led Wagner, 1-1, with 20 points, including the 1,000th of his career on a basket with 3:27 to play. Kevin House had 17 for the Seahawks.

Kentucky 84, Cincinnati 54

LEXINGTON, Ky. — Forward Kenny Walker scored 26 points, including 10 in a 19-2 first-half spurt and nine in a 21-2 second-half run, to power ninth-ranked Kentucky.

Kentucky improved its record to 4-0 while Cincinnati slipped to 1-2.

Pan Am 69, NTSU 68

EDINBURG — Tom Fiepke hit two free throws with 55 seconds remaining Tuesday night to rally Pan American University past North Texas.

Fiepke's 18 points topped Pan American as the Broncs raised their record to 2-1. Substiute Paul Meyer led North Texas State with 16 points as the Mean Green fell to 1-2.

Indiana 82, Notre Dame 67

BLOOMINGTON, Ind. — Unlike a year ago, when Notre Dame's pressing defense wiped out an Indiana lead, the Hoosiers' new-found aggressiveness withstood repeated Irish rallies.

"Last year, they went on a 29-8 spurt when they put on the press," said Steve Alford, recalling Indiana's 74-63 loss at South Bend. "From then on, we never came back."

Alford, a junior guard, matched his career high with 32 points Tuesday night, including 16 during a 22-8 spurt that carried 19th-ranked Indiana over the No. 10 Irish.

Houston Baptist 86, Lutheran 62

HOUSTON — Junior Guard Fred Goporo, with 22 points, paced four Huskies in double figures as Houston Baptist University ran past Texas Lutheran College.

Texas Lutheran, which is 1-5, was led by Benny Russell with 22 points and Gary Spray with 12. The Huskies, who are 3-2, have won 30 of their last 31 games at home.

UTEP 68, New Mexico St. 59

EL PASO — Dave Feitl scored 21 points and pulled down 15 rebounds to lead Texas-El Paso.

Quintan Gates added 14 points and had 9 rebounds as the Miners improved their record to 3-1. The Aggies dropped to 2-1. A near-capacity crowd of 11,523 at the Special Events Center saw the Miners outscore the Aggies 12-3 within a 3½-minute span late in the first half en route to a 36-29 halftime lead.

Arkansas 76, San Diego State 64

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. — Arkansas Coach Nolan Richardson says his Razorbacks are still struggling, but he found some bright spots in a victory over San Diego State.

Among them was the play of William Mills, who settled down after seven turnovers in the first half. Mike Carpenter's relief of 6-foot-11 Andrew Lang, some big plays by 5-foot-10 Scott Rose and the Razorbacks' composure down the stretch.

A&I, ASU head all-LSC

ABILENE (AP) — Eight unanimous choices, including four each from league champion Texas A&I and co-runnerup Angelo State, lead the coaches' 1985 all-Lone Star Conference football team.

Unanimous selections from Texas A&I on the first team offense were center Charles Smith, guard Richard Zepeda and record-setting placekicker Walter Rule.

Angelo State's four unanimous picks were running back Wesley Williams, punter Pete Hibler, defensive lineman Pierce Holt and linebacker Henry Jackson.

Ron Harms of Texas A&I was named LSC Coach of the Year, quarterback Ned Cox of Angelo State was LSC Back of the Year, Jackson was LSC Lineman of the Year, and running back Heath Sherman of Texas A&I was a unanimous choice as LSC Freshman of the Year.

Harms coached the Javelinas to an 8-3 season and 20th in the final NCAA Division II national poll. A&I went through the LSC season undefeated at 5-0.

The 27-member first team included nine players from Angelo State, seven from Texas A&I, six from league newcomer Eastern New Mexico and five from East Texas State.

Lack of injuries key to success

By DENNE H. FREEMAN

IRVING (AP) — Dallas Coach Tom Landry said on Tuesday that the Cowboys' ability to remain injury-free has been a primary reason for their leadership in the National Conference Eastern Division.

"Few injuries have been a big factor in our success," Landry said. "Last year we had a disastrous season. Last year at this time we had all guards playing in our offensive line."

Landry added, "You have to have depth to make a run at the championship and we have that this season."

The Cowboys play at Cincinnati on noon Sunday, their first visit to Riverfront Stadium in history. Dallas is 2-0 against the Bengals overall.

A Dallas victory combined with a Detroit loss at New England would clinch a playoff berth for the Cowboys.

Dallas has games at home against the New York Giants and on the road against the San Francisco 49ers after the Bengals. The Cowboys are a game ahead of the Giants in the NFC East.

"Cincinnati looked just awesome against Houston last week," said Landry. "We sure can't afford the luxury of looking ahead to the Giants."

Landry said the Cowboys "will have to play at a higher level than we have been playing" to sweep their final three games.

In fact, Landry said, "I think (winning) two out of three would be an outstanding performance for us."

Landry said he was encouraged by quarterback Danny White's seven touchdown passes in the last two games.

"His confidence is back, it took a while," said Landry. "He is playing well and he has to perform at that level for us to win the championship. Danny is playing well as I've seen him in a long time."

The Cowboys are 16-1 in games after playing on Thanksgiving and getting a 10-day rest.

Bengals' Coach Sam Wyche told the Dallas media in a telephone conversation on Tuesday that the extra rest the Cowboys get "is a tremendous advantage. It really helps at this time of the year when there is chronic fatigue from the long season."

Network plans bathroom, frig breaks

NEW YORK (AP) — Football fans who want to run to the refrigerator or bathroom during NBC-TV's Super Bowl pregame show won't have to wait for the commercials — the network will provide time to do those things.

NBC will present a one-minute break during which the screen will go blank, background music will play and a clock will count down 60 seconds. Then, the show will resume.

"I was going to use sound effects of toilets flushing and beer cans popping open, but I thought that would be a bit much," Michael Weisman, executive producer of NBC Sports, told Advertising Age.

"This may not be a cure (for people leaving during commercials), but it certainly will help," he said.

The break is scheduled to come around 4 p.m. EST, with the kickoff coming shortly after 5 p.m.

Wing goalie in yawning debut

Associated Press

So much for first-night jitters.

Rookie goalie Mark Laforest, told he would make his National Hockey League debut against the Philadelphia Flyers Tuesday night, went off and took a nap.

"I had a dream I was going to play well," said Laforest, who turned aside 35 shots as Detroit beat the Flyers 4-1. It was only the sixth loss of the season for Philadelphia.

NHL

"I was nervous at the start (when he allowed a goal to Dave Poulin). I couldn't get behind the net. I kept stumbling," Laforest said.

"But I got some good bounces. I was stopping the first shot and the puck was going the other way. I played well at Adirondack and I just tried to play well here."

Laforest won all nine games he started this season for the Red Wings' American Hockey League affiliate while posting a 2.91 goals-against average.

North Stars 9, Black Hawks 2

Tony McKegney scored three goals and Scott Bjugstad added two for Minnesota, which snapped a 2-2 tie by scoring seven straight goals. Goals by Bjugstad and Chicago's Bill Watson deadlocked the clubs after one period, and short-handed scores by Minnesota's Dirk Graham and Chicago's Rick Paterson made it 2-2.

Minnesota rookie goaltender Jon Casey stopped 37 shots for his third victory and second against the Hawks.

Oilers 8, Kings 4

Jari Kurri scored two goals and assisted on another to spark Edmonton, which scored five times in the third period in putting away pesky Los Angeles. Goals by Marcel Dionne and Dave Taylor allowed the Kings to draw into a 3-3 tie after two periods. But Edmonton got third-period goals from Craig MacTavish, Mark Napier, Marty McSorley, Dave Hunter and Kurri as the Oilers pulled away for their 18th win of the season. Edmonton's 18-4-3 record is the best in the NHL.

Jets 4, Islanders 4

Randy Carlyle's power-play goal at 18:51 of the third period allowed Winnipeg to gain a point against the homestanding Islanders. Only eight seconds remained in a penalty to New York's Paul Boutilier when Carlyle took a pass from behind the net from Brian Mullen and flipped in his second goal of the season.

Pat LaFontaine had two goals for New York, the second at 13:45 of the second producing a 4-3 lead. Brent Sutter and Pat Flatley also scored for New York, while Winnipeg got scores from Scott Arniel, Dale Hawerchuk and Mullen.

Holtz steps into shoes of Faust

By THOMAS P. WYMAN

SOUTH BEND, Ind. (AP) — Lou Holtz has started to work at it, doing a job once performed by the likes of Knute Rockne, Frank Leahy and Ara Parseghian — coaching football at Notre Dame.

Holtz began by doing what he does so well, talking. He met individually with Notre Dame football players and assistant coaches Tuesday.

"I want to establish a line of communication between me and the players," Holtz said. "I want to put their minds at ease as far as the future is concerned, especially going into final exams. That's priority number one.

"Number two is recruiting. We're going into that very hard," he said.

HOLTZ will find, as did the coach he succeeded, Gerry Faust, that Notre Dame no longer has first shot at the best Catholic high school players in the country, according to another former coach, Dan Devine.

"There's no longer the feeder system where a product of a Catholic High School automatically goes to Notre Dame," said Devine, who coached at South Bend from 1975-1980.

"You've got to go out and fight for those kids," said Devine who was in New York to be inducted in the College Football Hall of Fame Tuesday night.

Devine predicted that Holtz may be shocked when he finds "there's not nearly as much emphasis on football, internally, as you think there is."

Recalling his experience at coach, Devine said Holtz will "Get his players later in the day than at any other school in the country. He'll get less practice time. Kids will go to a lab class rather than practice.

"But they'll play on Saturday. They'll compete."

DEVINE said Holtz soon may wonder, "My gosh, is this Notre Dame where football is so important?"

Devine, who led the Fighting Irish to the National Championship in 1977, said Holtz also will find less pressure from alumni than he may think.

"It's a lot sweeter than Lou Holtz had at Arkansas or Lou Holtz had at Minnesota," said Devine.

"The alumni does not dictate at Notre Dame, though the university may let them think they do."

"Look to the future" was Holtz's message to the players, who returned to campus Monday after a devastating defeat at Miami and the end of Faust's disappointing era.

"He's trying to stay away from the past," athletic department spokesman John Heisler said of Holtz.

THE PAST under Faust was capped by Saturday's 58-7 defeat at Miami and closed with a 30-26-1 record compiled during Faust's five years with the Irish.

Faust resigned Nov. 26, three days after a loss to Louisiana State made him the losingest coach in Notre Dame history. Holtz, head coach at Minnesota the past two seasons, was hired the next day.

Holtz has given each player a lengthy questionnaire asking for detailed information about personal background, football experience and the players' views about their roles in the 1986 season, Heisler said. "As he said, you can never know too much about these kids," Heisler said.

The player interviews also give Holtz an opportunity to make his own style and coaching philosophy known, Heisler said. "He wants to make sure they're all on the same wavelength," he said.

The interviews with as many as 90 players, including walk-ons, could stretch into Friday.

At the same time, Holtz wants to assemble the staff of assistant coaches who will join him on the sidelines. Those decisions may be delayed until Minnesota selects his replacement, perhaps one of the two assistants Holtz publicly recommended for the job.

"I ASCERTAIN that that'll get settled in the near future, but right now I'm concerned with the players, their feelings, their academics, and recruiting," Holtz said.

Eight of the nine current assistant coaches were hired by Faust, Heisler said. Inside linebacker coach George Kelly was hired in 1969 by Ara Parseghian, Heisler said.

Wilander eliminates Johan Kriek

MELBOURNE, Australia (AP) — Mats Wilander is battling a painful elbow injury as he closes in on his third successive Australian Open tennis title.

The 21-year-old Swede defeated sixth-seeded Johan Kriek of the United States 6-3, 7-5, 6-2 today to set up a semifinal meeting with unseeded Yugoslav Slobodan Zivojinovic, the man who beat him in the first round at Wimbledon this year. Zivojinovic upset John McEnroe in the quarterfinals here.

But the third-seeded Wilander completed his victory over Kriek with his elbow bandaged and admitted the injury was giving him pain.

"It happens playing on grass or hard courts," he said. "You have to serve harder on those surfaces and it hurts after a while. Right now it is hurting more than ever. It hurt every time I served.

Ump awarded $2,800 after assault by fan

SAN FERNANDO, Calif. (AP) — An amateur baseball umpire won a $2,800 award for medical bills and lost wages suffered in a brawl that erupted after he ordered the forfeiture of a game. Municipal Court Judge Michael Luros on ordered William Laufman to pay $865 in medical expenses and $1,950 for lost wages to umpire James Ellis, 43.

During a California Baseball Association game last March, Ellis threw Laufman's 19-year-old son, Robert, out of the game for shouting obscenities at another umpire, a police report said.

After Robert Laufman threw his mitt in Ellis's face, the umpire halted the game and awarded a victory to the opposing team, the report said. As Ellis left the field Laufman's wife, Joyce, 47, blocked his path and began swearing at him.

Witnesses said the woman slapped him in the face and Ellis slapped her in return, at which point William Laufman and all three adult sons joined in the fray.

Ellis said the brawl left him with a cut above the right eye, bruises and strains in his back, causing him to miss seven days of work at $31 an hour. He is a fire-sprinkler installer.

Misdemeanor battery charges were filed against all five Laufmans, but the city attorney later dropped all charges except one count of disturbing the peace against William Laufman. He pleaded guilty and was given three years' probation.

Switzer calls SMU most-talented rival

NORMAN, Okla. (AP) — The Southern Methodist football team represents the most talent on offense that Oklahoma has faced this year, Sooner Coach Barry Switzer said Tuesday.

"I've had pro scouts tell me SMU is more talented offensively than Nebraska, and it wouldn't surprise me," Switzer told writers and broadcasters at his weekly luncheon.

"I think they're probably the most dangerous team we've got left on our schedule, and I'm not saying that just because this is our final game," Switzer said. "They're kind of like a sleeping giant. They are a very, very talented football team."

Oklahoma, ranked fourth, must beat SMU in order to keep alive its hopes of playing for the national championship against No. 1 Penn State in the Orange Bowl. The Sooners enter Saturday's 2:30 p.m. game with a 9-1 record, while Southern Methodist is 6-4.

The Mustangs were a preseason Top 20 pick and their record has been a disappointment, but Switzer said they could easily have been 9-1.

"SMU didn't struggle, they lost," Switzer said. He added that late scores carried Texas A&M, Baylor and Arkansas past the Mustangs.

"They just murdered Texas, and we didn't," Switzer said. "...They got beat by Arizona, they got worn out with the passing game. The other three ball games, they could have won every one of them."

Southern Methodist is on probation, and it has been speculated that perhaps the probation has given the Mustangs less to play for. Switzer disagreed.

"When we were on probation (1974 and 1975) we still won our games because we had good players," he said. "The teams that usually win have the better players."

Switzer had strong praise for Southern Methodist's tailback duo of Reggie Dupard and Jeff Atkins, flanker Ron Morris and noseguard Jerry Ball.

"Their offensive line is huge, their I-backs are great and their receivers are great," he said.

"Jerry Ball should be one of the finalists for the Lombardi Award. He is a great football player. He and (Oklahoma noseguard) Tony Casillas are the best I've seen.

"I didn't realize how good he was," Switzer said. "He is by far the best lineman I've seen this year."

Sports Special
By MIKE CLARK

NEW YORK (AP) — The World Cup ski tour at age 20 is in trouble. Attendance is down, television ratings have soured, and racers are bridling under the seemingly never-ending schedule.

"I think the tour is in worse shape now than it has been in the last 10 years," said three-time overall champion Phil Mahre, "because there are too many races, too many events and a lack of interest.

"I think the lack of interest came from TV and, in Europe, from Europeans no longer winning. They lost the spectator. I think skiing's going through a lull and it'll come back. They had their rich years in the early '80s, really, and tried to change or improve things too rapidly, and instead of thinking it out, they've destroyed things."

IF, AS the Yakima, Wash., whiz says, skiing enjoyed rich years in the early 1980s, the sport had a similar golden era when the World Cup was introduced in 1967.

"We had the Olympics and World Championships in even-numbered years, and nothing in the odd-numbered years," said Billy Kidd, one of the top American racers of the 1960s. "There are so many variables in racing — you hit one little patch of ice and you're down — so the World Cup was formed to better recognize the best skier, and not have luck being such a factor."

The start of the World Cup coincided with the emergence of perhaps the best all-around skier the sport has known, Jean-Claude Killy of France. He breezed to Cup titles in 1967 and 1968 and capped his career by winning three gold medals in the 1968 Olympics.

In the early days, the World Cup was simple, with about 20 races spread over the three skiing disciplines — the glamorous downhill as well as giant slalom and slalom. Everybody skied all three, so there was no trouble figuring out an overall champion. That didn't last long, however.

By the mid-1970s, the face of the sport had changed, thanks in large part to Ingemar Stenmark of Sweden.

THE INTERNATIONAL Ski Federation (FIS) reacted to the increasing popularity of ski racing by cramming more and more races onto the schedule. Most were gate events, and the tighter scheduling reduced the time available for skiers to practice all three disciplines. So racers began to specialize, none more so than Stenmark, the best gate skier the sport has known. He won overall titles in 1976, 1977 and 1978 without skiing a single downhill.

Rather than cut back on the schedule, World Cup organizers tinkered with the scoring system to keep the specialist Stenmark from winning the "overall" title.

The answer was combined scoring, a hybrid event in which the results of a downhill and a gate race are factored together, or "combined," to form a third result. Insdead of producing a real overall champion, the new system served only to make a mockery of the 1979 season. Stenmark won a record 13 baces, yet lost the the overall title to a racer who won only once.

"You don't dethrone a champion by changing the way the system is scored," said Mahre. "You just bring along an athlete who can beat him.

"The big thing in my dethroning Stenmark was the new scoring system, the combineds," Mahre added. "I would have won the World Cup only one season had I not had combineds. That would have been 1982. I played by the rules as they were and I won my three titles."

The FIS apparently hasn't learned its lesson. This season, there will be scoring in a fourth Alpine discipline, the super-giant slalom, which despite its name is actually just a tighter downhill. It increases the number of points available for downhill specialists.

"The athletes yell and scream there's not enough events, then they yell and scream about too many events and they don't have time to train and travel," Mahre said. "It's gotten out of hand."

THIS SEASON, for instance, began with a pair of men's downhill races last August in South America. Before the season, which resumed on Sunday, ends in March, the men face 42 more events and the women 38.

"Somebody's got to take a firm grip on it," Mahre said. "I think a lot of people in the FIS have to be moved out of their seats. You have a lot of old-timers in there who don't have any clue which way to go.

BOWLING BEAT

Daughtrey paces bowlers with 708

By RANDY ISENBERG

Rick Daughtrey paced the men at Fairmont Park Lanes with a 255 game and a 708 series, while Ouida Davidson paced the women at Fairmont with a 200 game and 562 series over the past week.

Pat McClain paced the bowlers at Dellwood Lanes with a 241 game and 671 series and Carol King paced the women with a 225 game and 604 series.

The team of Leo Rodriguez, Tito Velasco, Ken Robey Jr. Perales and Ruben Garza rolled a 1,117 scratch team game in the Chicano Men's League.

David Wright rolled a 231 game and 644 series and a 233 game and 666 series. Jim Morris rolled a 266 game and Jr. Perales rolled a 253 game.

Ronny Meador was the Most Over Average bowler at Dellwood for the week with a 255 game and he also rolled a 625 series. His 255 game was 84 pins over his 171 average.

Ila Reed rolled a 206 game and 556 series in the City Classic League, while Gaye Reed rolled a 209 game and 558 series in the same league. This is a classic example of mother knows best.

Virginia Reyes won this weeks edition of Pin Point Bowling. Seventh bowler Bill Roberts had just taken the lead with a 49. Lead off bowler Betty Farris opened with a 26 total pin fall for the ninth and 10th frames. That held up until David Lewis the sixth bowler totaled a 28. Then Roberts rolled a 49. Virginia Reyes, making her first appearance on the show, proceeded to roll three strikes in a row and a seven count for a total of 57 and the title. She also converted the 2-7 split to become the first winner for the $100 Dellwood Lanes Pro Shop gift certificate.

Pin Point Bowling is taped every Saturday at 4 p.m. at Dellwood Lanes.

Tom Antle is the winner of the Thanksgiving World Class Bowling Tournament, earning the $400 first prize. Tom was the number one seed after the semifinal fournd. He defeated Steve Witte, 203-194, in the final round. Witte was the number two seed. Steve rolled a 276 scratch in the second match. Theresa Wright was the third seed and she defeated Gil Pyle in the second match of the stair step finals.

Pyle finished in fourth place and Donna Archer was fifth. In all, $1,535 was paid out. The next World Class Tournament will be held at Fairmont Park Lanes on Dec. 13-15.

Denver's Lang out four weeks

DENVER (AP) — A broken left hand may keep Denver Broncos running back Gene Lang out of the lineup for at least four weeks.

Lang suffered the injury in the Broncos' 31-23 National Football League victory over the Pittsburgh Steelers on Sunday.

"The doctors feel like he cannot take a blow on that hand for four weeks," Coach Dan Reeves said Monday. "At that position, running back, there's no way you can have him play basically one-handed. He just wouldn't help you that way."

Lang, a second-year player from LSU, is the Broncos' second-leading rusher with 318 yards on 84 carries, a 3.8-yard average.

Pack inks Clanton

GREEN BAY, Wis. (AP) — The Green Bay Packers have signed defensive back Chuck Clanton to a series of one-year contracts, the National Football League team said Tuesday.

Terms of the deal were not announced, said Packers spokesman Scott Berchtold.

Clanton, 26, was the United States Football League's defensive player of the year in 1985 while with the Birmingham, Ala. Stallions. He set a single-season interception record with 16, breaking the mark of 12 set by Luther Bradley of the Chicago Blitz in 1983 and tied by Marcus Quinn of Oakland in 1984.

Your horoscope

By JEANE DIXON

Thursday, December 5, 1985

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Greater visibility is the key to moving up at place of employment. Handle tough tasks with aplomb and you will attract the attention of top management. New technology helps you do a better job. Romance flourishes. Be careful not to demand more than you are prepared to give. Loved one will hold you to any promises you make. An unexpected windfall or legacy lets you do something really wonderful. Share your good fortune with others. CELEBRITY BIRTHDATES: Sen. Strom Thurmond (R-S.C.), Raiders quarterback Jim Plunkett, author Joan Didion, producer Walt Disney, director-producer Otto Preminger, Gen. George Custer, President Martin Van Buren.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Extra personal effort will lead to higher pay. A part-time job could be the best way to pay for all those Christmas gifts. Show loved one how much you care. Plan a special outing for two.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Put yesterday's disappointments out of your mind and make a fresh start. Bearing a grudge is counterproductive. Shoppers come across some excellent buys. A budget revision works wonders.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Be frugal. Buy in bulk whenever practical. Mate is on the same wavelength, eager to reduce expenses. Entertain at home instead of in restaurants. Accepting a friend's invitation brings special knowledge.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Someone reneges on a promise to provide financial aid. Scholarships are available for hard workers. Go after one! A new romantic partner or friend is a source of inspiration.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Home and family matters dominate your thoughts. Go out of your way to please loved one. Avoid taking center stage. Let others enjoy some time in the spotlight. A secret agreement is finalized.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Misunderstandings can be avoided if you choose your words with special care. Write overdue letters and pay outstanding debts. Personal spending should be kept to a minimum.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Seek a solution to a problem that arose yesterday. Try something new or slightly unorthodox. A broken romance could be on the mend. Do not withdraw jointly owned funds from the bank.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): You will accomplish more by working on your own today. Concentrate on improving your skills and advancing a pet project. Others see you as a storehouse of valuable information.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): An old financial problem could recur, resisting standard solutions. Look for ways to make your home more comfortable without spending large sums of money. Romance is mostly happy.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Act only after considering all of your options. A work project could be interrupted by someone with an emergency. Continue to keep a close eye on spending. Romance brings delight.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): A family member plays a prominent role in your day. Confer with loved ones whose opinions you value. Your original ideas receive a warm reception from someone influential.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): A great day for creative projects. Devote as much time as you can to advancing a favorite cause. A young person makes you proud. Make your own decisions after consulting with experts.

There can be more than one way to play a hand or, indeed, a suit combination. The right way to go about your business might depend on what you learn about the lie of the cards.

North-South conducted an unscientific but accurate auction to get to their small slam. Once South learned North's jump shift was based on spade support, he bid what he thought he could make. Since North was dead minimum for his jump, he was content to pass.

West led the top of his heart sequence. Declarer won in hand with the king, then cashed the ace and king of spades to learn that he had a trump loser. That meant he would need a successful finesse and an end play to avoid losing a trick in diamonds as well.

Declarer breathed a sigh of relief when a diamond to the queen won. He cashed the two red aces and the three high clubs to reduce the hand to this position with the lead on the board:

Declarer called for dummy's club and ruffed in hand. As long as West had no more diamonds, declarer did not mind if he were overtrumped. When West followed suit, declarer simply threw him in with a trump to the queen. With nothing left but hearts, West was forced to yield a ruff sluff as declarer ruffed in dummy and discarded his losing diamond from hand.

Springsteen stands up for hometown

FREEHOLD, N.J. (AP) — Rock star Bruce Springsteen, whose songs have rhapsodized blue collar life, is pleading in a newspaper advertisement today on behalf of 430 workers due to lose their jobs at 3M plants here in his hometown.

The ad, in four newspapers, features a letter signed by Springsteen and country singer Willie Nelson asking Minnesota Mining & Manufacturing Co. not to close its Magnetic Audio-Video plant and reduce staff at another plant here.

The 24-year-old audio-video plant, which makes tapes for the entertainment industry, is to be phased out by June, the company announced last month.

About 360 workers would lose their jobs and 70 more jobs would be lost because of cutbacks at 3M's nearby Electrical Products Division plant.

The ad was sponsored by Local 8-760 of the Oil, Chemical and Atomic Workers Union and the Labor Institute, a New York-based public interest organization that provides services for unions.

The ads were placed in the New York Times, the Asbury Park Press, the St. Paul Pioneer Press and Dispatch, the St. Paul (Minn.) Pioneer Press Dispatch where 3M is based, and Variety, the weekly show business newspaper.

ATLANTA (AP) — Singer Connie Francis, booked on trespass and battery charges after she refused to put out a cigarette aboard a Delta jetliner, was released from custody today, police said.

The Nassau to Los Angeles flight was being refueled Tuesday in Atlanta and the flight crew had asked all passengers to extinguish cigarettes, Delta spokesman Bill Berry said.

Police were called when the singer refused to put out her cigarette despite a personal request from the captain, and refused to leave the plane, Berry said.

Police escorted her off the aircraft and Miss Francis kicked one of the officers as they were walking toward the terminal, said Atlanta police spokesman Kevin Forier.

She was taken to the Clayton County jail, charged with criminal trespass and simple battery on a police officer, Forier said. After processing, she was released early today, said Clayton County Sheriff's Sgt. Barbara Barnes.

• • •

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — Glenda Jackson was named cable television's actress of the year for her portrayal of Soviet dissident Yelena Bonner in the Home Box Office movie "Sakharov," which was selected best movie.

"Sakharov" also won for directing and writing in the Awards for Cable Excellence announced Tuesday, two days after Mrs. Bonner left the Soviet Union for medical treatment in the West. Her husband, Andrei Sakharov, remains exhiled in the Soviet city of Gorky.

Shelley Duvall and Joe Piscopo were hosts for the awards show, which will be broadcast nationwide Friday on cable superstation WTBS.

Art Carney was named best actor in a movie or miniseries for "The Undergrads" on the Disney Channel.

Mell

CHICAGO (AP) — Mary Tyler Moore returns to television next month as a Chicago newspaper columnist in a new series, but a local publisher says he's considering legal action against the program.

"Mary" debuts next Wednesday on CBS, set at a fictional daily newspaper called the Chicago Post — which happens to be the name of a monthly newspaper Alderman Richard Mell has published for two years.

If the network and MTM Enterprises Inc., the show's production company, don't "cease and desist" from airing the program, Mell said, he plans to pursue the matter in court.

"This is just a way of saying, 'Wait a second. A trademark is the fundamental right of a person in this country who is starting a small business for protecting himself from the big guy,' " Mell said Tuesday. "The big guy just wants to come in and step on him."

Mell's paper, distributed free with an estimated circulation of 40,000, is protected by federal and state trademarks, he said.

Larry Bloustein, vice president for public relations at MTM in Studio City, Calif., said attorneys have advised him not to comment because of possible litigation.

• • •

CHICAGO (AP) — Don Johnson, star of NBC-TV's "Miami Vice," is almost — but not quite — nude in a 10-page photo essay in Playboy magazine's January issue.

The photos show Johnson's shoulders, chest and thighs, but reveal more of his ex-wife, "Body Double" star Melanie Griffith.

The pictures were taken in 1976 as part of a series of pictorials on couples. Ms. Griffith has since married actor Steven Bauer and Johnson has become a parent with actress Patti D'Arbanville.

• • •

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Entertainer Jerry Lee Lewis has returned to the hospital, a day after his release following stomach surgery for a bleeding ulcer.

"He came in complaining of nausea and stomach pains," Beth Maas, night administrator at Methodist Hospital, said Tuesday.

Doctors had not issued a diagnosis on the condition for the 50-year-old singer, Mrs. Maas said. He was not being treated as an emergency patient, however, a hospital official said.

Dellacroce

NEW YORK (AP) — Aniello "O'Neill" Dellacroce, a reputed top-ranking member of the Gambino organized crime family, died Monday night. He was 71.

Dellacroce, reputedly a leader of the nation's largest Mafia family for almost two decades and the subject of three separate indictments in the past 13 months, had been suffering from cancer and heart disease, his attorney, Barry Slotnick, said Tuesday.

Since the late 1960s, federal and local investigators have identified Dellacroce as the No. 2 man in the crime network once led by the Carlo Gambino, the "boss of all bosses" who died in 1976.

• • •

LENOX, Mass. (AP) — Lulu Smith Howard, a suffragette and one of the first women to hold a seat on the New York Stock Exchange, died Thursday. She was 97.

Mrs. Howard began her investment career on Wall Street in 1914. She was one of the earliest members of the Women's Bond Club and a registered representative and member of the exchange until her retirement. Mrs. Howard worked with other suffragettes for women's right to vote, which was granted in 1920. She also served with the Red Cross in Europe in World War I and in World War II was a Red Cross canteen worker on the docks in New York City.

DALTON, Mass. (AP) — Arthur E. Crane, a board member and retired vice president of the company that produces paper for U.S. currency, died Sunday of an apparent heart attack. He was 71.

Crane worked for Crane & Co. for 44 years.

NFL Playoff picture beginning to come into focus

By MICHAEL JANOFSKY
New York Times News Service

NEW YORK — With three weeks to go in the regular season, the playoff picture is relatively clear in both the National and American Conferences. Here is a closer look:

In the NFC, one division title has been won, the Central by the Bears, who are 12-1 before their Monday night loss in Miami. The Cowboys (9-4) have a one-game lead in the East over the Giants (8-5), and the Rams have the same advantage over the 49ers in the West.

But a victory by the 49ers over the Rams next Monday night in San Francisco, which is likely, would stir things up. A 49er victory would be their second over the Rams this season and would put them in strong position to win the division. It would also put additional pressure on the Cowboys to win the East and on the Giants and Rams not to lose again. If they did, the Redskins or Lions, both 7-6, could jump into contention for the wild-card berths.

FOR THE time being, however, the Giants have advantages over each of the other teams. They have a better divisional record than the Redskins, with whom they split their two games this season, 5-2 to 2-4; a better conference record than the Lions, 8-3 to 5-5; and a victory three weeks ago, 24-19, over the Rams.

In the AFC, things are a little more complicated. Six teams are in the best position to win the five playoff spots: the Jets (9-4), the Patriots (9-4) and Dolphins (9-4) in the East; the Browns (7-6) in the Central, and the Broncos (9-4) and the Raiders (9-4) in the West.

It almost doesn't matter who wins the Central. The rest of the division is so weak, the two wild-card teams will almost assuredly come from the East and-or West.

NFL Notes

The schedule favors none of the teams in contention, although it seems to put the Jets at a slight disadvantage. Each of the teams in the East plays two of its remaining three games at home, but the Jets' home opponents are the Bears and the Browns.

The Broncos play two of their three games at home, and so do the Raiders — sort of. The Raiders are scheduled for two more away games, but the second one, the last game of the season, they play the Rams on a Monday night in Anaheim, which is no more than 30 miles south of Los Angeles.

This is kind of silly, but you're dying to know: If the season were now over, the Patriots, who split with the Jets, would have won the East, based on a better divisional record than the Jets, 6-1 to 5-2; and the Raiders would have won the West, based on a victory last week over the Broncos.

The wild- card teams would be the Jets and either the Broncos or Dolphins.

AS THE end of another season approaches so does talk about the quarterback situation in Dallas. From most perspectives, Danny White has put in a creditable year, which has prompted rumors that the Cowboys may be willing to trade Gary Hogeboom, a backup for most of his six years.

"I'd say the chances are slim we'd trade him," Gil Brandt, the Cowboys' personnel director, said the other day.

The Cowboys have a third quarterback on the roster, Steve Pelluer, for whom they have high regard. But until he gets more experience, Brandt said, Coach Tom Landry may be reluctant to rely on him as the backup.

"I don't do anything until Tom tells me to," Brandt said of a possible trade for Hogeboom. "And so far, he hasn't said a word."

Coach Tells Player to Pass — On, Off Court

By VINCE RODRIGUEZ
Dallas Times Herald

ARLINGTON (AP) — When basketball coach Robert Gill tells his players to work on their passing, he isn't talking about the way they handle the ball.

"Coach tells us to get school No. 1 in your mind until 2:30," said David Wiener, a starting forward for Arlington High School. "From 2:30 to 4:30, it's basketball. Then after basketball, it's school No. 1 again until you go to bed."

In a year that has reverberated with often emotional debate about the academic standards now applied to high school athletes, Gill's concern about his team's performance off the court is not all that unusual.

On the other hand, their performance is.

His five starters — Wiener, Trent Turner, Danny Denton, Gary Webb and Chris Puempel — carry a combined grade point average of 3.86 on a 4.0 scale. In basketball parlance, that's like hitting 193 of 200 shots from the floor.

Perhaps it's fitting that the team's leader academically is its 6-foot-6 center, Turner.

"I'll be the first to admit, I'm not going to check Turner's grades," Gill said. "He has never gotten a B in his life."

In the academic statistics, the rest of the starting team is not far behind: Wiener's cumulative grade point average is 3.9; Denton, a forward, and the guards, Webb and Puempel, have 3.8 averages.

A cynic might suggest that they are taking easy courses or playing lousy basketball.

Wrong.

Several of the players are taking college preparatory courses such as trigonometry, physics and psychology. And on the court, the Colts are 2-1.

Andrews tops Midland girls

ANDREWS— Andrews High's Lady Mustangs came on strong in the last period to defeat Midland High, 61-49, here Tuesday night. It was the second win of the season for AHS over Midland, which is now 3-4 for the season.

Amy Cummings, Nadine Hill and Sabreina Finch scored 12 each for Midland, which jumped to a 31-30 lead at half time and was still ahead by one after three periods.

Midland hosts Hobbs next Tuesday and will play in the Tall City Tournament at the Chap Center Dec. 12-14.

Midland's JV lost to Hobbs, 60-41, squaring the season's series between the teams. This weekend, the JV plays in a tournament at Big Spring.

Andrews 61, Midland 49

Midland— Angie Shaw 4; Amy Cummongs 12, Amanda Hendrickson 1; Laura Martin 8; Nadine Hill 12, Sabreina Finch 12. Andrews— Charlotte Jones 24, S. Morton 14, M. Reynolds 6, Dell Hester 7, T. Jones 10.r.

ABC share awesome

NEW YORK (AP) — The Miami Dolphins' 38-24 victory over the previously unbeaten Chicago Bears drew an overnight rating of 31.7 and a 48 share — numbers which, if they hold up nationally, would set records for a Monday night football telecast, ABC said Tuesday.

The overnight rating reflects the percentage of homes with a television in 12 cities. A share is the percentage of those sets which are turned on.

The national ratings will be released Wednesday. There can be major differences between the overnights and the nationals. However, there was virtually none in the previous highest overnight, Miami's 28-21 victory over Dallas last Dec. 17. The overnights for that game were a 25.3 rating and 40 share and the nationals were 25.1 and 40.

If Wednesday's nationals are close to Tuesday's overnights for the Bears-Dolphins, they could surpass the record national numbers of a 26.8 rating and 43 share set on Oct. 2, 1978, when the Washington Redskins defeated the Dallas Cowboys 9-5 in Washington.

The Bears-Dolphins game drew the biggest viewership, naturally, in Chicago (50.5 share, 68 rating) and Miami (47.1 and 68).

Dollar down

LONDON (AP) — The U.S. dollar staged a broadly based retreat in Europe early today. Gold bullion edged higher.

Traders attributed the dollar's decline to profit taking following the currency's surge in New York late Tuesday. Positive U.S. economic news and a rise in long-term U.S. interest rates had helped lift the dollar Tuesday from two-year lows reached Monday.

A trader in Frankfurt, West Germany, said many investors were staying out of the market today because of the dollar's big swings of the previous two days. Consequently, the currency was fluctuating within a narrow range during the first few hours of trading.

Selected midmorning dollar rates compared with rates in Europe late Tuesday:

2.5220 West German marks, down from 2.5380.

2.1025 Swiss francs, down from 2.1115.

7.69 French francs, down from 7.7225.

2.865 Dutch guilders, down from 2.8486.

1,715.50 Italian lire, down from 1,725.50.

1.389 Canadian dollars, down from 1.3914.

The British pound rose to $1.4857 from $1.485.

Against its weaker trend in Europe, the dollar rose for a fifth consecutive session in Tokyo, closing at 204.15 Japanese yen, up from 203.80 yen Tuesday. Later in London, the dollar was quoted at 204.125 yen.

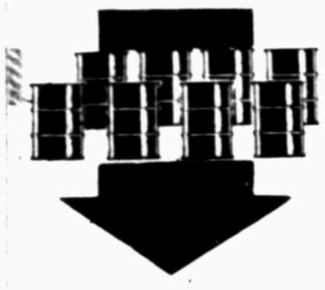

London's five main bullion houses fixed a recommended gold price of $324.00 a troy ounce up from $322 in late Tuesday.

In Zurich, gold was bid at $324 up from $322.50.

Earlier in Hong Kong the metal closed at a bid of $325.75, up from $324.98.

Silver was quoted in London at a bid of $6.10 an ounce, unchanged from late Tuesday.

Leading indicators move up sixth straight month

Los Angeles Times —
Washington Post News Service

WASHINGTON — The government's gauge of future business activity rose a moderate 0.3 percent during October, the Commerce Department said Tuesday, as economists predicted a steady economic course with neither a welcome boom nor a painful slump.

The index of leading indicators, which uses manufacturers' orders, building permits and other sensitive items to foreshadow economic momentum, increased in October for the sixth straight month.

Although the recovery that began in December, 1982, continues to generate sales and create jobs, it has settled into a sluggish pattern. Businesses have been creating enough jobs to accommodate the growing work force, but the expansion has not proved sufficiently robust to reduce the unemployment rate below the current level of 7.1 percent.

And in another bit of disappointing news Tuesday, the government reported that housing starts fell during October for the third straight month.

However, the general outlook for the economy is "reassuring," said Sandra Shaber, vice president of the consulting firm of Chase Econometrics of Bala Cynwyd, Pa. "There was concern in the summer that the economy was heading for a recession, but we seem to have avoided that. On the other hand, there is no evidence that we are going into a new period of strong growth."

The consistency of the economy was illustrated in Tuesday's revised report for September, which showed an increase of 0.4 percent in the yardstick of leading indicators. The original estimate for September had been a slim 0.1 percent, below the trend for earlier in the year.

The leading indicators show that "the flashy state of the recovery is behind us now," said John M. Albertine, president of the American Business Conference, an association of mid-sized, high-growth corporations. "The economy is plodding along in a dependable fashion. We're not going to be breaking any records for economic growth, but on the other hand we're not going to tumble into a recession."

A similiar assessment was offered by Dirk Van Dongen, president of the National Association of Wholesaler-Distributors, with 45,000 small and medium-sized firms handling a myriad of prducts. "Business for our members is good," he said. "It is not excellent and it is not poor."

Among the leading indicators showing improved performance in October were initial unemployment claims, raw material costs, stock prices and manufacturers' orders for consumer goods.

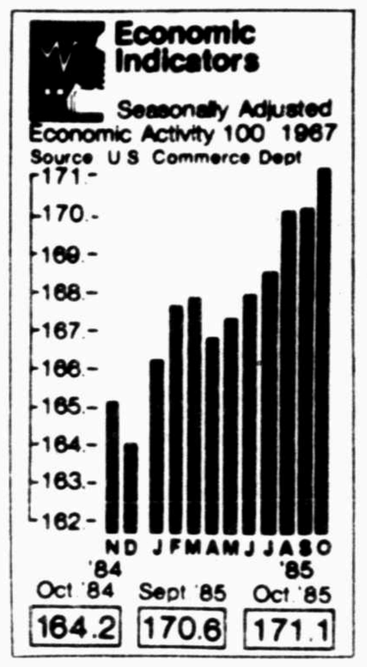

The Reagan administration insists that the economy will heat up again despite the sluggish performance this year. "The leading index is pointing toward continued expansion in 1986," said Commerce Secretary Malcolm Baldrige, predicting that the economy will expand by 4 percent next year.

The administration's goal for this year is a 3 percent increase in the nation's output of goods and services, but most economists believe the final result will be in the range of 2 percent to 2.5 percent. Growth averaged about 2.2 percent at an annual rate for the first three quarters of the year.

Without a new surge of growth, the unemployment rate will probably remain close to the current level of 7.1 percent, most analysts believe. "The economy is growing, but it's not a stellar performance," said Robert Wescott of Wharton Econometrics, a Philadelphia-based forecasting firm. "We're going to see the economy expanding over the next year or two, but we're not seeing the kind of performance needed to return to full employment."

The drop in home sales puzzled economists because mortgage rates have fallen to their lowest levels in five years, and the return of the 11 percent fixed-rate mortgage should stimulate the demand for homes. Wescott, who still expects a strong gain in home sales, said that the short-term behavior of the market sometimes defies explanation.

"The housing market should be healthy," added Shaber of Chase Econometrics. "It's just not living up to its potential."

Gearhart head sees extension of gas bubble

By JOHN PAUL PITTS
Business Oil Editor

"Oil will stay better than we thought it would and natural gas will take longer to come back than what we thought it would," said Marvin Gearhart, president and chairman of the board of Gearhart Industries of Fort Worth.

Speaking to an Energy After Hours gathering at Texas American Bank Tuesday, Gearhart said the best forecasters are predicting the gas bubble will break in February, but they don't know if it will be this year, next year or the year after. The joke.

On a serious note, Gearhart said it would probably be the end of the eighties before a break would be seen in the gas bubble.

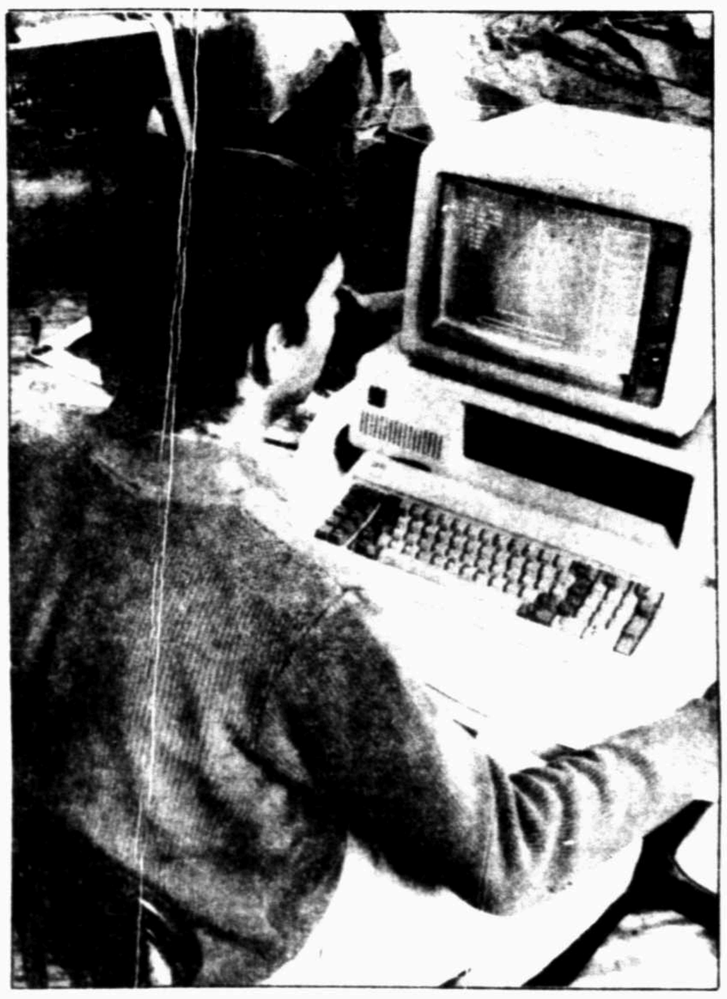

He said a good freeze this winter should sustain oil prices until spring and OPEC stability might see prices through the spring, but after that, "We'll be facing that tax bill and that could seriously hurt the industry."

Gearhart said that about 15 percent fewer wells would be drilled in 1986 compared to this year, and about the only wells that would be drilled would be offset wells to offset drainage, wildcat wells to validate leases and extremely good prospects.

He said that the only good news for operators was that drilling costs continue to go down. "Average cost per foot in 1981 was $110 today it is $65 per foot," he said.

The industrialist said the reason the oil industry was in bad shape was a continuing lack of demand for the product. "It doesn't matter how good your product is if nobody will buy it. The demand for oil is down worldwide and that is what is affecting our oil business."

He predicted, however, that other nations, like China and India who are net importers of crude oil would not be deterred by oil prices. "China with 600 rigs is moving to double that number and will continue to develop its productive basin no matter what the price of oil is. India has 50 rigs running and is going to bring that number to 120 for the same reason."

'Impeach Railroad Commision,' says royalty spokesman

Business Oil Editor

"The Texas Railroad Commission should be impeached for its handling of the white oil controversy," says Ron Slover, a stock broker and volunteer representative of royalty owners in the panhandle.

Slover, who is taking this message to newspapers and TV stations across the state, says the Commission seriously erred when it refused to testify before the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission, thereby allowing jurisdiction of matters which historically have belonged to the State of Texas to fall into federal hands.

"When the Texas Railroad Commission refused to testify before Judge Brenda P. Murray, administrative law judge for FERC, by default they allowed FERC to determine the classification of wells, including the definition of casing head gas; determine how wells are completed and the manner in which they are produced. These are all regulations that typically belong to the states. In one moment of negligence the Texas Railroad Commission has allowed by precedence for the federal government to extend its jurisdiction deeply into Texas," said Slover, a 34-year resident of Amarillo who operates a brokerage and oil consulting firm in that city.

He said FERC officials are fully aware of the precedence of this case in extending their jurisdiction and have stated such in a letter attached to the decision on the white oil controversy, which involved the refrigeration of gas to produce liquids thereby changing the classification of wells from gas to oil.

Ron Slover

Slover said the TRC was invited to testify at the hearings but never responded to the invitation nor provided a reason for not testifying, until later when the Commission indicated it did not think it appropriate for them to appear, since they were hearing the Phillips case, a related matter at the same time.

"We would have had some legal conflicts if we had testified at that time," said Jim Morrow, head of the TRC Oil & Gas Division. "We were involved in hearing of a similar nature involving Phillips at the time."

Pennwalt agrees to buy Purex units

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Pennwalt Corp. said it has agreed to buy Purex Industries Turco-Purex Industrial Division, the world's largest manufacturer of aircraft maintenance chemicals and cleaners.

Terms of the agreement were not disclosed Monday.

Turco-Purex, which last year had sales totaling $60 million, employs about 400 people at plants in Carson, Calif., Marion, Ohio, Houston, Lawrence, Mass., the United Kingdom, France, West Germany and the Netherlands.

Fifth Japanese carmaker picks U.S. plant site

Toyota Motors chooses Kentucky farmland as site

DETROIT (AP) — Toyota Motor Corp. will become the fifth Japanese automaker to build cars in the United States, choosing Kentucky farmland as the site of a $500 million assembly plant, sources said.

It's solid. It's going to Georgetown," a company source told The Associated Press Tuesday.

Georgetown, population 10,000, is about 60 miles south of Cincinnati in Kentucky's horse country and is near Lexington and Frankfort, the state capital.

Toyota, Japan's leading automaker, plans to make an official announcement Dec. 11 in Kentucky, said the company sources, who spoke on condition that they not be identified by name.

The proposed $500 million plant would employ at least 2,500 workers to put together 200,000 cars annually, but Charles F. Haywood, a University of Kentucky economist, predicts an additional 2,000 to 4,000 jobs would develop over two to three years.

Toyota plans to break ground at the new plant next year.

In July, Toyota announced that it would follow the lead of four smaller Japanese competitors — Nissan Motor Co. Ltd., Honda Motor Co. Ltd., Mazda Motor Corp. and Mitsubishi Motors Corp. — and build a U.S. auto assembly plant.

On a two-week economic development swing through the Far East in October, Kentucky Gov. Martha Layne Collins met with Toyota's chairman. Last month, she threw a state dinner at the governor's mansion, capped by a fireworks show for the company's site selection team.

At a news conference Tuesday the governor wouldn't confirm the reports.

"I do not make announcements about sites," Collins said. "I'm still working and talking with them (Toyota officials) about their needs."

Jerry Giaquinta, a spokesman for the subsidiary Toyota Motor Sales USA Inc. in Torrance, Calif., said he would neither confirm nor deny the reports.

The plant will complement one that Toyota operates in Fremont, Calif., in a joint venture with the No. 1 U.S. automaker, General Motors Corp. The jointly owned company has been making cars for nearly a year.

Those cars are sold by GM under the Chevrolet Nova name. That, as well as the Japanese government's continuation of quotas on car exports to the United States, has left Toyota's own dealers crying out for more cars, leading to the decision to build a U.S. plant, company sources said.

The new plant is to produce mid-size cars in the same class as the current Toyota Camry. The Novas built at the GM-Toyota plant are subcompacts based on the Toyota Corolla.

Nissan, Japan's No. 2 automaker, began building cars last spring at its pickup truck factory in Smyrna, Tenn. Honda was first with an American-made Japanese car in December 1982 in Marysville, Ohio.

Mazda's plant south of Detroit is under construction and scheduled to open next year. Mitsubishi earlier this year announced plans to build an auto assembly plant near Bloomington-Normal, Ill., to be owned jointly with its U.S. affiliate, Chrysler Corp.

Taxpayers asked to lean on mortgage companies

By SUSAN LINDSAY

Taxpayers are being asked to lean on their mortgage company this month in an effort to prevent a duplication of last year's problems with holding companies paying county taxes late.

Roland Wilkinson, chief appraiser administrator for Midland County, said "now is the time to begin contacting mortgage companies to make sure taxes are paid by December 31."

He said his office can tell if the taxes have been posted within a 24-hour period.

Problems arose last year when Ticor Tax Realty Service failed to pay Midland County taxes on time for its Lomas and Nettleton and Gibraltar lenders.

Also making an effort toward public awareness in bread-and-butter issues is SOUTHWESTERN BELL TELEPHONE. The company has produced a 12-page coloring book to educate youngsters about how and when to use 911 emergency telephone service.

In Midland, the company plans to distribute 1,000 of the books designed for pre-school children. Copies are available through the local Southwestern Bell office.

DRILLING SPECIALTIES CO. has opened a warehouse in Midland at 5702 Industrial.

The company carries a complete line of drilling mud additives and specialty products.

Texas now has its own "Save the Lady" campaign now as COCA-COLA FOODS, makers of Maryland Club brand coffee, has announced plans to co-sponsor the renovation of the Goddess of Liberty Statue atop the Capitol building in Austin.

The program is part of the company's participation in the Texas Sesquicentennial celebration. The company will conduct a special consumer coupon redemption program to allow Texas residents to generate funds for the statue.

Coupons for Maryland Club will be run in newspapers throughout the state. For every coupon redeemed by consumers, Coca-Cola Foods will make a donation to the statue renovation.

As people become more health conscience, they are switching to more nutritious foods. Another way toward increased vitamin content may be in paper milk containers.

The Paperboard Packaging Council contends that paperboard milk cartons are superior to translucent plastic judges in protecting milk from vitamin and flavor losses caused by exposure to light, especially the fluorescent light in supermarket dairy cases.

However, the campaign was contested by the Society of the Plastic's Industry and was taken to court. A federal judge ruled the advertisements could continue.

The campaign refers to whole or skim milk.

EXPLORATION HIGHLIGHTS

Andrews field sees 390 barrel well

From Staff Reports

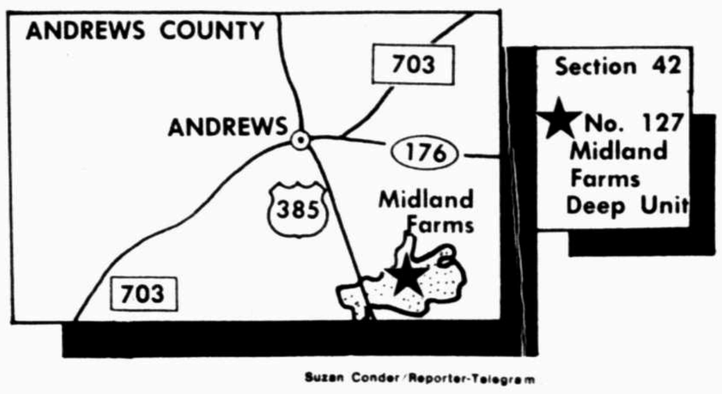

AMOCO PRODUCTION CO., Andrews, has added three wells to the Midland Farms field of Andrews County, including a 390 barrel Wolfcamp producer.

On potential test, the No. 127 Midland Farms Unit flowed 390 barrels of 41.2 gravity crude, 297 Mcfd and 32 barrels of water on a 28/64 inch choke with a flowing tubing pressure of 140 psi. The well is flowing from perforations 8,330 to 8,418 ft., which had been acidized with 5,000 gallons of 15 percent acid.

A second Wolfcamp well, the No. 84 Midland Farms Unit, pumped 58.5 barrels of 37.7 gravity crude, 108 Mcfd and 883 barrels of water from perforations 8,518 to 8,876 ft. Amoco acidized with interval with 15,000 gallons of 15 percent NeFe acid.

Amoco also completed a Fusselman producer in the field, the No. 142 Midland Farms Deep Unit. The well pumped, on potential test, 170.1 barrels of 45.1 gravity crude, 453 Mcfd and 48 barrels of water. Production is from perforations 11,950 to 12,090 ft., which were acidized with 3,000 gallons of 15 percent acid and fractured with 20,000 gallons of gel.

Two of the wells are located on Block 42, T-1-N, G&MMB&A survey, 12 miles southeast of Andrews, and the third is on Block 42, T-2-N, G&MMB&A, 13 miles southeast of Andrews.

Delaware discovery pumps 28 barrels

WESTLAND OIL & DEVELOPMENT CORP. has completed a Delaware discovery, approximately a mile and a half east of the Mentone Northeast field.

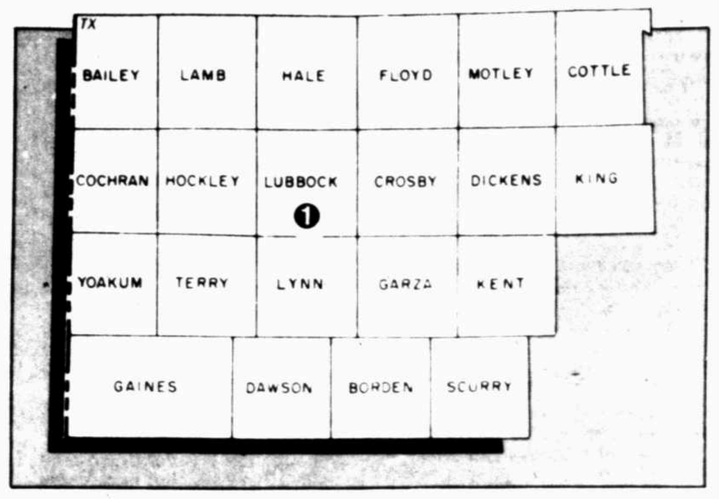

The No. 2 State of Texas "29" tested to pump 27.84 barrels of 38.4 gravity crude, 13.9 Mcfd and 65 barrels of water from perforations 4,895 to 4,930 ft. The interval was acidized with 2,500 gallons of 7.5 percent MSA acid. Gas-oil ratio is 499:1.

Scheduled as an 8,300 ft. wildcat, the well reached total depth of 5,200 ft., where 4 1/2 inch casing was set, and was plugged back to 5,152 ft.

The well topped the Rustler at 642 ft., Delaware Lime at 4,831, and the Delaware Sand at 4,855 ft. on ground elevation of 2,863 ft. Pay was topped at 4,895 ft.

Location is 2,100 ft. from west and 1,600 ft. from south lines of Section 29, Block 29, PSL survey, approximately seven miles northeast of Mentone.

American Motors president trying to keep firm in Wisconsin

Lucey to save firm with private investment

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — Patrick J. Lucey is no stranger to challenges — he was John Anderson's running mate in the 1980 presidential campaign — and now the former governor and ambassador is working to keep American Motors Corp. in Wisconsin.

His second objective is to help the troubled automaker regain its financial health. And he has to accomplish both tasks that without state money.

"We have to do everything we can to keep them alive and keep them here," Lucey, 67, says of his assignment from a fellow Democrat, Gov. Anthony S. Earl.

AMC says it can't survive in its antique facilities in Kenosha, and will decide by this spring where it will locate a new factory.

For the 4,100 AMC employees in Kenosha, and for the city, the issue is critical. Unemployment in Kenosha County was 11.2 percent in September, compared to 6.8 percent statewide.

The company has two plants in Kenosha, where boarded-up storefronts blight a downtown mall only a decade old. About 77,000 people live in the southeastern Wisconsin city hard by Lake Michigan.

AMC's balance sheet looks just as dismal.

From 1980 through 1984, the company reported losses of $622.5 million. That compared with cumulative profits of $8.7 billion at General Motors Corp., $1.5 billion at Ford Motor Co. and more than $1 billion at Chrysler Corp.

In 1984, AMC managed a modest profit of $15.5 million, but through the first three quarters of this year it is $118 million in the red.

AMC's share of the market for domestically built cars has slipped to 1.5 percent, ranking fifth behind American Honda.

Production workers in Kenosha approved a three-year contract in July containing a 61-cent an hour wage cut, elimination of nine paid days off and other concessions. The basic hourly wage for a production worker is $12.95.

AMC's body-making operation is in a six-story, turn-of-the-century building on the lakeshore, while an assembly plant is across town. Production is about 550 cars a day, half the plants' capacity, and the company has said the factories are outdated.

Simply selling more cars would not solve AMC's predicament of building low-profit autos in a high-cost plant.

AMC, 46.1 percent owned by Regie Nationale des Usines Renault, the French automaker, makes the subcompact Renault Alliance and Encore autos in Kenosha and its profitable Jeep vehicles in Toledo, Ohio.

AMC President Jose Dedeurwaerder, a former Renault executive, said the company will decide early next year where to make the cars that will replace the Alliance and Encore, which will be phased out within three years.

Building a new plant will take several years, and AMC says it has been contacted by several unspecified "governments."

The cost of new factories has been estimated at between $300 million and $600 million, but Lucey says that is the best strategy for keeping the partly French-owned automaker in Wisconsin.

He's examining the idea of building a factory usable for more than just making automobiles.

"Let us say you could find a group of private investors who would build a factory that could be leased at reasonable rates to American Motors but that could be adapted to other uses if AMC saw fit to terminate the lease," Lucey said. "It would need 2 million square feet, but would be divisible for other tenants."

In Detroit, company spokesman Lloyd Northard said AMC would respond to any of Lucey's comments only when it hears directly from him.

Dedeurwaerder has threatened to pull AMC out of Wisconsin if the state doesn't offer incentives.

Wisconsin's Constitution, however, bars incentives to one company that aren't available to all.

"There are limits to what we can do for a private company" Lucey said. "If we help one company, other corporate executives will say 'what about me?'"

It's a question AMC workers in Kenosha are asking, too.

"I have to hope this company is going to survive," said Rudy Kuzel, president of the United Auto Workers Local 72 at AMC. "If they can get some financing for a new plant, Kenosha has a lot going for it."

Others are less certain.

"I do think they'll continue," says Mike Fechner, 36, and owner of Fec's Place, a workingman's tavern half a block from the aging lakefront AMC plant. "Otherwise Kenosha will be a ghost town. Every business I know would be affected by it."

Lucey, who governor from 1971 to 1977 and was appointed U.S. ambassador to Mexico in 1977, now is a consultant to U.S. businesses operating in that country. He also teaches political science at Marquette University in Milwaukee.

Lucey says he has met just once with Dedeurwaeder, at a dinner at the governor's mansion, but he thought it was significant.

"If he (Dedeurwaerder) were not interested in keeping AMC in Wisconsin he would not have come," he said.

Corporate raiders to discuss oil company mergers

HOUSTON — Two leading authorities will discuss the impact on the oil and gas industry of mergers and financial reorganizations at Arthur Andersen & Co.'s Oil and Gas Symposium, December 5 and 6, in Houston.

In a panel session at the Symposium, John E. Swearingen and T. Boone Pickens will examine this controversial restructuring, perhaps the most important issue confronting industry executives today.

"We feel fortunate about the opportunity of having two of the industry's most prominent figures address this controversial and timely issue," said Richard Adkerson, moderator of the panel and director of Oil and Gas Industry Services of Arthur Andersen & Co. "During the past three years, the oil and gas industry has undergone massive structural changes affecting practically every company and each individual working in the industry, and the prospects for continuing realignment appear great," he added.

Swearingen, now chairman of the board and chief executive officer of Continental Illinois Corp., served as executive officer and chairman of the board of Standard Oil Co. of Indiana (AMOCO) for 18 years before retiring in September of 1983. During his leadership at AMOCO, he became a highly respected industry spokesman, serving as chairman of the National Petroleum Council, 1974-1976, and as president of the American Petroleum Institute, 1978-1979.

Pickens, as president and chairman of the board of directors of Mesa Petroleum Co., initiated transactions that led to the merger or restructuring of Gulf Oil, Cities Service, Unocal and several other companies. Mesa recently announced a plan to restructure itself as a publicly traded partnership.

The Arthur Andersen & Co. Symposium will also feature presentations by industry leaders on a wide range of other critical issues. The keynote address, "The Opaque Crystal Ball," will be delivered by independent oil producer Robert Mosbacher, who at the 1981 Arthur Anderson & Co. Symposium accurately forecast the severity of the then pending downturn in industry conditions. Luncheon speakers will be Hugh J. Kelly, president and chief executive officer of Ocean Drilling and Exploration Co. (ODECO), a leading contract drilling company and oil and gas producer, and Kenneth L. Lay, president and chief operating officer of HNG/InterNorth. Lay has been at the forefront of the emergence of the new environment for the natural gas industry.

The changing regulations and markets for natural gas will be a major theme of this year's Symposium. Leading natural gas industry executives will present sessions on recent actions by the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission and on the impact of pipeline mergers. Other sessions will address topics ranging from tax reform, master limited partnerships and the oilfield service industry.

Judge bars UPI suitor from contacting creditors, customers

WASHINGTON (AP) — A federal bankruptcy judge temporarily barred an unsuccessful bidder for United Press International from contacting the news agency's creditors and customers in an effort to replace the winning suitor.

U.S. Bankruptcy Judge George Francis Bason Jr. on Monday told Financial News Network, a distributor of business information over cable television and other outlets, that he will "not tolerate such activity" as communicating directly with creditors concerning the FNN offer to buy UPI.

"They are creating a potential for disaster," an attorney for UPI management said of FNN's activities. "This has been a very delicate situation."

The attorney, Richard Levine, said UPI will soon seek Bason's approval to sell the news agency to a partnership controlled by Mexican newspaper publisher Mario Vazquez Rana.

Joseph J. Levin Jr., attorney for FNN, said FNN and its partners were not given an adequate opportunity to present a new offer for UPI and that now the court was being asked "to enjoin our right to freedom of expression."

Bason issued a temporary restraining order and set Dec. 13 to hear further arguments.

Under bankruptcy law, the support of individual creditors can not be solicited until a reorganization plan, along with a full disclosure statement, is approved by the federal judge.

In the current case, UPI management had the exclusive right to submit a reorganization plan, although Bason modified that to include a committee of UPI creditors and officials of the union which represents UPI employees.

A purchaser must go to one of those three entities, seek its support and then make a submission to the court. After the rerganization plan is approved, it is then submitted to the creditors who then can be solicited directly.

Under the law, persons without standing, and thus not eligible to submit a reorganization plan, cannot solicit support for their plan from

Sohio sets pretax charge of $1.86 billion

New York Times News Service

NEW YORK — Joining the wave of restructuring that has coursed through the oil industry in recent years, the Standard Oil Co. (Ohio) announced a sweeping reorganization Tuesday that will result in a $1.86 billion pretax charge against its fourth-quarter earnings.

The charge, which Sohio said would amount to $1.15 billion after taxes, or $4.90 a share, will include $440 million to write down assets related to the company's financially troubled Kennecott copper facilities in Utah. Sohio said, however, it would spend $400 million to modernize the facilities.

The write-down also will include the disposal of copper, coal and shale oil reserves, oil and gas lease cancellations and previously announced staff reductions.

The Cleveland-based company said it expects the restructuring to result in "more than $500 million of increased net cash inflows during 1985 and 1986 due to tax effects and sales proceeds." It also said cost reductions from the move should contribute about $175 million after taxes to 1986 earnings.

Wall Street reacted positively. Analysts praised the oil company's action as a solid move, if somewhat overdue, and Sohio's stock closed at $52.75 on the New York Stock Exchange, up $1.75 for the day.

"Better late than never," remarked Alan Edgar, who follows the company for Schneider, Bernet & Hickman of Dallas. "The market was positive because people were waiting for Standard to take its medicine for its past mistakes just like the other big boys have."

Edgar was referring to similar moves by other oil companies — including Exxon, Atlantic Richfield and Pennzoil — to take special charges for poorly performing divisions acquired in recent years outside their main line of business. Sohio purchased the Kennecott Corp. in 1981.

Joel D. Fischer of Drexel Burnham Lambert said the Sohio announcement was particularly appealing because it balanced the decision to take the special charge, which the financial community had been awaiting, with the news that it would try to revitalize the Utah copper facilities.

"Sohio had to take some medicine," Fischer said, "but they covered the pill with enough sugar to sweeten the concoction."

He said many investors have been deeply worried about the copper division, which has not turned a profit since Sohio bought Kennecott to be the division's mainstay. In the first nine months of this year, the division lost $121 million.

Sohio as a whole earned $346 million, or $1.48 a share, in the third quarter on revenues of $3.4 billion. That compared with a profit of $359 million, or $1.49 a share, on revenues of $2.9 billion a year earlier.

The American Telephone and Telegraph Co. took a $5.2 billion after-tax write-down in the fourth quarter of 1983, by far the largest ever at a U.S. corporation. Other huge charges have included the Continental Illinois Bank's $1 billion write-down in the second quarter of 1984 and Union Carbide's $620 million after-tax special charge in this year's third quarter.

Oil companies that have taken substantial write-downs recently include Atlantic Richfield, which wrote down $1.3 billion pretax in the second quarter this year, and Texaco, which wrote down $765 million pretax in the fourth quarter of 1984.

Sohio broke down its $1.86 billion write-down like this:

—$530 million related to copper, coal and shale oil mineral reserves.

—$440 million related to the copper facilities in Utah.

—$260 million to cover losses from the disposal of uranium operations, consolidation of chemicals and industrial products divisions and regulatory expenses related to Alaskan operations.

—$255 million from losses expected from the disposal of certain undeveloped coal properties and the write-down of mine equipment and development costs.

—$210 million stemming from staff reduction and reorganization programs, which include closing exploration and production offices in San Francisco and Denver and eliminating 1,300 positions this year.

—$16 million on dry oil and gas wells and from canceled leases.

Alton W. Whitehouse, Sohio chairman and chief executive officer, said the write-down "recognizes concern about future oil prices, continued weak coal and copper markets and general economic uncertainties."

Further, he said the company was reducing its capital spending, including funds for exploration, to about $2.3 billion next year. Its capital expenditures for this year are expected to exceed $2.4 billion.

However, Whitehouse noted that Sohio expects "to realize significant cash flow" from the sale of assets and tax reductions that the reorganization should bring. He said the "flexibility" the reorganization will give the company should position it well for 1986.

"The major question," he said, speaking of next year, "will be the level of oil prices. We have taken significant steps to control those things which we can control and, given reasonable oil prices, we expect 1986 to be a good year for the company."

SLOVER

As to the actual merits of the white oil controversy, Slover says there is no black and white in the matter, but a lot of gray: "Both sides are guilty of attempting to maximize their limited resources," he said.

Slover said the real problem in the panhandle dispute has been the Railroad Commission's neglect to enforce Statewide Rule 26, which requires hydrocarbon liquids to be separated on the lease for purposes of taxation and royalty payment. He said the State, local taxing entities and royalty owners are losing millions in revenues each year because title to the gas is transferred at the wellhead, to a "daisy chain" of related companies.

"Some gas companies are not reporting the production or collection of liquid hydrocarbons," said Slover, who presented statistical records of the TRC to make his case.

He said District 10 of the TRC, in which the Panhandle East field is located reported only 10,338 barrels of condensate production out of 197,891, 340 Mcf of natural gas in 1983 and as the litigation in the panhandle oil dispute continued, the report got even lower with only 3,000 barrels reported for almost 200 million cubic ft. of gas.

"The statewide average for condensate is one-quarter gallon per Mcf, but in District 10 it was 1/125 of the statewide average in 1983, and 1/378 of the statewide average in 1984. The record would indicate that we have a very dry gas in the Panhandle, but we know for a fact that is not the case," said Slover.

"We have heard these complaints before," said Morrow, "and our response has been to investigate the matter. We determined that the maximum condensate produced in a well was .65 gallons per Mcf., but we are continuing to run tests. We have also looked into the matter of transports taking materials out of the fields and depositing them in Oklahoma. We have found that as a general rule all the condensate is being accounted for, but we can't say that every barrel is being accurately reported."

Slover said the definition imposed by FERC, which classifies wells with a gas-oil ratio of 100 mcf to one barrel, was totally unacceptable. "The industry can't live with this," he said.

"I don't recall that definition being a part of the hearing decision," said Morrow.

Slover said he wants to see one or more of the following three remedies enacted to remedy the problems of the Panhandle:

- State administration, Governor, Lieutenant Governor and Speaker of the House, should appeal to FERC to restore jusrisdiction in matters of well classification, completion, and operation to the states where they properly belong.
- Statewide Rule 26 should be enforced for the sake of the State and royalty owners.
- The citizens of Texas should consider impeaching the Texas Railroad Commission.

New-home sales down for third straight month

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sales of new homes fell for the third consecutive month in October, with the 5.5 percent decline the sharpest since last April, the government reported Tuesday.

New single-family homes were sold at an annual rate of 652,000 units in October, compared to a rate of 690,000 units in September, according to the joint report by the departments of Commerce and Housing and Urban Development.

The decline, the steepest since a 7.2 percent fall in April, followed drops of 4.9 percent in August and 3 percent in September.

The median price of a new home rose $1,000 last month to $86,200.

Conoco to sell interest in Canadian fields

CALGARY, Alberta — Conoco Canada Ltd. and Ocelot Industries Ltd. jointly have announced that agreement has been reached for Ocelot to sell Conoco Canada its interests in four oil fields and one natural gas field in Alberta.

The sale is valued at $48.1 million Canadian ($35 million U.S.).

Conoco Canada Ltd. is an affiliate of Conoco, a subidiary of the Du Pont Co. Ocelot Industries Ltd., based in Calgary, is a Canadian independent oil company involved in exploration, production, oil field services and petrochemicals.

Conoco Canada will become operator of the Crystal Non-unit, David and Simonette oil fields and the Ferrybank gas field, involving 36 oil and 11 gas wells. Conoco Canada will also acquire a 13.35 percent interest in the Crystal Unit oil field.

Reserve figures for the properties were not disclosed.

The Crystal and Ferrybank fields are south of Edmonton, Alberta; Simonette is northwest of Edmonton, and David is southeast of Edmonton near the Saskatchewan-Alberta border.

"The acquisition of these properties will significantly expand Conoco Canada's presence in Canada by increasing our reserves and production, and signifies our confidence in the Candian petroleum industry," said W.D. (Bill) Simmons, president of Conoco Ltd.

BUSINESS BRIEFS

Mary Kay stockholders approve buyout

DALLAS (AP) — Stockholders of Mary Kay Cosmetics Inc. have approved a $389.5 million leveraged buyout of the company that allows it to once again become a privately held concern.

Company founder Mary Kay Ash, in a meeting Tuesday that lasted only 15 minutes, received approval of the merger agreement which provides for acquisition of the company by an investor group headed by her and her son, Richard R. Rogers.

Officials said the deal would be finalized today in New York. Under the agreement, stockholders were asked to sell their shares back to the company for $11 in cash and $8.25 in 15-year debentures.

Ms. Ash is the chairman and Rogers the president of Mary Kay Cosmetics.

Last spring, Mary Kay officials announced they wanted to return the company to private status, which it had held from its founding in 1963 until 1968.

Japanese allege unequal U.S. steel policy

WASHINGTON (AP) — Japanese steelmakers have accused the United States of unequal trade policies that they contend have caused Japan to fall from its position as America's leading steel trading partner.

In its first open criticism of President Reagan's steel import program, the Japan Iron and Steel Exporters' Association said in a statement Tuesday that Japan apparently had been singled out for tougher treatment than other groups, such as the 10-nation European Economic Community.

"When we reluctantly agreed earlier this year with President Reagan's steel quota program to help the American steel industry revitalize, one of our main concerns was that we not lose our market position in the United States vis-a-vis other foreign exporters such as the EEC," Haruki Kamiya of the association said in the statement.

"Our concerns were not unfounded."

In late 1984, the Reagan administration embarked on a five-year program of negotiating restraint agreements with steel-exporting countries to try to give domestic producers breathing space from foreign competition. The goal was to reduce the foreign share of the U.S. steel market from about 25 percent to about 18.5 percent, except for an additional 1.7 million tons of semi-finished steel.

Union members casting second strike votes

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) — Machinist union members at Pratt & Whitney's fourth and largest Connecticut plant began casting ballots in a second strike vote early today, after a federal judge refused management's bid to block the voting.

Pratt & Whitney's parent company, United Technologies Corp., challenged the second vote at the jet engine maker's East Hartford plant, arguing that a new contract took effect when the union failed to get a two-thirds strike vote on the first ballot Sunday.

Judge T. Emmet Clarie on Tuesday refused to issue an injunction.

The Machinists are seeking to widen the 2-day-old strike of about 5,000 hourly workers at three other Pratt & Whitney plants in Middletown, Southington, and North Haven.

The East Hartford plant has 7,700 hourly workers, with about 4,500 eligible to vote. Today's balloting began at 3 a.m. and was to run until 8 p.m.

Officials from District 91 of the Machinists union said a second vote was necessary because some union members from the East Hartford plant were locked out of Sunday's voting.

The strike began Monday after the union rejected a three-year contract offer, unable to agree on wages, job security, health insurance benefits and pensions. The Machinists union represents about 14,800 workers.

Licensing board criticizes nuclear plant report

DALLAS (AP) — Builders of the Comanche Peak nuclear power plant have been criticized by a federal licensing panel for misleading the board on sampling of U-bolts in the plant.

The Atomic Safety and Licensing Board order, released on Tuesday by tehe Citizens Association for Sound Energy, urged Texas Utilities Generating Co. to be more "careful, precise and trustworthy."

The order found that a random "representative sample" of U-bolts examined last year by the utility did not include any bolts in Unit 1, the first reactor scheduled to become operational in the two-unit plant.

The Unit 2 bolts may have been representative of the Unit 1 bolts but the utility never presented any such evidence, said Peter Bloch, board chairman.

Sandinistas 'soft on capitalism'

Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

MANAGUA, Nicaragua — Three Nicaraguan Communist parties are squabbling with the leftist Sandinista government and accuse it of being authoritarian, unproletarian and soft on capitalism.

The criticism from the Marxist-Leninist left has become increasingly strident in recent months. While critics on the right charge that the Sandinistas are going communist, the essential complaint on the left is that they are not.

"The rift has reached a climate — we wouldn't say of rupture — but of some hostility," said Domingo Sanchez Salgado of the Nicaraguan Socialist Party.

The Socialists are Nicaragua's oldest communist organization, and Sanchez Salgado, 69, is its grand old man. In an interview, he scored the Sandinistas for surrounding themselves with "bourgeois and petit bourgeois forces."

The bourgeoisie, of course, is the traditional capitalist-class enemy of the proletarian Marxist.

"There are very few elements of the working class in the government," Sanchez Salgado said. As a result, he argued, the Sandinistas and their revolution "are losing their way...They are not advancing toward socialist transformations."

Sanchez Salgado also portrayed the ruling Sandinista Front as authoritarian and intolerant.

"As far as the Sandinistas are concerned, there is no right to dissent," he said. "If you oppose what they say, you are a counter-revolutionary."

The Socialist Party is one of three avowedly Marxist-Leninist parties represented in the National Assembly, which was elected in November 1984. The other two are the Nicaraguan Communist Party and the Marxist Leninist Popular Action Movement, known by the Spanish initials MAP-ML.

The Communist Party is a splinter of the Soviet-line Socialists, and the MAP-ML is a more radical party that scornfully labels the other two "revisionist."

All three backed the Sandinistas when they took power in a 1979 guerrilla war against the right-wing regime of Gen. Anastasio Somoza. But troubles soon began.

South African police clash with rioters in Cape townships

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Police said today that they clashed with black rioters in six Cape province townships, and shot and killed a black man in a skirmish with rock-throwing protesters in the Crossroads squatter settlement.

In Soweto, outside Johannesburg, police said a hand grenade was hurled at a patrolling army vehicle today, but caused no damage or injuries. A spokesman said there was no connection between the blast and a white Cabinet minister's visit to senior black politicians in Soweto.

Chris Heunis, minister of constitutional development and planning, was miles away from the scene of the attack, the police headquarters spokesman said.

Apart from that incident, violence from Tuesday night to early today was confined to the Port Elizabeth and Cape Town regions in the Cape provice, police headquarters said. Most of the incidents consisted of stonings and arson attacks against private cars, police vehicles and buses, police said.

Police said stone-throwers caused extensive damage to private vehicles in attacks at Crossroads, and injured the black driver of one of the cars. In one case, police opened fire at a rock-thrower, fatally wounding a black man. Another man was injured and a third was arrested, police said.

Police have reported several sniper attacks in recent days in Crossroads, east of Cape Town. On Tuesday, riot patrols staged a major security sweep, rounding up an estimated 140 residents and detaining 33.

A crowd of about 200 women, many with babies on their backs, marched on a nearby police station to demand the release of those who were detained, news reports said. The women dispersed after being told most of those held were being released.

"The blood of our heroes will be avenged," said Winnie Mandela, wife of jailed African National Congress leader, Nelson Mandela, as she defied her banning order by addressing a huge funeral crowd in Mamelodi township outside Pretoria, South Africa, Tuesday.

The five-hour, house-to-house operation involved about 1,000 police and soldiers, Cape Town police spokesman Lt. Attie Laubscher said. He said one person was held for possessing an unlicensed firearm and the others for possessing or selling marijuana, keeping stolen property, or attending illegal meetings.

Laubscher said he had refused to allow the Cape Times newspaper to publish pictures of the marching women, citing state-of-emergency rules barring visual coverage of unrest and protests.

The Cape Town area stayed relatively calm until August, when serious rioting broke out both in black and mixed race townships. On Oct. 24 President P.W. Botha extended the state of emergency to eight Cape Town districts, giving police wide powers to arrest without warrants, declare curfews and seize property.

Botha lifted the four-month-old emergency rules in eight small, rural areas on Tuesday in the eastern Cape, the Transvaal and Orange Free State Province, saying that "the revolutionary climate is fast losing momentum."

As many as 50,000 black mourners packed a soccer stadium in the township of Mamelodi, near Pretoria, Tuesday for the funeral of 12 blacks killed in one of the bloodiest days in 15 months of protests against apartheid.

Ethiopia to have 1986 crop shortfall, FAO reports

ADDIS ABABA, Ethiopia (AP) — Ethiopia will have a crop shortfall of about 1 million metric tons next year and will need food aid for up to 6 million people, United Nations officials reported Tuesday.

The statement was in a preliminary report released jointly by the U.N. Food and Agriculture Organization, the World Food Program and the U.N. Emergency Operations Office in Ethiopia.

A final version of the report will be issued by the FAO in Rome later this month. The report assessed only crops, not overall food requirements.

Ethiopia's Relief and Rehabilitation Commission, which oversees the international famine relief effort, issued its own report last month saying the country would need 1.2 million tons of food aid in 1986.

The FAO report said Ethiopia's total food crop will be 6.3 million tons, about 13 percent below what the U.N. organization calls the normal 7.3 million tons.

"Even in normal years, Ethiopia is dependent on food imports and food aid," the report said. "The amount of food aid needed for a certain year should not be related only to the production of that year."

Meanwhile, non-food aid to 20 famine-stricken countries in Africa this year is fulfilling only 35 percent to 40 percent of the needs, a senior U.N. official said Tuesday in Tokyo.

"In a number of cases there was improvisation, and over the years the Africans have learned to get along without something they need," said Bradford Morse, director of the U.N. Office for Emergency Operations in Africa.

"We could have used a lot more money for agricultural input such as seeds, tools, fertilizer, insecticides, vaccines, water and health projects," Morse said. Other supplies include items such as tents, blankets and stoves, and trucks to distribute them.

Fourteen killed in Israeli strike, police say

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Police said today that 14 people, including eight Palestinian guerrillas and two Israeli soldiers, were killed in Israel's first ground strike this year against a Palestinian base in southern Lebanon.

Israeli troops, backed by tanks and helicopter gunships, Tuesday swept 12 miles north of the border into the Bekaa Valley, where they battled Palestinians for eight hours.

Police reported that the dead included two Israeli soldiers, eight guerrillas of the Libyan-backed Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine-General Command, three Lebanese Druse militiamen and one Lebanese army soldier.

A spokesman at the police headquarters in Beirut, who declined to be identified in keeping with government regulations, said the casualty report was based on information received overnight from police stations in the western Bekaa sector.

However, the Israeli military command in Tel Aviv said Tuesday afternoon its forces killed five of the Libyan-backed guerrillas and captured several others in the strike northeast of Hasbaya, a mainly Druse town in the foothills of Mount Hermon.

The command made no mention of Israeli losses. Israel state radio said in its Arabic service that all Israeli troops returned safely from the raid, which was close to the Syrian border.

WORLD in brief

Non-toxic gas leak causes mass panic in New Delhi

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — A cloud of non-toxic gas leaked from a fertilizer plant and floated over a congested area of the Indian capital today, sending hundreds of residents fleeing in panic, police said.

The United News of India reported two people were hospitalized in serious condition, while more than 200 others were released from hospitals after receiving first aid.

Earlier, city Chief Secretary Virendra Prakash said 53 people were taken to hospitals and all but five were released after receiving first aid. Police spokesman Satish Sharma had said no one was seriously hurt.

Three employees of the fertilizer plant were arrested on charges of "causing injuries due to negligence," Sharma said.

The leak occurred one day after the first anniversary of the gas leak at the Union Carbide plant in Bhopal that killed more than 2,000 people.

Guerrillas hit Soviet convoy

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan (AP) — Afghan guerrillas destroyed 16 fuel tankers in an attack on a Soviet fuel convoy in northern Afghanistan, and 15 civilians were killed when a bus was caught in the ambush, sources said Tuesday.

In another development, travelers said in Islamabad that Pakistan closed the Khyber Pass, connecting Pakistan with Afghanistan, after moving troops into the area in a hunt for rebellious tribesmen. The travelers, who insisted on anonymity, said the pass was closed to all traffic Monday.

Sources speaking on condition of anonymity said the region has been the scene of pro-Afghan activities by tribal leader Wali Khan Kukikhel inside Pakistani territory.

Malta refuses request

VALLETTA, Malta (AP) — A government spokesman said today that Malta does not intend to comply with Egypt's request to extradite the man thought to be the sole surviving hijacker of an Egyptair jet.

Government spokesman Paul Mifsud also said Maltese authorities believe the terrorists who hijacked the airliner to Malta last month are Palestinian. No information was available immediately on why officials came to that conclusion.

The Egyptair Boeing 737 was hijacked Nov. 23 on a Athens-to-Cairo flight. Five people were shot, two of whom died, before Egyptian commandos stormed the plane Nov. 24. Fifty-eight people died in the fiery rescue attempt, most from smoke inhalation but some from bullet wounds, according to Maltese investigators.

Nicaraguans seek asylum

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — Eight Nicaraguans, including an army captain and his family, have taken refuge in the Venezuelan Embassy in recent weeks and asked for political asylum, a diplomatic source said Tuesday.

The source, who would not permit use of his name or country for security reasons, said Capt. Roberto Granera, 30, a doctor at the Military Hospital of Nicaragua, sought asylum at the embassy Nov. 22 with his wife and five children.

Holidays Are For Singles, Too!

It's no fun to be away from family and/or old and good friends during the holidays.

But it happens to a lot of people, and you probably know some of them. Maybe you just might be one of them yourself.

There are certainly a lot of career-oriented singles who face the prospect of being far from "home" at the festive season. Many are too recently arrived in new locations to have made more than passing acquaintances.

Then there are the recently divorced or widowed of both sexes who moved back into town because "the suburbs are for couples," only to discover that cities can be pretty solitary, too. As in lonely.

If you're serious about expanding your circle, as everybody should be, look around. Find those others whose lifestyles are stuck just now in an alone-at-the-holidays scenario. These who you gather together might be people who work where you do, live in the same apartment complex, shop in your supermarket — or even cashier there. Talk and ask. Ask them to share a holiday get-together with you at your place.

Now having gotten a crowd together, get the act together. This is going to be an easy and relaxed holiday feast, one that can be put together in the most challenging small-space kitchen.

When guests arrive at whatever is the appointed time, a festive way to greet them is with a delicious sangria — this one different because it has a tea base. Tea and white wine seem to have a particular affinity, and if you've never tried the idea before you'll feel a thrill of discovery. If it's a seasonably chilly day or evening, a hot mulled tea may be part of the welcome. Teetotalers (no pun intended) and designated drivers will appreciate this nice touch. The hot tea drink tastes so good it's hard to believe that alcohol is missing.

Whether the affair takes place at midday, early or late evening, or brunch, the main event will be worth celebrating. The star casserole of South African rock lobster is festive to look at, luscious to taste, elegant and very very easy to make. The rock lobster meat and the potatoes can be prepared ahead of time and assembled in the sauce just before being put into the oven for a cooking time of less than half an hour.

Since this succulent seafood is everybody's favorite when eating out, the person who is hosting this party will know he or she has a winner in this dish. Nice, also, is that the potatoes stretch the rock lobster meat. Six four-ounce tails in this dish serve six people very generously.

There's a thread of good flavor that binds everything together in this holiday repast. It's used in the sangria, as a flavoring in the main dish, as an ingredient in the salad dressing. It's Angostura aromatic bitters, a blend of all the exciting and exotic spices we all associate with the holidays. There's nothing like it. This versatile seasoning and flavoring agent does different things for everything it's used in, since it has the unique quality of marrying other flavors in the dish or the drink, while adding a subtle touch of its own.

The dessert for this holiday party is a "mincemeat" pie. It seems that many people actually don't like mincemeat, seemingly tolerating a small slice of pie only in deference to the holiday spirit. Well, this "mincemeat" pie is made from blueberries, so it's guaranteed to please everybody! It's got all the holiday taste without the dried fruits and suet. You've never tasted a blueberry pie like this one. It's different, delicious and is about to build a holiday tradition of its own.

When you do make this pie, go to the little extra effort to put on the lattice top, rather than a solid top crust. The tradition of lattice-topped pies at holiday time originated in England centuries ago. The lattice represents the hay rack in the stable where the Christ Child was born. It's an interesting conversation piece.

Good conversation, good food and good fellowship will make your guests feel warm and belonging. After all, you provided an interesting bright spot in their holiday season.

And in your own.

DRESSING FOR A WARM RECEPTION

Port of Spain Salad Dressing

- 1/2 teaspoon salt
- 1/4 teaspoon sugar
- 1/4 teaspoon paprika
- 1/3 cup salad oil
- 2 tablespoons lemon juice
- 1 teaspoon Angostura aromatic bitters
- 1 tablespoon each of minced onion, minced green pepper, minced celery

Combine salt, sugar and paprika. Add salad oil and blend. Add lemon juice, Angostura, onion, green pepper, and celery, and beat well.

Toss with a salad of not only "greens," but radish roses, tomato slices, sweet onions, carrots, cauliflowerets and cucumber slices.

CELEBRATING IN STYLE

Rock Lobster Star Casserole

- 6 (4 oz. ea.) frozen South African rock lobster tails
- 3 cups cooked potatoes, diced
- 2 tablespoons butter or margarine
- 2 tablespoons flour
- 2 cups milk
- 1/2 teaspoon salt (or to taste)
- 1/2 teaspoon pepper
- 1/2 teaspoon Angostura aromatic bitters
- 1/4 cup drained capers
- 1 tablespoon onion, finely chopped
- 1/2 lb. grated mild cheddar cheese
- Parsley sprig garnish, optional

Parboil frozen South African rock lobster tails by dropping into boiling salted water; when water reboils boil for 4 minutes. Drain immediately and drench with cold water. Cut underside membrane and insert fingers between shell and meat at heavy end of tail. Work meat loose from shell and remove in one piece. Slice meat from three tails into medallions; slice the remaining three tails in half lengthwise and reserve. Combine diced potatoes and rock lobster medallions in greased 2-quart oven dish. In saucepan, melt butter or margarine; stir in flour and add milk gradually. Cook over low flame stirring constantly until smooth and thickened. Add salt, pepper, Angostura aromatic bitters, capers and onions; stir cheese into hot sauce and continue cooking until cheese is melted. Pour sauce over rock lobster and potato mixture. Bake at 375°F. for 15 minutes. Remove from oven and arrange reserved 6 halves on top in star fashion. Bake an additional 5 minutes. Yield: 6 servings.

NOTE: This recipe can be doubled or tripled for larger parties. The rock lobster and potatoes can be prepared ahead of time.

MAKING MERRY WITH A BERRY

Blueberry "Mincemeat" Pie

- Unbaked pastry for one 2-crust 10-inch pie
- 1/4 cup water
- 1 tablespoon lemon juice
- 1 beef bouillon cube
- 3 green apples, unpeeled, cored and finely chopped
- 4 cups dry-pack frozen blueberries
- 2 medium zucchini squash, trimmed and finely chopped
- 2 tablespoons minced orange peel
- 1 tablespoon Angostura aromatic bitters
- 1 cup sugar
- 1/4 teaspoon nutmeg
- 2 envelopes unflavored gelatine
- 1/2 cup water

In a large saucepan, mix water, lemon juice, bouillon cube, apples, blueberries, squash, orange peel, Angostura, sugar and nutmeg. Cover and simmer for 30 minutes, stirring occasionally. Stir gelatine into cold water. Add gelatine mixture to hot mincemeat and stir to dissolve. Cover and chill until set, about 5 hours or overnight. Preheat oven to 425°F. Divide pastry dough in half. Roll out one piece and fit into pie pan. Roll out second piece and cut into 1/2 inch wide strips. Pour 5 cups of mincemeat into pie shell. Brush edge of pie rim with beaten egg. Place strips of pie dough on top of pie in a lattice. Trim pastry to one inch from edge of pie and fold pastry inward to seal edge. Make a decorative edge on rim. Brush pastry with a beaten egg if desired and bake on rack below center of oven for approximately 40 minutes, or until crust is golden brown.

NOTE: Keep any leftover mincemeat in refrigerator. It is delicious served as a relish with meat or poultry.

LIFTING A CONVIVIAL CUP

Festive Tea Sangria
(makes about 9 cups)

- 6 rounded tablespoons lemon-flavored iced tea mix
- 1 tablespoon Angostura aromatic bitters
- 1/4 cup sugar
- 4 cups cold water
- 3 cups apple juice, chilled
- 2 cups dry white wine, chilled
- 1 lime, sliced
- 2/3 cup sliced strawberries

Combine tea mix, Angostura, sugar and water; stir to dissolve sugar. Mix in apple juice and wine. Chill. When ready to serve, add lime slices and berries. Pour over ice in large pitcher.

Aromatic Mulled Tea
(makes about 9 cups)

- 6 cups boiling water
- 8 teabags
- 2 tablespoons Angostura aromatic bitters
- 1/2 cup sugar or to taste
- 6 orange slices, halved and studded with 1 whole clove per half
- 1/2 teaspoon nutmeg
- 1 teaspoon cinnamon
- 3 cups cranberry drink

Pour boiling water over tea, Angostura, sugar, orange slices and spices; stir to dissolve sugar. Cover and let stand 5 minutes. Meanwhile, heat cranberry drink. Combine with tea. Remove teabags. Serve piping hot with a half orange slice in each mug.

WHAT'S COOKING

New York dishes brought south

By ELIZABETH EDWIN
Lifestyle Writer

Although Nellie Benjamin is not a native Texan, she has spent quite a bit of time in Midland.

For the past seven years Mrs. Benjamin and her husband Rod have spent seven months a year in their Midland town home.

Mrs. Benjamin is originally from Cooperstown, N.Y., and her husband is from Burlington, N.Y. The two towns are not too far apart, so some of the activities involved people in both towns.

"I met him (her husband) at a Grange dance. I don't think you have those down here," Mrs. Benjamin said. "It's a secret order, kind of like the Masons."

Mrs. Benjamin was raised by her father and grandmother due to her mother's death when she was three years old. Her father was a dairy farmer, as were most of the people in the area she grew up in.

"They were just good people," Mrs. Benjamin said of the people in the Cooperstown area.

Her husband was a carpenter and when they retired, they began traveling. They came to Midland to visit their daughter, Gloria Parsons.

"When Gloria's husband was transferred here, we came to visit and my husband liked it. I got a little home sick at first, but I like it now," Mrs. Benjamin said.

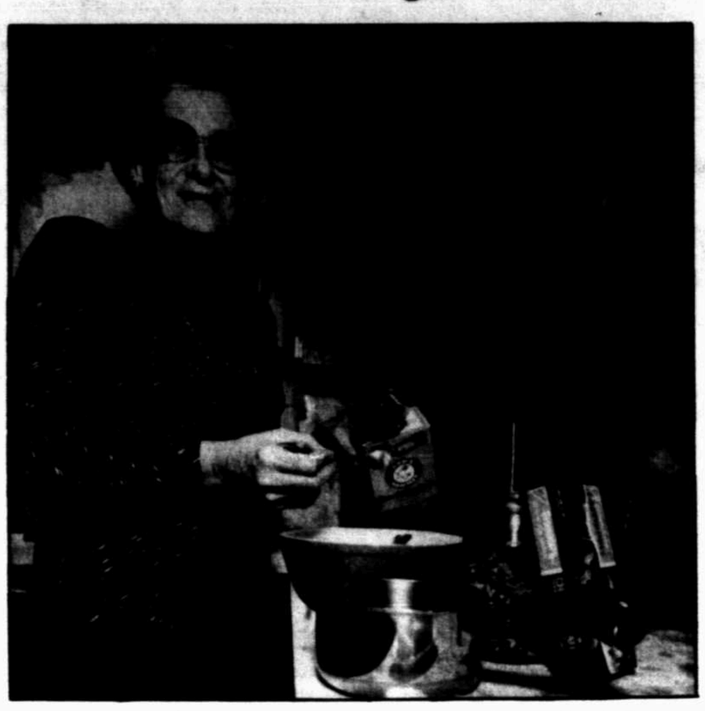

Each year, the Benjamins spend five months in New York camping on Crystal Lake. Then they take three or four days and drive 2,000 miles to Midland to spend the winter and spring months in their town home. They often take different routes to see the country as they travel.

"We try not to leave the lake until the last week in September so we can see the leaves change. They are so beautiful," Mrs. Benjamin said.

While in Midland, Mr. Benjamin still does some carpentry work and Mrs. Benjamin has become involved with the Chaparral Home Demonstration Club.

"Although not all of the children always get to come here (Midland) for the holidays, we always have Christmas here at our house," Mrs. Benjamin said. "You cook a little bit different down here. In Cooperstown we had butternut squash, turnips and cabbage along with the sage dressing and turkey."

In order to keep a few Northern family traditions, Mrs. Benjamin brings the butternut squash from her brother's garden in New York with her to Midland. She keeps it in a dark, cool closet in her town home until Christmas to keep it from ripening too much. To prepare the squash she usually bakes or boils it and seasons it with salt and pepper.

One of the families' favorite holiday treats is Mrs. Benjamin's Christmas Date Pudding. She discovered the recipe when she was serving on a food committee with Stella Jones, one of her friends in New York. Their project was desserts. Her family liked the date pudding Ms. Jones made, so Mrs. Benjamin got the recipe and began making it for her family's Christmas dinner. That was 45 years ago. Her Christmas Date Pudding is as much a part of their Christmas tradition now as the turkey is.

The following recipe is straight from Mrs. Benjamin's kitchen. She recommends using the prechopped dates to save time. Also, her preference is walnuts for this recipe, but any nut will do.

CHRISTMAS DATE PUDDING

PART 1
½ cup dates cut fine
1 teaspoon baking soda, sift over dates
Add 1 cup boiling water and cool.

PART 2
Cream together:
1 cup sugar
1 tablespoon butter
1 egg
Then add:
1½ cups all-purpose flour
1 teaspoon baking powder
½ cup nut meats cut fine

Now add first part and blend well. Pour into a 9-by 9-by 2-inch square pan. Bake at 350 degrees for about 30-35 minutes or until a toothpick inserted into the pudding comes out clean.

PART 3
While the pudding is baking make a syrup of:
½ cup dates cut fine
½ cup nut meats cut fine
1 cup sugar
⅔ cup hot water

Let the mixture come to a boil and simmer until pudding is baked then pour the syrup over the pudding as soon as it comes out of the oven.

Serve cold — Cut in squares and serve with whipped cream topping with a red cherry on top.

This may be made the day before serving and also freezes well.

This is the second in a four-part "What's Cooking" series featuring the holiday recipes of local home extension club members.

Pecan roll copied for Christmas candy

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
AP Food Editor

DEAR CECILY: This year I'd like to make pecan rolls for Christmas. Have you a recipe similar to the pecan rolls sold by a chain of shops that originated in Florida? Those rolls have white nougat centers and pecan-studded caramel coatings. — CANDY MAKER.

DEAR CANDY MAKER: Friends of mine worked out the recipe you want. However, the bought rolls have their nougat centers dotted with bits of maraschino cherries; the recipe for the homemade rolls omits the cherries. — C.B.

COPY CAT
PECAN ROLLS

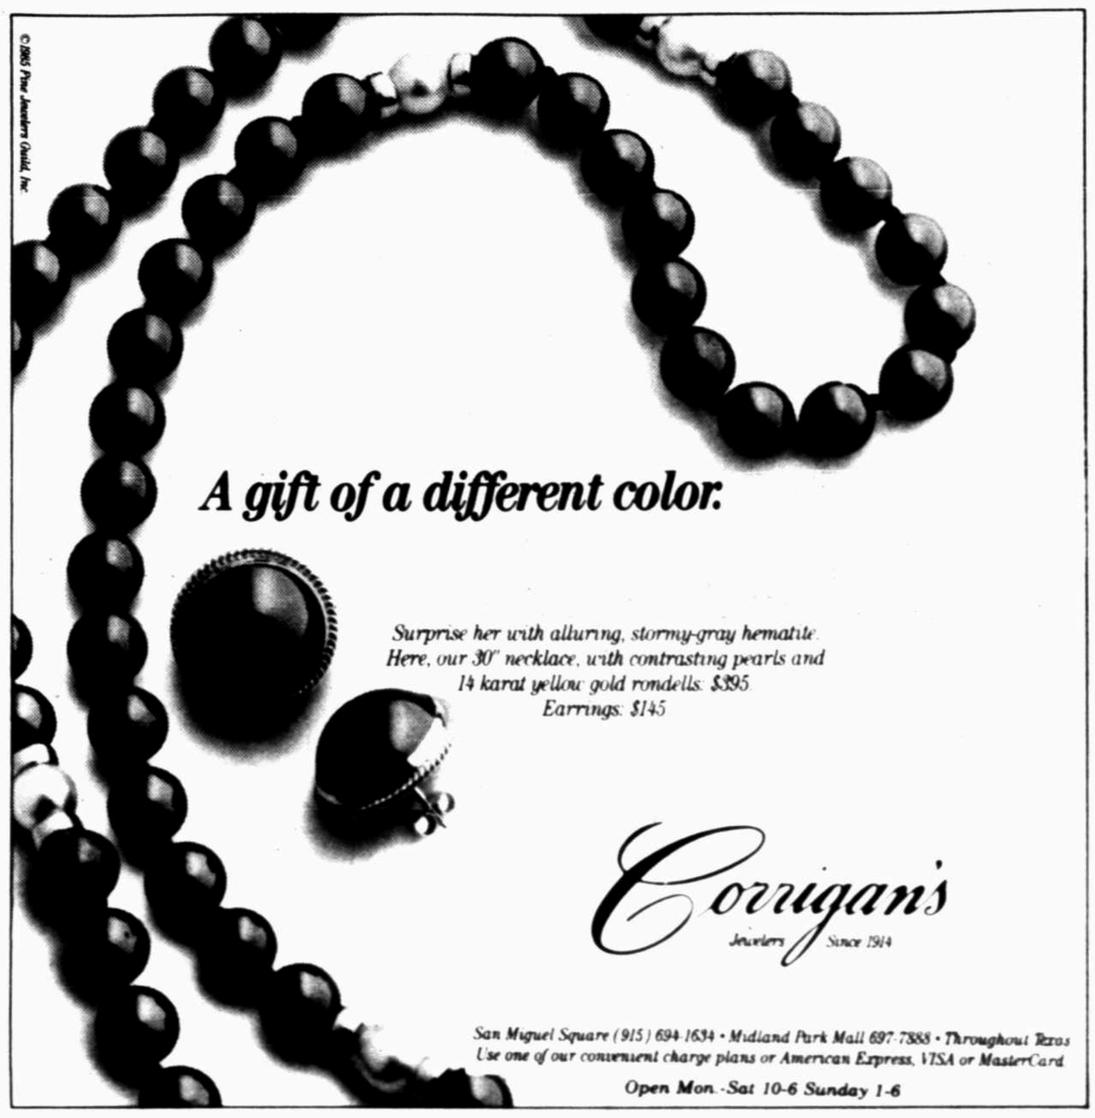

2 cups sugar
½ cup light corn syrup
½ cup water
1 large egg white
1 teaspoon vanilla
3 cups (about) pecans, coarsely chopped
Caramel Coating, see recipe

In a 2-quart saucepan over medium heat stir together sugar, corn syrup and water until sugar dissolves and mixture boils. Without stirring, boil gently until a candy thermometer reaches 250 degrees, or a small amount of mixture dropped into very cold water forms a ball that is hard enough to hold its shape but still plastic. Just before syrup reaches 250 degrees, in the small bowl of an electric mixer at high speed, beat egg white and vanilla until soft peaks form. Beating constantly, slowly pour hot syrup over egg white. Continue beating about 10 to 12 minutes or until stiff peaks form. If mixture becomes too stiff for mixer, beat with a wooden spoon. Cool. Divide into sixths. Shape into six 4-by 1-inch rolls. Wrap in saran. Refrigerate at least 4 hours or until cold and firm — a day or two if you like.

When ready to coat rolls spread pecans on a cookie sheet. Prepare Caramel Coating and remove from heat; when mixture stops boiling, lower rolls, one at a time, using two forks, into Caramel Coating, turning to coat completely. Roll in pecans. Cool. (Drop any remaining Caramel Coating by tablespoons onto chopped pecans to form candies.) Wrap cooled rolls tightly in saran. To serve, slice ¼-inch thick.

Caramel Coating:

In a 2-quart saucepan over low heat, stirring constantly, bring one 14-ounce can sweetened condensed milk, 1 cup sugar, ½ cup light corn syrup and ⅛ teaspoon salt to the boil. Continue cooking over low heat, stirring almost constantly, until a candy thermometer reaches 234 degrees (soft ball stage) — about 1 hour. Remove from heat and use as directed in Copycat Pecan Rolls recipe.

Tips offered on holiday dieting

Associated Press

Now's the time to resolve that this year you won't have to make that annual New Year's resolution — to lose the extra pounds you put on over the holidays. Follow these smart eating rules for healthful — and satisfying — holiday feasting. Come Jan. 1, you'll be glad you did, claim the editors of Better Homes and Gardens.

As Pavlov showed, subtle cues can make us think we want to eat. These signs trigger a reaction that makes us feel hungry. This list of weight reducing hints can help you reduce weight gain.

— Remove sight cues: Store food in opaque containers. If "seconds" tempt, serve plates from the stove.

— Avoid the desire triggered by location: Eat in one room only, and not in front of the TV or in bed.

— "Don't gobble your food," Mama said. More than good manners is at stake. As many as 20 or so minutes pass between the first bite and the time that your brain gets the word that you're satisfied. The more slowly you eat, the less you eat before you realize you've eaten.

— Plan family holiday celebrations around activities, not the table. Every turkey — or person — need not be stuffed for an enjoyable holiday.

— Concentrate on quality, not quantity. Many holiday meals become a groaning board of duplicates. One beautifully prepared meat or dessert, for example, will satisfy as well as many.

— Eggnog may be seasonal, but you can also keep the holiday feeling with sugar-free hot chocolate, hot spiced tea, wassail, or cranberry juice.

— Thank friends and relatives for high-calorie food gifts, then head promptly for the freezer or cabinet. Parcel out the goodies in small quantities.

— Instead of giving food gifts, try your hand at a craft or give an IOU for a service, such as a car washing.

— Never skip meals before or after your family's big dinner or a party. When you fall into this famine-feast-famine cycle, your body prepares for the worst by learning to burn calories more efficiently. The upshot: You use fewer calories and store the surplus.

— Drink a large glass of water before you eat and you'll eat less.

— Don't eat while standing. (You eat faster in that position.)

— Collect nibble foods on a plate to help you judge amounts better.

— If alcohol is served, it's not rude to ask for extra ice, less alcohol, or nonalcoholic beverages.

— Avoid salty or hot foods that start an eat-drink-eat cycle.

— Choose single-crust pie over double-crust and, in general, pies topped with commercial whipped toppings or meringue rather than whipped cream.

— Season with herbs and skip the sauces and butter toppings.

— Plan one very low-cal food for each meal (broccoli, cauliflower, radishes, greens) so that you get maximum munching with the fewest calories.

— Eat raw veggies and fruits. With more bulk than their cooked counterparts, they make you feel more "full."

— Roast chicken and turkey in a bag so you won't need butter for browning.

— Cut back on optional ingredients in holiday recipes. Items such as coconut and chocolate chips add big calories.

— Dip into low-cal plain yogurt when a recipe calls for sour cream or, in many cases, mayonnaise. (Mustard also may substitute for mayonnaise.) The yogurt-haters won't know the difference if the food is made savory with herbs and spices, but your calorie count will.

— Substitute evaporated skim milk for evaporated whole milk (such as in the traditional pumpkin pie); nondairy whipped toppings for whipped cream; and half-and-half for heavy cream.

'Healthy' carob bars contain saturated fat

Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

Carob bars, often sold as health food, are just as nutritionally detrimental as the chocolate bars they imitate, the Nutrition Action Healthletter reports. Both contain saturated fat, which causes heart disease. The chocolate's fat is from cocoa butter; the carob's, from palm oil.

American Meat Institute attempting to beef up market

By JIM WOOD
Hearst News Service

If you're one of millions of Americans cutting back on steak because you think it's fattening, watch out. You've been targeted by the American Meat Institute, and in the next few months you'll be hearing a lot about beef being "nutrient dense."

Faced with a slipping market share, lean beef is now the ideal. Just how thin is the new beef? U.S. Department of Agriculture scientists say fed cattle now contain about 6 percent less fat than they did in the 1950s. The Beef Industry Council gives the following calorie count for 3-ounce servings: Tenderloin steak, 183 calories; top round steak 166; strip loin, boneless, 182; flank steak, 196; top sirloin butt steak, center cut, 185 calories.

There's a slight catch in those figures. Three ounces is the standard beef serving unit in calorie charts, and it's the amount nutritionists say we should eat. But the truth is that most of us are accustomed to much larger servings. A standard portion is five or six ounces.

Sarah H. Short, Ph.D., Ed.D., a gracious veteran of more than 600 media appearences for the American Meat Institute, says Americans should cut back on the size of their portions.

"Part of it is the way children are trained," she says. "They're rewarded with food or sweets when they're good instead of with love and kisses. They grow up associating food with rewards."

Americans also snack under stress, she says, which leads to an imbalanced diet. Short says that to be healthy, you should eat a variety of foods, cut back on portions and exercise regularly.

WHEN SHORT says it, steak sounds so, well, respectable.

As part of its campaign, the meat industry will be providing meat the same kind of nutrient charts that you find on the back of a can of peanuts or a carton of milk. But you don't have to wait for the campaign to begin. Here are some tips right now for cutting back on fat:

— Trim the outside fat from meats before cooking and trim any separable fat before eating.

— Remove the skin from chicken and turkey before eating.

— Limit the use of sugar, fats, oils, sauces and gravies.

— Season with herbs or spices instead of butter, margarine or cream sauces.

— Bake, broil or roast meats on a rack so the meats will stay above the drippings.

— Remove the fat from the surface of stews or soups after cooling.

— Select lean cuts of meat.

In addition, you can reduce fat by sensible cooking. To roast, place the meat fat side up on a rack in an open roasting pan, do not add water or cover, and roast in a slow oven (300-350 degrees). If you use a thermometer, be careful to insert it so that it isn't touching bone or fat. Take the roast out when it is 5 degrees below the temperature you are seeking and let it rest 15 to 20 minutes before carving. During that time, the internal temperature will increase 5 degrees to the level you want.

WHEN BROILING, let the broiler (or charcoal grill) heat up, then place the meat 3 to 5 inches from the source. If the piece is thinly cut, 2 to 3 inches may be better. Broil until the meat is brown on one side and then turn. Season after broiling. In panbroiling, place the meat in a heavy, preheated frying pan (grease lightly for lean cuts), do not add water and do not cover, cook slowly and pour out the fat as it accumulates.

Here's a recipe for a light and luxurious beef dish.

BEEF SAUTE (2 servings; calories: 224 per serving; 183 calories from beef tenderloin

2 beef tenderloin steaks, cut ¾- to 1-inch thick (about 4 ounces each)
1 clove garlic, minced
¼ teaspoon cracked black pepper
¾ cup single strength beef broth
2 tablespoons Madeira wine or sweet vermouth
1 teaspoon butter
2 small heads Belgian endive, halved lengthwise (see note)
2 plum tomatoes, cut into wedges
1 teaspoon grated Parmesan cheese

Combine the garlic and pepper and rub it into the surface of the steaks. Bring the broth, wine and butter to a boil in a medium skillet; add the endive, cut side down, in a single layer. Reduce the heat and cook tender-crisp, about 7 minutes.

Add the tomatoes. Heat through. Meanwhile, panbroil the steaks in a non-stick skillet over medium-high heat 6 to 8 minutes, turning once. Remove the vegetables and steak to a platter. Quickly reduce the liquid by half; pour the sauce over it. Top the vegetables with the cheese.

Note: 2 cups fresh mushrooms or sliced celery; 1 cup whole fresh green beans may be substituted for the endive.

Using herbs to flavor food can decrease salt intake

By DESIREE VIVEA
Copley News Service

Your average American taste bud is accustomed to some pretty salty fare. French fries and potato chips are among the most obvious culprits, but many common processed foods contain surprising amounts of sodium, as well.

The fresh cucumber in your market's produce section contains only about 2 grams of sodium, but a dill pickle carries a whopping 928 grams. A fresh tomato contains only 14 grams, while a cup of regular canned tomato sauce may have as many as 1,498 grams of sodium.

While many producers of processed foods are now offering "reduced salt" products, it's still a good idea to keep tabs on the number of ready-made foods you consume.

To reduce the risk of high blood pressure, most doctors recommend cutting down on the old sodium (and 40 percent of table salt is sodium). Steer your family away from processed foods and salty snacks. Try using herbs and spices — instead of salt — to lend flavor to your favorite dishes.

Remember not to mix two strongly flavored herbs together in one dish. One "strong" herb (such as bay, curry, ginger, hot pepper, sage) will blend with a milder herb or two with more pleasing results.

Following are several saltless blends for you to mix at home. Use in cooking, or sprinkle over foods at the table, instead of salt.

If you'd like more information on herbs, write to Holly Shimizu (curator of the National Herb Garden) at the National Arboretum, 3501 New York Ave. N.E., Washington, DC 20002.

Once you start using your culinary creativity in the herb and spice department, you may find that your taste buds don't miss all that salt after all!

SALTLESS SURPRISE

2 teaspoons garlic powder
1 teaspoons each of basil, oregano and powdered lemon rind (or dehydrated lemon juice)

Place all ingredients in blender and blend well to mix. Store in tightly covered glass container, label, and add rice to prevent caking.

SPICY SALTLESS SEASONING

2 teaspoons paprika
1 teaspoons each of cloves, pepper, rosemary and coriander seed (crushed)

Mix all ingredients in blender. Store in airtight container and label.

POACHED SOLE JACQUELINE

1 pound sole fillets
2 tablespoons flour
⅓ cup water
3 tablespoons lemon juice
¼ cup sliced green onion
2 tablespoons chopped fresh parsley
½ bay leaf
2 peppercorns
2 tablespoons milk

Arrange fillets in 10-by 6-inch glass baking dish with thicker pieces toward outside of dish.

Combine flour, water and lemon juice in small bowl, blending until smooth. Stir in green onion, parsley, bay leaf, peppercorns and milk. Pour sauce over fillets.

Cover dish with plastic wrap and microwave on HIGH (100 percent power) 4 minutes. Baste fish with sauce, recover, and continue cooking at same setting 3 to 4 minutes longer. Fish should flake easily with fork.

Remove bay leaf. Let stand, covered, 5 minutes before serving.

Serves 4.

HERBED MICROWAVE CROUTONS

6 cups small bread cubes
½ cup melted butter or margarine
½ teaspoon garlic salt
1 teaspoon dill weed
¼ teaspoon dried thyme
1 tablespoon Italian herb seasoning

Spread bread cubes evenly in large glass baking dish. Microwave, uncovered, on HIGH (100 percent power) 6 minutes, stirring every 2 minutes.

Combine bread cubes, melted butter and seasonings in plastic bag; shake to coat evenly.

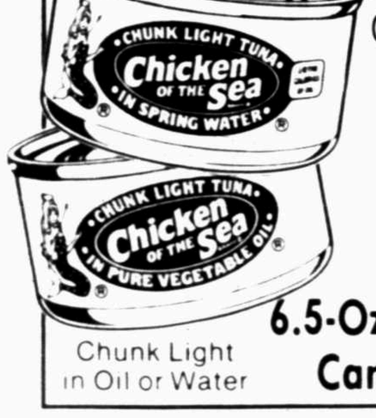

Return to baking dish and microwave on HIGH 4 to 6 minutes longer, stirring once every minute, until crisp. Store in airtight container.

Makes 6 cups.

TEXAS ★ CELEBRITY ★ RECIPE

(By RUSSELL M. GARDNER and CHRIS FARKAS)

"Texas is a state of mind and heart." — Dan Rather

DAN RATHER'S FAVORITE BRISKET

Brisket
Celery salt
3 ounces liquid smoke
Salt
½ cup Worcestershire sauce
Garlic salt
Lemon pepper
Onion salt
Pepper
1 small bottle barbecue sauce

Sprinkle brisket with celery salt, garlic salt, lemon pepper and onion salt. Center in a heavy piece of foil, sprinkle with liquid smoke and fold sides of foil over to seal in packet. Refrigerate overnight. Six and a half hours before serving: open packet, season with salt, pepper and Worcestershire sauce, reseal and cook in a slow oven at 300 degrees for 5 hours. Uncover and pour barbecue sauce over brisket. Cook 1 additional hour, uncovered. Let sit for 20 minutes before slicing. Serve with remaining sauce.

Apple pie wrapped in parchment

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
AP Food Editor

Every once in a while, over the years, I would hear about the merits of baking apple pie in a large plain brown paper bag. The bag kept the oven clean because any juices that ran out of the apple filling dropped into it instead of over the oven floor. The pie also usually browned evenly.

Then recycled brown bags came into existence and word went out that baking in them was not a good idea because the adulterants with which these bags are treated might affect the food baked in them.

Now acquaintances of mine have come up with a new idea — instead of using a brown bag, wrap the pie in parchment paper. They tried this, as I did in my own kitchen, and we had great results. Parchment paper is available in rolls in department stores and in some specialty food and equipment shops.

The apples used in this pie are Golden Delicious, widely available, delicately fragrant and prone to keep their shape.

WRAPPED APPLE PIE

5 large Golden Delicious apples (each about 8 ounces)
2 tablespoons plus ½ cup stirred all-purpose flour
½ cup sugar (spooned and leveled)
½ teaspoon ground nutmeg
9-inch unbaked pie shell with high-fluted edge
6 tablespoons butter

Pare and core apples; thinly slice to make 7 heaping cups.

In a large bowl stir together ¼ cup of the sugar, 2 tablespoons flour and the nutmeg; add apples and toss. Fill pastry shells with apple mixture, mounding in the center.

In a large bowl stir together ½ cup flour and remaining ¼ cup sugar; with a pastry blender cut in butter until particles are fine to make a soft dough. Flatten small pieces of the dough with finger or between sheets of wax paper; arrange on top of apple mixture — they do not have to cover it completely.

Place pie in the center of a 30- by 15-inch sheet of parchment paper; bring together the two 30-inch edges of parchment and fold over twice to seal, making sure parchment does not touch pie. Staple short ends of parchment together to seal well.

Bake on center rack in a preheated 400-degree oven for 1 hour and 10 minutes. Cut away parchment from pie and let stand on wire rack until warm, then serve at once or reheat.

AP Food Editor

LYDIE'S TOPPING

3-ounce package cream cheese, soft
¼ cup sugar
½ cup heavy cream
1 tablespoon brandy

Beat cream cheese until fluffy; gradually beat in sugar, cream and brandy until blended. Chill, covered, until serving time. Serve with scalloped apples or Brown Betty.

Coke controversy still continuing

Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

Sometimes it is just not possible to please everyone, at least that is the message that Coca-Cola Co. executives must be mulling over these days. Bowing to intense consumer displeasure over the "new Coke," the company reintroduced Classic Coke. Well, the return of the veteran formula was not well received in all quarters.

Coca-Cola devotees and historians note that this particular classic is not nearly the formula that made Coke America's leading soft drink. These critics state that the real Coke was sweetened entirely with pure sugar whereas today's version uses only corn syrup.

The Sugar Association, a Washington-based sugar manufacturers group, says the switch was originally made in 1980 when a blend of sugar and corn syrup was introduced. Then in 1984 Coke went to 100 percent corn syrup and this is the formula recently reintroduced as Classic Coke.

Corn syrup is slightly less expensive for manufacturers to use than sugar and by making the switch the giant beverage company was able to save about a penny a bottle or can.

The Sugar Association is pressuring Coca-Cola to use sugar again and has launched a full-page newspaper advertising campaign to state its case.

The ads advocate a return to the 100 percent sugar-sweetened beverage by stating that Coke's share of the soft drink market has declined steadily since the introduction of corn syrup in the tangy, brown beverage.

The group also criticizes the soft drink giant for failing to fully inform consumers of the switch from sugar to corn syrup.

Hot tea warms winter days

Associated Press

Few treats lift the spirits on a chilly winter afternoon like a good cup of tea.

But with so many varieties available, how do you know which ones to buy? By understanding the origins and processing methods for tea you'll have a better chance of selecting the varieties best suited to your taste.

Here's a brief introduction to tea and some of the types available, according to Country Home magazine.

More than 3,000 varieties of tea are grown around the world, but all tea comes from the leaf of the Camellia sinensis plant. The flavor of the leaves depends on the location, the time of picking, and the processing.

It is the processing, however, that produces the three basic types of tea: black, oolong, and green. Black and oolong tea leaves are dried after picking, crushed to release their juices, and left to ferment. A final heat-drying stops the fermentation.

Black teas are fermented the longest, giving them the richest color and most pungent flavor; oolong teas are partially fermented. Unlike black and oolong teas, green teas are not fermented. Green teas taste most like the fresh leaves.

Assam is an unblended black tea from India. It has a strong flavor.

Ceylon is any of the many black teas grown in Sri Lanka, formerly known as Ceylon. In general, they are pungent and intense in flavor.

Darjeeling is a black tea grown in the Himalayan foothills and is delicately flavored.

Earl Grey is actually a blend of teas with a citrus-like aroma due to the addition of oil of bergamot.

English Breakfast is a blend of Indian and Ceylon teas that makes a rich strong brew.

Flavored teas are black tea with added natural or artificial flavorings, such as orange, strawberry, or cinnamon.

Formosa Oolong, considered one of the world's best teas, is amber colored.

Gunpowder tea refers to green tea leaves that have been rolled into tiny pellets during processing.

Irish tea is a blend of one part Ceylon tea to two parts Assam tea.

Merle's mother makes mean mincemeat

By MERLE ELLIS

Every year about this time, I begin to get requests from readers for my mother's mincemeat recipe. It was published first in 1974, again in 1979, and it's time again. It's a great recipe and one that has been a tradition in our family for at least three generations.

What follows is Mom's mincemeat recipe, followed by a few of the recipes she developed. Space here does not not permit the inclusion of all her ideas. If you would like a few more recipes for things to do with mincemeat, send a self-addressed, stamped, legal-size envelope to Merle's Mom's Mincemeat, P.O. Box 907, Tiburon, CA 94920.

MERLE'S MOM'S MINCEMEAT

2½ or 3 pounds boneless beef rump or bottom round
1 fresh beef tongue, about 3 pounds
1 pound beef suet (kidney fat)
4 cups seedless raisins
4 cups golden seedless raisins
2 cups currants
1 cup citron, diced
Rind of two large oranges, diced
Rind of one large lemon, diced
1 cup dried figs, chopped
3 cups sugar
1 teaspoon ground cloves
2 teaspoons each, salt, cinnamon, allspice, nutmeg
Brandy, sherry

Simmer the beef and tongue in enough water to cover until tender, approximately two hours. Remove from heat and allow to cool. Remove and discard any fat from the beef and skin and trim the tongue. Cut both into cubes and run them, along with the uncooked suet, through the coarse plate of a meat grinder. Put the ground meat into a large crock and add all the remaining ingredients — except the brandy and sherry — and mix it all well, using a long-handled wooden spoon or, better still, your hands.

When all of the ingredients have been thoroughly mixed, add enough brandy to moisten well, cover and let stand for three weeks or a month — two months is even better and it will keep almost forever. As long as there is a really cool place to keep the crock, refrigeration is not necessary. Add a little brandy and sherry alternately as needed to keep the mixture moist.

When you're ready for a great old-fashioned mincemeat pie, add one cup of chopped tart apple to each 1¼ cups drained mincemeat before using.

MINCEMEAT MOUSSE

2 tablespoons unflavored gelatin
½ cup cold milk
4 eggs, separated
½ cup sugar
2 tablespoons cornstarch
3 ½ cups milk, scalded
1 teaspoon vanilla
1 ½ cups mincemeat
2 tablespoons rum, brandy or sherry
4 tablespoons sugar

Soften gelatin in cold milk. Set aside. Mix beaten egg yolks, ½ cup sugar and cornstarch. Add to scalded milk. Cook in a double boiler until mixture thickens enough to coat a spoon. Add gelatin mixture and stir to dissolve. Chill until slightly thickened. Add vanilla. Fold in mincemeat and liquor. Beat egg whites until soft peaks form. Add 4 tablespoons of sugar and beat in. Fold the mincemeat mixture into the beaten egg whites gently. Mold, chill and serve. This may be molded in one individual 6-cup mold or in 8 to 12 individual molds. Wine glasses also work very well. Serves 8 to 12.

MINCEMEAT PINWHEELS

½ cup shortening
½ cup sugar
1 egg yolk
1½ teaspoons vanilla
1½ cups flour
¼ teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon baking powder
3 tablespoons milk
2 cups mincemeat

Thoroughly cream shortening and sugar. Add egg yolk and vanilla. Add sifted dry ingredients alternately with milk. Divide dough in half. Roll each half about ⅛ inch thick on heavy waxed paper and spread 1 cup mincemeat on each half. Roll each and slice thin. Refrigerate over night. Bake on ungreased cookie sheets in a 350-degree oven for 8 to 10 minutes, or until golden brown. Makes 4 dozen.

MINCEMEAT FUDGE

½ cup butter
1 cup sugar
2 eggs
½ cup mincemeat
½ cup chopped walnuts
1 teaspoon vanilla
1 ½ ounces chocolate, melted
¾ cup sifted flour
¼ teaspoon salt
Powdered sugar

Cream butter and sugar together thoroughly in a large bowl. Add eggs and beat to incorporate completely. Stir in mincemeat, walnuts, vanilla and melted chocolate. Fold in sifted flour and salt. Pour mixture into a waxed paper-lined 8 x 12-inch baking pan and bake in a 350-degree oven for 30 minutes. Turn out on waxed paper and cut into two inch squares while still hot. Sprinkle with powdered sugar.

Mincemeat fills pastry

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
AP Food Editor

MINCEMEAT TURNOVERS

9-ounce package condensed mincemeat, crumbled
¾ cup orange juice
½ cup walnuts, coarsely chopped
1 teaspoon grated orange rind
11-ounce package pie crust mix
Two 3-ounce packages cream cheese, cut up
Milk

In a small saucepan, over medium heat, bring mincemeat and orange juice to the boil and boil, stirring, for 1 minute. Off heat, stir in walnuts and orange rind; reserve. In a large bowl, cut cream cheese into pie crust mix until crumbly; add ¼ cup water and stir with a fork until a ball is formed. Divide in half, shape each half into a ball.

Roll each ball into a 12-inch square and cut into four 6-inch squares. Place a scant ¼ cup mincemeat mixture slightly off center on each square. Fold squares in half diagonally; press edges together with a fork to seal. Cut a slit near center of each; brush with milk. Bake on an ungreased cookie sheet in a preheated 375-degree oven until golden brown. Serve warm.

Makes 8 large turnovers that may be cut in half.

Tropical cloves spice up winter

By DIANE SAVAGE
Copley News Service

I always associate cloves with the cold-weather holidays, from Thanksgiving through the Christmas season. Yet, ironically, the clove is a tropical export, flourishing in the balmy climes of Indonesia, the Philippines and Madagascar.

The clove is one of the most fragrant of the aromatic spices. The dried, unopened bud resembles a small brown nail that is often poked into whole apples, oranges or onions to lend flavor to hot beverages and soup stocks.

Whole cloves are also favored for pickling fruits, while the ground spice is most often used in baking. (The flavor even blends well with the lentil, the vegetarian's favorite legume.)

A simple spice bouquet, for flavoring hot cider, wine punch or tea, may be made from 8 whole cloves, a 1-inch stick of cinnamon (broken), and ½ whole nutmeg, cracked. Combine in a small piece of cheesecloth or a stainless steel tea ball, and add to simmering beverage. Remove when desired flavor is reached. This mixture will add a piquant spiciness to 3 quarts of cider, punch or tea.

At one time among the most costly of spices, the clove has been called an aphrodisiac, an antiseptic and a pain killer. Oil of clove is an ingredient in simple toothache remedies, and is still used to flavor some toothpastes.

But I like it best in spicy baked goods and hot mulled beverages that warm the spirit during the winter chill.

APPLESAUCE-OATMEAL DROPS

½ cup butter or margarine, at room temperature
¾ cup brown sugar
1 egg
1 cup whole wheat flour
1 tsp. baking powder
1 tsp. cinnamon
½ tsp. each ground cloves and grated nutmeg
¼ tsp. salt
1 cup applesauce
2 tbsps. lemon juice
1 cup raisin
1¾ cups rolled oats

Preheat oven to 375 F.

In large mixing bowl cream together butter and brow sugar; beat in egg.

In separate bowl combine flour, baking powder, cinnamon, cloves, nutmeg and salt. Stir into creamed mixture, a little at a time, blending well. Add applesauce and lemon juice, stirring well.

Stir in raisins and rolled oats. Drop by teaspoons onto lightly oiled cookie sheet. Bake in preheated oven 12 to 15 minutes, or until lightly browned. Makes about 5 dozen.

HONEY-PUMPKIN SPICE BREAD

½ cup honey
2 eggs
1 cup cooked, pureed pumpkin (canned or fresh)
½ cup vegetable oil
1 tsp. baking soda
¼ cup plain yogurt
2 cups whole wheat flour
½ tsp. each cinnamon, cloves and nutmeg
Dash salt
½ cup chopped walnuts

Preheat oven to 325 F.

In large mixing bowl beat together honey and eggs. dd pureed pumpkin and oil, mixing well.

In small bowl, dissolve baking soda in yogurt.

Sift together whole wheat flour, cinnamon, cloves, nutmeg and salt. Add to pumpkin mixture alternately with the yogurt mixture, blending well. Stir in walnuts.

Turn batter into buttered and lightly floured 9x5-inch loaf pan. Bake in preheated oven 1¼ to 1½ hours, or until toothpick inserted in center comes out clean. Makes 1 loaf.

CINDY'S HOT SPICED CIDER

1 gallon pure apple cider
¼-½ cup brown sugar or honey (to taste)
4 sticks cinnamon
2 tbsps. whole allspice
3 whole cloves

Combine cider and brown sugar or honey in large pot, stirring to dissolve. Tie spices in small cheesecloth bag and add to pot. Simmer, covered, about 20 minutes. Remove spice bag, strain, and serve hot. Makes 1 gallon (serves 6 to 8).

Durable cookbooks survive while fad books lie forgotten

By JAMES R. GRAY
Hearst News Service

Each day, thousands of cookbooks flow off the presses across the nation, from hundreds of publishers. Of them, remarkably few will become kitchen standards. Oh, many of them will have their moment in the sun, as one fad in dining fades into another, then they'll lie forgotten on the back of a closet shelf or sitting on a crate at a garage sale.

The few that will survive become classics, used day-in and day-out in kitchens everywhere. These will be the basic, no-nonsense cookbooks all good cooks have come to know and trust — on the down-home side, "The Better Homes & Gardens Cookbook," "The Fannie Farmer Cookbook," "The McCall's Cookbook" and the like. On the haute side, there's the perennial "Joy of Cooking," the Time-Life series and standard works by Julia Child, James Beard and Craig Claiborne. And each specialized cuisine has its own "Bible" as well.

The secret of these kitchen durables is their stability — they don't cater to the foibles of the moment, but offer a compendium of usable recipes a creative chef can adapt and alter to fit his or her own needs and dietary constraints. They are, however, adapted to changing dietary trends in revisions as they are republished time and time again — making them both current and comprehensive.

Make room on your shelf for one more.

"The New Doubleday Cookbook" ($16.95, Doubleday hardcover) is already a classic. First published in 1975, it earned "Best Cookbook of the Year" awards for authors Jean Anderson and Elaine Hanna. The new, revised edition just released makes it even more of a must-have for the kitchen, with up-to-the-minute nutritional information and even more creativity than it displayed the first time around.

That should hardly come as a surprise. Anderson, after all, is the author of three award-winning cookbooks of her own, and Hanna is a veteran food writer. Together, the two have kept well-abreast of food trends and have developed nutritional skills that few food writers display.

All that shows clearly in the Doubleday book, a jam-packed 965-page cooking course that contains not only recipes but advice on everything from making drinks to choosing fish, not to mention full sections on cooking basics and measurement conversion. Indeed, if one hadn't even boiled water previously, a reasonably intelligent human could turn out a fine meal by following the careful instructions here.

But where the cookbook truly impresses is in the scope and quality of the recipes. Did you ever have a spectacular meal in a restaurant and want to duplicate it at home? If it's a standard recipe from virtually any cuisine — Italian, French, even Chinese, Japanese or Mexican — you're most likely to find it here. Looking for a recipe for Matzoh balls? It's here. How about Lyonnaise-style artichoke bottoms? Also here. Mole sauce? Ditto. Risotto alla Milanese? You bet.

The book is nicely organized, too, with chapters on everything from "The Fundamentals of Cooking" to soups to meats to separate chapters on desserts and dessert sauces; pies and pastries; cakes, fillings and frostings; cookies, and candies and nuts — literally, from soup to nuts.

Innovation is not the point here. What's delivered are the basics for the 80s cook, complete with information about calories, sugar, salt and cholesterol provided for each recipe. The depth is not staggering, however. Where a specialized cookbook might provide four separate recipes for a single dish, "Doubleday" provides a basic recipe that the cook can mold to his or her own uses.

About the only complaint one could voice about the new cookbook is that the recipes are not set in large type, and some of them continue from one page to another. But that's merely a quibble, and is to be expected when you're dealing with literally hundreds of recipes in a single compact volume.

If you're looking for a standard cookbook to answer most ordinary problems in most ordinary situations — and in some extraordinary ones as well — check out the new "Doubleday." But do it soon: It's bound to be a hot gift for the holidays.

Here's a sample sample of the bounty:

EGG, NUT, AND MUSHROOM PATE

1 large yellow onion, peeled and sliced thin
1 large clove garlic, peeled and minced
¼ pound mushrooms, wiped clean and sliced thin
½ cup butter or margarine
6 hard-cooked eggs, peeled and quartered
1 cup walnuts
½ cup unblanched almonds
1 tablespoon Worcestershire sauce
1 teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon pepper

Stir-fry onions, garlic, and mushrooms in butter in a heavy skillet over moderate heat five minutes until onion is soft, not brown, remove from heat. Mince eggs, walnuts, and almonds by pulsing six to eight times in an electric blender at high speed or three to five times in a food processor fitted with the metal chopping blade. Add skillet mixture and all remaining ingredients; buzz three to five seconds to mix. Spoon into a decorative bowl, cover, and chill one to two hours to blend flavors. Let stand 30 minutes at room temperature before serving. Makes 3 cups.

BEETS IN BURGUNDY

1 (1-pound) can julienne beets (do not drain)
1 tablespoon cornstarch
⅓ cup sugar
⅛ teaspoon cloves
Pinch salt
¼ cup red wine vinegar
2 tablespoons butter or margarine
½ cup red burgundy wine

Drain beets, saving one-fourth cup liquid. Mix cornstarch, sugar, cloves, and salt in a saucepan, slowly add beet liquid, vinegar, and wine, and cook, stirring, over moderate heat until thickened and clear. Add beets and butter, turn heat to low, cover, and simmer 15 minutes to blend flavors. Serves 3.

BROCCOLI, EGG, AND SOUR CREAM CASSEROLE

1 (2-pound) head broccoli, steamed, drained, and coarsely chopped, or 2 (10-ounce) packages frozen chopped broccoli, boiled and drained
2 hard-cooked eggs, peeled and sliced
1 cup sour cream
½ cup mayonnaise
2 tablespoons tarragon vinegar
1⅛ teaspoon paprika

Preheat oven to 350 degrees. Arrange broccoli in an ungreased shallow one and one-half quart casserole, top with egg slices, and set aside. Over lowest heat warm sour cream with mayonnaise and vinegar, stirring, four to five minutes (do not boil); pour over broccoli.

Bake, uncovered, 10 minutes, sprinkle with paprika, and serve. Serves 4.

Leftover turkey has many uses

Your Thanksgiving meal is over. The relatives have gone home, the kitchen looks like the aftermath of World War III, and you don't think you'll want to cook (or eat) again.

Not to worry — it's a normal reaction to the gastronomical extravaganza that is the typical American Thanksgiving. If you're fretting about what to do with those gargantuan platters of leftover turkey, relax! With the help of your microwave oven, you'll find dozens of quick and easy ways to serve the succulent bird.

If you didn't use the giblets for your Thanksgiving meal, don't throw them out. Microwave them into a flavorful broth for soup or gravy.

In a 2-quart glass casserole, combine turkey giblets (neck, heart, liver and gizzard) with 3 cups water, 1 bay leaf and a dash each of salt and pepper. For more flavor, add a slice of onion and a few celery leaves.

Microwave, covered, on ROAST (70 percent power) about 30 minutes. Remove bay leaf, onion and celery leaves. (Meat may be chopped fine and returned to the broth.)

Perhaps the easiest way to serve leftover turkey is in a sandwich. For a quick, hot sandwich, just place 3 or 4 thin slices of turkey on bread or bun. Cover with a few tablespoons of gravy. Microwave on HIGH (100 percent power) 1¼ to 1 minute for 1 sandwich, 1 to 1 1¾ minutes for 2 sandwiches, and 2 to 3 minutes for 4.

Leftover turkey is great in a tasty casserole dish. Try one of the following, or use in any cooked chicken recipe.

TURKEY NOODLE TARRAGON

4 cups cooked cubed turkey
2½ cups uncooked wide egg noodles
1 cup hot water
1 chicken bouillon cube
½ teaspoon dried tarragon
¼ teaspoon pepper
1 cup shredded Monterey Jack cheese

Combine all ingredients except cheese, stirring to blend well.

Cover and microwave on HIGH (100 percent power) 15 minutes, stirring after 7 minutes. Stir in cheese. Let stand, covered, 5 minutes before serving.

LUNCHEON TURKEY BAKE

2 cups cooked cubed turkey
1 (10¾ oz.) can condensed cream of mushroom or cream of chicken soup
1 cup diced celery
3 tablespoons minced onion
2 hard-boiled eggs, chopped
½ cup chopped walnuts
½ cup mayonnaise
¾ teaspoon curry powder
¼ teaspoon pepper
1 cup fine dry bread crumbs
2 tablespoons melted margerine
Paprika

Combine turkey, condensed soup, celery, onion, eggs, walnuts, mayonnaise, crry powder and pepper in 2-quart glass casserole. Cover and microwave on HIGH (100 percent power) 5 minutes, stirring after 2½ minutes.

Combine bread crumbs and melted butter in small dish, tossing to blend. Sprinkle buttered crumbs evenly over turkey mixture. Dust lightly with paprika.

Microwave, uncovered, 4 to 5 minutes on HIGH until heated through, rotating dish after 2½ minutes. Let stand several minutes before serving.

TURKEY CHOW MEIN

2 tablespoons butter or margarine
1 cup diced celery
½ cup finely chopped onion
1 (10¾ oz.) can condensed cream of mushroom soup
1 (4 oz.) can mushroom stems and pieces
⅓ cup water
2 cups cooked cubed turkey
1 (3 oz.) can chow mein noodles
Soy sauce

Combine butter, celery and onion. Microwave 4 miutes on HIGH (100 percent power), stirring after 2 minutes.

Stir in condensed soup, mushrooms, water and turkey, blending well. Cover and microwave 5 minutes on HIGH, stirring halfway through cooking time. Let stand, covered, 3 minutes before serving.

Serve over chow mein noodles, and sprinkle lightly with soy sauce.

DEAR ABBY

End of relationship doesn't end pain

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: Over a year ago, our next-door neighbors (I'll call them Betty and Roger) terminated a long-term relationship, after which Roger moved to the other side of town to live in his travel trailer. He and my husband are close friends, so Roger drives over to visit us frequently. Betty still cares for Roger, who has been playing with her feelings — trying to get her back into bed, but refusing to make a commitment. Betty told him last week to stay out of her life because just seeing him was too painful, but he seems unmoved by her pain.

Betty has asked us to please not let Roger visit us. My husband thinks this is ridiculous and says she must get over him.

Betty is considering selling her house and moving away to avoid the pain of seeing Roger. (She cries at the sight of his car parked in front of our house.)

Abby, should we ask Roger to refrain from visiting us? And how can I help Betty get over him? — NEXT-DOOR NEIGHBOR

DEAR NEIGHBOR: You can help Betty get over Roger by insisting that she get counseling in order to deal with her lovesick feelings. ("Love" is a mental condition; sometimes it's a mental disease.)

Your husband is right. If Betty can't handle seeing Roger (or his car), instead of insisting that Roger be kept out of her sight, she will have to get over him.

DEAR ABBY: I have two grown daughters and a 6-month-old baby boy who is especially dear to me because his father died while waiting for a heart transplant. (He was only 33 years old.) It was my second marriage and his first.

I was five months' pregnant when I lost my husband. We had been married a little less than a year. I was 45.

I need one of your good answers when strangers ask me if the baby is my grandson. Some even suggest that he was an "accident," which hurts me deeply as he was a very much wanted child. I suppose when he goes to school he will be asked if I am his grandmother! Please help me. — STUMPED IN BALTIMORE

DEAR STUMPED: Please accept my condolences for the loss of your husband. It is obvious that you loved him very much.

When your son is mistaken for a grandson, simply say, "No, he is my youngest child." Say it with a smile, and keep in mind that the person is probably just trying to be friendly.

DEAR ABBY: I've been married for 10 years to a man who always had a roving eye. He recently contracted herpes. He claims he got it from a "john" at work. Divorce is out of the question, so I will just have to learn to live with this situation.

What do you think about his explanation that he picked up herpes from a john? — FAITHFUL FOOL

DEAR FAITHFUL: I doubt that he got it from a john. A Jane would be more likely.

DEAR ABBY: I have been laughing about the ladies who complained because of workmen showing up with their kids.

Well, ha ha ha! They haven't seen anything yet. My cleaning woman brought her husband to my house every week for over a year. He ate, smoked and watched TV while she worked.

I am an old woman with osteoporosis and I use a walker. I had to fix lunch and coffee for him. I finally got fed up and let the woman go and told her why. Who needs a deal like that? Not me. — M.N. IN THELMA, KY.

(Problems? Write to Abby. For a personal, unpublished reply, send a self-addressed, stamped envelope to Abby, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038. All correspondence is confidential.)

Spinach salad accents meal

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
AP Food Editor

SPINACH SALAD

½ pound spinach
½ head iceberg lettuce
1 small red onion, thinly sliced and separated into rings
1 slivered hard-cooked egg white (yolk saved for Vinaigrette)
Vinaigrette (see recipe)

Tear spinach and lettuce into bite-size pieces and layer with onion and slivered hard-cooked egg white in a salad bowl. Add Vinaigrette and toss well.

Vinaigrette: In a small bowl mash saved hard-cooked egg yolk; add 1 teaspoon salt, ¼ teaspoon pepper, ¼ teaspoon paprika, ¼ teaspoon dry mustard, ¼ cup red wine vinegar, ½ cup vegetable oil and 2 tablespoons finely chopped parsley; whisk well.

Technology creating synthetic, not artificial food

Associated Press

Algaecakes and plankton patties? Such standard science fiction delicacies are far in the future, but, according to an article in the December issue of Science Digest, food-making technology will soon be producing a new kind of REAL food.

Genetically modified microorganisms or fixed-bed enzymes will be used to yield foods that taste, smell and nourish exactly like the real thing — because they are the real thing, matching the biochemical aroma, flavor, nutrient patterns and even texture of natural foods.

These foods are synthetic but not artificial. Their composition is identical with that of their natural counterparts. Dr. Sanford Miller, director of the FDA's Center for Food Safety and Applied Nutrition, in Washington, is excited about their possibilities.

"We're now reviewing preliminary data on the first such bacterium," he said. "It has been genetically modified to produce the enzyme rennet, which coagulates cow's milk and is normally made in a calf's stomach."

Rennet, used in puddings and cheeses, is always in short supply. Non-calf rennet is readily available, but it's not as good as the calf enzyme, which is difficult and expensive to harvest. "This bacterium produces rennet identical with what the calves make," said Miller, "so there can be an unlimited supply of the best type."

Miller believes that within 20 years, other bacteria will be modified to produce large amounts of high-quality proteins whose amino acid patterns will exactly match those in meat, fish and other foods.

Creme Fraiche Pear Tart recipe comes from France

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
AP Food Editor

If you are interested in a not-too-sweet dessert we recommend this recipe for Creme Fraiche Pear Tart. Its base is a regular 9-inch pie shell and Creme Fraiche tops canned pear slices. No sugar added.

The recipe comes from a French woman now making her home in the United States. When she lived in France she bought the Creme Fraiche; now she makes her own.

I baked the tart one recent weekend morning and, when it was still warm, took it to a potluck brunch at my next-door neighbor's house. Over half a dozen tasters enjoyed it. You can serve the tart warm, as I did; or, if you prefer, you can serve it chilled.

CREME FRAICHE PEAR TART

2 cans (each 29 ounces) Bartlett pear slices
9-inch unbaked pie shell
Creme Fraiche, see recipe
1 teaspoon grated lemon rind

Drain pears; blot on paper towels. Arrange in pie shell. Gently fold lemon rind into Creme Fraiche; pour over pears. Bake in a preheated 350-degree oven for 45 to 55 minutes or until mixture bubbles about halfway between edge and center. Place on a wire rack to allow the Creme Fraiche to set and serve while still warm or chill before serving. Makes 8 to 10 servings.

Cream Fraiche: Stir together 1⅔ cup heavy cream and 1½ teaspoons sour cream; gently heat to 90 degrees. Let stand in a non-corrosive container at room temperature (60 to 70 degrees) about 12 to 15 hours or until thickened. Stir gently; chill until ready to use — overnight if you like. Makes 1⅔ cups.

Bazaar recipes simple, salable

By BETTY WILSON
Hearst News Service

If you're competing for customers at a holiday bazaar, tempt them with foods that are neat, attractive, easy to transport and safe to store at room temperature.

Know your customers. It's easy to please working women who are willing to trade dollars for time. Many shoppers want single servings, while children are looking for instant gratification. Foods for special diets also are popular.

Cleanliness is important to shoppers. Good packaging keeps food clean and makes it easy to carry. Plastic bags are convenient for freezer storage, and ingredient labels are helpful. Trim your goods with holiday bows or wraps and they can double as gifts for others.

Don't overbake, either: leftovers eat into your profits.

SEASONED SALT

½ cup salt
½ teaspoon thyme
½ teaspoon marjoram
½ teaspoon garlic salt
3 teaspoons paprika
½ teaspoon curry powder
¼ teaspoon onion powder
¼ teaspoon dill weed
½ teaspoon celery seed

Combine all ingredients and blend with wooden spoon. Pour into jar, cap tightly and store in cool, dry place away from light. Makes about ½ cup.

NOTE: If salt-free product is desired, use ½ cup substitute salt instead of regular salt, and omit garlic salt and celery seed.

CRUNCHY CORN BRITTLE

1 cup brown sugar
¼ cup light corn syrup
½ cup water
1 teaspoon salt
¾ cup salted peanuts
2 tablespoons margarine
¼ teaspoon baking soda
5 cups crispy corn cereal squares

Combine sugar, syrup, water and salt in heavy Dutch oven. Cook over medium heat, stirring occasionally, until mixture reaches hard ball stage at 250 degrees. Add peanuts. Reduce heat, continue cooking until mixture reaches 285 degrees, stirring constantly. Remove from heat. Add margarine and soda. Quickly stir in cereal.

Working rapidly, spread mixture evenly onto buttered jellyroll pan. Let cool. Break into pieces. Makes 1 pound.

NUTTY POPCORN

12 cups popped corn, unsalted
1 cup whole almonds, toasted
1 cup pecan halves, toasted
½ cup margarine
½ cup brown sugar
½ teaspoon salt

Combine popped corn, almonds and pecans in a large bowl. Set aside.

Melt margarine in small saucepan. Add sugar and salt. Cook 30 seconds, or until sugar dissolves. Pour over popcorn mixture, stirring until evenly coated. Spread in jellyroll pan. Bake at 350 degrees for 10 minutes, stirring once. Store in a covered container. Makes 14 cups.

CHOCOLATE ROLLS

2 tablespoons margarine
½ cup white corn syrup
2 squares unsweetened chocolate, melted
1 teaspoon vanilla
3 cups powdered sugar
¾ cup non-fat dry milk

Combine sugar and powdered milk. Set aside.

Blend margarine and corn syrup. Add melted chocolate and vanilla. Mix and add sugar mixture. Knead until thoroughly blended. Shape into rolls or bite size pieces. Score with sharp knife. Wrap.

APPLE-CRANBERRY CONSERVE

5 apples
3 cups cranberries
1 orange
1 lemon
2½ cups crushed pineapple
1 package powdered fruit pectin
5½ cups sugar
1 package (2-ounce) slivered almonds

Core and cut unpeeled apples into fourths. Chop in food chopper, using medium blade. Wash and sort cranberries. Extract orange and lemon juice. Grind orange and lemon peels until fine. Chop cranberries.

Combine fruit and juice in kettle. Bring to boil. Add pectin and return to boil. Add sugar, stirring constantly. Return to boil and boil hard 1 minute. Remove from heat.

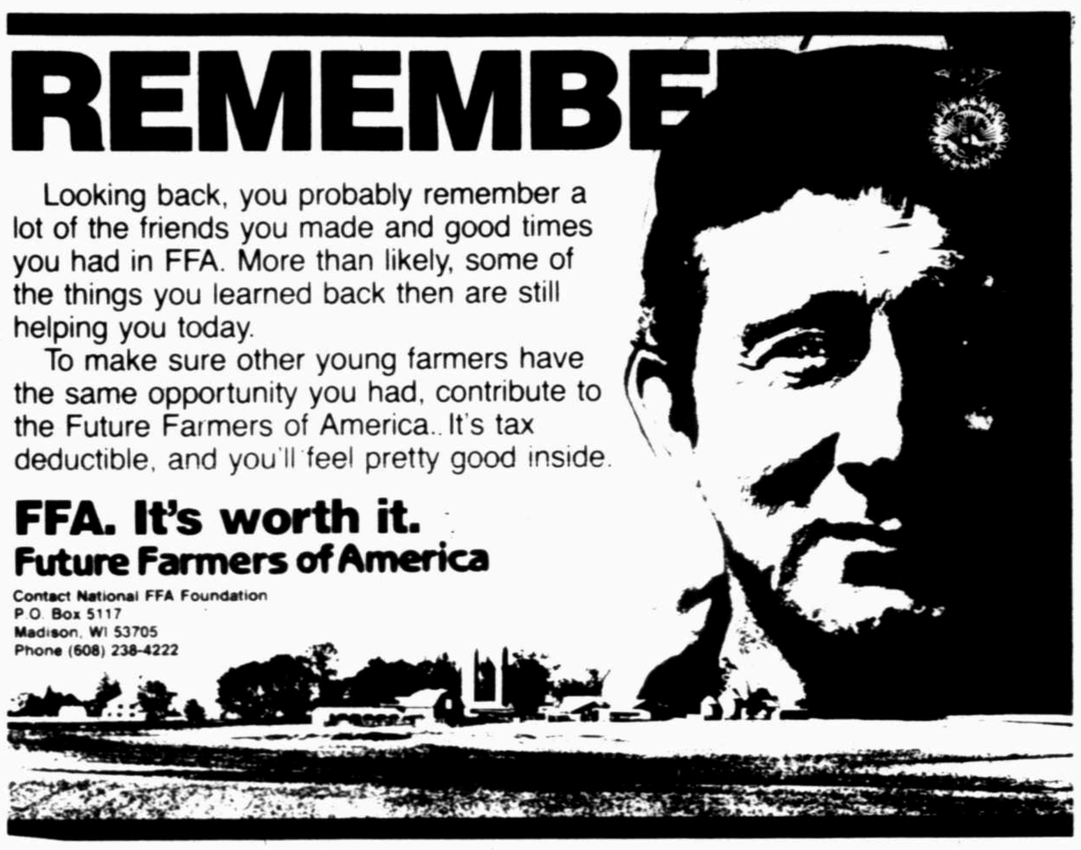

Stir and skim for 5 minutes. Add almonds. Pour into 8-ounce jars to within ½-inch of tip. Cover tightly. Process in boiling water bath 5 minutes. Yield: 9 eight-ounce jars.

PEAR CONSERVE

5 pounds firm pears (15 cups sliced)
10 cups sugar (5 pounds)
2 cups seedless raisins
½ cup orange rind, cut fine
1 cup orange juice
¼ cup lemon juice

Peel pears and cut in small pieces. Add sugar and let stand overnight.

Add raisins, orange rind and fruit juice. Cook until thick, about 30 to 35 minutes. Pour into 8-ounce jars to within ½ inch of top. Cover tightly. Process in boiling water bath 10 minutes. Yield: 12 eight-ounce jars.

Utensils, food bought 'by the book'

By MARIE BIANCO
Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

This is a switch.

For years, people who lived in rural areas had to turn to the big-city mail-order houses for their major shopping needs. They knew that if it couldn't be grown or made on the farm, Montgomery Ward or Sears, Roebuck probably had it in stock. But now city folk who don't have time to get in the car and head to the country are using the same route, albeit via somewhat different vehicles, to get local foods or ingredients straight from the farm.

Shopping at home with mail-order catalogs is becoming as much a part of a busy family's arsenal of time-saving devices as the TV dinner and the microwave oven. Shoppers know they may be able to buy many of the foods locally, but frequently buying them through one of the many available food catalogs is more convenient and quicker.

American regional foods are good sellers, especially when they carry a "homemade" label (on such foods as fruitcakes baked in a country kitchen in Connecticut, down-home barbecue sauce from Tennessee, Moravian sugar cookies, pickles and chowchow from Pennsylvania) or are "homegrown" (sweet Vidalia onions from Georgia, maple syrup from Vermont, elephant garlic from California, pecans from Texas).

"It's easy to find a hard-to-get-item through a catalog," said Peggy Hardigree, author of "The Mail Order Gourmet" (St. Martin's Press, $9.95), who believes "the catalog shopper is used to paying a little more for the convenience." Making choices from a food catalog also can take the hassle out of Christmas shopping for that list of hard-to-shop-for people who seem to have everything. "It isn't unusual anymore," Hardigree said, "to get a gift of steaks through the mail."

LAST YEAR, the U.S. Postal Service delivered 8.5 million copies of the 6,500 catalogs that were published in that period, according to the Direct Marketing Association, a trade organization. About 400 of the catalogs were devoted to food and cooking equipment, while some specialty foods and equipment were also available from other catalogs featuring a wide variety of merchandise.

Chocolate is a big catalog seller. A chocoholic can choose from a foot-wide cookie with more than 500 chocolate chips from Pepperidge Farm, a 10-pound Hershey bar, Madame Chocolate's truffles from Brussels or Godiva's chocolate tennis balls.

A cook who buys expensive ingredients offered by the catalogs may not want to cook them in a $2.29 skillet. Kitchen equipment catalogs offer a large variety of pots and pans in a wide price range.These selections often are larger than what most stores might have in stock. Among offerings in this year's catalogs: a new gadget that makes fancy egg rosettes for salads; five vegetables brushes for scrubbing corn, mushrooms, carrots, potatoes and celery; and a "gun" that can be used to inject marinade into meat and brandy into fruitcake.

SELLING SPECIAL ingredients by mail has become so successful that a few catalogs are trying to take things a step further by offering completely cooked dishes that can be sent anywhere in the country. The foods are frozen before shipment and, after reheating, resemble upscale TV dinners. The price of these dishes, coupled with the cost for overnight delivery, generally make them too costly for most pocketbooks.

To further promote sales, designers of food catalogs are including recipes along with descriptions and illustrations of exotic ingredients and special items of cooking equipment.

Food catalogs are expensive to print; each one costs between 55 and 60 cents, according to the New York-based Direct Marketing Association, which represents 2,600 companies that mail out catalogs. That's a lot of money, considering most of the catalogs end up in the garbage can. New York food consultant and writer Pamela Krausman has come up with a different idea. She mailed out a new catalog last year called Pamela Krausman's Notebook, featuring such specialty items as caviar, puff pastry, smoked salmon and mesclun (a mix of unusual lettuce seeds). The information is meant to become part of a permanent reference collection. "I'm selling classics," she said, "not trendy stuff."

KRAUSMAN OBJECTS to a color photo and a description of 25 words or less of copy to describe a food. Her catalog is more editorial than pictorial, what she describes as a combination of a magazine and a book on food. "I spend a lot of space telling people why this particular product is better than the others, what its history is, what to look for when you're buying it." She charges for the catalogs: $2 for the first one, $3 for the new issue coming out this month.

If your mailbox has been stuffed with catalogs recently, it's probably because you bought an item through the mail and your name was entered on a list. Karen Wyoski, spokeswoman for the Direct Marketing Association, says that occasionally the association rents these lists to other companies whose products they think you might enjoy.

As part of Direct Marketing's Mail Preference Service, consumers have the option to receive, or not receive, catalogs. If you are receiving too many of these publications and never want to see another one, write to the Direct Marketing Association, 6 E. 43rd St., New York, N.Y. 10017, and ask that your name be deleted. "Send us the white address portion on the back cover of your catalog and specify that you want your name removed from our list," Wysocki said. For those who want to receive a greater variety, the association will send its "Great Catalog Guide," listing 735 catalogs in 28 categories for $2. Included are eight postcards with which to request catalogs.

Soup made with canned pumpkin

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
AP Food Editor

PUMPKIN SOUP

1 large onion, sliced
¾ cup sliced white scallions
¼ cup butter
16-ounce can pumpkin
4 cups chicken broth
1 bay leaf
½ teaspoon sugar
½ teaspoon curry powder
⅛ teaspoon nutmeg
Several parsley sprigs
2 cups half-and-half
Salt and pepper to taste

Saute onions and scallions in butter until golden brown. Stir in pumpkin, broth, bay leaf, sugar, curry powder, nutmeg and parsley. Simmer uncovered for 15 minutes, stirring occasionally. Transfer soup to food processor in batches and puree. Return to pan; add half-and-half, salt and pepper. Simmer 5 to 10 minutes. Makes 6 servings. Pumpkin roll wins ribbon

By ROSE DOSTI
Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

We contacted Kim Kautzer of Alta Loma, Calif., and asked if she would mind sharing the recipe for her blue-ribbon winning cake in the cake division at the Los Angeles County Fair. She was delighted to do so. Kautzer said the recipe is not original (it came from a friend), but it draws raves every time it is served.

3 eggs
1 cup sugar
⅔ cup pumpkin
¾ cup flour
1 teaspoon baking powder
½ teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon ground ginger
2 teaspoons ground cinnamon
½ teaspoon ground nutmeg
1 cup finely chopped walnuts
Cream Cheese Filling (recipe follows)

Beat eggs at high speed 5 minutes. Slowly beat in sugar. Stir in pumpkin. In a separate bowl, stir together flour, baking powder, salt, ginger, cinnamon and nutmeg. Fold into pumpkin mixture.

Grease and flour paper-lined 15 by 10-inch jellyroll pan. Spread mixture evenly in pan and sprinkle with nuts. Bake at 375 degrees 15 to 20 minutes. Carefully loosen edges and turn out onto clean towel. Beginning at narrow end, roll up cake. Cool, unroll, fill with Cream Cheese Filling and re-roll. Slice to serve. Makes 1 (10-inch) pumpkin roll.

Cream Cheese Filling

1 (8-ounce) package cream cheese, softened
¼ cup butter or margarine, softened
½ teaspoon vanilla
1 cup powdered sugar, sifted

Beat together cream cheese, butter, vanilla and sugar until fluffy. Some powdered sugar may be sifted across the top of the pumkin roll to decorate.

UNICEF recipes have foreign flair

By SHEILA FRIEDECK
Hearst News Service

Desserts take on an international flair with recipes from a new paperback cookbook, "The Great International Dessert Cookbook." The book, which combined the efforts of the U.S. Committee for UNICEF and American diplomats, touches on the favorite sweets of 80 countries on six continents.

The cover of the book, as well as inside illustrations, feature the colorful, festive designs of past UNICEF cards. According to information from the publisher, revenues from the sale of the book will be shared with UNICEF to support its many programs for children throughout the world.

Aside from being a delightful collection of rather unusual recipes, the book also offers brief glimpses of countries which are otherwise relatively unknown. Informational paragraphs offer quick trips to such faraway places as Surinam — formerly Dutch Guiana in northeastern South America — and the Seychelles — a group of 92 islands and islets 1,000 miles off the east coast of Africa.

THE ONE major criticism is in the organization of the book, something that could easily have been remedied with a little extra care. In all too many cases, recipes and/or information is continued on a following page, not necessarily a facing page, making it difficult for a cook trying to follow a recipe. The design of the paperback book also is such that it generally will not stay open on the counter, as a spiral-bound book would do.

It's a good collection, an interesting book, but a bit overpriced at $8.95 for a small-scale, 146-page paperback. Here's a sampling of some of the more interesting recipes.

YAM AND PINEAPPLE DELIGHT
(Barbados)

6 medium yams
1 cup crushed pineapple
1 tablespoon lemon juice
¼ cup butter or margarine, melted
½ cup brown sugar
½ cup granulated sugar
1 teaspoon grated lemon peel
½ teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon ground nutmeg
Chopped nuts
Flaked coconut

Bake the yams at 375 degrees for about 60 to 90 minutes, until tender. Remove from the oven. Lower the oven heat to 350 degrees. Remove the skins from the yams, slice and place slices in a 2½-quart ovenware dish.

Spoon pineapple over the top. Sprinkle lemon juice and butter over the pineapple. Combine sugars, lemon peel, salt and nutmeg and sprinkle evenly over the top. Cover with a lid.

Bake at 350 degrees for 30 minutes. Remove the cover and bake for another 30 minutes. Sprinkle with chopped nuts and coconut. Yields 8 servings.

COCONUT MILK COGNAC CAKE
(Venezuela)

1½ cups coconut milk
9 egg yolks
Dash salt
½ cup water
1¾ cups sugar
8 slices pound cake
2 tablespoons cognac mixed with 2 tablespoons water
Ground cinnamon

Mix together the coconut milk, egg yolks and salt. Set aside.

Combine the water and sugar in a heavy saucepan and cook over medium-high heat, stirring until the sugar dissolves. Let boil, without stirring, for 5 to 6 minutes.

Remove from the heat and add the coconut milk mixture, stirring until the mixture becomes creamy. Cook over low heat, stirring constantly, until the mixture just begins to boil. Remove from the heat, let cool slightly and divide into three equal portions.

Spoon one-third of the coconut milk custard evenly into the bottom of a 9- by 13-inch baking dish. Place four slices of pound cake over the custard, forming a cake layer. Mix the cognac with the water and sprinkle half of the cognac and water mixture evenly over the pound cake slices.

Spoon another third of the coconut milk custard over the pound cake layer and place the other four slices of pound cake on top. Sprinkle remaining cognac and water mixture over the top and then cover with the remaining coconut milk custard. Sprinkle with cinnamon.

Chill in the refrigerator and serve cold. Yields 8 servings.

COCONUT COOKIES
(Tanzania)

¾ cup flour
1 teaspoon baking powder
3 tablespoons butter or margarine, softened
¼ cup sugar
1½ cups flaked coconut
1 small egg, beaten
¼ cup milk

Preheat the oven to 350 degrees.

Sift together the flour and baking powder. Knead in butter. Add the sugar and ¾ cup of the coconut, mixing well. Mix in the egg and milk.

Using lightly greased hands, shape the mixture into 1½ inch balls. Roll the balls in the remaining ¾ cup of coconut.

Place on a greased cookie sheet about 2 inches apart and bake at 350 degrees for 15 minutes. Yields approximately 20 cookies.

Brazilians like beans, rice

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
AP Food Editor

Today's inventive cooks in the United States sometimes draw inspiration for new dishes from those of other countries.

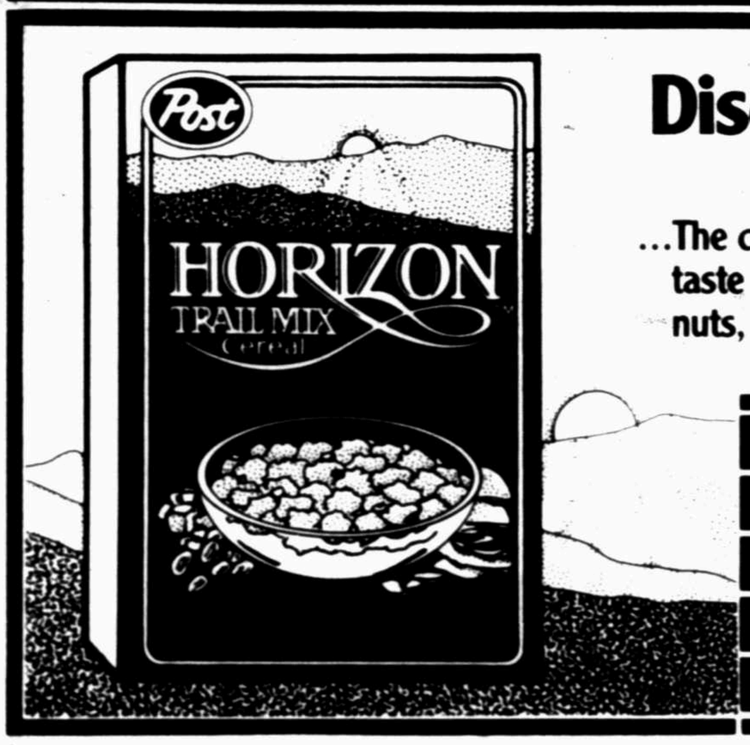

For example, when I recently came across a new recipe for rice and beans I realized it had a resemblance to the Brazilian national dish called Feijoada.

BRAZILIAN-STYLE BEANS AND RICE

2 cups water
1 cup converted-type rice
1 large onion, coarsely chopped
½ pound sweet Italian sausage, cut into ½-inch pieces
¼ pound cooked ham, cut into ½-inch cubes
1 large clove garlic, minced
¼ teaspoon dried red pepper flakes
¼ teaspoon pepper
3 tablespoons dark rum
1 medium tomato, seeded and diced
One 15-ounce can black beans
2 tablespoons finely chopped parsley or fresh cilantro
Grated orange rind, if desired

In a large skillet, bring water to a boil. Stir in rice, onion, sausage, ham, garlic, red pepper flakes and pepper. Cover and simmer 20 minutes. (Just before simmering time for rice mixture is up, drain beans, rinse in very hot tap water and drain again.) Remove rice mixture from heat. Stir in rum. Spoon tomato and beans on top. Let stand covered until all liquid is absorbed — about 5 minutes. Sprinkle with parsley and orange rind. Makes 6 servings.

TDHS gets input from area residents on budget planning

By RON GILMORE
Staff Writer

Representatives from various interest groups and individuals spoke before an advisory committee Tuesday afternoon in a public hearing held by the Texas Department of Human Services, one of 12 being conducted Dec. 2-11 throughout the state.

"The purpose is to get input from the general public on our programs for the fiscal years 1987-1989," said Bobby Halfmann, a member of the Budget and Planning Committee in Austin. "Recently I heard that we'll have a tight budget for the next biennium due to low oil prices. It doesn't look good for social services and there's some talk of raising taxes already."

The meeting, held from 3 to 6 p.m. at the DHS offices in Midland, were designed "to obtain public comment regarding program directions, budget priorities and expenditure of federal block grant funds including Title 20 and Low-income Home Energy Assistance.

Conducting the hearing were members of the department's advisory committee and staff of the agency including Rafael Aguirre and Janice Harvey from the El Paso Family Violence Advisory Committee, Charlotte Flynn of the Advisory Committee for Service to the Elderly and Disabled (Austin) and moderator, Dave Cockrun, an associate professor at Sul Ross State University who serves on the Texas Council of Child Welfare Board.

"We're all volunteers," said Cockrun. "We're just here today to listen to public comment. We're not supposed to get involved in what's discussed, but rather to serve as an ear to gather testimony statewide that will be sent to Austin for consideration by the Board of Human Services and Executive Council."

The short presentations generally centered on the emphasis for continued and improved funding and the need for preventative monies.

"The emphasis for Title 20 funding seems to be shifting away from preventative measures to 'after the fact' funding," said Pam Black of Planned Parenthood-Permian Basin. "Currently we serve around 12,000 clients and most of them are indigent."

Ms. Black also informed the advisors on the problems encountered with reimbursement rates.

"We are very concerned about the reimbursement rates under Title 20," she said. "For example, we get reimbursed $800 for a tubal ligation under the current system. The procedure itself costs $1,500 locally. It's difficult to find a physician who will do this at close to half the cost."

Cheryl Franklin of the Permian Basin Center for Battered Women expressed similar pleas for continued funding.

"Family violence is a cycle and we are trying to stop that cycle," she said. "All of our services are at no charge and we to have money in order to do this. Last year we served more than 600 women and we had to turn some away, sending them back to violent situations. We need money. It's just that simple."

Judy Dixon of the Midland chapter of the National Multiple Sclerosis Society, addressed committee members on the problem of keeping a MS patient independent.

"If you can't afford leg braces, if you can't get to work, then that's a significant problem," she said. "We want to see people get more independent. Right now, most MS patients give up their economic independence."

The director of a Fort Stockton home for mentally retarded residents, also expressed the need for continued funding.

"We are a very small facility, six-15 beds, and we receive less funding than state schools, but are under the same, if not stricter, scrutiny," said Sandra Miles, of Comanche Flats. "Our program provides a wonderful vehicle for training mentally retarded persons to go out into the community as productive individuals and like everyone else, we need money."

Comanche Flats, indicated Ms. Miles, is a Level I facility for mildly retarded residents.

The father of a 27-year-old resident of a similar facility in Midland expressed anger over a federal rule that keeps his son from joining the family on vacations.

"Right now, residents of facilities like MarcWood are not allowed to leave for more than 72 hours without paying a $51 per day charge," said W. C. Harrington. "I speak for several other people as well."

Ms. Miles, agreed that the rule, which applies "because the staff is paid whether the resident is there or not," is "overdoing it" and should be changed.

According to the DHS, one out of every nine Texans uses one or more department services.

"During 1985, the agency provided services for 1.7 million people or about 10.6 percent of the population. Services included financial assistance, health care, day care, family planning, employment services, nursing home care, community care, licensing of child-care facilities and protective services," said a report.

Halfmann discussed the major steps involved in the 1987-1989 operating plan.

"This month we are conducting the public budget hearings across the state and between now and March will consider alternatives for fiscal years 1987-1989," he said. "In April, the Board of Human Services and Executive Council will review the recommendations, alternatives and issues and will meet with the staff to be briefed on considerations."

"In May, the commissioner will meet with the advisory representatives and the proposed Intended Use Report for Low-income Home Energy Assistance Program and Title 20 Block Grants will be published," he said. "Also in May, the board will review and hold a hearing on the draft Operating Plan and Legislative Appropriation Request, which will be open for public comment."

"It will then be submitted to the board for approval in June for submittal to the legislature in July," he said.

Halfmann revealed figures that showed a budget of $2.4 billion for fiscal year 1986. The figure included $759,586,095 for health care services, $245,813,213 for services to family and children, $9,694,450 for licensing, $863,568,252 for services to aged and disabled persons, $90,409,380 for agency administration and $468,999,952 for income assistance. The figures do not include food stamp value of $714.5 million and the value of food distributed of $136 million.

Halfmann stated that of the budget, $1.4 billion (57.7 percent) is derived from federal funds, $1 billion (42.1 percent) are state funds with $5.3 million (.2 percent) coming from other funds.

By MARK LEWIS
Staff Writer

A gruesome photograph of a dead man sitting in a chair holding a baseball cap was a key piece of evidence introduced Tuesday in the trial of a former Midland woman accused of murdering her husband.

Dorothy Sue Inskeep was arrested June 6 outside her mobile home southeast of Midland by sheriff's deputies who found the body of her 28-year-old husband, Jerry Dale Inskeep, seated in a chair in the living room. He had been shot once in the head at close range with a high-powered rifle.

According to a statement Ms. Inskeep gave sheriff's officers after her arrest, the 23-year-old woman was afraid of her husband and she came home to Henley Mobile Home Park that night intending to move out and file for a divorce.

Finding her husband not home, she called her brother to come help her and began packing, according to the statement read into evidence Tuesday by former Sheriff's Sgt. Minnie Weddel. She then took out her husband's Winchester .30-30 rifle, turned out the lights and waited.

"I didn't want to leave and have Dale come home while I was walking to my car," she said in the statement.

When Inskeep arrived, "I held the rifle on him," the statement said. Dale went into the living room and sat down.

At that point her brother, Greg Shaw, arrived with a shotgun, but Ms. Inskeep kept the rifle trained on her husband.

"I told him not to come near me. He had an angry or evil look in his eye," the statement said. "I told him, 'You're not ever going to do that to me again.'"

Inskeep then started to get up.

"It was then that the gun went off and Dale fell back against the chair," the statement said.

Ms. Inskeep's 18-year-old brother, Greg Shaw, testified Tuesday that Inskeep was reaching for the rifle when it went off.

"He (Inskeep) said, 'OK, go.' She just kept walking toward him saying, 'You'll never do this to me again,' and crying louder and louder. He came up out of the chair — it looked like he was reaching for the gun," Shaw said.

"He really didn't grab the gun?" asked Midland County District Attorney Al Schorre on cross-examination.

"I couldn't tell," replied Shaw.

His then-girlfriend, 16-year-old Courtney Broughton, also witnessed the shooting, and she said Inskeep grabbed the rifle before it went off.

She was yelling at Dale, telling him she wasn't going to take it anymore," Ms. Broughton said. "Seems like he did grab a hold of the gun. The next thing I knew it went off."

But Schorre and First Assistant Attorney David Rosado noted inconsistencies between the statements Shaw and Ms. Broughton made the night of the shooting and their testimony Tuesday, which more strongly supported the concept of self-defense. And their testimony was further damaged by a photograph taken of Inskeep's body which showed him holding a baseball cap in his lap.

Since a pathologist testified that Inskeep died instantly, the photo seemed to contradict Shaw's and Ms. Broughton's claim that he was reaching for the rifle when he was shot.

Shaw and Ms. Broughton claimed the statements they had signed June 7 were incomplete, but sheriff's investigators testified to the contrary.

That night, Shaw had said his sister "is saying he (Inkeep) reached for the gun, but I didn't see him reach for it. I can't believe she did it," according to former Sheriff's Investigator Bret Grove, who took Shaw's statement.

Testimony was to continue this morning in Judge Vann Culp's 238th District Court before an eight-man, four-woman jury. Defense attorney David Lashford refused to comment Tuesday when asked if Ms. Inskeep would take the stand.

Story about faked bar trouble for reporter

By JOHN KELSO
Associated Press

It seems that a fellow named Wade Roberts, a former writer for the Chicago Sun-Times, has been asked to split by that newspaper for writing a story that the executives there figure he must have made up.

It sounded too good to be true.

The feature story came out in that newspaper on Nov. 18, a day after the Chicago Bears whipped the Dallas Cowboys, 44-0. The setting of it was a bar called Bonner's, which according to the dateline on the story would place it in or near Eden, a small ranching and farming community between San Angelo and Brady.

Let's just cover some of the more salient facts of the story. Our players include Jefferson Davis Bonner (the proprietor of Bonner's, a place with pickled eggs), some other characters with typically Texas names, and the key figure of them all — one Les Smalley, "a craggy, weathered rancher known as Buster."

The story takes place while several Bubba types are gathered around the bar's TV set watching the Bears-Cowboys game. Before the game begins, some of the others try to enlist Smalley in a bet. Here's how the story describes that.

"'Sorry,' said Smalley, looking timid all of a sudden, 'done made my bet today.' 'Just who and what,' demanded Bonner, 'are you bettin'?' The wife. The Cowboys win, and she don't bother me the rest of the season. The Bears win, and I don't get no football 'til the Super Bowl."

Towards its finale, the story tells of a distraught Smalley with "his lower lip hanging lower than his Mack truck belt buckle." And right before that, of course, one of the boys in the story punches E-7 on the jukebox, and they all accompany Bobby Bare in a round of "Drop kick me Jesus through the goalposts of life."

Now, some of the people at the Sun-Times found all of this a tad hard to swallow. So they sent Roberts, the author, along with Ken Towers, the managing editor, to Eden and vicinity so Roberts could show Bonner's to the boss and clear himself.

It never happened. During two days of searching, Roberts couldn't find the bar. Roberts claims the bar exists and that the reason he couldn't find the bar again is that it is being run illegally, and that therefore the locals deny its existence. And he says that the reason he couldn't find it was that on his first visit he was led there by men in a car who followed a roundabout route.

Curious about this, on Monday I went looking for the bar, myself — by phone. I couldn't find it, either. The locals assure me that there is no Bonner's in or around Eden, although they seem to think the story was a pretty good deal for them — true or not.

Condition of accident victim has stabilized

From Staff Reports

A Midland man critically injured Monday when his car crossed the path of a truck-tractor on Interstate 20 remained in critical condition this morning, but his condition had stabilized, according to a Midland Memorial Hospital spokeswoman.

Wayland Bruce Stephens, 33, Route 2, Box 19B, suffered head injuries and broken bones about 7:50 p.m. Monday on I-20 three miles east of Midland. His 14-year-old son, Kenneth Wayne Stephens, was killed in the accident.

Daniel Frazier, an 18-year-old Odessan also injured while riding in Stephens' car, was listed in fair condition this morning with broken facial bones, the spokeswoman said.

In other reports, equipment worth more than $3,000 was reported stolen by Walthall Consultants Inc., No. 29 Industrial Loop.

A $1,200 microscope, a $520 printer, four typewriters worth $185 apiece and other items for a total loss of about $3,041 were taken from trailers sometime between Nov. 15 and Nov. 20, reports said.

Gary Hutchins, Route 4, Box Y50-6, reported the loss of a $2,000 welder mounted on a $1,000 homemade trailer.

Hutchins told Sheriff's deputies the welder was taken from the back yard of his home on County Road 1184 just north of County Road 137 sometime between Sunday and Monday, reports said.

VIEWPOINT

Respondents divided on using force in dealing with hijackers

By RAMONA NYE
Staff Writer

Last week Egyptian commandos stormed a hijacked plane in Malta and 58 passengers were killed after the terrorists threw fire grenades into the plane's cabin.

This week the Midland Reporter-Telegram asked a random survey of 12 Midlanders if they approve of the use of force when dealing with hijackers.

Six of 12 people interviewed said "yes." Two people said governments should negotiate with hijackers. Four others said the use of force would depend on the situation.

Mary Griffin was one who was hesitant to give a yes or no answer. The California woman visiting Midland said, "It depends on the circumstances. You really hate to see innocent people die. But you hate to feel at their (hijackers) mercy either," Ms. Griffin said.

Nurse aide Elena Silva, 301 W. Estes, said, "Sometimes it's all right to negotiate and sometimes it's not."

In the Malta hijacking situation, Ms. Silva said, "I think they just had to do it. They couldn't help it."

C.R. Pierce, 712 W. Pine, said he approved of the use of force in the Malta hijacking, but again it would depend on the situation.

"It depends on the cases. In that particular case they had killed one person and were going to kill others. You can't make a blanket statement. Everything is a different case," Pierce said.

Silva

Pierce

Cooper

Lucille Frazer, a housewife who didn't want her address published, said she had mixed emotions on the subject, but, "I do think something should be done. I know we're not getting anywhere the way we are."

Office manager Sue Potts of rural Midland said, "I just feel like we should stand our ground. If we can't get countries to respect us, then put the fear of God back into them."

"I'm not for war or anything, but it just gets tiring after a while," Ms. Potts said.

Secretary Sherry Cooper, 4513 W. Storey, said she approved of the use of force when dealing with hijackers.

On the Malta hijacking incident, she said, "I know that was costly and that was sad. But I don't think it was avoidable. They can't be allowed to get away with it."

Attorney Mark Collinsworth, 4312 Princeton, said, "I feel that in dealing with force such as that, equal or greater force is necessary. In that situation, they tried time, but as time went on things got worse, the situation was actually forced by the hijackers."

Telephone system manager Gary Godd, 1602 McDonald, said force should only be used if a settlement cannot be reached.

"I think they should negotiate with them first, but if they can't reach a settlement, then use force."

Maintenance worker Norman Roberts, 706 S. Webster, was one of the few who was against using violence to overcome a hijacking.

"When you storm a plane like that, you put other people's lives in jeopardy. If you were on that plane, you wouldn't want anyone to storm it like that," he said.

Fishing favorite hobby of 12-year-old cancer victim

GARLAND (AP) — Ronnie Decker has a deal any 14-year-old fisherman would love: the owner at a fishing camp near Winfield, La., has offered to hire him as a guide.

But Ronnie's family is thinking of shorter term goals now. They are concerned with keeping him alive.

When Ronnie was 12, he had some pain in a leg. He went to the doctor, who thought the problem might be growing pains. When the pain did not go away, Ronnie's grandmother, Evelyn Golden, took him back that same week to her employer, Dr. Richard B. Hartin, who X-rayed the leg and found a tumor.

Ronnie was first in Memorial Hospital of Garland, then Baylor where a large tumor was found in his hip. His leg was amputated. He received chemotherapy for eight months at Children's Medical Center.

In April another X-ray revealed spots on his lung. Four tumors were removed. Five months later, more spots were found.

"He has more than 100 spots on one lung and some on the other, so that they can't take out a lung and help him," Golden said.

The two most recent surgeries were done at Children's Medical Center, with the last one Oct. 2.

Ronnie knows he has terminal cancer, his mother said.

"I have known it was serious since I was 12," Ronnie said. Struggling to answer questions about how he feels, he usually feigns indifference.

A fund in Ronnie's name is established at RepublicBank-Garland and contains about $6,000, said Ronnie's grandfather, F.G. Golden. A Varo Inc. employee for 20 years, Golden said the fund has been boosted by his co-workers and others.

Theater Three has planned a benefit performance Jan. 5, and teenagers at Good Shepherd Catholic Church are planning a benefit dance.

"Ronnie (Decker) can do anything he sets his mind to. He snow skied on one leg and won a trophy in Colorado. He has also water skied, but fishing is his favorite thing to do."

— F.G. Golden, grandfather of cancer victim

Ronnie's mother, Sharon Davis, is employed at J.C. Penney Insurance. Her health maintenance program will not cover experimental treatment, which is the next step for her son.

"We will need $10,000 to admit Ronnie to the program at Wadley Institute," his grandfather said.

The experimental program is the tumor necrosis factor dealing with a natural protein manufactured in the laboratory.

"We have had good results in animal trials, and we are ready for Phase I clinical trials," said Hanne Klein, assistant director of public affairs for Wadley. "The clinical trials will establish dosage levels and evaluate side effects," she said.

Dr. Amanullah Khan is in charge of the medical team working on TNF, as it is called.

"There is no cost for the TNF," Ms. Klein said. However, Granville C. Morton Hospital, like other hospitals in non-emergency cases, asks for assurance of payment. The first goal for the fund is $10,000, although $50,000 may be needed if Ronnie is accepted into the program. The money would pay for regular hospital care and tests.

Until this year, Ronnie has attended school regularly. He was in Daugherty Elementary for Grades 1-5, Memorial Middle School for Grades 6 and 7 and in Lone Oak with his father, Ronnie Decker Sr., for Grade 8. He plans to register as a home-bound student to continue his ninth grade work. Math is his favorite subject.

"Ronnie can do anything he sets his mind to," said his grandfather. "He snow skied on one leg and won a trophy in Colorado. He has also water skied, but fishing is his favorite thing to do."

Mrs. Davis said her church, Grace Baptist in Garland, has held benefits for Ronnie, as has United American Insurance.

"A lot of businesses that I know have said I can put out jars and posters for Ronnie," she added.

One of the youth's special joys has been his association with the Sunshine Kids, a group from Houston that seeks to give sick kids things they enjoy. This group sponsored Ronnie's visits to Colorado and to Montana this past summer.

An autographed portrait of sportsman Jimmy Houston and a big fish have a place of honor in Ronnie's neat room.

INS officials say office needed in Central Texas

AUSTIN (AP) — U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service officials say thousands of illegal aliens in Central Texas could be involved in criminal activities and an investigative office should be staffed to fight the problem.

INS officials said a temporary detention cell, capable of holding up to 10 people, will be included in a proposed field office.

"We believe Austin is saturated with illegal aliens, which is not to say yours is a unique situation," John Abriel, deputy director of the immigration agency's district office in San Antonio, said. "Texas is the third-largest state in the country by population. Not to have an INS office in Austin doesn't make sense."

Officials on Tuesday presented a request to change the zoning of the property to the Planning Commission. Gary Renick, assistant director of investigations for the immigration office in San Antonio, said the agency plans to occupy the space by the end of January.

Renick said investigators assigned to the office will not participate in sweeps to round up illegal aliens. He said the sweeps are usually conducted by the U.S. Border Patrol.

Immigration officials also said the detention facility will not be used to hold undocumented workers whose only crime is being in the United States illegally.

Renick said persons arrested by immigration authorities in Austin will remain in their custody for several hours. He said that after the suspects are charged, they will be turned over to U.S. marshals. No one will be held overnight, he said.

Farmers charged with pesticide use

HOUSTON (AP) — Federal charges were filed Tuesday against 39 Chambers County rice farmers accused of illegally using a pesticide, bringing to 76 the number of Southeast Texas farmers named in the case.

Each of the farmers is charged with attempting to kill a protected migratory bird, which carries a penalty of up to six months imprisonment and a maximum $500 fine.

The charges stem from a massive investigation headed by agents with the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service. Authorities allege the farmers treated their rice seed with the pesticide aldrin in an attempt to kill birds feeding on the seed.

The Environmental Protection Agency banned the use of aldrin for most agricultural uses in 1974 because of the chemical's longterm hazard to wildlife and suspected threat to human health.

The 39 farmers charged Tuesday signed papers stating they agree to plead guilty to the misdemeanor charges rather than face charges of pesticide use, which carries a stiffer penalty, authorities said.

Sixteen of 17 farmers charged last spring pleaded gulity and were fined $500 each. Another 20 Southeast Texas farmers were charged in the probe last week.

BAR

"There's no such thing, never has been," said Burr Agnew, owner of the Hard Times Restaurant in Eden. "It's come up with a lot of publicity for this town, though."

Agnew went on to explain that the story about Bonner's has been fun for the town, since the town has gained both the fame of making the Chicago papers, as well as something to talk about for a change. Was he bothered by the story? "No, no," he said. "Any kind of publicity for this town is great — bad, indifferent or good. It really doesn't matter. We'll take any kind."

Jim Schumann, the mayor of Eden, agreed with Agnew that there's no saloon named Bonner's in the Eden area. But like Agnew, Schumann saw the story as doing some good for the community — at least on a light level.

"It's been a pretty good joke around here," he said. "I think there's even been some bumper stickers ordered — 'Follow me to Bonner's Bar - Eden, Texas.' I don't know if that's going to be a fact or not. I just heard it. We won't know it for two or three weeks. If you call me back in two or three weeks, I'll know if there's any bumper stickers or not."

So even though the people in Chicago are mad at him for the story, it sounds to me as if Roberts could move to Eden and get himself a job as town publicist. What the heck? He'd probably be happier living in Texas than Illinois, anyway, considering he writes about bars such as Bonner's, real or imagined."

Widow agrees to polygraph test

HOUSTON (AP) — The wife of an investment broker found dead in the charred shell of his car has agreed to take a second polygraph test to prove "she's telling everything she knows," her attorney says.

Sandra Baker, 41, will take the polygraph this afternoon or Thursday morning, according to Harris County sheriff's investigators who requested the test.

UT professor may run againt Mattox

AUSTIN (AP) — Phillip Bobbitt, a University of Texas law professor and a nephew of Lady Bird Johnson, is thinking about a possible Democratic primary race against Attorney General Jim Mattox, the Austin American-Statesman said today.

Bobbitt, 37, has talked to several Democratic party officers and some top state officials but says he had no plans to make the race unless he thinks he has a chance to win, the American-Statesman said.

The San Jacinto Junior High School Parent-Teacher Association will meet at 7 p.m. Thursday in the school auditorium.

Drama, band and choir students will present a musical program.

Report: Most property taxes paid to schools

AUSTIN (AP) — More than half the property taxes paid by Texans last year were collected by public school districts, the State Property Tax Board reports.

Ron Patterson, executive director of the board, said Tuesday that city, county and other local governments levied $8.2 billion in property taxes during 1984 compared with $7.2 billion the year before — which was 10 percent above 1982.

There is no state property tax.

The average property tax burden was $450.57 per capita in 1984, compared to $416.86 in 1983.

Local property taxes made up 41 percent of all state and local taxes paid in 1984.

"The property tax is still the most important revenue source for school districts, cities, counties and special districts such as utility, junior college and hospital districts," Patterson said.

He said school taxes, which made up 51 percent of the total, were increased 15 percent during the year, while city taxes, which made up 20 percent, went up 12 percent. Special districts, 12 percent of the total, raised their levies 16 percent. County taxes, which made up 17 percent of the total, were up only nine percent.

Patterson said the figures show that business taxpayers, including mineral producers, paid 52 percent of the school taxes, while owners of single-family residences paid 30 percent.

Farm properties, including rural acreage, paid less than eight perecent.

"These figures show a gradual shift in the local tax base when you compare them with figures from previous years," Patterson said.

"Residential property, vacant lots, and commercial and industrial real estate have become increasingly important components of the local tax base. In the past, these propeeties were appraised less often than than utilities, mineral properties and industrial equipment.

"Their growing share of the tax base probably indicates better local appraisal efforts in recent years, resulting in appraised values that are closer to full market value," Patterson said.

Day care center to be dedicated

From Staff Reports

The Midland Metropolitan YMCA Community Services Day Care Center, 815 S. Carver, will hold dedication ceremonies at 4 p.m. Thursday at the facility.

K. Michael Conaway, chairman of the Board of Managers, will make a presentation to Gwen Carter, president of the Federation of Black Women's Clubs, honoring their commitment for the past 37 years to the community in the field of child care.

In 1948, the Women's Clubs saw a need for low cost, quality child care in the community and founded the Community Day Nursery. Through the years, they have supported this organization and have been instrumental in its upkeep. The Center is currently running near capacity.

For more information, contact Gail Harmon, Community Services Executive Director at 684-8392.

Astronomers to hold public viewing

From Staff Reports

West Texas Astronomers will host a public viewing session at the planetarium Saturday. Activities will begin at 7 p.m. with an orientation in the planetarium, followed by an outdoor viewing session through club members' telescopes. Comet Halley, Jupiter and its moons, and the Andromeda Galaxy are among the celestial objects that should be in good position for viewing.

Public planetarium programs are regularly presented at 2 and 3:30 p.m. on Sundays and 7:30 p.m. on Tuesdays and Wednesdays. "Is there Intelligent Life on Earth?" is the program for Dec. 8, 10 and 11, and "The Christmas Star" will be the program on Dec. 15, 17 and 18.

The Marian Blakemore Planetarium, located at Haley Park, is open to the public without charge.

Hair salon to do hold benefit

From Staff Reports

The Head Quarters Hair Salon will be conducting a Christmas Cut-A-Thon fund raiser to benefit the Midland Cerebral Palsy children from 10 a.m.-7 p.m. Friday.

Haircuts will be $10 for children 12 and under, $15 for men, and $15 for women's wet cuts. All proceeds will be given to the Midland Cerebral palsy Center.

Hairstylists donating time for the fundraiser are Head Quarters owner Joe Turner, Vickie Dolbow, Danna Williams, Jerry Gordan, Kathy Turner, and Michelle "Mitch" Barler.

The Head Quarters Hair Salon is located in Suite 101 of the Wilco Building, 401 W. Wall.

He died Monday at a Spur hospital following a lengthy illness.

Spain was born July 31, 1904 in Fisher County. He married Elsie Shoults Oct. 1, 1928, in Metadore. He was previously employed as a cement contractor and had also worked for Dickens Electrical Cooperative and the Green Fund Program.

Survivors include his wife; a son, B.W. Spain of Lubbock; a daughter, Juanice Brasseal of Midland; a brother, Floyd Spain of Sweetwater; two sisters, Susie Henington of Sweetwater and Alva Ruth Hamilton of Rotan; three grandchildren; and three great-grandchildren.

Kenneth Stephens

Services for Kenneth Wayne Stephens, 14, of Midland will be at 11 a.m. Thursday at the Ellis Chapel with Elder Elvis Barrington officiating. Burial will be at Resthaven Memorial Park under the direction of Ellis Funeral Home.

He died early Monday morning from injuries received in a car accident.

Stephens was born Oct. 6, 1971 in San Angelo. He moved to Midland 18 months ago. He was a seventh grade student at Greenwood School.

Survivors include his mother and step-father, Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Stephens of Midland; his father, Ken Stephens of McCamey; a sister, Cassie Stephens of Midland; his grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Ken Stephens Sr. of McCamey; Sonny and Minnie Stephens; and Richard Killingsworth of San Angelo; and his great-grandmothers, Hazel Killingsworth of San Angelo and Ophia Willis of Odessa.

Mary J. Mackey

Services for Mary Jayne Mackey, 56, of Midland will be at 2 p.m. Thursday in the Episcopal Church of the Holy Trinity with the Rev. Allen Whitman, pastor, officiating. Burial will be at Resthaven Memorial Park under the direction of Ellis Funeral Home.

She died Tuesday at an Odessa hospital.

Mrs. Mackey was born July 18, 1929, in El Paso, where she spent her early life. Following graduation from high school in 1947, she lived in various places, including Austin and Chicago, Ill. She returned to El Paso before moving to Midland in 1962. She married L.G. Mackey Jr. in 1967 in Midland.

Survivors include her husband; three daughters, Debra Cunnington, Trisha Brown, and Pam Skinner, all of Albuquerque, N.M.; and three grandchildren.

Judge lifts stay of execution

HOUSTON (AP) — A federal judge who granted a stay for a Death Row inmate twice tried and convicted in the bludgeoning death of a Baytown man has cleared the way for the killer's execution.

U.S. District Judge Ross Sterling on Tuesday issued an order lifting the stay he granted convicted killer Leon Rutherford King on Aug. 8.

The stay blocked King's Aug. 15 scheduled execution.

Court papers filed with Sterling on King's behalf contended there were errors in questioning potential jurors before King's 1980 trial, in allowing certain testimony by police and in allowing King to be searched after his arrest.

Gardens preserve pieces of personal history

By LAURA A. LAMBETH

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — When Darrell Bertsch of La Grange came to San Antonio on vacation last year, he did not spend his free time like a typical tourist. He was looking for a small piece of his personal history — a one-room cabin of hand-hewn logs.

Finally, after several days of searching, Bertsch and his wife, Carolyn, climbed the long path to the top of the hill at the lush San Antonio Botanical Center on North New Braunfels Avenue and found what he had been searching for. He recognized it by one of the walls.

When he was a child, he would visit his grandparents in a large, three-bedroom home in the small community of Park, about 10 miles from La Grange. One of the hallways in the home was part adobe and logs.

"It's nice to come and see it. I'm happy it's preserved. I never knew its historical value."

— Lorine Bertsch

It turned out the "hallway" was part of the cabin, of East Texas architecture built in the style of the 1850s-70s. It had been covered with walls and turned into a bedroom, with other rooms added around it to expand it into a larger home for a growing family.

"After they started tearing it down, they discovered its historical value," he said.

His great-grandfather, a cotton and corn farmer of Czechoslovakian descent, purchased the home at the turn of the century. His mother, now 50, was born in the cabin, which was her parent's bedroom.

Recently, the Bertsches took his mother back to her roots. "It's nice to come and see it," she said. "I'm happy it's preserved. I never knew its historical value."

Ten years ago, the family sold the home located on 95 acres of rich farmland. They later learned part of that land was to go under water with a man-made lake being developed by the Lower Colorado River Authority. But the cabin disappeared, and the family did not know what happened to it.

"It was taken down, piece by piece," Bertsch said he learned. "Each piece was wrapped in burlap, and moved here."

He contacted local architect James Keeter, who had taken part in the design of the botanical gardens and arranged to bring in early Texas homesteads as part of the garden's exhibits. He was able to confirm that the cabin was part of his family heritage, one of the three homesteads relocated here in the late 1970s. Keeter wanted to find homes depicting the early lifestyle of Texas settlers who lived close to nature, and heard that the owner of the land in Park wanted to sell the property because the land was being condemned for the lake.

A plaque on a log near the cabin reads: "Native Texas Area. A gift to the People of San Antonio. The Ewing Halsell Foundation."

"Little Willie" Williams

Burkburnett tradition also 'a real Christian'

By DOROTHY CROWDER

BURKBURNETT (AP) — "Little Willie" Williams could be called a Burkburnett tradition. Just about everyone in town knows him, and he knows everyone.

"I may not be able to say their names, but I knows their faces," he says.

At 5 feet, 2 inches and 105 pounds, the former shoe shiner is called "Little Willie" by most people, but some call him "Mr. Willie." Others simply call him "Shorty" or "Porter."

Whatever they call him, the residents of this North Texas town on the Red River have a high regard for the little man who strolls the sidewalks of the business district every morning.

Williams is 73. He walks with a crutch under his right arm and an eternal smile on his face. His clothes may be ragged and his shoes worn, but he is referred to as a "as a real gentleman" by those who know him best — the business people of the town.

Each morning, rain or shine, Williams walks seven blocks to the Ideal Cleaners. There he has coffee and doughnuts with Joe Hensley, owner of the cleaners.

"Mr. Willie and I have had breakfast together for 15 years. He gets here about 7 or 7:30 a.m. We sit and chat, and I make him take his vitamins," Hensley said.

Hensley buys vitamins for Williams to help him in his battle against increasingly poor health.

"I've known Mr. Willie all of my life. As a kid, I sold papers on the street corner and I thought he was old then. He's a gentleman. A real gentleman," Hensley said.

Williams was born March 25, 1912, in the tiny East Texas community of Fedville. He came to Burkburnett with his mother in 1927 and moved here in 1928. He served two years in the Army during World War II.

He never married, and explained with a toothless grin, "I'm happy that way."

For many years he worked as shoe shiner and janitor at Joe and Joe's Barber Shop on Main Street. When he started shining shoes, Williams got a dime. Toward the end of his career, he was getting $2.

"But people don't shine their shoes no more," he said.

Children love him and gather gleefully when they see him. Busy people pause to walk across the street to shake his hand and exchange a word or two.

"Mr. Willie has a very strong love of people. He's one of the kindest people I've ever known. Whenever someone does something nice for him, he is always grateful," said Annie Belle Harris, a friend.

"He always returns a good deed. When someone does him wrong, he doesn't say a thing, he just tries to do something good for those who hurt him. He does for others what the world has forgotten to do. He's a true Christian," she said.

As Williams walks the blocks between The Ideal Cleaners and the post office, he stops to chat with those in business along the street. He gathers their mail and eventually deposits it at the end of his trek. There he sits on the post office steps to rest a while with his crutch leaning against the building.

When he sees a woman coming to the post office with an arm full of bulk mail, he quickly gets up, grabs his crutch to steady himself and opens the door for her with a broad smile across his face.

The changes in the downtown area of Burkburnett, now a town of about 10,000, make Williams sad.

"The biggest change in Burkburnett was the closing of the Corner Drug Store. When they closed, a part of the city died. I used to like to go in there for a chicken sandwich and talk to people as I drank my coffee. I sure miss the Corner Drug Store," he said.

Children's summit unites U.S., Soviets

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — American teen-agers wanted to know if young people in the Soviet Union date, while the Soviet youngsters asked if Russian is taught in the United States.

In a "children's summit," young people in the United States and the Soviet Union asked each other questions, sang and acted together while joined in a satellite television hookup between the two nations Monday.

"Do you go on dates, and when you do, do you have chaperones?" was one American question to the Soviet youngsters, who watched the U.S. audience 9,000 miles away on a large video screen.

"We have lots of opportunities. We go to the theater. We have lots of fun," a Soviet boy answered.

A Soviet girl then asked if Russian is taught in schools in the United States.

Although one American girl gave a brief answer in Russian, another said, "For most of the United States, we can probably say, 'Nyet.'"

Translators in each country relayed the questions.

"We don't fear the United States, because we have a lot of experience working together. We just want friendship, particularly with American children. We must see each other and speak together like we're doing today."
— a Soviet boy, asked if Soviets are taught to fear the U.S.

ASKED IF Soviet children were taught to fear the United States, a Soviet boy said, "We don't fear the United States, because we have a lot of experience working together. We just want friendship, particularly with American children. We must see each other and speak together like we're doing today."

The question-and-answer session was part of an hour-long program taped for broadcast in the United States and the Soviet Union.

Seventeen U.S. teen-agers, who visited the Soviet Union last July to present the play "Peace Child," performed with the Minnetonka Children's Choir at the Minneapolis Children's Theater and Soviet youngsters performed in the Ostankino Concert Hall in Moscow.

"Talking to each other...we can create the world of peace we dream about," said singer John Denver, who was host for the U.S. side.

Young singers and actors from the United States and the Soviet Union sang duets while taping the program, which was dedicated to Samantha Smith, the Maine teen-ager who was killed in a plane crash in August and who had visited the Soviet Union as an unofficial peace envoy in 1983.

"SHE EMBODIED the young of America that we want to be good neighbors with," said the Soviet host, Vladimir Pozner.

In one segment, an American boy and a Soviet girl performed a scene from "Peace Child," which calls for an end to the nuclear arms race. The performers' images were superimposed on a TV screen and they appeared to clasp hands.

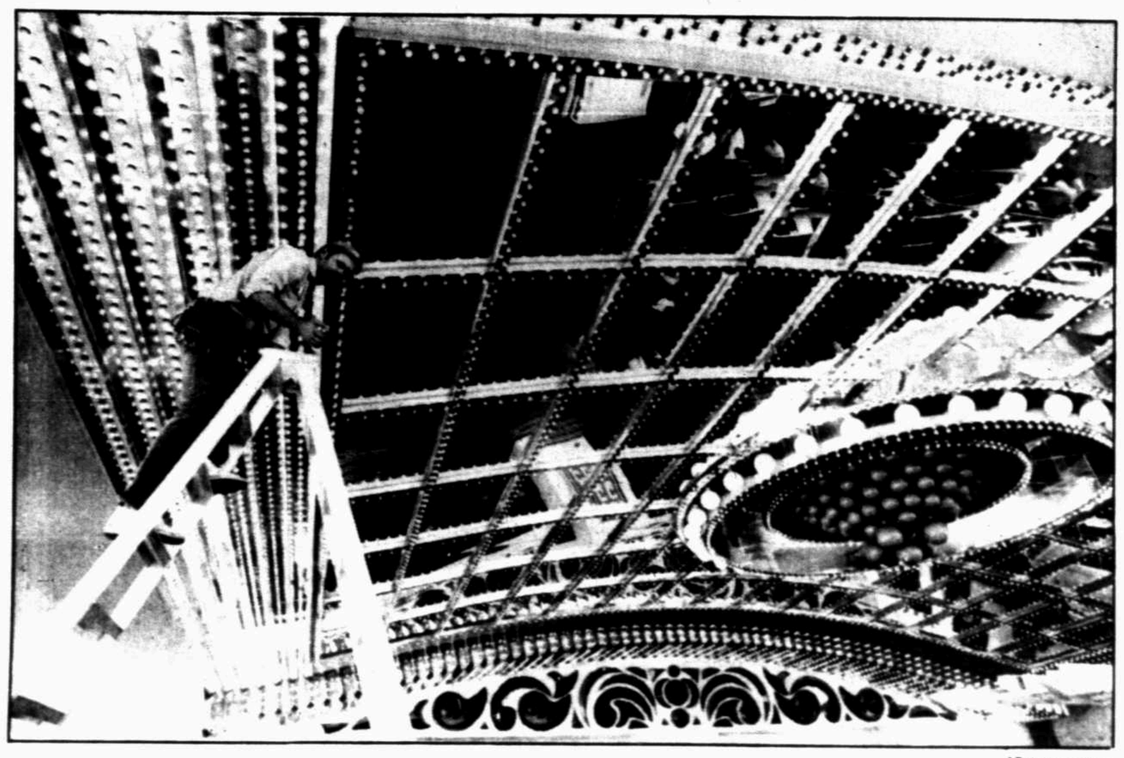

Organizers said the program will be on WCCO-TV, a commercial station, Wednesday night and will be transmitted to 180 stations in the Public Broadcasting System by satellite Thursday.

Soviet television also plans to show the program.

Singer John Denver performs Monday in front of a TV screen showing an audience in Moscow during the taping of a joint production involving Soviet and American children, which will be aired later by PBS stations.

Lightbulb changing is a mammouth job for Rob McGuire of Young Electric Sign Co. of Salt Lake City, which controls nearly 75 percent of the lighted signs in in Las Vegas, Nev.

Brighter is better in Las Vegas

EDITOR'S NOTE: They are brilliant beacons in the desert night, inviting thrill-seekers to the gambling halls of Las Vegas. The miles of neon and flashing lights give this good-time city a personality of its own and a ranking among the sign capitals of the world.

By ROBERT MACY
Associated Press

LAS VEGAS, Nev. — When President Nixon turned off the lights in this neon capital in 1973, the city's largest hotel harnessed a horse to turn a generator that kept the resort's marquee glowing.

Such is the ingenuity that has fueled the neon wars which flash incessantly between downtown's Glitter Gulch and The Strip, the electric ribbon strung across the desert.

Las Vegas Tokyo and Mexico City have been described as the sign capitals of the world, with the art rapidly moving from the old days of the 40-watt bulb to the modern age of electronic wizardy.

Bigger and brighter are the goals as the city's gambling resorts spend millions of dollars for the glow designed to coax billions from the 13 million tourists who visit the city annually.

Visitors to downtown's Glitter Gulch find the millions of bulbs and miles of neon tubing provide a toasty warmth on chilly winter nights.

On the Strip, tourists stop to snap pictures in front of the sprawling neon artwork of the Stardust Hotel. The 18-story sign's 40,000 light bulbs are enough to illuminate a small town. There are 30 miles of wiring in the sign, 38 tons of steel, enough paint to coat 27 houses and enough concrete to provide the foundations for those homes.

Down the Strip there's Lucky, the 13-story neon clown beckoning gamblers and families to the Circus Circus Hotel and Casino. Further north is the Sahara hotel's $1 million 22-story sign. The city's highest, it requires a special built-in crane at the top to allow workers to reach its upper limits.

THE NEWEST entry is at the Palace Station Casino along Interstate 15, the artery used by millions of Californians each year. That sign is more than 12 stories tall and covers 7,500 square feet.

The bright lights of Las Vegas have long attracted worldwide attention.

"We have a steady flow of sign manufacturers from Japan tour our plant every year, checking to see the latest innovations," says Richard Linford, service manager for Young Electric Sign Co.

The Salt Lake City-based company controls 70 to 75 percent of the signs in Las Vegas. Each night, Linford says, crews fan out across the city with tape recorders, taking note of signs that have lost their glow, bulbs that have succumbed to slingshots, rocks, BB guns, weather or age.

Linford, who has been with the company 20 years, remembers another era when Las Vegas casinos were content with smaller, less flashy signs.

"I don't think anyone thought the signs would grow to what they are today," Linford says. "The casinos started out with real small neon signs. But everyone wanted to get something just a little bit bigger."

Nevada Power Co. says their biggest customer is the Nevada Test Site, 65 miles northwest of Las Vegas and second is Nellis Air Force Base. But the city's seven top resorts do rank among the top 12 electric customers.

MOST LAS Vegas resorts kept their signs lighted 24 hours a day until the Arab oil embargo began in 1973.

On Nov. 16, 1973, hotels shut off their outside signs to comply with President Nixon's request for voluntary cutbacks in energy use.

That's when the Las Vegas Hilton recruited an aging workhorse to shuffle in a circle three or four hours a night, pumping 5,500 watts of power from a generator and keeping the hotel marquee aglow while much of the city was dark.

"All it cost us was a little bit of hay," Hilton spokesman Bruce Banke recalls. "In fact, if we could only figure a way to do it, we could put a lot of horses to work now."

The resort, which includes the world's largest hotel, spends about $4 million annually on electricity — consuming as much power as a city of 15,000 people.

As the effects of the embargo began to ebb, Las Vegas resorts were allowed to light their signs for three hours on the weekend, then three hours a day. Soon it became business as usual, with the signs glowing around the clock.

When the bitter cold winter of 1977 left Eastern states with dwindling gas supplies, the Nevada Public Service Commission, in a symbolic, energy-saving gesture, adopted a regulation banning the use of lighted signs during the day.

That gesture was not enough to quiet some critics. In U.S. Senate hearings last year to consider distribution of cheap Hoover Dam power, Sen. Howard Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, criticized providing cheap power to light Las Vegas signs.

Israeli philanthropist donates money to robbed cathedral

NEW YORK (AP) — An Israeli businessman said he was so angry about the armed robbery of St. Patrick's Cathedral that he donated $7,000 to the famous Fifth Avenue church.

"It was all boom, boom, boom, bang" when Abe Nathan decided to give the money, said the Rev. Peter Finn, the church spokesman who accepted the check this week.

Nathan, in New York on his way home from Colombia where he helped people displaced by last month's volcano, said he learned from television reports that two ski-masked gunmen had robbed the cathedral Saturday of about $7,000.

"I was just mad, angry that people should do that," Nathan said in a telephone interview from his New York hotel. "There are so many places to steal from, I can't understand it. It's terrible, absolutely terrible."

Police were searching for the robbers who locked four ushers and two maintenance men in a walk-in safe at the cathedral. The pair made off on foot with poor box, votive candle and collection plate funds, police said.

There were no injuries.

"I couldn't sleep," Nathan said. "I tried even to get the archbishop or somebody." He called his bank in Israel on Monday morning and it wired the money to New York. Then he called Finn and arranged to meet him at St. Patrick's.

Finn said he accepted the money on behalf of the cathedral rector, the Rev. James Rigney, and Cardinal John J. O'Connor.

"It certainly was a very pleasant surprise indeed," Finn said. The cardinal "was also surprised and very pleased that the gentleman was so kind to think of others at a time like that....We're very grateful to him."

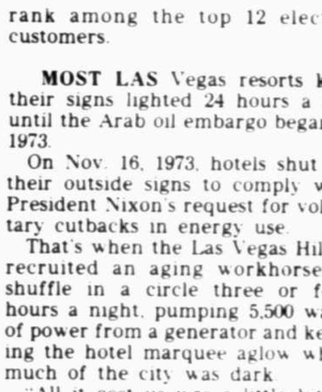

Nathan said he felt he owed something to the Catholic church because he was educated by Jesuits in a boarding school in India.

Nathan lives in Tel Aviv, where he operates a radio station called the Voice of Peace, whose aim is "to get Arabs and Jews together," he said.

Nathan said he planned to leave today for Israel. There, he said, he will gather a crew to go with him to Colombia to help build a brick factory so survivors of the volcano can rebuild their homes.

"And then we go home again, and wait for the next disaster," he said.

Hanoi: Asia's most well-preserved, underdeveloped city

EDITOR'S NOTE: Hanoi is probably the best preserved city in Southeast Asia. If it could afford paint, plaster and some basic engineering, Hanoi could also be among the loveliest. But the city suffers from a bad case of shabbiness, a common ailment of communist cities from Prague to Peking.

BY DENIS D. GRAY
Associated Press Writer

HANOI, Vietnam (AP) — When dusk obscures the peeling paint and louvered windows shut behind seedy, crowded rooms, Hanoi becomes a place of surface magic, a charming French city from a vanished era whisked into the last decades of the 20th century.

Under Hanoi's dim streetlights — there are no bright ones — it would hardly be surprising to pass a colonial gentleman decked out in white linen or hear Edith Piaf singing melancholy ballads about the French Foreign Legion.

Hanoi is probably the best preserved city in Southeast Asia, if not all Asia. Only the Burmese capital of Rangoon and Phnom Penh in Cambodia offer competition. With its lakes, extensive parks, tree-lined boulevards and homogeneous architecture, Hanoi could also be among the loveliest — if it could afford paint, plaster and some basic engineering.

By day, it is quickly evident that Hanoi is suffering from a bad case of shabbiness, a seemingly common ailment of communist cities from Prague to Peking.

And talking with officials it becomes clear that old Hanoi is being preserved not by intention but rather by default while booming, capitalist Asia has bulldozed its past and put up skyscrapers, Hanoi lacks the resources to follow suit.

THE EXPLANATION for underdevelopment one hears again and again is war — against the Japanese, French, Americans — and the current threat from China. Indeed the arm of the military is strong in Hanoi. The most efficient, impressive happening this correspondent has seen in many trips to this capital was the recent parade marking the 40th anniversary of the Communist state.

Fifth thousand troops marched smartly followed by tanks, howitzers and missiles all coated with shiny, green paint.

Besides the buildings, Hanoi has inherited its sewage system, water supply and electricity plant from the French who left after the battle of Dien Bien Phu in 1954. The archaic infrastructure shows its age.

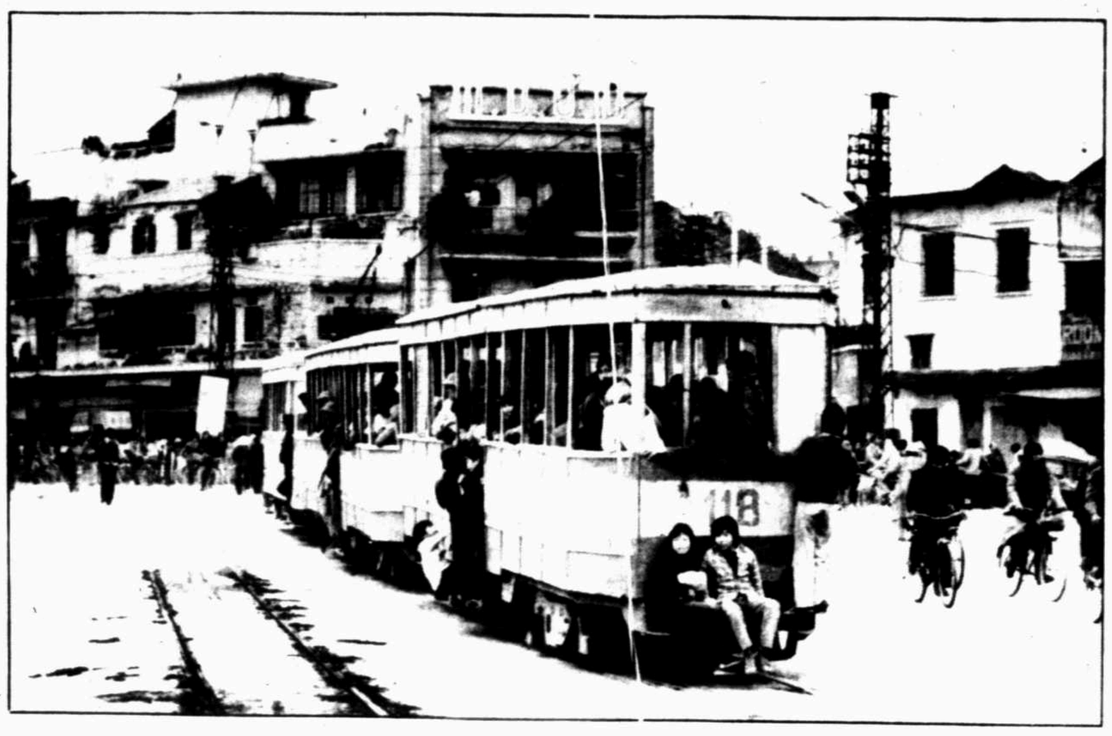

The colonials planned Hanoi to accommodate 150,000 people. Today, there are one million living in the inner "French city" with another 1.5 million in newer suburban areas where industrial zones and sooty apartment blocks have risen.

Hanoi's streets overflow with pedestrians and swarms of bicyclists; passengers jam a French-era tram which clangs its way through the heart of the city. A first-time visitor, having heard cliches about the "ant-like activity" of the North Vietnamese, is surprised to find much of the colorful anarchy of Asian alleys as well as purposeless meandering, bicycle cruising and sitting for hours at hole-in-the-wall tea shops.

OTHER RECREATION consists of strolls in the parks, where kiosks sell ice cream and beer, and watching local or Soviet films at packed movie theaters. There are 23 hours of television each week and more American rock is finding its way into the ears of Hanoi youth, mainly via copied cassettes.

For the foreign community, chiefly diplomats and aid officials, public pleasures are sparse. The East bloc favors weekly dances at tourist hotels. Westerners gather on Friday nights at the Australian Embassy's Billabong Bar or at Hanoi's very few private restaurants.

One long-standing "in" place is a four-table eatery atop a tenement reeking with urine and frequented by rats. The owner deserves credit for managing to assemble Australian beer, tapes of American pop music, Bulgarian wine, posters advertising heavy-duty Czech trucks and an ambitious menu which includes crepes flambe and duck a l'orange.

Hanoi's streets overflow with pedestrians and bicyclists as passengers jam a French-era tram clang through the streets of the city.

Such French favorites are unlikely to appear on the tables of most Vietnamese, although crusty French bread is sold all over town: one of the last colonial legacies still with the common folk. Among the older, educated Vietnamese, including virtually everyone in the top leadership, French is still spoken, French literature is read and days at French lycees are remembered. The youth today prefer to study Russian and English.

"WE HAVE received a great deal of culture from the French," says Vu Can, a scholar and editor of the important Vietnam Courier magazine. Can, unlike members of the younger generation, can tell you which of the yellow stucco, green-shuttered, red-tiled buildings housed what colonial office or French dignitary.

Many of these buildings will probably not survive the century. Can said only some areas of Hanoi would be preserved "to show how our ancestors lived." But the vestiges of the French spirit may well vanish even before the colonial structures are bulldozed.

Here and there, a few modern buildings have begun to appear in the inner city. Most of them are utilitarian, some downright ugly. Hanoi even has a high-rise, a recently opened 11-story hotel which also boasts the city's only working elevators.

The Soviet influence is also beginning to show. The gray, Russian-built mausoleum of Ho Chi Minh is a transplant from Moscow's Kremlin wall and Red Square. The stamp of the Soviet Union and East bloc will probably leave deeper imprints — on surface and spirit — as befits the capital of the third most populous nation in the communist world.

Chinese leaders concerned Hong Kong too independent

HONG KONG (AP) — Officials of mainland China have expressed concern about demands for direct elections and other political reforms in Hong Kong, which reverts to Chinese sovereignty in 1997.

The demands arose after limited elections were held in September for 24 of the 56 seats on the Legislative Council. The remaining 32 seats were filled by appointment by the British colonial government.

The voting was limited to semi-government and professional groups representing less than 1 per cent of Hong Kong's 5.4 million people.

The balloting was devised as part of the process of preparing for the turnover of Hong Kong to Peking, after a century of British rule.

Peking has promised to retain Hong Kong's capitalist system for 50 years beyond 1997 and that Hong Kong will be a Chinese Special Administrative Region administered by its own residents.

Since the September elections, several groups have been demanding more drastic changes. Some have called for direct elections with universal suffrage, a suggestion that has been interpreted as a move for greater local autonomy than Peking had agreed to in its pact signed with Britain.

These groups have expressed a belief that strong democratic institutions in Hong Kong will discourage China from interfering in local affairs should it renege on its promise to allow Hong Kong residents to govern the territory.

Ji Pengfei, director of China's Hong Kong and Macao Affairs Office in Peking, has repeatedly expressed his concern about the demands to Hong Kong delegations visiting the Chinese capital.

After Hong Kong's sovereignty is reverted to China, the most important feature is that Hong Kong must not become an independent country, Ji told one delegation. "It will only be a Special Administrative Region practicing capitalism under the leadership of a socialist China."

Hong Kong, Ji added, is now in a crucial transitional period.

"In this period, we must avoid the emergence of any unnecessary chaos that may affect a smooth transfer of sovereignty and the materialization of Hong Kong people ruling Hong Kong after 1997."

He said any political reforms must be consistent with the Basic Law, a constitutional document for the post 1997 era now being drafted by China and Hong Kong representatives.

Hong Kong's left-wing press has supported Ji's views, stressing that Britain's responsibility is to return power directly to China rather than to a Hong Kong electorate.

The Hong Kong government has been cautious in its reaction to the developments and has said it will wait until 1987 to decide what further steps should be taken toward a more representative government.

"I think a lot of people are worried that we should not go too fast and, in fact, we should not go too fast," said Chief Secretary David Akers-Jones, Hong Kong's second-ranked government official after Gov. Edward Youde.

"I think if we were seen to be doing things hastily and without consideration, then it may slow down economic development," he told reporters.

Akers-Jones added that he does not believe a majority of Hong Kong residents are keen on direct elections.

"They don't want change for change's sake or any particular form of change for change's sake," he said. "We've got one of the most prosperous economies in Asia. We've got to keep it that way because our social programs, all our programs, depend on it."

Some residents have voiced their own concerns about any drastic reforms, such as "one man, one vote." This sector maintains such reforms could pose problems, especially if those elected to governing assemblies are supporters of Taiwan, seat of the Chinese Nationalist government which was defeated on the China mainland by the Communists in 1949.

Germans to name school for Anne Frank

BERGEN, West Germany (AP) — After rejecting a proposal to name a street after her, townspeople have agreed to name a school after Anne Frank, the German Jewish girl who died 40 years ago at the Bergen-Belsen Nazi concentration camp that was nearby.

It is the first area memorial dedicated solely to the girl who was not quite 16 years old when she died in March 1945.

Her diary about 25 months of hiding with her family from the Nazi Gestapo in Amsterdam, the Netherlands, before they were betrayed, made her famous worldwide after her death.

The decision to name the school after her was reached after the proposal to name one of the town's main streets for her aroused weeks of protests, especially among older residents.

For years, Bergen townspeople had talked about a memorial to the girl who died along with 50,000 other people of overwork, disease and hunger in the camp.

Inspired by President Reagan's visit to the camp last May 6 and his reading of parts of the diary, the town's Social Democrats proposed that Belsen St. be renamed Anne Frank St.

The street originally lead from Bergen to Belsen, which were two neighboring villages before the war. After the war, Belsen was incorporated into Bergen, and the town now has 12,000 residents.

Opposition to the street naming was spearheaded by Guenther Ernst, the 52-year-old editor of the local newspaper, the Stadt Anzeiger.

He wrote in the paper that Bergen does not want a "daily demonstration" of its past through an Anne Frank St. He polled Bergen residents and reported a result of 545 to 29 against renaming the street.

Ernst, who is also on the City Council and a conservative Christian Democrat, maintained that Bergen residents are tired of hearing about the concentration camp.

"All the blame for all the SS crimes has been heaped on Bergen-Belsen," he said in an interview.

"Their (town residents') annoyance at the street idea was understandable."

Ernst published letters from readers alleging that local houses had been plundered by survivors of the camp after it was liberated in April 1945.

The vandalism "defied description," said one letter signed by M. Staege, who opposed renaming Belsen St., because "thank you very much, we do not wish to be branded with the mark of Cain."

The Stadt-Anzeiger also published the comments of a Bergen lawyer, Ernst von Briesen, saying that he had visited the camp in the 1940s and found "the occupants made a very normal impression, neither tortured nor afraid."

A Social Democrat City Council member, Wilhelm Hohls, 65, takes a different view.

"This quarrel has been shameful," said Hohls, who proposed the street name change. "I thought we should rename the street as a reminder....People here need to be reminded so that it will not happen again."

Rash of bombings rocks Chile

SANTIAGO, Chile (AP) — Nineteen bomb explosions in central Chile in two days have left one man dead and nine wounded, police reported Tuesday.

In the most serious attack, a bomb exploded early Tuesday morning on rail tracks about 60 miles northwest of Santiago, killing a 25-year-old railway employee. Three other workers were injured, but none seriously. The four were checking the tracks at the time.

Police said at least 14 bombs went off Monday night in Santiago, wounding six people and damaging several targets, including six public buses, an army recruiting center, an electric company office, a bank and several shops.

In Valparaiso, about 80 miles from Santiago, three bombs damaged the downtown offices of the Port Authority and a customs office near the port area. Valparaiso, on the Pacific coast, is Chile's second-largest city.

Rundown Fisherman's Wharf could lose its fishermen

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Tourists swoop to Fisherman's Wharf like scavenging sea gulls, but the city's main attraction could become just another shopping mall unless rotting piers and poor berthing conditions are remedied.

In short, Fisherman's Wharf could lose its fishermen.

"Right now, it's a terribly rundown situation," said Louis Ferrari, president of the Crab Boat Owners Association. "It can't get much worse. It's either stay here and put up with it or go elsewhere."

San Francisco Port Commission officials say conditions should improve next year as a breakwater is completed and plans advance for expanding and modernizing the Hyde Street Pier.

The fishermen aren't eager to leave San Francisco but they are skeptical of the improvement plans.

"They say they want to do everything they can for the fishermen because the fishermen are important to Fisherman's Wharf," said salmon fisherman Bob Miller. "But it often becomes a political thing and fishermen don't seem to have a lot of clout."

The wharf area once was dominated by the fishing industry and factories. Restaurants followed to take advantage of the fresh seafood. Eventually, glitz and neon took over.

Nowadays, the decimated fishing fleet is confined to a few piers wedged among two-story seafood restaurants, souvenir stores, hot dog stands, pizzerias, a wax museum and video arcades.

In every direction are centers of dining and commerce, some tourist attractions in their own rights — Ghirardelli Square, The Cannery, Pier 39, The Anchorage.

"There's so many tourists down here that they're all stepping on each other's toes," said Jim Phelan, a 71-year-old charter boat captain who's worked here more than 40 years. "The fishermen originally were the people who mattered at the wharf. Now, it's just tourists, that's all."

Some visitors are disappointed to find only a few boats unloading catches, their masts swaying like metronomes to the rhythm of the waves.

"I came down here because I knew there are fishermen here and because I like the ocean," said Abe Gershonowicz of West Bloomfield, Mich., watching gulls wheel over the boat lagoon. "I didn't realize how commercial it is."

The Port Commission says about 80 fishing boats, including commercial fishermen and charter boats for sport fishing, have berthing permits at the wharf. Most fishermen there are small operators who own their own boats and whose livelihood depends on the quantity and quality of their catches.

Waterfront businessmen worry that tourists may drift away as the fishing fleet dwindles.

"The main thing, of course, is image," said Christopher Martin, president of the Fisherman's Wharf Merchants Association. "Though we have a lot of attractions at Fisherman's Wharf...the thing we lack is one cohesive image and that's what was started with fishing."

Martin's group voted earlier this month to join fishermen lobbying for better facilities.

"It's as backward as any port in Alaska," Martin said. "Basically, all that's here is a pier."

Unlike modern concrete piers in other nearby harbors, the ones at Fisherman's Wharf are of deteriorating wood. Rickety metal ladders dangle from the docks to reach the boats below.

Commercial fisherman W.H. Warren also complained about a lack of parking space, a shortage of electrical and water connections, inadequate berthing facilities and poor lighting and security.

Warren said his boat once was stolen by a drunk who rammed it into other boats and a dock. Miller said he has found "bums" sleeping aboard his boat.

However, both said a bigger danger is the "surge" of current entering the lagoon, particularly at this time of year when ocean swells are bigger. The fishermen said the surge bounces the boats around, sometimes snarling outriggers and tearing off rails as the vessels bump pilings and each other.

Federally funded construction began this month on a breakwater to control the surge. That's the first step toward improving the fishermen's part of the wharf, said Ron Stone, director of maritime affairs for the Port Commission.

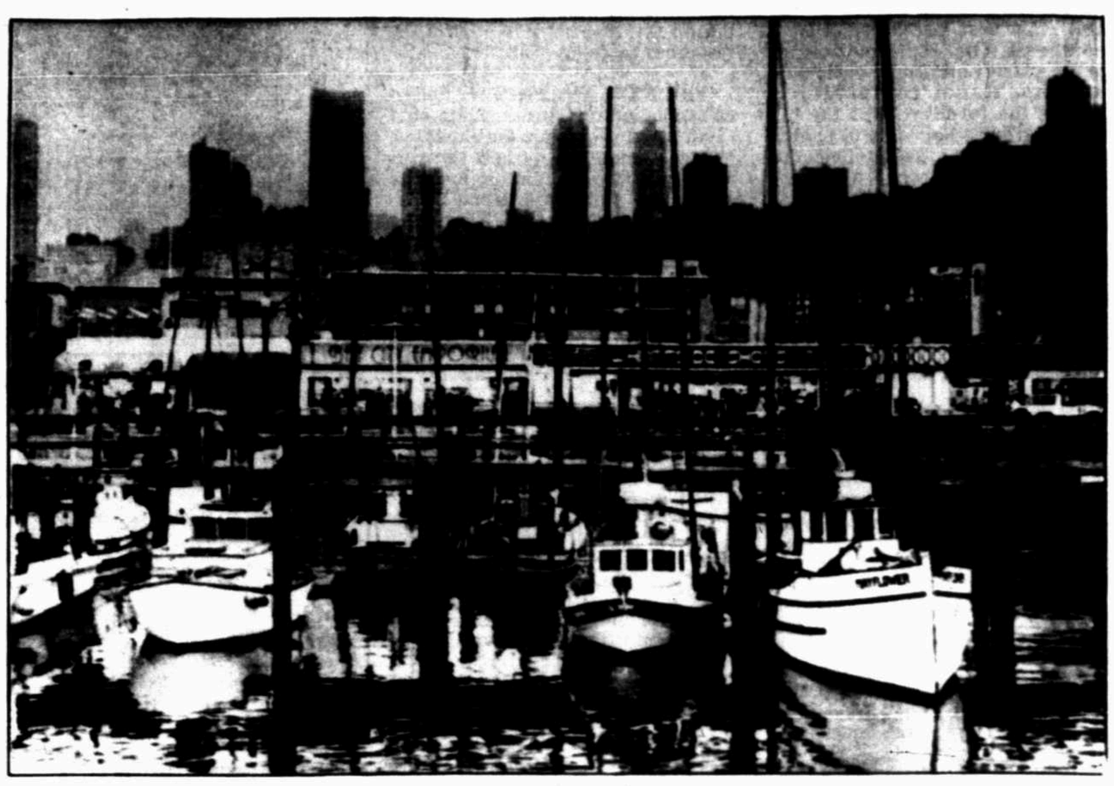

The next step, he said, will be taken within a couple of months as bids are sought from developers to build a hotel and convention complex on Pier 45, which forms one border of Fisherman's Wharf. The developer will be required to expand and modernize the Hyde Street Pier as part of the package, Stone said.

Merchants, however, are resisting any more hotels in the area and fishermen complain that the plan caters more to tourist businesses than to their needs.

Stone said improvements in lighting and security around the wharf are being discussed by port officials and boat owners, but money is short.

Several months ago, the rental system for the fishing boat berths was changed, raising rents for some fishermen and creating more ill will.

"The biggest complaint is a rate hike without giving us something in return," said Warren.

Tourists flock to San Francisco's famed Fisherman's Wharf like scavenging seagulls, but the city's main attraction could become just another shopping mall unless rotting piers and poor berthing conditions are remedied, say local fishermen. Businessmen worry that tourists may go elsewhere in the city if the fishing fleet vanishes.

Is Britian immune to new 'Nicholas Nickleby' epidemic?

By MATT WOLF

LONDON (AP) — Five years ago, London had a "Nicholas Nickleby" fever, as the kaleidoscopic saga of Victorian-era England unfurled on stage over 8½ hours.

Brought back twice to accommodate overflow crowds, the play then went to Broadway in 1981, winning four Tony Awards and setting a record ticket price of $100 a seat.

Co-director John Caird said at the time that he'd never do it again. He dreaded a revival because the first production had been such a huge success.

However, the Royal Shakespeare Company has gone into rehearsal to reprise the historic production of the Charles Dickens tale about an impoverished young man's adventures. The financially plagued company is counting on another triumph to generate income.

Granted a 1.9 percent funding increase for 1985-86, the government-subsidized RSC has reported that the company will be $211,500 short of the $352,500 needed to maintain its present operations.

Caird is now enjoying his work on the new production. "I was rather dreading a reprise, but I suppose now long enough has gone by to revive the appetite for the work and make one want to get it better," he said in an interview.

Under Caird and Trevor Nunn, its original directors, the marathon drama, adapted by David Edgar from the 1839 Dickens novel, is being remounted for a 16-month run that starts Dec. 13 in Stratford-upon-Avon and includes a year-long American tour in the spring.

The play fed a hunger for large-scale theater and environmental design that carried over to subsequent endeavors such as Nunn's staging of "Cats" and "Starlight Express."

However, before it can help make up the imminent shortfall, the new "Nicholas Nickleby" must live up to the tremendous popularity of the original.

So enthusiastic was one fan that he initiated an elaborate hoax announcing via posters and letters that the RSC had changed its name to the RDC — the Royal Dickens Company.

"We should be so lucky to get that sort of a compliment again," said the 36-year-old Caird.

He said the current project was "partly an exercise in remembering what we did...and also reminding ourselves that certain solutions were arrived at because of the particular personalities of the actors."

Five members of the current company of 32 appeared in the first production of "Nicholas Nickleby" in supporting roles.

Michael Siberry plays Nicholas, a role originated by Roger Rees, and John Lynch portrays Smike.

"I just remember the incredible buzz," said Lynch who starred in the movie, "Cal." He was a student at the Central School of Speech and Drama when the show first opened.

Siberry's freckle-faced, tousled haired youthfulness dispels images of Rees' sunken-cheeked angst.

Nicholas, he said, is "the throughline around which all these extraordinary people come and go." He's "the foil who lets other characters introduce what's unique to them."

Most unique is the beloved Smike, the hunched cripple whom Nicholas befriends and holds out to the audience at the conclusion of the play as a defiant gesture of humanity.

Writers Room, library offer space, silence for city's scribblers

By LARRY McSHANE

NEW YORK (AP) — There are 8 million stories in the naked city, but where amid the bustle of Manhattan can you find enough silence, space and solitude to write even one?

Music journalist Chet Flippo claims to have written a book on the Rolling Stones in a closet. If you check out rents and rooms in Manhattan, that doesn't seem so preposterous.

"New York writers face certain specific problems you don't find in other places," said Dey Gosse, executive director of the Writers Room, quickly ticking them off: outrageous rents, tiny rooms, constant noise, plus the universal writer's woe, a lack of funds.

"A writer in the country doesn't have these problems," she continued. "And because of the housing in the city, writers here can't afford to give up that one-room apartment they live in. But they can't work there."

They can work at the Writers Room, an "urban writers colony" of 3,500 square feet on the fifth floor at 156 Waverly Place in the heart of Greenwich Village.

It offers five small offices, 30 desks and a lunch room. And the rent is just $150 every three months.

"Writers are always long on ideas and short on cash," said Nancy Milford, biographer of Edna St. Vincent Millay and Zelda Fitzgerald. "What they need is someplace to convert those thoughts."

Ms. Milford is the incoming president at the Writers Room. She also wrote "Zelda" in the city's other prime location for those with The Write Stuff: the New York Public Library, where writers from Betty Friedan to Cindi Lauper have come to work.

THE WRITERS Room started in 1978 with four desks in a single room off Times Square; today, 70 writers come in and out of its home in the Village. Its whitewashed walls echo with the sounds of typewriters and word processors, but little else; silence is the credo of those who walk through its doors.

The quarterly fee gives writers access to a combination work space and social center-cum-"therapy room."

"The people who were there really became like my best buddies, although we don't always stay in touch now," said Judith Rossner, who put in six months of 84-hour weeks at the Writers Room to produce the best-selling novel "August."

"When you're all in there, it's like bunker buddies — there's a great understanding of purpose," said Rossner, who also wrote "Looking for Mr. Goodbar." "There's a camaraderie."

Ms. Milford, who was among the room's founders, said it started with 22 people donating $100 apiece; half of the original investors couldn't use the room because there wasn't enough space. But none of those involved — including marathon swimmer-author Diana Nyad and writer Susan Brownmiller — hesitated in contributing.

"There aren't many places like this, especially in the city, where you can have the kind of access you want, a little bit of comfort, a good atmosphere," explained Ms. Gosse. "It's relaxed, but structured."

A LITTLE ways uptown at Fifth Avenue and 42nd Street, the vast resources at the New York Public Library serve the same purpose for writers hungry or desperate for information.

"We are the library of last resort," said Rodney Phillips, who runs the main reading room with its more than 1 million books and documents on 16 miles of shelves. "Just about any book or novel which required some bit of research has probably used our collection a little bit."

Testimonials from authors including E.B. White, Thomas Tryon and John Knowles back him up. Library workers tell of Norman Mailer working there on "Ancient Evenings" and E.L. Doctorow on "Ragtime."

In the early years of this century, author-critic Frederick Lewis Allen often put in long hours of research at the huge, ornate building with the twin lions outside. To avoid stepping outside to smoke a cigarette, Lewis began working in a room where the library allowed smoking. That room took his name in 1956, two years after his death, and now serves as a workplace for 30 writers.

No one in the Frederick Lewis Allen Room cranks out "Looking for Mr. Goodbars" or pieces on Jagger and the Stones; Carl Sulberg, for example, clutches a 1952-54 U.S. State Department report on Chinese relations while talking about the room.

THE ALLEN Room, now funded by a Ford Foundation grant, admits only writers with signed, non-fiction book contracts, limits their stay to one year and is open only during regular library hours.

"There is no charge for the room, all we require is a $5 key deposit," said John Miller, current director of the Allen Room. "This can be a godsend to some of them. It's so hard to find space in midtown Manhattan — not to mention expensive."

The room is anything but posh — 17 by 35 feet filled with ancient typewriters, a dozen desks and one wall filled with books written there.

Sulberg, 70, was a friend of Allen and has been working on and off in the library for the past decade.

"I keep coming here because of the peace and quiet," he said.

Union Carbide 'skinnied down'

By PETER S. HAWES

DANBURY, Conn. (AP) — On paper, Union Carbide Corp. is a very different company today than it was on Dec. 3, 1984, when its chief executive stood before reporters and acknowledged that poison leaked from a chemical plant in India had killed as many as 2,000 people.

It has 4,100 fewer employees and a realigned management, has written off $1 billion in assets, and is in the middle of siphoning money from its employee pension fund, buying back shares of its stock and preparing to sell businesses it feels it no longer needs.

"Skinnied down," is how Chairman and Chief Executive Officer Warren M. Anderson describes it.

No longer does it appear the apologetic corporate parent of an overseas subsidiary where an apparent accident caused the worst disaster in chemical industry history. The Indian government announced Nov. 18 that the adjusted death toll was 1,750, with 300,000 people sickened.

Carbide executives speak more frequently of sabotage, and they blame attorneys and a stubborn Indian government for the lack of a quick settlement of issues associated with the Dec. 3 leak of methyl isocyanate gas from a Union Carbide India Ltd. plant in Bhopal.

"It wasn't accidental," Anderson said recently of the leak, which according to a company assessment occurred when water entered an MIC storage tank.

In an interview last month at Union Carbide's headquarters here, Anderson said his company's attitude toward the Bhopal crisis had "not changed. But the circumstances have changed."

The Indian government has rejected two reported settlement offers from Carbide, with the total ranging from $200 million to $300 million, depending on whether it is figured in 1985 dollars or by the value of payments stretched over 30 years. On November 26, Carbide agreed to pay $5 million in direct relief to victims, with the money distributed by the Indian Red Cross.

The government has, however, agreed to represent those who have filed more than 2,700 lawsuits in Bhopal. An additional 130 lawsuits are pending in U.S. courts.

Together, the claims have climbed into the hundreds of billions of dollars. Carbide is fighting to keep all lawsuits out of U.S. courts, while attempts to reach an out-of-court settlement with India have reached an impasse.

"Somehow, some way, the lawyers have indicated that it would be best not to cooperate with Union Carbide because it may sort of prejudice their case," Anderson said. With a black spot on its name, he said, the company has financed vocational training, housing and mobile hospitals in Bhopal through such third parties as Arizona State University.

Anderson, who plans to retire in about 16 months, once spoke of spending the rest of his career preoccupied with Bhopal. Company insiders then described him as "obsessed."

Eleven months later, however, Anderson said, "Today, 90 percent of my time is spent on Carbide business. It's a big company. We have a lot of irons in the fire-...When the government of India decided to take the litigation route, it made it simple. In some ways it's easier for me because lawyers lawyer and do their thing over there."

Anderson spends most of his time overseeing a vast restructuring he said had been planned for January 1985. Events in Bhopal and an Aug. 11 leak at a Carbide plant in Institute, W.Va., "got in the way," he said, denying analysts' contentions that the reorganization, announced Aug. 28, was designed in part to thwart a takeover.

Bhopal-like disaster would overwhelm facilities

By NANCY PAPPAS
Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

Although doctors deal regularly with cases involving poisonous substances, like overdoses of medicines or children who have drunk weed killer, a toxic emergency on the scale of Bhopal lies outside the experience of the American medical community.

In general, physicians and other professionals involved with emergency medicine believe that the only response to a chemical disaster like Bhopal lies in its prevention, because no practical amount of advance preparation could guarantee adequate care for so many victims.

Nowhere is a medical community prepared for a disaster of the magnitude of Bhopal.

"What city can cope with 100,000 people streaming into emergency rooms in acute respiratory distress? The answer is none," said Dr. Jeffrey Koplan of the federal Centers for Disease Control, who was part of a team of American medical experts that visited Bhopal after last year's disaster.

"The acute disaster is of such a monumental scale that having more modern equipment or more ambulances doesn't make much difference, they get overwhelmed so quickly," Koplan said. "It's almost irrelevant whether a hospital in Bhopal has two respirators and Hartford has 20. If 100 people come in, most people don't get one."

Neither do toxicologists or doctors possess complete information on the full range of the health effects of chemicals. With about 55,000 chemicals in commercial use in the United States, the best that doctors can hope for is to know where to look for information.

MOREOVER, filling the gaps in knowledge about the health effects of chemicals has been as much a matter of chance and opportunity as of design, experts in the field say.

"When the disaster occurred, very little was known about methyl isocyanate," said Dr. Eugene McConnell of the National Institute of Environmental Health, a federal research agency with headquarters in Research Triangle Park, N.C. "I can assure you that in the year since, this institution and many others have learned a great deal more."

The institute, as well as several other laboratories, are in the midst of long-term exposure studies using various animals, McConnell said. The researchers are watching for both immediate and long-term effects of the chemical.

No matter where it happened in the United States, a release of toxic chemicals on the scale of Bhopal would result in what emergency medical people call a mass casualty.

"The definition of a mass casualty is when medical needs outstrip the available resources," said Chris A. Gentile, director of emergency medical services at the Connecticut Department of Health Services.

Because mass casualties have so many possible causes — a nuclear power plant accident, a building collapse, a tornado, a plane crash — planning consists of "training people to know what their resources are and how to make appropriate decisions," Gentile said.

For instance, a newly adopted regional New England mass casualty plan focuses primarily on avoiding chaos at the scene and sorting victims into appropriate groups: the dead or dying, those in need of immediate life-saving care, and those whose treatment can be deferred while those more gravely injured are attended to.

"ON A day-to-day basis, you deal with everybody as if you're going to save them," he said. "In a mass disaster, you go in on the assumption that someone's going to die."

Mass casualty planning now is limited to local, or at best, regional areas and varies widely in quality and sophistication. A national disaster medical plan, an outgrowth of a Department of Defense plan to treat military casualties of conventional warfare, is still in the planning stages.

As a result, the effectiveness of the medical response to a catastrophe such as Bhopal would depend on the location.

The consequences of poor regional coordination became apparent to Dr. Mary Ann Cooper, director of emergency medicine at St. Francis Hospital and Medical Center in Hartford, when she was working at a hospital in Cincinnati, Ohio, in 1977.

She was on duty the night of May 28, when a catastrophic fire broke out at the Beverly Hills Supper Club across the Ohio River in Southgate, Ky., killing 164 people. Although the club was only a few minutes' drive from the state line, Kentucky's emergency medical communication system did not cross the border and rescuers from Cooper's hospital were forced to rely on television reports for information and instructions.

Although the ability of the medical system to cope with a Bhopal-scale disaster is limited and likely to remain so, emergency physicians say they are reasonably well-prepared to treat chemical victims brought to the hospital in more manageable numbers.

ALL adequately equipped emergency rooms have toxicology reference manuals in easy reach, as well as a list of hot-line numbers to call for additional information on any one of the 55,000 chemicals manufactured in the United States, Cooper said.

But the manuals are useless if the doctors do not know what chemical is involved, she added.

"Very often the patient or group of patients comes in and you have no idea what they're contaminated with," she said. "So we're treating symptoms."

The American College of Emergency Physicians, a 11,300-member professional organization, recently adopted a resolution asserting the group's right to gain access to the ingredients and health effects of toxic materials

Dotson's future clouded by doubts

CHICAGO (AP) — He started the year facing at least three more behind bars. He'll end it a free man shackled by fame, living under a cloud of doubts about the bizarre story that ended his imprisonment.

Still, Gary Dotson has come a long way.

He's planning his wedding, hoping to start a new job and laying the groundwork for a future that has taken an almost fictional turn since Cathleen Crowell Webb, the woman who once accused him of rape, said it was all a lie.

But while his world has changed, Dotson, 28, has not.

It's been six months since Gov. James R. Thompson freed Dotson by commuting his 25- to 50-year sentence. In that time, friends and family say, Dotson has shown a remarkable lack of bitterness about his six years in prison.

"Prison didn't change him that much," said longtime friend Bill Julian, who was with Dotson the night of the alleged rape. "It's amazing he doesn't hold a grudge. He doesn't seem to have too much anger...He's just so glad to be out."

"He's the same — before he went away, during and after," confirmed Dotson's 23-year-old sister, Laura. "He seems to have adjusted really well."

These first few months, however, have not been trouble free.

First, a bout with hepatitis this summer landed Dotson in the hospital. Then he lost his job as a roofer. The combination left Dotson "in desperate need of money," said Warren Lupel, his attorney.

Dotson also had to get used to living under the watchful eye of parole officials. For the next three years, he will be on "high supervision" — reporting to his parole officer three times a month. Like other parolees, every trip he takes outside Cook County must be approved.

"He's walking on eggshells," Lupel said. "He's very, very cautious in his everyday life."

And finally Dotson, who declined to be interviewed, has been uneasy with the media hoopla surrounding his every move. "He is very reticent, almost to the point of shyness," Lupel said. "It was difficult for him to handle."

He has, however, signed agreements for a book and TV movie (he'd like actor Sean Penn to portray him) and appeared last month on ABC's "Good Morning America" with his fiancee, Camille Dardanes.

Dotson said then that he remains troubled by his failure to clear his name — a judge refused his bid for a new trial — and feels some people still doubt his innocence.

His fiancee is not one of them. She said she never questioned whether Dotson was telling the truth.

And it is Ms. Dardanes that Dotson credits with pulling him through his period of adjustment. "Without her I think I would have fallen over the edge," he said recently.

AP Laserphoto

Gary Dotson, with fiancee Camille Dardanes, is looking to the future since his release from prison after Cathleen Crowell Webb said her accusation against him of rape was all a lie.

The two vacationed this fall in Las Vegas and Dotson hopes to begin an apprentice carpenter's job soon, his sister said.

The couple, who live together five minutes away from Dotson's family in suburban Country Club Hills, met in May when she handed him a flower at his clemency hearing. This fall, he gave her a ring set with a pear-shaped diamond. A spring wedding is planned.

The clemency hearing, conducted by Thompson, came two months after Mrs. Webb declared she had lied when accusing Dotson of raping her in 1977.

Mrs. Webb, now a mother of two living in New Hampshire, said she concocted the story because she feared she was pregnant after having sex with a teen-age boy. The governor refused to pardon Dotson, saying he didn't believe Mrs. Webb's recantation.

In a sense, Dotson, who would have been eligible for parole in 1988, is grateful to Mrs. Webb, Julian said. "Like he says, she might have saved him 10 years."

"Prison didn't change him that much. It's amazing he doesn't hold a grudge. He doesn't seem to have too much anger...He's just so glad to be out."

— Bill Julian, longtime friend of Gary Dotson

Mrs. Webb has written a book about the experience, "Forgive Me," and has turned over the first royalties — a low five-figure sum — to Dotson.

In return, Dotson has signed an agreement giving up his right to sue her for wrongs committed against him, Lupel said. She is now under no legal obligaton to pay him any more money from any royalties she may earn from telling her story, he added.

But the public hasn't heard the last of the Dotson-Webb case.

Three independent producers, two with Broadway experience, have acquired the rights to their story for $350,000, said Joe Dera, of Rogers & Cowan public relations in New York.

The three will put together a television movie that will probably air next fall over three nights. Though no writers, directors or actors have been selected, Dera said, "Gary would like Sean Penn to play him." Penn, husband of rock singer Madonna, starred in "Bad Boys" and "The Falcon and the Snowman."

An "investigative" book is also planned. "What we hope to do is have the book on the subject," said Agnes Birnbaum, of Bleecker Street Associates in New York. "I have a long list of editors saying, 'Send it to me. Send it to me.'"

Whether Dotson will continue to profit from story is uncertain.

Lupel has filed suit challenging a bill passed by Illinois lawmakers that prevents criminals from profiting from the sale of their story.

Under the bill, any profits from a criminal's story would go into a special fund that could make payments to the victim. After two years, unclaimed money would be sent to other programs to assist other crime victims.

Two suits seeking a new trial to clear Dotson's name also are pending in the Illinois Appellate Court.

Although the case isn't closed, Dotson, who still goes fishing and drinking with old friends, doesn't mention it very often.

He does talk of the future, though. "He doesn't want anything special," Julian said. "He just wants a comfortable life."

And, his sister added, "He still wants his name cleared. And we do, too. We just don't talk about it."

Colorado town trying to maintain small-town aura

Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

CASTLE ROCK, Colo. — The mayor's speech about "the importance of community" lasted only a few minutes, but that was just long enough for the soft gray of twilight to give way to the deep black of night. Perfect timing! The stage was set for the big event.

The townspeople gathered here on the steps of the Douglas County Courthouse joined in a loud countdown.

When it ended, the lights of a 40-foot-tall Christmas star mounted high atop the town's eponymous rock flashed on.

For the 49th year, the people of this community had celebrated the lighting of "The Star at Castle Rock."

Back in 1936, when the town elders first erected the star above the highway running north to Denver, the purpose was partly to spread Christmas cheer and partly to remind the outside world of the existence of this small town at the base of the big rock.

But today Castle Rock finds itself smack in the path of a historic migration: the Sun Belt shift.

The small town is becoming a big one; and in those circumstances, the annual star-lighting ceremony here has a new purpose.

"We're here to light the star," said Mayor George Kennedy in that perfectly timed speech.

"But we're also here to remind ourselves of the importance of community."

Maintaining a sense of community has become an important but elusive goal for towns all over the South and West that are absorbing the great migration of Americans who are trickling out of the Northeast and Midwest and flooding into places like Douglas County and its county seat, Castle Rock.

The census data vividly demonstrate the dilemma here. Douglas County's population grew from 8,407 in 1970 to 25,153 in 1980.

That growth rate — 199 percent — made it the second-fastest growing county in the nation, according to the Census Bureau. The fastest was Summit County, Colo., to the northwest of here.

The town of Castle Rock doubled in population — to about 7,000 — in the same decade, and planners say it will be a full-fledged city of 30,000 by the end of the 1980s.

There has been some muted criticism of this sudden growth, but little has been done to stop it.

For one thing, some old landowners are getting rich; for another, the strong sense of personal freedom here precludes the governmental controls over development that are common in the East.

Still, the change in the town's nature is something people notice every day. Sam Swearingen, proprietor of a jeans-and-boots shop on Castle Rock's main street says, "There are people coming in my store that I don't even know."

There's also been a qualitative change as this erstwhile rural outpost takes in thousands of newcomers for whom a "mustang" is a kind of car.

The Montgomery Ward catalog store has been replaced by an art gallery, and Hi's Western Store has turned one room formerly devoted to tack and saddlery into a videotape outlet.

The cattle that grazed just three years ago at the edge of the Safeway parking lot were evicted to make way for a golf course.
