Concealed gun poll

Texas Gov.-elect George W. Bush said last week that once he takes office in January he will sign into law a bill that would allow qualifying citizens to carry concealed handguns. The bill, sponsored by State Rep. Ron Wilson, D-Houston, would allow people 21 or older who have no criminal record or history of mental illness to carry concealed handguns after applying for a license and passing a firearm education and safety course. Would you support such a measure in Texas? Call Cityline's Community Pulse Poll at 560-2400, category 7655. If you think Texans should be allowed to carry concealed handguns, press 1. If not, press 2. You also have the option of leaving comments with your vote. We ask that you give your name, but that is optional. The non-scientific poll will remain open until noon Tuesday. Results will appear in Wednesday's edition.

Serb strikes provoke U.N.

Vote authorizes NATO attacks in Croatia

■ Ambassadors back Security Council measure, weigh military options on how to proceed.

Associated Press

UNITED NATIONS — Anxious to stop Serb attacks on the "safe zone" of Bihac in northwest Bosnia, the Security Council on Saturday authorized NATO to bomb rebel Serb forces striking from neighboring Croatia.

The measure will allow NATO to target an airfield used in a napalm attack Friday on Bihac and an attack Saturday on the nearby town of Cazin, said Security Council president Madeleine Albright, the U.S. ambassador.

The unanimously approved measure wouldn't allow retaliation for those attacks, Albright said, but the Ubdina airfield in Serb-held territory in Croatia is considered an "ongoing threat" and is open to attack.

"My government believes this pattern of military activity justifies a military response from NATO. Therefore we welcome this resolution," Albright said.

Bosnia's U.N. ambassador, Muhamed Sacirbey, criticized the resolution as inadequate. He said NATO and the United Nations already were authorized to carry out such attacks. A French U.N. diplomat agreed.

Ambassador Colin Keating of New Zealand said urgent military action was imperative.

"The important thing today ... is not that this resolution has been adopted, but that action pursuant to it be taken and be taken quickly," Keating said.

In Brussels, Belgium, ambassadors from the 16 NATO nations acted on the U.N. resolution by deciding early today to extend possible use of NATO airpower into Croatia if cross-border Serb attacks from there continue.

Diana Avila serves a hot tray to Anna Garcia on Friday. Ms. Avila's father, Mariano Rendon, started the Midland Soup Kitchen Ministry. It is based on Jesus' words to his disciple Peter to "feed my sheep."

Soup kitchen finds itself in hot water

■ While the ministry receives grants and donations to purchase food, it needs more food or donations to buy food. "We've been in a bind for five months," said co-founder Mariano Rendon. "I'd hate to close. We can't close."

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

The mission and worth of the Midland Soup Kitchen Ministry becomes readily apparent at noon each weekday when people, both young and old, in need and sometimes in tattered clothes, meekly walk into the soup kitchen, sign a guest list, and quietly sit at tables.

Soon, they shall be waited on and fed by people who heed a calling to help others less fortunate than they. The volunteer servers are people who humbly can say, "Except for the grace of God, there go I."

Among the volunteers is Evaughn Taylor.

No one is turned aside at the dining tables, she said.

"We don't ask questions. We try not to judge people."

Each weekday, as many as 120 people — from children to the elderly — are fed nutritional meals at the soup kitchen, which is housed in the former YMCA gymnasium-auditorium at Orchard Lane and Carver Street.

The mission — more than simple prayers to help the needy — is to feed the hungry.

Break in grisly murders looms after 11 years

KILGORE — On an autumn night in 1983, three young men and two women disappeared from a Kentucky Fried Chicken restaurant in this East Texas college town.

> 'There is no cover-up, there has never been any cover-up and there will be no cover-up.'

The next day, an oil field worker discovered the bodies at a remote site in nearby Rusk County. They had been summarily "executed," police said.

Authorities promised grieving relatives quick arrests and assured the small, stricken community that a crime so savage and senseless would not go unpunished.

They were wrong.

But now, more than 11 torturous years after the massacre, investigators may be on the verge of obtaining criminal indictments.

Council's rezoning effort to pave way for Lamesa Road retail development

■ Action isn't a cure-all, officials say, but there is optimism about steps taken so far.

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff Writer

Areas along an eastside thoroughfare are being rezoned in an effort to precipitate retail development interests and create the climate for more lucrative incentives.

"Hopefully, it will provide one less obstacle for businesses along Lamesa Road," said Assistant City Manager Glen Hackler.

The City Council is expected to give a second and final approval on the measure at their regular meeting Tuesday.

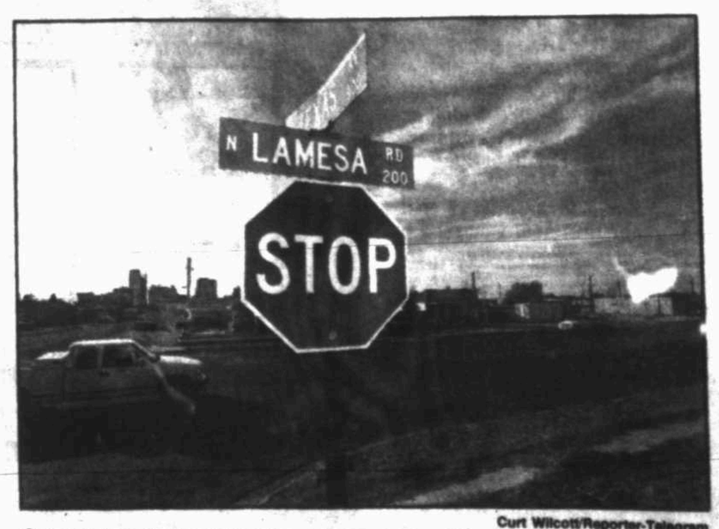

On first reading, the council unanimously opted for an LR-2 (local retail) classification that permits the most common retail stores as well as restaurants, cafeterias, indoor commercial amusement centers, pet shops, service stations, medical and dental offices and theaters.

A more expansive classification — LR-3 — was considered. That would have allowed new and used-car sales lots, maintenance shops, outdoor amusement centers, pawn shops and dance halls.

The rezoned areas generally are located on both sides of Lamesa Road between Scharbauer Drive and Cloverdale Road.

The action taken isn't a cure-all for slow development along Lamesa Road, officials said.

Violence erupts in Gaza Strip, one day truce holds elsewhere

By Dianna Cahn
Associated Press

GAZA CITY, Gaza Strip — Yasser Arafat and his Islamic fundamentalist opponents sought a truce Saturday in their violent rivalry as stone-throwing militants, angry over killings by PLO police, turned on Israeli soldiers.

Israeli troops killed a 17-year-old militant after about 300 Palestinians tore down an Israeli checkpoint in the PLO-ruled Gaza Strip, where a one-day cease-fire kept the lid on more widespread factional violence.

An Israeli soldier was fatally wounded Saturday night in a drive-by shooting in Netzarim, an isolated Jewish settlement in the Gaza Strip, the Israeli army said early Sunday.

In the occupied West Bank, where Palestinian self-rule is limited to the city of Jericho, Israeli soldiers shot and killed a total of three Palestinians in clashes overnight and Saturday, as hundreds of militants threw stones and burned tires in protests over a crackdown by PLO police.

Israeli Arab legislators mediating between Arafat and the Muslim fundamentalist group Hamas said they were close Saturday evening to a more permanent cease-fire agreement. Under the mediators' proposal, all factions in Gaza would form a committee to deal with street violence.

The PLO leader said he would also establish a commission of inquiry into Friday's clashes between Muslim worshipers and Palestinian police. Thirteen people were killed and at least 150 wounded when PLO police opened fire on stone-throwing militants outside a Gaza City mosque.

The promise of an inquiry was Arafat's nod to Hamas, his main opposition and the driving force behind Friday's riots, the worst since Palestinian self-rule started in May. Hamas opposes the PLO-Israeli peace process.

But in the private meeting with Israeli Arab leaders, Arafat was reportedly seething with anger. A Palestinian official close to Arafat said at one point the PLO leader threw a pile of anti-Arafat leaflets on the table in disgust.

Hamas leader Mahmoud Zahar said his group holds Arafat "solely responsible" for Friday's bloodshed but would participate in an inquiry if it had a say in the panel's makeup and if the findings were binding.

As part of a one-day truce, Palestinian police did not interfere as Islamic fundamentalists buried their dead. Thousands accompanied the bodies carried through Gaza City on wooden stretchers draped with Palestinian flags.

Merchants throughout the West Bank and Gaza Strip closed their shops in response to a strike call by Hamas. In Gaza City, supporters of Hamas and Arafat staged rival marches.

Zaire forbids Rwandan exile government

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — Zaire has banned the formation of a government-in-exile on its territory by officials of Rwanda's former Hutu-led government, Zairian radio reported Saturday.

The Rwandans have been told to halt all political activities in Zaire, Communications and Press Minister Masegabio Nsanzu was quoted as saying in the broadcast, monitored by the British Broadcasting Corp.

Nsanzu said Zaire was only prepared to grant Rwandans political asylum for humanitarian reasons. "Accordingly, no Rwandan government-in-exile can be allowed to operate on Zairian territory," Nsanzu said.

Top U.N. officials are considering a plan to send a new peacekeeping force to northeastern Zaire to stop as many as 30,000 defeated Rwandan soldiers and militiamen from brutalizing Hutu refugees and reorganizing their army.

The force of as many as 5,000 soldiers would work with another 5,500 U.N. peacekeepers in Rwanda, the last of whom arrived this week.

The army and militias are blamed for many of the massacres of an estimated 500,000 Rwandans between April and July, before Tutsi-led rebels took control. The victims were mostly minority Tutsis and Hutus opposed to the former Hutu-led government.

Another 1.2 million people, mostly majority Hutus, fled to neighboring countries amid fears of reprisal attacks by Tutsis. An estimated 1 million people are displaced inside the central African nation.

Recent reports from Goma, Zaire, where several large Rwandan refugee camps are located, have confirmed campaigns of intimidation and plans to reorganize the ousted army.

Security in the camps, which are controlled by the militiamen and soldiers, has become so poor that a leading private relief agency, Doctors Without Borders, pulled out Tuesday. Several others have threatened to do so unless the violence is halted.

Miss India wins world pageant

SUN CITY, South Africa (AP) — Miss India, a 21-year-old architecture student from Bombay, was named Miss World 1994 on Saturday.

Folding her hands in a traditional gesture of thanks, a composed and smiling Aishwarya Rai accepted the crown. She succeeds Lisa Hanna of Jamaica, who won last year's title.

For the second straight year, Miss South Africa was the runner-up. This year it was Basetsane Julia Makgalemele, 20. She was followed in third place by Irene Ester Ferreira Izquierdo, 18, of Venezuela.

The Miss World title brings prizes and gifts worth more than $500,000, including more than $75,000 in cash.

Miss Rai, in a sparkling white evening gown, was a crowd-pleasing contestant, drawing enthusiastic cheers from partisans from her first appearance on stage.

The brown-haired, green-eyed contestant projected an aura of grace and dignity, despite confessing to enjoying the "occasional extravagance." She also was named Most Photogenic in a poll of photographers.

Asked her aim as Miss World, she said her first goal would be to show "compassion for the underprivileged."

Judges included fashion model Iman; Eileen Ford of the Ford modeling agency; photographer Patrick Lichfield; Zinzi Mandela Hlongwane, daughter of South African President Nelson Mandela; actors Ron Moss and Katherine Kelly Lang from the CBS-TV soap opera "The Bold and The Beautiful;" and actors Tony Leung Ka-Fai, Marsha Rae Ratcliff and Andres Garcia.

Peace is first priority, leader says

By Diarmid MacDermott
Associated Press

DUBLIN, Ireland — Finance Minister Bertie Ahern was picked Saturday by Ireland's largest party to try to form a new government, and he immediately put peace in Northern Ireland at the top of his agenda.

"Peace is still the most important issue and priority for us," said Ahern, who could become prime minister if he can build a coalition for his Fianna Fail party.

Ahern must lure back the Labor Party, which brought down the government of former Fianna Fail leader Albert Reynolds this week when it left the coalition over the appointment of a religious conservative to Ireland's High Court.

Known as one of the strongest negotiators in Reynolds' coalition, the 43-year-old Ahern said he would "like to bring any talent I have for conciliation to bridge the political divisions in the north."

He must heal the rift with the Labor Party by Tuesday, when Parliament is scheduled to vote on forming a new government.

Reynolds, 60, resigned as prime minister and party chief Thursday after Labor pulled out of his coalition government over the appointment of his attorney general to the High Court.

Labor said Harry Whelehan was unfit for promotion because as attorney general he had failed to extradite to Northern Ireland a priest facing child molestation charges there. Whelehan also resigned Thursday.

Reynolds argued that allowing his government to fall would jeopardize a chance for peace in Northern Ireland, where the Irish Republican Army has declared a cease-fire in its 25-year-old campaign against British rule.

Following the cease-fire, Reynolds met with Gerry Adams, leader of Sinn Fein — the IRA's political ally — and has prodded Britain to speed up negotiations.

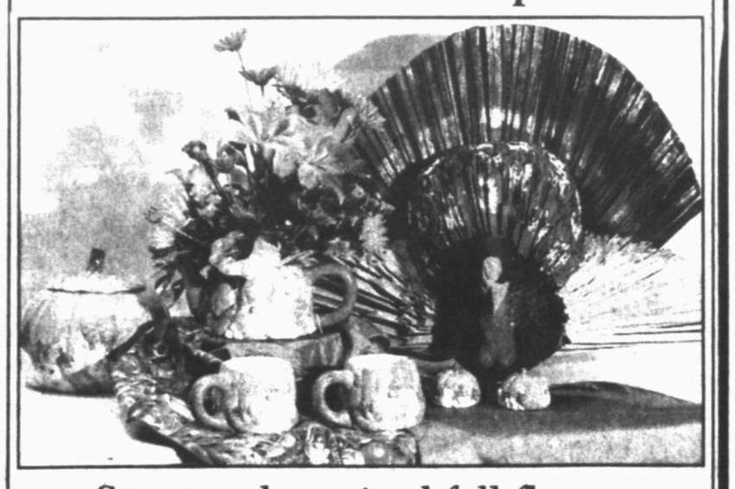

Ahern said he will not be rushed into coalition talks with other parties.

"We are not going to be forced into either government or opposition," he said. "We will do what is right for Fianna Fail and then we will make our decisions."

But Fianna Fail is expected to hold talks soon with Labor, which is too small to lead but too substantial not to be accommodated as a junior partner.

Its leader, Dick Spring, was the highly regarded deputy prime minister and foreign minister under Reynolds.

STALL: Storm cuts visability

falling on a vehicle in the parking lot during the storm.

A spokesman for the National Weather Service in Midland said three different incidents of wind gusts up to 58 mph were recorded at the airport during the first wave of the storm. A second wave came through town within hours after the first.

The storm was caused by a vigorous upper-level storm system to the west generating a low pressure system at the surface, the NWS spokesman said. The stronger the system is the stronger the winds are, he said.

He indicated that a cold front blew through town and high pressure built behind the front causing the severe conditions.

Much of the Permian Basin was under a tornado watch — which indicates conditions are favorable for a tornado — during the storms.

At press time the NWS recorded 0.68 inches of rain as a result of the storms.

Winds will continue to be gusty and blowing through the city at 20-30 mph with gusts expected to exceed those forecast, the forecaster said.

Today should be sunny and windy with west to northwest winds 20-30 mph and a high in the mid-60s. Tonight should be clear with a low in the low 30s.

Monday will be mostly sunny with a high in the mid-60s.

After an overnight low of 58, Saturday's high reached 71, compared to the record high for that date of 83 set in 1950. The record low was 18 set in 1950.

NATION

A powerful storm piled as much as a foot of snow across the mountains of the Southwest on Saturday, while Tropical Storm Gordon's erratic course took it out to sea off the East Coast.

The storm in the Southwest was centered over the high country of northern Arizona, where Flagstaff and the South Rim of the Grand Canyon had 10 inches of snow by midday Saturday. About 6 inches of snow had fallen in the White Mountains of east-central Arizona, at Pinetop and Lakeside.

Up to a foot of snow had fallen in southeastern Utah at Monticello. On Friday, mountains in the southwestern part of Utah got up to 3 feet.

The snow was moving into northwestern New Mexico and southern Colorado. Gallup, N.M., had 2 inches by late morning.

Ahead of the storm, rain spread across parts of the Plains. Oklahoma City had 1.48 inches of rain by midday.

Behind the storm, strong wind blew over the mountain passes and desert areas of southern Nevada and Southern California, with a gusts to 48 mph at Las Vegas, Nev.

Tropical Storm Gordon was about 400 miles east of Jacksonville, Fla., after doubling back on its course along the North Carolina coast.

By Saturday afternoon, Gordon's sustained wind had decreased to 40 mph and it was expected to continue weakening.

Temperatures dropped to record lows Saturday across northern California, including 42 at San Francisco and 29 at Eureka, and Fresno tied its record at 29. Across the Sierra Nevada, Reno, Nev., had a record low of 5 above zero.

The Associated Press contributed to this report.

AUSTIN (AP) — No tickets correctly matched all six numbers drawn Saturday night for the twice-weekly Lotto Texas game, state lottery officials said.

The numbers drawn Saturday night from a field of 50 were: 1, 3, 12, 31, 39 and 42.

Lottery officials estimate the jackpot for Wednesday night's game will be $10 million.

Officials offer hot tips to douse fire hazards

By Katherine Poteet
Staff Writer

Lower nighttime temperatures mean that residents have started using fireplaces, space heaters and heating systems. Fire officials said residents need to be aware of the potential dangers surrounding fireplaces, heaters and — later in the season — Christmas decorations.

The death of an Odessa man earlier this month has been attributed to a space heater and Assistant Fire Marshal Lon Dominguez said that so far, in Midland, three cases of carbon monoxide poisoning caused by heaters have been reported.

"People don't realize how important proper ventilation for heaters — especially these heaters that burn fuel — is in preventing carbon monoxide poisoning," he said.

"Those fuels are toxic."

Dominguez said that none of the carbon monoxide cases were fatal, although the residents involved had to be treated at the hospital.

A space heater left near a bed claimed the life of 82-year-old James Ellis of Odessa on Nov. 12.

The Odessa Fire Department found Ellis' body at his residence at 836 Barrett St. after a fire gutted the home. An autopsy revealed that Ellis died of smoke inhalation.

Officials believed the man tried to escape the fire, became disoriented and collapsed.

Last year, the Midland Fire Department reported seven housefires during November and December. Four of those fires were started in fireplaces; three were started by various heaters.

In addition to fires, Dominguez said the Midland department receives many false alarms this time of year because of the burning smell many residents experience when a heating system is first turned on.

The Federal Emergency Management Agency of the United States Fire Administration has issued tips to decrease the number of fires started by space heaters or stoves:

- Always have proper ventilation.
- Keep heater in good working condition.
- Only use fuel specifically designed for a heater.
- Use a screen around stoves or heaters with open flames.
- Leave a clear space around a heater.
- Make sure wiring is adequate and avoid overloading an extension cord or outlet.
- If using a heater in a bedroom, turn the heater off or low before going to bed and open a window.

Officials advise against using a flammable liquid to start a fire in a fireplace. Always make sure the flue is open before starting a fire and keep a screen in front of the fireplace.

Dominguez said manmade logs are designed to be used one at a time. When using real wood, only the smaller manmade logs specifically made as such should be used to start a fire, he said.

Officials caution against leaving a fire unattended and urge residents to make sure the fire is out before going to bed.

Others safety tips provided by officials are:

- Don't dispose of paper in the fireplace or use it to start a fire.
- When putting up holiday decorations, keep decorative materials away from the front of the fireplace. Combustible material should be removed from near the front or sides of fireplaces.
- Lights and candles should be checked periodically, since they are usually burned for long periods of time.
- Christmas trees should be purchased fresh. Trees should be kept away from all heat sources. The tree should be kept moist and watered daily. If possible, run a humidifier in the room where the tree is, because heaters will tend to dry it out. Make sure an artificial tree is flame-resistant.
- Christmas lights should be checked for frayed or broken cords and loose sockets. Use lights with UL or Factory Mutual lables. Do not plug more than three strands of lights into one extension cord. Use lights with plastic holders. Always turn off lights and blow out candles when leaving the house or going to bed.

PAVE: Rezoning might remove 1 obstacle

(From 1A)

A task force of citizens and city representatives — who examined the problem and made the rezoning recommendations — recognized that "rezoning is not synonymous with development, so we will continue to explore incentives for development along that corridor," Hackler said.

That may include an examination of affordable housing and private lending for prospective businesses.

Nevertheless, there is optimism about the steps taken thus far.

"I think we will" see change, said Charlene Romero-Wurtz, executive director of the Midland Hispanic Chamber of Commerce and member of the Lamesa Road task force.

Ms. Romero-Wurtz said she was aware of a couple of businesses in the past that were discouraged from locating on Lamesa Road because of zoning. In that light, rezoning demonstrates progress, she said.

"It helps the Hispanic chamber go and sell Lamesa Road," she said.

Ms. Romero-Wurtz said the chamber would like to create interests to bring a pharmacy, medical clinics and clothing stores to the area.

"We don't have that here," she said. Most businesses around Lamesa Road are restaurants and groceries, she said.

At this time, almost 15 acres of retail establishment exist along Lamesa Road. And the rezoning created about 18.5 acres designated for retail use, adding to about 17 acres already so zoned.

At-large City Council member and task force member Jose Cuevas Jr. said rezoning only sets the groundwork to attract business development.

To make development happen, Cuevas believes, sights must be turned on boosting the population, increasing the traffic count and raising the median income in that area. "That trips everything," he said.

There's more commercial acreage than needed to serve the population, Cuevas said. That must be turned around, so demographics create a demand for retail, he said.

"If you don't have the people you don't have anything to entice them (businesses) there," said Cuevas, a businessman himself.

Cuevas said he believes the answer lies in new and affordable housing.

One stride in that direction involves $250,000 in Community Development Block Grant funds allocated for affordable housing. Three companies have submitted proposals to use that money, coupled with private dollars, to create an affordable housing program, Cuevas said.

"We are trying to build Lamesa Road through housing to attract business," he said.

Aside from housing, offering tax abatements to businesses would also prompt development, Cuevas said.

And another way to get development rolling, Cuevas said, would be to get a good anchor store on Lamesa Road.

"If one makes a bold move to locate on Lamesa Road then other people take note of that," he said.

Mayor Bobby Burns has made a personal effort to attract such a business.

Burns has contacted well-known fast-food franchises, retail and grocery stores.

"We've had people that were interested and some people who have said flat out 'no,'" Burns said.

"What I'm trying to get is one store over there . . . I think we'll get some growth over there if we get one (major) store," he said.

STRIKES: U.N. authorizes attacks on rebels stance lately against the Serbs, but the expansion of its authority to launch air attacks carries the added danger of dragging foreign forces deeper into the conflict in Croatia and Bosnia.

The resolution was passed in response to a Serb attack with napalm and cluster bombs Friday on the U.N. "safe area" of Bihac. It was the first confirmed use of napalm, a form of jellied gasoline used as an anti-personnel weapon, in the 31-month-old Bosnian war.

No injuries were reported in the attack. The target may have been Bosnian army soldiers, according to a U.N. source who spoke on condition of anonymity.

Croatian President Franjo Tudjman on Friday invited the United Nations to attack rebel Serb airfields to stop attacks on Croatian troops and across the border into Bosnia. Rebel Serbs in Croatia captured a third of the republic's territory in a six-month war in 1991, and have used that land to launch attacks in support of rebel Serbs in Bosnia.

As the council prepared to vote, two Serb warplanes raided Cazin, about 15 miles north of Bihac. They appeared to be trying to hit an ammunition factory, but missed and strafed a residential area, U.N. officials said.

One of the Yugoslav-made Orao fighter-bombers hit an apartment building and crashed, killing its pilot, said U.N. spokesman Paul Risley. He said buildings were on fire and there were four large bomb craters.

At least 15 people were seriously wounded, Sacirbey said in New York.

Russian Ambassador Sergey Lavrov warned that the cross-border attacks and retaliation threatened to allow the Bosnia civil war to spin out of control, a concern reiterated by Albright.

SOUP: Ministry's been in bind for 5 months

(From 1A)

If the more fortunate people, in their prayers and wishes, merely say to the poor: "Go and be hungry no more," then they have done nothing, Ms. Taylor said.

"There's commitment to belief" in Jesus Christ and in Christianity, Ms. Taylor said.

Just knowing or citing Scripture is not enough, she said.

"There's more to it. There's commitment. You can't talk to somebody about the bread of life if they are hungry."

And it is that commitment that assured 77-year-old Homer Haynes of a full meal last Friday.

"It helps out," said Haynes, a former gravedigger who used to earn extra cash by doing home repairs.

"Everything is dead," he said. "It's the slowest I've ever seen the Permian Basin since '24. There's nothing to do but stick it out."

Haynes has been eating for several years at the Midland Soup Kitchen Ministry — which originated in the 1980s as the Blessings-for-Obedience Soup Kitchen on Terrell Street.

"I've seen quite a few old people get hot meals, probably the only meal they got all day," Haynes said.

On Thanksgiving Day, the soup kitchen's crew — which is headed by co-founders Mariano Rendon and his wife, Amelia or Mary — will be preparing and serving food for hundreds of homeless, unemployed and low-income people and their families.

And while the soup kitchen receives grants and donations to purchase food, the ministry needs more food or donations to buy food.

"We've been in a bind for five months," Rendon said. "I'd hate to close. We can't close.

"We are planning on having a big Thanksgiving dinner for the first time in this (old YMCA) building," Rendon said.

He and his wife and their daughters, Yolanda Spencer and Diana Avila, and their families will be preparing turkey and dressing and all the trimmings.

The soup kitchen receives funds from foundations — including the Abell-Hanger, Beal, Burlington Resources and Fasken — but is in need of more assistance, Rendon said.

Inspiration for the Soup Kitchen Ministry came from Rendon's and his wife's compassion for the needy, but "we didn't have the money or the way" to set up a soup kitchen earlier in the 1980s.

"When we first started, the Lord spoke to me and my wife and told us: 'I want you to fill their stomachs and show them that there is a God,'" he said.

The message, he said, was clear: "If you love me, feed my sheep."

The means for the soup kitchen came out of a 1980s prayer group that was seeking to feed the hungry, the homeless and the street people in Midland. Among the members of the prayer group were Kelly Coleman and Doug Wight.

In its earlier years, the soup kitchen fell under Coleman's Blessings-for-Obedience amateur radio network to aid missionaries around the world in their spreading the Good News of Jesus Christ.

The old soup kitchen was at a World War II military barracks, which Christmas-In-April volunteers converted into a kitchen and dining room.

The soup kitchen is now under Rendon's management in its new eastside location, where it serves more people than before.

"I think we have proven ourselves to God," Rendon said of his honoring God's trust.

Volunteers, including lawyers, bankers, people in the petroleum business and other church-goers, work at the soup kitchen.

Robert "Bob" Bledsoe, a Midland attorney, serves trays of food and washes dishes.

"They are really walking their talk," Bledsoe said of the Rendon family. "They are just real fine folks, and they are so happy" in serving the hungry. "It's contagious. It's a real fine ministry."

Bledsoe said the Rendons heeded the Lord's message "to open the door" to all people, to turn no one aside and not to judge who deserves to be fed.

"It's a pleasure to see what's going on there," Bledsoe said. "The people have plenty of food to eat — good, wholesome food."

In his soup-kitchen work, Rendon said he focuses on Jesus' message to the disciple Peter in John 21:17: "Feed my sheep" if you truly love Jesus Christ.

"There's a lot of low-income people, believe me, making less than $200 a week," Rendon said. "If you have a house payment and a car payment, surely you cannot buy that much food — groceries."

Rendon said he cooks "as if I were cooking for ourselves (his family). No busted beans. And I shop the way I shop for myself.

"They not only get soup. Soup is on the side. They get whole meals — solid meals."

In addition to hot meals and cool drinks, people who visit the Midland Soup Kitchen Minstry between 11:30 a.m. and 1 p.m. may hear gospel music, preaching and messages.

The ministry collects clothing, shoes, blankets, furniture and other household items for people in need.

"It's not just the feeding," said Rendon's daughter, Yolanda Spencer. "It's giving them clothing and the Word."

Soup kitchen volunteer Emma Wilkes said her heart was touched and she became "excited about helping" others after she had toured a soup kitchen and hotel for the homeless.

"There are so many other people that have more needs than I do," Ms. Wilkes said. "And I try to help them out."

Ms. Taylor said she tries "to witness as I go" among those eating at the soup kitchen.

The soup kitchen "fills an immediate need": feeding the hungry today.

Normally, she said she is lowkey and not too forward in talking about God, Jesus Christ, love and salvation.

But when she comes across hitchhikers who stop in Midland, "I'm just real straightforward with them" and ask them if they know Jesus Christ as their Lord and Savior.

A soup kitchen regular is Ricky Sauls who, at 35, is disabled and living on a fixed income.

Sauls said he was so moved by the soup kitchen's ministry that he wept.

"They are doing this to win souls," Sauls said. "I come over here and witness for God. The Lord wants to give you His best."

Sauls said God delivered him from his addictions to tobacco, liquor and drugs. "There ain't nothing like it."

Randy Allison, a 44-year-old handyman, said, "I do a little of this and a little of that." He visits the soup kitchen "basically to praise the Lord and eat my dinner."

Cult murders include infant 'anti-Christ'

N.Y. Times News Service

TORONTO — A three-month old boy was stabbed to death in a Quebec village because he was considered the Antichrist in the rituals of a cult linked to the murder-suicide of 53 people in Switzerland and Quebec last month, the Quebec provincial police say.

The police reconstructed the bizarre developments in a burned-out chalet in the ski resort village of Morin Heights, north of Montreal, where five people were found dead early last month. The incident was followed a few days later by the fiery deaths of 48 cult members in two Swiss villages.

All the victims had some association with the Order of the Solar Temple, a cult that used symbols from Roman Catholicism, astrology, Gnosticism and the medieval Christian fraternities of the Knights Templar and Rosicrucians to attract believers in Europe and Canada.

The cult's two leaders, Luc Jouret, 46, a Belgian-born physician, and Joseph di Mambro, 70, a French Canadian who lived in Switzerland and Quebec and who controlled the finances, died in Switzerland.

At a news conference in Montreal on Friday and in later telephone interviews, the Quebec police said an earlier investigation into the Solar Order probably prevented more deaths. In March 1993, the sect was being investigated in connection with possession of illegal weapons and a suspected role in threats to kill the province's Public Security Minister, Claude Ryan.

In that same month the police, in a search for weapons, raided the crypt of the order in St. Sauveur, a village next door to Morin Heights.

Constable Michel Brunet said a mass suicide was being planned at that time. "We think had it occurred then there would have been between 60 and 80 victims," he said. "Because of our raid, they decided to stop everything in Quebec and move to Switzerland. They felt that our police had contaminated their crypt."

Brunet said that many of the cult members who died in October were convinced they had to pass through a fiery death to be reborn on another planet, which they called Sirius, in another solar system.

The most surprising revelations related to the killing of the baby, who the police said was killed along with his parents by Joel Egger and Dominque Belaton, Swiss followers of di Mambro. The police said they were acting under the orders of di Mambro, an authoritarian figure in the cult, and used a wooden stake in the ritual slaying, driving it through the infant's heart.

The baby's parents, Antonio Dutoit and his wife, Nicky Robinson Dutoit, did odd jobs for di Mambro. Mrs. Dutoit had been the babysitter for di Mambro's daughter Emmanuelle. Dutoit was in charge of special lighting and other effects that provided an otherworld atmosphere for some of the ceremonies.

According to the police reconstruction, di Mambro, who usually decided when women in the cult had babies and what names would be selected, was outraged when Mrs. Dutoit had a baby last July 5 and named the boy Christopher Emmanuel.

Brunet said the police learned from interviews with some of the sect's former members that di Mambro regarded the baby as the Antichrist because the name matched that of his daughter and because he had not been consulted, and then ordered two of his followers to Quebec to kill the entire family.

Public inquiry will look into torture killing by Canadian peacekeepers

By Jeffrey Ulbrich
Associated Press

TORONTO — Late one sultry evening just outside a bone-dry town in Somalia's western desert, soldiers from Canada's elite Airborne Regiment methodically beat, kicked and tortured a 16-year-old civilian captive until he died.

Twenty months and eight courts-martial later, only one soldier, a private, has received significant punishment. Now, a military doctor who was in Belet Huen, Somalia, on the night of March 16, 1993, is alleging a cover-up by senior Canadian military officers.

The charges, the trials, the whole sordid story of what happened during the Airborne Regiment's stint with the U.N. intervention force in Somalia has tarnished the image of the world's premier peacekeeping nation. It also has dampened the morale of many professionals who feel that 40 years of success in peacekeeping, a concept developed by Canada, is being obscured by one incident.

'The stories are concentrating on everything from cover-up at the very top right down to individuals on the ground conducting activities that should have been stopped by the chain of command.'

— Maj. Gen. Lewis MacKenzie

Under mounting pressure, Defense Minister David Collenette announced on Thursday that a public inquiry will be held into the conduct of the Canadian forces in Somalia.

"The stories are concentrating on everything from cover-up at the very top right down to individuals on the ground conducting activities that should have been stopped by the chain of command," said retired Maj. Gen. Lewis MacKenzie, who once commanded U.N. forces in Sarajevo.

Alex Morrison, executive director of the Canadian Institute of Strategic Studies, said the killing in Belet Huen "will have a great impact on future preparations for peacekeeping."

"Well informed Canadians recognize that incident for what it is: regrettable, obscene and sorry, but they place it in the overall context of the Canadian Armed Forces," Morrison said.

Chinese cinemas cancel 'Fugitive'

BEIJING (AP) — Harrison Ford escaped from the law in "The Fugitive." But the film couldn't evade Chinese culture czars nervous about Western influence on their country's movie industry.

Filmgoers hoping to see the Hollywood box office smash were turned away this week after officials told Beijing theaters to stop showing the movie. It opened Nov. 12 and was playing to packed houses.

The film was cancelled because some officials who oversee the film industry believed showing it would allow foreign distributors to "invade" China's movie market, the official China Business Times reported Saturday.

That, officials believe, could muscle domestic films out of the market.

U.S. filmmakers want not only profit but also to "influence future generations of Chinese with Western thinking," the newspaper said.

Although billboards for "The Fugitive" still adorned several Beijing cinemas Saturday, notices outside said it had been cancelled "because of unforeseen circumstances."

Showing instead were several older, more obscure U.S. films. When the ticket taker in one theater tried to convince disappointed moviegoers to see one of those films, she drew only shrugs and turned backs.

"Those are all old," one young man murmured to his girlfriend before they walked away.

It was unclear exactly when the theaters were forced to stop showing the film or how many people had seen it.

The China Business Times said it looked into the matter after receiving many phone calls from readers.

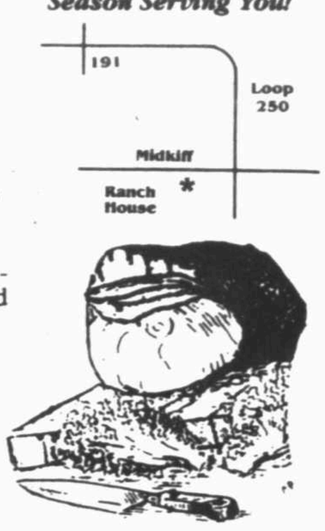

In recent years, Chinese theaters have been allowed to show only older, cheaper films with a political content acceptable to the most powerful Communist Party officials.

Earlier this year, the Ministry of Radio, Film and Television announced that it would allow 10 "excellent" foreign films to be imported and shown by theaters around the country each year.

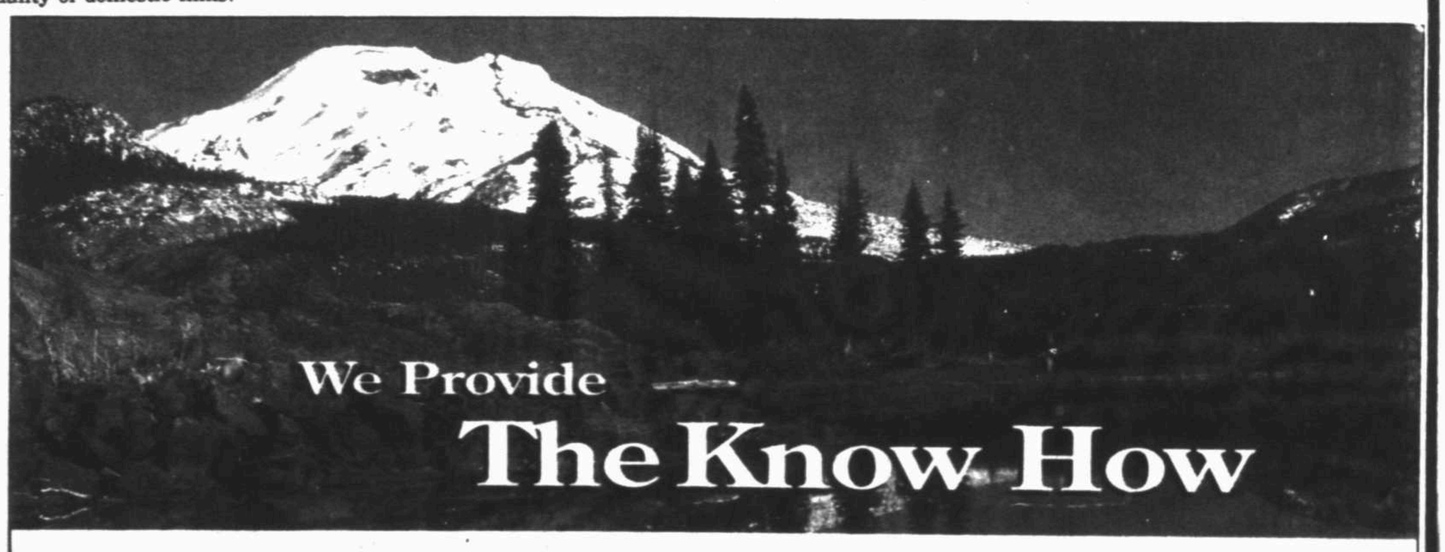

These films were expected to have a positive influence on China's struggling film industry, it said.

The decision also would give foreign film distributors access to one of the world's largest viewing audiences. China has a population of 1.2 billion people.

Still, all levels of the movie industry, from production to cinemas, complain of low profits. Chinese movie critics say lack of financing is a major reason behind the poor quality of domestic films.

'Trade tourists' join other victims of Polish-Russian power struggle

By Frank Bajak
Associated Press

WARSAW, Poland — The Russians step warily off the express train from Moscow at dusk and wheel bags bulging with goods down the platform. They stick together in small groups, eyeing strangers nervously.

These trade tourists, the foot soldiers of free enterprise, are a hearty but harried lot. At Polish train stations and Warsaw's teeming bazaars, Russian-speaking gangsters routinely exact "protection money" or simply rob them.

Last month, the tourists — many of whom earn their living buying goods here for sale at home — became pawns in a political dispute over alleged Polish police brutality that led Russian Prime Minister Viktor Chernomyrdin to cancel a state visit.

Poles accused Russia of depicting them as irresponsible in a campaign to prevent NATO from accepting Poland as a member.

"It is doubtful, for example, that a single incident with the police would result in an official visit of the Russian government leader to Bonn being canceled," said the Polish news magazine Wprost.

The Oct. 23 incident began when gangsters robbed Russian trade tourists on a Moscow-bound train at Wschodni, then fled. The angered tourists pulled the train's emergency brake to prevent it from proceeding and demanded to see a Russian consular official.

No official came. Instead, club-wielding Polish police forced six Russian passengers off the train and arrested them.

Some Polish officials suspected provocateurs of causing the incident: What if the people who pulled the emergency brake were Kremlin agents trying to stir trouble?

Russian officials, in turn, accused the Polish police of brutality. The Moscow newspaper Komsomolskaya Pravda cited "reports" that Polish police called the Russians "pigs" while clubbing them.

Polish authorities conceded that police may have used excessive force in arresting and dragging away the passengers.

Finally free after 45 years of Soviet domination and wary of Russian interests, individual Poles have been known to mistreat Russians.

Polish police harassed Russian soldiers, for example, as the Russians crossed Poland by car caravan over the summer during their withdrawal from eastern Germany.

It has been difficult for Poles to build a new relationship with a country that occupied their land from 1795 to 1918 and which under Stalin murdered some 15,000 interned Polish officers at Katyn in 1940.

Russia's vice consul in the southern Polish city of Krakow did not help matters by losing his temper with protesters on Nov. 7 and accusing Poland's revered pre-war leader, Josef Pilsudski, of murdering 60,000 Russian soldiers in prison camps in 1920, when the two countries were at war.

Yet Polish leaders know they cannot escape geography, and they have opted to mend relations with their No. 3 trading partner.

Poland's interior minister, Andrzej Milczanowski, apologized in Moscow for the train incident. And Chernomyrdin's visit is now back on, scheduled for early December.

Chernomyrdin and his hosts will sign agreements on debt forgiveness and Poland's share of a deal to build a $100 billion gas pipeline from Siberia to Germany.

Milczanowski also promised an end to an unofficial hands-off policy by Polish police that allowed Russian mobsters to terrorize trade tourists from former Soviet states with near impunity for the past year.

"In this particular sphere of crime such conditions were created that were even better than in Russia — because the police didn't interfere," Russian ambassador Yuri Kashlev told The Associated Press in an interview.

He said Poland had agreed to staff Warsaw police stations with Russian speakers and that Russian police commandos may even be brought over to help the Poles battle the gangs.

Extra police and soldiers are already patrolling Warsaw rail stations.

There were 6 million visits by Russians to Poland in the first half of this year, up 11 percent from the same period in 1993, according to Poland's border police. Belarussians and Ukrainians accounted for nearly 7 million crossings.

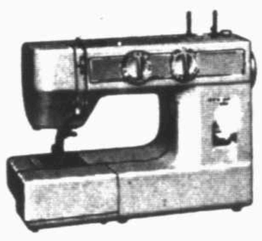

Like so many ethnic Russians from commodity-starved regions to the east, trade tourism has become a way of life for 28-year-old Victoria Klimova of Kishinev, Moldova.

"I have been to Poland about 20 times," said Klimova, who quit her job at a television plant and makes her living buying clothes in Warsaw and selling them in Kishinev.

Klimova was staying at a $4-per-night Warsaw hotel, a converted workers' hostel that was home to 500 guests this week from St. Petersburg to Nizhni Novgorod.

MURDERS: 11 years later, a break

(From 1A)

grand jury soon," said Ron Dusek, a spokesman for the Texas Attorney General's office.

eral's office.

Dusek told The Associated Press his office was asked to look at the case last summer.

"It's rare when you get involved in a case that old and are able to develop some evidence," he said. "But, lo and behold, it looks like we might be able to do something. . . .

"We're optimistic that we might be able to resolve this case."

THE CHILLING SAGA began the night of Sept. 23, 1983, a Friday, a time when small towns across Texas come alive to the beat of high school football.

In fact, the Bulldogs were busy downing Hallsville, 13-0, that night.

An oil center of some 10,500, Kilgore is also home of Kilgore College and an internationally known precision dance-drill team, the Rangerettes.

Two of the men abducted and slain that night, Joey Johnson and David Maxwell, were 20-year-old Kilgore College fraternity brothers. The third, Monte Landers, 19, also attended school there.

Maxwell and Landers had gone to the restaurant to visit Johnson.

The other victims, both working mothers, were Mary Tyler, 37, the assistant manager, and Opie Hughes, 39, an employee and mother of three.

Mrs. Tyler's teen-age daughter, Kim Miller, dropped by the restaurant around 11 p.m. She found the front door locked, the back door standing open and the building empty.

Then she saw blood on the floor.

"I turned around," she told the Longview News-Journal later, "and noticed more blood on the floor and blood running across my mother's desk."

It was obvious that something horrible was happening, but it was unknown at once just what and to whom. Some $2,000 in cash receipts were missing, and at least four people dead.

At 3 a.m., Lana Maxwell, 18, David Maxwell's wife, showed up at the police station. She said her husband took a borrowed motorcycle to Joey Johnson at the KFC restaurant and never returned.

"Oh my God," the officer replied, "that makes five."

ABOUT 10 A.M. on Saturday, oil field pumper Arthur Warlick arrived at a gas well site four miles northwest of Henderson and 14 miles from Kilgore.

He saw four people lying face down on a dirt road.

Warlick honked his horn but no one moved. He crept closer and realized they were dead. A fifth victim, who apparently tried to escape, lay in weeds near a gate.

All but one had been shot at least once in the back of the head.

The bodies had been stripped of billfolds and jewelry and their pockets turned inside out.

Years later, Warlick told the Longview News-Journal: "I can still see the picture of those people in my mind, just like it was yesterday."

An investigator described it as a "gruesome mess."

A SEVEN-HOUR horseback search through heavily wooded Rusk County that weekend produced no clues, and a recovered stolen van could not be tied to the abduction.

Still, investigators sounded optimistic.

"I foresee a successful conclusion to this," G.W. Burks, a tough, well-known Texas Ranger captain, told the Henderson Daily News.

Kentucky Fried Chicken offered a $25,000 reward for information leading to the killers and Kilgore merchants quickly matched it.

Forensic experts determined that at least two handguns were used, and investigators theorized the killers knew the victims and the backroads of Rusk County.

A broken fingernail was found on Johnson's body and there were rumors that it might be traced to a gunman.

But investigative problems surfaced, in part because of the split jurisdiction. The robbery-kidnappings occurred in Gregg County, the murders in Rusk County.

Bill Ferguson, then Rusk County District Attorney, was soon at odds with Kilgore police official Dick Headen, who would become chief of police.

They sniped at one another through the media and, in time, it got nasty.

Rusk County Sheriff Cecil West, a Henderson police patrolman in 1983, recalls also that the Henderson Police Department offered assistance to his predecessor, Sheriff Mike Strong.

"He turned it down," West recently told the AP.

Even worse, when West was elected sheriff in 1989 he learned there was no file in the sheriff's office on the KFC case.

"It was real strange," West said. "It surprised the heck out of me that there wasn't any documentation at all."

A YEAR AFTER the slayings, the Tyler Courier-Times-Telegraph printed a pair of front-page stories under an eight-column headline that said:

"Kilgore Killings: An Open East Texas Wound."

The articles focused in part on the victims' relatives and their frustration over the lack of progress.

"It's inconceivable to me," said David Maxwell's father, "that people can sleep at night knowing five brutal murders happened a year ago, and that there have been no indictments or convictions."

Oscar Landers, Monte's father, was no less angry.

"I think they've screwed up," he said, expressing disappointment over both the progress and the demeanor of the investigation.

"I think they know who did it, and I don't know what the holdup is."

Two years later, in June 1986, Ferguson astounded everyone when he told a Rusk County budget hearing that five capital murder indictments might be forthcoming against four suspects.

Ferguson revealed that the FBI and the Texas Rangers were pressuring his office to seek indictments.

Ferguson refused to elaborate and others involved in the investigation declined comment.

"This is just too delicate," Ranger Stuart Dowell told the Henderson Daily News. "There's been too much work put in on it. We've all worked too long and too hard to say anything that might jeopardize the case now."

A year later there still was no action.

BY THE FIFTH anniversary of the shootings, the statute of limitations had run on the robbery-abductions, technically ending Kilgore police involvement in the case.

Chief Headen used the occasion to lash out at Ferguson on a variety of fronts, most notably his failure to prosecute a "prosecutable case."

In response, Ferguson declared:

"I feel like I know when we have a prosecutable case, and when I feel like we have enough evidence to prosecute, I'll bring it before a grand jury."

Presumably, nothing changed before Ferguson retired last year, although Dowell offered a puzzling insight in a 1990 interview with the Henderson Daily News.

"It was a fouled up deal," he said. "It involved drugs and a party not at the restaurant."

He said the killers went there that night to get an "item," but "whether or not they got this item, we don't know.

"A fight occurred and somebody was injured," he said. "So they were taken out and executed. They knew they'd been recognized and they had to shut them up.

"In my opinion, it was made to look like a robbery in the end."

In September 1993, newspapers in Kilgore, Tyler, Henderson and Longview published 10th anniversary stories on the case. They focused on the anger, frustration and heartache of the victims' families.

There were accusations of incompetence and indifference.

"They keep saying we don't want to go to trial and have them get off," complained Kathy Hamilton, David Maxwell's sister. "They've already gotten off."

ASIDE FROM COLLECTIVE grief, there is little left to remind observers of the horror that began that mild autumn evening.

The familiar red and white KFC restaurant quietly closed sometime after the slayings. Motorists cruising U.S. 259 see only a garish pink structure decorated with pink and silver tinsel.

Southern Africans conclude summit meeting with talk of problems

N.Y. Times News Service

Already this year three of the 10 countries that make up the bottom third of Africa — South Africa, Mozambique and Malawi — have settled domestic conflicts through negotiation and elections and joined the club of novice democracies.

LUSAKA, Zambia — As a summit meeting of southern African leaders was winding down last month, Frederick Chiluba, the elfin former union leader who is now the president of Zambia, lapsed into a pensive monologue.

Maybe Africa was not really cut out for Western-style democracy, he told his fellow heads of state with a sigh. How could a president get anything done with opponents constantly carping at him? Maybe the one-party state was the way to go, after all.

"To run our countries effectively, we have to be securely in control," he said, according to another participant in the meeting. Soon, leaders from South Africa and Zimbabwe, Botswana and Mozambique were all embroiled in this philosophical debate.

Not long ago, it would have been hard to find a quorum of African leaders who could argue from experience about the frustrations of democracy.

But while much of the continent languishes under warlords, despots, or martial rule, southern Africa is coalescing into a region of peace and political pluralism, sometimes crudely honored but remarkable by African standards.

Already this year three of the 10 countries that make up the bottom third of Africa — South Africa, Mozambique and Malawi — have settled domestic conflicts through negotiation and elections and joined the club of novice democracies.

Saturday leaders from across the southern part of the continent converged on this placid capital hoping to induct their newest recruit — Angola, a country that has spent most of the last 33 years at war.

Eduardo dos Santos, the Angolan president, arrived Saturday for the scheduled signing todayof a treaty promising a cease-fire and a share of power for the Unita rebel movement.

But U.N. officials said Saturday night that the rebel leader, Jonas Savimbi, had refused to come for fear of his personal safety. The treaty was to be signed instead by less senior officials, indicating that even if the rivals stop fighting, they are a long way from trusting one another.

If Angola can be calmed, a region of more than 100 million people will be at peace for the first time since the liberation uprisings of the 1960s.

Every country but one, the tiny monarchy of Swaziland, has passed through multiparty elections and all, with varying degrees of indulgence, tolerate political opponents.

Now the role model is Nelson Mandela, the freedom fighter mellowed into a conciliator. The battle cry is growth and investment.

Accident brakes voyage of new Estonian ferry

TALLINN, Estonia (AP) — The Estonian ferry that replaced the one that sank in September, killing more than 900 people, hit a breakwater Saturday as it was leaving the port of Tallinn. No injuries were reported.

The hull of the Mare Balticum was leaking, but the ferry was able to return to port, the Baltic News Service said.

The accident occurred shortly after the ferry set out on its regular 14-hour run to Stockholm, Sweden, the report said. The cause wasn't immediately known.

Officials of Estline, the company that operates the ferry, said divers would inspect the Mare Balticum's hull on Sunday. Officials said the ferry would be out of service for at least several days.

The Mare Balticum can carry up to 2,000 passengers. It was unclear how many people were on board Saturday night.

Estline resumed service on the Tallinn-Stockholm run only eight days ago with the launching of the 11,800-ton ship.

The vessel replaced the ferry Estonia, which capsized and sank in bad weather on Sept. 28. More than 900 people died, and only about 100 survived.

Gay incumbents harbor concern for future despite successful election

By Tim Klass
Associated Press

SEATTLE — Like the Republicans, all their incumbents were re-elected, some prominent newcomers won and the ballot measures they most strongly opposed were defeated.

Leaders of the International Network of Lesbian and Gay Officials say their success was especially encouraging in the face of losses in the Nov. 8 Republican landslide by Democratic incumbents who had supported gay-rights issues.

The mood at the opening of the group's conference Friday was one of modest celebration tinged with uncertainty about the future.

New York Assemblywoman Deborah Glick, co-president of the network, cited voter rejection of initiatives that would have banned or overturned local gay-rights ordinances in Idaho and Oregon, though backers of both measures say they will try again.

"I am not depressed. I am energized and enthusiastic about what this election means," Glick said.

When it comes to openly homosexual officeholders, "We have a net gain," said Seattle City Council member Sherry Harris, co-chairwoman of the host committee, "despite a conservative streak to the right."

When it comes to the GOP, Harris added, "we have to challenge them to do the right thing, to change their party platform. We have lesbian and gay Republicans. We're saying that we won't go away. You'll have to deal with us."

Fewer than 10 percent of network members are Republican, but some high-profile GOP officeholders — including Minnesota Gov. Arne Carlson, New York City Mayor Rudolph Giuliani and Los Angeles Mayor Richard Riordan — have been strong supporters of gay rights, organizers said.

"The Republican party is by no means monolithic," said network co-president Allan Spear, president of the Minnesota state Senate.

Every openly gay incumbent was re-elected, including Democratic Reps. Barney Frank and Gerry E. Studds of Massachusetts, said Kathleen DeBold of the Gay-Lesbian Victory Fund in a telephone interview from Washington, D.C.

Also re-elected was Republican Rep. Steve Gunderson of Wisconsin, who has acknowledged having a male companion.

Bootleg CD features music by president

WASHINGTON (AP) — Live from Prague, it's "The Pres Blows," an unauthorized recording of President Clinton playing the saxophone that one critic says is destined "to go aluminum."

Clinton's jam session at a Prague club in January has ended up on a compact disc being distributed by Stash, a mail-order jazz recording company in New York.

"I have heard that it's great music," White House spokeswoman Ginny Terzano said, perhaps dutifully.

Czech President Vaclav Havel gave Clinton a new saxophone when the two slipped out to the club, and the U.S. president led a local sextet in renditions of "Summertime" and "My Funny Valentine."

They didn't know the performance was being taped, Terzano said. Czech radio began playing it and a copy ended up with Stash.

"The (New York) Daily News gave it a harsh review," Stash owner Bernard Brightman said. "They said it was sure to go aluminum."

"The first song is kind of rough, because he was using a new saxophone, but the second song he plays respectabiy," Brightman added.

"The Pres Blows" is "basically a bootleg version," Terzano said. But she said White House lawyers did not seem inclined to try to stop distribution of the 18-minute CD, which sells for $15.

Clinton picked up a saxophone several times during that European trip, following up his Prague session with another go at the same pair of tunes at Russian President Boris Yeltsin's dacha.

Brightman said he got a "very nice thank-you note" from White House Press Secretary Dee Dee Myers when he sent her a copy of the CD. He was shipping more to the White House to soothe the post-election blues.

Park workers need new housing, official says

By John Flesher
Associated Press

ISLE ROYALE, Mich. — When Doug Barnard became superintendent of Isle Royale National Park a year ago, he quickly evicted a maintenance man from his quarters — as a favor.

"It was just a tin shack, the kind you might have in your back yard to put your lawn mower in," Barnard recalled, shaking his head. "It had running water, but only for the sink. No toilet, no shower, no insulation."

It was the worst — but not the only — example of shoddy employee housing on the 210-square-mile wilderness park in northwestern Lake Superior. Many workers spend chilly nights in ramshackle cabins with little or no insulation. Some have no electricity or indoor plumbing.

The problem isn't unique to Isle Royale. More than half of the 5,000 government-owned housing units in the 366 federal parks are substandard, says Thomas Collier, chief of staff to Interior Secretary Bruce Babbitt, whose department includes the National Park Service.

It's a side of the park system most visitors never see — the hodgepodge of rundown cabins, trailers, military surplus huts, even refurbished 8- by 20-foot shipping crates that many employees call home.

'The housing stock is in such poor condition that the number of units we're adding to the substandard list is growing faster than the number we've been able to take off the list.'

— Thomas Collier, chief of staff to Interior Secretary Bruce Babbitt

"It's a sad and pretty embarrassing state of affairs," Collier said.

Maintaining employee housing hasn't been a top priority for the cash-starved Park Service, which over the years has pumped most available money into visitor services, he says.

Now the Interior Department is pleading for private-sector help.

The National Park Foundation, created in the 1960s to drum up private support for the park system, is taking the lead. It's asking businesses, primarily builders, to donate money, materials, labor and know-how for a construction blitz.

The Park Service's last major housing initiative ran from 1956 to 1966. Many of the small houses built then are in poor shape because little money has been budgeted for upkeep, Collier says.

It's unclear what it would cost to bring all park accommodations up to par, but the $47 million Congress has appropriated since fiscal 1992 is "a drop in the bucket," he says.

"The housing stock is in such poor condition that the number of units we're adding to the substandard list is growing faster than the number we've been able to take off the list," Collier said. "We're in a downward spiral, and the situation gets worse every year."

With the park foundation's help, the government hopes over the next two years to replace all 659 trailers scattered through the park system. Most are decades old. There have been reports of rotten bathroom floors literally collapsing when people sat on the toilet, sending them to the ground below, Collier said.

Another immediate goal is upgrading housing at the seven parks where conditions are worst.

Those are Isle Royale; Yellowstone in Wyoming; Cape Hatteras in North Carolina; Rocky Mountain in Colorado; Big Bend in Texas; Channel Islands in California and Glacier Bay in Alaska.

For each park, a different member of the National Park Foundation board is assembling public-private partnerships. The Isle Royale program is led by Donald Thurber, a retired public relations executive who organized the foundation at the request of President John F. Kennedy.

"There's been an outpouring of offers to help," Thurber said. "People are writing, calling, volunteering their services."

The North Carolina branch of the National Association of Homebuilders is constructing a house for six at Fort Raleigh, part of the Cape Hatteras complex on the Atlantic coast. Officials hope eventually for 37 new houses to replace trailers corroding in the salty sea air.

"We've had three house trailers that had their siding ripped off in storms — just peeled back like you open a can," said Hatteras management assistant Mary Collier, no relation to Thomas Collier.

EDITOR'S NOTE: People wanting to make donations toward park employee housing can send checks to the National Park Foundation, 1101 17th St. NW, Suite 1102, Washington D.C., 20036. Donors wishing to help a specific park should indicate so on their checks. For example, a contribution for Isle Royale would read: "Isle Royale Housing Employee Initiative."

Big band jazz singer Calloway dies at 86

By John S. Wilson
N.Y. Times News Service

Cab Calloway, the flamboyant band leader who strutted and scat-sang his way to enduring fame as the "Hi-de-ho Man" of jazz, died Friday in a nursing home in Hosckessin, Del. He was 86 and lived in Greenburgh, N.Y.

The cause was a stroke he suffered in June, said his wife, Nuffie.

Calloway, who gave up law school and spurned an offer to play basketball with the Harlem Globetrotters to pursue his music, led one of the most successful bands in the Big Band era. He later toured the world playing Sportin' Life in "Porgy and Bess," a role that George Gershwin, who composed the score, had modeled on Calloway's colorful performing style.

The trademark Calloway image, which combined an almost cat-like grace on the bandstand with a singing style that could be slyly insinuating one moment and wildly exuberant the next, came into full bloom on a night in 1931 when he was leading his band in a radio broadcast from the Cotton Club in Harlem.

He had recently written "Minnie the Moocher," a new radio theme song for his band. The song combined a melody that was very close to the band's previous theme, "St. James Infirmary," with lyrics patterned on those of two other popular songs of the day, "Willie the Weeper" and "Minnie the Mermaid."

As he started to sing the song, Calloway suddenly realized that he could not remember the lyrics.

"I couldn't leave a blank there as I might have done if we weren't on the air," he wrote in his autobiography, "Of Minnie the Moocher and Me." "I had to fill the space so I started to scat-sing the first thing that came into my mind."

What he scatted was: "Hi-de-hi-de-hi-de-ho. Ho-de-ho-de-ho-de-hee. Oodlee-odlye-odlyee-oodlee-doo."

"The crowd went crazy," Calloway recalled.

Democrats use Gingrich as rallying cry

By John King
AP Political Writer

LAKE BUENA VISTA, Fla. — While searching for a consensus on how to rebuild from its devastating 1994 defeat, the Democratic Party has quickly decided who among the resurgent Republicans is its worst enemy, and best fund-raising friend: Newt Gingrich.

Attacks on Gingrich, the incoming Republican House speaker, provided the few occasions for cheer at an otherwise sober post-election summit of state Democratic leaders this weekend at, of all places, Disney World.

The session was "an opportunity to get over our shock, to get over our denial," said Debra DeLee, the acting Democratic National Committee chairwoman.

But in looking for a comeback route, the party leaders had far more questions than answers, beginning with uncertainty over how President Clinton and congressional Democrats will deal with the new Republican majorities in Congress.

And at a time when they were desperate for a dose of reassurance from the White House, several state party leaders voiced frustration that emissaries sent by the White House had little specific guidance to offer — and that much of the advice they did give was conflicting.

So, in the short term anyway, Democratic hopes appear based on the belief that Gingrich and his fellow Republicans will frighten away many of the voters who decided to side with the GOP and strip the Democrats of their majorities in the House, Senate and governorships.

"The Gingrich agenda is a dangerous one for this country," DeLee said. "It is divisive and it is close-minded."

Yet even as it flays Gingrich and his policy ideas, the party hopes to use his new profile to raise money and motivate lethargic Democrats, much as conservative groups used Clinton's election to rally their troops and fill their coffers.

In its first fund-raising mailing since the election, the DNC warned that the Gingrich agenda "would explode our deficit and produce large cuts in Social Security, Medicare, education, Head Start and crime prevention and infringe on the civil liberties of many of our citizens."

The fund-raising letter also warned that Gingrich will be "working with the National Rifle Association and the Christian Coalition to reverse the assault weapons ban and enact the social agenda of the radical right."

Party officials said additional mail appeals focusing on Gingrich were in the works, and DeLee said the controversial Georgia Republican would "be tremendous for our fund-raising."

But the far broader and more complicated task of rebuilding the party rests heavily on how Clinton performs in the second half of his term. And while trying to be polite in their comments, the state party leaders could barely hide their contempt for a White House political operation they say gives them little respect and even less information.

After a private meeting Saturday with White House deputy chief of staff Harold Ickes and pollster Stanley Greenberg, several state party leaders said they were shocked to hear Ickes say the administration did not believe it needed to make major changes in its message.

"There was a discussion that the message needed to be a lot more clear and lot more focused and it needed to be focused on fewer issues," said Texas Democratic Chairman Bob Slagle.

The Arizona chairman, Steve Owens, said Clinton needs to focus more on the economy, take a much more moderate approach to health care reform — and stop telling voters they would think more of him if they only understood what he had accomplished.

"He needs to go out and listen to people instead of having people in Washington telling voters what they ought to like," said Owens.

The state leaders were cheered somewhat by Greenberg's acknowledgement that voter unhappiness with Clinton's health care plan and efforts to allow gays to serve openly in the military had undermined his credibility on deficit reduction and other economic issues.

Two brothers plead guilty to sex charge

LACON, Ill. (AP) — A 10-year-old and his 8-year-old brother pleaded guilty to sexually assaulting a 5-year-old girl who lived next door.

The older boy, who was 9 at the time of the assault, admitted Friday in court to having sexual intercourse with the girl in a vacant house near their homes in Henry, about 40 miles north of Peoria. He pleaded guilty to aggravated criminal sexual assault, a felony.

The younger boy pleaded guilty to aggravated criminal sexual abuse, a lesser charge that does not involve penetration.

Marshall County Juvenile Court Judge C. Brett Bode said he would decide at a future hearing whether to place the boys in a foster home or institution until they reach age 18.

In the meantime, he ordered psychological evaluations for them and their parents. "I've probably had more juvenile cases than anyone else in this area. But this is something new for me," Bode said.

The parents of the victim, now 6, attended the hearing. They moved out of their house soon after the May assault, but the two brothers and the girl still attend the same school.

The youths weren't identified because of their ages and the nature of the crimes.

Conservatives don't present united front on school prayer amendment

By Richard Carelli
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Conservative religious groups are far from united in support of a Republican proposal for returning organized prayer to public schools by amending the Constitution.

Some think Republicans have failed so far to capture the best language for a school prayer amendment. Others believe there might be a better way to end what they see as hostility toward God in public schools.

Most surprising, there's even open opposition on the religious right.

"We don't need Newt Gingrich to raise our consciousness about the importance of prayer for our youth," said Steven McFarland of the Christian Legal Society.

"Amending the Constitution is unnecessary. The effort will leave blood all over the floor of Congress and divert attention from more needed measures to protect religious freedom," McFarland said in an interview.

Forest Montgomery of the National Association of Evangelicals said a constitutional amendment "may or may not be the best way to address a basic problem in our society — public schools have been sanitized of all mention of God and our nation's religious heritage.

"There could be a statutory solution, or perhaps some other better way," Montgomery said.

Gingrich, the Georgia Republican congressman likely to become House speaker in January, has called for hearings and a House vote by July 4 on a school prayer amendment. He has said the amendment will allow "voluntary prayer" in schools, a term open to numerous interpretations.

The Supreme Court ruled in 1962 that organized prayer in public schools violated the constitutionally required separation of church and state.

Many Catholic, Protestant and Jewish groups have supported the 1962 ruling and subsequent Supreme Court church-state decisions that flowed from it.

"We are not opposed to prayer," said J. Brent Walker of the Baptist Joint Committee. "It is precisely because we believe so fervently in prayer that we do not want the government to meddle in it."

Before the 1962 ruling, schools across the nation featured prayers to start each day, recitations of the distinctly Christian Lord's Prayer before all assemblies, and use of state-written prayers.

Clinic receives volunteer calls to test pill

HOUSTON — A month after the announcement that the Planned Parenthood clinics here and in five other cities would take part in the clinical trial of the French abortion drug RU-486, thousands of women have called to volunteer, the clinics say.

"It's been much more than we expected," said Kitty Kahn, director of surgical services for the Houston clinic. Her clinic has received more than a thousand calls from prospective volunteers from Texas, Oklahoma and Louisiana, and as far away as Iowa, she said.

Meteorologists predict storm downgrade

MIAMI — Indecisive Tropical Storm Gordon rolled back toward Florida on Saturday, a shadow of its former hurricane self that will probably die out before it hits the peninsula.

"It's continuing to weaken," said Max Mayfield, meteorologist with the National Hurricane Center in Coral Gables. "It could be downgraded soon to a tropical depression."

Gordon, born Nov. 8 off the tip of Nicaragua, zig-zagged as a tropical storm through the Caribbean, killing more than 500 in Haiti, before snaking across Florida, where it battered homes and crops.

Ostriches are 'food of future', some think

Anyone who says the U.S. economy has lost its vim and vision doesn't know a thing about ostriches.

The lanky birds with Barbara Bush eyes have set off a speculative boom. Lawyers, realtors, antique dealers: all are plunking down as much as $40,000 for a pair of the flightless birds, convinced that on a Thanksgiving not too far off, their fellow Americans will be carving ostrich legs.

"It's the meat of the 21st century," said Chuck Ball, executive director of the American Ostrich Association in Fort Worth, Texas. "Every day more people are learning that ostrich makes good eating and a great investment."

Joint Chiefs chairman defends Clinton

WASHINGTON — Gen. John Shalikashvili, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, went out of his way on Saturday to reject assertions by Sen. Jesse Helms of North Carolina that President Clinton was not up to the job of commander-in-chief and that many military officials shared that view.

"I was taken aback by the implication that he left, that somehow the Joint Chiefs of Staff and I shared his view on President Clinton," Shalikashvili said in a telephone interview. "Nothing could be further from the truth, and I think it's important to me that this view not be represented as that of the military leadership, or, for that matter, the view of the military as a whole."

Simpson gains appeal fodder, legal experts say

By Michael Fleeman
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — O.J. Simpson would seem to have little to gain by thrusting Judge Lance Ito's wife into the media glare.

Except headlines and appeal fodder. Legal experts say that might be enough.

Consider the "even-if" list:

Even if another judge allows police Capt. Peggy York to testify Monday about a key detective in the Simpson case, she's not likely to have much to say about Mark Fuhrman because she was just one among many watch commanders.

Even if she has something to say, it has to be relevant to the Simpson case if she's to be a witness at trial. All indications now are that if she does have any dirt on Fuhrman, it probably has more to do with sexism than racism.

Even if York's testimony is relevant and her husband, Ito, is taken off the case over that conflict of interest, it would just mean more delay for a defendant who says he wants fast justice.

Even if Simpson decides to try to slow things down, there's no guarantee he'll get a more sympathetic judge.

And, even if he does, that judge isn't likely to revisit any of Ito's decisions anyway.

"Why do they bring in this watch commander?" asked Stanley Goldman, law professor at Loyola University. "The media would not be doing any stories if it was some other watch commanders. They're doing stories because it's Ito's wife."

A story like this doesn't just make the TV news, it makes for a juicy news teaser, and that's about all members of the jury pool are allowed to see.

During jury selection last week, several prospective alternates said they saw Ito's own TV interview through teasers and full-page newspaper ads hyping the sweeps-week interview.

If members of the jury or the alternate pool see any Fuhrman coverage, it could help Simpson.

"It could be one more way to undermine Mark Fuhrman's credibilty when he takes the stand," said Robert Pugsley, a law professor at Southwestern University.

Fuhrman is a key part of the case against Simpson: He reported finding a bloody glove on Simpson's estate the morning after the killings. Police say it's the mate of a glove found near the bodies of Nicole Brown Simpson and her friend Ronald Goldman.

Raise doubts about Fuhrman and his credibility, the defense theory goes, and you raise doubts about the glove: Was it Simpson who dropped it, or was it Fuhrman, painted as a racist with a propensity for framing blacks.

The renewed attack has outraged Fuhrman's lawyer, Robert Tourtelot, who calls defense lawyers Robert Shapiro and Johnnie Cochran legal magicians using hocus pocus to deflect attention from the charges against Simpson.

But Loyola's Goldman suggested that the man behind the tactic is a considerably lower-key member of the team, Gerald Uelmen, who's looking ahead to a possible appeal by Alan Dershowitz.

"Uelmen is known as a guy who likes to dot every 'I' and cross every 'T'," said Goldman.

GOP has same headache Dems do

By Walter R. Mears
AP Special Correspondent

WHITE SULPHUR SPRINGS, W.Va. — It is the primest of times to be a Republican governor. They are resurgent, in charge in 30 of the 50 states, political power brokers — even prospective contenders — in the arenas that will nominate a Republican challenger for the 1996 presidential election.

Heady days indeed.

But right behind the celebrations comes the business, the budgeting, the search for revenue to balance spending, the heavy duty of governing.

And in those tasks, the reinforced GOP governors are just like the Democrats and the independent from Maine — they could have headaches with an incoming Republican Congress bent on cuts in spending and taxes, a course that has sometimes forced costs back upon the states.

Gov. William F. Weld of Massachusetts, re-elected by landslide, said in an interview that it's worth the pressure because government is simply too big and too costly. "You've got to shrink the size of the beast," he said.

No one was disputing that at a National Governors' Association cram course for governors-elect, but with a touch of caution.

Gov. Howard Dean of Vermont, a Democrat and chairman of the association, said that Democratic Congresses have been all to willing to tell the states what to do by passing laws that cost money but don't provide it. Those are the unfunded mandates governors have griped about for years.

■ Analysis

The governors association has no quarrel with the balanced budget amendment that House Republicans have made their top priority. But they're wary of cost-shifting; Dean said that would be dishonest politics as usual.

Dean said the Republican governors ought to be helpful getting that message to the GOP Congress. They won't have to wait long — when school is out here, GOP governors are going to their own Republican Governors' Association meeting in Williamsburg, Va., and the new leaders of Congress will be there.

An expanding economy is boosting state revenues and helping to balance budgets, but the association's self assessment is that states are "staring down the barrel of some major spending pressures" with the new lineup in Congress.

There are a dozen Republican governors-elect, three Democrats, one independent, and one contest still unsettled. Ten came as students, about twice as many veterans to serve as the faculty, for two days of seminars on topics like budgeting, dealing with Washington, and the social and family pressures of their new roles.

Handling Washington may be the toughest course of all, regardless of their party lineups. The governors do their work in 50 capitals, separately, with neither the direct leadership nor the collective muscle that works in Congress.

Too often for their liking, Congress, or the federal bureaucracy, decides how they should govern.

Republicans in Congress say they'll pay for tax cuts with spending cuts. That's been said before and hasn't quite worked out.

But something has to give. All but the most draconian of economizers acknowledge the need for a social safety net, to catch and cover the neediest. Reforming welfare will save money, but there are costs attached. Cuts in education, housing and other federal programs leave gaps to be dealt with elsewhere.

That gets more difficult if Republicans in Congress and in state capitals all try to cut taxes at the same time. And there were some major Republican state victories built around just that promise.

Post office is clear to sell stamp misprint

N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — Six stamp speculators who planned to make hay out of a misprint have had their hopes dashed by a federal judge, who ruled Friday that the Postal Service could sell 150,000 copies of a flawed stamp honoring a black rodeo star.

The suit concerned the 1994 "Legends of the Wild West" stamp sheets, which included a stamp featuring the rodeo star, Bill Pickett. The Postal Service recalled all 5.2 million copies of the sheet in February after relatives said the picture was not "Bulldogging" Bill Pickett, but Ben, the rodeo star's chubby older brother.

The Postal Service soon discovered that 183 sheets that included the misprinted stamp were sold before the error was detected.

Postmaster General Marvin T. Runyon said he originally planned to destroy the additional misprinted sheets, but, after discovering that some sheets had been sold, decided to make 150,000 copies of the misprinted sheets available to stamp enthusiasts, always avid for unusual stamps.

But his decision was a blow to collectors who had the original 183 sheets. In September, six stamp collectors and a dealer who paid $5,000 for a misprinted sheet filed suit to block the sale, saying it would cheapen the value of their misprints.

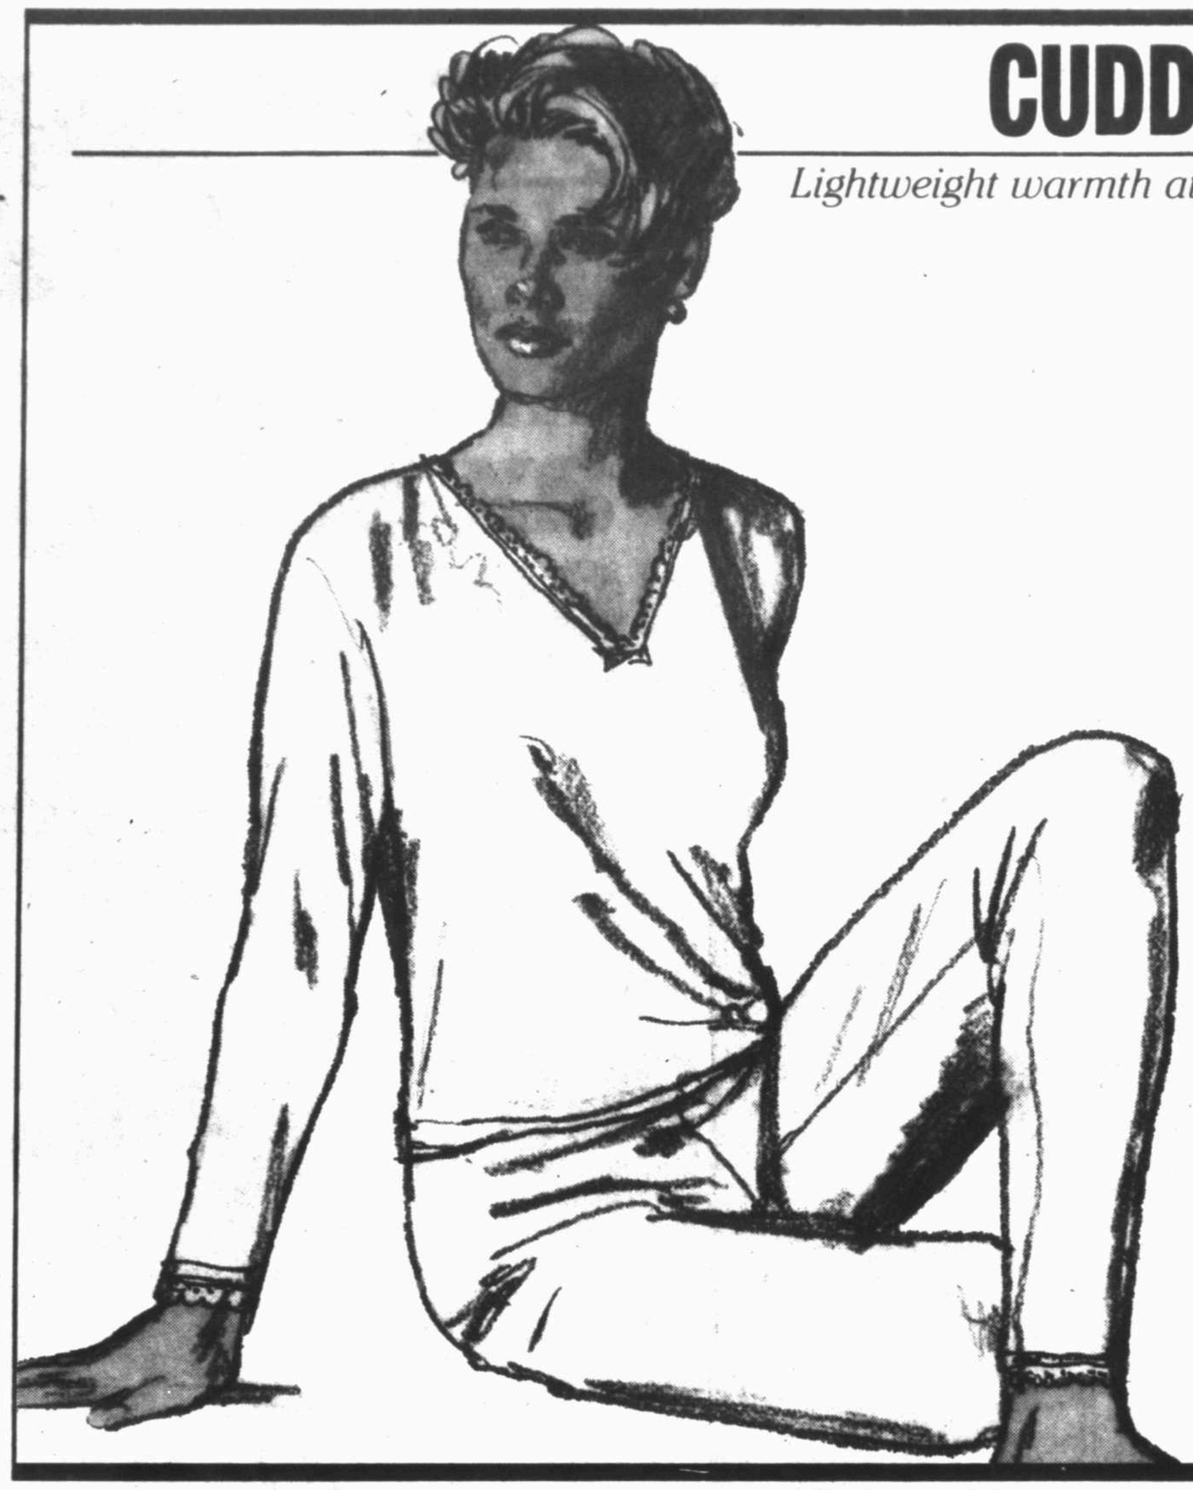

The collectors argued that the rare stamp sheets might rise in value to as much as $50,000. Now, with 150,000 more to be sold, sheets of the misprinted stamp will probably be worth about $100.

Judge Gladys Kessler of U.S. District Court ruled in favor of the Postal Service, saying Congress had given the Postal Service "broad authority to provide and sell postage stamps."

But a lawyer for the collectors who sued, Myron G. Hill, said Saturday that the Postal Service's motivation in releasing the stamps is simply the money it will make from its sale. He said he has filed an appeal.

Russian observes free enterprise

Government official visits Midland, gets look at U.S. businesses

■ Resident Arthur Odum hosts Nadezhda Denisenko during her three-week stay.

By Melia McEwen
Staff Writer

America's way of life and doing business were put under the microscope by citizens of the former Soviet Union the past three months, and Midland was part of the study.

Midlander Arthur Odum, director of International Matrix Resources, recently played host for three weeks to Nadezhda M. Denisenko of the Tyumen Regional Administration in Russia. She came to the United States as part of the Central and Eastern European Internship Program sponsored by the National Forum Foundation, a non-partisan organization helping countries of the former Eastern Bloc learn about free enterprise and entrepreneurship.

The foundation, explained Ms. Denisenko in Russian-accented English, carried out a competition in Russia, the Ukraine and Slovenia, seeking government officers, politicians and business leaders who could help with the transfer to democracy and into international markets.

Demand, price for state-grown vegetables rise in wake of storm

McALLEN (AP) — Demand for Texas vegetables has surged and prices have skyrocketed because of the estimated $200 million in damage Tropical Storm Gordon inflicted on South Florida produce.

"It has increased the demand 100 percent," said John Bearden, vice president for marketing for Plantation Farms in Sharyland.

Bearden said prices for local cucumbers and bell peppers have soared since the storm ravaged Florida farms early in the week. Cucumbers were selling for $10-per-bushel box at the beginning of the week and now are going for $18- to $20-per-bushel box, he said.

The price for bell peppers also has shot up, from $8- to $10-per-bushel box before the storm to $16 to $18.

Bearden said he expects prices and demand to remain high for the next several weeks.

Florida growers usually dominate the East Coast market, but Texas vegetables now are being shipped throughout the country.

"This has opened up the entire United States as a market for us," Bearden said.

Florida state officials estimated crop losses at $200 million in an area that produces more than half of the nation's winter vegetables.

Bearden said that when celery and parsley harvests begin in December, the effect of the tropical storm probably will show itself again.

"Because of all the standing water, they probably won't have nearly the quality or quantity that we will have," he said.

According to a clerk at the H.E.B. Food Store in Weslaco, broccoli went from 99 cents-per-stalk to $1.49 Friday, and cauliflower will rise from $1.29 to $1.49. The store expects a shortage of fresh produce over the next few weeks and an increase in citrus, tomato and other fruit and vegetable prices.

Students experience cultures of world

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff Writer

The aroma of beef tamales wafted through the gym, upstaged by the clatter of bamboo sticks on the floor and the rousing tune of a fast-paced Philippine folk song. A tiny tot squealed in delight at the sight of a hanging paper fish in the Japanese display as a young boy in a toreador costume strutted by her.

'We are more like my friends than we are unalike.'
— Maya Angelou, poet

From the crudely cut Styrofoam igloos in the Alaska exhibit to delicately sculpted Chinese porcelain figurines, Scharbauer Elementary School took on the appearance of an international festival last week.

On Friday, parents walked through the halls of the school where every wall, nook and cranny was covered with artwork and writing projects about various countries. From African folk tales to stories of Grecian culture, children's essays hung alongside artwork depicting houses and costumes from countries around the world.

Differences between moms, dads stay same despite our age

Ott

This, of course, is stating the obvious, but there are many and varied differences between mothers and fathers. And no matter how old you, the child, become, those differences will always remain.

It all starts at an early age when you learn which parent to discuss which subject with.

If, for example, it is something sensitive that concerns a fellow family member, you automatically go to mom. After all, she understands such matters.

If, on the other hand, you need an answer to a major financial question — such as, "Can I have a $20 advance on my allowance?" — dad is your ultimate destination, even if you try to bypass him by approaching your mom first. She will simply shake her head and say, "You'll have to talk to your father about that." Which, of course, means you can kiss that 20 bucks goodbye.

The reason all of this comes to mind is that I recently spent a couple of days with my parents and sure enough, those inevitable differences jump out at me once more.

It was as though I had made two trips home — one to visit with my mother and the other to chat with my dad. Neither conversation had anything to do with the other.

See if this sounds familiar.

First, the mother-son conversation.

It is 5:30 in the afternoon, and you're both in the kitchen. She's standing at the sink peeling potatoes for the pot roast, and you are seated at the butcher block table spoiling your appetite by nibbling at a homemade pecan pie.

Between nibbles, you kick things off by saying, "So, how's the family?"

You don't speak again for half an hour.

Your mom, on the other hand, spends the next 20 minutes describing in excruciating detail the latest happenings in the lives of all three of your sisters and their families, with special emphasis on the many accomplishments of the various grandkids. Then, after taking a deep breath, she launches into the lives of numerous aunts and uncles, none of whom you institutions function and the relationships between government and the private sector and how they influence each other."

Tyumen is the capital of the Tyumen Region, where 80 percent of Russia's oil and gas is produced, Odum said.

Odum said the foundation contacted him and he invited Ms. Denisenko to visit the Tall City. He thought it would be appropriate for her to visit a major oil-producing region of the United States.

Ms. Denisenko, 43, is foreign affairs adviser for the Tyumen Regional Administration, which is responsible for making connections between foreign companies and enterprises in her region.

Ms. Denisenko said that not only was she in the United States to observe American institutions, but she is to help foster joint ventures between U.S. and Russian companies, particularly those in the oil and gas business.

She said that the United States, while a democracy, has socialist overtones.

"Your government has great concerns about its people, their well-being, their homes, their jobs, how they're carried out," she observed.

Odum took her to a polling place during the Nov. 8 elections. She said that while the voting procedure is very similar to that in Russia, "everything is possible in your country.

"Your election was not the result of an ideology imposed on the people, the results were the people's choice, and that's good."

During Communist rule the citizens "were equal in poverty," and the citizens came to think of capitalism as a very bad thing, she said.

Russians are now struggling to overcome after the demise of the Soviet Union and are being encouraged to become entrepreneurs, she said. They need to be taught business theory and to gain practical business experience, Ms. Denisenko said.

"All my people were not ready for businesses. Businesses need good ideas, good management skills; we were not taught these."

Before coming to Midland, she spent a month at the Oklahoma Department of Commerce in Oklahoma City. She said that visit impressed her with how small businesses are helped by government agencies, how government-funded small-business centers help entrepreneurs polish their ideas, put together business plans and how government agencies work with banks to help finance start-up businesses.

It is such methods that she hopes to take back to Russia.

"It's so easy to make a business here, to set up a company," she said.

While this was not Ms. Denisenko's first trip to the United States, it was her first trip to a desert region, and to Texas. She admitted she wasn't sure what to expect other than a massive region of sand, but she found what she called "an oasis of organization and civilization" in Midland.

As for Texas, "you are perhaps more independent than the other states, and I sense in Texas a special pride."

Odum, a former diplomat who spent two years in the former Soviet Union during the 1960s, said "it's been a pleasure to have her as a house guest. Her understanding of our democracy and our business practices is very impressive, and I know she'll bring back a great deal to her region in assisting its transfer from communism and a command economy to a democracy and a demand economy."

There are great business opportunities for American firms in Russia, and those that don't act now will miss the boat, he said.

OTT: We catch on to differences between moms, dads early on can remember, or, if the truth were known, care to remember.

Still, you act interested.

This continues until dinner is served.

Once the meal is consumed, it is time for you and your father to retire to the den so you can engage in a more manly discussion.

It is equally predictable and goes something like this:

Dad: "So, how's your job going these days?"

You: "Fine. Everything's just fine."

Dad: "How's your car running?"

You: "Fine. Had to buy a new battery the other day, but other than that, it's doing just fine."

(NOTE "Fine," as you may have figured out by now, is a key word in these conversations. You will use it often.)

Dad: "Saving any money?"

You: "Sure. I'm setting aside a pretty good wad every month."

(NOTE: That's a blatant lie, of course, but it beats having to endure a lengthy lecture on the benefits of CDs, 401K plans and mutual funds.)

Besides, it is about that time that your mother will have finished cleaning up the kitchen and join the two of you in the den.

An awkward silence follows, but all three of you know what the others are thinking.

So you decide to confront it head-on.

"No," you say in a sarcastic voice, "I'm not seeing anyone seriously right now, so you can forget about having any new grandkids. Now, switch the channel. I want to watch the basketball game."

Man rescues child from underground barrel

DALLAS (AP) — A truck mechanic overcame two electrical jolts to pull an 8-year-old boy from an underground barrel, then used CPR to revive him by the time paramedics arrived.

The mother of Justin Reed said he had no pulse and wasn't breathing when her neighbor, Chris Stevens, pulled her son from an underground barrel. Justin had fallen into the space while playing with friends.

"I really feel thankful for Chris," said Marilyn Reed, 33, of Dallas. "He was there, and he helped and he reacted real fast. If he hadn't been there, he (Justin) would have been gone."

The boy was released from Medical City Dallas Hospital on Saturday, a hospital official said.

Stevens, 36, said he would never have discovered the boy except that he has a taste for barbecued pork chops, and he had a habit of dumping his used charcoal briquettes into an underground barrel behind his apartment.

When Stevens went out to empty his grill Thursday night, he said, he noticed that the lid of the barrel was ajar and that a boy's hands were sticking up out of the wet hole. It was a boy who lives in an apartment above Stevens'.

When Stevens grabbed Justin's hands to pull him up, he was hit with a jolt of electricity that knocked him backward, he said.

"I'm a welder, and I get shocked pretty much," he told The Dallas Morning News. "This was a pretty good hit. At least 220 volts. It threw me back."

But Stevens gathered his senses, reached down again, grabbed Justin by the shirt collar and pulled him out of the hole. The underground barrel contained an electrical line — and the power hit Stevens with another jolt of juice.

Stevens said the boy appeared to have stopped breathing, and had no pulse. His eyes were rolled up in his head. Stevens, though he had no training in emergency medical techniques, began cardiopulmonary resuscitation.

"I'd never done CPR before," he said. "I just saw it on 'Rescue 911.' I watch those shows all the time."

Justin's pulse soon returned, but he wasn't breathing, so Stevens provided mouth-to-mouth resuscitation. Then Justin vomited and began to cry. His first words, Stevens said, were "Don't tell, please don't tell."

Mike Foster, the fiance of Justin's mother, arrived while Stevens was administering CPR. Ms. Reed was upstairs in their apartment calling 911.

"I picked his arm up, and he was gone," said Foster, 30. "I didn't feel his heart or nothing. I really think he was gone. When he woke up, his lips were white."

Foster said Justin told them later that he and a few friends had been playing on the barrel. When he jumped on the lid, it shifted and he fell into the watery hole. When he tried to escape he touched the electrical line and blacked out.

The barrel apparently had been installed by the apartment complex staff to pump underground water.

Black soldiers in 3rd Cavalry claim racism pervades unit

FORT BLISS (AP) — Capt. Bennie J. McRae III believes racism has derailed his hopes for a successful Army career.

The decorated black officer said he had consistently been praised during his years in the military, until he joined the 3rd Armored Cavalry Regiment. There, he alleges, a superior's racist attitude led to a substandard performance report that leaves him with little hope of promotion.

"And I still have faith in my country," McRae said. "My country didn't screw me over, but people did."

McRae, who won the Bronze Star and received written praise for his actions during the Gulf War, said racial prejudice is prevalent in the Army, especially in the cavalry.

"It's regarded as an exclusive club," he said.

McRae is not alone in his beliefs.

Several black soldiers from the 3rd Armored Cavalry also said they endure racial slurs, have difficulty getting promotions and face other forms of discrimination in the Fort Bliss-based unit.

"I've never had any racial discrimination problems, or observed any, in 15 years (in the Army) before I came to the 3rd ACR," said Staff Sgt. David Cooper, who has been with the unit since 1992.

Fort Bliss officials deny allegations of widespread racism in the unit.

"Discrimination exists everywhere, and it's taken very, very seriously (by the Army)," said post spokeswoman Jean Offutt. "But the Army has probably a much better reporting system for such complaints."

An analysis of Army records conducted by the El Paso Times shows the 3rd Armored Cavalry's rate of complaints about racial and ethnic discrimination is essentially the same as the Army as a whole.

The unit, which numbers about 6,000 soldiers, had 11 race- or ethnicity-based complaints filed at its equal employment opportunity office in the 1993-94 fiscal year.

That's about 1.83 complaints per 1,000 soldiers. The Army's rate was 1.76 complaints per 1,000 soldiers in the 1992-93 fiscal year, the latest statistics available.

But unit soldiers insist there are problems with the 3rd Armored Cav.

"There's an informal group of white officers interested in keeping the Cav lily white," said a former unit captain who asked that his name not be used.

McRae, a six-year Army veteran, said he never experienced serious racism until he arrived at Fort Bliss.

He filed a racial bias complaint against his 3rd Cav boss late last year.

"He'd make comments to me like, 'Who wants to go for fried chicken? Oh, Bennie, I knew you'd come,' " McRae said.

A Fort Bliss investigation found no racial bias by the officer but recommended he be reprimanded for demeaning lower-ranking officers.

McRae appealed the findings and his case is being reviewed by the Department of the Army. A ruling is expected in a month.

Meantime, McRae is serving in an air defense unit while awaiting an assignment to an armor unit at Fort Hood this winter.

'Zelda' becomes first openly gay candidate to win legislative seat

By David W. Dunlap
N.Y. Times News Service

As a politician, Sheila Kuehl discovered there were practical reasons for holding on to her character of Dobie Gillis fame.

DALLAS — Zelda Gilroy should only have known, as she longed hopelessly more than 30 years ago for the indifferent Dobie Gillis, that the boys who truly fancied her were legion. And so, it turned out, were the girls.

She knows now.

Sheila James Kuehl, who played Zelda on CBS' "The Many Loves of Dobie Gillis" from 1959 to 1963, was stopped every few yards as she made her way through the Southland Center Hotel, where the National Gay and Lesbian Task Force held its annual organizing conference last week.

Many of her admirers wanted to congratulate her on having just become the first openly gay candidate to win a seat in the California Legislature, representing a district that includes Santa Monica.

But a lot of them simply wanted to meet Zelda.

Zelda and Dobie were teen-agers in Central City when Dwight D. Eisenhower and John F. Kennedy were in the White House. Zelda and Dobie (whom she called "Poopsie") were perfectly mismatched: She was forever pursuing him, while he was pursuing someone else.

It is easy to imagine Ms. Kuehl, 53, a Harvard Law School graduate who is about to represent some 370,000 people in the state Assembly, tiring of that alter ego.

Instead, Ms. Kuehl embraces it. "She talks about Zelda as a cousin she was fond of," said Torie Osborn, a columnist for The Advocate, a gay news magazine, who was Ms. Kuehl's partner for nine years.

As a politician, Ms. Kuehl discovered, there were practical reasons for holding on to Zelda.

"When we did our very first polling, one of the things we found was that 76 percent of the people polled had seen the show and remembered it," she said. "And almost that many remembered my character."

Then there is what she calls the Zelda Factor, using the character to pierce many voters' aversion to her lesbianism: "When people know gay people personally, they tend to feel differently about the whole community. And all of a sudden, here's a person that they knew very well that they found out was lesbian."

Ms. Kuehl became aware of her feelings for other women while at the University of California at Los Angeles, where she studied while appearing on "Dobie Gillis."

At 17, she recalled, "I fell in love and was just totally freaked out by the fact that I was not 'normal.' " When her relationship came to light at her sorority, she was expelled.

Shortly after that, she filmed a pilot for a spinoff Zelda series. "It just sank like a stone," she recalled. "The director took me out for a walk and said, 'I don't know if anybody's told you this, but the president of CBS said no to this pilot and said you were just a little too butch.' "

Ms. Kuehl eventually decided to attend law school at Harvard. She subsequently entered private practice in Los Angeles and began raising money for the Sojourn Center for Battered Women, of which she is still chairwoman.

Soon, the staffs of other shelters were asking Ms. Kuehl for training in domestic-violence law.

"I had to learn what there was, which wasn't much," she said. She joined a small circle of lawyers trying to fashion legislation, including a bill requiring judges to consider evidence of domestic violence in custody cases.

Timber firm offers road to county

DIBOLL (AP) — A timber company that blocked land once used as a route to the Big Thicket National Preserve has proposed donating one of its roads to Hardin County.

Diboll-based Temple-Inland Forest Products Corp. on Friday offered a 2.4-mile road that would provide easier access to picnic areas at the preserve.

Temple-Inland and Hardin County residents have been at odds after the company shut down three roads and adjacent land leading to the picnic areas.

The company said it was upset about poaching and garbage-dumping on its property. Sturdy, spike-studded gates were built on the roads, forcing would-be picnickers to hike more than a mile through boggy woods with no trail to guide them.

Earlier in the week, Hardin County commissioners postponed a decision on residents' demands to take control of the three roads.

"I went because they were affordable. I stayed because they're wonderful."

I first went to Planned Parenthood because I really couldn't afford a gynecologist. I was young. And nervous. And didn't know what to expect. But now I can afford to go anywhere. And you know what? I still go to Planned Parenthood.
From my very first visit, I felt they sincerely cared about me. They took the time to know me and answered all my questions in plain talk. Every time I go, they're as kind and understanding as ever.
I also feel their medical staff is professional, knowledgeable and very up to date. They're extremely sensitive to a woman's special medical concerns, and everything is kept confidential. I'm glad they offer such a wide range of services. As far as I'm concerned, Planned Parenthood is like family and will always be an important part of my health care.

Health care survey indicates need

New program expands through continuing education

By Elise Coombes

Midland College is taking a more regional approach for health care education by expanding its continuing education offerings, according to Beverly Prichard, Continuing Education Health Care Coordinator.

"That's the attitude, that we can do this," Prichard said of the college's expanded commitment to the health care community. And, the task is a large one.

Local professionals who need continuing education include athletic trainers, nutritionists, nurses and nurses aides, dental hygentists, veterinary technicians and the clerical staff in doctors' offices—and that is just the beginning.

One resource book indicates there are 150 different careers in the health care field.

Prichard said each field requires that employees have ongoing continuing education to maintain certification or licensure.

Prichard set out to assess local interest in continuing health care education by sending out 1,750 surveys to hospitals, emergency medical clinics and physicians offices in Midland College's 17-county service area.

The survey was directed to physicians, their medical personnel, nurses and the secretarial staff. So far, 40 percent of those surveys have been returned, and the response indicates an interest in a wide range of health care programs.

The Abell-Hanger Foundation and Memorial Hospital & Medical Center have given financial support to the program. A local advisory committee made up of health care professionals from doctors to pharmacists has helped Prichard identify immediate needs and set long term goals.

And, many local doctors have offered to help with seminars and courses. "They want to speak and they want to help," Prichard said.

Offering seminars and courses locally saves smaller hospitals and other health care entities the expense of sending employees to Dallas or El Paso for retraining. "It should be a cost savings if we can put on programs where people can come and spend a day here and get their mandatory continuing education," Prichard said.

Midland College's role in providing expanded continuing education for health care professionals is both simple and complex. Setting up the programs through the Continuing Education office gives the college the flexibility it needs to respond quickly to whatever courses or retraining is needed.

However, the time frame between identifying a need and offering a course can generally be two to three months, Prichard said.

The college must determine the kind of certification or license that is needed. Then educational needs have to be determined. The national or state accrediting agency must approve the program after a local planning committee has submitted its course plan to the agency.

Prichard said her goal is for Midland College to become an accredited provider for different areas of health care so that new courses and seminars can be developed more quickly to satisfy the growing health care education needs in the Permian Basin.

"We are looking for any assistance we can get," said Prichard. In addition to feedback from the professional community by survey, corporate grants and subsidies can help to provide classes with guest lecturers from relevant areas of study as well as to meet extra program needs.

One sure way to enhance the quality of patient care is to provide quality education to health care professionals.

"We hope that by offering these programs and developing continuing education programs for the health care professionals, we can serve the community that's been so supportive of Midland College," Prichard said.

Additional survey forms can be obtained by calling Prichard at the Midland College Cogdell South Facility at 684-4100.

Innovative plan allows college to purchase new equipment

Coombes

Last week's regular meeting of the Midland College Board of Trustees painted a bright financial picture for the college.

The Midland College campus is more than 20 years old and faces maintenance problems and the replacement of major equipment to comply with new environmental regulations.

But, Midland College's Vice President of Administrative Services Rudy Gonzales has found a unique way to deal with the problem of buying several hundred thousand dollars in new equipment in an already tight budget year.

A proposed agreement with the Honeywell Corporation would allow the college to purchase new equipment and pay for that equipment from the energy savings without budgeting any extra money.

Honeywell is projecting an annual savings of $125,000 with a projected 10-year cash flow of more than $300,000 providing enough money to pay for installation of new chillers and a new lighting system.

The built-in safety feature for the college is provided in an agreement with Honeywell that stipulates if the company's projections are wrong, it must pick up any extra costs to the college. Once a final agreement has been reached, installation of the new equipment should begin this spring.

More good news for the college came from the accounting firm of Johnson, Miller and Company, which pronounced the college "financially sound" after the Nov. 1 completion of the annual audit.

Contributions from the community continue to supplement the college's budget, allowing programs to expand.

Support from the local veterinary community and the recent donation of a $12,000 blood analyzer from the DuPont Corporation means the college's Veterinary Technology program is well on its way to re-accreditation. Local and corporate support also continues for the Automotive Technology program. And, orders for commemorative bricks means the College's "Court of Honor" will soon be a reality.

The community is invited to attend Midland College's Merry Christmas celebration 6:30 p.m., Tuesday, Nov. 29. Events include music, the lighting of the Carillon Tower, a student art show, and, of course, refreshments.

Elise Coombes is public relations director for Midland College.

Hospital settles with woman who claimed she was fondled by worker

HARLINGEN (AP) — A South Texas hospital has agreed to pay a woman $300,000 to settle a lawsuit in which she claimed a hospital employee fondled her while she was under sedation.

Valley Regional Medical Center of Brownsville also agreed to send the 55-year-old woman a letter, apologizing for the incident, and to implement a sexual molestation policy.

The hospital also agreed to allow women patients the option of having another woman in the room during private exams.

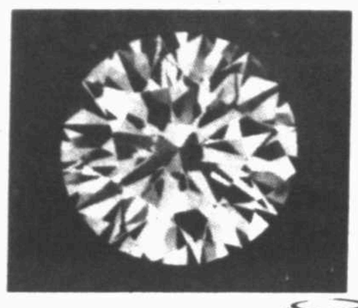

The settlement was reached late Friday in Brownsville as jurors deliberated on the woman's allegations in state district court. The seven-woman, five-man jury had been out for about four hours after a week of testimony.

"We're happy," said Tom Rhodes, the woman's attorney. "This is all we wanted from the beginning, is for them to change their policies."

Hospital administrators say Richard Belson, a 37-year-old student technician accused in the incident, was fired, but deny the allegations played a part in their decision, instead saying he was a bad employee.

The woman said Belson molested her on Aug. 11 while she was sedated and lying on a radiology table, waiting for an examination.

Since the incident, the woman said she has suffered anxiety attacks, hyperventilation and fears men, her lawyer said.

Ex-fugitive, health spa tycoon gets step closer to freedom

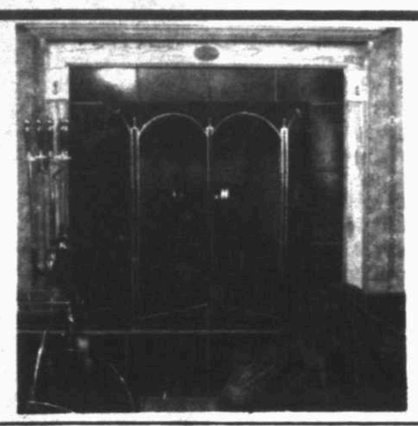

HOUSTON — A federal judge has ordered health spa founder Richard Minns' Irish passport returned so the former fugitive can leave the country after his legal troubles are settled.

The decision means Minns won't be detained while the Internal Revenue Service attempts to collect more than $670,000 in past-due taxes.

U.S. District Judge Lynn Hughes on Friday ordered Minns to make payment arrangements and post $100,000 bond against the amount he owes. The judge also ruled that the government must abide by a plea arrangement to return Minns' Irish passport.

"A person should not be deprived of liberty altogether for what is, after all, a debt," Hughes said.

The IRS filed a civil suit on Thursday to collect more than $772,000 in taxes plus interest and penalties.

'Governor for Day' honors officers of law enforcement

AUSTIN (AP) — State Sen. John Whitmire marked his one-day ceremonial reign as Texas governor Saturday by paying tribute to law enforcement officers and promising to continue efforts to get tough on criminals.

Whitmire, who heads the Senate Criminal Justice Committee, predicted passage in next year's legislative session of measures denying parole to those convicted of sexually assaulting a child and ensuring that able-bodied inmates work full-time in prison.

The Houston Democrat, who sponsored a massive 1993 rewrite of Texas' criminal laws, served as temporary governor in a long-standing tradition in which the governor and lieutenant governor both plan to be out of state on the same day.

That allows the Senate president pro tem, who is next in line of succession, to become governor for a day and invite friends and supporters to a Texas Capitol celebration to commemorate the occasion.

WORLD: Pupils celebrates other cultures

(From 1B)

"The children have been studying countries for awhile. Each grade level took a continent to study," said Scharbauer principal Mamie Williams.

This is the second year the school has celebrated International Week, she said.

Ms. Williams said foreign exchange students at local high schools came and spoke to the students about their native countries.

"The kids were amazed at how many languages the foreign exchange students speak," she said.

The elementary school pupils asked the exchange students everything from "What do you learn in school," to "do you have hot dogs in your country?"

The week culminated Friday with Scharbauer pupils performing a Chinese ribbon dance, an Israeli scarf dance, a Korean fan dance and a complicated Philippine dance involving jumping between bamboo poles that their peers tapped on the floor.

Some students greeted the crowd in Swahili, and special education pupils showed off words they had learned in Japanese.

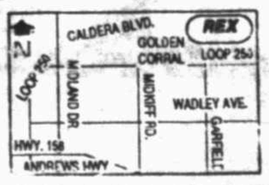

"The teachers must really have done a lot of work teaching all of these dances and songs to the kids," said parent Leesa Johnson. "It's pretty impressive."

Ms. Williams said some students learned songs in seven languages. "Our fifth-graders have also served as ambassadors from countries," she said.

The principal said students not only learned about other countries, they learned that people have many similarities as well as differences.

"Our theme for the week came from (renown poet) Maya Angelou "we are more like my friends than we are unalike.' "

Couple sues river authority for flood damage

CONROE (AP) — A couple swamped by flood waters last month is suing the San Jacinto River Authority, alleging that officials failed to adequately warn residents of an impending release from swollen Lake Conroe.

Charles and Kelly Robinson claim the river authority is liable for flood damage to their home and livestock, which they say were deluged in about two hours during heavy rains last month.

"I don't care what anybody says — 30 inches of rain doesn't make the water come up that high that fast," Charles Robinson, 37, told the Houston Chronicle in Saturday editions.

The Robinsons' lawsuit says the river authority didn't issue adequate warnings when it began opening flood gates on the San Jacinto Dam, releasing water down the San Jacinto River toward the Houston Ship Channel.

Three days of torrential rains spawned flooding throughout Southeast Texas last month, killing 20 people and forcing more than 14,000 from their homes. More than 4,000 homes were damaged in Montgomery County, which is crossed by the San Jacinto.

Jim Adams, a river authority supervisor at the dam, said he and other agency officials couldn't comment on the lawsuit because they had not yet seen it.

Adams, however, said the heavy rainfall — up to 30 inches in some parts of Montgomery County — left no option but to open the flood gates. He said the gates were opened gradually starting on Oct. 16.

At one point, officials have said, water was released at a rate of 33,000-cubic-feet-per-second, about four times the previous record rate.

"What so many people don't recognize is that there are so many creeks flowing into Lake Conroe, which is a water supply lake and not a flood-control lake," Adams said.

"With that much water, we don't have any choice but to raise the gates to protect the structural integrity of the dam."

Dexter Patterson, an attorney representing the Robinsons, said the river authority apparently issued some warning of the flood-gate opening through radio stations.

"Whatever warning they gave was totally inadequate. They knew for a couple of days the water level was rising and that more water was coming," Patterson said.

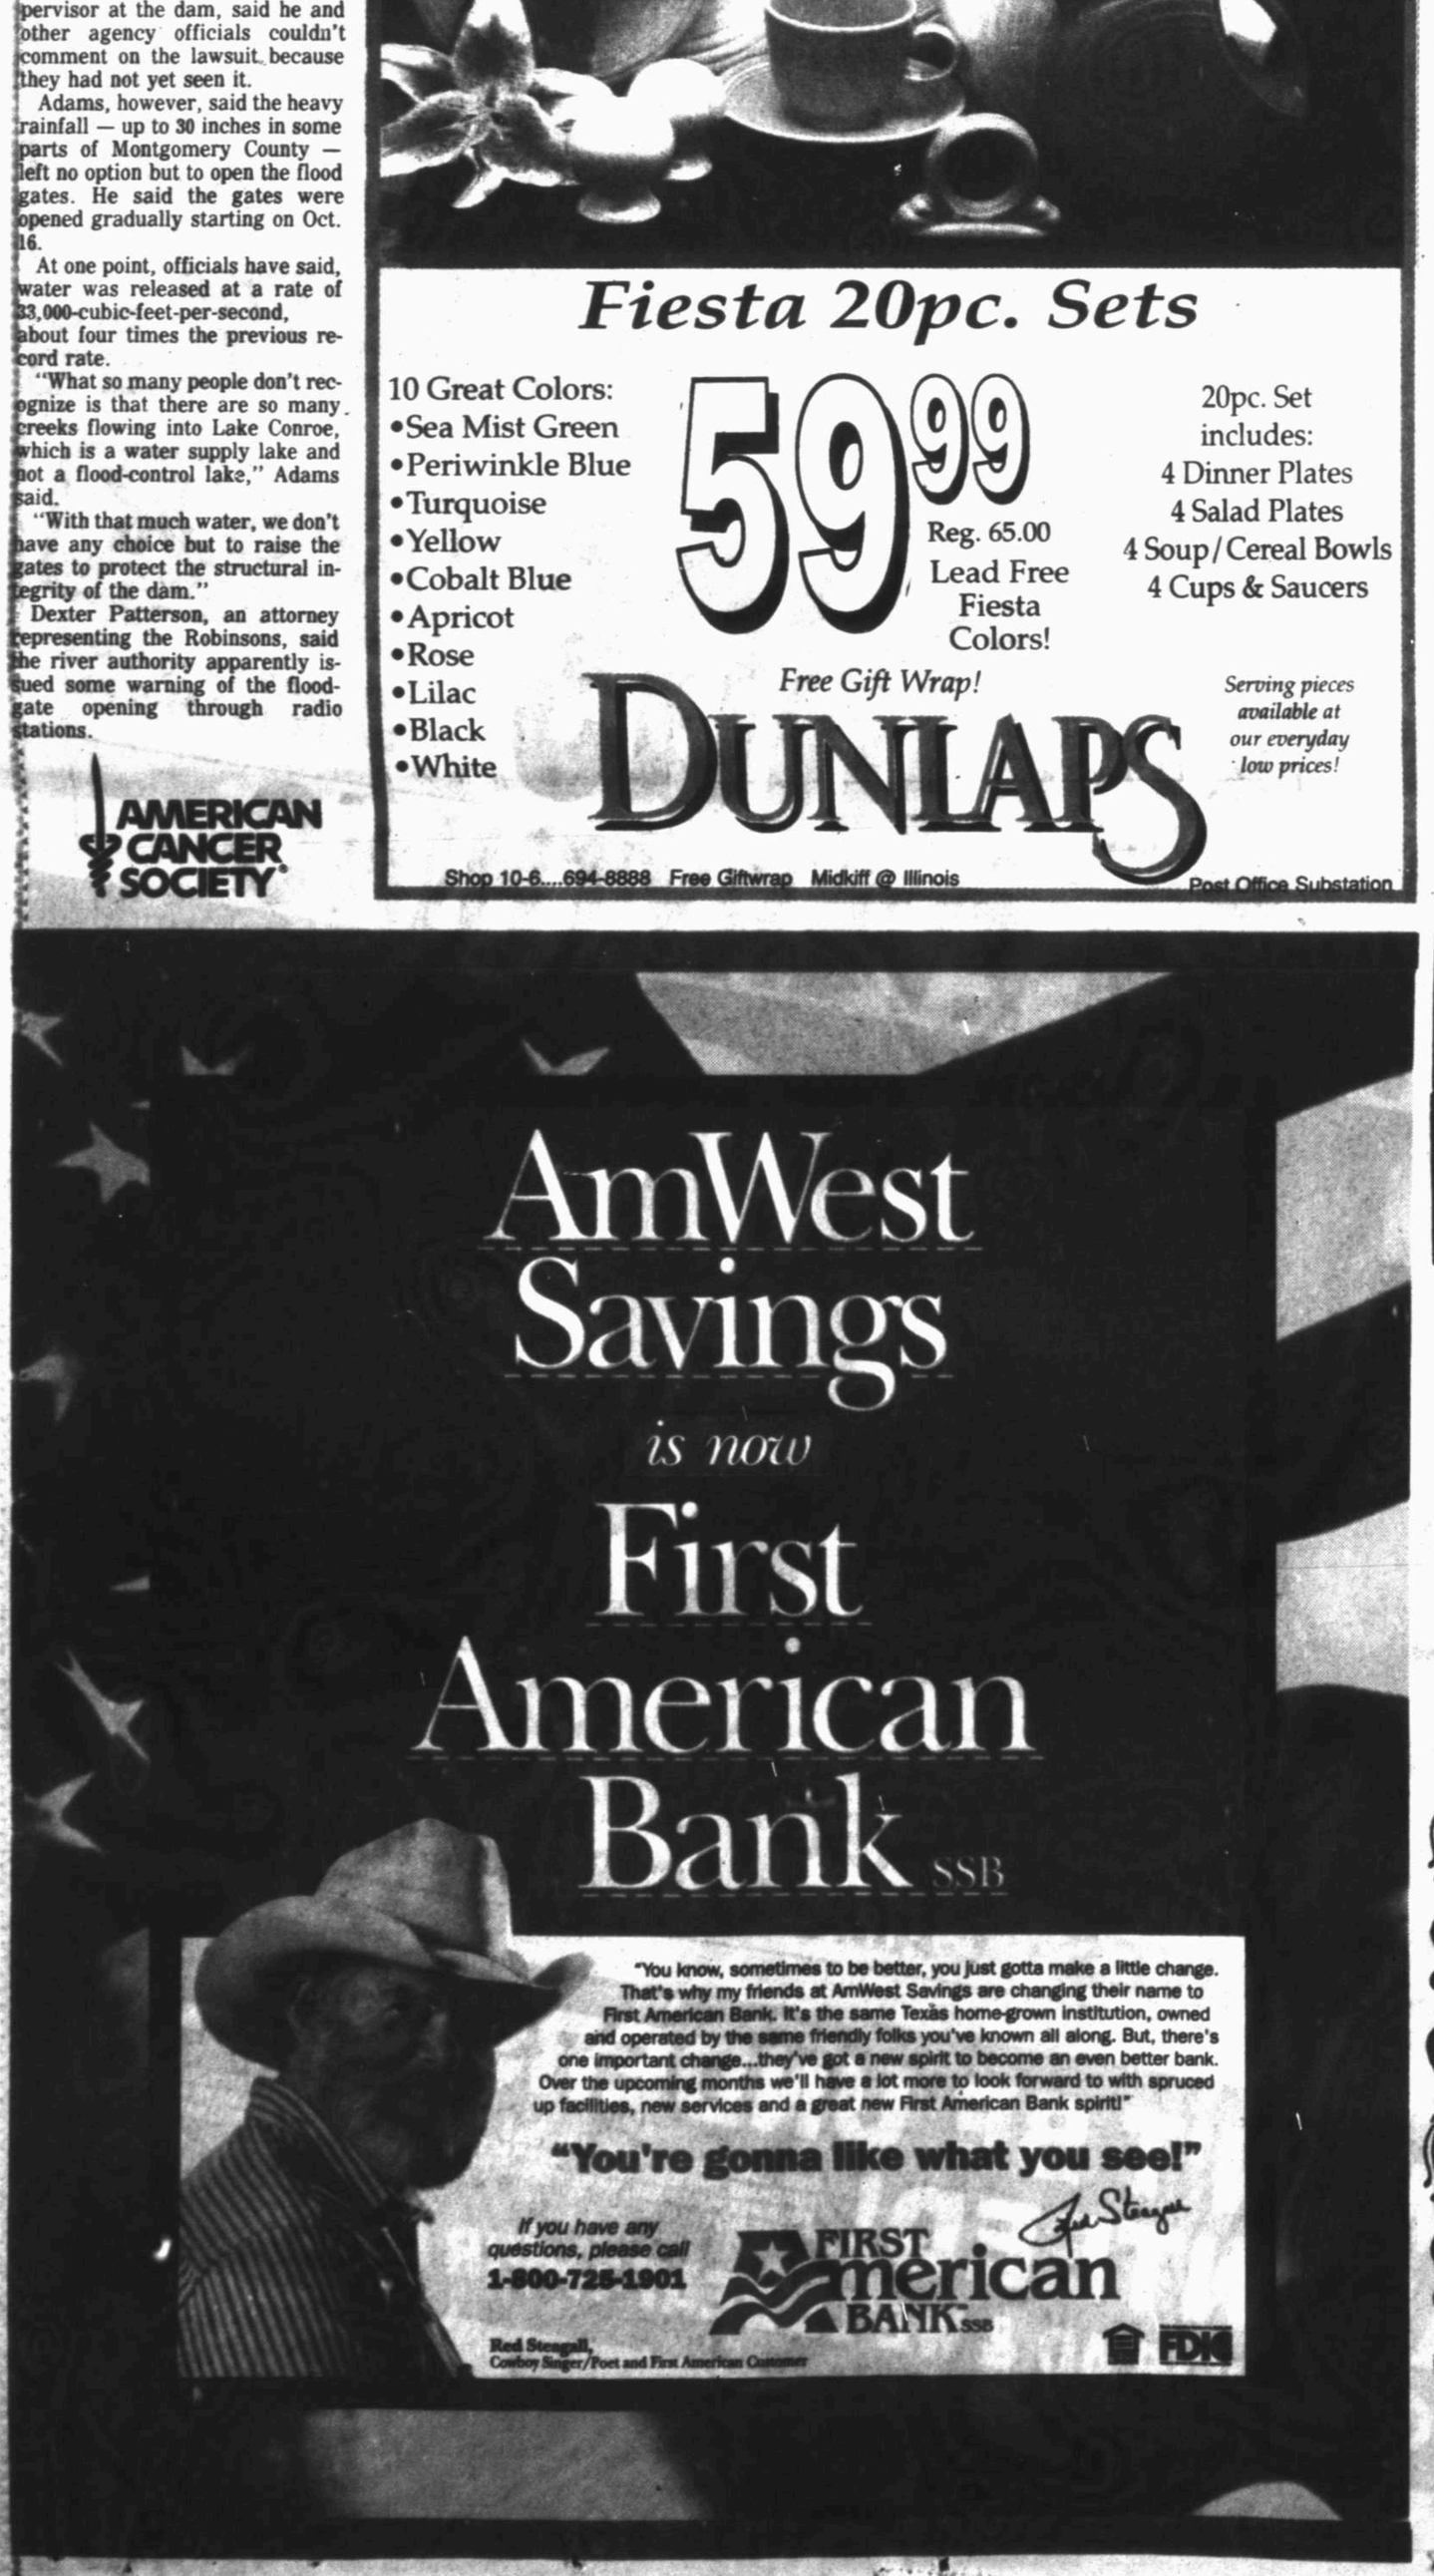

In their lawsuit, the Robinsons also ask state District Judge Lee Alworth to certify their suit as a class action. That could lead to thousands more property owners downstream from the dam seeking damages from the river authority.

And all through the store
Were sights, smells and sounds,
Like never before.
My gift list was a long one...
I approached it with dread!
Just thinking about it
Caused aches in my head!
Walking through SonSilks,
And all through the store...
Were wreaths, centerpieces
And swags galore!
Angels, wind socks-
Wind chimes, potpourri!
Jeep Collins jewelry
And candles to see!
To my surprise and complete delight
My list no longer seemed such a fright!
I checked off each name, one by one...
And before I knew it, my shopping was done!

Lee dusts Rangers 35-13

Victor Calzada/El Paso Times

Midland Lee running back Theo Macklin reaches across the goal line for his second touchdown of the game during Lee's 35-13 win over El Paso Riverside in the Class 5A Area Playoff game Saturday at Riverside Stadium.

■ Midland Lee continues District 4-5A's dominance over El Paso schools with 35-13 win.

By Terry Williamson
Sports Editor

EL PASO — With all the hype, with all the barb tossing between coaches and with another weekend of miserable playing conditions, Midland Lee's annual border patrol run against another El Paso team was much like it has always been.

Without an awesome performance, the Rebels handed El Paso Riverside a 35-13 area playoff loss at Riverside Stadium. Lee (7-3-1) advances to the region round of Sweet 16 while the Rangers (9-2-1) get to sit in the dust stirred up by this contest.

■ Playoff Results/3C

And after 1,200 miles of travel in two weeks, Lee finally gets to stay at home on Thanksgiving weekend, meeting Arlington Lamar on Saturday at 2 p.m. at Memorial Stadium.

Against Riverside, Lee jumped to a quick 14-0 lead fueled by good field position by electing to play defense at the start of the game and let Riverside fight a stiff 30-40 mph wind. The wind and sand got so bad at one point that the scenic vista of El Paso was completely lost as the mountain ranges seem to fad away in a cloud of dust. The weather was ugly and the game sometimes re-

Raiders blank Coogs

■ Texas Tech nears first Cotton Bowl berth in 56 years with 34-0 win over Houston.

By Kelley Shannon
Associated Press Writer

SAN ANTONIO — Their fans already were thinking Cotton Bowl, but the Red Raiders couldn't afford to ponder that prospect.

They can ponder it a little more now.

■ SWC Roundup/14C

Tech wins the Southwest Conference title and goes to Dallas for the Cotton Bowl with a victory over Texas Christian on Friday. If the Red Raiders lose to TCU, they still go to the Cotton Bowl if Baylor loses to Texas on Thanksgiving.

Byron Hanspard rushed for 109 yards and two touchdowns and Zebbie Lethridge passed for 186 yards and scored one touchdown as the Red Raiders (6-4, 4-2 SWC) shut out their first opponent since 1983.

Red Raiders coach Spike Dykes said the victory was a sweet one, especially in light of the Cotton Bowl pressure on the team.

"The kids did a good job considering what they hear all week. Their concentration was excellent. They have done a good job of keeping everything in perspective," Dykes said.

Texas Tech never has represented the Southwest Conference in the Cotton Bowl since entering the SWC in 1960. Texas Tech faced St. Mary's of California in the Cotton Bowl in 1939.

Midland tops Lee in Tall City treat

■ MHS guard Jamie Rand turns in a third-quarter scoring spree to lead the Lady Dawgs to their second-straight Tall City Tournament title.

By Amy Wolfenbarger

What a treat!

For those who ventured out in what turned out to be a drenching rain storm not typical of Midland, the match between Midland High and Midland Lee in the championship of the girls Tall City Tournament Saturday at Chap Center gave an exciting, spine-tingling preview of what these two teams can look forward to when District 4-5A play begins in mid-December.

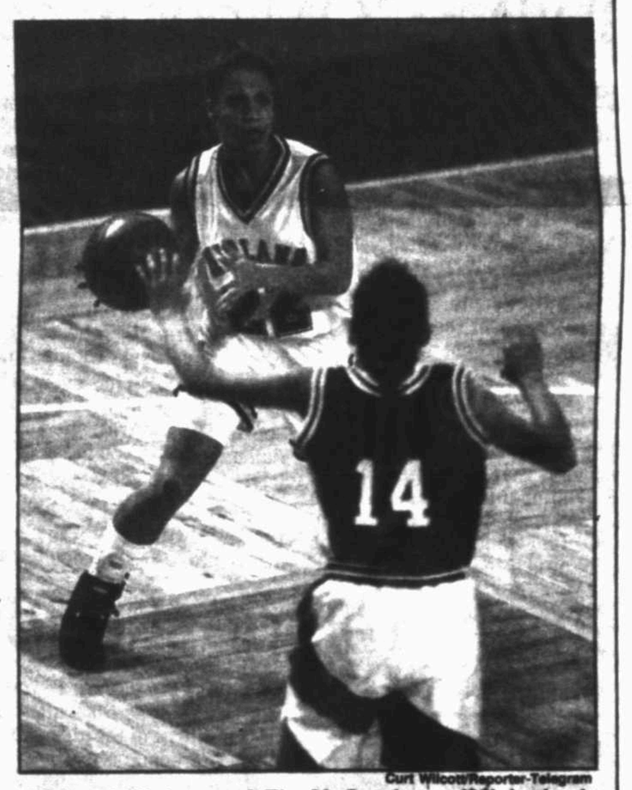

The outcome was the same as it has been in all Lady Dawg-Lady Rebel battles since 1993 — when MHS' Amy Alcala and Lee's Krissy Woodard became sophomore starters. A 71-56 MHS win gave the Lady Dawgs their second straight Tall City title.

But it was by far the most well-played game of the six staged on Saturday, the second day of the tourney. And it was arguably the best of the tournament, which was fitting for the championship. Only Lee's victory over powerful Lubbock Monterey on Friday compared.

But this time, instead of Alcala or Woodard playing the key role, it came down to "Money Time" — as in MHS guard Jamie "Money" Rand's clutch play in the third quarter — that gave the Lady Dawgs the spurt they needed to outdistance their cross-town rival Lady Rebels.

In the third, 5-6 senior Rand poured in 13 of her varsity career-high total 19 points to send the Lady Dawgs on a 12-5 run in the final 3:30 of the period to turn what was a tight

MHS bench wears down Uvalde

By Mike Butts
Staff Writer

Two games into the Midland High Bulldogs' basketball year and one thing is evident: few if any Bulldogs will get too familiar with the bench this season.

Bulldog coach Jack Stephenson used 14 players in the first period, one less than the 15 he used in the same quarter Thursday against Plainview, in Midland High's 87-74 win over Uvalde Saturday at the Midland High Gym. And even with the Coyotes (0-2) leading 36-30 at halftime, the Bulldog press and heavy substitution eroded Uvalde's chance for a win or even a close game.

"One thing that helps us is we can go 12 or 13 deep and most people can't," Stephenson said.

Midland High goes to 2-0 on the year and plays next at the San Antonio North Side Tournament Friday and Saturday.

Hospital settles with woman who claimed she was fondled by worker

HARLINGEN (AP) — A South Texas hospital has agreed to pay a woman $300,000 to settle a lawsuit in which she claimed a hospital employee fondled her while she was under sedation.

Valley Regional Medical Center of Brownsville also agreed to send the 55-year-old woman a letter, apologizing for the incident, and to implement a sexual molestation policy.

The hospital also agreed to allow women patients the option of having another woman in the room during private exams.

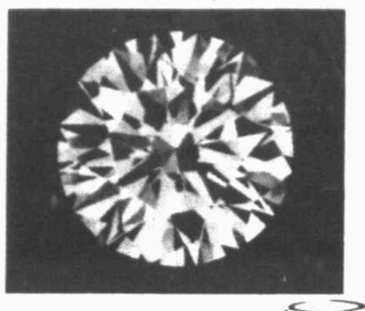

The settlement was reached late Friday in Brownsville as jurors deliberated on the woman's allegations in state district court. The seven-woman, five-man jury had been out for about four hours after a week of testimony.

"We're happy," said Tom Rhodes, the woman's attorney. "This is all we wanted from the beginning, is for them to change their policies."

Hospital administrators say Richard Belson, a 37-year-old student technician accused in the incident, was fired, but deny the allegations played a part in their decision, instead saying he was a bad employee.

The woman said Belson molested her on Aug. 11 while she was sedated and lying on a radiology table, waiting for an examination.

Since the incident, the woman said she has suffered anxiety attacks, hyperventilation and fears men, her lawyer said.

Ex-fugitive, health spa tycoon gets step closer to freedom

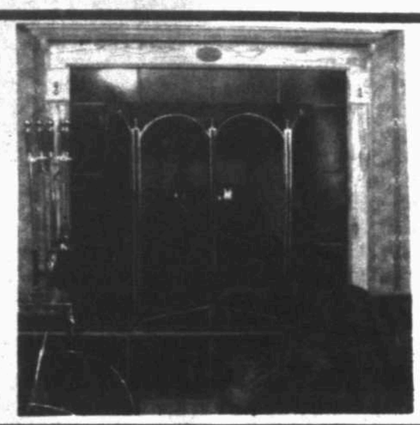

HOUSTON — A federal judge has ordered health spa founder Richard Minns' Irish passport returned so the former fugitive can leave the country after his legal troubles are settled.

The decision means Minns won't be detained while the Internal Revenue Service attempts to collect more than $670,000 in past-due taxes.

U.S. District Judge Lynn Hughes on Friday ordered Minns to make payment arrangements and post $100,000 bond against the amount he owes. The judge also ruled that the government must abide by a plea arrangement to return Minns' Irish passport.

"A person should not be deprived of liberty altogether for what is, after all, a debt," Hughes said.

The IRS filed a civil suit on Thursday to collect more than $772,000 in taxes plus interest and penalties.

'Governor for Day' honors officers of law enforcement

AUSTIN (AP) — State Sen. John Whitmire marked his one-day ceremonial reign as Texas governor Saturday by paying tribute to law enforcement officers and promising to continue efforts to get tough on criminals.

Whitmire, who heads the Senate Criminal Justice Committee, predicted passage in next year's legislative session of measures denying parole to those convicted of sexually assaulting a child and ensuring that able-bodied inmates work full-time in prison.

The Houston Democrat, who sponsored a massive 1993 rewrite of Texas' criminal laws, served as temporary governor in a long-standing tradition in which the governor and lieutenant governor both plan to be out of state on the same day.

That allows the Senate president pro tem, who is next in line of succession, to become governor for a day and invite friends and supporters to a Texas Capitol celebration to commemorate the occasion.

WORLD: Pupils celebrates other cultures

(From 1B)

"The children have been studying countries for awhile. Each grade level took a continent to study," said Scharbauer principal Mamie Williams.

This is the second year the school has celebrated International Week, she said.

Ms. Williams said foreign exchange students at local high schools came and spoke to the students about their native countries.

"The kids were amazed at how many languages the foreign exchange students speak," she said.

The elementary school pupils asked the exchange students everything from "What do you learn in school," to "do you have hot dogs in your country?"

The week culminated Friday with Scharbauer pupils performing a Chinese ribbon dance, an Israeli scarf dance, a Korean fan dance and a complicated Philippine dance involving jumping between bamboo poles that their peers tapped on the floor.

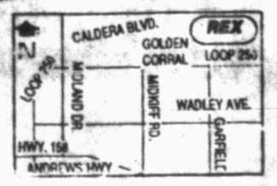

Some students greeted the crowd in Swahili, and special education pupils showed off words they had learned in Japanese.

"The teachers must really have done a lot of work teaching all of these dances and songs to the kids," said parent Leesa Johnson. "It's pretty impressive."

Ms. Williams said some students learned songs in seven languages. "Our fifth-graders have also served as ambassadors from countries," she said.

The principal said students not only learned about other countries, they learned that people have many similarities as well as differences.

"Our theme for the week came from (renown poet) Maya Angelou "we are more like my friends than we are unalike.' "

Couple sues river authority for flood damage

CONROE (AP) — A couple swamped by flood waters last month is suing the San Jacinto River Authority, alleging that officials failed to adequately warn residents of an impending release from swollen Lake Conroe.

Charles and Kelly Robinson claim the river authority is liable for flood damage to their home and livestock, which they say were deluged in about two hours during heavy rains last month.

"I don't care what anybody says — 30 inches of rain doesn't make the water come up that high that fast," Charles Robinson, 37, told the Houston Chronicle in Saturday editions.

The Robinsons' lawsuit says the river authority didn't issue adequate warnings when it began opening flood gates on the San Jacinto Dam, releasing water down the San Jacinto River toward the Houston Ship Channel.

Three days of torrential rains spawned flooding throughout Southeast Texas last month, killing 20 people and forcing more than 14,000 from their homes. More than 4,000 homes were damaged in Montgomery County, which is crossed by the San Jacinto.

Jim Adams, a river authority supervisor at the dam, said he and other agency officials couldn't comment on the lawsuit because they had not yet seen it.

Adams, however, said the heavy rainfall — up to 30 inches in some parts of Montgomery County — left no option but to open the flood gates. He said the gates were opened gradually starting on Oct. 16.

At one point, officials have said, water was released at a rate of 33,000-cubic-feet-per-second, about four times the previous record rate.

"What so many people don't recognize is that there are so many creeks flowing into Lake Conroe, which is a water supply lake and not a flood-control lake," Adams said.

"With that much water, we don't have any choice but to raise the gates to protect the structural integrity of the dam."

Dexter Patterson, an attorney representing the Robinsons, said the river authority apparently issued some warning of the floodgate opening through radio stations.

"Whatever warning they gave was totally inadequate. They knew for a couple of days the water level was rising and that more water was coming," Patterson said.

In their lawsuit, the Robinsons also ask state District Judge Lee Alworth to certify their suit as a class action. That could lead to thousands more property owners downstream from the dam seeking damages from the river authority.

'Twas the Holiday Season...

And all through the store
Were sights, smells and sounds,
Like never before.
My gift list was a long one...
I approached it with dread!
Just thinking about it
Walking through SonSilks,
And all through the store...
Were wreaths, centerpieces
And swags galore!
Angels, wind socks-
Wind chimes, potpourri!
Jeep Collins jewelry
And candles to see!
To my surprise and complete delight
My list no longer seemed such a fright!
I checked off each name, one by one...
And before I knew it, my shopping was done!
They'll charge it, they'll gift wrap it,
Their aim is to please.
And their helpful staff
Makes your shopping a breeze!

Lee dusts Rangers 35-13

Victor Calzada/El Paso Times

Midland Lee running back Theo Macklin reaches across the goal line for his second touchdown of the game during Lee's 35-13 win over El Paso Riverside in the Class 5A Area Playoff game Saturday at Riverside Stadium.

■ Midland Lee continues District 4-5A's dominance over El Paso schools with 35-13 win.

EL PASO — With all the hype, with all the barb tossing between coaches and with another weekend of miserable playing conditions, Midland Lee's annual border patrol run against another El Paso team was much like it has always been.

Without an awesome performance, the Rebels handed El Paso Riverside a 35-13 area playoff loss at Riverside Stadium. Lee (7-3-1) advances to the region round of Sweet 16 while the Rangers (9-2-1) get to sit in the dust stirred up by this contest.

And after 1,200 miles of travel in two weeks, Lee finally gets to stay at home on Thanksgiving weekend, meeting Arlington Lamar on Saturday at 2 p.m. at Memorial Stadium.

Against Riverside, Lee jumped to a quick 14-0 lead fueled by good field position by electing to play defense at the start of the game and let Riverside fight a stiff 30-40 mph wind. The wind and sand got so bad at one point that the scenic vista of El Paso was completely lost as the mountain ranges seem to fad away in a cloud of dust. The weather was ugly and the game sometimes re-

Raiders blank Coogs

■ Texas Tech nears first Cotton Bowl berth in 56 years with 34-0 win over Houston.

By Kelley Shannon
Associated Press Writer

SAN ANTONIO — Their fans already were thinking Cotton Bowl, but the Red Raiders couldn't afford to ponder that prospect.

They can ponder it a little more now.

■ SWC Roundup/14C

Tech wins the Southwest Conference title and goes to Dallas for the Cotton Bowl with a victory over Texas Christian on Friday. If the Red Raiders lose to TCU, they still go to the Cotton Bowl if Baylor loses to Texas on Thanksgiving.

Byron Hanspard rushed for 109 yards and two touchdowns and Zebbie Lethridge passed for 186 yards and scored one touchdown as the Red Raiders (6-4, 4-2 SWC) shut out their first opponent since 1983.

Red Raiders coach Spike Dykes said the victory was a sweet one, especially in light of the Cotton Bowl pressure on the team.

"The kids did a good job considering what they hear all week. Their concentration was excellent. They have done a good job of keeping everything in perspective," Dykes said.

Texas Tech never has represented the Southwest Conference in the Cotton Bowl since entering the SWC in 1960. Texas Tech faced St. Mary's of California in the Cotton Bowl in 1939.

Midland tops Lee in Tall City treat

■ MHS guard Jamie Rand turns in a third quarter scoring spree to lead the Lady Dawgs to their second-straight Tall City Tournament title.

By Amy Wolfenbarger

What a treat!

For those who ventured out in what turned out to be a drenching rain storm not typical of Midland, the match between Midland High and Midland Lee in the championship of the girls Tall City Tournament Saturday at Chap Center gave an exciting, spine-tingling preview of what these two teams can look forward to when District 4-5A play begins in mid-December.

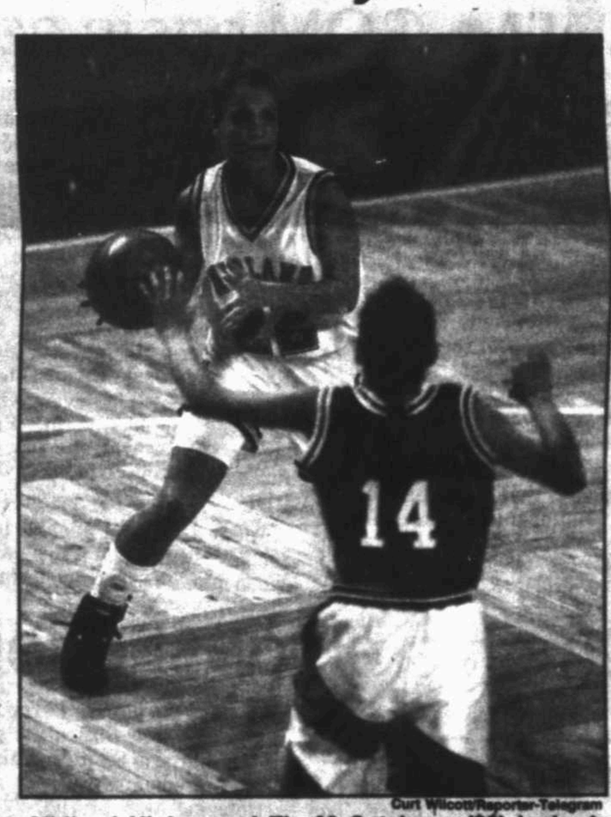

The outcome was the same as it has been in all Lady Dawg-Lady Rebel battles since 1993 — when MHS' Amy Alcala and Lee's Krissy Woodard became sophomore starters. A 71-56 MHS win gave the Lady Dawgs their second straight Tall City title.

But it was by far the most well-played game of the six staged on Saturday, the second day of the tourney. And it was arguably the best of the tournament, which was fitting for the championship. Only Lee's victory over powerful Lubbock Montery on Friday compared.

But this time, instead of Alcala or Woodard playing the key role, it came down to "Money Time" — as in MHS guard Jamie "Money" Rand's clutch play in the third quarter — that gave the Lady Dawgs the spurt they needed to outdistance their cross-town rival Lady Rebels.

In the third, 5-6 senior Rand poured in 13 of her varsity career-high total 19 points to send the Lady Dawgs on a 12-5 run in the final 3:30 of the period to turn what was a tight

MHS bench wears down Uvalde

By Mike Butts
Staff Writer

Two games into the Midland High Bulldogs' basketball year and one thing is evident: few if any Bulldogs will get too familiar with the bench this season.

Bulldog coach Jack Stephenson used 14 players in the first period, one less than the 15 he used in the same quarter Thursday against Plainview, in Midland High's 87-74 win over Uvalde Saturday at the Midland High Gym. And even with the Coyotes (0-2) leading 36-30 at halftime, the Bulldog press and heavy substitution eroded Uvalde's chance for a win or even a close game.

"One thing that helps us is we can go 12 or 13 deep and most people can't," Stephenson said.

Midland High goes to 2-0 on the year and plays next at the San Antonio North Side Tournament Friday and Saturday.

TALL: MHS repeats tournament championship with win over Lee contest for the first 21 minutes of the game into a 15-point MHS win.

"It's about time," Rand said of her 9-of-18 shooting for the game. "I haven't been shooting very well lately. But Coach (Jim Raughton) said when they (Lady Rebels) play a zone, somebody would be open to shoot from outside. The whole team went through a slump but we are finally getting back on track."

MHS improved to 4-0 for the season including a 47-35 semifinal win over El Paso Del Valle earlier Saturday. The Lady Dawgs handed Lee its first loss of the season to drop the Lady Rebs to 3-1.

"You know it's like last year (in Rand's key reserve role), it's Jamie "Money,"" Raughton said. "She came out to this tournament and she struggled some with her shots. But again, you can't quit shooting the basketball because you don't make it and your whole game is not based on just the offensive performance. But she can certainly make things easier on us when she hits some of those shots."

Rand knocked down all but 10 of MHS' points in the key third quarter as the Lady Dawgs outscored the Lady Rebs 23-10 to pull to a 53-40 edge. Rand hit the last four buckets of the third, including a putback off a long rebound to beat the buzzer.

"We were supposed to be playing defense," said Lee coach Elise Kail. "We just didn't have anybody step up and get in her (Rand's) face ... so she shot them, which was smart on her part."

Lee came out smoking in the first half behind point guard Claire Wright's NBA-range three-point goal which opened up scoring. Wright got another trey in the third to lead a balanced Lee scoring attack with 14 points. The Lady Rebs jumped out to a 9-4 lead and led 15-14 at halftime behind 13-of-24 shooting from the field.

MHS finally overcame horrendous 13-of-41 shooting in the first half to take a 30-27 halftime lead before putting it away in the third. The Lady Dawgs were led by Alcala's 13-of-23 shooting for 30 points and another school-record outing defensively with nine steals. Lee's 6-2 post Woodard scored 11 and pulled down eight rebounds but stayed on the bench for much of the game with foul trouble.

"We let them shoot what they wanted to," Kail said. "They (MHS) dictated to us what they were going to do instead of us dictating to them. But I'm not disappointed in the kids. It's a great start and we're going to use this as a stepping stone."

In the third place game, Lubbock Monterey jumped out to a 17-7 lead after the first quarter and pulled away from a sluggish 54-42 win over El Paso Del Valle. Pamela Spencer, a 6-2 post, totaled 19 to lead the Lady Plainsmen.

Andrews, one of only two non-Class 5A teams in the tournament, won the consolation trophy with two wins on Saturday. The Lady Mustangs defeated El Paso Austin 54-44 in the first game and topped El Paso Bowie 54-36 in the trophy game.

"This is the first three weeks since coming out of volleyball and we're just trying to get everybody in the right place and start executing," said Andrews coach Roger Goldsmith. "We came over here and won two ball games so we feel pretty good."

Greenwood, the only 3A team out of eight, also saw marked improvement. After losing two games on Friday, the Rangerettes defeated EP Austin 40-39 for fifth place. Reserve Candice Newman hit one each of two pair of free throws in the final seconds to tie the game at 39-39 and put Greenwood ahead 40-39.

"It feels good to win," said Greenwood coach Allan Wootan, whose squad improved to 1-3. "On Monday, she (Newman) sprained her ankle so we weren't even sure if she was going to play. She's not one of our better free throw shooters but she stepped up and made them when she had to."

MHS: Depth aids in 'Dog win over Uvalde

(From 1C)

"They have 10 or 11 kids over there that can wear you down," Uvalde coach Newton Grimes said of the Bulldogs. "We took advantage of that with some of their combinations in the first half. But in the long run he (Stephenson) got what he wanted out of it."

The Coyotes rode four three-pointers and some success against the Midland High press for their first half advantage. But the Bulldogs increased there scoring in the third and fourth periods after getting only 15 points in quarters one and two.

"I think in the first half had we been able to shoot the ball the game would have been over then," Stephenson said. "(But) when our guys play it's only a matter of time before good things happen."

The Bulldogs tied the score three times in the third quarter before taking the lead for good when Terry Johnson's free throw made it 46-45. Jumon Hailey, who led all scorers with 25 points, had nine in the quarter as the Bulldogs outscored Uvalde 24-12.

"I knew they could shot the three's," Stephenson said. "(But) we were behind Midland Lee by 13 last year and came back and won. These guys have been playing basketball all their lives and they know that a half is just a half. When we're behind at the half sometimes I don't even care."

Stephenson substituted a little less freely in the third period.

"Some of our young kids are very unseasoned and it was evident against the press," Grimes said. "We played yesterday (a 85-72 loss to Plainview) and turned around and played somebody that soon. I don't know if we're in that kind of shape to play that kind of style."

Uvalde took their halftime lead on Gabe Castillo's three-pointer with 22 seconds left in the second period. But Midland High's third quarter gave them a 54-48 lead after three.

Ten Bulldogs scored in the game. Jonathan Hopkins had 11 of his 14 points in the fourth period. And guard Lavius Taylor had eight of his 13 in the last frame.

Uvalde was led by J.D. Trevino's 18 points with 14 from Nulfo Patino.

SWIM: COM hosts national meets

(From 1C)

"It took six years of planning for the junior nationals to become a reality," said COM coach Brad Swendig. "Although we hope to host several national events here, we built the pool specifically with the junior nationals in mind.

"The two events are exactly what we designed the pool for. A lot of people thought we wouldn't attract both those meets in the same year, same facility. I don't think that has ever been done."

What makes the feat more impressive is that these are the first U.S. National-level meets to be held and hosted by a U.S. swimming club where the facility is wholly owned by that club.

The junior national swimming event expects over 900 swimmers from 22 states to compete and will be a stepping stone for those athletes to go to the 1996 Olympics in Sydney, Australia.

Nineteen former junior national champions competed in the 1992 Olympics for the United States. Among those to compete were: Pablo Morales, Tom Jager, Summer Sanders, Jill Johnson, Megan Kleine and Jenny Thompson.

The Senior Diving event will be televised nationally by Prime Sports (HSE), with the top eight finishers moving on to the Olympic trials.

Today's event brings together the best swimmers in the state divided into North and South squads.

Twelve swimmers from the COM team will be in the water including Greg Brink, Stephanie Brown, Susie Carnett, Amber Goodwin, Clint Rand, Gregg and Scott Strauss and Monica Stroman.

It marks the first time this statewide event has been held west of Interstate-35.

"It is an important meet from the standpoint that it will give the swimmers a chance to swim against really good competition," Swendig said. "It should be fun, but you have to take it seriously or you have a great chance of getting creamed."

The top three swimmers in each event qualified in a meet earlier this fall for the all-star team..

Smith's biggest enemies off field

N.Y. Times News Service

IRVING — In Emmitt Smith's fertile mind, they are waiting for him on every street corner, like convenience stores or fire hydrants, except that instead of squirting out Big Gulps or water, they spit venom.

They are malevolent. They are pillagers. They exist only to bedevil him, to doubt him, to jar him from his position, to remove his head from his shoulders, to remove him from the game.

They are not Rickey Jackson and Ken Harvey and Reggie White and Derrick Thomas and Bruce Smith and Wilber Marshall. Those enemies, this story's protagonist can handle.

"It's my critics," says Smith. "They're the ones who are out to get me. They're the ones who bother me. I hate 'em."

Is Emmitt Smith paranoid? Or, finally, do his critics actually have something to sink their fangs into?

It would seem no one has less justification to suffer from the mental ailment of paranoia than Smith, who, until developments in recent weeks, could comfortably be called the National Football League's best running back.

So it could be that the man with the imaginative running style also uses that imagination to create "critics." It could be that his vision of himself as a "good guy" requires the conjuring of bad guys in black hats. It could be that Smith visualizes obstacles where there are none, simply because he believes a man needs hurdles to leap over.

"Oh, they are out there," Smith says, before acknowledging that all of this might be a self-orchestrated psychological game. "At least that's what I'm going to keep telling myself."

But now, unlike in past years, there really are two obstacles, one flesh-and-blood, the other facts

In 1994, the elusive Barry Sanders has been as difficult to grasp as the source of Smith's statistical drop in production.

Entering this season, in four years as a professional football player, Smith had earned four consecutive selections to the Pro Bowl. Four years, three consecutive rushing titles. Four years, two consecutive Super Bowl championships. Four years, capped by a 1993 season during which he missed the opening two weeks (and two Cowboys defeats) while embroiled in a bitter contract dispute, stormed to the rushing title anyway, captured the league's most valuable player award, and earned a bookend MVP trophy with a 132-yard effort in January's 30-13 victory against the Buffalo Bills in Super Bowl XXVIII.

In the same time span America gives its elected officials to do nothing, Emmitt J. Smith III had accomplished about everything his occupation allows.

But suddenly, Smith allows himself to hear questions. Lots of 'em.

What about the tired bugaboo, his weight-room habits? Why is his per-carry average at 4.0 yards, almost 1 1/2 yards lower than it was in 1993? Why do the San Francisco 49ers, who downed the Cowboys last week, feel justified in doubting his toughness? Has his No.2 position in the rushing rankings caused him to run with less hunger? Can he use today's game at Texas Stadium against the struggling Washington Redskins to propel himself back into the NFL rushing race?

"I think I can," says Smith. "I've always liked to challenge myself. I've always liked to prove myself. And when someone says I can't do something, I eat that up. I love it. Because in the end, they're always wrong. Always."

Well, maybe not this time, not when it comes to the Sanders-vs.-Smith race. Smith has six games to make up the 230-yard gap that separates him (at 989 yards) from the Lions' Sanders (at 1,319).

If Sanders maintains his per-game average of 132 yards, he'll finish with 2,112, surpassing Eric Dickerson's NFL-record total of 2,105 yards with the '84 Rams. That would require Smith to average an astronomical 187 yards per game to keep pace.

Even if Sanders averages just 100 yards per game the rest of the way, giving him 1,919, Smith would need 155 yards per game to keep pace.

"He's aware of all that," says teammate and buddy Michael Irvin. "But believe me, the one way to help Emmitt back into the race is to tell him he's out of it."

Baylor talks to coach about hoop vacancy

AMES, Iowa (AP) — Former Iowa State basketball coach Johnny Orr says if the price is right, he'll be bound for Baylor.

Orr, who met with Baylor officials for three hours in Dallas on Friday, said there's a good chance he'll become the school's next coach, if some details can be worked out.

"I was really impressed with them," Orr said Friday after returning to Ames. "What made me feel good is that they really made me feel wanted. It reminded me of when I first came to Iowa State."

Orr, 67, retired as ISU's coach in April.

Baylor is looking for a coach to replace Darrel Johnson, who was fired Wednesday after the school concluded his program had violated NCAA rules during his two-year tenure. The school would like to find a veteran coach to take the job on an interim basis.

Baylor opens the season at home this Friday against Northwestern Louisiana.

"If things sound 99 percent right, I'll fly there Tuesday and I won't be coming back," Orr said. "I'd take over the team. We'd practice Wednesday and Thursday and play on Friday. I'll go back if we get a couple of things straightened out."

Orr met Friday with Baylor vice president James Netherton, Athletic Director Dick Ellis and faculty athletic adviser David Guinn.

"We think a lot of him," Netherton said. "We're both interested in pursing this further and were where it leads."

Among the school's self-imposed penalties were the loss of five scholarships during two seasons and the loss of one assistant coach. Orr is requesting that he be allowed to bring one assistant with him.

Orr said Thursday that he would be interested in job for one season, but he indicated Friday that two seasons is a possibility.

"It would be hard from them to pay me any amount of money if I'm just there until March," Orr said. "So one of the questions is whether I'm going to do this four months or four months and another year."

Orr didn't indicate how much was asking for His package in his last season at Iowa State exceeded $300,000.

"The money thing is a matter of pride with me," Orr said. "I have money. I didn't lie to them. I don't have to work another day of my life if I don't want to. But as a matter of pride, I'd want to be one of the better paid coaches in the country."

Olajuwon leads Rockets to 9-0

Associated Press

DENVER — Hakeem Olajuwon scored 26 points and Sam Cassell came off the bench to score a season-high 22 as the Houston Rockets remained unbeaten with a 109-101 victory over the Denver Nuggets on Saturday night.

It was the sixth straight road victory and ninth overall for the Midwest Division leaders and defending NBA champions.

Reggie Williams scored 26 points for the Nuggets, who lost for the second straight game.

Denver was only the second opponent to score over 100 points against the Rockets.

Williams' layup with 45 seconds remaining in the third quarter gave Denver its final lead at 80-79.

Cassell answered with a 3-pointer and Vernon Maxwell followed with another 3-pointer to give Houston an 85-82 lead after the third quarter.

Maxwell finished with 16 points and three 3-pointers in 10 attempts. He has attempted 60 3-pointers this season. His final 3-pointer with 2:35 remaining gave Houston its biggest lead, 105-94.

Mahmoud Abdul-Rauf came off the bench in the first quarter as the Nuggets led 26-20. Olajuwon had eight for the Rockets, who trailed for only the second time this year after a quarter.

Cassell's 12 points and and eight from Olajuwon kept Houston close in the second quarter. Williams scored 13 points including a pair of free throws in the final seconds of the second quarter as the Nuggets maintained a 56-52 advantage.

Williams moved into second place on Denver all-time 3-point list with 6:24 remaining in the second quarter when he hit his 218th career 3-pointer.

Spurs 109, Timberwolves 101

MINNEAPOLIS — Chuck Person scored 23 points against his former team, and Avery Johnson had 16 points and 15 assists as San Antonio beat Minnesota.

Johnson made all seven of his field-goal attempts, and David Robinson had 20 points and 10 rebounds as the Spurs snapped a two-game losing streak.

Christian Laettner scored 22 points to lead the Wolves, who lost their ninth straight at home dating back to last season.

Person, who signed as a free agent with the Spurs in the offseason, went 9-for-14 from the floor, including 4-for-8 from 3-point range.

■ NBA Roundup

Warriors 119, Jazz 115

OAKLAND, Calif. — Latrell Sprewell scored a season-high 39 points, making 17 of 18 free throws, as Golden State beat Utah Jazz for its seventh victory in eight games.

Tom Gugliotta, acquired Thursday from Washington along with three first-round picks in exchange for Chris Webber, was greeted by a standing ovation and "Welcome Tom" signs in his Warriors debut. He got into foul trouble early and had just 3 points and five rebounds in 21 minutes.

Bulls 111, Mavericks 85

DALLAS — Scottie Pippen scored 19 of his 36 points in the third quarter, and Chicago used a 16-0 run after halftime to defeat Dallas.

Pippen was 7-for-11 from the floor and hit three 3-pointers as the Bulls outscored Dallas 34-15 in the third quarter to build on a 10-point halftime lead.

The victory was the 300th for Chicago coach Phil Jackson (300-119), and the seventh straight for the Bulls at Reunion Arena.

Pippen added 14 rebounds and helped contain Mavericks top scorer Jamal Mashburn, who poured in a club-record 50 points last Saturday as the Mavericks beat the Bulls 124-120 in overtime at the United Center.

Dallas, which had won four of its first six games after collecting only 24 victories over the last two seasons, suffered through by far its poorest performance of the season.

Celtics 103, Bullets 102

LANDOVER, Md. — Dee Brown crashed Chris Webber's coming-out party with the Washington Bullets, scoring 22 points and the game-winning free throws with 1.6 seconds left to give Boston a victory.

Webber, obtained Thursday in a blockbuster trade with Golden State, had 9 points and nine rebounds in his Bullets' debut. But he missed nine of 13 shots, including a tip-in that would have given Washington a three-point lead with 20 seconds left.

Derek Strong then made a layup to put Boston up by a point, and Calbert Cheaney's jumper gave Washington the lead with 3 seconds to go. Scott Skiles then fouled Brown, who made both free throws.

SuperSonics 120, Bucks 96

MILWAUKEE — Gary Payton scored 18 of his season-high 25 points in the first half as Seattle snapped a three-game losing streak with a victory over Milwaukee.

Sam Perkins had 18 points and Shawn Kemp 17 for the SuperSonics, who had six players score in double figures. The Bucks, who had won two straight, were led by Lee Mayberry's career-high 22 points, and Johnny Newman and Glenn Robinson, the NBA's No. 1 draft choice, who both scored 17.

Knicks 92, Hawks 79

NEW YORK — Charles Smith made up for the absence of injured Patrick Ewing with 24 points and New York held Atlanta scoreless for almost four minutes down the stretch.

With leading scorer Ewing on the sidelines with a sore right knee, the Knicks had a 26-point first-half lead cut to eight at the end of the third quarter, but their defense in the fourth quarter prevented a Hawks comeback.

Herb Williams, starting in place of Ewing, had 16 points and eight rebounds, and Charles Oakley added 11 points and 15 rebounds.

The Hawks cut New York's lead to 85-74 with 6:11 to play on a basket by Andrew Lang but didn't score again until he hit two free throws with 2:36 remaining. By then, the Knicks's lead was 91-76.

Ewing, who underwent arthroscopic surgery on the knee in July and missed all of the preseason, missed only his eighth regular-season game since the 1986-87 season. His right knee has caused him to sit out three of the games.

Pacers 102, Hornets 89

CHARLOTTE, N.C. — Derrick McKey scored 19 points, and Indiana continued to play well at the Coliseum, beating Charlotte Hornets.

The victory was Indiana's fifth in its last six games at the Coliseum. The Pacers also have beaten the Hornets in 18 of 26 lifetime meetings.

Indiana easily outplayed Charlotte in virtually every aspect. The Pacers outshot the Hornets .471-.432, outrebounded them 48-40 and committed just 13 turnovers to 20 by Charlotte.

All 11 Pacers who played scored, and six were in double figures. Rik Smits had 16 points, and Dale Davis and Antonio Davis 14 apiece.

Stanford rolls over Purdue in women's preseason tilt

JACKSON, Tenn. — Two successive 3-pointers by Kate Paye broke a 41-41 tie and led fifth-ranked Stanford a 62-52 victory over No. 2 Purdue in the State Farm Hall of Fame Tip-Off Classic on Saturday.

Purdue (0-1) fought back from 14-0 Stanford (1-0) run to close the lead to 32-24 at the halftime. The Big Ten team tied the score twice in the second half, 39-39 on a Melina Griffin layup at 11:42 and 41-41 on two free throws by Danielle McCulley with 9:31 left.

After Paye's two 3-pointers at 9:17 and 7:33, Purdue never got closer than four points.

Anita Kaplan led Stanford with 22 points, with Kate Starbird and Paye each scoring 12. Jannon Roland led Purdue with 15 points and Stacy Lovelace had 11.

REBELS: Lee returns home

sembled the surroundings.

Quarterback Dedrick Adams gave Lee a quick lead with a 30-yard TD run and then sophomore John Norman intercepted a pass and returned it to the Ranger 36 where Adams nailed Antwan Alexander with a 26-yard pass to set up Theo Macklin's one-yard TD run.

That made it 14-0 and enough for the win, but there were brief scary moments. Like when Riverside responded in the first half for an 88-yard drive that saw QB Mike Herrera hit John Vasquez with a four-yard TD strike to narrow the margin 14-7. Riveride also got another penetration to tie the Rebels in that area and led in first downs 10-5 at the half, but not on the scoreboard.

"We started off with some mental mistakes," said Lee linebacker B.J. Honeyman. "They lined up in things we expected, but they run a lot of different things. We did a better job in the second half, but we're going to have to pick it up another level next week."

The Lee offense took over in the second half, scoring with big play regularity, looking much like the Rebels of old. Fullback Theo Macklin, who entered the game with a strained hamstring, led all rushers with 102 yards and three touchdowns. And Melvin Dunson, who had missed six games and seven weeks, returned with 74 yards rushing on only five carries and had a 54-yard TD run called back. Now that was the offense Lee was waiting to see happen.

"The offense looked good," said Lee coach Earl Miller. "When you add another back with some speed, it helps. The offense did what it was supposed to do, but the defense is going to have to stop the stuff we have worked on. Things aren't going to get any easier from here."

Macklin, too, was glad to see the offense arrive.

"This was a lot of fun," Macklin said. "I'm glad Melvin is back. It's going to make us all better. The line did a great job."

Offensive lineman Luis Araujo said, "We're not doing anything different with Dunson in there. We block and they find the holes."

Macklin had a huge 61-yard run to aid an 80-yard TD drive to open the third period and Dunson's 46-yard run and Macklin's 21-yard rip was a touchdown producer on the next drive for a 28-7 lead. Game, set, match.

"One thing about this game," Dunson said. "It let me know that I'm not in as good as shape as I thought I was. I was pooped after that run they called back," Dunson said. "I'll be in much better shape by next weekend."

Riverside coach Tom Work said, "Obviousley, Lee is a better team with Dunson in there, and we are a different team with (William) Buffington out of the game."

Buffington missed much of the second half after suffering what was said to be a concussion. He returned to the game, but in the fourth quarter. Lee held the 1,000-yard rusher to only 23 yards, but he caught six passes for 100 yards.

Riverside quarterback Herrera was suffering from an injured nerve in his throwing arm. He still had 160 yards passing, but completed only 12 of 32 attempts and had two passes picked off.

Actions of the week weren't forgotten. Riverside coach Work had complained to the print media this week about Lee's Miller not allowing an exchange of game film. When the Lee band played a tribute to Miller by spelling out "E-A-R-L", the Riverside crowd booed. Also, officials weren't going to let the Lee band even march after a 600-mile trip. That problem was solved, too, but the Lee band did march last.

How good it must be to be coming home with a win in a hostile environment. Hostile in more ways than one. And they say it only gets worse from here.

MOJO: Permian uses wind to advantage

(From 1C)

But the Panthers buried the Thunderbirds at their own end after a punt by Jeff Dinger. And Justin Johns returned a Jody Nalley fumble five yards for a 7-0 Permian score.

Later in the third quarter Dinger hit Jeremy Martin with a 41-yard touchdown pass for the only other TD of the game. The pass was set up when Permian failed to convert on a fourth down at the Coronado 9-yard line and then held the Thunderbirds. The pass came on the first play after Coronado punted from deep in their territory.

L.C. Ward was Permian's leading rusher with only 49 yards.

Coronado had a chance to score in the third quarter when they recovered a fumbled punt at the Permian 9-yard line. A personal foul gave Permian a second-and-goal at the 24. Mike Nichols knocked a pass down on the next play and intercepted a pass on fourth down, returning it to the 45-yard line.

Permian had the only penetration in the game at halftime with the score tied at 0-0.

LCU captures cross country title

NAIA Cross Country

KENOSHA, Wis. (AP) — Simeon Sawe and Julius Randich finished 12 seconds apart to take first and second places and lead Lubbock Christian to the NAIA men's cross country championship Saturday.

Lubbock Christian took four of the top six places on the way to totaling only 21 points, compared with 120 for runnerup Hillsdale, Mich., 148 for Malone, Ohio, 170 for Azusa Pacific and 174 for Simon Fraser.

The winning team total tied the NAIA record set by Adams State, Colo., in 1988.

Sawe covered the 8-kilometer course in 23 minutes, 42 seconds. Lubbock's Levis Anyega was fourth and Peter Tanui sixth.

In the women's meet, Cari Rampersad of Simon Fraser won in 17:51 over 5 kilometers, edging Rosa Ibarra of Wayland Baptist by two seconds.

Tech linebacker earns All-America

WACO (AP) — Running backs Rashaan Salaam of Colorado and Ki-Jana Carter of Penn State headline the American Football Coaches Association All-America team announced Saturday.

Texas Tech junior linebacker Zac Thomas, who leads his team with over 100 tackles this season, was named to the first-team defense.

Salaam, the nation's leading rusher, and Carter, averaging 7.6 yards per carry, were joined in the backfield by Georgia's Eric Zeier, the national leader in total offense and one of only three quarterbacks to pass for more than 11,000 yards in his career.

On defense, Florida State lineman Derrick Brooks and Illinois linebacker Dana Howard were selected for the second year in a row. The only repeater on offense was lineman Korey Stringer of Ohio State.

The receivers are Michael Westbrook of Colorado, Jack Jackson of Florida and tight end Kyle Brady of Penn State. Joining Stringer on the offensive line are center Corey Raymer of Wisconsin, Zach Wiegert of Nebraska, Tony Boselli of Southern California and Reuben Brown of Pittsburgh. The kicker is Michael Proctor of Alabama.

Agassi loses cool, match to Sampras

Associated Press

FRANKFURT, Germany — Once he lost his cool, Andre Agassi lost the match.

Tennis Roundup

Top-ranked Pete Sampras survived a tough challenge from the second-ranked Agassi to win 4-6, 7-6 (7-5) 6-3 Saturday and set up a match against Boris Becker in Sunday's final of the IBM-ATP Tour World Championship.

Becker also fell behind, before rallying for a 6-7 (5-7), 6-4, 6-1 victory over Sergi Bruguera.

Both Sampras and Becker have the chance to become the first to win two titles since the inception of the tour championship in 1990. Sampras won in 1991, Becker in 1992.

Becker is undefeated in this tournament and will collect $1.24 million if he wins. Sampras lost to Becker in round-robin play and will get $1.16 million if he wins.

"It's a rare occasion that you have to beat the No. 1 twice in a week to win a tournament," said Becker, who also beat Sampras last month at Stockholm.

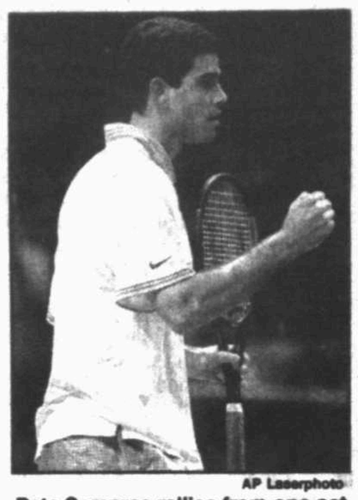

The $3 million tournament is limited to the top eight players in the world.

Slims Championship

NEW YORK — Gabriela Sabatini, who hasn't won a tournament in 2½ years, beat an injury plagued Kimiko Date 4-6, 6-0, 6-3 Saturday to join Lindsay Davenport in the title match at the Virginia Slims Championships.

Davenport earlier qualified for Sunday's best-of-5-sets final by defeating Mary Pierce 6-3, 6-2.

Sabatini, who won this season-ending title in 1988 but has seen her ranking slip this year to ninth in the world, began this week by sending Martina Navratilova into early retirement. Date was much tougher to beat.

AP Laserphoto

Pete Sampras rallies from one set down to upend Andre Agassi.

The No. 8 seed from Japan refused to allow a strained quad muscle in her right leg hamper her game, which is running down everything and forcing her opponent to hit at least one more shot. While Date doesn't have a power game, per se, her groundstrokes are struck flat, deep and precise.

While that was enough to eliminate Wimbledon champion Conchita Martinez in the quarterfinals, Sabatini had enough weapons to combat Date's skills and offer some problems of her own.

In what was the most popular win of the week, as far as the Madison Square Garden crowd was concerned, Sabatini again established herself as one of the world's top players.

The 18-year-old Davenport needed exactly one hour to win her semifinal match in this, her debut in the $3.5 million, season-ending tournament.

Auburn rallies late, but 'Bama is 'state champ'

Associated Press

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. — Alabama won its state championship Saturday with a thrilling win over Auburn. With two more wins, the Crimson Tide also could make a strong claim for the national championship.

Jay Barker threw two long touchdown passes, Sherman Williams ran for 164 yards and one score and Alabama withstood a furious Auburn rally for a 21-14 victory in a battle of unbeaten archrivals.

The victory kept fourth-ranked Alabama (11-0, 8-0 Southeastern Conference) in the hunt for the national title, ended No. 6 Auburn's 21-game unbeaten streak and gave Terry Bowden his first loss in two seasons as the Tigers' coach.

Auburn (9-1-1, 6-1-1), which trailed 21-0 at halftime, pulled to 21-14 on a pair of 1-yard sneaks by quarterback Patrick Nix. But a last-ditch drive by the Tigers ended when Frank Sanders was stopped inches short on a fourth-down reception with 31 seconds left.

No. 2 Penn St. 45, Northwestern 17

STATE COLLEGE, Pa. — Ki-Jana Carter scored three touchdowns and Penn State converted four turnovers into 28 points.

In the first half, Northwestern (3-7-1, 2-6 Big Ten) outgained the Nittany Lions (10-0, 7-0) by 65 yards and controlled the ball for all but 5½ minutes, yet trailed 38-3.

Nortwestern was able to drive on Penn State's banged-up defense despite the loss of the school's career rushing leader, Dennis Lundy, who was suspended for an unspecified violation of team rules.

Lundy's replacement, Darnell Autry, carried the offensive load, running for 171 yards on 39 carries.

No. 3 Florida 24, Vanderbilt 7

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Freshman Fred Taylor rushed 16 times for 140 yards and scored two touchdowns as Florida went to the ground for a victory over Vanderbilt.

Vanderbilt (5-5, 2-5 Southeastern Conference) sacked Danny Wuerffel four times and held Florida (9-1, 7-1) to 221 yards passing and it lowest point production this season. Florida previously beat Tennessee 31-0 in September.

So the Gators turned to the run in the third quarter, letting Taylor carry seven times in an eight-play, 64-yard drive that he capped with a 12-yard run that put Florida up 24-7 with 3:02 left.

No. 5 Miami 38, Temple 14

PHILADELPHIA — James Stewart, Alfred Shipman and Larry Jones combined for 234 rushing yards and four touchdowns as Miami overcame a slow start and rolled over Temple.

The victory clinched the Big East Football Conference title for the Hurricanes (9-1, 6-0 Big East).

Temple (2-9, 0-7) finished its season with its eighth straight loss and 25th straight conference loss. The Owls did become the only Big East team to score two touchdowns in a game against Miami this season.

No. 7 Colorado 41, Iowa St. 20

BOULDER, Colo. — Rashaan Salaam became major-college football's fourth 2,000-yard rusher as Colorado beat Iowa State, but lost its coach when Bill McCartney abruptly announced his resignation.

McCartney made the announcement moments after his team generated 576 total yards and set several records in downing the winless Cyclones.

No. 8 Florida St. 34, No. 25 N. Carolina St. 3

RALEIGH, N.C. — Eighth-ranked Florida State completed its third unbeaten run through the Atlantic Coast Conference, using two touchdowns by Rock Preston to run up a win over No. 25 North Carolina State.

Danny Kanell also tossed two touchdown passes for the Seminoles (9-1, 8-0 ACC). Florida State stretched its record winning streak in the conference to 24 games and wrapped up another championship to guarantee one more major bowl bid.

No. 10 Colorado St. 44, Fresno St. 42

FRESNO, Calif. — E.J. Watson ran for three touchdowns as No. 10 Colorado State overcame an early 21-point deficit to clinch the WAC title and a Holiday Bowl berth with a defeat of Fresno State.

No. 11 Kansas State 73, Oklahoma State 6

MANHATTAN, Kan. — Leon Edwards scored two touchdowns in a driving rain as Kansas State beat Oklahoma State, setting a season attendance record and putting up its best Big Eight record in 24 years.

The Wildcats (8-2, 5-2 Big Eight) can finish no worse than third in the Big Eight, which probably will be worth a bid to the Aloha Bowl.

No. 12 Oregon 17, Oregon St. 13

CORVALLIS, Ore. — Danny O'Neil threw his second touchdown pass to Dino Philyaw on a screen play with 3:43 to play and Oregon completed its improbable march to the Rose Bowl with a come-from-behind victory over Oregon State.

The Ducks (9-3, 7-1 Pac-10) will play No. 2 Penn State Jan. 2 in their first Rose Bowl appearance in 37 years.

UCLA 31, No. 13 Southern Cal 19

PASADENA, Calif. — A six-game losing streak earlier this season cost UCLA any chance it might have had of representing the Pac-10 in the Rose Bowl game, or, for that matter, playing in any other post-season contest.

But by beating crosstown rival Southern Cal before a crowd of 91,815 at the Rose Bowl, the Bruins eased a lot of pain.

No. 16 Virginia 42, No. 14 Virginia Tech 23

BLACKSBURG, Va. — Virginia's big-play defense and Rafael Garcia's school-record five field goals carried the Cavaliers to a victory over Virginia Tech.

No.22 Ohio St. 22, No.15 Michigan 6

COLUMBUS, Ohio — Marlon Kerner blocked a field goal and Luke Fickell tipped and then intercepted a pass to set up 10 fourth-quarter points as Ohio State ended a seven-year drought by beating Michigan.

Washington State 23, No. 18 Washington 6

PULLMAN, Wash. — Derek Sparks rushed for two touchdowns and Kevin Hicks ran for one as No. 24 Washington State beat No. 18 Washington.

West Virginia 21, No. 17 Boston College 20

MORGANTOWN, W.Va. — Matt Taffoni's fourth-down tackle stopped a potential scoring drive and West Virginia held Boston College nearly 200 yards below its rushing average en route to a victory.

No.21 Utah 34, No.20 BYU 31

SALT LAKE CITY — Mike McCoy threw for four touchdowns, including a winning 20-yarder to Charlie Brown with 56 seconds left, as Utah beat arch rival Brigham Young.

N.Carolina 41, No. 24 Duke 40

DURHAM, N.C. — Mike Thomas pulled off another miracle finish against Duke, hitting Octavus Barnes on a 71-yard scoring pass with 2:01 left.

Raiders, Bears keep hopes alive

By Jimmy Burch
N.Y. Times News Service

SAN ANTONIO — And then there were two.

The wide-open Cotton Bowl race, which included five contenders at the start of yesterday's games, now includes just Texas Tech (6-4, 4-2) and Baylor (7-3, 4-2).

Tech, with its 34-0 victory over Houston in the Alamodome, mathematically eliminated Texas and Rice from Cotton Bowl consideration. TCU (6-4, 3-3), with its 34-17 loss to Texas A&M, also joined the ranks of Southwest Conference teams forced to look somewhere other than Dallas for a postseason bowl berth.

"There's a little relief after this one," Tech coach Spike Dykes said in the wake of his team's fourth consecutive victory. "Now, it boils down to us knowing we'll have the chance to play to go to the big house."

Tech can wrap up its first Cotton Bowl appearance since joining the SWC in 1960 by defeating TCU in Friday's regular-season finale (10 a.m., Amon Carter Stadium). If Baylor loses Thursday against Texas (10 a.m., Waco), the Red Raiders would be Cotton-bound regardless of what happens in the TCU game.

For Baylor to reach its first Cotton Bowl in 14 years, the Bears must beat the Longhorns (6-4, 3-3) and have TCU defeat or tie Tech. In addition, a tie in the Baylor-Texas game — coupled with a TCU victory over Tech — would send the Bears to Dallas.

Despite the fact the SWC championship race could end in an unprecedented five-way tie for the league title, Tech finds itself in control of its own destiny because SWC bylaws covering multiple-team ties for the league championship favor the Red Raiders.

The first tie-breaker in a co-championship is head-to-head play and Tech defeated Baylor, 38-7, on Oct.22. Beyond that, Tech would win a four-way tie of teams with 4-3 league records — involving Tech, Texas, Baylor and TCU — because Tech and Texas would be 2-1 against the other co-champs. That would eliminate Baylor and TCU, meaning the Cotton Bowl berth would be decided on the basis of the Red Raiders' 33-9 victory over Texas on Oct.29.

If Rice (4-6, 3-3) should beat Houston on Nov.26 and join a five-way tie of SWC co-champs with 4-3 league records, Tech still would advance to Dallas by virtue of the "last appearance rule" because the Red Raiders' last Cotton Bowl appearance came in 1939.

Because of NCAA sanctions, ninth-ranked Texas A&M (10-0-1, 6-0-1) is ineligible to compete for the SWC title or play in a bowl game this season.

While Tech's victory assured the Red Raiders they would be eligible to accept a bowl berth, Rice's 29-17 loss to Navy eliminated the Owls from postseason consideration. That means the SWC has four remaining bowl-eligible teams — Tech, Baylor, Texas and TCU — with guaranteed spots in the Cotton, Sun and Alamo bowls.

Putting puts Watson in lead

Associated Press

MIYAZAKI, Japan — Tom Watson's smooth putting yielded his second consecutive bogey-free round Saturday enabling him to take a one-shot lead at the $1.5 million Dunlop Phoenix Tournament.

Watson, the winner of this tournament in 1980, produced a second round 4-under-par 68 to move to 10-under-par 134 and take a one-shot lead over Britain's Barry Lane and Japan's Nobuo Serizawa entering Sunday's final round.

"My putting has held up," said Watson, seeking his first win since the 1992 Hong Kong Open. "My stroker is going pretty much where I want it but I'll have to put it to the test in the final round because that's where I haven't done so well this year.

"I've made no bogeys so far and the most important thing is that I'm in the lead, but I know I'll have to shoot a final round in the 60s to win," he added.

Jumbo Ozaki kept alive hopes of a third straight win on the Japanese tour after a 69 moved him to 136 and into a tie for fourth place with his brother, Naomichi Ozaki, and David Ishii.

Lane who finished tied for second last year, missed a 10-foot birdie putt on 18 that would have tied him for the lead.

"I'll let Tom have the lead — until the final round," said Lane, who is playing well despite a late arrival and no practice round. "I'm feeling relaxed and I'm not worrying at all about how I'm playing."

Jack Nicklaus was back at 3-under-par 141 after a second-round 71 that included six birdies and five bogeys.

Taiwan's T.C. Chen won $5,000 for a hole-in-one at the 183-yard, par-3, third hole with a 6-iron.

Because of the rain out Friday, the tournament has been reduced to 54 holes for the first time in its 21-year history. First-prize has been reduced by 25 percent to $270,000.

Pebble Beach Invitational

PEBBLE BEACH, Calif. — Robert Gamez continued to excel despite his course inexperience and extended his lead to four shots after shooting a 2-under-par 70 at Spyglass Hill in the third round of the $200,000 Pebble Beach Invitational.

Gamez, who hadn't played any of the tournament's three famed Monterey Peninsula courses prior to practice rounds, shot a five-birdie, three-bogey round en route to a 10-under 206.

Johnny Miller, battling fickle winds and a nagging knee problem, shot par 72 at Pebble Beach and is alone in second place at 210 in the event that features former and current players from the PGA as well as Senior PGA and LPGA players.

■ Golf Roundup

Kirk Triplett and Keith Fergus, who respectively shot 68 and 72 at Spyglass Hill, trail Gamez by six strokes at 212.

Shark Shootout

THOUSAND OAKS — The team of Ben Crenshaw and Mark Calcavecchia combined for a 10-under par 62 to take a one-shot lead after the second round of the $1.1 million Shark Shootout.

Crenshaw and Calcavecchia's two-day total of 131 is 13-under par, ahead of the teams of Fred Couples and Brad Faxon, and first-round leaders Andrew MaGee Lanny Wadkins. The winners will split $300,000.

Couples and Faxon shot an 8-under par 64, and Wadkins and Maggert shot a 6-under 66.

More Sports/14C

"I couldn't have felt worse than yesterday for my partner," Crenshaw said. "I putted pathetically. Today I tried to hit the putts quicker. If I were going to miss today, I was going to miss quicker. But I hit some good putts so it was a nice day."

Saturday's format was best ball, and Couples and Faxon helped each other stay in contention.

"We did a good job of splitting up the duty today," Couples said. "When I was out of a hole, Brad was right in there and vice versa. That is the way you have to play in best ball if you want to have a chance to win this tournament."

The Shark Shootout, a three-day event, features three different formats. Friday's format was alternate shot, and Sunday's final-round format will be a scramble.

"This tournament is such a nice and interesting change of pace," Calcavecchia said. "I really enjoy the different format each day. Plus you have time to get to know your partner. We play out here most of the year and don't get much of a chance to get to know the other players."

Greg Norman and Nick Price posted a 9-under par to move into contention with a two-day toal of 135, 9-under par.

Mexican Open

MEXICO CITY, Mexico — Bob Tway and Doug Tewell like the idea of being neighbors, both on and off the golf course.

They live only a few blocks apart in the Oak Tree Country Club complex in Edmond, Okla., and on Saturday moved into a tie for the lead after three rounds of the $600,000 Mexican Open. The winner will collect $100,000.

Tway had a round of 2-under-par 70 for a 10-under 206 on the 7,142-yard Club de Golf Mexico course. Tewell shot 68.

Howard Twitty, the leader after each of the first two days, simply had what he called a "very poor round." He made two birdies, but also had three bogeys and a disastrous double-bogey at the final hole. He led Tway and Tewell by a stroke until the last hole.

Twitty finished with a 3-over-par 75 and dropped one stroke off the pace to 9-under-par 207.

OPTIMIST YOUTH APPRECIATION

OPTIMIST YOUTH APPRECIATION WEEK.

WE SALUTE THE YOUTH OF OUR COMMUNITY

The Optimist Club of Midland came together to honor our young citizens for their outstanding service to the community. The Youth Appreciation Week is for the recognition of those 95% of our young people who are following the "juvenile decency" road to adulthood.

For the past forty years, Optimist Clubs nationwide have set aside the second week of November to pay tribute to the vast majority of youth often overlooked and unrecognized.

On November 17, 1994, at 7:00 p.m., in the Midland County Center, the Optimist Club of Midland sponsored a banquet to honor young people who represent schools and organizations which provide a learning experience of good citizenship for our youth. Parents and friends attended the banquet along with the leaders of our community to honor these young people.

Judicial reform still is needed

Although results of the 1994 election in Texas were generally pleasing — essentially bolstering our faith in the wisdom of the electorate — there was one area of significant concern: the election of judges.

Jurists run on the basis of political party affiliation as do candidates for other offices, although most judicial candidates readily admit their discomfort with campaigning and seeking the support of attorneys who they likely will meet in court at some future date if elected. The system simply doesn't make sense and it often puts judges in what they believe is a compromising position.

Over the past several years various methods have been proposed and discussed for removing judges from the process of partisan election, and while each of those proposals has strengths and weaknesses none seems to offer an iron-clad method for removing jurists from the taint of partisan politics while still ensuring that they are answerable to the voters of the state.

One plan that seems particularly appealing is merit selection with retention elections. Under such a system the judges would be selected by a panel and appointed to office or under an alternate system, selected to run for office, but the voters would still have the final say on whether they stayed in office. In the past, voters have overwhelmingly indicated that they want to continue electing their judges.

That's fine and well, as long as voters do not simply start electing judges — at whatever level of government — on the basis of their party affiliation without giving any real consideration to their qualifications. That practice seemed to be especially evident in the recent election in which Texas judicial races were swept up by Republican candidates. We beleive it is particularly dangerous in races for the Court of Criminal Appeals and the Supreme Court, in which voters may not be familiar with any of the candidates running and may simply make selections on the basis of party affiliation. While such a practice may have validity in terms of a candidate's position on economics, political philosophy or even support for social programs, it doesn't really provide such a yardstick on a candidate's ability to mete out justice on the applicable law in question. So it can't really be a good guide for choosing the better candidate for a judicial position.

Obviously, the system needs to be changed — and now is a good time to start moving that direction, while there's still time to act before the next election.

Mrs. Clinton battles right-wing radio

WASHINGTON — The White House is planning an unprecedented war of the airwaves against Rush Limbaugh and other right-wing talkmeisters by promoting Democratic-minded talk radio hosts across the country.

Anderson

First lady Hillary Rodham Clinton, often the target of Limbaugh's lampoons, is leading a group of Democrats who are calling for a communications counteroffensive. Mrs. Clinton argues that Democrats must find talent to counteract arch-conservatives, and believes the White House has been too timid in taking on the man who hails himself as the "fourth branch of government."

"She believes we have to get engaged in (countering Limbaugh) and we can't ignore it any longer," says one official close to the first lady. "We can no longer let Rush Limbaugh have that territory without opposition. The misinformation has got to be checked."

Mrs. Clinton was armed during a recent White House meeting with examples of Limbaugh's capacity for wreaking havoc. Expressing a mixture of anger and awe, the first lady said he managed to disrupt her trip in late September to Philadelphia on behalf of several Catholic hospitals. Soon after Limbaugh announced the visit to his 20 million-plus listeners, she said, the hospital phone lines were ringing with angry protests.

"The moral of the story is this guy (Limbaugh) has so many tentacles that 15 or 30 minutes after something happens he can generate a grass roots movement that besieges somebody," said one source who attended the meeting.

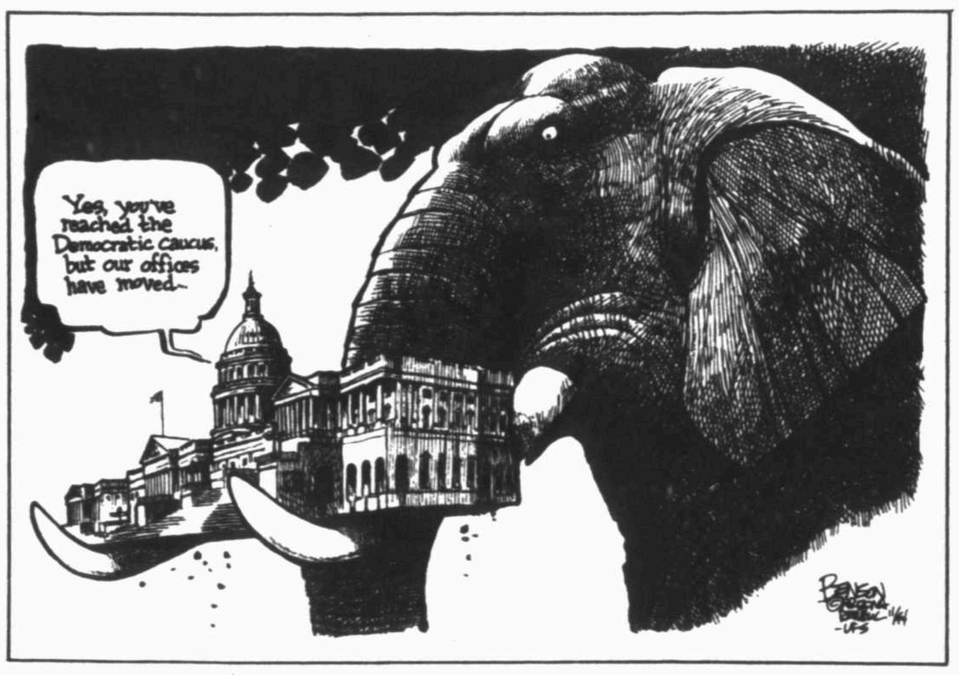

Even before the Republican blow-out in the midterm elections, administration officials had gone back to the drawing board to revitalize the Clinton presidency. Talk radio has always been conservative country, over which Limbaugh towers with a beguiling blend of information and entertainment.

White House officials have debated ways they can prevent right-wing talk radio from jamming the Democrats' political signal. "We can complain all we want and it's interesting in journalism schools, but we have to figure out a way to deal with it," one senior White House official told us. "That's the hand we've been dealt."

Officials think they have one trump card to play: Grant interviews to radio show hosts who are friendly, or who at least give Clinton a fair shake.

"The interviews we've granted are with those folks to elevate their stature," explains this official. "They can market and increase their stations because they get the president." Jim Hightower — the funny and in-your-face former Texas state Agriculture Commissioner — has the official blessing. Hightower is an unabashed liberal populist whose syndicated program is gaining new markets.

Congress assumes authority on gun law

WASHINGTON — On Election Day, as voters were creating a Congress with a mandate to relimit government, the Supreme Court was hearing arguments in a case involving an old but long-dormant dispute about the limits of Congress' powers.

Will

In 1992 officials at a San Antonio high school caught Alfonso Lopez, a 12th grader, in possession of a pistol. He was convicted of violating the federal Gun-Free School Zone Act of 1990 which criminalizes possession of firearms in or near schools.

It is no longer startling when Congress asserts that some local problem — any problem — comes within its purview, and the 1990 act, another step in the federalization of criminal law, doubtless was compatible with public opinion. But was it compatible with the Constitution?

Lopez may not have been packing a copy of "The Federalist Papers" along with his pistol, but he subsequently has discovered the sainted James Madison's Federalist 45: "The powers delegated by the proposed Constitution to the federal government are few and defined. Those which are to remain in the state governments are numerous and indefinite." That idea informs the 10th Amendment: "The powers not delegated to the United States by the Constitution . . . are reserved to the states respectively, or to the people."

Between the founding and the New Deal there was constant controversy concerning the Constitution's enumeration of the delegated powers. During the New Deal the federal government slipped the Founders' leash. The judiciary became extraordinarily deferential toward all congressional claims, like the one Congress made in passing the 1990 law, that particular actions were undertaken for the purpose of regulating commerce. Since then the clause delegating to Congress power "to regulate commerce . . . among the several states" has been construed by courts with a permissiveness that constitutes the judiciary's dereliction of its duty to confine Congress to exercises of its enumerated powers.

But in September 1993 a federal appeals court, reviving an honorable tradition, said that with the Gun-Free School Zone law Congress acted where it had no constitutional authority to act. The court said that although the 10th Amendment does not "define the limits of the commerce power," its obvious premise is "that the reach of that power is not unlimited, else there would be nothing on which the 10th Amendment could operate."

The court said a "trivial impact on commerce" does not constitute an excuse for broad general regulation of private activities, such as gun possession. Congress should have to make a detailed finding of substantial impact. Otherwise "there is no private activity, no matter how local and insignificant, the ripple effect from which is not in some theoretical measure ultimately felt beyond the borders of the state in which it took place," and by casuistry Congress can dissolve constitutional limits on its powers.

Barry Friedman of Vanderbilt law school says, "In order to criminalize conduct under the commerce clause, Congress must be regulating interstate commerce." But no one, including the government, disputes that Lopez' conduct — the possession of a firearm near a school (which Texas law criminalized before 1990) — was purely intrastate in nature.

Glenn Harlan Reynolds of the University of Tennessee law school says that if the Supreme Court sides with Lopez, this will be the first significant ruling enforcing borders of the commerce clause in more than half a century.

ANOTHER VIEW

Mexico's PRI could face fate of Democrats

American voters turned their nation's political system upside down Tuesday, rejecting the Democratic Party's way of doing things.

A day later, Mexico's ruling politicians went in the other direction as they officially confirmed that its Institutional Revolutionary Party, (PRI), will hold onto power for another six years.

The lower house of Mexico's Congress, meeting as the nation's Electoral College, on Wednesday declared Ernesto Zedillo the next president — more than 11 weeks after the general election.

The process took more than 16 hours of debate, with almost 100 members taking the rostrum to voice their opinions. The August presidential election — held under the eyes of hundreds of international monitors — is accepted to be the cleanest ever in Mexican history.

Many opposition politicians, however, still contend fraud was widespread. ...

Zedillo should take note of the U.S. election. He can't afford to enter the presidency on Dec. 1 with an economic agenda and nothing else. He should recognize other social ills still plague Mexico, including rampant health problems and high unemployment.

The president-elect should push for needed political reforms to match the economic gains made by Salinas. Mexico's 1994 presidential campaign represented a substantial step toward opening up the nation's political system. Much remains to be done to satisfy the yearning many Mexicans have for a more democratic nation.

Mexico's constitution limits Zedillo to a single term. But if he fails to appease the growing unrest among his countrymen, his PRI could face the same fate as U.S. Democrats did on Tuesday.

Come election day, the party's over.

— The (McAllen) Monitor

RUSSELL BAKER

Channel-surfing provides solution to problems

The most interesting explanation of the famous Republican triumph comes from my wife, who is not political and whose mind, therefore, has not been ossified by total immersion in polling statistics.

Baker

She thinks it was the inevitable result in a nation with a really heavy channel-surfing habit. Voters treated the familiar old Democrats just as they treat the familiar old TV shows when they plop down in the parlor with a remote-control gadget.

They just naturally zapped them, thinking, "Might as well try another pol. Probably won't be much better, but he can be zapped too after I've surfed the entire menu."

If you have been listening all week to talking heads make everything perfectly murky, you may dismiss my wife's explanation on ground that it is excessively simple. Yet the simplest explanation often solves the most baffling mystery.

Recently, for example, I was wrestling with the mystery of why the British refuse to acknowledge that American institutions are clearly superior to their own. With her usual clear-headedness, my wife explained everything with a simple question:

"What can you expect of a country that has only one time zone?"

It seems quite natural that channel-surfing should lead to politician-surfing, for Americans have long been prisoners, as it were, of both television and politicians.

When television consisted of a few networks and an independent station or two re-running old network shows, you could either take it or turn it off. And who could possibly turn it off? Its grip was so unshakeable that the few who could turn it off were jeered as intellectuals and snobs.

Even changing from one channel to another required toil. Overweight bodies had to be lifted, then walked two, three, four feet, maybe bent slightly to touch a dial, a button.

It was easier to lie there and let the arrogant tubemeisters and advertisers give it to you right between the eyes.

Then suddenly — empowerment! Dozens and dozens of new cable channels became available. And the ultimate weapon — the remote!

It was like the invention of gunpowder, like the Spanish armies' introduction of the horse as a war engine against horseless, horse-ignorant Indians.

This incredibly powerful new weapon changed the balance of power between TV providers and viewing masses. Viewers no longer have to lie there and take it. Now they lie there and zap it. With more channels constantly becoming available, channel surfers now have to move swiftly and ruthlessly to exhaust the entire entertainment supply before the shows change and surfing has to start all over again.

The terrifying threat of 500 channels, if carried out, will require such intense concentration on the remote that millions doubtless will suffer psychiatric breakdown after repeated failure to surf the entire 500 before all change shows.

Channel-surfing gave millions a taste of power over an old tyrant. Change became a habit in the parlor. It was so easy. You just pushed the button. Didn't even have to get up.

Change is hard for people to accept. Maybe that's why so many politicians stayed in office so long. With the remote working its havoc in the TV room, however, change became a habit. The manipulated herd was herd no longer. It was now a surfer.

When did it begin to feel comfortable with the idea that it could zap a politician and move on to look at another, just as casually as it zapped a shopping channel and moved on to the Weather Channel, then to Bravo, to A&E, to PBS, to the Cooking Channel, the Cosmetics Channel, the Automatic Firearms Channel, the O.J. Simpson Channel ... ?

It's hard to say precisely when people became comfortable with politician-surfing, but the 1992 defeat of President Bush showed it well under way. President Bush, once so unbeatable that no important Democrat dared run against him, was in a few months so reduced by failure to gratify audience demand for an exciting economic show that he fell to the little-known Bill Clinton.

Clinton was the first beneficiary of politician-surfing, and now of course the surfers seem hot to surf on to another pol after last week's demonstration of how easy it is.

Well, the idea is my wife's. I was in charge of the muddling.

Choral's performance at tree festival is fine

The Lee High School Choral is to be commended for their fine performance at the Festival of Trees. Those of us who were seated, in order to enjoy their music, appreciated their talent and poise "under fire."

Pro-choice hypocrisy will increase deaths

Are pro-choicers hypocrites, or have they been duped into believing that the issue around abortion is simply a matter of a woman's personal choice?

Pro-choicers and pro-lifers alike decry the senseless, brutal murder of an abortion doctor in Florida.

Together they weep and shake their heads at a South Carolina mother's choice to take the lives of her two small children — yet pro-choicers advocate a mother's choice to murder her unborn children.

Which is more barbarous: strapping a child into his car seat and driving the car into the lake or attacking a child in the womb and cutting him into pieces, then disposing of the parts in an industrial-strength garbage disposal?

I don't see the difference. The public outcry to the murders of the two children in South Carolina proves that the issue is not whether the mother has a "choice." The issue is that the mother does not have the right to terminate the life of her child if the child is unwanted.

A mother's choice to take an innocent life is still murder, regardless of whether the child is in the car or in a womb.

I predict that the killing of innocent children outside of the womb will increase as long as America continues to condone the killing of innocent children inside the womb.

City needs fund-raiser to buy school books

With all the signs around us, I should be running for some kind of office! I have three children, kindergarten, second and sixth graders. I went to my sons' open house at school and his teacher informed us that none of the students would be taking home any books to study because there are not enough books to go around. Then they told us that they would not be using them in class, because even there there's not enough.

Why can't the city buy books to educate our children, especially when the citizens pay and pay just for this purpose. It seems like our money goes to fixing streets that don't need fixing and end up being worse than they were before.

As for all the tests our children take, past generations have never needed them, now they are senators, presidents, doctors, lawyers, teachers and farmers to name a few professions. I think that too much pressure on passing tests causes children and teens to feel they just can't cope and end up dropping out. My kindergartner took four days of tests last week and she kept praying she passed them.

Simple plan: each household buys their children their books,then the city has a fundraiser or donations all summer to get money for books for those who just can't afford it. It's time to take control of our money and be able to ask why our children are not being educated. Teachers here in Midland are great, but they need our help too.

Politicians use Smith case to manipulate

In response to the letters of Judy Golden and Mildred Smead regarding the Susan Smith and children tragedy in the Midland Reporter-Telegram on Nov. 14, what evidence is there for you to be so sure that "many of the people who reacted so vehemently before the television cameras" during the national viewing of the tragic events of Union, S.C. are "pro-abortion?" How do you connect these two events together?

No one can surmise what led to the tragedy of Susan Smith and her children. No one questions the tremendous pain and ordeal that the family and community of Union, S.C. has experienced. However, an attempt that is beyond common decency was made on a national level to use this for the elective GOP slate. It is, in fact, vile and irresponsible that Newt Gingrich would try to solicit votes using this connection as evidence of the principles of the Democratic Party.

Additionally, Pat Robertson stated on his 700 Club news network, after the nation learned that Susan Smith confessed to the murders, that he considered the use of Christians around the country whose prayers went out to the family and the little boys for their safe return almost worse than the murder itself. No prayer that comes from the heart is ever to be considered a waste of faith or time.

Open your mind, your eyes and your heart. The politicians are using your emotions to meet their agendas using the same tactics they ascribe to their opponents.

Readers' views on: final results of Election '94

Republican wagon likely to go in circles

As the results of this year's election sink in, a knot in my stomach develops. And a giant sucking sound (in which the working middle class is pressed to bear more of the tax burden and support of America and not the Forbes 400 middle class) can be heard in the distance.

On the national front the Republicans were granted what they wished for, control of Congress. But it seems as though the Pillsbury doughboy (Newt Gingrich) and Dr. Jekyll (Bob Dole) were absent of their cocky, combative speeches. Phil Gramm (Mr. vote no, take credit anyway) had asked for help to pull the wagon, but with the indecisive Republicans steering the reins, I believe the wagon's only progress will be in circles. Lastly, I wonder if the infamous "Contract with America" contains the standard fine print stating "these may not be possible" or "these provisions do not apply to us."

On the state scene I hope George Bush hires an etiquette consultant to verse him on the more refined manners necessary of a governor. I say this due to the possibility of the national or state media circulating another picture of him placing his fingers in a certain orifice. Maybe he should get an aide to do that.

Locally the old double-standard applies. Shockingly the local tax rate rises steadily and lame duck incumbents are re-elected. But there is a light on the horizon, election 1996!

Doonesbury comic should go in opinion

Since the elections, it's hard for me to get mad about anything. I'm even delighted to have Ted Kennedy and Marion Barry in office so we can have someone to kick around when the euphoria wears off.

But while it's fresh in my mind, may I suggest that you give Doonsebury the hook, or at least take him out of the comic section and put him on the political opinion page as many newspapers do.

In your "Sunday Funnies" prior to the election, Doonesbury did a profoundly biased and distorted demonizing of the Reagan era. I support the First Amendment, but the setting of this "other view" was not responsible.

I've been an avid reader of the comics ever since they were called "funny papers" (because they were funny then), and it never injured my political psyche. But I also read the hard news and commentary sections.

The trouble is, some 43 percent of the voting electorate read only the comics section — so there's no balance.

Hey, I'm not canceling my subscription. Trudeau has, at least, started depicting the president as a flip-flopping waffle. That's progress!

Restore Constitution through contract

Well, well. The most fundamental shift in American legislative power in decades is at hand. The Republicans, once they finally decided to stand for something definitive and give the people a clear choice, now have a mandate (unlike Clinton's phantom mandate two years ago).

The mandate is: restore the Constitution and especially the Bill of Rights through the Contract with America. I, a Federalist, will be watching with anticipation the return of open debate on the floor of Congress, come Jan. 4, 1995. Hopefully, the 104th Congress will deliver. We the voters did our part; now the people voted into office are expected to do their part. We must hold them to it.

So let's get out the popcorn and turn on C-SPAN. It should be exciting.

Taxpayers must be specific on changes

In spite of what all the analysts say, in spite of the denials on the part of Democrats, the nation has given a clear mandate that our government must be responsive to the taxpayers, not the freeloaders. I have no doubt that the new Republican majority in the House and Senate will waste no time in trying to bring about sweeping changes. I'm sure the media won't give them a moment's rest and will scrutinize everything they do and say.

NOW is the time for all of us to make our voices heard. Big changes are coming. We need to make sure that these changes are well thought out, not just change for the sake of change.

I want to urge everyone to give serious consideration to the types of change that are needed and then WRITE your representatives and let them know what you want. They WILL listen, so be specific. Just because the election is over doesn't mean we can let up. Let's keep the pressure on and rebuild a nation that we can truly be proud of again.

Rhetoric confuses issues, like eclipse

Sometimes politics are hard to understand, yet politics are drawn from our most basic of instincts. The rhetoric that develops around the issues outmaneuvers reason. Simply, draw three circles in a row. The circles can join and overlap in varying degrees; left with center, right with center, left and right with center. When in the cosmic phenomenon of a total eclipse the animals get excited, there is anticipation as alignment of sun, moon, and earth occurs. Then the eclipse is over and we are relieved, as if this momentary alignment was somehow unnatural.

For several years, politically, we have been eclipsing and the rhetoric was confused. Issues of non-violent dissent and civil liberties, matters of foreign and domestic policy had Republicans and Democrats trading their traditional roles that bemused the issues and the voters. Has the eclipse passed? The Republican Party, which tripled the deficit with Star Wars in its most recent administrations and which itself in order to dominate the rhetoric in the most recent election incurred millions of dollars of debt, told voters they will impose term limits on themselves and will balance the budget while cutting taxes and increasing defense spending.

If we now label the three circles as poor, middle and rich our diagram shows that recently the circles did not merge as they did in the political arena, but grew further apart. The "Newt"onian charter seemingly defies laws of economics by targeting welfare which accounts for under 2 percent of the national budget, while contrary to popular myth the Seawolf submarine is still being built. Why don't we start building submarine drilling rigs? Yes, and use the information the Navy has garnered to drill deep sea prospects under the U.S. flag.

Exit polls show many voters hate Clinton

One of the exit polls following last Tuesday's (Nov. 8) election showed that no less than one of five American voters hate Bill Clinton. (The pollsters hasten to point out that this group is predominately white-male.) Most of the liberal press seems genuinely stunned by this revelation and incapable of offering a plausible explanation.

As a newcomer, I stood Saturday in a grassless field with hundreds of others on a cold, overcast, windswept day for the dedication of the Permian Basin Vietnam Veterans Memorial. The 225 men from the area whom we honored had three obvious common traits: they were male, they were American, and their racial heritage was as diverse as that of the citizens who gathered to salute them. I would suggest that these young men did not lay down their lives for our country because of any fuzzy-minded or politically correct multicultural labeling that is now the fashion. Indeed they did so because they were raised as good patriotic Americans who, like the thousands before them, answered when their country called them to duty.

Looking into the totally unpretentious faces of the families, friends and just plain good folk who gathered there, I was struck by the stark contrast of their simple dignity, collective character and values as opposed with that of the '60's crowds that surrounded Bill Clinton as he demonstrated against our country from the sanctuary of a foreign shore.

To the liberal press who just can't seem to get it, I would say this: had somehow the "exit pollsters" been able to take a posthumous survey of the 225 men we honored, they would have discovered that their white-male labeling has little or nothing to do with the collective contempt of warriors for those who would "cut and run" when the chips are down. Duty, Honor and Country are still alive and well in the hearts of many, and character still counts in America.

Lack of change leads to Democratic loss

The Clinton Administration lost their Democratic majority because they lost their credibility. The major part of Clinton's 1992 campaign was CHANGE. The change was not defined, only that it would improve our economy, change welfare, reduce crime and provide universal medical care at low cost. However, there was no real change because what was generally presented was just the same old TAX and SPEND with more governmental control, hence the Republican landslide. At least the voter went to the heart of the problem, the representatives and the senators. In the past there has been too much emphasis on the presidency. It is very easy to be against bad proposals, however it is very difficult to generate workable and affordable solutions to improve our country. My suggestion to the Republicans is to start with two items that have widespread support.

1. Pass the line-item veto to increase the president's power to reduce pork.

2. Pass term limits: four terms for our representatives, eight years; two terms for senators, 12 years; and a new limitation on Supreme Court judges, one term, 10 years.

After these two it gets very difficult; however, here is a list of the most important items.

1. The economy must always be of primary concern because crime, welfare and the deficit are compounded when the economy is weak. Hence we must reduce governmental regulations such as EPA, OSHA, Endangered Species, the Disability act, Family Leave and so forth.

2. Tort reform is badly needed, the nation's legal costs are excessive. For sure punitive damages if any should go to the state.

3 Our health care system does need changes. To allow market forces to come into play to reduce costs the choice and expense of medical insurance should be borne by and be deductible by the individual not the employer. For individuals without insurance, guidelines have to be established as to what level of care will be provided.

4. Education should be returned to local control, no mandates from the state, federal or the courts.

5. Government grants for local facilities should be eliminated. If local government believes that a facility is needed let them get the local taxpayers to fund the project. A limited number of first-time facilities such as an airport, water system or sewage facility could be eligible for low interest loans, but none of this 80 percent business.

6. Welfare has to be modified to discourage single-parent families (this is tough one.) The voter wants change but I am afraid he does not know exactly what is needed so if the Republicans revert to business as usual they should be and will be at risk in two years.

Our policy on letters

The Reporter-Telegram recognizes the "Letters to the Editor" format as an important forum for citizen opinion and encourages participation of all readers. To that end, we have set as few rules as possible. However, we must have some, and they are:

- Letters must be signed and include a street address and daytime phone number for verification. Letters not including this information will not be considered for publication.
- They should be no more than 350 words in length. While some lengthy letters are published, we reserve the right to edit when necessary due to space limitations. The briefer the letter, the better its chance of publication.
- Only one letter per month per writer can be published.
- Letters will be edited for length, taste and legal reasons and are accepted only on that basis. Letters which are difficult to reduce in length will be returned to the writer to be edited before being re-submitted.
- We do not publish 'open' letters, copies of letters sent to others or multiple signatures.

Education act doesn't improve academics

By Jeanette Dragisic

Jeanette Dragisic, a lifetime Midland resident, is president of Advocates for Better Learning & Education (ABLE) and employed by an independent oil company in Midland.

The standardized state accreditation test is becoming more "attitudinal," which is difficult to score and falsely shows students as doing well.

Goals 2000 (The Educate America Act) recently passed both the U.S. House and Senate. Texas Education Commissioner Meno and the State Board of Education voted to accept Goals 2000 in Texas.

The heart and soul of Goals 2000 is "Outcome Based Education" (O.B.E.). Basing education on expected outcomes sounds good, however, the "outcomes" are not solely based on academics. They are more focused on behavioral and attitudinal outcomes. Many parts of O.B.E. have already been approved and incorporated into Texas schools through various initiatives, textbooks, curriculum and other programs by the TEA (Texas Education Agency).

The standardized state accreditation test is becoming more "attitudinal," which is difficult to score and falsely shows students as doing well. Parents are never allowed to view this test, keeping secret its non-academic content.

Midland Independent School District's (MISD) superintendent suggested at a recent board meeting that the district should apply for Goals 2000 grant money. Once accepted, we must accept the rules and mandates that go along with it.

Even without Goals 2000 being implemented, MISD is already deeply involved with O.B.E. Specifically, look at the following O.B.E. idealogy:

1. Grades do not actually reflect performance, but reflect "effort" (i.e: math paper with three answers wrong receives grade of 100). Students may redo their work several times, until a satisfactory grade is obtained.

2. Spelling and handwriting are UNIMPORTANT. Focus is on "critical thinking" and "content."

3. "Team," "Group," "Cooperative Learning." Students work on assignments in a group or pair. Group receives one grade, which they share.

4. "Whole Language/Literature" based reading program. This program is NOT "phonics first." It is mainly composed of "word guessing," "predicting," focusing on the meaning of the story, rather than actually reading each word.

5. "Block Scheduling," "Team Teaching," "Middle Schools," all types of UNPROVEN class schedule restructuring.

6. "Inclusion," "Mainstreaming," "heterogeneous." ALL children become part of the classroom, regardless of academic level or ability and behavior. Focus is on equality — NOT quality!

7. "Mastery Learning." All students master level before group moves on. The faster learners are not challenged; often used to "tutor" the slower learners. "Learning Goals" set at lowest common denominator — to reach ALL levels of students.

8. "Self Esteem," "Positive Discipline," "Personal Journals" are an INTEGRAL part of OBE idealogy.

9. "Multiculturalism," "Tolerance," "Lifestyles." Training for world citizenship and government (NOT patriotism), population control, radical environmentalism, government "solutions" for every problem, and acceptance of all forms of "lifestyles" incorporated throughout curriculum.

10. Counselors, psychologists, psychiatrists are deeply involved at each campus, and in district. "Feelings" and "attitudes" of the students have become EXTREMELY important, de-emphasizing academics.

11. Flunking discouraged, it might hurt the student's "self-esteem" or "blemish" campus statistics. Students promoted to the next grade level, regardless of academic performance.

12. Academic failures, disturbances and even violence are excused by labeling those students as "at-risk," "504," "E.D.," "L.D.," "A.D.D.," "Special Ed.." etc.

MISD's Long Range Plan has eight "Objectives" — only ONE regards academics (reading on grade level before 4th grade). MISD's "Mission Statement" doesn't even mention academics. Mission is to "graduate productive citizens ... who will contribute to the needs of their family, nation and world community while demonstrating respect for cultural and economic diversity." Is this ALL we expect from our MISD graduates?

O.B.E. "dumbs down" our children. PLEASE, let's NOT accept this anywhere in America — ESPECIALLY NOT IN MIDLAND! Contact your state and U.S. representatives. Call your school board trustees — let them know how you feel about O.B.E.!

TECH: Hanspard breaks frosh mark

the season gave him 648 yards this year, breaking Tech's freshman rushing record of 613 yards set by James Gray in 1986.

"Offensively, we are growing and showing improvement," Dykes said. "Byron Hanspard has come of age. He's a steady, hard-working football player."

The Red Raiders asserted their dominance early over the Cougars (1-9, 1-5) at the Alamodome. Hanspard scored on the first possession on a 5-yard run that capped an 80-yard drive.

A 35-yard field goal by Jon Davis late in the first quarter pushed the Red Raiders' edge to 10-0. Hanspard struck again with 4:42 remaining in the half, scoring on a 14-yard run. On the next Tech possession, Lethridge ran 15 yards for a touchdown and the Red Raiders led 24-0 at halftime.

Despite all the scoring, Lethridge said the Red Raiders "were a little flat at times."

"But we did the things we needed to win. We tried to get on them early and get ahead and build on that," Lethridge said.

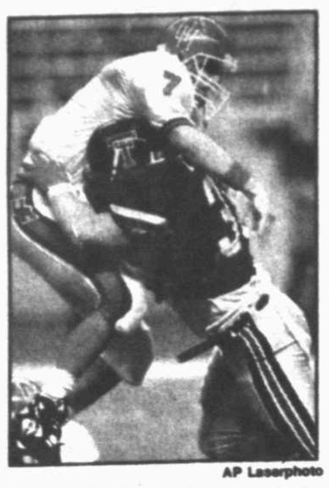

Although they couldn't stop Tech, the Cougars' defense recorded six sacks — Houston's most all season.

"I thought the defense really brought their war hatchets and played their hearts out," said Houston coach Kim Helton. "Their quarterback is a great athlete and we just couldn't get to him."

After Tony Rogers' 44-yard field goal early in the third quarter, Houston made it biggest scoring threat of the game. But Trace Craft's 38-yard field goal try went wide left.

The Red Raiders completed the scoring with 4:31 to play on Lethridge's 14-yard touchdown pass to Field Scovell.

It was the third time this season Houston's been shut out.

Aggies squash Horned Frogs

■ Texas A&M's defense stops TCU twice in the third quarter, hurts Frogs chances of bowl berth.

COLLEGE STATION (AP) — The No. 9 Texas A&M Aggies can't go to the Cotton Bowl because they're on NCAA probation. After a loss to the Aggies, the Horned Frogs can't go either.

Corey Pullig threw a third-and-long touchdown pass and the Aggie defense came up with two drive-stopping plays in the third quarter as A&M beat Texas 34-17 Saturday.

"You know, Texas A&M is still the measuring stick in the Southwest Conference," TCU coach Pat Sullivan said. "We're going to continue to work and get better."

TCU (6-4, 3-3) hasn't represented the SWC in the Cotton Bowl since 1959. The Horned Frogs still play Texas Tech on Saturday with bowl possibilities riding on the outcome.

The Aggies (10-0-1, 6-0-1) completed their first unbeaten season since 1956 when they had a 9-0-1 record.

"We've gotten everybody's best shot and still found a way to win," A&M coach R.C. Slocum said.

Texas Tech (6-4, 4-2), which beat Houston 34-0 Saturday, needs only a victory over TCU next week to go to the Cotton Bowl. The Raiders also could go to the Cotton Bowl if they lose to TCU and Baylor loses to Texas on Thanksgiving.

The eliminated Frogs, meanwhile, must hope for another invitation.

Independence Bowl officials were impressed with TCU after watching Saturday's loss.

"We'd like to see them win next week against Texas Tech," Independence Bowl representative Ken Antee said. "TCU is still an attractive option, especially if we win next week."

TCU's hopes of upsetting the Aggies fell apart in the third quarter, as the Horned Frogs lost to the Aggies for the 22nd straight time.

The Horned Frogs trailed 17-10 at the half but Pullig's 25-yard touchdown pass to Chris Sanders on third-and-11 late in the third quarter gave the Aggies a cushion.

"I was tickled to death at where we stood at halftime," Sullivan said. "We were in a position to win the ballgame if we can continue to execute."

Instead, A&M's defense took over in the third quarter. Michael Hendricks stopped a TCU drive by recovering Andre Davis' fumble at the A&M 24. Moments later, with 6:56 to go in the third quarter, cornerback Ray Mickens intercepted Max Knake's pass in the end zone.

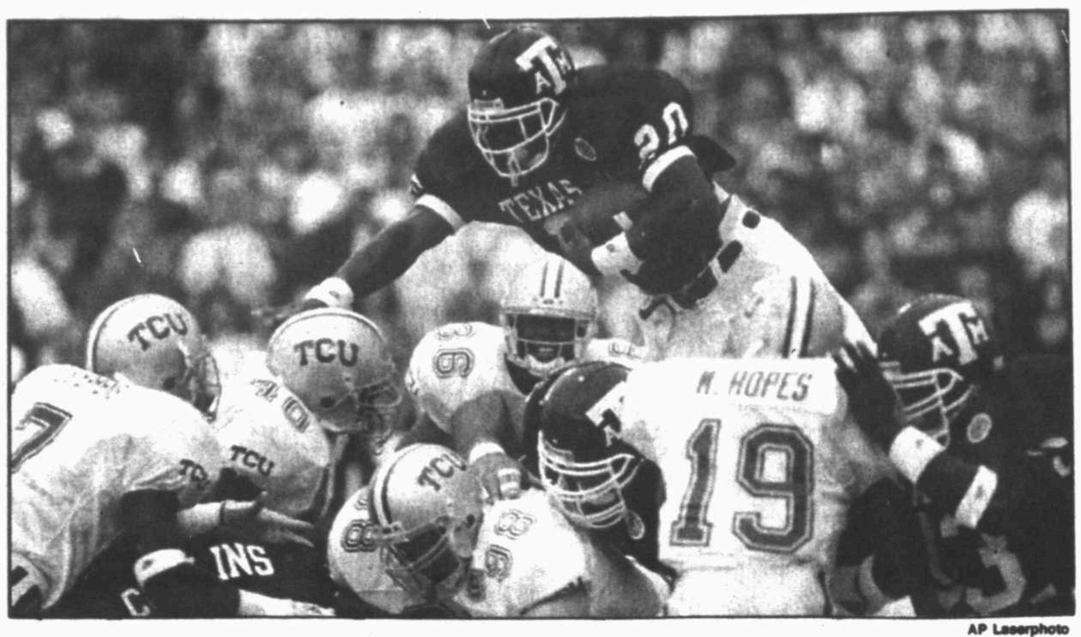

Leeland McElroy ran 27 yards for a touchdown with 13:41 left in the game — his second score of the game — and Kyle Bryant added a 25-yard field goal with 8:18 to play.

Davis scored on a 3-yard run for TCU with 5:09 left in the game.

"I thought our defense had a tremendous game, but offensively it seemed like we were waiting for something to happen, instead of making things happen."

The Aggies extended their Kyle Field winning streak to 26 games, and their home unbeaten string to 30. They were tied by Baylor 20-20 in 1990. The Aggies haven't lost at home since Arkansas' 23-22 victory in 1989.

The 23 Aggies seniors became the winningest class in SWC history with 42 victories overall and a 29-0-1 SWC record. The only blemish was a 21-21 tie with SMU this season.

Case ends storied career, Lobo beat UTEP

Associated Press

ALBUQUERQUE — Stoney Case threw for two fourth-quarter touchdowns and ran for another Saturday to rally New Mexico to a season-ending 25-21 win over Texas-El Paso.

Case, the most prolific quarterback in New Mexico history, finished his record-studded career by bringing the Lobos back from a 21-8 deficit in the game's final 13 minutes.

New Mexico finished the year at 5-7 overall and 4-4 in the Western Athletic Conference. UTEP ended 3-7-1 and 1-6-1 in the WAC.

Case was 15-for-35 for 244 yards and finished his career with 9,460 passing yards, a school record that surpassed the previous mark of 9,382 by Jeremy Leach from 1988-1991.

Washington & Jefferson, Pa. 28, Trinity 0

SAN ANTONIO — Washington & Jefferson's Jason Baer threw four touchdown passes as the Presidents shut out previously unbeaten Trinity in the first round of the NCAA Division III playoffs.

Baer threw TD passes of 2, 7 and 27 as the Presidents (9-1) raced to a 21-0 halftime lead.

Mike Speca caught six passes for 132 yards and two touchdowns. J.J. Jaronsinski caught four passes for 37 yards, but two went four touchdowns.

Trinity (10-1) was held to just 34 yards rushing and turned the ball over six times.

Hardin-Simmons 49, Missouri Valley 21

ABILENE — Tommy Cupil rushed for 227 yards and five touchdowns, powering Hardin-Simmons past Missouri Valley in the first round of the NAIA Division II playoffs.

Texas A&M-Kingsville 43, Western St., Colo. 7

KINGSVILLE — Texas A&M-Kingsville's Dexter Deese tied an NCAA Division II playoff record with five touchdowns, leading the Javelinas to a rout of Western State Colorado.

Deese's three touchdown runs and two TD catches tied the 1992 record set by Ronald Moore of Pittsburg (Kan.) State.

The Javelinas had 489 yards of offense, including 364 yards rushing.

Alabama-Birmingham 48, Prairie View 6

PRAIRIE VIEW — John Whitcomb set Alabama-Birmingham records with 33 completions for 539 yards and six touchdowns in a victory over Prairie View, which extended its record NCAA Division I-AA losing streak to 46 straight.

UAB, which has been a I-AA independent since 1991, set seven school records and tied another as it won its sixth straight to finish the year 7-4.

Sam Houston St. 34, SW Texas St. 10

HUNTSVILLE — Stacey Arrambide ran for two touchdowns and threw for another to lead Sam Houston State to a victory over Southwest Texas State.

Southwest Texas running back Donald Wilkerson ran 33 times for 153 yards to set a Southland Conference single-season rushing record with 302 carries for 1,589 yards.

Portland St. 29, Angelo St. 0

PORTLAND, Ore. — Kyle Allen threw for 258 yards and a pair of touchdowns as No. 4 Portland state shut out Angelo State in the opening round of the NCAA Div. II football playoffs.

SFA 34, NW Louisiana 13

NACOGDOCHES — James Ritchey threw two touchdown passes and Leonard Harris ran for two more as Stephen F. Austin scored 21 fourth-quarter points and beat Northwest Louisiana.

Midshipmen stop Rice's air attack, sink bowl hopes

ANNAPOLIS, Md. (AP) — Navy ended Rice's bid for a bowl bid and a winning season Saturday, holding the Owls without a pass completion in the second half of a 29-17 victory.

Jim Kubiak completed 19-of-35 passes for 242 yards and a touchdown as Navy (3-7) won a second straight game for the first time in 13 months. The key, however, was a defense that held the Owls to just one touchdown over the final 41 minutes.

Rice (4-6), a 16-point favorite, needed a victory to keep alive its bid to play in a bowl game for the first time since 1961. Nelson ran for two touchdowns, including a 74-yarder with 5:49 remaining, but that was the extent of the Owl offense.

Nelson, who was 6-of-9 for 115 yards, had thrown only one pass before Saturday. The freshman was playing for Josh LaRocca, who bruised his right shoulder last week against Baylor.

LaRocca played for one series after Navy took a 24-10 lead with 10:46 left, but threw one incomplete pass and did not return.

After a scoreless third quarter, the Midshipmen took advantage of a fumbled punt by the Owls' Byron Coston to go up by 14. Navy's Tom Poulter recovered the ball at the Rice 24, setting up a 1-yard touchdown run by Monty Williams.

Nelson's run got the Owls closer, but Navy subsequently moved 58 yards in 11 plays before Ryan Bucchianeri kicked a 25-yard field goal with 38 seconds to go.

Colorado's McCartney resigns after final game

BOULDER, Colo. (AP) — Colorado football coach Bill McCartney, who turned around a moribund program and produced a national championship in 1990, resigned on Saturday, moments after Colorado's 41-20 season-ending victory over Iowa State.

McCartney, 54, will coach the Buffaloes in a bowl game, but urged the administration to quickly appoint a successor so as not to disrupt recruiting.

"I've been thinking about this for some time now," McCartney said during a post-game press conference, with his wife Lyndi at his side and his family in attendance. "I've been here 13 years. It's time. There are things I want to do as a family.

"This chapter has ended. I don't know quite what's around the corner."

Bledsoe shoots for winning numbers

Associated Press

In the NFL quarterback numbers game, Drew Bledsoe of New England has the big ones and Steve Walsh of Chicago has the best ones.

Bledsoe broke NFL passing records for attempts (70) and completions (45) and threw for three touchdowns in last Sunday's comeback victory over Minnesota. He leads the NFL in passing with 3,031 yards.

Those are very nice numbers. The ones the Bears prefer, however, are the 5-0 in the win-loss column after Walsh's name. He opened the season as Erik Kramer's backup, and is unbeaten as a relief pitcher.

If he can lift his arm, Bledsoe starts against San Diego Sunday. Walsh, who hasn't had to throw nearly as much, takes the Bears against Detroit in a key NFC Central showdown.

In other games today, Cleveland is at Kansas City, Green Bay at Buffalo, Indianapolis at Cincinnati, Miami at Pittsburgh, Washington at Dallas, Atlanta at Denver, New Orleans at the Los Angeles Raiders, the New York Jets at Minnesota, Philadelphia at Arizona, Tampa Bay at Seattle, and the Los Angeles Rams at San Francisco.

The New York Giants play at Houston Monday night in Jeff Fisher's first game as the Oilers' coach.

In the early going against the Vikings, Bledsoe struggled, going only 4-for-11 and 24 yards as Minnesota led 20-0. When he cranked it up, though, he brought the Pats back with a vengeance. "It's fun to have those kind of things happen as long as you win," he said.

Against the Chargers, Bledsoe faces the AFC's second-best defense, yielding only 290.6 yards per game. San Diego is finishing a three-game road trip which so far has produced a one-point loss at Atlanta and a one-point win at Kansas City. That victory gave the Chargers a two-game lead over the Chiefs in the AFC West.

When Bledsoe beat the Vikings, it reduced Minnesota's NFC Central lead to one game over both Chicago and Green Bay. Detroit is two games back, which makes Sunday's Bears-Lions game important for both teams.

Walsh has been a pleasant surprise for the Bears, completing 102-of-162 attempts for 1,010 yards and five TDs. Chicago also has gotten good production from running back Lewis Tillman, who has gained 530 yards.

The Bears' big problem will be Barry Sanders, who is on a record ground-gaining pace. Sanders rushed for a career-best 237 yards against Tampa Bay last Sunday, pushing his league-leading season's total to 1,319. He needs to average 131 yards per game in Detroit's remaining six games to break Eric Dickerson's single season record of 2,104.

Lions coach Wayne Fontes' assessment of Sanders is simple. "God hasn't made a better running back in this lifetime," he said.

While Green Bay has reversed a shaky start to climb into contention in the NFC Central, Buffalo is struggling. The Bills, AFC champions and Super Bowl losers the past four years, are 5-5, their worst record at this stage of the season since 1987, the last time they missed the playoffs.

"It's not a hole we can't come out of," coach Marv Levy said. "But we've got to win. We've got to do better than we've done."

It won't be easy to start against the Packers, who have their own agenda. Brett Favre has passed for 2,183 yards and 15 TDs and Green Bay has won four of the last five after a 2-3 start.

Both teams face short weeks, with games scheduled on Thanksgiving Day. The Bills are at Detroit and Green Bay plays Dallas. That means the Packers will face both of last year's Super Bowl teams in a span of five days.

"We're starting to make our push for it, and it's coming at a good time because, obviously, playing Buffalo and Dallas back-to-back is as tough as it gets," Favre said.

HOMES & CLASSIFIED

Great style, wonderful character

Set on a quiet cul-de-sac in the Grasslands Estates, this charming four bedroom home offers much of what is good about contemporary home design.

Recently built by F N Builders, this house at 5403 Heartland is a perfect family home with a tremendous amount of space that even includes two gardens.

The floor-plan has been carefully thought out to provide rooms that flow together and are as practical as they are elegant. This is especially noticeable in the open-plan main living area which is made up of the kitchen, informal dining and family rooms. The result is that courtesy of the numerous windows,this is a very sunny, open space.

This suite of rooms typifies the attention to detail and high standard of construction that is to be found throughout the property. The kitchen is perfectly designed, boasts views over the side yard, and is equipped with the latest in appliances and conveniences.

A pantry and central island with shelves and drawers increases the already copious amount of storage space, as does the built-in bookshelves and desk in the adjoining breakfast room and tiled floors add to the easy upkeep aspect of the kitchen.

The family room also has a view of a garden, but a different one this time and it is graced by a large brick fireplace and entertainment center.

The formal rooms in the home are conveniently located next to the kitchen for ease when entertaining and are elegant, well-proportioned rooms with ceiling treatments.

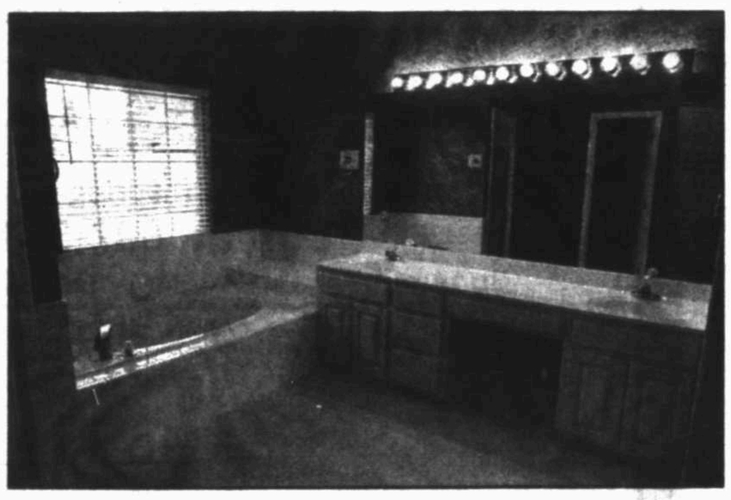

The sequestered master suite is located at the opposite end of the house from the other bedrooms for privacy and boasts an oversized master bath.

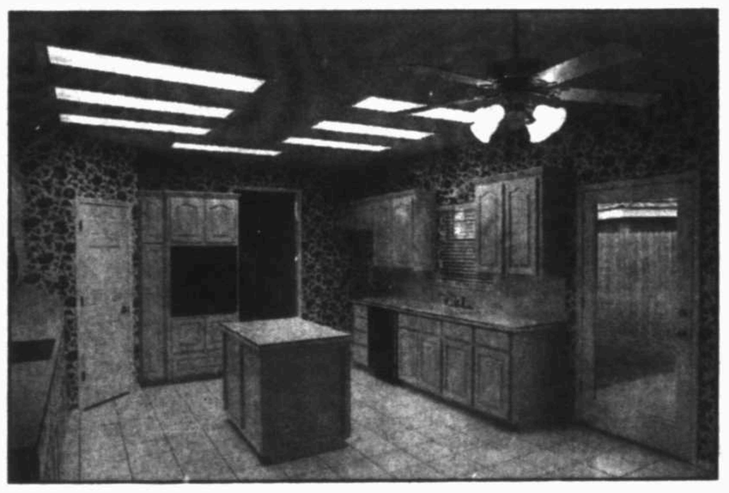

With a whirlpool tub, shower with seat, double vanities and a dressing table, this really is a room in which to escape.

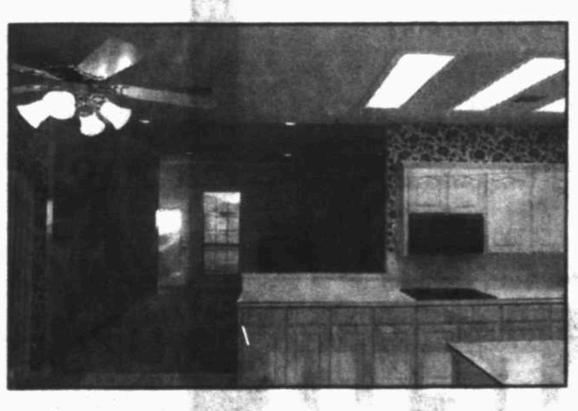

The other three bedrooms occupy a wing of their own with two bathrooms, one of which has a 'Jack and Jill' format for privacy.

This floor plan combines privacy with ease of upkeep, elegance with practicality and the house is being listed for $161,000.

Karen Foster of The Prudential Adobe Realtors is the listing agent and she will be holding an open house from 2 to 4 p.m. this afternoon. For more information, or to arrange an alternative appointment to view the home, call her at 683-9548.

Good communication is key to family involvement during relocation

Pat Orseth
President Midland
Association of Realtors

A successful family relocation depends on knowing what is ahead and planning your moves. "What comes first?" is usually the first question. The art of planning a move involves putting things in order. You will eventually cover all steps - from packing dishes, through selling and buying homes, through parting with old friends to adjusting to a new life in a new place.

One family's overall plan will differ greatly from another's. Here are some ideas to incorporate into your individual family plan:

• Divide a loose-leaf notebook into the 3 phases of relocation. Keep this family "Moving Book" in one place where everyone can check it out and make entries.

• Set up a file for collecting important papers and receipts in connection with your move.

• Hold family "brainstorming" sessions. Record the best ideas in the loose-leaf plan book.

• Assign responsibilities and target dates and review progress at family meetings.

Whether you relish the idea of moving or dread it, there is no question a relocation can be stressful. Yet knowing your next step and being prepared is the best remedy for stress. How and when to break the news to the kids? This is a step to be taken with great finesse. Let the children know about the move at the earliest possible time. Realize, first reactions of some young children involve fear - fear of the unknown: "Where will I go to school?" "Will I have any friends?" "Will there be any place to ride my bike?" Teenagers, on the other hand, may greet the news with anger. Take care to offer news about the move in as honest and positive light as possible. The more you know about the new area, the easier it is to present alternatives positively. Dr. David Wood, a pediatrician, researcher and father of three, said moving always will be stressful for children, but there are ways to help them cope:

• Talk to your kids about the move. "This may provoke a lot of questions, but that's good," Wood said. "Otherwise you won't know what they're worried about."

• Be forthright about why you are moving, even if the circumstances are troubling. Children sense anxiety in their parents and often will blame themselves if they don't know the real reason for a change.

• Try to introduce your children beforehand to their new surroundings. Walk through the new house before moving day; explore the neighborhood. Point out where the beds will go and what closet is for their toys.

• Bring your kids actively into the moving process. Let them pack some of their own belongings and help carry a few things they can handle.

Remember, children are generally more adaptable than parents often give them credit for. Many experts recommend moves during the school year to help children get acquainted with new school mates faster, rather than moving during vacation and rising long lonely months until school starts again.

The key to making a family project out of a move is good communication. Strong feelings may surface. Keep talking, and mostly, keep listening. Frequent meetings - through all stages of the move - go a long way toward getting family members working together.

The Midland Association is one of more than 1,800 boards nationwide that comprise the National Association of Realtors, the nation's largest trade association and the voice for real estate.

This is Part 1 in a 3 Part Series.

New venture to aid property seekers

Beginning in early 1995, customers looking for new properties in the Permian Basin will be able to take advantage of a new collaboration between Realtors in Midland and Odessa.

The Midland Board of Realtors and the Odessa Board of Realtors recently announced the formation of a new corporation, The Greater West Texas Regional MLS, Inc. to "create a more effective joint listing service than either city could provide separately," said Mark Clark, the service's first president.

The new venture will provide clients with a data base of all available properties within a 28-county area.

A new computer system by Realty Information Systems Co. will be used to enable clients to search listings and extract a list of properties that meet their specific requirements.

The computer will provide photographs and data about commercial, residential and farm/ranch properties throughout the area.

Although these services already exist within each city, the new collaboration is the first time the cities have pooled their resources, and local Realtors see the venture as being positive. "As a former chairwomen of the Midland Chamber of Commerce, I am very aware of the impact created when both of our cities work together. To have information about both cities is going to be invaluable to clients," said Joanne Langston, president of Langston Realtors.

"Regionalizing of multiple listing services is a trend in the industry," Clark said, (and) "we are only the third area in Texas so far to regionalize. There is considerable interest statewide and nationally at the progress we are making."

Mark Clark, the first president of the Greater West Texas Regional MLS Inc., announced the service's formation at a press conference Tuesday. The service will provide detailed information about listings in a 28-county area of West Texas, beginning in early 1995.

Prices recover

Crude futures prices moved somewhat higher late last week, boosted by the reported shutdown of Hess' refinery at St. Croix and an explosion at the airport in Nigeria. Also, traders are awaiting Monday's start of the regular OPEC meeting.

Prices began the week with a sharp drop below the $18 level as Iraq renewed efforts to begin exporting oil. Late in the week, futures on the New York Mercantile Exchange closed at $17.65 a barrel. The posted price closed at $16 a barrel.

Chevron purchase

Chevron has acquired the stock of Pakenham Inc., a subsidary of Abilene-based Wes-Tex Drilling Co., which includes 47 producing gas wells in Terrell County. Formerly operated by Riata Energy Inc. of Amarillo, the wells are producing approximately 26 Mmcfd of gas from the Wolfcamp at 8,000 feet. The purchase price was not disclosed.

Chevron Producing U.S.A. President Ray Galvin said the wells would improve Chevron's position in the vital area by giving it a base from which to aggressively increase production. He said the purchase also opens opportunities for Chevron subsidary Warren Petroleum to expand its natural gas processing operations. Also included in the purchase is a gathering system which delivers gas to a pipeline owned by Valero Transmission Co.

Drilling mixed

Drilling activity was mixed during the week ended November 11, according to Baker Hughes Inc.

In the Permian Basin, the count slipped one to 109 for the week. A year ago the count was 134.

The U.S. rig count posted another increase, rising nine to 833; the count a year ago was 872.

Orbitron files

Orbitron Capital Corp. and two of its subsidiaries involved in Yates gas production and processing in Andrews County have filed for chapter 11 bankruptcy. Orbitron says the filing was percipitated by liquity problems caused by unexpected delays beyond its control in the recovery of $2 million in proceeds from a transaction, which had resulted in substantial operating costs. As a result, the company said it was unable to meet its obligations incurred in a 20-well drilling program and plant expansion. In schedules filed with its chapter 11 petition, Orbitron reflected assets of $15.5 million and debt of $5 million.

ENVIRONMENTAL & SAFETY REVIEW

Get ready for Title V

■ New Clean Air Amendments promise to become environmental nightmare for oil industry.

By John Paul Pitts
Business/Oil Editor

A bureaucratic nightmare that has all the similarities a grade B horror flick begins this month for the oil and gas industry as Title V of the 1990 Clean Air Act Amendments become effective.

When Congress, including many Republicans, passed the Clean Air Act Amendments and President Bush signed it into law, it is not likely anyone dreamed that it would become the bureaucratic nightmare it has become. But that is little consolation to an industry that is now subject to permitting every single production, gathering, processing and pipeline operation in the oilpatch.

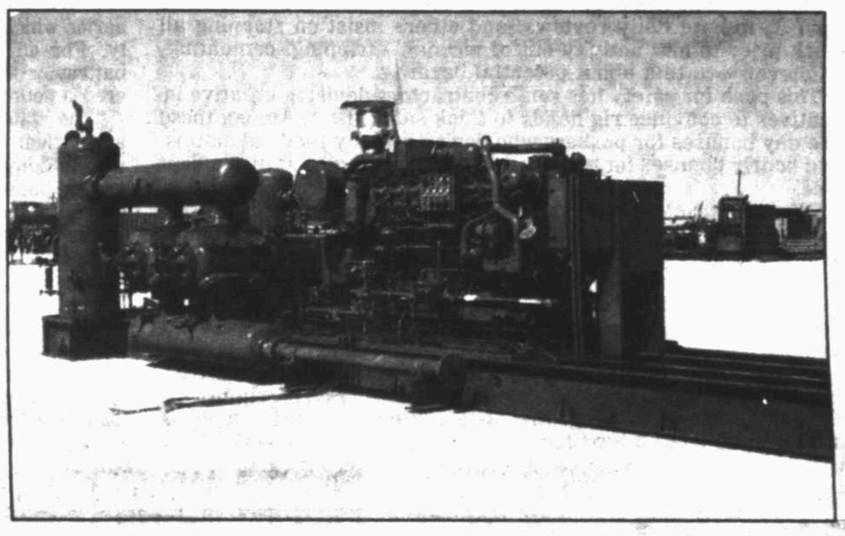

Over the next few months the industry is expected to spend billions on consulting fees, engineering studies, emission inventories, compliance audits, equipment upgrades and permits as it strives to come into compliance with Title V.

"It seems to be the biggest concern of the moment for oil companies," said Lou Mazzulo, an environmental consultant for GCL, a New Mexico environmental consulting firm. "Some oil companies have put it above all other issues, because they now have a year to come into compliance."

For environmental consulting firms like GCL and others it has meant

To heal an oilpatch scar

■ Texon project proves reclamation techniques can work anywhere

By Ellen Hopkins

It's an exaggeration to say that reclamation of the saltwater-contaminated soil in Big Lake Field was like turning desert land to an oasis, but it's not stretching the truth too far.

Thanks to the combined efforts of The University of Texas System, the U.S. Department of Agriculture Soil Conservation Service and Marathon Oil Company, the six square mile area in Reagan County known as the Texon Scar is less blemished for the first time in nearly 70 years.

The Texon Scar began when the Santa Rita No. 1 was discovered in Reagan County in 1923. For 40 subsequent years the excepted practice of produced saltwater disposal was surface discharge into evaporation ponds.

An estimated 200 million barrels (MMBbls) of saltwater was discharged onto the surface, and gravity carried it through drainage ditches to evaporation ponds several miles north/northeast of the field.

As the sodium-laden water traversed the ground, in places saturating areas as wide as 2500 feet, the salt concentration in the soil became too high to support plant life. The result -- 11 square miles of barren landscape. Although some rangeland was reclaimed naturally, all but one-half square mile of the U-shaped Texon Scar remains barren.

Steve Hartmann, director of West Texas operations for University of Texas Lands, initiated the 1989 reclamation project on this half square mile. This small area has since produced barley and kochia, a tumbleweed-like natural plant. And that is a long way from the mesquite graveyard that previously occupied this small plot of land.

"The project's accomplishment is significant, especially when you consid-

Working for total safety

■ Oilpatch goes all out for safety, puts focus on safer workplace

By Ellen Hopkins

Drilling contractors, well service companies and operators used to believe that if you worked in the oilfield, you were going to get hurt. This old philosophy has been replaced with the current motto: all accidents are preventable.

This safety-minded perspective has been incorporated into every wellsite activity, and has been regulated to such an extent that it has created jobs and spawned money-making businesses.

However, while putting safety first has increased business for suppliers and training companies, it is not an inexpensive way for contractors to do business.

Contractors spend a lot of money training employees, purchasing safety equipment and in some cases adding staff to comply with

Ronald Reagan should tell all — now

Pitts

When Ronald Reagan announced several weeks ago that he had Alzheimer's disease, it brought to light the urgent need for the former president to take care of some unfinished business.

With health failing, the 84 year-old former president should now come forward and explain to the world his involvement in the oil price crash of 1986.

That should not be too much to ask of a national leader who is accused of engineering a secret strategy that brought about the collapse of the U.S. oil and gas industry, as well as much of the banking and real estate industry in the southwest. For him not to offer a single word of explanation or apology to the hundreds of thousands of Americans who were wounded by his alleged policies would be the most arrogant act ever committed by a living president.

Lives, careers, families, businesses, futures and fortunes were wiped out by the oil price crash of 1986, and for Reagan to think that he owes no one an explanation is unthinkable. His silence only adds insult to injury and makes a mockery of the sacrifice made by an army of Texans — not just the rich who lost fortunes, but the ordinary workers who lost jobs, homes and cars.

At this point, Mr. Reagan is not so old nor so ill that he could not take an hour or so of his time to give a simple explanation as to why he secretly conspired with the Saudis to take oil prices from $29 a barrel to under $10 a barrel and bring devastation to the economy of the southwest — if indeed he did. And we must assume he did, because almost everyone involved has confessed: "Yes, we did it! And we are proud of it."

But beyond the salt in the wound aspect of his silence, there is new evidence to suggest that Reagan strategies may not have been as noble as reported in the book Victory — that the downfall of Communism was just unexpected icing on the cake, and the real reason for causing oil prices to fall was to stimulate the economy and win re-election for Republicans.

If the citizens of Texas, Oklahoma, New Mexico, Alaska, Louisiana and other oil producing states were called upon to sacrifice their futures and children's futures merely for the sake of winning elections, then the events of 1986 take on a very dark and nasty appearance. It becomes a crime of the heart.

But there is also evidence to suggest that the actions of the Reagan administration in manipulating world oil prices — if true — were in fact illegal and unconstitutional, since only Congress has the power to regulate foreign commerce.

Senate records of three closed-door hearings of the Senate Energy and Natural Resources Committee in the mid-1980s could reveal cost-benefit details of Reagan's cheap oil policy and congressional knowledge and involvement of the Reagan strategy. But so far, the Clinton administration, despite repeated requests by consumer and energy policy groups, has refused to release the proceedings of the hearings.

SAFETY: Emphasized

(From 1E)

OSHA and EPA regulations. Drug screening, safety meetings, and a myriad of equipment – including steel toe boots, glasses and back support belts – are further measures designed to reduce accidents and insurance rates.

OSHA regulations have meant continuous training for all rig hands. Certified training instructors are hired by some oilwell service companies who can't justify a full-time safety director position. Other companies handle most safety training in-house, but contract out CO_2 or hazardous materials training.

Equipment like H_2S monitors and airpacks are not the only required additions. Regulations also require that hazardous material notifications are posted in areas where the materials are found. The posted sheets must also describe the type of protective equipment and clothing handlers should use, the hazardous potential classification and the antidotes.

Although safety is expensive, it has become an economic necessity. A contractor's safety record is often a deciding factor in future work. Operators have changed their selection criteria and placed a contractor's safety record before price.

Some of the majors have been conducting extensive reviews of prospective contractors' in-house safety programs, administration practices and managements' attitudes about safety. Some also visit field locations and well sites, and conduct oral interviews with employees to disclose whether they have been properly trained.

As a result, contractors' safety records have been on the upswing. But so has the demand for righands, and the cost of screening new job applicants and training them once they are hired has also skyrocketed. A pre-employment physical, drug screening and a determination of common sense are all attempts by contractors to avert injuries on new hires. It can cost about $300 per person just to hire them.

It has been a balancing act for contractors who need righands and have to hire untrained people to fill the positions. They realize that safety is compromised with inexperienced rig hands, and have noticed that new hands tend to get hurt within the first two to four weeks after they start. And if they don't get hurt, they are often the cause of accidents for other crew members.

Contractors often rely on experienced hands to train new hires. The new hand might be the fifth man on a crew, learning from the more experienced crew members. But experience doesn't preclude accidents. Even an experienced worker hired from another company needs to learn the operating methods and timing of his new crew. The turnover rate of experienced hands is periodically high.

Most contractors concede that a definite parallel exists between accident rate and turnover, and have tried to compensate with additional training and incentives.

Some contractors begin each tour with a safety meeting, some have 15-minute daily reviews, and others insist on stopping all work prior to any activity out of normal – tripping, cementing, whatever – to talk about potential hazards.

This push for safety has some contractors devising creative incentives to convince rig hands to think safety first. Among these are day bonuses for pushers who don't have any medical claims, and hourly bonuses for drillers and roughnecks who stay accident free.

Other contractors have tried issuing certificates for items like tools and clothes. The certificates are issued monthly for hands who work without a lost-time accident, but only if their entire crew remains accident free. This approach not only generates self-awareness, but has also helped promote teamwork. Other measures include safety contests and BBQ lunches at the wellsite.

Some of the majors have gotten into the act. For those contractors in the major's alliances, or otherwise used on a regular basis, safety incentive programs with material awards, such as knives, have been issued for crews meeting safety standards.

PITTS: Reagan owes oil patch explanation

(From 1E)

I hold Ronald Reagan in high esteem, but I hold truth and justice in even higher esteem. I am a conservative Republican, because I feel Conservatives have the truth and speak the truth. But if Republicans seek to conceal and distort the truth, we are no better than those driven by far left social agendas and political correctness.

President Reagan owes a lot of people an explanation, because it is the right thing to do.

Some may ask, why bother? What's done is done. Bringing Reagan forward would not change anything.

That's true. Having President Reagan confess and explain his role and motives in the Oil Price Crash of 1986 will not change history, but it will make his version a part of the historical record. Otherwise, decades from now historians writing of the oil price crash of 1986 and the downfall of communism, will wonder why he never spoke for the record.

I am confident that someone in the world of Republicanism is close enough to Reagan to pursuade him to come forward and tell all the truth at a national press conference, so that the nation can complete the historical record. If he does not history may not be that kind to Reagan. This is not a matter that will go away. In years to come, writers will never mention the downfall of the Soviet Union without speculating about the downfall of the U.S. oil and gas industry.

Nobody is asking the former president to endure a witchhunt or go to jail. He only needs say: "Yes, this is what happened. We did it for this reason. We expected this to happen. We did not expect this to happen. Looking back we might have done it this way or that way. I am pleased about the outcome."

And while he's at it, if the connection is indeed true, it would not hurt him to say: "Thanks, oil and gas industry, for your sacrifice. Thank you for biting the bullet so that we could carry on our agenda to improve the national economy and cripple the Soviet Union. We put you on the front lines of a war you did not know about, and you paid the ultimate price for your country, and your country owes you a debt of graditude."

TITLE: Environmental nightmare begins

a boom in new business. And some are issuing early warnings to industry that they had better get started now or there will not be anyone available to help when the crunch comes in a few months.

Donald Tryk, senior engineer with GCL, said those involved would include: natural gas producers, natural gas processors, pipelines, and oil producers, and that all facilities from the wellhead on will be subjected to permitting.

According to Environmental Services Inc., also of Albuquerque, the operating permits will not impose substantive new regulatory requirements on affected emission sources, but they do impose significant documentation and record keeping requirements.

Features of the operating permits will include: Specification of all regulations and limits which apply to a source, and identification in detail of all operating scenarios which could affect a facility. For oil producers each tank battery or well net will be considered a source.

"The states will formulate and adopt their own regulations and will administer the permit programs, but state plans must be approved by the EPA," said Tryk. In Texas the program will be administered by the Texas Natural Resources Conservation Commission.

Who is affected? Any facility that emits more than 100 tons per year of any regulated air pollutant is a major source. The emission tonnage will be based on allowable levels listed in facility construction permit or upon potential to emit.

Tryk said that once an operating permit is issued it will remain in force until significant alterations are made.

The potential to emit can be determined by any number of EPA approved methods to calculate emissions such as engineering factors, manufacturer specifications, and stack testing.

"Not all tank batteries will be a major source," said David Sullivan, senior scientist for Geraghty & Miller Environmental Services. "Tank batteries will be subjected to a variable definition that will determine if it emits more than 10 tons of toxins or 100 tons of volatile organic compounds. Gas processing plants will be among the hardest hit, and will be judged on emissions of volume of throughput."

Any source which emits more than 10 tons per year of a hazardous air pollutant is affected. Facilities which emit less than these amounts may obtain a standard exemption, but will not be free of the $25 per ton tax that will be imposed. A facility may be defined as one or a dozen compressors, a single gas processing plant, or a single tank battery.

"Part of the reasoning behind the permitting is to have a basis upon which to tax," said Sullivan, who acknowledged that the annual emission tax bill to the oil and gas industry could run in the billions or dollars.

He says permitting for a small tank net could cost $5-$10,000, and processing plants could expect to pay up to $100,000 for permits. Refineries will pay hundreds of thousands of dollars for permits. For a small tank battery producing less than 25 tons of emissions per year the annual tax bill could be as much as $625 per year for as long as the permit is active.

EPA wants the emissions registered, said Sullivan, because they are going to collect taxes on those emissions at the rate of $25 a ton. He adds that Title V is just the tip of the iceberg for emissions that eventually every industrial facility in the U.S. from dry cleaners to paint shops will be included for permits and taxes. Emissions categories, which are numbered at over 300, will be added a few dozen each year until the year 2010.

"It is possible," said Sullivan, "that we will see much of our refining and heavy industry moving offshore to avoid the stringent environmental emission. There has not been a single refinery built in the country in decades. We are already exporting our refining industry."

He noted that there are standard exemptions in state regulations that would exempt most stationary engines, but the operator would still have to file notification so they could pay their tax.

For those who try to operate unpermitted emission sources there will be criminal sanctions, including possible jail time.

Sullivan advises that operators with major pollution sources should begin now to get ready for Title V. A full ten percent of operators are expected to get a hearing call from Texas Natural Resource Conservation Commission before May 1, 1995 with the remainder receiving calls by November 1995.

"In most cases operators will need help, to determine the amount of emissions, examine all options and determine the cheapest way possible to comply," said Sullivan. "If they wait until the last minute they may not find help."

Some of the options to consider before the permit is issue are: Changing out equipment, better maintenance, catalytic converters, and additional control devices.

New financing for gas sales

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The natural gas industry is exploring the use of financial market mechanisms to expand gas sales in non-traditional markets, according to a report released by the American Gas Association.

"All segments of the natural gas industry are exploring the use of financial market mechanisms to satisfy customer needs for price risk management. In doing so, gas companies have the potential to increase gas use in residential and commercial markets," said A.G.A. President Michael Baly. "These financial tools are especially promising as a way to stimulate demand in new markets, such as natural gas vehicles and gas cooling."

For example, he said, LDCs could encourage fleet owners to convert their vehicles to natural gas by locking in a price for delivered, compressed natural gas that would ensure fleet owners' recovery of conversion costs through fuel savings.

SCAR: Healing saltwater-contaminated Big Lake Field

er that the top three to four feet of soil had blown been away," said Michael "Doc" Weathers, geologist with University of Texas Lands and co-author of a paper on the project. The paper's other authors include Kenneth Moore with University Lands, Donald Ford with USDA Soil Conservation Service and Charles Curlee with Marathon.

Weathers said 40 years of saltwater discharge altered the native plants' ability to survive by binding the water in a form unavailable to the plants. The plants existed in a state of continuous drought even during rainfall. By the project's beginning in 1989, hundreds of mesquite stumps with up to three feet of their roots exposed indicated the effect wind and erosion have had on the upper soil.

Salt also affected the clay subsoil, now on the surface, altering its ability to form clumps or clods, eliminating water and air movement, and resulting in impermeable soil. Average permeabilities were estimated at .2 inches per hour.

Along with an absence of organic material in the soil, the main problem in the area has been a "perched" water table. Perched water occurs where unconfined groundwater is separated from an underlying acquifer by an impermeable barrier, in this case a caliche bed approximately eight feet below the surface.

The salt-contaminated perched water lies between two and six feet below the surface, and it is here that the reclamation project began.

The experiment on this half square mile plot near the highway was designed so rainfall would percolate through the soil. This percolation would accomplish two tasks: lower the perched water column, dissolving some of the salt and washing it away from the area; and leaching salt in the soil near the surface, preventing rainwater/saltwater from backing up above the perched water level and further contaminating the soil.

Underground drainage technology, formerly used to remediate salt in heavily irrigated farmland, was utilized. The entire drainage system was positioned above the caliche bed and within the perched water table.

The system consists of 125,000 feet of underground conduit laid out in a series of 13 main and five submain conduits, with 160 laterals. The laterals lie between two and five feet deep and are spaced 100 feet apart.

"We tried to put the drainage system close to the caliche bed which has an average depth of about eight feet," said Weathers. "Most of the laterals are around five feet deep."

Spacing and depth of the laterals was recommended by the USDA Soil Conservation Service. Laser technology was used to position the drainage system on a grade to correspond to the main size and sump depths.

Eight sumps collect and pump saltwater to saltwater disposal wells. The system disposal capacity is 55,000 barrels of water per day.

To reduce runoff and increase percolation, 92,000 feet of earthen levees or "terraces" were constructed. The 66 terraces were designed to trap up to one foot of rainfall.

Following construction, the soil areas between the terraces were ripped to increase percolation and provide a seed-bed for germination. In November 1991, the area was seeded by plane with barley.

"It was fortuitous that the area had an extremely high rainfall in the few months immediately after installation," said Weathers. "In an area that has averaged around 17 inches a year, almost 11 inches fell during those subsequent four months."

By April 1992, a fair-to-good stand of barley was produced over 75 percent of the experimental area. During the spring and summer, kochia established itself over 90 percent of the project area, and has since added stability and organic matter to the soil.

Due to lower than average rainfall in 1993 and 1994, negligible amounts of rainwater have been collected, and the barley planted last year did not come up. But the reestablishment of kochia was the first occurrence of natural vegetation within the Texon scar in 70 years. Adjacent areas to the project developed virtually no rangeland plants.

Future plans for the project area could include supplemental fresh water, soil-amending chemicals, or organic mulching. Weathers said occasionally an independent test of a new hybrid seed on a half-acre of land is requested. Current plans are to continue monitoring the area.

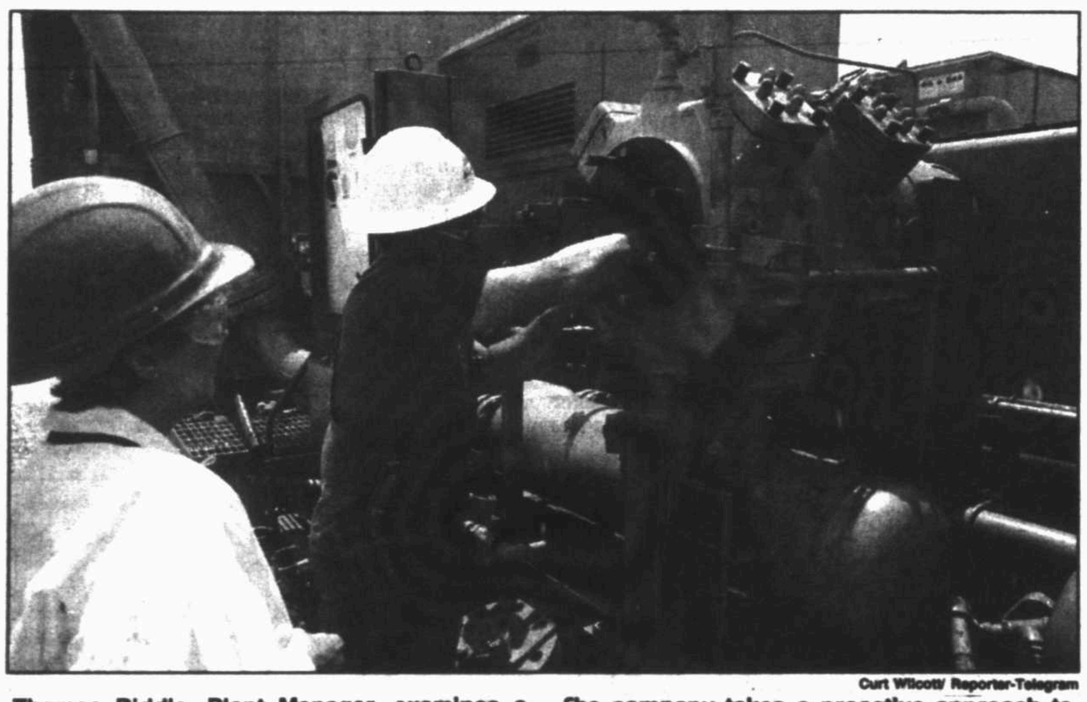

"Sufficient rainfall on a continuing basis could keep the area green and further leach salt from the soil, but we do live in a desert," said Weathers.

He said the project's benefits include not only the reclamation of part of the Texon Scar such that the methods and design of this system could be adapted to other areas, but also the way the project came about.

"This was a cooperative effort between a federal agency (USDA Soil Conservation Service), a state agency (University of Texas Lands) and private industry (Marathon Oil Co.)," Weathers said. "And that's always of benefit."

Thomas Riddle, Plant Manager, examines a compressor at GPM's Zia Plant open house. The company takes a proactive approach to regulations.

GPM likes proactive approach

Staff Report

GPM Gas Corp. is taking a positive and proactive approach to environmental protection and employee safety.

Instead of being frustrated by regulations, GPM has voluntarily developed programs that make both good environmental sense and good business sense.

Vince Bernard, director of safety and environmental affairs for GPM's New Mexico region, views GPM's approach as a win for all parties — the environment, GPM and producers.

Many of the "environmentally friendly" actions taken by GPM result from a commitment to the idea of a waste hierarchy. As explained by Jed Watkins, environmental specialist in GPM's West Texas region, "This concept maintains that the highest form of environmental protection is engineering problems out at the front end. By working to eliminate waste or pollutants from the process, we can eliminate the problems and save the time and costs of clean up, disposal or even recycling."

Technology is one method GPM is applying in its commitment to the environment. GPM is voluntarily using technological advances to dramatically reduce emissions from the engines that power gas compressors. By utilizing lean-burn technology on new engines when possible and by retrofitting older engines with catalytic converters, GPM has achieved an approximate 80 percent reduction in emissions in the West Texas and New Mexico regions in the past two years.

This is not only good for the environment, but also good for GPM and its producers. Because the emissions are far below threshold levels, construction permits can be issued more quickly. Bernard states, "By speeding up the permitting process, we can respond more quickly to producer needs and set compression in the field — instead of having to wait eight to 10 months for the permit."

GPM also uses air/fuel ratio controllers to monitor and adjust air/fuel mixtures. This keeps engines operating at optimum levels — benefiting the environment through more effective fuel combustion and benefiting GPM through less maintenance and longer lasting engines.

Environmental protection is also important when designing facilities. GPM designs its facilities to prevent spills and leaks. For added protection, GPM builds concrete pads, curbs and drip pans to ensure that any leaks or spills that may occur are carefully contained. It's good for the environment. And it's good for business by saving time and costs of clean up, remediation and reporting.

At the GPM Goldsmith plant, technology is making a significant impact. Watkins reports that 31 regular reciprocating engines are being replaced by only two turbine engines. While contributing to a five-fold decrease in emissions, these new engines help the entire plant operate more efficiently and decreased fuel usage. The value flows back to the producer through percent-of-proceeds contracts.

GPM also commits its time and money to education on environmental issues. It works closely with state agencies to ensure they have a good understanding of the latest technologies and their impact on the environment. And GPM's contributions to the Sibley Learning Center are having an impact on the environmental education of students in Midland's elementary schools.

Permian Basin students are able to incorporate night courses into Midland College's new environmental studies program, which is training and retraining for a new industry.

School for the environment

By Ellen Hopkins

Environmentalism has become a new industry in the oilpatch and Midland College is doing its part to make sure the new industry will have well trained employees for the fast-growing industry.

A cross-section of students — comprised of professional geologists and engineers, displaced industry workers, and high school graduates — have been learning environmental technology at Midland College from local specialists.

"It's an excellent exchange of information in the true spirit of a community college," said Fred Wetendorf, director of the environmental technology program at Midland College.

The program is just over one year old, and Wetendorf couldn't be happier about local professionals teaching students who are already employed locally or who plan to work in the community after completion of the program.

Included in the course curriculum is the application of career-related activities encountered in a student's environmental area of specialization. Students are required to work at least 20 hours per week in a paid job in environmental sciences under the supervision of the college.

The program has already realized graduates since it began in September of '93, and the last recorded semester indicated 70 students participated in the program. Students can choose between a one-year certificate or a two-year associate of applied science degree, and graduates in each category have recently acquired local jobs.

The two-year degree includes courses from other disciplines such as microbiology, technical writing, statistics and ethics. Both the two-year degree and one-year certificate require a course in geology.

Wetendorf said environmental technology students come from three basic groups. Some are displaced industry personnel whose tuition is funded through the Job Training Partnership Act (JTPA), and others are high school graduates who have taken an interest in the environmental field and see a future in it.

He said about one-third of the program's students are degreed geologists and engineers who are either taking courses at their employers' request or because they have the foresight to realize their corporations will need employees with this knowledge.

The program's curriculum encompasses surface and subsurface hydrology, contamination and remediation, waste management, site assessment and property transfer, and environmental sampling, among other courses.

The curriculum enables students to interpret state and federal regulations, perform audit compliance, assist in emergency response, conduct site assessments, design remediation procedures and collect samples according to Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) approved methodologies.

Among the in-depth studies is a course on aquifers in which students evaluate the hydrologic cycle and a climatic impact on aquifer withdrawal and recharge. In a related subsurface hydrology course, fluid-rock interaction, capillarity, saturation and transition zones are studied.

A course covering contamination and remediation technology not only provides lab exercises, but emphasizes the communication of complex remediation methodologies to clients as well as stressing the ethics of client/consultant relationships.

Wetendorf said that because course instructors are local professionals, students take field trips to perform sampling procedures and witness field operations.

"Our instructors from Conoco, for example, will take students to one of their sites," said Wetendorf. "This not only offers students hands-on experience, but in turn provides the instructors a chance to show how their company has complied with federal and state regulations."

Along with representatives from major oil companies, instructors include Joe Reed and Alan Schmidt of the national environmental firm Geraghty & Miller, and Jack Burns from the City of Midland's Solid Waste Disposal department.

For the upcoming spring '95 semester, Wetendorf said he is excited to have Dr. Rao from Rexene's analytical laboratory scheduled to teach a sampling course.

Building a staff of instructors and staying up-to-date on this ever-changing facet of the industry was a challenge Wetendorf was prepared for. He had been teaching part time at Midland College for five years, and previously worked as an exploration geologist for Shell Oil Company since the late 60s. He helped write the original proposal for the environmental technology curriculum.

He said the initial recommendation for the program stemmed from a combination of industry request and Wetendorf's recognition that the community needed an avenue to understand EPA and state regulations.

With input from the majors and assistance from Geraghty & Miller, the program was constructed and presented before the Higher Education Coordinating Board in Austin. It remains the only complete, certified, community college program in environmental technology in the state.

Tank Safety Gauge is right for safety and environment

Tank Safety Gauge's gauging system is a simple and inexpensive device which mounts to the outside of tanks within minutes and allows lease operators to visually gauge tanks in a matter of seconds instead of minutes.

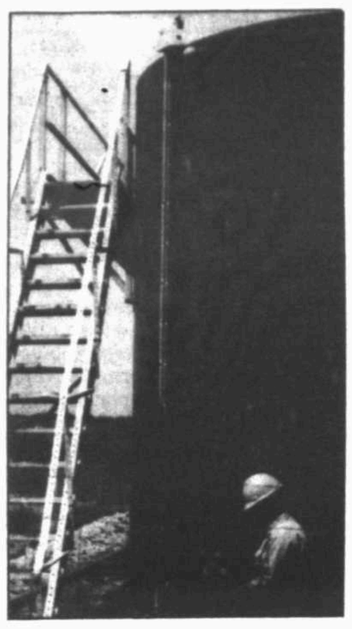

This safe, comfortable and quick gauging method not only increases morale by simplifying a hazardous and unpleasant task, it also improves efficiency by reducing gauging time, thus leaving more time for routine duties.

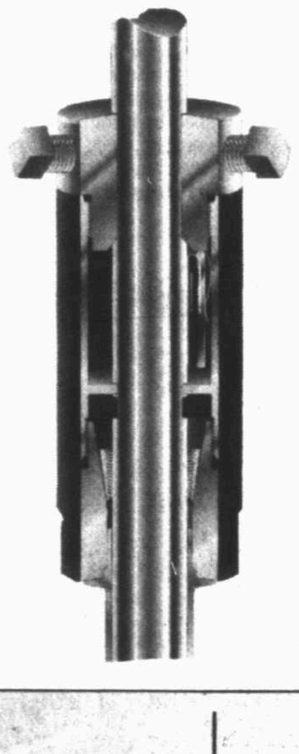

Through the use of Tank Safety Gauge's gauging system in H_2S situations, the secondary lease operator may not be required, resulting in considerable savings to producers.

Tank Safety Gauge greatly improves safety conditions by keeping lease operators off hot, muddy, slippery and icy tank batteries during inclement weather. Should weather conditions pose access problems, tanks can be gauged through binoculars.

Cost of the company's gauging system is relatively inexpensive, starting at only $550 for an average gauge. The gauges have been installed on numerous tank batteries in the Permian Basin.

The patented system utilizes a simple float, cable, pully arrangement which allows it to be installed in a matter of minutes.

Innovative polish rod liner has new features

Due to increased environmental concerns regarding the possibility of an open hole when a polished rod breaks, Hasco Manufacturing Company has developed the Hasco Environmental Safety Seal Liner.

The purpose of the liner is to prevent excessive damage to the well string and environment in the event a polish rod breaks or slips out of the rolish rod clamp. It is also designed to prevent an open hole in the event the rods fall through the stuffing box.

The innovative new product works the same as conventional polished rod liners, but includes important addition features:

- A Safety Clamp with more holding power than most polished rod clamps is incorporated to secure the polished rod at the stuffing box when a rod breaks.
- If the polished rod vacates the stuffing box, an automatic check valve or "flapper" is designed to shut, reducing the risk of oil leakage through an open hole.

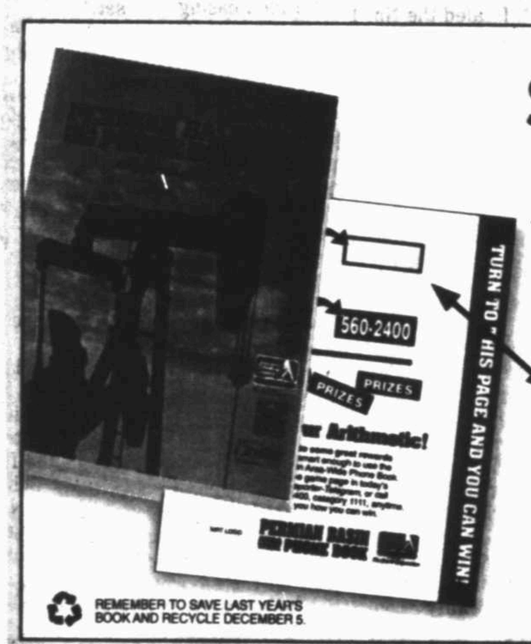

The Safety-Seal Liner has added value at minimal cost, because it was designed to prevent clean-up costs and save damage to the sucker rods. The heat-treated slips have been incorporated in the liner to secure to the polish rod and keep it from going through the stuffing box.

Howard County has gained a Fusselman discovery, 1.5 miles west of 3,300 ft. San Andres production in the Moore field and four miles northeast of similar production in the Lomax field, five miles southwest of Big Spring.

J. CLEO THOMPSON potentialed the No. 1 Quinn to flow 277 barrels of 51.6 gravity condensate and 5 Mcfd on a 7/64 inch choke with flowing tubing pressure of 1,140 psi. The well flowed from perforations 10,362 to 10,383 ft., which had been acidized with 250 gallons of acid.

Permitted as a 10,500 ft. wildcat, the well was drilled to total depth of 10,383 ft. with 5 1/2 inch casing set at 10,362 ft.

Formation tops, on ground elevation of 2,493 ft., include the Yates at 1,828 ft., Spraberry at 6,360, Dean at 7,584, Wolfcamp at 7,845, Strawn at 9,539, and Fusselman at 10,330 ft.

Location is 1,819 ft. from north and 305 ft. from east lines of Section 34, T&P survey, Abst. 1271.

Bone Spring opened in Eddy County field

MARALO INC. has completed a Bone Spring discovery in Eddy County, N.M.

On potential test, the No. 2 Keystone flowed 111 barrels of crude, 1,270 Mcfd and 191 barrels of water on an 18/64 inch choke with flowing tubing pressure of 950 psi. The well flowed from perforations 6,307 to 6,514 ft., no treatment reported.

Total depth is 6,700 ft., where 5 1/2 inch casing was set.

The well was drilled to 6,802 ft. and plugged back to 6,747 ft. with 4 1/2 inch casing set at 6,798 ft.

On kelly bushing elevation of 2,532 ft., formation tops include the Clearfork at 3,253 ft., Lower Spraberry at 3,750, Dean at 4,477, Wolfcamp at 4,590, Base Middle Wolfcamp Limestone at 5,656, and Canyon at 6,179 ft.

Location is 850 ft. from north and 2,260 ft. from east lines of Section 24, Block QR, HE&WT survey, Abst. 5566.

The well will be dually produced with production from the Ozona (Canyon Sandstone) field. The well was tested in December 1992 for a calculated absolute open flow of 1,253 Mcfd from Canyon perforaions 6,200 to 6,696 ft.

Bellwether, Hampton agree to merger

HOUSTON — Bellwether Exploration Co. and Hampton Resources Corp., two Houston-based independent energy companies, have executed a definitive merger agreement.

Under the terms of the merger agreement, Bellwether would acquire all of the outstanding shares of Hampton's common and preferred stock. If the merger is consummated, Hampton would become a wholly-owned subsidiary of Bellwether.

The aggregate merger consideration payable to Hampton stockholders ranges from $23.5 million to $25.3 million, based on approximately 3,753,000 fully diluted shares of Hampton stock outstanding. The merger consideration of $6.75 per share is subject to a reduction to $6.25 per share if Hampton does not close the pending acquisition of certain oil and gas properties. Each Hampton stockholder may elect to receive payment in cash or in shares of Bellwether common stock.

Consummation of the proposed merger is contingent upon approval by Hampton's stockholders.

Santa Fe selling energy operations

DALLAS (AP) — Santa Fe International Corp. is trying to sell its exploration and production operations as part of a strategy by its shareholder, Kuwait Petroleum Corp.

Gordon M. Anderson, Santa Fe's chairman of the board, president and chief executive officer, said that the company hopes to close the sale by mid-1995.

Dallas-based Santa Fe did not disclose the potential buyer.

Santa Fe's oil and gas operations are primarily in the United States, with principal operating areas located in the Gulf of Mexico. Some of the company's approximately 1,140 wells are located in Kansas and Oklahoma.

Sante Fe estimates that 140 employees — 100 in Dallas — will be affected by the sale.

dustry personnel had to leave the area to get this kind of training," Wetendorf said.

In addition to the certificate and degree programs, continuing education course credits are available for industry personnel who require a certain number of annual continuing education credits to ensure they stay up-to-date.

He said the college takes a continuing education course on the road to serve residents of Ft. Stockton, Big Lake and Ozona, because those cities are within Midland College's district.

"It's a way for us to share the expertise we have," he said. "Mark Henkhaus, with the Texas Railroad Commission, is the instructor."

Because he has close ties with the TRC and area businesses to help him stay abreast of regulatory changes, Wetendorf said he will continue revising the curriculum and offering seminars based on the latest EPA changes.

For example, he said his instructors informed him when Congress recently reauthorized the Clean Air Act which incorporates Title III and Title V. All businesses are impacted by this type of legislation.

"Our plan is to blend with the oil and gas industry rather than hitting them head on," he said. "And it's wonderful to see the supportive response from the community."

The Final Solution for SOIL REMEDIATION
LOW TEMPERATURE THERMAL DESORPTION

① INFEED PROCESSING UNIT; The contaminated soil is deposited in the infeed hopper. The soil is then transferred via a remotely controlled, variable speed conveyor to a Screen/Shaker/Crusher. From this infeed processing system, the product is weighed "on the fly" as it passes over a conveyor belt scale and into the rotary kiln.

② ROTARY KILN; Contaminated soil is brought to temperatures between 400-1000 Degrees Fahrenheit. Moisture is evaporated and the hydrocarbons within the soil are volatilized and transferred to the thermal oxidizer. The treated soil exits the kiln by way of the discharge auger. The processed soil is quenched in the outfeed auger to cool the material and suppress fugitive dust emissions.

③ OXIDIZER; The volatilized hydrocarbons are passed through the thermal oxidization section of the system where they are subject to temperatures of 1425 Degrees Fahrenheit or more for a minimum of 1/2 second, thus assuring destruction of the hydrocarbons.

TransTexas spuds well in Val Verde

HOUSTON — TransTexas Gas Corp. has spudded a deep well 60 miles north of Del Rio in Val Verde County, Texas, using advanced air drilling technology. Projected to reach a total depth of 16,500 feet, the Poussard No. 1 well will test the Ellenberger formation known for its high gas reserve potential.

The air drilling system is being used on the well to avoid costly drilling delays from a shallower shale formation that exists in the area. Total depth is expected to be reached in late January or early February of 1995.

Earlier this year, the company announced it had acquired a 100 percent working interest in a 33,945 acre Ellenberger prospect from Westar Royalty. The Ellenberger formation is gas productive in Terrell and Pecos counties where such prolific gas fields as Brown-Basset and Puckett are located.

The Poussard No. 1 is south-southwest of the Brown-Basset field in an area that has very promising geology. The well will test a large structure, mapped by seismic data, along the same structural lineament as the Brown-Basset and Puckett fields. The gas reserves in these fields are in excess of 1 trillion cubic feet, with some individual wells having shown themselves to be capable of producing up to 80 Bcf over their lifetime.

"We're drilling in an area of great potential while there has been limited activity," said Arnold Brackenridge, president of TransTexas. "These geologic structures have been shown to contain significant gas reserves and highly productive wells."

"What makes this project somewhat unique is the drilling method being employed," continued Brackenridge. "The air drilling technique has been used on only a limited number of wells to this depth in very sensitive to fluids. The company used great care in selecting a rig and crew with strong experience in this type of drilling.

TransTexas Gas is engaged in the exploration, production and transmission of natural gas in the Lobo Trend and other areas of South Texas.

Nuevo income drops

HOUSTON — Nuevo Energy Co. reported third quarter net income of $1.9 million or 13 cents per share, compared to $2.4 million or 18 cents per share in the same period of 1993.

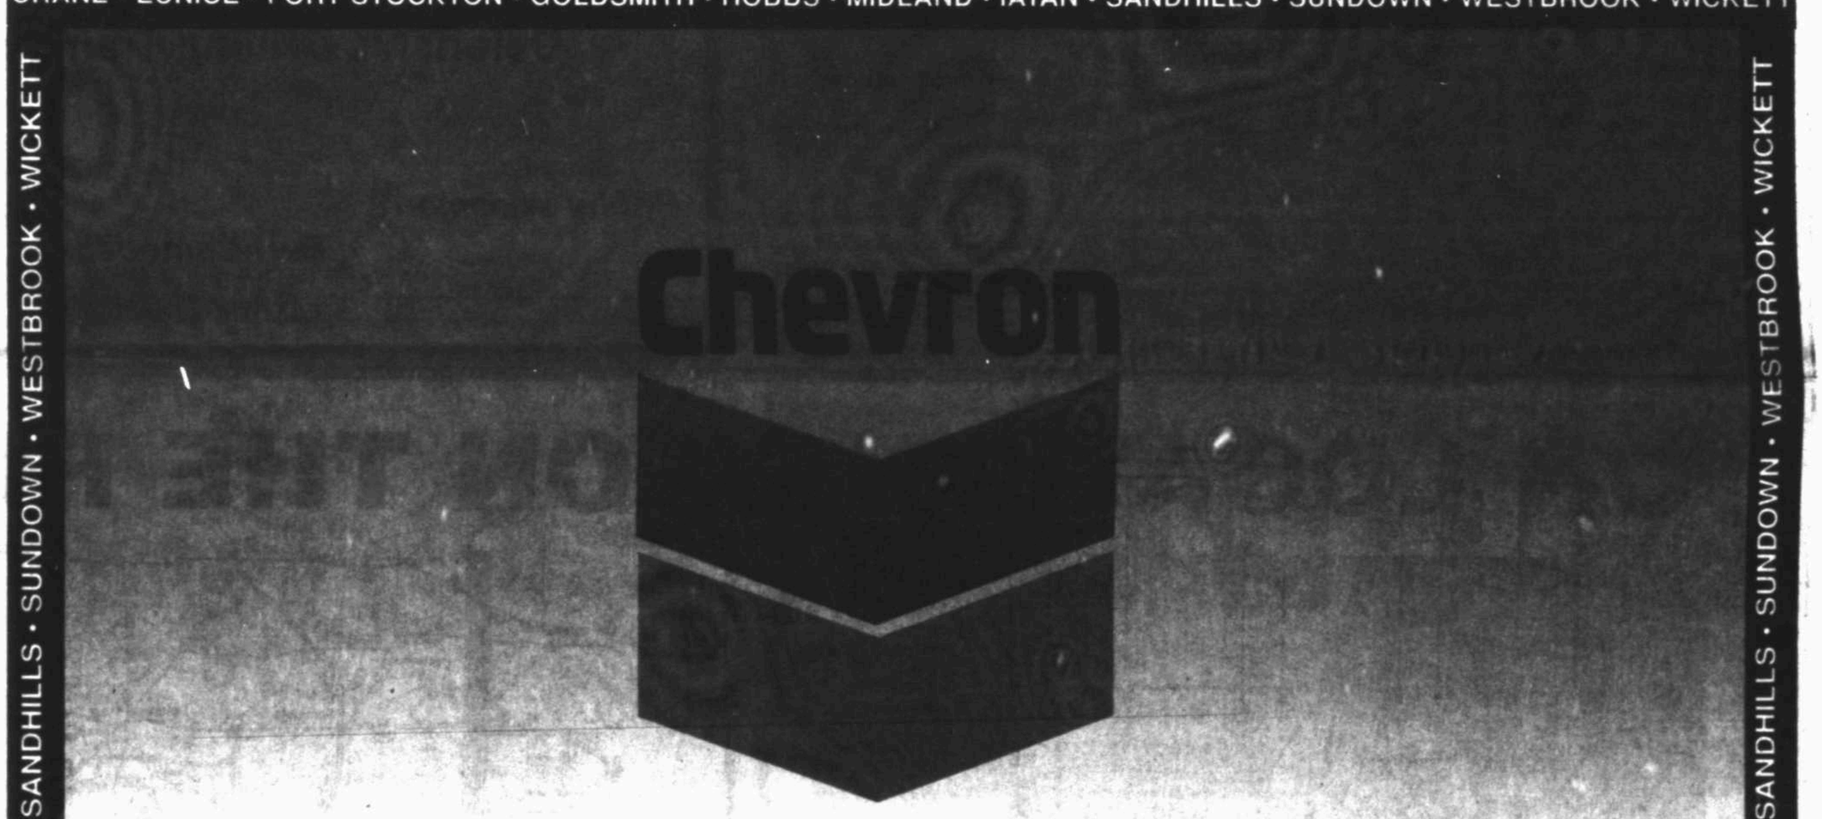

Consolidated total revenues for the third quarter were $32.1 million, compared to $28.1 million during last year's third quarter, a 14 percent increase. Operating cash flow was $13.1 million or $1.19 per share, compared to $11.6 million or $1.05 per share in the same 1993 period.

Oil and gas production in the third quarter averaged 6,641 barrels of oil per day and 68.9 million cubic feet per day, up 29 percent and 49 percent, respectively, from last year's third quarter. The average realized oil price was $15.55 per barrel, down 3 percent from the same quarter last year. Natural gas prices averaged $1.86 per thousand cubic feet.

Natural remediation improves

By Mella McEwen
Staff Writer

Oil operators have found, and regulators are agreeing, that letting Mother Nature do her job is frequently the best way to clean up a hydrocarbon spill through bioremediation.

Bioremediation is defined as "a natural, environmentally friendly process of eliminating unwanted contaminants. In this process, microbes are utilized to break down hydrocarbon contaminates and other wastes into non-hazardous compounds such as fatty acids, carbon dioxide and water."

The three primary methods of removing or treating hydrocarbon-contaminated soils are in regulated, permitted landfills, through thermal incineration or through bioremediation.

The biggest advantage of bioremediation is its cost-effectiveness, with costs ranging from $20 to $40 per yard. To dispose of the soil in a landfill can cost anywhere from an estimated $34 per yard to over $200 per yard, and thermal incineration costs range from $60 to over $100 per yard.

Bioremediation got a boost from the Texas Railroad Commission a year ago when it implemented Rule 91, effective Nov. 1, 1993. This rule authorizes bioremediation of crude oil spills, passed in response to concerns about improper oil spill clean-up, according to Mark Henkhaus, director of the commission's District 8, covering the Midland area. The rule requires the clean-up of crude oil spills to 10,000 parts per million total petroleum hydrocarbons within one year.

The rule, he said, encourages on-site remediation of crude oil spills, but does not include other hydrocarbons or saltwater spills. It allows for natural bioremediation or enhanced remediation with the addition of outside microorganisms.

The level "is a level where the hydrocarbons are not mobile and will not migrate. At that point, plant life generally can be established and further remediation usually occurs naturally," Henkhaus said.

He added that industry response has been enthusiastic because "we think it is the first rule in the oil industry that actually gives a numeric clean-up standard, it gives operators a numeric goal to reach to determine if something's clean. Previous clean-up guidelines had been vague on when clean is clean," he said.

In establishing the rule, the commission received input from the industry, industry associations, environmental concerns and remediation experts, Henkhaus said, noting that at the time concerns were raised that the regulation would be too strict.

"But I believe most of that concern is probably unfounded in that the regulation is effective. The 10,000 ppm goal is easily attainable and it's a number we've determined eliminates any further environmental damage."

Bioremediation may be effective and cost-efficient, but its main disadvantage is that it can take one to two years to biodegrade hydrocarbons to regulatory-acceptable levels.

"In general, my experience shows that if you start with a 5 percent concentration of hydrocarbons out here in West Texas, more than 80 percent will be gone after the first year," said Bill Priebe with the Midland office of K.W. Brown Environmental Services, adding that if the concentration of hydrocarbons is too high, it has a toxic effect on the microorganisms in the soil, causing the spill to last longer because there are fewer microorganisms to perform the biodegradation.

There has arisen in recent years a wide difference of opinion in bioremediation circles on the use of natural organisms versus genetically-engineered organisms.

Some firms heavily market genetically-engineered organisms as being quicker and more efficient.

George Harris, vice president of operations for Alpha West Inc. of Midland, says adding an outside culture to the soil to augment the native organisms can bring about quicker, more effective remediation.

He said that, for Alpha West, using microorganisms to clean up soil is more prevalent in New Mexico than in Texas, because the Bureau of Land Management in New Mexico is more stringent with oil companies about oil spills. The company's mainstay, he said, is providing microorganisms to treat paraffin buildup downhole.

Micro-TES of San Antonio advertises the fact that it has over 60 different species of microorganisms to metabolize hydrocarbons, and can select different ones for use, depending on the type of hydrocarbon to be metabolized.

"The best way is to stimulate the organisms already in the soil," says Shane Eastep, vice president of operations for Eco-logical Environmental Services in Midland. "The best way do do that is with water and a high nitrogen-based fertilizer. The naturally-occurring organisms are already adapted to the soil-type. If you use genetically-engineered organisms, the high Ph of the soil out here can kill them."

Priebe concurs with Eastep's observation, saying that "generally I recommend leaving the spill alone and letting the native organisms metabolize the material. We can assist those organisms in metabolizing hydrocarbons by adding fertilizers; out here adding water makes a significant difference, and sometimes you can add an organic material such as hay or other non-salty organic materials that you can mix with the native soils."

Out here in West Texas, where oil wells produce saltwater, Priebe said companies such as his are looking for ways to remediate saltwater spills.

"Saltwater will not bioremediate," he said. "That is a different technology altogether, and right now there is no good method of remediating saltwater spills. Saltwater spills do not harm humans and won't hurt animals badly unless they drink the saltwater, but the spills will cause big sterile spots on the soil. This area is sensitive to that because we have low rainfall."

He said right now the best technology is removing the saltwater and heavily-contaminated soil and mixing the remaining soil with a deluent such as virgin soil, hay or other organic material to lower the salt concentration.

"If you effectively decrease the salinity," Priebe said, "plants will grow," adding that sometimes the area is revegetated with specific plants that are salt-tolerant.

Henkhaus said the commission has formed a study group to look into saltwater remediation techniques and standards.

"We're looking at all alternatives, not just soil removal," he said. "We're looking at technologies such as ion displacement and sodium chloride dilution."

He predicted that the commission will propose clean-up standards for saltwater spills in the near future, most likely a year or two from now.

Clayton Williams Energy earnings slump

Clayton Williams Energy Inc. reported a third quarter 1994 net loss of $782,000 or 14 cents per share. In 1993, the company reported net income of $923,000 or 16 cents per share.

The loss is due primarily to lower oil and gas production during the quarter, resulting from a curtailment of drilling activity earlier in the year while oil prices were low.

Oil and gas production averaged 7,700 BOE per day for the third quarter, down 25 percent from 10,300 BOE for the same period a yea ago. The average oil price was up 2 percent for the quarter at $17.07 per barrel compared to $16.77 for the third quarter of 1993. The average gas price, down 8 percent, was $1.92 per Mcf compared to $2.09 in 1993.

For the first nine months of 1994, the company has experienced a net loss of $2.3 million or 41 cents per share on revenues of $37.5 million. For the same period in 1993, the company had a net income of $3 million or 71 cents per share on revenues of $45.5 million. Lower realized oil and gas prices and decreased production account for the decrease in revenues for 1994 as compared to 1993.

During the nine month period, oil and gas production averaged 8,600 BOE per day in 1994, down 12 percent from 9,800 BOE per day for 1993. The average oil price was down 14 percent at $15.53 per barrel as compared to $18.02 for the first nine months of 1993. The average gas price, down 9 percent, was $2.01 per Mcf as compared to $2.22 in 1993.

The company announced that its use of horizontal slim-hole drilling techniques has been successful in reducing the drilling costs for wells in the northern part of the Giddings field located in Brazos, Burleson and Robertson counties, by an average of approximately 25 percent per well. During the third quarter, the company drilled and completed 3.0 gross (2.5 net) wells using this technique. An additional 7.0 gross and net wells have been drilled and completed during the first half of the fourth quarter and currently the company has three rigs under contract. This drilling is being conducted on the company's block of approximately 63,000 gross (51,300 net) acres in the northern part of the Giddings field.

The company completed two wells drilled earlier in the year in the Colhue Huapi area of Argentina. Under an agreement with CAPSA EPLORADORA SA, the company was to drill a minimum of six wells by January 1, 1995 or pay a contract termination fee of $437,500 per well for any well which was not drilled. The company has negotiated an extension of its obligations to March 1, 1995. The company is evaluating the results of the two wells drilled to date and, depending upon further analysis, may either drill or cause to be drilled the four remaining wells or alternatively pay the stipulated fee for any wells not drilled.

Property sales finaled

The properties were located in Texas, Oklahoma, New Mexico, Louisiana, Arkansas, Kansas, Michigan, Mississippi, Montana, North Dakota, Utah, Wyoming.

Norway approves Phillips' Ekofisk II plan

BARTLESVILLE, Okla. — Phillips Petroleum Co. Norway, as operated of the Phillips Norway Group (PNG) announced that the Norwegian parliament has approved the Ekofisk II plan, submitted in March 1994 to provide for the continued long-term operation of Ekofisk, the PNG's giant oil and gas venture in the Norwegian sector of the North Sea.

"The Ekofisk II plan will lead to significantly reduced operating costs and will allow the maximum long-term recovery of Ekofisk field reserves," said Knut Aam, managing director of Phillips Petroleum Company Norway.

Additional recoverable reserves in the production license after 2011 are estimated at more than 280 million barrels of oil equivalent.

The plan features five key items:

- The Norwegian state acquires a direct ownership share of 5 percent beginning January 1, 1999. The state also will fund 5 percent of the development costs for Ekofisk II.
- The royalty on oil and natural gas liquids will be discontinued once the project is completed. The tentative date for completion is late 1998.
- The production license is extended from 2011 through 2028.
- The operating licenses for the pipelines owned by Norpipe a.s. are extended from 2005 for the oil pipeline and 2007 for the gas pipeline through 2028.
- After 2005 for the oil pipeline and 2007 for the gas pipeline, the equity shares will be 30 percent for PNG, 30 percent for Statoil and 40 percent for the Norwegian state. Current ownership is divided 50/50 between PNG and Statoil.

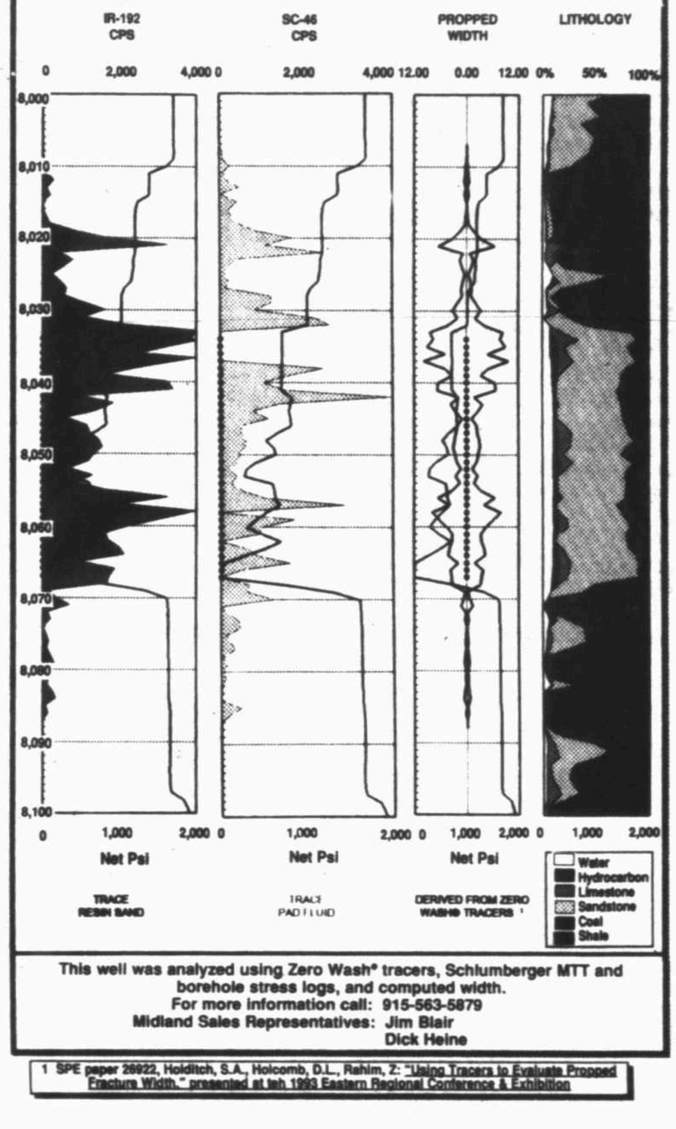

The Ekofisk II plan provides for the construction of two new platforms - a wellhead platform to be completed in 1996, and a combined process and transportation platform to be completed in 1998, linked with the existing Ekofisk Complex.

The new facilities are expected to allow production of the field to the end of the revised license term of 2028. The estimated capital cost of the Ekofisk II facilities is $3 billion.

The Ekofisk Complex is the hub of the world's largest petroleum transportation system. Currently, about 560,000 barrels of oil per day are transported through the Ekofisk Complex to Teesside, England, and approximately 2 billion cubic feet a day of natural gas are transported to Emden, Germany.

Coventures in Ekofisk are: Phillips Petroleum Company Norway (operator), 36.96 percent; Norsk Fina A/S, 30 percent; Norsk Agip A/S, 13.04 percent; Elf Petroleum Norge A/S, 7.594 percent; Norsk Hydro a.s., 1 percent; Elf Rex Norge A/S, 0.855 percent; and Norminol A/S, 0.304 percent.

New techniques alter thermal incineration

By Melia McEwen
Staff Writer

The use of thermal incineration in soil remediation is an area that is seeing changes in its technology.

Two companies have unveiled alternatives to incineration, one of them a Midland company.

Fiery Furnace Environmental is marketing its Low Temperature Thermal Desorption Unit as an alternative to incineration.

It operates on the theory that hydrocarbons do not need to be oxidized in the same chamber, or at the same temperature, as the soil being treated.

There are four primary components to the processing system.

First is the infeed processing unit, where the contaminated soil is deposited and conveyed to a screen/shaker/crusher, then weighed "on the fly" as it passes into the rotary kiln.

In the rotary kiln, the soil is brought to temperatures between 400 and 1,000 degrees Fahrenheit, where moisture is evaporated and the hydrocarbons in the soil volatilized and transferred to the third component, the thermal oxidizer. The treated soil is removed by discharge auger, quenched in the outfeed auger to cool the material and suppress fugitive dust emissions and transported to stockpiles.

In the oxidizer, the volatilized hydrocarbons are destroyed by being subjected to temperatures of 1,425 degrees Fahrenheit or more for at last a half-second.

The fourth component is the control system, an "on board" Allen-Bradley computer system and other remote control devices that control the entire Thermal Desorption System.

Dallas-based Hrubetz Environmental Systems has unveiled its patented remediation process, the Hrubout Hot Air Extraction Process.

This process is a portable system for in situ treatments and injects pressurized, super-heated air via perforated piping into and directly below the contaminated soil zone.

As the soil water is evaporated, soil pores become less constructed, soil permeability increases and greater air flow carries higher temperatures. Lighter hydrocarbons are volatized and move to the surface, which is covered with an impermeable cover. While most volatiles exit with the soil water, the heavier hydrocarbon particles are directed, under vacuum, into an incinerator. The contaminants that will not volatize are oxidized in-situ with higher temperatures of 300 degrees Fahrenheit.

The unit can also be used for ex-situ treatments of either containerized soil or horizontal pipes laid on the surface, with the soil piled on top and sealed.

This process is focused primarily on petroleum fuels from leaking underground storage tanks, pipelines and tank farms, but also has applications for certain chemical contaminants.

Michael Hrubetz's basic idea was to conduct enough heat into the soil to vaporize the ground moisture and the contaminants through the use of superheated steam through injection wells at a relatively low injection pressure. The collection system would be under a vacuum to facilitate the flow of air and water vapor into the collection system, where the water vapor and contaminants would condense in an air-cooled barometric condenser for recovery and recycling.

Research indicated, however, that hot air had greater advantages over steam and allowed for the development of a new surface collection system and elimination of vapor recovery holes, the steam boiler and condenser/liquid collection system.

Hrubetz reports that the volatile gases are destroyed in the incinerator at a rate of no less than 99.5 percent, with vapor destruction at 99.9 percent.

Santa Fe Energy begins 3-D study of Basin

HOUSTON — Santa Fe Energy Resources has initiated its Galaxy project, a second large 3-D seismic study adjacent to its recently completed "Motherlode" project in the Permian Basin near Midland.

The Galaxy survey, which began data acquisition in mid-September, encompasses approximately 200 sections (128,000 acres) in Martin and Andrews counties. Santa Fe's Motherlode project involved 250 square miles and has yielded five successful wildcat well completions since the drilling phase began in November 1993. Completion of the Galaxy project will bring SFR's contiguous seismic data base in the region to approximately 450 square miles (288,000 acres), the largest onshore U.S. 3-D program to date.

Primarily targeting the Ellenburger and Devonian geologic zones at depths of 12,000 to 13,000 feet, Santa Fe believes the Galaxy project area to contain features similar to those in existing productive fields in the region. Secondary objectives are in the Grayburg-/San Andres horizons at depths of 4,000 to 6,000 feet. The data acquisition phase of the project should be completed by January 1995, with drilling beginning later in the year.

Santa Fe Energy Resources is the operator of the Galaxy project and holds a 50 percent working interest. Energy Development Co., a subsidiary of Public Serve Enterprise Group Inc. of Houston also holds a 50 percent working interest.

Cooper renames equipment unit

HOUSTON (AP) — Cooper Industries Inc. announced it has selected the name Cooper Cameron Corporation for the new company being formed from Cooper's Petroleum & Industrial Equipment segment.

The stock symbol for the new company on the New York Stock exchange will be RON.

Last September, Cooper announced it intends to separate the Petroleum & Industrial Equipment segment into an independent, publicly traded company and offer it to Cooper shareholders in exchange for some or all of their Cooper common stock.

Credit rating firm covers Parker & Parsley

CHICAGO — Duff & Phelps has initiated coverage of Parker & Parsley Petroleum Co. (PDP) and its wholly-owned finance subsidiary, Parker & Parsley Capital LLC (PPC), with a rating of 'BB' (double-B) on the $189 million of cumulative guaranteed monthly income convertible preferred shares of PPC. The implied senior debt rating of PDP is 'BBB-' (triple-B-minus).

The rating reflects PDP's strong asset base and established record of prudent growth through acquisition. Recent acquisitions include PG&E Resources' producing asses ($122 million), Bridge Oil Ltd. ($449 million) and the pending acquisition of Tide West Oil Co. ($171 million). These assets add 131 million barrels of oil equivalent to PDP's proved reserves. When coupled with internally developed reserve additions of 17 MBOE net of production, PDP's total reserve base has increased by 81 percent to 329 MBOE since December 31,1993. Duff & Phelps expects further development of these new assets to result in increased production volumes and higher revenues and cash flow.

PDP has diversified its operations away from its traditional Permian Basin base through the acquisitions, establishing large domestic operating bases in the onshore Gulf Coast region of South Texas and Louisiana and the Midcontinent region. Through the Bridge Oil acquisition, PDP now also has 10 percent of its reserves outside the United States in Australia. The company has demonstrated the discipline to actively manage its portfolio of properties, keeping only those which complement its operations and selling non-core properties.

The company has shown a willingness to use equity to finance a portion of these acquisition, thus limiting financial risk. In 1994, it raised approximately $172 million in two common stock offerings and $189 million through the sale of the MIPS and is funding the majority of the Tide West purchase through a stock swap.

PDP has consistently followed a low risk exploitation strategy, utilizing in-fill drilling, recompletions, enhanced recovery and other proven techniques to limit operating risk. This strategy has resulted in a drilling success ratio of almost 99 percent over the last three years on over 800 wells. While Duff & Phelps Credit Rating expects this ratio to decline as PDP expands its exploration program, the company has indicated that it will still concentrate approximately 85 percent of its capital expenditure budget on development which should result in a relatively high success ratio in the future due to the predictable nature of existing properties.

The rating also recognizes PDP's leverage and moderate debt protection measures. While improving from 60 percent at year-end 1993 due to the additional equity, debt to total capital is expected to remain relatively high in the 50 percent range at the end of1994. The fixed charge coverage ratio is expected to decline to 1.3 times in 1994 from 2.0 times in 1993, primarily due to higher interest expense. Duff and Phelps anticipates possible swings in leverage as PDP continues to pursue a growth strategy heavily dependent upon additional acquisitions. Reliance on acquisitions for growth exposes the company to the risk of availability and attractiveness of properties on the market. Furthermore, the company's cost structure is relatively high due to the more mature nature of its properties, which raises the level of commodity price risk, resulting in a lower tolerance for reduced energy prices.

Other considerations in determining the rating are PDP's increasing focus on exploration and its expansion into international markets through its Australian holdings. While management is expected to apply its proven operating expertise to these efforts, PDP's record in each of these areas is yet to be established.

Midland Resources posts income for quarter

Midland Resources announced unaudited results for the third quarter and first nine months of 1994.

For the three months ended September 30, the company reported net income of $31,000 on revenues of $1,370,000. The company reported an income tax expense of $16,000 for the period. For the third quarter of 1993, Midland Resources posted a net loss of $18,000 on revenues of $1,082,000. The loss included a $174,000 income tax expense.

For the nine month period, the company posted income of $338,000 on revenues of $4,320,000, compared to income of $971,000 on revenues of $3,334,000 for the first three quarters of 1993.

Quarterly revenues increased 27 percent and nine moth operating cash flow increased 179 percent to $1,311,780 from comparable periods in the preceding year despite the 14 percent drop in oil prices and the 11 percent drop in gas prices.

Third quarter natural gas production increased 55 percent to 328 million cubic feet and oil production increased 19 percent to 42,238 barrels. These increases were principally due to two acquisitions including Midland Resources Operating Co., formerly Miresco Inc., and the Copano Bay Development.

Broad applications of advanced technology, wherever possible, have continued to enable the company to trim costs. Production expenses for the first nine months dropped from last year by 21 percent to $5.80 per net equivalent barrel. These efficiencies are certainly due in part to assistance from and cooperative efforts with the National Laboratories under the Department of Energy-sponsored "Natural Gas and Oil Technology Partnership." Utilizing advanced technology to achieve improved efficiencies in both development and production is clearly a critical component to future enhanced profitability. Midland Resources specializes in and is recognized for the utilization of advanced technology applcations.

The company has greatly expanded its exploration capabilities with the recent addition of Gerald Bross as exploration manager. He is an experienced oil-finding geologist with bachelor and masters degrees in geology from the University of Oklahoma. His years as both an exploration and development geologist include 24 years at Texaco with responsibilities in East Texas, Permian Basin and the Gulf Coast. During his tenure at J.M. Huber in the late 1970s, he reached an average of adding 6 million equivalent barrels per year.

Enron ventures into solar power

N.Y. Times News Service

DALLAS — The nation's largest natural gas company is betting $150 million that it can succeed where the government has so far failed: producing solar power at rates competitive with those of energy generated from oil, gas and coal.

Enron Corp. plans to build a plant in the southern Nevada desert that would be the largest operation in the country making electricity directly from sunlight, producing enough to power a city of 100,000 people. It is expected to begin operating in late 1996.

Grand promises in the late 1970s about the potential of virtually pollution-free, endlessly renewable energy sources like solar energy faded into an embarrassed hush. But several of the nation's leading solar power experts say Enron's optimistic goal is probably reachable.

The reason is that during the last decade, the cost of solar power generation has quietly declined by two-thirds. Far from depending on some wondrous breakthrough, the experts say, Enron can offer commercially competitive solar power by inexpensively mass-producing solar panels, and then employing thousands of them in the Nevada desert.

Even the most optimistic supporters of solar power have doubted that they would see commercially competitive production until the next century. The Worldwatch Institute, an environmental group in Washington, said earlier this year that solar-cell electricity, now as low as 20 cents a kilowatt-hour, might reach 10 cents by 2000 and 4 cents by 2020.

Yet Enron is pledging to deliver the electricity at 5.5 cents a kilowatt- hour in about two years. That would beat the average cost of 5.8 cents currently paid by the government for the electricity it uses. The national average retail price is 8 cents.

Several legal and political obstacles remain, and for competitive reasons Enron will describe its technology only in general terms. But some solar energy researchers who had consulted with Enron were willing to elaborate on the available technology and the financial calculus.

Enron's 100-megawatt plant would be more than a dozen times the size of any other that employs photovoltaic, or solar power, cells, which use the energy in sunlight to shake electrons loose from molecules of silicon or other substances. Size is key, says Sigurd Wagner, a professor of electrical engineering at Princeton University.

"If a good group of people puts a plant of that scale in, it will have a real consequence on costs," he said. "It's not going to go down by just a little bit, but by a factor of two."

To drive down the price further, the company is counting on available tax breaks and inexpensive financing.

As for whether Enron's goals are realistic, Wagner said, "They're pushing it, but they're not far off."

The company, based in Houston, has already won preliminary backing from the Department of Energy, which tentatively plans to buy Enron's solar power as long as the rate is truly competitive with the power from conventional sources.

"I'm confident we can make some commitment for a federal entity to purchase or at least broker some purchase of solar power," said William H. White, the deputy secretary of Energy.

Government officials say Enron's success will encourage the spread of solar power generation here and abroad.

"If they can do this, they're going to have lots of business," said Tony Catalano, director of the Energy Department's photovoltaic division. "This is going to be very competitive in the U.S. and lots of other places in the world."

Enron has asked the government to buy or guarantee a market for its power, with annual increases of 3 percent, for 30 years. It also depends on leasing government land, receiving federal tax benefits for renewable energy and financing construction with tax-free industrial development bonds.

White proposes having the department's Western Area Power Administration, whose grid connects Hoover Dam and other projects with large public power authorities, buy the power generated by the solar plant. That power would only be available during daylight hours, which are also the hours of peak demand, especially for air-conditioning.

Previous efforts to promote solar power as a clean alternative to fossil fuels have foundered, despite the government's spending of hundreds of millions of dollars on solar research. Solar power has remained too expensive, while fossil fuel prices have declined.

While solar cells can economically provide the tiny charges needed by watches and pocket calculators, their larger applications are mostly in remote places beyond the reach of the world's power grids.

Federal officials, aware that solar power breakthroughs have shined and faded almost as often as the sun, say the Enron project could introduce commercially competitive technology without expensive government aid.

"This establishes the benchmark we want and restarts a stalled solar industry,' said Robert H. Annan, the solar energy director in the Department of Energy.

In fact, the solar industry has already grown, with the shipments of solar cells up more than tenfold since 1980, as repeated technological advances have lowered their cost.

Even after federal officials agree to buy solar power, they will have to formally solicit bids to see if anyone can beat Enron's offer. Among more than 30 informal proposals so far, no one has.

Enron's chief strategy officer, Robert C. Kelly, says that producing solar power follows naturally from Enron's generation of electricity from natural gas, a cleaner fuel than coal or oil.

But Enron will not be running a charity. Asked how soon solar power could generate earnings, he said: "Now. We're a very impatient company in terms of profits."

Limited production of solar power cells at an adjacent factory, to be run by a partner whom Kelly would not identify, will keep the $150 million power plant from reaching its full capacity for about a decade.

The necessary technology is on display in Kelly's office, where a square glass panel about the size of an art book, its surface shimmering with metallic greens, blues and violets, rests on a gleaming steel rack. He is cautious about saying anything more than that the panel was produced by another company and used what people in the business called a thin-film design.

Silicon has been the film of choice, but several companies are achieving much higher efficiencies, and lower costs, with other substances or more than one silicon layer.

The bottom line:

Working safely and working to protect the environment make good business sense.

That's why we at Mobil invest so heavily in both.

Here in the Permian Basin, our outstanding safety record shows how well our investments in injury-prevention programs pay off.

Our investments in environmental protection have been equally successful. You see the results in wildlife habitats maintained in their natural state, in the use of the best available technologies to control emissions and in protected groundwater supplies.

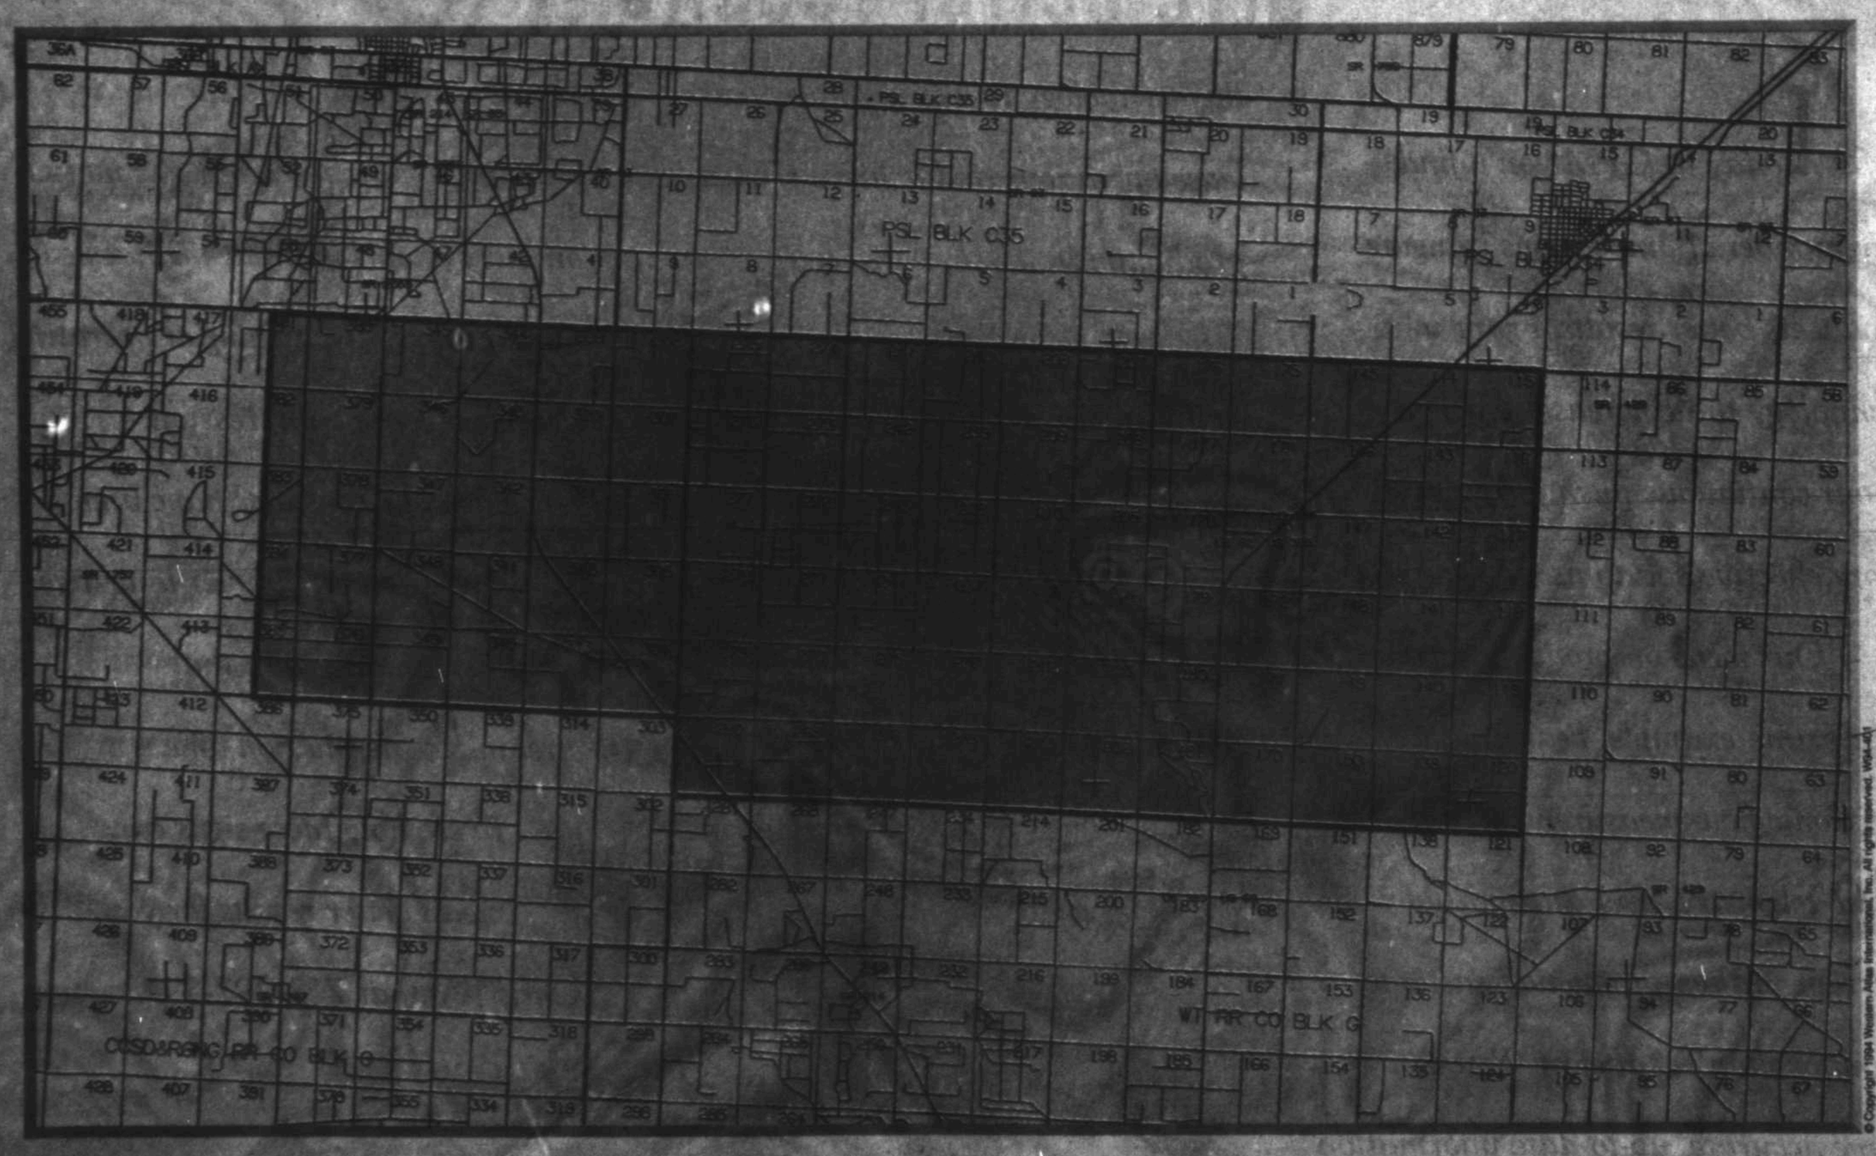

Our investments in safety and the environment pay off not only for us but for everyone in the Permian Basin.

Holiday Feasts Don't Have to be Fowl...

Design by Elizabeth Edwin

With all the holiday festivities beginning Thursday — Thanksgiving day — there are some who are crying "fowl."

While traditions are great, it seems that many people at some point in their lives find that the tradtional turkey dinner is more trouble than it's worth. Parents whose children have moved away, singles and single parents, families where both parents work: these are just a few of the situations that cause the stuffed bird to give way to dinner at a restaurant or other alternatives.

However, there are many ways around the traditional dinner, and many new ways to create inovative and imaginative meals using traditional turkey dinner leftovers.

Instead of the tried and true mashed potatoes and gravy with your stuffed turkey, try stuffed tomatoes. Although there are many ways to prepare stuffed tomaotes, the following recipe uses couscous.

ORANGE-COUSCOUS STUFFED TOMATOES

4 large (2 pounds) fresh tomatoes
¼ cup orange juice
2 tablespoons butter
1¼ teaspoons salt
⅛ teaspoon ground black pepper
1 cup uncooked couscous (available in rice and grain sections of supermarkets)
½ cup frozen peas

Preheat oven to 350 degrees. Use tomatoes kept at room temperature until fully ripe. Cut tomatoes in halves horizontally. Scoop out tomato pulp, leaving ¼-inch thick hollow shells. Place tomato shells in 13x9x2-inch pan; set aside. Chop tomato pulp (makes about 1½ cups). Place in medium saucepan with ¾ cup water, orange juice, butter, salt and black pepper. Bring to boil; remove from heat. Stir in couscous and peas. Cover; let stand 5 minutes, then stir gently. Fill reserved tomato shells with couscous mixture. Cover tightly with foil. Bake until tomatoes soften, about 20 to 30 minutes. Serve hot or at room temperature. Garnish with orange slices and parsley sprigs if desired.

Then It's Time to Bake

It seems like just as you get the kitchen clean from the Thanksgiving day feast, it's time to start your holiday baking. The following recipes are just a few new ideas for holiday baking.

HOLIDAY BREAD STICKS

HERB DOUGH:
4¼ to 4¾ cups all-purpose flour
1 package rapid rise yeast
1½ teaspoons salt
¾ teaspoon EACH rosemary, oregano and thyme
1½ cups water
2 tablespoons olive oil
SEED TOPPING:
1 large egg, lightly beaten
Sesame or poppy seed

Children will enjoy helping out in the kitchen especially making thes holiday bread sticks. Sprinkled with either poppy or sesame seeds or a sugar and cinnamon combinations and then curled into candy canes, the Holiday Bread Sticks are an ideal gift for children to give to a teacher or friend.

In large bowl, combine 2 cups flour, undissolved yeast, salt, rosemary, oregano and thyme. Heat water and oil until very warm (120 degrees to 130 degrees); stir into dry ingredients. Stir in enough remaining flour to make soft dough. Knead on lightly floured surface until smooth and elastic, about 6 to 8 minutes. Cover; let rest on floured surface 10 minutes (or place dough in greased airtight container and refrigerate for up to 24 hours).

Divide dough in half; roll each into 9-inch square. With sharp knife, cut each square into 12 (¾-inch wide) strips. Holding ends of each strip, twist in opposite directions 5 times. Place sticks, slightly apart, on 2 large greased baking sheets. Cover; let rest until risen slightly, about 10 to 20 minutes.

Brush with egg; sprinkle with seed. Bake at 400 degrees for 20 to 25 minutes or until done. Remove from baking sheets and cool on wire racks. Store bread sticks in airtight container or wrap airtight and freeze. To recrisp, heat uncovered on baking sheets at 400 degrees for 5 to 7 minutes. Cool on wire racks.

PUMPKIN GINGERBREAD

BREAD:
2½ cups all-purpose flour
¾ cup wheat germ, any flavor
2 teaspoons baking powder
1 teaspoon baking soda
1 cup canned solid pack pumpkin
¼ cup finely chopped crystallized ginger or 1 teaspoon ground ginger
1½ to 2 teaspoons pumpkin pie spice
⅓ cup (5 tablespoons plus 1 teaspoon) margarine, melted
¾ cup sugar
1 egg
¼ teaspoon salt
½ cup raisins
1 cup skim milk

GLAZE:
¾ cup powdered sugar
½ teaspoon vanilla
3 to 4 teaspoons skim milk

This festive gift bread, seasoned with grated orange peel, cardamon and mace and baked with the traditional holiday fruits of raisins and currants, makes an ideal hostess gift. Yet, it's so rich and flavorful that you'll want to keep a loaf to share with your family.

Heat oven to 350 degrees. For bread, lightly grease bottom only of 9x5-inch loaf pan. In large bowl, combine dry ingredients and raisins; mix well. In medium bowl, combine pumpkin, milk, margarine and egg; mix well. Add to dry ingredients; mix just until dry ingredients are moistened. Pour into prepared pan. Bake 60 to 70 minutes or until wooden pick inserted in center comes out clean. Cool 10 minutes. Remove from pan to wire rack; cool completely.

FOR GLAZE: Combine all ingredients; mix until smooth. Drizzle over top of loaf; sprinkle with additional wheat germ, if desired.

Junior League hosts events

By Marilyn McKnight Harrison

It was fun to watch as the Junior League of Midland's Festival of Trees began to take shape and then to return for the Preview Party and to see the transformation which had taken place in Midland Center and to witness the beginning of a new tradition in the Tall City. The league plans to make the holiday extravaganza an annual event.

McKnight-Harrison

Over 1,000 persons attended the Preview Party on Nov. 10, which got the weekend off to a lively start. Entertainment was provided by the Lee High School Chorale and Alumni Chorale, featuring former Midlander Edward Pleasant of New York City. Edward invited the children in the crowd up to the stage to join him in singing Christmas carols. The Dow Jones Average Band then provided music for dancing.

Meanwhile, those attending could browse at the Christmas trees, wreaths and gingerbread houses, which were offered for sale by posted bid. Wonderful desserts and creamy cappuccino were available for sampling.

A few of those attending were Mayor Bobby Burns with his wife, Denise, and son, Austin; Leona B. Smith, Kay and Lewis Burleson, Betty and C.C. Tull, Elizabeth Locker, Celeste Fasken and Carole and Harry Hinkle.

On the evening of Nov. 11, the center was turned into a "Starry Night by Candlelight" for the league's 44th annual Charity Ball. Seven hundred fifty guests enjoyed cocktails prior to a candlelight buffet dinner catered by Don Strange and dancing to the music of The Big Time.

Among those enjoying the elegant occasion were Peggy and John Matson, Vickie and John Williams, Stacy and John Pool, Teresa and Steve Beal, Marsha and Scott Shelton, Karen and Rick Davis and Missy and Mac McGee.

Finishing up the weekend was the popular "Holiday Wonderland" on Nov. 12. The day began with Breakfast with Santa's Elves. More than 250 children attended, among them the children at Hearthstone, an emergency shelter foster group home and one of the league's 13 projects. Area teen-agers and senior citizens acted as the elves.

Eddie Coker of Dallas and formerly of Midland presented a concert following the breakfast. He is a former opera singer turned kids' entertainer. Those present joined him on stage during his performance, and they loved the participation.

Following Eddie's concert, the festival opened its doors to the public. There were demonstration booths by local merchants, with ideas for the holidays and continuous entertainment, with Edward Pleasant serving as master of ceremonies.

Among those spotted in the crowd, which totaled 2,000, were Joyce Sledge, Brenda Cauthan, Karen Chancellor, Adelle Howard, Amy and Steve Robnett, Debbie Reese and Marge Tompson.

Chairman of the Festival of Trees was Mary (Mrs. Jack) Blake, with Kris (Mrs. Greg) Thagard as assistant chairman. Charity Ball chairman was Lisa (Mrs. Steve) Sell.

Vicki (Mrs. David) Donnell, president of the league, stated that "For the past 44 years, members of the Junior League of Midland have been privileged to give over 434,000 hours of volunteer service and $2,300,000 to past and current community projects.

"The first annual Festival of Trees brought all segments of the community together in a celebration of the holiday season, while providing additional funding for current projects," she said.

OUR CONGRATULATIONS and best wishes to Joan Pace and Ernie Bel, who were united in marriage at 6 p.m. Saturday at Joan's home. Officiating was the Rev. Dr. J. Pittman McGehee of Houston. A dinner followed the ceremony.

The couple are both psychotherapists engaged in private practice in Midland.

Parties for the out-of-town guests included a dinner hosted by Ernie at the Midland Hilton Friday evening and a soup and sandwich luncheon Saturday at the home of Joan's parents, Doris and Van Howbert, and also hosted by her brother and sister and their spouses, Chuck and Paula Howbert and Jill and Jerry Hancock.

Among the wedding guests were Joan's daughters, Lauren and Sara Pace; Ernie's sister, Jeanne Ingraham, her husband, Frank, and daughter, Ann, of Houston, and his cousins, Kay and Billy Blake of Lake Charles, La.

FRIENDS OF FORMER Midlanders Roseann and Ches Herndon of Oklahoma City will be interested to learn that their nephew, Frank Keating, is the newly elected governor of Oklahoma. Frank is married to Ches's niece, the former Cathy Heller of Tulsa.

The Keatings formerly resided in the Washington, D.C., area, while Frank served in the Reagan Administration as assistant secretary of the treasury and associate attorney general and with the Bush Administration as general counsel and assistant secretary of HUD.

Catlin specialized in painting Indians

WILKES-BARRE, Pa. (AP) — Artist and author George Catlin, born here in 1796, specialized in painting American Indian scenes. Interested in Indian life since boyhood, Catlin began visiting various Plains tribes in 1829, and made more than 500 paintings and sketches. These were exhibited in the United States and Europe, and some were published in book form. After George Catlin's death in 1872, the bulk of his work was acquired by the National Museum in Washington.

In large bowl, combine 1½ cups flour, sugar, undissolved yeast, orange peel, cardamom, mace and salt. Heat milk, water and butter until very warm (120 degrees to 130 degrees). Gradually add to dry ingredients; beat 2 minutes at medium speed of electric mixer, scraping bowl occasionally. With spoon, stir in enough remaining flour to make soft dough. Knead on lightly floured surface until smooth and elastic, about 6 to 8 minutes. Cover; let rise in warm, draft-free place until doubled in size, about 45 to 60 minutes. (If using rapid rise yeast, cover kneaded dough and let rest on floured surface 10 minutes. Proceed with recipe.)

Punch dough down; turn out onto lightly floured surface. Knead in fruits and almonds. Divide dough in half; shape into two 5x5-inch square loaves. Place loaves on large greased baking sheet. Cut four 18x2-inch strips of foil. Fold in half lengthwise. Grease one side of each strip. To mark loaves for tying ribbon after baking, cross two strips on top of each loaf, greased-side down, making "plus" shape. Tuck ends of strips under loaves. Cover; let rise in warm, draft-free place until doubled in size, about 45 to 60 minutes.

Brush egg white on loaves. Bake at 350 degrees for 40 to 45 minutes or until done. Remove from sheet; discard foil and let cool on wire rack. When cool, tie loaves with 1-inch wide ribbon, making bow at top.

Sizzle chicken for slim party snacking

By Nancy Byal
Associated Press

Watch how these gingery chicken morsels disappear at your next party, almost as fast as you can broil them. Dieters love them because they're low in calories and fat.

The spicy marinade seasons the chicken without adding fat. Its special flavor comes from five-spice powder, a pungent blend of aniseed, cinnamon, fennel, pepper and cloves. Look for this blend in the spice aisle of your supermarket.

GARLIC-GINGER CHICKEN STRIPS

4 skinless, boneless chicken breast halves (1 pound total)
¼ cup low-sodium soy sauce
¼ cup dry sherry
1 tablespoon snipped fresh basil or 1 teaspoon dried basil, crushed
6 to 8 cloves garlic, minced
1 tablespoon honey
2 teaspoons grated gingerroot
½ teaspoon pepper
½ teaspoon crushed red pepper
¼ teaspoon five-spice powder
Lettuce leaves (optional)

Cut each chicken breast half lengthwise into four long strips (16 total). In a large nonmetal bowl combine soy sauce, sherry, basil, garlic, honey, gingerroot, pepper, crushed red pepper and five-spice powder. Add chicken strips; stir to coat. Cover and marinate for 30 minutes at room temperature or for 4 to 24 hours in the refrigerator.

Drain chicken, reserving marinade. Place chicken strips on the unheated rack of a broiler pan. Broil 4 to 5 inches from the heat about 5 minutes or until light brown, brushing once with reserved marinade. Turn and brush again with marinade. Broil 3 to 5 minutes more or until chicken is golden brown and no longer pink inside.

To serve, line a serving platter with lettuce, if desired. Transfer chicken strips to the platter. Serve warm. Makes 16 appetizers.

Cookbook benefits homeless

By Nancy Byal
Associated Press

I've got the perfect gift for your favorite cooking friends — a cookbook that benefits homeless families. "Food Editors' Treasured Recipes" features 115 favorite recipes from more than 30 food pros. You'll find quick meals, hand-me-down recipes and festive entertaining ideas from the editors of such magazines as Better Homes and Gardens, Ladies' Home Journal, Midwest Living and Country Home magazines.

All proceeds from the sale of this book benefits The Better Homes Fund, a national nonprofit organization that funds programs to help homeless families. The fund receives the entire sale price because everything needed to create the book was donated. The following is a sample recipe:

DOUBLE-CHOCOLATE CHEESECAKE

1½ cups finely crushed chocolate wafers
⅓ cup butter, melted
3 8-ounce packages cream cheese, softened
1½ cups sugar
4 squares (4 ounces) semisweet chocolate, melted and cooled
2 tablespoons all-purpose flour
1 teaspoon vanilla
4 eggs
½ cup milk
¼ cup vanilla-flavored pieces
1 square (1 ounce) semisweet chocolate
2 teaspoons shortening

For crust, stir together crushed wafers and butter. Press mixture evenly over the bottom and 1¾ inches up the sides of a 9-inch springform pan. Place the springform pan in a shallow baking pan.

For filling, in a large mixer bowl combine cream cheese, sugar, the 4 squares melted chocolate, flour and vanilla; beat with an electric mixer until mixed. Add eggs all at once; beat on low speed just until mixed. Do not overbeat. Stir in milk. Pour the filling into the crust.

Bake in a 350-degree oven about 45 minutes or until the center appears nearly set when gently shaken. Cool on a wire rack for 5 to 10 minutes. Loosen the sides of the cheesecake from the pan. Cool for 30 minutes. Remove sides of pan. Cover and chill for 4 to 24 hours.

For star design, in a small heavy saucepan melt vanilla-flavored pieces; cool slightly. Pour melted pieces into a small plastic freezer bag; snip a small piece of plastic from a bottom corner. Gently twist the top of the bag to squeeze melted mixture through hole. Gently squeezing with hands, pipe stars atop cheesecake. In a small saucepan melt the 1 square chocolate and shortening over low heat; repeat with another plastic bag, piping stars atop the white stars. Chill until chocolate is set. Chill to store. Makes 12 servings.

Pregnancy too difficult for men

By Erma Bombeck

Bombeck

This is the week moviegoers have breathlessly awaited — the opening of the film "Junior," starring Arnold Schwarzenegger as a pregnant man.

Amazingly, it's a comedy.

The concept of a man having a baby isn't new. Every couple of years someone plays around with the idea. Arnold, walking around with a 9-pound silicone stomach, wearing a dress and smoking a cigar, is no exception.

This is not meant to be a sexist comment, but motherhood is something women expect, adjust to, and have been doing since labor pains were invented. To many men, it is something so bizarre they would delegate the job to their secretary and have FTD send her a bouquet of flowers for her trouble.

I'm not saying attitudes couldn't change with a few male pregnancies, but at this moment in time, men are too practical to carry a child. They would schedule an appointment with their gynecologist and, when informed of their condition, would look at their watches and ask, "Is this going to take long?" When told it would take nine months, give or take a few weeks, they'd say: "You're joking! That is not fiscally feasible. We're not missing a legal deduction by four weeks, buddy. We have to talk!"

Men would not be content just knowing what sex a baby was going to be. They would want to know how long it would be before it slept through the night, when it would stop crying when there was nothing wrong with it, how tall it would be, what would be its political affiliation and especially its IQ. They might even offer to pay a few more bucks to upgrade the plumbing and buy a few more brain cells.

I know for a fact that if my husband had given birth, he would have refused to leave the hospital without a warranty, an operational manual and a few extra batteries. He's like that.

It has taken women a couple of thousand years to get men to make the coffee in the morning and empty the dishwasher. The idea of having them carry a baby for nine months is one that appeals only to a movie producer making a comedy.

Actually, it's the greatest gift that could have been bestowed on women. The miracle of bringing a life to fruition is the most significant thing anyone can do in a lifetime. It's a shame men are not privileged to share the same feeling.

In the Old Testament, God said, "Be fruitful and multiply, and replenish the earth."

The first time a man lost his breakfast three solid months in a row, he would make plans to have a nocturnal headache for the rest of his married life.

Erma Bombeck's column is distributed by Universal Press Syndicate.

SEEDS FOR THOUGHT

Growing sprouts is fun, easy way to garden

By Deborah A. Benge

Benge

This is not gardening on a large scale. In fact, anyone can do this type of gardening, even if you live in an apartment — growing delicious, nutritious sprouts.

Sprouts are not only a lot of fun and easy to grow, but are very nutritious. In the germination process, a great many vitamins, enzymes and other food materials are made more readily available. As an example, the vitamin C content of soybean sprouts from the time they first sprout until after 72 hours increases 700 percent.

There are many types of seeds that can be sprouted, including Mung beans, soybeans, lentils, alfalfa, chickpeas, sesame, oats, clover, corn, flax, garden peas, safflower, turnip, barley and Southern peas (blackeyes, etc.). Mung beans and alfalfa seeds are two of the very best.

Sprouting these seeds is simple. It can be done in almost anything from a covered crock to special seed sprouting devices. The following is an easy-to-construct seed sprouter. You will need the following materials for this project:

- Quart-sized jar for large sprouts or pint-sized jar for small ones.
- Medium-sized cardboard box (about 6x12-inches should be adequate).
- Piece of quarter-inch plywood.
- Piece of cheesecloth.
- Seeds for sprouting.

You will also need some tools — a small bladed saw to cut a hole in the plywood for the jar to rest in, a drill to start the hole so that you can cut an oval piece out of the center of the plywood and perhaps some paint if you want to add an extra touch to your sprouting chamber.

Construct the chamber by removing either the top or bottom of the box (if flaps have been pulled open, cut these off and consider that the bottom). Cut through three sides of the top of the box to make a lid for the sprouting chamber, then measure a piece of plywood, and cut an oval hole slightly larger than the jar so that the jar can be set at a slant on the rack. The jar will be suspended at about a 45 degree angle through the rack for better drainage.

Place two to three tablespoons of small seeds or ¼ cup of larger seeds in the jar: fill it half full of water. Cover the top of the jar with cheesecloth, securing with string or rubber band. Soak small seeds for six to eight hours and large seeds for 12 to 15 hours.

Pour off the water and then invert the jar, placing it in the sprouting chamber with the cheesecloth dangling in the pan of water beneath the chamber. This keeps the cheesecloth covering the jar constantly moist and prevents the sprouts from drying out. Once or twice a day, remove the sprouting chamber and rinse the seeds. Replace in chamber. Check water level frequently as it evaporates.

Most sprouts are ready in two to three days. Some, such as the alfalfa sprouts, will be even more nutritious if allowed exposure to light for a few hours or so. Be sure to use fresh seeds designed for sprouting and put your sprouting chamber in an area where temperatures will be about 70 to 85 degrees.

Never mind the weather or the space — you can do sprouting gardening in your kitchen.

DEAR ABBY

In spite of love and support, some addicts can't be saved

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: You have published letters from women who were involved with (or married to) men who had drug problems. Perhaps my story can be used to warn other women.

Van Buren

I, too, fell in love with a man who had a history of drug abuse. His choice of drug was heroin, and it nearly destroyed my life. I met him when I was 18. For the next four years, I tried to keep him off drugs. He went through a methadone program several times. I remember the nights I spent in hospital emergency rooms when he had OD'd. I begged him to stay away from heroin and his drug-addicted friends, but he wouldn't listen.

He spent time in jail for crimes committed trying to support his habit. Of course, he always left jail "clean" — but then he'd use drugs, and the cycle would begin again.

I married him when he was "clean" — or at least I thought he was. Money started to disappear from my purse. He would miss work and be gone for days with no explanation. Checks from our joint checking account began bouncing. Then one day when I was sorting laundry, I found a needle and syringe in the pocket of his work jacket. That night we had the biggest fight we ever had, and I finally faced the fact that the love of his life was heroin.

So, Abby, please advise young women to run as fast as they can away from these men. They'll never change. Love is not enough to keep an addict clean. I know. It has been 20 years since I fell in love with that hopelessly addicted man.

He has been dead for seven years. He was found on a Detroit city street. The coroner said his body was full of drugs.

At his funeral, as I looked at the almost unrecognizable body of the man I had loved for so many years, I thought to myself, "Well, at least the monkey is off your back for good now!"

But even after seven years, I still jump when my telephone rings at night, thinking it's the hospital, the police or the morgue.

Sisters: Get away from these men. Don't let them ruin your lives. The longer you stay, the longer you enable them to be addicts, and the harder it will be for you to walk away. Heroin is the destroyer of lives — not just the life of the addict; it also destroys the lives of those who love them. Worse yet, many of these addicts carry the AIDS virus.

Seek support from friends and family, your church or a support group; but don't waste your life trying to save or help addicts. Run like hell in the opposite direction, and help YOURSELF to a new life! — M. IN MICHIGAN

DEAR M.: Thank you for a powerful letter. I hope women who are now in the same tragic situation you were in will take note — and get out.

DEAR READERS: A verse worth sharing — submitted by Maudie White, Erie, Pa.:

Whenever I walk by a church,
I stop and make a visit.
So when I'm carried in some day,
The Lord won't say, "Who is it?"

DEAR ABBY: We have been told that when a son marries, it is up to his parents to pay for the honeymoon. If not, who is supposed to finance it? — GROOM'S MOM AND DAD

DEAR MOM AND DAD: The groom pays all honeymoon expenses. The groom's parents are responsible for: their own transportation and hotel expenses, if any; their attire for the wedding; the rehearsal dinner (however, if they are financially unable to handle it, the bride's family usually assumes it); a wedding present; and any entertaining they do for the bride and groom.

Good advice for everyone — teens to seniors — is in "The Anger in All of Us and How to Deal With It." To order, send a business-sized, self-addressed envelope, plus check or money order for $3.95 ($4.50 in Canada) to: Dear Abby, Anger Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mohr Morris, Ill. 61054-0447 (Postage is included.)

ODESSA — Costumes and set designs for operas, ballet and other stage performances form the nucleus of an exhibition on display through Dec. 29 at the Art Institute for the Permian Basin, 4909 E. University Blvd.

"We hope that families will enjoy examining these set and costume designs of favorite Christmas productions," said director Marilyn Bassinger.

"Many students will have just seen excerpts from 'The Nutcracker' or the Tulsa Ballet's production this weekend in Midland.

" 'The Nutcracker' is extremely popular with the young at heart and set and costume designs for this ballet make up at least a third of this exhibit. One is all candy canes. Another is all in red and green. Yet another is a perfect setting of the living room. It's interesting to see various designers' concepts for this ballet."

The institute's Adventures in Art family art appreciation program focuses on this exhibition today from 2:30 to 4:30 p.m. After a family treasure hunt through the gallery, students ages 6 through 12 will be offered the opportunity to design costumes or sets for their favorite holiday stories. Cost is $7.50.

"Area theaters and churches are presenting productions of holiday stories this month and in December," Mrs. Bassinger said. "And, we thought children would enjoy designing costumes and sets for their favorite

Jazz trumpeter plans to 'wing it'

Randy Sandke

Trumpeter Randy Sandke hasn't rehearsed for the New York Jazz All Stars concert set for the Yucca Theatre Nov. 29. But, he isn't worried.

"After doing it (jazz) for so many years, I think we have a fairly sophisticated way of winging it," said the veteran player, who was a member of Benny Goodman's last bands and was among the players featured on the PBS special "Let's Dance" and on Goodman's final recordings.

"That's kind of what jazz is all about any how," Sandke said, referring to jazz's almost limitless opportunities for improvisation.

"I don' think we'll bring anything printed for it, although it's possible. We all have lots of arrangements."

The other players Sandke will be improvising with for the West Texas Jazz Society's 8 p.m. show are Dan Barrett, trombone; Ken Peplowski, clarinet and saxophone; Jackie Williams, drums; Frank Tate, bass; and Johnny Varro, piano.

Williams has played with, among others, Earl "Father" Hines, Buck Clayton, Bobby Hackett, Roy Eldridge and Buddy Tate.

Frank Tate, who toured with Pearl Bailey and the Louie Bellson Orchestra from 1985-90, has worked with Hackett, Goodman, Zoot Sims, Lionel Hampton and Pee Wee Erwin.

And, Varro, who has played in the Permian Basin on several occasions, began his professional career playing with Hackett.

Barrett, Peplowski and Sandke are familiar to Permian Basin jazz fans who attend the Midland Jazz Classic and the Odessa Jazz Party because they have played both events on more than one occasion.

Barrett, who played valve trombone for the soundtrack of the movie "Cotton Club," has appeared alongside Woody Allen with the New York Pops Orchestra at Carnegie Hall and

HOROSCOPE

SUNDAY, NOVEMBER 20, 1994

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Private time will be easier to come by. As a result, you do a better job of everything you undertake, professionally and personally. Travel for pleasure. Romance takes on a brighter glow. Your relationship will soon be on a firmer footing. Use intelligence, not muscle, to settle disputes. Next summer brings a welcome change of environment. Your finances improve.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: TV game show host Richard Dawson, actress Bo Derek, football player Mark Gastineau, concert pianist Ruth Laredo.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Do not let a hot-tempered relative put a crimp in your Sunday. If you are tactful, you may be able to ward off an open conflict. Choose entertainment you can comfortably afford.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): A lot of good will is flowing in your direction now. Past differences can be resolved. A recent alliance will bear additional fruit if you are willing to take a more realistic view. Nurture romance.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Events at a distance could cloud your thinking. Travel may prove complicated. At-home entertainment is especially appealing if shared with fun companions. A phone call brings welcome news. Host a small family celebration.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Not a good day for confrontations. Mate or partner could be in an irritable mood. If single, enjoy a new romance without pressing for a commitment. Completing a self-improvement project will feel great!

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Center your activities around home today. Rent a favorite movie and enjoy something you have not experienced for years. A good friend will be happy to join you if you decide to take a trip.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): A banner day for group activities, short trips and friendly gatherings. You are able to call the shot — with beneficial results. Everyone smiles when you take a lighter approach to domestic disputes.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Do all those chores you have been saving up. Make calls to people you have not had a chance to write. A cat or bird could bring special pleasure to someone who is housebound. Help out.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Bring your checkbook up to date. Then, reach out and help someone who is too shy to ask for support. Your interest in spiritual matters grows stronger. Try attending church in a different neighborhood.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Get a head start on Thanksgiving dinner by cooking and freezing some special goodies. Before shopping for clothes, inventory your wardrobe. You may be short on the basics. Buy one elegant outfit.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): A positive attitude helps you get your way with other family members. A child's or pet's performance gives you something to celebrate. Avoid wishful thinking in romance. It will not help you salvage a relationship.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Good luck accompanies you everywhere today. Head for the nearest open museum or art gallery. An evening phone call makes you rethink certain social plans. Stay in closer touch with relatives at a distance.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): When family members gather for the holiday, you will got all the praise and advice you can stand. Do something to lift a loved one's spirits. Partner will become more supportive in time.

"Ladies and Gentlemen of the Jury:

"My client, Mr. South, stands before you accused of a heinous offense: cheating by looking at the opponents' cards. Of course, he is totally innocent of this charge.

"South reached three no trump after opening the bidding one club and being raised to two clubs by his partner. No one can say anything about my client's jump to three no trump.

"West led the queen of diamonds and, since declarer did not want a spade shift, dummy's king was played. Next came the jack of clubs, covered by the queen and taken with the king. Declarer returned to the board with the ace of hearts and led another club, finessing the nine when East produced the five. Declarer was thus able to score all five club tricks and come home with an overtrick.

"It is the prosecution's contention that South could not play the hand that way unless he 'knew' the lie of the club suit, and that could be only by peeking. Hogwash! South was merely taking an avoidance play, a relatively elementary technique.

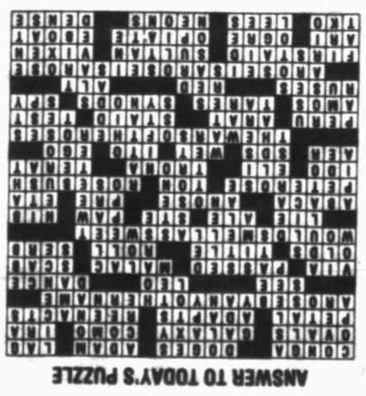

"South needed only four club tricks to fulfill the contract. What South could not afford was to have East gain the lead to play a spade through the king. The play in the club suit was designed to keep East off lead — South was quite prepared to lose a club trick to West, if necessary. Thank you for your patience."

"Ladies and gentlemen of the jury, have you reached your verdict?"

"We have, Your Honor. South is guilty, but only of being a very good bridge player!"

Generation of artists capture dream of ancient India's ruler on canvas

By Holland Cotter
N.Y. Times News Service

One night three centuries ago, the ruler of the small desert kingdom of Bikaner in Western India had a dream. He saw the god Vishnu, his skin a deep indigo blue, enthroned in a garden pavilion with the goddess Lakshmi seated on his knee.

The fortunate sleeper — Raja Karan Singh, by name — awoke, described his vision to his chief court artist, and directed him to capture it in paint.

The idea of the dream became a popular one in the Bikaner court, and a generation of artists painted it repeatedly. One gorgeous version, depicting the comely young god attended by female musicians, perfectly distills the heady combination of sensuousness and spirituality that makes Indian miniatures so haunting and is among the highlights of a remarkable exhibition titled "Realms of Heroism" at the Brooklyn Museum in New York.

Organized by Amy G. Poster, curator of Asian art, the show celebrates the publication of the catalogue raisone of the museum's outstanding Indian painting collection, and the 89 works, on view through Jan. 8, offer a solid historical outline from the 13th to the 19th century.

In Europe these were, of course, years of radical ferment for art as it moved from Chartres to Michelangelo to Monet. But in India, where motifs have a long shelf life and a handful of styles have always been stylish somewhere, change took the form of subtle variations within a framework of constancy.

One of the great subjects of Indian painting — and the theme of the Brooklyn show — is the hero in his many guises.

He finds his most dramatic secular form in the paintings done for the great Mughal emperors who came to India from western Asia in the 16th century, bringing with them a taste for epic tales and a naturalistic figure style.

The Mughal rulers were, by all accounts, awful and admirable in about equal measure. Astute political spinmeisters, they were quick to realize the propaganda potential of art.

If the Mughals were inveterate self-promoters, they were also superb storytellers. One of the museum's treasures is a set of four large paintings on cloth (the collection originally had nine, but lost five in a misguided deaccession deal in the 1930s) illustrating the exotic adventurers of Amir Hamza, an uncle of the prophet Mohammed.

New generation creates their own cult favorites

By Vernon Silver
N.Y. Times News Service

Their parents know each line from the 1942 classic "Casablanca." Their older siblings can join in with every bit of audience participation from the 1975 cult film "The Rocky Horror Picture Show."

Now, inevitably, the 90s generation have their own movies to watch — and quote — obsessively.

For this youngest group, raised in the video age, film has become increasingly important, not to mention accessible. In the same way that cult movies developed dedicated followings in repertory houses, films that might otherwise have been lost have been given extended life by the videocassette recorder.

In the same way that cult movies developed dedicated followings in repertory houses, films that might otherwise have been lost have been given extended life by the videocassette recorder.

The result is a new breed of cult film in which coming-of-age stories — and the recently "rediscovered" John Travolta — loom large.

Put several of these young people in a room with a VCR, and you'll probably hear gems like "Come on, Heather, bulimia is so '87," a line from the morbid 1989 romp "Heathers," a satire of high school social strata. "Here's looking at you, kid," and even "Damn it, Janet" (from "The Rocky Horror Picture Show") are cinematic history to this generation, now in their teens and 20s, who identify with the more recent films that have provided road maps to their growing-up years.

And so, as the video player turns campus dormitories and the homes of new graduates into mini-theaters, no longer is it just the offbeat "Barbarella" and "Polyester," with their esoteric appeal, that are repeat favorites. Also popular are such sagas of adolescence as "The Breakfast Club," "The Sure Thing" and "A Fish Called Wanda," as well as comedy in the tradition of Monty Python and any movie with a dance contest.

While old films have always been popular among viewers, the VCR has given today's youth the power to watch what they want, when they want. It has even given them a new social activity: the group-renting ritual that often involves popcorn, beer and a movie they might have seen as recently as the week before.

This new popularity of films that were only modest box-office successes took the writer and director John Hughes by surprise when he discovered a festival of his films in progress at his son's college.

"I didn't realize they were doing this," said Hughes, whose films include "Sixteen Candles," "Pretty in Pink" and "Ferris Bueller's Day Off," all of which are about high school students.

"I began my career at the point where videocassettes were starting to take off, and I knew a movie could have a second life," Hughes said. "But I'm really flattered that something has lasted."

Shari Lowenthal, 23, who studied film as an undergraduate at New York University, said: "We didn't dance around Central Park singing 'Aquarius.' We grew up with VCRs. It was like a staple in our media diet, these movies."

Buried deep in the memory banks of Ms. Lowenthal's brain are bits of dialogue embedded through repeat viewing. There's the immortal "What's a hoppinin', hot stuff?" uttered by Gedde Watanabe, who plays a foreign-exchange student, to Molly Ringwald, a scrawny high school girl, in "Sixteen Candles." Then there's "It's not a big college town" from Tony Hendra, the rock-band manager who insists it was no loss that a Boston gig was canceled in "This Is Spinal Tap."

While precise figures for the frequency of video rentals are not available, executives at Blockbuster Entertainment Group say their young customers repeatedly take out brat-pack movies like "St. Elmo's Fire," "Bill and Ted's Excellent Adventure," "National Lampoon's Animal House," "Airplane" and "The Blues Brothers," along with Hughes's films.

Camp is a key ingredient in the new cult films, according to Frank O'Malley, 21, a clerk at New Concept Video in Miami Beach. One of the main crowd pleasers is the 1978 film "Grease," starring John Travolta and Olivia Newton-John, said O'Malley. "You just sit around, have snacks and sing along — doing the hand jive and all that."

"Grease," with its lavish production numbers, is also a hit in campus auditoriums, where male and female students sing lines to one another from "Summer Nights." Among O'Malley's peers the film is a strong candidate to supplant "The Rocky Horror Picture Show," which, he said, "is getting a little tired."

stories."

Instructors will be Midlander Nancy Daugherty and Odessan Karen Hembree.

The collection on display includes three maquettes — or miniature models of set designs — drawings and paintings of costumes and sets and several antique books with excerpts of plays or notes with margin drawings by designers.

"This exhibition came to my attention in the newsletter of the NcNay Art Museum (in San Antonio) last year," Mrs. Bassinger said. "The entire Tobin Collection was exhibited there as their Christmas exhibition last year.

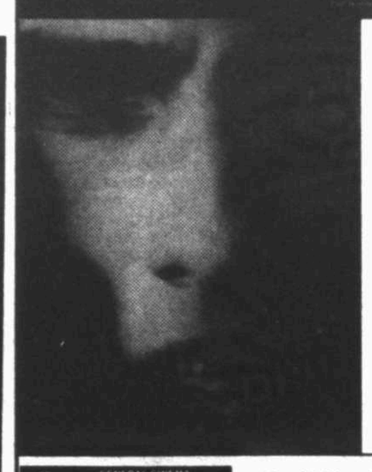

"Robert Tobin is an actor and is a collector. This exhibition is from his private collection and from the McNay's permanent collection named for him. In fact, one of the maquettes has an inscription at the bottom of the stage that said it was designed for a production that Robert Tobin was in in 1974."

Included in the exhibit, which is sponsored by Orion Pacific Inc. of Odessa, are designs for such productions as "Amahl and the Night Visitors," "The Nutcracker," "Chauve-Souris," "La Boheme," "Les Patineurs (The Skaters), "The Christmas Tree," "Twelfth Night" and "The Young Lord."

"The exhibitions committee was pleased when we were told we might borrow all of the Christmas-related works from that exhibit (at the McNay) except for several that were being shown in Russia this Christmas," Mrs. Bassinger said.

Docented tours of the exhibition are available weekdays with advance reservations, which may be made by calling 550-3811. Viewing hours are 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Tuesday-saturday and 2 to 5 p.m. Sunday. No admission is charged.

CONCERT: Sandke to bring improvisations to Yucca Theatre has been featured with Billy Butterfield at Butterfield's guest appearance at Eddie Condon's Jazz Club.

Peplowski, who also played with Goodman when Sandke did, has performed with Mel Torme, Peggy Lee, George Shearing, Leon Redbone and Rosemary Clooney.

"This coming April, Ken Peplowski and I are doing a concert with the Tulsa Symphony, and we're going to be playing three pieces that I wrote for the orchestra," Sandke said. "I'm very excited about that."

As a composer, Sandke has received two National Endowment for the Arts grants and his works have been performed at Carnegie Hall, New York City's Greenwich House and the JVC Jazz Festival at Lincoln Center. But, the Tulsa performances mark the first time his compositions will have been performed by an orchestra.

"I'm really looking forward to it," he said. "I think I'm going to be very happy with the stuff I wrote. That's something I would like to get more into — writing for orchestra. Not necessarily jazz, but writing orchestral pieces."

Born and raised in Chicago, Sandke was introduced to jazz and the trumpet by his older brother Jordan. He studied at Roosevelt University with Reinhold Schilke, a teacher and trumpet maker who was with the Chicago Symphony for many years.

Sandke attended Indiana University, where, along with Michael Brecker, he formed a rock band with a jazz-oriented horn section.

Then the opportunity to join rock singer Janis Joplin's band came into his life at about the same time he was having difficulties with his throat and was in Chicago checking on possible throat surgery.

"I played with the band just for one day, and decided that it really wasn't a good time for me to be doing that," Sandke said.

He was 19 at the time. He didn't play trumpet again until he was 29, but he's been playing since and is reasonably happy with his life.

"I like to sleep late and stay up late," Sandke said. "And I like the freedom of at least getting in the position of being your own boss. That's not always the case . . . I think that music keeps you young . . . As you can see by a lot of people at the jazz parties. It keeps them very youthful."

Music still presents him with challenges.

"It's not like you're ever perfect it," he said. "It's something that's ongoing the rest of your life. You can find something that's new and interesting and absorbing about it."

Sandke particularly enjoys playing his own compositions.

"I think I most like to play my own original music, which is something that I almost never get to do, but I am doing it more in my recordings."

He said traveling is the hardest part of being a musician.

"I'm not one of those people that loves being on the road all the time. I like being home a lot. I like to write music and play with my computers and my cats."

Home includes his wife, Karen Kelly, a senior editor at Warner Books, who, Sandke said, "is really in overdrive when she's home and when she's working."

They live in a remodeled brownstone that was built in Manhattan in 1871.

To escape the pressures of their lifestyle, they travel.

This month, Sandke performs in Europe. While he is there, his wife plans to join him for a trip to Budapest because they have "never been there and it sounded interesting."

Then she returns home and he goes to Hamburg, Germany, to perform.

"I'm coming to Midland the day after I get back," Sandke said. He laughed. "I'll be lucky if I have time to pack and find a jacket that isn't wrinkled."

WEST TEXAS' BEST COUNTRY

Most know musican's music from TV shows but not his name

By Laurie Benenson
N.Y. Times News Service

LOS ANGELES — Writing the music for a prime-time television show is an impressive credential for a composer: his audience numbers in the millions, and they hear his work on a regular basis.

Devising the scores for five prime-time shows is more than prodigious. But this is what W.G. (Snuffy) Walden has done. And though most viewers may not know his name, they know his music.

A lanky, graying musician from Texas, Walden (Snuffy is a family nickname) has a low-key, modest demeanor that belies his status in the realm of television composers.

"I take credit for showing up and working real hard," he says, playing a moody refrain for "My So-Called Life" at a keyboard in his studio near Los Angeles. "I don't take credit for the inspiration. I think I was just given a gift."

Walden, 44, arrives at his studio by 5 every morning and often works until 7 at night. The results are heard by viewers across the country several evenings each week — from the eerie electric-guitar underscores for "My So-Called Life" to the rollicking bluesy riffs of the theme for "Roseanne."

He also writes the music for "Ellen," "Sisters" and "Sweet Justice." From his blues and rock roots, he says, "I've evolved a simple minimalist style that's full of emotion."
