Death Slinks In Wake Of 4 Oil Disasters

TWO DEAD AND 35 ARE MISSING AS RESULT OF FOUR TRAGEDIES THAT COST 18 MILLION DOLLARS

TWO SHIP TRAGEDIES FOLLOW FIRE IN SAN LUIS OBISPO AND NEW ORLEANS IS SCENE OF FRENZIED SEARCH FOR VICTIMS

(By Associated Press.)

Two persons are dead, thirty-five are missing, and $18,000,000 worth of property has been destroyed in four disasters involving oil, ships and property in two widely separated parts of the country. Thirty members of the crew of the Dutch steamer, Silvanus, are missing as a result of a collision with a Standard Oil tanker in the Mississippi river below New Orleans. Five persons were believed to have been killed and more than two score were injured, when another Standard Oil tanker exploded at a New Orleans dry dock.

The huge property loss was suffered in two oil reservoir fields at San Luis Obispo and Brea, Calif. The fire in the former field was rated as the greatest petroleum conflagration in the history of the American oil industry, with a probable loss of $15,000,000. Two persons were killed. The loss at Brea was estimated at $2,000,000. Both oil tank farms were owned by the Union Oil Company.

NEW ORLEANS, April 9.—Searchers today continued their task of searching for bodies of more than thirty-five sailors, who are believed to have lost their lives in two Mississippi River disasters in the New Orleans district yesterday and last night. Authorities believe it possible that the death toll will not be as large as had been expected.

Several boats today centered their activities near Pointe La Hache, La. about forty miles below New Orleans where the Dutch steamer Silvanus last night collided with the Standard Oil Company's tanker Thomas H. Wheeler.

Chinese Unaccounted For

Early today thirty Chinese members of the crew of the Silvanus were unaccounted for. None of the Thomas H. Wheeler seamen were badly injured.

Five men were officially reported missing, another unaccounted for by relatives and two critically hurt as a result of five oil explosions aboard the Standard Oil tanker steamer O. T. Waring in a dry dock here yesterday. Those officially missing from the O. T. Waring are Edward Blazer, Joseph Reiss, E. T. Bayh, Manuel Aviline and Perry Laurier. They were real dents of New Orleans.

Other Sailors Unhurt

In addition, Sider Roth, a local sailor, was reported missing by members of his family. Forty-four other members of the crew were hurt.

Shortly after the Dutch and American ships collided a severe explosion occurred aboard the foreign owned tanker which was bound for London with a cargo of benzine. A few minutes later the vessel ran against a bank and a minor explosion followed. The impact with the earth plunged the tanker back into the stream. It was caught in the current and carried down the river eleven miles before burning to the water's edge and sinking.

Meanwhile, members of the crew of the Thomas H. Wheeler, were successful in their efforts to extinguish a blaze which originated in the accident. The Thomas H. Wheeler was beached.

(AP)—One probably fatally hurt, and three others, all of San Angelo, seriously injured, was the toll of an automobile accident nine miles west of here shortly before noon today when an automobile skidded and went down a steep embankment on the Weatherford road in drizzling rain.

LABOR ENTERED THREE NEW STATE IN WET BATTLE HIGHWAYS ASKED

Union Men Favor Beer, States Representative On Stand In Capital Today

(By the Associated Press.)

WASHINGTON, April 9.—Challenging the prohibition legions to a showdown at the ballot box on modification of the Volstead act, spokesmen for the American Federation of Labor and the Senate liquor committee, said the working man wants beer and wine and would be better if he had them.

Called to the witness stand by the wets, as they neared the end of the work allotted them for presentation of their testimony, a succession of officials of the Federation and several of its departmental representatives, the present law a fault, declared it favored the rich at the expense of the poor and predicted that a national referendum would show a majority for a change.

Range of Testimony Wide

Their testimony ran a wide range. It touched on the ability of Governor Smith to get himself re-elected on a wet ticket in New York, on irregularities in prohibition and politics in Ohio and on the condition among seamen in Portland, Ore. Some of the labor spokesmen opposed the return of the saloon, but united in asking for beer and wine.

A picturesque chapter of the testimony was recited by Andrew Furuseth, western chief of the Seaman's Union, who said that he himself had been a prohibitionist but had taken to wine after he reached sixty. Undoubtedly, he said, "the raking and scrapings of Hell and bedlam," that make up the rank and file of "sea men" would be better off with wine and beer than they are with "poison."

Grins Prevail As Spring Rain Wets Plains Territory

A heavy mist, which fell here throughout the greater part of Thursday night turned into rain Friday morning shortly after daybreak, and as the day wore on the fall gradually increased until by the middle of the afternoon the precipitation was coming down in a good volume.

It is estimated that between one-third and one-half an inch had fallen by 3 o'clock, with low-hung clouds still heavily laden and the fall continuing. Indications point to the belief that the fall is general over the entire Plains section.

Reports from Slaton Friday morning said that a heavy deluge had fallen there early Friday morning, flooding the entire city, and in some instances causing considerable worry to business men as water threatened to enter store buildings in lower portions of the city.

Reports at the Union Bus Terminal here early this afternoon said that the fall was general and heavier here than at points as far west as Muleshoe, south as far as Lamesa and Sweetwater, east to Floydada, and north to the Panhandle. The fall apparently was heavier to the south than other directions, with plentiful quantities falling in all parts of the South Plains.

The fall here was slow and of a more or less misty nature that will be of inestimable benefit to farm and range conditions in the county, even though the need for moisture has not been felt very appreciably since the heavy snow and rainfall in late March. Temperature remained about normal for spring weather, and practically no wind accompanied the fall.

The trial opened here Monday afternoon.

Big Bambino, With Reduced Waist Line, Pounds Well Known Agate To Help Team-mates Wallop Dodgers

(By the Associated Press)

Intimidable Babe Ruth, one of the hardest hitters, is finding that he can send the ball to the far reaches of the diamond.

His waist-line somewhat reduced in comparison to last year, the New York Yankee slugger has been pounding out safe hits with a semblance of regularity during the present training season.

He figured prominently in his team's fifth straight victory over the Brooklyn Dodgers yesterday by connection with a homer and brace of doubles.

Sens Blank Giants

Bucky Harris and his Washington Senators have further convinced John McGraw of the New York Giants that they will be in the running next fall as recently forecast by McGraw. At Atlanta, Ga., yesterday, the Nats played tight ball to shut out the New Yorkers, allowing only two men to reach second and one to reach third. The two teams moved to Norfolk today and on Saturday and Sunday will finish the series which now stands a 2 to 1 in favor of the Senators.

The St. Louis Cardinals, who today closed their training tour yesterday with a victory at Springfield, Mo., and will meet the other home team, the Browns, at St. Louis tomorrow. With Lamotte, McManus and Davis hitting well, the Browns play Memphis again today. Their game ended with a tied score yesterday.

K. C. Beats Cubs

Chicago's Cubs, fanned in sunny California, went down to defeat yesterday in Kansas City's cold and snow. The opposing Blues got to the veteran Alexander for eight hits and three runs in five frames. The two clubs met again today. The Chicago White Sox were again cheated out of a game by the weather, this time at Evansville, Ind.

Rain yesterday caused postponement of the first game of the Boston city series to be played by the Braves and Red Sox. The Philadelphia Athletics and Phillies will meet twice more before the season opens.

Unsettled weather at Nashville yesterday resulted in the Detroit Tigers missing their first day's workout since spring training season opened.

Will Announce Openers

Announcements on opening game line-ups are being made from all sides, McGraw says Lindstrom will start at third for the Giants and that he will keep Tyson, Carter and Moore, rookies, outfielders. Pittsburgh's Pirates, 1925 champions, will have Big Bee in left field under Paul Weaver, coast "find" improves his batting.

The Pirates open a three-game series with the Louisville Colonels today and will arrive in St. Louis Monday for the season's opener on Tuesday.

Clevelanders Silent

Either Homer Summa or Cliff Lee will tend the right garden for the Cleveland Indians when they open the season with Detroit. Assuring salary questions are a club's private business, President Barnard has refused to comment on the report that Pitches Uble and Shaste will receive the most money ever paid them if their work of this season is of high calibre. Hendricks of the Cincinnati Reds plans to use two rookie hurlers in the initial four-game series against the Cubs. Danbner, only regular in-prime condition, will pitch the opener, and Mays the next.

Catcher Wingo, unsigned will discuss his future with the club bosses today.

ATHLETES OF WEST FACE EAST WITH HIGH HOPES

SAN FRANCISCO, April 9. (AP)—Western athletes are gathering for a vigorous summer campaign on the eastern front.

Led by the University of Southern California with six of its biggest field and track stars that battered down opposition for the 1925 I. C. A. A. A. championships at Philadelphia, the collegiate invasion will be supported by cohorts of the tennis and golf world, racing crews, swimmers and miscellaneous performers.

Besides the six veterans who helped with the track title for Southern California last year, including Captain Bud Houser, intercollegiate champion discus thrower, there are many new stars, one of whom, Lee Barnes, vaulted into first place at the 1924 Olympic games while yet in high school.

Stanford is grooming several track stars for the national competition among them Erskine Coverly, a transfer from Arizona University and a 19-second sprinter. California has the usual large field including Phil Barber who stepped the century in 9.9 in practice. Barber, however, must make up scholastic deficiencies if he is to go East.

With a world's record for an objective, a veteran four mile relay team will be entered by Oregon Agricultural College in two, possibly more, of the eastern and middle-western relay meets. Trainer M. H. Butler has invitations from Drake, Iowa, April 23-24, the Kansas Relays a week earlier and the Penn relays whose date conflicts with Drake. The Oregon team may decide to run in the Layola meet in Chicago as was done last year.

Two of the four runners, Percy Hall and Boyce Clayton were members of the team that broke the Kansas record by 21 seconds with the time of 18:07 and a week later made a mark of 17:59 equalled only three times in 25 years at Drake. Tedd Butts is the third veteran, prevented from making the trip last year by illness and for the fourth Butler has seven vets to choose from.

Washington and California matches coars April 9 for the right to represent the Pacific Coast in the national intercollegiate regatta and it is possible also, that the losing crew will compete at Poughkeepsie, especially if the losers put up a good race.

Hawaii, already represented in the national woman's swimming championships by Miss Mariechen Wehselau will make a second bid for honors through an entry in the international regatta class yacht races, on Long Island Sound. Herbert Dowsett, Honolulu sportsman will represent the most westerly outpost of the United States.

Five Stanford swimmers already have left on a tour of the country to take part in ten meets between the two coasts.

In the tennis division, coast stars are marshalling for a concerted drive Helen Wills will return from Europe in time to defend her national woman's title and William M. Johnston second ranking player among the men will swing rackets in various eastern tournaments although he will not cross to Europe this year.

Another star of this section, Miss Helen Jacobs rules the national junior girls' division but whether she will defend her title has not been decided. Her plans will be made known in June.

Two court performers from the West Coast will not enter national event this season. They are Cranston Holman, eighth ranking player and national junior title holder and Gerald Stratford, national intercollegiate doubles title holder. Instead these sterling young players will tour the Far East touching at Japan, the Philippines and Hawaii.

RAIN BREAKS INTO COUNTY MEET HERE TODAY

Rain, which began falling here early Friday morning, considerably dampened the ardor and enthusiasm of both officials and participants in the Lubbock county track and field meet that was to have opened here today for a two day session.

Literary events that are staged under a foot held away today, as representatives from various schools throughout the county gathered here to participate. Preliminaries in tennis, both boys' singles and doubles, were to have been played today, but slight hopes of doing so were held early this afternoon.

The weather permitting, rural school track and field events will be run off in the morning on Tech field, and class A and B schools will participate in a similar meet in the afternoon. Tennis finals also are scheduled to be played Saturday morning on the courts at the high school. The county meet is under direction of Ernest Lowrey, director general of county athletics, who is coach of the Waterbers track and field team.

New Conference In East Restricts Baseball Activity

NEW YORK, April 9. (AP)—If there is any "over-emphasis" upon college football, the group of Pennsylvania colleges in the newly formed Eastern collegiate Athletic Conference is determined to eliminate it.

Besides adopting a set of six articles placing restrictions on football activities, modelled much along the lines of the "Big Three" program, the conference has taken steps to stamp out "the evil of commercialism." Gettysburg, Muhlenberg, Franklin & Marshall, Dickinson and Ursinus have accepted this program but Haverford declined to join the conference because it does not adopt rules to eliminate "athletic subsidizing."

These are the articles adopted: (1) There shall be no training tables; (2) Scouting of opponent's games and scouting for future players will be prohibited; (3) There shall be no seasonal coaches; (4) Football practice shall not begin before September 15; (5) The one-year residence rule shall be enforced to prohibit freshmen from playing on varsity teams; (6) No game shall be played before the last Saturday in September.

Women Will Hold Olympics In Sweden

GOTHENBURG, April 9. (AP)—Olympic games for women only, to which all nations will be invited to send two competitors for each event, have now been definitely arranged for August 27-29 in Gothenburg this year.

They will mark the second international contest of the kind, held under the auspices of "La Federation Sportive Feminine Internationale" and since this body also plans to cooperate with the International Olympic Committee in future games, the official title of the meet in Sweden this summer will be "The Second International Athletic Games for Women."

OLD RIVALS ARE FIGHTING AT GALVESTON

WOMEN'S GOLF MEET HAS MRS. LANHAM AND MRS. SCOTT IN FINALS

(By the Associated Press)

GALVESTON, April 9.—After a three years interval, Mrs. John H. Lapham of San Antonio and Mrs. Rufus Fenner Scott, Jr. of Paris today in the semi-finals of the state links championship renewed their rivalry.

In 1923, Mrs. Lapham, playing over her home course, the San Antonio Country Club links, in the semi-final of the Texas title tourney, defeated Mrs. Scott, then Miss Priscilla Rogers of Galveston.

Mrs. Lapham also disposed of her next opponent and won the 1922 title. The San Antonio woman did not play in 1924 and Mrs. Scott that year won the championship.

In the other semi-final battle, Mrs. L. W. Magruder of Waco, 1924 city champion of Memphis, Tenn., met Mrs. J. J. Morris, Brookhollow Country Club star of Dallas.

Mrs. Scott Leading.

GALVESTON, April 9. (AP)—Mrs. Rufus Fenner Scott Jr. of Paris, Texas, was leading Mrs. John H. Lapham of San Antonio at the end of the first nine holes in the semi-finals of the state championship golf tourney 2 up; Mrs. L. W. Magruder of Waco was leading Mrs. J. J. Morris of Dallas five up at the end of first nine.

Mrs. Scott was playing beautiful golf, repeatedly outdriving her opponent. Mrs. Lapham missed a six inch putt at the eighth hole which would have squandered the match had she sunk it.

GALVESTON, Apr. 9. (AP)—A slender, brown-haired maid in the person of Mrs. Rufus Fenner Scott, Jr. of Paris today upset the calculations of the dopsters by defeating five and 3 the most feared golfer in the tourney, Mrs. John H. Lapham of San Antonio, to qualify for the state championship finals.

Saturday Mrs. Scott, formerly Miss Priscilla Rogers of Galveston, will battle Mrs. L. W. Magruder of Waco who won over Mrs. J. J. Morris of Dallas five and three.

Unperturbed by the fact that she was given only an outside chance to defeat the redoubtable San Antonio ace, state champion in 1921 and 1922, and undefeated in a Texas title meet, Mrs. Scott played courageous, heady golf from the start. With one exception she was down the heart of the gateway on every shot from the tee, frequently outdriving Mrs. Lapham 5

A WEST TEXAS THREAT

Has West Texas threatened East
Texas and Central Texas in the matter of cotton growing? This from the Brownwood Bulletin indicates that it has:

A few years ago East Texas regarded West Texas as an arid waste, capable of producing nothing more useful than a few cowhides and an occasional sandstone, but not so now.

It is new land that is being cultivated in West Texas. Hundreds of thousands of fertile acres have been subjected to cultivation on the vast prairies of the plains section of the state, and it has been found in all the South. Because of the enormous acreage that West Texas can and does cultivate, it is in position to command the attention of the whole cotton industry, and if all of West Texas goes in for cotton production and for nothing else, the total yield of that section can be computed only in millions of bales. Only those who have gotten a glimpse of that great territory can envision the possibilities of West Texas. It is literally an empire, with an empire's broad lands.

In spite of all that can be done to prevent it, a record breaking cotton yield this year is almost a certainty.
For many seasons Texas has produced more cotton than any other two states in the South, and now that West Texas has become a cotton producing section, the potential yield of Texas has been doubled. There is an element of danger in this situation for every cotton state, for over-production will mean a lower price—a price that pays no profit. East Texas would do well to heed the injunction of West Texas, and produce some feed stuffs and West Texas would do well to profit by the experience of East Texas in past seasons, and produce some feed stuffs. Too much cotton is too much cotton, no matter where it may be produced.

STEWART'S WASHINGTON LETTER

TOURISTS PROTEST, BUT HANDSHAKING IS DEFINITELY OFF

By CHARLES P. STEWART
NEA Service Writer.

WASHINGTON. — White House
attendants knew there was due to be a terrible bowl, when President Coolidge announced he wasn't going to do any indiscriminate spring handshaking this year.

The week before and the week following Easter is the period of the capital's greatest popularity with tourists. A few important occasions, like inauguration bring bigger crowds to the city for a day or two, but the jam doesn't last so long.

The present season gave promise,
some time ago of being a record
breaker.
Hotels all were completely "booked up" in advance. "Personally-conducted" agencies were snowed under with business. The railroads had their plans laid for handling at least 200,000 passengers, in and out of town,
during the fortnight of maximum activity.

All this talk scared the president.
He said—that is, the "presidential spokesman" did—that he could stand about as much as the next man, but that shaking hands with 16,666 2-8 visitors every working day for two weeks
was too much for anybody.

He expressed a willingness to have callers file through his office during specified hours, and look at him, like a wild animal at the zoo, but he positively drew the line at shaking hands with anybody he isn't acquainted with personally.

Just as expected, the tourists are roaring vociferously.
By an eyelid of the president, without taking hold of him, isn't sufficient is a mystery nobody can solve,
with the exception of the average tourist. It's a fact, however.

THESE WOMEN

BEGIN HERE TODAY

Two women are deeply in love with HARRY MORTON, who is wealthy, attractive, middle-aged and unmarried. One is AUDREY, his 19-year-old ward. The other is NONA, a Chicago girl.

Morton, whose past is unknown
to the gossips of Peoria, has lived here for 15 years, maintaining also an expensive apartment in Chicago, which he visits weekly, taking Audrey with him.

Nona comes to his apartment
to ask forgiveness for a jealous attack she has made on him, and the two girls meet. Audrey declares her love for Morton, and asks him to marry her. He evades
the question, and hires JOHN PARRISH to be his secretary, instructing him to be a companion to Audrey. She detects his purpose. Trying another expedient, he orders Parrish to take $500 to Nona, and instruct her to buy a single piece of jewelry with it.

Parrish refuses to go.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY
(The names and situations in this story are fictitious.)

CHAPTER XI
It was a real crisis in the relation of Morton and his newly engaged secretary.

Boylike, Parrish expressed his own determination by clenched fists, and flushed, tense face. Morton, the man of the world, sure of himself and of his moral mastery of the situation, sat looking at Parrish as he might have looked upon an interesting child.
He waved his hand toward a chair
"Sit down," he ordered.

"Now," Morton continued, "will you tell me exactly why you won't do as I tell you?"

The young man shifted in his seat.
Finally, his eyes fixed upon the floor
his feet twisted together, and his hands in nervous motion upon the arms of the chair, he answered.

"I've heard about your reputation,"
he blurted.

Morton smiled. "Just what have you heard?" he inquired.

Parrish considered. "Well, I know
of that of her guardian. I heard

Arising he walked to the window and stood there a few moments, his hands thrust deep in his trouser pockets. After a silence, he turned and resumed.

"Are you going to do my errand?"

Parrish slowly got up, reached for the check and for the penciled memorandum that his employer had written a few minutes before, and silently left the room.

Morton watched him go, and then with a short laugh, resumed his seat and began dictating letters.

When Morton, with Audrey and Parrish arrived at Peoria the next morning, it was raining. The cloud seemed to hang at the level of the house-tops, and the air was chill.

"Daddy, let's walk in the rain," Audrey proposed.

Morton nodded. Turning to the chauffeur, he told him to take their baggage to the house, and asked Parrish if he, too, wanted to walk.

"I have your brief-case," Parrish
said, "and there are some things
I want to look at in it. I'd better ride."

His eyes were on Audrey while he spoke, as if waiting for her to ask him to come. She said nothing, however, and so he rode away in the enclosed car, as the man and girl trudged off in the down-pour. Neither wore a raincoat, and they had no umbrella.

"I suppose I'll be getting out, when I no longer like the drive-of rain in my face," he said.

She hugged his arm with hers.
"You'll never be old," she said. "There is something young in you that always is going to be there."

They were dripping wet when they got home, and retired to their own apartments for a hasty bath, and a change of clothes.

When they reappeared, the rain had ceased, and the sun had begun to shine.

"Want to come down to the office
with me?" he asked.

It was a rare request from him. For most of her life, Morton's office had been as strange to Audrey as if it were no relation to her own existence.

Parrish considered. "Well, I know
of that of her guardian. I heard

His eyes were on Audrey while he spoke, as if waiting for her to ask him to come.

what your reputation is. They say that you have lots of women on the string, and that you run around with them to places where you oughtn't to go, and—and—well, everybody says
that you're a roue."

"And," said Morton, gently, "just what has that to do with your refusing to go on my errand?"

"Parrish looked up, evidently surprised. "Why," he said, staring at Morton, "you are sending me on an immoral errand. You're sending me with money to buy jewels for a woman."

Morton leaned forward across his desk. "Does it occur to you," he asked "that you are displaying yourself as an insufferable young prig?"

"Do you know what a prig is?"
Morton persisted.

"A prig," Morton continued, "is a Pharisee—and a confounded nuisance to boot. As you get older, you'll find that you have enough to do to look after your own morals, without sitting in judgment on the morals of others."

"Just look what your idea is! Here's an employer who told you to take a check to a given address, and deliver a message. You don't know whether the woman you are to meet is a good woman or not. You know nothing about her. In your self-righteousness you decide that the errand is a bad
one. Therefore, you won't do it. Parrish!"

He spoke the name suddenly, and the young man started. "Sir?" he said
"Have you dirty spots in your mind?" Morton's tone was coldly inclusive, and his eyes seemed to be boring into the young man before him.

Parrish was confused. "No sir,
don't think so," he said. "I'm quite sure not."

He assented, and together they secured the check.

As they passed a telegraph office
Morton asked the girl to wait a moment. He left her standing on the step, as he went inside, and hastily wrote a telegram.

"Can you come to Peoria tomorrow
to stay two weeks?" it read.

Telling the clerk to charge the message to his account, he rejoined Audrey, and together they went on down
the street.

"Here's why I wanted you to come to my office," he said, as the girl settled herself in a chair beside his desk.

He took some papers from a drawer
and passed them to her. She lifted the folded documents, shuffling them in her hands, and looked at him inquiringly.

"You haven't known it," he said
"but since your eighteenth birthday
you have really been independent of me."

"But I don't want to be independent of you," she said promptly.

He laughed. "But this is a practical matter—a financial affair. Those papers that you have in your hand mean this, briefly—you are a rich woman. I have turned over to you, in cash, and bonds, one-half of everything that I own—or used to own."

He looked at her inquiringly. She smiled, laid down the papers, and kissed him warmly.

"Thank you, daddy," she said, "but I don't want it. I don't want to have you give me all that. You've given me everything as it is, and I want you to have all the money."

He shook his head, as he patted her fondly on the cheek.

"But, my child, there are certain practical things in life. There may come a time when you dislike me ulterly."

She tried to seal his mouth with her hand, but he held her wrist, and went on: "Whether that time come or not—whether you like me, or don't like me—it is a good thing for you to have your own money, and to be able to do exactly what you want.

"There is an account in the bank in your name. It is enough to take you around the world, if you want to do that. There's a safe-deposit box also in your name. It has in it railroad and government bonds, which you can turn into cash at any time
you want to. These bonds have coupons on them, and the interest on all those coupons belongs to you. They are yielding you a large income. You can turn the bonds into cash at any moment you desire. Here's the key to the box."

Humming in the desk again, he produced a key, and gave it to her.
She took it, and looked at it speculatively.

"I have no duplicate of the key," Morton went on. "That's your safe-deposit box, and everything in it is yours. Do exactly as you please with it, always."

She dimpled. "Can I buy new imported automobiles for you with the money?"

He laughed. "You CAN, but I wouldn't advise. It's like to select my own gigs. For a girl to buy a man an automobile is a good deal like buying his ties—there's apt to be a clash in judgment."

"The girl got in on the desk, before him, and stroked his hair. "Why did you do this for me?"

"Because I love you, and I want you always to be free to do whatever will make you happy," he said.

"Nothing makes me happy except to be with you," she said softly.

She held out her arms to him, but smiling, he turned in his chair, and arose.

"The office isn't a good place to make love," he laughed. "Do you mind waiting here while I go into the cashier's office a little while?"

He provided her with a book, and left her alone. Her eyes wandered curiously over the office. It had been two or three years since she had entered it before. The table on which she was sitting was of walnut, polished to a satin finish. So was Morton's desk, and so were the chairs that sat

about the walls.

"Expensive," she said to herself.
A large painting filled the space between the two windows. In the semi-gloom, it was startlingly life-like—the work of an able artist. As Audrey was looking at this, a clerk
entered, and laid an opened telegram
on Morton's desk.

As he went out, Audrey leaned forward with feminine curiosity, and read the message.

"Will come to you tomorrow, dear?"
she read. The signature was: "Nona."

go," said Mr. Harris, "tend to show that the Beaufort Sea is nearly landlocked in all directions toward the west."

Mr. Harris cited the Accounts and Papers of the Navy, page 162, volume 2, 1854, which describes how the tides are affected by the wind at Elson's Bay, east of Point Barrow. When the wind was from the east or north-east there was scarcely any rise in tide, but with the wind blowing a gale from the southwest the tide sometimes rose three and a half feet. The difference Mr. Harris drew was that the unknown coast line was not greatly distant from the north coast of Alaska, making a pocket in which the tides pile up.

Driftwood carried by ice current also gave evidence, little driftwood being found as far east of the mouth of the Mackenzie river as Coronation Gulf. Virtually none had been found along Banks Island.

"That the Beaufort sea is an ice trap is indicated by the observations of several explorers. Osborn described it as follows:

"Ice of stupendous thickness and in extensive floes some seven or eight miles in extent, was seen. The surface of it was not flat, such as we see in Baffin Strait and the adjacent seas, but rugged with accumulated snow, frost and thaws of centuries."

Important evidence also was furnished by the drifting of the Ill-fate Jeanette, sunk in 1879 after it had been deserted by Captain DeLong, with his crew froze to death.

The Jeanette became lodged in the ice at a point northeast of Wrangell Island and drifted westerly, going to pieces northwest of Bennett Island. The Fram, Nansen's ship, became icebound northwest of Bennett Island and drifted in a general course toward the Greenland Sea, showing a sharp turn in the ice current north-west of Bennett Island. Mr. Harris believed this indicated the point of a large body of land extending down to a point not far from Bennett Island, deflecting the ocean current southward. He also claimed that the unknown land cannot extend much beyond the pole, or it would have deflected the current in which the Fram drifted.

At the same time, he believed the undiminished tide at Bennett Island indicates a fairly narrow channel along which Nansen traveled.

The division of ocean currents in the eastern section of the Beaufort Sea, one current flowing northward and the other westward also indicated a large obstruction to the north in Mr. Harris' opinion.

Mr. Pope, and others supporting his expedition, feel that in these reasons they have sufficient evidence of a polar continent to justify their exploration.

GREAT REINDEER DRIVE TO TAKE PLACE IN ALASKA; TWO YEARS IS NECESSARY TO GET ANIMALS OUT

(By the Associated Press) ANCHORAGE, Alaska, April 9.—A great reindeer drive which will take two years and for spectacularity rival the big trail movements of Texas herds in frontier days will be undertaken in an effort to revivify an industry now menaced by lack of marketing facilities.

Under the direction of George Ashenfelter many thousand head of both government and privately owned deer will be driven overland from the Arctic to Broad Pass on the Alaskan railroad. The drive may be as large as 50,000.

A similar plan conceived two years ago by the Bureau of Education was abandoned for lack of funds.

Ashenfelter, a large herd owner, will sponsor the drive which will mean not only that removal of the deer from the north to a territory reached by rail but also means a more or less wholesale migration of Eskimo herd owners, most of whom have matriaculated in the government schools of huskandry.

"There is not an Eskimo in the Arctic who can support himself on his herd of reindeer," said Ashenfelter, owing to the lack of marketing facilities. The best they can get now for their animals is $10 to $15 a head with the scant population of their country for a market. On this he cannot provide the necessities of life for himself and family.

The Eskimo has been weaned from his primitive mode of livelihood, educated by the government and started in the reindeer business but finds himself unable to provide for himself and family the necessities of life, while herding his deer. To leave them unherded means their eventual passing to other hands.

"Under present conditions, with township service provided, deer must be either butchered at a season when the meat is not of the best or killed in the fall and stored. If the deer are moved to territory served by the Alaskan Railroad it will be possible to kill and ship any season. This is the reason why the big drive will be undertaken."

The drive plans call for cutting up the herds into units of about two thousand each with each unit supervised by skilled chief herders assisted by a number of herders, apprentices and collie dogs. The units would move several miles apart with their positions in the line of march reversed at intervals so that equal advantage of the browsing grounds would be obtained.

"Herds of educated owners total more than 125,000, but if only 50,000 of this number should participate it would create a series of herds stretching

Care will be taken to keep the deer and caribou separated because of the penchant of the wild animals to steal the domesticated does.

Ashenfelter expects that approximately 7,000 animals belonging to the Bureau of Education will be included in the trail movement. With his wife a full blood Eskimo, and their 5 children, Ashenfelter will leave for the north in June, to make preparations. Among the Eskimo who will participate are many skilled ivory carvers. They hope to create an Eskimo village near Cantwell, the center of the Southern reindeer industry. Mrs. Ashenfelter plans assembling a score of Eskimo women and opening a manufactory of bead and skin work.

Organizer Of Arctic Expedition Defends Risk Of Life And Money Expenditure For Polar Air Flights

NEW YORK, April 8. (AP)—Justification for the risk of life and expenditure of money involved in three American Arctic expeditions this summer was given today by Robert Anderson Pope, organizer of the all-American Arctic expedition.

His outfit will be commanded by Lieutenant Leigh Wade, assisted by Lieutenant H. H. Ogden, both of whom are round-the-world fliers.

All three American expeditions will attempt to locate, chart and claim for the United States a large body of land believed to lie north of Alaska and Eastern Siberia, spoken of by the explorers as "a new polar continent." A bulletin issued last year by the National Geographic society estimated that this land comprises about 1,000,000 square miles.

"Sufficient evidence is available," said Mr. Pope, "to justify the almost certain belief that such land exists."

Natives of the northern Alaskan and Siberian coasts have been convinced that land lay to the northward ever since Arctic explorers first began to inquire. They base their belief chiefly upon the northerly flight of birds in the spring as soon as the ice starts to go out, which is just before nesting season.

Some scientific sceptics think the birds fly clear across the Pole to Spitzbergen and Franz-Joseph Land, but the majority think they would not be likely to attempt such a long flight at the beginning of the nesting season.

E. W. Nelson, chief of the Bureau of Biological Survey of the United States Department of Agriculture has written Mr. Pope:

"My information concerning the flight of birds at Point Barrow, gained both during my residence in Alaska years ago and what has been learned since, all combine to indicate the probability of unknown lands to the north or northeast of that point. Also my observations on Wrangell Island indicate the probability of lands lying northerly from that island."

Mr. Nelson recalled the evidence of Captain Hooker of the Corwin in 1881 who found innumerable fresh tracks of wild geese on Wrangell Island but not a sign of the geese themselves, indicating a temporary stopping place for a greater number of migratory birds. Mr. Murdoch, the naturalist of the Ray Expedition, located near Point Barrow in the same year and the following two years, noted the flight northward of large flocks, Mr. Nelson stated.

Donald Colzow, of the Museum of the American Indian, also noted geese and ducks flying northward from Alaska.

Captain Edward P. Heredend, years ago reported that the natives wintering between Harrison and Camden Bays, Alaska, claimed that in the clear days of spring they often could discern land to the northward, but this is thought to have been merely a large island.

Captain John Keenan, of Troy, N. Y., cruising the Beaufort Sea north of the Alaskan shore, in search of whales in the seventies, offered more substantial evidence. After taking several whales the weather became thick and he stood to the north when the fog lifted land to the north was seen distinctly by him and all the members of his crew, but as he was not on a voyage of discovery and no whales were in sight, he gave the order to keep away the southward, he said.

In a later day, Peary on his unsuccessful attempt to reach the Pole in 1906 reported that he sighted land to the northwest of Grant Land. Observing from an investigation of about 2,000 feet, he could see land at a distance, which he named Crocker Land. Further north between latitudes 85 1/2 and 87 degrees, almost at the Pole, he found bear and fox tracks, indicating that land was not a great distance away.

As early as 1832, a Mr. Simpson, ship's surgeon of the Flover, reported that the Eskimos of Point Barrow had a tradition that members of their tribe once had been carried northward in a southeast gale to a hilly country inhabited by people like themselves, and that after staying a long while there they returned one Spring.

However, the late R. A. Harris, of the United States Coast and Geodetic Survey, offered what the explorers believe to be far more substantial information. Mr. Harris claimed that virtually all the tidal movement at the pole depends upon pressure from the sides of the North Atlantic Ocean entering the circumpolar seas between Greenland and Spitzbergen.

If there were no obstruction the tides at Bennett Island, north of the Siberian Coast, would be the same as at Point Barrow, he said. But the tides off Bennett Island rise and fall 20 feet, while off Point Barrow there is a tide of only 0.4 feet. Mr. Harris held this to be proof positive that there is some great obstruction around which the tides must flow. The hours of the tides show that they follow the circle of the Siberian coast around to Alaska, being seven hours earlier at Bennett Island than Point Barrow.

Further evidence of land to the north was furnished, Mr. Harris pointed out, by indications that the Beaufort Sea virtually is closed in to the north and eastward. Ice does not drift freely to the northward. It seems to be caught in a pocket, and is of remarkable thickness and ice. North-east winds will drive the ice to the westward, but there is little or no movement of the ice when the wind blows from the west.

"These circumstances, so far as they

FIRST TEST HOLE FOR OIL OR GAS SPUDED IN

The Watson test, the first attempt in Lubbock county for gas or oil, was spudded in at 5 o'clock Thursday afternoon about five miles northwest of here before the curious gaze of several hundred people who are deeply interested in the outcome of the test. H. I. Cline, drilling contractor, of Fort Worth, is in charge of the rig crew.

The test is being conducted by J. W. and Jax, E. Watson, father and son respectively, who own the ranch on which the location was made. The giant drill bit took its first bite of Lubbock county soil at two minutes past five, and in thirty minutes had bored its way several feet into the ground. Photographers, armed with cameras and kodaks, were much in evidence on the scene.

The well must be a minimum of 1,000 feet unless oil or gas is found in paying quantities at a shallower depth, the contract of Messrs. Watson with M. C. G. Peoria, also of Fort Worth, provides, Mr. Peoria, an experienced oil man, has expressed the belief that the liquid gold will be found somewhere in this depth, but has said that the chances, in his opinion, are better for gas than oil.

Drilling will go on continuously until the well is finished as far as weather and other conditions over which the drillers have no control are concerned, Mr. Cline said Friday morning.

CELEBRATION IS PLANNED FOR BIRTHDAY

183RD ANNIVERSARY OF THOMAS JEFFERSON IS GALA DAY

NEW YORK, Apr. 8. (P)—The hundred and eighty-third anniversary of Thomas Jefferson's birth will be celebrated with birthday parties in many sections of the country April 13, the principal ceremonies centering at Monticello, which now is a national memorial to the statesman.

Students, faculty and alumni of the University of Virginia, which Jefferson founded, will gather at the home in the morning to celebrate Founder's Day. Glenn Frank, formerly editor of The Century and now president of the University of Wisconsin, will be the speaker.

In the afternoon, special exercises will be held at Shadwell, a short distance away, where the Thomas Jefferson Memorial Foundation has erected a monument to mark his birthplace. Senator Robinson, of Arkansas, and Senator Willis, of Ohio, will be the speakers.

Governor Harry Flood Byrd, of Virginia, will officiate later at a reception at Monticello and after this floral tributes will be placed upon Jefferson's grave. In the evening there will be a ball.

The parties throughout the country are being held as a result of an invitation issued by Breckinridge Long, chairman of the Jefferson Centennial Committee, and they are being sponsored by Daughters of the American Revolution and other organizations.

Secretary of State Kellogg and Governor Smith, of New York, will deliver addresses at Monticello, July 4, when the hundredth anniversary of Jefferson's death will be commemorated and the hundred and fiftieth anniversary of the signing of the Declaration of Independence celebrated. The ceremonies will begin July 4 and continue through the following day.

GERMAN CHAMP IS HARD TO BEAT

REFEREE SAYS

NEW YORK, April 9. (P)—Eric Hagelacher, of Germany, has reached the peak of the professional 18.2 balkline billiard realm with a careful, methodical game which will not be readily surpassed by American sports of brilliance. In the estimate of the veteran referee, Charles Peterson, of St. Louis:

"A placid disposition not easily ruffled by unexpected 'breaks' at crucial periods of his matches adds to the smoothness of his play an essential factor for retention of the championship, said Peterson, who has officiated in 269 matches without dispute, including the last title contest in which Jake Schaefer was dethroned by the German star.

"Schaefer and Edouard Horemans, of Belgium, unquestionably are the most brilliant and spectacular players in the game," is Peterson's opinion. "But both are temperamental, and their remarkable long runs may be suddenly counteracted by slumps under unfavorable conditions.

"Schaefer and Hagelacher were both tested in their championship match at Philadelphia, and it was Hagelacher who best survived the conditions. In the first five hundred point block the German displayed the nearest approach to perfect billiards I have ever seen. He never committed a mistake—every carom was made off the two balls for position that I do not believe could have been improved upon.

"In the second block he was temporarily thrown out of stride by making a foul, but he recovered sufficiently to save his big advantage. Schaefer is the world's greatest billiard player at 18.2 balkline. Horemans, in one of his winning moods makes a close second. But with less favorable conditions, Hagelacher is not likely to be troubled."

Willie Hoppe, in the estimate of Peterson, was the greatest champion of them all for overcoming adverse conditions. He referred to a match which Hoppe played in Dallas, Texas, on a table which apparently had a flaw in one corner.

ANOTHER ROMANCE OF OCEAN IS WRITTEN

MIAMI, Fla., April 9. (AP)—Another romance of the sea was written here today with the unheralded arrival of the four masted schooner Alvena which sailed from Aberdeen, Wash. December 11, in a picturesque race with the Irene, a sister ship.

Laden with lumber the Alvena slipped quietly into anchorage in Bay Biscay. Hardly larger than the off-shore fishing smacks and sloops that ply the tropical waters, the Alvena's identity did not become known until shortly before noon.

Battered and bruised by her grueling experience in a Pacific storm, with canvas almost threadbare, decks unkept and blistered hull, the clipper ship virtually limped into port, a ghost of the proud schooner once known as the "Pearl of the Pacific."

TODAY'S MARKETS

Cotton Markets

NEW ORLEANS TRADING

NEW ORLEANS, April 9. (AP)—The cotton market opened steady with first grades unchanged to 1 point down. Although Liverpool cables were lower than here, their effect was offset by continued unfavorable weather in the belt. As the Northern market opened a little down, prices here eased off a few points after the opening call.

The market ruled fairly steady all morning, supported by reports of continued delays in prospects for further unsettled weather in the belt. Early in the morning improved on Secretary Hester's figures on takings of 375,000 to 285,000 bales, which was larger than expected. May traded up to 18.11c; July to 17.89c and October 16.09c. At noon the market was steady and at the highs.

The market ruled steadier during the afternoon, some buying being encouraged by the large mill takings for the week. There was also disposition on the part of shorts to cover on the unfavorable weather, outlook and soon reports for rain at many points. The market went up 3 to 13 points above the lows of the morning and six to 12 points above the previous close.

NEW YORK COTTON

NEW YORK, April 9. (AP)—The cotton market opened barely steady at a decline of four to six points in response to overnight selling orders. Prices covered most of the early losses with May selling at 18.78c at the end of the first hour.

The market held generally steady later in the morning. Selling of new crop months was restricted by the fear of renewed showers or rains in the Southwest, while there was further recovery by old crop trade or speculative shorts. The demand for May was supplied at a premium of about 53 to 55 points over July but early losses were recovered with May ruling around 18.78c and October 17.48c at mid-day.

WOOL REPORT

BOSTON, April 9. (AP)—The Commercial Bulletin tomorrow will say: Business in wool at the seaboard markets is dull and listless, with prices still sagging. By contrast, buying in the West has been somewhat spectacular and prices have risen for the week, although as the week ends, there seems to be less pressure to buy in the West.

With little or no support from the goods market and the mills showing marked indifference to the raw material, the trade is very unsettled.

Foreign markets keep fairly fair, especially on the finer qualities and Australia has been steady this week. Mohair is slow at the seaboard but moving in the interior. The San Angelo warehouse sold about 190,000 pounds at about 57 cents for goat and 67 cents for kid hair.
