Descend Among Bicycles
Many Strikes and Worries
Two Flags That Clash
Two National Hymns

This column, like others to follow, written in Europe, traveling about by automobile, will represent an effort to see things clearly, and describe them simply, according to the old formula.

You descend from the ship at Havre into a world on wheels, bicycle wheels, a change from the world on automobile wheels left on the other side of the Atlantic.

Here working men and women, thousands of them, ride to and from work, ten to thirty abreast, depending on the width of the street.

They have the right of way, properly, in a democracy.

So it used to be in America, when automobiles were new, small boys shouted "Get a horse," and New York state law compelled the automobile driver to stop his car and engine, while a farm wagon passed, if the farmer raised his hand, or even lead the farm team past his machine if the farmer requested it. Here the car stops, while bicycles circulate around it on both sides. Similarly, you stop, later, meeting flocks of sheep, on roads across the salt marshes of the Vendee.

France is a land of bicycles, of many political parties, and, at the moment, a land of strikes. Like all other European countries, it is a land of permanent war scares. America looks upon war as a distant, improbable possibility, and when it comes spends billions on airplanes that do not fly, ships that never go to sea, and similar evidences of patriotic dollar-a-year efficiency. Europe's nations live in a state of fear, as an American family might live if it knew that, at any moment, well-equipped gangsters from next door might enter, "shoot up" the household and set fire to the house.

American travelers leaving the boat by railroad, descending in Paris at the Saint Lazare station, were surprised to find crowds fighting each other, not waiting for Germany, crowds made up entirely of Frenchmen of different political opinions.

Some wore ribbons with the red, white and blue colors of the French flag; others, more numerous, wore the plain color red. One side sang the "Marseillaise," national hymn of France since the revolution.

Others wearing small red flags sang the "Internationale," official song of the Communists the world over, from Moscow to Harlem. Crowds grew bigger, the Frenchmen sang the two hymns at each other, more and more violently, with excellent voices, not one out of tune, all knowing the words of their respective hymns. The "Marseillaise" says, "Let us go, children of the fatherland, the day of glory has arrived"; the other says, "Arise ye prisoners of starvation; arise, ye wretched of the earth."

It was a scene never to be described, now that Dooley is dead, and Artemus Ward. Nobody bothered the descending foreigners from across the water. A few Frenchmen hit other Frenchmen, not hard, then agents of the Surete, whom we should call policemen, gradually dispersed the crowds, that met and sang at each other again the next day. They live in the suburbs and work in Paris, or vice versa, and, meeting in the railroad station, it enrages them to encounter those that sing the wrong hymn and wear the wrong colors.

Those singers have chests like drums, complexions that reveal countless billions of red corpuscles and voices that could be heard, almost, from Los Angeles to Santa Monica.

One of them broke off at the sad

THE UNLOADED GUN

You can't be too careful while handling a gun. Children should be taught from infancy to never forget that a gun—even a toy gun—loaded or unloaded is a dangerous thing in the hands of any one who has not been taught to handle it with care and safety.

Most of the sad accidents resulting from the "unloaded" gun is the result of habit, ignorance and carelessness on the part of parents.

By the time Lycurgus, the young hopeful of the Bonehead family is two years old, his dad or mother presents him with a toy gun with a snapper attachment.

About the first thing they say to the young gunman is: "Shoot dad shoot mother, shoot sister—shoot her in the eye." Then they show Lycurgus how to aim the gun at a human target and pull the trigger, and when he does it successfully, they pat him on the back and praise him as a very promising boy.

If someone suggested to Daddy and Mother Bonehead that it is all right for Lycurgus to have a toy gun but they are teaching him a dangerous habit by telling him to "Shoot daddy, shoot mother, shoot sister in the eye." They will answer: "Aw, the thing isn't loaded. It is just a harmless toy. What's the use?"

The use that he is making of that toy gun is causing him to form a dangerous habit. When he picks up a gun—toy or otherwise, his first impulse is to point it at someone and pull the trigger. By and by when he gets a little larger, he will find a real loaded gun. He picks it up, points at someone, pulls the trigger—boom! A corpse! Grief and sorrow in a home! A load of remorse will weigh on someone's soul, all because of a useless and dangerous habit formed in babyhood.

Two little girls peeped into a dresser drawer. There they saw a loaded pistol. The older one picked it up. She obeyed the first impulse that no doubt had been formed by seeing others or perhaps herself, pick up a pistol, point it at someone and pull the trigger. Not thinking, the force of habit urged her to pick it up, that lethal weapon, point it at her little sister's head, and O, horror of horrors! She pulled the trigger and the little darling fell dead at her feet.

"Keep guns and pistols out of the reach of children", you will say. That may be all right if you can do it, but who is it that can keep these things out of reach of children at all times? Sooner or later they will get them in their hands and if they are not taught what to do, they will obey the impulse of the habit formed.

It is all right for children to have toys, if they are taught the lessons of caution just the same as you would teach a child the dangers of fire, water or other dangerous things. Never allow your boy to point his toy gun at anything he doesn't want to kill. Show him the danger of it the same as you would show him the danger of applying a lighted match to a haystack or a barrel of gasoline. He will acquire the correct habit with a gun as you now force him not to play with fire. He will take a pride if you teach him, in showing you that he has learned how to handle his gun. Do this favor to your children and you may one day save a human life. Neglect it and take your chances.—Uncle Bill

Trustees Fill New Faculty

The Board of Trustees met in adjourned meeting at 3:00 p. m., Saturday, July 18.

Superintendent H. B. Lane presented the names and credentials of a number of teachers applying for positions in the school. After examination and consideration, the Board elected following teachers:

For 4th grade, Miss Rena Ball as first choice, and Miss Lillian McElroy as second choice.

For arithmetic in 5th, 6th and 7th grades, Miss Florence Allen.

Above teachers have college degrees and experience as teachers.

For Mexican school, Miss Mildred Simpson who has had two years of college work.

The Board fixed the date for the opening of school to be on Thursday September 3rd.

There is to be a special school program on Armistice Day.

Two days are to be given for Thanksgiving.

The Christmas holidays are to begin on Thursday, December 23rd.

The inside walls of the high school building are being repainted in light ivory. Some of the ceilings are to be repainted in white and some in ivory with L. Z. T. gloss paint to reflect the light.

This refinishing will make the school building brighter and lighter and more attractive and better fitted for the work of the school.

The Board has had many other improvements made to the school plant during the past year which, with proper care, will add increasing beauty to the twenty acre school campus with the passing of the years. The Board is planning for present needs and future development.

Dr. W. J. Swann, who has been ill in a hospital in San Angelo for the past two weeks, returned home last Wednesday. Dr. Eyeritt has had the sick all to himself and has been getting along all right, but as an old lady expressed it the other day: "Suppose that two cases happened at the same time, then what? They sometimes do."

What To Do To Avoid Drownings

In Texas, during 1935, there were 371 deaths from accidental drowning, according to records in the State Bureau of Vital Statistics. This is an increase of 54 over the number reported for the year 1934, and an increase of 85 over the number reported for 1933.

"While water sports are the greatest of all sports during the summer season, they present certain hazards which should be heeded," said Dr. John W. Brown, State Health Officer. "Accidental drowning would not occur if each individual respected the fact that water is not man's natural element, and governed his activities in the water by standard of safety."

Certain precautions should be taken by all swimmers:

1. Never swim alone—especially in deserted places where no rescue is available in case of an emergency.
2. Do not let young children go out in deep water even if they know how to swim, unless some older person proficient in life saving, is with them.
3. Do not go in bathing directly after eating. Wait two hours before taking the plunge.
4. Do not dive in unfamiliar places until you are sure of the depth of the water and the absence of rock.
5. Do not overtax your strength, work up gradually to a long swim by strengthening the muscles first.
6. Do not swim when fatigued.
7. Do not create a hazard for other swimmers by childish pranks and smart tricks.

"Accidental drownings, with few exceptions, occur through lack of proper safeguards or in places without adequate supervision. Take your swim in one of the approved sanitary swimming pools now available in most communities, and help reduce deaths in Texas from drowning."

Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Atkinson and daughter, Miss Mildred Atkinson, returned from a visit to their old home in Mason county last Monday. The Atkinsons had not been at the old home in 34 years, and while great changes had taken place, yet, they had a most enjoyable trip.

Good Rains In Part Of The County

Good showers fell over the west part of the county early last Wednesday morning. In places the rain fall was heavy. A good rain fell on the Reed, Cole, U and other ranches on the upper reaches of the North Concho. Templeton Foster reported a good rain on his ranch on Sterling Creek. He said there was about a four foot rise in Sterling Creek. About 1/4 of an inch fell here. C. C. Reynolds of Lacy Creek had a good rain.

Two Flock Raiders Are Killed

If there is anything a coyote likes it is nice, tender chevon and lamb chops. Three wolves who liked these good eats, took up board with Templeton Foster a few weeks ago. Temp didn't mind furnishing these guests with all the fat rabbits they wanted, but when they changed their bill of fare to chevon and lamb chops, Temp's hospitality ceased. Even for his own eating, he rarely ever sacrifices a good five-dollar lamb.

So last Tuesday, Temp summoned over thirty of his neighbors to help him rid his pasture of these wolves. Three cars filled with wolf shooters and twenty horsemen started out to beat the mesquites. As a result, the hunters killed two of the sheep killers, but one of them climbed the fence and escaped.

Unless that wolf goes somewhere else to dine, there will be another wolf hunt soon.

William G. Clingman, the new pastor of the local Church of Christ will preach here next Sunday. Mr. Clingman and family plan to move here soon and place his shoulder to the wheel and help us push the town along the road to progress. The preachers of this town are my sidekicks. This new preacher having been an editor once should know just how to be a real good sidekick. I gave him a copy of the "Book of Jim" and he is making a study of this inspired volume.

INHERENT REPUBLICAN

Sentimentally and logically, the Negro is a Republican. The Republican party was organized for no other purpose in its inception than to take him from his master and make him free.

Of course this was not done because of the humane feelings entertained for the downtrodden race, but a desire to soak the slaveholder and bring him down from his high perch.

If the Spirit of humanity had dominated the heart of the Republican party when it took up arms against the white people of the South perhaps the negroes would have been slaves to this good hour.

As it was, the white Southerners were prosperous in the days when they owned slaves, and these fellow envied and hated them for it. Only for this envy and hate, the Civil War would have never occurred.

After the Negro was set free, the republican party gave him equal political rights with the whites, knowing too, that the poor, ignorant negro didn't know, or care for that matter, what it was all about. As a result, the negro was dominated by the whites who made it possible for him to have a home and a bread-earning livelihood.

Those who understood negro nature, knew that the colored man was not far enough removed from his simian ancestors as not to be an inveterate imitator. You never saw a negro who was content to imitate another negro, but there was always some white man who was his ideal and whom he did his utmost to ape.

In the absence of initiative, the propensity to imitate the white man proved a salient trait in the negro, because in nearly every community there is some good white man who serves as an ideal for the negro to imitate with the result that many of them have become good citizens.

The negro apes and outmonkeys the white man in the matters of dress, manners and customs. The females of the negro race willingly spend her summer wages for dope that is recommended to straighten her kinky wool and make it look like "de white ladies' hair", and paste that will make her skin look white. I like this trait in the negro because it shows an admiration for the beautiful and a desire to become beautiful themselves. You can't blame them for this, even if it does sometimes make you laugh because they still show a flare-back of their recent simian ancestors.

While the Negro is logically Republican, yet, he looks up to his white Democratic boss for inspiration and direction and he would gladly follow wherever his white friend leads. He loves and admires his white boss. He longs to become a member of his white Democratic boss's party. He knows that he is already as good as his Republican political boss who has always fed him up on empty promises, but he longs to see the day when he can join up and fraternize "wid de suah

South Americans' Song Bird

Dolores Anderson, member of the celebrated South American orchestra headed by Jose Manzanera, appears regularly at the Texas Centennial in the Ford Exposition building. The orchestra has established an enviable reputation for an unusual type of music and Dolores is the vocal soloist and cellist for the group.

Ambitious to climax a vocal career by reaching the grand opera stage, Dolores Anderson, cellist and soloist with Jose Manzanera and his South American orchestra, is an industrious person completely wrapped up in the study of music. She is an important member of the celebrated musical group appearing in nightly concerts in the court of the Ford building at the Texas Centennial in Dallas.

Dolores was born in Oakland,

California. She attended school there and was considered a good student. Her first job was as a stenographer in San Francisco and it was there that she met Jose Manzanera.

Able to speak in Spanish, Dolores also can sing in five languages. They are Spanish, Italian, Russian, French and English.

Although Dolores appears mostly in the role of singer and cellist, she is an able pianist and arranger.

nuff white boss," who is always ready to get him out of a crap game scrap, or get the court to soften his punishment for "sumpin' bout a chicken".

One future day, the Democrats are going to realize that the negro is thousands of years removed from his Simian forebears, 200 to 400 years removed from his native jungle in Africa and 75 years removed from slavery, and during the latter period he has been more or less educated so that in his way, he realizes what it is all about, and after the manner of the melting pot he will be absorbed by the Democratic party.

The Negro will also realize that the Southern Democrats, the people whom he admires, are his best friends. He will find his true place among them and he will forget his fool dream of social equality that his vicious so-called white friends taught him in the times when it hurt his head to think.

Instead of being a wart on the Republican party and making its members a public laughing stock, he will join the Democratic party, learn his place and cooperate with his white brothers in keeping the races pure and free from that contamination which results in the vices of both races and the virtues of neither. The whiteman will know his place and the negro will know his, and each will help the other in making happiness and prosperity for both, but the time is not here yet, but it is coming.—Uncle Bill

Don't forget that dollar and two-bits. It would come in mighty handy these days. If I can get enough of that stuff together, I am going to see the Centennial show in September, I sure would like to go, but it is up to you if I do.—Uncle Bill addressing the best people on earth.

To The Voters Of Sterling County

My duties have made it impossible for me to make an active campaign for the nomination for County Judge, but I want every person in Sterling County to know that I shall appreciate their vote and influence in securing the nomination I seek.

Had I been able to make a house-to-house campaign (which I enjoy doing) I would not have been able to tell the people more than I have heretofore told them. I have endeavored to carry out every policy that I have advocated, and am happy to say that I have, in a measure, succeeded, though there is much yet to be done.

My official record is open. The public knows, or has the means of knowing, just what I have done by merely referring to the public records, which I shall be glad to have them do. We too often listen to the crooked story of the crooked politician, rather than seeking the records for the truth.

There are a number of projects under way with which I am familiar and I desire to see these finished before I leave the County Judge's office. These projects mean much to Sterling County, and I feel that I can be of much assistance to the Commissioners Court in putting them through, since I am fairly familiar with the procedure required by the Federal Administrative branches necessary to get the work under way—and it is no little task to learn the requirements of WPA, TRC, PWA, and balance of the State and Federal alphabet.

Thanking the people of Sterling County for the handsome favors bestowed upon me in the past, and assuring them of my appreciation of

Is it ever wise to exchange a well trained and efficient judicial officer for a man whose judicial temperament and capacities are unknown?

JUDGE SUTTON'S record for fair dealing, prompt, efficient and economical administration of the business of the court has proven the soundness of his legal and judicial training and good JUDGMENT. Jurors appreciate his courtesies and understanding of their problems.

The Political Liar Pays
Us A visit

A stranger came in here last week and loafed around with the boys and argued politics. He was regarded no different from other men until he announced that he was bitterly opposed to Vice President John Garner of Uvalde. He severely criticised "Cactus Jack" and said that he was unpopular and never carried Uvalde County in any election. The boys did not believe it. They went to the News-Record office and looked up the election records and found when John Garner last ran for congress, the vote in Uvalde County gave John Garner 1187 and his opponents 684. The boys said that this stranger either didn't know what he was talking about or was just a plain liar. Being the first specimen of that kind that the boys had ever seen, they naturally concluded that all of John Garner's opponents are that way.

They could not understand why a Texas man could be against John Garner.

It isn't because, Hunter, Sanderford, Brooks, Fisher and the other candidates for governor are such bad men that I am not going to vote for them, but I shall vote for Jimmy Allred because I think he is the best bet for governor. I would have been suspicious of Jimmy if these other candidate hadn't cussed Governor Allred so bitterly. When they began it, I knew I had picked the right man. You know we sometimes admire a man for the enemies he makes

Sunday The Hottest
Day Of The Year

Last Sunday was the hottest day of the season. A light breeze was blowing most of the time which made people take but little notice of the extreme temperature.

At about 3 o'clock p. m. a reliable thermometer fastened to the bole of a tree in the News-Record home yard and where the rays of the sun could strike it, registered at least 130 degrees. The instrument was scaled for 120 degrees with room above this mark for about 10 more degrees. At 3:30 p. m. the mercury had filled the glass tube and was pushing for more room.

At this time, another thermometer on the east porch where it was nice and cool, stood at 108 degrees in the shade.

Up to 4 o'clock not a speck of cloud could be seen, but just then a few specks the "size of a man's hand" showed in the sky. By eight o'clock a cloud formed in the north and west and flashes of lightning could be seen. At 5 o'clock Monday morning we were awakened by a heavy roll of thunder and a light sprinkle of rain on the roof.

word "starvation" and said to your narrator, who had politely congratulated him on his vigor: "Tenez, tenez mon bras, et j'ai soixante sept ans"—meaning, "Here, feel my muscle, and I am sixty-seven years old."

The muscle rose in a biceps like a small melon.

The duty of a visiting foreigner is to observe, describe and not comment; but this writer, had he accepted the invitation to speak at the American club in Paris recently, would have suggested that the French, whose only earthly possession is France, should be careful not to tear that property apart, especially with Germany ready to gather up the pieces.

This crosses the water by mail, is not new, and not news, when you see it. Only heaven knows what might happen in a week.

BUY AN ELECTRIC REFRIGERATOR

To Guide Your Purchase of a Refrigerator!

DON'T CHOOSE BLINDLY

FOR HEALTH—Your refrigerator must maintain safety food temperatures below 50° all the time. Before you buy, be sure it will do this in the hot hours of the summer time, too.

FOR CONVENIENCE—Your refrigerator must be able to freeze ice quickly—must have a high degree of usefulness. Before you buy, be sure it will produce fresh ice during the hot hours of the day.

FOR ECONOMY—Your refrigerator must maintain the above performance at low over-all cost. Before you buy, be sure.

● If you buy a refrigerator that cannot provide satisfactory, economical performance, all the time, you are wasting your money. It is inconvenient to own a refrigerator that cannot freeze desserts or plenty of fresh ice quickly during the hot hours of the day. It is wasteful to own one that has a high initial cost, though little to operate, if it cannot provide satisfactory performance, all the time .. under all conditions.

Remember this when you buy. All refrigerators cannot provide all three of these basic requirements. Tests prove this to be true by actual use in the home. So don't buy on claims alone. Ask for and be sure you get convincing evidence of value. Only then can you be certain you are getting your money's worth. Choose carefully and you will choose a modern electric refrigerator.
