AJRA activities begin Monday in Snyder

The first performance of the AJRA National Finals Rodeo isn't scheduled until Tuesday, but rodeo-related action will begin Monday in the annex of the Scurry County Coliseum.

The regular run of the finals will then continue through Saturday beginning nightly at 8 o'clock in the coliseum.

Monday at 10 a.m., team roping finals are scheduled, to be followed that night at 8 p.m. by the first go-round of racing slack and the first of nightly after-rodeo dances in the annex.

Tuesday begins the regular national finals slate and Saturday will see the local show end with the crowning of the junior world champions.

Special events are planned all week to include a meeting Wednesday of the Cowboys Fellowship of Christian Athletes.

It will be at 2 p.m. in the coliseum. The speaker will be Dennis McKinley of Keller, a professional roper. Special music will be provided for those attending.

Miss AJRA, who will reign during 1986, will be crowned Friday night of the finals. This year's winner will be crowned by the reigning Miss AJRA Anita Balch of Sonora.

A Snyder girl is among the six contestants vying for the title of Miss AJRA this year.

Seeking the honor from Snyder is Leslie Ward. She is joined by contestants Rebecca Powers of Sonora; Karen Snodgrass, Texico, N.M.; Angie Almand, Waxahachie; Traci Christenson, Hewitt; and Karen Cochran, Aspermont.

Miss AJRA will represent the rodeo organization at all rodeos and appearances until next year's finals. She will receive special awards such as an awards jacket from Wall's, leg-

More adjustments for values okayed

No protestors appeared Friday at a "cleanup" session scheduled by the Scurry County Appraisal District for questions related to real estate property values.

The district's Board of Review did make adjustments in local values equaling approximately $250,000, however — changes based upon letters submitted to the district since the last review hearings July 16-18.

The largest share of this adjustment related to values placed on buildings comprising the Varsity Square shopping center. These had been questioned by its Amarillo-based owners, incorporated as Varsity Investors.

Chief Appraiser Ray Peveler said Friday that the adjustment in value will "mean less than $1,000 in tax (income)" to local entities. "They'll never know it as far as taxes go," Peveler said.

He said the review board considered 15 letters related to value questions.

Other adjustments in value were granted to the Hardy family partnership; Raymond Pylant (a value reconsidered at the request of district staff); Texanna Second-Glance; Billy Joe Stephens Jr., James Ellison (a value reconsidered at the district staff's request); Swann's Ice Cream; Hometown Motors; Kelly R. Sharp; Mary Chauncy;

Sunday exhibits at both museums

Twin receptions are planned Sunday from 1 until 4 p.m. for new exhibits opening at both the Scurry County Museum and the Diamond M Museum.

At the county museum, located on the campus of Western Texas College, former district judge Wayland G. Holt will be on hand to autograph copies of his newly published booklet titled "The District Courts of Scurry County and Their Presiding Judges: The First 100 Years."

This will be part of a new exhibit opening featuring 69 photographs of county courthouses across the nation.

A special feature of the exhibit will be a Scurry County section to include courthouse photographs and artifacts from the museum collection.

The booklet will be on sale in the museum store for $3.50.

At the Diamond M, an exhibit of wood engravings from sketches by famous western artist Frederic Remington will open Sunday.

The exhibit of engravings is on loan from a private collection in Santa Fe and will remain in the Diamond M Museum through Sept. 6.

During his 23 year career, Remington produced more than 3,000 paintings, drawings and sculptures.

The public is invited to both exhibits at no charge.

County's tax rate due vote

Commissioners will consider setting a new tax rate for 1986 at the regularly scheduled Monday morning meeting.

The tax rate proposal tops the list of a crowded agenda facing the court beginning at 10 a.m.

During 1985, the county charged approximately 15½ cents per $100 valuation. Since they completed the bonded indebtedness pay cycle for Cogdell Memorial Hospital last May, a rate of 14.4 cents would generate the same amount of tax dollars this year as required during 1985.

In other county business Monday, Monte West of the accounting firm Anderson, Vestal and West is scheduled to present the annual outside audit of the county's 1984 operational year.

The court is scheduled also to appoint election judges for the November election.

R.E. Glasscock is scheduled to request easements in Pcts. 1 and

By Roy McQueen

The feller on Deep Creek says, "Wrinkles is what you get as you travel down the erode of life."

It's hard to believe that 10 years have passed. That's how long Snyder has hosted the National AJRA Rodeo Finals.

In addition to a host of chamber volunteers, the mainstay behind the rodeo has been the Ralph Millers who ranch over in Borden County. That first year, Ralph was appointed chairman of the chamber's rodeo committee.

It was then-chamber manager Mickey Nunley along with John Ward and Sidney Johnson who made the first pitch to attract the rodeo finals to Snyder. At first, one year was considered a major feat.

Because of good community support, the junior rodeo has become a tradition in Snyder and Scurry County. A lot of folks come from out of town, and it's a great attraction for our city.

We remember that first rodeo. Nunley was one of the star attractions. SDN Editor Wacil McNair promoted Nunley to ride a buffalo in a special event.

Nunley, who now is one of the owners of Line and Line Oil Co., did ride—but not for long. Nunley was a victim of the event that he worked so hard to attract here. Nunley broke his arm coming out of the shoot and then was thrown after an eight-second ride.

After Nunley was tossed off, WTC Rodeo Coach Van Rigby ran over to see about Nunley whom he thought was faking an injury. As Rigby bent over, the buffalo ran over him.

We learned back in junior high that we didn't have the grit that rodeo hands are made of. Our riding experience came during one of those old-fashioned Halleween carnivals held in the school gym.

One of the organizations had rigged up a barrel connected to ropes and car springs. When a rider got on and got set, two guys would jerk the ropes, causing the barrel to buck.

One jerk of the rope and we landed on the hardwood floors. It was then that we decided we were better suited for the kissing booth operated by the future homemakers.

Our favorite cowboy story concerns the rancher who was lucky enough to strike a few oilwells on his property.

As the money started to come in, he found himself being dragged all over the country by his wife who believed in the good life. While in New York, she talked the crusty rancher into going with her to a fashion show.

Afterward, he told his coffee-drinking cronies that the women's clothes reminded him of his barbed-wire fences.

"They appear to protect the property," he said, "without obstructing the view."

New store opening Monday

James Reis, the new men's store on the east side of the downtown square, will officially open for business Monday.

Featured will be men's and boy's sport and casual clothing. The store will feature also sports jackets, socks, underwear, belts and some men's accessory jewelry.

Hours of operation will be from 10 a.m. until 7 p.m. Monday through Friday and from 10 a.m. until 6 p.m. Saturday.

Owners of the new business are a partnership comprised of Ronnie and Lea Ann Shields and Ronal and LaTrix Gladson.

Both wives will manage the store's daily operation.

The main brands offered at the store will be Colours by Alexander Julian, Gant, Sans-a-belt slacks by Jaymar-Ruby, London Fog, Merona sportswear, Ruffini sports wear, Jockey underclothing and McCubbin socks.

Ask Us

Q. — If you added it all up, how much in local taxes did Snyder residents pay last year?

A. — Some $15.3 million. The ad valorem tax figures for 1984 were Snyder ISD, $8,509,653; Scurry County, $4,055,771; WTC district, $1,995,637; and City of Snyder, $743,083.

Two meetings

The August meetings for the Western Texas College board of trustees and Snyder school board members are due this week.

The college board will meet beginning at 5:45 p.m. Monday and the school board will be in session at 7 p.m. Tuesday.

8 and under

With AJRA National Finals activities set to begin Monday, those competitors age 8 and younger will have their own chance to compete in a finals event this Sunday for the first time.

A championship barrel racing competition for boys and girls age 8 and under has been scheduled in the coliseum beginning at 1 p.m.

Thirty entries have been received and the public is invited to view the show at no charge.

The event is sponsored by the Rocking R Training Stables, operated in Gail by Randy and Corky Ogden.

They have scheduled it since traditionally youngsters age 8 and younger are not included in the AJRA National Finals.

Sunday's top winner will receive a saddle, donated by Ammerman Saddle Shop of Yoakum, and the Top 10 will earn jackets donated by the Ogden family.

Critics laud proposed ban

WASHINGTON (AP) — Administration critics say a proposed ban on sulfite preservatives used to keep fruits and vegetables looking fresh will help protect the public from potentially fatal reactions, but they contend the government stalled for months before taking action.

"This is good news for the American consumer," said Rep. Ron Wyden, D-Ore, who had proposed legislation to ban the preservatives. "There's no reason on earth to be tainting foods with sulfites just to keep them pretty....

"But there's no question that it has taken far too long," he added. "There was foot dragging all along the way."

Wyden's comment came after the Food and Drug Administration on Friday proposed a ban on the use of sulfite preservatives on fresh fruits and vegetables, including those in restaurant salad bars, because of potentially fatal reactions.

The proposal will be published in the Federal Register early next week and will be subject to public comment for 30 days, the FDA said. A final regulation would follow.

The FDA said it was acting because 13 deaths have been linked to sulfites out of some 500 allergic reactions serious enough to have been reported to authorities.

Sulfite preservatives make fresh fruits and vegetables look more attractive. They keep lettuce from wilting, for example, and prevent apple slices from turning brown.

But while harmless for most people, an estimated 500,000 sensitive people, mostly asthmatics, could suffer an allergic reaction to them. While uncommon, severe reactions can send a person into shock and constrict the air passages, causing suffocation.

The National Restaurant Association and the Produce Marketing Association say most restaurants have stopped using the preservatives because of the hazard.

The teli-tale case of tongue

AVON, Mass. (AP) — Forgers of an athletic shoe have made a mistake which might be called a slip of the tongue.

The fake Reebok shoes look real. But a look at the label inside the tongue of the real Reebok reveals the legend: "From a tradition of over 80 years." The fake, apparently based on an earlier prototype, reads: "From a tradition of over 77 years."

Viruses contribute to susceptibility

BOSTON (AP) — The presence of microbes or viruses from other diseases that affect the body's immune system may account for the spread of AIDS in some African countries and among high-risk groups elsewhere, a researcher says.

Scientists studying why some hemophiliacs become infected with AIDS concluded it often preys on people whose immune systems already are disturbed by disease and other conditions, they reported in the British journal Lancet.

Some experts suspect that viruses, parasites and other microbes may contribute to victims' susceptibility to acquired immune deficiency syndrome.

"This may account for the alarming spread of AIDS that we are currently witnessing in some countries in Africa," as well as the transmission of the disease among homosexuals, said one of the researchers, Dr. Robin A. Weiss of the Institute for Cancer Research in London.

Three-quarters of U.S. AIDS victims are male homosexuals. But hemophiliacs also risk the disease because they must take blood clotting material derived from human blood that may be contaminated with AIDS.

Some male homosexuals have had repeated bouts of venereal diseases and other infections, while drug addicts, another group at risk, catch diseases from dirty needles.

In central Africa, where AIDS is now rampant, people often encounter malaria and other parasitic infections that can disrupt the immune system.

"Those might seem to be a far cry from homosexual practice, but it may all come down to the same thing in the end," Weiss said. "Anything that perturbates the immune system may allow the virus to get a better grip on the host's body."

The study, published Aug. 3 and directed by Dr. Christopher A. Ludlum of the Royal Infirmatory in Edinburgh, focused on 33 people who were inadvertently given some AIDS-tainted blood clotting factor at a clinic in Scotland.

Doctors attempted to learn why 15 of them became infected, while the rest remained free of all signs of the disease.

They discovered differences in the immune systems of the two groups. Even before the 15 got infected, they had lower levels of protective white blood cells that are attacked by the AIDS virus.

The doctors say the irregularity was caused by their hemophilia treatment and it might have made them more susceptible to AIDS infection.

The AIDS virus attacks blood cells called helper-T cells that are necessary to protect the body from infection. The virus wrecks the immune system by turning these T cells in virus factories and then destroying them.

Bond gets denied in theft of antler case

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — A Canadian hunting guide charged in a case involving the alleged theft of a massive set of white-tailed deer antlers will have to spend the weekend in jail, a federal magistrate said.

U.S. Magistrate Jamie Boyd on Thursday denied bond for hunting guide Lloyd McMahon. But Boyd also agreed to hold another bond hearing Monday at the request of Assistant U.S. Attorney Ray Jahn.

Jahn told the court McMahon came to the United States from Canada through Alaska and that he needs time to allow immigration officials to determine if McMahon is in this country legally.

McMahon was named in a federal criminal complaint charging him with transporting stolen merchandise in interstate commerce. The complaint stemmed from a continuing investigation by U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service agents.

The criminal complaint alleges a set of antlers was stolen from Canada Wide Taxidermy in Edmonton, Alberta, and taken to the Rio Grande Ranch located just across the Mexican border from Eagle Pass, Texas.

Jury convicts firm

HOUSTON (AP) — A Houston area woman whom prosecutors portrayed as a merciless madam was convicted of violating federal "white slavery" laws by transporting prostitutes across state lines.

Defense attorneys argued during a four-week trial that Penelope Hatteras, 32, of Sugar Land, was merely a successful businesswoman who ran a legitimate modeling agency in three states.

But jurors in U.S. District Judge John V. Singleton's court on Friday convicted Ms. Hatteras on 21 counts of conspiracy, using interstate facilities to promote prostitution and violating federal "white slavery" laws barring the interstate transportation of prostitutes.

Her former business assistant, Ed Wallach, 31, of Houston was also convicted on 21 similar counts and her former accountant, Charles Holcomb, 42, of Houston, was convicted on 15 counts.

Singleton set a Sept. 19 sentencing date for the three defendants, all of whom were indicted on 21 counts.

Defense attorney Jan Fox said she believed jurors did not reach their verdict based on pertinent issues in the case.

"The jury has reacted to the issue of sex rather than reacting to the specific charges against Miss Hatteras," Ms. Fox said.

Ms. Hatteras declined to comment on the verdict.

Prosecutors contended Ms. Hatteras' business was a poorly disguised front for prostitution. Several witnesses testified they worked as prostitutes for Ms. Hatteras and described her as a cruel and merciless boss who forced some of her employees to service clients for 24-hour stretches.

Ms. Fox said during the trial her client's agency offered nude modeling and massage services in Houston, Dallas, Atlanta and Denver. However, defense attorneys argued Ms. Hatteras tried to prohibit models from selling sex, but she could not be held responsible for their unauthorized actions.

Holcomb was accused of handling the prostitution ring's finances, while Wallach allegedly was the business' "go-fer."

Walker will testify against his brother

NORFOLK, Va. (AP) — Convicted spy Arthur J. Walker will try to avoid the possibility of spending the rest of his life in prison by testifying against his brother and other alleged spy ring members, his lawyer said.

Walker, 50, a retired Navy lieutenant commander, was convicted Friday of seven counts of espionage for selling Navy secrets to the Soviet Union through his brother, John A. Walker Jr., the alleged mastermind of a spy ring.

Officials have called the ring one of the most damaging in U.S. history.

Arthur Walker faces up to three life terms plus 40 years and $40,000 in fines. Sentencing was set for Oct. 15 after defense attorney J. Brian Donnelly said he wanted to try to cut the sentence by cooperating with prosecutors.

"I think Arthur will be willing to cooperate," Donnelly said. "He has nothing to hide at this point."

John Walker is scheduled for trial Oct. 28 in Baltimore. Also charged with espionage are John Walker's son, Navy seaman Michael L. Walker, and associate, Jerry A. Whitworth of Davis, Calif.

Arthur Walker, of Virginia Beach, confessed to FBI agents that he passed documents on Navy ship repair to his brother in 1981 and 1982 for $12,000. The documents were from VSE Corp., where Arthur Walker was an engineer.

He was found guilty by U.S. District Court Judge J. Calvitt Clarke Jr. after 10 minutes of consideration following a weeklong non-jury trial that defense attorneys contended might not have been necessary.

Donnelly said Justice Department officials in Washington overruled local prosecutors and spurned a plea bargain because they wanted a "public display" in the first trial involving any of the four.

"I wouldn't be surprised also to see this used as fodder for the death penalty provision of the peacetime espionage act," said defense lawyer Samuel W. Meekins.

The case has sparked calls on Capitol Hill and elsewhere for a renewal of the death penalty for espionage during peacetime.

Donnelly and Meekins said Walker had been willing to plead guilty to one count carrying a maximum life sentence. He said the U.S. attorney's office was interested but that Justice Department officials rejected the plea.

Assistant U.S. attorney Tommy E. Miller refused to discuss plea negotiations.

UT president is named by regents

AUSTIN (AP) — A nationally known marketing scholar, William Cunningham, has been chosen president of the University of Texas at Austin.

The nine UT system regents also on Friday created another top level administrative job at the 46,000-student Austin campus by naming Gerhard J. Fonken, an organic chemist who was one of four finalists for the choice UT-Austin presidency, to be executive vice president and provost.

The other two finalists considered Friday were Lattie Finch Coor, president of the University of Vermont, and Morton W. Weir, vice president for academic affairs in the University of Illinois system.

A fifth finalist, James E. Freedman, president of the University of Iowa, said on Thursday he had withdrawn as a candidate.

On Sept. 1, Cunningham will take the place of UT-Austin President Peter J. Flawn, an geologist who resigned to return to private business. Flawn, a former president of UT-San Antonio, had been president in Austin since 1979.

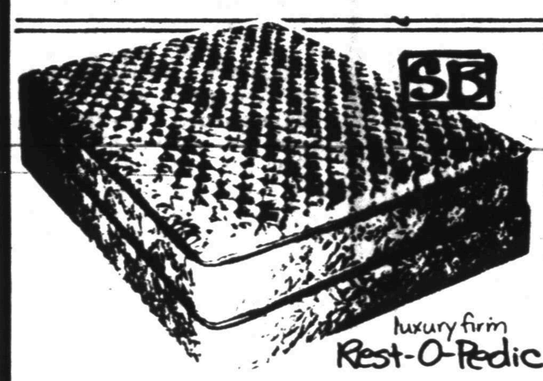

Cunningham, 41, has been at UT-Austin almost all of his academic career, coming to the Austin faculty in 1970 from Michigan State University. Hay said Cunningham has won several major teaching excellence awards and is noted for having developed special multimedia teaching materials for marketing courses.

Cunningham became dean of the UT-Austin College of Business Administration and the Graduate School of Business in 1983.

Crash report not due for months

GRAPEVINE, Texas (AP) — It will be sometime next year, at the earliest, before a final report on the Aug. 2 crash of Delta Air Lines' Flight 191 is issued, a National Transportation Safety Board investigator says.

The wide-bodied L-1011 jumbo jet crashed during its final approach to Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport during a severe thunderstorm.

"We had at one time a target date of about six months on a major case like this," NTSB staff investigator Rudolf Kapustin said at a news conference Friday.

But he added, "It's never happened. It's considerably longer."

However, advisories will be issued or other action taken immediately should safety problems at the airport be discovered, Kapustin said.

"They've been made the day after an accident, two days, a week or a month ... depending on what type of information is developed," he said.

Investigators previously reported that wreckage of the Delta jumbo jet showed no evidence of failures in the aircraft's structure or systems.

The examination of various parts and equipment is continuing in Atlanta, where Delta has its headquarters, Kapustin said.

The investigation, which at one time involved more than 100 experts, has centered on violent downbursts of air, known as wind shears, as the cause of the L-1011 crash, which claimed 133 lives.

It was revealed Thursday that the Delta pilots were using information from an outdated weather forecast as the jet made its final approach toward Runway 17L.

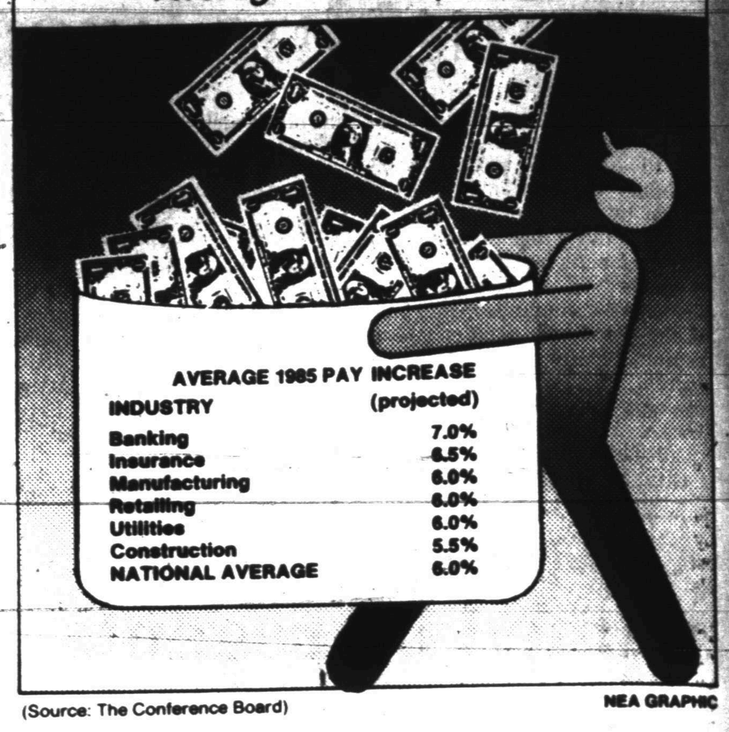

Kapustin said the crew was unaware that a weather observer had reported seeing cumulonimbus clouds, which are associated with the formation of thunderstorms, and possibly, the wind shears being investigated as a possible cause of the crash.

It was disclosed Friday that Delta has changed the number of the ill-fated flight, effective Sept. 1.

Delta officials had insisted in recent days that there were no plans to change the flight number. But a marketing employee in Delta's headquarters in Atlanta "just decided" to change the number, airline spokesman Jim Ewing said in Atlanta.

Indians, Zulus patrol area where fierce riots occurred

DURBAN, South Africa (AP) — Black Zulus and Indians armed with guns, spears and sticks patrolled their townships to try to protect themselves from the racial rioting that left an unofficial toll of 50 dead and 300 hospitalized.

In Johannesburg, rumors persisted in financial markets Friday that the government would release Nelson Mandela, the imprisoned leader of the outlawed African National Congress, the main guerrilla group fighting white rule.

Elsewhere, there were reports the government was preparing to make other major concessions, possibly including some form of voting rights for blacks.

State Department spokesman Bernard Kalb said in Washington that the Reagan administration was encouraged after a meeting between South Africa's foreign minister, R.F. Botha, and U.S. National Security Adviser Robert C. McFarlane in Vienna.

"To their credit, the South Africans are looking at and considering the views of other Western governments," Kalb said. "We expect the process to go on and we would be looking for results in the near future."

The battles between blacks and Indians in Durban, an Indian Ocean port, escalated Friday. Blacks burned and destroyed a monument built by Mohandas K. Gandhi 80 years ago as a symbol of peaceful resistance.

Gandhi lived in Africa for 21 years, from 1894 through 1915, and it was in Durban that he formulated his philosophy of nonviolence.

Natal province, where Durban is located, is home to 6 million Zulus, South Africa's largest tribe, and to the majority of the nation's 850,000 ethnic Indians.

Durban's Daily News reported in today's early edition that about 3,000 Indian vigilantes armed with shotguns, revolvers, swords and short spears patrolled Indian townships for fear of renewed attacks by blacks.

Followers of Gatsha Buthelezi, the conservative chief of the Zulus, also patrolled black townships with short spears and sticks to try to restore order.

Police put the death toll at 22, but the two major black hospitals reported a total of 38 deaths, including 24 Friday. Durban newspapers said their reporters tallied 50 dead, only one of them Indian.

Officials said about 300 blacks with gunshot or other wounds were admitted to hospitals Friday in Durban, which had been unaffected by racial unrest until Tuesday.

The United Democratic Front, the main anti-apartheid organization which has Indian leaders, blamed "opportunistic elements" for the ethnic conflict.

"There is no reason whatsoever for this situation to be interpreted as Africans against Indians," it said in a statement.

Response to White lukewarm

AUSTIN (AP) — The advice Gov. Mark White gave to help students cope with the no-pass, no-play rule is getting a lukewarm response from coaches and teachers.

"I don't think it addresses the main problem. But anything that may help is welcome," said Eddie Joseph, assistant executive vice president of the Texas High School Coaches Association.

White's advice, modeled on one used by Houston's Madison High School to keep basketball players eligible, suggests advisory sessions, tutorial programs, a buddy system pairing successful and struggling students, adult "mentors" and study seminars.

The no-pass, no-play rule — which White has taken to calling the pass-play rule — prohibits students from participating for six weeks in sports or other extracurricular activities if failing any course. This will be the first football season under the rule, which was a key element of school reforms approved by the Legislature last year.

Coaches have urged White to consider a suspension period shorter than six weeks, but the governor Thursday said he wouldn't back down from the rule.

"To us, this (six-week suspension) is strictly punitive. If the purpose is to motivate children, it's hard to see why they shouldn't be eligible again as soon as they pass," Joseph said.

The American Revolutionary War began April 19, 1775, with the British defeats at Lexington and Concord, Mass.

Pope praises contributions of missionaries

LOME, Togo (AP) — Pope John Paul II praised the contributions of white missionaries during the first stop on a seven-nation African tour, and left Togo for the Ivory Coast today to dedicate the continent's biggest church.

The pontiff was seen off at Lome airport by President Gnassingbe Eyadema and a large cheering crowd performing tribal dances, waving flags and handkerchiefs and singing "Auld Lang Syne."

In a brief farewell speech at the airport, John Paul declared his "gratitude to God ... for the happy witness, vitality, prayer and warm welcome" he received in Togo.

He sent greetings to Togolese of all religions and expressed confidence that Togo would "confront its difficult problems of truly human development, aggravated by the problem of drought ... in respectful observance of human dignity."

John Paul's schedule called for a stop in Cameroon after dedication ceremonies in Abidjan, Ivory Coast, for the Cathedral of St. Paul, the largest church in Africa and one of the 10 largest in the world.

In defense of white missionaries, the pope said Friday they account for nearly half of Togo's 193 Roman Catholic priests and "deserve a very vigorous gratitude."

"Without them, the church would not have been implanted here," he said.

He urged Roman Catholics to seek peace and harmony with their countrymen of other religions, particularly with the nearly 70 percent of Togo's 3 million people who continue to follow ancient animistic tribal religions.

He did not speak at all of "Africanization" — a term used by African nationalists for their campaign to oust the remaining white expatriates from trade, industry, administration, technical services and churches.

In a gesture that brought enthusiastic approval from many Togolese of all religions, he met a group of tribal "priests of the sacred forest," including traditional sorcerers, faith healers and snake worshipers.

Texas Air sweetens bid for TWA, Inc.

HOUSTON (AP) — Texas Air Corp. has sweetened its bid to acquire Trans World Airlines Inc. by $3 a share, to $26, in an escalating takeover battle for the New York-based carrier.

But New York financier Carl C. Icahn's investor group already is on the verge of taking outright control of TWA. The group has disclosed it owned 45.5 percent of TWA's total stock outstanding.

The latest offer made Friday by Texas Air, the parent of Continental Airlines and New York Air, tops a $24-a-share bid for TWA made earlier this week by Icahn.

Icahn refused to comment on Texas Air's revised offer but notified TWA that he may increase his ownership of its stock, according to a statement issued by Howard Rubenstein Associates, a New York public relations firm representing the investor.

Icahn offered to buy the TWA stock his group does not already own for $24 a share in cash and securities after Texas Air reached a tentative agreement on June 13 to pay $23, also in cash and securities, for each of TWA's approximately 34.5 million total common shares outstanding, or $793.5 million.

Icahn made his offer after he reached an agreement with two of TWA's three major unions, under which the unions would exchange sizable wage concessions for TWA stock and profit sharing.

Texas Air's new bid, which has a total value of about $897 million, calls for Texas Air to pay $20.50 in cash and $5.50 of a new issue of preferred stock for each TWA share.

On consolidated New York Stock Exchange trading, TWA closed up 50 cents a share Friday to $22.50.

At its New York headquarters, TWA said it was reviewing both offers and would discuss them at a board of directors meeting next week.

Texas Air has $600 million in financing arranged through the New York investment house Drexel Burnham Lambert. The additional amount required for Friday's increase would come from "internal resources, cash and lines of credit," spokesman Bruce Hicks said.

Inmate stabbed by fellow prisoners

HUNTSVILLE, Texas (AP) — A Texas Death Row inmate was recovering from minor wounds after he was attacked by two fellow prisoners armed with a 9½-inch piece of flattened metal, a prison spokesman said.

Mikel Derrick, 28, was stabbed about 9:30 p.m. Thursday in a recreation room near the Ellis I Unit's so-called "animal wing," where the state's most dangerous Death Row inmates are housed, authorities said.

Derrick faces execution for the October 1980 shooting death of Edward Fonnier, 32, during an attempted robbery in Houston. Texas Department of Corrections spokesman Phil Guthrie said Friday.

Two fellow Death Row inmates attacked Derrick with a piece of metal, called a shank, because they apparently did not want to pay gambling debts they owed him, Guthrie said.

After the attack, Derrick left the recreation room, told an officer he had been stabbed and handed him the metal shank, the spokesman said.

The inmate was taken to the unit infirmary, where he was treated for superficial stab wounds on his elbow and chest and received stitches in his left wrist, Guthrie said.

Authorities questioned two Harris County capital murder convicts — ages 23 and 33 — in the incident, Guthrie said.

Backfield area of concern as Tigers open two-a-days

When two-a-day football workouts begin Monday, Snyder coaches will be looking especially hard at several areas - most notably, at the offensive and defensive backfields.

While Snyder returns three offensive four defensive linemen from last season's squad, only fullback-safety Justin Webb and linebacker Jimmy Hunter return from the backfield.

Offensively, Webb, expected to be one of the top running backs in the district this season, is a fine cornerstone. He rushed for 724 yards last season, despite missing three and a half games with a wrist injury. He also caught three passes for 68 yards.

But the vacancies are obvious. Gone are last season's quarterback, tailback, halfback and primary receivers. Also graduated are most of the six defensive backs.

While the coaches hope to mold players into these roles, they can at least be content that Snyder could have the best offensive and defensive lines it has boasted in years.

Returning on offense are guards Joe Rodriquez and Steve Parker and tackle Trey Tippens. Jake Menix, Donnell Davis and Chris Garrett have all had some experience along the offensive line, too.

Defensively, Parker and Robert Patterson return at end. The tackles, 200-pounders Arthur Robinson and Juan Benitez, are also on hand for a second campaign. They will be joined by Garrett and Mark Thompson, among others.

Another area that could be strong early in the season is the kicking game. Back are punter Mike McWilliams and punter-kicker Ricky Hunter. McWilliams punted 12 times for a 36.3 average last seson while Hunter booted 36 for a 25.9 figure. Hunter's average was lowered by a handful of punts which were partially blocked - something that the 1985 team, with its stronger, more experienced line, may be able to avoid.

Coach Dennis Tomlin expects about 50 players to come out for varsity football this season. They include linemen Brent McFarland and John Hamlett and backs Patrick Malone, Scott Lanier, Craig Watkins, Cal Mayfield, Mike Carter, Jeff Rose, Earl Ware, Todd Pollard and Rusty Radican.

'Hills wins Little League crown

WACO, Texas (AP) - Dale Stanton hit a three-run homer in the third inning to spark Sagemont-Beverly Hills of Houston to its second state Little League title with a 7-4 win over Baytown West.

Sagemont-Beverly Hills, which took the title Thursday night, also was the state champion in 1983. The three-run homer by Stanton made the score 5-1 and Sagemont-Beverly Hills scored two other runs in the fifth inning with an RBI double by Chris McKinley.

Baytown West scored all its runs with shots over the fence. Scott Marquart and Jacinto Constante hit solos in the second and fourth innings and Alex Alegria hit a two-run homer in the fifth.

In the consolation game, Waco Midway defeated Carrollton South 1-0, with Midway's Brent Baker walking, stealing second, advancing to third on passed ball and scoring when John Kilgore was thrown out at first.

Carrollton pitcher Jeff Conway threw a one-hitter and struck out 10 in the losing effort.

Girls preparing to tip off volleyball season for 1985

Twenty-five girls, including five returnees from last year's varsity squad, have picked up their workout gear for the 1985 Snyder High School volleyball season.

VICKI NELMS

Karlene Thompson, Donna Anderson, Hope Hernandez, Kim McLarty and Allison Adams - all members of last season's varsity unit - lead the group of seniors, juniors and soohomores which will workout at 8 a.m. Monday.

Coach Vicki Nelms indicated that several other girls may report Monday.

Workouts will be held from 8-12 and 2-6 Monday through Saturday. As soon as the varsity team is selected, that group will work from 2-4 in the afternoons while the junior varsity will work from 4-6.

"Monday, we'll just go over everything. We'll show the girls the new drills they'll be doing and go into our strength training program," said Nelms.

Both the varsity and junior varsity will scrimmage in Seminole on Aug. 19 and open the season by hosting Levelland on the 20th.

The match with Levelland will be the varsity's only home game before the District 2-4A season opens with Fort Stockton on Sept. 14. The varsity will attend tournaments at Monahans on Aug. 23-24, at San Angelo on Aug. 30-31, and at Breckenridge on Sept. 7.

The junior varsity will compete in the Monahans Tournament, and host the Snyder Junior Varsity Tournament on Aug. 31.

Seniors reported out for the 1985 season include Anderson, Hernandez, McLarty, Thompson and LaSaunya Ward.

Juniors are Adams, Pam Casias, Donna Clay, Stacy Dunk, Carrie Fortune, Monica Hinojos, Shondra Robinson, Sharnette Thompson, Leslie Ward, Julie Williams, and Tammy Williamson.

Sophomores are Jennifer Alarcon, Patricia Anderson, Yolanda Anderson, Becky Becerra, Paula Caldwell, Brinda Gonzales, Denise Overton, Holly Page, Kelly Walker and Meredith Goodwin.

Patty Grimmett will serve as junior varisty coach and serve as assistant with the varsity.

Freshmen do not report for workouts until Aug. 26. Their coach will be Jan Kruse.

A program designed to acquaint the public with the players, managers, coaches and the sport of volleyball will be held in the high school gym at 6:30 p.m. Aug. 17.

Radican takes second at Jr. Olympic Games

IOWA CITY, Iowa -- Snyder's Rusty Radican took second place at the USTU National Junior Olympic Taekwondo Championships, held here Friday.

He lost in the finals to Doug Baker of Ohio, who had defeated him in a first-round match a month ago in Chicago.

"It was the best match in the competition," said Radican. "He (Baker) said 'Last time was the best one. Now this one.'"

Radican is a first degree black belt.

The competition was part of the AAU-USA Junior Olympic Multiple Sports Games, held on the Iowa University campus. Over 5,000 competitors attended the games, with Texas boasting the third largest delegation.

Radican said portions of the competition would be televised Aug. 19 on WTBS.

"It was really special," said the Snyder High School senior, who was to return home over the weekend and prepare for two-a-day football workouts Monday.

PLAYING IN TOURNAMENT – Retha and John Pickering warm up for the annual Raggedy Ann & Andy Couples Golf Tournament by playing a practice round at Snyder Country Club. The two-day tournament began Saturday morning. (SDN Staff Photo)

Nelson leads at LaJet midpoint

ABILENE, Texas (AP) - Brian Nelson holds the midway lead in the LaJet-Pelz National Amateur golf tournament with a 5-under-par, 36-hole score of 137.

Nelson, who just finished his freshman year at the University of Texas, overtook first-round leader Scott Verplank with a 5-under-par 67 Friday at the Fairway Oaks Golf & Racquet Club.

Verplank, an All-American at Oklahoma State University, is two shots back.

Nelson tamed the winds, which gusted up to 25 mph, with a no-bogey round in which he hit 16 greens in regulation. On one of the holes he missed, he chipped in for a birdie.

"I just went out and hit the ball the way I did yesterday (Thursday)," said Nelson, who had a 70 under nearly perfect conditions in the first round. "I've played here in junior tournaments in the spring when the wind was a lot worse and I've been more successful when I didn't try to change my swing to adjust for the wind. I probably had about four putts that I could have made that didn't go in."

Verplank, who led the first round with a 65, double-bogeyed the 12th hole to go 5 over par for the day, but he closed his round with a birdie-birdie-par-birdie flourish that closed the gap Nelson had opened.

"Scott's a pro," joked Nelson of Verplank's fast finish. "He might as well be a professional. It's going to be fun playing with him (in the final group of the day on Saturday)."

Three players, including Philip Jonas of Lamar University, Grant Waite of Oklahoma University and local businessman Conway Jordan are tied at 140.

NFL preseason in full swing...

Cards nip Bears; Bills tied

by The Associated Press

The race to the Super Bowl is on.

Running back Quentin Walker skirted right end for 48 yards and a touchdown with 3:42 remaining, giving the St. Louis Cardinals a 10-3 triumph Friday night over the Chicago Bears, as the first full weekend of National Football League preseason games commenced.

In the only other game played Friday the Buffalo Bills and Detroit Lions played to a 10-10 tie.

Walker's long run came on the fourth play of a drive that started at the St. Louis 29. A 15-yard pass completion from Kyle Mackey to Curtland Thomas and Walker's 7-yard run off tackle preceded the touchdown run.

Cards starting quarterback Neil Lomax and his Chicago counterpart, Jim McMahon, played only two series - with Lomax completing four of eight passes for 50 yards and McMahon making good on two of six for 58.

Withheld from the contest was running back Walter Payton of Chicago, the NFL's all-time leading rusher.

Wide receiver Andre Reed scored on a 19-yard scamper late in the fourth quarter to earn a tie for the Bills. Reed took a reverse handoff from running back Jacque Robinson and ran untouched into the end zone with 2:29 left in the fourth quarter.

White is pleased executions still on

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Mark White, who never has stayed the execution of a condemned man during his term, says he is pleased with the way Texas is carrying out the death penalty because it deters crime.

"We have the death penalty in Texas. I'm pleased to see that it's being carried out today, because I believe it can be an effective deterrent against those people in our society who would take life," White said Friday.

The governor also said he approved of Attorney General Jim Mattox's quick handling of death penalty appeals for the state, which has executed nine men by lethal injection since 1982 and currently has more than 200 prisoners waiting on Death Row.

"I am pleased that our attorney general is moving to expedite those cases so they won't be tied up in court on an interminable basis," White said.

His comments came in a speech marking the 50th anniversary of the Texas Department of Public Safety.

White said Texas has a solid crime-fighting reputation.

"We're taking a tough stance and we don't coddle criminals. I haven't ever seen a state that works harder or more cooperatively to make certain that we do provide protection for the lives of our people and their property," White said.

RRC is requesting federal rehearing

AUSTIN (AP) — The Railroad Commission says a federal agency ruling in a Panhandle case would "have the practical effect" of regulating gas production in Texas, which Congress has expressly reserved for the state.

The commission commented Friday in asking the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission to reconsider its order that 37 independent Panhandle oil operators illegally sold natural gas from what the commission had classified as oil wells.

The Railroad Commission's motion for a rehearing said the July 12 FERC opinion "creates an unworkable conflict between state regulation of oil and gas production" and the FERC's authority.

The FERC order favored out-of-state natural gas purchasers who said the independents were illegally diverting gas from interstate commerce and federal pricing regulations.

The Railroad Commission said "findings and definitions" adopted by the FERC would have "the practical effect of regulating completion and production practices in Texas," which has been expressly reserved for the state's jurisdiction.

"For the FERC to rule on what practices constitute compliance with RRC rules is inconsistent with FERC's mandate to leave regulation of production to the states," the commission said.

"It is clearly the intent of Congress that the individual states regulate natural gas production. While the order in this docket purports to apply Texas law and Railroad Commission rules, it actually preempts state examination and resolution of various state regulatory issues 'applying Texas law' to them before the various state regulatory issues, which have only recently been raised, have been resolved by the state."

The commission said it had embarked "on what promises to be a lengthy and detailed review of present law, rules and practices," and it asked for a rehearing to give the commission time to "resolve those issues concerning production practices properly reserved to the state."

It said it would forward the results of its study to the FERC.

The commission also submitted a motion to intervene in the proceedings involving independent operators and Dorchester Gas Producing Co., saying it would be in the public interest. The July FERC opinion came in the Dorchester case.

Boy, 16, charged in capital murder

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — A 16-year-old boy was charged with capital murder Friday in the slaying of a 4-year-old neighbor girl whose body was found dumped in an alley in June.

Felix Louis Kennedy was being held without bond early today in the Tarrant County Jail, said Sgt. Savala Swanson of the Tarrant County Sheriff's Department.

Kennedy was transferred to the jail from the Juvenile Detention Center Friday, officials said.

Earlier this week, a judge certified the youth to stand trial as an adult. Under Texas law, a person found guilty of capital murder can receive the death penalty. However, the law prohibits a juvenile from being executed if found guilty of capital murder as an adult.

Investigators said the child, Melody Ann Flores, was sexually assaulted before her death. No sexual assault charges have been filed against Kennedy, officials said.

Possible tampering reported

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Palo Verde Nuclear Generating Station officials say someone apparently has tampered with switches in the control room of Unit 2 at the three-reactor complex.

Plant spokesman Dan Canady said Friday that a start-up engineer discovered Thursday afternoon that 21 of the 89 "control element drive mechanism" were in the "on" position.

"The switches act like electrical circuit breakers. When they're on, they allow power to flow to motors that adjust the (nuclear fuel) control rods. But there's no fuel and no rods there yet," Canady said.

The unit is scheduled to be loaded with nuclear fuel in the last quarter of this year.

Canady added that in a possibly related incident Monday, an engineer noticed five of the switches were on.

"At this point, we don't know what to think," Canady said. "That's a high-traffic area. No damage was done."

He said the Maricopa County Sheriff's Office has not been notified, however.

Construction on Unit 2 is more than 99.7 percent complete at the plant, located 50 miles west of downtown Phoenix.

Unit 1, which began producing power June 10, has been out of service since July 24 after a water leak was detected in the nuclear portion of the plant. It since has been repaired and officials expected to restart power production this weekend.

Okay battered women grant

WASHINGTON (AP) — Following a nearly two-month delay forced by conservative claims that the cause of lesbianism would be advanced, the Justice Department has approved a $293,904 grant to a group that aids battered women.

Some two dozen conservative members of Congress had interceded with Attorney General Edwin Meese III in June to stop the award of the government grant to the National Coalition Against Domestic Violence. They had claimed the Reagan administration should not approve a grant to an organization which includes pro-lesbian elements.

The grant, which had been scheduled for award in mid-June to coincide with a screening at the Kennedy Center of a movie about battered women, was pulled back and subjected to further review.

But on Friday, Meese gave his approval and the grant was signed, said Assistant Attorney General Lois Haight Herrington, whose Office of Justice Program will police how the money is used.

On Capitol Hill, a spokesman for Rep. Mark Siljander, R-Mich., leader of a group of self-styled "pro-family Republicans," said only that Siljander had asked the department to review the proposal and that it did so before approving it.

Sen. Frank Lautenberg, D-N.J., said through a spokesman, "I am pleased that the Justice Department has seen fit to release money to combat violence. This is an important step for victims across the country."

Lautenberg had led an effort in the Senate to gain the release of the funds, sending a letter to Meese on July 25 urging the attorney general to award the money. The letter had 22 Senate co-signers.

Officials at the coalition, which operates some 700 shelters for battered women across the country, could not immediately be reached for comment on Friday.

Mrs. Harrington said that under terms of the grant, the coalition by mid-August will receive $293,904 for the first year of the two-year program. In addition, the coalition would be eligible for another $286,096 in the second year, for a total of $580,000.

"It's up to them to satisfy conditions for (the balance of the money) the second year," Mrs. Herrington said in a telephone interview.

On July 11, she had sent a letter to Siljander pledging that none of the money would be used for pro-lesbian causes.

On Friday, Mrs. Herrington said the total amount of the grant was lowered from the original $625,000 to $580,000.

Two rockets hit Gemayel's palace

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Two rockets slammed into President Amin Gemayel's palace in suburban Beirut during a battle along the dividing line between Christian and Moslem sectors of the city, police said today.

Nine people died and 41 were wounded in the fighting, but there were no casualties at the palace. Gemayel was at his summer residence northeast of Beirut.

Shells from the Christian-Moslem fighting also crashed into residential districts along the Green Line that splits the capital into Christian and Moslem sectors.

A police statement said two Soviet-made Grad rockets hit the presidential palace in the Christian suburb of Baabda about 11 p.m. Friday night.

One round slammed into the main square at the palace's entrance, shattering windows. The second exploded at the edge of the two-story, hilltop palace east of Beirut, causing some damage, the statement said.

Several other rockets landed in the heavily guarded complex, but there were no casualties, police said.

Police could not determine the source of fire at the palace, but Christian-controlled radio stations said the rockets were unleashed by Druse militia gunners in hills southeast of Beirut.

Shells also crashed into the Yarze bluffs near Baabda, where the U.S. ambassador's residence and the Lebanese Defense Ministry are. The two compounds were not hit, police said.

The fighting shattered the third cease-fire called along the Green Line on Friday.

An army spokesman said earlier two cease-fires were ignored, but the third truce, declared after nightfall, appeared to hold despite sporadic exchanges across the Green Line.

Meanwhile, despite kidnappers' recent release of two foreigners, there was no sign Friday that any of a dozen Western hostages would soon be released.

Diplomats and intelligence sources in Beirut and Damascus, Syria, said they had no indication of an impending release of the seven Americans, four Frenchmen and a Briton kidnapped by Moslem extremists. There had been a flurry of speculation following a Kuwaiti newspaper report that they would be released Wednesday.

Retired professor is saving dialects

ASHLAND, Ore. (AP) — A retired English professor, who says British dialects are going the way of Eliza Doolittle's "haitches" before she met 'enry 'iggins, is trying to save 65 versions spoken from Scotland to Cornwall.

Donald E. Moore, who taught English at Southern Oregon State College, is giving the college library recordings of 185 speakers. Some of the tapes have been transcribed to help understand them, but others eluded translation.

"I've got an hour or so of Lincolnshire with no transcription," Moore said. "You sit down for a half an hour and you'll end up with maybe half the page full of blanks because you can't tell what they are saying."

Moore said in a recent interview that he wanted to preserve the dialects while they were still being spoken, particularly for people interested in studying the language as it was 100 years ago.

The influence of television, radio, movies and expanded education is responsible for eliminating differences in the way people speak and for giving languages a bland sameness, he said, adding that the tapes would be of use to English and literature teachers —Well, I have tapes of the Nottingham dialect, which is where these novels were set."

Such recordings also are needed by actors and actresses "who want to do an authentic dialect," he said

Many of his examples were taken from commercial recordings, some prepared by the British Drama League in the 1930s to help actors learn accents.

Others are from scholarly collections such as the Survey of English Dialect Archives at the University of Leeds.

About half were culled from oral history tapes made by linguists and sociologists.

"Then I picked up things off radio broadcasts, things like an Irish politician being interviewed by a BBC broadcaster, which made a nice contrast," Moore said. "Whenever there was an opportunity to interview somebody, like a Welsh farmer I stayed with, I made some tapes."

Warrant nets two charged

Police executed a search warrant at an east Snyder residence shortly before midnight Friday — netting two arrests for misdemeanor possession of marijuana.

Taken into custody around 11:20 p.m. were a 26-year-old and a 36-year-old suspect. They were charged with possession of marijuana in a quantity less than 2 ounces.

Teenage mother sentenced

HOUSTON (AP) — A teen-ager convicted of smothering her 8-day-old son was sentenced to 63 years in prison after jurors heard testimony that she laughed and joked about killing the child.

A state district court jury that convicted Leanne Pitts of murder in the April 10 suffocation of her son, Michael Dean Pitts, deliberated almost eight hours over two days before deciding Friday how to punish her.

Ms. Pitts' attorney, Jimmy James, pleaded with jurors to give her a suspended sentence, saying the 19-year-old woman needed the psychiatric help she would not get in prison.

"You know that she was saying, "I need help.' She delivers a child. She tried to figure ways around the dilemma, but she figured the wrong way," James said.

However, prosecutor Joe Magliolo argued Ms. Pitts deserved at least 60 years in prison.

"What kind of person could hold their hand over a child's mouth while it's kicking and crying until it turns blue?" Magliolo asked.

"This is a beautiful healthy boy. There are people in this country who would give their hearts and souls to have this child," he said.

During the four-day trial, jurors heard a tape recording in which Ms. Pitts called a constable's office and told a dispatcher, "I've killed my baby." According to the recording, Ms. Pitts said she held her hand over the baby's nose and mouth until he turned blue.

Psychologist James Ray Hays testified that at the time of the killing, Ms. Pitts suffered a "brief reactive psychosis" produced by stress from her parents and a failed marriage and childbirth. Hays said Ms. Pitts needed to be hospitalized six months to a year, followed by several years of out-patient therapy.

Jail inmates Bridget Holland and Norma Cuellar testified during the punishment phase of the trial that while they waited in a courtroom holding area Ms. Pitts described how she put her hand tightly over the baby's nose and mouth and how he struggled.

"She was laughing. She was smiling," Ms. Cuellar said of the defendant's demeanor.

Retailers, analysts divided on outlook

NEW YORK (AP) — The nation's major retailers are entering the second — and most crucial — half of their year divided about whether they will see a pickup in consumer buying during the back-to-school, fall and Christmas seasons.

The companies this past week posted poor sales for July, the last month in their fiscal first-half. It was the fourth disappointing month in a row.

Retailers' second-quarter profit reports, due in a few weeks, are not going to look good either, analysts say.

Whatever is ahead, though, counts more.

The companies earn 70 percent of their profits and register almost 60 percent of their sales in the coming period, says Jeffrey Feiner, an analyst with the investment firm Merrill Lynch, Pierce Fenner & Smith Inc.

The Conference Board, a business sponsored research group, reported this past week that consumer confidence moved up slightly in July.

It said its consumer confidence index, with 1969-1979 equaling 100, advanced to 92.4, about one point higher than it was in June. And the percentage of survey respondents expecting improved business conditions in the second half remained the same at 20 percent.

Fauber said that strong inventory management in the first half of the year has positioned his company to take advantage of the increase in sales it is expecting.

"Lean and clean inventories have permitted buyers to take maximum advantage of the new seasonal merchandise, substantially reducing the risk of markdowns we experienced last year," Fauber said.

And that would mean better profits.

Career Postal Workers will now earn a starting salary of $18,532 plus benefits — with an accelerated step increase plan; men and women, regardless of age, are eligible. The first step toward a postal service career is getting your name onto the "Register of Eligibles," which is accomplished by passing this Exam. To be one of the first hired, you need to get one of the higher scores! And to be hired at all during the next three years, you will need to score at least 95%.

This workshop is being offered now, prior to the formal announcement of the examination dates, to give you adequate time to prepare for the test. Many post offices begin testing within a week of the announcement which isn't enough time to prepare properly. By starting now, you'll be ready to attain high scores using our methods when the test is given.

Come to the workshop. If you don't feel, at the end of the course, that it will help you achieve a score of 95% or better, don't pay for the workshop! Furthermore, If your score is less than 95% on the official exam after using our techniques, we will immediately refund your tuition in full!

WANT TO RELOCATE? We are the publishers of The Postal Alert, the bi-weekly newsletter giving you postal exam dates nationwide. Only The Achievement Center provides this service. Learn how you can relocate to any area of the country you like.

★ You are invited to bring your tape recorder to record the workshop for personal exam review.
★ You may attend as many extra sessions of the workshop as you like (on a space available basis) without additional tuition charge.

WORKSHOP TUITION — $40 (Includes guaranteed 4-hour Workshop, The Corey Guide to Postal Exams [with 6 complete practice tests], a Sample Exam with Answers, Workshop Workbook, "12 Important Steps for Getting Hired into the U.S. Postal Service" Booklet, ANNOUNCEMENT WITH SIGN-UP DATES MAILED TO YOUR HOME, Follow-up consultation privileges, Achievement Award to high-scorers and Practice Kit containing Six Additional Practice Exams with Answers, Memory Test Flash Cards, and "Simulated Exam" on cassette tape). Please bring two No. 2 pencils with you to the Workshop.

Seating is limited; pre-registration by phone is advised. Otherwise, you may register by arriving thirty minutes early. Tuition is payable at the door by cash, check, money order, MasterCard, VISA or American Express.

Modern day Bonnie & Clyde sentenced for robbery

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — A husband and wife described by authorities as a modern-day Bonnie and Clyde have been sentenced to federal prison terms for bank robbery.

Lawrence Edward Byrom, 56, and Alice Elizabeth Marie Byrom, 37, were charged with robbing 14 small-town North Texas banks of more than $572,000 in 14 years.

U.S. District Judge David O. Belew on Friday handed Byrom four 25-year sentences structured so that he would serve a total of 50 years. Mrs. Byrom was given two 25-year sentences to be served concurrently.

The judge agreed to send them to federal prisons in Texas so they would be near their three teen-age sons.

gins from the Rodeo Shop of Fort Worth and a buckle from the AJRA organization.

Locally, the finals are sponsored by the Snyder Chamber of Commerce and Board of County Development. This will be the 10th consecutive year the AJRA finals have been hosted in Snyder.

National sponsors of the finals are Wrangler, an AJRA sponsor since 1983, and Dodge, co-sponsored locally by Snyder Motor Company. This marks the first year with Dodge as a sponsor.

Event sponsors note that "the best of the pros" are back for the 1985 finals, headed by Bob Tallman, coming back as rodeo announcer for his fifth consecutive year. His co-announcer will be Bill Venz.

Pro clowns Rick Chatman, Tom Feller and Leon Coffee are back again also to spotlight a week of entertainment and bull fighting. Chatman was last year's World Champion bullfighter and has been with the AJRA National Finals for 10 consecutive years.

Sammy Smith of Mullin is furnishing stock for the 1985 finals for the third year.

Ticket prices are $4 for adults and $2 for children age 12 and younger. Box seats are $6 each and may be reserved by calling the chamber.

Tickets may now be purchased at the Snyder Chamber of Commerce, Boss & Hoss Western Wear, Anthony's and Bar-H-Bar Western Wear. These will be sold at the door also.

Mary Hudden, a question related to oil; Bobby O. Bonar, a question related to oil; Ronnie Johansen, Andrew Hallman, Munden's Wholesale Co. and Charles Henderson.

Peveler noted the three-member review board will be back in session Aug. 27 to hear six additional questions related to oil property in the county.

The sessions have been called to "cleanup" protests of values received after the review board recessed July 18.

Notificaton of increased values were mailed to affected property owners during the last week in June here, and under the law they are granted 30 days to question these values.

Following this, the cutoff date for such protests was July 26.

Serving as the board of review here are Walter Stirl, Harold Lacik and Ross Carroll.

Parents urged to check records

Parents of students enrolling in Snyder elementary schools for the first time are now asked to check their child's records to be sure they are complete.

Registration for Snyder elementary students has been scheduled for Tuesday, Aug. 20.

If the new student is to begin kindergarten or did not attend kindergarten in Snyder and is at least six years old, the parents will need the child's certified birth certificate and his immunization record.

Birth certificates should be obtained by contacting the county clerk in the county where the child was born. Immunization records can be completed by taking the child to the Scurry County Health Unit on Tuesday of each week.

Parents who pre-registered five-year-old students last spring must also register on Aug. 20. If immunization records on students who pre-registered are incomplete, these students will not be allowed to begin school until their record has been cleared. The D.P.T. booster is now available at the Health Unit.

Required immunizations are:

—Polio, three doses of oral vaccine with one or more received on or after the fourth birthday.

—Diptheria-tetanus: a minimum of three doses required with at least one having been received on or after the fourth birthday.

—Measles (rubeola), one dose after first birthday or physician verified history of measles.

—Measles (rubella), one dose is required for all students.

—Mumps, students in grades kindergarten through sixth grade must have vaccination or physician verified history of disease.

Additional registration information will be published prior to Aug. 20. Parents with questions concerning registration should contact the school principal in their school district or Bobbie Box, Student Development Coordinator, at 573-9364 between the hours of 8 a.m. and 4 p.m.

Bike said stolen

Police are investigating a bicycle theft reported Friday at the Towle Park Pool.

Snake bites

Not all bites by venomous snakes actually contain venom. For instance, the snake may temporarily lack venom, or may fail to inject it. Any animal bite, however, carries the danger of tetanus. And no bite by a venomous snake should go untreated.

Local police clear burglary of store

Police indicated Saturday morning they have cleared the July 25 burglary of a local convenience store — charging a 35-year-old man previously jailed here Friday for burglary of an automobile.

Jimmy Wayne Shannon of 1901 Coleman Ave. now faces one count of burglary of a business — a break-in at the Kwik Grocery Store on the Lamesa Highway — in addition to the vehicle burglary charges filed Friday.

The added charges were filed shortly after 6 p.m. Friday after questioning of the suspect. He remained in jail Saturday in lieu of bond on both charges.

City officers also arrested a 16-year-old girl Friday afternoon on a misdemeanor theft charge.

Employees of Kmart called police at 4:01 p.m. and reported having a shoplifter in custody.

Police went to the store and the suspect was arrested at that time.

In other action, police logged two other misdemeanor arrests Friday including one for driving while intoxicated and one for driving with no license or insurance.

Department of Public Safety officers also jailed two suspects Friday evening. One was charged with driving while intoxicated and the other with public intoxication.

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — The crew of space shuttle Discovery was "ready to go" after a successful countdown rehearsal for the scheduled Aug. 24 flight during which astronauts will attempt to "jump start" a disabled satellite.

"We had a very good test," commander Joe Engle said Friday after the simulated liftoff. "We're definitely ready to go."

Election may cost mayor his job

CRABB, Texas (AP) — Voters in this tiny rural Southeast Texas community went to the polls today in an election that could leave their 12-year-old mayor without a job.

The vote is a chance for Mayor Brian Zimmerman to make good on one of his campaign promises — to incorporate Crabb and protect it from being annexed by neighboring cities. Polls opened at 7 a.m.

Heat illness risk higher for children

During summer weather children playing outside run the risk of heat exhaustion. They run a higher risk for several reasons.

Children are prone to heat illnesses because they have more skin surface for each pound they weigh than adults, so they absorb more heat.

Because children's sweat glands don't work as well as adults until after puberty, their bodies don't regulate temperature as well either. Children also take almost twice as long as adults to become accustomed to different temperatures.

When children get involved in playing, they may ignore thirst, become overheated, fatigued and dizzy.

To avoid problems with heat illnesses, children and active adults should follow these guidelines:

—Drink at least eight cups of plain water each day.

—Drink at least half a cup of cool water every 15 minutes during the activity. The body absorbs cool water faster than warm.

—Weigh before and after the activity. Drink two cups of water for every pound lost during the activity.

—Drink water, since it is absorbed faster than electrolyte drinks, sodas and juices.

—Avoid salt tablets.

National "Night Out" set for Aug. 13

People who are fed up with crime should make plans to join in the 1985 National "Night Out" scheduled for Aug. 13. Neighborhoods across the country will light up against crime that evening starting at 8 p.m. Families and friends will sit on lawns or front porches of their homes and apartments to observe any suspicious activity in their neighborhoods and to serve as an extension of the eyes and ears of local law enforcement agencies. The project will highlight the value and importance of law enforcement, community crime prevention programs and crime watch efforts.

Proper maintenance for computer disk drives

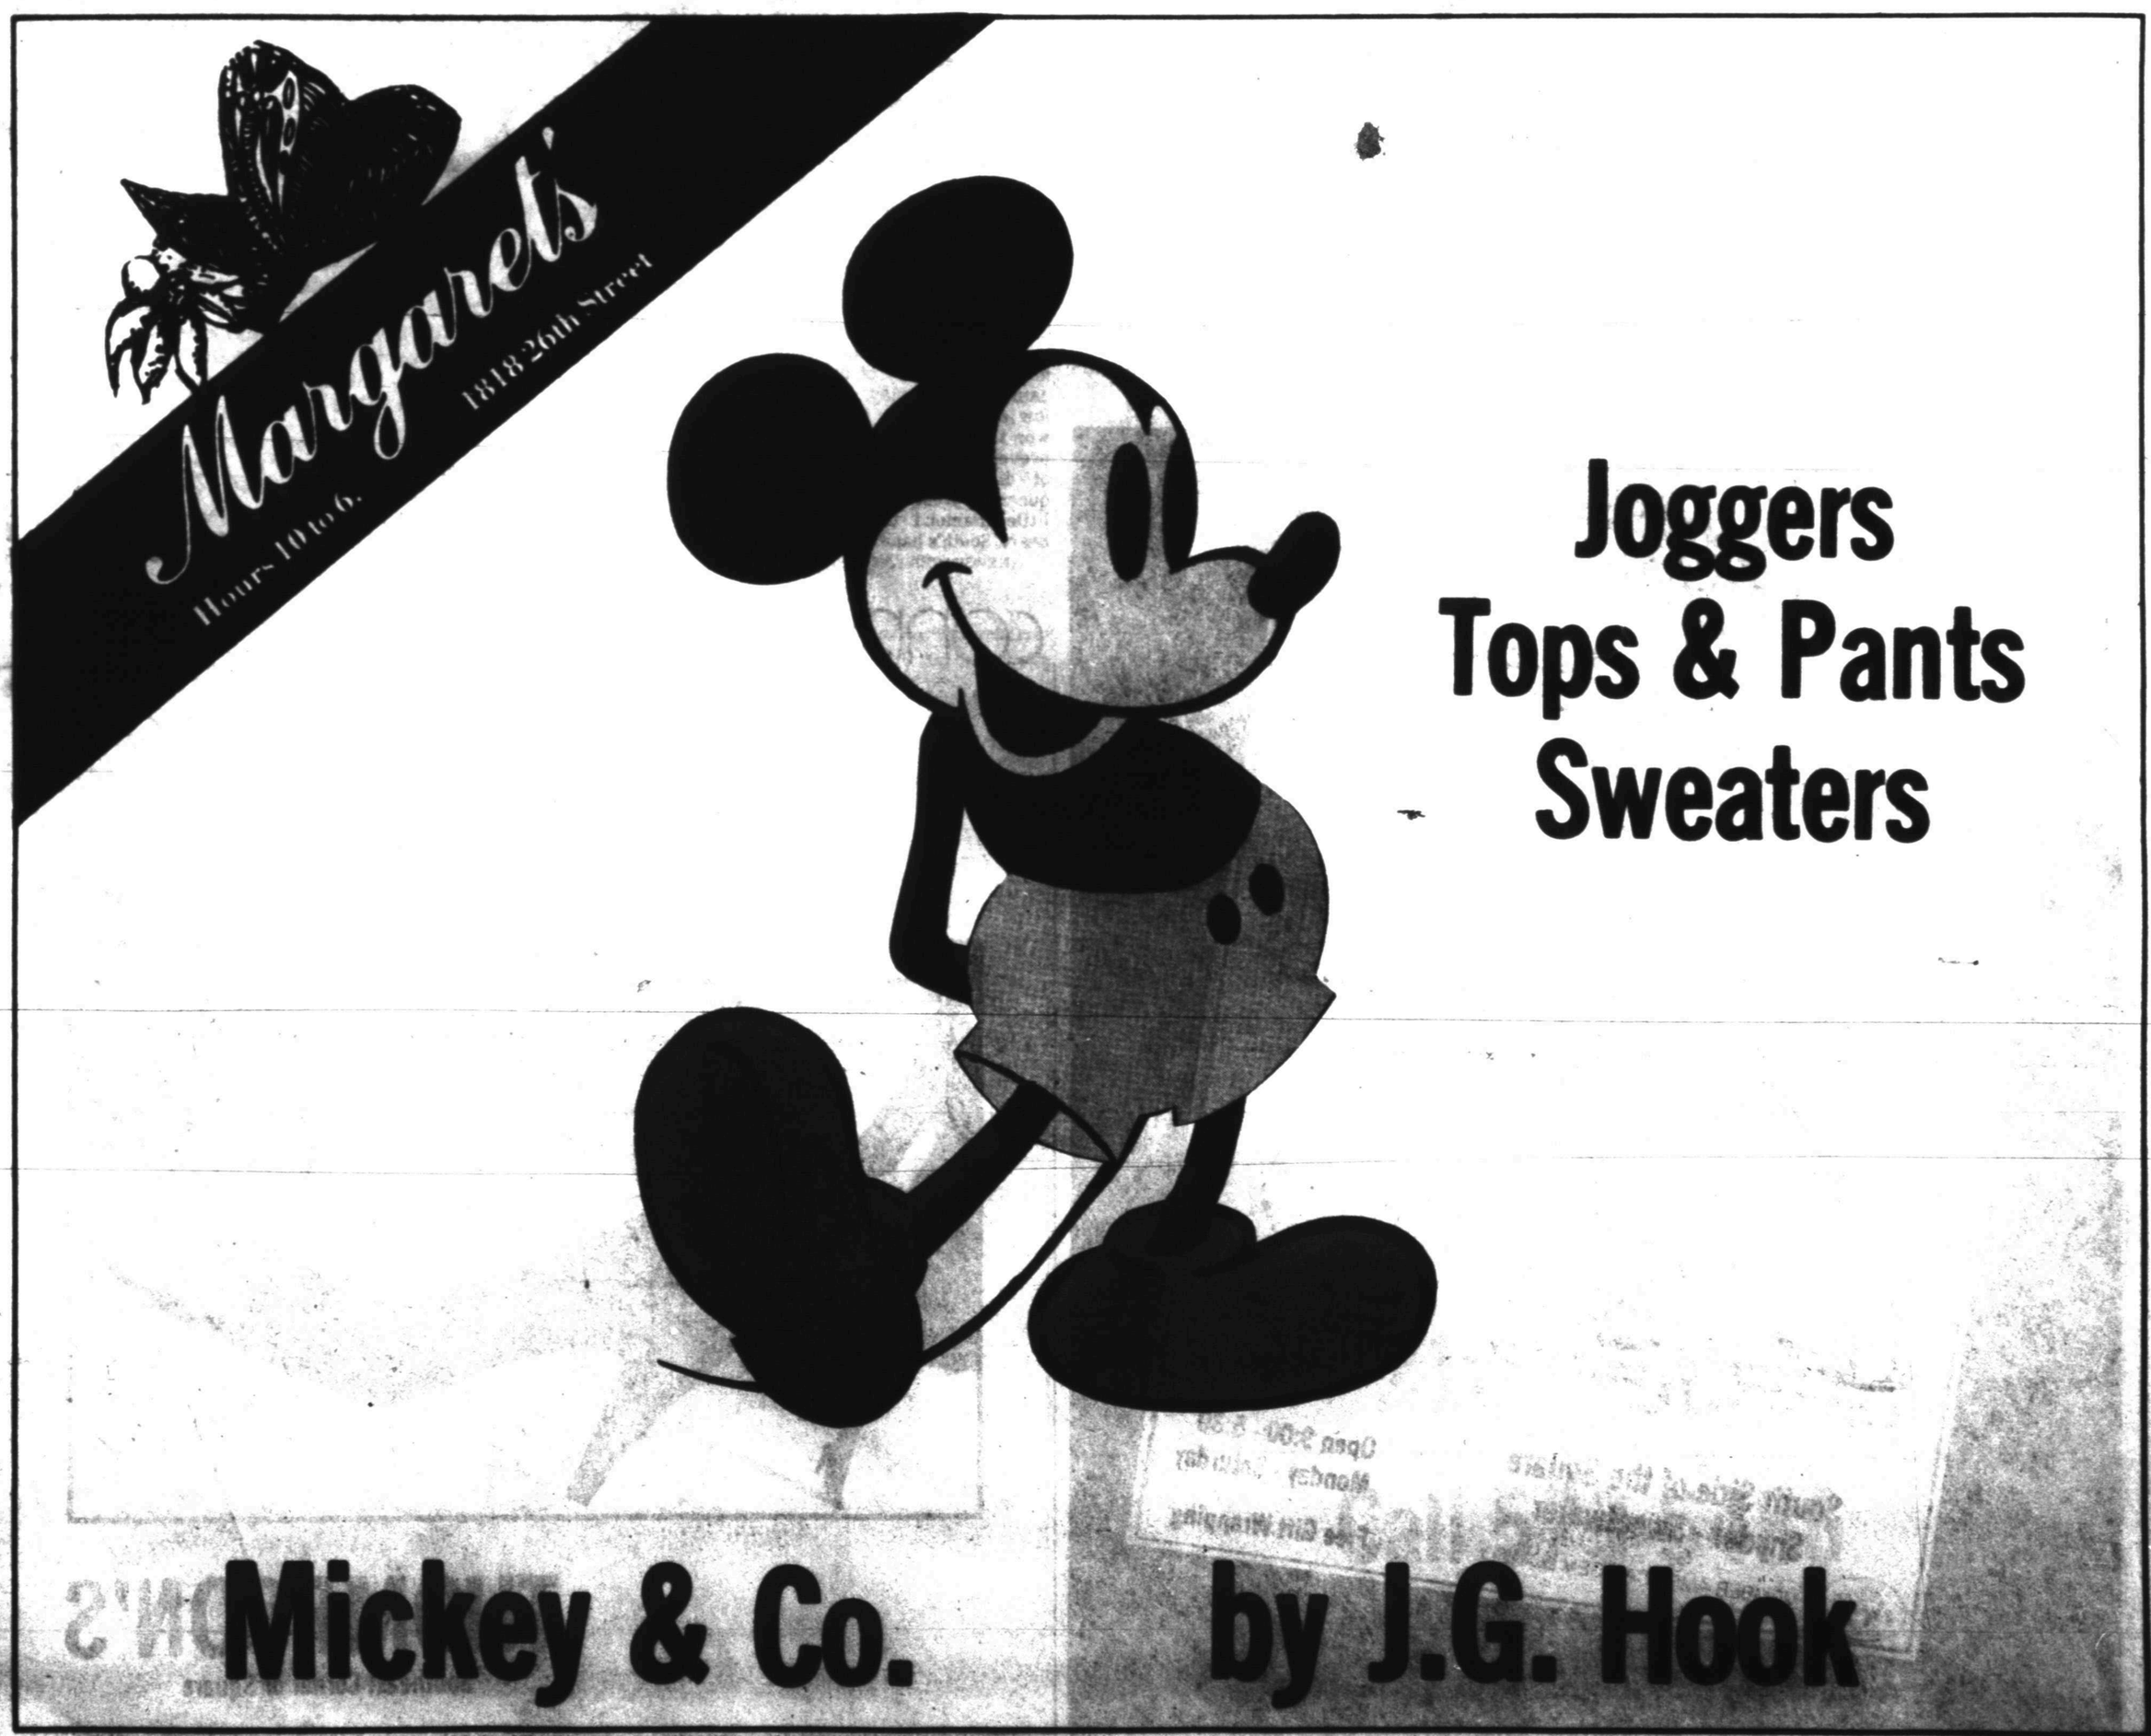

OVERLAND PARK, Kan. (AP) — Computer failure is the bane of office operations nowadays, but a few simple tactics can help keep the machines up and running.

These maintenance practices will help avert disk drive failure, the most frequent cause of computer breakdowns, according to Microservice Management magazine here.

—Keep diskettes in their jackets and also in a closed container, and keep the area in which they are stored and used as clean as possible.

—Keep foreign objects, such as paper clips and pencils, away from diskettes and the disk drive.

—Clean drive heads regularly, and align disk drives two or three times a year.

State to honor land owners

Scurry County's centennial celebration last year marks a new opportunity for county residents — participation in the Family Land Heritage Program.

This program is designed to honor those agricultural or ranching operations which have been in continuous production in the hands of one family for 100 years or more. Sponsored by the Texas Department of Agriculture, the program is administered locally by the Scurry County Historical Commission. The state initiated the program in 1974.

Families wishing to be included in the registry must own the farm and must live in the state. For inclusion this year, an eight-page application and supporting documents must be sent to the department and postmarked by Aug. 30.

Carolyn Baethge, program coordinator for the department, added that the application and supporting documents must be certified by the county judge of the county in which the land is located.

She said that usually the only documents required are copies of all deeds related to the property. "We sometimes require copies of surveys if no deed is available or if questions arise about the application," she added.

Personnel at the Department of Agriculture read each application, checking for the judge's signature and dates on supporting material. "We write the applicant if questions arise or if more information is needed," Baethge said.

Families are generally notified of the honor within two months. But she added that sometimes the process requires more time when she must contact an applicant for additional verification.

Honorees are included in a registry book published by the department each year. In addition to a property listing, the book contains a history of the founder and his succeeding generations. Applicants are encouraged to send old photographs for inclusion in the book. "The honorees receive a copy of the registry and a certificate," Baethge said, adding that the family and other interested persons may purchase more copies from the department.

Families wishing further information and application forms may call Mary Keith at 573-3935. "We (the historical commission) will be glad to help anyone who needs help with their application," she said.

It's always a good idea to be careful about doubling for a one-trick set. You don't gain very much, and you may alert your opponent into playing the hand well enough to make it. Here is just such a deal. West thought his length in hearts plus the A-K of spades would be enough to cause the four-heart contract to founder, so he doubled.

The opening lead of the spade king drew the very encouraging play of the queen from East. This has the traditional meaning of telling partner to underlead his ace next, and West followed that instruction. South trumped and considered what West could have for his double. It looked as if a holding of all five trumps was what West was banking on, so declarer played accordingly. He cashed the ace and king of clubs, led a diamond to the king and ruffed another spade. Then he played the ace of diamonds. Now came the key play. South played a low diamond from his hand. If East won that trick, declarer could not be prevented from trumping the queen of diamonds with dummy's heart queen. If West ruffed in on the third little diamond to play ace and a heart, South's hand would be good.

Missouri caves are popular

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Fertile farmlands and teeming cities stretch across Missouri, but underneath the surface the state more closely resembles a piece of Swiss cheese, with caves and interlocking caverns in subterranean abundance.

"It's like a giant sponge," Art Hebrank, geologist and Missouri Division of Geology and Land Survey spokesman, said of Missouri's 4,617 known caves — the most by far of any state in the nation. Tennessee is second with slightly more than 3,500 caves.

And with such an over supply of geological cavities, Missouri has put this natural resource to myriad uses ranging from storage to tourist attraction to recreational diversion.

The labyrinths of Missouri are called solution caves, created by circulating groundwater that dissolved the acidic limestone and dolomite rock underlying those areas over millions of years, said Jim Vandike, a division geologist.

They range from car-size dens to caverns the size of small cities, with the two largest caves — both located in Perry County in eastern Missouri — containing about 25 miles of passageways, he said.

By comparison, Mammoth Cave in Kentucky contains about 300 miles of passageways.

"We do not have the largest or longest caves," said assistant state geologist Jerry Vineyard. "But, at the moment we have the most recorded — that is not to say we will always be No. 1. A lot of states are not as advanced in charting caves."

Vineyard, who helped establish the Missouri Speleological Survey in 1956, estimated about 1,800 of Missouri's known caves have been charted. But, he said, new caves are found on a regular basis along with undiscovered passageways in existing caves.

Most of the mapping of Missouri caves results from work done by spelunkers and the speleological survey. Their efforts recently earned the group a presidential citation, said Vineyard.

For Vineyard and other state geologists, knowing where caves exist is vital to above ground construction, but the most important aspect of locating caves is their relationship to groundwater movement and using that knowledge to protect delicate aquifers from pollution.

"A great deal of people in Missouri get their drinking water directly from groundwater," said Hebrank. "It is very critical to properly locate sewage lagoons and waste disposal sites."

The survey findings also are useful to those interested in caves for recreational purposes because they include the types of formations that can be found in each cave.

"Because of the number of caves and opportunity for variety, there is better caving here," said Steve Kenser, a long-time member of the Kansas City Area Grotto, a caving club. "Quality-wise we don't have the extreme beauty of some other areas — although there are some very pretty things here — but, as a spelunker, if I had to settle in any one place, it would be Missouri."

Although the state does not keep attendance figures for its 23 commercial caves, they account for nearly half of the 52 commercialized caves in the country. The state's two best known commercial caves are Mark Twain Cave near Hannibal and Meramec Caverns near Sullivan. Both enterprises average about 100,000 visitors a year, company officials say.

Mark Twain Cave is famous for its links with the tales of Tom Sawyer, while Meramec Caverns boasts of its ties to the Missouri outlaw Jesse James, who sometimes made the cave his hideout.

Meramec, which contains 19 miles of charted passageways, also offers two world-famous formations.

One, called the Wine Table, is a 7½-foot-high formation of argentite — a type of silver ore — that resembles a three-legged table. The only other known formation in the world of that type is in Italy, said Les Turrilli, the cave's general manager and president of the Missouri Cave Association.

Meramec also contains the Stage Curtain, a drapery-like formation that stands 70 feet high, 120 feet wide and 35 feet thick. It is the largest such formation in the world, Turrilli said.

Among Missouri's other commercial caves is Bridal Cave at Camdenton, which — as its names suggests — has been the site of more than 970 marriages since it opened in 1949, and Fantastic Cave near Springfield, which offers excursions by wagon and is the only drive-through cave tour in the nation.

Missouri's caves have been put to other uses, primarily storage and shelter.

Judge to retire and go fishing

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Jack L. Ogg, who served under Gen. George Patton in World War II and as a young lawyer practiced his profession in a room under a tap-dance studio, is retiring from the Arizona Court of Appeals this fall when he turns 65.

Ogg suffered a stroke two years ago and has had to abandon the hikes he used to take with his sons in the Grand Canyon, but hopes to take up fishing again after he retires and gets "as well as I can get."

The stroke has hobbled Ogg's stride and slowed his tongue, but the mind that helped rewrite the state's criminal code and continues to write major decisions seems as sharp as ever.

In a recent interview, Ogg recalled how a barber he was defending in 1948 spoke of how nervous he was to be in Prescott's Yavapai County Superior Court for the first time.

"I told him, 'if it's any consolation, I'm also nervous — this is my first trial, too,' " Ogg said. "I spent most of my time proving what a great pilot he was in World War II, and the jury acquitted him."

Ogg was paid $15 for the two-day case, enough to cover part of the $50-a-month rent on his office, located below a studio where dancers practiced every afternoon.

"From 2 to 4, it was so noisy I couldn't interview any clients," Ogg recalled. "I didn't have many, anyway."

So Ogg spent his afternoons in the county law library, and the research paid off. He became a deputy county attorney, then county attorney, then Yavapai County's sole judge and, after 14 years on the trial bench, an appellate jurist.

Ogg's eagerness to be a lawyer goes back to his high school debating days in Prescott. He worked as a houseboy at the University of Arizona and sold flowers to help pay for college. He lost most of his profits one day by leaving carnations on a radiator, where they wilted.

Ogg graduated in 1943, married schoolmate Mary Frances Wilson and served as a captain under Patton in Europe. He was wounded twice and escaped from a German POW camp.

Back in Tucson after the war, Ogg went to law school and returned to Prescott, where he still lives. He sat in judgment on one of the last persons to be executed in Arizona, but he prefers to remember happier cases.

"It's more fun to be a trial judge," he says. "It's pretty hard up here because you don't get easy questions."

Ogg's appellate decisions include the case that banned "Christmas Tree" bills in the Arizona Legislature, under which lawmakers took a popular bill and attached pet projects to it like ornaments on a Christmas tree to get everything passed at once and make vetoes harder.

He also served as chairman of the Arizona Criminal Code Commission, which drafted a complete rewrite of the state's criminal laws for legislators to consider.

Ogg said he "had to learn to walk and talk all over again" after suffering the stroke. It still is hard for him to articulate his words, and he has stopped his public speaking, but others say he still roasts attorneys in private conferences with other judges.

"His mind is just as sharp," says fellow Appeals Court Judge Bruce Meyerson.

Elderly are retaining pictorial information

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — The memory for pictures seems to decline less than the memory for words as people grow old, say researchers at the University of North Carolina at Charlotte.

"The popularly held stereotype is that memory declines with age — and it's a true stereotype," said Dr. Denise Park, who did the studies on memory and aging with fellow psychology professor Dr. Tom Puglisi. "But our most interesting finding is that ... the memory for pictures does not appear to have as substantial a decline as the memory for verbal material."

Park and Puglisi, who tested several hundred people with an average age of 68, found that the more complicated the picture, the better older people seemed to remember it.

"When we studied very simple pictures, there was a decline for old people compared to young people," she said. "But with really complicated, more 'real-worldish' pictures showing real people doing real activities, we did not find that decline. It was very surprising and very exciting.

"The whole package of findings suggests that when possible and appropriate, you should present information in a pictorial format to older adults," she said.

However, older people seemed to have more trouble remembering the complicated pictures for more than a month. And they were less able than young people to remember things while dealing with a distraction, she said.

The researchers also found that both old and young people had trouble remembering colors, although the older ones were worse.

"This could show hospitals which code routes with colors that this is not really effective," Park said.

The studies all concerned long-term memory, but psychologists use that term for anything from a minute up. Park said more studies are needed on memory over several years, since so many people report that their older relatives can remember detailed events decades in the past.

Park and Puglisi have been doing the studies under a two year grant from the National Institute on Aging, which is part of the National Institutes of Health. Park said they are getting another $100,000 grant from NIA for further research.

They plan to look further into the effect of context and environment on memory in an effort to determine what causes the decline in older people. The problem could lie with the coding of information in the brain, with the storage or with the retrieval. So far the problem seems to be with coding and retrieval, which appear to be intertwined, she said.

Ex-Miss America is speaker

DENVER (AP) — When she was 20, the Denver newspapers gushed over the hometown "blonde beauty queen." Today, the slightest glint of ice comes into her Aegean-blue eyes when she hears that phrase.

The remarkable smile never goes away, but it is obvious Marilyn Elaine Van Derbur Atler could have lived quite well without the nonsense that went with being Miss America 1958.

"It never was a beauty contest," insists the woman who got onto the Miss America track almost by default and later made it clear to pageant officials she never wanted to pose in a swimsuit again.

Today, the title is Queen of Motivation. Long before the Me Generation of the '70s discovered self-help, Marilyn Van Derbur had made a business of it.

For many years, she was the nation's highest-paid female public speaker. She may still be, but she doesn't discuss speaking fees. In 1982, it was $2,000 a shot, several times a week, nine months of the year.

She heads the Marilyn Van Derbur Motivational Institute in Denver. It offers a library of Marilyn Van Derbur motivational films, considered the tops in their class by many corporate leaders and high school counselors. Television stations can buy 75-second spots of inspiration to inject hope into their newscasts.

For 48 years, Marilyn Van Derbur has grabbed hold of each day and wrung more from it than many get from a week, a month or a year.

As a child, she was a standout swimmer. She was a high school honor student who became a Phi Beta Kappa when she returned to college from her yearlong reign. As host at later Miss America pageants, or in other television specials, she astounded the film crew by never needing cue cards.

Marilyn says she's very good now because once she wasn't very good at all.

In her talks, she often speaks of the success and failure found in every life. This is the real theme of her work: that people can be motivated to do their best in part by learning that others aren't always what they seem, that even the most "successful" have failed at some point — often big.

Her listeners know that a newspaper editor once told Walt Disney he had no drawing talent, that Winston Churchill failed three times to get into the British Military Academy, that Babe Ruth had a record for strikeouts as well as homers.

"I could take a couple of hours and give you support for this but, generally speaking, I believe there's plenty of evidence that most people who excel do so because they've had a handicap," she says.

Hers was shyness. Numbing, agonizing shyness. She got very good at public speaking, Marilyn says now, because she feared it so much.

Being Miss America was a fluke of sorts.

She was nominated as the Pi Beta Phi entry in the Miss University of Colorado contest while she was out of a meeting answering a phone call. She tried to decline and was told she couldn't.

Told she must have something for the talent competition, she played "Tea For Two" and "Tenderly" on an organ so many times they finally sounded as if she had composed them.

Her family was as surprised as she was when she won the Miss America crown in Atlantic City. One of her three sisters sent a telegram: "Roses are red, violets are blue; flatchested girls can be beauty queens, too."

Going on to serve as what Andy Rooney calls his "favorite Miss America of all time," Marilyn unknowingly began shaping her future.

Marian McKnight of South Carolina, Miss America 1957, had dazzled crowds with her Southern-belle style. Marilyn found her a hard act to follow.

"I'd get off the plane and they'd say, 'Where's Miss America?'

"It wasn't enough for me to just stand up there, smile and say, 'Thank you for having me here today.' Some before me had been able to do that and make it sound like a lot more. I couldn't.

"I got so that I'd close my eyes on the plane and think about what was coming up next. It was role-playing, visualizing, but I'd never heard of those words then. Nobody every talked to me about it — I just did it.

"When I got somewhere to speak, I'd already been there 50 to a hundred times before. I worked hard. I prepared, prepared, prepared."

She calls the two years at the university after her reign "the most difficult time in my life. I didn't know who I was."

Lucrative television work in New York came after graduation, then a three-month marriage to a college sweetheart, a much-publicized divorce and still more television work.

One night she came home from being host at a network special and decided it wasn't enough.

"I had no purpose in my life," she remembers. "I was famous. I could go into a supermarket in Omaha and people knew who I was. I had money, but I'm not a spender. I had everything most people think they want, but I didn't go home and feel, 'I've done something worthwhile today.'"

Cautiously, she renewed her relationship with Larry Atler, a classmate at Denver's East High.

On St. Valentine's Day 1964, Marilyn and Larry were married at her parents' vacation home in the Rockies.

After her daughter Jennifer was born in 1971, when Marilyn was 34, the schedule was trimmed. Summers and weekends have always been off limits to those who schedule her time and "as Jennifer gets older, I find myself cutting back still more."

For 17 years, the Atler family has made its home within a few blocks of both Marilyn's and Larry's parents, in a section of east Denver where families' roots and wealth stretch far back into the city's history.

Marilyn and Larry bought the house they live in completely furnished and little has changed since the former owner left. The blue-velvet club chairs still stand on the white carpet across from the white piano.

A few years ago, she says, a sister-in-law walked in and said, "'Marilyn, your house looks tired.' That's when I got the plants."

Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1985 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I have an adorable 2 1/2-year-old daughter who has seen her father only once, when she was 6 months old at the blood testing that determined this man as her father. (I'll call him John.)

Since then we have been to court to determine child support, which John pays faithfully. At the time of our hearing, he requested that I direct any and all inquiries regarding our daughter to his attorney. The judge left visiting rights open in hopes that he would one day wish to see her again.

It has been two years and I am heartsick for my daughter. I know she is suffering emotionally from the absence of a father. Someday she will want to know who he is, and I had hoped he would come around before this happens. However, any effort by me to make contact is thwarted by John's attorney, who threatens me with court action if I "harass" him.

I believe all children have a right to know their father. I am fighting for this right for my child. How can I reach this man before it is too late? Emotionally I am drained. Is my daughter destined to be forever fatherless? I cannot accept this.

MOTHER OF A FATHERLESS CHILD

DEAR MOTHER: I understand your pain and disappointment, but there's no way you can force John to see his daughter if he chooses not to.

You say you can't "accept" it. I say, you had better get counseling and learn to accept it because your bitterness is not only affecting you, it's bound to affect your daughter. In the absence of a father, she needs a mother who is at peace with herself. Good luck and God bless.

• • •

DEAR ABBY: I am engaged to be married when I turn 21. (I'm 18 now.) When I was about 8 or 9 years old, a friend I'll call Lydia and I made a pact to be each other's maids of honor. We were good friends until junior high school, but now we're not all that close.

Lydia knows I'm engaged, and every time I see her, she says she can't wait to be my maid of honor. I don't want Lydia to be my maid of honor. I don't even want her in my wedding party.

Can I be held to a pact I made when I was 8 or 9 years old?

STUCK OR NOT?

DEAR STUCK: Don't waste any energy worrying about what will happen three years from now. Besides, you can't be each other's maids of honor even if you wanted to. After one is married she can be a matron of honor—but not a maid of honor.

• • •

DEAR ABBY: I have a problem I need help in solving. Every time my boyfriend and I are alone together, he always starts touching and kissing me, and we end up making love. I am not saying I don't want to, but he never wants to talk or do anything else.

I would like to slack off for a while, but I don't know how to tell him. I'm afraid he might get mad or stop seeing me.

Please tell me what to do.

FEELING USED IN PRESCOTT, ARIZ.

DEAR FEELING: There is only one good reason to make love, and that's because you feel like it. If you give in because you're afraid he'll get "mad" or stop seeing you, you are allowing yourself to be used.

Tell him in plain language what you told me, and if he gets mad and stops seeing you because you won't accommodate him every time he gets the urge, you'll be lucky if you never see him again.

French pawnshops date back to year 1637

PARIS (AP) — They call it "My Aunt," or sometimes "The Nail." In the 18th and 19th centuries, it was known as "Montde-Piete," or pious credit. Today, the government-run pawnshop is known by the more dignified name of Credit Municipal.

No matter what it is called, the massive edifice that covers nearly an entire city block in Paris' fourth district is where the temporarily insolvent go to hock the family silverware.

Operated jointly by the city government and the Finance Ministry, the Credit Municipal of Paris views itself as a social service, helping those who find themselves short of cash and unable to get credit through normal channels.

"We are not here to make a profit on the backs of the poor," says Philippe Gaillard, a young executive at the Credit Municipal. In fact, the pawning department is a consistent loser, registering $6.2 million in red ink last year.

"You do not cope with poverty by welfare," says Director Yves Laulan. "When you give soft loans, people are stimulated to do something about themselves. Give money away, they spend it and that's it."

To increase its resources, the Credit Municipal is expanding its other services, which include quick and simple loans against salary for civil servants, low-cost housing loans to city employees and welfare recipients, and regular checking and savings accounts.

Despite efforts to change its image by renovating the 300-year-old building and taking on more traditional banking activities, most people continue to think of the Credit Municipal as a pawnshop.

The first pawnshops in Europe — Monti di Pieta — were set up by Italian monks in the 15th century. In Paris, Theophraste Renaudot opened the first in 1637. But by 1777, just prior to the French Revolution, dishonest or greedy pawnbrokers were taking advantage of the hard times to exploit the poor.

On Dec. 9, 1777, King Louis XVI created the first Monte de Piete in France. In 1804, under Napoleon, they were given the monopoly for all pawnbroking business, which they still have.

Its customers, bank officials will tell you with tongue firmly planted in cheek, include 20 percent immigrants, 20 percent unemployed people, 20 percent retired people and "40 percent presidents of companies, former ministers and foreign princesses."

'Right stuff' pilots aid firefighters

STOCKTON, Calif. (AP) — Buzz Blaylock coaxed tanker "72" skyward, bound for a wildfire belching deadly mixtures of smoke, updrafts and debris.

Blaylock, a former fighter pilot who was shot down in Vietnam, banked toward the Sierra Nevada in the twin-engine plane, one of 21 former submarine-chasing S-2s the state refitted to douse fires.

To survive the hazards that killed two tanker pilots last summer alone, the 58-year-old flier must make just the right approach: always diving downhill and upwind.

He must achieve precisely the right speed, flying slowly enough to maintain control as 800 gallons of retardant gushes out, abruptly making the plane four tons lighter.

He must brace against heated updrafts, hoping to miss debris spewed by flames, then peer through smoke for exactly the right spot to release — ideally half in, half out of the fire. He's forced to dodge other tankers and planes, making sure firefighters are clear of the drop, which can squash a fire engine.

His flying comes second nature. Like all S-2 pilots, he flies without a co-pilot.

"It's not really an awfully dangerous job," says Blaylock, who supervises the tanker pilots. "It's just one where you've always got to know exactly what you're doing.

"Like in late afternoon, when the shadows make the canyons so dark it seems as if you're diving into the belly of a whale. But you learn that your eyes will adjust quickly enough."

Blaylock has flown for 35 years, so long that he goes by "Buzz" rather than his real first name, Monroe. He started in propeller-driven fighters, then flew jets for the U.S. Air Force. North Vietnamese gunners shot him down on March 12, 1966, but he escaped capture.

As a Hemet Valley Flying Service pilot based in Grass Valley, he's flown nearly 10,000 fire-fighting missions since 1977 in the planes the state Department of Forestry leases from the military.

On this mission, he flew 20 miles northeast to the foothills of the Sierra Nevada. He had an audience of news reporters, there to view a drill for tanker pilots and the CDF air attack commanders who give directions from smaller planes.

The lime-green and orange tanker flashed overhead, engines popping as if they were backfiring.

Your Birthday

Aug. 11, 1985

Valuable new friends could enter your life in the year ahead through rather unusual circumstances. Make it a point to get to know better those people who impress you in a chance meeting.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Strive to be cooperative with others today, but don't make unwise concessions to placate another, especially if your best interests are not served. Be fair to yourself. Trying to patch up a romance? The Matchmaker set can help you understand what it might take to make the relationship work. To get yours, mail $2 to Astro-Graph, Box 489, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Keep your expectations within realistic bounds today. You're capable of generating personal benefits, but don't expect that to which you're not entitled.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Regardless of what occurs today, try to view life philosophically and look for the humor in what transpires. A bad temper will spoil a fun day.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov.22) Major accomplishments are possible today, provided you don't waste too much time getting started. Set your goals early and go for them.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Avoid making hasty judgments today because your initial assessment could be off target. Weigh and balance every aspect before rendering a decision.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Goals can be achieved today if you rely upon your industriousness and abilities rather than fate or friends. Make your own destiny.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) It's OK to have a good opinion of yourself, but today be careful that you don't feel or act too superior to others. Treat everyone as an equal.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Keep your duties and responsibilities in proper perspective today. If you start thinking things are too much for you to handle, you might not even attempt them.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) If you want to interest others in a cause you're espousing today, don't paint too rosy a picture. Merely present the unembellished facts.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Look out for your own needs today, but also be aware of the needs of others. You could lose a friend if you behave too selfishly.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Try not to let others overly influence your decisions today. Your reasoning will be sound, but their advice might contain flaws.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Something good could slip through your fingers today if you take your opportunities for granted. Make the most of situations where Lady Luck favors you.

Your Birthday

Aug. 12, 1985

Several favorable changes are in the offing for you in the year ahead. You will welcome these alterations, but you're not apt to be the one who brings them about.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) A matter over which you have little control is going to work out to your advantage. Don't get in the way of people who are trying to bring this about. Trying to patch up a romance? The Matchmaker set can help you understand what it might take to make the relationship work. To get yours, mail $2 to Astro-Graph, Box 489, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) If you've been neglecting an old friend lately, this is a good day to make amends. Take measures to let him or her know you still care.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) The trend of events now tends to favor your career and finances. Be quick to make the most of opportunities as they develop.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov.22) Look to your past for solutions to present problems. Knowledge you now possess will get you over the rough spots.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) It's best not to discuss your confidential affairs today with people other than those directly involved. Secrecy assures success.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) If you have something beneficial to share today, contact your old pals first to see if they are interested. They deserve the first option.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Both today and tomorrow, try to give priority to matters that can further your ambitions. This is where you'll be the luckiest.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 19) Situations too difficult for others will be remarkably easy for you to handle today. Step into the breach where needed.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Use your efforts and abilities to implement changes that can enhance your material security, as well as the harmony in your household.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) This is a good day to iron out important matters that affect both you and your mate. Better courses of action can be found.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Material gains could come to you today from other than your usual sources. They may be triggered by one who has been helpful previously.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) You'll be a standout today in situations requiring your managerial touch, especially if you have competent assistants to aid you.

Museum pays homage to oil

MIDLAND, Texas (AP) — Oil made this city of flat planes and sharp angles that juts out of a vast pancake landscape. And it made rich men out of wildcatters like the late George T. Abell.

Men like him abound in Midland, where it is said the poor are easy to spot because they wash their own Cadillacs.

Abell wasn't content to bask in his wealth. He wanted a monument to the black gold that made it possible and to the special breed of men that wrenched it out of the harsh West Texas earth.

"The oil business has been good to him and he wanted to pay it back," said petroleum historian Berte Haigh.

Abell's vision crystallized as a museum dedicated to oil, oilmen and the oil patch.

He got together a group of like-minded oilmen, charted a non-profit corporation and started raising money. In 1975, their unabashed valentine to the oil business opened.

The Permian Basin Petroleum Museum now attracts about 50,000 visitors a year. They include everyone from school kids to roughnecks to visiting delegations from behind the Iron Curtain, said director Ed Rowland.

Unlike most museums, the Permian Basin Petroleum Museum is not devoted to acquiring valuable artifacts, he said.

"We collect very little," Rowland said. "We rely heavily on exhibits, slide shows, things like that."

The museum is dedicated wholeheartedly to educating visitors about oil, the petroleum industry and the 115,000-squaremile Permian Basin.

"Everybody thinks an area like this has no history, that it's just dry flat terrain," said Rowland, who worked his way through college roughnecking in the oilfields.

Visitors can see what the basin looked like 230 million years ago, when it was a warm, shallow sea teeming with the marine life which eventually metamorphosed into oil.

They can view a simulated well blow-out.

"It's one of the few exhibits I've ever seen that's guaranteed to get the attention of eighth-graders," Rowland said, as the soundtrack roared and the artificial flames flickered wildly.

The museum also tries to communicate a sense of how limited a resource petroleum is.

Island packed for celebration

ATHENS, Greece (AP) — Friends of shipping heiress Christina Onassis were packing a tiny Ionian Sea island owned by the heiress for a weekend of festivities for her six-month-old baby, Athina.

Ms. Onassis and the baby flew from Paris to Greece Wednesday, accompanied by her fourth husband, French jet setter Thierry Roussel, for the celebration on the island of Scorpios, family friends said Thursday.

The friends said the Onassis summer home on the wooded islet in the Ionian Sea would be filled to overflowing with guests. Others will stay in a hotel rented by Ms. Onassis on the nearby island of Lefkas, they said.

Athina, born in January at the American Hospital in Paris, is making her first trip to Greece. She is Ms. Onassis' first child.

Above the Fold

By Donny Brown

Every Saturday night we sit there wondering, "Is anybody else above the age of 35 doing this?"

We're talking about watching the Night Flight channel with its non-stop music videos — 3½ minute, fult-tilt blowouts for people with the attention span of a traffic light.

We sit there mesmerized to the point of paralysis thinking, "After the next one I'm going to get up and turn this thing off."

Then they crank through another bee-boop, shoo-bop, shoo-bop number and we're hooked all over again.

Some evil genius has finally devised the ultimate junk fook fantasy. The electronic equivalent of salted peanuts.

And only a few short years ago we admitted with a twinge of impending age that we probably couldn't identify five "current" music artists.

Our record collection of popular singers, sad to say, has a severe drop-off point around the mid-1970s, a point in time when we finally decided folk music was never going to make a comeback.

About the time they started hiring Del Shannon to sing his 1 billionth rendition of "Runaway," and Neil Sedaka to offer up "Oh Carole" one more time, we started tuning out popular music.

We even got neutral about the Beach Boys.

We'd already lived that life, we figured, and if somebody else wanted to claim our past as their own, so be it.

Then videos happened, and suddenly we're listening to the music again as we sit captivated by the images.

We find ourselves pondering the private lives of Hall and Oates (although we're still confused as to whether Hall is the short dark one with curls or the tall skinny one with the whimpy hairdo), Frankie Goes to Hollywood, Madonna (pre-Playboy exposure), Sting, The Police and Quiet Riot.

To your average teenager, this list may look superficial, but we'll challenge that same teen to identify one song by say The Cyrkle, Lou Christie, Question Mark and the Mysterians, Spanky and the Gang or Sam the Sham and the Pharoahs — just to mention 1965-66.

Hey guys, we still think of John Fogerty as the cat who sang lead with Creedence.

Admittedly, sometimes we get the feeling that the "stuff" going on on-screen is so much window dressing to cover up the occasional uninspired music it illustrates.

New bread to cover the taste of stale peanut butter.

But a whole bunch of it has a fresh feeling, and one year later the new still hasn't worn off.

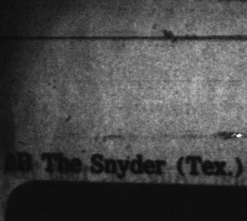

Twenty years ago, the best thing in life was making the drag and listening to that unbroken string of Top 40 hits coming out of twin cardboard speakers in our car radio.

And now, in the privacy of your own home, a new musical entertainment is offered.

We're not saying it's as good as it used to be, but it ain't bad either.

Commentary

By Don Graff

A reservoir problem

It's no news that the news business in this country is not in such good repute with the people of the country these days.

The press, if we're to believe what we hear, is widely regarded as arrogant, overbearing, biased, obsessed with sensation and more interested in getting a story than in the rights of individuals and the interests of the nation. And more, much more.

It is not a pretty image for an institution that is also regarded — especially by itself — as a pillar of democratic society. This problem is addressed by Burns W. Roper, of the polling outfit, in the current issue of Freedom at Issue, the magazine of Freedom House, a New York-based organization that keeps watch on freedom's ups and downs worldwide.

Roper, who is also a vice president of Freedom House, regrets to report that the negative public perception noted above is borne out by his organization's recent surveys. For examples:

On the question of fairness and balance, 50 percent of those polled believe the press doesn't care; 44 percent give it credit for trying.

Sixty-two percent say stories of high public interest but slight importance are given greater prominence than more important stories of low interest; less than half as many, 28 percent, believe the press puts importance first.

Forty-nine percent think the press would knowingly break a story endangering U.S. troops; 41 percent would trust it to keep a secret to save lives.

Forty-one percent think the press is out to get certain groups (frequently, Roper notes, the person polled happens to be a member of the group specified); 49 percent say it's tough on everyone, playing no favorites.

It may be some comfort, in view of the above, that 74 percent would not favor revising the First Amendment to eliminate or curtail freedom of the press. But Roper finds the 21 percent who would be willing to do some constitutional tinkering ominously high.

The important point, according to Roper, is not whether the specific criticisms are right or wrong but the public perception that the press is out of line. With rights go responsibilities, he observes, and, as the public sees it, the press is playing loose with the latter while demanding the former.

Every public institution, as he puts it metaphorically, requires a reservoir of good will to function successfully. In the case of the press, he suggests, the reservoir may have sprung a leak.

He does not, however, look for anything as drastic as a rewriting of constitutional guarantees. Rather, he sees as quite possible a succession of court interpretations that gradually narrow the application of those guarantees.

I would not be inclined to disagree with any of this. Comment, however, is called for on a couple of points.

One is the definition of "press," a term often used, as by Roper, as interchangeable with "media." Print and electronic journalism are, however, very different. Much of what the "press" is currently being taken to task for applies much more specifically to one than the other. Viz., the continuing debate over coverage of the Flight 847 hijacking, too recent an incident to have been dealt with in the Roper study.

Lastly, in defense of the press it might be said that it best serves the public interest — which, in a healthy democracy, is by assuring a fully informed public — not by judging what should or should not be properly reported, but by reporting what happens simply because it happens.

Whether the press is performing adequately in this respect might make a good question for a Roper Poll: How does the American public know the American press is being widely criticized, and precisely why?

Think a bit about that.

Letters to the Editor

To the editor,

In last Sunday's letter of appreciation from the Little League All-Stars, one paragraph was left out which was of great importance to us. We would like to publicly thank Monte and Linda West — Little League President — and all the Little League coaches and their wives. These people gave so unselfishly of their time and labor during this All-Star season. Even though they were not involved in coaching the team directly, many hours were volunteered to make everything run more smoothly for the boys. Many people do not realize all the behind the scenes time put into the Farm League-Little League summer program.

Whole family getting involved in 'Fiddler'

By PAT RAFFAELE
The Lawton Sunday Constitution

LAWTON, Okla. (AP) — "Traditions" is more than the opening number of "Fiddler on the Roof" to the Lawrence family.

Members of the Jewish family — Sidney, Louise, Naomi and Jordana — contributed not only their time and effort to Lawton Community Theater's production of "Fiddler on the Roof," but also their knowledge and understanding of their religion.

Each member of the family was involved in the recent production here. Naomi Lawrence, 15, was the first to get involved when she was cast as Shprintze, Tevye's fourth daughter.

Then, she said, it was only a matter of time before her mother became stage manager, her father was cast as Label, the fishmonger, and her sister was managing props and helping backstage.

Just as in Tevye's family, the values of a strong family life and the keeping of religious traditions are important to the Lawrence family. Louise Lawrence, who was in hiding in Amsterdam during World War II, said her family life was a happy one.

"Home life is continuous," she said, "whether it is in a big house with a yard and open doors or in an attic where no one leaves."

Mrs. Lawrence said she doesn't want people to feel sorry for her but she wants them to understand that her life in semi-hiding was not quite like that of Anne Frank's.

"We did live under tremendous stress but it was still our home and we didn't know any better," she said. "It was pure luck and circumstance that people helped us out and were good to us. We were not completely closed off like Anne Frank and we were not unhappy in hiding."

She said when her family was moved to Amsterdam her father sensed something was wrong, and looked for a place for his family where there would be few neighbors. The lack of neighbors made it easier to sneak out at night to get food.

After the war, Mrs. Lawrence said her family lived in Sweden for two years and then returned to Amsterdam, where she lived for 20 years. Mrs. Lawrence, a physical therapist, met her husband, Col. Sidney Lawrence, while he was attending medical school in Amsterdam. Lawrence is a surgeon at Reynolds Community Army Hospital at Fort Sill and the family has lived in the United States for nine months. Previously, they lived in Belgium for six years.

As stage manager, Mrs. Lawrence said her job included keeping track of cast changes, working with lighting cues and doing odd jobs. She said even though she had never had such a job before, she would help on other shows if she was needed.

"I felt comfortable with this show," she said. "I love theater and in this show I could advise the cast on ceremonial parts of the production and help with costumes." The Lawrence family has seen "Fiddler on the Roof" at least 16 times in Europe.

The bottle dance performed in the show is traditional, Mrs. Lawrence said, along with the dances the men share. The chair dance in the show is also still seen at Jewish wedding ceremonies.

Mrs. Lawrence said traditions and customs play a large role in their family life. Naomi and Jordana said they intended to keep all the customs their parents have taught them. The Lawrence family observes all of the Jewish holidays, including the Friday Sabbath.

Even though the Lawrences don't keep a kosher house, Mrs. Lawrence said foods are very important, especially the blessing of the wine and bread.

A nuclear, non-proliferation treaty went into effect in 1970 after 43 nations ratified it.

Orthopedists focus on bones

By Peter H. Gott, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT — What do orthopedists do? Why are they listed apart from other physicians in directories (such as the Yellow Pages), although "M.D." is given after their names? Are they "legitimate" specialists? How do they differ from chiropractors?

DEAR READER — Orthopedists are medical doctors who, after completing training in general surgery, choose to specialize in problems relating to the body's bones, joints and muscles. As a group, they are certainly legitimate, but there is a variation of skills between members of the specialty.

My local Yellow Pages lists "Orthopedic (Musculoskeletal)" in the same manner that other medical-surgical specialties are listed. Since all M.D.s are licensed as physicans or surgeons, it is not surprising that the telephone company indexes them as such.

Chiropractors do not have medical degrees, and therefore are not listed with doctors. Orthopedic surgeons provide many more services than do chiropractors — for example, they can operate and chiropractors cannot. They are also pretty good at fixing broken bones, dealing with sports-related injuries and generally keeping us old folks on our feet.

DEAR DR. GOTT — Are bad breath and digestive problems related?

DEAR READER — Digestive problems can release gases and foul scents that may be perceived as bad breath. Certain foods can cause halitosis, as can some diseases and infections. Ordinarily, however, most bad breath arises within the mouth, where particles of food are digested and decomposed by saliva and then get caught in or around teeth. Persons with bad breath should improve their oral-hygiene habits before they malign an innocent and misunderstood digestive tract.

DEAR DR. GOTT — Ever since menopause, I have suffered from terrible insomnia. Will estrogen help?

DEAR READER — Possibly, but insomnia is not an apppropriate reason to take the hormone. A frank discussion with your doctor might be more beneficial. After menopause, many women have difficulty sleeping. The reasons vary. Depression, anxiety and a decreased sleep requirement are examples of insomnia-producing factors that are more likely causes for your sleeplessness than hormone deficiency. Your doctor may be able to guide you without the necessity of taking medication — either estrogen or a sedative. That would be a better option.

'Metro Hospital makes ulcers fun!'

By Peter H. Gott, M.D.

The other day I noticed a car with a Pennsylvania license plate, which stated: "You've Got a Friend in Pennsylvania." This little-known fact startled and puzzled me because, try as I might, I could not think of a person in that illustrious Keystone State whom I would consider to be a friend. Acquaintance, perhaps, in a pinch; but friend, no. I wonder precisely what the Pennsylvania legislature is trying to accomplish by the use of this flashy and faintly felicitous familiarity. Actually, I resent the presumptuousness of an utter stranger being forced to drive around with such a message, charitable though it may be in intent.

The lawmakers seem to be making an effort — rather transparent, I believe — to present their state as a friendly place to visit so you will want to travel there and spend tourist dollars. I hope the ploy is unsuccessful, because I'd rather visit Pennsylvania to see the sights or to visit a friend I already have, if I had one.

This trend to license-plate advertising began several years ago with Louisiana's "Sportsman's Paradise." Vermont was the "Green Mountain State"; then, and Maine was the "Vacationland." New Hampshire never really got into the swing. "Live Free, or Die" is an ambivalent message of transcendental value to the skiers and summer visitors whose last expectation is either to live free or die in the Granite State.

In any case, many states are now proudly bandwagoning their leisure attractions — on license plates. The whole trend is a bit precious, a little too cute, on a par with Ye Olde Gift Shoppes that dot the countryside and specialize in selling cheap plastic trinkets made in Taiwan. I'm afraid it is only a matter of time before hospitals and, by extension, doctors, get caught up in this unseemly tendency.

I cringe when I imagine the advertising campaigns and bumper stickers that will proclaim, "You've Got A Friend at St. Ignatius Memorial Hospital." Going to the hospital is only one degree better than being mugged in downtown Philadelphia, so the experts will have a tough time making medical care seem attractive. "Dr. Gore, the Caring Surgeon" is not going to make your bypass surgery more comfortable or less risky. You'll continue to ponder the reasons your mother rejected you long after you've completed therapy with "Dr. Daft, the Laughing Shrink." A potentially more useful bit of data would be "I Accept Medicare Assignment." On the other hand, a different slogan might appeal to an upwardly mobile patient looking for a podiatrist: "Dr. Corn Helps You Get a Foot in the Door."

Plastic surgeons, dermatologists and obstetricians could have a heyday, yet it is hospitals that could really profit — by advertising organ transplants. For example: "Beth Lebanon Has Heart — For You." "Uptown Lying-Down Medical Center: 'Trade in Your Liver. Easy Terms.'" "Pacific Palisades Health Maintenance Complex for the Chronically Ill: 'Become a Bionic Man!'" Maybe this is expecting too much. Perhaps we should be content with simple messages on license plates. "New York: The Hospital State." "Florida: A Great Place to Get Sick." "Texas: The Lone Scar State."

The possibilities are unlimited.

Send your questions to Dr. Gott at P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101. Due to volume of mail, individual questions cannot be answered. Questions of general interest will be answered in future columns.

Lemon law aids consumers

AUSTIN (AP) — Texans who quickly soured on their new cars are turning to the state Motor Vehicle Commission for some lemon aid.

A commission examiner, operating under the state's new Lemon Law, has recommended refunds in the first two cases to come down the road — an odorous Dodge and a leaky Buick.

Patsy Martin of Irving complained that her 1984 Dodge 600 smells of gasoline. Larry Miley of Longview says his 1984 Buick Century has an engine coolant leak. Both want their money back.

They should get it, examiner Henri ten Brink said in his recommendations to the commission, which could rule next month.

"It's the only way I could get any satisfaction. Chrysler wouldn't help me," Ms. Martin said of the Lemon Law.

The 1983 Legislature approved the law, intended as a last recourse for new car buyers convinced they've got a lemon. Chrysler went to court to challenge the law, and won. But a federal appeals court reversed that decision and the Lemon Law was put back on the books in April.

The Martin and Miley cases were heard by ten Brink, a commission assistant director who drives a 1973 Buick with 98,000 miles on it and has a radio-controlled scale-model Porsche in his office.

Ten Brink's reports say refunds are in order even if the defect seems minor. In the case of the Miley coolant leak, he said he was "not persuaded that a vehicle must be rendered completely immobile before the use and market value are substantially impaired."

Miley had a long list of complaints about his 1984 Buick Century.

"No matter if all the problems are eventually corrected, which doesn't seem very likely, the 'new' has worn off and we haven't had a happy day of ownership, nor will we," Miley said in a letter to the commission.

The car was in the shop 23 times the first year.

"I do not want this car," Miley told the commission. "I have 44 more payments left and I'm already soured on the vehicle."

Miley, an office manager for Brown & Root, took his complaint to the local Better Business Bureau, which said there was fault enough to go around.

"They cited me for not catching the defects before taking delivery of the car," Miley said in a telephone interview.

Unsatisfied with the BBB action, he turned to the Lemon Law.

Ten Brink, Miley and Buick officials rode in the car as part of the hearing. Ten Brink found no defects during the drive, but noticed the coolant leak afterward. That was enough to make Miley's Century a certifiable Texas Lemon Law lemon, he said.

"Constant monitoring and refilling the engine coolant by Mr. Miley requires him to substantially alter his enjoyment and use of the vehicle compared to an owner who got a 1984 Buick without an engine coolant leak," said ten Brink.

Under the law, a purchaser can get a full refund — minus an allowance for any driving done before the first complaint. In the Miley case, ten Brink recommended a full refund, minus 20 cents per mile for the first 2,895 miles.

He also said Beavers Buick of Longview, which sold the car to Miley, could be required to cover 25 percent of the refund.

Buick officials refused to comment on the Miley case, saying they have not seen the ten Brink report. Company spokesman Tom Roberts of Dallas also said the automaker has no solid feeling on the Lemon Law.

"It's too new to form an opinion at this time," he said.

Miley has talked to lawyers about suing for "mental anguish."

"This has really been eating on me ... the frustration of going through this 23 times and still not having a car that I don't have to put radiator fluid in every week," he said.

Ms. Martin said she bought her Dodge in May 1984 because it had lots of extras and filled a particular need.

"I liked it. I'm a very short, fat woman and I could drive it," she said. She paid $10,500 to North Loop Dodge in North Richland Hills.

Among her complaints were a malfunctioning horn, a leaky windshield, sporadic air conditioning and a gasoline odor so offensive that Ms. Martin won't let her pregnant daughter ride in the Dodge.

"The last time I talked with them they said their computer said there was nothing wrong with my car," she told the commission.

In October, Ms. Martin wrote to Chrysler Chairman Lee Iacocca. She said she never heard from him. In all, the car was returned to the dealer for service 32 times, she said.

Ten Brink tested the car during the Martin hearing.

"A strong petroleum product odor was detected, although it did not smell exactly like raw gasoline. It was strong enough to cause irritation and discomfort, especially if extended exposure were to occur," he said in his report.

Give the lady a full refund, minus 20 cents a mile for the first 853 miles, ten Brink recommended.

How to complain about lemon items

AUSTIN (AP) — Think you've got a lemon? Here's how to try to get your money back.

First, notify the manufacturer of the problem and give the company a chance to fix it. Under the law, it is "presumed" that a "reasonable number of attempts" to repair have been made if the vehicle has been brought in four or more times for the same problem during the warranty period.

You also might have a certifiable lemon if the car has been in the shop for a total of 30 days or more — not necessarily for the same problem — during the warranty period. The law covers only vehicles purchased new. A Lemon Law complaint can be filed only during the warranty period or within a year of purchase, whichever is shorter.

The Motor Vehicle Commission can order a replacement or refund if the unrepaired problem "substantially impairs the use and market value of the motor vehicle." That's a judgment call, said commission director Russell Harding.

"A coolant leak by itself may seem pretty insignificant. Nonetheless, I don't see why the owner of a new vehicle should have to live with something like that," he said.

The dealer also could be required to pay part of the refund.

The commission has set up the process with an eye toward allowing consumers to represent themselves without a lawyer.

"We're trying to keep it as informal as possible," said Henri ten Brink, assistant director for enforcement.

"The whole intent of this law is if they can't fix something after four times, then enough's enough and a guy ought to be able to get his money refunded or the car replaced," Harding said.

Once you've complained to the car maker and given the dealer at least four shots at fixing the problem, you can ask the Motor Vehicle Commission to intervene.

Keep records. Some pending Lemon Law cases include receipts from each trip to the shop, more than 20 in some instances.

Under the Texas law, it's the consumer's burden to prove his or her case. The process begins with a hearing at which all parties get to tell their side and take a ride in the cars — with a commission examiner on board.

Ten Brink said the commission tries to hold the hearings in or near the consumer's hometown. Although the commission's final ruling probably would be made at an Austin hearing, the consumer is not required to bring the car to Austin.

"If the car's got a problem, we can't require them to drive it to Austin," said ten Brink.

The commission's decision can be appealed to state district court. In fact, a consumer can bypass the commission and go right to court to press his case.

Thirty-two states have Lemon Laws, but experts say the Texas version is among the most friendly to consumers. In many states, the process is handled by the car-maker's consumer appeals board. A consumer unsatisfied with the board's decision can then go to court.

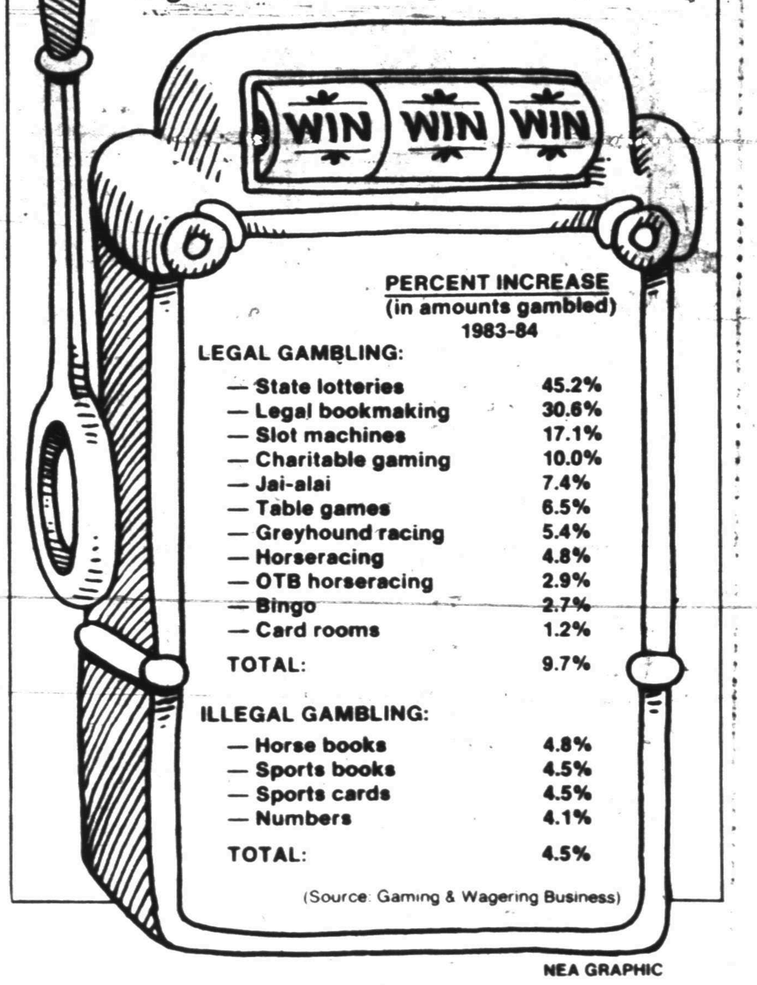

"The boards are supposed to be completely independent. That's what the Federal Trade Commission's line is," said ten Brink.

Although the Texas law was approved in 1983, it didn't take effect until April because of Chrysler's court challenge. The automaker did not like the make-up of the board because it includes auto dealers.

Training camp unique facility

By JOHN WEISS
Rochester Post-Bulletin

LITTLE FALLS, Minn. (AP) — The large expanse of woods south of Little Falls teems with deer and other wildlife, yet one could just as easily run into an M48 tank rumbling and snorting through the trees.

That expanse, 53,000 acres in all, is Camp Ripley (now technically known as the Gen. E.A. Walsh Training Center), one of the largest training camps for National Guardsmen in the country. It is unique because it is the only defense training facility in the country without civilian roads or buildings and the only one with capability to bridge a major river.

One of those tanks won't necessarily be driven by a National Guardsman from Minnesota, though. It's possible to run into one driven by a guard from any state because every state has sent guards to the Minnesota camp at one time or another, said Maj. Terry Jones, public information officer of the state guard.

Then again, it might be driven by a regular Army soldier, a Marine, a Marine Reservist or a Ranger, because they train there too.

Those soldiers might run into a sailor now and then at the camp, which is on the Mississippi and Crow Wing rivers but certainly far from any large body of water. Some Navy personnel have been trained at the camp, Jones said. In fact, members of every branch of the service except the Coast Guard have trained at Ripley.

Soldiers from Norway, Canada and England also have trained at Ripley, which is a major winter-tactics training area in addition to its summer training programs.

Camp Ripley is on the site of Fort Ripley, which was built around 1847 to both protect white settlers and trappers and keep the Chippewa and Sioux Indians from fighting each other, Jones said. But it was decommissioned in 1877 and torn down by local lumberjacks.

The camp was begun in 1931 because the previous camp on the shore of Lake Pepin in southeast Minnesota was too small. The first two units walked through the stone gates of the camp on June 14, 1931. The Minnesota guard now has 9,950 personnel in regular divisions and 2,200 in non-divisional units, Jones said.

But the camp has changed dramatically since it opened in 1931.

For one thing, it's much larger, Jones said.

The main area is now gigantic, with row after row of small cabins for summer use, repair shops, offices, military museum, airstrip, parking lot for scores of tanks and other vehicles, and mess halls. Guardsmen originally had to put canvas tents over wooden frames, but the frames were changed to tin huts. Now, some huts are being replaced by modern, winterized, brick-concrete structures.

A guardsmen who was at Camp Ripley 20 years ago "would be in awe" of what the camp looks like now, said Maj. Lyle Lalim, director of planning, training and security for the installation support unit.

Camp Ripley is actually a city in itself with its own sewer and water systems, streets, police, fire department and air medical evacuation to the troop medical clinic.
