TEX GUINAN SAYS 'BYE' TO CHICAGO AMID SHOTS

Police Squad Kills Four Men In Two Battles With Buffalo Automobile Thieves

Home Town Talk

By B. D. D.

The employment service of the U. S. department of labor is unable to report any substantial gains in employment in February but expects an upturn in the spring months. It points to planned expenditures of $1,500,000,000 for municipal and county highway improvements, and $3,250,000,000 to be expended in improvements by public utilities during 1930. Over much of the country construction work is pretty much at a standstill during January and February. Usually it begins to pick up in March and gets going in April. We can hope that the worst of the unemployment situation is over.

The federal bureau of labor statistics reports that the general level of wholesale prices for food descended to the lowest level in February since 1916. Retail prices followed the trend of wholesale prices. Based on 100 cents in 1926 the dollar in February had a purchasing power of 106 cents. Its something to have your dollar worth more even if you have fewer of them.

Soviet Russia becomes the second most important foreign market for American scientific and laboratory devices, according to the U. S. department of commerce. Our neighbor, Canada, holds first place. Watch Russia. There is a stronger urge among its people for advancement probably than exists in any other country. Russia—its government and its people—will make plenty of mistakes and some of them may be very grievous ones but the thing is that they are trying with splendid enthusiasm and courage to advance.

Temple, Okla., sells $45,000 municipal bonds at par. The proceeds are to be expended for improvements, $30,000 for water works extensions, $5,000 for a sewage disposal plant and $10,000 for a town hall and fire fighting equipment. These improvements will be started at an early date. They will make Temple a better place in which to live. Last fall a number of blocks of paving were completed in the business district of Temple. Talker would say, watch Temple too. He would say to watch any community or nation or people who are striving earnestly to improve their situation.

Farmers of the United States pay $800,000,000 in taxes annually, the bureau of agricultural economics of the department of agriculture finds. Thirty per cent of the net revenue of rented farms go to the payment of taxes. Farms operated by owners pay from 18⅛ to 31 per cent of their net returns for the support of the government. The bureau attributes much of the disproportionate tax cost to high assessments. The bureau has given the findings of its survey in a printed report.

One of the last acts of the legislature in its called session just ended was a vote to increase the pension of the married Confederate veterans who has been living continuously with his wife since 1900 to $50 per month. Single veterans and the widows of veterans are to receive $25 per month. The number who will be benefited by the increase will be comparatively small. Fifty dollars a month will go a long ways toward giving these aged veterans and their wives the necessities of life and giving them a sense of security that will comfort them in their declining years.

Albert B. Fall was convicted by a jury on a charge of having accepted $100,000 as a bribe from Edward L. Doheny. Edward L. Doheny was acquitted by a jury on a charge of having given the $100,000 as a bribe to Fall. Fall was convicted last year. Doheny was acquitted Saturday. The verdicts were returned in the same courtroom in Washington.

The verdicts may seem anomolous. They are. But verdicts as widely different are being returned in our courtrooms almost every day. With the same set of facts one jury may acquit and another jury may convict. Some may say that these variant verdicts prove the failure of the jury system and that it ought to be abolished. They do prove that justice is not exact. It never could be. It can be only proximate and sometimes is even not that. As individuals we vary one from another. Any group of individuals will reflect these variances. Humanity is always variant. That is one of the reasons why we have juries. It is the reason why verdicts are so often at variance. Instead of being arguments against the jury system they are the rather arguments for it.

Ours is an age of standardization. Forces are at work to standardize men and women. Much of our education is a straight jacket. The forces of custom and convention tend to draw the laces the tighter. We ought to be glad there is something human and errant about juries and their verdicts.

Here's a thought from Successful Farming:

In our life's search for happiness it is hard to learn that contentment is from within and it is not entirely dependent upon our circumstances or surroundings. He who makes the most of things around him may arrive at happiness in spite of his surroundings.

Car Crashes Fire Hydrant When Bullet Strikes Chauffeur

BUFFALO, N. Y., March 23. (AP)—Four men were killed and one was wounded early today in two encounters between police and men riding in stolen cars.

The wounded man escaped from the operating room at City hospital while the surgeons about to operate on him for two bullet wounds. He climbed down a fire escape.

In both clashes with the police the men in the stolen cars opened fire on the police auto squad machine, Lieut. Arthur D. Britt, in command, said.

Eight Cars Stolen

Eight automobiles were reported stolen within a short time before midnight Saturday and Lieutenant Britt and three of his men cruised the east side in search of them.

About 1:30 a. m. one of the missing automobiles was spotted. Driving alongside, Britt ordered the driver to pull in to the curb. Instead of complying the driver speeded away and fired at the police car.

The police returned the fire and after the first volley the stolen car swerved into the curb and knocked off a water hydrant. The occupant, identified as Walter Krajewski, was thrown through the front of the car. He died immediately.

Meet Second Car

After reporting to police headquarters, Lieutenant Britt and his crew returned to the east side. In Genesee street they met another stolen car.

The police car and the stolen machine were going in opposite directions and before the officers' car made a turn the other automobile, a roadster with four men in the seat, was speeding away. Their effort to shake off the pursuing police car was unsuccessful. Lieutenant Britt said all except the man at the wheel opened fire on the auto squad.

The battle continued for several blocks, through side thoroughfares

Pete McKenzie Jury Fails to Find Verdict

SAN ANTONIO, March 23. (AP)—After more than 30 hours deliberation on the fate of John M. (Pete) McKenzie, a jury in the 94th district court had not arrived at a verdict tonight.

McKenzie, convicted slayer of Detective Chief Sam Street in San Antonio in September, 1927, was saved from the electric chair when he was found insane. Dr. George Powell, superintendent of the Terrell state hospital, field an affidavit attesting a belief that McKenzie is sane.

If the jury finds McKenzie sane, he will be sent to the death cell at Huntsville. If he is found insane he will be returned to some state hospital.

Naval Parley Sleeps Through Dull Sunday

LONDON, March 23. (US)—The situation remained all quiet on the disarmament front today.

With France now definitely withdrawn from the ranks of the negotiating statesmen, the balance of the assembled naval delegates found Sunday a dull day, indeed—at least as far as any changes of rousing the parley out of its lethargy are concerned.

Sheriff Takes Four Prisoners To Texas Pen and Brings Them Back

Officials at Huntsville Refuse to Admit Tarrant County Quartet Under Recent Order

HUNTSVILLE, Texas, March 23. (AP)—Four Tarrant county convicts were offered to the Texas state penitentiary here today and refused by Warden E. F. Harrell. It was the first test of the recent order of the penitentiary commission to the warden to refuse any more prisoners because of alleged overcrowded conditions.

Three members of the commission were at the prison. They explained they had stopped there on their way to a meeting of the penitentiary commission at Houston tomorrow, and learned, through a long distance telephone call, that Sheriff J. R. Wright of Fort Worth was en route with his men.

Meeting on Porch

The warden met the sheriff on the front porch.

"Warden, I have four men here for you, and here are the commitment papers," the sheriff said.

"I'm sorry, sheriff, but I cannot accept them," the warden replied.

The penitentiay commissioners, Chairman W. A. Paddock of Houston, Fred Horton of Greenville and Lee Simmons of Sherman, explained that the prison was overcrowded.

Simmons explained that all the farms were crowded and gave the Sugarland farm, with 300 inmates crowded into a place built for 200, as an example.

Warden Harrell told the sheriff he had 128 prisoners in one of the prison buildings intended to house 93. He then showed the sheriff through the penitentiary.

Sheriff Wright left on the return trip accompanied by a deputy and the four prisoners who were James Kelly, W. C. Vest, Bobby Wells and Arnold Jacobs, each under two-year sentences.

Commissioner Horton expressed the hope Gov. Dan Moody soon will sign the prison appropriation bill so it will be possible to relieve prison congestion in 90 days.

CONTEMPT ACTION MAY BE RESULT

FORT WORTH, March 23. (AP)—Tarrant county's test of the state prison board's ruling against accepting more prisoners at Huntsville because of alleged crowded conditions of the state penitentiary having met Sunday with refusal of prison authorities there to accept four convicts, Sheriff J. R. Wright and his two deputies are expected back in Fort Worth Monday with the prisoners.

The test of the prison board ruling was initiated by Judge George E. Hosey of criminal district court of Tarrant county. He could not be reached tonight for a statement as to his fuutre plans, but he has been quoted as saying contempt proceedings might be brought against the prison warden.

BYRD'S PARTY ON WAY HOME

City of New York Leaves New Zealand Port

DUNEDIN, New Zealand, March 23. (AP)—Carrying 50 members of the Byrd antarctic expedition homeward, the bark, City of New York, flag ship of Rear Admiral Richard E. Byrd, sailed this afternoon from Otago harbor for Tahiti, en route for New York.

Admiral Byrd was among a crowd of more than 10,000 that thronged the wharves to say goodbye. He is remaining here to complete business affairs and will travel by mail-steamer homeward, rejoining the City of New York at the Panama canal.

Pushing out into a gray mist and bucking a stiff easterly breeze, the Byrd flag-ship, after 16 months in the waters under the Southern Cross, started the expedition's journey home from its conquest of the south pole by air, and its triumps in the fields of exploration and scientific research.

The steamship Eleanor Bolling will follow in a few days. Captain Melville and the crew of the City of New York have become particularly popular here since making it their base on arriving in November, 1928.

Captain Melville was entertained by the master mariners of the port and also by a big gathering of Maoris. One Maori chief expressed his delight that such small craft as City of New York were able to venture successfully into the far regions of the southern seas.

Mellon Weathers Nine Years In Treasury to Mark 75th Birthday

By JAMES P. SELVAGE

WASHINGTON, March 23. (AP)—The dean of the Hoover cabinet—Andrew Mellon—celebrates tomorrow his 75th birthday anniversary.

Two weeks ago he observed his ninth anniversary as secretary of the treasury, the only man except one to hold the portfolio so long.

At an age when most men are content to sit by the fireside, the secretary whom his friends describe as "the greatest since Alexander Hamilton" carries the financial burdens of the world's richest nation quietly, implacidity—almost lightly.

Backward and forward between his Massachusetts avenue apartment and his office often three times daily, Washington sees the slender little man with the iron gray mustache walking briskly along the streets. For nine years the political swirls have surged about him almost savagely at times. But to all appearances the Andrew Mellon who came unostentatiously from Pittsburgh nine years ago to take a portfolio in the Harding cabinet has not changed.

Public speaking irks him, leaves him a little embarrassed, and as a

SURVEY GIVES DEMOS HOUSE LEAD IN 1931

Byrns Sees 70 Victories When November Votes Are Polled

PROSPECTS SCANNED

North and West Will Swell Gains From South, Leader Says

By CECIL B. DICKSON

WASHINGTON, March 23. (AP)—The flat prediction that President Hoover will face the problem of dealing with a Democratic controlled house the last two years of the present administration was made today by Representative Byrns of Tennessee, chairman of the Democratic congressional committee.

The assertion was based on a political survey by Byrns. He predicted the Democrats would increase their number in the house in the fall elections by 70 members. With the 165 members now, they need but 53 additional votes to give them a total of 218 seats in the house of 435 members. The Republicans have a majority of 102, with one Farmer-Laborer and several vacancies.

"Not only will the Democrats regain 30 seats lost during the 1928 elections," the Tennesseean said, "but from the survey made we conservatively estimate that we will gain 70 seats, and there is an excellent possibility of our taking 20 more."

Blames Conditions

Byrns declared the "failure of the administration's efforts to successfully carry out one major project within an entire year, the economic depression, the obvious failure of the London arms conference, and nationwide unemployment conditions, have created dissatisfaction throughout the country and the voters will register their protest this fall."

Noting it was customary for the Democrats to "stage a come-back in off year elections," Chairman Snell of the house rules committee, said the Democrats would regain between 30 and 40 seats. Snell said that the Republicans now held that number which normally were in the Democratic column. The New Yorker added that Republican control of the house would continue during the last two years of the Hoover administration.

Northern Gains

The Democrats, Byrns said, would gain seats largely in the northern, mid-western and western states, in addition to those expected to be regained in the southern and political border states.

"New England states, particularly Massachusetts and Connecticut, Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, several western states and California and Washington," Byrns said, "undoubtedly will send Democrats to the 72nd congress instead of Republicans. We will regain the seats lost in North Carolina, Virginia, Kentucky and Oklahoma, and will pick up a few votes in Missouri, Michigan, one in Utah, and several scattered seats."

Captain Frank M. Hawks' Transcontinental Glider Flight To Pause In City

Capt. Frank M. Hawks, noted American flier and holder of the dawn-to-dusk transcontinental air flight record, left Wichita Falls early Sunday morning for El Paso after changing his plans to remain here until Monday morning. Captain Hawks took off in a J-5 Waco of the Texas company, for which he is director of aviation in the entire United States. He will fly to San Diego, Calif.

His visit to Wichita Falls, the second within the last two years, will be repeated within the next 10 days when Captain Hawks will land here in a glider attached to an airplane. He is expected to arrive here again early next week, probably Tuesday, April 1.

Flight to Start Sunday

From San Diego next Sunday Captain Hawks will begin the first coast-to-coast glider tour ever attempted, according to a dispatch Sunday to The Record News from the United Press.

Attached by a 500-foot tow rope to a biplane, Captain Hawks will pilot a glider in which he will carry the first consignment of glider mail ever sent across the continent, a 10-pound bundle which he will deliver at the New York postoffice.

The first "air train" will pass through 12 states and over 60 cities. He will make 20 stops along the 2,800-mile route, each of which will necessitate casting off the tow rope and gliding to earth. Captain Hawks will reach New York on April 6 and from a high altitude above Central park, will glide into Van Cortland park, 10 miles distant.

Franklin to Be Passenger

The plane will be piloted by J. D. (Duke) Jernigan Jr., and will carry as a passenger Wallace Franklin, one of the builders of the glider.

The glider, which bears the name of "Eaglet," has a wing span of 50 feet and is the first cabin glider ever constructed. It will be equipped with a radio receiving set, in order that Hawks may have entertainment during his flight. A telephone line from the plane to the glider will also be installed in order that Hawks and Jernigan may communicate with one another.

The flight will start from Lindbergh field in San Diego and the first stop for fuel will be made at Yuma, Ariz. Other stops for fuel and overnight will be made at Phoenix, and Tucson, Ariz.; Lordsburg, N. M.; El Peso, Pecos, Midland, Sweetwater and Wichita Falls, Texas; Oklahoma City and Tulsa, Okla.; Springfield, Mo.; East St. Louis, Ill.; Terre Haute and Indianapolis, Ind.; Columbus and Cleveland, Ohio, and Buffalo, Elmira and New York City.

Norther Tumbles Mercury Rapidly

A strong wind out of the north, which struck Wichita Falls shortly after mid-night Sunday night brought a sudden drop in temperature, sending the thermometer down to 55 degrees, 15 points lower than the high mark for the day.

The mercury began falling a little after sundown Sunday, slipping gradually lower until the wind brought the abrupt drop. Reports from the Panhandle told of colder weather there, accompanied by high wind.

Fliers Protest Paying Gas Taxes for Roads

CHICAGO, March 23. (UP)—Governors of 48 states were asked tonight to pity the poor aviator who has to pay a tax on the gasoline he uses, only to see the money go to improve roads he doesn't use.

Frank Phillips, president of the Phillips Petroleum company and aviation enthusiast, wired all the governors urging they consider adoption of a uniform policy of taxation of aircraft gasoline. He said avition used 40,000,000 gallons of gasoline last year, paid taxes on nearly all of it, and got nothing in return. He suggested taxes collected on aviation gasoline be used to improve airparts instead of automobile roads.

Fascists Celebrate Anniversary of Order

ROME, March 23. (AP)—With Fascist demonstrations of party power and unity in every city and large town, Italy today celebrated the eleventh anniversary of the foundation of the "Fascist," the combat units from which the Fascist party arose.

Fascist secretaries in all districts read a message from Premier Mussolini in which the Duce declared that during 11 years Fascism had prevailed over a thousand difficulties of every kind, but that many more no less grave awaited it.

Chillicothe Woman Out To Be Mayor

Special to The Record News.

CHILLICOTHE, Texas, March 23.—Mrs. A. G. Jameson, a leading business woman of Chillicothe for the last several years, has announced her candidacy for election as mayor in the coming city election. She will oppose Mayor Thurman, present incumbent, who has announced for re-election.

The new candidate expressed surprise that her announcement should occasion comment.

"A woman mayor is no new thing," she declared. "Lets talk about the business of the town instead of the sex of the candidates."

FRANKLIN TO RENEW FIGHT

'We're Not Licked,' Says Ardmore Leader

TULSA, Okla., March 23. (AP)—Wirt Franklin of Ardmore, president of the Independent Petroleum Association of America, who led the unsuccessful oil tariff fight in Washington, predicted here today the independent oil men's campaign "eventually" would bring a duty on petroleum imports.

"We lost the tariff fight," he said, "but we are far from being licked. We have just begun to fight for our rights, and the campaign is to be reorganized and continued. Eventually we will get a tariff on oil."

Franklin stopped in Tulsa on his way home from Washington. He was accompanied by Joseph I. Cromwell, vice president of the association, and Russell B. Brown, secretary of the Washington oil tariff headquarters.

The association will be reorganized, Franklin said, for the renewed fight.

GUN PLAY ENDS HOSTESS' LAST NIGHT IN CLUB

Lessee of 'Green Mill' Reseat Receives Slugs From Three Pistols

ROW OVER RENTALS

Two Men Booked by Police While Third Escapes Arrest

CHICAGO, March 23. (AP)—Leon Sweitzer was shot and seriously wounded early today in the office of the Green Mill Night club while Texas Guinan delivered her valedictory at her farewell party on the floor below.

Sweitzer, his chest and left leg and arm punctured by slugs, told police the shots had been fired by Harry A. Voller, proprietor of the Green Mill, Arthur Reed, his floor manager, and an unidentified assailant following an argument over the club lease.

About 80 patrons, friends of Miss Guinan, stage folk and contemporary entertainers gathered for the most part to bid her good luck in her forthcoming New York appearance, did not hear the shots.

Good-Bye to Chi

Texas was concluding her parting address with "good-bye, folks, you can always reach me through a New York police court," when Sweitzer was carried across the floor by club attendants and rushed to a hospital.

Voller and Reed, accompanied by their attorneys, at the Summerdale police station denied they had participated in the shooting. They were held on open charges.

Miss Guinan also went to the station to protest her innocence of connection with the affair. She was not held, although she remained at headquarters for five hours.

New Kind of Record

"This is my first record at this police station," she said. "I usually make them for the talking-machine people."

Sweitzer said he held a lease on the quarters occupied by the club but had sublet to Voller under the condition of club remain in operation until May 1. He learned Voller intended to violate the agreement by closing the place, he said, and had gone to Voller's office to demand $2,000 as full payment of the rent.

The argument started in the club lobby, Sweitzer said, but suddenly Reed struck him with a pistol and with Voller and a man he did not

France Blames A. E. F. For Potato Bug Scourge

BORDEAUX, March 23. (UP)—The A. E. F., which has been blamed for many things since it landed in France in 1917, is now accused of bringing to France the potato-bug scourge.

Until the soldiers came from America, France had never seen a potato bug, but now those insects are ruining crops over the whole of the southwest of France. Since a potato bug cannot fly the ocean, cannot swim and cannot be carried on potatoes, the French government is convinced some potato bugs came in the baggage of the American army.

Wichita Mechanic Dies of Broken Spine Three Months After Accident

Wilburn R. McSpadden, 32, who had been confined in a local hospital for nearly three months with a broken spine sustained in an accident in the Dixon Motor company shop, died about 10:45 o'clock Sunday morning at the hospital.

Physicians had held no hope for his recovery since the time of the accident but he had maintained a spark of life in spite of the fact that the spinal cord was snapped, with no possibility of its growing back together, they said. The accident occurred Jan. 3 when an automobile, hoisted by a chain above the floor in the Dixon company shop, fell and crushed McSpadden's back. He had been working on the machine.

Survivors include the widow, his parents, Mr. and Mrs. George T. McSpadden of Harlingen, Texas; four brothers, Bert L. McSpadden of Earlsberry, Okla., George M. and James T. McSpadden, both of Megargel, Texas, and Charles Turner McSpadden of St. Louis, Mo.; and one sister, Mrs. Elizabeth Robinson of Harlingen.

Funeral services will be held at 3 o'clock Tuesday afternoon from the chapel of the Merkle Undertaking company. Interment will be in Rosemont Burial park.

TEXAS GUINAN BEFORE POLICE

Shooting Ends Hostess' Farewell Party

know carried him to the second floor office. The bickering was concluded there, he said, when the stranger shot him through the leg and the others fired on him as he turned to flee.

Bombing Resurrected

Police sought to connect Voller and Reed with the recent bombing of the Little club, owned by Sweitzer after he relinquished the management of the Green Mill. They also believed they may soon clear the mystery of the slaying of Joe Cada, racketter shot to death Feb. 2 shortly after he left the Green Mill with two other men.

Pat Roche, chief investigator of the state's attorney's office, said a report that Cada was slain because of a plan to kidnap Miss Guinan for ransom, had been investigated but that no evidence to bear out the theory had been uncovered.

Miss Guinan's contract as chief hostess at the club was to terminate in two weeks although she had announced she would leave Wednesday for New York.

Tells of Shooting

Sweitzer went to the cabaret with his own guard, "Solly" Marks, and his sweetheart, Lorraine Hayes, until last Wednesday employed in the show at the Green Mill, a protege of Tex Guinan's, brought here by the latter from New York.

Upon their arrival at the Green Mill, Sweitzer said:

"Just wait in the car for me. I'll only be a minute. I've got to see Voller about the rent."

Sweitzer said he saw Voller and Reed seated at a table, drinking coffee, and held this conversation with them:

Sweitzer: I hear you're going to close.

Voller: Yes, this is Texas' last appearance here. We close next Saturday.

Sweitzer: Who is going to pay the rent for April?

Voller: I'm not.

Sweitzer: No? Guess again. I'll be around for the receipts for tonight's business and you'd better see that they're here.

Voller: Don't be like that. I'm not going to pay.

Sweitzer: We'll see.

Covered by Guns

At this point, according to Sweitzer, some one called Voller and he and Reed edged away, leaving Sweitzer seated.

"The next moment I felt three pistols pressed into my back," said Sweitzer, later, from a cot in Lake View hospital. "I was told to walk quietly upstairs.

"We stepped into the private office, only a few feet from the nearest tables. I half turned, then there were three shots."

One bullet struck him in the left chest, was deflected by a rib, perhaps saving his life; another hit his arm and the third pierced his leg.

"So you're tought, eh?" some one said.

"I started outside, followed by someone. I think he intended to finish me. Lieutenant Lang grabbed me and called an officer to get me into a car and drive to the hospital.

Repeats Identification

"Voller and Reed were two of the three that shot me. I recognized the other, too, but vaguely, so I can't name him."

Face to face with Voller and Reed in the hospital, Sweitzer repeated his identification.

Texas Guinan, following Voller's arrest, made every effort to obtain his release, mainly on the grounds he "is a wonderful man." She offered bail. This was refused on the grounds Sweitzer may die, making the charge murder. She then telephoned a score of politicians, seeking influential aid.

Texas Agleam

Miss Guinan arrived at the Summerdale station, adorned in fine furs, a costly evening gown, and agleam with jewels, lolling back in a Rolls Royce, driven by a liveried chauffeur.

"I've got the Rolls," she saluted the officers. "Who's got coffee?"

She sat down and offered to give a record of herself, adding, "I usually make records for the talking machine companies, and get paid for them."

"Nice outfit you're wearing," said a policeman.

"All paid for, too," she said.

"Where can we reach you, after you leave here?"

"Any courtroom, New York City."

Then, as she was departing,

"I certainly closed with a bang, didn't I?"

Rangers Unable to Substantiate Blackmail Theory in Fire Plot

FAIRFIELD, Texas, March 23. (AP)—Investigating officers today sought verification of their belief that blackmail played a part in the perplexing case in which Mrs. Sarah Jane Dodd, 50, and her son, Tommie, 30, were charged with forgery yesterday and Miss Wilma Jones, 23, claimed some one attempted to burn her to death Wednesday night while she was here pending trial of a forgery charge against her.

The charges against Mrs. Dodd and her son were brought in connection with alleged forgery of a $250 check on G. S. Moore, business man of Oakwood. Moore was charged with arson after the fire Wednesday night.

Miss Jones yesterday had not changed her story that someone entered her hotel room, bound and gagged her and fired the mattress of her bed, and that she saved herself by rolling off the bed and knocking against the wall to attract help.

Mrs. Dodd today was released under $500 bond but Tom Dodd was held for further investigation. The state charged that as accomplices of Miss Jones, they schemed to extract money from Moore.

'Glory of the Church' Subject Of Dr. Goodrich in Sunday Sermon

Church Will Lose Power if It Ever Forgets Divine Mission, Congregation at First Methodist Told

"Kinship means weakness through likeness," and "Kingship means strength through unlikeness," said Dr. Robert E. Goodrich in his sermon on "The Glory of the Church," at the First Methodist church Sunday morning.

"The church is the divine purpose and passion organized through human agency for a world's redemption. It was begun when God called Abraham to become the father of a people through whom His revelations were to given to the world. The church received her cornerstone when Jesus Christ, the son of God, 'took upon Him the form of a servant and was made in the likeness of men'."

"The church's misison shall end when the church militant on earth becomes the church triumphant in heaven and 'every knee shall bow and every tongue shall confess that Jesus Christ is Lord to the glory of God the Father.' The mission of the church is not to assimilate but to regenerate; she is not to be conformed but she is to be transformed."

Wesley and Voltaire

In making this point clear Dr. Goodrich compared the lives and beliefs of Voltaire and John Wesley, using as an illustration two streams in which they flowed and the termination of their existence.

"The church's true relationship to the world is not kinship, but kingship. As applied to the church kinship and kingship are mutually exclusive to the extent that the church takes on kinship and to the extent that she loses kingship. Kinship with the world means that the church partakes of the world and kingship means that the church is not a subject of the world, but that she is supreme above the world. The church in the world is good because it was the divine plan but the world in the church thwarts God's purpose because it robs God's church of its power."

In making this statement, Dr. Goodrich compared the world and the church with a ship on the sea, which, he said was useful and masterful and masterful, but when the terful, but when the sea gets into the ship, she "flounders in impotency and despair."

"If the moon should dip down out of the heavenly orbit to bathe her form in the waters of the seas, she would lose her power to move the seas, but while she holds to her divinely appointed way, in her serenity and beauty, she draws after her all the mighty tides of our plant, so, if the day should ever dawn when the church forgets her divine mission and comes down to the world, that day will be the time when the church will lose her power."

Dr. Goodrich will continue his sermons through Friday. His subject Monday evening will be "Bartering in Pearl." Monday has been set aside as young people's night.

POLICE SLAY FOUR THIEVES

and back to Genesee street again. Then bullets from a police riot gun struck the man at the wheel and the car swerved into a pole.

Driver Killed

The man at the wheel, Henry Pistrowski, was killed and the three others were wounded. The injured men were taken to the City hospital. Two of them, later identified as John Dzazdzynski and Edward Dombkiewicz, died on the operating table. The other man, apparently badly wounded, escaped from the emergency operating room while the surgeons were attending to the others.

Edward Dombkiewicz, one of the dead men, is a brother of Peter Dombkiewicz, recently sentenced to life as a member of the "blond" bandit gang. Peter caused a sensation at his trial by stabbing one of the complainants while they were before the court.

Krajewski, the first man killed, is said by the police to have been wanted for the slaying of a policeman during the holdup of a chain store two months ago.

'RICH' FLOWERS CARRY HONORS

Kahn, Marshall Field and Like Gardens Shown

By SAM LOVE

NEW YORK, March 23. (UP)—The poor little rich flowers that bloom before spring, at the behest of Mrs. Otto H. Kahn, Mrs. Marshall Field and others only mildly affected by unemployment situations, are in spirited competition with each other this week to win fame and prizes for their owners.

Some thousands of them are entered in the 17th international flower show at the Grand Central palace and every little tulip and sweet pea is in there trying to bring home the bacon for Mrs. Kahn, Mrs. Field, J. P. Morgan or whomsoever's garden it was transplanted from.

Spirited Contest

There have been some spirited contests. In addition, the whole affair is very pretty—much better looking, for instance, than a dog show or a six-day bicycle race—and it gives the public a rare opportunity to see how the other half lives. Several of the competitors, including Mrs. Kahn and Mrs. Marshall Field, have transplanted their sections of their private gardens to the show, statuary and all. The effect is much like the privilege of peeping over John D. Rockefeller's back fence.

There are $40,000 worth of prizes exclusive of loving cups, medals and ribbons and the competition is keen enough for the most sporting. Mr. Morgan has had only fair luck, so far. Mrs. John T. Pratt ruined his chances in the cyclamen competition and Mrs. F. E. Lewis and Mrs. Marshall Field ran his potted lilliums back into third money. But the Morgan lilies of the valley came through away ahead of the field.

Also, Mrs. Daniel Guggenheim's tulips were a sensation, beating even Mrs. Payne Whitney's right straight through.

Yellow and Orange Garden

Mrs. Kahn's garden has a yellow and orange color scheme and the thousands of hol polloi who have gaped at it since the show opened would have entered through a white fence gate and proceeded along a flagstone walk flanked by an evergreen hedge and beds of yellow iris, orange wallflowers, tulips, pink azeleas and other spring bloom—if they had been allowed to. Fortunately for the Kahn azeleas, they weren't.

Mrs. Whitney has a pan in her garden—the kind of a pan that pipes—and Mrs. Marshall Field has a fountain backed by lilacs and flanked by dogwood trees.

A good many of the winners in the flower competitions are already aware of their good fortune because their yachts are in most cases equipped with wireless.

result his appearance on the rostrum have been infrequent. Society affairs on a large scale appeal to him little more and he is seldom seen at the larger capital parties. He enjoys a quiet dinner party, either at his own apartment where he lives alone, or with congenial friends.

Shy of the public and retiring by nature, loathe to have his personal affairs discussed, Mr. Mellon from the outset of his official life has been the target for repeated attacks in congress. He has been upbraided by the wets for his enforcement of prohibition and condemned by the drys for alleged laxity. Taxation, the soldier's bonus, war debts settlements, farm relief, tax refunds, charges that he was holding office in violation of the law prohibiting any one engaged in trade from serving as secretary of the treasury—all have drawn fire of political enemies.

Through it all he has gone steadily about his job of keeping America's finances straight and reducing public debt. He has paid litlle attenfion to his assailants and seldom has answered them. And, taking life calmly as he does, he returns to his native city to observe his birthday apparently little the worse for the nine years of turbulent life in the capital.

Woman's Forum To Present Artist Program Wednesday

Some . . . new in lyceum entertainment comes to Wichita Falls when Mu . . . y's Concert company, a group of five artists composed of a mixed qu'rtet and pianist, will present a program of both classical and semi-popular music at the Woman's Forum clubhouse Wednesday evening at 8 o'clock.

A group of artists, all young, good looking and alive with stage personality, will give a varied and high class program. The 1928-29 revue of this company went over with a claim. The variety in the program and the artistic stage setting met nothing but words of praise.

Just as much enthusiasm has been shown over the new song revue. The program opens in concert form and the closing numbers will carry hits from all the late successes with the prettiest of costuming and lighting. One of the finest stage directors in America, it is said, is carried by this company, so the stage effects are unusual works of art.

Cathedral choir numbers, where the best sacred musical numbers will be given, will alternate with a college glee club and numbers in costume with special scenery from the best hits of the season.

The Mulvaney Concert company comes to the forum on the artists' program calendar. Members will be admitted on their white membership cards and tickets will be on sale at Renfro's drug store beginning Monday morning at $1 for non-members.

Mrs. Claude Woods is general chairman of arrangements, and hostesses announced are Mesdames O. E. Nichols, Ben Bell, William Young, J. V. Howell, C. Y. Tully, W. M. Priddy, C. D. Shamburger, Horrace Robbins, C. E. Basham, F. L. Mercer, Harry Karlsberg, Howard Renfro, F. E. Van Wormer, J. C. A. Guest, and Misses Dorothy Greathouse and Inez Rudy.

PEEPS AT PEOPLE

By MRS. L. N. CASON

A group of women, many of them with gray hair, dressed as children Friday morning and put aside womanhood for a brief half hour.

They acted out the Friday afternoon entertainment in a country school before their Girl Reserve daughters in the audience, and we do not believe the roars of laughter meant the girls were ashamed of mothers.

Time really flew! It is always fun to "play like."

Men and women go through maturity in the same way; work to be done; bills to be paid; people to be seen; jounreys to be made; worry to be borne. How rarely hours are found that are altogether without clouds.

School of today is not like school of yesterday. But then today is not like yesterday. There are millions of people living who feel a guilty sensation (all yesterday's), when they throw a newspaper or any fluttering object loose upon the street—just for fear they'll make a horse run away.

Breaking loose from a past generation is a hard thing to do. One outgrows high stiff collars, wide full skirts; but some of the inhibitions that went with them hang on for a long, long time.

Weather isn't the same in a way. On the front page of a recent paper a corner weather forecast read "Partly cloudy tonight and Saturday; warmer Saturday." One headline read, "Blizzard Fails to Arrive" and another, "Sign of Spring Belie Cold Wind as Robins Chirp," while outside a raw cold wind blew and a dull gray sky and heavy coats mocked at the flowers.

In the '90's, weathermen weren't daring adventurers with words that this century has developed.

An no one would have thought of facing the world with a "Believe It or not" column.

In the cynicism born of a cold, we sometimes read paragraphs from such columns and wonder what's the use.

What good, for instance, did it do for a man to stand balanced 28 minutes on his head? Anyone would get tired looking at him and we know he got tired.

And as to that 75-year-old man who has shucked 66,000,000 oysters in his life, we believe by the time we're that age, we will have swept that many floors.

Positively Others Will Benefit as He Did

"If Orgatone (Argotane) does for others what it has for members of my family, and I have every confidence it will, they will be more than satisfied with the results," said Mrs. E. E. Glasscock, wife of a well known Sherman man and employe of the Frisco Railway company, while in conversation at her home, 1006 North Porter avenue.

"My husband has been bothered several years with stomach trouble and my daughter has been troubled with indigestion," continued Mrs. Glasscock. "They had to be careful of their diet and even then they would suffer from their meals. It seemed my husband could not feel good at all and daughter was in a rundown condition.

"Recently Orgatone (Argotane) was called to our attention, so many people were telling the beneficial results gained from taking this medicine that they both started into take it themselves. Today my husband is feeling better than he has for years. He can eat most anything he wants and it does not seem to bother him, his appetite is better. My daughter's appetite has improved and she can eat all she wants to without having the pains of indigestion that used to bother her and she has picked up wonderfully. My husband is speaking of Orgatone (Argotane), says, 'I certainly can say a good word for it and am satisfied that if others will take it who are bothered with stomach ailments they are bound too.'"

Way to Get At a Cold Is Through the Bowels

As soon as you catch cold, the pores close; perspiration is checked. Gases and waste can't escape through the skin. That's why your doctor's first advice in case of colds is a mild laxative like cascara. Medical authorities agree it actually strengthens bowel muscles. You get cascara in its most pleasant form in candy Cascarets.

Remember this when you catch cold; whenever breath is bad; tongue coated; or you're headachy, bilious, constipated.

Why resort to harsher things when Cascarets activate the bowels so quickly, so harmlessly and pleasantly—and cost only a dime?—Adv.

Few Middle-Aged Men Happy With Flapper Wives

Shall the Middle-Aged Wife Divorce Her Husband So That He Can Marry a Flapper?—Why Money Is the Poorest Thing for Which a Girl Can Marry.

Dear Miss Dix—We have been married 24 years and have got along amiably and pleasantly together. When we were married we were a poor boy and girl, but we were both ambitious and not afraid of work, and so we have prospered, each of us doing our share, and now at middle age we are well off and should be happy. But all of a sudden my husband has discovered that we are not congenial and "have nothing in common," and that we should get a divorce so that he can marry a young girl with whom he has become infatuated. He demands that I should get out and make my own living, I am 42.

Is it fair for me to have to give up my home that I have helped earn and surrender my husband to a younger woman after giving the best years of my life to his service? He doesn't find any fault with me. He merely says I don't understand him as this girl does, and that he will be happier with her than with me. Is there any way to make a man like that see reason.

—MRS. X.

Answer—None except experience, and its lesson comes too late to do any one any good. The disaster has happened, and it does not even serve as a warning to any other middle-aged man who is taken by a pretty flapper and who thinks he can find happiness in swapping an old wife for a new one.

When men look around among their acquaintances who have wrecked their homes and discarded the wives of their youth for girls young enough to be their daughters, they see that in almost every case it has brought misery instead of the happiness he expected to the man, but that doesn't prevent them from indulging in the same folly. They are sure that somehow, some way, their case is going to be an exception, and that all they need to restore their youth and make them boys again is to get a young wife, and that with her marriage will be a blissful romance, a grand sweet song, with never a discordant note to mar its harmony.

Of course it doesn't work out that way. It couldn't in the very nature of things. To begin with, unless a man is a conscienceless villain, and generally he is nothing of the sort, he finds out that you can't build a new house of happiness on the wrecks of an old one. Also he finds out that he can't shut the door on a cruel and wrong thing he has done and forget it. Conscience is the skeleton at his feast. Do what he will he cannot forget the wife he has betrayed, the children he has forsaken.

Then he finds that marriage is no fountain of youth into which he can plunge and come forth a boy again. The little flare of youth that made him think that his wife was too old for him dies down, and when he finds himself united to a girl half his age he realizes that she is too young for him. He doesn't want to jump around and play around as she does. He doesn't want to dance and go on wild parties. He wants to stay at home and rest. His point of view, his code of conduct, the very things he knows are of one generation, while hers are of another. They disagree on a thousand points simply because their traditions are of different eras.

And he finds out, 99 times out of a hundred, that when a young girl marries a middle-aged man she does it because of what he can give her. She is tired of work and tired of poverty and she wants a fine house and cars and fine clothes. She wants a sugar papa instead of a husband, and she lets him pay the bill while she dances with boys who are lithe and young as she is, and has dates with sheiks while husband is working in his office to make the money she throws away.

When a man says he has "nothing in common" with the wife to whom he has been married for 24 years, he simply befools himself. Why, he has more in common with her than he can ever possibly have with any other human being. They have the memories of their youth; of the years they worked and struggled shoulder to shoulder; of pinching economies, of little treats, of hopes and plans and dreams that they dreamed together.

They have the memories of newborn babes that they cradled in their arms, of sick beds that they watched by and prayed over, of coffins that they wept over, of boys and girls growing up about them. They have the memories of old friends, of old ways. They can say endlessly to each other, "Do you remember?"

They have in common the same standards of conduct, the same habits, even the same tastes in food. What other woman in the world could ever have as much in common with him as the woman who has lived with him for years and adjusted her life to his?

As for a man saying that the wife to whom he has been married for 24 years doesn't understand him, that is arrant nonsense. He may not know it, but she knows him far better than he knows himself. She knows every turn of his mind. She knows his every weakness, his every vanity, just as well as she knows how many lumps of sugar he likes in his coffee or his taste in neckties.

It is the new wives with whom men have nothing in common. It is the young wives of old husbands who do not understand them, as nearly every man who divorces his old wife to marry a flapper finds out to his sorrow.

Floral Heights Epworth Group On '29 Honor Roll

The Floral Heights Epworth Young People formed one of the 435 groups out of 1615 societies of young people in Southern Methodism to attain the honor roll in 1929. This was announced Sunday evening when an interesting program from the Young People's bulletin of March was given by Helen Simpson's group at the meeting of the Epworth young people at Floral Heights church, with Helen Simpson leader.

Helen Berry opened the meeting with the Bible lesson, and sentence prayers followed, led by Helen Simpson and closed by Mrs. George Truitt.

Miss Simpson read a letter full of vital information from Miss Julia Lake Stevens, council superintendent of young people. She announced that council certificates for standard mission study work, which up until this time have only been given to senior groups, will be granted to intermediate groups who meet the requirements. It was at this time that it was announced Floral Heights attained the honor roll in 1929.

One of the high points of the year 1929 was the sponsoring of an essay contest for the young people by the general section of the board of missions. It began the first of September and closed Dec. 25. There were 10 subjects from which to choose, all of which center about the missionary work of the church. Eight essays went in from Texas and the first prize of $100 in gold and a special medal was won by Jimmie Woodward of the Central Texas conference, whose subject was "China Needs Christianity." The third prize also came to Texas, being won by Walter Vernon Jr., of the North Texas conference. He won $50 in gold for his theme on "Christian Service and the Negro."

Leon Deaton gave a review of the work of 1929. There is a total enrollment of 31,127 members in 1615 societies. An increase in the mission study classes and Bible classes was reported and $49,819 was paid on the young people's council pledge.

The life of Cora Wilson Stewart, founder of the Moonlight school of Kentucky, was a most interesting story told by Thomas Scott.

During the business session, the count for the attendance contest put Helen Simpson's side five points ahead.

Results of the tennis games played last week were given and it was announced that the next preliminary tryouts will be on Tuesday afternoon at 4 o'clock.

Among those present were William Donnell, J. I. Staley Jr., B. Ross, Joe Long, Betty Jane Sehmann, Dorothy Johnson, Helen Berry, Thomas C. Scott, Helen Simpson, Fred Barron, Ray Wilson, Mildred Johnson, Barbara Martin, Dan Cox, Bob Daugherty, Frances Gardner, Leon Deaton, Dorothy Cline, Estelle McPhail, William McKenney, George Thorburn, Leroy Farabee, Phoebe Jane Filgo, Elizabeth Albritton, Dal Hudspeth, Lillian Martin, and Mrs. George Truitt.

Unfair Pain

It is not fair that some women should suffer so each month. It isn't necessary! The menstrual process is natural, but the painful part is not. Midol will prove this to every woman who will try it. These wonderful tablets are non-narcotic, but they banish every bit of pain. They act directly on the organs affected by menstruation and they take effect in five to seven minutes. Better yet, the woman who anticipates her time and takes a tiny tablet of Midol beforehand will experience no pain at all.

Realize what Midol means. It is the product of specialists for this special purpose and it really does end all suffering and even the discomfort women once had to endure at such times. Always obtainable at any drug store in the convenient aluminum pocket case for only 50 cents.—Adv

Herbert Kaufman's Daily Editorial

NO ROBOTS FOR THINKING JOBS

A ROBOT wouldn't be reaching out for your pay envelope, if you weren't doing a job which an automaton can manage with greater exactness and at a lower cost. Wherever men are exposed to the rivalry of steel brains, they obviously aren't using their own. Nobody, putting judgment, individuality and independent thinking into his tasks, is threatened by invention. Price current compels us to measure compensation by output, and estimate an employe's value by the production chart. And folk who have never aspired to accomplish anything that a robot can't as satisfactorily handle, must in time, be driven to more intelligent occupation.

We buy such labor, just as we purchase equivalent equipment. And dividend necessity will always give preference to the machine, human or mechanical, which operates with fastest and with fewest errors.

Your age has no bearing upon your wage. Business is solely concerned with earning power. If your ideas are still sound and original, expediency will retain you.

Commerce is an opportunist and a free-thinker—progress refuses to be hampered by orthodoxies. Yesterday's rules are as unsafe as yesterday's fools.

Promotion by seniority is a generally abandoned practice. Experience repudiated that unsound procedure when we substituted motors for mules, and typewriters for calligraphers.

Compensation judges what a man does, not what he was.

WE CEASELESSLY infuse new blood into our manufacturing and sales systems, not so much that we lack faith in veterans, but because they so often lose faith in themselves. An efficient orchardman promptly uproots sterile trees; he can't afford to waste space on dead wood—nor can mill, shop or office.

The dollar struggle is too stern for such expensive, bankrupting sentimentality. We can't withstand competition from without, if we don't encourage it within.

The law of survival was laid down by nature long before man took it up. Displacement, by force of merit, is universal. You were paid in full for services rendered. From the outset, you demanded the largest salary your worth could secure. As you became more proficient, wherever and whenever you could press personal advantage, you seized the chance and immediately claimed your due. At every propitious moment, you held out for the full market value of increased utility. Consequently, we are mutually freed of obligation.

The score was clean. Week by week you insisted upon your pound of flesh, in fair weather and foul—through depression, panic and deficit.

Now, when you place less on your side of the scales, you must expect to receive less from ours.

If your outlook had remained up to date, there'd be nothing to remind us of the date of your birth.

But if you cease to collect policies and absorb suggestions—if you close your eyes to innovation and disregard changing techniques—if you don't conserve vitality and receptibility—if you keep riffling the discard instead of drawing new cards—if you're guided by past information instead of present inspiration—if you've concluded that you're too old to learn, then you're manifestly too old to earn.

We can't hope to win modern battles with ancient strategy.

DAVID BRANCH'S DAILY FILOSOFY

"He who wins the favor of the world often violates the law of righteousness."

The only winning that counts is right winning. In the court of righteousness it is not a question of whether you won or lost, but, how you played the game.

"Hindenburg Signs Young Plan." Headline. This Hindenburg line was a "dotted" one.

Too Much Education?

AMERICAN COLLEGES are handing out too many degrees. Some 250,000 young people are graduated from colleges and universities this year. The college graduate is becoming a drug on the market, and the day soon may come when a Bachelor of Arts degree won't be worth a snap of the fingers.

All of this is the complaint of a Milwaukee teacher, voiced in a recent address before the Milwaukee Women's City club.

It isn't especially new. Criticisms along the same line have been heard rather often in the last few years. But it is worth looking at if only for the reason that it represents so completely erroneous a conception of what a college education ought to be.

A college, after all, is not primarily a place where a young man can be taught how to get ahead in life. Except for the technical and professional schools, it is not greatly concerned with the earning power of the people it sends out into the world.

It is the process of living, rather than the process of earning a living, that a college deals with. A graduate may become a millionaire or he may never in his life rise above a salary of $50 a week; either way, the college has done its job if the graduate's life is richer, fuller and freer because of his college training.

For if there is one thing on earth which any college worth its salt does teach, it is that success in life does not at all depend on the amount of money one is able to make. If that concept is wrong, then Harry Sinclair, Babe Ruth and Al Capone are more illustrious citizens than such a scientist as R. A. Millikan, for example, or a jurist like Oliver Wendell Holmes, or a humanitarian like Jane Addams. But if it is right—if there is something in life more important than the ability to command a large salary—then there can never, by any stretch of the imagination, be so many college graduates that a Bachelor of Arts degree is worthless.

All of this is rather elementary, of course. But it is worth repeating, since the complaint of this Milwaukee teacher expresses a rather common misconception.

It is undoubtedly true that a great many young people spend four years at college without really absorbing the lesson that the college is supposed to impart. To them, a college degree is valuable only as an open sesame to some good job, and if it fails to function in that way they have wasted their time. But to the young man or woman who has fully experienced the broadening influence that a college education should give, a criticism like the one quoted here is the last word in pointlessness.

Texas and Wisconsin

PERSONS interested in the advancement of the Wichita irrigated valley might well keep track of developments in the great war between the states. This "war," if any Texan isn't abreast of the times, is being waged by Texas and Wisconsin or rather by certain developers of the Rio Grande valley and the Wisconsin Real Estate board.

Correspondents behind the lines in the Badger state report the Rio Grande forces generally out maneuvered to date. Court orders have halted sales of magic valley lands there. It would seem the Wisconsin sealots are in a fair way to keep their farmers at home—

But now comes the threat of a piece of master strategy on the part of the Texans which promises to turn the tables. Our state legislature, sensing a menace overshadowing the prison and tax issues, has suggested that Texans refrain from buying products manufactured in Wisconsin. The war correspondents deem this a crushing blow and already the Wisconsin Manufacturers association is reported trying to put an end to the great war between the states.

Texas, the biggest state, has again demonstrated her bigness. It's true the boycott-reprisal method was recently practiced by our neighboring republic to the south and we called it "Latin sensitiveness" then, but when used by practical Yankees it can only be termed strategy.

Has the Farmer Escaped?

ALTHOUGH wheat prices have slumped disastrously recently, Vice President Allard Smith of the Union Trust company of Cleveland, is authority for the statement that the farmer is not the big loser, after all.

Most wheat growers, he says, sold their crop before the slump came, and the big losers are the speculators and middlemen.

This is encouraging news—not that anyone has any grudge against the speculators and middlemen, but because the poor farmer has taken enough bumps in the last few years. If he has avoided this one, so much the better.

The news suggests, furthermore, that we might as well reserve judgment on the complaints that are made about the farm board's responsibility for the price decline. The wheat speculator has no love for this farm board, and nothing would please him more than to persuade the average citizen that the farm board has hurt the farmer.

Business or Whoopee?

THE West Texas Chamber of Commerce, under a new regime and a new system of operation, announces it will stress attendance at the business sessions in the annual convention this year at Abilene.

Heretofore a handful of delegates, as compared with the total attendance at the yearly meetings, have taken care of the real business of the organization while the general membership made merry. The festive spirit may have had its disadvantages but none would deny it brought a feeling of friendly solidarity to those making whoopee and the playboys always went home knowing their neighbors were good fellows while the official delegates sometimes went home rankled by clashes on the floor of business sessions.

Possibly the ideal situation would be a little more business for the playboys and a little more whoopee for the serious minded delegates. Anyway, it appears the new regime is working toward just that.

Detroit's Amazing Story

SOMEONE has remarked that criminals flock to the busiest, most prosperous cities. If this is so, Detroit apparently is paying the penalty for the business that the automobile industry has brought it.

It is an amazing story that is being told at the Detroit police board hearings. Almost incredible charges are hurled back and forth at high officials of the police department. It is asserted that Detroit's notorious "Purple Gang" had friendly relations with some of these officials and was given a helping hand by them when the going got tough.

And, meanwhile, Detroit continues to have a "crime wave" that bears comparison with Chicago's.

In America, at any rate, prosperity seems to bring a certain amount of lawlessness in its wake. Detroit, like Chicago, is suffering for it.

The Girl With The Red Hair by Rob Eden

"I've made a fool of myself accosting all the red-haired girls I have seen."

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

Pretty Gay Terris agrees to marry her employer, Frank Patterson, whom she does not love, in return for a loan of $5,000 to send her sick mother to Arizona. One day she receives a card from Paul Ladishaw, requesting to see her. He introduces her to Fania Crandall, prominent society woman, who resembles Gay. After due consideration, Gay accepts Mrs. Crandall's offer of $300 to represent her at the Van Schyler mask ball. Andy Grant, whom Gay met through an office companion, Nita Rollins, tells her he is going to the affair as press representative. At the ball she dances with Mark Loring, whom she casually met on another occasion and was attracted to, but is unable to reveal her identity because of her promise to keep silent. Returning to Mrs. Crandall's, her suspicion is aroused when she discovers a complete costume on Mrs. Crandall's bed which she remembers seeing at the ball. A valuable necklace is stolen at the masquerade and Andy Grant interviews all the prominent guests including Fania Crandall for his paper. Fania is surprised when he tells her she resembles a friend of his—Gay Terris. Mrs. Crandall learns from Gay that Mark Loring was present at the ball and asks Grant why Loring's name is not on the guest list.

CHAPTER XVI

Gay read every line in the papers about the robbery.

Could Mrs. Crandall?—no, it was impossible. There was no need for Fania Crandall to steal. She had plenty of money—everything. Certainly she would not steal. Besides, she was one of them, one of this circle of wealthy, luxurious people. As far as she could see, Mrs. Crandall had no need for Lady Agatha Manners' diamond necklace.

Still, Gay was frightened. She felt she never should have entered into the agreement with Fania Crandall. She had done it blindly, foolishly, drawn by her sense of adventure, the hope of earning the money the older woman offered. Now, when it was over, the escapade which which had seemed so trivial to her was assuming gigantic proportions. If Fania had stolen the necklace—if—well, then, she, Gay, would be equally guilty. How could she explain satisfactorily why she had done this thing for Mrs. Crandall, a stranger to her? Who would believe her?

There was comfort, of course, in the fact that she didn't know. Her imagination was bothering her, that was all. It got the better of her at times. No need to be so worried. Fania couldn't have stolen the necklace. If only she hadn't poked into Mrs. Crandall's bedroom that night, hadn't seen the Spanish costume, which meant, at least to her, that Fania had gone to the ball after all, and had returned just in time to change and greet Gay and Ladishaw.

Wednesday morning the guest list was printed in the morning papers. Here was Mrs. Crandall, Paul Ladishaw. Yes, even Andrew Grant, reporter for the Herald. The list was long, and she read it through carefully three or four times. Mark Loring must have been omitted. His name wasn't there. Strange.

She pumied over it for some time, sitting at her desk. She had missed the name, that was all. But another perusal left her uncertain. Loring's name was positively not there.

Then he didn't belong in this set. He wasn't one of Mrs. Van Schyler's friends. Some relief at that. The dread of having him so far removed from her . . .

However, with the relief, was concern, too. What could it mean? Why wasn't Mark Loring's name on the list? Was he—oh, no, for if he had been there on account of the jewels, he wouldn't have unmasked for her, wouldn't have told her his name.

Although she was staring at the wall ahead where on one of the doors Patterson's name was printed, she saw nothing, but the leafy moon-hung copse in which she had talked to Loring at the masquerade. The faun, pale white in the darkness. Loring looking down at her eagerly, trying to snatch the mask from her face.

Her hand brushed her eyes swiftly. She mustn't think about that too much. Dangerous. She must forget Mark Loring, forget she had ever seen him . . . There was work to be done. So she plunged back to her typewriter and wrote furiously for half an hour or so. Then, gathering some letters in her hand, she prepared to go to Mr. Galway's office, for his signature. Passing through the swinging gate that separated the executive offices from the main room, she stopped. A man was coming in the door.

It couldn't be . . . it was! Mark Loring!

Gay's breath came faster as she went forward. How had he found her here? He was looking around vaguely. Now he had stepped up to the information desk, and was asking the girl there some question.

But he didn't know her name—. Then he saw her, and his face broke out in a broad smile as he came toward her.

"It's you, isn't it?" he asked eagerly, looking at her closely.

"Yes—" Gay's lips were trembling. Tears sprang suddenly to her violet eyes. So good to see him, to tell him—

"Sure?" he insisted. "I've made so many mistakes, I want to be sure!"

"Of course—you're the man—Coney Island—" she couldn't help her disconnected sentences.

All she wanted him to know was that it was she—

"What are you doing here?" Then he hadn't come to find her!

"Working."

"Oh. I thought I'd never find you. I've made a fool of myself—accosting all the red haired girls I've seen. Really. I even went up to see one yesterday. Saw her as a masquerade the night before, and was positive she was you. However," this rather bitterly, "one sometimes makes mistakes, and that was one of them."

"You went up to see whom?" Fania Crandall? It could only be Fania! The fear that Gay had forgotten came back, but only for a moment.

"Her name was Fania Crandall. She told me at the masquerade, but I wouldn't believe her. Just like me. What's your name, anyway?"

"Gay Terris—and yours?" Gay knew it but she had to ask. He mustn't suspect about the masquerade, mustn't suspect she had taken Fania's place there.

He told her, and was about to say something else, when Patterson came up beaming. "Why, Mark! My boy, I didn't know you were in town." He put out his hand.

Gay stood by, embarrassed, while Patterson greeted Loring effusely.

"You know my nephew, Miss Terris?" he finally asked her, drawing her into the conversation. He always called her "Miss Terris" at the office. Always was formally polite to her. She didn't mind him here . . . it was only when they were alone, when he wanted to kiss her . . .

Nephew! Mark Loring, Mr. Patterson's nephew! She tried to stutter out some answer but nothing came. Finally, Loring came to the rescue. "Yes, we've known each other for some time."

"How long have you been in town?" Patterson was asking. Gay had controlled herself by then.

"Since Saturday morning—but I was busy, and didn't have time to run in. Only going to be here a few weeks—"

Saturday morning he had come to the city, and she had seen him Saturday night! That was why he was alone. A stranger in New York . . .

"Come out and stay with us," Patterson was urging.

"Sorry, but I can't. I'm at the Knickerbocker."

"Why don't you come out to dinner this evening? Miss Terris will come, won't you, Miss Terris?"

"Why—all right."

Mark brightened at this, and quickly agreed. With a nod to Gay, Patterson drew Loring into his private office.

Mr. Patterson's nephew. Nephew. Gay was still dazed when she came from Galway's office, and took her seat at her typewriter. That meant he would be her nephew. No—no . . .

Only in town for a short time. That meant she wouldn't see him any more. Just as well. She was thinking about him too much.

Nita touched her arm. "That's the fellow, isn't it?"

"What fellow?" She wished Nita wouldn't bother her now. She wanted to be alone. Wanted to think this out.

"Why, the fellow you saw at Coney Island. I took a good look at him that night. Looks like a grand guy. What's his name?"

"He's Mr. Patterson's nephew, Mark Loring," Gay answered primly.

Nita took another look at the door where Patterson's name was printed.

"You said you'd bring him up to the apartment some night," she reminded Gay.

"I haven't had a chance, yet."

Nita's lips drew together in a straight blood red line. "Listen, Gay, you owe me something, don't you?"

"I don't—know what you mean?" Was she going to recall that horrible scene again?

"For taking Andy away from me. You admit that!"

"I didn't take him away—"

"Don't try to lie out of it!"

"Please Nita—"

"Well, do you want to make up for it?"

"I—"

"Do you!"

"Yes—"

"Then, when this Loring man comes out of Patterson's office—if he comes up here to your desk, introduce him to me, will you?"

"I will."

"Thanks, that'll make everything O. K." And Nita sailed back to her desk.

Mark came out presently, and Nita managed to side up to Gay as he approached her desk. As Gay introduced them, she smiled to herself. She hadn't been properly introduced to Mark Loring herself. Yet she felt, some how, that she had known him for years.

Q.—What is sap?—F. P.

A.—Sap is the water contained in living plants and the substances dissolved in it. All active plant cells have more or less water in their protoplasm, and when there is a surplus it is in the form of drops or masses in cavities (vacuoles) in the protoplasm. Intercellular spaces and the cavities of inactive internal cells also may contain water, holding various substances in solution. In terrestrial plans this water is absorbed by the roots from the water of the soil and carries with it the substances dissolved in it. In the plant it is absorbed from cell to cell, suffering in each a loss of such substances as are appropriated by the protoplasm and gaining such as are soluble. It thus contains many substances, some of which are organic, as sugar, insulin, etc., and others inorganic, as salts of lime, potash, etc. By puncturing (as in the maple), crushing (as in the cane), or slicing and diffusion (as in the sugar beet), the sap is obtained in large quantities, and evaporation yields sugar, with many other substances.

Q.—When were Pennsylvania's blue laws passed?—M. B. I.

A.—They were passed in 1794.

Q.—Who discovered iodine? —C. M. A.

A.—It was discovered in 1812 by Courtois, a French niter manufacturer. He was boiling the ash from seaweed in copper kettles. Upon the addition of unusually strong sulphuric acid to the residue in his pots, he saw violet fumes arising. It was named from a Greek word, meaning "violet color."

Q.—How should ground be prepared for a tennis court? —L. McD.

A.—In constructing a tennis court, the ground should be dug up to about a three-foot depth, then it should be filled with large gravel, then a layer of medium rock, and a layer of crushed rock over that in order to provide for the drainage of the court, then a layer of binding clay should be rolled down to make a surface. The court can be left complete with this surface; however, a great many use as a finishing powdered bluestone or a substance called fine brick dust.

Q.—Who compiled the Dictionary of American Biography? How many volumes is in it.—C. D. W.

The preparation of the manuscript is made possible through the subvention of more than $500,000 by Adolph S. Ochs in behalf of the New York Times. Four volumes have been published and 16 will follow. The 20 volumes will contain the biographies of 15,000 persons who have made important contributions to the progress of the United States. There will be more than 20,000,000 words.

Q.—Which is the larger element in business payment, cash or checks?—D. K.

A.—The American Bankers association says it is estimated more than 90 per cent of all settlements of credits are accomplished by checks or similar instruments.

Q.—Why does a ceiling show the shadow of the laths above it? —L. C.

A.—The lines on the ceiling are caused by dust-laden air passing up through the plaster and leaving a deposit over the spaces between the laths.

Q.—Has cauliflower much food value?—B. S.

A.—Cauliflower, while low in fuel value, is rich in vitamins A, B and C. It contains also considerable calcium and phosphorus, which are needed for healthy bones and teeth. Its water content is 92 per cent.

Increasing the Circulation

Oxygen is taken into the body through the lungs, and food through the alimentary canal. The blood takes up the food elements and the oxygen and distributes them to every cell of the body, returning poisonous wastes to be eliminated through the lungs, kidneys, skin and bowels.

The blood also regulates the temperature of the body, and distributes the internal heat of the organs to the outer parts of the body where there is not enough heat. The muscles play an important part in this circulation through the blood and lymphatic vessels.

There are more than 500 muscles in the body, and these comprise more than two-fifths of the body's weight. The heart, itself, is composed almost entirely of muscular tissue and muscular fibers. They are also important parts of the structures of the walls of the arteries and veins.

Without muscular action in the body there could be no circulation of the blood.

In all circulatory disturbances, whether it be functional disorders of the heart, hardening of the arteries, varicose veins, or just sluggish circulation, the treatment of any of these disorders is influenced more by the proper kind of physical culture exercising than by any other single factor. Either light or heavier exercises, as the case demands, will immediately increase the flow of fluids in the body, and such muscular activity will always produce a permanent effect through the increased strengthening of the muscle fibers all over the body.

Everyone knows that any kind of exercise increases the general circulations; that the heart beats faster, and respiration is increased. While occasional light exercise may do some good and no harm, a sudden ambitious spell of violent exercise usually does a great deal more harm than good.

To get the best results in increasing the circulation, it is necessary to use carefully graduated exercises. Exercise is a wonderful remedy, and the only one worth considering is the development of a good blood circulation; but, it can be a dangerous remedy if not used cautiously.

At the start it is best to use only light calisthenics, combined with short walks. Every few days another exercise can be added which will gradually call for more muscular tension.

Those who have not exercised regularly for years can afford to go slowly at first and increase their exercises gradually over several weeks until the maximum of exercise is taken. A good plan is to start walking a mile the first day and gradually increase the distance a few steps daily so that at the end of about a month the distance has been increased from three to four miles.

The calisthenic exercises and walking will improve the general circulation in every part of the body. If prolapsus of abdominal organs exists it will be necessary to give special attention to the exercises taken while lying on the back, as the exercise taken in this position will more quickly develop the abdominal muscles which are always weak with those suffering from any form of abdominal prolapsus.

Massage treatments are slightly effective as a temporary measure in increasing the circulation, but cannot replace the exercising.

My prescription for poor circulation is exercise—and more of it!

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Granulated Eyelids

Question—G. H. J. asks: "Will you please tell me a remedy for granulated eyelids?"

Answer—A dietetic treatment is often helpful in such a condition as the irritating discharge from the mucus membranes can be reduced. At the same time, you should go to an eye specialist who can treat your eyelids or give you some remedy to use at home. Such troubles often become very serious and may lead to blindness if not properly treated.

Oyster Plant

Question—H. V. asks: "Is there any similarity between oysters and oyster plant?"

Answer—Oyster plant or salsify is a vegetable which should be used as young as possible before the starch has had time to develop, as in this way it may be used more freely and has a more agreeable flavor. Do not scrape the oyster plant but wash it with a vegetable brush and cook in plain water. If cut thin and seasoned with cream and butter, the flavor will slightly resemble that of an oyster stew, although the food value is undoubtedly different as the oyster is a protein food and often poisonous, while the vegetable oyster is nonstarchy and always wholesome.

Alcoholic Dementia

Question—Mrs. M. asks: "Will you kindly let me know if there is any cure for alcoholic dementia? Does a person ever get over it?

Answer—The cure of this trouble would depend upon the severity of an attack. Most patients recover within two or three days from the first attack but of course if excess drinking of alcoholic liquors is continued there may be a succession of attacks until the brain and nervous system are finally injured.

Business Letter

The shtuff you sent me (hic!)
Wash indeed full of powersh
It packed a palpitating kick
And pleashed me with its flavors,
And in response to yours in hand
Will shay your proposition
Deserves attention and reshpect
And our full recognishun,
Will let you know our answer
When shober up tomorrer
O by the way it wasn't you
Who shent me all that likker
Wash it? 'Scuse me ole feller
Better tear to bits this letter
Will write when brain unwinds thish knot
And straightens out thesh mattersh
And holds 'em tight, as they shay at the lot
With no runsh, no (hic!) no errorsh.

The above pome, we admit, is not so good. We hasten to add, moreover, that we did not write it. Who the author is we do not know. The alcoholic author mailed the pome from Childress, signing his missle "A Disgusted Reader," and adding in a footnote that he considers our poetical abilities on a par with those of the sweet singer of Michigan, "whom," the reader writes, "I loathe."

"I admit," continues the disgusted citizen of Childress, "that writing a poem ending in 'no runs, no hits, no errors' each day of the year is a difficult job, but it seems to me that since you have undertaken the task you should put some pep and ginger into it. Your poems so far have been rotten, in fact, so disgusting that I cannot but compare them to the effervescent bosh that in other years emanated from the pen of the sweet singer of Michigan, whom I lothe. I hereby enclose you one of my own poems, ending in your prescribed manner, the which I consider has more humor than any you have inflicted on us since you undertook to fill each day your self-designated 'immortal department' on the sports page, which you have appropriately named 'The Rambler's Corner.' I do not believe that you will print my poem. I don't believe you will risk losing your alleged immortality by printing poems palpably better than your own. In fact, I think you are an ass. . . ."

Wow!

This immortal department, while admitting some few weaknesses, cannot be charged with having no sense of fair play. In proof whereof we point out that we DID print the disgusted citizen's poem, even though we do maintain that we can write better lyrics asleep. And in further proof of our broad-mindedness, we hereby solicit one and all of our readers, if any, to submit verses of any kind whatever, with the promise that all will be printed. We prefer, of course, shorter verses than the one above. And see if you can make them end with "no runs, no hits, no errors." As the disgusted citizen intimates, it is a hard job. But writing better poems than the Childress citizen's attempt should be easy. . . .

As this time-defying department is being written, our sweating ball club is crossing bats with the Bovines at Dallas, and the score is unknown; and we are heaving great prayers that our Spudders will win; but if they don't we keep thinking, "O well, this is only an exhibition game."

My Day Off

Up with a greate stretch and this being the blessed day when I worke not, did call Bill and two prettie girls and faired to the golf course where we did gambol about; but Bill and his girl being better shots, my prettie partner and myself kept no score but did linger behind, discovering some wild violets budding in the hedge which did looke very prettie, and near them grew some purplish flowers unknown to me, the bud of which smelled so sweete, but the roots thereof did whiff of onions.

BOVINES HELD TO THREE HITS

Smith, Cromer and Hillin Occupy Mound

DALLAS, March 23. (AP)—Wichita Falls evened up a two-game series today by defeating the Dallas Steers 3 to 1. The series was the first ever played between the two teams except during the regular championship races. The game looked rosy for the home nine when they went into the seventh frame with a 1 to 0 lead but it soon became apparent they had a struggle on their hands when Elmer Bray, Hensick's successor to the rubber, showed a lack of form and a tendency to wildness.

The game was the second series against professionals on the exhibition calendar for the Steers, the other being with St. Paul last weekend, when honors also were divided.

Youngsters Pitch

The crowd of more than 1,000 customers saw a trio of young right-handers, Smith, Cromer and Hillin, limit the Steers to three hits, no two of which were closer than three innings of each other. One, however, happened to be a lusty home run into the left field bleachers, off the bat of Nick Borrelli. It opened the second inning and accounted for the only Dallas run. Barring a single by Phil Hensick in the fifth, it was the only base knock collected off Cy Smith in the five frames he was on the mound for the Spudders.

Starting in the box for Dallas was Phil Hensick and his performance was creditable. When he was succeeded by Elmer Bray, however, the visitors got to him in his initial session to tie the count. The Spudders tucked the game away in the ninth when they bunched four blows for two tallies.

Hard Hitters

The Carl Williams clan probably were roundly deserving of the triumph for they were hammering the pellet hard all day and in spite of their ability to hit where the fielders weren't in several pinches. They had a margin of 12 to 3 in bingles at the close.

English Speedboat Is Nearing Completion

LONDON, March 23. (US)—Miss England II, the speedboat with which Sir Harry Segrave expects to wrest from America her motorboating speed supremacy, is now rapidly nearing completion at a Cowes shipyard.

The Royal Motor Yacht club has already cabled on behalf of Great Britain a challenge to the Yachtsman's Association of America, and the actual struggle, the most hectic in the history of motorboat racing, will take place at Detroit in August.

This will be the seventh attempt to recapture the British international trophy from the United States, France having made two attempts and Great Britain four.

BLUES DEFEAT HOUSTON BUFFS

Former Spudder Leads Visitors to Victory

HOUSTON, March 23. (AP)—Some very sloppy fielding Sunday helped the Kansas City Blues to a 6 to 4 triumph over the Houston Buffs here today.

Denver Grigsby, left fielder of the visitors, who used to perform for Wichita Falls, led the bingling for the Blues; while Eddie Hock, Joe Hunt, and Sol Mishkin led best with the stick for the Schultzmen. Joe Brown and Art Reinhart of the Buffs both pitched good enough ball to win most ball games; while Joe Maley, a lean, young right-hander, twirled well for the Blues.

Cats Beat Orioles

FORT WORTH, March 23. (AP)—A four-run lead held by Baltimore today melted away in the seventh and the Fort Worth club won their exhibition game with the International leaguers, 9 to 7.

Home runs by Bonowitz and Snyder of the Cats, the tight pitching of Hardaway and Schupp of the same club, some more of the same kind of hurling by Hearn of the Orioles, were featured.

Abe Martin got into trouble in the first when the visitors scored all their runs but soon settled down and pitched airtight ball thereafter, as did Pipgras, Green and Newman, who followed.

Heinie Schuble's double to right scored the tying run off Tennant, right-hander, and Charley Wade's infield hit with the bases loaded ended the game.

Ruth's double in the seventh put the New Yorkers a run ahead only to lose out in the final frame when the Braves bunched hits off McAvoy.

Send In Your Slogan And Boost Campaign!

The chamber of commerce athletic committee that is working for Wichita Falls to win the Texas league's opening day attendance prize, needs your help. They need a battle cry to carry on their campaign to bring out a record crowd of fans for opening day at Athletic park, April 9. For that slogan they will give six box seats to the opening day game.

Think of something appropriate — something short and snappy, and send it to the Times and Record News. Help the Spudders. Help yourself. Send as many suggestions as you like. Fill in the blank and mail or bring it in.

I suggest the following slogan for the Spudders' opening day attendance campaign:

Aces Give 'Kid Brothers' Start

Keeping step with all star sports performers, Horton Smith, Art Shires and Ernie Orsatti have acquired proteges. And they went no farther than their own families to get them. Smith helped Brother Ren establish himself in his old position as pro at the Joplin municipal links; Shires talked John McGraw into giving Brother Len, an infielder, a tryout with the Giants, and Orsatti, crack young Cardinal outfielder, brought Brother Vic along to the Red Birds' training camp for a shot at an infield job.

WHITES WIN POLO CONTEST

Blues Defeated, 10 to 6, in Practice Game Here

The Whites triumphed over the Blues, 10 to 6, in a practice polo game played Sunday afternoon on Clinerowe field. Starting with a three-goal handicap advantage, the Whites emerged victorious in one of the fastest games of the practice season chiefly through the efforts of Hubert Stringer and Jim Minnick, who scored three and two goals respectively. C. H. Featherston and Gerald Coffey scored one each.

The scoring for the Blues was done by Lieutenant Barden and Cecil Wilfong, who got two each; and Horace Robbins and Lieut. I. L. Kitts, who got one each.

Tentative plans call for the first matched polo game on the home field next Sunday with the Kelly field team from San Antonio, according to Mr. Featherston. One more practice game is scheduled before the game with the Kelly field riders. The lineup of the Wichita Falls team for this game, should it be decided to play Sunday, has not been selected, but it will be chosen from the following: Featherston, Robbins, Wilfong, Stringer, Minnick and John Fastnow.

Lieutenant Barden and Lieutenant Kitts, who played with the Blue team is Sunday's game, were visitors from Fort Sill. Lieutenant Barden carries a three-goal handicap.

The Whites lined up with Stringer in front, John Fastnow, No. 2, Jimmy Minnick, No. 3; Featherston back, and Gerald Coffey, substitute. The Blues played Lieutenant Barden at No. 1, Horrace Robbins No. 2, Cecil Wilfong No. 3 and Dr. C. H. Fletcher and Lieutenant Kitts alternating at No. 4.

World's Richest Stake Captured By 5-Year-Old

AGUA CALIENTE, Mexico, March 23. (UP)—Victorian, 5-year-old son of Whisk Broom II, won the first Agua Caliente handicap—richest stake in the world for horses of all ages—before a crowd of 25,000 here today.

Victorian, winner of the 1928 preakness, won by two lengths, setting a new track record of 2:03 1-5.

The Allo Carrodlo stable's Alexander Pantages was second, the Rancocas stable's Donnay third and W. C. & E. W. Reichert's My Dangy was fourth.

Victorian was bought by Harry Payne Whitney for $75,000 as a yearling and after a sensational record as a 3-year-old was purchased by the Warm stable for a reported price of $125,000.

A field of 14 started, making the total stake $124,600. The race was worth $108,400 to the winner, including a $5,000 gift to Jockey Georgie Ellis, who rode Victorian, and a $5,000 gift to Trainer T. J. Taylor.

WINNING TICKET BRINGS $51,751

AGUA CALIENTE, Mexico, March 23. (UP)—Probably the most excited spectator at the racetrack here today during the running of the Agua Caliente handicap was George Fisher, a Butte, Mont., miner, who held the sweepstakes ticket on Victorian, the winner.

The ticket paid him $51,751. However, he had made sure he would get something and had sold a share to Harry Fink for $5,000 and another part to Bart Baroni. Fisher got $2,000, nevertheless.

BIG BOYS ON WEEK'S CARD

Risko to Fight Campolo Tonight

NEW YORK, March 23. (AP)—Boxers in the lighter divisions, for the most part, will rest on their laurels this week while heavyweights fight.

George Godfrey, negro, Primo Carnera, Johnny Risko and Victorio Campolo, among others, will be "doing their stuff."

Risko and Campolo are matched in the 10-round feature bout of a charity show in Madison Square garden tomorrow night. The garden tried to put this battle on some time ago, but the New York State Athletic commission stepped in and ruled that Risko was "too small" for Campolo. The garden promptly matched the two in one of the bouts of the Sharkey-Scott show and Risko cuffed the big Argentine fighter around for 10 rounds only to have referee, Kid McPartland, call the bout a draw.

Godfrey, negro, from Leiperville, Pa., meets Roy (Ace) Clark in a 10-rounded at Philadelphia tomorrow night. Clark recently lasted six rounds with Carnera, putting up a great battle. He weights 235 pounds, Godfrey 250.

Carnera battles George Trafton, Chicago pro football player, in a 10-rounder at Kansas City Wednesday night.

Madison Square garden has matched Jimmy McLarnin, Vancouver welterweight, with Young Jack Thompson, San Francisco negro, in the main 10-rounder of its Friday night show.

PHILLIES VICTORIOUS

WINTER HAVEN, Fla., March 23. (AP)—The slugging Philadelphia Nationals today defeated Winter Haven in an exhibition game, 15-0.

CUBS TO FACE STRONGER FOES

Champs, However, Are Favored to Repeat

(Note this is one of a series of first-hand Associated Press stories of major league prospects for 1930.)

By BRIAN BELL
Associated Press Sports Writer.

ATLANTA, Ga., March 23.—The champion Chicago Cubs, rated better than they were at this time a year ago, are being generally favored to again show the way in the National league, but the competition may be of sterner stuff.

Strengthening of the clubs in the second division in 1929 suggests that the senior circuit should have a great battle through the long summer stretch.

Bloody Battle Forecast

The always dangerous Phillies, the hustling Reds of Cincinnati and the rejuvenated Robins of Brooklyn, with doves of peace hovering about their bench, should make the fight for places in the first four a sanguinary struggle.

With early spring estimates subject to revision later on, seven clubs in the National league seem to have a chance to take a lively part in the battle for the prestige assured by first division berths.

The mauling Phillies, highly enthusiastic over their sensational finish in the closing months of the last race, declare they will not be satisfied simply to improve their position, but expect to be a contender for the championship.

With Lester Bell adding a punch at third base and at least one fair to middling pitcher available from the new crop, Joe McCarthy starts the season with rosy prospects.

Suhr Boosts Pirates

Pittsburgh is experimenting with a brilliant minor leaguer—Gus Suhr at first base, but the rest of the Pirates are much the same as in 1929. Burleigh Grimes may not get the start he had last year when he bowled the opposion over right and left until he was injured when a drive struck his wrist. Ben Shankey, an infielder from Selma of the Southeastern league, has been one of the best of the Buccaneer prospects.

Making adequate arrangements for protection of second base will be the Giants' problem this year, as it was last. If a capable second sacker is developed the team will be formidable, for some of the pitchers, notably the unusually reliable Larry Benton, will not have two poor years in succession. Close observers of the Giants' practice period have been disappointed at the showing of the recruits as a whole.

St. Louis, under a new manager, the veteran Gabby Street, is standing pat on the starting line up, but with additional reserve strength in readiness to answer a call for help. The Cardinals have a veteran pitching staff, and their chances will be decided, perhaps by the ability of some of these olders to continue to pitch winning games.

Phillies Dangerous

Ability to hit the ball makes the Phillies dangerous at all times. Top heavy with sluggers, Manager Burt Shotton has added another likely clouter in Tripp Sigman and, in John Sherlock, has picked up a good infield reserve. Grover Cleveland Alexander, at 43, is not the least effective pitcher in the National league and his words of counsel, directed at the younger pitchers, are expected to bear fruit.

Brooklyn's hopes were boosted sky-high when Glenn Wright, the hard hitting shortstop, who was out of the game with a lame arm last season, amazed the rail birds by throwing about as well as ever. Other sick and injured players have recovered strength and the addition of Neal Finn and Gordon Slade, Pacific coast infielders, has given Manager Robinson a chance to surround himself with some much needed strength.

Dan Howley, an American leaguer from St. Louis, has the Reds hustling. With the extra power furnished by the bats of Bob Meusel and Harry Heilmann, the Cincinnatis will not be pushovers. Manager Howley is hoping for the best in the way of pitching, but will not know for some time how much he has a right to expect. Given some runs to work on Red Lucas and Jakie May will win their share of games.

The Boston Braves face a long period of reconstruction, but Manager Bill McKechnie, who will be left alone with the responsibility of working out his baseball salvation, has made a start by getting some recruits who seem to be able to hit the ball. Randy Moore, a Texas league product who has moved in from the outfield to third base, and Wally Berger, Pacific coast outfielder, have shown signs of being able to smash the ball. Red Rollings is a better player now than he was when a member of the Red Sox.

Great Gulpers Decide Heavyweight Eating Championship

Napoleon Jack Dorval Wins Over Atlantic Seaboard Favorite By Fowl

By DAMON RUNYON
(Copyt., 1930, Universal Service, Inc.)

NEW YORK, March 23.—After months of bickering and dickering, two of the mightiest trenchermen of modern times, George Godfrey, the black shadow of Leiperville, and Napoleon Jack Dorval, the Pennsylvania timber wolf, came together last week in an eating contest for the heavyweight championship of the Atlantic seaboard, and Napoleon Jack was declared the winner by a fowl. He was one fried chicken upon Godfrey when the old black shadow hurled in a vacant wishbone in token of surrender.

Thus was finally settled a long and acrimonious debate as to the gastronomical prowess of the two men, and Dorval becomes eligible to meet Tom Thorp, the turf waiter, for the American title. While some may sniff at his pretensions against the great Thorp, the upstate Pennsylvanian's feat of out-eating Godfrey proves that he is no mean foe for any man or horse at that old trough.

Godfrey Was Favorite

Only those who were aware of the eating form Napoleon Jack has been displaying the past few weeks gave him a chance with Godfrey, who was a 3 to 1 favorite as the boys tucked their napkins under their chins. It was known that Godfrey had out-eaten Dorval before in non-title exhibition bouts, so it was assumed that he would do it again. What the Godfrey supporters didn't know, however, was that Napoleon Jack recently had his tonsils removed so that the fodder would slide down his gullet unimpeded, and without the effort of swallowing.

It proved to be a big advantage to Dorval when the contest narrowed down to serious eating. He was enabled to ingest such minor items as hot biscuits whole, while Godfrey had to masticate 'em to get them past his tonsils. In his inhalation of the fried chicken on which the contest was primarily based, Napoleon Jack at times displayed all the finesse of some of the old eating masters, such as Babe Ruth, the ball player, and Irven Cobb, the author, both heavyweight eating contenders of a bygone day.

Clam Eater Referees

The Dorval-Godfrey contest was held in the Chester pike, along which George Washington and Lafayette once picked 'em up and laid 'em down. The referee was none other than the good baron of Leiperville in person, who was a first rate middleweight eater himself in his day, and almost a champion against clams.

Napoleon Jack warmed up in a lunch counter up the street 10 minutes before the supper bell on a dozen fried eggs, a Virginia ham, and a loaf of bread, while the Black Shadow, in the privacy of his boudoir in the Colonial hotel, hastily swallowed a small suckling pig to prepare himself for the ordeal. They sat down opposite each other at 6 o'clock sharp, and as the baron of Leiperville called time, Agnes, the camp cook, began bringing in the fried chicken, the hot biscuits, the candied sweet potatoes, the cauliflower, and stewed tomatoes, and all the various other items that anlivened the contest.

No Holds Barred

It had been agreed that no holds were barred, and both men promptly seized their fried chicken with their fried chicken hooks, which is the only proper method of grasping fried chicken, at that. Taken otherwise, a fried chicken is apt to elude the most vigilant. For the next hour nothing was heard in the dining hall save the heavy breathing of the contestants, and a sound like unto a saw mill devouring oaken logs.

The old Black Shadow ate away steadily with the technique of long experience, and at one time he got three fried chickens ahead of Dorval when the latter permitted his eye to wander to a stack of lemon meringue pies that Agnes had laid out on the sideboard. Then Dorval corraled his wandering fancy, and quickly regained his lost ground.

At another stage, Godfrey got far out in front when the timber wolk took to floundering on a fried chicken that seemed no different from any of the others, but which was presently examined by the baron of Leiperville, in his capacity as referee, and pronounced illegal. It developed that this chicken was none other than Elmer, an old brassback fighting cock from Ed McLaughlin's flock down the street.

Cook Given Rest

Elmer was the hero of a score of desperate pit battles, and famed the countryside around, and how he ever got into Agnes' frying pan is a mystery. On the ruling of the referee, Dorval laid Elmer's remains aside for a light lunch when he would have more time, and speadily ate himself up neck and neck with Godfrey again on tenderer tidbits.

At 9:30 a brief recess was taken to permit Agnes to rest, and during the wait both Dorval and Godfrey nibbled away four bunches of celery, and two bottles of olives apiece. It was following this period that Napoleon Jack began showing his true form. He tossed off one fried chicken with his left hand, and then tucked in one with his right. He downed a helping of cauliflower, and for his next move he swallowed three cups of coffee in rapid succession, a change of pace which clearly disconcerted Godfrey.

The latter commenced to complain about midnight about the fare selected for the contest, asserting that if it had been stewed muskrat he would have disposed of Dorval inside of an hour. Now stewed muskrat is recognized as a rare delicacy in many quarters, but no where in the unexpurgated rules on eating do you find it listes as contest provender. The good baron of Leiperville warned Godfrey against further complaints of this nature.

Godfrey Weakens

At 2:30 a. m., Godfrey was showing signs of fatigue, while Dorval was getting stronger every mouthful. They were then on their 116th fried chicken apiece, and the supply of fried chicken was running so low that the referee announced that in the event all the fried chicken was exhausted without a decision having been reached, the contest would continue with cold mutton as a substitute. A boy was sent out to catch and kill a mutton so it would be cold in time, in case it was needed.

At 3 o'clock Godfrey made a tremendous rally, but it was no use. The Pennsylvania timber wolf was right at his hip. At 4:30 the Old Black Shadow bowed to the inevitable, and retired from the contest, making the following statement to the public:

"Ladies 'n' gempun, ah done et agin some big eatuhs in ma time but Napoleon Jack am de eatinust man ah evah see, en mist' Tho'p bettuh go en hide himself. Thass all."

Napoleon Jack Dorvall then asked Agnes what time she would have breakfast, and she replied at 6 o'clock.

"Very well," said Napoleon Jack, "I might as well sit up and wait for it now."

What's On The Air Today?

Approach of the baseball season will motivate one of the most unusual radio programs of the year which is to be given over the NBC system from New York Monday night at 8:30 o'clock. Texas listeners will find the program relayed through stations WFAA and WBAP.

Connie Mack will step to the microphone for the first time as entertainer in a national hook-up, and the renowned stage comedian, DeWolfe Hopper, will contribute his famous recitation, "Casey at the Bat." The entire program is to be divided into a nine-inning session, with Graham McNamee covering the history of baseball. Mr. Hopper's reading will be inserted in about the "third inning" somewhere in the "gay nineties." Famous characters and incidents in the game's history will be cited by McNamee.

REASONS FOR CHURCH GIVEN

Barron Tells Four Purposes In Address

The reasons for joining and maintaing the church were given Sunday morning by John Daniel Barron in an address before the Kay Bible class. Mr. Barron named four outstanding reasons for the existence of the church: first, its exalted mission in the world; second, our need of the church; third, the need of religion for a tangible human organization to make it effective in the lives of men; and fourth, the fact that man gives life to the church, which in turn gives life to man.

His talk was as follows:

"Some powerful bombs have been set off under the foundations and in the ceilings and around the walls of the Christian church in recent years. They have been placed by two classes of men with opposite motives. First, there is the class who believe the church is a useless institution, if not an actual menace to the best interests of society. They have sought to blow to splinters what they believed to be at best no more than an obsolete institution. And they have set off some very effective explosives, as well as a liberal quantity of fire-crackers, Christmas sparklers, and stink-bombs. No doubt the effectiveness of their efforts was one thing which led the second class, the churchmen, to re-examine the whole structure of the church which was under fire. We have found them of late years setting off bombs all over the church. And some of us have felt at times that they were engaged in a nasty business—this apparent attempt to destroy confidence in and allegiance to the church. But we saw not deep enough in those fearful moments. Their bombs were as friendly and useful as the surgeon's knife. They have sought to keep the temple intact, effective, and true to its noblest mission in the modern world. The bombs of the wise and unwise enemies of the church—bombs often set with ignorant and malicious hands; and the bombs of the churchmen bombs set with fear that the great structure they loved would come tumbling down, have left the foundations, ceilings and walls of the great church unharmed. The fierce bombardment from without and from within has only served to increase our faith in the church by demonstrating to the world her stability. Surely she is founded on a rock! Her foundations are laid deep in human nature and human need, and will not be moved. She has withstood the shocks and lost nothing more than moss from her ceilings and ivy vines from her windows. And these we were forward to see blown away. The bombing continues from both quarters but the church, like a great oak with arms lifted heavenward, stands serenely, confidently, triumphantly.

Small Shells

"A few of you men are more or less antagonistic toward the church. Some of you are friendly in a way, but painfully indifferent. No few of you profess to be disciples of Christ; yet feel no need of the church and have no apparent sense of personal responsibility for it. Occasionally one from your midst will set off a wet package of small fire-crackers in the direction of the church. It is utterly surprising what small shells the average man will use when he attacks the church. I asked the non-churchmen of this class to write me on the subject: Why I am not a member on any church. One of my good friends gave as his chief reason that church members violated the Sabbath. He could not commune with Sabbath breakers! Which recalled to my mind the saying of Jesus that there are some men who will strain at a gnat and swallow a camel. All other reasons I received were nearly as sound as this one. I only mention this one to indicate the type of reasons advanced, and to illustrate how feeble are most men's criticisms of the church. So I want to speak to the main to those men here who for one reason or another are affiliated with no church. My purpose is to answer at least in part the question: Why join the church?

"Its exalted mission in the world constitutes one valid reason for joining the church.

"Here is an institution the whole mission of which is to promote the kingdom of God in the lives of men. This is equivalent to saying that its mission is to lead men to live in the spirit of Christ. This is the trunk of its mission; it has many branches. Among other things, for instance, its attempts to lead men to a conscious fellowship with God, and to an attitude of trust in His love and goodness. Then, it seeks to so instruct and motivate men that they will live the social implications of the belief in the Fatherhood of God and its corrollory, the brotherhood of man. Again, the church fosters the religious spirit in the individual and social lives of men. We note also that it aims to extend the kingdom of God to all people. And finally, it aims to be the institution through which the spirit of Christ expresses itself to each succeeding generation of men. Needless to say, no other organization in the world has a mission to compare with this one.

"May I urge you to get the main mission of the church clear in your minds. If one does not understand what the main mission of the church is, the objections that one raises will be beside the point as a rule. Here is where the average man who condemns the church as a failure stumbles and his darts go beside the mark. For instance, if a man conceives the church to be 'a paradise for the perfectly sanctified' instead of a hospital for those who need help and strength' that man is sure to have the colic. He sees the unholy men with whom he deals tramping up and down the 'golden' isles of the church with their muddy shoes and soiled clothes on, and then cries out: 'What! Is this the church? Then away with it!' That man's entire feeling toward the church would be changed if he viewed the church as 'the body of Christ,' the body of him who associated with sinners that he might save them; with the socially and religiously sick that he might heal them.

Short of Perfection

"But some one is already saying: 'But the church does not live up to its mission you outline for it and that is the reason I do not join it.' I am not ashamed to admit the fact that the church does not fulfill its mission perfectly. As long as its ideals are so divine and its materials are so human, just so long will it fall short of perfection. But is it not true that all organizations with great ideals fail to realize them fully? Take our government. It purports to be a government 'of the people, by the people, for the people.' But who will contend that it realizes that ideal perfectly? No one familiar with the facts. Again, take your service clubs. Do they put into perfect effect their ideals of service? Most assuredly they do not. Neither do your lodges, nor any other organizations with which I am acquainted fully realize their ideals as set forth by their newly elected presidents, or an occasional minister who comes before them to cough out a few words in a fog of smoke. But because the government fails at many points, the clubs and lodges fail, gives us no adequate reason to abolish and disband them. They do too much good in spite of their failures. The same is true of the church. It fails in many respects, but it succeeds more than it fails and its successes are the sources of the best in our lives.

"You who have read the Gospels will recall the fact that the Jewish Church of Jesus' time was not a perfect institution. The official church of his day was about as unideal as one could find in all history. Its leaders had perverted true religion. It was full of pretense, hypocrisy, sham, and sin. It had unlovely people in it. It had unjust people in it. It had narrow minded and bigoted people in it. It was cold and unkindly in the main. More objections could be raised against membership in the organization to which Jesus belonged than could be raised against most any religious denomination that exists today. But we find Jesus nowhere withdrawing from the established religious organization of his day. This is rather suggestive to me. A man like Jesus found it worth while to affiliate himself with the organized religion of his time. He could have found plenty of excuses for discontinuing his membership, but 'as his custom was he went into the synagogue on the Sabbath day.' If Jesus found it worth while to continue in an imperfect organization, I believe we ought to also. If any one could have lived as good out of the church as in it, Jesus could. But the fact is he stayed with it.

"If any of you have read the epistles of Paul, and read them with any understanding or imagination, you will recall that the churches to which he wrote were far from being areas of paradise in which dwelt spotless saints. They had good and bad members. Paul exhorted the good ones to help the bad ones, not to withdraw from them. He had the correct conception of the function of the church 'Brethren if a man be overtaken in a fault, ye which are spiritual, restore such an one in the spirit of meekness; considering thyself, lest thou also be tempted.' Had this great apostle waited in Ephesus, Corinth, or Thessalonica, till he gathered a group of spiritually perfect men before he organized a church, he would have lived and died his life in vain in the first city he visited. But he took them as he found them, and set before them the living Christ and his ideals and spent the rest of his life helping them grow in grace, and knowledge, and power. Many come into the modern church who are not Christians in the highest sense—I wonder if any of us are! The church's mission is to help them, to help all of us to grow in grace, to know and live the spirit of Christ. And I contend that such a mission though not perfectly realized ought to win every man into church membership.

"Another reason for joining the church, as is implied in the foregoing discussion, is that we need the church.

Need of Church

"Some of you will deny any need of the church in your religious lives. 'I can live a Christian life outside the church as well as in the church,' is the old answer. Those who give this answer mean, no doubt, that they can be Christians without affiliating themselves with any particular denomination. Let us grant for the present, for the sake of argument, the truth of this position. Then I ask: Where did such ones get their ideas of God and the Christian religion? If you will think you will know where they got them. They got them from their associations with Christian people who were church members as a rule, who in turn had learned them from the church directly or indirectly. Now the point I want to lay hold of here is not whether or not you can live the Christian life outside some denomination, but that you cannot live the Christian life separate and independent of the church. Your spiritual life and the spiritual life of the churchman come from the same source, namely, the life fostered by the church through all the ages, and I call upon any of you to give an account of the spiritual ideals and the spiritual life in the world today independently of the Church of Jesus Christ. Abraham Lincoln, though not an official church member, drew his spiritual life in part from the Bible. John Bunyan's Pilgrim's Progress. Without the life of the church through the centuries I have no reason to believe that Mr. Lincoln would have been the great Christian that he was. Mr. Lincoln, like any other Christian who fails to join the Church of Christ, was in the ultimate sense a spiritual palagarist.

"You not only needed the church to get started in the Christian way, but you need it in order to keep going in that way in the highest sense. The Christian religion is of such nature that it cannot be lived in the highest sense separate from society. Man is of such nature that he has to have fellowship with men to be religious. The sense of a need for mutual fellowship in the matter of religion lies at the basis of organized Christianity. John Wesley observed long ago that the Bible knows nothing of solitary religion. It is only as we come into fellowship and cooperation with our fellowmen that we come to realize our religion at its best. The church is an institution designed to meet this fundamental spiritual need in man. The man who feels that he does not need the fellowship of Christians has a limited view of his religion.

"Then, have you no sense of responsibility for others? If you are spiritually strong, why not share that strength with your sinful brethren you see so much of in the church. We need you in the church. If you do not need us we need you. If the church cannot help you, maybe you can help the church. I am convinced that we all need each other to live the Christian life in the sense that our Lord would have us to. I certainly do feel the need of like-minded persons to help me to be what I aspire to be, and this is one of the reasons I believe in joining the church.

"Still another reason for joining the church is based on the fact that religion, like all other ideas, has to have a tangible, human organization through which to become effective in the lives of men.

"Take, for instance, that of governments. No system of government could be made to function effectively in human society without some form of a tangible organization through which to make its ideas live. No one would attempt to operate a bank, a business, or a social enterprise without an organization as a means of carrying them on. This is a principle that runs through all life. In 1918 when this country joined in the international attempt to commit suicide, President Wilson and his cabinet did not visualize men from all parts of this great country going to their local merchants and buying khaki uniforms, and guns and ammunition, and going to France to fight. They saw a great and complicated organization for the mobilization and the training of men, their transportation to and support in battle. Everything from the kitchen to the long, blood soaked battle lines was organized. We could not have been effective without it. We would have been torn to shreads had we advanced on the enemy separately, or without organized effort.

Refers to Whale

"Now when we come to that group of ideals symbolized by the term 'the Kingdom of God' the rule of the necessity of an organization for effectiveness still holds. If you believe that the ideals and the spirit of Christ would have continued in the world in an effective and triumphant way without some such organization as the church, you show your utter ignorance of history. We have no logical reason to believe that we would possess our great heritage of spiritual truth had not this great servant of God brought it down through the centuries and laid it at our feet. The man who claims to do the solo act in religion ought to face the deeper implications of his position. As I have indicated, one of these implications is that the world would be where it is religiously and otherwise even though there had been no such thing as the church in the past. There is also the implication that the future of the religious life of the world would be just as well without the church. Then there is the implication that every man ought to be for himself religiously. Also there is the implication that the countless millions in the past who have found their spiritual life in the church were in fact deluded; that they would have been as well off without the church. No! This position leads to error in every direction. We have always needed organized religion, we need it now, and we shall always need it.

"Some of you saw the whale that was on exhibition here last week and heard one of the attendants tell how those small pilot fish directed the whale to his food, and that without them he could not live. You recall the interesting fact that after they got the whale to the food which consisted of fish, they swarmed along the side of his mouth and fed upon the fish he caught and prepared for them. They gave life to the whale and he in turn gave life to them. Is this not what the church does for us and what we do for it?"

MARTIN TALKS ON HEALING

Divine Cures Discussed in Bible Class Address

Divine healing in a day when the great majority of persons depend upon what they believe to be a science removed from the powers of God was chosen as a subject Sunday by Judge P. A. Martin in his address before the Men's Bible class of the Floral Heights Methodist church. Judge Martin pointed out that our human agencies for cure of disease were made good through the blessings of God and pointed out the kind of divine healing to be found in this modern time.

His address in part was as follows:

"Out of the lesson of today there comes the age-old question of divine healing and faith cure, for this is one of the outstanding incidents of the power of Christ over all manner of human ills and complaints. The daughter of the woman of Canaan was grievously vexed with a devil. This form of expression, in that day and age meant that the daughter was insane; probably a victim of epilepsy or some kindred mental disorder. The mother's insistent and persistent faith resulted in her cure at the hands of the Great Physician. Then returning to Galilee, the Master went up into a mountain and a multitude of the people came to Him bringing their sick and lame and blind and dumb and He cured them all by His divine power.

Support for Beliefs

"Now there are thousands of good people who believe that Jesus still exercises the same divine power. The Christian scientists and several other denominations of Christian people depend alone upon this divine power for the cure of all human ills. It is not my intention to criticise them. They are perfectly honest and sincere in their belief and they tell of many modern miracles of divine healing and I would not, if I could, say a single word to disturb their faith and their loyalty to their particular beliefs. There is an abundance of scriptural teaching to support a belief in such healing.

"However, it is my own belief that we are expected to use such human agencies for the cure of disease as science has provided, praying to God always to bless these agencies to our good, so far as is consistent with the divine plan and will. I well remember an old country doctor I knew back in the hills of North Carolina in the days of my childhood. Hundreds of the mountain folk sent for him in time of sickness and he spent a long and useful life going about and doing good. When he reached the bedside of his patient he always knelt down and prayed for the help of the Great Physician to assist him in the proper diagnosis of the disease and the treatment of the patient, calling into consultation, as it were, the powers of a heavenly world; and somehow he was a mighty healer of men and women and he enjoyed the confidence and respect of all. When he died the simple mountain folk for a distance of some 30 or 40 miles around went to his funeral and mourned his death.

"Now his was the sort of divine healing I believe in. I have always thought that if I were nigh unto death it would be a great consolation, if not a real help to me to have the attendance of just such a doctor at my bedside. And I would like to know also that my Christian friends were all praying for me too, to spare my life, if it was of any further use in the world, and if not, then to give me a peaceful and painless death and a joyous entry into a better land.

Modern Work

"Connected with this lesson also comes the thought of the mission of the church of God to relieve suffering humanity by the erection of hospitals and furnishing free treatment to the poor. The Roman Catholic church has long been doing this work for its people and the public at large and a great deal of its wonderful hold upon its people is due to its continued performance of its mission of healing through its hospitals and its white-robed sisters of mercy whose lives are devoted to the care of the afflicted. In late years several of the Protestant denominations have entered the hospital work also and our own church now has an organized general board and many of the conferences, including our own, have hospitals now in operation that are doubtless doing great good.

"There never was a hospital erected anywhere, public or private, church or municipal, that did not owe its existence, directly or indirectly to the religion of Jesus. It is an institution that goes hand in hand with Christianity. In our mission fields we have first the mission station then a medical missionary with his clinic, then a regular hospital. And surely this scientific healing done in the name of Jesus, is in a very literal sense divine healing itself.

"It may have been that the daughter of the woman of Canaan was not a crazy person; she may have been only vexed with the devil of sin and wickedness, just like we have all been; for all have sinned and come short of the glory of God. She may have been just a wild and wilful girl, beyond the control of her loving mother, just like thousands of girls and boys are at this day. Just like my child and your child may be right now. To those of us so situated the lesson offers great encouragement to keep on working and praying. This woman was rebuked by the apostles, then by the Master himself, but she continued her prayers and entreaties until Jesus exclaimed: 'O woman, great is thy faith: be it unto thee even as thou wilt,' and her daughter was made whole from that very hour.

"There is always hope for the boy or the girl whose parents are praying for them, however sorely vexed of the devil they may be, or wherever they may be."

County Officials To Study Report

Consideration of the annual report of Paul Barnett, county auditor, which was issued Saturday, will be the most important item of business before the county commissioners court at its regular weekly meeting Monday, it was announced Sunday by M. A. Bundy, commissioner for precinct No. 1 (Wichita Falls.)

The report indicated a reduction of $326,000 in the county's bonded debt during 1929, in addition to payment of $146,742.27 in interest. The report also listed extensive road and bridge improvements in each of the four precincts, the work having been carried on without the necessity of bond issues.

The commissioners court Monday will also receive bids on supplies for all precincts in the county. The supplies will include gasoline, oil and all other necessities for carrying out precinct work, Mr. Bundy said.

Club Members to Auction 75 Trees at Meeting

Members of the Kiwanis club will dispense with the usual luncheon meeting Monday in order to stage an outdoor picnic Monday evening at 6 o'clock with their families at the Holliday creek park site recently presented by the club to the city for a new park-playground.

Among the items of entertainment planned for Monday night's party will be a band concert. Food for the crowd is being prepared under the supervision of Tom Medders.

Seventy-five trees located in the park will be auctioned to the highest bidders, it was said, as the first step in a campaign to prepare the site for definite transfer to the city.
