MR. ABALOS' COMMUTE

He drives 500 miles to his job

By DONALD M. COOPER
Brand Editor

It's staple of the movies: A dedicated teacher motivates youngsters in a poor school to excel.

In this case, however, it's not a Hollywood film, it's real life and a Hereford resident is the dedicated teacher.

What makes Paul Abalos' story different is the extent of his commitment to education. That's because he teaches in Presidio, a small town of 3,200 people on the Texas-Mexico border nearly 500 miles from his home just off U.S. Hwy. 385 south of Hereford. The school district is Class AAA, with about 1,300 students.

Abalos is the director of adult basic education for the Presidio Independent School District. However, he said with a laugh, my boss says, 'Mr. Abalos wears a lot of hats.'"

In addition to his responsibilities in running the adult education program for PISD, Abalos also is an interpreter, public information officer and serves as a liaison between the school and the community.

"If a family has a problem, they come to me to set up meetings with principals or the superintendent," he said.

Abalos grew up in the Odessa area, graduating from Rankin High School. He earned his bachelor's degree from Sul Ross State University in 1961, then taught for a year in Presidio.

In 1962, he came to Hereford, where he taught for several years before leaving education to "work for my wife at her restaurant." Abalos' wife, Pilar, is owner-operator of Mrs. Abalos' Mexican Restaurant in Hereford.

"But I got serious about getting back in ... education, so I tried to find a small school. After seven years, education systems had really changed. I went to Presidio, a small school, as junior high counselor and language arts teacher (in 1988)," Abalos said.

After some health problems, which required surgery, he didn't want to make the 479-mile drive from Hereford to Presidio, so he was able to get a position within the Plainview ISD. While in Plainview, he decided to seek an administration position. However, he found out his master's degree in education and psychology, which he had earned from West Texas State University (now West Texas A&M University) in 1968, didn't meet the requirements for administrative certification. So, Abalos went back on the road, commuting to Alpine to earn another master's degree.

After gaining his administrative certification, he was hired as curriculum director for elementary education in Presidio, a position he held until last fall when he was promoted to his present job in the district administration office.

Before accepting the position in Presidio, Abalos said he discussed it with his wife, whose restaurant business has been a Hereford fixture for more than 26 years, and she said if he were doing what he likes, then it's fine.

"I try to spend the weekends here. The longest I'm away is two weeks. It is a long, hard drive," he said.

"I get offers to get closer to home,

Hospital board sets interview with job finalist

By DONALD M. COOPER
Brand Editor

One down; one to go.

Directors of the Deaf Smith County Hospital District will interview a North Dakota health professional behind closed doors Monday night -- the second prospective hospital administrator the board's met with in a week.

The board will interview John Studrud in executive session at 6:30 p.m. Monday in the board room at Hereford Regional Medical Center. The board on June 28 interviewed LuAnn Weldon of Guymon, Okla., about the position vacated in February by Jim T. Robinson.

Robinson, who had been HRMC administrator since September 1994, resigned following a dispute with the hospital medical staff, a dispute both Robinson and the medical staff said could not be resolved.

The board established a six-person committee -- two board members, two physicians and two members of the medical staff -- to conduct the search for a new administrator. At the same time, the board picked George Parsley, a vice president of St. Mary's of the Plains Hospital in Lubbock, to be interim administrator. Parsley has split his time between Hereford and Lubbock since April.

While praising Parsley's work for HRMC, Manchee said the board is anxious to get a permanent administrator in place because "no matter how good an interim administrator is, he's still 'interim.'"

At the June 23 board meeting, Mark Collier, who chaired the search committee, said the list of prospective hospital administrators had been weeded down to five, out of 80 resumes which the panel had received.

Following a review of the five prospects, the board contacted the candidates, but three of the prospective administrators declined interviews.

After the interview with Weldon, Manchee said the Oklahoman was a good candidate.

"She's very astute, knows health and knows this area," Manchee said. "My initial impression was very favorable.

"She has a home health background ... and some nursing home background. The physicians seemed to like her. Overall, the board seemed to feel good about her," Manchee said.

He said Weldon's husband has worked in banking and would be interested in purchasing property in the country, if she were to be hired.

He also expressed optimism the board will be able to make an offer to a new hospital administrator within days after the next interview.

Tickets to go on sale for 'birthday' concert

"Emilio in Concert" will kick off Hereford's Centennial Celebration, according to the Deaf Smith County Chamber of Commerce.

The concert will be 8 p.m. July 31 at Whiteface Stadium.

Emilio was Tejano music's hottest star for six years running and now has crossed over to country and western.

Tickets for the concert, which will be sponsored by the Spicer Gripp Memorial Roping Committee, will go on sale Monday. Advance tickets will be $18; admission will be $20 at the gate.

The sponsors will make 3,600 tickets available and no more will be sold. Proceeds from the event go to a scholarship fund at West Texas A&M University and to a fund started to construct a special-events outdoor arena in Hereford.

Tickets will be sold at Hereford State Bank, FirstBank Southwest, Hereford Texas Federal Credit Union, Boots & Saddle Western Wear, Walco International, BJM Sales & Service, Troy's Sweet Shop, and the chamber of commerce office.

When his first country album came out in 1995, Emilio Navaira dropped his last name. Now, he is simply Emilio. For six straight years, he was named male entertainer of the year at the Tejano Music Awards. But Emilio's backers wanted to take one step farther, making him the first truly bilingual star in the U.S. and Mexico.

"Life Is Good," his first country album, was a giant step in that direction.

Seating will be on the west side of Whiteface Stadium for the July 31 show. A concession stand will be open at the concert. Due to Texas law, alcohol and tobacco products will be prohibited at the event.

Top officials leave government positions, come back as lobbyists

WASHINGTON (AP) - Two years ago, Linda Hall Daschle policed the airlines as the No. 2 official at the Federal Aviation Administration. Now she is taking the industry's side as a lobbyist.

The wife of Senate Democratic leader Tom Daschle already counts Northwest Airlines, American Airlines and the nation's biggest commercial airplane maker, Boeing, among her clients.

Ms. Daschle, the FAA's deputy administrator from November 1993 through January 1997, joins a growing list of civil servants who are trading in government positions and passing through the lobbying profession's revolving door to take lucrative jobs as influence brokers for the industries they once oversaw.

An Associated Press computer analysis of lobbying disclosure reports identified 304 recently retired government officials and members of Congress who registered as lobbyists in the last 18 months. At the end of 1997, there were only about 230. Hundreds more former government officials, who left office before 1995, also dot the lobbying rolls.

They range from former White House deputy chief of staff Harold Ickes, whose clients include the New York City Council and a hospital group, to former Reps. Jack Fields, R-Texas, and Sonny Montgomery, D-Miss.

Fields, who oversaw the overhaul of the telecommunications industry as a House subcommittee chairman, listed GTE Corp. among his clients. Montgomery, a former senior member of the National Security Committee, listed defense contractors Lockheed Martin and Hughes Aircraft among his.

Under the Clinton administration's rules, Ms. Daschle cannot lobby the FAA or the Transportation Department for five years. She voluntarily does not lobby the Senate.

With the airline industry seeking to block Transportation Department guidelines designed to increase competition at smaller airports, Ms. Daschle helped arranged meetings with House members. The industry won a partial victory with a recent vote in the House Transportation Committee.

"I would hope that my years in aviation would provide them with the type of assistance that they would see as valuable for working on a number of technical and regulatory matters," Ms. Daschle said.

Ms. Daschle's firm is handsomely rewarded. Northwest Airlines alone paid it $100,000 in 1997.

Former members of Congress cannot lobby their ex-colleagues for one

Local Roundup

City commission

Members of the Hereford City Commission will discuss bids for sale of 25.4 acres located near the intersection of Progressive Road and 15th Street when they meet at 7:30 p.m. Monday in the commission chamber at City Hall, 224 N. Lee.

The commissioners also will approve a resolution establishing grievance procedures, consider an ordinance amending the electrical licenses, consider Hereford Economic Development Corp. agreements with Caviness Packing and American Modular Buildings, and hear a report on a sub-standard house at 309 Avenue C.

Church softball teams forming

Hereford YMCA church co-ed softball leagues are now forming. Registration begins July 9, with games begin July 13 at the Nazarene field. Games will be at 6:30 p.m. and 7:30 p.m. Monday, Tuesday, and Thursday evenings. The cost is $200 per team.

For more information, contact Weldon Knabe at the YMCA.

Memorial 10-K run

The Greg Black Memorial 10-K fun run will begin at 8 a.m. Aug. 8 at the Hereford YMCA. Entry fee is $10 in advance, $12 the day of race.

Census help

The Census Bureau will be administer census enumerator tests every other Tuesday through Aug. 18, at the Texas Workforce Commission, 1700 25 Mile Ave.

Tests will be administered at 1 p.m. and 7 p.m.

For more information, contact the TWC office at 364-8600.

Farmers Market

All vendors interested in selling produce during this year's Hereford Farmers Market, sponsored each year by the Deaf Smith Chamber of Commerce, are encouraged to contact Denise Andrews, market chairman, at 276-5240.

The market has been scheduled to begin operation in July 15 at the Family Dollar parking lot, 111 W. Park Ave.

The market is open to all vendors, but produce must be home-grown. Planting acreage must be inspected before permits will be issued. Vendor entry fees include a $15 season membership fee and a $5 stall fee.

City Wide Garage Sale

The Deaf Smith County Chamber of Commerce will accept garage sale registrations for the 2nd Annual City Wide Garage Sale through July 13.

The event will be 8 a.m.-5 p.m. July 18.

The registration fee is $10, and each garage sale will be listed on a locator map and furnished with a yard sign. Garage sales are to be registered at the chamber office, 701 N. Main.

There are still booth spaces available for the arts and crafts show being held in FirstBank Southwest parking lot in conjunction with the City Wide Garage Sale. Sign-up deadline is July 10. For more information or to rent a booth, call Andra Schlabs at 364-8403 and leave a message.

Dress code reminder

Parents and their students who will be enrolled in Hereford Independent School District classes for the 1998-99 school year are encouraged to keep in mind dress codes for all grades when purchasing back-to-school clothing.

Several popular clothing items are not allowed in the classroom or on the various school campuses according to the HISD dress codes.

Elementary students may wear shorts to classes, but "short" shorts will not be permitted.

In grades 7-12, skirts must be no shorter than 6 inches above the knee when the student is in a kneeling position. Athletic shorts and bicycle shorts will not be allowed, but walking shorts may be worn if they are no more than 7 inches above the knee in kneeling position.

Baggy and/or sagging pants will not be permitted on any campus and undergarments must not be exposed at any time. Lowcut clothing will also not be accepted.

Jury deadlocked in blinding trial

DALLAS (AP) - A jury will return from the three-day Fourth of July weekend to continue deliberating the fate of a 17-year-old high school wrestler accused of gouging another young man's eyes.

Jurors met for six hours Thursday before telling the judge they were deadlocked 9-3, without saying which way. They could be overheard yelling in disagreement several times.

They're expected to pick up where they left off Monday.

In a note to State District Judge Hal Gaither, the jury said, "Our positions are solidified. We don't expect any movement."

The judge told jurors they would have to deliberate a total of four days - the time it took to pick a jury and present evidence in the aggravated assault trial - before declaring a mistrial, defense attorney David Scoggins said.

Heading for tee

Ryan Palmer (left) of Amarillo and James Salinas, golf coach at Hereford High School, are ready to tee off in the first round of the 1998 Coors Open Partnership golf tournament at John Pitman Municipal Golf Course. Palmer, who played in U.S. Open at San Francisco and who will play in the U.S. Amateur, was a special guest Friday at the tournament's first round. The tournament, which benefits the Make-a-Wish Foundation, will conclude Sunday.

Flash foods hit Hill Country

By The Associated Press

Strong thunderstorms moved across the Hill Country early Saturday, causing some flash flooding.

Rainfall estimated at 2-4 inches fell early Saturday in Burnet County and eastern areas of Llano County. Several county roads and low water crossings were flooded in Burnet County.

The activity was expected to continue in South Texas through tonight. Many areas of South Texas had received a half of inch of rain or more since early Friday.

Some scattered showers and thunderstorms were also forecast in most areas of West Texas through Sunday.

It will be partly cloudy with a chance of thunderstorms across North Texas through Sunday.

South Texas will have cloudy skies and continued showers and thunderstorms. Some areas could get heavy rainfall, forecasters said.

Lows tonight will be in the 60s and 70s in West Texas, the 70s across North Texas and in the 70s and 80s in South Texas.

Highs Sunday will be in the 80s in the mountains and in the 90s elsewhere in West Texas, the 90s in North Texas and in the 80s and 90s in South Texas.

Agency urges water conservation

DALLAS (AP) - Water, water everywhere - and that's the problem.

With scorching temperatures in the 100s and no rain, Texans are using lots of the wet stuff these days to cool themselves and their yards.

But water systems are having a hard time keeping up with the demand, so the Texas Natural Resource Conservation Commission is asking folks to conserve.

"In short, it's time for action, and that means we need to put water conservation as a top priority," Commissioner John Baker said Friday. "We ask all citizens of Texas to use water wisely this time of year."

The shortage is especially bad in Northeast Texas, where 11 counties are having water demand problems. More than 30 systems from Cass County in the north to Cherokee and Anderson counties in the south are under mandatory or voluntary rationing.

At least two North Texas cities have gone a step further. Residents of Plano who ignore water use rules face fines up to $1,000. In Coppell, fines for violations range from $50 to $200.

Despite preventive measures, officials stress there's plenty of water in North Texas lakes, and no shortage is imminent.

Most cities have enough water in reserve to cover a few high-use days, but during extended periods of hot weather or drought, those reserves run out quickly.

And Texas is in the grip of a long-running drought that is draining billions of dollars from the state's economy and prompting farmers to abandon scorched crops.

Janell Mirochna, a spokeswoman for Dallas Water Utilities, said water use estimates are crucial for making sure there's enough for everyone.

"The system's not a yo-yo, and you can't just ask for more water one day and then go back to the old amount the next," Ms. Mirochna told The Dallas Morning News.

The TNRCC has these tips for saving water:

- Wash clothes and dishes only in full loads. Soak dishes before washing instead of running water over them.
- Never keep water running while brushing your teeth.
- Water your plants and lawn only when necessary and only on designated days, if you live in an area where rationing is in effect. Never water during the hottest part of the day.
- Put off washing your vehicle if possible.
- Fix leaking faucets and toilets.

Clinton seeking strong food rules

WASHINGTON (AP) - As Americans prepared to celebrate the Fourth of July around their barbecue grills, President Clinton called today for tighter food safety rules and new government research on preventing contamination.

Clinton said he wanted to use his weekly radio address, recorded before he flew home from Hong Kong, to relay "what I'm doing to make sure the food and drinks we serve our families this Independence Day and every day are safe."

He announced a plan to create, with the Agriculture and Health and Human Services departments, a joint institute of food safety research that would coordinate all federal research programs, including those conducted with the private sector and academia.

It is anticipated the institute would develop faster and more accurate methods of identifying foodborne hazards, and more effective ways of preventing contamination at each step of food production, the president said.

He added an appeal to Congress for $101 million to implement his broader food-safety initiative, including expanded surveillance, inspection and early-warning systems. Thus far, the House has voted to provide just $16.8 million of the president's request. The Senate Appropriations committee approved only $2.6 million.

Following up on a 2-month-old Food and Drug Administration announcement that unpasteurized juices would soon be required to carry warning labels, Clinton said work on the federal regulation is completed and it will take effect in time for the fall apple cider season.

"These warnings will help families make better decisions about the juice they buy," he said.

GOP hails tax cuts

WASHINGTON (AP) - Drawing parallels to the fight against taxation that lead to the nation's independence, Republican Rep. Gerald Solomon of New York saluted his party today for its strides in reducing Americans' tax burden.

In the GOP's weekly radio address, Solomon pointed to the growth of government intervention and of taxation as signs that the freedoms gained by independence more than two centuries ago were slowly unraveling.

"What the Founding Fathers couldn't even comprehend is the idea of Americans paying more in taxes than they do now for food and shelter," he said. "They couldn't even begin to comprehend the idea of the American people working six months out of the year just to pay for the cost of government."

but I'm making a difference (in Presidio). We've gone from monitored status to state-recognized for TAAS scores. I intend to stay until we get exemplary status, then I'll hang it up," Abalos said.

"You really have to want to be there in Presidio. There's nothing but desert for miles. You can't go to the corner drugstore for a milkshake -- there are none. There's no theater, no doctor. If you get sick, you have to go 80 miles to Alpine," he said.

The isolated city, located in the rugged desert just across the Rio Grande from the Chihuahan city of Ojinaga, also struggles with high unemployment, which now is running about 39 percent.

"Most people who live there work in the Permian Basin in the oil fields. There're a lot of insulation workers who travel around the United States, and (migrant) farm workers," he said. The major employer in the Presidio area had been the onion farms, Abalos said, but during the most recent harvest, many farmers left onions in the field "because they couldn't find enough workers."

He said it is ironic that an area with 39 percent unemployment would have a shortage of workers when it was time to harvest the onions, but he said hydroponic tomato operations have been established in Fort Davis and Marfa, so people in Presidio either work in the big greenhouses or try to find jobs there.

It's understandable, he said, people wanting to work in the greenhouses rather than doing "stoop labor" in the onion fields.

'Hereford's been good to my family. The kids went to school here and they're doing pretty well.'

-Paul Abalos

Presidio also has a negative image, Abalos said, because of its status as a "gateway for drug traffickers."

Drugs are smuggled across the border at Presidio, but Abalos said he doesn't understand the traffickers.

"Everyone knows they're coming across there, but they keep coming," he said.

Unlike many other border cities - El Paso-Juarez, Nogales, Ariz.-Nogales, Sonora, Brownsville-Matamoras - where drug smuggling is a major problem, Presidio's school district has had few of those communities' disciplinary problems.

"We haven't had any discipline problem, up to now. We just haven't had it," he said.

When he goes back to Presidio in a couple of weeks, Abalos will be putting on another hat: promoter.

He is organizing a football game between two semi-professional teams as a fund raiser for the district. As part of the promotion, he persuaded the district to purchase a big-screen television. At halftime at the game, the district will hold a drawing and some lucky ticket-holder will go home with the television.

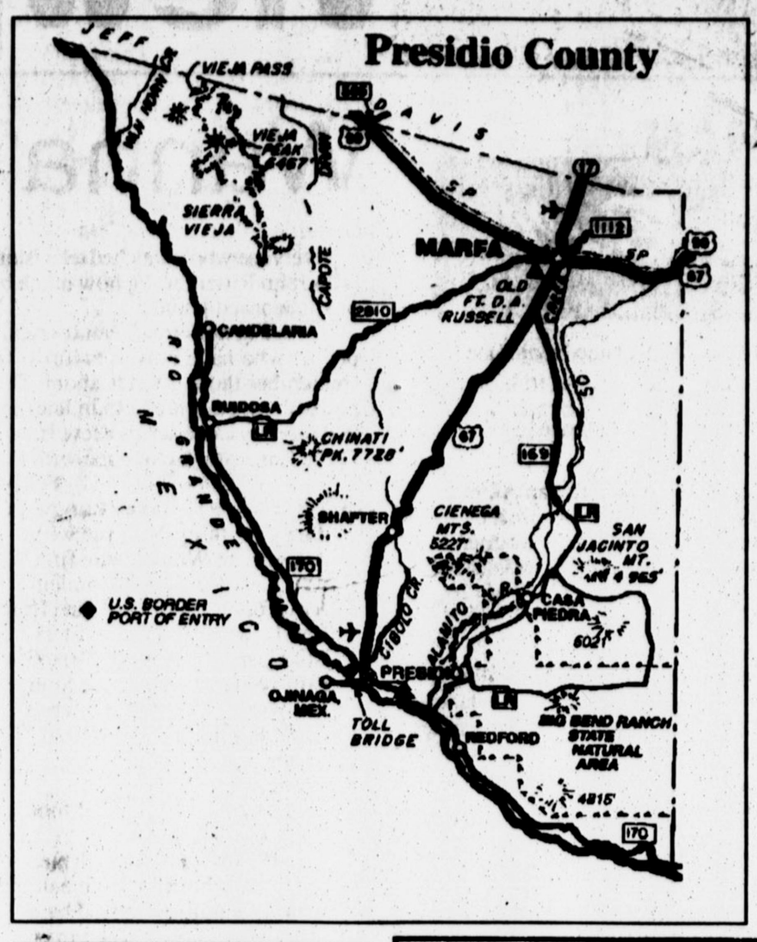

While Abalos is teaching in Presidio, his wife runs her restaurant in Hereford.

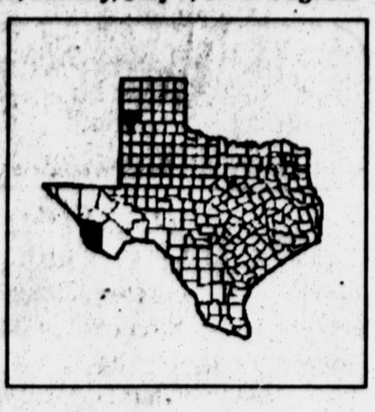

"The success of (her) restaurant is because people believed in us, some of the lending institutions have been very supportive. There were some valleys, but this is home. We've had chances to go to other places, but we opted to stay," he said.

"Hereford's been good to my family. The kids went to school here and they're doing pretty well," he said proudly.

Paul and Pilar Abalos are the parents of five adult children. They have 12 grandchildren and two great-grandchildren.

Map (at right) shows Deaf Smith and Presidio counties in black, while map below gives more detail about the border area where Presidio is located.

The value of U.S. manufacturers' shipments of fireworks was $22.9 million in 1992, up from $15.3 million in 1987.

Pearls of Investing Wisdom

In today's world, investing advice is as pervasive as oxygen. Pick up a newspaper or magazine, turn on the TV or answer the telephone, and you'll find someone promoting the latest and greatest way to achieve financial security.

However, there are a few real pearls of wisdom amid all the hype. Some of these gems can be found in the bookstore.

For example, "One Up on Wall Street," by Peter Lynch, is an easy-to-read book that shows ordinary investors how to pick good stocks. The former manager of one of the nation's largest mutual funds, Lynch says the average investor can pick stocks just as well, if not better, than the average Wall Street expert.

"One Up on Wall Street" is sprinkled with amusing personal stories of how Lynch missed golden opportunities by focusing on trendy stocks. More importantly, he talks about his successes. Lynch encourages readers to be aware of companies that are successfully filling the needs of people. He also provides solid advice on financial planning before you ever invest a dime in stocks. "One Up on Wall Street" is fun reading with a message.

Benjamin Graham's "The Intelligent Investor" is classic reading for the serious investor. First published in 1949 and updated in 1973, "The Intelligent Investor" provides timeless advice. Graham views buying securities like owning a business: Know the business, get involved in its operation, understand its profit-making potential, trust your instincts and judgment, and much more. "The Intelligent Investor" is filled with logical advice that never grows old.

"The Investor's Anthology," by Charles Ellis and James Vertin, offers firsthand accounts from experts such as Warren Buffett, Ben Graham, T. Rowe Price and others. Between its covers you'll find real-life stories of investing successes and defeats, popular misconceptions and foolish mistakes. A candid look at the experiences of some of the most successful investors of our time, "The Investor's Anthology" is entertaining and instructional.

"Common Stocks and Uncommon Profits and Other Writings by Philip A. Fisher" answers many of the most common investing questions. You'll find proven advice in this book, including Fisher's "Top 10 Don'ts for Investors." A pioneer of modern investment theory, Fisher introduced his ideas 40 years ago — and most of today's widely accepted philosophies can be traced to his genius.

Finally, "The Millionaire Next Door," by Thomas J. Stanley, is probably one of the most motivational books on investing. This column first discussed this book back in September 1997. Since then, it has made bestseller lists everywhere.

"Millionaire" tells us that becoming wealthy is within the reach of everyone and suggests specific ways to start. Stanley's studies show that hard work, frugality and a rigid investment plan can — and do — make millionaires out of ordinary people.

Invest a little money and spare time in some great reading, and you'll be rewarded with increased confidence and expanded investing knowledge.

At the recent Texas Press Association convention in San Antonio, a program on community and economic development was presented by the Pace Group of Tupelo, Miss. It was a very interesting program and a copy of an article on "What A Good Newspaper Should Be" was included. It was written by George McLean, founder of the Tupelo Daily Journal, and it reflects many of our beliefs:

What A Good Newspaper Should Be

The good newspaper should be a catalyst in its community, oiling the efforts of widely varying groups to achieve a reasonable smooth, balanced flow of progress. It seeks to provide coherence to scattered and sometimes conflicting objectives, enabling its community to get a better view of priorities...It is its community's encourager which by making known what groups and individuals are doing bring mutual support for each other's projects and invites still greater personal initiative. It is a community's semi-official provider of pats on the back through news stories, pictures or editorials. The good newspaper can contribute perhaps more than any other institution to development of an active, mutually serving citizenship.

The good newspaper seeks to promote a spirit of neighborliness, by features it carries on the activities, the hopes and the contents of the "average" citizen. The good newspaper knows most life is lived by small people and their activities deserve a word, however brief, in reporting the news. It seeks ways to say "yes" rather than "no" to requests from its readers or the general public. It is warm, not cold; flexible, not rigid, in meeting each day's challenges.

The good newspaper should be a friend of its community, limiting criticism to needs for improvement rather than condemning shortcomings. It carries stories about progressive undertakings and methods which can be profitably imitated, recognizing that the good example of others is frequently effective; creating the impression that "if others can do it, so can we."

The good newspaper will not merely report but will enlighten, recognizing that the typical citizen may be limited in his understanding of government, economics, human relations, etc., but frequently is eager for broader understanding when the information is presented in an interesting, credible manner.

The staff of the good newspaper develops expertise not merely to propose progress but to assume leadership in bringing it about even though this involves one in activities which may stir controversy. The good newspaper is one of the hardest workers and most generous givers in the civic affairs but does not seek to dominate the community in a way that causes others to say, "Let the paper do it."

The good newspaper is an economic tool for personal and community progress. It recognizes its advertising as being of major value to the community as is its news and should try to maintain the integrity of its ads as it does that of news stories. The good newspaper serves as an educational institution, teaches life as it actually is being lived without effort to conceal human frailties but seeks to help maintain faith and hope in human potential and human progress, emphasizes the good more than the bad.

The good newspaper reaches out as far as it can touch or see to bring to its readers new ideas, new approaches to life, new methods of meeting problems, and new information which adds interest or joy to life. It does not hesitate to provide entertainment and pleasure as well as educational material. But at all times seeks to maintain good taste throughout its columns.

The good newspaper adopts one of its major objectives the unobtrusive establishment of a definite tone in its community built around high ethical standards, a cooperative spirit, a broadly-based tolerance among all groups, a yearning for personal and community growth, a belief in God, service to man, and hope for a better tomorrow.

Reflections

Everyone who's watched television probably has seen those commercials with John Ritter telling how much better a kid's grades will be if only he or she learned phonic.

Well, I'm not sure if phonics really does any good or not, but I do know people who have moved to Texas from other countries, like the U.S.A. (remember those TV ads about 'Texas: It's a whole 'nother country'?), probably need some help in learning Texas linguistics.

I recently came across a few, basic Texas words that will help newcomers to the Lone Star State cope with the language.

TEXONICS

Texas Language Idiosynchrocies

Ahz - the things you see with.
Aig - as in: Which came first? The chicken or the aig?
Arn - an electrical instrument used to remove wrinkles from clothes.
Awf - opposite of own (see lectricity).
Bawl - what water does at 212 degrees Fahrenheit.
Bidness - a commercial enterprise.
Bobbycue - a delectable Southern meat drenched in a fiery sauce.
Bobware - a product which ended open ranges.
Co-cola - any form or brand of soft drink/pop.
Clinics - a tissue.
Crine - weeping.
Dawfins - a professional football team in Miami coached by Jimmy Johnson.
Daints - an event in which members of the opposite sex hold each other and move rhythmically to music.
Doc - a condition caused by the absence of light.
Ever - each, as in "She bin crine ever day since J.J. run off."
Far - combustion.
Git - to acquire.
Goff - a game played with clubs and a little white ball.
Hep - a cry for assistance, as in, "Hep! There's a far!"
Hoss - a large, hoofed, herbivorous animal.
Lectricity - energy for arns, TVs an other thangs.
Liberry - a building with thousands of books.
Nekkid - to be unclothed.
Ole well - a source of petroleum.
Own - opposite of awf (see lectricity).
Paypuh - what you write on.
Shevuhlay - a General Motors car.
Spearmint - something scientists do.
Stow - a place where things are sold (see bidness).
Tar - a round, inflatable object that you might need a tar-arm to fix if it goes flat.
Uhmurkin - someone who lives in the United States of Uhmurka.
Zackly - precisely.

Inside Politics

Renaming binge is under way

WASHINGTON (AP) - Congress has been on a renaming binge.

Name changes are a relatively inexpensive way for lawmakers to honor their own.

For instance: The Senate paused late last week to unanimously rename the defense bill it was debating to the "Strom Thurmond National Defense Authorization Act of 1999." A bill often takes on the name of its sponsor. But it is rare that a bill's title itself is named after a legislator.

The name change was to honor Thurmond's 40 years on the Senate Armed Services Committee, the last four as chairman. At 95, he's soon stepping down from the chairmanship.

One of his predecessors, the late John Stennis, D-Miss., had an aircraft carrier named after him. But, after all, Thurmond remains very much alive, and still in the Senate. He was elected to another six-year term in 1996.

"He is truly one of the legends of the last half century in this country. In my opinion, he is Mr. Defense," said Senate Majority Leader Trent Lott, R-Miss., of the nonagenarian who landed a glider in Normandy with the 82nd Airborne Division on D-Day and later became a two-star general in the Army Reserve.

"I have enjoyed every minute of it," Thurmond said.

While in a naming mood, the Senate then voted unanimously to rename CIA headquarters in Langley, Va., after former President Bush. It will become the George Herbert Walker Bush Center for Central Intelligence.

"This is a fitting tribute to a man that has had a remarkable and distinguished career in public service," Senate Intelligence Committee Chairman Richard Shelby, R-Ala., said of the only former CIA director to become president.

Ronald Reagan had both an airport (Ronald Reagan Washington National Airport) and a downtown federal office building named after him this year.

And 1996 GOP presidential candidate Bob Dole has a porch named after him. When he quit the Senate in June 1996 to pursue his candidacy full time, the Senate memorialized the balcony where he used to enjoy the sun. He called it "the beach." Now, there's a sign there that says, "The Robert J. Dole Balcony."

The Senate couldn't name his offices after him. They'd already been named after another former Senate GOP leader - Howard Baker of Tennessee.

The House, meanwhile, voted last week to rename a laboratory building at the National Institutes of Health the "Louis Stokes Laboratories." Stokes, D-Ohio, is a 15-term congressman and a senior member of the Appropriations subcommittee that oversees NIH funding. He is retiring at the end of this year.

Letters to the Editor

Dear Editor:

This is an answer to the letter to the editor dated June 14, 1998, written by Nita Black. As a teacher at the school you made mention, I would like to tell you that each and every teacher is truly dedicated to the children that attend Shirley School. I suppose that the word wager is what led you to believe that the expectations were not set high enough. The students did well on the TAAS test because the teachers prepared their students to the best of their abilities. The students did not do well on this test because the principal made a wager with them. I think what you do not understand about teaching school is that it is up to the teacher to make learning interesting and fun. Children today have to be motivated to do their best and taught to enjoy life a little. The children enjoyed seeing their principal enjoy life along beside them. I do not understand why it is so wrong to have fun.

I personally did not like being referred to as hired help. Each person who attains a teaching certificate has spent a great deal of their money and time to become a certified teacher. One would have to want to become a teacher to go and work as hard as they do. If we are your hired help, maybe you need to consider giving people that you entrust the future of this country and the education of your children a raise. You may not know it, but the pay is not wonderful.

Before you make other claims, maybe you should consider spending the day at a local elementary school and see what things a teacher might have to do all in a day's work.

Dear Editor:

On June 6th, our family of seven set out from Greeley, Colo., in a rented van to San Antonio. We left Greeley at 4 a.m. Around 2:15, we arrived in Hereford, Texas, and stopped at a grocery store on 25 Mile (Avenue). We got down and got what we needed, loaded into our van and started to back out when my stepdad realized that he could not turn the steering wheel. He was able to pull forward a bit, got out of the van and noticed a big puddle of liquid running out of the van. After several people stopped by to help, we were told that the pulley on the fan belt had broke. We were stranded. For approximately 3 hours, we were back and forth on the phone with our car rental to find a solution. In the meantime, there were 7-9 people that stopped by and offered their help, gave us their phone numbers and even offered their homes to us. I could not believe the helpful, caring people in this town. It was so neat. Of all the people, Mr. and Mrs. Ramirez (Cruz) came over to us and offered their home while my husband and I drove with a two truck to Amarillo to get another van. By the time we got back, it was 9:30. Seven and one-half hours had passed and my mother, stepdad and three kids were safe and sound at the Ramirez's home.

I would just like to somehow thank all the people in your town that cared enough to stop and offer their help. Especially, Mr. and Mrs. Cruz Ramirez. If anyone were ever to get stranded, it should be in the town of Hereford, Texas. ... In all, we made it to San Antonio and had a wonderful vacation.

What in the world's going on?

Current issues just don't make sense

DIANNA E. DANDRIDGE

The Real World

It has come to my attention that the world has apparently lost its collective mind.

Very few of today's current issues seem to make any sense.

Soon-to-be-newlyweds go into a marriage only after signing a pre-nuptial contract.

Isn't that kind of like saying, "I know we won't make it until death do us part, so I want to make sure that everything that is mine remains mine?"

I thought marriage was supposed to be based on the trust and faith that love could endure all and that most problems could be worked out?

That may sound a bit hypocritical coming from a divorcee, but I didn't go into marriage with an eye to an easy out. It wasn't a contract I planned to break.

With the idea of easy divorces is also the questionable notion of easy abortions.

I realize many abortions are the end result of a period of passion between two individuals who have no intention of tying the knot.

I was brought up to believe nights of passion were best spent between two people who had already stood at an altar and made certain promises to each other.

So, this period of illicit passion results in an unwanted pregnancy. An appointment is made and the pregnancy is ended. In some cases, this series of events may take place two or more times. In fact, some people use abortion as a form of birth control. I can't help but believe that preventing an unwanted pregnancy can be achieved much easier than the ending of it.

Now we come to an even crazier dilemma: the question of what do we do with the unfortunate children who no one seems to want?

We all know these children - the ones left to their own devices while a drunken parent sleeps off the latest binge; the ones who stand around hungrily waiting for a supper invitation, because the parents have better things to do than provide a meal; or the 1-year-old baby found wandering in a street, the location of its parents unknown.

Social service agencies can't even begin to address the problems of the unwanted or the uncared for children, not that those kids should be the responsibility of the state or the agencies.

What hope do these kids have when they are left in these less than desirable situations?

Parents and responsible adults are a necessary must if these kids are to have any kind of chance at normal childhood and adult future.

But, then there are the problems many responsible parents face when put in the position of using leniency or strict discipline.

If a parent is generally lenient, then someone is bound to say the kids are getting away with murder, but what can you expect when the kid has never been told no. If a parent is stricter than normal, someone will surely accuse the parent of being controlling and manipulative and say the kid has a right to rebel.

Kids have a right to grow up, I agree, but they don't have a right to break or even bend the rules just so they can have the freedom to make a possibly bad mistake.

Making decisions is part of growing up, but until children show signs of making the right decision on small things - like appropriate clothing, suitable friends, and personal conduct - parents should plan on and have the right and responsibility to make those decisions.

For it is far better for a child to walk through childhood, adolescence and young adulthood feeling somewhat controlled and restricted with a firm clear, path - girded by right and wrong and appropriate rewards and consequences - rather than only a rough and rocky road with no well-defined boundaries or solid markers.

This is all part of the collective madness which seems to be sweeping the nation. Let's take back our nights, our cities and our towns by retaking the control of the children who have played a major role in the changing attitudes.

The House also voted to rename the 37-mile River Valley Trail, on the Pennsylvania side of the Delaware Water Gap, the "Joseph M. McDade Trail." McDade, R-Pa., retiring after serving 18 terms, chairs the Appropriations energy and water development subcommittee.

Naming and renaming has long been a legislative prerogative. Not only do lawmakers do it to honor politicians, but also to remove some stigma from certain pieces of legislation - or sometimes to hide the true intent.

Tax increases become "revenue enhancements," a 1996 law permitting states to ban homosexual marriages became the "Defense of Marriage Act," and last year's complicated tax bill the "Taxpayer's Relief Act." Recesses become "district work periods."

Backers of President Clinton's controversial move to extend most-favored-nation trade treatment to China for yet another year - an annual battle Congress will fight when it returns from its Independence Day recess, that is, its district work period - took a novel step to try to build support.

They changed the name. Rep. Bill Archer, R-Texas, chairman of the tax-writing Ways and Means Committee and a longtime advocate of continued trade with China, slipped into the recent Internal Revenue Service overhaul bill a sentence eliminating the phrase "most favored nation" from U.S. trade law.

From now on, it will be "normal trade relations." Archer argued that all U.S. trading partners get automatic most-favored-nation status except China - so there's nothing so special about it.

"Poof!" exclaimed Rep. Brad Sherman, D-Calif., a critic of trade with China who expressed in a word to a House hearing last Friday what became of "most-favored-nation."

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
Analysis

WASHINGTON - All men and women are created equal, said the resolution passed 150 years ago this month at the first women's rights convention in Seneca Falls, N.Y. But the laws said otherwise, and women could not even vote to change them.

Today, women's rights advocates can point to major advances, including the right to vote and own property and laws promising equal employment and education opportunities.

"The legal framework of rights for women has been transformed in the last 150 years," said Kathy Rodgers of the NOW Legal Defense and Education Fund. In those days, "when you were married you became one person and that one person was the husband," she added.

"I think (the early feminists) would be thrilled that we've made as much progress as we have and they would be committed to continuing the advance toward true equality," said Susan Deller Ross of the Georgetown law school's sex discrimination clinic.

The challenge in 1848 was a huge one, as spelled out by the convention's Declaration of Sentiments and Resolutions, modeled after the Declaration of Independence.

The document accused men of seeking "absolute tyranny" over women by denying them the right to vote, own property and keep their own wages. Married women had no legal rights, and divorce and child custody laws favored men.

Women were denied college educations and access to "nearly all the profitable employments" and were forced to live under a double standard for moral behavior.

"We insist that (women) have immediate admission to all the rights and privileges which belong to them as citizens of the United States," the document said.

Therefore, the document declared that laws that placed women "in a position inferior to that of man are .... of no force or authority."

In many ways, but far from all, the goals of Elizabeth Cady Stanton, Lucretia Mott and the other women have been reached.

The right to vote came nationwide in 1920. Federal laws barring sex discrimination in employment and federally funded education programs came in the 1960s and 1970s. There is a new emphasis on prosecuting domestic violence cases - an issue foretold by the 1948 convention's complaint that men had the legal right to "administer chastisement" to their wives.

Many rights for women were provided through a patchwork of state laws, not federal laws, including changes in divorce and child custody standards. It was not until 1967 that Texas allowed married women to control their own property or run a business without their husbands' consent.

The Supreme Court, which in 1961 let states automatically exempt women from jury duty, a decade later began ruling that a number of laws that treated the sexes differently violated the Constitution's equal-protection guarantee.

year after they leave office. All Senate staffers and senior House staffers also are subject to one-year waiting periods. Part of the recent growth in the numbers of revolving door lobbyists stems from several 1996 congressional retirees registering.

Even with the restrictions, revolving door lobbyists are invaluable to their clients because of their inside knowledge of government and their contacts.

Take the case of lobbyists Kenneth Kies and Daniel Berman. They recently headed separate business coalitions that succeeded in getting the Treasury Department to pull back a plan to immediately stop American companies from reducing their foreign taxes, and deferring their U.S. taxes, by shifting money among their overseas affiliates.

Treasury has agreed to delay whatever new rules it institutes until Jan. 1, 2000, giving lawmakers time to review them.

The two lobbyists were well-armed. Kies spent three years as chief of staff for the congressional Joint Committee on Taxation, the powerful panel of representatives and senators that crafts the nation's tax laws. Berman was deputy international tax counsel at the Treasury Department from 1995 to 1997.

"What was a little awkward was I had a lot of the responsibility for moving the law in the general direction that this Treasury effort was going," Berman said.

"Here I was suggesting it should be reversed. Had I still been at Treasury, I would have opposed this initiative internally," he said.

Kies said he didn't lobby Congress.

Robert McIntyre, director of the labor-funded research group Citizens for Tax Justice, which supported the Treasury rules, said Kies' relationship with key tax writers got his message across. "If he didn't do it himself, he sent somebody else with a 'Ken Kies sent me' sign," McIntyre said.

'It's always offensive watching former public servants enrich themselves because of their formerly held positions in the public trust. These folks are trading on their government experience and making big bucks.'

- Charles Lewis, director, Center for Public Integrity

Critics see the revolving door as an offensive perk for departing U.S. officials.

"It's always offensive watching former public servants enrich themselves because of their formerly held positions in the public trust," said Charles Lewis, director of the Center for Public Integrity, a Washington watchdog group. "These folks are trading on their government experience and making huge bucks."

Though President Clinton began his presidency by imposing a moratorium prohibiting his senior staff from lobbying their agencies for five years after leaving the administration, plenty of ex-administration officials can be found on the lobbying rolls.

Former senator and vice presidential nominee Lloyd Bentsen, Clinton's first treasury secretary, reported more than a half-dozen clients, including the investment firm Merrill Lynch.

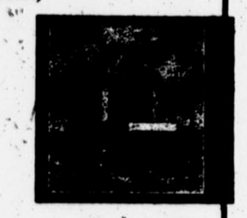

Former White House counsel Jack Quinn has a similar number of clients, including insurer MetLife and telecommunications company Bell Atlantic.

Celebrities' forays into music often have disastrous results

"Hey!
"Mr. Tambourine Man!
"Play a SONG for me!"
- William "Capt. Kirk" Shatner, 1968

By TED ANTHONY
AP National Writer

NEW YORK (AP) - Sing. Sing a song. Sing out loud. Sing out strong.

Wait. On second thought, don't sing at all. For pity's sake, just go away.

Leonard Nimoy probably should have gone away. William Shatner definitely should have gone away. Sebastian Cabot, Buddy Ebsen, Joe Pesci and, Lord help us, Watergate's Sen. Sam Ervin and "Tic Tac Dough's" Wink Martindale really should have gone away too.

They didn't. Instead, they decided to augment their sometimes soaring, sometimes flagging careers by recording what in some realms might be considered music.

"Golden Throats," an occasional series of compact discs from the folks at Rhino Records, where chestnuts are their business, resurrects these stars' questionable decisions like so many rotting graveyard corpses. In four agonizing CDs, "Golden Throats" compiles the most outlandish examples of celebrities' tuneful dilettantery and offers them up in hunks hefty enough to choke on.

"They never imagined we'd be digging this stuff up," says Gary Peterson, a Rhino producer who came up with the "Golden Throats" concept a decade ago with his then-partner, Pat Sierchio.

"Can you imagine being in the recording studio, seeing this going on?" says Sierchio.

It hurts to listen to Shatner, with his staccato voice, emoting the late, lamented John Lennon's "Lucy in the Sky with Diamonds" or belting out a "Mr. Tambourine Man" that suggests he ran out of laxatives the night before. It hurts to hear the voice of Andy Griffith - the voice that comforted Opie and gently upbraided Barney Fife - drawling through the folk-tune-cum-rock-ballad "House of the Rising Sun."

It hurts to hear Nimoy, in full Ronald Reagan twang, nasaling out a decidedly un-Spockian "I Walk the Line." It hurts even to contemplate Ebsen singing "Your Cheatin' Heart." And Martindale doing a John Wayne-ish "Peace in the Valley"? We'll put an "X" in the middle square to block, Pilgrim.

What were these guys thinking? And what's with poet Rod McKuen's frenetic version of "Mule Train"? Isn't there a federal statute that bars anyone but Boxcar Willie from doing that?

"With some of them, you really have people who thought they were doing something profound. Shatner is one of those. Others did it because the producer told them to," says Barry Hansen, the rock folklorist better known as novelty-record advocate Dr. Demento.

The vocal train wrecks get more reality-defying - like a playlist from Radio Free Hades:

- Jack Palance huffing "The Green, Green Grass of Home."
- Mae West wheezing through "Day Tripper."
- Phyllis Diller sassing out "(I Can't Get No) Satisfaction" with a few one-liners thrown in between verses.

"Clearly somebody said, 'Oh, Phyllis, you should do some rock 'n' roll,'" Dr. Demento says.

SHERMAN ALEXIE

WASHINGTON (AP) - Sherman Alexie knows that other up-and-comers in the movie business have said it before, but he really means it: He doesn't care about money.

"Money is the root of all evil. It's a cliche, but it's a true cliche," said Alexie, the 31-year-old writer and producer of "Smoke Signals," a new film by and about Indians that was honored at this year's Sundance Film Festival by other independent filmmakers.

"Every producer, actor and writer in Hollywood has sat on couches like this one at the beginning of careers and told reporters the same thing I'm telling you now. And then you interview them a year later and they've got the BMW, they've got the big house and they're making 'Godzilla,'" he said in the Washington Post. "It's not going to happen to me."

GEORGE CLOONEY

LOS ANGELES (AP) - George Clooney has finally found a movie that needs no apologies.

"No one is expecting this movie to make a billion dollars," Clooney said of "Out of Sight," in which he plays a bank robber who falls for a federal marshal. The film opened last weekend and debuted at No. 3.

"We'd just like to get some good word-of-mouth and hang around for a while. I tell you, though, it's awfully nice sitting here talking to you about a movie that I can unabashedly say I love," he said.

Clooney's string of so-so flicks - including "From Dusk Till Dawn," "One Fine Day," "Batman & Robin" and "The Peacemaker" - have failed to give him the acclaim he receives from his role on NBC's "ER."

"All those movies were good breaks, especially considering where I was coming from," Clooney said. "And, yeah, if I had been better, they probably would have been better, too."

BRAD RENFRO

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP) - "The Client" actor Brad Renfro has agreed to a plea deal that should allow him to avoid a trial on cocaine and marijuana charges.

The 15-year-old Knoxville native agreed Thursday to be screened randomly for drugs and evaluated for any substance abuse problems, according to The Knoxville News-Sentinel.

If he stays out of trouble for six months, prosecutors will recommend the case not be pursued and he will have no juvenile criminal record.

"I made out pretty good," Renfro said, adding that he never used cocaine.

Renfro and his cousin were stopped June 3 for suspicion of drunken driving. Police said Singleton was drunk, driving without a license and had a bag of what appeared to be drugs in his underwear. Renfro had two baggies of cocaine and marijuana in his sock.

Renfro's lawyer had argued that police had no compelling reason to search the boy.

Chiropractic Q & A

Q: When I move my head from side to side I hear my neck "crack." It doesn't hurt but it is loud. Should I be worried by this?

A: The sound you are hearing called "cavitation." This is caused by gasses in the fluid between joints being released by a sudden change in pressure on the fluid. This can occur naturally and be of no concern, as it does when you receive a chiropractic adjustment. However, excessive popping of joints can also be a sign of a problem which may need attention. Additional causes of excessive popping are over-stretched ligaments, arthritis, or a locking together of the vertebra (also known as a "subluxation"). If the popping continues or causes pain, you should see your chiropractor to determine the cause of the problem.

Q: Why do chiropractors have to take x-rays?

A: X-rays are an important diagnostic tool used by doctors of chiropractic to rule out certain problems before beginning treatment. X-rays can help identify problems such as fractures (which can occur with even minor trauma), cancer, congenital problems, and spinal curvature. Chiropractors are careful to order only X-rays that relate to the cause of the patient's pain.

We accept assignments on Medicare & Medicaid & most insurance carriers.

All-Star Game focuses spotlight on power

By BEN WALKER
AP Baseball Writer

DENVER -- The All-Star game has always been a blast.

Reggie Jackson's rocket off the light tower. Bo Jackson's bomb to dead center field. Ted Williams' moonshot on an eephus pitch.

From the first home run -- Babe Ruth's drive in 1933 at Comiskey Park -- up through the most recent one -- Sandy Alomar's winning drive last season at Jacobs Field -- home runs have always highlighted the summer exhibition.

And all of baseball is talking about only one topic as Tuesday night's game at Coors Field approaches.

How about it, Mark McGwire? Will this be the season you or Ken Griffey Jr. or Sammy Sosa rewrite Roger Maris' mark of 61 home runs?

"I've said it time and time again. Everybody has been pointing at me, but there's a handful of guys capable of breaking this record, not just me," McGwire said.

"I've said it time and time again. Everybody has been pointing at me, but there's a handful of guys capable of breaking this record, not just me."

-- Mark McGwire

"Sosa, Griffey, (Andres) Galarraga, if he hadn't gotten hurt. It should be exciting, but believe me, there's no competition," he said.

There's no clear explanation, either, on why so many hitters are challenging the mark.

Expansion is an easy answer. It doesn't appear to be the right one, however, for explaining why McGwire had 37 homers, Griffey 35 and Sosa 33 going into the weekend.

Last year, there were an average of 1.99 home runs per major league game. This year, with the addition of the Tampa Bay Devil Rays and Arizona Diamondbacks, the rate is only 2.04. Not exactly a whopping increase, not like the nearly 25 percent surge that occurred in 1993 when Colorado and Florida joined.

Smaller strike zones and stronger players are more likely reasons. Either way, it's looking more and more like the record Maris has held for 31 years might finally fall.

Ryan Palmer of Amarillo tees off on No. 1 as part of the 1998 Original Coors Open Partnership at John Pitman Municipal Golf Course. Palmer played in the recent U.S. Open at the Olympic Club in San Francisco and is scheduled to play in the upcoming 1998 U.S. Amateur.

3 tied for lead at Partnership

From staff reports

Three teams were tied for first place after the first day of the 1998 Original Coors Open Partnership at John Pitman Municipal Golf Course.

Craig Nieman and James Salinas, Cory Newton and Paul Hubbard, and Mark Vega and Ramiro Rodriguez all shot a 67 during Friday afternoon's round, which was formatted low-ball.

One stroke back in fourth place in the Championship Flight was the team of Roy Ripley and Jerry Ripley.

In the First Flight, a pair of teams were tied for first. Bob Sims and Chick Russell, and Wade Easly and Randy Langen each shot 72s during Friday's round.

Another pair of teams were one shot back, each shooting a 73. Mark Thomason and Kenny Wilcox, and Pat McGinty and Scott McGinty shared third place.

Three teams shared the lead in the Second Flight after Friday's round. Cal Mitts and Stuart Mitts fired a 5-over 76, as did Rick Shaw and Randy Kapner, and Don Clements and John Fuston. One stroke back at 77 in fourth place were three of the remaining four teams in the flight.

The Third Flight had two teams sharing the lead after the first round of play. Ed Sanders and Steve Stevens, and Cody Sargent and Harold McNutt each shot 79s for one-stroke lead over the team of Rodney Straufus and Jerry Killingsworth.

Saturday's second round was scheduled to start a 9 a.m. at Pitman. The final round of the Open Partnership will be Sunday.

Thirty-two teams are entered in the Open Partnership, according to Cal Garrett, Head Professional at Pitman.

WIMBLEDON

Sampras outlasts Henman

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) -- Pete Sampras outplayed Tim Henman in four sets Friday to move within one victory of his fifth Wimbledon title in six years.

Sampras, who lost his first set of the tournament, relied on his superior serve and experience to prevail 6-3, 4-6, 7-5, 6-3. He ended Henman's bid to become the first British men's finalist in 62 years.

Sampras will play two-time runnerup Goran Ivanisevic in Sunday's final.

Ivanisevic squandered two match points in the fourth set, then outlasted Richard Krajicek 15-13 in a marathon fifth set.

It will be a repeat of the 1994 final, which Sampras won in straight sets.

Sampras had to come up with some of his best tennis against the 12th-seeded Henman, his occasional practice and doubles partner.

"There was a lot of emotion out there, especially playing Tim here in England," Sampras said. "This is what it's all about. You raise your level of intensity and raise your emotions."

By winning Sunday, Sampras would join Bjorn Borg as the only players in the Open era to win Wimbledon five times. A victory would also give him a total of 11 Grand Slam titles, one behind all-time leader Roy Emerson.

Returning to the final ended a slump for Sampras, who had failed to get past the quarters of a a Grand Slam tournament since last year's Wimbledon.

Henman, the first British men's semifinalist in 25 years, had been aiming to become the first home-grown finalist since Henry Austin in 1938 and first champion since Fred Perry in 1936.

WIMBLEDON GLANCE

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) -- A brief look at what happened on the 11th day of the Wimbledon tennis championships:

WEATHER: Overcast skies clearing by evening. High temperature was 68 degrees. Fourth straight day without rain.

ATTENDANCE: 28,257, a record for the 11th day. Last year on the 11th day, it 26,516. Overall attendance is 370,595, down 15,541 from 1997.

STAT OF THE DAY: Pete Sampras fired the fastest serve of the tournament at 136 mph.

QUOTE OF THE DAY: "I was very mentally strong today. I never was like this in my life, and I just believed I was going to win."

--Goran Ivanisevic

"One day, he's going to win this thing," Sampras said. "I can tell you that. He's very, very strong. He does everything very well. He doesn't have any holes in his game. He's going to learn from this match."

Henman offered no excuses.

"At 5-6 in the third set, he was the one that came up with the goods," he said. "It's relentless the way he plays."

Sampras broke Henman twice to take the first set. But Henman displayed the full range of his grass-court talents in the second set, breaking Sampras twice. It was the first set Sampras had lost in six matches.

Henman stayed even with Sampras in the third set until the American broke in the 12th game. After Henman saved two set points, Sampras converted on the third, ripping a backhand return which forced a volley error. He skipped to the back of the court and pumped his right fist.

"When I won the third set, I knew I had him," Sampras said.

Sampras broke for 3-1 in the fourth set, attacking Henman's second serve, punching a forehand volley winner and celebrating with more fist pumping.

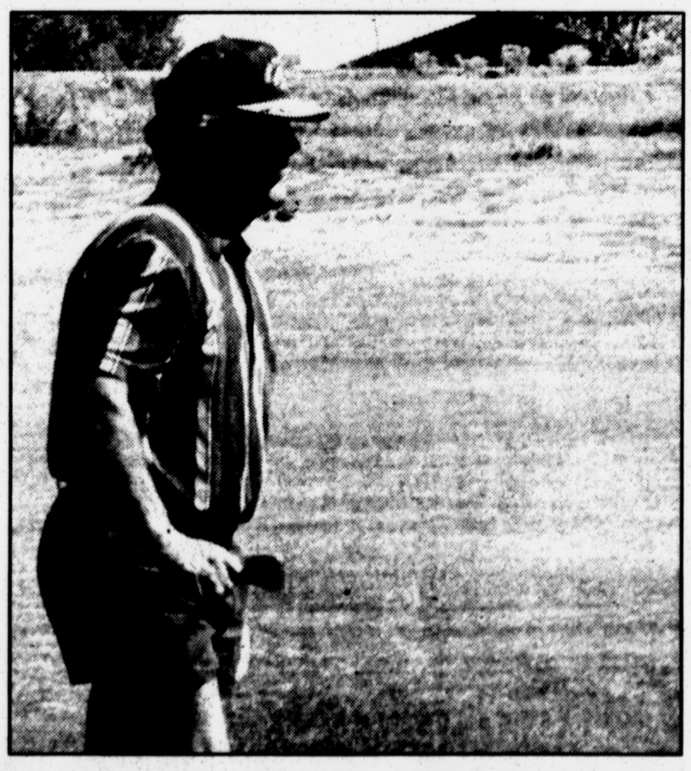

Sampras served out the match in the ninth game, closing with his 16th ace.

Throughout the match, Sampras came up with big serves when he needed them. He hit the fastest serve of the tournament so far, a delivery timed at 136 mph.

Ivanisevic put on an animated display after winning 6-3, 6-4, 5-7, 6-7 (7-5), 15-13 in a match that lasted 3 hours, 22 minutes, with the final set alone going 1:19.

He fell to his knees, tapped the grass with his hand

Don Cumpton of Hereford closes his eyes to the afternoon sun Friday after hitting his approach shot on No. 2 at John Pitman Municipal Golf Course in Hereford during the first round of the 1998 Original Coors Open Partnership. Cumpton and his partner, Danny Haney, shot a 91 with the low-ball format of the first day. The tournament was scheduled to continue Saturday morning and will conclude with the third round Sunday morning.

Pak fires 70 to lead field by 1

U.S. WOMEN'S OPEN

KOHLER, Wis. (AP) -- Rookie Se Ri Pak says Blackwolf Run Golf Course is so mentally demanding that it is making her head spin.

Save the aspirin, though, for the rest of the field in the 53rd U.S. Women's Open.

Pak continued to tame the menacing Pete Dye-designed course that crushed the likes of Nancy Lopez and Meg Mallon in the second round of the Open on Friday.

A 1-under-par 70 put Pak at 3-under 139 halfway through the biggest event in women's golf, one stroke ahead of Liselotte Neumann, the 1988 Open winner, who also shot a 70.

"I don't think she is going to be too nervous," Neumann said of Pak. "She has nothing really to lose. She is having a good year and a long career in front of her."

Pak indeed is calm, collected and confident.

"I really enjoy playing this course. I'm thinking a lot. This course requires more thinking, more smart play," Pak said.

"Too many headaches," she added with a laugh.

The 20-year-old from South Korea, who won the McDonald's LPGA Championship in May, is seeking to become the first woman to win two majors in her rookie year since Juli Inkster in 1984.

"My irons are good. My putting is good. That's why I don't have a big number," said Pak, who has bogeyed just three holes so far.

Because of high scores, slow play and a 51-minute lightning delay, not everybody finished the round.

Darkness suspended play with 21 golfers still on the course, but amateur Brenda Corrie Kuehn elected to finish the 18th hole, which she bogeyed, finishing at 1-over for the day and even-par for the tournament.

The 36-hole cut won't be determined until Saturday morning. The 60 lowest scores and ties and anyone within 10 strokes of the lead will make the cut.

Lopez won't be one of them.

She and her playing partners, Mallon and Jane Geddes, were so deflated by their play that they approached the 18th green Friday waving white towels from their putters.

"Jane said we ought to walk up to 18 waving the white flag," Mallon said. "That's pretty much how we felt. The course definitely won."

Lopez's 83 was the worst of her 81 career Open rounds and left her at 18-over 160. Mallon shot a 76 for 153, Geddes a 79 for 157.

Blackwolf Run got the best of them -- and many others.

Rampley, Lombard on TGCA roster

From staff reports

ABBOTT -- With three teams at one time ranked in the Class 4A Top 10, District 1-4A figured to be well-represented in the Texas Girls Coaches Association all-star game Thursday in Grand Prairie.

They figured wrong.

Only two players -- Hereford's Julie Rampley and Canyon's Lindy Lombard -- from District 1-4A made the select roster for the Division II (classes 4A and 5A) North squad. The team will be coached by Joe Lombard of Canyon and Jim Wilcoxson of Canyon Randall, the Class 4A champions.

The Lady Raiders did not place any players on the team.

Rampley and Lombard are both college-bound to play basketball. Rampley will play at Midland College and Lombard has signed with Midwestern State University, an NCAA Division II program in Wichita Falls.

Rampley led the Lady Whitefaces to a 28-5 record and the Region I quarterfinals where Hereford dropped it's third game of the year with Canyon. Rampley averaged 17.5 points, 7.2 rebounds, 5.7 assists a nd 4.5 steals per game during the 1997-98 season.

The south squad, coached by Susan Smith of Spring Westfield and Tony Taylor of Lampasas, features 11 players who have signed with Division I programs. The north squad has five Division I signees.

Padres double Rockies, 4-2

SAN DIEGO (AP) -- Ken Caminiti hit a go-ahead double with two out in the seventh inning and the San Diego Padres beat the Colorado Rockies 4-2 on Friday night in the first matchup this year between the NL West rivals.

Steve Finley and Carlos Hernandez hit consecutive homers opening the fifth and Chris Gomez added an RBI double in the eighth.

The Padres also were sharp defensively, turning three double plays, throwing out one runner stealing and getting an outfield assist from Tony Gwynn.

Joey Hamilton (6-9) ended a two-game losing streak. He allowed two runs on six hits in seven innings, struck out six and walked five.

Trevor Hoffman pitched the ninth for his 25th save and 33rd straight dating to last year.

With the score tied at 2 in the seventh, Caminiti hit an opposite-field double into the Padres' bullpen in left to score Chris Gomez. Mike De Jean (3-1) relieved Jamey Wright starting the inning and promptly walked Gomez, who advanced on pinch-hitter Ed Giovanola's sacrifice bunt and Quilvio Veras' groundout.

Houston edges Arizona, 6-5

HOUSTON (AP) -- Derek Bell hit a two-run homer and Bill Spiers had three hits as the Houston Astros beat the Arizona Diamondbacks 6-5 on Friday night.

Shane Reynolds (10-5) won for the eighth time in 10 decisions, allowing two runs on 11 hits and one walk in seven innings. He had eight strike-outs.

Billy Wagner pitched the ninth for his 19th save, allowing Tony Batista's two-run homer with two outs.

Bell hit his 12th home run of the season in the first inning off Andy Benes (6-9). Bell's shot, a line drive to left, extended the Astros' homer streak to six games.

The Astros added three runs in the third. Craig Biggio led off with a double and scored on Spiers' single. Spiers moved to second on a wild pitch and scored on Jeff Bagwell's double. Bagwell scored when second baseman Andy Fox committed an error on Carl Everett's groundball.

Arizona made it 5-2 in the fourth on Jay Bell's RBI triple and Jorge Fabregas' run-scoring groundout. Houston added a run in the fifth, with Spiers scoring on Benes' wild pitch.

Texas swoon continues, drops 6th straight

ARLINGTON (AP) -- The Texas Rangers couldn't knock Jeff Fassero out of the game. Leg cramps finally did.

Fassero pitched 7 1-3 shutout innings in 96-degree heat, and Edgar Martinez and Alex Rodriguez each drove in three runs as Seattle extended Texas' losing streak to a season-long six games with an 8-2 victory Friday night.

"He threw the ball well against a heck of a lineup," said Mariners manager Lou Piniella. "It was hot out there, he was sweating a lot, and he got a big knot in his calf."

Fassero (7-5), who had won only one of his previous eight starts, gave up only six hits as the Mariners won their third straight. Bothered by leg cramps since the fifth, he was pulled with one out in the eighth and a runner on first when he told Piniella he couldn't drive off his left leg anymore.

"I lost a lot of fluids and four or five pounds out there," Fassero said. "Then my leg started to cramp up and I couldn't push off anymore. I didn't want to take any chances."

In his last two starts, Fassero said he's done a better job of mixing his pitches, resulting in consecutive victories.

"I've been locating the fastball in and out and I'm not throwing any two off-speed pitches in a row the same," Fassero said. "After I was able to establish my pitches, then I was able to get them to chase some pitches."

The Rangers didn't score until the ninth, when Fernando Tatis completed a 4-for-4 night with an RBI single off Heathcliff Slocumb and Mark McLemore drew a bases-loaded walk from Bobby Ayala.

Texas has lost six in a row for the first time since June 18-23, 1997.

"The effort is there," manager Johnny Oates said. "In fact, maybe too much effort is there. These guys want to do so well, and it's just not happening for us right now. You can't see the light at the end of the tunnel, but you know it's there."

Seattle took a 2-0 lead in the first off John Burkett (4-9) on an RBI single by Martinez and David Segui's sacrifice fly.

Gump shoots 62 to take 2nd-round lead at GHO

CROMWELL, Conn. (AP) -- Scott Gump tied the course record with an 8-under-par 62 Friday to take the second-round lead at the Canon Greater Hartford Open, while Casey Martin made history but didn't make the cut.

Gump's round put him at 10 under for the tournament, one stroke better than Larry Mize and Omar Uresti. It also matched a season low on the PGA Tour this year.

He started his round on the back nine and had nine birdies, including four straight midway through the round.

"I got in a good rhythm today," he said. "I just got on a roll and before you know it I was six or eight under."

Martin, who sued for the right to use a motorized cart in tour events because of a disability in his right leg, shot a 73 Friday and was four over for the tournament. The Nike Tour player was using a sponsor's exemption to compete in his first PGA event, but missed the cut by five strokes.

His round included a triple-bogey 8 on the 523-yard 13th.

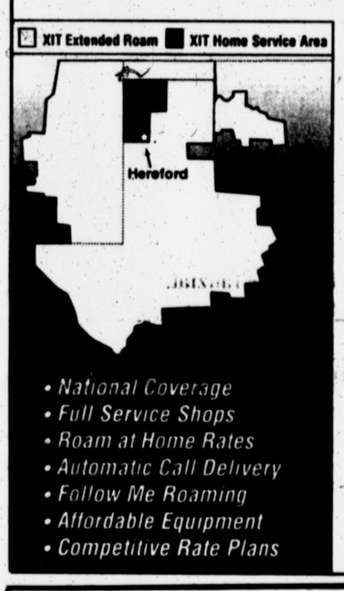

"It's disappointing. I played poorly," he said, describing No. 13 as "a meltdown."

The rolls definitely went Gump's way at the TPC at River Highlands, which was marked Friday by firm fairways and soft greens. He had birdie putts of 20 and 30 feet and said his birdie on the 444-yard, par-4 18th was "a bonus."

Gump hit a poor drive into the right fairway bunker about 210 yards from the pin. He used 4-wood and the shot landed about four feet from the hole. He attributed the birdie to a good lie in the bunker and some good fortune.

"That was pure luck," Gump said.

Stars sign Hull to three-year deal

DALLAS (AP) -- The "Golden Brett" landed in Dallas Friday.

Seeking to bolster an offense that faltered in the Western Conference finals, the Dallas Stars signed unrestricted free agent Brett Hull to a three-year, $17.5 million contract.

The 33-year-old right wing became the most sought-after player in this year's free agent market after failing to reach an agreement with his longtime team, the St. Louis Blues, earlier this week.

His new contract with the Stars also includes a no-trade clause, a one-year option and, Hull hopes, a chance to win his first Stanley Cup.

"The main thing is to win and to be a champion," Hull said. "They (Dallas) were as close as anybody to winning a Stanley Cup and to have them want me to be a part of that I thought is a great honor."

Hull, a 13-year NHL veteran with 554 career goals and 987 points in 801 games, turned down a $15 million contract in March with the Blues because it didn't include a no-trade clause.

"I lost a home and a career over it, so that was the stickler for me," Hull said.

While the negotiations to bring Hull to Texas took only two days, starting with the opening of the free agency period Wednesday morning and ending late Thursday, Stars owner Tom Hicks made it clear that he's had his eye on Hull.

Though Hull is coming off a disappointing season where he scored a career-low 27 goals, it is Hull's offensive skill that Dallas coveted most.

"We believed we needed to improve our goal scoring and I think we did that," Hicks said at a news conference announcing Hull's signing.

Still up in the air is the chemistry between Hull and his new teammates and Hull's application to Dallas' defense-first system. Hull has earned a reputation as a self-centered player quick to shirk his defensive duties in recent years.

General manager Bob Gainey was confident that Hull would be a valuable asset. A knee injury to center Joe Nieuwendyk in the first game of the playoffs severely hampered the Stars offense.

"We think he'll blend and mesh with the team we have," Gainey said. "As an athlete, he is capable of participating in a lot of different ways with our team."

There was no word yet on whether Hull will play on the left side, as he did for much of last season, or whether he will stay at right wing.

Hull acknowledged the importance of defense in Dallas' system, but had no illusions about why he was brought to Texas.

"Whatever Coach Hitchcock wants me to do, I will, but I've spent a lot of years in this league scoring goals and I think that's my job," Hull said.

Stars coach Ken Hitchcock was on vacation.

But don't expect Hull to make like new teammate Mike Modano, who has shaken his reputation as a soft player with vast improvements to the physical side of his game.

When asked if he would step up his hitting to fit in with the Dallas system, Hull answered: "I play my own game. I play within a team system with my own energy, and I think I'm a guy who uses a lot of brainpower rather than (body checks)."

Hull had 62 goals and 101 career points against Dallas, more than he has against any other team. Hull said he won't ask to veteran Pat Verbeek to relinquish the number 16, the jersey number Hull wore while in St. Louis.

"I would never do that to a guy like Pat who's played 1,000 games," Hull said, adding that his wife will probably pick his new number.

Hull's acquisition follows the re-signing of free agents Guy Carbonneau, a former teammate of Hull's in St. Louis, and Craig Ludwig to one-year contracts.

Power

"I would love to see it happen," AL manager Mike Hargrove of Cleveland said. "I think if they stay healthy there is a very, very good chance it will happen."

Whether Juan Gonzalez, Larry Walker, Greg Vaughn or anyone else will be able to take advantage of Denver's mile-high air, where balls tend to travel about 10 percent farther, on Tuesday night remains to be seen.

As it is, the longest drive hit in a regular-season game at Coors belongs to Mike Piazza at 496 feet.

"I've been shocked out there before," NL manager Jim Leyland of Florida said.

This game could turn out like the 1971 showcase, an electric night at Tiger Stadium in which six future Hall of Famers hit home runs. Reggie launched the longest ball, with Hank Aaron, Johnny Bench, Frank Robinson, Harmon Killebrew and Roberto Clemente also connecting.

It could match the glamour of the 1956 classic at Griffith Stadium in Washington when all-time greats Mickey Mantle, Ted Williams, Willie Mays and Stan Musial each homered.

Then again, it could be a repeat of the 1987 affair in Oakland. With baseball buzzing about lively balls, sluggers such as Mike Schmidt, Andre Dawson and Dave Winfield -- plus a rookie named McGwire -- did not hit a single home run in a game that was scoreless until the 13th inning.

There have been at least two home runs in each of the last seven All-Star games. The deepest drives, though, usually come a day earlier in the home run derby.

Fans tuning in to watch the power show Monday -- it will be televised live from 7-9 p.m. CDT -- may be disappointed.

McGwire and Sosa will compete, but Griffey is adamant that he will not take part, and others might follow Junior's lead. Not quite like Michael Jordan missing the slam-dunk contest, but close.

"It's fun. I don't understand why they wouldn't want to," McGwire said. "It's the best part of the All-Star game."

Because with the likes of Greg Maddux, Roger Clemens and Curt Schilling on the mound, there's no guarantee that anyone will connect the next day. At least the hitters won't have to face Cubs rookie Kerry Wood, the strikeout phenom left off the NL team by Leyland.

McGwire has managed only four singles in 16 career at-bats in All-Star play. Joe DiMaggio (.225), Aaron (.194) and Pete Rose (.212) all had trouble getting hits, while Maris (two singles in 19 at-bats) never homered. Musial holds the All-Star record with six home runs.

The NL leads the series 40-27-1. Its three-game winning streak was stopped last year at Cleveland when home runs by Alomar and Edgar Martinez overcame a homer by Javy Lopez and gave the AL a 3-1 victory.

No telling what will happen this time when the All-Stars visit Coors, the park where the most home runs in the majors were hit in both 1996 and 1997.

"I've seen some high-scoring games," Leyland said. "I don't really know what to expect."

Wimbledon

and held his clenched fists in the air when Krajicek -- the 1996 champion -- netted a backhand volley to end the match in the 28th game of the final set. He then flung his racket across the court high into the stands.

The Croatian ripped off his bandana, tossed two towels into the stands, clapped to the crowd and held up his left index finger in a No. 1 salute as he walked off the Centre Court.

"The fifth set was a just a horror-thriller," he said. "I never saw somebody serving like that in my life. They were just bombs. I couldn't even react. I said, 'Just keep your serve. He has to miss a couple of first serves.' And that happened at 13-14."

Ivanisevic reached the final for the third time, having lost in the 1992 and 1994 championship matches. He has never won a Grand Slam title and came into this tournament after winning only one match in his five previous Slam events.

The women's final is set for Saturday, with Jana Novotna facing Nathalie Tauziat.

Open

3-under, stumbled to a 10-over 81 for a two-day total of 149. Davies had a 75 and, at 143, was four strokes off the lead.

"I didn't sleep all that well last night. I was thinking about the cut," said Davies, the 1987 Open champion who had missed four cuts in her last five events. "Here I am worrying about the cut in the leading position. But that's what this game does to you. It works on your mind."

Annika Sorenstam of Sweden, the 1995 and 1996 Open winner, had a 75 for 146, 10 strokes better than defending champion Alison Nicholas of England, whose second straight 78 meant she wouldn't be around for the final two rounds.

Not everybody had trouble Friday.

Dottie Pepper duplicated her 71 to reach the halfway point at even par. Mhairi McKay and Chris Johnson shot 70s to put them at even.

And three-time Open winner Hollis Stacy, playing in a record-tying 29th straight Open, followed a 76 on Thursday with a 3-under 68 for 144.

With wind whipping off Lake Michigan and a few pins tucked behind bunkers, second-day scores soared on the unyielding 6,412-yard, par-71 layout.

Some groups took three hours to play nine holes, and two golfers, Candy Hanneman and Lisa Walters, were penalized two strokes for slow play.

Even though darkness forced the second round to be completed Saturday morning, Lopez knew early that her Open was over. Yet the gallery at 18 cheered her as if she was leader.

"The fans were fantastic. I never gave up, I just kept swinging and hoping something would happen," Lopez said. "It's just really nice when you're playing bad, they're still there.

"I just have to shake it off and go on," Lopez said through tears. "I'm a crybaby. But I'm fine. I'll be good."

Lopez has finished second in the Open four times, including last year, when she lost by a shot to Alison Nicholas in a dramatic finish at Pumpkin Ridge.

"That was a whole different kind of disappointment," Lopez said. "Today ... it's hard to feel like you have to smile when you don't really feel like smiling."

Displaying her usual graciousness, smile she did as the gallery at 18 gave her a prolonged ovation, chanting "Nancy! Nancy!" just like last year when she approached the final hole on Sunday with a chance to win the only trophy in women's golf that has eluded her.

Now it will have to wait for another course, another year, if ever.

THANKS!
From the Texas Trojans!

We express our sincere thanks for the community-wide support of the fund-raising project to help with our expenses to the AAU Basketball Tournament in Detroit!

We had a lot of fun with our "flamingo project," as did many of our contributors. Brand publisher Speedy Nieman sent us this little poem along with his donation:

T'was the second of June and all through the house,
not a creature was stirring, not even a mouse.
As I backed out the drive to head down the block,
I was dazzled by the sight of a colorful flock.

Those are pink flamingos, I knew without a doubt,
But where did they come from, who put them out?
A note on the door explained the whole thing,
the Trojans will soon fly like birds on the wing.

To Detroit they'll go, it's a long trip to take,
but these Trojans will show folks how to shake & bake.
They've got our support, some expenses we'll pay,
Now hoop it up Trojans, and you can win the day!

With special thanks to the Hereford Sports Association, John Pitman Golf Course Association, and everyone who participated in our pink flamingo fund-raiser!

Industry leaders discuss soybean quality, quantity, options

Representatives of the United Soybean Board recently met with leading soybean importers from China, Japan, Korea and Taiwan to strengthen solid working relations with the countries which purchase nearly one-third of all U.S. soybean exports.

"China, Japan, Korea, and Taiwan buy more than $3 billion worth of soybean products a year, from the U.S.," said USB International Marketing Chair Doug Magnus, a soybean farmer from Slayton, Minn.

"These sales average out to more than $10,000 per U.S. soybean farmer."

USB said establishing this strong foundation is critical to maximizing soybean checkoff dollars.

Magnus represented U.S. soybean farmers during recent discussions of the role of the U.S. soybean farmer in soybean market expansion.

During the meetings Magnus stressed the importance of all that the producers, exporters, and seed companies are doing to meet the growing demand for quality soybeans and soy products.

"We want to be the soybean supplier of choice for the future, and we are committed to earning that position," Magnus said. "We have a responsibility to make sure these countries will be able to get the soybeans and soybean products they need."

Not only was quantity discussed, but also the quality of U.S. soybeans.

According to Magnus, India and Argentina are unable to make high-protein soybean meal, and only a few crushing facilities in Brazil can make high-protein meal.

- "The quality of U.S. high-protein soybean meal gives U.S. soybean farmers an edge. That's where we have the biggest competitive advantage," said Magnus. "We want our customers to know that we are working to produce an even better quality soybean meal by improving the protein content."

The importance of the oriental soybean market takes on new impact when it is realized that China is the world's largest importer of soybean meal and oil, and it may soon become the largest importer of soybeans.

Not only that, but Taiwan's annual per capita consumption of soybean meal is 10 times greater than that of China.

If China raises its level to just half of Taiwan', the additional meal consumed would be 50 million metric tons, the equivalent of 429.3 million bushels of soybeans or 42 percent of the soybeans produced in the world.

Magnus said the check-off funded efforts of U.S. soybean farmers through the American Soybean Association to address concerns have not gone unnoticed by the importers and processors.

"Our customers invited us, not our competition, to participate in these meetings because of our willingness to address their concerns and build partnerships, plus our long history in building demand forsoybean products in the region," Magnus said.

WTAMU offers pest management classes

Controlling the insects, disease, and weeds, which cost farmers millions of dollars every year through crop losses, means balancing the farmers with the environmental cost through Integrated Pest Management.

"Integrated Pest management means using multiple tools to control pests at an economic level," said Dr. Greta Schuster, assistant professor and IPM coordinator.

"IPM seeks to reduce reliance on pesticides by using a range of practices. We try to use host-plant resistance, plants with a resistance built into them. We also use biological control, which uses natural beneficials - insects that feed on the insects that harm the crops."

Agriculture is practiced in some form on 81 percent of Texas land, according to TAEX figures. Insects, disease and weeds hamper productivity, which results in millions of dollars in losses annually.

IPM takes into consideration not only the crops and land but also aquifers and other water supplies.

A $250,000 appropriation by the Texas Legislature in 1997 funded the IPM partnership between WTAMU and TAEX.

"This is the first time our University and the extension service have been formally linked," said Dr. Bob Stewart, interim head of the Division of Agriculture and director of the Institute for Dryland Agriculture.

"I think it's a great partnership for both parties. This should give our faculty better opportunities to get in the county extension programming," said Stewart. "It will also give us better access to the 4-H club members, who are our future students.

Dr. James Clark, dean of the College of Agriculture, Nursing and Natural Sciences said the University hopes to receive future funding for two more positions at WTAMU and seven IPM extension agents located in the Panhandle area as the program continues to grow.

Undergraduate students majoring in agriculture may now select IPM as their area of specialization. Graduate students can receive a master of science degree in plant, soil and environmental science with an emphasis in IPM.

"There are three areas to IPM - entomology, or insects; plant pathology, or disease; and weed science," Clark said.

"These are the three major things outside of rainfall, fertility, and weather that influence whether the farmer has a crop. More and more farmers are depending on specialists to help them make decisions about controlling insects, weeds, or disease. There is a great demand for graduates with training in this area.'

The IPM program will work with TAEX, chemical companies, private and crop consultants to advise the program and to provide internships for WTAMU students.

Schuster said 19 students are currently serving internships with IPM extension agents, private consultants, chemical companies and extension specialists.

"It's amazing how many people and companies have bombarded us with job opportunities," she said.

"These internships will give our students the chance to apply what they learn in the classroom to field crop production by providing hands-on training, thus making them more valuable to agriculture and industry."

Schuster received a bachelor of science degree in animal science and a master of science degree in agriculture, both from East Texas State University in Commerce. She received her Ph.D in plant pathology from Texas A&M University in College Station.

For more information about the IPM program call Schuster at (806) 651-2552.

Vines make great cover plants

By GEORGE BRIA=

POUND RIDGE, N.Y. (AP) - Few plants give the sense of contentment inspired by well-tended vines. And there are so many to choose from some boasting spectacular flowers and others just the simple but elegant green leaves that soften a wall.

On the family acreage my wife and I share with our son, we have many vines, including a few rambunctious, Jekyll-and-Hyde characters like bitter sweet, woodbine and wild grape. Our clematis, trumpet creeper, climbing hydrangea, honeysuckle and English and Boston ivies delight us year after year.

This year, my son had the thought of planting a vine to adorn the wooden post that holds up our mailbox at the roadside. So he chose morning glory, a wise choice because the vine is an annual that dies with the fall frost. If it doesn't work out, he can try something else next year.

For anyone new to vines, annuals are the way to go, even to cover a sizable wall of a building, because of this opportunity for fast-paced experimentation.

With perennials, you might invest two or more years of work and time before discovering your selection was unsuitable. For example, wisteria, so beautiful to contemplate in professionally cared-for settings, might overtax your capacity to train and keep it under control. And vines will likely require trellising of some to keep them from eating into the surface of your house.

Probably the most admired morning glory is Heavenly Blue, but the red Scarlet O'Hara is also popular and there are others with white flowers. To speed germination, you nick the seed or soak it for a day before sowing in a sunny spot after danger of frost is past.

The plants, with heart-shaped leaves, climb rapidly on a trellis, achieving heights of eight to 10 feet, if you want to let them grow. As the name suggests, the flowers give a glorious show in the morning but close in the afternoon.

Moonflower, or moon vine is an annual whose white flowers open at twilight and waft a heavenly perfume through the night. You might like to grow the vine on a trellis next to a bedroom window. Its cultivation is similar to that of morning glory.

To achieve a solid screen quickly with an annual vine, the National Garden Bureau suggests the balloon vine or love-in-a-puff (Cardiospermum halicacabum) or the cup-and-saucer vine (Cobaea scandens). They both are flower-bearing and they can stretch to 20 feet.

Perennial vines require thoughtful site selection and careful nurturing, but, once established, they are highly satisfying. Probably America's most loved perennial vine is the clematis, of which there are some 90 different varieties.

I have two, a blue one and a white one, that I have trained and cultivated for many years on a section of post and rail fence that I erected exactly for that purpose. With clematis, you should make sure what varieties you are growing because the pruning requirements differ.

Yearly pruning is a must with two other vines of mine, a climbing hydrangea that luxuriates on a wall of my house and a trumpet creeper that I've trained to form a leafy canopy over a patio and to attract humming birds with its showy orange blooms.

Left untouched, these vines get out of hand. My son, in fact, has deliberately allowed a hydrangea to climb up the trunk of a towering Siberian elm tree. So far, the vine has reached a height of 30 feet on its way to charm the squirrels and Baltimore Orioles with its delicate white blossoms.

Beyond their own intrinsic beauty, vines provide relatively inexpensive cosmetic surgery for unsightly places like sheds and gas tanks or views of your own house you may not be happy with.

As Frank Lloyd Wright said in midcentury, "The physician can bury his mistakes, but the architect can only advise his client to plant vines."

Northcutt gets AQHA riding award

Local resident, Amy Northcutt, of Hereford, recently earned a program recognition patch - an award for logging 50 hours in the American Quarter Horse Association Horseback Riding Program.

The patch is the first of 10 awards given to participants who have logged and verified their hours. Other awards include gift certificates and a trophy belt buckle.

Participants need not own their hors, but all official hours must be accrued with a registered American Quarter Horse.

This program provides AQHA members recognition and incentive to spend time riding or driving American Quarter Horses.

Current AQHA members pay a one-time $25 enrollment fee, complete an application and then are ready to earn credits for riding or driving their quarter horse.

Jim Brett Campbell, AQHA program manager said, "AQHA is so proud to offer this program. This program literally fits everyone who likes spending time with horses."

WASTE WATER AND YOU COULD GET SOAKED.

If you do your part to conserve water by saving water outside your home, you will also save money:

- Water lawn only when needed;
- Do not over-water. One and a half inches of water applied once a week in the summer will keep most Texas grasses alive;
- Water early in the morning or late at night to avoid evaporation;
- Plant native plants;
- Use drip irrigation systems instead of sprinklers or set sprinklers at low angles;
- Do not cut your grass very short during the summer;
- Use a broom to sweep sidewalks - not your hose; and
- Use a bucket of soapy water to wash your car and turn on the hose only for rinsing.

Practice saving water and Be Water Smart!

Every Drop Makes a Difference.

One item to be included in the King's Manor auction will be this backyard playset, made by Backyard Adventures and donated by Mildred and Shirley Garrison, center. Dustin Sammann, on the slide, and Chris Connors, in the swing, sons of the company's owner, Charlie Sammann, assembled the playset on the manor grounds so potential bidders would have an opportunity to inspect it prior to the auction.

Something new has been added to annual King's Manor barbecue

King's Manor Methodist Home's annual barbecue and auction, a benevolent care fund-raiser, will begin on Thursday with a quilt show as the premier event.

"The quilts will not be offered for sale in the auction, but will just be displayed," Patsy Bryant, King's Manor administrator, said.

The quilt show will include old and new quilts. All entries will be judged and a traveling trophy will be awarded.

In addition to the quilt show, horse shoe and washer pitching have been added. These will take place on the manor grounds beginning at 6 p.m. Saturday, just prior to the barbecue.

A meal of barbecue brisket and sausage with all the trimmings will be served at 6:30 p.m. Tickets for the meal are $10 each and are available from members of King's Manor Founders Board or by calling the office at 364-0661.

A quilt auction has been a part of the fund-raising activities in past years, but this year the auction will include a wide assortment of items in addition to quilts.

A backyard playset, a child's antique rocker, prints by Kenneth Wyatt and hand painted china tea services are among the items scheduled to be auctioned.

In 1960 the Reverend Don R. Davidson conceived the idea of a retirement facility in the Northwest Texas Conference of the United Methodist Church. This idea came to fruition with the creation of the Hereford Area Foundation and the subsequent construction of the first phase of King's Manor Methodist Home in 1962.

In 1964 the Westgate Nursing Center was opened. During that same year the apartments and an enlarged dining room and dietary facility were added. Finally, the first two cottages were built during that year.

During the following years, King's Manor continued to grow. Buildings were constructed and services were added.

At the present time, King's Manor has five individual retirement homes, 18 duplex cottage, nine manor dormitory rooms in the Independent Living section, 22 private rooms with bath in the Personal Care section, and 79 full-time nursing care rooms in Westgate Nursing Center.

There is also a child care center with a staff that has a total of 40 years in child care experience.

King's Manor Methodist Home residents come from many communities and denominations.

Becky's Camp Site

By BECKY CAMP, Lifestyles Editor

Watermelon is one of my favorite summer foods. A chilled slice of watermelon on a hot summer day is beyond compare.

Growing up in West Texas during the drought years of the 50s, watermelon was one of the few "luxuries" we were allowed. I remember my sister and I sitting on the back porch eating watermelon slices while the juice dripped from our chins and ran down our arms.

(Watermelon eating time was followed immediately by bath time.)

I don't remember anything else in those days that was watermelon-flavored, like the candy, gum, etc. that we have now. Maybe that's why watermelon was such a treat.

My mother did make watermelon rind preserves but as I recall, she and I were the only ones who ever ate them.

Watermelons are well named. According to The Old Farmer's Almanac, they are 92 percent water and fat free. A two-cup serving contains 90 calories and is a good source of vitamins A and C.

Watermelon can be enjoyed in ways other than just chill, slice and eat. Here are some recipes from the National Watermelon Promotion Board you might enjoy trying.

Watermelon Punch

6 cups watermelon juice (see note)
2 cups pineapple juice
1 can (12 ounces) frozen raspberry juice blend
1 small can (6 ounces) frozen orange juice concentrate
1/4 cup lemon juice

Combine all ingredients in a large jar or pitcher and chill. Serves 12-14.

Note: To make watermelon juice, process small chunks of watermelon in a blender or food processor until they turn to liquid. Make more than you need for this punch, freeze the extra in ice-cube trays, and use the watermelon cubes to chill the punch. (You can also use watermelon juice instead of water when preparing frozen lemonade or limeade.)

Filled Watermelon Basket

1 large oblong watermelon
1 cantaloupe
1 honeydew melon
1 fresh pineapple
2 fresh peaches or nectarines
2 cups fresh blueberries, strawberries or raspberries
Honey-Lime Dressing (see recipe below)

Cut off the top third of the watermelon lengthwise, saving this portion for another purpose. If necessary, cut a thin slice from the bottom so the melon will firmly stand upright. With a melon ball cutter, cut balls from the larger section of the melon. Remove the seeds from the balls and chill. Remove the remaining pulp from the melon to make a basket. Drain, if necessary. Cut balls from the cantaloupe and honeydew melons. Remove the rind and core from the pineapple, cut into bite-sized pieces, and mix with the melon balls. Cover and chill. Just before serving, peel and slice the peaches and prepare the berries. Drain the melon balls and the pineapple chunks. Combine all the fruit in a large bowl. Toss with the Honey-Lime Dressing and pour into the watermelon shell. Garnish with fresh mint leaves.

Honey-Lime Dressing

2 tablespoons lime juice
3 tablespoons honey
1/2 cup white wine or ginger ale

Combine all ingredients in a jar with a tight-fitting lid and shake until well mixed.

Refrigerator Watermelon Rind Pickles

4 cups cubed, peeled watermelon rind (red flesh removed)
3/4 cup granulated sugar
1 cup white vinegar
2 sticks cinnamon (about 3 inches each)
1 teaspoon whole cloves

In a medium stainless steel saucepan combine all ingredients and bring to a boil over high heat, stirring frequently. Reduce the heat, cover, and simmer gently until the rind is tender and translucent, about 45 to 50 minutes. Cool. Refrigerate in a covered glass container. Store at least 12 hours to blend the flavors. Serves 6-8.

Creamy Melonsicles

2 cups seeded watermelon chunks
2 cups frozen vanilla yogurt

In a blender or food processor puree the watermelon and frozen yogurt until smooth. Pour into popsicle molds or freeze in paper cups and insert popsicle sticks when the mixture is partially frozen. Makes 4-6.

To be selected for the Dean's Honor Roll, a student must take at least 12 credit hours and have a 3.5 or better grade point average.

PLAINVIEW -- Karen Manchee, daughter of Mal and Pat Manchee, has been named to the President's List for the spring semester at Wayland Baptist University.

Matthew Baird, son of Edward Baird and Misti Peabody, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ted Peabody, have received Dean's List recognition for the spring semester at Wayland.

The President's List recognizes students who receive a 4.0 grade point average while handling a class load of at least 12 semester hours.

Students who maintain at least a 3.5 GPA while taking a full load of coarse work are included on the Dean's List.

MARRIAGE ENRICHMENT

COMMUNICATION AND CONFLICT RESOLUTION WORKSHOP

Conflict is an inevitable part of marriage ! Wes & Holly Eades will lead us through two session program to help us learn that conflict can be one of the most positive experiences of marriage if we understand how to handle it!

In this workshop Wes and Holly will address two root causes of conflict in relationships: 1) Personality differences and 2) Undeveloped conflict in resolution skills. They will lead us through a popular personality inventory and a method of resolving conflict. With humor and honesty, Wes and Holly use their own marriage as an example of positive and negative approaches to conflict resolution. You will enjoy both laughter and serious reflections in this workshop. Couples will come away with new insights, new skills, and a renewed appreciation for the important role our marriages plays in the life of faith.

Wes and Holly have been providing marriage enrichment experiences for much of their seventeen year marriage. They have led marriage and family seminars for churches from Texas to South Carolina.

Wes is the minister of Adult Education and Pastoral Counseling at the First Baptist Church of Waco, Texas. He provides counseling services to members of the congregation and the community, plus directs the marriage and family life education programming of the church. Wes has served numerous congregations in a variety of capacities over the past 25 years. He received his doctoral degree (Psychology of Religion) from Southern Seminary in Louisville and, prior to coming to Waco, was the Executive Director of the Counseling and Pastoral Care Center Of Austin.

Holly is a teacher by training, but a homemaker by vocation. She has the full-time job raising Abigail (9) Benjamin (6) and Olivia (2). Holly grew up on the mission field of Venezuela and graduated from William Jewell College (Liberty, Missouri) with a degree in education. She taught fifth-graders for 6 years. Holly has recently returned to school to pursue a degree in nursing.

MRS. JOHN GABRIEL GUERRERO
...nee Samantha Bordayo

Local couple is wed in afternoon ceremony

Samantha Bordayo and John Gabriel Guerrero were united in marriage in an afternoon ceremony June 20 in St. Anthony's Catholic Church.

The bride is the daughter of Rick and Virginia Bordayo of Hereford. Parents of the bridegroom are Deacon Jessie and Maggie Guerrero, also of Hereford.

Officiating were Monsignor Orville Blum of St. Anthony's and Father Joe Bixeman, Amarillo Diocesan's Vicar General.

Matrons of honor were Bobby Compton, sister of the bride, and Edna V. Medrano of Amarillo. Best man was Josh Gamboa.

Bridesmaids included Edith Bordayo, cousin of the bride of Sargosa, and Yvette Nava, cousin of the groom.

Groomsmen were Freddie Valdez; Rick Bordayo, brother of the bride; and Nino Salomon.

Guests were seated by Tony Garcia and Lt. Jessie Joe Guerrero of Hawaii, brother of the groom.

Flower girls were Meagan Bordayo, niece of the bride, and Jaci Guerrero, niece of the groom.

The ring bearer was Connor Guerrero of Hawaii, nephew of the groom.

Train bearer was Regina Nava, cousin of the groom.

Padrinos and Madrinas were Edward and Sandy Maldonado, cousins of the groom; Richard and Lupe Rodriguez of Dimmitt, bride's aunt and uncle; and Jimmy and Delia Guerrero of Austin, groom's brother and sister-in-law.

Diana Detten accompanied vocalist Bill Sava on the piano. Vocal selections included "Ava Maria", "Wherever You Go" and "Surely the Presence."

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a formal white gown of Italian satin featuring a sleeveless bodice of re-embroidered alencon lace with delicate pearl edging around the neckline and sleeves.

The basque waist flowed into a multilayered billowing tulle skirt that was edged with a wide satin band and appliqued with alencon lace and sequins. Two satin bows accented the low square back neckline above the bouffant chapel train.

She carried a nosegay bouquet of various shades of pink and mauve roses accented with mauve gypsolla and white tulle puffs.

The bridal veil was an elbow-length triple layer illusion edged with a band of white satin, matching the bridal gown.

Bridal attendants wore deep mauve floor length satin sheath gowns. They each carried a nosegay of pink and mauve roses accented with white tulle.

The couple was honored with reception and dinner at the Hereford Bull Barn provided by Jessie and Maggie Guerrero and San Jose TYM.

The bride's five layer white cake iced with classic white on white frosting and filled with strawberry glace was provided by Margaret Gamez and Lupe Castillo. The layers were separated by masses of pink and mauve roses and the top layer held a bouquet of roses and a cloud of white tulle that surrounded the cake and pooled on the table.

The groom's chocolate cake filled with apricot glaze and frosted with chocolate shells and roses was provided by Linda Dominguez.

The dance at the reception was DJ'd by Edward Maldonado.

The bride is a 1994 Hereford High graduate. She attended West Texas A&M University and is now employed by the Hereford Independent School District.

The groom is a 1995 graduate of Hereford High. He attended WTAMU and is now employed by the Deaf Smith County Sheriff's Department as a corrections officer.

Merry Mixers elect officers

In regular business meeting, the Hereford Merry Mixers elected new officers to be installed August 6.

Elected were Ed and Earlene McCreary, president; Trow Mims, vice president; Joe and Tommy Boeckman, secretary/treasurer; Pat Ancona and Paula Eubanks, social chairmen; Richard and Darla Stengel, reporter; and Sonny and Carolyn Evers, Top of Texas delegate.

Plans were discussed for an entry in the Jubilee parade. After the parade, the club will dance in the park.

Plans were also made for a picnic at the Aquatic Center beginning at 6:30 p.m. with dancing at 8 p.m. Dress will be casual.

Following the business meeting, the Outlaw Squares of Amarillo joined the Merry Mixers in dancing to the calling of Herrick Allen.

Aesop's fables were compiled (if not actually written) by a Greek writer named Babrios.

HJH Roundup

By CAROLYN WATERS

Freedom is not guaranteed. It must be earned everyday.

As we celebrate another holiday, we find that our youth understand less and less why we have some of our holidays. Being a parent, grandparent and teacher for a "few" years, I realize more and more that we are neglecting our children in this area.

This portion of an editorial of Dave McReynolds seems very timely for this Fourth of July weekend. (Actually, he "borrowed it from Rep. Mitchell Kay of Cobb County, Georgia.).

It suggests the following:

"We, the sensible people of the United States, in an attempt to help everyone get along, restore some semblance of justice, keep our nation safe, avoid any more riots, promote positive behavior and secure the blessings of debt-free liberty to ourselves and our grandchildren, hereby try one more time to ordain and establish some commonsense guidelines for the terminally whiny, guilt-ridden, delusional and other cry-baby bleeding hearts...

We hold these truths to be self-evident, that a whole lot of people are confused by the Bill of Rights and therefore require a Bill of No Rights..."

Article I: You do not have the right to have a new car, big-screen TV or any other form of wealth. More power to you if you can legally acquire them, but no one is guaranteed anything.

Article II: You do not have the right to never be offended. This country is based on freedom and that means for everyone, not just you.

Article III: You do not have the right to be free from harm. If you stick a screwdriver in your eye, learn to be more careful. Do not expect the tool manufacturer to make you and your relatives wealthy.

Article IV: You do not have the right to free food and housing. Americans are the most charitable people in the world and will gladly help those in need. But if you can be self-supporting, do so.

Article V: You do not have the right to physically harm anyone. If you do, don't be surprised if the rest of us want you punished.

Article VI: You do not have the right to free health care. Again, if honest help is needed, it's there for you.

Article VII: You do not have the right to the possessions of others. If you rob, cheat or coerce away the goods and services of others, don't be surprised if the rest of us lock you away where you do not have the right to a big-screen TV or a life of leisure.

Article VIII: You do not have the right to demand our children to risk their lives in foreign wars to soothe your aching conscience.

Article IX: You do not have a right to a job. All of us sure want you to have one and will gladly help you along in hard times, but we expect you to take advantage of opportunities of education and vocational training that is offered you and to make yourself useful.

Article X: You do not have the right to happiness. Being an American means you have the right to pursue happiness -- which, by the way, is a lot easier if you are unencumbered by an overabundance of idiotic laws created by those of you who are confused by the Bill of Rights.

What do you think of that?

American Legion, Auxiliary will hold ice cream social

Hereford Post and Unit of the American Legion and American Legion Auxiliary will host an ice cream social for members at 7 p.m. Tuesday in the American Legion Hall.

Special guests will be the three delegates who attended Boys State and Girls State activities in June, and the two 1998 scholarship recipients as well as their families.

A program will be presented by the delegates as they report their participation and accomplishments gained while attending the Boys State and Girls State sessions in Austin and Seguin.

All Legionnaires and Auxiliary members are urged to attend.

Military Muster

DAX RIGGIN

Pvt. Dax Riggin, son of Royce Riggin of Hereford and Cindy Lemons of Ruidoso, N.M., recently completed basic infantry school with the 210th Bravo Co. in Fort Benning, Ga.

Pvt. Riggin then completed Airborne School and received his Silver Wings upon graduation with 507th Charlie Co. also at Fort Benning.

He will be stationed at the 82nd Airborne Division in Fort Bragg, N.C., where he will receive additional training.

Navy Petty Officer 3rd Class Eric V. Savage, a 1991 graduate of Hereford High School of Hereford, Texas, recently departed on a six-month deployment to the Western Pacific Ocean, Indian Ocean and Arabian Gulf aboard the aircraft carrier USS Abraham Lincoln.

Savage is one of more than 5,000 Sailors and Marines aboard the ship, which departed its home port of Everett, Wash., to lead the USS Abraham Lincoln Battle Group. The battle group is comprised of ten tactical air squadrons, five combatants and two submarines.

Carriers, like USS Abraham Lincoln, are forward deployed around the world to maintain a U.S. presence and provide rapid response in times of crisis. They serve as a highly visible deterrent to would-be aggressors and, if deterrence fails, offer the most versatile and powerful weapons available.

The USS Abraham Lincoln Battle Group can travel more than 500 miles a day while simultaneously deploying to separate geographic regions.

He joined the Navy in February 1996.

An Open Letter to Our Friends & Neighbors in Hereford:

This letter is to thank everyone who sent expressions in response to the loss of my beloved wife, Dorothy, on June 13, 1998, at the Hereford Regional Medical Center.

Your thoughts, prayers and telephone calls have meant far more to me and my children than words can convey. It would have filled Dorothy's heart knowing just how many folks were thinking of her during her illness.

May God bless and keep you all, and once again my family and I are most appreciative for all your support and concern at this difficult time.

Sincerely, Bill Hamer

VANESSA PESINA, BENNY ROCHA

St. Anthony's Church to be site of wedding

Raul and Sara Pesina of Hereford announce the engagement of their daughter, Vanessa Dianne Pesina, to Adolfo B. Rocha of Hereford, son of Alicia and Adolfo Rocha Jr. of Hereford.

The wedding will be held August 8 in St. Anthony's Catholic Church.

The bride-elect is a 1997 graduate of Hereford High School and plans to attend West Texas A&M University in the fall.

The prospective bridegroom is self employed.

The couple has a 2-year-old son, Alexander Benjamin Rocha.

Ann Landers

Dear Ann Landers: We are middle-class working people who live in the geographic center of the United States. My husband is a conservative, sensible man in every area of his life except one -- the lottery. "Jim" has been playing the lottery for longer than he is willing to admit. He is convinced that if he stays with it, eventually, he will win the Big One.

When a retired electrician from Streamwood, Ill., won $104 million in the lottery, Jim said, "See, lightning DOES strike. That could have been ME." I replied, "Yes, Jim, it could have been you, but it wasn't."

What can I say to my lunatic husband to get him to stop throwing away money we need for our kids' college education and, to put it bluntly, for our old age? Maybe if you print this letter in the column, it will open his eyes. -- Mrs. Goofy in Kansas

Dear Kansas: I can respond to your question with one word: nothing. Jim is totally hooked, and he will continue to play the lottery as long as he can lay his hands on the money.

The stories about what happens to people who DO win the lottery should be enough to scare any sane person away from this gamble. I recall reading about a court fight between a woman in New York and her gentleman friend who turned out to be neither a friend nor a gentleman. After she had won $2.8 million, he sued her for half because he had "prayed for her."

And I remember the story about another "lucky" lottery winner in Pennsylvania whose brother hired a hit man to kill him and his wife so he could claim the "next of kin" windfall. There was also a magazine article by an enterprising author who looked up several lottery winners to see how the sudden wealth had changed their lives. There were a few happy winners, but I can tell you that almost all those mentioned in the article said they wished they had never heard of the lottery.

So, dear readers, remember the old adage "Be careful what you pray for. You might get it."

Dear Ann Landers: You were right on the money with your advice to "Bride-to-Be in D.C.," the spoiled brat who expected her father to go into hock to give her a fancy wedding.

A few years ago, my parents offered to pay for my wedding, even though they'd had to foot the bill for my sister's wedding six months before. Because my husband and I wanted to buy our first home, we took them up on their offer. Knowing they weren't wealthy and had just finished putting three kids through college, we did our best to economize. I wore my mother's wedding dress, made my own veil and had a single attendant (my sister, who bought her taffeta gown off the rack at a bridal shop for $20). We kept the guest list down to relatives and close friends.

We didn't have swans spouting champagne or a fancy limo. We cut corners wherever we could. My father-in-law was amused to find me washing my dad's 20-year-old car on the morning of the wedding. He ran in the house to get his camera and took a picture of me doing it. I wouldn't have changed a thing. It was the wedding of my dreams. -- Happy in Bakersfield, Calif.

Dear Bake: You are much too young to remember that song "The Best Things in Life Are Free," but take my word for it -- it's true.

What can you give the person who has everything? Ann Landers' booklet, "Gems," is ideal for a nightstand or coffee table. "Gems" is a collection of Ann Landers' most requested poems and essays. Send a self-addressed, long, business-size envelope and a check or money order for $5.25 (this includes postage and handling) to: Gems, c/o Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11562, Chicago, Ill.

Red Cross Update

Hereford Community Center was the site of our Annual Membership meeting on June 30. For those of you that were unable to attend, we are sorry that we missed you. We honored Doris Johnson of Dawn and Jim Steiert of Hereford as our "Volunteers of the Year" for 1997. Again we thank them for all of the many things they have done for our chapter.

Other volunteers appreciated were Lupe Chavez, Betty Henson, Dale Henson, Sally Walker, Lois Norwood, The Hereford Brand, KPAN Radio Station, Karen Shore, Bud and Lurline Cawthon, Thama and L.D. Combs, and Audine Dettman. In addition, new board members were voted into office.

We would like for you to know that long-time volunteer and the Tri County Chapter's "backbone," Sally Walker, will be out of the office for a few weeks due to hand surgery. We all pray for a speedy recovery and for that much deserved rest and relaxation.

On Tuesday, at noon we will have Terry Kelly Marquandt visiting the Field Office in Fort Worth. All volunteers and board members are invited to come for a "brown bag" lunch and an opportunity to meet Terry.

A CPR Renewal class will be held at 7 p.m. Tuesday at the chapter office. All those needing their renewal certificate are encouraged to attend. Call the office to register for this all important class. The cost of the class is $5.

The American Red Cross is dedicated to helping make families and communities safer at home and around the world. For information on local classes and programs, call the office at 806-364-3761 or you may write to P.O. Box 1371, Hereford, Texas 79045.

The Red Cross is a volunteer-led humanitarian service organization that annually provides almost half of the nation's blood supply, certifies more than 8.5 million people in lifesaving skills, mobilizes relief to victims in more than 68,000 disasters nationwide, provides direct health services to 2.8 million people, assists international disaster and conflict victims in more than 40 counties and transmits more than 14 million emergency messages to members of the Armed Forces and their families.

All Red Cross disaster assistance is free, made possible by voluntary gifts of time and money from the American people. the Red Cross is not a government agency.

Tax deductible gifts are received at our local office by mail or in person at 224 South Main. Office hours at 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Checks may be mailed to the American Red Cross, P.O. Box 32743, Washington, D.C. 20013.

GINA STREUN, BURKE THOMPSON

Couple will wed

Gene and Cynthia Streun of Hereford announce the engagement of their daughter, Gina Streun, to Burke Thompson of Lubbock, son of Cliff Thompson of Corona Del Mar, Calif. and Val Thompson of Lubbock.

The bride-elect is the granddaughter of the late Jack Streun and the late Mr. and Mrs. William Perry McMinn, all of Summerfield.

The couple will be married on Sept. 12 in the Covenant United Methodist Church.

The bride-elect is a 1995 graduate of West Texas A&M University and is currently the customer service manager of the Austin branch of Nextlink One, Inc.

The prospective bridegroom is a 1994 graduate of Southwest Texas State University. He is the branch manager for Yusen Air and Sea Service, an international freight forwarder, and a development consultant for Tradeport International, a new warehousing development for the Austin-Bergstrom International Airport.

Booming! Sparkling big business

DALLAS - Randy Beckham figures his must be the best career in the world.

"I take other people's money to blow things up," he said, "and I fulfill my desire to make art at the same time.

"I have achieved the ultimate job."

And at this time of year, a very busy job, too.

As founder and owner of Dallas' Pyrotex Inc., the state's largest pyrotechnics firm, Beckham and his crews will light the skies across much of suburban Dallas this holiday weekend.

For him, the Fourth of July is Christmas and New Year's and Thanksgiving all wrapped up in one.

"We've been working like 6 a.m. to midnight every day. I've been sleeping at a house at our plant, and it isn't much of a house," Beckham said. "I feel about 70 right now, and I look about 50, but I'm really only 41."

The frenzy began Thursday night in Carrollton and continues Saturday in Flower Mound, Frisco, Greenville and Plano, when Pyrotex crews will launch thousands of chrysanthemums and peonies, willows and palm trees, comets, meteors, serpents and stars with computer-regulated synchronization.

That's where holiday extravaganza meets Beckham's artistic sensibility.

"We try to match the effects with the music we use. And over the years, you learn that this effect works with strings, this one with horns, that one with drums, that a certain effect represents a musical instrument," Beckham said.

Sometimes, of course, his artistic vision doesn't necessarily match that of his patrons, he said, including the city of Carrollton on one recent Fourth of July.

"I have had some arguments over my art," Beckham admitted. "In Carrollton, I wanted to end the Fourth of July fireworks subtly, with a single white shell.

"No one got it but me."

It didn't hurt his relationship with the city. Carrollton has hired Beckham for at least five consecutive years, said Carrie Cessna of the city's Parks and Recreation Department.

"He's excellent - very professional, very safety-conscious," Ms. Cessna said. "We're very glad to have him as a part of our show."

And that little disagreement over subtlety taught Beckham an important lesson: Know your audience.

"For the Fourth of July, you need to go theme-park style - shoot a whole lot of stuff real quick. People can have a short attention span. So, fire fast and furious, and leave some sort of impression," Beckham said.

And then there's the music, the core of Pyrotex shows, particularly on the Fourth of July.

"I'm a traditionalist, or at least a neo-traditionalist, when it comes to patriotic shows," Beckham said. "Not John Philip Sousa necessarily, but I like to use a combination of orchestral and contemporary patriotic music."

That usually works very well, he said. But a local radio station will sponsor the Plano show this year, and station executives had their own particular ideas about music, the songs I want and half the songs they want," Beckham said.

Pyrotex does about 120 corporate and entertainment shows a year, and Beckham designed a show that will be repeated 100 times this year at Six Flags Fiesta Texas in San Antonio. He can work indoors or outdoors like this weekend's shows.

Today in History

By The Associated Press

Today is Sunday, July 5, the 186th day of 1998. There are 179 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:

On July 5, 1946, the bikini made its debut during a fashion show at the Molitor Pool in Paris. Model Micheline Bernardini wore the daringly skimpy two-piece outfit, which was created by Louis Reard.

On this date:

In 1801, American naval hero David G. Farragut was born in Knoxville, Tenn.

In 1811, Venezuela became the first South American country to declare independence from Spain.

In 1830, the French occupied the North African city of Algiers.

In 1865, William Booth founded the Salvation Army in London.

In 1940, during World War II, Britain and the Vichy government in France broke diplomatic relations.

In 1947, Larry Doby signed a contract with the Cleveland Indians, becoming the first black player in the American League.

In 1948, 50 years ago, Britain's National Health Service Act went into effect, providing government-financed medical and dental care.

In 1954, Elvis Presley's first commercial recording session took place at Sun Records in Memphis, Tenn.; the song he recorded was "That's All Right (Mama)."

In 1975, Arthur Ashe became the first black man to win a Wimbledon singles title as he defeated Jimmy Connors.

In 1978, a Soviet Soyuz spacecraft touched down safely in Soviet Kazakhstan with its two-member crew, including the first Polish space traveler - Major Miroslaw Hermaszewski.

Ten years ago: Attorney General Edwin Meese III announced he would resign, saying he had been vindicated by an independent prosecutor's 14-month probe into his official conduct.

Five years ago: A United Nations team left Iraq after trying for more than a month to persuade the Baghdad government to allow surveillance cameras at two former missile test sites. President Clinton left Washington for a Group of Seven summit in Japan.

One year ago: NASA scientists brainstormed to fix problems that left Mars Pathfinder's robot rover stuck aboard the lander. Cambodia's Second Prime Minister Hun Sen launched a bloody coup that toppled First Prime Minister Norodom Ranariddh. Sixteen-year-old Martina Hingis became the youngest Wimbledom singles champion this century as she beat Jana Novotna in the women's finals. (Charlotte "Lottie" Dod won in 1887 at age 15.)

Today's Birthdays: Actress Katherine Helmond is 64. Actress Shirley Knight is 62. Singer-musician Robbie Robertson is 54. Julie Nixon Eisenhower is 50.

Wedding is planned in Amarillo

Sandy Monroe of Amarillo announces the engagement of her daughter, Cassidy Ann Monroe, to Matthew Mark Dill of Amarillo, son of Mark and Laura Dill of Borger.

Grandparents of the bride-elect are G.D. and Jeanie Caison of Hereford.

The couple will be wed on August 1 at the home of Sandy Monroe.

The bride-elect is a theater major at Amarillo College.

The prospective bridegroom is a criminology major at West Texas A&M University and is the manager of the seafood department at United Supermarket.

CASSIDY MONROE, MATT DILL

Hints from Heloise

Dear Heloise: Buy an extra shower-curtain rod to hang back near the wall of the tub, out of the way of a person showering. Use it for company or kids returning home for a visit and using lots of wet towels. Towels can hang up on the rod and won't be all over the bathroom. They will be there for a second use or won't mildew by being put in the laundry basket until washed. This has been a life-saver and space-saver for me! — Audie Standley, Conroe, Texas

Love it! Especially for a vacation, beach or lake house. Those wet towels seem to multiply! — Heloise

DOGGIE POOL

Dear Heloise: My dog loves the water, and when we go to a nearby lake we always take Ginger along. She romps for hours at a time and hates to get out of the water.

We made her very happy when we bought a small kiddie pool and set it up in the yard for her. Many days we come home and she is lounging around in her pool as comfortable as can be. She sure is one lucky dog. I wish I could spend my days in a pool. — Carol G., Fort Myers, Fla.

RECYCLE

Dear Heloise: I reuse the plastic net bag from oranges and grapefruit. I weave a shoelace at the top and bottom, clip a hole at the bottom and put my plastic bags in the top and pull them out the bottom as I need them. They store neatly until they are needed. — Donna Kiel, Watertown, Wis.

— YOUR EYES —

Swimming & your Eyes

Nature provided our eyes with a built-in cleansing system: we blink several times a minute, washing tears over our eyes. But some of our modern-day activities -- including swimming in treated pools -- sometimes cause damage that tears alone can't fix.

Conjunctivitis -- old-fashioned "pink eye" is a familiar summer problem. Ordinary, non-contagious conjunctivitis is generally a reaction, sometimes allergic, to the irritation of chlorine. But pools also harbor bacteria and help more dangerous conjunctivitis spread among youngsters swimming together. It's wise to see your eye doctor to diagnose and treat either kind.

If you wear corrective lenses, do not try to swim with contact lenses. Soft contacts, especially, can absorb chemicals that may irritate the eye. Swim goggles can be made with corrective lenses, even with ultraviolet protection for outdoor use. These offer the added advantage of keeping chlorinated water out of the eyes.

Success is a by-product

I don't know anyone personally who doesn't want to be successful. However, I do know a lot of folks who haven't achieved any great amount of success. It may be because they don't realize that success is a by-product.

My dictionary defines a by-product as: "Anything produced in the course of making another thing." Success fits this definition because it is only accomplished through work, effort and the desire to achieve.

If you study the lives of men and women who are achieving an admirable measure of success, you'll often find some common factors. Most often than not, these common factors are by-products of other actions.

For example, Stan Musial, the great baseball player, never dreamed of becoming a Hall of Famer when he broke into the major leagues. His only goal was to play for the St. Louis Cardinals. His motivation was to earn a good living doing something he loved. Musial went on to become the National League's "Most Valuable Player" three times. He led the league in hitting seven different years and finished his career batting .331.

Musial's approach to success was to work on one pitch at a time. Then one hit at a time and then one season at a time. His record-shattering career was the by-product of studious attention to mastering his craft, an intensely competitive spirit and showing up for work every day for 22 years.

The Main Ingredients

• Success is a by-product of love. I've never yet seen anyone achieve greatness without loving what they do. While there is still work involved, if you love what you're doing the workload gets lighter.

• Success is a by-product of thought. Not thinking of success, but rather solving this day's problems through careful consideration of facts. Thought opens the door of discovery and lets in the light of reason. Sound reason brings clear solutions to difficult problems.

• Success is a by-product of focusing on the positive. Only a pessimist succeeds by being negative. By focusing on what you can do, rather than what you cannot, you move forward toward success. Your progress may not be visible to you each day, but you are on your way.

• Success is a by-product of planning. Creating a plan will not make you successful. I've seen the business plans of some real failures. However, a good plan is a foundation to build on. Executing the elements in your plan will guide you toward success.

• Success is the by-product of starting. Many potentially successful projects fail because no one got them started. All success comes from starting. An adage says that well begun is half done.

• Success is the by-product of continuing. Thomas Edison achieved great success by starting where others quit. Winston Churchill made a great speech with just six words. He said, "Never, never, never, never give up." Helen Keller said, "We can do anything we want to do if we stick to it long enough."

• Success is a by-product of time well spent. Productive use of your time is a critical success factor. All people are given the same amount of time every day. Some us it dreaming, some denying, some dodging and some doing. Become a doer. Concentrate on results. Use your time wisely.

• Success is a by-product of doing. Results are the outcome of actions. Actions are the by-product of doing. A lifetime of doing what we love in a positive way, while thinking of others, will create some wonderful products and cause success to surround you. Work toward other goals and success will overtake you as certainly as night follows day.

Between the Covers

By MARTHA RUSSEL

The summer is flying by. Summer Reading Club is almost over, but there's still plenty of fun left. This Tuesday, July 7, will be Fairy Tale day.

Then, the next Tuesday, July 14, will be the Tale End, our final program activity. Not only is this "Wear a Tail to the Library" Day, but also we will have a very special guest. Trudy Hanson, West Texas A&M University professor and storyteller, will be telling exciting animal stories and tales. We are privileged to have her for our grand finale. Don't miss this treat.

Joe Weaver made an encore appearance at the Deaf Smith County Library last week. He shared Johnny Appleseed with the Summer Reading Club kids and parents. Joe has been gone from Hereford long enough that there were some younger kids who had not seen him as one of his "characters." He is quite a sight in costume and does an excellent job.

If you are planning a trip to Grandma's or wherever, don't forget to take some talking books with you. They are great for long, tiresome journeys. The time flies when you are involved in a good story. We have everything from current popular fiction, romance, etc. to Hank the Cowdog and other titles that kids will enjoy.

The talking books check out for two weeks just like regular books. But if you will be away longer than that, we can make that work, too. Drop in before your next trip. We have an excellent, and growing, collection.

With the weather so hot, outside activities are a little unpleasant. If you can find a cool place to hide, a good book is a great companion. Aside from the 70,000 plus volumes we have on the shelves, we have a few new books for you this week. We guarantee you can find something that you will like.

In The All-True Travels and Adventures of Lidie Newton: A Novel by Jane Smiley, we find Lidie to be a strong, no-nonsense woman in Quincy, Ill. She is hard to scare, almost shockingly alive, and a plain girl who rides, shoots, and speaks her mind. When she marries Tom Newton, a steady, sweet-tempered abolitionist on his way to Kansas, she packs up and goes with him.

Tom's mission, as one of a group of rashly brave New Englanders, is to settle Kansas with like-minded folk to ensure its entering the Union as a Free State. Plunged into the turbulance of "Bloody Kansas", where slave holding Missourians viciously clash with the Free Staters, Lidie becomes even more fervently abolitionist than her husband.

Then, suddenly, cold-blooded murder enters her life. Lidie doesn't falter. She cuts off her hair, disguises herself as a boy, and rides into Missouri in search of the killers. She is a woman in a man's world and an abolitionist spy in slave territory, her life threatened, but her wits sharpened.

Margaret Cuthbert, M.D. has written a new medical thriller, The Silent Cradle. Dr. Rae Duprey, Berkeley Hills Hospital's premier obstetrician is driven by a passion to save the lives of the women and babies in her care. Dr. Duprey, in line for the chairmanship of Berkeley Hill's prestigious obstetrics department, is determined to uncover the truth about why a series of seemingly routine deliveries emanating from the politically sensitive birth center across the street have turned into "bad baby" cases.

Her investigation unleashes a firestorm of resistance form all sides, including her former lover, the director of the birth center. As the hair-raising emergencies continue unabated, she begins to suspect the unthinkable: a sinister plan of medical sabotage, masterminded by a killer who is hardly a stranger to Berkeley Hills Hospital.

Other new fiction include:

Signal to Noise by Eric S. Nylund, a sci-fi for the new millennium

The Eleventh Commandment, a political thriller by Jeffrey Archer

1919: A Novel of the Irish Revolution by Morgan Llewelyn

Death of a Scriptwriter by M.C. Beaton, a Hamish MacBeth mystery

National Geographic has published a book of it's wonderful diagrams and cutaways drawn form the vast collection that began with their first magazine in 1888. Part I, "Under the Surface," explores the insides of the Vatican, tarantulas, volcanos, potatoes, ancient ships, and the human body.

Part II, "How Things Work," has colorful illustrations of lightning, a fishing boat, and glacier formation. "Unseen Worlds" is the title of Part III and includes quasars and black holes, skyscrapers, jellyfish, and pyramids.

Inside/Out: The Best of National Geographic Diagrams and Cutaways is a typically beautiful book that will interest children as well as adults.

Speaking of great pictures...Funny Babies edited by J.C. Suares has some great photos of babies that are good for a chuckle on even the most frustrating day. Clever text and quotes add to the fun.

Have you ever found yourself in a difficult situation where you had no idea what to say, so you just stood around and looked awkward? Surely I am not the only one. If you have the advantage of advance warning, you might want to check out Miss Manners' Basic Training: The Right Thing To Say by Judith Martin.

This handbook covers what to say, and not to say, to a bereaved person, a pregnant person, or to a newly engaged couple. It also gives hints on how to say "no" gracefully, but absolutely, and enlightens on the art if apology when you haven't said the right thing. Keep this book in mind. You never know when you might need it.

Other new nonfiction books this week are:

The Circle of Innovation by Tom Peters, a handbook for business.

Brain Workout: Easy Ways to Power Up Your Memory, Sensory Perception, and Intelligence by Arthur Winter, M.D. and Ruth Winter, M.S.

Why Things Bite Back: Technology and the Revenge of Unintended Consequences by Edward Tenner

Africa: A Biography of the Continent by John Reader

Food and Family

Ways to cut the calories from fast food meals

Many items on the menu at fast food restaurants are extremely high in calories and fat -- but some healthier choices are generally available.

For instance, a double hamburger, large fries and milk shake add up to a whopping 1200 calories. Try instead a grilled chicken sandwich or a small burger -- with a baked potato and salad.

If you order a diet soda or iced tea instead of a shake -- and use ketchup or mustard in place of mayonnaise -- this meal now has 500 calories, or two and a half times less.

Over time, the difference in calories really adds up. So enjoy fast food once in a while -- and remember, at a fast food restaurant, you can make healthy choices.

County Council plans 4-H Fun Day

Summer and early fall activities for Deaf Smith County 4-H'ers were discussed during a County Council planning session held recently at Pizza Hut.

Included in the activities are a 4-H Fun Day to be held July 9 at 7 p.m. in Veterans Park and the Bull Barn. Oldham County 4-H families have been invited to participate in a picnic, games and a dance to be called by Jimmy Walker.

All families attending are asked to bring a picnic supper for themselves and enough to feed two other people.

Robin Bell requested support for a community service project based on collecting crushed aluminum cans with proceeds to benefit Habitat for Humanity. Clean, bagged and crushed cans can be brought to the Fun Day or delivered to 114 Fir or 300 Westhaven.

Council members in attendance were Jaime Steiert, Robin Bell, Abby Wilks, Amy Bell and Seth Hoelscher.

Leaders attending were Beverly Harder Misty Peabody, Kerrie Steiert, Jim Steiert and Diane Hoelscher.

The next council meeting will be in August.

Writing Want Ads that really sell!

Unsure how to write a Classified Ad that will get results? Follow these pointers and you'll soon have an empty space in your storage room and cash in your pocket.

For starters, look at ads which offer the same item/products. Get a sense of going rates and ideas for how to make your ad stand out. Once you're ready to write, begin with exactly what you're selling: "Dining room set, maple, six chairs." Then, remember these hints:

--Give the price. A newspaper consultant says 70 percent of classified readers won't respond to an ad with no price.

--Use key words to describe what you're selling. The key words for a car are make, model, year, body style, color, mileage and price. If it's a house, key words are location, type of construction, number of bedrooms and baths, and condition.

--Don't use abbreviations. It's tempting to abbreviate and save money if ads are billed by the line. Brand ads are billed by the words, so spell them out so readers won't be confused trying to figure out abbreviations.

-- Don't be misleading. Think accurate and factual when you write. Be sure to include a phone number and the best times to reach you.

Linkletter tells how he got kids to say darndest things

More than half a century after he realized his young son, Jack, offered pearls of wisdom worthy of the airwaves, Art Linkletter, now in his 80s, still believes children say the darndest things. Art Linkletter's House Party, which aired on CBS from 1952 to 1969, was the forerunner of today's Kids Say the Darndest Things.

By John Crook
©TVData Features Syndicate

Bill Cosby may be the current host of the CBS Friday hit Kids Say the Darndest Things, but Art Linkletter first made that discovery more than half a century ago after recording a chat with his then-little son, Jack.

In the late 1930s, Linkletter, at the time the host of a big-band radio program, played a recording of a conversation with Jack for his listeners. The switchboard lit up with calls.

As the 85-year-old TV personality remembers it, "I told my wife, 'Honey, I'm the star and you're the producer.' Four kids later, we turned to the public school system."

The schools Linkletter refers to were the source of the children who appeared on Art Linkletter's House Party, the CBS hit that aired from 1952 to 1969.

The program featured a short daily segment in which the host chatted with children from Los Angeles schools.

"I wouldn't ask the teachers for their best or their smartest students," Linkletter says with a chuckle. "I would tell them to give me the student from whom they would love a few blessed hours of relief."

Even the chattiest kids could be intimidated by the lights, cameras and audience, Linkletter explains. "And a kid who is kind of shy would be under the chair entirely. So we went with the children who almost couldn't shut up."

Linkletter's show would send a stretch limousine to pick up the children and bring them to the studio.

En route, a school chaperon would eavesdrop on the conversation and try to scribble notes for Linkletter, such as, "Billy recently got a new dog."

Even so, the kids were unpredictable on camera.

"Sometimes I'd ask that kid, 'So, any new animals in your life?' and he'd look blank and go, 'No.' Either he forgot or didn't want to talk about it or he had just made the story up in the car," Linkletter recalls.

One thing he learned very quickly was never to ask a child a question that could be answered with a simple yes or no, because usually that's all you would get, Linkletter says. "It was better to ask questions like 'What do you think about this?' or 'What kind of animal would you like to be, and why?' "

At a time when adults weren't even allowed to say "pregnant" on TV, Linkletter explains, the usually rigid network censors were more lenient with children.

One little girl answered Linkletter's animal question by saying she wanted to be an octopus, so she could grab all the bad boys in the class with her "testicles" (she meant tentacles).

"I asked one little boy what he had done over the summer, and he said he had been in the hospital," Linkletter recalls. "I said, 'I'm sorry. What was wrong?' The little boy replied, 'Oh, I got circumcised.' "

Linkletter says today's children, starting at about age 8, are more sophisticated than earlier generations, but youngsters of 5 and 6 retain the simple perspective they've always had.

"Their world is their family, and they have the most wonderful way of expressing themselves," he says. "A little boy once asked me how old I was. I told him, and he asked, 'How high do you want to go?' "

"That's what I mean," the octogenarian concludes. "And they say things like that all the time."

HOROSCOPES

July 5-11

ARIES – March 21/April 20
A friendly conversation ends up causing you a lot of problems late in the week, Aries. Someone misinterprets your words and gets angry. Remain calm, and explain what you meant. While things will be tense for a while, everything will work out in the end. An old friend has a surprise for you. Enjoy it!

TAURUS – April 21/May 21
Control your temper early in the week. A business associate tries to bait you into an argument. Don't fall for it. Just keep your mind on what you have to do, and ignore him or her. That special someone gets called out of town. While you miss him or her, don't keep calling. He or she has important things to take care of.

GEMINI – May 22/June 21
You have a relaxing week ahead of you, Gemini. Enjoy it. Pamper yourself and splurge a little. Now is the time to do it, because things will get hectic very soon. A close friend has a question for you. While you may not want to answer it, you must. Just be honest, and everything will be OK.

CANCER – June 22/July 22
Keep your shoulder to the wheel this week, Cancer. You have a lot to do and very little time to do it all. People are counting on you, so don't get distracted by those around you. Loved ones have a favor to ask you. While it will be hard, you have to say no. They're not telling you everything about their plan.

LEO – July 23/August 23
Don't hold a grudge against a close friend. He or she never meant to cause you any problems. Accept his or her apology. A loved one needs romantic advice. While it's not your favorite topic to discuss with him or her, be supportive and helpful. Virgo plays an important role late in the week.

VIRGO – Aug 24/Sept 22
Accept only the best this week, Virgo. An acquaintance tries to pull a fast one on you. Don't let him or her get away with it. That special someone has a romantic evening planned for the two of you. Enjoy it now, because things will be hectic for both of you very soon.

LIBRA – Sept 23/Oct 23
Your working environment gets tense late in the week. Don't despair. Listen to what those around you have to say, and try to figure out what's going on. With a calm head, you can help things get back to normal. A friend takes you out on Friday.

SCORPIO – Oct 24/Nov 22
Don't wear your heart on your sleeve this week, Scorpio. The person to whom you're attracted finally responds to your advances, but don't seem too happy or eager. This is sure to scare him or her off. A loved one needs your help with a family problem. Be supportive.

SAGITTARIUS – Nov 23/Dec 21
A disagreement with a friend throws you off track early in the week. Try to stay focused on all that you have to do; don't keep thinking about the fight. The two of you will work things out before the week is over. That special someone drops by unexpectedly. He or she needs a shoulder to cry on. Be supportive.

CAPRICORN – Dec 22/Jan 20
Don't be shy when you meet an important business figure early in the week. Get yourself noticed, and try to speak with him or her. This is the perfect opportunity to advance your career. A close friend shares a secret with you. Keep it to yourself. Pisces plays a key role on Thursday.

AQUARIUS – Jan 21/Feb 18
You have your freedom this week, Aquarius, and you couldn't be happier. Spend time doing what you want to do, not what others tell you to do. This is your chance to focus on yourself. A family member gives you a treasured heirloom. Let him or her know how much you appreciate it.

PISCES – Feb 19/March 20
Laugh at everything that goes wrong early in the week. If you don't, you just may have to scream — that only would cause more problems. Do what you can to simplify your situation. Don't get discouraged, because things will get better soon.

IN FOCUS

Based on a true story, In the Blink of an Eye features Veronica Hamel as a successful filmmaker who takes the law into her own hands to help a friend in need. The dramatic TV movie airs Sunday, July 5, on ABC.

The filmmaker receives news her childhood friend (Mimi Rogers) is in prison, convicted in the murder of two police officers. Without having seen her friend in 30 years, the woman puts her career on hold to investigate the crime and prove her friend's innocence. Piper Laurie also stars.

PBS' P.O.V. series presents the story of Arthur Campbell Jr., a courageous man with disabilities fighting for a normal life in filmmaker Walter Brock's "If I Can't Do It." The movie airs Tuesday, July 7 (check local listings).

Born with cerebral palsy, Campbell spent the first 38 years of his life sheltered by his parents. The movie explores his determination to move out on his own and follows his work as an activist for people with disabilities. Included are interviews with Campbell, his parents and other activists.

TV PIPELINE

Q: In the theme song to South Park, what does Kenny sing? He tends to mumble. –Randy Wilde, San Francisco.

A: Kenny's mumblings are the subject of a lot of fan conjecture. If you go to the South Park Information Center Website (the address is www.beefcake.com), which Park creators Trey Parker and Matt Stone often visit, you'll find some pretty persuasive guesses about what Kenny says.

Unfortunately, they're all unprintable here.

Q: What was the name of the TV show about oil people that starred Richard Egan and Anne Seymour? –Angela F., Deland, Fla.

A: You're thinking of Empire, a Western drama that ran on NBC during the 1962-63 season. The show was canceled after that season, but Egan and his character, Jim Redigo, returned the following fall in a half-hour show called Redigo. It lasted only 13 episodes.

A: They're brother and sister.

Q: A good friend of mine insists that Cher was the actress who gave the gushing Oscar speech that went, "You like me! You really like me!" Please tell her it was Sally Field. –Kim Thore-Watts, Charlotte, N.C.

A: When Field accepted her second Oscar in 1984 for Places in the Heart, she made the Oscar speech that has haunted her ever since.

"This means so much more to me this time – I don't know why," Field said. "I think the first time I hardly felt it because it was all too new. I haven't had an orthodox career, and I wanted more than anything to have your respect.

Cartman, Kyle and Stan

"The first time I didn't feel it, but this time I feel it, and I can't deny the fact you like me. Right now, you LIKE me!"

Q: Who was the actress who played Todd's mother recently on Suddenly Susan? I say she used to be on L.A. Law, but someone else says she played Georgette on The Mary Tyler Moore Show. –Linda in Kamloops, B.C.

A: Although Georgia Engel of The Mary Tyler Moore Show did make a guest appearance on Working earlier this season, that was former L.A Law regular Susan Ruttan on Susan.

Q: Who did the voice of the robot on the old Lost in Space series? –Mike Franz, Erie, Pa.

A: That was Bob May, who repeated his voice role in the recent Lost in Space feature film.

Q: Please settle an argument: Are Donald and Kiefer Sutherland really father and son? –Anne via e-mail.

A: Yes.

HIGHLIGHTS

An airport police officer is one of many who witness the daily drama at London's Heathrow Airport. BBC's Airport, a three-part documentary, airs on PBS starting Thursday (check local listings).

Real-life Airport somewhere between comedy and disaster

By Suzanne Gill
©TVData Features Syndicate

It probably arrived in the United States via a flight from Heathrow.

That's one of the ironies of Airport, a summer-light three-part documentary scheduled for arrival on PBS Thursdays beginning July 9 (check local listings). Produced in 1996 by the BBC, the film's broadcast "master" copy for PBS' use in the United States was most likely shipped through London's Heathrow Airport, the world's busiest international terminus.

A lot of other things pass through Heathrow, too: a daily shipment of live eels, for example. Drug smuggling is a popular sport, and customs officers Cath Hall and Garth Powell spend their days checking for contraband.

Then there is the human freight. From the Queen and Mick Jagger to the humblest commoner, most pass through Heathrow on their way to somewhere else. Only the plainly drunk or disoriented are turned away.

The camera tags along as Anita Newcourt ushers the world's royalty through the airport's VIP entrance. Newcourt attends to every detail, from tea and faxes to squishy red carpets on wet tarmac.

President Clinton, the Duchess of York and the Sultan of Brunei merit Newcourt's attentions, while rock stars and archbishops go through the main terminal.

They are greeted by Fleet Street paparazzo Dennis Stone, on hand with flash strobe at any hour, doing a job even he seems to despise.

Heathrow's trouble-shooters include policeman Dave Kidd, security agent Jean-Marie Lavaillard and dispatcher Viv Eggins. Each is a study in patience as passengers vent their frustrations with flight delays, lost relatives, stuck elevators and the like.

Airport also follows the progress of 14 flight-attendant trainees and a group attending a "fear of flying" course.

The realism is nerve-jangling at times, but Airport gives a faithful rendering of events from the intersection of pathos and folly – the exact spot where the mundane task meets the photo opportunity. Then, like everything else at Heathrow, it moves on.

THE BUCK STARTS HERE.

Newspaper is usually the first place people go when considering a purchase. It's their primary source of advertising information.

Newspaper helps spark the local economy by putting dollars into circulation. And that's good for everyone, not just the retailer.

Because a strong local economy means lower property taxes, more jobs, tax support for community services and a better place to live.

Newspaper is more than just a smart place to advertise.

It's an integral part of our lives.

Newspaper. It delivers.
