Sirica Suggests Written Questions

Limits Put On Weapons

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Ford said the nuclear weapons agreement with the Soviet Union "put a cap on the arms race," but the figures he released indicated that the United States must deploy more strategic weapons to reach the ceilings.

"I can say this without hesitation or qualification," Ford told Monday's news conference. "If we had not had this agreement, it would have required the United States to substantially increase its military expenditures in the strategic areas. So, we put a cap on the arms race."

The annual price tag for the 2,400 delivery systems — missiles launched either from land or submarines, plus heavy bombers — and 1,320 multiwarhead missiles will go up from $15 billion to $18 billion, Ford said much of that would be inflation.

Inflation took up the second half of Ford's two-part meeting with reporters. The President again pressured Congress to enact his legislative proposals, criticizing them for spending $1 billion more than he proposed. He predicted the United States would be without major gasoline shortages this winter, barring another Arab oil embargo.

One of Ford's legislative recommendations — a trade regulation bill — is expected to be discussed today when the President speaks to the American Conference on Trade.

Another area in which Ford has a faceoff with Congress is in the appointment of a new vice president. The nominee, Nelson A. Rockefeller, also is scheduled to meet with the President today.

Ford wore a brand new blue pin-striped suit for his fifth news conference. It was so new that he didn't want to pierce the fabric with a WIN button.

The President seemed relaxed and well prepared for the series of questions on strategic weapons. The United States has 838 MIRV-equipped missiles now. Pentagon sources say plans call for 1,286 of the hydro-headed rockets — 34 less than the limit.

"I intend to stay below the ceiling," Ford said. "That is the agreement, but we do have an obligation to stay up to that ceiling, and the budget that I will recommend will keep our strategic forces either up to or aimed at that objective."

Current spending, Ford acknowledged, was about $15 billion and the increase would bring it to "the ballpark" figure of $18 billion.

"My best judgment," he said, "is that our strategic arms cost will hold relatively the same. It will not be substantially expanded other than for any increase resulting from inflation."

He was direct in answer to a question about gasoline. "We have more gasoline in storage than we had a year ago," he said. "I see no prospects of the cost of gasoline going up to $1 a gallon."

ADVISER DISCLOSES

Rockefeller Holdings More Than $1 Billion

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The 84 members of the Rockefeller family are worth slightly more than $1 billion, family financial adviser J. Richardson Dillworth disclosed today.

Dillworth, who runs the Rockefeller family empire, told House Judiciary Committee hearings on Nelson A. Rockefeller's nomination as vice president that the family holdings total $1,033,988,000.

It was the first time in history that the family founded by oil magnate John D. Rockefeller Sr. had disclosed its net worth. Dillworth was called as a witness primarily to answer questions about a possible conflict of interest between Rockefeller's wealth and the powers of a vice president.

He said the 84 living Rockefellers have given $235 million to charity in their lifetime. This does not include the $1 billion given away by John D. Rockefeller Sr. and John D. Rockefeller Jr.

The Senate Rules Committee, which already has approved the nomination, meanwhile prepared a report saying it found no evidence that Rockefeller had any ulterior motives when he gave nearly $3 million in loans and gifts to personal and political associates over a period of 16 years. The loans and gifts have been another major issue in the confirmation process.

Dillworth provided no breakdown on the holdings of the individual family members. He said that would be an invasion of their right of privacy.

The bulk of the family holdings — $738 million — is in trusts set up by John D. Rockefeller Jr. for his descendants. Dillworth said. The remaining $295 million is held by the individual family members.

As expected, Dillworth said the major family investment is in Exxon, one of the companies formed when Standard Oil Co. formed by John D. Rockefeller Sr. was split up. But Dillworth added the family's $156.7 million in Exxon stock represents just over 1 per cent of the total company stock.

The family's second largest holding is $98 million, or all the outstanding stock in Rockefeller Center. Dillworth said. The family also holds $84.9 million in Standard Oil of California and $72.6 million in IBM stock.

Dillworth, nephew and namesake of the former Philadelphia mayor, insisted that the goal of the Rockefeller family was to make money on their investments and not to hold economic control of major U.S. industries.

"It should be stressed that both the family members and their investment advisers are totally uninterested in controlling anything," he said. "The family members are simply investors. The aim and hope of the advisers is over time to achieve a reasonable total return for our clients."

While most of the family holdings are in stocks, Dillworth also listed $127 million in bonds and real estate totaling nearly $95 million.

Companies in which the family holds $10 million or more in stock included Chase Manhattan Bank, Mobil Oil Co., Eastman Kodak, General Electric, Texas Instruments and Minnesota Mining and Manufacturing.

Dillworth said that he had received "unanimous permission" of the Rockefeller family to make public the total figures of their holdings.

PIF Selects 10 Nominees

STARTS WEDNESDAY

Burn Institute Sessions Slated For This Week

The Southern Burn Institute in co-operation with the Pampa Chamber of Commerce will sponsor an industrial Burn and Safety Seminar Wednesday, Thursday and Friday in the Starlight Room of Coronado Inn.

Lee Fraser, chairman of the Fire Prevention and Safety Committee of the chamber, said approximately 25 persons have been enrolled for the course, which will begin at 7:30 p.m. tomorrow with the first general session.

Thursday and Friday programs will run from 8:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. in the Starlight Room of Coronado Inn with a Continental breakfast scheduled for 10 a.m. each day.

The special two and one-half day course is devoted to latest techniques and strategies involved in establishing fire and burn accident prevention programs in industry and in the community.

R.A. Kolvoord, education director of the Institute who will serve as the co-ordinating instructor, will arrive in Pampa tomorrow evening, according to Fraser.

All registrants will receive a copy of the "Industrial Burn Management" manual especially developed for the program; a one year subscription to "Flame Free Newsletter," and a portfolio of reference materials and resource lists.

Although the seminar is designed primarily for industries in the area, all businesses and individuals are invited to attend. The registration fee for the two and one-half day seminar is $75 per person. The class will be limited to 50 and, as of yesterday afternoon, several places were still open, Fraser said.

Anyone wishing further information should call the Chamber of Commerce office, 669-3241.

WASHINGTON (UPI) — U.S. District Judge John J. Sirica suggested today that written questions could be submitted to former President Richard M. Nixon if he remains too sick to testify orally in the Watergate cover-up trial.

Sirica made the suggestion following a request Monday by attorneys for defendant John D. Ehrlichman that the trial be recessed over the Christmas holidays to await a deposition or testimony from the ailing former president. Ehrlichman claims Nixon's testimony is crucial to his defense.

The suggestion came before another defendant, former White House chief of staff H.R. Haldeman, was to resume his testimony.

Sirica said he would ask a court-appointed panel of medical specialists to advise him whether Nixon was well enough to answer written questions. He also sought the reaction of lawyers involved in the trial of five former Nixon aides and indicated he was seriously considering the idea.

Chief trial prosecutor James F. Neal did not directly oppose Sirica's suggestion. But, he said, "in all frankness, we have had a number of statements from the former president on Watergate, none of which has been satisfactory to us."

Sirica then told Neal that the prosecution would be permitted to submit its own questions too.

Washington (UPI) — Lt. Gen. Sa'ad El Shazly, the Egyptian ambassador to London, said today he believed another war with Israel was inevitable and that his country had the right to build nuclear weapons to counter Israeli nuclear capability.

"I think there will be another war because you see there is a minimum which we can accept," he told an Independent Television News interviewer. "And if they don't concede to this minimum then war is inevitable."

Shazly, who commanded Egyptian forces in the October 1973 Middle East War, said Egypt had nuclear capabilities but had never thought of converting them to armed capabilities until the Israeli announcement of its own nuclear weapon-making potential.

Israeli President Ephraim Katzir said Monday that Israel had a nuclear weapon-making potential but promised it would not be the first nation to bring such arms into the Middle East.

Shazly said Egypt was not alarmed by the Israeli announcement because, "we do not believe they really have atomic weapons." He said otherwise Israel could not talk of converting its nuclear capability within a matter of days.

"I think we have these capabilities, but you see it's different to have the capabilities and to convert them," Shazly said in reply to a question.

"They think that if they go on to peace talks with the conception that we know that they have the atomic weapons, that will bully us," Shazly said. "But on the contrary, that will incite us to bring our own."

Israeli military sources said today in Tel Aviv that Egyptian troops east of the Suez Canal have constructed six bases which could be used as anti-aircraft missile sites and that Israel has complained to the United Nations.

The disengagement accord Egypt and Israel signed last January forbids installation of anti-aircraft missiles in the limited forces zone on the eastern side of the canal.

The military sources said the U.N. Emergency Force was investigating the Israeli complaint.

Before the first Israeli-Egyptian disengagement accord was agreed on, Israel lodged a similar complaint and refused to sign the document until the missile bases were dismantled.

The complaint came as the Tel Aviv newspaper Ha'aretz reported that Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin believes that Israel will have to decide within six weeks on concessions, it is willing to make in any second stage accord with Egypt.

In what was described as a conversation with Rabin by correspondent Yoel Marcus, Ha'aretz said Rabin's dilemma was how many concessions to the Arabs Israel must make in order to assure continued U.S. support in future negotiations. It said Rabin viewed Israel's central objective as gaining time in the negotiations — meaning a period of up to seven years.

The judge then instructed his law clerk, Todd Christofferson, to contact Dr. Charles A. Hufnagel, head of the court-appointed panel of physicians, to report back on when and under what circumstances Nixon would be able to answer questions in writing.

The medical panel reported to Sirica last Friday after personally examining Nixon that the former president would not be well enough even to provide an oral deposition from his home in San Clemente, Calif., until Jan. 6 — after the trial was expected to be over. It said Nixon could not testify in Washington until at least Feb. 15.

The technique of written questions, known as "interrogatories," was used in the White House plumbers trial last summer. In that case, Nixon answered four written questions which were screened by U.S. District Judge Gerhard A. Gesell.

Nixon has been hospitalized with phlebitis twice since he resigned the presidency Aug. 9. He currently is recuperating in San Clemente.

Haldeman testified Monday that he failed to disclose the existence of the White House taping system to the Watergate grand jury under orders from Nixon.

"You didn't mention tapes and you hoped they wouldn't be revealed?" Assistant Watergate Prosecutor Richard Ben-Veniste said as he began what was expected to be three days of cross-examination of Haldeman.

With his mother, brother, wife and daughter in the courtroom, Haldeman replied: "I was under orders from the President of the United States at that time. It was not a matter of my hopes; it was my instructions."

Ben-Veniste pointed out that Haldeman already had resigned at the time he was questioned by the grand jury in May 1973.

Earlier Monday, Ehrlichman's lawyer asked that the sequestered jury of eight blacks and four whites be excused over the holidays so he could obtain Nixon's testimony starting Jan. 6.

Wofford stated it was planned to determine who will attend the Austin hearing next Tuesday. He added that he planned to go and probably will be accompanied by at least one other city official.

Today's noonday meeting with Green was attended by Wofford, Mayor R.D. Wilkerson and city commissioners.

Wofford said although Pampa's place on the priority list still is subject to further study at the Austin hearing next week, local officials feel today's notice of being placed No. 4 on the long priority list puts Pampa in excellent position for favorable final approval of the treatment plant project assistance on the full 75 percent basis of federal aid.

Pampa city officials have been working on the sewage treatment plant project for nearly three years following orders from the EPA and TWQB that the city would have to bring the local facilities up to state and federal requirements under the Federal Environmental Protection Act.

It was explained in the notice received today the new priority list still is subject to a public hearing scheduled before the TWQB in Austin at 9 a.m. one week from today.

City Manager Wofford said a meeting had been scheduled at noon today in Coronado Inn with Chester Green, representative of Parkhill, Smith and Cooper, Lubbock consultant engineers for the Pampa project.

In a letter received this forenoon from Emory G. Long, director of the Administrative Operations Division of the Texas Water Quality Board, City Manager Mack Wofford was advised of Pampa's ranking near the top in the preliminary draft of the priority list which reflects alterations adopted Nov. 8 by the TWQB.

The three cities currently ranked ahead of Pampa on the lengthy priority schedule are Fort Worth for a $58.6 million project; Corsicana, $2.1 million, and Kingsville, $4 million.

In the notification received today, Pampa is set up for a $1.24 million project with an estimated $857,500 in a federal Environmental Protection Agency grant.

Since Pampa already has received a $17,000 grant for Step 1 of the local project and is committed for $50,000 on Step 2, the city's total assistance on the entire project would amount to approximately $924,500 or 75 percent of the total estimated cost.

It was explained in the notice received today the new priority list still is subject to a public hearing scheduled before the TWQB in Austin at 9 a.m. one week from today.

A COOL PRICE — During the past year or so, the price of antifreeze has been going up along with everything else. But at first glance, this sign is enough to worry a person. Fortunately, the sign is in fact advertising a used car for sale in Fort Worth.

Our Capsule Policy

The Pampa News is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessing. Only when man is free to control himself and all he produces can he develop to his utmost capability.

The News believes each and every person would get more satisfaction in the long run if he were permitted to spend what he earns on a volunteer basis rather than having part of it distributed involuntarily.

Food And Population

When the food supply increases, the animal population does likewise. In some areas of the world, the human population acts similarly. This is especially true in those areas of the world where the quality of life and esteem for the individual are low. Since World War II and before this country, Canada, Australia and Argentina have produced food surpluses. On the other hand, countries such as India, the Soviet Union, mainland China have suffered food shortages. Such shortages have been tempered somewhat by Free World production Part of the surplus production was distributed through trade and part through giveaways.

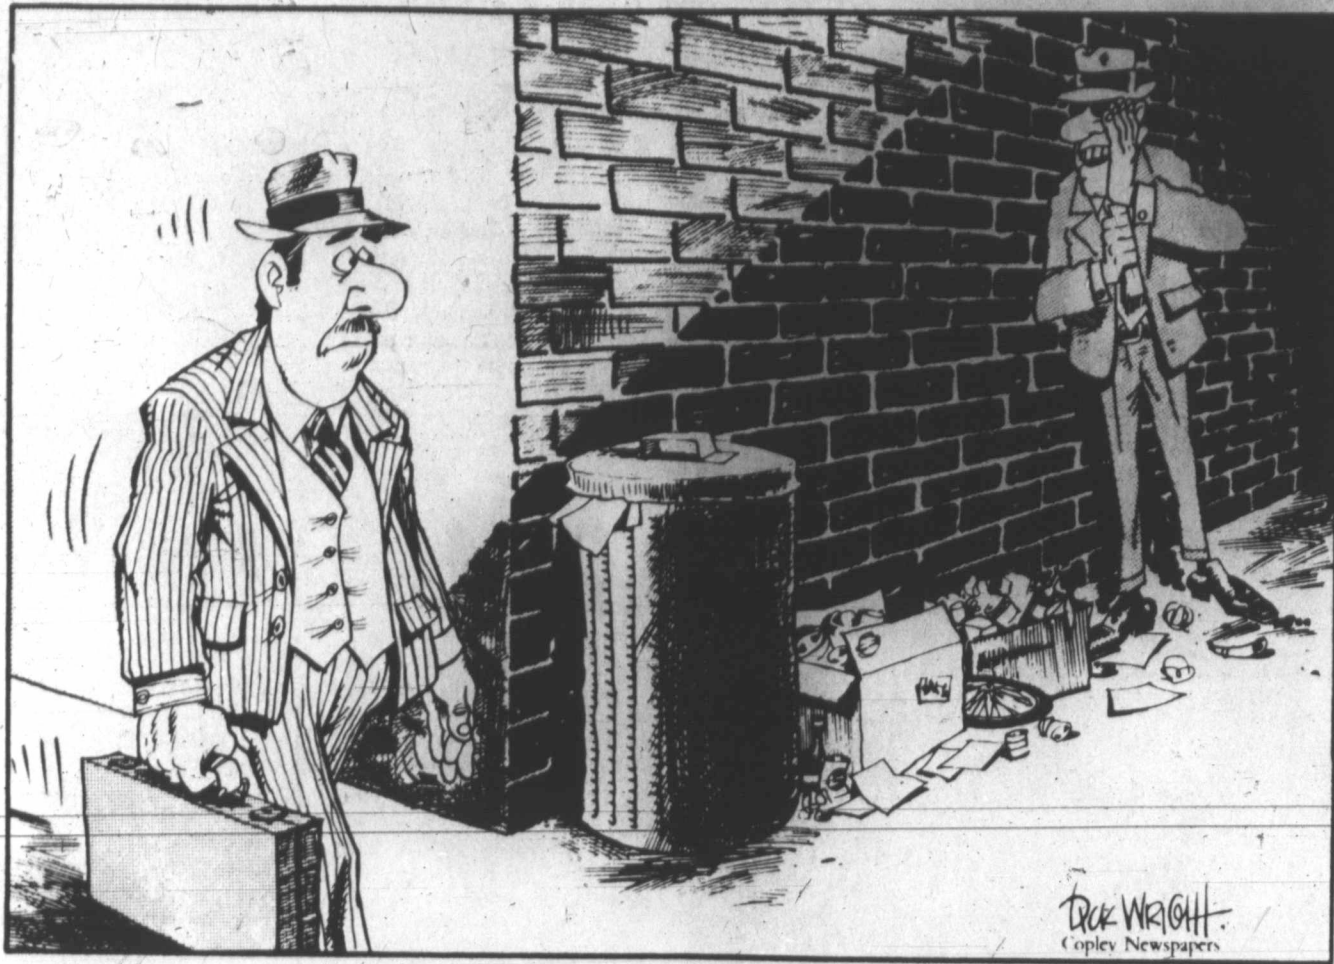

The giveaways were widely regarded as an act of meritorious mercy in that the hungry were fed. To the American farmer, the disposal of the surplus had a benefit, for the extra supply no longer worked to depress the domestic market. The taxpayer also could claim an advantage in that he no longer had to pay for the government-subsidized storage space.

The American surplus, of course, was created by a variety of government programs which had the effect of paying the farmer more than the free market would pay. The overproduction, having drugged the domestic market, was shipped abroad as gifts. The net, long-term result was that the exports of Free World food production to the have-not areas triggered a population explosion there and financial deficits here.

Now, that farm subsidies and foreign aid are generally recognized as naughty words in the politicians' vocabulary, a committee of so-called businessmen — the Committee For Economic Development (CED) — wishes to start the tired cycle all over again. The group is calling for the creation of food surpluses which would be stored at the taxpayer's expense, which would depress the market price to farmers, which would bring an outcry for exports to the have-nots, which would bring on more giveaways, which would bring on more giveaways, which would bring on more giveaways.

Thus the consequence of humanitarianism is more suffering than otherwise would occur. Any individual who will trouble to look up humanitarianism in a dictionary will see that it basically means trying to solve problems by following manmade methods instead of following principle.

The most economic storage space for future food supply is the soil in which it grows. Unhindered by man-made interference, the free market will call forth as much product as other producing populations require.

"PSST! HEY BUDDY... WANNA BUY A POUND OF SUGAR?"

Question Box CONSERVATIVE ADVOCATE Uncle Sam Strikes Out

QUESTION: Cannot a nation that can provide $60 million to elect one candidate afford to take better care of the ill and elderly people?

ANSWER: We do not know what the spending of money to get a candidate elected to office has to do with taking care of the elderly or ailing members of the population.

It sounds as if the questioner believes tax money were spent to get a candidate elected, and that tax money should be spent to finance some sort of welfare program for people.

In the first place, we have not heard that $60 million in taxes has been spent on any specific election or candidate. It is quite evident that huge amounts were spent by the various politicians in their efforts to get elected or reelected. Incumbents, in particular, for many years have been using tax dollars to promote their candidacies, either by putting out publicity and propaganda releases or by their advocacy of spending programs which amount to buying support of organizations, groups, parties and businesses. That is the nature of politics — seeking to build power and influence.

Now, as to whether the nation can afford to take better care of the ailing and elderly members of the population. We are convinced that far better care could be provided, if the government were not intervening with its taxing and spending for bureaucratic "assistance" programs, and with its attempts to control the public's health.

One of the reasons for the high price of health these days is the high taxes levied against the producers. Another is the fact that government entry into the field of medical assistance has created a greater demand, while government has continued to limit the supply of health practitioners, through licensing and other controls. The law of supply and demand still plays a major factor, despite the efforts of politicians to set aside important natural laws of economics.

If the prices of treatment and care were reduced and taxes were less exorbitant, we are convinced that care would be available for those in need of care, through voluntary action. But, of course, the political big spenders are unwilling to take over. It would end their chances to build their own power and prestige through use of the tax dollar.

We believe the questioner is taking the wrong approach by implying that the big election spending money should be diverted to care of the needy through government action. If the power were taken away from the politicians, the big corporations, big unions and other big lobbies would not have any reason to buy the election of friendly candidates. And, who knows, they might even spend some of the election money to help the needy directly.

By William Rusher

Americans, relax. We can now be certain that the next Little League World Series will be won by a team from the Continental United States. The League's board of directors has insured this gratifying result by the simple if brutal expedient of excluding everybody else.

After all, it was the only way we could win. Since 1957, when the Little League was expanded to include foreign teams, Mexico and Japan have each won the series twice, and in recent years a dreadful little bunch of Chinese pee-wees from Taiwan has swamped the competition, taking the championship four years in a row. The last American team to win it was from Wayne, New Jersey, back in 1970.

Europeans have never particularly cottoned to baseball, preferring soccer. But in Latin America and the Far East, Abner Doubleday's little invention has taken hold with a vengeance. Under the lights in Nagoya and many another Japanese city almost any summer night, you can find scores of thousands of baseball fans screaming their heads off at some umpire who has called a close strike or a dramatic out.

In Taiwan, under the benevolent eye of old Chiang Kai-shek, America's national pastime has long had its fans, but it wasn't until Little League competition was opened to all comers that Taiwan found something it could do better than anybody else in the world.

With skillful training by some adults who obviously know their business, the slant-eyed little hotshots of the (Nationalist) Republic of China were soon fading their Far Eastern competition in the regional playoffs, and in 1969 they came to Williamsport, Pa., to play in the World Series against Santa Clara.

In the United States, Little League baseball is a fairly modest crowd-puller. But can you imagine — have you any idea — what the notion of its youngsters vying with America's best for the Little League championship of the world did to the people of Taiwan? The moon developed purple spots, lions whelped in the streets, and plans for the invasion of the mainland simply ground to a halt, as Taiwan clung to its transistor radios. And when the local boys crashed through and won the championship, Taiwan all but rose straight out of the sea. From that day forward, the whole lovely island has been baseball-crazy. In 1971 I personally saw the champion trophy proudly entered on the mantelpiece in the reception room of the Prime Minister of the Republic of China.

Since then, the Taiwan teams have been unbeatable. Last August, the Kaohsiung Li eh team wrapped up Taiwan's fourth series by clobbering Red Bluff, Ca., 12 to 1. That lone run was the first the young Chinese had allowed in 46 innings. We Americans apparently just don't have anybody like 12-year-old Lin Wen-hsiung, the Kaohsiung Li Teh team's ace right-handed pitcher, who (I quote the AP) "hit two home runs and hurled a two-hitter in the finals, striking out 15 of the 21 batters he faced."

So the Little League directors have decided, quite unilaterally, to "break up the Taiwan Little Leaguers," at least as far as competition with our American teams is concerned, by banning all foreigners from competition in this misnamed "world" series.

It is a blunder, and an act of staggeringly poor sportsmanship. Must we grump and go home, simply because these wonderful little Orientals have a better team than any we can presently field? The English adore tennis, and used to be good at it, but there hasn't been an English finalist in the men's open at Wimbledon for 36 years. Yet still these doughty sports-lovers annually welcome Americans, Australians and all sorts of lesser breeds without the law to their prestigious home turf, and gamely watch their own best players being served, volleyed, lobbed and smashed right best players being served, volleyed, lobbed and smashed right into the ground. They have also been trying stubbornly for a century to regain the America's Cup, and haven't laid a finger on it yet. Are they the less for these "failures"? On the contrary, England will be remembered and honored for her sportsmanship long centuries after Harold Wilson has joined Ethelred the Unready.

But not us. Give us our bat and glove. We're going home.

Public Employes Get Strong Labor Backing

By VICTOR RIESEL
WASHINGTON—Washed out by the deluge of political news these past few days is a story which in perpetuity will make far more dramatic headlines where it hits hardest — right in the neighborhood. Your neighborhood.

Powerful AFL-CIO labor leaders received the blessing of their president of presidents, George Meany, and his pledge of national support in any strike they lead against the federal government, any state government, and any city. There's no qualification. The pledge, which could be translated in terms of no wheels turning if push got to crunch, was made to leaders of fire fighters, teachers, inner-city transport workers, government employes and even police.

What Meany says, Meany means. And he said it at the fastest convention in history — the founding session of the AFL-CIO's PED — Public Employes Dept. It opened at 10 o'clock Wednesday morning when many election returns weren't yet in. It adjourned at 10:44 a.m. It pulled together some 24 unions, and a goal of 13 million more workers who now run everything from a hamlet to Department of Defense key installations.

It chose as president a dynamic fire fighters leader, Howie McClellan, who not only has led his International Assn. of Fire Fighters successfully, rolled up its membership to a record 160,000 since 1968, but was studied at Harvard U., Boston U., Massachusetts U., Conn. U. He will give PED militant leadership.

He accepted the charter from Meany — and it hasn't any no-strike clause in it. It couldn't. Not after Meany's keynote speech, strongly delivered in the national AFL-CIO big conference room looking out at a historical old church.

There's no doubt this is America's new unionization front. Leaders such as the State, County and Municipal Employes president Jerry Wurf, firemen's chief McClellan and the new American Federation of Government Employes administration as well as the go-for-broke teachers federation, have been eager to cut loose on "the civil service." It is an enormous field. Wurf's 750,000 member union is far out front. Make no mistake about the labor movement. Each chief wants a piece of the action, and competes vigorously for part of the market. That's the name of the game.

Further, in this field is the new proletariat, the blacks, the Spanish surnamed, the minorities. Wurf's union leads all the rest in drive and members (1,000 new ones to a week). To win, Wurf has struck whole cities. So have the hospital workers, the nurses, the police (Baltimore), the sanitationmen, bridge handlers and sewage-processing plant employes.

Certainly it's against the law to strike the civil service. Hit the federal government, if you work for it, and you're liable to a year and a day in prison. A felony, with loss of civil rights.

But now it's national AFL-CIO policy to ignore those laws. Meany said so bluntly. If a governor or a mayor consistently bucks the municipal and state employes' demands — "You just quit working for him, you stop the job. You shut it down, as we say in the construction trades, and you take the consequences and you fight." Thus spoke Meany.

For instance: Meany told the delegates of an unreported incident in the grim saga of the 1966 New York City transit strike. A million autos were backed up. Subway trains were idle elongated behemoths in dark tunnels. Buses were garaged. Leader of the illegally striking Transport Workers Union, Matthew Guinan, was jailed in the old federal prison. Nothing happened. Then Meany said former Major John Lindsay telephoned. "Please ask Matty Guinan to come out of jail so I can talk to him." Big John, creator of Fun City, pleaded with Meany according to Meany.

"So I got the message to Matty and Matty said, 'No, I like it in here.'" Meany disclosed.

Then he added they were on strike in defiance of the state anti-public sector strike law. But the state legislature buckled. That was a victory. In defiance of the law.

To Meany and his colleagues this is not law breaking. They just don't recognize any no-strike statutes. Can't be enforced anyway. That's what the miners have been saying too, incidentally. You can't mine coal with bayonets. Calling out the National Guard is meaningless. This was once attempted by Lindsay, who was deep in Fun City's fun at the moment. It was early in February 1968.

Garbage was piling up, and when it piles up in big Babylon during a strike, it piles. There was a strike. It had been called by John DeLury's Uniformed Sanitationmen's Assn. (which is a teamsters local). It isn't in the AFL-CIO. The town was in danger of a plague. Lindsay put one on both houses of labor. He urged Gov. Rockefeller to call out the National Guard. Then Harry Van Arsdale, who is the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers' national treasurer, as well as chief of the New York Central Labor Council, warned not a wheel would turn in New York if the strike was broken. No troops came.

Meany knows his movement, its strength and strategy. Says he: "Public employes have got to fight for what is theirs and what is just and proper by the same method that private employes in unions fight for their rights."

Meany said that it doesn't make "a great deal of difference, whether there's a law which affirmatively says...you don't have the right to strike."

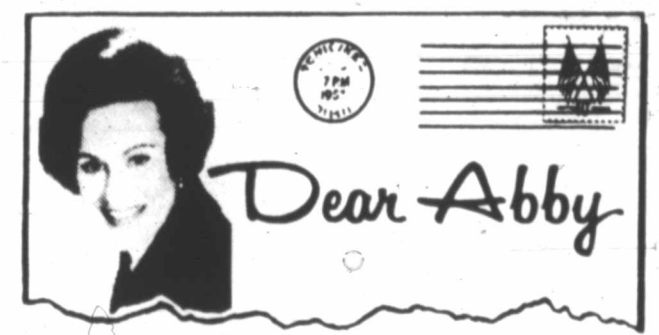

So the PED is off to a militant start. Strong leadership. Powerful blessing.

Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I am a 74-old childless widow. My husband left me a nice home and well off financially. Some close relatives are now pressing me to sell my house, buy a trailer, and move to another state so they can look after me.

Abby, I don't need "looking after." If that day ever comes, I plan to use my money to live out my days in a nice nursing home. I can certainly afford it.

These relatives ignore everything I say to them in this regard and keep pressuring me to sell my home and make plans to live near them. I am sure if I were penniless, they wouldn't be so eager to look after me.

My will does not include any of my family. Everything is going to charity.

In case you think I'm getting senile, let me assure you that I am not. How do I get these relatives to leave me alone?

PESTERED

DEAR PESTERED: Assume them emphatically that if you ever feel the need of their help, you will let them know. Then mention the fact that you are leaving everything to charity.

DEAR ABBY: Exactly a year ago today we lost our only child—a beautiful 16-year-old boy. He and I were returning home from a fishing trip in a blinding rainstorm. I skidded, lost control of the car and we landed in a ditch. My son's neck was broken and he died before I could get him to a hospital. I walked away with a small cut on my nose.

My wife hasn't been the same since. I know she blames me for the boy's death, but I give you my word, I wasn't going fast. I wasn't careless, and it was one of those freak accidents that couldn't be helped. I've tried to explain this to her a thousand times, but she doesn't seem to hear me. We're practically strangers, Abby, and I can't snap her out of her depression. I once suggested that she get psychiatric help and she said she wasn't "crazy."

Can you help me? We once had a good marriage.

NOT GUILTY

DEAR NOT: Your suggestion of psychiatric help is the only solution. If you can't persuade her, perhaps someone whose judgment she trusts can. Your family doctor? A clergyman? A dear friend? Others who have suffered similar heartbreaking tragedies have found their way back to normalcy and peace-of-mind-with professional help. I urge you to find a way to lead her to it.

DEAR ABBY: I feel sorry for the bride who was afraid the best man would spoil her wedding because he was in a wheelchair.

When I was married seven years ago, my father, who could walk only with the help of crutches, "walked" me down the aisle. (He offered to let my uncle walk me so he wouldn't "slow up" the wedding procession, but I wouldn't hear of it.)

I wore a slim long wedding gown so it wouldn't get in his way, and when we walked down the aisle together there wasn't a dry eye in the church.

Today Daddy uses a wheelchair, and if I were being married now I would push his wheelchair down the aisle just to have him there.

I love your column, Abby. It has often helped me. Maybe I can help someone now.

DIANE IN PUEBLO, COLORADO

DEAR DIANE: You have. You've given my readers a wonderful warm feeling. And me, too. Thanks for writing.

DUNAGIN'S PEOPLE

Mills' Actions Cause Reactions

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Wilbur Mills once was known as the intellectual giant of the House of Representatives, a powerful man who held the country's tax laws in his grip and who could force presidents to come begging to him, hat in hand.

Now, friends and enemies alike are asking why he could not cope with a simple little sex scandal.

Openly his colleagues wonder about his mental health, and fledgling movements are afoot to attempt the unthinkable — remove him next January as the chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee.

Already the Democratic Caucus has removed the Ways and Means Committee's powers to make House committee assignments, and it is likely the committee will be expanded so that it can be packed with liberal Democrats.

This might well have happened anyway, but Mills' trip to Boston last weekend to appear on stage with stripper Fanne Foxe, "the Tidal Basin Bombshell," sealed his committee's fate.

Ways and Means Democrats were angry, especially the southerners.

Back home in Arkansas, the state's largest newspaper, the Arkansas Gazette, editorially called on Mills either to "forego his public indiscretions" or resign.

The Gazette echoed a theme heard often through the halls of Congress: Mills was forgiven for the original Tidal Basin incident in which Miss Foxe jumped from his car, intoxicated, and dived into the Tidal Basin, a backwater of the Potomac River, but he "will find no such spirit of forgiveness now" after his appearance on stage in Boston.

"It's a matter of judgement and mental balance," said one southern Democrat.

Mills, looking tired and drawn, spent most of Monday in the ornate Ways and Means Committee room in the Capitol, occasionally going to the House floor where the Democratic Caucus met, but not making any speeches.

Reporters, who for years hung on every Mills utterance on taxes and trade, quietly came and went asking questions of a different sort.

LEAVES JUPITER Pioneer Heading Towards Saturn

MOUNTAIN VIEW, Calif. (UPI) — Hurling by tremendous orbital motion from its encounter with Jupiter, Pioneer 11 shot away today for the first spacecraft look at the ringed planet Saturn.

The 570-pound Pioneer swept Monday night through Jupiter's radiation belts to a point 26,000 miles from the planet's cloud tops — three times closer than Pioneer 10 approach last December.

Sweeping under the South Pole and out over the North Pole, Pioneer 11 demonstrated that the planet can be used as a slingshot to toss bigger spacecraft of the future out for investigations of the outer planets.

It had not been known before whether a spaceship close enough to Jupiter to catch its orbital motion could survive a radiation belt equal in power to several hydrogen bombs.

Pioneer was hit close to the planet with an intense radiation peak that lasted only a few minutes. The peak caused several dozen false commands to instruments but apparently resulted in no great damage.

A NASA official said, "Pioneer 10 tickled Jupiter's dragon's tail but Pioneer 11 flew right into the dragon's mouth. It emerged only a little singed."

At Saturn Pioneer will find a gas planet 700 times the volume of earth, yet light enough to float in water. Saturn's three rings are believed to be composed of flying rocks and ice.

Pioneer's exact course — whether it cuts between the rings or flies over them — will be decided by the space agency in a few months.

Pioneer 11 will reach Saturn September 5, 1979. If its nuclear power source does not decay too much, the space agency may direct the craft on a journey of a few more years to the planet Uranus.

Pioneer 10, a year after its visit to Jupiter, is cruising at a steady 45,000 miles an hour on a course which in 1987 will make it the first man-made object to leave the solar system. It is expected to broadcast at least until 1979.

Contribution To Briscoe Inspected

HOUSTON (UPI) — Attorneys for Frances Farenthold Monday inspected a $15,000 cash contribution to Gov. Dolph Briscoe's 1972 campaign they say was never reported in violation of the state's campaign laws.

Terry O'Rourke and Raymond Needham said they examined the cash — 130 $100 bills and 40 $50 bills — to record serial numbers and determine if the cash was the same money donated by rancher Clinton Manges in late May or early June, 1972.

The action was taken as part of Mrs. Farenthold's $2.5 million suit against Briscoe — that charges the governor accepted illegal campaign contributions.

Mrs. Farenthold lost Democratic primaries to Briscoe in 1972 and 1974.

The money was inspected in the office of Briscoe's attorney, Joe Reynolds.

Farenthold's attorneys said the money was transferred there only recently after being kept in Briscoe's vault.

Briscoe said in a deposition last month he never accepted the gift and for that reason did not report it. He said the money was left with his ranch foreman while he was away campaigning.

"He thought it was too much to accept from one person, especially in cash," Reynolds said.

Reynolds said Briscoe made repeated attempts to return the money during the past two and a half years without success.

State District Judge Herman Jones of Austin ordered Reynolds to allow Mrs. Farenthold's attorneys to inspect the money.

Cosmonauts Take Shakedown Flight

MOSCOW (UPI) — Two cosmonauts maneuvered a Soyuz spacecraft in earth orbit today in a shakedown flight for next-summer's joint Soviet-American space mission.

The Soviet news agency Tass said the two spacemen — Col. Anatoly V. Filipchenko, 46, the commander, and civilian Nikolai N. Rukavishnikov, 42, the flight engineer — reported "everything in order" aboard the Soyuz 16 craft.

Tass said the mission, which began Monday, would last several days and include a simulated docking to prepare for next July's linkup with an American Apollo ship.

U.S. and Soviet space officials conferred by telephone about the flight, according to the National Aeronautics and Space Administration in Houston. U.S. ground stations tracked the craft.

The Soviets gave wide publicity to Soyuz 16, apparently in an effort to dispel doubts raised by past mishaps in the Kremlin's troubled space program.

Western experts said they expected the Soyuz 16 to be the first of two dry-run flights by the Soviets to satisfy American space officials.

The experts said NASA is happy about the proven ability of the moon-tested Apollo but would like to see a couple of trouble-free warmup Soyuz missions before the joint project.

The Soyuz has experienced past stabilization problems, which caused the craft to roll in space, but the ship has been modified to correct the defects.

In addition to the stabilization changes, the Soyuz 16 has been specifically altered to duplicate the craft to be used in the Apollo-Soyuz mission next summer.

Soyuz 15, the last Soviet manned flight, returned to earth in August two days after failing to dock with an orbital station. But the Soviets said a new docking system was being used for the joint flight.

The Apollo was scheduled to blast off from Cape Canaveral, Fla., next July

FORD, GM CLAIM

Fear, Talk Aggravate Economy

United Press International President Ford and the new chairman of General Motors, in separate appeals, told Americans Monday the problems of the economy are aggravated by fear and talk about hard times.

Ford said times are nowhere near as desperate as the Great Depression, when President Franklin D. Roosevelt said the only thing Americans have to fear is fear itself.

But Ford added, "It is a good thing to remember," since "our greatest danger today is to fall victim to the more exaggerated alarms."

Thomas A. Murphy, in his first news conference as chairman of GM, called upon the news media, President Ford himself, and even fellow auto executives to stop "doom and gloom talk" about the economy.

Murphy said such talk is wrecking consumer confidence, hurting car sales and contributing to the woes of the economy.

"All the gloom and doom talk can't dissuade me from the fact that economically we're still very strong and we're going to pull out of this thing together," and I emphasize that word 'together,'" Murphy said.

Ford, in a televised news conference, said the United States had the ability to cope with inflation, recession and the energy crisis, but he acknowledged "we're going to take some lumps and we're going to take some bumps."

Ford once again ruled out a 20-cent or better tax on a gallon of gasoline to force energy conservation, but he did not rule out a smaller tax hike in the neighborhood of 10 cents a gallon.

Murphy, who held his news conference before the President's talk, softened GM's opposition to higher gasoline taxes to discourage consumption.

Murphy said GM preferred voluntary controls and strict enforcement of the 55 mile an hour speed limit, but would agree to a tax hike if President Ford thinks it's necessary.

In other developments: —Amstar and Susect Corp., two major sugar companies, dropped wholesale sugar prices to 69 cents a pound from about 75 cents a pound. It was the first drop in the wholesale price in weeks. The companies said the lower price reflects lower raw sugar prices.

—Striking coal miners were given another day to vote on a proposed three-year contract because of a heavy snowstorm. Voting will continue through Wednesday.

POLITICAL GROUPS

Spain May Allow Democratic Step

MADRID (UPI) — The government of Generalissimo Francisco Franco has moved to legalize political groups for the first time since coming to power but has rejected a "spectacular and uncertain" leap toward democracy.

Premier Carlos Arias Navarro introduced a draft law Monday to authorize so-called political associations, but the measure would leave the groups under the tight control of Franco's right-wing National Movement.

Navarro described the law as a first step toward democracy, but critics said conservatives in Franco's 35-year-old regime watered down the measure.

The draft motion now goes before the 112-member Council of the National Movement, which can only suggest changes. The aging Franco was expected to sign the draft into law before the end of the year.

The movement, Spain's only legal political organization, would have the right to withdraw authorization for any group. The 81-year-old generalissimo, however, would be the supreme judge.

In a televised appeal to Spaniards to accept the measure even though some might consider it too little, Arias said: "I believe the draft is an important consolidation of the democratic process of the nation."

"Our turbulent history has proven that a sure step is infinitely more effective than a spectacular and uncertain leap, which almost always becomes a step backward," he said.

He promised "further firm and sure steps" toward democracy and asked Spaniards for their "understanding and, above all, generosity."

Storm System Strands 35,000

United Press International A storm that carried its fury from the Midwest to the East Coast left more than 35,000 persons stranded today.

Michigan officials called the snow storm the worst since 1886. National Guard heavy equipment was mobilized in western Maryland and several communities were virtually isolated in Pennsylvania.

The storm was the same in parts of Ohio, West Virginia and Virginia.

The American Red Cross estimated 35,000 stranded in Michigan, Ohio, Pennsylvania and Maryland, and reports indicated thousands more were trapped by snow-blocked highways in other states.

Temperatures plunged to near 20 degrees in the upper Panhandle early today but warmer weather replaced the chill conditions which existed since the Thanksgiving weekend.

Temperatures near or below freezing were reported before dawn from near Houston to College Station to San Antonio and Midland. South of the line formed between those cities temperatures were in the 40s and 50s.

Cloudy skies were reported in far South Texas. Elsewhere skies were clear.

In southwest Virginia, two persons froze to death. More than 18 inches of snow blanketed parts of the state. Dozens more died across the storm front in weather-related traffic accidents. In Michigan alone, 27 persons died of heart attacks suffered while shoveling snow.

Many homes and other buildings were left without power, schools and shops were closed, and for the first time in its history, the Detroit Daily News — the nation's largest afternoon newspaper — was unable to publish because it could not deliver its papers.

The snowstorm in the eastern coal fields also prevented about half of 120,000 striking coal miners from voting on a new contract Monday, and United Mine Workers President Arnold Miller extended the voting through 8 p.m. Wednesday.

Light snow continued to fall in western Maryland Monday night on top of 30 inches already on the ground.

At Wit's End

By ERMA BOMBECK
Next time you attend an Athletic Awards Banquet, catch the look on the faces of the mothers as the accomplishments of their sons and daughters are revealed. By intense concentration, you can sometimes read their thoughts.

"Mark is probably one of the best sprinters I've had in my entire career here at So. High. Hang onto your hats, people. Mark ran the 100-yard dash in 9.9!"

"Had to be nine days and nine hours. I once asked him to run out the garbage and it sat by the sink until it turned into a bookend."

"I don't know what the baseball team would do without Charlie. We've had chatters on the team before who get the guys whipped-up, but Charlie is the all-time chatter. There isn't a moment when he isn't saying something to spark the team."

"Charlie speaks six words to me a week. 'When you going to the store?'"

"For those of you who don't really understand field event, I want to explain about the shot put. It's a ball weighing eight pounds that was thrown 100 feet by an outstanding athlete here at So. Wesley Whip."

"That's funny. Wesley looks like the same boy who delivers my paper and can't leave a six-ounce Saturday edition all the way from his bike to my porch."

"Wolf-Man Gus will go down in football annals as one of the all-time greats here at So. High. In the game with Central, Gus scored the winning touchdown despite a chipped bone in his ankle, a dislocated shoulder and a fever of 103."

"So how come Wolf-Man Gus stays home from school everytime he has his teeth cleaned?"

"I don't suppose anyone has better reflexes in this entire state than our outstanding basketball rebounder, Tim Rim. When the Good Lord passed out coordination, Tim was first in line."

"Tim is 17 years old and I can still only pour him a half glass of milk because that's all I want to clean up."

"Tennis is a gentleman's game. This year's recipient of the Court Courtesy award is none other than So. High's Goodwill Ambassador, Stevie Cool."

"He's come a long way since he tried to break his brother's face last week when he took a record album without asking."

"The swimming team would never have made it this year without our plucky little manager, Paul Franswarth. Paul picks up those wet towels off the floor, hangs up the suits to dry, and is responsible for putting all the gear back where it belongs."

"Let's go home, Ed. I feel sick."

Hints from Heloise

Heloise

Dear Heloise:

Let me tell you how I save on paper towels!

I didn't used to look at anything but the price but now I look at things differently since taking an "analysis" course from you, my dear

I never noticed before that some paper towels were a third longer, yet had the same amount of tissue on the roll per square feet. Then it dawned: "Do I need that extra third and if so why?"

I noticed that if I tore a towel in two, it was still ample. Savings of at least one-half. Now I buy the rolls with smaller perforations between the towels and figure that I am saving at least one-third.

Might tell some other widowers this. Money is hard to come by these days.

Leo Schumiltz

Now, why didn't I think of that? You're just a smartie pie, Mr. Leo. Do write agsin—you're great!

Heloise

Dear Heloise:

On my boxes of noodles, spaghetti, rice and macaroni, I tape a great recipe for each one that I'm going to try next time I use these products for a lovely casserole. It helps use leftover meat, ground beef and tidbits of cheese.

This eliminates hunting all over the house for the recipe book, which is hard to find just before supper when things get "wild" around the house.

Doris

Dear Heloise:

Since I live alone, I no longer keep flour on hand. I usually bake chicken and fish, but today I decided to pan fry fish and had nothing to dip them in.

My "borrowing" neighbor was gone so, I used some leek soup mix. The fish was delicious.

A.E.K.

Dear Heloise:

Vacationing in exotic places? Buy fabrics of the area for long-lasting remembrances and use your favorite patterns and special care in sewing to make your native dresses at a much reduced price.

Mrs. Robert Briody

Dear Heloise:

I am a maintenance mechanic in a hospital. Instead of carrying a large tool box around, I have, for years, used a fishing tackle box for basic calls, relying on the big tool box as a backup only when necessary.

The fishing tackle box is so easy to carry around—upstairs, etc.

Also, the utility tool box for the family around the house is a fishing tackle box.

Harold L. Hutton, Sr.

Dear Heloise:

I recently visited my sister out of town, leaving my 5-year-old boy in the care of my mother-in-law.

His sadness at my leaving was consoled by the fact he would get a postcard from me every day.

Knowing it would be three or four days before any mail would reach him, I left some already written postcards with my mother-in-law who "snuck" them in the mailbox every day.

The excitement of him getting his own mail everyday eased my absence greatly.

Vallarie Granson

For those of you have copper-bottom cooking utensils, make a paste of vinegar and cleanser and start rubbing. They will soon look like brand new.

Mrs. Essie Williams

Another quickie I use is to sprinkle table salt on the bottom and pour a little vinegar over it and rub slightly.

Quick as a flash, it's gleaming again.

Children's Plays Create Community Involvement

When a lack of appropriate movies and TV programs for children become a source of concern to parents, members of the Pampa Fine Arts Association set out to remedy the situation through the presentation of stage plays for children. Originally the group brought in a touring company for a series of three plays.

Even earlier, at least by 1952, Pampa High School, through their drama and speech program, began producing one or two children's plays a year. Normally performed in the PHS auditorium, the department, under the direction of Mrs. Virginia Myers, also tried touring the plays to the elementary schools. Producing the plays without charge, although beneficial to both performers and spectators, proved to be unwise financially for the drama department. Expenses included not only costumes and minimum set pieces, but scripts and royalties (payment to the publisher for permission to produce the play before an audience).

In 1972, the Pampa Fine Arts Association and the PHS Drama Department joined forces to present a series of the plays for children in the Pampa area. In an effort to make the plays available to as many children as possible, ticket prices have remained the same for several years, $1.50 for a season ticket or 75 cents per play if purchased at the door.

The 1974 - 75 PFAA theatrical arts chairman, Mrs. Robert Mack, coordinated community volunteers, and acting as liaison with Mrs. Calvin Lacy, PHS Drama director. With the assistance of adult workers sewing costumes, handling publicity, and ticket sales, and occasionally helping locate unusual properties, Mrs. Lacy and the students are free to concentrate their efforts on performing and technical work such as lighting and sets. Helping Mrs. Mack on costumes for "The Red Shoes," the first show of the current season are, Mmes. Daniel Cook, Odus Wells, W.R. Whitsell, and Dewey Palminter.

This season, adult story tellers visited each of the elementary schools and told about the three plays being presented.

Working from scripts of "The Red Shoes," "The Golden Grotto," or "Braeko The Prince Frog," and "The Plain Princess," each of the storytellers wrote their own story and some added costumes to their presentations. Assisting were Mmes. Gene Thompson, Jack O. Miller, Harold Taylor, Ted Dotts, Robert Mack, David Holt and Larry Cross. Mrs. Victor P. Raymond presented her story in a morning assembly at Travis school instead of going to individual classrooms. At St. Matt ew Mrs. Paul J. Hartin presented the story assisted by drama students Kathy Coats, Maria Martinez, and Diana Willis.

Promoting ticket sales in White Deer is Mrs. Calvin McConnell, and Mrs. Bob Burgoon in Miami.

Helping locate and provide props are Mmes. Kenneth Lemons, Gary White, and Dwaine Blakemore. In an effort to bring the play to students who might otherwise be unable to attend, David Gantz, a PFAA board member, contacted local civic and social clubs requesting they provide money for tickets for entire classes of students.

The Pampa Fine Arts Club, Kiwanis, Rotary Club,

Twentieth Century Allegro, Jaycees, and The Noon Lions Club each sponsored one class at Baker school.

Other organizations wishing to sponsor a class should contact Mr. Gantz.

The First Baptist Church will provide transportation via their church buses for all three plays. Drivers Jim Stroud and Jack Stafford will pick up the groups at Baker school, transport them to Pampa High School, and return the children to Baker.

In addition to the many hours of classroom time spent in rehearsals by Mrs. Lacy and the students, many outside hours have also been spent in rehearsals with Mrs. Jeanne Willingham, of the Beaux Arts Dance Studio.

Season ticket sales were recently held at each elementary school after letters were sent home with each child, explaining the programs to the parents. Volunteer ticket sellers were Mmes. Carl Brugger, Larry Cross, Jim Hughes, E.H. Brainard II, Elbert Walker, Billy D. Terry, and L.D. Lewis.

Mrs. Robert Stith Williams, Jr., chairman of the dinner dance for debutantes, has announced that 30 debutantes will again be presented at the Assembly and her committee will honor the debutantes and their mothers at a luncheon on Dec. 30 at The Plaza.

Continuing another tradition of 53 years this year the Debutante Assembly and New Year's Ball debutantes will represent 23 states and seven foreign countries. The ball is the "oldest dinner dance for debutantes in New York City, and is a highlight of the New York social season.

The Assembly follows a long tradition of formality in the presentation of the young ladies, and this season will celebrate the 53 year of the assembly and the third generation of debutantes, their mothers and grandmothers having made their debut at the Assembly in past years.

On Jan. 1, the night of the ball, the 30 young ladies and their mothers will receive guests in the Terrace Room at a reception preceding the Grand March of the debutantes and their escorts into the Grand Ballroom where they will be honored at dinner, followed by the

KARPIN ON BRIDGE

By FRED KARPIN

During a side-game at the National Championships this past summer in New York City, the West defender was to be on lead against South's six-notrump contract. Since he held two aces (in hearts and diamonds), quite naturally, he doubled. But, for some reason, he decided to lead a club as his opening lead. Twelve tricks later he had to choose which ace to discard — and he guessed the wrong one, so declarer made an overtrick.

His partner remarked caustically: "It looks like you should have cashed your aces at the start." To which the opening leader replied: "I told you my analyst said I needed a vacation."

In today's deal, East WAS on vacation — or taking a siesta when he should have been home minding the store. The result was that declarer fulfilled a contract that should have been defeated.

Both sides vulnerable. South deals.

The bidding:
South West North East
1♥ Pass 2♥ Pass
4♥ Pass Pass Pass

Opening lead: King of ♠.

On West's opening lead of the spade king, East signaled violently for a continuation by playing the nine. West next led the spade queen, on which East dropped the deuce. A third spade lead was then ruffed by South.

Declarer drew trumps in three rounds, after which he laid down the king of diamonds. When East won this with his ace, the defenders had made their last trick.

East played badly on the opening lead when he signaled for a spade continuation. He should have recognized that West's lead of the king indicated that West possessed the queen. And East should have been desirous of getting his singleton ace of diamonds out of the way in order to be able to ruff a second diamond lead. This could have been accomplished in simple fashion.

The king of spades should have been overtaken by East's ace, after which the diamond ace would be cashed. To trick three, a low spade would be led to West's known queen.

West would surely recognize that the only reason for East's "squandering" of the spade ace, and the cashing of the diamond ace at trick two, was that the diamond ace was a singleton. A diamond return by West would now be ruffed by East — and declarer would be down a trick.

US Cranberry Profits Damaged By Inflation

HANSON, Mass. (UPI) — The nation's cranberry industry, comprised primarily of small, family growers, is feeling the pinch of inflation as the traditional holiday sales peak approaches.

The price of sugar has increased 300 per cent over the past year, affecting processed items such as cranberry sauce and juices, and cutting into the growers' profits.

Gilbert Beaton, director of grower relations for Ocean Spray Cranberries, Inc., a cooperative which handles about 80 per cent of the nation's annual crop, said the high cost of sugar is "hurting us in the return to growers. I would guess they are receiving about 15 percent less than they normally receive."

increase has come from the introduction of new products.

The 1974 cranberry crop is rated slightly higher than last year's according to the USDA, which estimates the national production this year at 2,235,000 barrels, each containing 100 pounds.

Most of the cranberries are harvested in Massachusetts. Wisconsin is the second largest producer, followed by New Jersey, Washington and Oregon. These are the only states that grow cranberries.

Ocean Spray, which became a cooperative in 1930, is wholly owned by the growers. Some 820 growers belong to the cooperative and they sign a three-year contract to deliver all of their fruit for processing and marketing. Ocean Spray does not own any growing properties.

Beaton said the industry is comprised almost entirely of small growers. "Of all our growers, 41 per cent produce less than 5,000 barrels, 57 per cent produce less than 10,000 barrels and we have only five growers producing more than 20,000 barrels."

Ocean Spray each year borrows money to pay the growers for their harvest. After processing and marketing any net profits also go to the growers.

Marines get support for Yule toy program

By FRANK MACOMBER

Frank Parks, vice president and general manager of Rancho San Diego — a new community being developed in East San Diego County near the tip of Southern California — set a goal of $5,000 in tournament entry fees. That will buy about $12,000 worth of toys, retail value, for contribution to the Toys For Tots campaign.

Rancho San Diego conceived the tournament idea as part of its community relations program, then took it to the Marine Corps Reserve. It manages the Toys For Tots program on a voluntary basis.

CORTES LANDS
Spanish explorer Hernando Cortes landed his expedition in Mexico on Nov. 8, 1519.

Traditionally the U.S. Marine Corps Reserve puts its muscle behind a drive to gather Christmas toys for needy children.

This year, however, something new and nice has been added. A large community development company decided it wanted to help make the underprivileged kids happy, too.

So, the Rancho San Diego Land Co. of El Cajon, Calif., teamed up with the leatherneck reserves to sponsor a golf tournament. The entry fee: $100 each and all of it went to the Marines' Toys For Tots program. Only this time they called it Tee Off For Tots.

YEARS OF EXPERIENCE — John T. King and Sons, serving the Panhandle since 1930, has undergone changes in areas of service and name, but has never failed to offer top-notch service to the oil industry. (Staff Photo)

JT King, Sons Tops Since 1930

There is nothing more exasperating to a customer than having an off brand pump and no source of supply parts, but that's not so with John T. King and Sons.

When a part is needed for pumps that are very popular in other parts of the country but have not reached this area through manufactured distributors... then it's time to come down to 918 S. Barnes and let John dig through his drawers for that much needed impeller, or shaft.

Kings have a very nice stock of Lovejoy and Woods coupling for those motors and pumps hook-ups, not to mention repair parts for Murphy controls.

Another feature of interest for oilfield pumpers is that Jack wants to show the oil thieves, centrifuge machines, heaters and centrifuge tubes, along with the many types of Tex-Stream Chemical Pumps and repair parts.

John T. King and Sons offer rapid field service on repairs to automated lease custody well testers and oil transfer units with the very best of service equipment. They also carry all repair parts for Rockwell International, A.O. Smith and instrument positive displacement meters for measuring oil and water volumes.

John T. King and Sons, 918 S. Barnes, has been serving the oil industry since 1930 — for over 40 years.

The company was then known as Stapp King Electric and Machine Co., where the first Pyle National Generators, run by steam, and the old Robert Obsch Magnetos were repaired.

Old timers will remember the type EK type R and Oc Wice magnetos that were rebuilt at this time.

Six years after its founding, the company became known as the King Chemical Company, with patent rights on the first paraffin solvents and paraffin scrapers that were popular in the oilfields for many years to follow.

Since the end of World War II, John T. King and Sons have been serving the Panhandle field in various capacities and have met challenging changes with the advent of future automation in the field of oil field production and products.

John T. King and Sons handle a complete selection of industrial magnetos, pumps, skids and industrial electronic automation equipment.

One of the newer types of magnetos stocked by King and Sons is the Altronic, a magneto used for larger industrial purposes.

The firm also has Frank Murphy safety switches and electronic control units for field installation.

Safety devices include United Engineer PKM and Keystone and Associated Well Sounders, Rockwell water meters and Worthington pumps, Fischer controls and natural gas regulators are also found at John T. King and Sons.

King is represented as an authorized central distributor for the latest type of ignition units that eliminates breaker point and impulse couplings, spark plug life extended, higher voltages available at low cranking rpm, shielded and low fire hazards — all are featured in the newest Altronic ignition system.

John T. King and Sons, more so than keeping up with changes that are sweeping our period of time, are finding newer and better ways of pleasing their old and new customers.

Energy Need Confuses Debate On Environment

By BENJAMIN SHORE
Copley News Service

WASHINGTON — Ralph Nader's recent citizen rally here to protest the pace of continued government and industry development of nuclear electric power is but one highly publicized part of the continuing growth of environmental protection as a lobbying force.

This particular theory of political evolution permits a simplistic formula: environmental protection plus energy crisis plus inflation equals tough decisions.

Most of these decisions will be made here, in the halls and committee rooms of the Congress, in the federal agencies that must wrestle with endless interlocking details, and in the Oval Office where the President must put the pieces together into a workable and convincing policy.

The decision-makers are inundated by lobbyists.

Some represent industry, which itself is fragmented into hundreds of goals and viewpoints.

Some represent organized labor, which naturally thinks a job is the most important piece in the puzzle.

And some represent scores of local and national citizen action groups, which are quick to translate environmental policy into election-day voting power.

Were it not for the pressing international energy supply problem — which is more of a monetary problem — some of the environmental concerns could be debated rationally at length.

But this nation's desperate determination to lessen its dependence on imported oil to help rescue a faltering economy appears to be leaving little time for thorough debate.

This likely will be made clear at next month's Interior Department hearings in California, Alaska and New Jersey where federal intentions to lease offshore oil tracts will receive perfunctory consideration.

The leasing, says Interior Secretary Rogers Morton, should not wait for environmental impact statements.

Let the oil companies go exploring now, he says; there will be plenty of time to draft impact statements before full-scale drilling actually begins.

Sounds as if his mind is made up, but Morton knows more than his recently stated position implies.

The last decade of environmental awareness has taught the government and industry and concerned citizens that energy development and environmental protection can be combined, although some might say compromised.

Boating Deaths Fewer In '74

SOME FLIGHTS CONTINUE

Airline Employees Striking TIA

DALLAS (UPI) — Texas International Airlines will be able to continue operating half its flights throughout a strike by airline employees even though mechanics have decided to honor picket lines, according to TIA vice president Jim O'Donnell. "We are operating a schedule which offers 46 per cent of our normal flights and 65 per cent of our normally available seats," O'Donnell said Monday. "The union says it will be able to shut down the airline but TIA will continue to fly at today's schedule indefinitely," he said. "There's no question we can maintain this level of operations." The Air Lines Employees Union, which covers ticket agents, reservationists, secretaries and other clerical workers, walked off their jobs Sunday following a breakdown in contract negotiations. Even though a strike deadline passed last week, the union had agreed to remain at work while contract talks continued. Airline mechanics honored the union's picket lines Monday and 400 of them were taken off the TIA payroll, O'Donnell said. However, 100 non-union maintenance personnel remained on the job to service planes under the supervision of the Federal Aviation Administration. Management personnel, including former Texas Lt. Gov. Ben Barnes, now a businessman and a member of the TIA board of directors, worked in place of the striking union members. Barnes briefly helped load baggage Sunday outside the TIA terminal in Dallas. In Chicago, the president of the Air Line Employees Association accused the company of ignoring safety rules by hiring "totally unqualified workers in an attempt to maintain a few profitable schedules and keep its planes in the air" during the strike. Victor J. Herbert said he had been informed replacements were being used to load and balance aircraft and in day-to-day fleet maintenance — work normally assigned to skilled, experienced personnel. Herbert urged the Federal Aviation Administration to monitor the airline. "We have advised management that we are ready to resume talks at any time," Herbert said, "but as yet we have had no response, and in fact, the company rejected a similar proposal (for resumption of talks) from the National Mediation Board." The clerical workers' strike, over a contract which became amendable Aug. 1, was their first against the company in the 22 years in which they have been represented by the Air Line Employees Association. Contract bargaining has been under way since June. O'Donnell said he has received no indication union pilots would honor the strike. Texas International Airlines serves 23 cities in Texas plus cities in California, Utah, Colorado, New Mexico, Arkansas, Louisiana, Mississippi, Tennessee and Mexico. But only Arkansas appeared to be hit heavily by the strike. "We have 40 employees in Arkansas that belong to the union. 39 have refused to come to work," O'Donnell said. "The areas in which the strike is having the greatest impact are small cities."

Bus Drivers' Attorneys To Seek Higher Court

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (UPI) — The attorney representing striking bus drivers and mechanics said he would file a suit today taking their demands for higher salaries to the federal courts. A state district judge found 28 union members in contempt Monday for violating his temporary injunction that ordered the union to end the strike which entered its 20th day today. Attorney Frank Herrera, representing the 483 members of the Amalgamated Transit Union, Local 694, said the federal suit would claim the board of directors of the city owned transit system, the city and the individual members of the city council violated the strikers' first amendment rights. He said the District Judge Robert R. Murray cannot issue a temporary injunction because the union has been guaranteed the right to collective bargaining under the Mass Transit Act, under which San Antonio has obtained federal funds for operating its bus system. But Murray said he granted the injunction because Texas law forbids strikes by public employees. He delayed sentencing on the contempt citations until Wednesday to give the two sides another 24 hours to reach agreement on a contract. A rally was called for today in front of city hall to protest city council's refusal to budge from its final offer to the striking transit system employees. Mayor Charles Becker said Friday the city council had met its last time on the matter. The rally was promoted by the Texas AFL-CIO, the San Antonio AFL-CIO Council, the Service Employees Union and the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees. At a membership meeting of the union Monday night there was no sign the strikers — who prefer to call the work stoppage an "individual action" instead of a strike which is illegal for public employees in Texas — would return to work without a new proposal from the city. "They're (management) just going to have to give me a better proposal to bring to the men," union president Robert Thompson said after the meeting. The San Antonio Manufacturers Association said the strike was causing a hardship for 60,000 potential passengers a day and called on the transit system to hire replacements to fill the gaps. Thompson called the manufacturers' statement "asinine." "You can't just pick up 360 people off the streets and put them behind the wheel of a bus. It's a highly qualified and skilled job," the union president said.

H.L. Hunt Buried In Plain Services

DALLAS (UPI) — Billionaire Haroldson Lafayette Hunt was buried Monday in a simple, low-key service beside the grave of his first wife. Dozens of persons bundled up against the cold attended the services in the First Baptist Church, the largest Baptist church in the nation. Its pastor, Dr. Wallie A. Criswell, conducted the services. Hunt, whose fortune was estimated at anywhere from $1.5 to $5 billion, died Friday at the age of 85. A family spokesman said death was attributable to complications of old age. "Lots of people have talked flatteringly of how rich I am," Hunt said once when someone inquired into his personal fortune. "I don't want to disappoint them by denying anything." Hunt's only outward appearance of wealth was his mansion, patterned precisely after George Washington's home at Mt. Vernon, that rests on a knoll overlooking Dallas' serene White Rock Lake. Otherwise, Hunt drove a medium-priced car, bought his suits off the rack and reported six days to work in his spartan office carrying his lunch in a brown paper bag. He once said he felt like a sucker for paying $3 for a hotel breakfast. He parlayed a $5,000 inheritance from his father into billions through land and oil leases. He later branched out into such businesses as canned goods, asphalt, drug items, pecans and cosmetics.

Pampa Hosts Perryton

By PAUL SIMS
The Pampa Basketball team, off to a flying start by winning its first four games and capturing top honors in the Key City Invitational Tournament over the weekend, will play its first home game of the season tonight against the 1-AAA Perryton Rangers.

Perryton opened Pampa's season, losing 55-41. In the contest, two Harvesters hit in double figures as all-district candidate Billy Wilbon scored 10 and Howie Lewis, another post-season honoree candidate, 11.

Those same two Harvesters were named to the Key City (Abilene) all-tournament team following the championship game — Saturday night.

Lewis scored 66 points, including 24, in Pampa's 74-

58 championship win over Cooper in the tournament, while Robert Young scored 59 and Wilbon 55. Young, surprisingly, was not mentioned when tournament honors were bestowed.

Prior to the finals, Pampa whipped Temple, 74-58, and Abilene High, 85-70. Of the three teams Pampa faced, Abilene High had the most talent, according to McPherson.

It was the first tournament victory for a Harvester team since 1971 when Pampa captured the Midwestern Classic at Wichita Falls.

Pampa has one of its most balanced teams in years with Lewis, Wilbon and Young playing at post and at the two guard spots. Edd Drew, Donnie Hughes and Richard Lane alternating at the forward positions and Brian Bailey, Noel Hansen, Charles Pearce and Jewel Landers successfully filling in for starters.

Forward Nick Slaymaker, who scored nine points against Perryton and showed exceptional potential, is out with a foot injury.

Perryton is led by post Paul Ogden, who was held to only three points by a sturdy Harvester defense, and guard Ronnie Smith, who managed 11 field goals and 24 points in the loss.

Other starters will likely be guard Doug Greenway, post Sammy Hill and forward Russ Regan.

Roger Reimer, a 6-3 forward, was released by the doctor last Wednesday and will play in today's game, which starts at 7:45 p.m.

"They'll be improved," Pampa coach Robert McPherson said. "I was impressed with 'em the last time they played us. Slaymaker will be out tomorrow night (tonight), so I look for it to be a good ball game."

The Pampa Shockers, who own a 1-1 record which includes a 55-54 loss to Perryton, take on the Deputies (Perryton JU) at 6 p.m. tonight.

Perryton's top JV players are James Ridgeway and Mike Tarvin, two hot-shooting guards, and post Gaylan Irwin.

Irwin won the game over Pampa with a tie-breaking free shot with four seconds left in the game.

Pampa will likely start post Winslow Ellis, forwards Rayford Young and Henry Williams and guards Mark Ebenkamp and Forrest Taylor.

Dolphins Whip Cincy Bengals

MIAMI (UPI) — The confidence that comes with two straight Super Bowl championships showed itself Monday night. The Miami Dolphins believe that when they have to produce they will.

That's the reason they played their best game of the year Monday night, a convincing 24-3 victory over the Cincinnati Bengals. The win kept Miami in a tie with Buffalo for the American Football Conference's Eastern Division lead with a 9-3 record.

"I think the Miami Dolphins play their best ball with their backs to the wall, and we certainly have our backs to the wall, don't we?" said a battered Larry Csonka after he had gained 123 yards on 13 carries against the Bengals.

"I feel it was our best performance of the year."

said a pleased Coach Don Shula. "Our defense played really well and offensively we got after them."

The Dolphins took control immediately after taking the opening kickoff, marching 87 yards in 14 plays on a drive that took 8:39 minutes.

The loss gives Cincinnati a 7-5 record and drops them a 1½ games behind AFC Central leader Pittsburgh.

Griffin Top Candidate For 40th Heisman

NEW YORK (UPI) — Tailback Archie Griffin of Ohio State, the most consistent runner in collegiate football history, is the favorite today to win the 40th annual Heisman Trophy and thus become the first junior since 1963 to collect the treasured prize which symbolizes the best player in the nation.

Griffin, who led the Buckeyes to the Big Ten Conference title and a berth in the Rose Bowl, will probably get some strong competition from senior tailback Anthony Davis of Southern California, who scored four touchdowns and rushed for 234 yards against Notre Dame on national television last Saturday.

But the late rash of votes probably will not be enough to swing the decision in Davis' favor. The Downtown Athletic Club, sponsors of the Heisman Trophy, had already tabulated the majority of the votes before Davis' thrilling performance last Saturday.

Technically, voters have until noon today to get their ballots in but the DAC announced it would accept only mailed ballots and telegrams, not phone calls.

Other players who figure to do well in the Heisman voting are senior quarterbacks Tom Clements of Notre Dame and David Humm of Nebraska and junior running-back Joe Washington of Oklahoma.

9-Player Trade Likely To Occur In Meetings

NEW ORLEANS (UPI) — The Baltimore Orioles closed in on slugger Ken Singleton, the New York Mets, offering Rusty Staub, went in two different directions in pursuit of a centerfielder and the Philadelphia Phillies seemed hopeful of adding All-Star catcher Bill Freehan in a three-way nineplayer swap.

At the end of the first day in baseball's winter meeting "swap and shop" sessions, however, nobody got anybody of major importance.

In the only trade made Monday, the opening day of the weeklong meetings, former American League stolen base king Tommy Harper went from the Boston Red Sox to the California Angels in exchange for infielder Bob Heise.

That one didn't occasion any ground rumblings.

But the light-hitting Orioles, with pitching to spare, were ready to deal southpaw Dave McNally and outfielder Al Bumbry to Montreal in an effort to add the 6-4, 210-pound Singleton's potential "big stick" to their 1975 lineup.

The Expos, completely devoid of lefthanded pitching, would kick in righty Mike Torrez.

who can hit 20-30 homers for us next year," acknowledged Orioles' manager Earl Weaver. "and we feel Singleton's the guy."

The Mets, who've been dissatisfied with their centerfield situation since the departure of Tommie Agee a few years back, were making overtures to the Phillies for Del Unser in a complicated interleague trade that could involve as many as nine players, including Freehan.

"We're still talking," said a Detroit spokesman. "Maybe we'll be able to put the whole thing together today."

In between their negotiations for Unser, the Mets also talked to the Red Sox about centerfielder Juan Beniquez. But the asking price from Boston would likely include shortstop Bud Harrelson, a commodity the Mets are not that eager to exchange.

Kansas Coach Quits Football

LAWRENCE, Kan. (UPI) — Kansas Coach, Don Fambrough says football isn't worth the Friday night stomach ache.

Fambrough, whose Jayhawks finished the season in the Big Eight cellar with Kansas State with 1-6 records, said Monday he will resign and retire from the sport today.

He scheduled a news conference at 10 a.m.

Since taking the reins as head coach in 1971, Fambrough's teams compiled a 19-25-1 record. His three-year contract has a year before expiration.

"There just comes a time," Fambrough told UPI. "There never is an ideal time, but I feel this is the time to check it in. I know one thing, I'm not going to have that stomach ache on Friday nights anymore."

"It was a hard decision and the statement I made four years ago still holds. I'll never coach anywhere else."

Fambrough said he has not made plans for his future. Observers said he probably will remain at the university in some capacity.

This season ended on a dismal note for the Jayhawks as they lost to their traditional rival, Missouri, in the last game.

Fambrough was the second Big Eight coach to resign this season. Last week Kansas State Coach Vince Gibson resigned after his team defeated Colorado for its only conference victory.

WFL Birmingham Has Walkout, Game Cloudy

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (UPI) — Team owners anticipated a decision today from Birmingham Americans football players on whether they would participate in the World Football League championship game Thursday after staging a surprise walkout Monday.

The Americans players, scheduled to meet the Florida Blazers in the first World Bowl Dec. 5, refused to practice Monday and said they would not work out again until they were paid for five previous games.

When the walkout took place the players had not reached a decision about participating in the World Bowl, but met late Monday night to discuss it.

Allen Miller, WFL Players Association counselor in Detroit, said a decision by the players not to take part in the World Bowl "would be the last straw for the league. It would certainly kill attendance."

Industrial pollution is new Taiwan problem

By EDWARD NEILAN Copley News Service

One way to judge a developing nation's progress toward industrialization is by the extent of its pollution problem. By that yardstick, Taiwan is a leader in Asia. Only the great industrial cities of Japan, some parts of South Korea and some sections of Shanghai in the People's Republic of China (PRC) have more massive pollution problems than those faced by

Taiwan, which could reach developed nation status by 1990 or before. Japan is the only nation in Asia that can be classified as truly industrialized and it is the only one with a comprehensive environmental program, including enforcement. Taiwan ranks next among the countries of Asia in doing something about industrial pollution. This is one more area where Taiwan is many strides ahead of the PRC, where environmental control programs are just getting in gear. The man guiding Taiwan's environmental protection effort is Chuang, director of the Environmental Health Bureau, National Health Administration, and a professor of chemical engineering at National Taiwan University. He is presently in the United States studying environmental protection technology, legislation, social responses to the problem—and the Grand Canyon, which he describes as "an environmentalist's dream."

Chuang is the author of his country's water and solid waste regulatory laws which are already in effect. He also drafted Taiwan's air quality control legislation which is now before the Executive Yuan after being passed by the legislature. It will go into effect, with tough enforcement provisions, in 1975. "By 1980," said Chuang during a luncheon interview in Washington, "the population of Taiwan will reach 18 million and that of the cities will be 12 million. These figures will grow to 21 million and 15 million respectively in 1990."

That means the percentage of urban residents in Taiwan will increase from 51 per cent in 1970 to 67 per cent in 1980 and 74 per cent in 1990. When Chuang returns to Taiwan he hopes to write early next year a comprehensive antipollution program as part of an Environmental Protection Agency which he is recommending as a new department of government.

The U.S. ambassador in Taiwan, Leonard Unger, has pledged cooperation in Chuang's efforts to blunt pollution. Chuang says flatly that "the United States is the world leader in both approach to antipollution problems and in manufacturing technology to fight pollution."

AUSTIN, Tex. (UPI) — Poor economic conditions that have cut Texas' agricultural income by $1 billion this year and could run some young farmers out of business have also erased any threat that giant corporations will take over the farms, says Agriculture Commissioner John C. White. White said even though the sharp drop in agricultural income this year is likely to force some Farming is only attractive to corporations when they can make 10 to 15 per cent profit," White said. "No corporate executive is going to risk his neck on the crap game we've got going now." White said even though the sharp drop in agricultural income this year is likely to force some young farmers and ranchers out of business, it certainly will not encourage corporations to take up agricultural interests. Corporations engaged in farming are the first to drop the business when it is not profitable, he said. "Corporate farming is not as big a threat to farming now as it has been," he said.

The only reason we've got food as cheap as we've got it now is because these individual farmers and ranchers keep digging it out and a corporation wouldn't do that. "If a farm is run by employees of a corporation, they've got to have their holidays, work 8 to 5, and they're not going to go out there in bad weather and work all night trying to save a crop."

White said he isn't nearly as concerned at the prospect of private corporations getting into farming as he is at the possibility that the government might launch agricultural enterprises. "If it gets to the point that profits won't sustain the farming business, then the government would come in with some kind of system and it wouldn't be efficient and food prices would be even higher," White said.

The Lighter Side

By DICK WEST WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Crisis of the Month Club has just named sugar as its selection for January.

With prices rising toward $1 per pound, sugar has become exorbitant enough to rank with electricity as one of the bugaboos of inflation, the club's announcement said.

"Unless something is done soon, many Americans will be unable to afford sweetness and light."

The pattern by now is all too familiar. As with energy, the United States expends more sweetness than it produces and therefore is dependent on imports.

So sugar exporters double the price every two or three days. The impact of the upsurge is particularly acute in December, owing to the demand for sugar plums and other holiday goodies.

Various programs designed to make the United States self-sufficient in sweetness are being considered. But even the most sanguine estimates put

Tex Watson talks about The West Texas Gas Supply

You hear a great deal about the competition for the natural gas in West Texas these days. It is rightfully a matter of interest and concern to every citizen of this area. It has some serious implications.

Natural gas has been an important factor in building West Texas and will continue to be. Most of the businesses and industries in our area depend, directly or indirectly, on a continuing supply of natural gas. A lot of people's jobs depend on it. So, we must see that they have it.

We will have to pay more for it than in the past... the competition for gas has never been so fierce. But by working together, and without outside interference, we'll have the gas energy we need today and in the future. Gas will still be your best energy buy.

CHANGING WORLD A proud mother's inspiring message

By JOHN PINKERMAN
Editor,
Copley News Service

Most Americans would be enriched if they should have the opportunity to meet Mrs. Owen C. Roark. I had this opportunity not so long ago on a very special occasion and it was a most heartwarming experience.

This woman, of San Diego, Calif., is the happily married mother of four children. There used to be five children and the death of the fifth was the reason behind our meeting. The occasion was the dedication of a new U.S. Army Reserve Center at Camp Pendleton, Calif., about 40 miles north of San Diego.

The reason why Mrs. Roark was present at this dedication was because the facility was being named, with proper ceremonies, in honor of her son, the late Sgt. Anund C. Roark.

There was not much advance publicity concerning this event; metropolitan newspapers seem to have much more important things to report these days of elections, murders and the other bits of endless routine. However, the sky was clear and blue and a crowd of about 700 was on hand for the simple but dignified ceremonies. In the crowd were all members of the Roark family: father Owen, son Patrick, son Anthony, daughter Frances and married daughter Mrs. Anthony Allain, wife of an Air Force lieutenant.

The chaplain and a Lutheran pastor said all the right things in invocation and benediction. Lt. Gen. Elvy B. Roberts, Sixth Army commander, said the right things as principal dedicatory speaker. Maj. Gen. Louis Kaufman, top Army Reserve commander for the event, said all the right things at plaque unveiling and ribbon cutting ceremonies with Mr. and Mrs. Roark. A civilian master of ceremonies added a bit more rhetoric.

The Pentagon official ordering Sgt. Roark's achievements said all the right things. Sgt. Roark had been awarded the Medal of Honor, this nation's most hallowed award for combat action, at the age of 20, in the Vietnam War. "Seeing a grenade land in the midst of his men, Sgt. Roark, with complete disregard for his own safety, hurled himself upon the grenade, absorbing its blast with his body. Sgt. Roark's magnificent leadership and dauntless courage saved the lives of many of his comrades. His actions culminated in the supreme sacrifice of his life."

Then, the master of ceremonies asked if Mr. or Mrs. Roark would like to respond, to speak a few words to the audience. Yes, Mrs. Roark would like to say something. It is not possible to quote this remarkable mother exactly. There was a flicker of a tear in the corner of each eye, then she drew up her shoulders and spoke clearly and strongly into the microphone. What she said went something like this:

"Our family is gratified by this expression in honor of our son Anund. Lest anyone be misled, we are proud, yes very proud, that a member of our family was able to give the utmost for his country. There never has been bitterness and the sadness is overcome by our pride and our belief that he did right. It is my hope that all of you will continue to show devotion to this country. We need a strong military organization and we need to be ready. This great country deserves no less. Thank you very much."

Mrs. Roark is a simple woman with the graciousness of a queen. She is a strong woman with an uncommon gentleness and dignity. She has known joy and she has known the despair of that fatal Pentagon knock on the door. She knows it like it is. And, she is an inspiration to anyone who has the slightest love of country.
