Jury convicts six defendants in Achille hijacking

GENOA, Italy (AP) — A jury today convicted six Palestinians of hijacking the Achille Lauro cruise ship and killing an American passenger, and sentenced three of them to life in prison, including fugitive Palestinian leader Mohammed Abbas.

After deliberating for three days under tight security, the panel of two judges and six civilians also convicted five other defendants in connection with the hijacking.

It acquitted four defendants for lack of evidence.

Four defendants were present in court when Judge Lino Monteverde announced the verdict. They shouted, "Long live Palestine!" in Arabic from their steel-barred courtroom cages. Their shouts were translated by a courtroom interpreter.

The Genoa-based luxury liner was hijacked Oct. 7-9 with 413 people aboard. Four Palestinians commandeered the vessel after it made a port call in Egypt, and demanded the release of 51 Palestinians jailed in Israel.

A wheelchair-bound American passenger, Leon Klinghoffer, 69, of New York, was shot to death during the ordeal and his body dumped overboard.

The jury found three hijackers, Abbas and two other fugitive leaders of Abbas' Palestine Liberation Front equally responsible for the hijacking, the taking of the ship's passengers and crew members as hostages and the killing of Klinghoffer.

Under Italian law, planners as well as participants in any crime that results in a death are as guilty of the killing as the person who actually commits it. There was no separate charge of murdering Klinghoffer, because a killing that occurs during a terrorist kidnapping is considered more serious under Italian law than other killings.

The hijackers were among five defendants in custody. Abbas and the two PLF officials were among 10 defendants tried in absentia.

Abbas' two associates also were sentenced to life in prison. They are Ozzuddin Badrakkam, 39, the PLF military leader, and Ziad El Omar, 35, who was charged with buying the hijackers' cruise tickets.

Youssef Magied al-Molqi, 23, the hijacker accused of shooting and killing Klinghoffer, was sentenced to 30 years in prison. The prosecution had asked for a life term.

Ibrahim Fatyer Abdelatif, 20, also accused of being one of the pirates, was sentenced to 24 years and two months.

Ahmad Marrouf al Assadi, 24, a hijacker who had cooperated with authorities, was sentenced to 15 years and two months. He was not present when the verdict was read.

In New York, Klinghoffer's daughters, Lisa and Ilia, said today on ABC's "Good Morning America" program that they were outraged Molqi was not sentenced to life in prison. They said they would seek extradition of the hijackers so they could be retried in the United States.

"We were hoping to hear that they would receive life imprisonment and that is not the case," Lisa Klinghoffer said on the "CBS Morning News." "Those who were tried in absentia had received life imprisonment, but those who were there, who actually did the act, were not given that penalty."

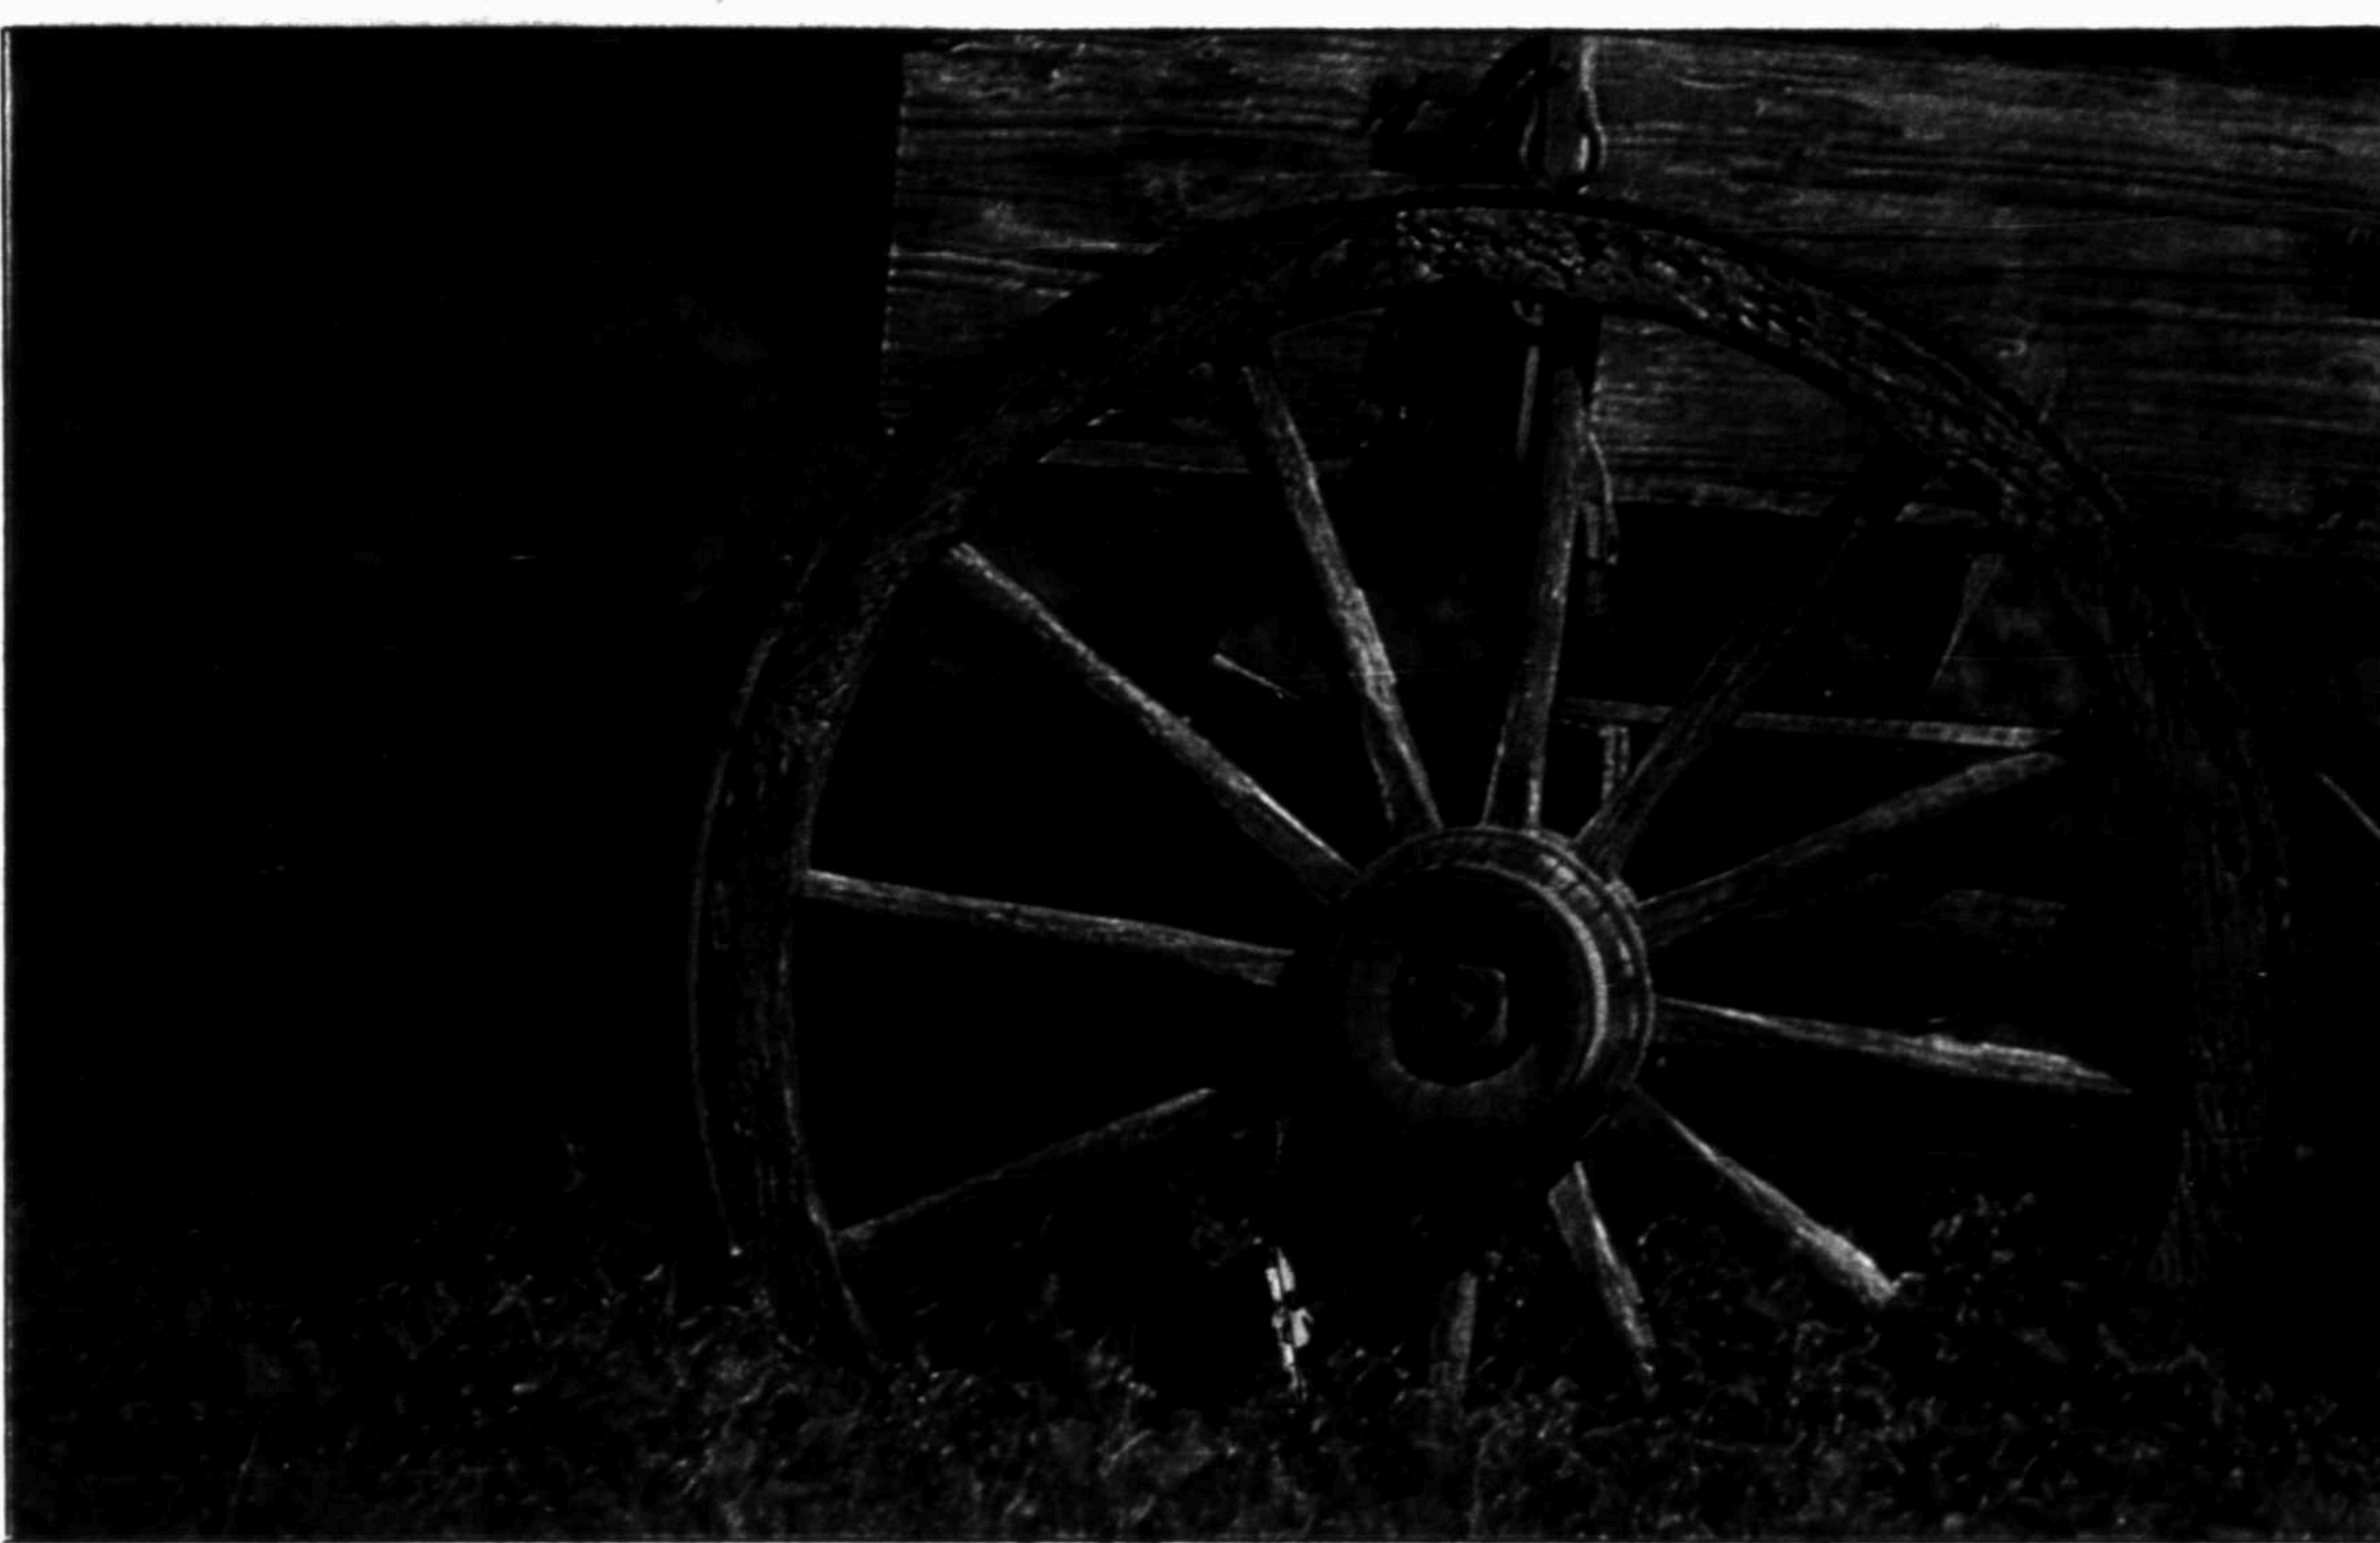

Former hostages Seymour and Viola Meskin of Union, N.J., said they were glad the men were convicted but that they also had wanted stiffer sentences.

The fourth man accused of the actual hijacking, Bassam al-Ashker, 18, will be tried later in juvenile court because he was 17 and a minor at the time of the hijacking.

The other two defendants in custody received lighter sentences.

Abbas' cousin, Mohammed Issa Abbas, a 24-year-old Syrian, was convicted of using false passports and sentenced to six months in prison. In a separate trial in November, he was convicted of smuggling the hijackers' weapons aboard the ship and was sentenced to seven years.

Banks report effect of state's economy

DALLAS (AP) — Analysts predict problems in the state's energy and real estate sectors will prompt second-quarter results of weak earnings and strong loan loss provisions for Texas financial institutions.

The state's largest bank-holding company, RepublicBank of Dallas, was the first to report for the second quarter, with an 84 percent drop in earnings and net income of $5.7 million or 13 cents per share. The loan loss provision was strengthened by $78.5 million, the company reported.

RepublicBank reported $22.5 billion in assets as of June 30.

First City Bancorporation of Texas, which made a $275 million loan loss provision in the first quarter, showed net income of $15.1 million or 36 cents per share, for the second quarter, officials said Wednesday.

The company is reporting a net loss of $217.2 million for the first six months of the year because of the large reserves set aside, spokesman John Jamison of Houston said Wednesday.

"We are still swallowing and living with the positive decision we made in the first quarter to provide for future uncertainties," Jamison said.

He said the net income reported for the second quarter indicates First City was correct in increasing reserves. The company charged off $126.6 million in loans during the second quarter, primarily in the drilling and oilfield service areas. Reserves for loan losses stood at $269.8 million as of June 30.

Most second-quarter reports from financial institutions will probably reflect a slight deterioration from first-quarter results, said Georgia Head, an analyst with the Dallas firm of Rauche Pierce Refsnes Inc.

She said problems started with the rapid drop in oil prices this year and spread into the real estate economies because of overbuilding in some Texas cities during the boom cycle.

Officials for InterFirst Corp. are predicting a second-quarter loss of at least $260 million after increasing reserve funds for loan losses.

RepublicBank Chairman Gerald W. Fronterhouse said in a prepared statement that the bank's performance this year reflects the current challenging economic environment in Texas.

First phase of health center opens

By FRANK TROMBLEY

Staff Writer

ODESSA — Former Odessa Mayor Dan Hemphill, calling the opening of the new Texas Tech University Regional Academic Health Center "a milestone of diversification," told a crowd of several hundred gathered for opening ceremonies that "the oil industry has been very beneficial to the Permian Basin; however, the official opening of this facility is a giant step toward becoming a major regional health care center."

Gary Watkins, who was Ector County Judge during the period when the decision was approved by Texas Tech regents to build the regional health center, said, "It seems like just the other day we were on this vacant lot with all the shovels at the groundbreaking."

Speaking as a member of the coordinating board of the Texas College and University System, Watkins said, "We realize that times are hard, but all the members of the board are committed to excellence in higher education and we plan with the help of the Legislature and other elected officials of the state to move forward in education." The former county judge termed the opening of the regional health center "a great day for the region, evidenced by many members of surrounding communities" present for the grand opening.

Medical Center Hospital Administrator Sam Glenney, referring to the fact the center's staff has been operating here for the past several years out of temporary facilities, said, "I think we've already seen an overall improvement in the quality of health care services available to citizens of the Permian Basin as a result of our teaching affiliation with Texas Tech and I truly believe this trend will continue for many years in the future."

Greater Odessa Chamber of Commerce President John Landgraf said,

"We feel it's going to have some real long-range benefits as far as health care for the Permian Basin is concerned and that's really the reason that it's here."

Concerning the long-term potential benefits to the area, Landgraf said, "Anytime you have the type of teaching facility that we have here you're going to have a natural spin-off of other types of medical laboratories, other medical testing facilities that gravitate toward such a center."

Observing that studies show the per capita ratio of doctors has been lower in the West Texas area than other areas in the state, Landgraf said studies show doctors have a tendency to set up practice within 100 miles of where they went to school, which he feels "will help the whole area from a medical care standpoint."

Following remarks by the various dignitaries, Dr. Lauro Cavazos, president of the Texas Tech University, stepped forward to cut the ribbon at the south entrance and to officially open the $25 million first phase of the facility.

Cavazos noted that those who arranged the ceremony had given him a scalpel rather than the traditional scissors. "But don't worry," he said, "I'm an anatomist by training."

The center is located on 6.1 acres of land immediately west of Medical Center Hospital and provides space for administrative offices, classrooms and a medical library. The facility opened Wednesday is the first of five phases to be built at a total cost of $3.3 million.

In 1978, Odessa citizens pledged $325,000 in "seed money" to support creation of the Regional Academic Health Center in the city. The new center will employ about 75 people, including three first-year resident doctors, with an annual payroll of about $1.6 million.

A balloon launch was part of the grand opening ceremonies at the Texas Tech University Regional Health Center at the Permian Basin in Odessa Wednesday.

Midland Chamber of Commerce names executive vice president

By DEANNA J. NEAL
Business/Oil Writer

At its monthly board meeting, the Midland Chamber of Commerce named as its new executive vice president Henry P. Jones III, who for the past six years has headed the Greater Jonesboro (Arkansas) Chamber of Commerce. Jones will fill the position vacated by Grant A. Hittingley.

Jones

"I believe we have identified and obtained the services of an experienced, outstanding chamber execuve," said Jim Alsop, immediate past president of the chamber and chairman of the search committee that selected Jones. "We made an extensive search, reviewed almost 100 applications and submitted the individual we believe can move quickly to help the chamber to continue its leadership of the business community."

Says Jones: "I am looking forward to working with the Midland Chamber, its members and board. I hope to offer the leadership and advice of my 26 years experience to move forward with the policies and programs of the board of directors, and we'll try to avoid some of the pitfalls that often befall areas in times of a recessionary economy."

"We will continue to work toward diversification. If we can expand our economic base, when the oil and gas industry comes back, we'll be that much stronger," he added.

Jones, who has extensive experience in industrial development, governmental affairs and community development, is a 1960 graduate of Arkansas State University. He began his professional career as a staff assistant at the Pine Bluff, Ark., Chamber of Commerce that same year and later served as executive officer of chambers at Stuttgart and El Dorado in Arkansas before becoming executive director of the East Arkansas Planning and Development District.

He has also been executive director of the North Little Rock Chamber of Commerce and was instrumental in its merger into the Greater Little Rock Chamber of Commerce.

Officials testify against cuts in human services

Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Without state-supported daycare, Terry Vara of El Paso would have to quit her job and stay home to care for her two boys.

Ms. Vara also would have to add her name to a growing list of Texans who rely on welfare, something she says she would rather not do.

"Being a single parent, I need daycare," she told members of the House Human Services Budget Subcommittee. "My life would be terribly affected" if legislators try to solve a budget crisis by cutting benefits for low-income families needing child care services.

Members of that panel heard testimony from scores of public and private officials Wednesday, all of whom decried cuts in human services as a way to balance the state's books. And, almost without exception, those who testified said they would support a tax increase to achieve that end.

"Please make the right choice, we'll back you up," said Anita Marcus, spokeswoman for the Texas Coalition for Juvenile Justice, a non-profit organization created to help keep runaways off the streets. "It's very cheap to intervene early," she added. "It's very expensive to build prisons."

Support from lawmakers on that issue, however, is somewhat harder to find. Last week, House Speaker Gib Lewis said there is very little support from representatives for a tax increase of any kind. A tax bill must originate in the House.

Hunt continues for escaped convict

Residents nervously await McFadden's capture— 3A

GILMER, Texas (AP) — Hundreds of police officers searched today for a convicted sex offender awaiting a murder trial who escaped from Upshur County Jail and took a female deputy hostage, authorities said.

McFadden

A manhunt by hundreds of state and local police and four helicopters using searchlights intensified early today for Jerry Walter McFadden as 35 to 40 more state troopers and bloodhounds were added to the search. McFadden escaped about 6:30 p.m. Wednesday, authorities said.

Sheriff Dale Jewkes said McFadden, 38, who calls himself "Animal" and is a suspect in two other murders, fled in a maroon and gold Datsun 280ZX and was armed with a .38-caliber service revolver. "He was making a phone call and he hit a deputy with a piece of iron and escaped," said Chief Deputy James Beasley.

Authorities posted roadblocks on state highways 155 and 154 and others in Northeast Texas.

Jewkes said the 6-foot-1, 220-pound McFadden had been taken to a lobby area inside the jail to use the telephone. McFadden was scheduled to be tried July 28 in neighboring Wood County for aggravated assault and robbery.

He struck Sgt. Kenneth Mayfield, 53, between the eyes with a sharp piece of L-shaped metal believed torn from a cell window, Jewkes said. Mayfield was in good condition at Baylor Medical Center in Gilmer with trauma and a laceration on his head, a spokeswoman said. Jewkes said McFadden then went into the dispatching area, forcing another deputy, Stacey Mullinix, into a cell and abducting Rosalie Williams, 24. McFadden took Mayfield's weapon from a locked box outside the jail area, as well as an undetermined amount of cash, Jewkes said.

"He had been led out of his cell to make a telephone call," said Ms. Mullinix, 27. "And the next thing I knew, he was coming toward us with a flat piece of metal in his hand. He made us get the sergeant up and was going to put all three of us in his jail cell. "At first, he wanted us to put handcuffs on the sergeant," she said. "But then he wanted us to get him up however we could. Once we got him (Mayfield) up and on his feet and helped him in a cell, he had Rosalie close the cell door behind us. And then he took her. I never saw what happened after that. I never heard her say a thing."

Jewkes said Mrs. Williams, whose husband, Eddie, is a DPS trooper in the Upshur County area, is the mother of a 4-year-old son. Jewkes said early today he believed McFadden and the kidnapped deputy could still be in Upshur County "or the immediate area and daylight will make it extremely difficult for McFadden to remain holed up."

Jewkes said McFadden stopped at a convenience store just north of Gilmer and bought $10 worth of gasoline. He had discarded the jail's standard issue white jumpsuit and was last seen wearing blue jean cutoffs and a light colored shirt. McFadden was charged in the murder of Suzanne Harrison, 18, who was one of three Hawkins youths slain after they went on an outing to Lake Hawkins the weekend of May 3.

Miss Harrison was found beaten and strangled Monday, May 5, at Barnwell Mountain Park five miles north of Gilmer in Upshur County. An autopsy showed she had been sexually assaulted. She had disappeared along with Hawkins residents Bryan Boone, 19, and Gina Turner, 20, who were found dead five days later in a drainage ditch after an extensive search.

McFadden, of Ore City, was taken into custody on May 8 and questioned in connection with the case because authorities believed he had tried to rob a couple at gunpoint near the lake the Sunday night of the weekend the trio disappeared. McFadden was charged with two counts of attempted robbery and was charged May 21 in Miss Harrison's death. He was indicted by an Upshur County grand jury June 9.

McFadden also was held for a parole violation. He had been released from prison in July 1985 following three sex-related convictions.

Party denies opposition's charges of fraud

CARMINA DANINI
Hearst Mexico Correspondent

CHIHUAHUA, Mexico — A war of words erupted here Wednesday, as the ruling Institutional Revolutionary Party attempted to snuff out heated charges by the opposition of electoral fraud during last Sunday's state elections.

At a rally at PRI headquarters Wednesday morning, gubernatorial candidate Fernando Baeza Melendez told some 300 cheering supporters that the ruling party accomplished a goal previously thought unreachable.

Since Monday, the PRI has been releasing figures that show it with an unsurmountable lead in the races for governor, 65 out of 67 city halls and state representatives.

Baeza said the PRI's candidates in Chihuahua were selected openly and fairly, refuting claims by the opposition National Action Party that all of PRI's candidates are chosen by the national committee in Mexico City and "imposed" on the voters.

The Delicias, Chihuahua, native said that the opposition did not campaign and is now attempting to overturn the PRI's victory through illegal means.

Rejecting the PAN's allegations that there was massive fraud in Sunday's electoral process, Baeza said there had been some "anomalies," adding that those would be investigated by the proper authorities.

"However, we believe those allegations even if found true, will not affect the results of the election," said Baeza.

Joining his voice to that of Baeza's, Gov. Saul Gonzalez Herrera said the PAN's attitude cannot be justified because "there was no fraud in the elections."

In response, PAN gubernatorial candidate Francisco Barrio Terrazas said, "Why respond? That's just part of the same cynicism, the same farce."

The PAN announced Tuesday it will ask the state electoral commission to annul the elections because of widespread voter irregularities.

To counter the PAN's cries of fraud, the PRI early Wednesday placed on exhibit copies of the "Actas de Escrutinio" (documents that contain the ballot count in each voting precinct) in the Plaza de Armas downtown and outside the building housing the PRI municipal committee.

Across the street at the cathedral, church spokesman Dizan Vazquez said the Catholic Church will not only denounce that fraud which is proven but will give its support to "those groups which seek democracy and social justice for the people."

However, Camilo Daniel Perez, parish priest from Anahuac and one of the leaders of the Democratic Electoral Movement, warned that if the church keeps quiet about fraudulent electoral process, it will become "an accomplice of a system that sanctions corruption and injustice."

As the war of words heated up, the PAN maintained a series of protests that got under way in the capital city Tuesday night with the blocking of major thoroughfares.

On Wednesday morning nearly 1,500 PAN partisans marched to the Excelesior Hyatt, the city's poshest hotel and currently home to most foreign press and Baeza.

Similar protests were held in front of the local radio stations which allegedly boycotted PAN information, the government palace and the state electoral commission before the marchers rallied in front of the clock in Lerdo Park where Mayor Luis H. Alvarez was in his eighth day of hunger strike.

Mowfiq Said Gandura, a 37-year-old Syrian, was sentenced to eight months in prison for giving false testimony.

Also convicted in the case were three other defendants considered fugitives.

Abdull Rahim Khaled, 50, was sentenced to seven years and six months for using a false passport to board the ship. Khaled, described as a PLF colonel, left the ship during a port call before the Achille Lauro was seized.

Mohammed Ben al-Khadra, a 32-year-old Syrian, was sentenced to six years and six months for helping provide arms to the hijackers.

Yussef Hisham Nasser, a 24-year-old Lebanese, was sentenced to six years and six months in prison for using a false name and for also helping to provide arms.

Acquitted in the case were Abu Kifah, 25, a Tunisian who was accused of helping plan the hijacking; Mohammed Jarba, 28, a Syrian who prosecutors said was meant to take part in the hijacking but was too sick; Abu Ali Kazem, accused of helping to plan the hijacking; and a Greek man, Petros Floros, who was accused of letting one of the hijackers use his passport.

During pre-trial investigations, Molji confessed to killing Klinghoffer, but retracted his statement during the trial, claiming the New Yorker wasn't even aboard the ship.

A Portuguese waiter testified that Molji ordered him to wheel Klinghoffer out to the deck and later ordered him at gunpoint to dump Klinghoffer's body and wheelchair into the Mediterranean.

The hijackers maintained that Mohammed Abbas had ordered them to launch an attack on the Israeli port of Ashdod. They insisted they never planned to seize the Achille Lauro, but were forced to do so when a crew member spotted them in their cabin with a weapon.

Prosecutor Luigi Carli charged that the hijacking was part of the plan all along. Carli alleged that Mohammed Abbas instructed the hijackers to separate American and British nationals from other passengers and kill one every five minutes if the demands were not met.

As part of the arrangement that ended the hijacking, the four men who seized the ship were put aboard an Egyptian airliner bound for Tunisia, where they reportedly were to be tried by a PLO tribunal.

Mohammed Abbas also was aboard the jet when it was intercepted by U.S. warplanes and forced to land in Sicily.

Italy took the four hijackers into custody, but despite U.S. protests let Abbas leave the country. Italian officials said at the time they believed Abbas' only connection with the hijacking was his mediation in the hijackers' surrender.

Abbas later was ordered to stand trial as the alleged ringleader, but by then had gone into hiding.

Jones is a graduate of the Economic Development Institute of the University of Oklahoma and has completed the Chamber Institutes for Organization Management at Houston and the Academy of Organization Management at Notre Dame.

He is currently president of the Industrial Developers of Arkansas, past president of the Arkansas Chamber of Commerce Executives Association and the Arkansas Association of Development Districts and a former board member of the Southern Association of Chamber of Commerce Executives.

Jones holds memberships in the American Economic Development Council, the Southern Industrial Development Council and in the past has served on the Governor's Manpower Council and the board of directors of the Arkansas River Basin Association.

In his most recent position with the Greater Jonesboro Chamber, Jones served as a catalyst in receiving approval of the Arkansas State University engineering program, the authorization of a business incubator in the Jonesboro Industrial Park and approval of funding for an $18.5 million Convocation Center now under construction.

In other chamber business, the board heard a report from Jim Ingram on efforts of the Commercial Air Service Committee to attract additional commercial air service to Midland Regional Airport.

Ingram and a group of interested area residents, including Mayor Carroll Thomas, Billingsley, Victor White, the city's aviation director, and John Landgraaf, president of the Odessa Chamber, flew to Atlanta recently to the corporate headquarters of Delta Airlines to discuss the viability of that airline bringing commercial service to the area.

"They are observing the area and have stated their interest in competing in the Midland market. We are definitely still in the batter's box, so to speak, and we think they were impressed with the presentation of Midland as a viable site for them," Ingram reported.

Also at the meeting, Ed Smith, representing AT&T, presented a donation to the board's vice president of economic development, Charles Spence, in an effort to assist in improving economic development in the area.

"I think you will find this was a good corporate investment and will be able to see a return on that investment very soon through improved economic condition," stated Spence in accepting the donation on behalf of the chamber.

CUTS

El Paso Rep. Jack Vowell, chairman of the budget committee, acknowledged that something has to give.

"We cannot maintain current levels of service without additional revenues," he said Wednesday. "It seems to me that the people of Texas want to maintain current levels of spending in health care programs."

If lawmakers cannot support a tax increase, Vowell said, they should give themselves more flexibility by changing laws that dedicate certain funds for specific uses.

State Comptroller Bob Bullock told legislators two weeks ago to expect at least a $2.3 billion budget deficit for the remainder of the 1986-87 biennium. The bad news grew worse when he projected as much as a $5.4 billion shortfall through 1989.

Wednesday, high-ranking officials of the Department of Human Services testified that those Texans who rely on state government for social services should not have to bear the brunt of tough economic times. Again, almost without exception, they called upon legislators to raise additional revenue to solve the budget crisis.

DHS Commissioner Marlin Johnston told the panel that the state's fiscal crunch "pales considerably" in contrast to the problems of "the more vulnerable members of our society: the fragile elderly, disabled persons and kids — all of whom are caught in the deepening whirlpool of poverty."

The poor, Johnston said, are not the problem. "They do not cause the problem; yet, it is their lot to suffer the symptomatic consequences of a faltering economy." He urged lawmakers to either spread cuts across all state agencies and/or raise taxes.

Michael Hudson, director of the Children's Defense Fund and co-chair of the Texas Maternal & Child Health Coalition, also stressed the need for more revenues.

"The voters know that we must have increased revenues; they know that we cannot cut $2 billion from the current budget without destroying the safety net for our less fortunate and disabled," Hudson said, "and they are willing to pay more taxes to keep those services."

As Vowell conceded during a break in the action Wednesday, the solution to the budget crisis will not be easy.

"I don't know what the answer is," he said. "I wish I did."

"There's no question that the banks as far as their earnings are definitely under pressure," said Frank Anderson, an analyst at Weber, Hall, Sale & Associates in Dallas.

"What we're starting to see is not only no improvement in energy, but we're also seeing additional weakening in the real estate market," Anderson said.

Republic Bank's provision for loan losses of $78.5 million in the second quarter exceeded charge-offs of $63.5 million, thus increasing the allowance from the first quarter by $24.7 million to $285.7 million, or 1.84 percent of loans outstanding, Republic Bank said in a statement.

"Banks in Texas have been very fortunate going into this cycle. They've always been the darlings of Wall Street," Anderson said. He said most banks built up a strong capital base and can withstand the present economic problems.

"The big question mark is where are oil prices going in the next couple of years and what's going to happen to real estate," he said.

Both Anderson and Ms. Head said they don't expect any major bank failures in the immediate future, but Anderson noted that "the numbers are not going to be pretty."

Crew: Problems won't stop flight

VANDENBERG AIR FORCE BASE, Calif. (AP) — The crew of the Voyager, an experimental plane designed to circle the globe without refueling, says problems that forced it to land during a crucial test won't stop its round-the-world flight.

"We didn't feel in any dire emergency," pilot Dick Rutan said after bringing the plane down Wednesday, seven hours after takeoff Wednesday on what had been planned as a record-breaking 4 1/2-day flight. "It was just a matter of doing the proper procedure to save the airplane. We landed with plenty of safety margin."

The plane landed at Vandenberg Air Force Base, 130 miles northwest of Los Angeles after taking off from the Mojave Airport in the desert 70 miles north of Los Angeles.

Peter Riva, a spokesman for the project, said a problem with the rear propeller forced the engine to shut down.

East Texans nervously wait for alleged killer's recapture

LONGVIEW (AP) — Local radio stations aired reports every 15 minutes urging East Texas residents to remain behind locked doors while authorities searched for Jerry Walter McFadden, an escaped murder suspect.

McFadden, who is charged with the murder of 18-year-old Suzanne Harrison, fled from the Upshur County Jail in a Datsun 280ZX after hitting a sheriff's officer in the head with a piece of metal and taking a female deputy hostage.

Hundreds of state and local police and four helicopters using searchlights continued a search early today for McFadden, who escaped about 6:30 p.m. Wednesday, authorities said.

John Cathey, the funeral director who handled arrangements for Miss Harrison, said he and others in the nearby town of Mineola listened closely to news reports.

"This has upset a lot of people around here," Cathey said. "They are about ready to shut down the town." Miss Harrison was found beaten and strangled May 5 at Barnwell Mountain Park five miles north of Gilmer in Upshur County. An autopsy showed she had been sexually assaulted.

She disappeared along with Hawkins residents Bryan Boone, 19, and Gina Turner, 20, who were found dead five days later in a drainage ditch after an extensive search.

"My basic feeling is that they get him. I wish I had more to say," said Boone's guardian, Walter Denby of Hawkins. "He obviously belongs in jail, and I hope they get him back before he hurts someone else."

Denby said he has no desire for vengeance.

"If he doesn't get what is coming from him from our government, he'll get it from God when it's time," he said.

Women's lawyer tells court WTSU should follow Title IX

HOUSTON (AP) — West Texas State University benefits from federal funds and therefore should follow federally mandated rules that prohibit sex discrimination, an attorney said.

Suzanne Meeker, representing the six women who filed a class-action suit against the school in 1980, Wednesday told a 5th Circuit Court of Appeals panel in Houston that WTSU's intercollegiate athletic programs receive federal aid through revenue sharing, work study funds and the use of buildings constructed with federal money.

The suit charges the programs unfairly favor men by giving male athletes more money, better facilities and better game and practice times.

U.S. District Judge Robert Porter of Dallas ruled in favor of the 6,500-student university in Canyon, near Amarillo, on June 19, saying its intercollegiate athletic programs don't receive a direct benefit from federal aid and therefore Title IX sex discrimination laws do not apply.

Title IX forbids discrimination on the basis of sex in school programs. In 1974, the U.S. Supreme Court interpreted the statute to mean that only school programs receiving federal assistance fall under the law.

The appeals panel took the case under advisement on Wednesday.

Ms. Meeker said the athletic department selects scholarship recipients and then submits them to the student financial aid office.

If the financial aid office determines the student qualifies for federal funds, the athletic scholarship is then set aside or reduced.

But Laura Jefferson, an assistant state attorney general, said financial aid officials don't select scholarship recipients. The officials only distribute the money according to federal guidelines, she said.

Union praises changes in South African ban on meetings

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — A trade union today hailed the lifting of a 2-day-old ban on meetings of most unions and anti-apartheid groups in the Johannesburg area, calling it the first government backdown since the state of emergency was declared last month.

"We hope it means that hawks in the Cabinet are starting to lose momentum, and people with a bit more sense are starting to see what they've got themselves into," said Bernard Fanaroff, senior organizer of the Metal and Allied Workers Union.

His group was among four unions representing a total of 300,000 workers that appealed Wednesday to the Rand Supreme Court to overturn the meetings ban. Within hours of the appeal, the official Bureau for Information announced the ban "contained certain errors" and would be replaced today by a revised ban.

The original order affected 33 organizations. The bureau said the new ban would cover only groups in Soweto, the black township outside Johannesburg, and would not affect trade unions.

"It's amazing that a government can pass a law and then say, 'Excuse me, the whole thing was a mistake,'" said Peter Harris, a lawyer for the unions that challenged the ban. "One wonders how many other mistakes they've made."

Harris said he thought there was "very little doubt" the government reaction was a response to the law suit. He said the unions will press the suit anyway.

Raymond Parson, executive director of the Association of Chambers of Commerce, said the lifting of the ban also was a partial response to employer organizations that expressed concern to the government about some regulations.

Since the state of emergency declared June 12, unions representing hundreds of thousands of black workers have conducted strikes and work slowdowns to protest the detention of scores of their leaders. The job actions have prompted appeals by white employer groups that the union officials be freed.

About 5,000 gold miners at Free State Geduld mine in Orange Free State agreed Wednesday night to resume full-time work after the management promised to appeal government detentions of union members.

About 3,000 striking workers at five De Beers diamond mines at Kimberley reached a similar agreement with their management.

The Bureau for Information said Minister of Law and Order Louis le Grange met employers Wednesday "to help with problems arising out of the present abnormal situation, and to stress the fact that no employee is or will be detained for bona fide trade union activities."

Le Grange has said those in custody are held for political reasons, not because they are union members.

Under the state of emergency, journalists are prohibited from revealing the names of detainees, reporting on security force actions without official permission or quoting statements that the government considers subversive.

Two French policemen comatose

PARIS (AP) — Two policemen injured in the bombing of a police headquarters annex in central Paris that killed a police inspector have not regained consciousness and were reported today in very serious condition.

The officers were among 27 people injured in the blast Wednesday that killed 54-year-old inspector Marcel Basdevant, authorities said.

Many of the injuries were minor, but hospital sources said officers Armel Legras, 33, and Paul Orsini, 35, both suffered serious head injuries and were still in comas.

The powerful bomb, apparently placed in a fifth-floor toilet, blasted out chunks of the 3-foot-thick walls, scattering documents around a courtyard, shattering glass and demolishing the ceiling.

Premier Jacques Chirac, who visited the scene of the attack, said he was "shaken and outraged by this attack which has gone beyond the limits."

The National Assembly suspended its debate on a portion of Interior Minister Charles Pasqua's proposed laws cracking down on crime and terrorism, and before the session resumed, lawmakers observed a moment of silence in honor of Basdevant, who was killed by falling debris in his office.

There were still no reports of a claim of responsibility for the attack by this morning.

However, news accounts speculated that it could have been the work of the terrorist group Direct Action, which has claimed several recent bombings, in part because it occurred the same day as a bombing in West Germany claimed by the Red Army Faction.

WORLD IN BRIEF

Vietnam's Le Duan dies

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — Le Duan, Vietnam's most powerful leader since the death of Ho Chi Minh 17 years ago, died in Hanoi today, the official Voice of Vietnam announced. He was 78.

The broadcast, monitored in Bangkok, said the Communist Party secretary general died after "a period of serious illness." The radio said a state funeral was planned.

The broadcast said his death was a "great loss for our party and people." During his period of illness, he was taken care of by a group of good medical professors, the broadcast said. "But because of his age and the seriousness of his illness, he bade his farewell this morning."

Duan, who also was a member of the 14-member Politburo, the nation's highest decision-making organ, had led Vietnam since Ho Chi Minh died in 1969. Duan was secretary general of the party, but was never named chairman, the post held by Ho Chi Minh.

Blood cell protein found

TORONTO (AP) — Two American medical researchers on Wednesday reported the discovery of a white blood cell protein that could help scientists understand how the body's immune system fights infection.

Dr. Michael Brenner, of Harvard Medical School, and Dr. Leonard

Chess of Columbia University, attending the Sixth International Congress of Immunology in Toronto, said their teams made the breakthrough two months ago after two years of work.

Working independently, each team identified a new type of "T-cell receptor," a protein in some white blood cells that recognizes invading germs, the doctors told a news conference.

They described the substance as "part of the body's immunological orchestra," but said much more research was needed to discover its function.

Steamer back on track

SCARBOROUGH, England (AP) — The Mallard, the world's fastest steam locomotive, has returned to passenger service in northern England 23 years after it was retired.

Railroad buffs watched from overpasses and crossings Wednesday as the streamlined engine swept along the rails, pouring out steam and sounding its piercing whistle.

In the passenger cars were more than 450 people who paid the equivalent of $38 each for the 40-mile inaugural trip from York to Scarborough on the northeast coast of England.

The Mallard established its steam record of 126 mph in July 1938 when traveling between Grantham and Peterborough. The locomotive went out of service in 1963, but was recently restored.

Windstorm hits Latvia

MOSCOW (AP) — A windstorm tore off roofs, uprooted trees and may even have lifted calves into the air in the Soviet Baltic republic of Latvia, the government newspaper Izvestia reported.

There were no casualties in the storm, the newspaper said Wednesday. But it said one farm was destroyed, roofs blown off buildings at three livestock farms and old oaks torn up.

The storm occurred Monday near the town of Madona, about 60 miles east of Latvia's capital, Riga.

Border guards clash

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Israeli border guards clashed in a gunbattle today with guerrillas aboard a rubber boat off south Lebanon, and all four guerrillas were killed, an Israeli-allied radio station in Lebanon said.

The Voice of the South, a radio station controlled by the Israeli-sponsored South Lebanon Army militia, said one Israeli soldier was killed and several others wounded in the firefight at daybreak in the Naqoura area on the Lebanese-Israeli frontier.

The radio said the guerrillas were "trying to infiltrate near a U.N. camp at Naqoura when they were attacked by the Israeli patrol."

Drilling to China

It might have been overly optimistic to assume that the visit by a delegation of Midland civic and governmental officials to Dongying, China in late June would lead to specific steps toward a closer relationship for the two "sister cities."

But judging from the accounts of Mayor Carroll Thomas, Chamber of Commerce President Joan Baskin and others, that's exactly what is occurring. What's more, the future holds tremendous possibilities for both countries as the result of the relationship that has been established.

Two of the most significant upcoming exchanges between Dongying and Midland will be the exchange of artwork in August, arranged by Norma Webb, president of Midland Arts Assembly, and the hosting of a college and a high school student who will come to the Permian Basin to live and study in the 1987-88 academic year.

Those are significant steps but constitute only the beginning of what promises to be a most fulfilling relationship for Midland and Dongying. A number of Midlanders on the tour in late June remarked that there is little doubt that China represents a new market for the Permian Basin's petroleum equipment and expertise. China undoubtedly will benefit in that regard. At the same time, the cultural, educational and trade exchanges offer almost limitless opportunities for the people of this region.

China is a developing country, but an ancient society. Business leaders here can learn much from watching how the Chinese of Dongying react and respond to "problems" the people of this area already have encountered. Obviously, one city may benefit more in some regards than the other and vice-versa. But both cities will benefit and that's justification enough for the sister city relationship.

Over the next few months as the relationship becomes clearer, Midlanders will have a golden opportunity to see how another city on the other side of the world deals with life "in the oil patch." Perhaps Midlanders will profit in business dealings with the Chinese of Dongying. Or the relationship merely may become an eye-opening cultural experience. Either way, Midlanders should be enriched by "seeing ourselves through the eyes of others."

Drug-testing contractors in controversy

WASHINGTON — When two competing government contractors got involved in a bidding match, the results can be unexpectedly revealing.

That's what has happened in a controversy that has pitted two of the largest manufacturers of drug-testing equipment against each other in a battle for the lucrative Pentagon contract to test servicemen and women for illegal substances.

Syva Co. had the original contract to test military personnel with its EMIT kits. But two years ago, responding to complaints that the laboratory results were inaccurate, poorly controlled and unfairly implicating innocent servicemen, the Pentagon reopened the testing contract.

Jack Anderson

Syva argued that the inaccuracies were due to bad lab work, not to its EMIT kits, but the Defense Logistics Agency awarded the contract to Roche Diagnostics Systems Inc. Its Abuscreen test kit was similar to EMIT, but relied on a slightly different technology.

Syva protested, but the General Accounting Office ruled early this year that the Pentagon had not been unfair in giving the test contract to Roche.

The legal documents filed by both sides have been reviewed by our reporters Brian Bloch and Donald Goldberg. They provided a fascinating glimpse of the drug tests now being administered by government agencies, schools and corporations across the country.

In fact, if what the two quarreling contractors claim is true, the urinalysis tests being given are not only inaccurate but cannot detect the difference between legal and illegal substances in many cases.

For example, Syva's claim — undisputed by Roche — is that neither the EMIT nor Abuscreen test can "distinguish between use of heroin or codeine," and would simply identify the presence of an "opiate" in the tested person's body. Heroin is highly addictive and illegal; codeine is a common ingredient of prescription cough syrups and other medications.

The documents show a similar problem with testing for amphetamines. Abuscreen detects the presence of amphetamines, but doesn't single out the presence of "the abused drug methamphetamine," according to Syva. On the other hand, Syva acknowledged, its EMIT identifies methamphetamine but doesn't isolate other abused offshoots of the parent drug amphetamine.

In addition, neither test does well in singling out the presence of PCP, an extremely dangerous substance that has caused widespread crime and violence in many U.S. cities. Both tests gave positive results for "closely related analogs" of PCP, but also for high concentrations of a common cough medicine ingredient called dextromethorphan, according to a Syva document.

The company documents also detail other problems in drug tests, such as variations in testing temperatures and the presence of other substances in the bloodstream. For example, a pinch of salt added to a urine sample can neutralize the testing chemical and result in a "clean" test.

The problem revealed by the companies' documents is not that innocent parties will be wrongly identified as drug users, but just the opposite: Drug users will escape detection because of the (other company's) faulty test kit.

Furthermore, Syva claims that the steady decline in positives among Navy personnel — from 30 percent to 5 percent over the last several years — was due to a higher threshold decreed by the Navy. "Since only specimens with somewhat higher levels (of drugs) will be called positive, the confirmation rate will appear to go up, although the total number of confirmed drug users may appear to go down." This is because it's easier to detect a higher level of drugs, even with a questionable test.

Footnote: The Pentagon declined to comment.

GEORGE F. WILL

Ruling on deficit-control bill mere technicality

WASHINGTON — About 30 years ago, there was a jolly and judiciously correct song that said, "You can't chop your momma up in Massachusetts; we just don't do it here that way."

The Supreme Court, in a similar spirit of breezy frankness, has ruled (7-2) that Congress and the President can't chop the budget in exactly the way Gramm-Rudman-Hollings way.

The ruling was technical — too much so, according to Justice White's persuasive dissent. In its consequence, the ruling will be trivial, according to Sen. Fritz Hollings.

G-R-H requires the federal deficit to be reduced in five equal increments to zero by 1991. The President proposes his menu of pains for achieving that. Congress can ratify his menu or write its own. Failing that, the directors of the Office of Management and Budget and the Congressional Budget Office jointly submit deficit estimates and across-the-board, program-by-program cuts to the Comptroller General. He reports to the President, who is required to order the spending reduction ("sequestrations") the Comptroller General stipulates.

The Court says the Comptroller General's role violates the constitutional doctrine of separation of powers, doctrine not often the topic of table talk in many American bungalows. The Court says G-R-H vests the Comptroller General with "executive" powers. That is impermissible because of a 1921 law giving Congress power to remove the Comptroller General. To vest executive power in him would be to allow Congress to control the execution of its acts.

Justice White (Blackmun also dissented) says it is disproportionate to derail "one of the most novel and far-reaching legislative responses to a national crisis since the New Deal" on the basis of a technical provision of a 66-year-old statute. There is, he says, no potential for serious disruption of constitutional balance. All the Comptroller General was to do is apply detailed criteria written by Congress and signed by the President. The Comptroller General was not to exercise discretion.

Anyway, says White, Congress can control executive-branch officials legislatively by imposing duties, or increasing or decreasing funds, or even abolishing a particular office — so why make such a ruckus about the potential for Congress to control the Comptroller General as he performs a pro forma, accountant's duty? Never mind, says the "H" of G-R-H, the ruling is small beer.

Hollings is the only senator who sometimes requires subtitles, like a Swedish movie. During Hollings' 1984 presidential bid, Lars-Erik Nelson of the New York Daily News rendered a Hollings statement phonetically: "Ah spint foteen yahrns own a skewel bode." Hollings has spint thuddy yahrns in serious politics — he was elected South Carolina's governor in 1968 at 36 — and there is no need for translation when he says that technicalities do not control the sort of politics that fueled passage of G-R-H.

Last year, Hollings says, the President declared that tax reform was his number one priority, and the media were preoccupied with terrorism and arms control. But in the summer recess, Congress got an earful from the public concerning the deficit. Hence G-R-H.

The public, Hollings says, may be noticing that "the first thing the government does every morning is borrow another $500 million" to pay the interest on the money it has borrowed. Rounding off the numbers, he says we are spending $300 billion on defense, $300 billion on entitlements, $200 billion on the rest of government — and $200 billion on carrying charges.

In 1940, when he was a cadet at The Citadel, he was a page, supporting Robert Taft, at the Republican National Convention in Philadelphia, the one that stampeded for Wendell Willkie. (Young Gerald Ford was in the balcony chanting "We want Willkie.") Like many Southerners, Hollings is a connoisseur of lost causes, but he does not think G-R-H can be lost in a courtroom.

In the last year Congress has wrapped itself in G-R-H as in the flag, so has the President. Besides, G-R-H is already hard at work. In the Senate recently, $900 million was knocked out of an agriculture spending bill — on a point of order. The point was that the bill increased spending without providing for compensating revenues or cuts; hence it enlarged the deficit; hence it violated G-R-H.

The problem that concerns the Court is easy to fix: Change the 1921 law, making the Comptroller General removable by the President. Anyway, Congress had doubts about the constitutionality of the Comptroller General's role and built into G-R-H a fallback provision whereby Congress legislates and the President must sign (or veto) the sequestration order. So legislatively there is a way to do it. All this is untidy, and G-R-H may be a ten-thumbed way of cutting the deficit. But no one ever recommended democracy for its elegance.

Sul Ross 'necessary'

Sul Ross State University in Alpine is very special to me, and has been so for many, many years. I graduated from Sul Ross in 1962. My wife, Reba Theus Cross, graduated from Sul Ross in 1960. My son, Justin, began attending Sul Ross in 1979. My son, Stuart, graduated from Sul Ross this past year. My daughter, Kimberley, will be a senior student in Sul Ross this coming year. Many other members of my family have attended or have graduated from Sul Ross from the 1920s through the present.

The education of our children should be the number one priority of every Texan. If the State of Texas has financial problems, the budget must be trimmed, but not at the expense of our children. If a tax increase is necessary in order to continue support of all of our institutions of higher learning, so be it.

Sul Ross State University serves a very large area of West Texas and educates many students who would not be able to attend college simply because of the number of miles involved. If a person is not truly familiar with the vast expanse of West Texas, I would like to suggest the following trip to become acquainted. Don't fly to West Texas. By automobile take Highway 90 West out of San Antonio. You will pass through Castrolville, Hondo, D'Hanis, Sabin, Knippa, Uvalde, Brackettville, Del Rio, Comstock, Langtry, Dryden, Sanderson, Marathon, Alpine, Marfa, Valentine, and at Van Horn you will join Interstate 10. Continue on through Sierra Blanca, and you will bypass Fort Quitman, McNary, Fort Hancock, Fabens, Clint, and Ysleta before reaching El Paso. When the trip from San Antonio to El Paso is completed, you will have traveled more than 580 miles and you will have passed just one four year institution of higher education — Sul Ross State University in Alpine.

Thank God for the state legislature of 1917 for establishing the small college in the mountains of West Texas. What tremendous foresight these men did have.

Sul Ross has played a very important role in the education of literally thousands of public school teachers and administrators, many of whom are of Hispanic background. Other Sul Ross graduates have excelled in the fields of geology, biology, range animal science, industrial arts, theatre, arts, music, government, sports, medicine, the space program, and other fields of endeavor. Many others have been successful in business or ranching or farming.

If a certain state-supported university is having enrollment problems or financial problems, then it is my opinion that the State of Texas should help that school find the right tools or the right course of action to take in order to grow and prosper. That school should not have to fight every year just in order to survive.

In the Sunday, June 29th, edition showing samples of city population versus salaries, I question why you used Texas Almanac figures for all cities listed except Midland. The same Texas Almanac lists Midland population of 70,525.

I believe if the true comparable figures were listed, Midlanders might question why the top city officials were receiving approximately $35,000 more annually than like positions in San Angelo, and that city with a larger population.

Once sodomy's outlawed, all is in danger!

The Supreme Court has just upheld a Georgia law making sodomy a crime. It is a landmark decision, and as with all landmark decisions, many citizens are very nervous.

Not only homosexuals are worried by the court's ruling, but it has scared the pants off heterosexuals as well. I know this because some of my best friends are heterosexuals and they confide in me a lot. Matingly said, "If homosexuals are not safe in the privacy of their homes, who will be next?"

"I believe you are unduly pessimistic," I said. "The court would never do to heterosexuals what it has done to homosexuals. Many of the justices are heterosexuals themselves."

"Nevertheless, their decision is a dagger aimed at the heart of anyone who believes in a private sex life. If the state can go into the bedroom and arrest two people performing an act which has been declared illegal, what is to prevent it from going into a room next door and roasting out a couple doing something that is considered twice as weird?"

"Why would the state want to do something like that?" "Because the people who write the laws dictating what sex acts are legal and illegal would like to rule over everything but the missionary position. They want to tell us how to do it."

"No, they don't. No one has ever told me what to do in the bedroom."

"Then let me ask you how you feel about the pillow game."

"I don't know the pillow game."

"You beat each other with pillows until there are no feathers left in the cases. They're talking about forbidding that in Virginia."

"You heterosexuals are so hysterical. The next thing you're going to tell me is that body painting your mate will be declared a crime in South Dakota."

"It will be if tickling is involved. Don't you understand that once the Supreme Court had gone through the bedroom door, there was no way of getting them out. Eight men and one woman are no substitute for one Dr. Ruth Westheimer."

"This is no time for panic. What you practice in your own home, whether it be the 'Jewel in the Lotus,' the 'Gift to the Ceiling' or the 'Corkscrew Motion,' will not be forbidden provided it meets the community standards of at least five of the nine judges. It is only homosexuals who can't practice these things behind closed doors. You heterosexuals should be happy that what you revel in is not against the law, and that you live in a country where anything goes. In some societies, achieving the 'Great Delight of Enlightenment' with the large toe can get you 20 years in jail."

"But the Supreme Court has everyone cringing. If Georgia can pass a law against one type of lovemaking, why can't Arkansas enact one against another? Pretty soon there will be no positions left."

"Even if they do pass a law," I said, "your home is still your castle, and it would have to be very unusual circumstances that would allow the police to crash in."

"Possibly, but heterosexuals are very nervous people and just the knowledge that there may be someone on the other side of the bedroom door will inhibit us from engaging in the Yab-Yum positions."

"Why blame the Supreme Court for that?"

"Because when you start taking away the Yab-Yum position from one person, then you start taking it away from all."

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Thursday, July 10, the 191st day of 1986. There are 174 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history: On July 10, 1962, the Telstar communications satellite was launched from Cape Canaveral, Fla., to relay TV and telephone signals between the United States and Europe.

On this date: In 1832, President Andrew Jackson vetoed legislation to re-charter the second bank of the United States.

In 1850, Vice President Millard Fillmore succeeded to the presidency after the death of President Zachary Taylor one day earlier.

In 1890, Wyoming became the 44th state of the Union.

In 1933, the official news agency of the Soviet Union, Tass, was established.

In 1940, the Battle of Britain began as Nazi forces attacked by air.

In 1951, armistice talks aimed at ending the Korean conflict began at Kaesong.

Ten years ago: the Angolan press agency announced that American Daniel F. Gearhart and three other mercenaries were executed by a firing squad in Luanda.

One year ago: the Coca-Cola Co., bowing to pressure from irate customers, announced it would bring back its old formula for regular Coke and call it Coca-Cola Classic.

Today's birthdays: ABC news correspondent David Brinkley is 68. Former boxer Jake Lamotta is 63. Actor Fred Gwynne is 60. Broadway composer Jerry Herman is 53. Tennis star Arthur Ashe is 43. Tennis star Virginia Wade is 41. Folk singer Arlo Guthrie is 36.

Thought for today: "Education is the ability to listen to almost anything without losing your temper or your self-confidence." — Robert Frost, American poet (1874-1963).

New studies fuel debate over 'sidestream' smoke

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two new studies that draw opposite conclusions as to whether cigarette smoke can kill non-smokers are likely to touch off a replay of the initial dispute over whether smoking is harmful to health.

The annual death toll among non-smokers from "sidestream" smoke could be 31,000 or as high as 46,000, chemist Judson Wells, a retired research executive with the Du Pont Co., has concluded in a paper. But even Wells, who works as a volunteer twice a week with the American Lung Association, acknowledges his estimates are uncertain and preliminary.

Such a toll would be comparable to the 44,500 motor vehicle deaths reported last year.

The Tobacco Institute, the principal industry lobby, disputes Wells' findings and made available a British study from the July issue of the British Journal of Cancer. That study concludes "that any effect of passive smoking on risk of lung cancer or other smoking-associated diseases is at most quite small, if it exists at all."

Wells' estimates were presented last month at a meeting of the Air Pollution Control Association in Minneapolis.

The Wells report has not gone through formal peer review by other scientists. The British study, financed by the tobacco industry, has been reviewed by other scientists.

Karen Monaco of the American Lung Association, noting that her organization has been called "the No. 1 enemy of the Tobacco Institute," said her organization has not endorsed Wells' work, but added, "That's not to say it won't happen."

She said association doctors "feel it's just not yet fair to give that kind of an estimate" without more evidence.

She said the controversy seemed almost a replay of disputes starting 22 years ago over the effects of smoking.

A 1964 surgeon general's report on active smoking, which concluded that cigarettes are a health hazard, is credited with greatly boosting the anti-smoking case. A similar report on passive smoking is expected this fall.

James S. Kilpatrick of the Medical College of Virginia, a non-smoker who accepts tobacco industry research funds, says he is preparing a paper that will show the drastic changes in possible results from just a few errors in classification of smokers and non-smokers. For instance, people may claim not to have smoked but actually were smokers for a substantial period of their lives.

Some participants in the debate said Wells' work is bound to increase pressure for laws against smoking in public places.

"Even if the toll is only half that, it's got to help" those bills, said Graham Newson, an aide to Rep. James Scheuer, D-N.Y., who sponsored one of the measures.

Scott Stapf, assistant to the president of the Tobacco Institute, attacked Wells' work vehemently.

"This is nothing more than cocktail-napkin scribbling," Stapf said. "The most telling fact is that the American Lung Association has not endorsed these figures. If there was anything to them, they would be rushing to Wells' side."

Physicist James Repace of the Environmental Protection Agency is co-author of an earlier influential but disputed estimate that tobacco smoke causes 500 to 5,000 annual deaths from lung cancer among non-smokers.

Repace said Wells' work was "as sound as it can be made, given the present data. I've not found any reason to disagree with it."

From eight studies he considered reliable, Wells obtained or calculated the extra risk faced by non-smokers exposed to smoke.

Wells combined those "relative risk" factors along with estimates of the number of non-smokers, their exposure and their death rates from various diseases to calculate an estimate of excess deaths from tobacco smoke.

"I sure was surprised when I first calculated it," he said. "It may be wrong. You never know. If people are looking at this as a proven number, that is not the case."

The study tried to find if the incidence of lung cancer differed among non-smoking spouses of smokers and non-smoking spouses of non-smokers.

The small number of cases means that "though our findings are consistent with passive smoking having no effect on lung cancer risk at all, they do not exclude the possibility of a small increase in risk."

The British researchers based their lung cancer conclusions on 143 patients in all, including two non-cancer patients used as controls for each cancer case.

Multiple fires break at Lorton Reformatory

LORTON, Va. (AP) — Multiple fires, accompanied by prisoner disturbances, broke out in 13 buildings at Lorton Reformatory's Occoquan facility early today, and continued burning six hours later in what was called the worst fire in the prison's history.

The fires were reported at about 12:15 a.m., but firefighters were not able to enter the area until 2:05 a.m., said Fairfax County Fire Department spokesman Leonard Murray.

"We don't enter until all prisoners can be accounted for and secured," said Murray. "By then there was a lot of fire to be fought."

Smoke was still pouring from the buildings at dawn. As crews brought some of the fires under control, another broke out shortly before 6 a.m. Murray said the blaze inflicted severe damage to three buildings. Structures ranging in size from a baseball dugout to large buildings were on fire.

The main blaze appeared to be in an H-shaped building housing an office in the middle, a cell block on one side and a dormitory on the other, Murray said.

The road leading to the overcrowded, medium security facility was closed because of the blaze, said Fairfax police spokeswoman Judy Daily.

"It's still burning pretty bad," said Ms. Daily at about 5 a.m.

Fire units with 120 firefighters from Fairfax and Prince William counties and the District of Columbia were battling the blaze, termed by Murray "the worst fire in Lorton's history."

Cloudy skies in area forecast

From Staff and Wire Reports

Skies will be mostly cloudy today and tonight with a 30 percent chance of thundershowers. Some locally heavy rain is possible.

The low tonight will be in the upper 60s and winds will be from the south at 5-15 mph.

Back in 1964, the temperature hit a record 103 for this day. In 1961, it only reached 64 degrees for a record low.

STATE

A weak high-pressure ridge triggered showers and a few thundershowers over Southeast Texas and the upper Gulf coast today while scattered rain showers dampened the area west of the Pecos River, and forecasters expected more rainfall.

Meanwhile, a low-pressure trough developed over the northern High Plains. The National Weather Service said other showers and thundershowers, some producing heavy rain, developed offshore along the coastal plains in the northwest Gulf.

Skies were partly cloudy across most of West and Southeast Texas, while clear skies covered the rest of the state.

Winds were south to southwest across most of the state at 5 to 15 mph and light and northerly over far West Texas.

NATION

Showers and thundershowers ranged along a front from the South to the Midwest today and heavy rain touched off flash flood watches in Nebraska and Illinois.

Showers and thundershowers also spread across the central Gulf Coast, eastern North Carolina, the northern and central Rockies, west Texas and New Mexico.

Fair weather prevailed in New England, the Great Lakes region, much of the Southeast, the southern Plains and California.

Showers and thundershowers moved across the northern and central Plains as well as along a front from Virginia and western North Carolina across Kentucky and southern Illinois to Missouri.

Flash flood watches were posted in southeast Nebraska and southern Illinois.

Today's forecast called for showers and thundershowers scattered from the mid-Atlantic Coast across Kentucky, the lower Ohio Valley and the middle and upper Mississippi Valley through the Plains; showers and thundershowers scattered from Florida across the lower Gulf Coast region; showers scattered from northwest Oregon through western Washington; and for fair weather to dominate in the Northeast, the eastern Great Lakes region and from the central intermountain region through California and Arizona.

Andrews' Burgen wins at Ranchland

From Staff Reports

Mark Burgen, Andrews, convinced everybody that last month was no fluke by winning the West Texas Chapter PGA Junior tour event at Ranchland Hills Country Club Wednesday.

Less than a month ago, Burgen won the Hogan Park version of the event.

This time he scored a 72 to beat out Cary Reeves of Odessa by three strokes in the 16-18-year-old division. Mike Johnson of Midland took third with 77.

In the 14-15 division, J.C. Hernandez, San Angelo, fired a 76 to take first while Beau Brown, Midland, was second at 77. Keoke Cotner, San Angelo, defeated Tony Lara in a playoff for third after both golfers had tied at 79.

In the 12-13 division, Randy Scharenberg, Midland, posted a 78 for a two-stroke win over Chad Campbell of Andrews. Again a playoff was needed to decide third with John Cantu, San Angelo, outdueling Timothy Segura.

All of the winners and runnersup qualify for the WTPGA Junior Championship at Amarillo's Tascosa CC Aug. 13-14.

Tuesday's event carried with it added incentive, although no one is sure quite how much. The 72 participants at RHCC Tuesday also were qualifying for spots in the Texas State Junior Championships at The Woodlands in Houston July 28-Aug. 1. This was just one of three qualifying tournaments. Another is scheduled today at Amarillo CC and another TBA at San Angelo CC.

However, exactly how many finishers will qualify was still awaiting word from headquarters in Dallas. "It could be one to five," guessed Bob Pritchett, RHCC pro.

Almost every weekday in June and July there is a WTPGA Junior event going on somewhere in West Texas. Today's is at Borger. Midland's Green Tree CC will host a tournament July 18. Midland CC will be host July 25 and Mission CC July 29.

Angels host hottest TL team

By TED BATTLES
Sports Editor

There oughta be a Texas League law that requires Midland to play at home on July Fourth weekend.

For the Angels to be on the road over the Fourth is unpatriotic. Besides, it's downright boring on the Fourth without a ball game, at least for the baseball fan.

Midland Manager Joe Maddon might agree after what happened to his Haloed Ones in San Antonio, five losses in six games, a disaster which knocked the California farmhands out of the battle for first place, temporarily at least.

And what the long ordeal did to Maddon's disposition is better left to the privacy of the clubhouse.

If Maddon and the Angels are looking for any relief tonight (7:30 p.m.), Angels Stadium may be the wrong place to be.

Shreveport's Captains not only lead the Texas League East, but the 13-5 San Francisco Giant farmhands are the hottest team in the league, boasting the best second half record, East or West.

It's certainly not the type of position a team seeking to regain its equilibrium after wholesale losses of key personnel to higher leagues would prefer to face.

And, as if Maddon didn't have troubles enough, there was more bad news.

DH Kevin King was named Texas League Player of the Week for June 23-30. In 30 at bats, King, beginning to find his groove, had 14 hits, two doubles and six home runs. He had 11 runs batted in, including a lone game winner.

Travelers' Litton lifts East to win

TL All-Stars

SHREVEPORT, La. (AP) — Arkansas' Greg Litton says he was looking for a chance to atone after taking the collar with an 0-for-3 night when he stepped to the plate with the score tied in the bottom of the eighth during Wednesday's Texas League All-Star Game.

"I was just hoping to make up for earlier in the game. Two strikeouts and grounding into a double play isn't a lot of fun. I was just hoping to get another chance," Litton said after slapping a game winning single off Jay Aldrich to give the East a 4-3 victory over the West.

Litton worked Aldrich to a 2-2 count and then connected.

"I was trying to look for a fast ball in that situation, but he had thrown me five straight fast balls up to that point. I had in the back of my mind that he would probably throw me a slider."

Litton's hit sent Arkansas' Tom Amante home and made winners of pitcher Jeff Innis and Coach Mike Cabbage, both of the Jackson Mets. It was Cabbage's first triumph in three all-star attempts.

"I was just happy to finally get a win," he said.

Tulsa's Javier Ortiz opened the game-winning rally with a double off the wall in left. After retiring Arkansas' Ed Tanner on a fly ball, El Paso's Aldrich set up his own demise by tossing Amante's comeback over the head of El Paso third baseman Jesus Alfaro.

Ortiz scored on the error and Amante, who took second, then came around on Litton's only hit of the game.

Spud easily wins affection of kids

By ERIC SCHURER
Sports Writer

He's come a long, long way since his days at Midland College, but Spud Webb still takes time to visit friends, and make new ones, at his old school.

Webb, the National Basketball Association's littles star, added 32 wide-eyed youngsters Wednesday to his long list of friends and admirers in the Tall City.

The kids attending coach Jerry Stone's summer basketball camp were thrilled at the long anticipated visit from Webb, last season's NBA rookie sensation.

But it didn't take much from Midland College's most-famous alumnus to win over this crowd.

A couple of double-pump slam dunks.

A hint of a smile as he relates tales of his long road to the NBA.

And a serious pitch about the dangers of drugs, staying in school and the wisdom of listening to elders.

THE THROG, which by morning's end had attracted more than the 8-to-16-year olds in attendance at the camp, was in the palm of his hand.

Webb has been able to follow his own advice, and his reward, quite simply, has been fame and fortune.

Ever since overwhelming a partisan Dallas crowd Feb. 8 to win the NBA's Slam Dunk contest, Webb has been caught in a whirlwind of publicity — all of it favorable.

"It's hard to describe what's happened to me in the last year. It's all happened so suddenly," Spud said of a year that began by being cut in rookie camp by the Detroit Pistons. "I don't think I've changed. I mean, every guy grows up, matures. You learn to take responsibility into your own hands, to take care of things in your family and in business. I was just in the right place at the right time."

Stone, Spud's coach for two years at MC, gives Spud much more responsibility for creating his own success.

"The credit for Spud's success belongs to Spud. He has a lot of pride and desire to be the best," Stone said. "Spud is Spud. That's all you can say. I'm just glad we all got to see him play for the time that we did."

Anthony 'Spud' Webb has the attention of the kids participating in Jerry Stone's basketball camp at Midland College.

Cowboys' Jones picks retirement

THOUSAND OAKS, Calif. (AP) — James Jones, a five-year veteran running back expected to report to the Dallas Cowboys training camp Sunday, instead announced his retirement.

Jones, a third-round Dallas draft choice in 1980, had been troubled throughout his career with injuries. He missed two-and-a-half seasons with knee problems, but played in special situations for the Cowboys last season.

Jones telephoned head coach Tom Landry Wednesday afternoon with his decision.

"My left knee has been bothering me throughout the off-season," Jones said. "I finally decided the time had come to call it quits and get on with the rest of my life."

"I feel good knowing I didn't give up when I was hurt and missed so much playing time."

Detroit right-hander Eric King tied a major-league record for a pitcher in a nine-inning game with six putouts. He shares the record with Bert Blyleven, who was the opposing pitcher as the Tigers beat the Minnesota Twins 5-1. Blyleven had six putouts on June 24, 1984.

The New York Yankees, 46-38 overall, are only 10-19 when the opposing starter is a left-hander.

Changes hit heroes of '84

Lewis loses 100 meters; Moses slows down

MOSCOW (AP) — They were the heroes of summer, the gold-medal stars of the 1984 Olympics.

Two years ago, Edwin Moses was skimming over hurdles and winning his second Olympic championship. At the same time, Carl Lewis was sprinting, leaping and passing the relay baton, a man winning four Olympic titles for the first time in 48 years.

Things have changed for both athletes since then, and it was apparent Wednesday night at the inaugural Goodwill Games.

The final day of track competition at the international festival was highlighted by Ben Johnson's victory over Lewis in the 100 meters in 9.95 seconds — the fastest ever at sea-level.

The United States and the Soviet Union women's basketball teams both registered closer-than-expected victories, and will meet tonight in a showdown of unbeaten squads.

And for the fifth time a world record was set, this time in cycling. A Soviet team lowered the world mark in the four-kilometer pursuit to four minutes, 12.830 seconds.

MOSES, STARTING a comeback from almost two years of back and leg problems, sped away from the field to win his 11th consecutive 400-meter hurdles race in 47.94 seconds.

It was nowhere near his world record of 47.02, and even farther away from the sub-47 second clocking that he set as his goal. According to Moses, however, for someone with his recent experiences, it was fine.

"I was glad to be able to run under 48 seconds," he said. "I knew that I could come in here and win. I was expecting to have a good race. With the training I've had over the last two weeks, I felt I could do well."

Chidi Innot of Nigeria was second in 100 with Lewis, clocked at 10.06, third behind Johnson, a Canadian who now has beaten the American three consecutive times and just loves it.

"When I beat Carl the last time, he was complaining. This time I beat him pretty good," Johnson said. "I just wanted to see what he will say this time."

Lewis said Johnson had much the better night.

"I didn't get off to a good start and Johnson ran a great race," he said. Johnson, who finished third in the 1984 Olympics, blasted out of the starting blocks and finished just .02 seconds off Calvin Smith's world mark of 9.93. The time tied Jimmie

Royals end skid with 3-0 victory

Associated Press

It didn't have the same national impact as the birth of Drew Williams Sabers last October, but the Kansas City Royals have good reason to remember the day Brandon Neal Jackson was born.

Last October, a day after his son was born, Bret Saberhagen pitched the Royals to an 11-0 victory over the St. Louis Cardinals and the world championship.

And Wednesday night, some 15 hours after 8-pound, 8-ounce Brandon first saw the light of day, the Royals saw some light at the end of the tunnel when proud papa Danny Jackson teamed with Bud Black on a three-hitter, blanking the Baltimore Orioles 3-0 and snapping Kansas City's club record 11-game losing streak.

"I'd almost forgotten how good it feels to win," said infielder Greg Pryor.

It was the first victory for the Royals since June 26, when they beat Oakland 9-2. That was almost as long as Jody Jackson was overdue. She had gone to the hospital five times with false labor, as doctors revised their estimate of Brandon's arrival from June 24 to July 2. So what's an extra week?

"I'd have to say my wife was more overdue than the team," Jackson said with a grin. "But I know how great it feels for everybody to get this losing streak behind us."

Jackson, 5-6, allowed all three Baltimore hits while walking three and striking out three. Black came in with two on and none out in the seventh and pitched hitless ball the rest of the way.

"I'd had about three hours sleep, and that's not much on a day you're pitching," Jackson said. "I got home about 1 o'clock (Tuesday night) and took Jody to the hospital about 3:30. The baby was born a little before 7 a.m. I got home about 9 and slept until about noon. I was beginning to run out of gas out there."

American League

Manager Dick Howser said, "We had a great night of pitching. Any time you hold a club like that to three hits you've done a good job."

Angels 6, Brewers 1
Don Sutton, 8-5, and Donnie Moore combined on a six-hitter as California won its fourth straight and opened a 1½-game lead over second-place Texas in the AL West. Milwaukee has dropped four in a row and 12 of 17.

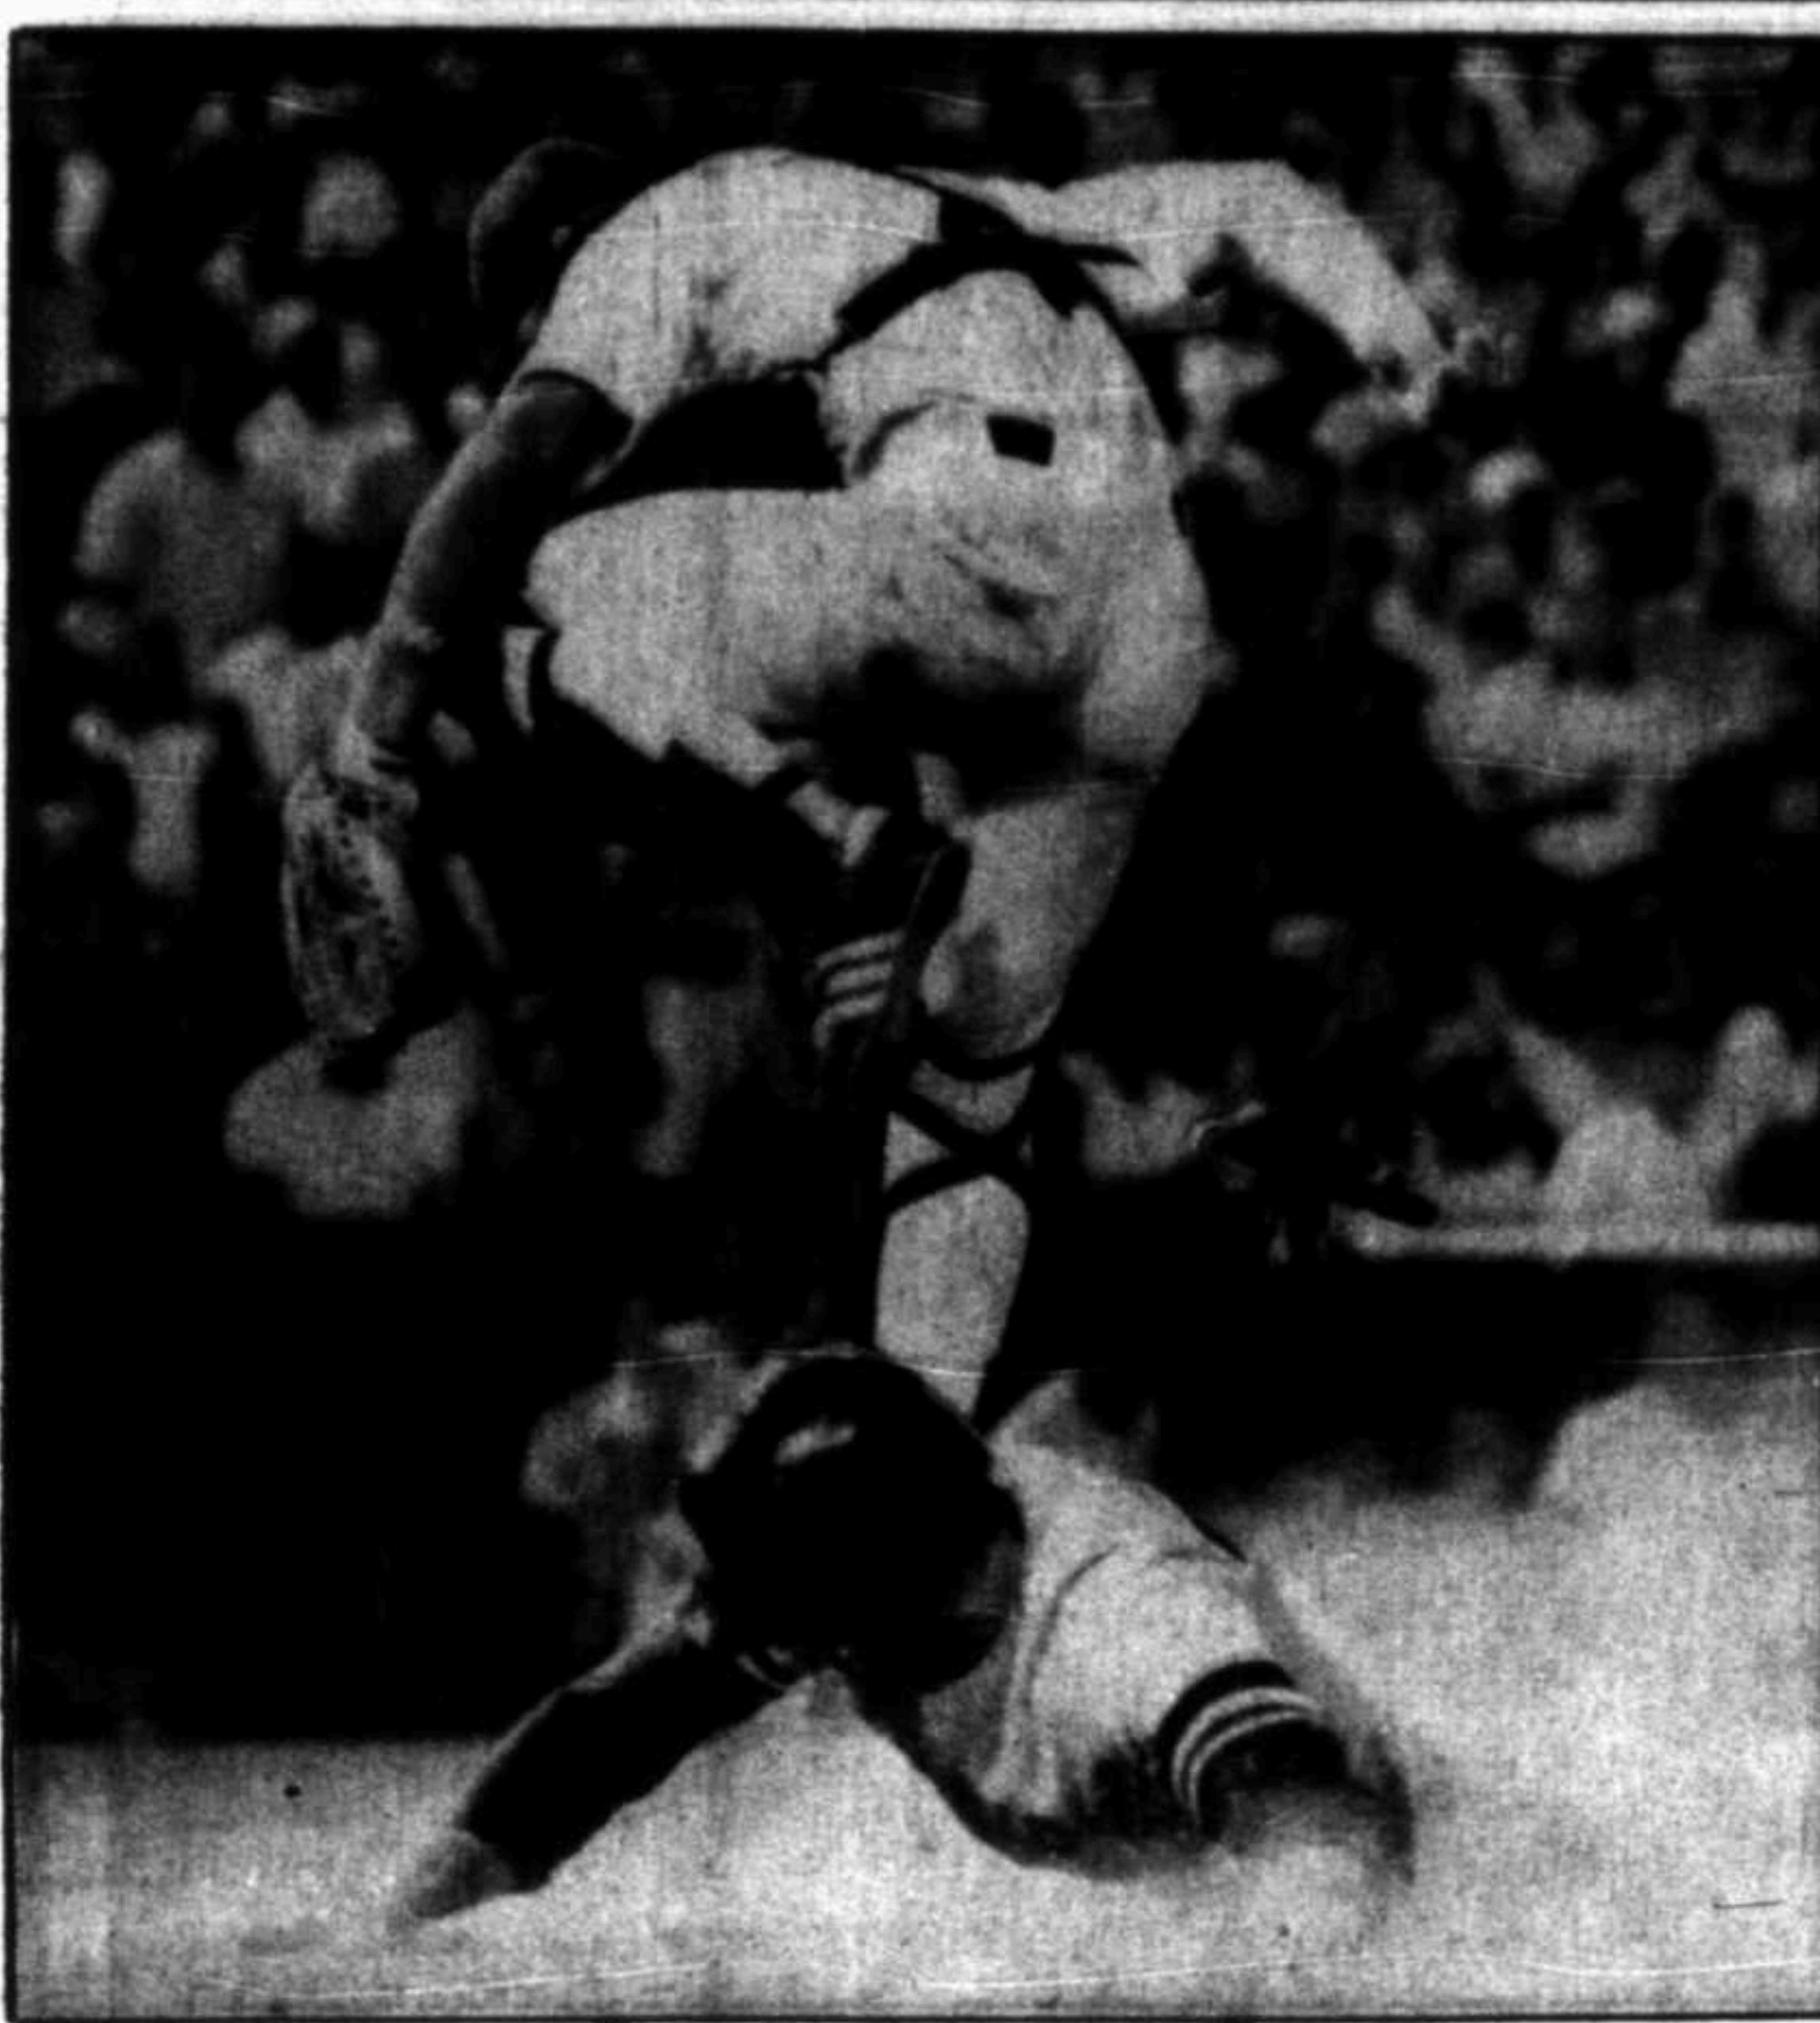

The victory was the sixth straight and 303rd of his career for Sutton, who allowed one run on four hits in 7 2/3 innings. Milwaukee starter Teddy Higuera, 10-7, gave up four runs in 3 2/3 innings.

California scored twice in the second inning on Bob Boone's RBI single and a sacrifice fly by Gary Pettis. The Angels added two more runs in the fourth on Rick Burleson's sacrifice fly and Wally Joyner's single after three walks loaded the bases. Burleson had an RBI single in the ninth.

Red Sox 7, A's 6
Third baseman Wade Boggs atoned for two costly errors with three hits and Boston scored six times in the fourth inning to erase a 4-0 deficit. Rookie Jeff Sellers, 3-3, survived three Boston errors and scattered six hits over 7 1/3 innings. Joe Sambuto retired all five batters he faced for his ninth save.

Boggs, who raised his major league-leading average to .373, drove in a run with a single in the big third inning, singled in the fourth and doubled home a run in the sixth. Dave Kingman and Alfredo Griffin homered for Oakland.

Indians 6, White Sox 3
Joe Carter hit a two-run double and Mel Hall followed with a two-run homer in the fifth inning while Julio Franco went 5-for-5 and 47-year-old Phil Niekro scattered six hits for his third consecutive victory, evening his record at 6-6.

Cleveland entered the fifth trailing 3-2. Tony Bernazard and Franco started the rally with one-out singles and Carter's double chased loser Richard Dotson, 7-8. Hall, who had an RBI grounder earlier in the game, greeted Bill Dawley with his 15th homer.

Tigers 7, Twins 0
Jack Morris, 8-6, pitched a six-hitter, Lance Parrish hit two home runs and Darnell Coles also homered. Parrish's homers gave him 21 for the season, tying him for the major-league lead with Oakland's Jose Canseco and Toronto's Jesse Barfield.

"It's too bad we don't play like this all the time," Parrish said. "Things have gotten away from us this year. I'm not thinking of home runs. I'm just trying to have a good year to help the Tigers have a good year."

Blue Jays 6, Mariners 5
Cliff Johnson keyed Toronto's three-run rally in the eighth inning with a two-run pinch-hit single. Tony Fernandez opened the eighth with a double and the Blue Jays loaded the bases against Mike Moore, 5-8, on a single by Rance Mulliniks and a walk to Willie Upshaw.

George Bell greeted reliever Pete Ladd with a sacrifice fly and the other runners moved up on a throwing error by center fielder John Moses. After Jesse Barfield was intentionally walked to load the bases, Matt Young came on and struck out pinch hitter Buck Martinez. Johnson then singled to drive in the tying and winning runs.

Dave Winfield, who wasn't in the starting lineup, pinch-hit for Washington in the Yankee eighth and doubled home a run that made it 5-3 and proved to be the decisive run when the Rangers got a run off Righetti in the ninth on singles by Gary Ward and Pete O'Brien and Pete Incaviglia's run-scoring double.

Larry Parrish was walked intentionally to load the bases with none out, and Paciorek was sent in to hit for Ruben Sierra.

"It didn't look too good," said Piniella. "Then we get the double play and Dave throws a perfect pitch to Slaught and it's over."

Youmans Ks 11 to tip Astros, 2-1

Associated Press

Floyd Youmans doesn't have to be the hottest hurler from Hillsborough High to be a first-class pitcher. It just happens that right now he is both.

Youmans won his fifth straight decision Wednesday night with an overpowering two-hitter, leading the Montreal Expos to a 2-1 victory over the Houston Astros. He struck out 11 batters, matching a season high.

Youmans' ex-high school teammate, Dwight Gooden, capped a month of so-so pitching with a down-right bad outing as his New York Mets lost to the Cincinnati Reds 11-1.

Thirty-four days ago, Youmans was 4-5 with a 5.91 earned-run average, 45 strikeouts and 37 walks. In 56.1 innings, he had given up 37 earned runs.

Now the 22-year-old right-hander is a 9-5 pitcher with a 4.13 ERA. In his last seven starts — which include two no-decisions — Youmans has given up 12 earned runs over 50.1 innings, a 2.15 ERA.

Over the same stretch, Gooden is 2-2 with a 4.25 ERA, 30 strikeouts and 23 walks.

Youmans' two-hitter Wednesday and the one-hitter on June 8 that started his streak are the Expos' last two complete games.

"I'm relaxing more and that's why I'm cutting down on my walks," said Youmans, who walked four batters Wednesday. "I went through a period of trying to do more than I could, but now I'm just trying to do what my abilities allow and I'm getting great results."

Reds 11, Mets 1
The Mets were swept in a three-game series for the first time this season. The Reds gave Dwight Gooden, 10-4, his quickest exit of the season.

"I had no rhythm," Gooden said. "I had no curveball or fastball today, either. I had nothing. A game like this you have to forget."

Rookie Wade Rowden went 5-for-5 with three RBI and Sal Betera hit a three-run homer for Cincinnati. Tom Browning, 7-7, allowed five hits over eight innings for the victory.

"I didn't know what to expect facing Dwight Gooden, but he gave me some pretty good pitches to hit," Rowden said.

The Reds had 17 hits off four New York pitchers as they won for the eighth time in 10 games. They batted out 45 hits in the three-game sweep.

Gooden retired the game's first two batters, then gave up four runs in the first inning on four straight hits, including an RBI double by Rowden and a two-run single by Dave Concepcion. A fourth run scored when George Foster dropped Butera's liner for an error.

Dodgers 8, Cardinals 2
Fernando Valenzuela, 11-6, pitched a five-hitter and became the NL's third 11-game winner, rebounding from two straight losses.

He struck out nine Cardinals and walked one, losing his shutout in the ninth inning. Valenzuela also had two of the Dodgers' 15 hits. He doubled in the eighth and scored the Dodgers' seventh run.

Jeff Hamilton's three-run double keyed Los Angeles' four-run first inning. Hamilton, a rookie, had three hits in the game. Enos Cabell had three hits and three RBI.

Braves 7, Phillies 3

Doyle Alexander, making his first start since being traded from Toronto, scattered eight hits over seven innings, helping Atlanta end a five-game losing streak. He also had two singles, his first hits since 1981 when he pitched for San Francisco.

"They just happened to hit my bat," he said.

Dale Murphy's streak of playing in 740 consecutive games, the longest among active major leaguers, ended. Braves manager Chuck Tanner and Murphy said they agreed the slumping Murphy — 7 for his last 39 — needed a day off.

"I just sat and rooted. I walked around a little," Murphy said. "The streak was always on my mind. It's better not to have it hanging over my head. It's better for the team," he said.

Terry Harper hit his sixth homer for Atlanta. The Braves' Ken Griffey had two hits and his cross-league hitting streak reached 19 games.

Cubs 4, Giants 3

Chili Davis homered in the ninth, pulling the Giants even, but Chicago loaded the bases in the 10th, then scored the winning run when Terry Francona hit a sacrifice fly.

The Cubs pulled a triple play in the fifth inning. Davis led off with a walk and went to third on a single by Chris Brown. Mike Aldrete then lined to pitcher Ed Lynch, who threw to third to catch Davis. Third baseman Davey Lopes fired to first to get Brown, who was running on the play.

The triple play was the first for Chicago since last Aug. 8 in St. Louis, and was the first the Giants hit into since May 31, 1984, in the 14th inning of a 23-inning game against the Mets.

Pirates 6, Padres 4

Joe Orsulak homered and scored three runs and Johnny Ray drove in two runs with a home run and double. Orsulak broke a 3-3 tie in the fifth inning with his second homer of the year.

Pirates starter Mike Bielecki, 6-5, went the first five innings for the victory. Don Robinson got his second save.

Terry Kennedy homered for San Diego.

Righetti sneaks one by Slaught to beat Rangers

ARLINGTON (AP) — New York Yankee reliever Dave Righetti said he doesn't fool too many people but he tricked Texas Ranger catcher Don Slaught to save a ball game.

Righetti, with the Yanks leading 5-4 on Wednesday night, faced Slaught with runners on second and third and two outs in the bottom of the ninth. He caught Slaught looking at a called third strike to end the threat and the game.

"He wasn't getting around on the fastball," said Righetti, who pitched three innings and earned his 19th save. "And we figured he'd be looking fastball again."

"I threw him a slider that was more like a slurve and I think I just fooled him. I usually don't fool too many people."

Before fanning Slaught to end the game, Righetti faced pinch-hitter Tom Paciorek with the bases loaded and none out and induced him into bouncing into a pitcher-to-home-to-first double play.

"It's really more than you can ask for in that situation," said Righetti, who preserved the victory for right-hander Bob Tewksbury, 6-3. "Paciorek could just as easily have hit a gapper to beat us."

The losing pitcher was Jose Guzman, 8-9, who went 5 2/3 innings and allowed four runs on eight hits and five walks.

Two of the walks preceded Mike

Pagliari's 19th home run of the season, which gave the Yankees a 3-1 lead in the fourth.

"Guzman never really got into the flow," said Ranger manager Bobby Valentine. "He was throwing well to every other batter. Then he got in trouble in the fourth and threw a high fastball to Pagliarulo."

After the Rangers tied it at 3-3 in the fifth, Claudell Washington got his first game-winning RBI as a Yankee with a two-out RBI single in the sixth.

"Claudell has done a great job for us since the trade," said Yankee manager Lou Piniella, who was ejected shortly after Washington's hit.

O'Grady loses suspension appeal

PONTE VEDRA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — A three-man Appeals Committee has upheld Mac O'Grady's six-event suspension and $5,000 fine imposed by PGA Tour Commissioner Deane Beman, the PGA announced Wednesday.

In a letter to O'Grady's attorney Steve Novak and the PGA, Appeals Committee chairman E.M. de Windt said the board found statements made by the golfer about PGA officials, players and a tournament sponsor "did in fact constitute conduct unbecoming a professional golfer."

De Windt also said the board's actions were not "discriminatory or arbitrary" against O'Grady and that the penalties were "reasonable in light of the extreme and repeated nature of the attacks" against PGA officials.

Novak said he and his client will probably decide whether to seek an injunction in federal court to block the penalties, scheduled to begin on July 14. The suspension will not affect O'Grady's participation in this week's Anheuser-Busch Classic in Williamsburg, Va.

O'Grady has exhausted his appeals within the PGA.

"In speaking with my client, we have decided that for a few days we are going to sit and think the situation over and hold off and decide whether or not we should proceed with our alternative legal remedies," said Novak, who said he was informed of the board's decision on Monday.

O'Grady, who was originally notified of the suspension in a letter from Beman on April 21, has been at odds with the commissioner since the golfer was accused of verbally abusing a tournament volunteer at the 1984 USF&G Classic in New Orleans.

Beman fined O'Grady, who refused to pay and then subsequently had some of his earnings withheld to cover the penalty.

Jets owner says there was no N.Y. conspiracy

NEW YORK (AP) — New York Jets owner Leon Hess says there was no "New York conspiracy" to keep the United States Football League out of the city.

The USFL contends in its $1.69 billion antitrust suit against the National Football League that the NFL conspired to keep the younger league out of New York by having Hess take preliminary steps to move to the city, then ultimately deciding to stay at the New Jersey Meadowlands.

Hess, however, testified Wednesday that his efforts to move the Jets back to New York were foiled by problems with permits, failure to agree on Shea Stadium improvements and the prohibitive cost of a new domed stadium.

"I didn't want to go to New Jersey if the city would build a stadium," Hess testified in the USFL's $1.69 billion antitrust suit against the NFL in U.S. District Court.

In his effort to return to New York, Hess also said he included an option in his 25-year contract with the Meadowlands Sports Complex in East Rutherford, N.J.

He said the option gave him the opportunity from Feb. 1 to Feb. 15, 1986 to announce the intention to move out of New Jersey two years after the Jets first began playing there after moving from Shea Stadium in Queens.

If Hess chose to go back to New York, he would remain for three more years in New Jersey, but would have had to find another home by 1989, he said.

Earlier in the trial, Vincent Tese, chairman of the Urban Development Corp., testified that he tried to put together a viable package for Hess, but later formed the opinion that Hess and the Jets never intended to come back to New York.

Joyner wins vote for first base

NEW YORK (AP) — As far as the All-Star Game is concerned, Wally Joyner picked the right year to be a rookie.

For the first time since 1970, when the fans regained the vote for the starting teams, rookies were on the ballot. And Joyner, the hard-hitting freshman first baseman with the California Angels, beat out an illustrious cast for the starting spot on the American League team, which was announced Wednesday.

"I've watched it almost every year," the 24-year-old Joyner said of the mid-season classic after attracting 917,972 votes to beat out the Yankees' Don Mattingly, the AL's Most Valuable Player in 1985 and a .337 hitter this year. "To think I'm going to be there is something special."

"Playing with the greatest players is just an honor. I don't even have to do well, it's just an honor to be there."

Joyner got into the lineup for next Tuesday's game at Houston with a .298 average, 20 homers and 66 runs batted in when the vote was announced.

The Angels were so sure of Joyner's abilities that they did not resign seven-time batting champion Rod Carew during the off-season and handed the first base job to the rookie.

"I'm just fortunate to be playing on this team this year," said Joyner, who also had more votes than Eddie Murray of Baltimore and Kent Hrbek of Minnesota, both of whom are having fine seasons. "Everyone has accepted me and helped me. Playing with all these veterans, I've already got a mindful of knowledge."

"I think I've outdone myself. It's the finest ball team I've ever been on. I can't tell you how fun it is to come to the ballpark."

JOINING JOYNER in the starting lineup will be second baseman Lou Whitaker of Detroit, shortstop Cal Ripken of Baltimore, third baseman George Brett of Kansas City, catcher Lance Parrish of Detroit and outfielders Kirby Puckett of Minnesota and Rickey Henderson of the Yankees.

Puckett and Joyner are the only non-repeaters from last year's team. Puckett edged out Reggie Jackson of California for the last starting berth with a late surge of voting support. In his third season and batting .342 with 16 homers and 49 RBI, Puckett had 736,328 votes, beating Jackson by 17,189.

Ripken, hitting .297 with 12 homers and 46 RBI, collected the most votes, 1,486,806 — more than one million votes ahead of Alan Trammell of Detroit.

Brett had 84,903 more votes than Wade Boggs of Boston, who leads the major leagues in hitting. It marked the 11th consecutive year that Brett, batting .291, earned a starting job.

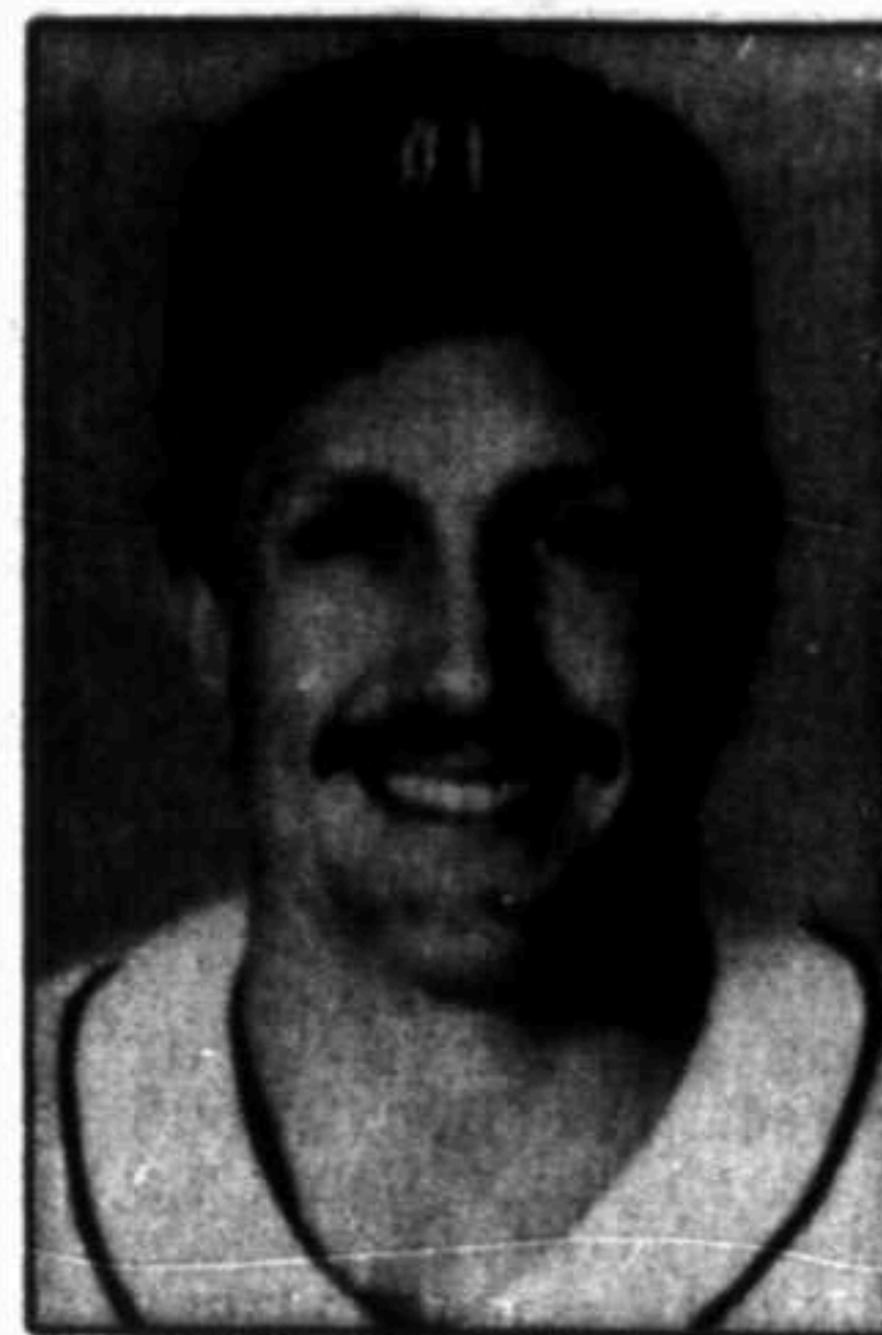

Whitaker, a .271 hitter, is the first AL second baseman to start three straight All-Star games since Carew made six consecutive starts from 1970-75. He had 633,399 votes to 526,714 for Willie Randolph of the Yankees.

Parrish, batting .262 with 21 homers and 59 RBI, easily became the starting catcher for the third straight year, though he missed the 1985 game with an injury.

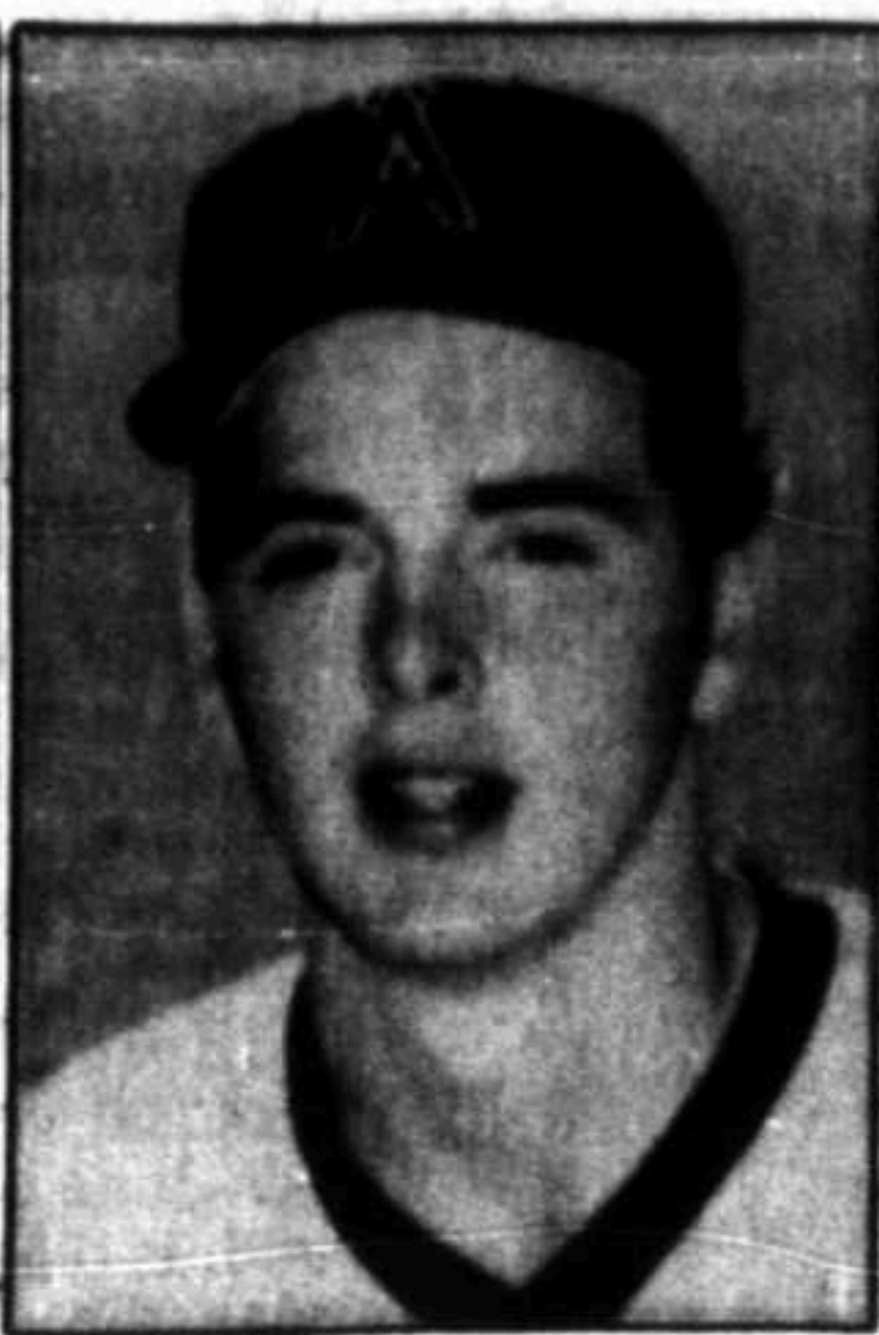

Henderson, hitting .280 prior to Wednesday's games with 15 home runs and 49 stolen bases, drew the most votes among the outfielders with 1,027,144. Winfield, batting just .230 and periodically benched in recent days, had 896,550 votes to gain his sixth All-Star start, including four straight.

OUTFIELDER DARRYL Strawberry, one of three New York Mets voted to the starting lineup, was the leading vote-getter for the National League All-Star team, which was announced today by the Commissioner's Office.

Strawberry attracted 1,619,511 votes, more than 135,000 ahead of the next most popular player in the fan balloting — his teammate, catcher Gary Carter.

All-Stars

er Gary Carter.

The third Mets starter is first baseman Keith Hernandez.

Also selected to the starting team for next Tuesday's game at Houston were second baseman Ryne Sandberg of Chicago, shortstop Ozzie Smith of St. Louis, third baseman Mike Schmidt of Philadelphia and outfielders Dale Murphy of Atlanta and Tony Gwynn of San Diego.

Strawberry was hitting .295 with 13 home runs and 45 runs batted in through Wednesday. He is the first NL player ever to start All-Star Games in his first three full seasons in the major leagues.

Hernandez, hitting .286, won his eighth consecutive Gold Glove Award last season and will be making his first All-Star start.

Carter is hitting only .241 but has 13 homers and 57 RBI. He won his sixth consecutive selection with 1,486,141 votes. Since 1970, when the fans regained the vote for the starting teams, only Carter, Johnny Bench and Ted Simmons have been selected as starting catchers for the National League.

Murphy earned his fifth straight starting assignment with a .273 average, 14 homers and 36 RBI. Gwynn held off a late surge by Montreal's Tim Lincecum to win by 82,848 votes for his debut as a starter. Gwynn, the 1984 NL batting champ, is hitting .335.

Sandberg makes his second start at second base. He has a .276 average with 43 RBI. Smith makes his fourth straight start at shortstop and joined Strawberry, Carter, Sandberg and Murphy in attracting more than one million votes. Smith is batting .290 and is known as the "Wizard of Oz" for his fielding exploits.

Schmidt, at .285 with 17 homers and 61 RBI, was a starter at third base from 1979-84. He began this season splitting his time between first and third base but has been mostly full-time at third for most of the season.

The managers — Whitey Herzog of St. Louis for the NL, Dick Howser of Kansas City for the AL — will announce their pitchers and substitutes for the 28-player squads on Friday.

Dollar slips

LONDON (AP) — The dollar posted modest losses against most other major currencies in thin European trading early today. Gold bullion prices also fell.

Currency trading continued to be dominated by conflicting speculation over a cut in U.S. interest rates, which could hurt the dollar, and the possibility of coordinated action by central banks, which could support the currency.

Evidence of slowing U.S. economic growth has fueled speculation that the Federal Reserve Board will soon reduce the U.S. discount rate in an effort to stimulate the economy, said a trader in Frankfurt, West Germany.

Midmorning dollar rates compared with levels in Europe late Wednesday:

-2.1740 West German marks, down from 2.1780

-1.7750 Swiss francs, down from 1.7806

-6.9765 French francs, down from 6.9925

-2.4468 Dutch guilders, down from 2.4570

-1.492.00 Italian lire, down from 1.493.50

-1.37805 Canadian dollars, down from 1.3815

The British pound edged down to $1.5248 from $1.5263.

The dollar rose marginally in Tokyo, closing at 160.30 Japanese yen, up from 160.10 yen Wednesday. Later, in London, the dollar was quoted at 160.50 yen.

Panhandle Eastern rejects bid

HOUSTON (AP) — Panhandle Eastern Corp. has rejected a $2.25 billion unsolicited takeover bid from West Texas oilmen Cyril Wagner Jr. and Jack E. Brown, the company announced today.

Panhandle Eastern's board of directors on Tuesday unanimously rejected as inadequate the bid by Wagner and Brown's wholly-owned Star Partners partnership to acquire the company, spokesman Mack Price said today.

Wagner and Brown could not immediately be reached for comment at their Midland offices.

Star Partners proposed June 27 to acquire all of Panhandle Eastern's 44.9 million outstanding common shares for $30 cash plus preferred stock designed to have a trading value of $20 on a fully distributed basis.

The company's stock had risen sharply when rumors circulated about potential takeover bids, and traded at about $48 a share on the New York Stock Exchange immediately following the Star Partners bid. Panhandle Eastern on Tuesday closed at $47.25 a share, down 1/2 cent from the previous session, in composite New York Stock Exchange trading.

Panhandle Eastern, a diversified energy concern, is considered a relatively attractive target because of its Anadarko Petroleum Corp. subsidiary, which holds a major stake in the rich Hugoton natural-gas field centered in southwestern Kansas.

Since 1983, Panhandle Eastern has adopted several measures designed to thwart hostile takeover bids.

The Wagner and Brown proposal was the oilmen's latest attempt to purchase a major natural gas-transmission company. The pair also control a Midland-based energy partnership that bears their name.

Panhandle Eastern officials have said they believed Wagner and Brown already had acquired some of the company's shares, but that the size of the stake was unknown.

If Wagner and Brown bought more than a 5 percent stake in the company they would be required to disclose their interest to the Securities and Exchange Commission within 10 days of reaching that threshold.

Airline merger gets okay from government

WASHINGTON (AP) — Texas Air Corp. and Eastern Airlines must show that a corporate merger would not squelch competition in the Northeast corridor prior to final approval, the Department of Transportation ruled.

The department, in tentatively approving the merger that would create the nation's largest airline, emphasized concerns Wednesday of a potential monopolization of the Northeast "shuttle" corridor serving New York, Boston and Washington, D.C.

Before Texas Air wins final approval in its bid to buy Eastern for $676 million, certain conditions will have to be met, the department said.

New York Air, which along with Continental Airlines is owned by Texas Air, competes vigorously in the Northeast with Eastern. The Justice Department's anti-trust division had raised concerns that the merger could create a monopoly in the region.

"While it appears the merger would not result in a monopoly or lessen competition substantially in any region of the United States," the department said in statement, "there are a number of outstanding issues which must be addressed."

In response, Texas Air in May agreed to sell some landing and take-off rights, operated by New York Air in Washington and New York, to Pan American World Airways. The Justice Department then withdrew its objections.

But the Transportation Department said Wednesday that Pan Am's existing slots and facilities combined with those it is purchasing from Texas Air, "may be inadequate to support a competitive shuttle at LaGuardia" airport in New York.

In addition, the effective date of the Eastern-Texas Air takeover would have to be postponed until Texas Air's landing rights sale to Pan Am is completed, the department said.

Federal Reserve may be delaying interest rate cut

WASHINGTON (AP) — A new cut in interest rates by the Federal Reserve Board appears imminent, but the Fed may be delaying the announcement to avoid giving the impression of bowing to political pressure, financial analysts are suggesting.

Recent probes by Senate Republican Leader Bob Dole of Kansas and White House chief of staff Donald T. Regan to reduce the "discount" rate may have produced the opposite psychological effect, suggested economist David Jones of Aubrey G. Lantson and Co., a business that deals in government securities.

"You have to know his personality," Jones said, speaking of the strong-willed Fed chairman, Paul Volcker. "The last thing he'd want to be perceived as doing is to cave in to that kind of political pressure."

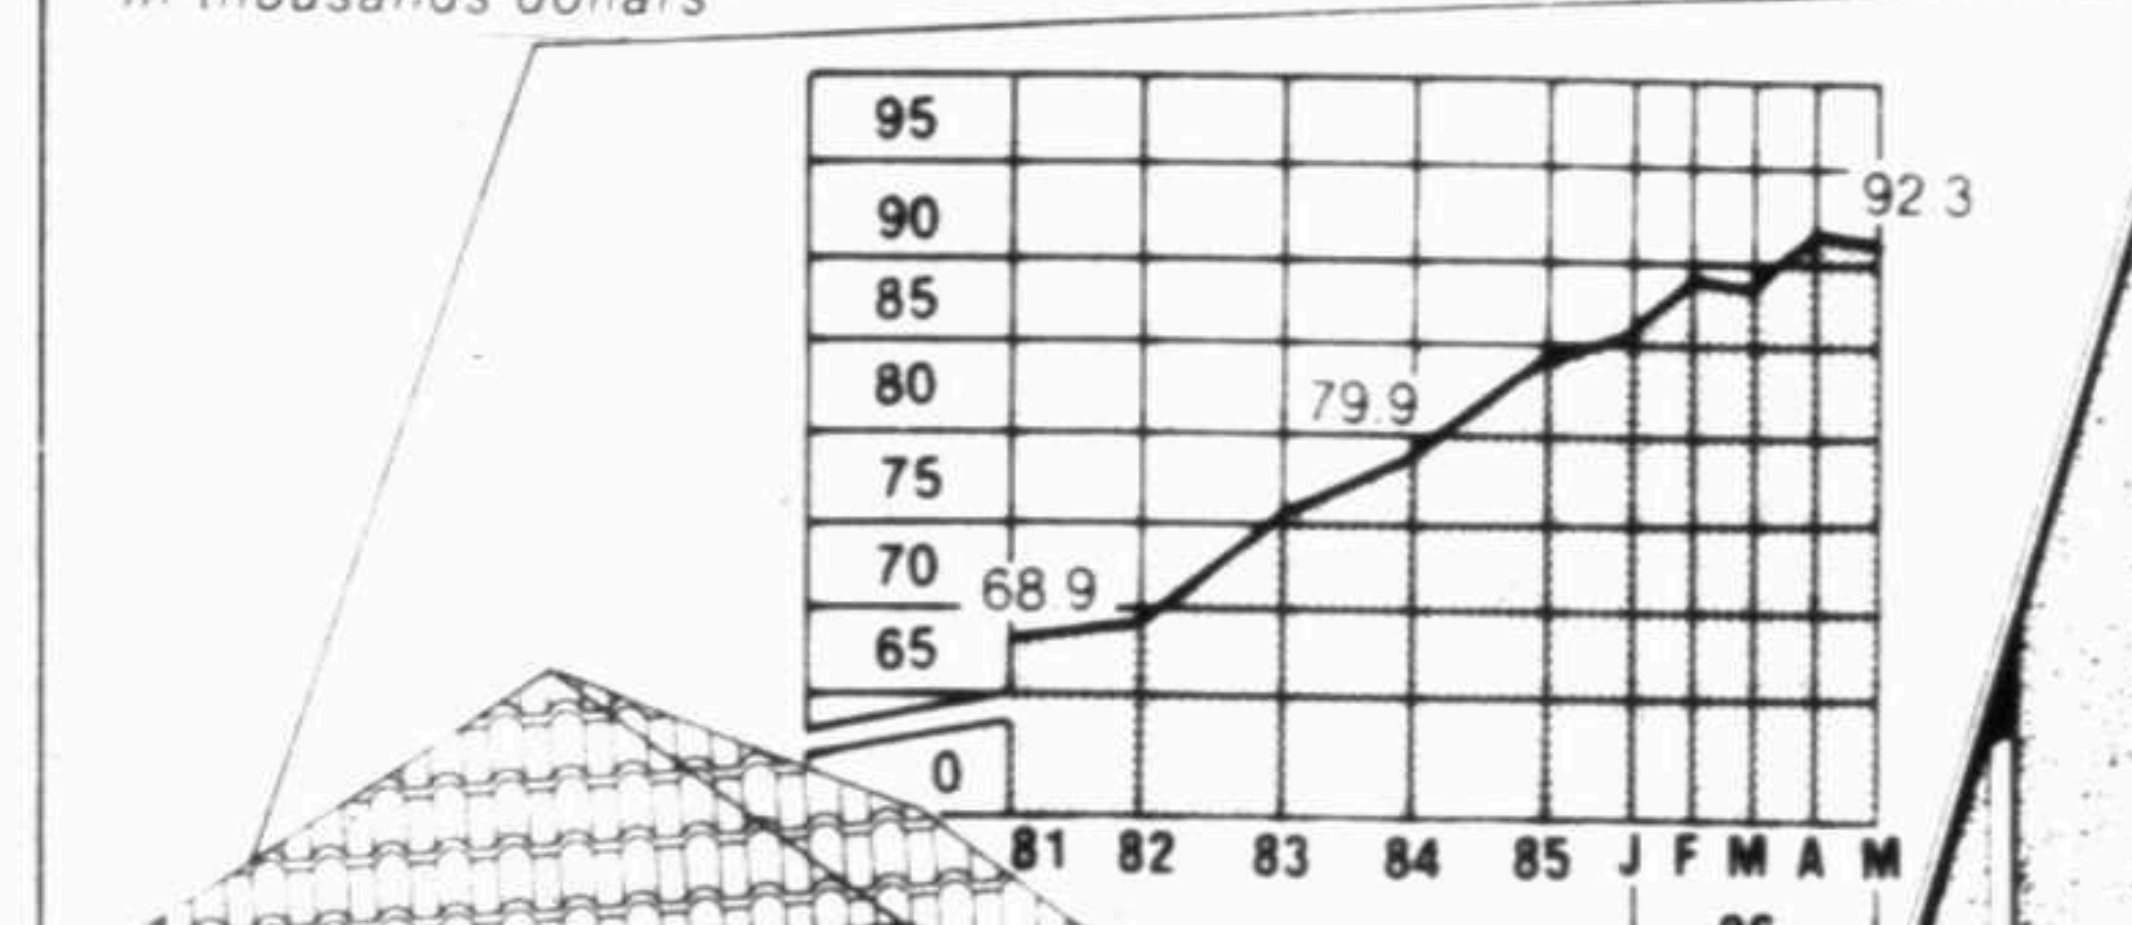

Both Dole and Regan within the past few days have urged the Fed to reduce the bellwether discount rate, which has already been reduced twice this year. The rate now stands at 6.5 percent.

A lowering of the discount rate, which is the rate the Fed charges for loans to other banks, usually paves

Rising home prices

The median price for a new single-family home has been rising at about $4,000 per year since 1983, and has increased by almost $6,000 since January, 1986.

MEDIAN PRICE OF NEW SINGLE-FAMILY HOMES

the way for reductions in many other interest rates throughout the economy, including the prime rate — the rate commercial banks charge their most credit-worthy corporate customers.

Jones claimed that the Fed remains deeply divided on the discount rate issue, and that Volcker is in no rush to lower rates at this time — at least not without coordinating the reductions with similar moves by central banks of West Germany and Japan.

But other analysts seem in agreement that a reduction of the discount rate to at least 6 percent is a near certainty.

"It may be by a full percentage point (to 5.5 percent)," said Lawrence Chimere, president of Chase Econometrics of Bala Cynwyd, Pa. "At this stage, with everyone expecting it, a half percentage point would be anticlimactic."

And, while Volcker's reluctance to reduce interest rates in the past for fear of rekindling inflation has been well documented, analysts note that the last showdown over the issue, on Feb. 24, resulted in a 4-3 vote overruling Volcker's objections.

Hunt Oil announces restructuring plan

DALLAS (AP) — Hunt Oil Co. officials said Wednesday the company will become a subsidiary of Hunt Consolidated Inc., a holding company formed by a restructuring plan.

The reorganization is necessary because of the company's rapidly expanding oil exploration in North Yemen, company officials said in a prepared statement.

Gary T. Hurford has been appointed as the new president of Hunt Oil, the largest subsidiary of Hunt Consolidated, the statement said.

"This restructuring is somewhat unique in today's business environment in that it is a result of positive achievements of our company and not the result of negative trends within the industries in which we operate," said Ray Hunt, chairman of Hunt Oil.

He said growth of Hunt Oil Co. prompted the need for streamlining corporate holdings.

Survey shows lower supply of gasoline

NEW YORK (UPI) — Gasoline supplies fell last week reflecting the summer driving season that included part of the three-day Independence Day holiday, the American Petroleum Institute said Wednesday.

Gasoline supplies declined to 226.6 million barrels in the week ended July 4 from 228.0 million barrels a week earlier. But supplies remained ahead year-ago levels of 222.2 million barrels.

Unleaded gasoline stocks decreased to 117.8 million barrels from 120.1 million barrels in the prior week but were above the 105.3 million barrel supply a year ago.

Gasoline production was 7.1 million barrels daily, unchanged on the week and from a year ago.

Gasoline imports amounted to 297,000 barrels a day compared with 294,000 barrels daily the preceding week and 266,000 barrels a year ago.

Supplies of distillate, used mostly for heating, continued the normal seasonal buildup to 106.1 million barrels from 104.5 million barrels the previous week. Last year's supplies were 111.3 million barrels.

Distillate imports of 211,000 barrels a day were higher than 134,000 barrels a week ago and than year-ago imports of 202,000 barrels.

The nation's refineries operated at 83 percent of capacity, down sharply from 87.6 percent but above output of 81.2 percent a year ago. The latest week's decline reflected a big buildup of inventories by at least one large refiner, the API said.

Crude imports declined to 4.3 million barrels daily from 5.1 million barrels daily a week earlier but were higher than year-ago imports of 3.3 million barrels.

Midland firm declares cash dividend

Texas American Energy Corp. has declared a regular quarterly cash dividend on its $2.575 cumulative convertible exchangeable preferred stock payable on August 1 to stockholders of record as of July 21. The payment will be $6.4575 per share, according to William F. Judd, president.

The conversion price for the preferred stock is $9.07 and each share of preferred stock is therefore exchangeable for 2.21 shares of common stock.

Judd said future dividends will be reviewed by the board of directors of the company in light of the cash flow and financial condition of the company existing at that time.

Producers set program to help protest valuations

AMARILLO, Texas (UPI) — The Panhandle Producers and Royalty Owners Association has initiated a program to help over-assessed producers protest their property valuations at county appraisal review boards.

Richard Adams, association president, said that documents from the State Property Tax Review Board show that oil and gas properties often are taxed at 100 to 130 percent of their value, while other real estate usually is taxed at 50 to 75 percent.

Historically, oil and gas properties have been overtaxed, but it didn't matter as much when oil prices were high, he said.

"That is the thing that has always stuck in our craw," Adams said, "but we've lived with it and recognized it and nobody's ever done anything about it."

"We were interested in this before, and the decline in oil prices added a little more momentum. Now we're real interested," he said.

In a letter sent out to appraisal districts in the 15 Panhandle counties north, east and west of Amarillo, Adams said that he asked that more uniform guidelines be applied to appraisals. He also asked that appraisals be lowered closer to normal real estate values.

A recent out-of-court settlement in San Angelo with a royalty owner and the Tom Green County appraisal district has given the association hope that producers can get their evaluations lowered through appeals to county appraisal boards and even district courts, if necessary.

First City Bancorp. reports loss for first six months of 1986

HOUSTON (UPI) — First City Bancorp. of Texas Wednesday reported a net income of $15.1 million for the second quarter but a $21.3 million loss for the first half of the year.

For the quarter that ended June 30, the company earned 36 cents per share, slightly better than the 31 cents earned in the second quarter of 1985, when net income totaled $14.6 million.

For the first six months of the year, the holding company with 63 banks in Texas and one in South Dakota lost $21.3 million or $6.90 per share. During the first half of 1985, First City earned $23.4 million, 44 cents per share.

First City lost $23.4 million in the first quarter and blamed that on its decision to set aside $275 million for loan losses.

J. A. Elkins Jr., senior chairman of the board, said improved second-quarter results affirmed the bank's first quarter decision to increase its reserve for problem loans.

"Our fortification of the reserve in the first quarter enabled us to maintain a large reserve despite our second-quarter charge-offs," Elkins said in a prepared statement.

"While uncertainties in the Southwest economy remain, we're making progress in getting our problems behind us and setting the stage for recovery," he said.

The reserve for loan losses at the end of the first quarter was $377.7 million, or 3.48 percent of total loans, while loan loss reserves at the end of the second quarter was $269.8 million or 2.56 percent.

In the second quarter, First City allowed $18.7 million for loan losses and charged off a total of $126.6 million, mostly in energy loans, the company said.

Bank getting savers 'interest'-ed in football

A Pittsburgh-based bank has come up with a marketing promotion for certificates of deposit that has all the earmarks of something which should have originated right here in football-crazed West Texas.

Equibank of Pittsburgh has announced a floating rate CD on which the interest rate will change with each win or loss by the city's NFL Steelers.

From July 14 until Sept. 6 — the day before the Steelers kick off their 16-game regular season schedule — the "Black-and-Gold $1,000 CD" may be purchased at current market rates, the bank says.

For each game the Steelers win, the interest rate on the certificate will be raised 0.1 percentage point; each time the Steelers lose, the interest rate will be reduced 0.1 point — but not to a rate lower than the market rate at which the CD was purchased.

The rates will be boosted by an extra quarter-point if the Steelers win the AFC championship and another 0.25 point if the Steelers win their fifth Super Bowl.

In addition to capitalizing on fan interest in the Steelers with the marketing tie-in, Equibank appears to have made a reasonably safe bet of not having to pay far higher than market rates on the certificates. It's been years since the Steelers — or any other team in their division, for that matter — has played anything but .500 ball.

Maybe that's why the idea didn't originate in Midland or Dallas. Bankers would run an enormous risk of having to raise rates on a weekly basis and wind up paying much higher interest than market value.

THE LATEST SKIRMISH in the Playboy/7-Eleven war has taken a turn for the silly. Clerks at 7-Eleven stores say the magazine can bag the idea of a nude pictorial featuring female employees of the convenience chain. Employees label the effort an attempt to make the women "look like low-lives."

Playboy has announced plans for a pictorial called "The Women of 7-Eleven" following Dallas-based Southland Corp.'s suspension of sales of the publication in more than 4,500 of its stores nationwide.

Many clerks complain that the uproar places them in the middle of an escalating fight between adult magazines and convenience stores.

"It sounds kind of childish — this is what we're going to do to you," says Marcy Kubaitis, manager of a 7-Eleven in Dallas.

"This has nothing to do with women. It has to do with getting back at Southland."

In April, the convenience store chain suspended sales of Playboy and Penthouse magazines at its company-owned stores. The ban followed months of pressure, including picketing and boycotts by several fundamentalist religious groups.

Playboy Enterprises has filed suit against a federal commission on pornography, saying the panel mailed what it called an intimidating letter to Southland and other major retail chains regarding the sale of adult magazines in their stores.

Playboy managing photo editor Jeff Cohen says candidates for the pictorial must be at least 18 and must submit two recent snapshots, a face shot and a full-body swimsuit pose.

Finalists will be selected on the basis of the photos submitted and will be flown to Playboy photo studios in Chicago or Los Angeles for final test shots, he says.

Jerry's Kids never had it better!

AS IF LOUISIANA industries aren't suffering enough in the current oil slump, now the state's advertising community has been dealt a low blow as well.

McIlhenny Co., the New Orleans-based maker of Tabasco sauce, is beating a red-hot trail to the Tracy-Locke agency in Dallas in an effort to spice up their advertising.

Tracy-Locke, which has gained national acclaim for the black-and-white campaign featuring Mr. Ed, Wally and Beaver Cleaver and the Dragnet guys touting Tostitos for client Frito-Lay, is the first new agency on the account in more than 30 years.

McIlhenny didn't invite any Louisiana agencies, not even 30-year incumbent Fitzgerald Advertising to pitch for the $3 million account during the review process.

This points out an advertising "Catch-22" not limited to the Bayou State: local agencies are being abandoned by home-town clients because they lack experience on national campaigns; and they can't get experience on a national scale because they are being abandoned by growing home-town clients.

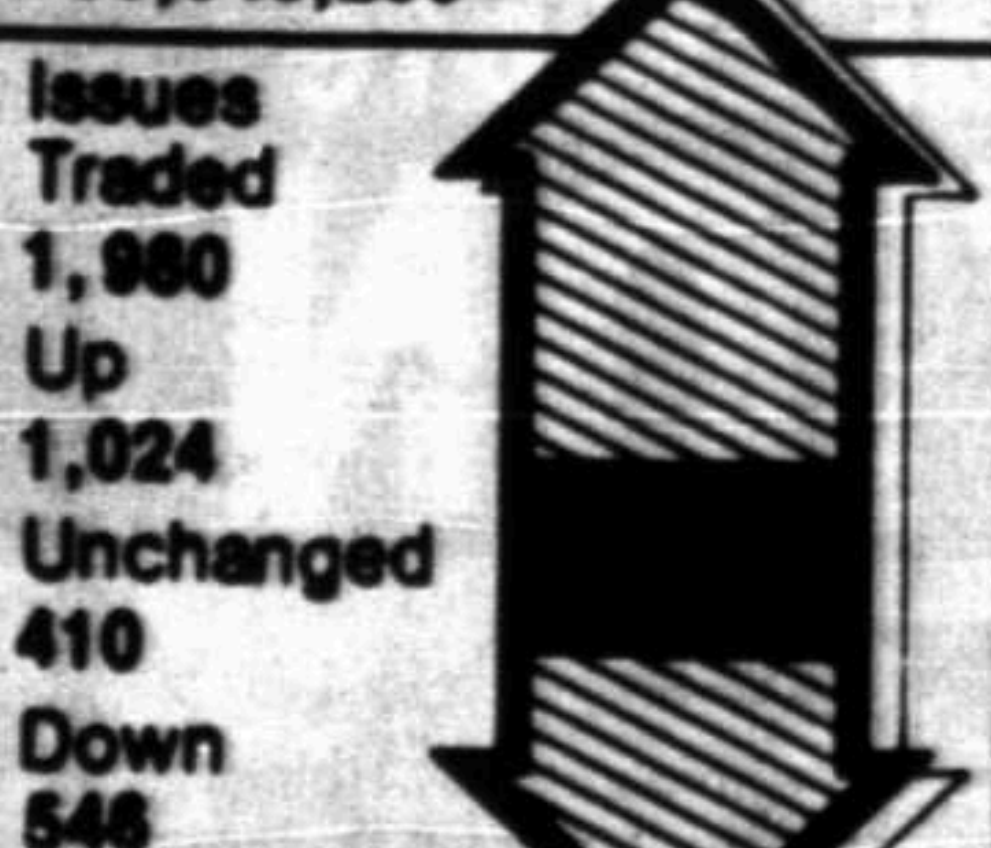

HEY, HERE'S an idea. Let's run down to 7-Eleven, check out Miss November, pick up some hot sauce and chips and hurry back to check out your investments on the football game.

GAO: Federal plant tests not uniform

WASHINGTON (AP) — Some Energy Department defense facilities have been inconsistent in performing certain safety reviews, according to a report by congressional auditors. A study by the General Accounting Office of eight of the department's plants showed that three "high hazard facilities" still had not completed their "safety analysis reviews," an examination of the plant to see that it is designed in accordance with established safety criteria and to analyze potential accidents to estimate the risk of operations. Those three — the fuel fabrication and reprocessing plants at Savannah River, S.C., and the plutonium fabrication plant at Rocky Flats, Colo. — should complete safety analysis reviews next year, the report said. It said drafts of those reviews were completed four and five years ago. Lack of such reviews does not mean that the facilities are unsafe, but the department cannot provide documentation of what it has done to support its conclusions that the plants are safe, the GAO said.

This afternoon's stock market report

INVESTOR'S GUIDE
Series EE bond interest reported year-by-year

By BILL DOYLE

Q. Federal income tax on the interest accrued on Series EE, U.S. Savings Bonds, is due when the bonds are redeemed. Some Savings Bond owners, including me, have very little other taxable income and are in very low income tax brackets or owe no tax at all. It would be advantageous for us to report the EE bond interest as it accumulates, year-by-year.

Can this be done? If so, how does one determine the amount of interest?

A. It can be done, assuming you are a "cash basis" taxpayer, as most people are. Most Savings Bond owners defer reporting the accrued interest as a matter of convenience and because they expect to redeem the bonds after retirement, when they usually are in lower tax brackets.

But that method can backfire. If a bundle of Savings Bonds are cashed and a large amount of accumulated interest is received in one year, the tax bite can be severe.

Reporting the Savings Bond interest buildup, year-by-year, can save tax dollars for folks in situations such as yours. To do that, you report the accrued Savings Bond interest as income in your federal income tax return.

On the income tax return you file for the year in which you first elect to report your EE bond interest that way, you must include as taxable income all interest accrued and not previously reported on all "appreciation-type" securities you own, such as EE and E bonds and U.S. Savings Notes.

And, once you start reporting Savings Bond interest as it accrues, you cannot switch back to the other method of deferring tax on that interest without specific permission from the Internal Revenue Service.

You can learn the exact amount of interest accrued on each of your bonds by obtaining a copy of the booklet "Table of Redemption Values for U.S. Savings Bonds, Series EE" from the Superintendent of Documents, U.S. Government Printing Office, Washington, D.C. 20402. That booklet, published twice a year, costs $1.25. A similar booklet for E bonds costs $3.75. Annual subscription to both is $10.

Q. Just recently, I became aware that interest from municipal bonds is tax free. Why didn't the same apply to U.S. Savings Bonds? Why can't people who buy Savings Bonds and help our country meet its goals have the same advantage as investors who own municipal bonds?

A. Because, by federal law, the United States government has not issued any bonds with interest-free from federal income tax since March 1, 1941.

Our federal government issues Savings Bonds and U.S. Treasury bonds, notes and bills to finance the horrendous federal debt. And the Treasury Department, through its Internal Revenue Service arm, collects taxes on interest paid on those debt securities to help keep that debt from getting even worse.

Q. I've encouraged my daughter to buy Series EE, U.S. Savings Bonds. Is it true they will double in value by the time they mature? When is the maturity date?

A. The EE bonds now being sold build up interest at 7.5 percent, compounded semiannually, or at what the government calls a "market-based" rate — whichever is higher — if held for five years. The market-based rate is 85 percent of the yield on five-year U.S. Treasury securities and changes every six months.

Because of this complicated formula, it's impossible to say exactly what EEs will be worth at maturity. The stated maturity for new EEs is 10 years and they will more than double in value in a decade.

Extended maturities might be granted to EEs. But there's no promise that will happen. E bonds, the predecessors to EEs, were given extended maturities. The oldest EEs matured after 40 years.

JEANE DIXON'S your horoscope

By Jeane Dixon
Friday, July 11, 1986

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: You will find success in areas of your life you have not enjoyed before. Love and marriage are especially satisfying. Family gatherings at Christmas set the stage for a happier future. Teen-agers can expect to fall in and out of love several times while the rest of you may find romance a bit unsettling at times.

CELEBRITY BIRTHDATES: U.S. President John Quincy Adams, writer E.B. White, Susan Seaforth Hayes of "The Young and the Restless," actor Yul Brynner, Tab Hunter, baseball's Mike Fuentes.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Productivity is unusually high for those working at home. Routine affairs are your best bet. Do not start anything new until all correspondence is brought up-to-date. Improve your diet for more energy.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Someone you need to get in touch with may be refusing to take your calls. Do not take this as a personal affront. Your efforts at work will soon lead to a raise or promotion.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): A straightforward discussion with superiors could lead to worthwhile agreements. Your concentration is good despite constant distractions at home or work. An unconventional approach could solve a traditional problem.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): All work and no play is unhealthy. Seek new interests. Take a long-range view of your present work situation. Release your frustrations in a positive way such as sports. Romance is terrific.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Home life runs smoothly especially for those who are married. Your mate has some interesting weekend proposals but it could prove to be costly. Suggest some interesting alternatives. Relax with a good book!

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): A recent investment begins to pay dividends. A long overdue check finally arrives in the mail or by messenger. Real estate is highly profitable today. Home entertainment provides a relaxed surrounding.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Keep your business plans flexible as a newcomer or unexpected visitor adds excitement to your day. Short trips expose you to some important, new developments. A minor issue could be blown out of proportion.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): This will be a pleasant as well as profitable day provided you use tact and consideration. Do not ride roughshod over others' objections. A family member may provide some valuable solutions.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec 21): Conflict may be unavoidable. Settling any differences will relieve tension. Your worries will multiply until you have additional data. Learn new skills or do more research to increase earning potential.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You may be better off not getting the promotion you had hoped for. A trusted adviser can open new doors for long-term success. Your loyalty pays off in friendship and dollars.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Do not try to rush someone into a business partnership. The fire or flame of an old romance could be rekindled when someone out of your past shows up on your doorstep. Proceed with caution.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Concentrate on career goals that are obtainable. Do not judge others by yourself. A friend may not live up to your expectations but still may be doing the best he/she can. Keep a secret.

Opening lead: King of ♠

Sometimes the location of a key card is completely unknown. To test your ability to guess right, cover the East and West hands and see how you would play two no trump after the lead of the king of clubs. We will take you through the play of the first few tricks.

The auction is straightforward. Since you stole a point for your one no trump opening bid, there is absolutely no reason why you should accept partner's game invitation.

You duck the opening lead of the king of clubs and, when West continues with the ten, you hold up again. When East shows out on the third round, you win and lead the king of diamonds. West takes the ace, cashes the winning club and exits with a spade.

You can count seven tricks: two spades, one heart, three diamonds and a club. Your eighth trick will have to come from the heart suit. Do you lead a heart to the ten or to the queen?

If, at this stage, you are taking a guess, you rate to be right no more than half the time when actually you should never go wrong. West passed at his first turn, and he has already shown up with the K-Q-J of clubs and the ace of diamonds, or 10 points in high cards. If he has the king of hearts as well, he would have had a mandatory opening bid.

If you led a heart to the ten you did more than go down in a col contract. You showed that you need to brush up on your declarer play. There are several useful books on the subject.

DEAR ABBY

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I received a tempting proposition last week and would like some information from you before I make up my mind. I am a woman, 28, single, and struggling to gain recognition as an artist. A good friend of mine knows a man from Mexico who wants to move to the United States and is seeking an American woman to marry. I have been assured that he wants nothing else — just my name on the marriage license. He is willing to pay me a good price to marry him. Frankly, I could use the money and am considering his offer. — THINKING IT OVER regularly. I am a Roman Catholic priest. I was very interested in your response to the woman concerned that her ex-husband wished to get an "annulment" for his marriage to her.

Abby, although you were correct in saying that a declaration of nullity (as it is called) can be granted only in the case where no marriage existed, there is more to it. The declaration is made in cases where a previous marriage was not a SACRAMENTAL marriage according to canon law. It does NOT mean that there was no marriage at all. It has no effect on children (although there were none in this case). And it has no effect on civil legal status.

By the way, your advice that she see a lawyer would be a waste of time and money. It would be more sensible to consult a priest and would not cost anything. Chances are that it was indeed a sacramental marriage if she was married according to the laws of the Lutheran Church.

Thank you for hearing me out. I am still one of your fans and think that your advice is usually right on the mark. — THE REV. RAYMOND RICKELS, OFM, ST. FRANCIS CHURCH, BAYFIELD, WIS.

DEAR ABBY: Several months ago you ran a column about a husband-to-be who asked if you thought his fiancée would object if he wore nylons, heels and ladies' attire in private. Our morning coffee group could not agree with your answer. Two were for, one was against, and I was undecided.

My loving, caring, nearly perfect husband of 48 years passed away last month. He was a retired portrait photographer. As I went through his things in his at-home studio, I got the surprise of my life! He had in the back of his closet women's lingerie, dresses, heels, makeup and wigs. I also found photographs which he had taken of himself dressed like a woman and looking beautiful. Even in his most recent photographs his legs were gorgeous in a miniskirt, hose and 4-inch heels. He could have been a hosiery model. I found diaries which he had kept since long before he knew me, and, Abby, he was not a homosexual — he just liked to get dressed up in women's clothing!

I regret that he was never able to share his fantasy with me while he was alive. He probably thought I would not have approved — or worse yet, that I would have thought he was some kind of freak. I have moved all his female attire into my dressing room closet where I can see them every day. Maybe somehow he will know that I would have approved had he told me. — WIDOW IN SUN CITY, ARIZ.

Ferguson will promise 'to obey'

LONDON (AP) — Although Prince Andrew may never be king of England, he'll be master of his household after he marries Sarah Ferguson, as the royal bride-to-be will promise at their wedding to obey her husband. According to details of the July 23 ceremony published Wednesday, the couple has chosen the Church of England's 1662 traditional wedding service in which the bride promises to "obey him and serve him, love, honor and keep him in sickness and in health." Andrew will promise to love, comfort, honor and keep his wife "so long as ye both shall live."

Princess Diana and her apparent Prince Charles selected the 1928 alternative rite when they were married, allowing Diana to drop the "obey."

offbeat, on-the-street vignettes. For months, she's been commuting cross-country from New York to do occasional funny pieces for KCOP-TV in Los Angeles. Recently, she visited a marriage bureau, a deli and the Shriners' convention.

What does Letterman think of it all? "The first time he saw me come on, which was about Christmas, he was just hooting and screaming in the bedroom. 'What are you doing on there?'"

"It's like anything. I'm really happy when he's doing what he wants, and he's happy when I'm getting something that I like."

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Connie Stevens says she expects to be released next week from the hospital where she's being treated for severe dog bites that nearly resulted in the loss of her right leg.

The 48-year-old singer-actress underwent surgery Monday at UCLA Medical Center, 10 days after she was bitten while breaking up a fight between her two pet huskies.

JEANE DIXON'S your horoscope

Friday, July 11, 1986

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: You will find success in areas of your life you have not enjoyed before. Love and marriage are especially satisfying. Family gatherings at Christmas set the stage for a happier future. Teen-agers can expect to fall in and out of love several times while the rest of you may find romance a bit unsettling at times.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Productivity is unusually high for those working at home. Routine affairs are your best bet. Do not start anything new until all correspondence is brought up-to-date. Improve your diet for more energy.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Someone you need to get in touch with may be refusing to take your calls. Do not take this as a personal affront. Your efforts at work will soon lead to a raise or promotion.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): A straightforward discussion with superiors could lead to worthwhile agreements. Your concentration is good despite constant distractions at home or work. An unconventional approach could solve a traditional problem.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): All work and no play is unhealthy. Seek new interests. Take a long-range view of your present work situation. Release your frustrations in a positive way such as sports. Romance is terrific.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Home life runs smoothly especially for those who are married. Your mate has some interesting weekend proposals but it could prove to be costly. Suggest some interesting alternatives. Relax with a good book!

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): A recent investment begins to pay dividends. A long overdue check finally arrives in the mail or by messenger. Real estate is highly profitable today. Home entertainment provides a relaxed surrounding.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Keep your business plans flexible as a newcomer or unexpected visitor adds excitement to your day. Short trips expose you to some important, new developments. A minor issue could be blown out of proportion.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): This will be a pleasant as well as profitable day provided you use tact and consideration. Do not ride roughshod over others' objections. A family member may provide some valuable solutions.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Conflict may be unavoidable. Settling any differences will relieve tension. Your worries will multiply until you have additional data. Learn new skills or do more research to increase earning potential.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You may be better off not getting the promotion you had hoped for. A trusted adviser can open new doors for long-term success. Your loyalty pays off in friendship and dollars.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Do not try to rush someone into a business partnership. The fire or flame of an old romance could be rekindled when someone out of your past shows up on your doorstep. Proceed with caution.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Concentrate on career goals that are obtainable. Do not judge others by yourself. A friend may not live up to your expectations but still may be doing the best he/she can. Keep a secret.

The bidding:

Pass Pass Pass 1 NT

Opening lead: King of ♠

Sometimes the location of a key card is completely unknown. To test your ability to guess right, cover the East and West hands and see how you would play two no trump after the lead of the king of clubs. We will take you through the play of the first few tricks.

The auction is straightforward. Since you stole a point for your one no trump opening bid, there is absolutely no reason why you should accept partner's game invitation.

You duck the opening lead of the king of clubs and, when West continues with the ten, you hold up again. When East shows out on the third round, you win and lead the king of diamonds. West takes the ace, cashes the winning club and exits with a spade.

You can count seven tricks: two spades, one heart, three diamonds and a club. Your eighth trick will have to come from the heart suit. Do you lead a heart to the ten or to the queen?

If, at this stage, you are taking a guess, you rate to be right no more than half the time when actually you should never go wrong. West passed at his first turn, and he has already shown up with the K-Q-J of clubs and the ace of diamonds, or 10 points in high cards. If he has the king of hearts as well, he would have had a mandatory opening bid. If you led a heart to the ten you did more than go down in a col. contract. You showed that you need to brush up on your declare play. There are several useful books on the subject.

DEAR ABBY

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I received a tempting proposition last week and would like some information from you before I make up my mind. I am a woman, 28, single, and struggling to gain recognition as an artist. A good friend of mine knows a man from Mexico who wants to move to the United States and is seeking an American woman to marry. I have been assured that he wants nothing else — just my name on the marriage license. He is willing to pay me a good price to marry him. Frankly, I could use the money and am considering his offer. — THINKING IT OVER regularly. I am a Roman Catholic priest. I was very interested in your response to the woman concerned that her ex-husband wished to get an "annulment" for his marriage to her.

Abby, although you were correct in saying that a declaration of nullity (as it is called) can be granted only in the case where no marriage existed, there is more to it. The declaration is made in cases where a previous marriage was not a SACRAMENTAL marriage according to canon law. It does NOT mean that there was no marriage at all. It has no effect on children (although there were none in this case). And it has no effect on civil legal status.

By the way, your advice that she see a lawyer would be a waste of time and money. It would be more sensible to consult a priest and would not cost anything. Chances are that it was indeed a sacramental marriage if she was married according to the laws of the Lutheran Church.

Thank you for hearing me out. I am still one of your fans and think that your advice is usually right on the mark. — THE REV. RAYMOND RICKELS, OFM, ST. FRANCIS CHURCH, BAYFIELD, WIS.

DEAR ABBY: Several months ago you ran a column about a husband-to-be who asked if you thought his fiancée would object if he wore nylons, heels and ladies' attire in private. Our morning coffee group could not agree with your answer. Two were for, one was against, and I was undecided.

My loving, caring, nearly perfect husband of 48 years passed away last month. He was a retired portrait photographer. As I went through his things in his at-home studio, I got the surprise of my life! He had in the back of his closet women's lingerie, dresses, heels, makeup and wigs. I also found photographs which he had taken of himself dressed like a woman and looking beautiful. Even in his most recent photographs his legs were gorgeous in a miniskirt, hose and 4-inch heels. He could have been a hosiery model. I found diaries which he had kept since long before he knew me, and, Abby, he was not a homosexual — he just liked to get dressed up in women's clothing!

I regret that he was never able to share his fantasy with me while he was alive. He probably thought I would not have approved — or worse yet, that I would have thought he was some kind of freak. I have moved all his female attire into my dressing room closet where I can see them every day. Maybe somehow he will know that I would have approved had he told me. — WIDOW IN SUN CITY, ARIZ.

Ferguson will promise 'to obey'

LONDON (AP) — Although Prince Andrew may never be king of England, he'll be master of his household after he marries Sarah Ferguson, as the royal bride-to-be will promise at their wedding to obey her husband.

According to details of the July 23 ceremony published Wednesday, the couple has chosen the Church of England's 1662 traditional wedding service in which the bride promises to "obey him and serve him, love, honor and keep him in sickness and in health."

Andrew will promise to love, comfort, honor and keep his wife "so long as ye both shall live." Princess Diana and her apparent Prince Charles selected the 1928 alternative rite when they were married, allowing Diana to drop the "obey."

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Living with zany talk-show host David Letterman and working for him, too, was cramping Merrill Markoe's style a bit, so she's started moonlighting as a television feature reporter. "I'm sort of phasing myself out of 'Late Night,' I guess," said Ms. Markoe, who has been a writer with the show since its 1982 debut and has produced many of its offbeat, on-the-street vignettes.

For months, she's been commuting cross-country from New York to do occasional funny pieces for KCOP-TV in Los Angeles. Recently, she visited a marriage bureau, a deli and the Shriners' convention.

What does Letterman think of it all? "The first time he saw me come on, which was about Christmas, he was just hooting and screaming in the bedroom. 'What are you doing on there?'"

"It's like anything. I'm real happy when he's doing what he wants, and he's happy when I'm getting something that I like."

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Connie Stevens says she expects to be released next week from the hospital where she's being treated for severe dog bites that nearly resulted in the loss of her right leg.

The 48-year-old singer-actress underwent surgery Monday at UCLA Medical Center, 10 days after she was bitten while breaking up a fight between her two pet huskies.

Experts endorse use of own blood for surgery to avoid AIDS

WASHINGTON (AP) — The practice of giving one's own blood in advance for upcoming surgery has been endorsed by a panel of experts which studied protecting blood supplies from AIDS contamination.

The group, convened by the National Institutes of Health to assess the state of testing for acquired immune deficiency syndrome, said Wednesday that so-called autologous blood giving is the safest way of getting a therapeutic transfusion.

Blood screening programs have greatly reduced the chance of getting AIDS through transfusions, the panel concluded, but small amounts of infected blood continue to escape detection. Using one's own blood, where possible, further reduces the risks, it continued.

Dr. Thomas C. Chalmers of Mount Sinai Medical School in New York, the conference chairman, said banking one's own blood for an immediate need is a good idea for reasons other than AIDS prevention, such as preventing allergic reactions.

However, Chalmers told a news briefing, the group did not endorse so-called directed donations, by which a person selects someone else to donate blood for him, because it has not been proven safer than blood from normal channels. Also, storing blood for no specific reason can be wasteful and should be discouraged, he said.

"We believe that a sick person should use his blood, but a healthy person should not stockpile," Chalmers said.

Dr. S. Gerald Sandler, a national American Red Cross expert on AIDS issues, said his organization also encouraged self donation for specific reasons. But Sandler said the Red Cross opposed private services that tried to make money by getting people to store blood when they have no immediate need.

The study group said tests to screen blood supplies for evidence of AIDS have improved greatly, but more research is needed into faster, more accurate techniques.

Present tests, which detect antibodies to the virus which causes AIDS, and successfully screening out most high-risk donors, has made blood supplies much safer in the past year-and-a-half, the panel said.

However, these first-generation tests, which do not detect the AIDS virus itself but only indirect evidence of infection, are not as precise as health authorities want, it continued.

Dr. Lincoln E. Moses, a panelist and statistics professor at Stanford University Medical School, said studies indicate one potential blood donor in 1,000 may carry the AIDS virus.

Because an estimated 99 percent of these donors are excluded by high-risk profiles or screening tests, it is likely 120 units of AIDS-infected blood gets into national supplies each year out of 12 million donations, Moses estimated.

About two percent of AIDS cases have been associated with transfusions of blood and blood products contaminated with the AIDS virus.

After meeting for three days to consider what is known about AIDS tests and interpreting the results, the panel said blood banking groups should abandon the practice of not telling donors when AIDS tests produce ambiguous results with their blood.

Those with confirmed positive tests — positive antibody tests backed up with a second, more precise test — should be considered to be infected with the virus and capable of spreading it to others, the panel said. People like this have been told the results and discouraged from giving blood.

But those with ambiguous results, such as being positive on one test and negative on another, often have not been informed by blood collecting services. Their names have been put on lists and later blood donations destroyed without their knowledge.

The panel said people have a right to know about their health status and if their names are on restricted lists, and encouraged blood collection groups to see that they are informed while keeping the information confidential from others.

"We think people who test positive initially, but negative on later tests, should be assured that they probably are not infected," Chalmers said.

Sandler said Red Cross blood collection regions have about 20,000 donors on such lists who have not been told about questionable test results.

Tons of garbage provokes city to seek back-to-work injunction

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Thousands of tons of garbage left by a 10-day-old city workers strike don't present enough of a menace to seek a back-to-work order, say officials who are going to court against striking health workers.

The administration decided against asking a judge to order 2,500 sanitation workers to end their walk-out as the city seeks to force 850 health and medical workers to end their strike, said Solicitor Handsel Minyard.

Managing Director James S. White said city Health Commissioner Maurice Clifford assured him 15 temporary garbage dumps wouldn't cause health problems, and that health officials on Wednesday laid rat bait at each site.

A hearing on the city's request for a temporary restraining order was scheduled for today in Common Pleas Court. The city is asking to bring back workers to staff a nursing home, a home for the elderly, nine health centers, infirmaries in city prisons, and other facilities.

The strike by 14,000 municipal employees is keeping thousands of residents and tourists from libraries, museums and swimming pools, and kept the city from picking up 3,200 tons of paper, glass, cans and other wastes disposed of daily by Philadelphia's 1.7 million inhabitants.

Negotiations resumed after a 36-hour recess Wednesday and continued until early this morning between the city and the smaller of two unions involved. Talks were set to resume again today.

"As long as we're talking it's a good sign," state mediator Edward Feehan said after talks recessed.

Shortly after the city went to court, Mayor W. Wilson Goode appealed to residents on television to cooperate in coping with the strike.

Asked at a news conference about complaints about the locations of the 15 temporary trash disposal sites set up by the city, Goode said, "No one wants it in their back yard. But it has to be in someone's backyard."

Talks resumed between the city and District Council 47 of the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees, which represents about 2,000 professionals and technicians, including nurses and health care workers.

No talks were scheduled, however, between the city and AFSCME District Council 33.

Study says crib deaths often accidents, poor judgment

BOSTON (AP) — Poor parental judgment and accidents are probably responsible for many of the baby deaths that are officially classified as the mysterious sudden infant death syndrome, according to a study published today.

When a seemingly healthy baby dies unexpectedly or without explanation, the cause of death is frequently attributed to SIDS, or crib death. It is the leading killer of children between ages 1 month and 1 year, and blamed for 8,000 to 10,000 deaths in the United States annually.

New research, however, suggests that when such deaths are examined, there frequently is a reasonable explanation for the death, often a preventable household tragedy.

Dr. Millard Bass said he and his colleagues found evidence of accidental causes of death in 24 of 26 SIDS cases at Brooklyn-Kings County Hospital Center in New York City.

"What occurred in Brooklyn is probably characteristic of the problem nationwide," said Bass.

Among the cases cited: — A 3-month-old boy suffering from a cold slept in a wooden drawer on a basement floor. He died, probably of asphyxiation and high body temperature, when the parents tried to treat him with a crude mist tent — a plastic bag over the drawer and an attached vaporizer.

— A month-old girl was placed face down on a large foam-rubber pillow in a bassinet. The baby was found dead, trapped in a groove formed between the edge of the pillow and the plastic side of the bassinet.

— A 4-month-old boy was dressed in an undershirt and jumpsuit, covered with three blankets and put to bed in a crib next to a leaky steam radiator. He was found dead the next morning. Blankets covered his head, and the temperature in the crib was 106.

NATION IN BRIEF

Blood shortage may force surgery postponements

DETROIT (AP) — A critical shortage of blood donations may force the Red Cross to ask area hospitals to delay elective surgery, officials say. A downturn in donations during the Fourth of July weekend aggravated a problem that began in early June, the Southeastern Michigan Red Cross Chapter said in a statement Wednesday. The shortage is especially critical for type O.

Donations have averaged 725 units a day since early June, compared with demand for 950 to 1,000 units, the Red Cross said.

Unless donations pick up significantly in the next week, hospitals will be asked to postpone elective surgery, the group said.

Illegal calls traced to jail

ANNAPOLIS, Md. (AP) — More than $25,000 in illegal phone calls originally thought to have originated from a naval installation have been traced to a jail in Upper Marlboro, a telephone company official says.

The calls, billed to an Ohio couple last month, were originally linked to the naval installation because they occurred between Annapolis and three naval cities, Norfolk and Newport News, Va., and Baltimore, said Syd Courson, a spokesman U.S.

Sprint, the long-distance phone company.

That link proved to be simply coincidental, Courson said.

The Department of Correction for Prince George's County in Upper Marlboro is now conducting its own investigation into how an inmate could have obtained the access code, he said.

The investigation has been turned over to the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. because the calls were made through C&P's collect phones inside the correctional facility, a jail spokesman said.

DC-8 makers duck lawsuit

PADUCAH, Ky. (AP) — Two companies that built a DC-8 jetliner which crashed in Canada last December, killing 248 U.S. servicemen, have asked to be released from lawsuits filed against the airline that operated the plane.

McDonnell Douglas Corp., the plane's maker, and Pratt & Whitney, which built its engines, filed motions this week asking that they and other "product defendants" be severed from the main action against Arrow Air.

St. Louis-based McDonnell Douglas has been named in only 15 of the 90 or more lawsuits filed so far, and Pratt & Whitney, of East Hartford, Conn., in only two, according to documents the companies filed with their request.

The DC-8 crashed Dec. 12 in Gander, Newfoundland, as it carried soldiers home to Fort Campbell from a Middle East peacekeeping mission. Arrow Air is based in Miami.

WILKINSBURG, Pa. (AP) — A man in women's clothing posing as a rape victim lured a woman into an alley with cries for help, then raped her, police say.

The 28-year-old victim, of Pittsburgh, was walking in Wilkesburg late Monday when she heard a high-pitched voice crying, "I've been raped," said Allegheny County police Inspector Floyd Neveling.

The call came from a person in a torn dress, crouched in an alley, Neveling said. "The victim was hesitant to aid the figure, but she felt that she had to help."

Police hear phone suicide

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) — A man shot himself to death after calmly telling a police dispatcher by telephone her was going to kill himself, investigators said.

"Oh my God, he just shot himself on the phone!" police dispatcher Felicia Roselle said after hearing the gun go off. "Oh my God!"

Hammond's fate in hands of appeals court

By FRANK TROMBLEY
Staff Writer

The fate of Ector County Commissioner Willie Hammond Jr. and former Odessa City Councilman Keith Weddel now rests in the hands of a three-judge panel of the U.S. Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals.

After hearing only an hour of oral arguments Tuesday, the New Orleans judicial appeals panel must decide if government prosecutors violated Hammond's legal rights.

Briefs filed in the appeals case say defense attorneys claim prosecutors intimidated Hammond's wife before the September trial in El Paso and question whether changing the site of the trial from Midland to El Paso was proper.

The attorneys also question whether the trial erred in excluding certain defense evidence and by allowing testimony about a prior fire at the O'Michael Building.

On these grounds, Hammond's attorneys, Warren Burnett and Larry Zinn, have asked the appeals court to dismiss charges against Hammond and reverse and remand the case for a new trial.

Weddel's attorney, Travis Shelton of Lubbock, argued essentially the same points as Hammond, but additionally contended there was insufficient evidence to convict Weddel.

Federal prosecutors argue U.S. District Judge Lucius Bunton rightfully transferred the case from Midland to El Paso because of extensive publicity.

They also contend that Hammond's attorney first raised questions about the earlier fire, thus opening the issue to exploration by prosecutors.

Government attorneys also deny any misconduct in connection with the transportation of Hammond's 40-year-old wife to El Paso to testify against her husband.

Trial records were sealed by Bunton following the El Paso conviction, but the appeal briefs tell of behind-closed-doors interviews between the judge and Mrs. Hammond and her mother.

The briefs quote the judge as saying he seriously questions action taken by the government in connection with the transportation of Mrs. Hammond to El Paso.

Regarding the treatment of Hammond's wife, Bunton said "the court does not wish to conduct an inquisition into the matter."

He also said that prosecutors Ellen Byers and Tom McHugh failed to make Mrs. Hammond aware of her rights "in terms understood by her."

The government appeal brief states McHugh was summoned to Bunton's chambers Oct. 11, 1985 for an interview in which Bunton accused the government of using "Star Chamber Hitlerian tactics" in the handling of Mrs. Hammond.

Government prosecutors contended Mrs. Hammond volunteered to testify against her husband.

But in an appeal brief Bunton — who interviewed Mrs. Hammond with only his law clerk and court reporter present — said that was not the case.

"She advised the court that she did not wish to testify. She did not know and had never been advised that she did not have to testify."

Questions of prosecutory misconduct raised by defense attorneys and Bunton's critical comments apparently prompted Helen Eversburg, U.S. attorney for the Western District of Texas, to ask the U.S. Justice Department to investigate the case.

Hammond and Weddel were indicted Sept. 20, 1984, by a federal grand jury.

Both were named on two counts each in connection with an arson conspiracy.

Hammond was additionally charged with two counts of perjury growing out of depositions he made in a civil lawsuit involving claims for insurance on the O'Michael Building. Hammond and Weddel first faced trial in Midland on the charges in February 1985. That trial ended in a mistrial.

Hammond's appeal brief contends jurors hung up 10-to-2 for acquittal of Weddel and 8-to-4 for acquittal of Hammond.

The government appeal brief, in a footnote, stated, "The government has no way of verifying those representations as there is no evidence in the record to support them."

Bunton ordered a second trial in El Paso and a jury found Hammond and Weddel guilty on all counts.

Oct. 14, 1985, Bunton sentenced Hammond to serve six months in prison on one of the perjury charges.

He was additionally sentenced to five years probation on each of the other charges and fined $10,000. The probation terms were to be concurrent.

Weddel was sentenced to five years probation on each of two counts and fined $20,000.

The O'Michael Building, since remodeled and known as Jackson Center, was owned by Weddel, former Odessa Mayor Bob Bryant and Odessa attorney Ray Stoker Jr. at the time of the fire in November 1981.

Federal indictments alleged the building was purchased because of its proximity to the site of a proposed downtown Civic Center.

The Civic Center bond issue proposal was rejected by voters.

The indictments further alleged that the building was losing money and Weddel and Hammond, acting as "middle men," conspired to burn the building.

The government's three key witnesses in the case, were the men purportedly involved in the actual arson.

Midlander gets five years for robbery

By PATRICK CRIMMINS
Staff Writer

A 20-year-old Midland man was sentenced Wednesday to five years in state prison for robbery following his guilty plea in connection with the armed holdup in May of a convenience store.

Douglas Carson Anderson, who was indicted June 18 for aggravated robbery in connection with the incident, testified before he was sentenced by Judge Vann Culp in 238th State District Court that he never went into the store and was an unwilling participant in the crime.

According to assistant district attorney Ralph Petty, a man wearing a Halloween mask entered the Bucks convenience store at Loop 250 and Midkiff Rd. about 3:30 a.m. May 22 and allegedly robbed the clerk, 30-year-old Hirauchm Awarthar, at gunpoint.

Twenty-five-year-old Frank Anthony Furtado, who Anderson said lived with him at the time of the incident, was also indicted for aggravated robbery and remains in county jail in lieu of $50,000 bond.

Petty said the clerk had called police about a suspicious vehicle in the store parking lot, and just before police arrived the robbery occurred.

Police chased the vehicle, which turned into the parking lot of the Sagewood Condominiums, 3316 Cuyler. Police arrested Anderson and Furtado at the scene.

Overproduction cited as farming problem

By JANE DEES
Staff Writer

The real problem in the Midland County farming economy is overproduction of staple crops, such as cotton, said Ernest Kiker, Midland County extension agent for agriculture.

"There is a marketplace for everything humans consume, and diversification to vegetable crop production, grapes or pecans, for instance, will be the key to recovery in the next 10 years," Kiker said.

Speaking at the Lions Club meeting Wednesday on "what's new in agriculture," the county agent said drip irrigation — plastic tubing placed on the ground with water spouting from emitters — is proving successful because it prevents the evaporation associated with centerpoint irrigation. Drip irrigation can also be helpful in weed control, Kiker said, because herbicides also can be sprayed through the plastic tubing.

The county agent said the Permian Basin Farmers Market, held in Midland on Tuesdays and Thursdays at 10 a.m. in the Wild River Canyon parking lot, had 16 producers Tuesday, which is close to the approximate capacity of 20 producers.

Kiker said he's pleased with the current response to the market, but added he hoped more people would patronize it.

He said the market will do better financially as it gets closer to harvest time.

Kiker said the freshness "can't be compared with that of grocery stores and farmers are keeping prices lower to attract the business."

Justice Department claims drug profits withdrawn

EL PASO (AP) — More than $4.2 million in suspected drug funds was withdrawn from two local banks by a Phoenix, Ariz., attorney who knew the money was subject to tax liens, according to a U.S. Justice Department suit.

The money had also been linked to a Mexican drug lord, a prime suspect in the kidnapping and murder of a U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration agent, said a federal official.

The civil suit, filed in U.S. District Court here, named as defendants Merwin Grant and the Phoenix law firm of Beus, Gilbert, Wake & Morrill. It alleged Grant took more than $2 million from El Paso National Bank and more than $2.2 million from First City National Bank of El Paso.

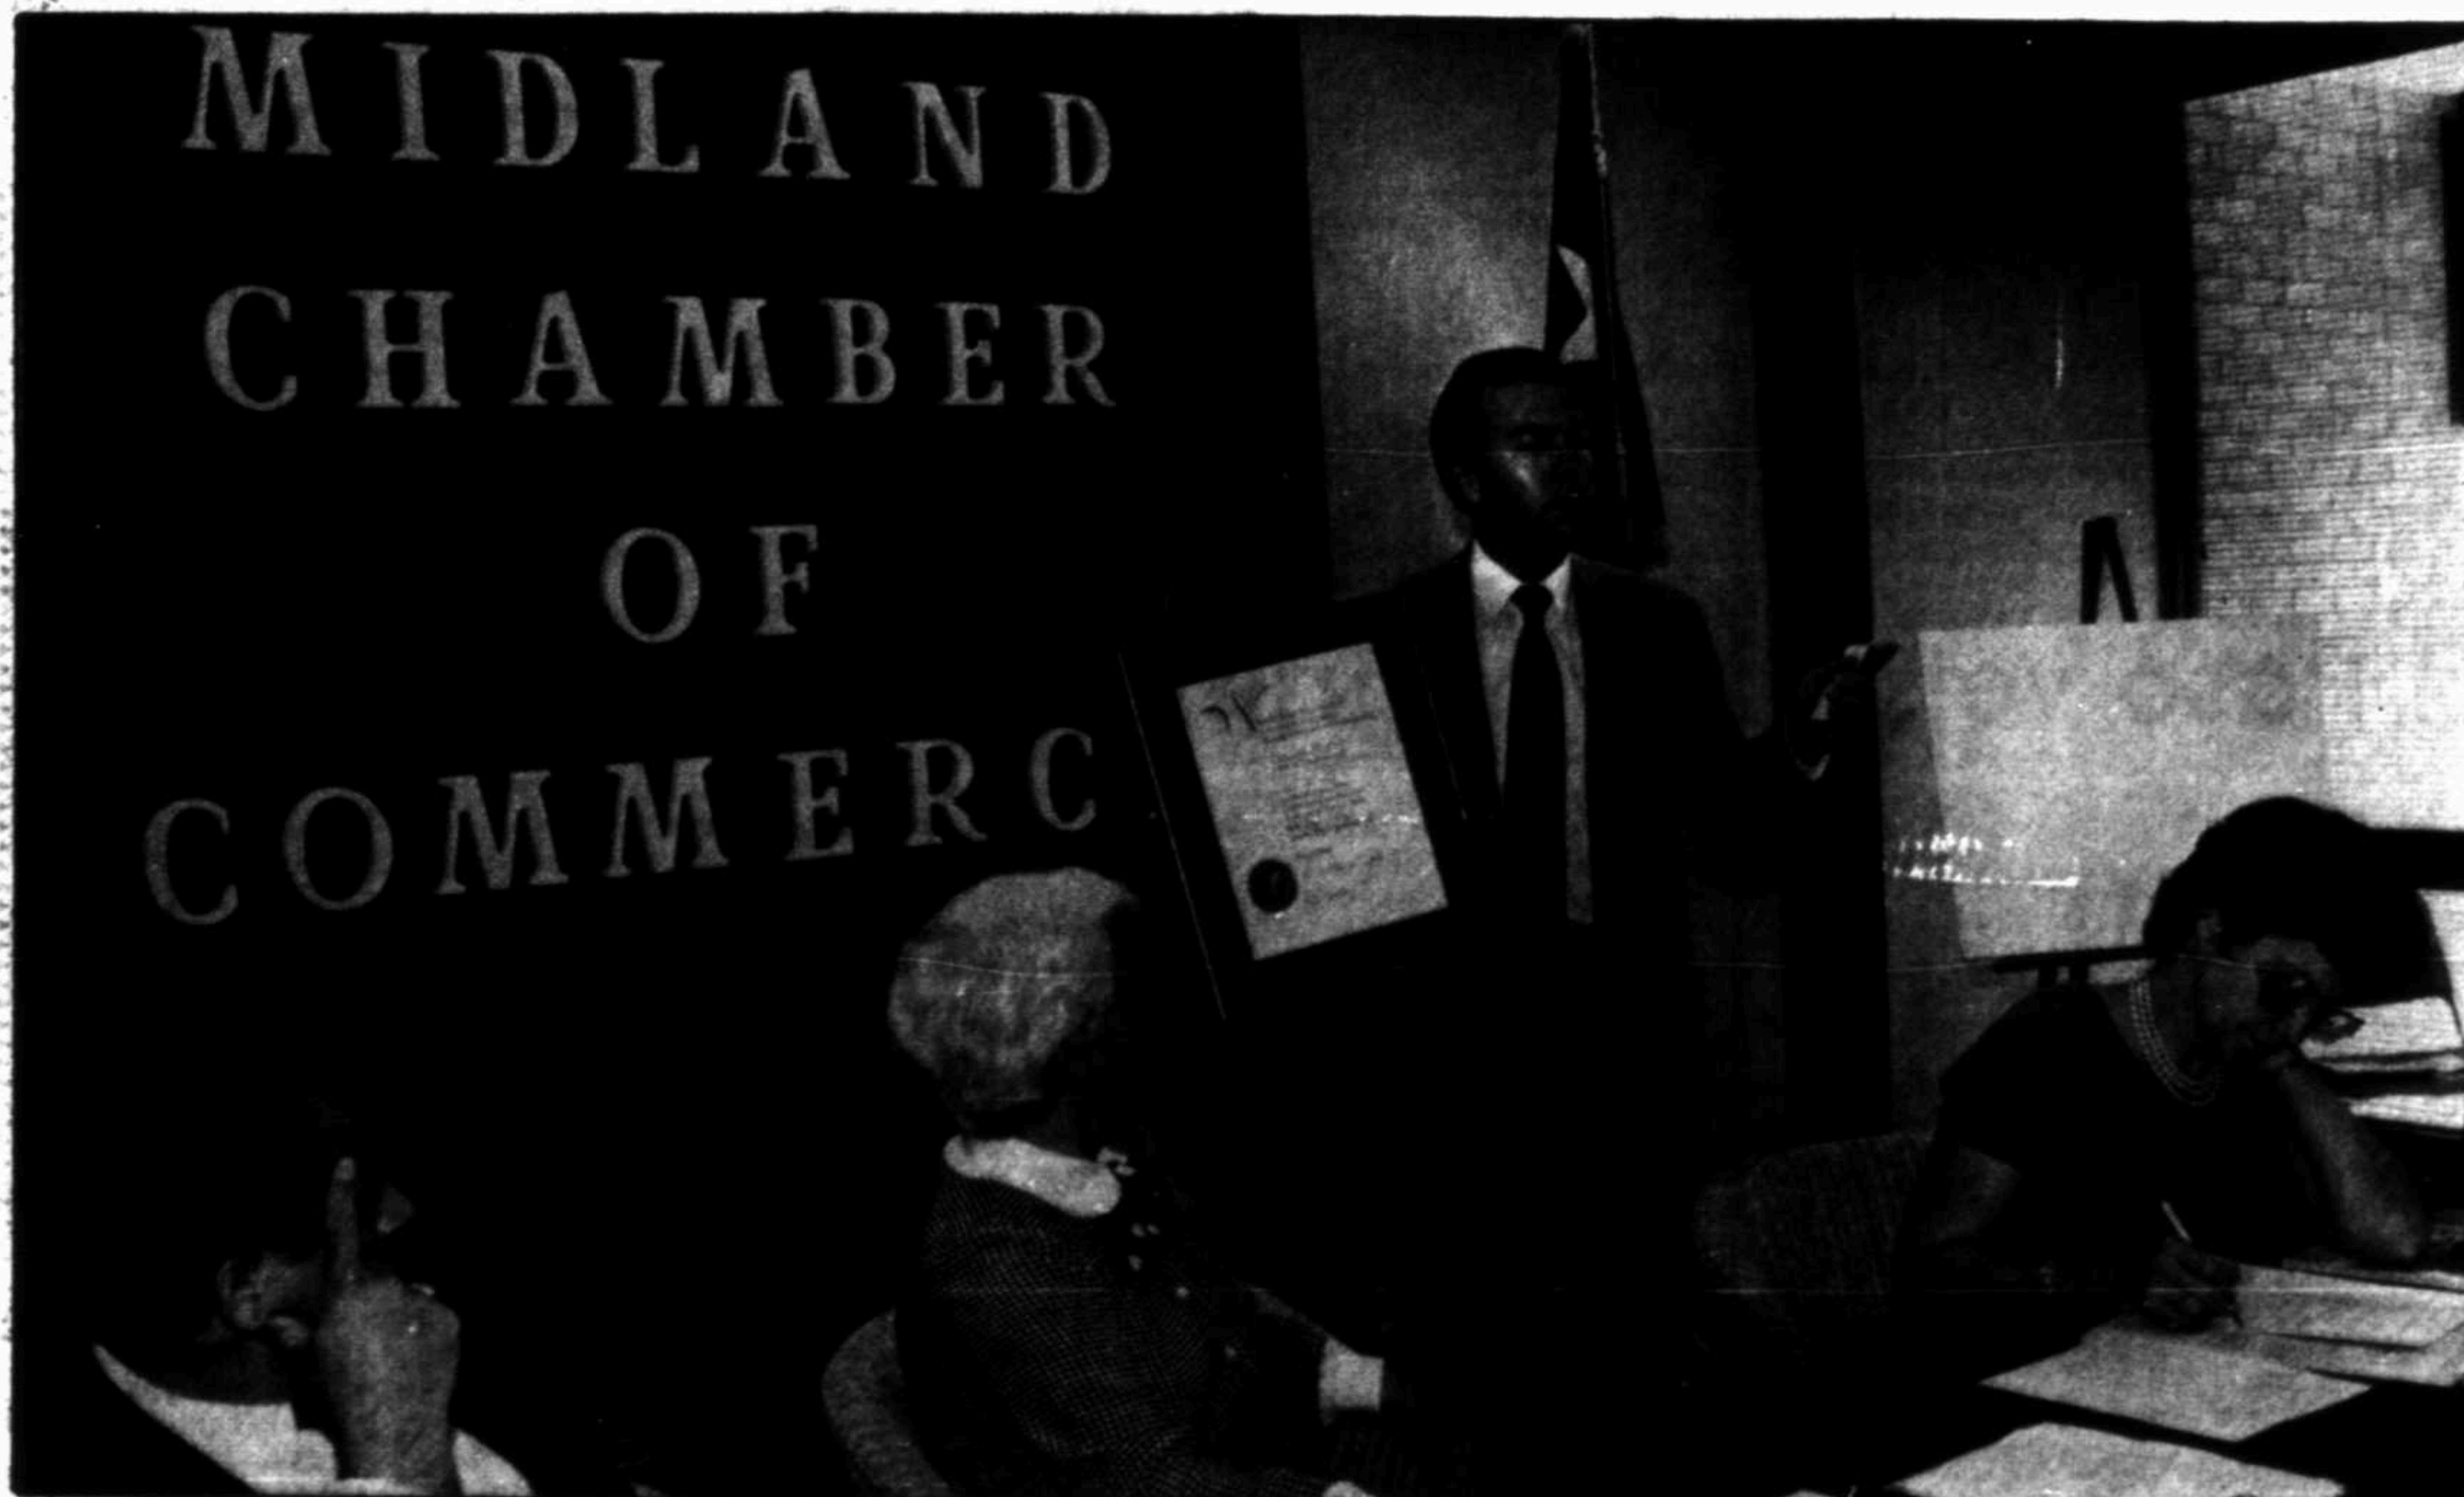

The suit, filed Friday by Michael E. Greene, an attorney in the Justice Department's tax division in Dallas, alleged Grant knew there were tax liens on the money when he withdrew it in early July 1984.

The money was to go toward payment of $28 million in taxes for 1984 owed by Marquedeo Alfaro Margairino, 54, a Mexican businessman, for what the IRS said were illegal transactions in a drug money-laundering scheme.

Grant represented Alfaro last year in a dispute over $6.5 million in certificates of deposit at First City National Bank.

"Defendant Merwin Grant had actual knowledge at the time he received the currency and checks...that such removal was being done for the purpose of defeating and evading payment of tax liabilities assessed against Taxpayer Alfaro," the suit alleges.

Cleaning up

Robert Leibrock, representing Clean Midland, discusses with Chamber of Commerce members the Governor's Community Achievement Award received by Midland. It consists of a $100,000 landscaping award from the Texas Highway Department as well as a metal plaque designating Midland a 1986 winner. The money is to be used for the development and construction of Volunteer Park at the corner of N. Big Spring and Marienfeld streets in downtown Midland.

Many Midlanders wouldn't boycott businesses selling men's magazines

By RAMONA NYE
Staff Writer

Pressured by anti-pornography groups, many convenience stores across the nation and locally have stopped selling magazines such as Playboy and Penthouse.

On Wednesday a sample of 14 people were asked, "Would you refuse to shop at a convenience store that sells Penthouse or Playboy?"

Ten said they had no objections to shopping at a store that sells pornographic magazines. Four said they would not shop at convenience stores selling such magazines.

"I always did before. I don't buy the stuff, I just never look at it," said Liz Moudy of 716 Ruby.

"If they keep it out where the kids can't look at it, I can't say it would bother me. The only thing that would bother me is if the children could look at it," said Ms. Moudy, who is a homemaker.

Kelli Enis, 3302 Stutz Drive, said "That's just something that doesn't bother me. I'm not saying I think pornography is OK, but I won't just stop shopping at a center just because they sell it." Ms. Enis is a Texas Tech student.

Elliott Barron, 2309 Siesta, said "It's people's choice. Isn't this the land of freedom?"

"If people don't want to buy them then they don't have to buy them," said Barron, a student at Midland College.

Lora Havrda, 504 Parkwood, said "I don't mind Penthouse and Playboy. I don't mind these pornographic. I think there's a lot more filth on the streets than that." Ms. Havrda is an apartment manager.

BethAnn Broughton, 4314 Sentinel, said, "As long as they are out of the children's view when they walk in to get candy, I don't mind." Ms. Broughton is a restaurant manager.

Edward Heredia of San Jose, Calif., said, "I'm against the magazines themselves, but as far as someone else looking at them, why take away their right? As long as they don't get too vulgar." Heredia is a college student in San Jose.

Rebecca Pierson, 2438 Whitmire said, "It doesn't bother me. I don't get the stuff, but if other people want to it's fine by me." Ms. Pierson is a shoe salesperson.

However others said they don't shop in the stores and they are opposed to the magazines.

"If they don't have pride enough in looking out for the little ones, they shouldn't sell," said Teresa Caldwell of 1908 East Pine. Ms. Caldwell is a Lee High School junior.

Wilburn Rosentreter, 3524 Humble, said, "I'm opposed to it. I prefer that they don't sell in public places like that where all the young teenagers have access to it." Rosentreter is a salesman.

Mildred Callihan of Big Spring said, "I don't believe in pornography. I think it's the worst thing that can happen, but it's not just these stores that handle it."

"It has one of the most detrimental effects on young people than any other thing," said Ms. Callihan, who is a homemaker.

'Chewing the fat' could land you in the fire

Filling the belly and emptying the mind are such ordinary pastimes. They are not without appeal.

One seems incomplete without the other wherever more than one is gathered. It's called "dinner talk," "bar talk," "socializing about the hors d'oeuvres," "chewing the fat," "talking with food in your mouth," "gossiping," "rumor mongering," "idle talk" and "Did you know that..."

It can be as compulsive as daydreaming, eating popcorn, smoking tobacco, shooting dice or playing bridge.

One ancient source calls it "propane and vain babblings." But isn't it simply devious and exciting and prohibitively enticing especially when you glance about to see who might be eavesdropping.

Gossip is the roller-coaster of sedentary people.

You just sit there, shift your haunches, press the powerful and insidious tongue firmly onto the palate, twitch the eyebrows, frown deeply, twist the mouth, clenched the fist and point a crooked finger, release the tongue and allow the lips to quiver and quake. Done enough, your teeth will rot out. That's the price of gossiping, blaspheming and lying. Brushing your teeth doesn't do away with deep, dark lies and malicious "truths." They rot teeth and weaken the mind. Dentists and doctors don't tell you that, do they? They should.

The amount of distortion which emanates from the mouth will astound you. If you believe any of the insane ramblings, you're gullible. If you pass the gossip on, you're foolish, bear out your human foibles and increase your chances of stumbling and embarrassing yourself and others.

Good gossip is strong on visual images. I recall one story that's so risqué that it's horrifyingly amusing — possibly to all but the victim. It's a sick-humor tale. The story involves the sadistic — and possibly just — revenge of a wronged spouse.

Much gossip involves the faithful husband who's been cuckolded or the wife who's been scorned. Occasionally, I'll hear rumors about another bank failing, about big-name businessmen dealing in high-dollar drugs, about officials "on the take" and indictments "coming down." Rumors lurk about so-and-so leaving him or her again and with good cause, about broken promises, how nasty and underhanded a divorce was, how the children were bantered about, how a lawyer ripped off another client or a doctor blotted another operation, how trade secrets were stolen and how sly "deals" were made.

I hear rumors which would make excellent material for a libel lawyer or a gossip columnist.

Rumors of a gossip nature are like acid on flesh. They may distort (or truly reflect) the personality or character of the one doing the gossip more so than the one gossiped about. You can dress up gossip, put some makeup on it, give it cosmetic surgery and try to soft-pedal it. It's still gossip and is "forbidden" even while it's highly encouraged in its ugly state and stages. Rarely is gossip stopped.

Shades of truth bouncing about dark lies give credibility to rumors. Often, there's just enough truth to a dark rumor to make it almost believable to those who bother not to investigate or who choose to pass it on.

The coffee shop, watering hole, cafe, kitchen table and social club seem to be quite suitable cultures for hatching and spreading rumors. I don't know what kicks them off. But there's mostly a negative and nasty do-well connotation to gossip and rumors. Rarely are good-news rumors passed around like contraband.

Occasionally, though, I've heard some downright good rumors, rumors of a flattering and uplifting nature. Like the negative rumors, they eventually get dispelled.

In fact, I recall hearing a couple of rumors about myself. Unfortunately, neither was true.

Drifter giggled as he begged for release

KERRVILLE (AP) — A drifter, allegedly tortured with an electric cattle prod before he died, begged to be released amid a chorus of giggles on a tape played in court.

Ranchers Walter Wesley Ellebracht Jr., 33, his father, Walter Wesley Ellebracht Sr., 55, and former ranch worker Carlton Robert Caldwell, 21 are charged with conspiracy in the death of Anthony Bates.

Bates and other drifters were lured to the Ellebrachts' Hill Country ranch with the promise of work and then forced to stay, prosecutors maintain.

On Wednesday, Caldwell's 10th day on the witness stand in the 11-week trial, the younger Ellebracht's defense attorney, Ray Bass, asked him to identify voices on the tape, played for the first time in court.

"Are you having stage fright? This is the second tape. You haven't even been shocked yet," said a voice Caldwell identified as Junior's.

"Coochy, Coochy, coo. Now here it comes," said the voice as men, identified by Caldwell as ranch workers, giggled.

"Sometimes I'm bluffing, and sometimes I'm not," the voice said.

"I'm grateful to be here, and I'm sorry I didn't cut enough tin," Bates was forced to repeat after the voice.

"You're not very loud. You know I like it loud," the voice repeated after Bates screamed.

"I would die for the privilege to be here," Bates was forced to repeat.

Then he begged, "Please God. Let me go, Junior!"

The men exaggerated the sounds for Junior's pleasure and were acting while Bates was shocked with the cattle prod, Caldwell testified.

Later in the day, Bass asked Caldwell to describe Bates' position during one of the last torture sessions. Taking his cues from Caldwell, Bass laid on his back on the courtroom floor and stretched his arms outward.

"Like this?" Bass asked. Bates was tied under a barn entryway so that his hips and shoulders hung off the ground, Caldwell said.

"You're giving me the mental picture that he was sort of tied up like a hammock," Bass said.

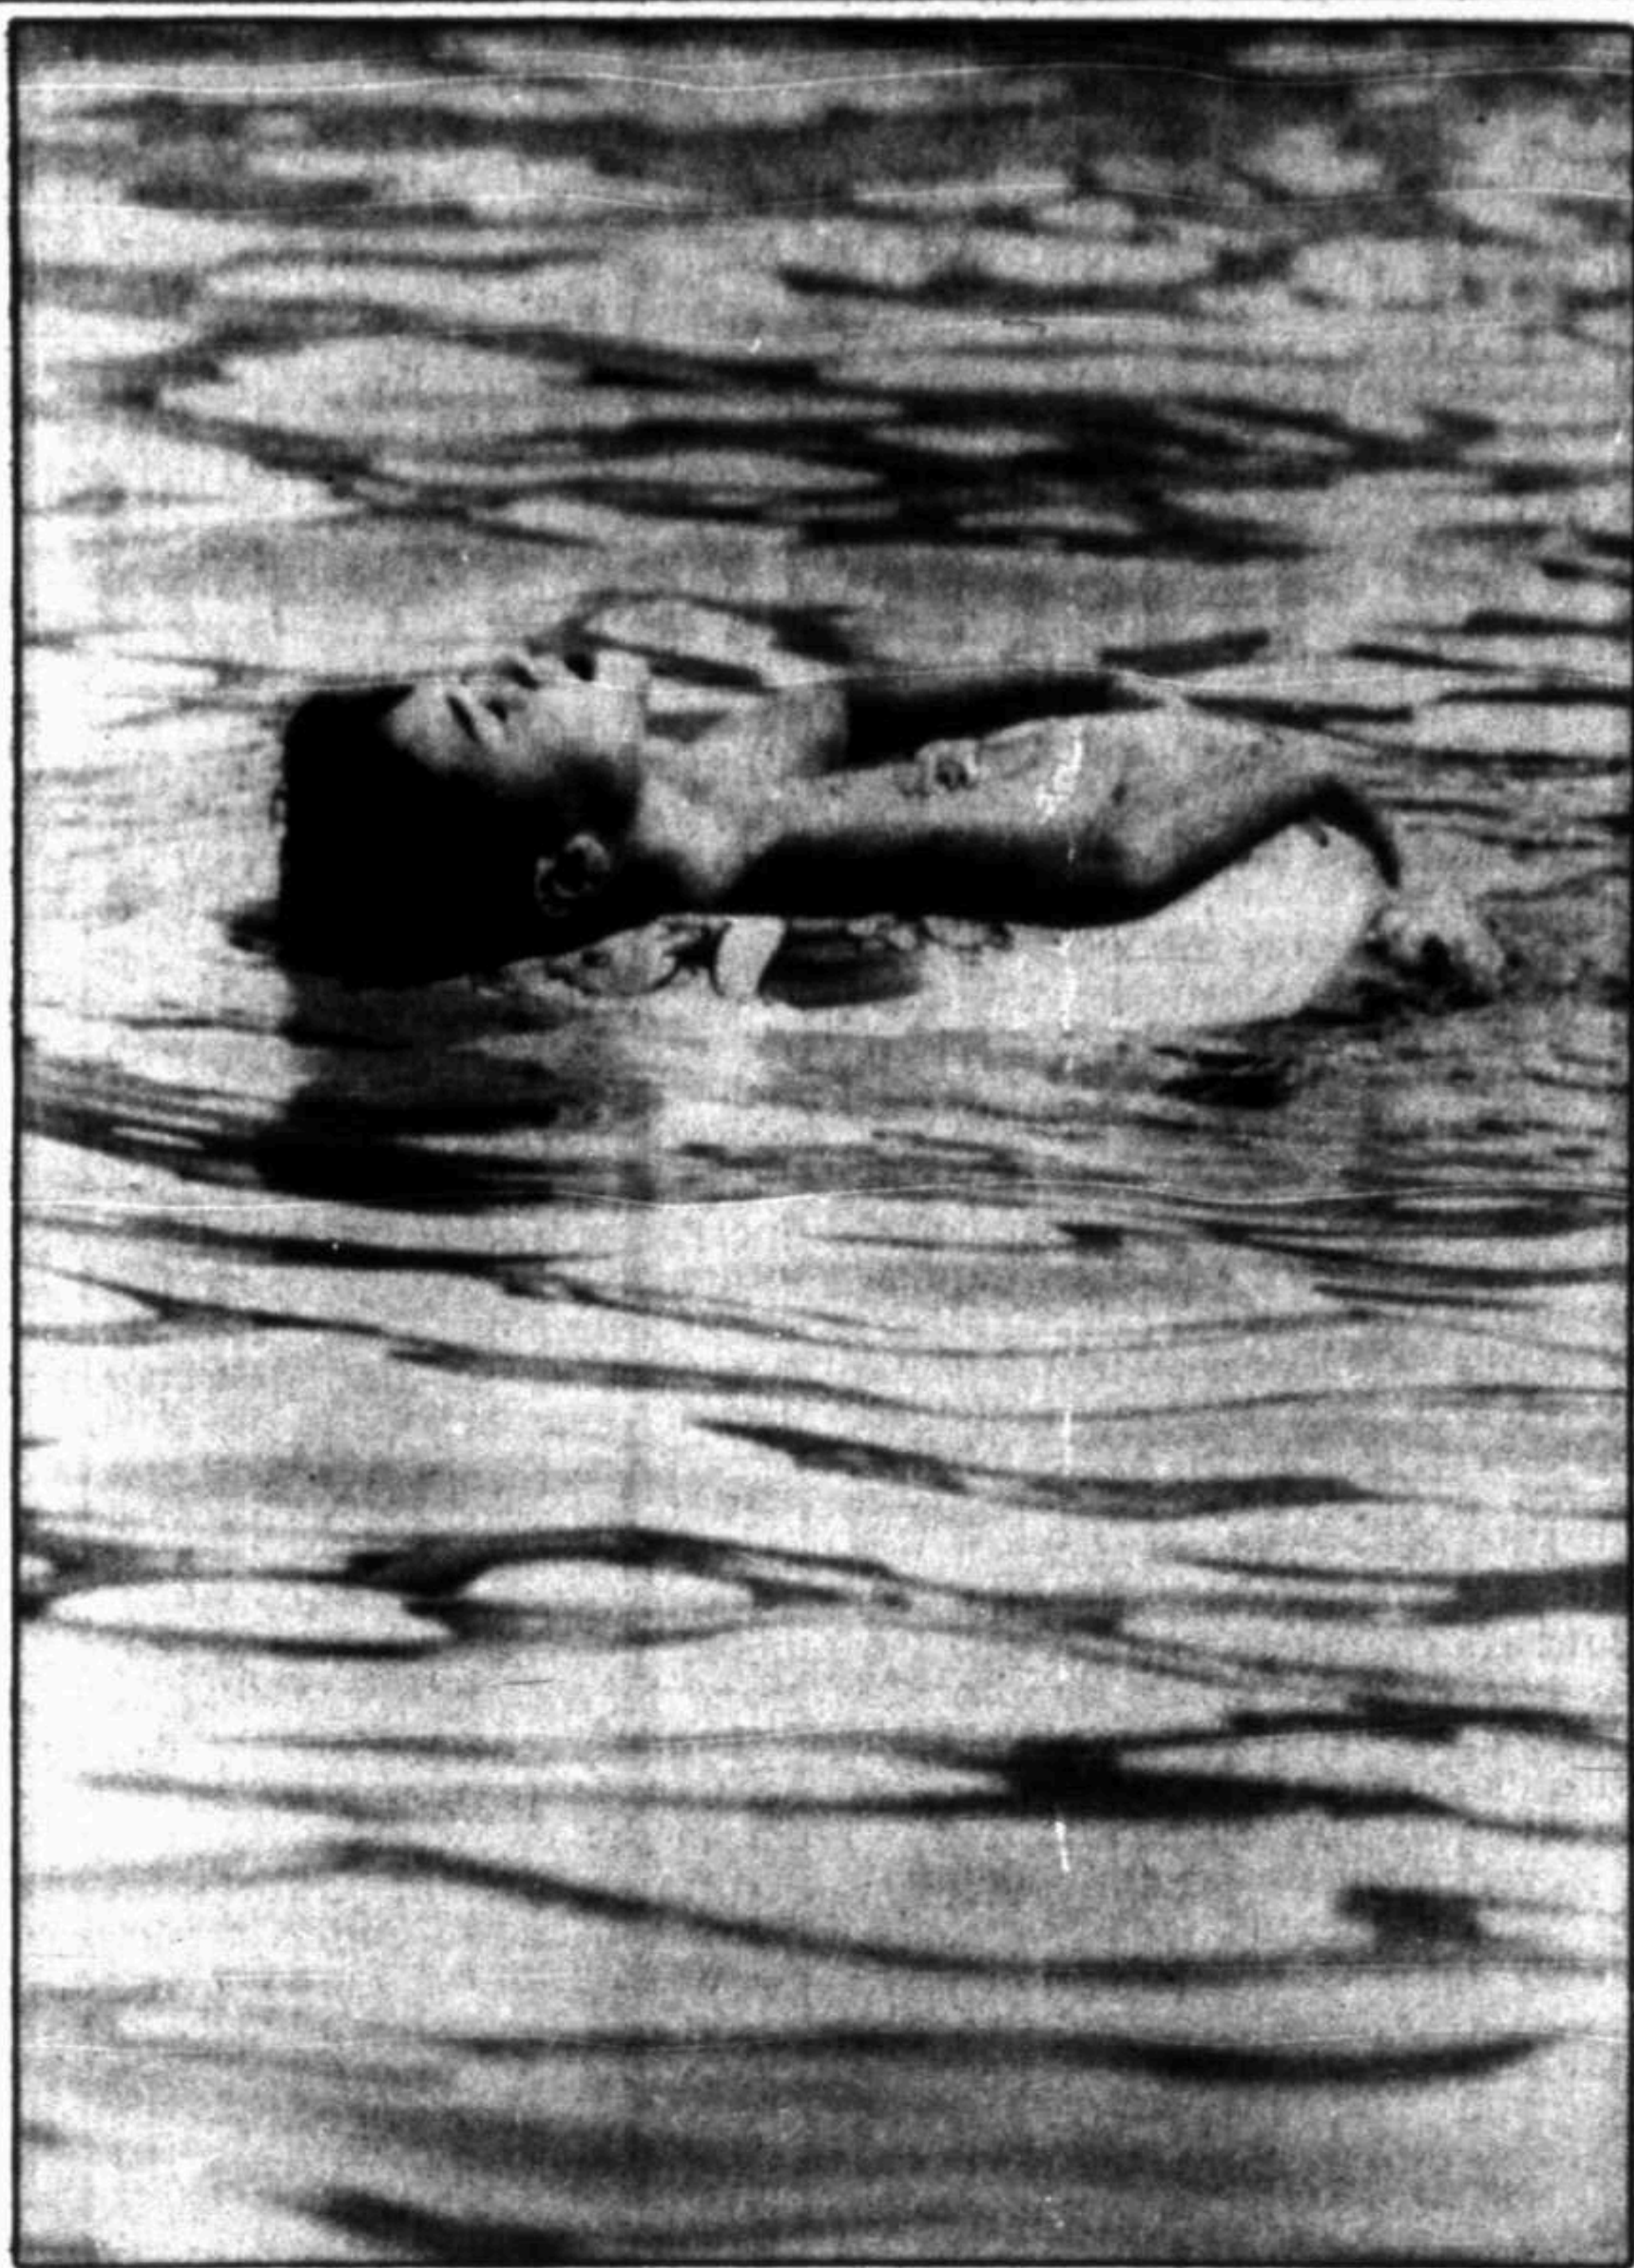

"Yes," Caldwell responded. "How many times, Mr. Caldwell, did you say Mr. Ellebracht (Jr.) kicked Anthony Bates in the head?"

"Ten or 15," Caldwell answered. As the trial continued into late afternoon, Caldwell's hands began to shake and he ground his teeth as Bass quizzed him about conflicting dates.

"These are not a bunch of hick town people," Caldwell said as he glanced at the jury, "and you're not going to get this over on them."

Caldwell's Attorney, Scott Stehling approached the witness stand and handed his client a pill.

Caldwell swallowed a pill and regained his composure.

El Paso vets plan pilgrimage to memorial

By MARY BENATI

EL PASO (AP) — Their journey began 20 years ago in the rice paddies of Vietnam. For those who died, it ended there as well. For some, the journey ends at the Vietnam Memorial Wall in Washington, D.C., where they can touch the names of their friends and weep if they so choose.

To that end, more than 50 El Paso Vietnam veterans have organized a "Journey to the Wall" on Veterans Day, Nov. 11, 1986. They said they thirst for a lessening of the pain they have carried since the war and hunger for healing.

"To me it's a very emotional thing," said Frank Dominguez, who served in Vietnam in 1966 and 1967. One of his best friends, Armando Aguilar, died there.

"We went to Bowie High School together. I was in the Navy, he in the Army. My mother didn't want to let me know that he had been killed in action. But I read it in a newsletter."

Dominguez wants to go and find Aguilar's name. He wants to touch it. He wants to feel the peace he knows is there — in the names of his comrades on the wall.

Like many veterans who came home unsung — indeed, savaged by anti-war demonstrations — Dominguez thought a journey to touch that wall was beyond his own reach. But that has changed.

He will be working with other veterans throughout the summer to raise money for the trip they are now planning. They will experience

Pig Stands still ride high on the hog

By JENNY NARKIEWICZ

BEAUMONT (AP) — Dallas businessman J.G. Kirby furnished the idea. Dr. R.W. Jackson had the money. Together they formed Pig Stands Co. Inc., and opened the nation's and perhaps the world's first drive-in restaurant in September 1921.

That original Pig Stand, a little wooden stand offering "pig sandwiches" on the outskirts of Dallas, had immediate success. Before long, there were more than 100 Pig Stands from New York to California. Two years after the first Pig Stand opened in Dallas, the company opened Beaumont's first stand, at the corner of Highland and Port Arthur roads.

"The restaurants were very popular," says Richard Hailey, owner of the restaurant chain. "Unfortunately, when the Depression hit, it was hard to get supplies, and the company consolidated its operations in Texas."

The first Pig Stand sat on a corner lot, allowing waiters the convenience of running to the curb and hopping onto a car's running board to take or deliver orders. Those actions created the terms "carhop" and "curb service." The car's driver and passengers never had to leave the vehicle for service.

"The idea of curb service was an immediate success," says Hailey. "People loved it." Today, there are 10 Pig Stand restaurants, three in Beaumont, the rest divided between Houston and San Antonio.

While Kirby and Jackson were the brains and money behind the Pig Stand concept, pigs made the ultimate sacrifice. "It all started with what the founders called a 'pig sandwich,'" Hailey says. "The sandwich barbecued leg of pork was so popular they named their restaurant Pig Stand."

The family-owned business is old hat to Hailey, who worked as a Pig Stand dishwasher when he was 16. "My father, Royce Hailey, started with the company in 1930 as a carhop, when he was 13," Hailey said. "He worked his way through the ranks and in 1955, became company president."

In the early 1960s, Royce Hailey and several other people acquired the company's stock and eventually, the elder Hailey became sole owner. In 1983, Richard Hailey, 37, took over ownership. "My father created the chicken fried steak sandwich in the 40s," Hailey says.

Hailey says he believes the restaurants are popular because "people are getting a good value and good food."

"We are the forerunners of today's giant fast-food industry," Hailey says. "And we have been able to adapt to meet the competition. We also put the customer first." In the 1930s, Pig Stands began offering dining-in service and began to evolve into family-style restaurants with full-service menus.

"The Calder Street restaurant, which is now the oldest Pig Stand in Beaumont, still offers curb service," Hailey says. The city's first stand last year was torn down to make way for a highway improvement project, Hailey says.

Hailey says Pig Stands are a tradition in Beaumont. "Some of our customers have been coming to eat here for 25 and more years," Hailey says. "When the older customers start talking about the past times they had at one of the Pig Stands, they get this faraway look in their eyes."

Minister vows he'll take case to 'higher court'

AUSTIN (AP) — The Rev. W.N. Ottwell, who has yet to win a court battle in his fight to keep his unlicensed church home in operation, says he is done trying.

"I'm through fooling with the court system. I'm going to a higher court. I'm going to God," he said Wednesday after the 3rd Court of Appeals dismissed his appeal.

The court said Ottwell did not meet a deadline for filing a required $1,000 appeal bond.

State District Judge Paul Davis of Austin ruled earlier this year that Ottwell's Community Baptist Church at Forest Hill, near Fort Worth, was illegally operating without a state license. Davis assessed fines of $100 per day for Ottwell and eight other people connected with the home.

At first, expressing contempt for the court system, Ottwell said he would not appeal Davis' decision. He changed his mind after a May 21 meeting with Gov. Mark White.

"We put up the appeal because Gov. Mark White said the court system was fair. I said I'd give it a try. It worked out like I thought it would," Ottwell said.

"I told Gov. Mark White our court system is corrupt and we are in a Hitler-type situation in this country," Ottwell said.

"These judges are playing God in these courtrooms and these little bureaucrats are controlling our system," he said.

Ottwell argues that the state has no business forcing a church home to get a license. But the courts, in Ottwell's case and cases involving the late Rev. Lester Roloff of Corpus Christi, have ruled otherwise.

An Aug. 5 sale of the Community

Baptist Church property has been ordered to cover the fines, which Ottwell said now add up to more than $24,000.

Ottwell and his followers came to Austin in May to protest near the Capitol and to meet with state leaders.

The 3rd Court of Appeals did not write an opinion in the case. It was listed as "dismissed for lack of jurisdiction."

Patrick Shannon, the appeals court's chief staff attorney, said the $1,000 appeal bond was filed after the deadline. Ottwell's request for more time was denied, Shannon said.

"The reverend didn't make up his mind soon enough to get the bond filed," he said. "This is pretty much it. He's pretty much out of court now. There's not much more he can do."

Ottwell said he will not voluntarily close the church home. He challenged Attorney General Jim Mattox to go through with the Aug. 5 sale of the church property.

"If Jim Mattox has the guts, he'll sell it. If he ain't, he won't," Ottwell said.

Mattox said Wednesday, "It's going to be sold unless he quits operating or he pays the fines."

"The law is very clear. It was totally expected," he said of the appeals court ruling. "Unfortunately, Ottwell thinks he's above the law."

Ottwell continued to predict that God would punish the state if the home is closed.

"God's not through with Texas yet. They think the state's economy is bad now, just wait," Ottwell said.

Model Airplane Club's 'Fun Fly' ready to take off

From Staff Reports

Organizers are hopeful rain will stay off the planes this weekend when members of the Midland Hi-Sky Radio Control Model Airplane Club converge for their first "Fun Fly."

Chester Tieman, one of the participants, said the planes are flown by radio control using a hand-held transmitter to send signals to the receiver located in the battery of the plane.

The planes' wing span, in this contest, will not be wider than about 6 feet, he said.

"We expect people from Hobbs, Lubbock and Odessa, as well as Midland," Tieman said.

There will be contests for the seven classes of model airplane flyers and plaques and awards will be given to contestants placing in the various stunts, maneuvers and "bomb drop" categories.

The "Fun Fly" will be held Saturday from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. and Sunday from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. It will be held 1/4 mile east on County Road 150, off the Rankin Highway, four miles south of Interstate 20.

Tieman said refreshments will be available and the event is open to the public.

Midlander apprehended after alleged burglary

From Staff Reports

A 26-year-old Midland man who fled on foot early today after allegedly breaking into a Midland woman's home and stealing her purse is in police custody following a search which included a dog from the department's K-9 unit.

Rosa Chiquito, 4000 Livingston, called police shortly after midnight to report a burglary in progress at her home, Det. Sgt. Dusty Land said. Land said the suspect allegedly broke through the woman's bedroom window, injuring both his arms, took the woman's purse and fled before police arrived.

Land said officers and a K-9 followed a trail of blood that led to the apprehension of the suspect in the 5000 block of Rio Grande. He was taken to Midland Memorial Hospital and treated for cuts on both arms.

Police Roundup

He said the woman's purse has not been found.

In other police reports, the burglary of an automobile was reported by John Rousseau. Rousseau told police a stereo and equalizer valued at $200 and a 22 caliber rifle valued at $70 were taken from a vehicle parked in the 3900 block of Tanner Dr.

Steve Reynolds reported the burglary of an automobile while it was parked in the 3300 block of Roosevelt. A set of speakers and other items valued at $130 were reported stolen.

The burglary of a residence was reported Wednesday afternoon by Lewis Elliot, who told police items valued at $1,700 were taken. The items included two rifles, two shotguns, a television set and three pairs of boots.

STATE IN BRIEF

Sweetwater hopes to get $1 million grant from state

SWEETWATER (AP) — Officials in this West Texas City say they hope state officials will approve a $1 million grant to help victims of the April 19 tornado.

Texas officials announced on Wednesday that Sweetwater would receive a $200,000 emergency housing grant. But city leaders said they hope to receive about $800,000 more under the same grant program later this summer.

The state has decided Sweetwater "needs at least ($200,000), but (we'll) have to justify how much more (we) need," said Donald Kenneally, Sweetwater grant coordinator.

The federal government provides grant money. A state agency, the Texas Department of Community Affairs, decides how the money will be spent, said Raymond Christ, executive vice president of the Sweetwater Chamber of Commerce.

Kenneally said the Sweetwater Emergency Relief Fund, a non-profit agency operated by the chamber, found 65 homeowners who appear to meet state requirements for aid under the program.

The twister killed one person and injured about 100 more. City officials said it destroyed 161 buildings and heavily damaged 111 others.

Child abuse funds offered

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Mark White said Wednesday state funds are available through the Children's Trust Fund to finance local programs to prevent child abuse and neglect.

White said the Council on Child Abuse and Neglect Prevention, which oversees the fund, is soliciting proposals for prevention programs and will sponsor a conference for potential applicants in Austin on July 25.

The grant awards will range from $1,000 to $70,000 for the fiscal year starting Sept. 1 and will require a 10 percent local match. With the exception of state agencies, any legally constituted entity is eligible to apply, according to a statement from White's office.

Half of each marriage fee, or $1250, is earmarked for the Children's Trust Fund, which is expected to receive approximately $2.5 million a year.

AUSTIN (AP) — Pat Taylor, an Austin short story writer, and Tim Hatcher, a playwright from Fort Worth, are the winners of the 1986-87 Paisano fellowships.

Each will live at the late J. Frank Dobie's 265-acre ranch, Paisano, near Austin, for six months.

Mrs. Taylor and her husband will reside at the ranch from Aug. 1 to Feb. 1. Hatcher's six months end July 31, 1987.

Alan Tennant of Austin, a nonfiction writer, and novelist Olive Hershey of Houston were selected first and second alternates.

Texas wines win gold

AUSTIN (AP) — State Agriculture Commissioner Jim Hightower said Wednesday the winning of gold medals by two Texas wineries "is a sensational achievement and sends a message all across the country that Texas wine is a serious product that is here to stay."

Hightower spoke at ceremonies honoring Llano Estacado Winery and Pheasant Ridge Winery, both of Lubbock, for their showing at the San Francisco Fair.

Of the 2,000 entries in the competition, Llano Estacado was awarded one of 11 Double Gold Medals for its 1984 Chardonnay. Pheasant Ridge received one of 54 Gold Medals for its 1983 Cabernet Sauvignon.

"In only a single decade, Texas wine producers have gone from being giggled at to winning gold medals. The best part is that this is only the beginning. With 18 commercial wineries across the state, Texas wines are just now coming of age, and our winemakers will be challenging for the gold from now on," Hightower said.

ESM trustee awarded fee

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP) — The trustee for failed ESM Government Securities Inc. didn't get the $1 million fee he asked for, but was happy with the nearly $600,000 a court awarded, his lawyer said.

"We consider it a very high compliment and we appreciate it," Mark Raymond said of Miami lawyer Thomas Tew.

CURIOUS SHOPPER

By SONJA HEINZE

Q. I've noticed that new bath towels (100 percent combed cotton or just 100 percent cotton) give off quite an excess of fuzz and lint for at least four or five washings. I never had this problem until three or four years ago and I've been buying linens for 34 years. What can I do to eliminate this fuzz mess? Phyllis Wood, Margate, N.J.

A. Your observation that newer towels lint more heavily is correct, says Gene Crocker of Cannon's laboratory department. The reason for this is that there has been a change in the manufacturing process. The newer, high-speed machinery produces a greater volume of yarn with fewer manufacturing steps and fewer workers, resulting in a greater amount of lint being left in the yarn.

Another important factor, explains Crocker, is that cotton lint and the dust associated with it are believed to be related to brown lung disease in textile workers. The modern machinery is made to hold more of the short fibers in the yarn so that less of this lint/dust will be released in the work area.

Cannon considered the possibility of using binders to hold the lint in the towels, but the application of chemical treatments could alter the absorbency and softness of the towels and perhaps cause skin problems for some individuals.

Thoroughly cleaning washing machine filters after laundering helps. Also, the use of fabric softener in the wash causes heavier linting.

Q. What has less caffeine, coffee or tea? Answer me back. Joseph Manson, Detroit, Mich.

A. According to Cornell University's guide to caffeine sources, coffee has more caffeine than tea, but the amount of caffeine varies depending on the brewing process. Decaffeinated coffee has the least amount of caffeine — 1 to 6 mg; instant coffee is next, with 60 to 70 mg; automatic perk coffee has 95 to 125 mg; and the coffee with the most caffeine is automatic drip, with 135 to 155 mg. The quantities listed are for five-ounce servings, not big mugs.

For tea, green tea brewed for one minute has 10 to 20 mg of caffeine. Both black tea brewed for one minute and green tea brewed for three minutes have 20 to 35 mg. The strongest cup of tea is black tea brewed for three minutes, which has 35 to 40 mg of caffeine.

"Caffeine is a stimulant that affects the central nervous system," states the guide. "Usually 200 to 240 mg of caffeine are needed to produce stimulatory effects, although for some people the effect level may be lower or higher. Furthermore, people who regularly consume large amounts of caffeine may develop some tolerance to these effects."

Q. I pack walnuts and almonds in the freezer and they always develop a bad taste. Is there any way I can pack them without getting this taste? Lorena Julian, Modesto, Calif.

A. Linda Garcia of the Cooperative Extension at the University of California suggests that the nuts be shelled. When they are shelled, you can pack them more densely and exclude as much air as possible. What you want is less surface area of the nuts to be exposed to air. Do not break them up. Whole pieces keep longer than those broken into smaller pieces, again because less surface area would be exposed to air. Don't add anything to them beforehand such as butter, oil or salt.

Package the nuts in rigid containers or plastic bags with as little room in the packages for air as possible. They should keep well in the freezer for over a year and about six to nine months in the refrigerator. Before using them, make sure they are completely thawed.

Q. Enjoy your column! Some of my sixth grade girls and I are on a diet. We wondered if you could find out the number of calories in one slice of pita bread. It's never given on the package. Esther Wing, St. Francis Cabrini Elementary School, Allen Park, Mich.

A. According to the "Nutrition Almanac" published by Nutrition Search, Inc., there are, surprisingly, 140 calories in one slice of whole-wheat pita bread. You could have fooled me.

Pita bread is a flat, Middle Eastern-style bread that is also known as "pocket bread." In a recipe given in the "Dictionary of American Food and Drink" by John Mariani, the ingredients for pita bread are yeast, water, salt, flour and olive oil. The bread splits open to form a pocket which holds any kind of food one desires.

Batteries necessity of modern life

By LINDA ANDERSON

It is an amazing fact of modern life that the older the child, the more necessary it is to keep a supply of batteries, in various sizes, on hand.

In our house, if it isn't the younger children's Glow-worms and A.G. Bears and Chubbies that need batteries, it's the teen-agers' Walkmen and cassette decks.

If it's one thing batteries aren't, it's cheap. When they all need batteries at one time it's likely to blow our food budget for the entire week.

The older teen-ager has a little tape player that is notorious for the speed with which it eats AA batteries. We decided to use this machine to check out two brands in this size for price, advertising accuracy and length of service. (If batteries can survive in this tape player, they can survive anything.)

Duracel batteries (the copper-topped) are advertised as being the longest lasting of all brands. Eveready Energizers are also supposed to last a long time. Both brands are available in packs of four batteries each, and both four-packs cost $3.19 each. That's about 80 cents for each AA battery. (Prices listed are from a local supermarket. Prices at other locations may vary.)

Energizers' label advertising claims the batteries are "long life alkaline for all uses." The label also carries a chart comparing Energizers' length of relative service with common, ordinary, general purpose carbon batteries. Guess which brand wins in every category? In fact, the chart shows Energizers lasting as much as six times as long as regular batteries when used in motor toys, and four times as long when used in movie cameras.

Duracel batteries are shown in commercials as the longest-lasting battery imaginable — "No other battery looks like it; no other battery lasts like it." The little battery-operated bunnies and monkeys always drum their drums much longer when Duracels are running the show, according to advertisements.

When we actually used the batteries in the teen's tape player, the Duracels really did last longer than the Energizers — about 50 percent longer, in fact. Of course, in actual time that only translates to 7½ hours of playing time for the Duracels and 5 hours playing time for the Energizers.

Though Duracel batteries really seem to last longer and we will probably prefer that brand over its competitors, 7½ hours playing time is not very long — barely one automobile trip to Dallas.

The battery-eating tape player has since been replaced.

'McMatttox attack' leads to fast food facts

AUSTIN, Texas (UPI) — Calorie-counting consumers can find out just exactly what's inside their hamburgers, French fries and chicken wings, thanks to a "McMatttox attack" on fast food chains by Attorney General Jim Matttox.

Five of the nation's largest fast food chains — McDonald's, Burger King, Jack in the Box, Kentucky Fried Chicken and Wendy's — agreed Tuesday to disclose nutritional information to their customers.

Negotiations with Taco Bell to provide similar information are continuing, Matttox said.

Officials of the fast food chains voluntarily agreed to provide nutritional and ingredient information after negotiations with Matttox and California Attorney General John K. Van de Kamp.

Matttox said the five companies were "doing a tremendous service" for the millions of Americans who eat fast foods. He jokingly referred to the campaign to win the agreement as a "McMatttox attack."

"I eat plenty of these fast foods, so it will be nice to know what kind of fat the chicken is cooked in and how many calories and carbohydrates I'm having for dinner," Matttox said.

The companies had limited product information programs in place before the agreement, but such information was only available at corporate headquarters, not at individual outlets, he said.

The agreement, which will be effective on a nationwide basis, requires the companies to provide ingredient and nutritional information — including calories, protein, carbohydrates, fat, cholesterol, sodium, and food additives or dyes — without charge and without the need to make a purchase.

The nutrition information will be provided on a per ingredient basis or on a finished product basis, such as a complete hamburger, Matttox said. Restaurants must also inform customers, including those at drive-in windows, that nutrition information is available.

Matttox said some of the fast food companies were reluctant to agree to provide information about their products.

"Some were concerned about the public's desire not to consume as much fat calories, I suppose, and as much salt," he said. "We think the consuming public ought to know."

Matttox said the agreement was an important step because of the public's interest in good health through proper exercise and nutrition.

Food irradiation mystifies, concerns consumers

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Food irradiation, a process of sterilizing food that has been approved by the Food and Drug Administration for limited uses, remains a mystery to American consumers, according to new marketing data.

In a survey of adults over 17 conducted by the U.S. Department of Energy and the National Food Processors Council, only about one in four were aware of the term "food irradiation" and seven out of 10 said they had concerns about the process.

Irradiation, which has been used to sterilize food in many countries, has traditionally been used in the United States only to sterilize medical devices. At present, low-dose irradiation has been approved for preserving spices, fresh foods and pork.

Industry experts believe that the jury is still out on the benefits of irradiation. According to Dianne Taylor, an editor of Food Engineering magazine, irradiation may eventually solve the problem of salmonella contamination, which involves 4 million cases a year. But high doses of irradiation can destroy food and may form unknown compounds in food.

"Most likely, irradiation will be used in the future combined with other preservation processes," says Taylor.

Campers' food storage no picnic

By MARIAN FARR

Camping out overnight presents special food safety problems, but you can plan ahead to solve them. The biggest problem is lack of refrigeration.

Even on a short overnight trip you'll need to keep cooler space for fresh meat and poultry, milk, butter and eggs. If the trip involves several meals — supper for the first night, plus meals and snacks the following days — here are some suggestions for handling the food:

■ Don't take any more foods that need ice to keep cool than you can use early in the trip. For later use take along canned meats and fish, vegetable soups and stews, dry cooked cereals and peanut butter.

■ Camping stores have a variety of dehydrated foods, including dried meat sticks, dried fruits and nut mixes and even whole dried dinners. For beef stew in a pouch, for example, you just add boiling water.

■ If you catch fish, remember they're highly perishable. After cleaning, wash the fish thoroughly and cook immediately or wrap the fish tightly and keep it in the cooler with ice for no longer than 24 hours.

■ To help keep your ice chest cool longer, wrap the cooler in newspapers and put it in a sleeping bag in the shade while you're hiking, fishing or boating.

■ Keep the same standards of cleanliness for cooking as you would at home. Clean your hands before working with food by using either soap and water or disposable wet hand wipes. And wash your hands again after working with raw meat, poultry or fish and before handling other food.

Food safety is just as important as fire or water safety on a camping trip.

FTC rules change credit transactions

By JOHN K. SCHMIDT

A recently adopted Federal Trade Commission rule changes some of the regulations governing credit transactions.

The "Credit Practices Rule" prohibits many creditors from including certain provisions in consumer credit contracts, requires creditors to provide a written notice to consumers before they co-sign obligations for others about their potential liability if the other person fails to pay and prohibits one method of assessing late charges.

The rule states that credit contracts can no longer include language that requires the debtors to waive their rights to a court hearing, give up their state law rights to keep certain personal belongings, permit the debtor to agree to automatic wage deductions or require the debtor to use as collateral certain uniquely personal items (such as a family Bible or household pet).
