NOBODY'S BUSINESS

BY JULIAN CAPERS JR.

Austin— The temperature of the weather and the Governor's race both mounted this week, as Ernest Thompson charged in a Lockhart speach that Attorney General Bill McCraw "bungled" the Lone Star gas rate case in the Supreme Court, and pledged himself to a continuation of the fight to cut gas rates for a million Texas consumers. As Thompson made the charge, the U. S. Supreme Court denied McCraw's motion for a rehearing of the case. McCraw, in turn, issued a four-hundred word denial, asserting that the case was lost in the lower courts before he ever became attorney general, and declaring the the state will win the rate reduction yet.

"Vernest" Out Of Luck

There was every indication that "Vernest O. Thompson", the Dallas filling station employee who seeks a place on the ballot, will not get his name on the ballot — at least not that way. Influential members of the state Democratic Executive committee, of which Myron Blalock, of Marshall, is chairman, were preparing this week-end to adopt a "resolution of policy", declaring the committee will not certify any candidate whose name is entered "with palpable intent to defraud the voters, and make a joke of the Demacratic executive committee." Meanwhile, the Dallas News dug up a story to the effect that "Vernest O. Thompson" has been listed in the retail credit records of Dallas as "Vivian O. Thompson", and never gone by the name of "Vernest."

Ernest Thompson issued a statement vigorously castigating the Dallas Thompson's obvious attempt to capitalize on the Thompson name. Similar statements also came from Governor Allred and later, after a report was circulated here that a man named "William McGraw" had been found, and that he had potential ambitions to be a candidate for governor, the Attorney General likewise denounced the "similar name racket".

There is a man whose sign near the highway at Hillsboro has for several years,proclaimed his name as "John Garner, Blacksmith", but so far he has not announced as a candidate for any public office.

That Man Allred Again

The story that Jimmie Allred will be named a Federal judge for the Southern Texas district was received with vigor here this week, and various insiders claimed absolute confirmation of the report, caried many months ago in here was whether Allred, if named, would resign in time to permit Lt. Gov. Walter Woodul to serve as governor for a while prior to the July primary. Most observers here believed if this happens, it would virtually insure Woodul a victory in the Attorney General's race without a runoff, and since some of Woodul's powerful friends in Washington have been reported vigorously backing Allred for the judgeship, it was considered not unlikely here that Allred might step out early in July, if nothing happens to the long-standing plan for Vice President Garner to recommend him to President Roosevelt, in view of the deadlock between Senators Morris Sheppard and Tom Connally, each having endorsed a different candidate.

Two More Press Agents

Newest recruits to Attorney General Bill McCraw's record-breaking staff of publicity men this week were North Bigbee, former oil editor of the Dallas News, and Ed Kilman, political writer of the Houston Post. Kilman was reported scheduled to begin leave of absence from his paper to write McCraw publicity until after elections.

Queer Political Lineup

The hotel lobby political experts this week were getting a chuckle out of the action of Walter Woodward, ex-Senator, and ex-president of the State Bar Association, who held an open house at his office, for Bill McCraw, and later introduced McCraw at a speaking in Coleman, Woodward's home town. They recalled that Woodward four yeears ago, was decisively defeated in the runoff for attorney general by McCraw, in a campaign that reeked with bitterness. McCraw assailed Woodward as a chain-store lobbyist, utility attorney from every stump he spoke from, and the bitterness didn't die out after the election, but carried over to the Democratic state convention at San Antonio in 1936, when McCraw partisans sought to prevent Woodward going to the Philadelphia Democratic national convention as a delegate-at-large from Texas. In the committee on delegates session, the McCraw forces had just about succeeded in blocking Woodward off the delegation, when Myron Blalock, the Democratic committee chairman saved his place as delegate-at-large by a personal plea in Woodward's behalf to the committee. Blalock now is one of Ernest Thompson's campaign managers. Woodward is said to have gotten a prompt protest over the Coleman incident from several members of the Senate who are supporting Thompson, and indicated he was 'duped' by the McCraw press-agents into a very unhappy position. He explained that he didn't promise to vote for McCraw, when he introduced him.

Crowley's Contribution

The chief effect which Washington Candidate Carl Crowley has on the Texas gubernatorial race, according to the other candidates, has been to make it very tough for all the candidates to raise campaign funds.

"After Crowley spread around that talk about $2,000,000 campaign funds, folks that usually could be counted on to donate $1,000 to our candidate, began writing letters and offering to work for our candidate --- for so much a week and expenses", complained one campaign worker. "The result is the boys who usually put up the money think we're already financed, like Crowley claims, and we're having a hard time getting enough dough to pay our press agents and print our literature."

Justice of the Peace J. A. Crosby reported Monday morning that a thief visited his chicken house Sunday night and made away with 13 of his fryers.

Drawing of Proposed Gymnasium-Auditorium

Above is the architect's drawing of the proposed gymnasium-auditorium for Loraine. When completed the building will look like this reproduction.

Windstorm Does No Damage Here

This section of the country was visited by a hard windstorm last Friday night. Thee wind was accompained by a heavy dust storm which blew for about an hour. No damage was reported in this immediate section except some crops were damaged a little by the sand. Only a sprinkle of rain accompained the storm.

The wind did considerable damage around Sweetwater. Six airplanes in the hangar west of town were damaged when the hangar door was blown open. Plate glass windows and other minor damage was reported in Sweetwater. Rotan reported a heavy hail storm along with the high wind.

A hailstorm late Thursday afternon visited the Virgil Wimberley farm south of town and did quite a bit of damage to his crop. He thought possibly some of it will have to be replanted. About an inch and a half rain fell there.

Miss Modena Godfrey returned to her schol work at Silver City, New Mexico, after a two weeks visit with her parents, Rev. and Mrs. M. H. Godfrey.

HOMEMADE WINE AND BEER IS ILLEGAL

Austin, (Special).— C. A. Paxton ,chief enforcement officer for the liquor control board, today said reports to his office indicate widespread violation of the state law which prohibits making beer and wine for home use.

"Checking through a large area in recent weks, inspectors have found evidence that home manufacture of beer and wine is being carried on by many persons who apparently are under the misapprehension that they have a right to do so," Paxton asserted.

"It is generally understood that operation of a moonshine still is against the law, and this activity is usually conducted secretly, but our investigations havee disclosed home manufacture of beer and wine is being done more or less openly. The only conclusion is that many of these persons do not know they are breaking the law."

Under the present liquor control act, Paxton pointed out, the penalties for home manufacture of beer and wine are the same as for operating a moonshine still. No one but a license holder, he added, is permitted to manufacture alcholic beverages in Texas. Price of licenses range from $10, for the manufacture of wine by a person growing his own grapes, to $1,000, for a liquor distillery.

"The liquor control board desires to caution all persons who may be unknowingly violating the law that it has no authority to give any special privileges, or set aside any provisions of the act," Paxton declared.

Interest Growing In Cheese Plant

Interest in the proposed cheese plant for Loraine is growing, not only in the immediate Loraine territory but in other communities.

Monday night J. C. Hall and J. W. King of Loraine and B. J. Baskin, county agent of Mitchell County and Mr. Ballard, County agent of Scurry County, met with a group of farmers in the gymnasium at Dunn where Mr. Hall and the two county agents discussed the proposition thoroughly. Those farmers present were greatly interested and pledged themselves to work to create interest among more farmers of the community. They are to call a meeting of the community in a few days and further discuss the plan and select delegates to come to Loraine on Thursday night, June 16, at which time Mr. Bowles of A. & M. College will be here to discuss cheese plants and the co-operative marketing act.

A meeting is being arranged for the people of Hermleigh Friday night of this week when O. I. Griffin and others from Loraine will meet with them to discuss the plan. Meetings in other communities will probably be arranged.

Good Rain, Hail Falls South Town

A light rain fell in Loraine Tuesday night. About a quarter to a half inch was reported here in town while the fall was much heavier south of town. Around Bauman more than an inch was reported with some hail in spots. It has been reported that hail seriously damaged the crop on the Will Rowland farm. Other farms in that area also were damaged by hail.

A good rain fell south of town almost as far up as the town section. Very little rain fell north of town.

The moisture was timely as most farmers have their cotton hoed out and plowed. All crops are in fine shape and have not been suffering for rain.

G. K. BAKER CALLED TO MINERAL WELLS

G. K. Baker, of Loraine, was called to Mineral Wells early Sunday morning after the mysterious disappearance of his brother of that city.

It was reported here that Mr. Baker's brother disappeared late Saturday after going to a nearby drug store for a purchase and no information of his whereabouts has been had since his disappearance. All police were immediately notified, it is reported.

Mrs. G. K. Baker accompained her husband to Mineral Wells.

WILL SPEAK HERE

Charles A. Jones

Charles A. Jones, candidate for state representative, will speak on the streets in Loraine at five o'clock Saturday afternoon. You are invited to hear him discuss the issues of the campaign.

PRECINCT AND COUNTY CANDIDATES TAKE NOTICE

Saturday night, June 18, is the last day on which candidates for county and precinct offices can legally have their names placed on the Democratic primary ballot for the election to be held July 23. Candidates are required to file with County Democratic Chairman J. A. Buchanan.

Athletic Committee Wants to Sell Bonds

The athletic committee is anxious to sell a few more bonds at $5.00 each within the next few days in order to have enough money to finish piping water to the football field and setting out grass. This work should be done now so that the field will be well sodded by playing time this fall. The committee lacks several dollars having enough to do the work and selling the bonds is the only way they have now of raising the money. If you have not purchased a bond and can do so the committee will appreciate your doing so now.

VERY LITTLE SMOKE IN TUESDAY BALL GAME

The Business Men's Club claim a run-a-way in the Tuesday evening game with the Loraine Fire Boys defeating them 21 to 6. While the Business Men's Club remain jubilant over the victory the Fire Boys are busy planning a push over Thursday when at this time they hope to have the two regular players who were absent from the game Tuesday.

Mr. and Mrs. Bob Fatheree of Roswell, New Mexico, spent several days here last week visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. George Henley.

Grant Asked On Gymnasium Project

The school board in session last Friday night authorized David S. Castle Co., Abilene architects, to make formal application to PWA for a grant of approximately $12,000 to match local funds in the sum of $15,000 in building the proposed gymnasium-auditorium and for necessary repairs to the present building.

The necessary repairs for the present building calls for the division of the present auditorium into three class rooms, a study hall and library. In addition some repairs, including painting, will be done on the first floor.

In order to build the gymnasium and do the repairs needed it will be necessary for the voters of the school district to vote an additional $5,000 bond to be added to the $10,000 voted some time ago.

If the voters approve the additional $5,000 a school building program can be carried out that will take care of the needs of the district for several years to come. If the voters should disapprove the aditional bonds then the board can only build the gymnasium and the repairs to the present building will have to wait until later. The voters should bear in mind that should the repair work be postponed in all likelyhood when it is done the district will have to bear the whole cost. If it is done now the PWA will pay 45% of it.

FARMERS CALLED TO MEET HERE JUNE 16

Farmers of this area are invited and urged to meet at Loraine on the night of Thursday, June 16, for the purpose of hearing Mr. Bowles of A. & M. College speak on co-operative marketing. He will give authorative information on the proposed milk or cheese plant for Loraine. The meeting will be held at the Rialto Theatre.

3 Divorces Given In District Court

Three divorces were granted in Mitchell County District Court this week. Divorces were granted Mabel Whitaker Morrison from Tom Morrison; Lillian May from L. D. May; and Tommie Musselwhite from David M. Musselwhite.

A jury panel was summoned for this week but was not used. A number of civil suits were tried before the court. Oma Caswell brought suit against L. C. Caswell for temporary custody of their six year old daughter, Betty Jo, and was given custody of the little girl.

West Texas Construction Co. won in a forclosure proceeding against W. A. Lane et al, over a paving lien held by the construction company. Mrs. Fannie Payne suit against M. E. Nolan et al for trespass to try title. J. A. Stiager and wife legally adopted the child Emily Jackson through District Court proceedings.

The criminal docket was taken up to the extent of the Court trying several upon pleas of guilt. T. A. Davis plead guilty to two forgery charges and was given two years in the penitentiary in each case. Douglas and Preston Brown, brothers, plead guilty to three charges of theft of chickens and were sentenced to 1 year in each case. Lynch McDonald was given 2 years for passing forged checks. Henry Wormby plead guilty before the court and was given a suspended sentence of three years for burglary.

The case of R. B. Lovejoy Vs. Cocoa Cola Bottling Co. is slated to be tried before a jujry next Monday, June 13. Lovejoy won in a daamge suit against the bottling company but upon appeal to the Court of Civil Appeals the case was reversed and has to be tried again.

Alto Fay Harlan and her friend Billy Fern Mull of Lubbock, are here visiting Alta Fay's grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. R. H. Horine.

CZECHOSLOVAKIA and all that may hang on its destiny is just an added starter in the up-and-coming cosmos of A. W. Robertson, chairman of the board of the Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturing company.

Robertson Has Remedy for Gloom

It is the always assured and hopeful Mr. Robertson who announces his company will spend $12,000,000 on additions and betterments this year, and, from where Mr. Robertson sits, that's just a couple of white chips compared to spendings to come.

Mr. Robertson is the H. G. Wells of industry. His "shape of things to come," which he has been outlining for the last year or two, includes the following specifications:

Migratory humans, shifting north and south like the birds. "Just whether the children will be born in the North or the South," he said, "is not quite clear to me, but I expect we will follow the policy of the birds and have the children in the North."

Windowless houses, pasteurized air, and artificial sunlight.

One-man planes, with folding wings, kept in the hall rack, with the umbrellas.

Pocket radios for two-way talk with anybody, anywhere.

Noiseless cities with double-deck streets.

Flat houses, with a push-button crane which will park the the auto on the roof.

IT WAS only a year ago that Robert R. Young, thirty-nine-year-old Texan, quite unknown to Wall Street, rode herd on the straying Van Sweringen system and corralled it. It was all bewilderingly complicated, but, finally sifted down, it appeared that Mr. Young had picked up a $3,000,000,000 rail "empire" with an original investment of $225,000.

Young Texan Rode Herd on Rail System

He is a quiet, inconspicuous, unassuming man, and now the feature writers are just getting around to calling him a "Titan."

He won a rock-and-sock proxy battle for the control of the Chesapeake and Ohio railway. Within the last few years, he has infiltrated gently into high finance, which is just now becoming acutely conscious of his presence.

His family was in and around Canadian, Texas, before the battle of the Alamo. They started the First National Bank of Canadian, which is now in the hands of the fourth generation.

At Culver Military academy, Robert R. Young was graduated at the head of his class, its youngest graduate, and later he attended the University of Virginia.

Career at Culver Was Prophetic

With the Du Ponts in 1916, he got his preliminary work-out in finance and joined General Motors in 1922.

In 1932, he founded his own Wall Street firm, with Frank F. Kolbe, his later associate in the Van Sweringen putsch.

Mrs. Young is the former Anita Ten Eyck O'Keefe, of Williamsburg, Va., sister of Georgia O'Keefe, the painter. In 1935, they leased Beechwood, the Astor estate, in Newport.

Mr. Young, a Democrat, like his father, paid $15,000 for a consignment of those famous Democratic convention books, which congressmen, badgering him at a senate hearing, insisted wasn't nearly so much of a bargain as the Van Sweringen deal. "You are a bigger sucker than I thought you were," said Senator Wheeler.

Languages of Nations

Switzerland is not the only nation having more than one official language. Palestine has three recognized tongues, English, Hebrew and Arabic. Actually more than one language is spoke in every country in Europe but one. Portugal is the only nation having a single language. In Asia, India has 220 distinct vernacular languages. But even with four languages Switzerland is not finished, says the Washington Post. There is still one more obscure dialect called Ladin, spoken by a small group of people.

NEW SEAWAY PROPOSAL

Secretary Hull's St. Lawrence Plan Arouses Strong Opposition in Congress . . . Wallace Again Rebuffed

Adolpho Echagaray Somohano, commander of the Mexican federal troops engaged in suppressing the revolt in San Luis Potosi state led by Saturnino Cedillo, is here seen, right, giving orders to two of his officers.

Hull's St. Lawrence Plan

PRESUMABLY by direction of the President, Secretary of State Hull submitted to Canada a new proposal for development of the St. Lawrence seaway, asking that it be considered as a basis for a new treaty which would be a revision and amplification of the treaty of 1932 that the senate refused to ratify in 1934. Under the terms of the Hull plan Canada would obtain without cost a completed St. Lawrence deep waterway, ready for power development, and also other valuable concessions. The United States would obtain the privilege of building the seaway at its own expense, increased power development at Niagara Falls, and the recognition by Canada of American sovereignty over Lake Michigan.

Secretary Hull

Immediate and vociferous opposition to the plan broke out in congress, both Democrats and Republicans characterizing it as a scheme to buy the support of the Dominion for a gigantic water power development planned by the New York state power authority.

From the State department leaked information that not even Canada was expected to approve the proposed treaty. Canadian officials have repeatedly doubted whether recovery from the depression would be promoted by spending millions on a waterway for which there is not sufficient commerce and for development of surplus water power for which there is no demand.

Hull's plan provides that the United States shall develop the international rapids section of the St. Lawrence river at an estimated cost of 400 million dollars. This was denounced by Senator Wagner of New York. Senator Copeland, also of New York, announced he was against the seaway project "1,000 per cent." He called it "an all-British canal."

Senator Key Pittman, chairman of the senate foreign relations committee having jurisdiction of treaties, said the new proposals would not have a chance of ratification unless materially modified.

Senators and representatives from the Middle West were especially aroused. Senator Clark of Missouri pointed out that the treaty would permit diversion of only 1,500 cubic feet of water per second into the Chicago drainage canal. He said the Mississippi river must receive more water than that from the canal in order to fill a nine-foot channel.

Representative Claude Parsons of Illinois was even more emphatic in disapproval. "This proposed treaty," he said, "is about the worst mistake Secretary Hull ever made. Under the terms of his proposal to set up an international commission for the Great Lakes-St. Lawrence basin, Canada would be given control over our all-American Lake Michigan.

"Furthermore, the treaty would prohibit any further diversion of water from Lake Michigan at Chicago of more than 1,500 cubic feet per second. The Illinois and Mississippi rivers must have at least 5,000 c.f.s. to insure a dependable waterway."

Wallace Slapped Again

STERNLY chastising Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace and Solicitor General Robert H. Jackson for making assertions that were unwarranted and wholly unfounded, the United States Supreme court rejected the government's petition for a rehearing of the Kansas City stockyards rate case.

Twice before the court had rebuked Wallace in the stockyards case and had set aside his order fixing maximum rates which commission men might charge for services because, the court said, they had been denied a full, fair, and open hearing by Secretary Wallace.

Justice Hugo Black, who was the lone dissenter when the case was decided in April, ran true to form, again being the only member of the court to dissent.

New Food Act Passed

WITHOUT a record vote the house passed the new pure food and drug bill. The senate had passed a similar measure and the differences were to be reconciled in conference. The act brings drugs, therapeutic devices, and foods under regulation of the Department of Agriculture. It prohibits alteration or misbranding of cosmetics, 94 foods and drugs, requires adequate tests of products before they are placed on the market, provides for license restrictions to control bacterial contamination of foods, requires warning labels on habit-forming drugs, and provides for factory inspection.

Reform Bill Shelved

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT accepted the advice of congressional leaders and consented to the shelving of his bill for reorganization of the executive government. This was announced with the approval of the President by Senator Barkley. At the same time it was made known that the administration would attempt to get the measure through congress early in the 1939 session. Sen. Hiram Johnson of California said the opponents of the bill would be ready to resume their battle against it next year.

Tax Bill Unsigned But Law

FOR the first time since he entered the White House, President Roosevelt permitted an act of congress to become law without his signature. He took this course with the tax revision bill in order to emphasize his objection to "those unwise parts of the bill" which removed all but the skeleton of the undistributed profits tax and drastically modified the levies upon capital gains.

President Roosevelt

The President announced his action in a speech delivered to 148 mountain families of the New Deal-sponsored rehabilitation community of Arthurdale, W. Va., at the graduation exercises of 13 high school students. His words, however, were carried to the nation by radio networks.

"I call the definite attention of the American people," said Mr. Roosevelt, "to those unwise parts of the bill I have talked to you about today—one of them which may restore in the future certain forms of tax avoidance, and of concentrated investment power, which we had begun to end, and the other a definite abandonment of a principle of tax policy long ago accepted as part of our American system."

The President declared that he had no objection to removing any obstacles to little business which might be contained in the revenue laws but he reiterated the administration's determination not to allow the use of corporate forms to avoid what it considers legitimate tax burdens.

Mr. Roosevelt made plain that he hoped for a future revision of the revenue laws in line with the objectives he seeks. Such revisions, he said, should be designed to encourage new investment and the entry of private capital into new fields.

Big Fund for Highways

LEGISLATION authorizing new federal highway expenditures of $357,400,000 for the fiscal years 1940 and 1941 won final congressional approval when the senate adopted a conference report previously accepted by the house. Also authorized was the expenditure of $150,000,000 of old, unused appropriations.

WHAT to EAT and WHY

C. Houston Goudiss Warns Against

Food Fads and Fallacies

Nationally Known Food Authority Explains How They May Endanger Health

By C. HOUSTON GOUDISS
6 East 39th St., New York City.

AS SCIENCE and civilization have progressed, painstaking investigators have sought to replace ignorance with knowledge, to substitute truth for superstition. But in spite of their efforts, our eating habits are still influenced by a multitude of food fads and fancies, which should have no place in this enlightened age.

Some of these are harmless; others may endanger health. And the homemaker must learn to distinguish between fact and fancy.

Fish Is Not a Brain Food

One of the most persistent fallacies is the notion that certain kinds of food are especially beneficial for certain parts of the body. Many people believe that fish is a brain food and celery a nerve tonic. Lettuce is thought to be a soporific. None of these things is true.

The idea regarding fish probably arose because fish contains phosphorus and the brain also contains phosphorus. How simple it would be if one could increase brain power merely by eating fish. Unfortunately, there is nothing to it! The brain, like other parts of the body, requires a balanced diet. No case has ever been reported of a man soothing the irritated nerves of his wife by feeding her celery. And as for lettuce, it is a fine source of minerals, vitamins and gentle roughage, but it does not contain any narcotic drug that induces sleep.

Other Fallacies Disproved

Science has exploded many common notions about vegetables which may change your ideas of what is best to buy and eat. Many homemakers prefer lettuce that is light green in color and they believe that string beans which snap are superior in quality. But it has been demonstrated that deep green lettuce is much richer in vitamins and that a snap in string beans merely indicates that the beans have been kept in a cold, moist place.

False Notions About Fruit

A score of superstitions cling to the eating of fruits. There is a false notion that acid-tasting fruits cause or aggravate rheumatism, because they produce "acidity." The truth is that most fruits, regardless of their acid taste, leave an alkaline ash following digestion.

One often hears that fruit should not be taken at the same time as milk because the fruit acids will cause the milk to curdle. But the fact is that milk is always curdled in the stomach by the hydrochloric acid.

Not Necessary to Sip Milk

Another false idea is the widespread notion that milk must be sipped slowly or it will be difficult to digest. This has been refuted by a widely known investigator who made many tests. One day he fed a man a pint of milk in 10 seconds. The next day the same man was fed the same amount of milk in 10 minutes. On both occasions the contents of the stomach were examined a half hour later.

It was discovered that the milk which was drunk in 10 seconds had formed smaller curds than the milk which was sipped in 10 minutes. And in both cases, the curds were of practically the same consistency.

Water With Meals?

It is widely held that water should not be taken with meals, the argument being that it dilutes the gastric juice and thus interferes with digestion. This sounds logical and many people have been fooled. But the truth of the matter is that water stimulates the flow of the digestive juices and careful research has established that normally, water taken with meals in reasonable quantities aids digestion.

Danger of Half Truths

The most insidious food fallacies are those which contain some portion of truth—for example, the belief that cooked fruit is more wholesome than raw fruit. It is true that cooking increases the digestibility of some fruits and also has a sterilizing effect. On the other hand, most fruits are easily digested in the raw state, are more palatable and richer in vitamins.

A widespread belief which has a small portion, but only a small portion of truth, is that whole wheat bread is vastly superior to white bread. Whole wheat bread contains more minerals, vitamins and roughage than white bread. But the minerals and vitamins lacking in white bread can easily be supplied by other common foods, and there is no justification for going to the extreme of omitting white bread entirely from the diet.

Fad Diets Lack Balance

Far more harmful than the fallacies regarding individual foods are the fad diets constantly put forth by those who seek to exploit the homemaker's desire for dietetic knowledge.

Foods Not Incompatible

A fad diet which has gained a large number of adherents in recent years is based on the notion that certain foods — notably starches and proteins—are incompatible and should not be consumed at the same meal because they cannot be digested at the same time. It is interesting to note that this fad has been condemned by the medical profession and that a physician of the highest standing has proved clinically that starches and proteins do not interfere with one another in the stomach.

The fallacy of this theory is further appreciated when one realizes that there are few pure proteins or pure carbohydrates, most foods containing varying proportions of protein, carbohydrate and fat. Such foods as dried peas and beans and whole grain cereals contain a substantial percentage of both starch and protein.

Dangers of Fasting

Fasting is urged by some faddists as a means of "detoxifying" the body. Advocates of this practice claim that it is nature's method of housecleaning. As a matter of fact, fasting for any length of time may be dangerous to health, because it may result in the accumulation of incomplete oxidation products of fat, and the development of acidosis.

Homemakers must put aside superstitions, half-truths and food fallacies if they are to nourish their families properly.

Put your faith only in established food facts. Remember that upon your knowledge and breadth of vision depend, to a great degree, not only the health but the happiness of your family.

Questions Answered

Mrs. A. F. R., Jr.—Light corn syrup yields nothing but energy values, but dark corn syrup is a good source of iron. Pure molasses is rich in calcium and iron.

Miss M. F.—Nut protein is similar to the protein of meat and fish and nuts may be used in place of these foods when desired. They should not replace milk and eggs, however, as with few exceptions, they are low in minerals and cannot compare with eggs or milk as a source of vitamins.

To Ride the River With

COPYRIGHT WILLIAM MACLEOD RAINE—WNU SERVICE

"Five of them, far as we know," Lee answered. "We're kind of in a hole, boys. If we jump up this bunch of wolves before the smugglers arrive, they can give us the horse-laugh and say they just rode out for a picnic. If we don't show up till after the Mexicans, the smugglers are liable to be rubbed out. We'll have to just jog along and hope for the best."

Gray dawn was beginning to sift into the darkness and bleach it with light. Lee held the lead, Jeff Gray at his heels.

Day poured down into the canyon. In an incredibly short space of time nothing was left of the blackness of night but a swirling mist. The men could see one another, not as shifting shadows but as individuals. All of them were conscious of a definite relief.

The leader drew up his horse. "Getting close to the rock slide," he said evenly. "They may be there or they may not. We're fixed so we have to guess at what these fellows want." Lee's glance rested for a moment on Gray. "Maybe I'm the one who is to fall into the trap and this talk of smugglers doesn't mean a thing. Ride as loose as you can, boys. Not too close together. If they fire at us we'll hunt cover, each man for himself. There will be plenty of boulders there, or anyway brush."

"Wouldn't it be better for one of us to crawl forward on foot and have a look-see?" Brand suggested.

From round a bend in the gulch there came the crack of a gun. Before the echo died away a fusillade followed.

"We're too late!" Chiswick cried. "Come on, boys."

He slid from the saddle and ran toward the bend, moving with the heaviness that comes from middle age. Gray passed him before he was halfway to the turn.

The scene Gray looked upon as he rounded the curve was one of the wildest confusion. Frightened by the firing, two saddled horses were bucking wildly in the dry bed of the stream. The men who had been riding them lay on the ground, one of them face down and the other in a twisted heap. Two others in Mexican costume were racing down the canyon to escape, while three masked men shot at them with rifles as they ran. Another masked man was struggling with a pitching mule.

Gray flung a bullet at the nearest of the marksmen. The man whirled, caught sight of him, and ripped out a startled oath. He gave a cry of warning, fired once wildly toward the men pouring round the bend, and turned to run. He caught at the bridle of one of the plunging horses and tried to mount. His foot could not find the stirrup nor could he fling himself astride the back of the animal. A bullet struck the pommel of the saddle to which he was clinging. With a yell of terror he let go and flew down the gorge, dodging in and out of the rocks as he went. Though the face of the man was covered by a bandanna except for the eyes, Gray recognized him as young Howard.

Taken by surprise, the other bandits thought only of flight. One ran limping to a horse, pulled himself to the saddle, and galloped off. Another plunged to the ground, as if he had stumbled, but did not rise again. The remaining two, penned in the rocks, answered the fire of the attackers.

"Get to cover, boys," Lee ordered. "We'll drive them into the open. Don't take any chances."

A saddled horse, snorting with fear, came out from the big boulders close to the spot where the two masked men crouched. The nearest outlaw seized the bridle and mounted. His companion clambered on behind, and the animal dashed down the canyon.

"Bring up the horses," Lee called to his son Frank. "We'll take after these fellows."

He moved forward to check the casualties. Two Mexicans were dead, as was also one of the outlaws. None of the Chiswick party had been hurt. The unexpected attack had sent their foes into panic.

Gray turned over the body of the masked man lying in the sand. He recognized the face of Sid Hunt, the cowboy he had seen in Yell Sanger's store when he first arrived in Tail Holt.

The crook-nosed man helped himself to the dead man's rifle and cartridge-belt. He caught one of the horses left by the outlaws and started down the gulch.

"Better wait for the orders of the old man," Brand advised.

"I'll just ride ahead and keep in touch with these fellows," Gray called back.

He passed a laden pack-mule. Part of the load was silver, he guessed. The mule had got over its fright and was picking at the shrubbery.

After he was through the boulder field, he put his mount to a canter, regardless of the brush which caught at him as he plowed into the chaparral. He was riding the gray gelding upon which he had seen Morg Norris leave town.

Presently he saw in front of him a man on foot. Sometimes the man was running, sometimes walking. In the space of three or four minutes he looked back a dozen times. Fear of death was riding him hard. As Gray drew nearer, the fugitive took refuge behind a mesquite.

"Don't you come any closer," he warned, his voice quavery with terror.

The man was Lou Howard. During his flight he had dropped the rifle because it interfered with speed.

"Reach for the sky," Gray ordered. "No funny business or I'll drill you through."

A bullet whistled past his head. He swung from the saddle and moved forward. In his hand was a forty-four, ready for action. The rifle he had left beside the horse.

"Don't you!" shrieked Howard. "You keep back."

"Get 'em up," snapped Gray. "Quick."

The hands of Howard went up, the weapon in one of them.

"Don't kill me," he begged.

Gray disarmed him.

"You'll be safer tied up," the captor said. "Keep you from being killed by one of the boys when they get to you. Move over this way."

The crook-nosed man took the rope from the saddle and tied up Howard swiftly and thoroughly. He left him lying in an open place on the trail.

"I need you along to keep me company."

A quarter of a mile farther down the canyon there ran into a steep rocky gulch narrow as a Titan's sword-cleft. Far up this Gray could see two men and a horse. One of the men was riding, the other clambering along the trail after him. The sun was now out and shining on them. It would be hot work for a man breasting that stiff slope, especially if he were in a desperate hurry. The haste Gray took for granted, since there were two riders and only one horse, with vengeance hard on their heels.

He turned up the gulch after them. In the rainy season water poured down this rocky bed, but vegetation had small chance in such terrain. Whatever soil there might once have been had long since washed down into the gorge below.

The horse took the narrow bed of the trough like a cat, its muscles standing out hard as steel while it reached from one foothold to another. A bullet ricocheted from a flat rock above Gray and plowed into the rubble close to the front hoofs of the gelding. The sound of the explosion came down in booming echoes. One of the men near the top of the gulch had fired at his pursuer.

Gray did not stop. He did not answer the fire. The fugitives were moving again. They were not looking for a fight. What they wanted was to reach the flat country just ahead of them where they could disappear into some of the hill folds that ran down to the plateau.

The men and the horse vanished above the brow of the gulch. Gray gave his mount no rest. He had to reach the summit while they were still in sight. The animal he rode was strong and willing. It had plenty of bottom. Heaving with exertion, the gray came to the top of the rocky gash.

Its rider had a shaky moment when the horse clawed its way to level ground. Enemies might be waiting there for him, though he did not expect it. The men were too intent on safety.

His glance swept swiftly the country in front of him. The men had gone. One of the draws in front of him had swallowed them up. Which one, he could not guess.

One point stuck out like a sore thumb. In this country a man without a horse was in poor plight. The first consideration of these fugitives would be to get another mount. They would strike for the nearest place where a pony could be picked up with safety.

The answer struck Jeff Gray almost with the force of a blow. That nearest place was the L C ranchhouse. These ruffians knew that Lee Chiswick and his men had fallen upon them in Live Oak canyon. Nobody would be at the ranch except women. Almost certainly the outlaws would ride straight to the L C.

CHAPTER VIII

Ruth spent some anxious, restless hours. She found herself on the front porch a dozen times, her gaze sweeping down the road to look for the returning posse.

With Nelly's help she laid in a supply of cooked food for the returning warriors. Whether successful or the reverse, they would certainly be hungry.

After all, it was Nelly who first saw the approaching rider.

"Someone coming this way," she called to her mistress.

Swiftly Ruth went to the door. A horse was cantering heavily up the road. The distance was too far for identification of either man or beast, but there was something unusual about the gait of the animal. Unless very tired it ought not to make such heavy going. Presently she made a discovery. A second rider sat behind the first.

A pulse began to beat in Ruth's throat. Something was wrong. Perhaps the man in the rear was wounded and they were sending him home. She ran down the steps and hurried toward those approaching the house.

They were close upon her before she realized they were not from her father's party. She stopped, abruptly, looking at them intently. The man in front she did not know. The other swung to the ground and came toward her. A cold wind swept through her. There was evil in the jeering cruel eyes.

"Nice to meet up with you again, Missy," he said.

"Who are you?" she asked, dread in her heart.

But she knew who he was. She had seen him at Tail Holt just before and after her father had been wounded. His name was Morgan Norris, and he was the man Jeff Gray suspected of firing the shot.

"Never mind the name. Just call me one of yore admirers. First off, we want horses. While Kansas is catching and saddling I'll help you get some food together. We're in some hurry, and we'll take it with us."

"What's happened?" the girl asked, her eyes on the bloodstained handkerchief tied agound his left arm below the elbow.

Norris ripped out a violent obscene oath. "Keep yore trap shut, girl, and do like I say," he ordered.

"You've been hurt — wounded," she cried. "There has been trouble."

Her eyes were big with fear. The color had died out of her face. She was not thinking of him but of those with whom he had fought. They too might be wounded—or worse.

"Ambushed by yore rotten kin," he snarled. "Shot down when we weren't lookin' for it, when we didn't have a chance."

Ruth looked into his bleak eyes, the focal points of a cruel, savage face, and knew what it was to be afraid. She turned and walked to the house, the man beside her. He caught hold of her arm just above the elbow, his fingers tightening with all the pressure they could exert.

"Let me alone," Ruth told him. "Take your hand off me."

"It's my say-so," he retorted, with an evil laugh. "What orders are given will come from me, sweetheart."

With an effort she wrenched herself free. There was a band of fire down her arm where his strong fingers had bit into the flesh.

"No," she challenged, head up and eyes undaunted. "You daren't harm me. If you did you'd be trapped and wiped out like a wolf."

"Would I? We'll see about that," he purred softly.

He was playing with a dangerous thought, one that had just come into his mind. Could he use her, as a protection and as a means of revenge? If he took her with him would he increase or decrease the peril of the situation in which he stood? He was not sure whether he had been recognized; if so, he might have to get out of this part of the country. Mexicans from across the border, engaged in illicit traffic, were at no premium in Arizona, but Lee Chiswick could use the killing of two of them to stir up a lot of trouble.

Norris went into the house with her.

"This man wants to take some food with him, Nelly," said Ruth.

Nelly looked at him out of startled eyes. She made as if to speak and changed her mind.

"Get a move on you," he snapped. "I'm in a hurry."

While Ruth packed the food they had just been cooking the outlaw sat astride a chair in the kitchen with his arm across the back of it. He watched her with narrowed eyes, primal fires flaming smokily in them. The man lived in his passions—in his hatreds and in his desires. This girl appealed to both of them. Through her he could strike at the whole Chiswick tribe. He could jeer at them to this daughter while they combed the hills to find her. It would be a magnificent revenge. That was one side of the picture. The other worked hand in hand with it. The slender grace of her figure, its fine spirited racehorse look, stirred a tumult in him.

Kansas came into the kitchen. "I roped and saddled two cow-ponies," he said.

"We'll need four," Norris answered.

"Four. What for?" Kansas asked.

"We're going to take these girls with us."

The other three in the room stared at Norris, Kansas with incredulity, the young women with gripping fear.

"The hell we are!" Kansas retorted. "You gone crazy from yore wound?"

"They will be a protection to us," Norris insisted.

"Like heck they will," his companion snorted. "What's eating you, Morg? This whole country would rise up and wipe us out. Use yore head."

The eyes of the killer glittered. He said softly, a silken threat in his voice, "Saddle two more horses."

Kansas felt a chill run down his back. "Good God, Morg—"

"Make tracks, fellow," Norris interrupted, his stabbing gaze fixed on the other.

Kansas backed out of the room. "All right, Morg. All right. Just as you say. I sure ain't lookin' for trouble with you."

Ruth said to Norris, keeping her voice steady with an effort, "You wouldn't do that to two girls."

Scowling at her, he answered harshly, "Don't fool yoreself."

"But it's like your friend said. The whole country would hunt you down and stamp you out."

"I can look after myself, I reckon," he told her; and added, "I need you along to keep me company."

Millions Spent Annually in U. S. on the Dainty Perfumes and Cosmetics

About $200,000,000 a year is spent on beauty by these United States—in other words, on perfumes and cosmetics.

In reviewing the chemistry of this vast industry before the Rochester chapter of American Chemical society, Dr. Charles F. H. Allen, of the Eastman laboratories, remarked that the jar in which some of these beautifiers come may be worth more than their contents. Six cents for the container, 2 cents for the contents, 2 cents for profit is Dr. Allen's analysis of a 10 cent sale.

This helps to explain why one college professor gave up teaching for cosmetics, with the remark: "It's easier and more profitable to decorate the outside of girls' heads than the inside."

In Dr. Allen's opinion the cheapest modern perfume is better than the kind for which the ancient and medieval lovers of luxury and beauty were willing to pay its weight in gold. Natural oil of rose is worth $175 a pound (cheaper than gold, it must be reluctantly admitted), but synthetic oil of rose only $22.50. The most delicate nose cannot tell the difference between the two.

Perfumes made from flowers have a base of essential oils. "Each oil may average as many as 25 components, some more important than others," says Dr. Allen. It is far harder to analyze a vitamin or hormone than one of these oils.

The chemist not only found out what constituents of oils are worth anything in a perfume but synthesized them. Most of the cheap good perfumes rely on these synthetic products for their scent.

Musk is the indispensable base of perfumes. And musk was synthesized long ago.

Many Names for Travelers

Travelers have more names than kings. Travelers are tourists, voyagers, wanderers, excursionists, pilgrims, globe-trotters, gypsies, rovers, explorers, adventurers, seafarers, wayfarers, passengers, not to mention tramps, vagabonds, hoboes and straphangers.

Cool, Smart, Easy-to-Tub

DRESSES with v-necks and short sleeves, easy to put on, and with no ruffles or fussy details to keep you long at the ironing board! That's the main and most important fashion for summer time, and here are two particularly smart styles that you can quickly and easily make at home, even if you haven't had much experience in sewing. A detailed sew chart comes with each pattern.

Slenderizing Shirtwaist Dress.

If you take a woman's size, choose this smart tailored type with notched collar, short kimona sleeves, and action pleats in the skirt. It's cool and unhampering for housework, and tailored enough so that you can drive to the station and go shopping in it, too. Gingham, percale, seersucker or tub silk are smart materials for it.

Basque Frock With Dainty Frills.

This charming dress is extremely becoming to slim, youthful figures, with its snug bodice, puff sleeves and wide revers. A fashion you'll enjoy for home wear and afternoon parties all summer long. This design will be lovely in any dainty cotton that you like—dotted Swiss, dimity, lawn and linen, light or dark, with white cuffs and revers to make it look so cool and fresh.

The Patterns.

1462 is designed for sizes 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44 and 46. Size 36 requires 4½ yards of 35-inch material.

1453 is designed for sizes 12, 14, 16, 18 and 20. Size 14 requires 4⅛ yards of 35-inch material, plus ⅝ yard contrasting for collar and cuffs, and 2¾ yards lace or edging to trim as pictured.

Spring-Summer Pattern Book.

Send 15 cents for the Barbara Bell Spring and Summer Pattern Book which is now ready. It contains 109 attractive, practical and becoming designs. The Barbara Bell patterns are well planned, accurately cut and easy to follow. Each pattern includes a sew-chart which enables even a beginner to cut and make her own clothes.

Beauty, Thrift in Crocheted Linens

Cross-stitched bouquets in crocheted baskets can be a needlewoman's pride. Try these on your linens and be delighted with the decorative result for they'll transform towels, pillowcases, and scarfs. Other cross-stitch motifs that may be used alone are given. The crochet is done in No. 50 cotton; the cross-stitch worked in lovely colors. In pattern 6038 you will find a transfer pattern of two motifs 3½ by 12 inches; two motifs 4 by 10½ inches; two motifs 4½ by 7 inches; two motifs 4 by 12 inches; a chart and directions for crocheted edgings 4¼ by 15 inches; material requirements; illustrations of all stitches used.

Pattern 6038.

To obtain this pattern, send 15 cents in stamps or coins (coins preferred) to The Sewing Circle, Household Arts Dept., 259 W. 14th Street, New York, N. Y.

Do You Get Your Share?

By T. C. Richardson, Secretary Texas Breeder-Feeder Association

Americans eat an average of 139 pounds of meat per capita, both fresh and cured. Two-thirds of it produced west of the Mississippi river and two-thirds of it is eaten east of the river. City people eat more fresh meat per capita than country people, and pay at retail something like three times the price per pound for which the producer sells it on foot. In other words, the farmer who raises meat can eat it for about one-third the price to his city neighbor, yet eats less of it.

Fresh meat, milk and eggs are bone-and-muscle building foods which are ready for human consumption where they are produced without going to a factory for processing. By all the rules of reason producers might be expected to use them in the diet to the utmost extent of appetite and the demands of health. It is a queer mental quirk, therefore, which stints their use by those who produce them and they are looked upon mainly as something to sell, with which to buy less palatable and more expensive foods.

The other day, in a puplic meeting, a Texas man said there were 4,000 children in his county for whom milk, butter and cheese have to be imported. He might have added that the same children probably have fresh meat very seldom. The town children can have only what their parents are able to buy, at retail prices, but no farm child needs be denied these wholesome foods. On our share.

the average farm enough feed can be grown on a few acres to supply the family's meat and milk menu to repletion. On many farms enough grass goes to waste for want of animals to eat it at the right time to raise a flock of sheep or two or three beef animals.

The old-time "beef club" by which several families kept themselves in fresh meat the year round was an institution of the pioneer days, and is still used in some communities. Modern refrigeration permits a single family to kill a lamb or a calf at any time and use it as needed. The steam pressure canner has made it possible for any farm family to preserve meat at any time, after using as much as possible in fresh form.

The present crop plans call for the planting of more feed crops, and these feed crops must be fed to livestock. There is no restriction whatever on the production and use of all the dairy, meat and poultry products the family can use and many a cotton family has its first real opportunity to produce and use its full needs in these wholesome and delicious foods. There is no restriction on the sale of meat, poultry or eggs. These will be used to enhance the cash income.

If every farm family raised and ate its share of fresh meat the livestock population could be greatly increased without sending any more animals to market than are now sold annually. Let's get the district, will give us a building program that is really needed. And the way we see it the district had better take advantage of it while the government will spend 45 cents everytime we spend 55 cents.

Should the additional bonds be voted and the grant secured the building program will be let by contract which we believe will be much more satisfactory in every respect than building through the WPA as originally planned.

The board of trustees wants to do what the people of the district want to do. If we want to go ahead and build only the gym, which will not be as large as planned in the new program, and leave off the repairs to the present building, that is what the trustees want to do. But if we want to take advantage of the government grant and get both the gym and the repairs then the board is ready.

The government grant will not have to be paid back by the district. In other words the district can put on a $27,000 building program for $15,000. We believe it is worth it.

Do You Want A Theatre,

Do the people of this community want to keep a picture show in Loraine, Or had you rather the people of Loraine and the surrounding territory would go to Colorado and Sweetwater to a movie? It seems that if the people of this community are going to a show at all they are already going to these places. Patronage at the Loraine theatre is very slim and it is not because of the class of pictures shown for the same type of pictures are being shown here as you will see anywhere else.

Mr. and Mrs. Day moved to Loraine and purchased the Rialto theatre in good faith. This has not been a fly-by-night proposition with them. They have done their best to provide the best entertainment. They have worked hard to get a crowd out but for some reason or another the crowds have been going to other places to see the same pictures shown here, maybe a few weeks later than shown elsewhere.

Mr. and Mrs. Day came to this town with full intentions of locating permanently, and still have the same hope. They have practced 'our trade-at-home' policy to the fullest degree. We are sorry to say that the people of Loraine have not seen fit to give them the support that their institution deserves. Mr. Day told the editor this morning that it is going to be necessary for him to close the theatre during the summer unless patronage increases. We are sure the busines men of this town would not like for this to happen. It might mean less crowds on Saturday. But he is not able to continue losing money. We don't believe the Loraine people realized that when they went to other towns to see a show, and failed to go to the Rialto, that they were doing their bit in helping put barred doors on the Loraine theatre.

We don't want to see people going to Colorado or some other town on Saturdays so the 'kids can go to the show. In order to keep the show open for the summer we suggest that the Loraine merchants make a trade with Mr. Day to have a free show for the children each Saturday afternoon. In that way the children will be provided entertainment and the town will benefit from the crowds that come to town.

The Loraine school district has an opportunity to get a building program for the school system that will put the present building in first class condition along with the new gymnasium-auditorium. Should this program be accomplished the school building situation here wil be solved for several years. The architect's plans call for dividing the present auditorium into three class rooms, a study hall and library, painting of the inside and out, and some needed repairs on the first floor. Plans also call for a new boiler that will heat the present building and the new gym.

In order to get this program through it will be necessary for the district to vote another $5,000 in bonds. The $10,000 bonds voted recently will only build the gymnasium-auditorium and will not be sufficient to do the necessary repairs to the present building. The board of trustees has already made application, on the basis of the district voting another $5,000 in bonds, for a grant from the federal government which will be in the neighborhood of $13,000. This gift of $13,000 together with the $15,000 in bonds furnished by "The old people of Texas who are entitled to benefits have been cruelly treated", says these endorsers of Crowley's candidacy.

In what way have they been cruelly treated? Suppose that many of them are not receiving as much as we would like to pay them, whatever they are getting is just that much more than Texas or any other government ever paid them before. We truly hope that the next legislature may find the means by which needy old people may be paid more liberally than they are being paid, but why should those who are not needy be allowed to become tax eaters at the expense of the public?

"No payments are adequate, and such payments as are made do not relieve the sons, daughters and grandchildren of old people of the burden of caringfor their aged because of such rank discrimination and under payment". say these Crowley backers. Why should the wealthy or well-to-do sons and daughters or even grandchildren of old people wish to be relieved of the "burden" of taking care of them? If they are not financially able to do it and have a spark of gratitude or filial affection in their souls, it will be a pleasure to them to provide the necessary financial assistance which their parents or grandparents might need. The wealthy or well-to-do son or daughter whose soul is so shriveled up that he or she wants the state or somebody else to take care of their own aged parents, is too little and too measly to be given any special consideration by anybody's government.

"We are going to advise every citizen of Texas to read your constructive platform and your (Crowley's) proposal to pay pensions by taking the system out of politics, to provide a total of$30 per month without favoritism and to each alike." If that means anything, it means that Crowley favors paying a pension to every person in Texas over 65 years of age.

Why should you, Mr. Farmer. Mr. Laborer, Mr. Merchant, struggling along to make a living and to lay up a little something for a rainy day, be compelled to pay taxes to provide for officials of a railroad or a great insurance company or a chain of stores, to the owner of oil wells or of a big ranch and thousands of whiteface cattle, to the president of a prosperous bank, on the sole grounds that such person is 65 years old? That is whatt Mr. Crowley's proposal means that you shall do.

How would you like to be made to dig deep into your pockets for taxes to pay a peension of $30.00 per month to old Unclee Ephraim and another $30.00 to his wife, Aunt Dinah, living in the Brazos River bottoms or some other section of Texas? There are many, many thousands of negroes in Texas over 65 years of age. They live the simple life and their wants are few. It would probably take a million dollars a month to pay thirty-dollars to these negroes to say nothing of the thousands of Mexicans who would likewise go on the pension rolls at thirty per. Yet, this is what Mr. Crowley's proposal means.

You may be for it, dear reader, but we are not. We are against any such raid on the state treasury and upon your pocket book and ours. —Lynn County News, Tahoka.

STOCKMEN WARNED TO PREPARE FOR SCREWWORM

College Station—"Prepare for the screwworm in great numbers," R. R. Reppert, entomologist of the Extension Service of Texas A. and M. College, has warned Texas ranchmen.

The Bureau of Entomology and Plant Quarantine of the U. S. Department of Agriculture has forecast a severe infestation, probably worse than that of 1935, in many parts of the Southwest, especially Texas and Arizona.

The screwworm fly has started earlier than ever before. The infestation in extreme Southwest Texas had been held down by dry weather during the first part of the season, but the weather in other parts of the state has favored the rapid development of the insect.

The best way to protect livestock from screwworms, Reppert points out, is to examine animals frequently so that wounds may be treated before they are seriously infested. Many ranchmen report that they have found it advisable to hold wounded or infested animals in small hospital traps, located on a high, open part of the range where flies are less abundant.

Reppert endorses the Bureau's recommendation for killing the maggots. The procedure is to treat the infested wound with 90 percent commercial benzol. The wound is then plugged with clean cotton saturated with benzol. Reinfestation is prevented by lightly covering the area around the wound with dehydrated pine-tar oil of 1.065 specific gravity.

The advantage of the benzol over most patented medicines lies in its low cost and in the fact that it does not cause shock to animal tissue. It does not deteriorate with age but is highly inflammable and will evaporate readily. It is this last property which makes it valuable in screwworm control, for the maggots are killed not by the liquid but by the fumes.

Reppert also emphasized that the common pine-tar oil will often burn the animal while the dehydrated form will not.

HAPPENINGS AT THE BAPTIST CHURCH

Sunday was a good day with us. Our Sunday School is making a good record with 200 in attendance, the offering good, but if the Sunday School attendance and offerings were left to some of our members we could give a five-year lease on the church to be used for other purposes. They don't use it for worship—shame on you. About the only way we can get some of our members to come to church is to build a storm house at the church. They will come then.

The B. T. U. was a great deal better last Sunday. 70 present and programs in all the Unions. Thank you.

Now, think this over will you, say it over as sit in your home. Here it is: "If all the members of the Church were just like me what kind of a church would my church be?" You answer this question with your self. A kicker never pays and a payer never kicks. Get on board brother, help row the ship.

Lets all be in our place next Sunday for the preaching and Sunday School and B. T. U. Don't fail, you are needed and expected. Be faithful and you can have the favors of God. Be there.

NO WHEAT MARKETING QUOTAS FOR THIS YEAR

College Station—The wheat crop will not be subject to the marketing quota plan in 1938, according to Geo. Slaughter, Wharton, chairman of the Texas Agricultural Conservation Committee.

The new farm act set May 15 as the latest date for establishing a national wheat marketing quota, subject to a referendum by wheat growers, and also provides that no wheat quotas can be in effect during the marketing year beginning July 1, 1938, unless provisions for parity payments have been made.

The Texas committee received word at its headquarters at Texas A. and M. College from AAA officials at Washington that the wheat marketing quota would have been proclaimed if parity payments had been provided for within the required time, Slaughter said.

The farm act provides that the wheat quota shall be proclaimed when the total supply of wheat will exceed the normal year's domestic consumption and exports by more than 35 percent.

The Division of Crop Estimates has indicated that the probable production of winter wheat will be 754 million bushels and spring wheat around 200 million bushels.

The total supply of wheat is expected to be approximately 1,154,000,000 bushels. This amount would be 400 to 450 million bushels in excess of the normal year's domestic consumption and exports and about 200 million bushels in excess of the marketing quota level.

Wheat is the only crop for which marketing quotas this year depended upon provisions for parity payments, Slaughter pointed out. Marketing quotas are already in effect for cotton and for flue-cured, burley, and the dark tobaccos. The act provides that there shall be no marketing quota for rice this year.

THE W. M. S.

The W. M. S. of the Baptist Church held their social and business meeting in the home of Mrs. Lester Jarrett with Mrs. Thurston and Mrs. Stewart as joint hostesses.

The topic for study was Brazil. Mrs. Johnson led the devotional. Brazil 60 Years Ago, Mrs Thornhill; Brazil Today. Mrs. J. L. Pratt; Hymn, The Morning Light is Breaking; Brazil Tomorrow, Mrs. Page; Prayer that we may send the Gospel to Brazil; A Dexter Taylor; Hymn, Bringing in the Sheaves.

After the program a business meeting with Mrs. J. C. Hall presiding, was held. At the close of the busines session a very enjoyable social meeting was had. Refreshments were seerved to 24 members with Mrs. George of Sweetwater as a visitor.

It was a very profitable and enjoyable afternoon and we all look forward to meeting with Mrs. Jarrett again.

Mrs. Page will teach the Bible lesson next Monday.

A TRIP BACK HOME

Messers. R. C. and J. C. Riden arrived here Friday night from Seminole and spent the night in the home of their brother, T. J. Riden. Saturday morning T. J. and W. J. Riden joined them in a trip to Comanche County to the old home community where they were raised.

Our first stop was at Rising Star with some relatives. Then we went to the Amity community to visit with our playmates when we were small boys. We went to the old home of our childhood so dear, where we once loved so well to roam. How sad and drear, no voice could we hear, there was no one to welcome us home. We spent the night with our old aunt, Josephine Smith, 84 years of age, living east of Sipe Springs.

Sunday morning we visited for awhile with Uncle Ike Walker, 94 years old, one of our neighbors while living in this community.

Then to the homecoming and singing that our father organized 47 years ago, which is held annually the first Sunday in June. During these years only two Sundays have been missed and these because of rain.

We drove up to the little church surrounded by a postoak grove, got out of the car and made our way toward toward the building through a large crowd. It sounded as though the singing was coming from above. We looked up and there were loud speakers in the trees which was very nice because the church was filled to capacity. We could take seats under the trees or under the tabernacle.

At noon we were invited to take our lunch with five or six hundred people under the large tabernacle where we found many good things to eat. Here we met all of our friends and mother's and father's neighbors whose hair was frosty with many winters.

It gave us great joy and pleasure to meet our friends and see the work of our father going on in such a big way, and I hope and trust it will continue.

T. J. Riden.

"I Saw It in the News Review"
is a common expression among those who keep well informed on current events. They know that in the "Weekly News Review," which appears regularly in this paper, they obtain a comprehensive interpretation of world events written by Edward W. Pickard, one of the nation's most widely-known news commentators.
Weekly News Review
deals with the important happenings and their effect upon our country. It is more than news—it is an interpretation of the news, and therefore much more valuable to the person who wants to understand what is going on in the world today.

IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL Lesson

Lesson for June 12

FACING THE SUPREME TEST OF SERVICE

LESSON TEXT—Mark 14:32-36.
GOLDEN TEXT—Not what I will, but what thou wilt. Mark 14:36.
PRIMARY TOPIC—Jesus in the Garden.
JUNIOR TOPIC—In Gethsemane
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Courage in the Face of Danger.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Challenge of God's Will.

No man has ever faced such a crisis as Jesus met in the Garden of Gethsemane, for He was the Son of God incarnate in order to bear the sins of the world. No one can ever fully understand the agony of soul involved when God "made him to be sin for us, who knew no sin; that we might be made the righteousness of God in him" (II Cor. 5:21). It is, therefore, true that we may never say that we have gone "through Gethsemane." But there is a very real sense in which our Lord's experience is shared by His disciples, in a lesser degree and as ordinary human beings.

Our lesson brings before us the closing scene of Thursday before the crucifixion. The day has been crowded with important events, among them the eating of the Passover, the revelation that there was a traitor among the twelve, the institution of the Lord's supper, the precious words of the upper room, the intercessory prayer in the garden.

I. Exceeding Sorrowful (vv. 32-36).

The text uses many words to convey the depth of His soul's agony, as though it were impossible to express it in the faulty medium of speech. So it is, for our Lord here experienced something far more serious than a dread of physical death. He was not a coward. He was not afraid to die. His soul was about to have put upon its spotless sinlessness the stain and dishonor of the world's sins. Little wonder that He was "sorrowful even unto death" (v. 34).

Since this was the road the Master trod, should not His servants tread it still?

II. Alone with God (vv. 37-41).

Jesus took with Him into the secluded place in the Garden the three who were closest to Him in the circle of disciples. He counted on their fellowship and sympathy in His hour of anguish. Merely to have them near Him, to know that they were there to watch and pray even though they could not share His holy burden, was to be a comfort to Him. We try to do as much for one another in hours of bereavement and disappointment, but how much greater was the opportunity of these three, and how ignominiously they failed. The spirit was willing (v. 38), but the flesh took the upper hand, and they slept! He was alone with His Father, when He prayed that if it were possible the hour might pass from Him, but in true and beautiful submission said, "not what I will, but what thou wilt."

The follower of Jesus will know this experience, too. While he will ever find it to be true that there is nothing more precious than the friends God gives him, he should prepare himself to expect the arm of flesh to fail him. There is no more bitter experience in human relationships than to count on those who should stand by, come what may, and to find that they have slept through our hour of soul-struggle.

III. Betrayed by a Kiss (vv. 42-46).

To betray the one who had done nothing but good, who had loved him and served him even in the washing of his feet, this would have been far more than one could have expected of even the sin-blackened heart of a Judas. But he fills the measure of his ignominy to overflowing by betraying his Lord with the sign of affection—a kiss.

We know full well that we may not stand on the same ground as our Lord even here, for, whereas He had done nothing to merit betrayal, we at our best are not able to stand forth without fault. Nevertheless, great is the hurt when we face the betrayals of life. It may be one whom we have befriended, who has been the object of our loving thought and care, and who in the hour when he thinks to gain himself some advantage or avenge some fancied wrong strikes us in the back, even as he smilingly professes to be a friend. Shall we be embittered in soul and give like for like? God forbid! Let us rather say as Jesus did to Judas, "Friend, wherefore art thou come?" (Matt. 26:50.)

Men of the Mounted

A CHISELER STARTS A RIOT

FOR a dozen days and nights the continuous roll of the tom-toms and the weird, blood-chilling shrieking of the Salteaux Indians had echoed and re-echoed over the Athabaskan plains. Meanwhile, in the tents and tepees, babies died in the arms of mothers too starved to suckle them, while others, including the aged and ill, were slowly dying from hunger and the 30-below-zero weather that had been gripping the region for weeks. And, as the Salteaux suffered and died, the warriors and braves, with the help of some smuggled rotgut whisky were dancing themselves into an ugly, fighting, bloodthirsty mood. They were steaming up for a little skull-splitting and scalp-lifting party to be staged on the handful of whites who were responsible for their pitiable condition.

The Salteaux, a rather superior group, were justified in their anger and rage, for the administration of their affairs had fallen into the hands of a double-dyed grafter and chiseler. When the Great White Mother made the treaty with the Salteaux, she not only agreed to give them equipment, horses and cows with which to begin farming, but she also agreed to give them food and supplies twice a week until they were well established and prosperous. Everything went along fine until some underling in the Indian affairs department was placed in charge while his superior was off on a rather extended vacation down east. From this time on, the food supplies for the Salteaux began to diminish. Each time the rations were handed out, they weighed a few ounces less than before, with the result that after a week or two the allotments reached the most ridiculous proportions, and the Salteaux began to grumble out loud. To make matters worse, game was exceedingly scarce in the region that winter, and even rabbits were few and far between. Moreover, had there been furs and skins, the Salteaux could have traded for food at the Hudson Bay Trading post located right on the reservation.

And now, with the tribe slowly starving to death in the middle of a stiff Athabaskan winter, it was time for action. Having worked themselves into a frenzy of rage and hate, the warriors and braves swooped down on the government warehouses and helped themselves to a few tons of flour, sowbelly, bacon and other staples. The underling in charge made a faint squeak of protest, and right away two husky braves had him by collar and belt and were heaving him off into the distance. Loaded with all the food they could carry away, the Salteaux returned to their tepees and had the first really decent feed in weeks. And, as they fed and gorged themselves, the Men of the Mounted were on their way to investigate what was termed an "Indian outrage."

The officer in charge, although a fearless policeman, was a poor hand with Indians, and his opening remarks were to the effect that the Great White Mother was deeply grieved to learn that her Salteaux children had committed this terrible crime (taking the food that rightfully belonged to them). Furthermore, the poor misguided, or misinformed officer asked them why they committed the robbery when everybody knew that the agent handed out plenty of food twice a week. Naturally, the Salteaux began to think that the red-coat was insane. Did he not know that they were starving? Did he not know that the food ration had been growing smaller and smaller until there was not enough for one child, let alone a brave? No, the officer did not know this.

Furthermore, he rather brusquely stated that they were not starving at all, and that the rations given them were more than sufficient. This was the spark to the powder. The braves began fondling their rifles and clubs, and they moved in close, dangerously close. The air was electrified with the tension of impending battle. Up to this time there had never been any misunderstandings, nor had there ever been shots exchanged between the Salteaux and the Mounted Police, and it wasn't long before an ordinary red-coated constable was down among the ugly Salteaux patching things up and, incidentally, learning the truth about the diminishing rations. Needless to say, the quarrel was patched up so well that there has never been any more trouble with the Salteaux.

The chiseler? Well, he saddled up one morning and rode east. He must have kept on traveling, for he hasn't been seen since.

The Screech Owl

The screech owl, called by some the little horned owl, is a familiar bird in many sections. It is not as secluded in habits as are other members of the owl family and often is found nesting in bird boxes put up for martins and flickers.

SEEN and HEARD around the NATIONAL CAPITAL

By Carter Field

FAMOUS WASHINGTON CORRESPONDENT

Washington. — Most congressmen and government officials who have studied the situation, and practically all bankers, will tell you privately that government ownership of the railroads is inevitable. The financial situation of the railroads grows worse by the month. More and more government money, via the RFC, is being poured into the doomed financial structures. Which merely means that they are tided over the immediate emergency, whatever it may be in each individual case, and therefore will have a harder row than ever to hoe from now on. For there will be interest, not to mention sinking fund, for the additional debt so kindly advanced by the government.

Politics being what it is, no one can think of any solution, not even President Roosevelt, who is more willing to be helpful to the railroads than to any other industry. Yet the apparent fate of the railroad companies is actually bad news for nearly everybody.

It is very bad for the stock and bondholders, of course. And in turn it is bad for the people with whom these investors have been spending their money, for obviously they will spend less when the "day" comes.

It is very bad for the treasuries, and therefore for the politicians and taxpayers of every state in the Union. For at present the railroads are paying staggering amounts of taxes to state, county and city governments.

It is very bad for the federal Treasury, for not only do the railroads pay a huge load of federal taxes direct to the Treasury, but their officers, high-ranking employees and security holders sweeten their own individual income taxes no little because of the fact that the railroads are privately owned.

Bad All Around

It is bad for the federal Treasury, and therefore every living person (for everyone contributes heavily to the federal Treasury, directly or indirectly, to an extent which very few realize) for another reason. Scarcely a single government official or member of congress believes that federal operation of the railroads will be as economical as private management. Hence the prospect is that when the day comes the railroads will quickly become a burden on the government.

Politics being what it is, no really drastic plan to avoid this approaching catastrophe seems likely of adoption. As a matter of fact, none is being proposed.

No man running for office, for example, would be likely to propose that the railroads be liberated from all regulation, to follow their own judgment or that of their individual officers, with a view to seeing if they could not work out their own salvation. On the contrary, there has been very little criticism of the interstate commerce commission for refusing recently to permit the railroads to increase certain rates, despite the fact that the I. C. C. made its decision not because it did not think the roads entitled to the additional money, but because it did not believe the proposed increases would result in additional earnings! Commissioner Joseph B. Eastman dissented violently from the right of the commission to substitute its own judgment for that of railroad managers, though personally he admitted he did not think the increases would provide more revenue.

Every traffic man, and most farmers, know that if roads were permitted to juggle rates as they pleased, they could often turn a pretty penny by cutting rates on perishable crops, providing they did not have to maintain the cut rates afterwards. But the feeling that this would be against public interest has prevented this ever being tried, though every store in the land can have a bargain Tuesday if it likes.

Problem for Farley

The problem confronting James A. Farley in Pennsylvania this summer and fall is plainly shown in the figures of the Democratic and Republican primaries. New Dealers, of course, are hoping that many of the voters in the Republican primary who cast their ballots for Gifford Pinchot will swing over to Charles Alvin Jones in the election.

There was no such bitterness against Jones at any stage of the campaign as was manifested against his running mate, Gov. George H. Earle, who is now the Democratic nominee for senator. In fact if John L. Lewis had not been so dictatorial, if he and Sen. Joseph P. Guffey had been willing to take a beating with a smile and accept half a loaf—they had their candidate for senator all selected—the story might now be very different.

Lewis, at least, could then have concentrated on Gifford Pinchot in the Republican primary. No one can tell what would have happened in that case, of course. With hindsight it would seem doubtful that the Lewis strength would have been enough to save Pinchot. But there are a good many shrewd Pennsylvania politicians who believe that the reason Pinchot was beaten so badly was that Lewis moved heaven and earth to get his Republican miners to change their affiliations so as to vote for Tom Kennedy in the Democratic primary, and obviously almost every vote so changed was a loss for Pinchot. Not only because of Lewis' friendship for Pinchot, but because Pinchot as governor made warm friends of the miners.

This may or may not be true, but it would not explain why Lewis made such a poor showing in the mining regions. The vote in these ran just as strongly against Kennedy as it did elsewhere.

Want to Beat Davis

The chief problem of the New Dealers, however, is to beat Puddler Jim Davis, and this looks like an uphill job indeed. For instance nearly 171,000 votes were piled up for former Attorney General Charles J. Margiotti. Margiotti had denounced Governor Earle during the primary campaign, accusing him of taking money from the brewers.

It must be remembered that the total Republican vote for senator was about 8,000 in excess of the total Democratic vote for senator. This would be insignificant, normally, but it must be considered that most of the votes cast against Senator Davis were organization votes, which normally can be expected to swing to the winner on election day.

Out of the total Democratic votes in the senatorial race, however, S. Davis Wilson, mayor of Philadelphia, piled up about 328,000. During the campaign Wilson attacked Earle bitterly, although he had been a former ally, charging that Earle had borrowed money from a state contractor.

Conceivably something might be done which would bring Wilson into the Democratic camp. Conceivably Wilson may even be making speeches for Earle before election day. But the fight was so bitter that it is very difficult to imagine all of Wilson's supporters voting for Earle in November. Some of them may have believed the plain intimation of the man they were supporting that Earle's actions in borrowing this money were not ethical, to put it mildly.

Zero in Marching

There has been a tremendous lot of marching up the hill and down again since last month, when the opinion was ventured that "Follow the Leader" was no longer a political necessity for senators and representatives in voting on measures affecting business.

But the net result of all the marching is pretty nearly zero. Pennsylvania, where the New Deal lost not only its shirt, but its reputation for infallible political prediction, just about offsets Florida, where a strongly pro-New Deal senator triumphed in his primary over a New Deal critic seeking his toga.

A good many more cards will be played, in various states, before the picture is complete, and it would be dangerous now to predict that New Deal ideals will not be slavishly followed by a chastened congress after the primaries and the November election have recorded their mandates. But—present conviction in Washington is that the results will be mixed, with administration victories and defeats so counterbalancing that the net result will be, next session, that individual senators and representatives who want to be independent will be.

Regardless of what may happen to the Roosevelt prestige, however, it would seem next to impossible for John L. Lewis again to inspire the political fear in congressional hearts which has dwelt there for the last few years. By the same token William Green, and the American Federation of Labor, have regained the prestige and political power which they enjoyed until Lewis and his C. I. O. moved in on Roosevelt.

Political Loser

Important now, however, is the fact that the labor outfit which has been dominating the New Deal policies and appointments turns up as a political loser. Since the Pennsylvania primaries congress is paying more attention to William Green's attack on the national labor relations board.

Shrinking of the Lewis political menace in the minds of our national legislators has also resulted in many members of the house and senate paying more attention to the flood of protests from manufacturers and other employers of labor as to the high-handed, arbitrary and discouraging methods of the NLRB.

Now congress is being told very emphatically that the labor policy of the government is also a wet blanket on enterprise, and particularly on any contemplated expansion. In short that it is one of the big contributing causes of unemployment. Up to now it has not been a question of disbelieving this contention. But individual congressmen, with their eyes on the primaries and election this year, were timid about making any move which might bring a strongly organized group out against them in their districts or states.

Strange Facts

Tiny Sailfish Puzzles Beebe

DR. WILLIAM BEEBE returned recently from a tropical expedition. He had collected 20,000 different specimens of marine life. He brought back a fish not as long as his little finger. This was his most valuable specimen, a sailfish 1½ inches long.

The familiar sailfish caught by anglers in California or Florida weighs from 30 to more than 100 pounds. Their length measures the height of a man or a giant. Some are even ten feet long. The "baby" sailfish measuring 1½ inches may not be a "baby" at all. The tiny fish exactly like the ten foot sailfish puzzles Doctor Beebe. In an interview on landing, the well known scientist says the tiny sailfish might be the first young sailfish ever captured, or may be a new miniature species. There is much doubt of the 1½ inch sailfish being the young of the ordinary sailfish because the little fish seems fully formed.

The sailfish derives its name from the huge dorsal fin that extends a foot or two above the body and resembles a sail. These fish feed on the surface of the water and they are caught by trolling in the daytime. The miniature sailfish secured by Doctor Beebe was caught at night under search lights, on a voyage that took Doctor Beebe and his companions 2,000 miles down the west coast from Cape Lucas to Panama.

Early Trial

In Panama, a man indicted for a crime, even though he may be a fugitive from justice, undergoes trial at once, while the witnesses for the state are alive, present and of sound memory. Recently a safebreaker was captured and began his six-year sentence a few hours later, his trial having taken place in 1935.—Collier's Weekly.

HOW TO SEW

by Ruth Wyeth Spears

Rag Rug Crocheted in Squares.

THE diagram shows how the contrasting squares are arranged to give the rug its interesting design. Whatever color scheme you use, black will be most effective for joining the squares and for an edging of single crochet around the outside of the rug. If the materials you have are not the colors you want, don't forget there is always the dye pot. Producing your own colors may be the most exciting part of rug making.

A crocheted rag rug like the one shown here uses odds and ends. Wool rags make a nicer rug than cotton, or rug yarn may be substituted if desired. Either a wood or large steel crochet hook is used. The rug shown here measures 36 by 21 inches. The 5-inch squares are made separately in single crochet stitch and then joined with crochet slip-stitch. If rags are used, tear or cut the strips not more than 1¼ inches wide, and work with the raw edges turned in as shown here at A. Measure each square carefully so they will all be exactly the same size. Full instructions for slip covers for side chairs like the one shown are in the book offered below.

NOTE: Every Homemaker should have a copy of Mrs. Spears' book SEWING, for the Home Decorator. Forty-eight pages of illustrated directions for making slip-covers and curtains; also dressing tables; lampshades and other useful articles for the home. Price 25 cents postpaid (coin preferred). Address Mrs. Spears, 210 S. Desplaines St., Chicago, Ill.

"There's the Doorbell Again"

SUPPOSE daily to your door came the butcher, the grocer, the clothier, the furrier, the furniture man, and every other merchant with whom you deal? What a tedium of doorbell answering that would mean!

● It would be even more impractical for you to visit daily all these stores to find out what they have to offer and the price. And yet you need those merchants' service quite as much as they need your patronage. Contact between seller and consumer is essential in the supplying of human needs. Before a sale can be closed the goods must be offered. Every week, through the advertising columns of this newspaper, the merchants of this city come to your home with their choicest wares. Easily, quickly, you get the news of all that is worth while in the market-places of the world.

● They are not strangers at the door, but merchants you know and trust. You are surer of high quality and fair price when you buy an article advertised by a reputable firm.

BUSINESS ACTIVITY SHOWS SLIGHT DECLINE

Austin, Texas, June 6.—Business activity in Texas showed a slight decline from March to April, continuing the trend observed in recent months, Dr. F. A. Buechel, assistant director of the University of Texas Bureau of Business Research, pointed out in his monthly analysis of economic conditions in Texas and other parts of the country. The rate of activity is still only moderately below what it was during April last year, however, he asid.

CASH FROM SALE FARM PRODUCTS ON DECREASE

Austin, Texas, June 6.—Cash income from the sales of crops, live stock, and live stock products in Texas during April was sharply below both the preceding month and the corresponding month last year, according to Dr. F. A. Buechel, assistant director of the Bureau of Business Research, University of Texas. The April index for the State also indicates a substantial decline when compared with the base period, 1928-32.

Sharp declines in April in comparison with the month before and the like month last year are especially noticeable in the crop reporting districts of the High Plains, the Permian Plains, and North Central Texas.

Total farm cash income for the State as computed by the Bureau was $20,921,000 in April, compared with $16,434,000 in March, and $27,370,000 in April last year. The average April farm cash income during the base period 1928-1932 was $26,076,000.

HARRY POND IS IN RACE FOR ELECTION AS DISTRICT CLERK

'Old Timer' of Cuthbert Makes Announcement of His Candidacy

Candidacy of H. A. (Harry) Pond of Cuthbert for the office of district clerk was officially announced this week. Pond, who has lived in Mitchell county 38 years, was a candidate for the office in 1934.

"In announcing my candidacy", Pond said at The News office this week, "I would like to express my thanks to all Mitchell county voters who supported my campaign in 1934. I am seeking the office because I need thejob. As I have said once before, I am not a politician, but I do solicit the earnest consideration ofthe voters for this post."

A native of Indiana, Pond has been in the farming business since coming to Mitchell county 38 years ago. His home is located between Fairview and Cuthbert.

"My record as a citizen is known to most of the voters of Mitchell county," Pond said when making his announcement. "I sincerely believe that I can fill the office which I seek satisfactorily, and on that basis I am seeking the support of the electorate. Between now and election time I shall do my best to contact as many voters as possible and personally solicit the support of each one."

MANUFACTURE OF DAIRY PRODUCTS INCREASE

Austin, Texas, June 6.—Increasing interest in the manufacture of dairy products in Texas has been evidenced by the large number of dairy shows held during the last month at various points in the State, according to Mrs. Clara H. Lewis, editorial assistant in the University of Texas Bureau of Business Research. The Kraft-Phenix Cheese Corporation opened a cheese plant at Grapeland the latter part of 1937 which is proving successful, and the cheese plant under construction at Sulphur Springs by the same company is expected to begin operation sometime this month, she said. The Spring Valley Butter Company of Houston has also been added to the list of dairy manufacturers in the State.

Other food processing plants include the egg drying plant of the Cudahy Packing Company at Cuero, employing approximately 125 workers, the Freezerved Foods, Inc., of Houston which has opened a plant at Port Lavacaca for freezing fruit juices, and the canning plant at Jacksonville of the Ozark Mountain Canning Company and the Ogburn Canning Company factory at Lindale, which have opened for the season canning fruits and vegetables.
