Road to righteousness

Dwight Lee Maskew sees but "one way" to salvation and that is the message he is carrying each day as he walks Midland's streets. Maskew said he is trying to call attention to what Jesus has done for mankind and to unify people in prayer that God will put together a mission group for Central America and Asia.

No confrontations expected at summit

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, flying to a restored 18th century village for three days of meetings on today's global economic problems, says he expects no confrontations at the seven-nation economic summit conference.

But Reagan, who is chairman of the meetings for the first time, could face disputes over the high U.S. budget deficit, interest rates, and suggestions of protectionist trade practices.

Before leaving for Williamsburg, Va., this afternoon, the president was meeting with Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone of Japan.

Even before the summit began, a flap arose over an official U.S. news release that described Japanese trade limitations as being structured in such a way that "foreigners cannot easily pinpoint where and how the restrictions are being applied."

The Reagan administration agreed to remove the material, after receiving protests from Japanese Ambassador Yoshio Okawara, who was described as "pretty upset."

A State Department official, who spoke on condition that he not be identified by name, said the comments in the press kit were unbalanced, and were "not in the spirit of what we are trying to do at Williamsburg."

The summit of the major industrialized democracies — the United States, Canada, Britain, France, Germany, Italy and Japan — will be the third Reagan has attended, and the ninth such annual meeting.

"The theme song of the summit" will be jobs, said Secretary of State George P. Shultz.

Treasury Secretary Donald T. Regan said the summit's priorities will be discussion of "sustained non-inflationry growth of income and employment, interest rates, monetary policy, budget deficits, combating protectionism, East-West trade and economic issues, (and) exchange market intervention."

The president told reporters Thursday that he is "ready as I'll ever be" for the summit conference, after a pre-summit meeting with President Amintore Fanfani of Italy.

The summit partners are expected to express concern that the U.S. budget deficit, which the government forecasts will reach $190 billion in fiscal 1984, is keeping interest rates high and strengthening the dollar. The end result, they are expected to argue, is weakened foreign currencies, continued inflation in the other nations and delayed economic recovery.

Rebel communique claims responsibility for killing

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — A communique purporting to be from the main leftist guerrilla faction claimed responsibility for the first slaying of a U.S. military adviser in El Salvador.

The communique said the killing was in reprisal for "the criminal intervention of Yankee imperialism." But there was no confirmation of the claim, either from rebel radio stations or other sources.

The communique, broadcast by two private radio stations Thursday, claimed that urban commandos of the Popular Liberation Forces (FPL), the largest of five rebel bands fighting the U.S.-backed government, killed Navy Lt. Cmdr. Albert A. Schaufelberger III on Wednesday evening.

But copies of the communique did not carry the official FPL emblem. The group's clandestine Radio Farabundo Marti, as well as Radio Venceremos, the official voice of the five rebel bands, reported the slaying without indicating who was responsible.

The message claimed guerrilla commandos "recovered" a pistol, a submachine gun and a radio transmitter that belonged to the slain American. It also said Schaufelberger, 33, of San Diego, Calif., was "executed" in reprisal for American intervention.

U.S. Ambassador Deane R. Hinton said Salvadoran police have begun an investigation and would likely receive FBI help to probe what he called the "shocking, cowardly murder" of Schaufelberger, who was deputy commander of U.S. military advisers in El Salvador.

Schaufelberger was one of 52 American noncombat military advisers training the Salvadoran armed forces in their 3½-year-old civil war against leftist guerrillas. He also was in charge of security for the American military group.

Before the purported claim of responsibility, Hinton implied leftists were to blame.

"We do not have evidence that would confirm who the killers were," he said, but added: "You can imagine who it is in this country who have been saying venomous things and lies about the role of the military trainers and would conceivably carry out such a terrorist act."

On Thursday, witnesses of the slaying at the Central American University campus in San Salvador said four gunmen acting with the cool manner of professional killers murdered Schaufelberger as he alone waited in his car for a woman friend, Consuelo Escalante, 34, manager of a faculty cooperative.

The shooting occurred after dark and the street was crowded with vehicles.

FNB facing 'serious challenges' with confidence

By LESLIE HAINES

The First National Bank of Midland faces serious challenges in the months ahead, including a probable loss in the quarter ending June 30, but management remains confident the bank will pull through.

More than 500 shareholders gave the bank's officers and board of directors a standing ovation following the bank's annual meeting Thursday after hearing a candid appraisal of the bank's condition and what changes are being made for its longterm financial health.

Board Chairman Clarence Scharbauer Jr. said the past year has been a turbulent one for West Texas businesses, including the bank.

"As the major financial institution in our market, we are, to a large degree, a reflection of prevailing economic conditions," he said.

"LAST YEAR I told you it had been quite a year," Jno P. Butler told shareholders in opening remarks. "This year, I tell you it's been a helluva year." Butler, the senior chairman of the board, has been with the bank 55 years.

In 1982, net income, deposits and earnings per share declined from 1981 results. The deposit decline continued in the first quarter of this year and non-performing loans have continued to plague the institution.

The bank broke even in the first quarter.

Chief Executive Officer Donald L. McCall said he expected loan charge-offs to be significant in the current quarter as well, leading to a loss for the bank. "After that, we expect the worst to be behind us," he said.

Scharbauer told shareholders an "exacting evaluation of every facet" of the bank's operations is now complete. Problems have been recognized and they are being "effectively addressed."

Steps to correct the bank's monetary and organizational structure are under way and have been approved by bank regulatory agencies.

Ground broken for five-story building

By JIM PRESNELL
Business-Energy Writer

A Houston developer broke ground Thursday for an office building on 4.5 acres of north Midland property.

Union Texas Petroleum Plaza is the name of a new five-story, 102,000-square-foot office building to be built by Coventry Development Inc., a Houston company that specializes in developing and managing commercial office projects. The building was designed by Chelsea Architects of Houston.

The $10 million project should be completed by Spring 1984.

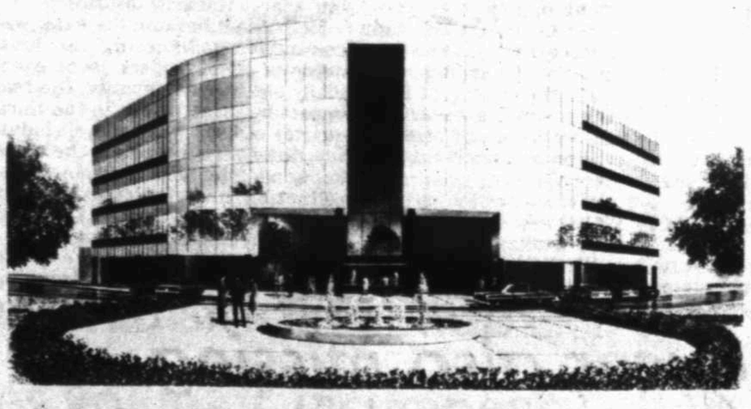
Leonard Lane, of Chelsea, said he and Robert Taylor tried to emphasize the sheltered, green central courtyard that will be landscaped between the left and right wings of the structure.

"We tried to create an outdoor space that is attractive, windshielded, and relaxing," Lane said. "The lobby should be very different, with an unusual sculptured ceiling, black marble and tile floor. Glass block walls will divide it from some of the lease spaces."



Union Texas Petroleum Plaza, a five-story $10 million office project, will be constructed at 4000 N. Big Spring St.

Notched, curved glass sheathing will cover the building in bands of silver, white, blue and black insulated glass.

Tribble & Stephens, a Houston general contractor, is expected to hire some local labor. Construction finance arrangements and permanent lending is being handled by Commonwealth Financial Group of Houston. Dave Webster said Commonwealth plans to do more business here, and this was its "initiation" to Midland.

The building's major tenant, occupying 40,000 square feet, will be Allied Corporation, a subsidiary of Union Texas Petroleum. They will use the anchor-tenant lease space for a home base — to manage their 120-person Midland Division.

Headquartered in Houston, Union Texas says it is "...one of the largest, most aggressive independents (in oil and gas) with worldwide proven oil reserves of over 165 million barrels and gas reserves at almost two trillion cubic feet." It listed a recent success rate for exploration of 84 percent producing wells.

Parent company Allied is in the top 10 percent of the Fortune 500 list of America's biggest corporations.

"People are talking about the death of Midland," said Union Texas' division manager John Freeman. "It hasn't happened.

"Our capital programs for the last three years of operations have gotten bigger and bigger each time," Freeman stated. "We continue to try to maintain production levels — which involves drilling more wells."

His office, which has been in Midland for more than 25 years, now occupies three floors in the Wilco Building. "Downtown is not going to suffer at all from development in this (north) area of Midland," he said.

Coventry Development made Union Texas a favorable offer — and the company needed long-term space that could expand and had good aesthetic possibilities.

"We wanted our own identity," Freeman said, "rather than being a tenant in someone else's building we will be the prime tenant."

The manager says his company is growing now, but Midland as a whole "...needs time in order to regain the 'booming' business climate."

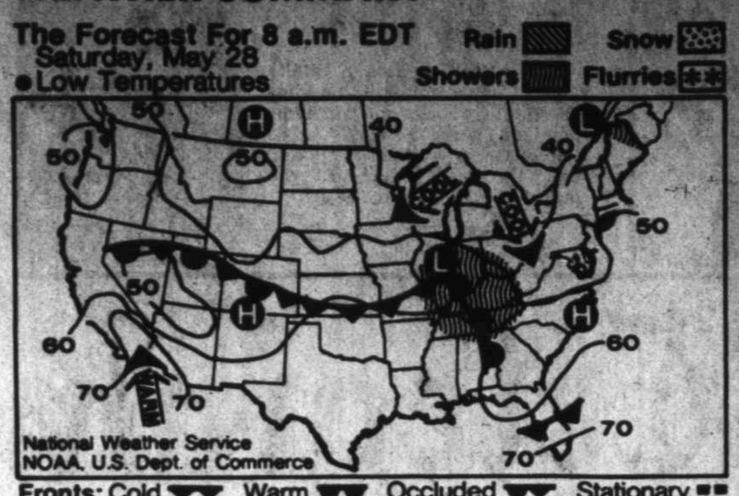
WEATHER SUMMARY



AP Laserphoto Map

Warm weather in the South and cooler temperatures in the North are forecast through Saturday by the National Weather Service. Showers are predicted from northern Georgia and Alabama into the Midwest.

Chance for thunderstorms looms

Though the May rains have been ever so slight, a chance for thunderstorms still looms.

The weatherman at the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport allowed a 20 percent probability of rain this afternoon and a chance of thunderstorms Saturday afternoon.

The weatherman recorded only a trace of rainfall Thursday. But the day before he gauged 0.27 of an inch. This brings the year's rainfall total to 1.94 inches.

Tonight's low temperature is to be in the mid-60s, and winds are to be southerly to southeasterly at 5 to 15 mph. The weatherman is calling for a chance of thunderstorms on Saturday, when the high is to be near 90 degrees.

Winds are to be southerly to southeasterly at 5 to 15 mph Saturday.

Thursday's high temperature of 89 degrees lagged behind the record high of 100 for the date in 1945. The overnight low was 61 degrees, while the record low for a May 27 was 48 in 1947.

Reagan offers arms reassurance

Copley News Service

WASHINGTON — On the eve of the Williamsburg economic summit where he will meet with leaders of six allied industrial nations, President Reagan sought Thursday to reassure the people of those countries that he is serious about achieving arms control.

The president's effort came in an unusual White House interview with television correspondents from Great Britain, France, Italy, West Germany, Canada and Japan, the nations to be represented at the summit.

The 36-minute session, dominated by issues certain to be raised at Williamsburg, was televised live in Canada and Japan, according to the White House.

It was not certain Thursday night how the interview would be aired in the other four countries, whose leaders will join Mr. Reagan this weekend in the restored colonial city 110 miles south of Washington.

Asked if he is not "too warlike" and not "bent more on a crusade than pure defense" in his approach to arms control and military spending, the president acknowledged "that there's been an effort to express doubt as to whether I really mean it about arms reductions."

He added:

"Let me assure all your audiences right now — I campaigned over and over again saying that I would stay in negotiations as long as it took to arrive at a real, legitimate reduction of these nuclear strategic weapons. That I believe is the only future for the world."

Defending his criticisms of the Soviets, the president spoke of Soviet soldiers in Afghanistan who "were ordered to kill women and children."

And, he said, "If I speak frankly about those things, it's because I believe that we in the Western world, in the free world, must make it clear that, yes, we want peace and, yes, we're willing to sit down and work out agreements with the Soviet Union, but we want them to know that we're not going to forsake our principles."

Pressed by the British reporter about who has control over the launching of cruise missiles in Europe — an issue in the current British political campaign — the president said Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher and the other allied leaders have "a sort of veto power" in the matter.

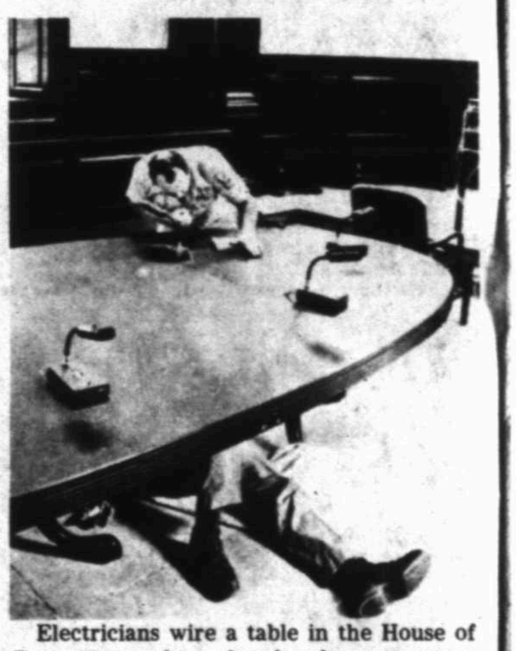
"I don't think either one of us will do anything independent of the other. This constitutes a sort of veto power, doesn't it?

"But we have an understanding about this and would never act unilaterally with any of our allies on this," he added.

The president made it clear as well that the United States plans to proceed with the deployment of Pershing II missiles in Europe later this year.

"I believe that deploying on schedule ... will be the thing that will bring the Soviets legitimately into negotiations," he said.

"Right now, they seem, with their propaganda, to have pinned their hopes on preventing our deployment. But any proposal they make is one in which they still have a monopoly and they view us as having nothing on our side."



Electricians wire a table in the House of Burgesses, where heads of government from seven nations and the European Common Market will gather.

FNB expects second-quarter loss

Scharbauer also announced creation of a 15-member Resources Advisory Board composed of young men who will augment the already-substantial business acumen of the directors with "a source of fresh ideas from some of Midland's most enterprising and energetic young business leaders."

FIRST NATIONAL remains dedicated to identifying all its problems and doing "what needs to be done to get these problems behind us, with a view toward year-end," said McCall. "Our goal is to firmly establish the integrity of the bank and to re-establish trust and confidence in it."

To that end, the board of directors announced recently a plan to boost First National's capital position and heal its wounded loan-to-deposit ratio.

THE PLAN includes:

—Injecting $40 million in new capital through a $20 million stock offer underwritten by the board and an additional $20 million in subordinated debentures to be purchased by the board;

—Accelerating $50 million in payment by selling letters of credit related to the sale of the bank's building in December;

—Limiting the bank's loan portfolio to a level that can be funded from First National's traditional, local deposit base;

—Reducing the loan portfolio by up to $200 million.

The latter reflects the banks' new conservative loan policy and a realization it must sell more loan participations to its upstream banks (larger banks more capable of handling the loan needs of big corporations).

If a local oil firm, for example, were to move its loan business from First National to another bank, that would probably be the reason, a bank officer explained. When a corporation does this, its deposits normally move also.

Under terms of an agreement with InterFirst Corp., Dallas, and Texas Commerce Banks, Houston, First National will be selling loan participations in the amount of $100 million in the near future, McCall said. The time frame on the remaining $100 million is uncertain, he added.

"THIS WILL result in some of our customers dealing with larger institutions. We hope there will be minimal disruption. We won't be any less responsive to our customers' needs, simply more conservative."

McCall said Texas Commerce Bank has asked for the right to purchase up to 4.5 percent of FNB common stock. InterFirst Corp. already owns this amount of the bank's outstanding shares.

McCall laid the blame for the bank's financial difficulties on the oil and gas boom of the past few years and the bank's heady response to it.

"We served a keystone role in the recent boom," McCall said. "Money and people were pouring into the Permian Basin from all over the country, and First National served as both a conduit and source. A country bank had been transformed into a large financial institution."

McCall said because the bank was committed to meeting the loan needs of its customers, loans eventually outstripped deposits. The real impact began to be felt in the third quarter of 1982 when the oil industry downturn affected the area economy, he said. This led to a reduction in deposits. Also, less money was available from the bank's corresponding banks.

First National will have to be leaner in order to offset dropping earnings, and be more discerning with loans, he said.

NEW OR revised policies include:

—Staff reductions since January.

—Starting June 1, assessing a service charge of $3 to $6 per month on all transaction (checking) accounts with balances below $1,000.

—Requiring independent oil and gas analysis on potential loans of $3 million or more, in addition to the analysis normally done by First National's own petroleum engineering department.

—Reducing operating expenses overall by 10 percent for the rest of 1983.

McCall also announced the bank's rebuilding plan might include "the distinct possibility" of First National forming its own bank holding company as a way to diversify the bank's holding through owning other businesses.

'Final chapter' on producer also missing

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The disappearance of Roy Radin has all the elements of a mystery novel: a rich New York producer vanishes, his mother puts up $1 million for his safe return and a self-proclaimed "No. 1 Hollywood Private Eye" hits the case.

The plot already includes a television celebrity, an elusive businesswoman, an incomplete deal for a $35 million movie studio and a broken dinner engagement at a posh Beverly Hills restaurant.

All that's missing is the victim — Roy Alexander Radin, 33.

John O'Grady, the private investigator and retired Los Angeles police detective hired to find Radin, said Thursday his search has hit a dead end.

"There's nothing more I can do," said O'Grady. "I developed all the leads I have and gave them to police."

O'Grady, hired by Radin's mother, claims Radin was murdered because of "organized crime trying to infiltrate the motion picture industry."

"I have enough information to damn near prove it, but Mr. Radin's mysterious disappearance is being handled by the (Los Angeles Police Department) and I can't reveal further information," he said.

Authorities "have no indication" of Mafia involvement, police Detective Glenn Souza, who is handling the investigation, said Thursday. Neither do they have "any idea" what happened to Radin.

"We haven't got a line on where he might be," Souza said. "It doesn't look likehe voluntarily disappeared at this time. (Foul play) is a logical assumption, but it is circumstantial."

A recent confidential report by the Los Angeles County district attorney's office said the Mafia might reach its tentacles into Hollywood "due to a frequent need for financial backing which is not always freely available through ordinary lending institutions."

According to Radin's personal secretary, Jonathon Swanson, Radin arrived in Hollywood on May 9 looking for $35 million to start a new movie studio.

On Friday the 13th at 9:45 p.m., Radin left Hollywood's Regecy Hotel for a private dinner at La Scala, a pricey Italian restaurant near Rodeo Drive. No one 7ill identify the film executive Radin was supposed to meet.

Murder, child injury indictments filed against vocational nurse

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Murder and child injury indictments filed against a nurse in another county should convince some reluctant witnesses to aid investigators looking into infant deaths at a San Antonio hospital, a prosecutor says.

The nurse, 32-year-old Genene Jones, was employed at San Antonio's Medical Center Hospital before moving to Kerrville to work for a pediatrician.

She is scheduled to be arraigned at 1 p.m. today at the Kimble County Courthouse in Junction. District Attorney Ronald Sutton said she also will ask the court to reduce her bond and appoint a defense attorney.

She was transferred to Kerr County Jail in Kerrville from Ector County Jail in Odessa, where she had been held on bonds totaling $225,000.

Ms. Jones was indicted by a Kerr County grand jury Wednesday on charges she injected seven children with a powerful muscle relaxant or "unknown drug," causing one death and six serious seizures.

A Bexar County special grand jury has been investigating a series of suspicious infant deaths at Medical Center's pediatric intensive unit from 1978 to early 1982.

Ms. Jones, a licensed vocational nurse, worked at the hospital during that period, but has denied any wrongdoing.

Bexar County Assistant District Attorney Nick Rothe, who is heading the San Antonio inquiry, said Wednesday's indictments should provide a focus for his investigation.

"The return of indictments in a related investigation always helps," Rothe said Thursday. "I think this may turn some people around. A lot of people say this is a witch hunt and it's not.

"Genene Jones is certainly someone we want to look very closely at," he said. "The continuation of the San Antonio scenario in Kerrville obviously is interesting."

Ms. Jones appeared before the Bexar County grand jury in February, but Rothe said it "would be futile to recall her while she's under indictment."

Hospital records show 122 infants died during the period being investigated, but prosecutors won't say how many deaths are considered suspicious.

The Kerr County investigation began about nine months ago, after the Sept. 17 death of 15-month-old Chelsea Ann McClellan.

Ms. Jones is charged with Chelsea Ann's death, which was attributed to respiratory failure, and injuring six other children ranging in age from one month to seven years.

Threatened cattle quarantine 'blackmail,' former governor says

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas senators are considering again a bill supporters say will stop the federal government from prohibiting out-of-state cattle shipments — a quarantine banned by a state judge and called blackmail by a former governor.

The House-approved bill, tentatively approved May 11 by the Senate, would make Texas conform with federal standards for control of the cattle disease brucellosis.

The Independent Cattlemen's Association of Texas obtained a court order Thursday temporarily stopping the federal government from enforcing the quarantine scheduled to begin June 1.

A hearing on the order will be held June 6 in the 139th District Court in Edinburg, Roy Wheeler, president of ICA, told a Capitol news conference.

The South Texas court confirmed the order was issued and a hearing date set.

Briscoe engaged in strongly worded debate with Sen. Bob Glasgow, D-Stephenville, the Senate sponsor of the measure.

"Ask any lawyer if a district judge in Hidalgo County can issue a restraining order against the federal government," Glasgow said.

Shortly after the news conference, Texas Attorney General Jim Mattox issued a news release saying he would seek an injunction against the U.S. Department of Agriculture if the threatened quarantine is imposed.

"If (President) Reagan and his agriculture department think they're going to run over the state of Texas and its cattle raisers, then we'll see them in court," Mattox said.

Brucellosis is a cattle diesase that causes reduced calf crops and lowers milk production, although it causes no danger to consumers of meat and pasteurized dairy products.

The pending bill in the Legislature would give the Texas Animal Health Commission authority to adopt rules to comply with the federal program of testing and vaccinations. Steers and spayed heifers would be exempted.

"All the cattle people in Texas I have talked with say they've got to have this bill," Glasgow said at the Thursday news conference. "It's not only a question of whether we have a federal quarantine but whether other individual states will have their quarantines," Glasgow said.

AP Laserphoto

Former Gov. Dolph Briscoe, right, and Roy G. Wheeler, president of the Independent Cattlemen's Association, appear at a news conference Thursday in Austin.

Sen. John Traeger, D-Seguin, who was instrumental in blocking final passage of Glasgow's bill earlier, said he would speak against the bill "but I do not plan to filibuster. I don't do that."

"A quarantine would have a negligible effect in Texas," Briscoe told the news conference. "This whole thing has been blown up as a bugaboo. It's a bluff by the federal government."

The former governor said he did not see how a quarantine would "affect meat prices now or in the future."

He said there are about 2 million head moved out of Texas each year. About 70 percent of these are steers, which are not part of the program. A large number of heifers are being moved to grass then to feedlots. "The best figure I can see is that a quarantine would affect 50,000 to 100,000 head," he said.

AUSTIN (AP) — House members have drawn a redistricting map that should leave Texas' 27 congressmen in good shape for re-election.

Bill sponsor Tom Uher, D-Bay City, said the plan tentatively approved Thursday in a 102-35 vote "recognizes the value of incumbency."

The measure faces another House vote before going back to the Senate for consideration of amendments.

The map, drawn by Uher and Sen. Oscar Mauzy, D-Dallas, should be particularly helpful to freshman U.S. Rep. Tom Vandergriff, D-Arlington, who won a tight election last November.

Vandergriff would pick up a Democratic portion of Dallas County and lose a Republican area of Dallas. The GOP section would shift to the district of U.S. Rep. Steve Bartlett, R-Dallas.

The Legislature got the redistricting task after federal courts and the U.S. Justice Department rejected the map drawn in 1981. The Uher-Mauzy plan is largely the court-drawn plan, with several changes.

House members turned down several amendments Thursday, including Dallas Rep. Paul Ragsdale's plan to draw a black congressional district in Dallas County. That amendment was voted down 88-48.

Copley News Service

LOS ANGELES — During the week, Bradley Tubin operates his law practice in traditional fashion from an office in nearby Westwood.

On weekends, however, Tubin, 29, sets up shop with a few lawn chairs and a fruit crate under a tree near Venice Beach. His degree hangs from a tree and a sign announces, "Free Legal Advice Here!"

Tubin dispenses no-obligation advice to the dozens of people he sees on a good weekend day and some end up coming to his regular office for more standard consultation.

A group of lawyers took a slightly more aggressive approach to soliciting clients last summer. They hired an airplane to tow a banner along South Bay beaches bearing a sign reading: "Need A Lawyer?" followed by a telephone number.

And there are an increasing number of lawyers, especially younger ones seeking to establish a practice, who are using newspaper, television and the Yellow Pages to advertise.

Six years ago, before the Bates vs. Arizona decision eliminated bans on attorney advertising, such behavior would have been enough to have the offending attorney tossed out of the Bar.

But the Bates decision, a surplus of attorneys and a tough economy are combining to revolutionize the way legal advice is procurred and dispensed in the United States.

"We're all out there trying to get exposure, hustling for the dollar," said one young Torrance, Calif., attorney. "There's a lot of competition."

The Los Angeles County Bar Association counts 17,300 members and adds 250 to 300 new members each year, a spokeswoman said.

Faced with intense competition, many young attorneys take second jobs and advertise in various media in an effort to establish their practice.

Perhaps one of the best examples of the deregulated legal marketplace is the Legal Action Workshop in nearby Lawndale which advertises "attorney assisted do-it-yourself law."

Clinic secretaries take care of the paperwork and filing, which is supervised by an attorney, spokeswoman Kathleen Witt said. "A lot of people like the idea of being able to represent themselves," she said. "We've really gotten quite busy."

The workshop opened about a year ago, the fifth in a chain of five around the metropolitan area.

Perhaps the best-known legal firm to arise after the Supreme Court decision striking down lawyer advertising is Jacoby & Meyers, which has grown to a chain of more than 80 offices around the nation.

Man rapes, murders old woman

EDWARDSVILLE, Ill. (AP) — A man who raped an 86-year-old was guilty of murder for her death a month later because the attack weakened the woman and left her unable to expel food lodged in her windpipe, a judge has ruled.

However, Madison County Chief Criminal Court Judge Philip J. Rarick, hearing the case without a jury, rejected prosecution claims of "psychological murder" based on testimony that Elizabeth Windslow had "lost the will to live."

The claims had "no basis in law," the judge ruled Wednesday.

The verdict against Randy Brackett, 23, was "a very important step forward in the protection of the elderly," said State's Attorney Don W. Weber. "It recognizes the frailties of old people. A younger person would not have died in the case."

Weber said the judge "took emotional and psychological factors into account, and our research shows that this is the first case where these factors were considered."

The judge set sentencing for June 6. Brackett, already serving a 60-year term for the attack in October 1981, could be sentenced to life in prison for her murder.

Mrs. Winslow died Nov. 24 when she choked on food while being spoon-fed her lunch at a Godfrey nursing home.

Rarick said he based his ruling on prosecution evidence that a broken rib suffered by Mrs. Winslow, a widow, during the attack at her Alton home would have made it difficult for her to expel food lodged in her windpipe.

Brackett "may not have anticipated the sequence of events following his acts which resulted in the death of Elizabeth Winslow," Rarick said in his ruling.

But, the judge continued, "his unlawful acts in the commission of the forcible felonies of rape and aggravated battery precipitated those events, and he is responsible for the consequence."

The fracture, discovered when she was hospitalized after the attack, was so minor it was missed by the pathologist who did an autopsy. She also suffered a broken arm in the incident. According to the autopsy report, Mrs. Winslow died after a large volume of food entered her esophagus.

"She was being spoon-fed ice cream at the nursing home when her jaw dropped and she went into a fixed stare," said Dallas M. Burke, the Madison County coroner. "She did not choke or even try to cough up the food. I'd say it's rare, but it does happen to people in a weakened condition."

Mrs. Winslow's doctor reported that she had slipped into a "deep depression" when she was released from the hospital two weeks after the attack, according Mrs. Burke.

"He said she had just lost the will to live," said Mrs. Burke. "She was voluntarily trying to starve herself to death."

Her family immediately placed her in the nursing home, rather than allow her to return to her house.

Homesteaders open Brazil's fastest-growing state

PORTO VELHO, Brazil (AP) — Homesteaders stream by the thousands into Rondonia, Brazil's newest and fastest-growing state, building new lives in what was once an inhospitable part of the Amazon jungle.

The settlers, mostly farmers from southern Brazil, are now producing coffee, cocoa, bananas, natural rubber, meat and dairy products on millions of acres that until recently were a malaria-infested, uninhabited rain forest.

"We are occupying Brazil's last frontier," Gov. Jorge Teixeira said in an interview. "Rondonia has tremendous potential to supply food, not only to Brazil but to an entire hungry world."

In 1970, 113,000 people lived in what was then a federal territory, covering 90,107 square miles — almost the size of Oregon — on Brazil's remote northwestern border with Bolivia 1,700 miles from Rio de Janeiro. Almost everyone lived in Porto Velho, the backwater capital and only the city for hundreds of miles in any direction.

Today there are nearly 700,000 Rondonians, and forecasts say the 1 million mark is not far away. New farming and ranching towns have sprung up literally in the midst of nowhere. One, Ji-Parana, which 10 years ago was not on maps, now has 175,000 people and is bigger than Porto Velho.

In late 1981 Rondonia became Brazil's 23rd state, in what Teixeira termed "a carefully planned operation" involving the creation of roads, health posts, schools and the government machinery necessary for the transition.

"It's incredible. Just since I took office, in 1979, 271,000 people have come in," said the governor, a 58-year-old retired army paratroop colonel. "But we were prepared to receive them, and we're ready for more."

A 1981-1986 development plan, budgeted at $1.5 billion with the World Bank financing a third, calls for the establishment of 39 more rural settlements, the paving of the state's principal highway, and the construction of Rondonia's first hydroelectric plant.

The pioneer spirit abounds.

Rondonia's first university opened in 1982. The state just held its first technology fair. The inauguration of the state bank is set for July.

Officials say Rondonia is avoiding the pitfalls that plagued Brazil's ill-fated Transamazon Highway homesteading scheme of a decade ago. In that project, thousands of settlers in a region further east were stranded on unproductive jungle land with no government support.

"Migration here has been spontaneous, not contrived by the government as was the case with the Transamazon project," said Luiz Carlos Coelho de Menezes, the new state's agriculture secretary. "We set up the basic structures, of course, but the farmers came here strictly on their own."

Hotel caters to nostalgic

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti (AP) — In the evenings, the fanciful and the famous sip rum punch at the bar and watch the bathroom of the Anne Bancroft Suite inch closer toward collapsing onto the piano.

By day, they sip rum punch at the pool or on the rambling verandah and watch unsuspecting first-timers back out in horror, stammering excuses and muttering threats at their travel agents.

Al Seitz, whose motto "The Guest Is Always Wrong" filled the Grand Hotel Oloffson with a loyal following, died last July. But his elegant widow Sue has added polish to the legend without dulling its edge.

"This is the only hotel in the world where guests send thank-you notes," says Jane Murphy Schulberg of New York, an Oloffson lifer. "We have reunions and write each other. It takes a certain type of person to love this place."

The Oloffson was built at the turn of the century to house a Haitian president who must have been a fan of the Brothers Grimm. It rises like a hallucinogen-inspired fantasy over surrounding mango trees and palms at the edge of Port-au-Prince. U.S. Marines used it as a hospital when they occupied Haiti, until 1934. Then Oloffson, a Norwegian sea captain, made it a hotel.

Seitz, a West Indies trader from Queens, N.Y., took over in 1960 and held on through the years of Francois "Papa Doc" Duvalier, at times struggling to keep at least one guest in the place to avoid threatened expropriation.

In his novel "The Comedians," Graham Greene wrote of the hotel:

"It had the air at night of a Charles Addams house in a number of the New Yorker. You expected a witch to open the door to you or a maniac butler, with a bat dangling from the chandelier behind him. But in the sunlight ... it seemed fragile and period and pretty and absurd."

Now its turrets, towers, breezeways, stairways, pickets, louvers and lacey wood grillwork are freshly painted in white. Rooms are done in colorful Haitian cottons, and the grounds show up as backdrops in Vogue. Still, it is the Oloffson.

Telephones are as rare as plaid polyester golf slacks. Sue Seitz decided to install a switchboard sometime in the future only after a lingering existential crisis and howls from guests who thought even air conditioning was going too far.

Fielding's Guide has dismissed the Oloffson as "a primitive bivouac."

But the 28 rooms are booked solid all winter, with 90 percent repeaters. Richard Burton, who portrayed the hotel owner in the movie "The Comedians," stayed elsewhere recently, and Oloffson legend has it that a clerk, not recognizing him, couldn't find him a room.

If ceiling slats bow precariously over the upright piano downstairs, guests are too busy reviving Cole Porter greats, or enacting "Annie" with the guy who wrote the script, or hearing Hal Holbrook's Mark Twain, to care.

Boston Mayor Kevin White appears on local television Thursday night saying that he will not seek re-election. White has served as mayor for Boston for four terms.

'The joy has gone out of the job'

BOSTON (AP) — Kevin H. White, the dean of the nation's big-city mayors whose administration has been marred by a federal corruption probe and high-level indictments, says he won't seek a fifth term because the joy has gone out of the job.

"I'm going to have fun again at something else, but not at mayor of Boston," White said after announcing his decision in a recorded statement broadcast Thursday, ending weeks of speculation on whether he would seek an unprecedented fifth term.

The 53-year-old White, now in his 16th year as mayor, said investigations of his administration by the U.S. attorney were "debilitating" but did not influence his decision. He contended that since the Watergate scandal of the early 70s, all mayors have had to contend with probes.

White has not been accused of any wrongdoing, but seven members of his administration have been indicted or convicted on charges of extortion or fraud connected to their official jobs.

"There does come a time in the life of every man when a change is appropriate, and that time has come for me," White said in his five-minute paid announcement, broadcast over radio and television stations. He did not disclose his plans for when he leaves office.

White has been under heavy attack for the past two years, and 71 percent of 401 registered voters polled by WBZ-TV on Thursday night said they agreed with White's choice not to run again.

A former Massachusetts secretary of state, White became mayor in 1968 just three months before the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr. was assassinated, and led the city through the racial strife of court-ordered busing in the 1970s.

He was considered for George McGovern's running mate in 1972 on the Democratic presidential ticket.

As mayor, White built a reputation as a bright, innovative, big-city leader. He attracted fresh talent to City Hall and established the city's first consumer protection agency. He began an ambitious urban renewal project in Boston's neighborhoods — most notably the restoration of the 18th-century Faneuil Hall Market, a popular shopping area and tourist attraction.

But in recent months the image was clouded by reports of federal grand jury investigations centering on an aborted fund-raiser and birthday celebration for his wife in 1981. The state Ethics Commission also investigated the party, learning that it had raised at least $122,000 and that more than 60 percent of the donors were city workers or members of their families.

A former city redevelopment authority official was convicted last year of extortion in the raising of campaign contributions for public officials, White among them.

The mayor has denied any wrongdoing and filed a complaint with the Justice Department against U.S. Attorney William Weld.

Money stolen in sorrow

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — Thieves masquerading as mourners took money and jewelry from a house where people had gathered after the funeral of a teenage girl, a family said.

Dean and Sally Koop opened their home to friends and relatives hours after their daughter, Selina, 17, was buried May 11. She had been killed in a car accident Santa Fe on Mother's Day.

As hundreds of people milled about the home and yard, thieves mingled in the house, robbing purses, taking money from wallets and rifling the dead girl's jewelry and other belongings.

"It just gives you the feeling that some people are very, very low," said Koop, 51. "It makes you want to move away into the country to get away from people who would do that."

Mrs. Koop said, "It's horrible to know that your friends were robbed in your very own house.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (AP) — Gov. James R. Thompson and state Senate leaders filed into a closed-door meeting that really got down to the bare essentials.

Reporters, eavesdropping at the door, heard clapping and laughter coming from what they thought was another high-level meeting on Thompson's proposal to boost Illinois' income taxes. A deal, perhap? A bill?

No. A Strip-a-Gram.

Statehouse scribes had watched the Republican governor, in shirtsleeves, stride into Senate GOP leader James "Pate" Philip's office outside the chamber. He was followed by Philip and Democratic Senate President Philip Rock.

A few other lawmakers straggled in, apparently — the reporters thought — to be subjected to intense lobbying from Thompson, who has had trouble rounding up votes for his plan.

TVA may add cost to bills

GREENEVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — The Tennessee Valley Authority (TVA), the nation's largest electric utility, may continue to add the cost of construction to consumers' bills, a judge has ruled, because the charge is a user fee and not a hidden tax.

A.F. Barone, an attorney who filed a lawsuit to halt the practice, said Thursday he would appeal Judge William P. Gray's decision.

TVA "holds everyone in its area hostage to its will ... and we, the consumers, are completely helpless to do anything about it," Barone said in a statement after the ruling.

TVA has built five nuclear reactors and is building four more. The agency has stopped construction on eight reactors after spending about $4 billion on them.

FDA tests fish for six rivers

LANSING, Mich. (AP) — The U.S. Food and Drug Administration is testing carp and whitefish from six Michigan rivers and Saginaw Bay to assess the "potential extent of the dioxin problem" in the state, the Michigan Department of Natural Resources says.

Results of the analysis should be available late this summer, the department said Thursday.

State and federal environmental officials consider Dow Chemical Co. to be the most likely source of dioxin contamination in Midland, the company's base, and the rest of Michigan. Dow says dioxin is a common pollutant generated by combustion.

A Michigan State University study found dioxin in fish taken from 10 rivers in the state, although the sample size was very small.

Licensing reforms wanted

WASHINGTON (AP) — Energy Secretary Donald Hodel is appealing for nuclear licensing reforms that would make it easier to build new plants but also give opponents more information to cite deficiencies before billions of dollars are spent.

Hodel said Thursday that Congress should take advantage of the current lull in orders for new plants to end the open-ended nature of the existing licensing process that discourages utilities from investing in atomic power. He spoke to the Senate Environment Committee's nuclear regulations subcommittee.

Fake teacher to be arraigned

LANCASTER, Pa. (AP) — Mystery professor Paul Crafton, charged by a second state college with teaching under a false identity, is to be arraigned Aug. 6, officials say.

The charges filed Thursday arose from Crafton's teaching stint at Millersville State College, where officials say he represented himself as Dr. Peter Pearce — an actual professor at Canada's University of British Columbia.

Crafton, 59, has already been ordered to stand trial on similar charges by Shippensburg State College, 75 miles from Millersville.

Altogether, the former George Washington University professor is said to have used 34 aliases in his academic and business dealings.

Employees may be protected

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration says it supports a bill that would bar the public from suing individual federal employees, who are now exposed to "personal financial ruin."

J. Paul McGrath, assistant attorney general in charge of the Justice Department's civil division, said the number of lawsuits filed against federal employees, from forest rangers to FBI agents, has been increasing. McGrath told a Senate Judiciary subcommittee that the bill, which would force citizens to sue the government instead of an individual, also would help plaintiffs with a strong case because they could collect from the government.

Teachers receive awards

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government today announced the award of $3,000 fellowships to 99 outstanding high school teachers who will spend the summer improving their knowledge of English, history, foreign languages and other subjects in the humanities.

The awards were made by the Council for Basic Education, a private, non-profit organization formed in 1956 to strengthen teaching and learning of basic subjects in schools, and announced by the National Endowment for the Humanities, an independent federal agency which is underwriting the project.

Top news executive resigning

WASHINGTON (AP) — Barbara Cohen, the top news executive for the financially troubled National Public Radio, says she is resigning effective next Friday.

Ms. Cohen, who has guided NPR's news effort since March 1979, said Thursday she would assume a position as the Washington manager of political coverage for NBC television. NPR is laying off 75 employees, including 17 in the news department, as part of plan to cope with an unanticipated deficit estimated at $7 million.

Ruckelshaus fights old battles, but wins new war

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Environmental Protection Agency, finishing its first week under new management, is still struggling with old problems in the courts and in Congress.

New Administrator William D. Ruckelshaus, moving quickly to make way for his own management team, found himself being sued Thursday for alleged abuses in the registration of dozens of pesticides during the tenure of his predecessor, Anne M. Burford.

The suit, by the Natural Resources Defense Council and the AFL-CIO, says the agency approved numerous chemicals suspected of causing cancer or other health problems after improper secret meetings with chemical company representatives. It asked the court to overturn these decisions and order a review of all pesticide actions taken in the past 18 months.

Central in the various allegations that have swirled around the agency has been the claim that under Mrs. Burford the EPA bent over backwards to favor companies it was supposed to be regulating. The suit is the first court action arising from the controversy.

While the case was being filed in U.S. District Court in Washington, a grand jury in the same building convened to take its first testimony from witnesses in an investigation of possible criminal wrongdoing by former officials.

In Congress, where the EPA drama has been played out for months, the leader of one of the investigating panels said he planned to press forward through the summer with his investigation. Rep. Elliott Levitas, D-Ga., also put Mrs. Burford and other former EPA officials on notice that they will be called on to testify in the coming months.

The lawsuit seeks to invalidate actions taken in so-called "decision conferences" between chemical companies and officials of EPA's Office of Pesticides. The conferences were initiated by former Assistant Administrator John Todhunter as a way to speed agency rulemaking. Todhunter is one of 20 top agency officials who have resigned since February.

The suit contends that the closed-door sessions violated regulations requiring notice and participation by all interested parties. It seeks to overturn decisions made on some of the most widely used pesticides in the country, including permethrin, lindane and Tordon. It claims the EPA is allowing use of these chemicals despite information that they may cause such problems as cancer, birth defects and nerve damage.

Ruckelshaus was successful Thursday in ending what had threatened to become an embarrassing personnel dispute when Sonia Crow, the head of the agency's San Francisco region, finally submitted her resignation after three days of negotiations.

The resignation came after a lengthy meeting with Ruckelshaus on Thursday night, their third such meeting in as many days. The agency had first announced Mrs. Crow's resignation Wednesday but then withdrew the announcement, leading to speculation that Ruckelshaus was being pressured by the White House to retain Mrs. Crow.

However, Ruckelshaus prevailed in his efforts to remove her, making Mrs. Crow the fifth high-ranking official who has left the agency since Ruckelshaus took over a week ago.

The grand jury met for the first time to hear testimony from agency officials who had worked with former Assistant Administrator Rita Lavelle. Law enforcement sources, who asked not to be identified, have said that the grand jury was looking into allegations that Miss Lavelle and former General Counsel Robert Perry may have committed perjury in testimony before Congress. Both have denied the accusation.

Miss Lavelle is also facing possible grand jury action on a contempt of Congress citation for refusing to testify before the House Energy Committee. The citation was forwarded last week to the U.S. District attorney for presentation to a grand jury.

Leader convicted of killing cohort

OROVILLE, Calif. (AP) — The leader of a racist band snapped a Nazi salute after being convicted of first-degree murder in the death of a youthful member, who prosecutors said was shot eight times for being a "race traitor" and a snitch.

A nine-man, three-woman Butte County Superior Court jury convicted Perry "Red" Warthan, 41, Thursday after less than 10 hours of deliberation for the execution-style slaying of 17-year-old Joseph Hoover.

"Red Warthan is violent man," said prosecutor Will Mattly after the verdict. "Warthan wanted control and he wanted notoriety."

The prosecution claimed Warthan killed Hoover because he considered the teen-ager a "race traitor" and a snitch for telling police about Warthan's racist activities. The defense claimed Hoover was killed by other young members of Warthan's group.

Investigators said Warthan, who described himself as a "treasurer" of a Nazi group, had no more than a handful of followers, all young.

NAACP chairman reestablishes Hooks

NEW YORK (AP) — Supporters of Benjamin L. Hooks, who was reinstated effective today as executive director of the NAACP, say they will try to limit the power of the organization chairman who suspended Hooks last week.

Margaret Bush Wilson, chairman of the nation's oldest civil rights organization, announced the reinstatement Thursday.

Although Mrs. Wilson never has revealed why she suspended Hooks on May 18, she said he was being reinstated because, "essentially, the purposes for which the action was taken have been served, and no useful purpose will be gained by its continuance."

Hazel Dukes, head of the New York state chapter of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People and one of Hooks' most outspoken supporters, said 46 members of the 64-member board plan to meet Saturday to launch a move to limit the chairman's powers. The legality of that meeting has been questioned by Mrs. Wilson's supporters.

Mrs. Wilson is a St. Louis attorney. Hooks, 58, a lawyer, banker and Baptist minister, became executive director in 1976, succeeding Roy Wilkins.

About 50 Japanese killed

Tidal waves follow undersea quake

NOSHIRO, Japan (AP) — Authorities counted 47 dead and 55 missing today after a full day of air and sea search operations along coastal areas battered by tidal waves that followed a major undersea earthquake.

The National Police Agency said almost all the victims in Akita, Aomori and Hokkaido prefectures were swept away by a series of tsunamis, or tidal waves, that pounded the shoreline of northwestern Honshu, Japan's main island, minutes after the tremor at noon Thursday.

The victims included at least 12 children washed away by a wave while on a school outing at a beach. The search continued for the body of a 13th child.

At least 88 people were injured in the disaster, which affected a 120-mile stretch of coastline, the police agency said.

With most of the missing victims feared dead, the earthquake-tidal wave disaster appeared certain to be the worst in Japan since 119 died from a tidal wave that was caused by a major quake off Chile in 1960.

Kyodo News Service reported that three more people had been washed out to sea and two were missing on the South Korean coastline, which also was struck by tidal waves from the quake, which was centered about 420 miles from Korea.

Kyodo quoted unnamed South Korean officials as saying waves of up to 12 feet struck the Korean coast, causing "extensive damage." It said the waves hit 90 minutes after the quake but no warning was given until two hours later.

Japan's Central Meteorological Agency said the quake's epicenter was in the Japan Sea about 96 miles west of Akita city, and measured 7.7 on the Richter scale, which records quake intensity as measured on seismographs. The reading showed the tremor was capable of tremendous damage.

The agency recorded 638 aftershocks in 24 hours and warned that another quake of moderate intensity was possible.

A construction worker in Noshiro, a port community of 60,000 located 40 miles north of Akita city, said the waves hit "with the sound of a jet engine."

Residents of Akita, Japan, examine a pier damaged Thursday when tidal waves following an undersea earthquake swept away supports.

They swamped fishing boats and engulfed workers atop a 28-foot-high breakwater. Police said they found bodies of seven workers and were looking for 27 more.

At Oga, a scenic peninsula between Noshiro and Akita City, police spokesman Hidenori Yuze said searchers found the bodies of nine schoolchildren but four others remained unaccounted for. The waves caught the children, part of a group of 49 pupils and teachers, as they picknicked on the beach.

The wife of a Swiss businessman working in Tokyo, identified by the Swiss Embassy as Madeleine Brandenberger, 38, of Zurich, drowned as the huge waves smashed against the coast at Oga. Her husband, Walter, reached safety.

Authorities said more than 9,000 policemen using Agency patrol boats, planes and helicopters were mobilized to search.

The earthquake hit at 15 seconds after noon Thursday, the Meteorological Agency said, and was felt in many parts of central Japan. In Tokyo, 280 miles to the south, it rocked buildings for more than two minutes but did no damage.

The quake buckled roads, bent railroad tracks, shattered hundreds of windows, wrecked 78 homes and collapsed a department store ceiling in Akita city, crushing a woman.

But the quake's impact on land apparently was blunted because its epicenter under the sea, where it spawned the tidal waves.

Naohisa Sasaki, a Noshiro port authority official, said the first tsunami warning was received about 12:15 p.m., but 10 minutes later, before police could clear the area, "the biggest wave of them all hit."

Yoshifumi Okawa, engineer of a 65-ton ship, said he moved the vessel out to sea when he heard the tsunami warning, and it was hit by a wave "as tall as a mountain."

"If I'd been one minute later in leaving the coast, I would be dead," he said.

Hours before leaving for the seven-nation economic summit at Williamsburg, Va., on Thursday evening, Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone declared an emergency and established a task force to assist victims.

Earthquakes are common in Japan, but most occur along the more heavily populated eastern coast. Tremors in areas along the Japan Sea dividing Japan and the Korean Peninsula are rare.

The most devastating quake this century in Japan was the 1923 "Great Kanto Earthquake," which had an estimated reading of 7.9 on the Richter scale and killed about 100,000 in the Tokyo area.

Israel keeping eye on Syria

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Foreign Minister Yitzhak Shamir said today that Israel was watching Syrian military moves in eastern Lebanon with increased concern and warned the Syrians not to "make a fatal mistake."

Shamir also said Israel did not want war with Syria but that the Jewish state would "decide its moves in accordance with its interests and it will determine the rules of the game."

The foreign minister spoke to reporters at Ben Gurion Airport outside Tel Aviv before he left for Brussels for a meeting with European foreign ministers.

"We hope that Syria won't make a fatal mistake and we are taking all the necessary precautions," Shamir said.

He also said he is "worried in light of the repeated pronouncements and declarations by the Soviet Union of Israel's aggressive intentions, while we know that the Soviet Union is aware that Israel has no intentions of attacking Syria." The Soviet Union is Syria's principal arms supplier.

Tension between Israeli and Syrian troops facing each other in eastern Lebanon's Bekaa Valley heightened Thursday when an Israeli soldier was killed and 14 others wounded in a roadside bomb explosion near Syrian lines.

The blast came one day after the Syrians fired missiles at Israeli reconnaissance planes over the Bekaa, the first such attack since last summer's Lebanon war.

The Israeli military command said in a statement that the missile fire violated the cease-fire between the two countries, and accused Syria of trying to "torpedo the Israel-Lebanon agreement that was achieved with U.S. aid."

The command also said it had evidence that Syria was digging new missile battery sites in the Bekaa. It did not elaborate.

In Beirut, Lebanese President Amin Gemayel was quoted by local newspapers today as calling for an Arab summit to take up Lebanon's quest for a withdrawal of all foreign armies from its territory.

Gemayel also was quoted as saying he was ready to meet Syrian President Hafez Assad to discuss reasons for Syria's opposition to the Lebanese-Israeli troop-withdrawal accord and for Syrian-Israeli tensions in the Bekaa.

Israeli jets broke the sound barrier over Beirut at midmorning today on their daily reconnaissance flights in Lebanese air space. Sonic booms reverberated through the Lebanese capital as high-flying jets streaked past unchallenged.

The Syrians have charged the withdrawal agreement gives Israel military advantages in Lebanon that would threaten Syria's security. They also rejected any discussions with the United States or Lebanon of a simultaneous Syrian withdrawal unless the May 17 accord is scrapped.

Assad said he would pull out Syrian troops from Lebanon only when Israel withdraws its 25,000 soldiers "without any conditions," Syrian government-controlled newspapers said.

The Israeli-Lebanese accord does not become effective unless Syrian and Palestinian guerrilla forces leave Lebanon at the same time as Israeli forces do.

U.S. intelligence sources in Washington said Syria sent a new brigade into Lebanon, at Zahleh, not far from the key highway between Beirut and Damascus. They also said two new Palestinian brigades had been formed — one north of Baalbek. The location of the other one was not given.

THE BETTER HALF

"You're getting $50 a week to babysit me. Cut me in for 20 percent and I promise not to grow up!"

Your horoscope

By JEANE DIXON

Saturday, May 28, 1983

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: The great decathalon winner Jim Thorpe whose Olympic medals were restored to him posthumously last year, was born on this date. Also sharing your birthday: singer Gladys Knight, "Private Benjamin's" Beth Howland, actresses Carroll Baker and Sondra Locke and basketball's Jerry West. In the year ahead, strive to be more serious about work and less tense about love. The career path will be smooth for those who are flexible about their duties. An artistic or musical talent gives your life a whole new dimension. Reevaluate your priorities. Vacation trips are fine, but business travel is unlikely to prove productive.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): A good time to ask for favors. Romance is in bloom. Do not take advantage of a loved one's generosity or leniency. Shopping can be very satisfying. Bargains abound!

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Share good news with relatives or close friends. An in-depth discussion with mate will help mend some fences. An excellent day for taking children to see places of historical interest.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Avoid social situations that could prove expensive. An older person is generally a good bet if you want advice. Your best relationship is with a member of your own sex.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): A dream moves closer to becoming reality. A letter or phone call brings wonderful financial news. You could win a contest or receive an inheritance.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Your social poise is tops! People are more interested in what you are thinking than what you are saying. You win the affection of someone you have long admired.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Guard against giving the impression that you are getting involved in something dishonest. A social gathering gives you a splendid opportunity to mix business with pleasure.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): You can have your cake and eat it, too, but you will have to be more diplomatic than usual. Some overdue money arrives. Tension evaporates. Pursue romance aggressively.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): A family member gives you an opportunity to earn extra money. Keep your promises. Travel is lucky and could lead to rewarding romance. Postpone making a family decision.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): A first-class weekend for fulfilling your personal wishes. It is up to you to take the first step in romance. Loved ones are easier to get along with now.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): A most opportune weekend for those who are ambitious. Look your best. You get introduced to influential people. Be courteous and respectful.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Refuse to be rushed into making a decision. Your insecurities are interfering with romance. Do something that will give you a more positive opinion of yourself.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): You have a tendency to overanalyze problems. Find their cause and deal with it promptly. Children respond to a request in a wonderful fashion.

Bird opens China to America

NEW YORK (AP) — First there was ping-pong diplomacy, then President Nixon swapped toasts with the Chinese. On Sunday night, Big Bird from "Sesame Street," possibly our best ambassador, opens China to American television again with a 90-minute special on NBC.

"Big Bird in China," part treasure hunt and part travelogue, is the first Chinese-American co-production for family viewing. In the story, Big Bird, played by Carroll Spinney, searches through some of China's most picturesque scenery and historic sites for the legendary Chinese bird, the Phoenix.

Anything involving the 8-foot yellow canary, Big Bird, is bound to enthrall young viewers. But, for adults, the humor and story line aren't up to the high standards of "Sesame Street" or "The Muppets."

The older set, though, will enjoy some spectacular photography and the tour of China's most famous landmarks, including the Great Wall, the Temple of Heaven and the Ming Tombs. They also will marvel at Big Bird's companion, Barkley the sheepdog, whose alter-ego, Brian Muehl, is a master at making his movements resemble a dog's rhythmic four-legged gait.

Playing a character on all fours inside a 35-pound costume is physically demanding, especially when he's bounding up the Great Wall of China. As preparation, Muehl underwent an arduous regimen of weightlifting and swimming to strengthen his upper body.

Once in China, Muehl encountered another problem. Chinese children of all ages delighted in pulling Barkley's tail, a situation which was corrected when the program's 6-year-old Chinese tour guide, Ouyang Lien-tze, taught Muehl how to say, "Don't pull my tail," in Chinese.

Lien-tze, who was chosen by director-writer-producer Jon Stone from among 100 contenders, is a sparkling discovery. Stone picked her because of the youngster's talent for mimicking English, and for her cheerful face and personality. She doesn't speak English, but memorized her 64 lines by listening to a tape.

Opening lead: Four of ♡.

We cannot overstress the importance of counting — whether it be points or tricks. That was the key to success on today's hand.

South's jump to four hearts shows a good trump suit and no desire to play any higher contract. Usually, it promises a six-card or longer suit. However, South reasoned that his hand might not produce a single trick at a no trump contract, so he decided to take his shot at the suit game.

West led a trump. Since that almost surely marked East with the king of trumps, declarer could count only nine tricks — five in the plain suits and four trumps. One way to establish a tenth trick was to hope for a 3-3 diamond split, which would enable declarer to establish the fourth diamond in the closed hand, but that was distinctly against the odds. Instead, declarer opted to rely on the fact that East probably had the king of hearts, and to try for five tricks in the trump suit.

Declarer won the ace of hearts, cashed the ace-king of clubs and ruffed a club, then crossed to the ace of spades and led another club. Since it would not help to ruff, East discarded a spade. Declarer ruffed, crossed to the king of spades and led another spade. This time East sluffed a diamond, and declarer ruffed with his penultimate trump for his side's ninth trick.

Declarer crossed back to the ace of diamonds and led the table's last spade. East was helpless. If he ruffed high, the queen of trumps would become declarer's tenth trick. If he did anything else, the queen of trumps would score a ruff en passant. Either way, ten tricks were there.

Rubber bridge clubs throughout the country use the four-deal bridge format. Do they know something you don't? Tale of absurdity

Can you imagine how difficult it must be for an official of the Soviet Union to accept the belief there is an arms race between his nation and the United States?

The U.S. Senate finally has decided how to deploy the hotly-debated MX missile, the one that's supposed to give the United States an "edge" over the Soviets. The question of deployment only took 10 years to resolve. But, then, time is no consideration when you're having fun. Right?

What the United States sacrificed during that decade and what it continues to sacrifice today is negotiation leverage with the Soviets. The MX is intended to give President Reagan a "bargaining chip" at upcoming arms limitation talks with the Russians. But how can the president bargain with something that doesn't exist?

At this very instance the absurdity of the arms limitation masquerade is unavoidable. The United States is abiding by a treaty with the Soviet Union that the Senate never ratified and the nation's best bargaining chip is a missile that doesn't exist and, from past experience, won't exist in the foreseeable future. And in the meantime the Soviets have been free to operate as they please — to expand and technologically improve their military arsenal — because the nations do not share an agreement with verifiable limits.

The absurdity of this situation can only be increased by noting that the saga of the MX is not over. Oh, no. Congress has only decided to deploy the controversial missile in reinforced Minuteman silos in Nebraska and Wyoming. It's scheduled to begin degate over whether to spend $22 billion to build and deploy the MX after the Memorial Day recess.

It is true: The urgency of action is in direct correlation to the degree of concern.

Voice from docks

Many Americans will treasure the epigrams and other writings of Eric Hoffer, who died last weekend at 80. His observations about people and society have a quality that renders them timeless. We do not doubt that a generation from now many of Hoffer's observations will ring as true as they do today.

That is what made Hoffer a philosopher. He saw past the pretensions and preoccupations of the contemporary world and into the immutable nature of human beings. The fact that Hoffer also was a longshoreman on the San Francisco docks gave his philosophizing a certain novelty as to its source but our guess is that what he had to say will be remembered longer than the background against which he said it.

Still, the career of Hoffer is reassuring because it proves once again that Americans find some of their best talent in the oddest places and are not snobbish about granting it recognition. This self-educated man became an adviser to a president and a university lecturer without having gone to college or even to grammar school.

In this country we have never insisted that our leaders come from one class or another or that the ideas we entertain conform to a handed-down doctrine or dogma. We practice a sort of free enterprise of the spirit. This is surely one of the main reasons Americans have been more successful at self-government than people whose society tends to be compartmentalized.

Hoffer had a way of cutting pretentious people and their ideas down to size, in particular the academic elites who have presumed to hold a monopoly on intellectual dialogue. His crusty voice from the waterfront forced one generation of Americans to ask hard questions about some of the popular political and social assumptions of its day. We can hope the independence of his point of view continues to generate questions in the future.

Another View:

Sabotage must end

"There is far too much law for those who can afford it," said Derek C. Bok, president of Harvard University, "and far too little for those who cannot."

And now there is even less law for those who cannot afford it than there was three years ago.

Since coming to the White House, President Reagan has tried to wreck the program that provides legal services to the poor. He asked Congress to abolish the Legal Services Corp., launched during the Nixon administration, but Congress refused. He sought to cut its funding and Congress went along, although not as far as Mr. Reagan wanted.

He has appointed to the LSC board directors who did not agree with the corporation's purposes, contrary to the law that says they must agree. The Senate has refused to confirm them. So Mr. Reagan has waited until Congress was out of session and made recess appointments, bypassing the Senate's constitutional function of "advice and consent."

Back in California days, Gov. Reagan vetoed (unsuccessfully) the California Rural Legal Assistance program, calling its lawyers "ideological ambulance chasers." So it all adds up to an ideological vendetta on Mr. Reagan's part and there is no reason to expect him to call it off. Congress, however, can thwart it, and the House Judiciary Committee again has acted to do so.

The committee, on a bipartisan vote of 23-6, has approved a bill that would restore some funds to the Legal Services Corp., authorizing a level of $296 million, as against the current level of $241 million, but still well below the 1981 level of $321 million.

The bill removes some of the restrictions that have been placed on the poverty lawyers' ability to represent their clients, but it also places some important restrictions on the president's ability to sabotage the program.

As of now, there are only five persons on the LSC board, all recess appointees. The bill says that recess appointees who have not been confirmed cannot change any funding for local programs and that they cannot be paid (except in severely limited circumstances). The bill also sharply limits those generous "consulting fees" and other fringe benefits that Mr. Reagan's appointees provided for themselves while providing less law for the poor.

The House should move promptly on the bill, and so should the Senate. Whatever may be Mr. Reagan's ideological views on the matter, this nation is not founded on the proposition of equal justice for all who can afford it.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Guile, greed overcame sanctions

WASHINGTON — When President Reagan meets allied leaders this weekend in Williamsburg, Va., he may discover in a very personal way that he was snookered into dropping the Soviet pipeline sanctions — by a combination of friends and enemies. Some of the culprits will be sitting right in the conference room with him.

Jack Anderson

As I reported last November — when Reagan announced the end of the sanctions he had imposed in January 1982 — the Soviet leadership had outguessed the White House at every step of the game. Probably with the aid of the KGB's intelligence network, the Kremlin leaders anticipated Reagan's moves and checkmated him with the skill of chess grandmasters.

The CIA played into the Kremlin's hands by producing two shoddy intelligence estimates on the likely effects of the sanctions. Then the agency compounded its errors of judgment by following the recommendations of an American company that stood to gain millions if the sanctions were lifted.

Finally, the State Department was evidently persuaded by our European allies that if the sanctions were lifted they would join the United States in a broad agreement on trade with the Soviet bloc. Secretary of State George Shultz convinced Reagan this was the case. The president will find out this weekend just how empty the allied leaders' assurances were.

My associate Dale Van Atta has pieced together a story of guile, greed and incompetence from secret documents and interviews over the past six months. Here are the details:

As I reported in November, the Kremlin figured — correctly — that Reagan would impose sanctions on pipeline technology if the Russians cracked down on the rebellious Poles. Knowing their own timetable for the crackdown, the Soviets rushed to nail down contracts for pipeline equipment with Western suppliers. The final contract was signed in Moscow on Dec. 14, 1981 — the day after martial law had been declared in Poland, and two weeks before Reagan announced the sanctions.

The one U.S. company whose products were considered by the Soviets to be vital to their pipeline was General Electric. And GE obviously stood to make a bundle if the sanctions were lifted. Knowing this, the CIA relied heavily on GE for information on how the sanctions were working — or not working.

A GE representative, in fact, coordinated and controlled a two-hour CIA briefing for White House and State Department officials in early 1982. His presentation naturally favored dropping the sanctions, and it went substantially unchallenged by the CIA.

In August 1982, the CIA produced an intelligence estimate that dumped all over the sanctions. Upset by the report, National Security Adviser William Clark wrote CIA Director William Casey in September and asked him to reconsider.

Examination of the CIA's August estimate shows it was a poor effort. It shows complete ignorance of the terms of the contracts the Soviets were then rushing to completion.

The CIA also drastically underestimated the value to the Soviets of their gas pipeline to Western Europe — obviously a vital consideration in assessing the degree of punishment inflicted by the sanctions. The CIA figured the Russians stood to make about $5 billion a year after completion of the first pipeline segment. But other intelligence estimates put the figure at $8 billion-$10 billion a year.

Even worse, the CIA didn't even address the question of Soviet gas sales when two more strands of the pipeline are in place — estimated by others at $30 billion-$40 billion a year in badly needed hard currency.

In October, the CIA gave Clark the second estimate he had asked for. It was essentially a justification of the first one. With the CIA firmly against the sanctions, Shultz was able to persuade Reagan they should be lifted. As a face-saving gesture, it was announced that the European allies would join in a tough general agreement on trade with the Soviets. The president will try to hold the allies to their promise this weekend.

WHAT'S TO HIDE?: Last February, board members of the taxpayer-funded U.S. Synfuels Corp. held a meeting by long-distance telephone conference call. Chairman Ed Noble pointedly reminded the board members to be sure their office doors were closed, lest anyone eavesdrop on the board's business. Rep. Mike Synar, D-Okla., wants to know what the board didn't want the public to find out about. He asked for a transcript of the board's closed meetings. He has also asked the board to explain why so many of its meetings are closed to the public.

INSIDE REPORT:

Reagan will be Reagan on taxes

WASHINGTON — The private knockdown by James A. Baker III and Richard Darman of the leaked report of a massive Reagan tax increase to take effect after the 1984 election points to this overriding political fact of life: The administration's tax-hikers do not have support from the powerful West Wing of the White House.

Rowland Evans

Robert Novak

When Washington awoke Saturday, May 21, to read on the Washington Post's front page that "senior Reagan administration officials" were pushing a $45-billion tax increase to take effect Jan. 1, 1985, conservatives instinctively (and angrily) fingered White House chief of staff Baker and Darman, his lieutenant, as the culprits. But Baker and Darman, in truth, were astonished by the story and, in some heat, set out to find the source. Martin Feldstein, chairman of the Council of Economic Advisers, denied leaking the story, but the idea of a tax boost — whoever leaked it — was clearly his.

However much they personally would favor a revenue boost, the self-proclaimed pragmatists of the West Wing are resigned to Reagan's veto strategy from now through the presidential campaign. In contrast to their shadowy intrigues culminating in the 1982 tax increases, the West Wing power-brokers are vigorous in denying any complicity with the Feldstein proposal.

"There is nothing in it for us politically, economically or personally," one senior aide told us. Thus, such non-Reaganite assistants to the president are saying they will permit Reagan to be Reagan for the remainder of his four-year term. Without West Wing support, Feldstein — even with budget director David Stockman's help — hasn't a prayer.

The spectacle of Ronald Reagan saying "never" to a tax boost and then turning into its fervent supporter was repeated so frequently last year that the congressional tax-cutting bloc has come to regard presidential promises here much as Charlie Brown looks upon Lucy holding the football: with justifiable suspicion. But that is precisely why the president's overall credibility is at stake.

Behind the latest struggle for the president's soul are projected budget deficits stretching far into the future. Having correctly reached the conclusion that Congress will enact no new cuts in domestic spending (either discretionary or entitlements), Stockman privately argues that only tax increases can close the budget gap. That allies him with Feldstein, who has been characteristically forthright in claiming that economic recovery will be aborted without higher taxes in the out years.

But Stockman and Feldstein have lacked that essential West Wing support. Darman, whose gossamer rhetoric is renowned for its ambiguity, has been uncharacteristically blunt in private assurances that the administration will not tolerate any tampering with the third year of the Reagan tax cut effective July 1 or tax indexing against inflation that comes later.

Such assurances, as well as the president's own promises, contain one major loophole: Might not Reagan retain the third-year tax cut and indexing and still opt for a huge future-year tax increase? The Reagan budget's own Fiscal Year 1986 tax increase of $50 billion is pinned to unattainable spending cuts, but liberal-to-moderate Republican senators have been moving to remove that condition. That raised the prospect that the West Wing again would play a tax-raising Lucy, at the last moment removing the football just as Charlie Brown was ready to kick.

Consequently, the most significant moment of the May 18 Cabinet meeting came when Jim Baker argued against the plea for a tax-raising budget resolution by Stockman, usually his ally. On the morning after the Senate passed its budget resolution calling for $50 billion in Fiscal '86 taxes without conditions, Reagan in a White House meeting reaffirmed his opposition to it and his reliance on the veto strategy.

Consequently, it looked like deja vu, 1982, in the manipulation of Ronald Reagan when reports were published the very next day of a $45 billion tax increase, achieved through the politically poisonous income surtax — a super-graduated tax on a tax. Reagan then would not only be disregarding the deadening effect on the economy by raising marginal tax rates but would eliminate any remaining Republican anti-tax advantages for the 1984 campaign.

Next came the call from the West Wing to Marty Feldstein asking whether he was responsible for the leak (answered in the negative), followed by the official White House disclaimers. Such disclaimers can come and go, but the fact that Dick Darman is making personal assurances that there will be no such tax proposal is significant. Without a sudden switch in the West Wing, Reagan will be Reagan in fighting higher taxes the next two years.

CHARLEY REESE

Welfare state's cost too high

Let's go back to the days when racism was largely unchallenged in the United States. Let's go back to 1940. The South was still segregated; in the North, racial prejudice was only thinly, if at all, disguised.

Charley Reese

In 1942 — in those pre-civil rights, pre-welfare, pre-sex education days — only 15 percent of black children were born out of wedlock and only 18 percent of black families were maintained by single women.

Today, we find that something terrible has happened to black family structures. In 1977, 55 percent of all black children in the U.S. were born out of wedlock. In Washington, D.C. (one of America's most affluent urban areas), the current figure is 65 percent; in Chicago, it's almost 70 percent; and in Central Harlem, it's 77 percent.

Today 41 percent of all black families are maintained by single women. Worse, 25 percent of all black children are born to teenage mothers and 85 percent of those teenage mothers are unmarried.

Now, what do all of these numbers, which came from a black scholarly journal, The Lincoln Review, mean? Certainly, there is no one single cause to explain changes which are, in less proportions, also reflected in the white population.

We know for sure there is less racism more economic opportunity, and certainly more sex education than there was in 1940; yet the condition of the basic unit of society, family, has gotten worse rather than better.

What most liberals and other collectivists tend to do is ignore individuality and morality. Colectivism is built on the false premise of determinism — that social environment determines the individual's destiny. For that reason, they tend to dismiss as irrelevant religious and moral values and individual motivation.

Nevertheless, people — black, white, red, yellow or mixed — are born individually, live individually, and see the world through their own unique prisms and react to it according to their own unique mixtures of genetics, values, and experiences.

Every individual, even the poorest, has aspirations; and every individual, despite his circumstances, will do the best he can to achieve them. What confuses liberals is that they tend to assume that every individual has exactly the same basic aspirations as the white upper middle class liberal. Not so.

Aspirations can range all the way from becoming president to getting another bottle of cheap wine. Whether we are talking about Reubin Askew, who wants to be president, or a wino, who wants a bottle of wine, each will do what he has to do to the best of his abilities to achieve his own goal. Each will judge himself a success or failure on whether or not he achieves his own goals. A wino with wine will not feel bad that he is not president. Askew, if he is defeated in his bid for the presidency, will not feel good just because he can afford a cellar full of the most expensive wine in the world.

What has this got to do with the changes in black families? Black children are simply doing the best they can to achieve their own individual aspirations in the world in which they find themselves.

And what kind of world is that? It is a world in which the establishment dismisses religious and moral values as irrelevant. It is a world in which the government pays cash on a monthly basis for the support of children without fathers. As Rep. Jack Kemp, R-NY, observed, you generally get more of what you subsidize and less of what you tax. We subsidize fatherless children and unemployment but tax work, homes and savings.

People may be poor but that doesn't mean they are stupid. In the absence of religious or ethical motivations, they will tend to do what they want to do the easiest way possible. If you can draw $85 tax free for not working, why work for $100 and pay $15 a week in taxes? If you can get a monthly stipend for a bastard child and the chances for better work are slim, why not, provided your aspirations are limited and your society approves?

Everything has a price — even a welfare state. And the price is more than dollars.

'Decisive' win expected for Thatcher's party

LONDON (AP) — Three more opinion polls published today predict a decisive victory for Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher's Conservatives in Britain's June 9 general election.

"It's a massacre," said the Conservative-supporting Daily Express above its report of a poll by Market and Opinion Research International (MORI) that showed support for the Conservatives at 51 percent against 29 for the Labor Party.

The poll of 1,088 electors showed the centrist alliance of Liberal and Social Demoeratic Parties trailing with 18 percent, while the figure for unspecified other groups was 2 percent.

A MORI poll last week gave the Conservatives 46 percent, Labor 37, the alliance 16 and others 1 percent

A Marplan poll of 1,422 electors in the Guardian gave the Conservatives 47.5 percent, Labor 32.5, alliance 19, others 1. A Marplan poll last week gave the Conservatives 47, Labor 34, alliance 18, others 1.

A poll by Harris Research Center for Thames Television gave the Conservatives 48 percent, Labor 33, alliance 18, others 1. A Harris poll last week gave the Conservatives 45, Labor 35, alliance 17, others 3.

Man admits forgery

HAMBURG, West Germany (AP) — The Hamburg Prosecutors Office said today that Nazi artifact dealer Konrad Kujau had admitted forging the Hitler diaries sold to Stern magazine.

The office spokesman, Peter Beck, also said Stern reporter Gerd Heidemann, who acquired the bogus Hitler diaries for the magazine, was arrested Thursday night and will be charged with criminal fraud.

British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher considers a reporter's question during a Thursday press conference.

Heidemann, 51, was fired by the magazine after West German authorities found portions of the diaries had been copied from an obscure book on Adolf Hitler.

Brazil's ties questioned

BRASILIA, Brazil (AP) — The right-wing military government here is considering closer ties with neighboring Surinam, a leftist-ruled country which some Brazilians fear might turn to Cuba to replace aid suspended by the United States and the Netherlands.

"Brazil wants to give the country a feeling of security so that it won't turn to Cuba for aid it lost," said a Western diplomat who spoke on the condition that he not be identified.

A high-ranking Brazilian diplomat who asked not to be identified said arms sales and military training have been discussed with the Surinamese.

He described Brazil's actions as preventive.

Missile measure passes

COPENHAGEN, Denmark (AP) — Denmark's Parliament has passed a bill that urges a halt to preparations for deployment of U.S. nuclear missiles in Western Europe while arms talks are underway.

The bill, approved Thursday, also endorses the Soviet suggestion to include British and French missiles in calculations of NATO missile strength.

Despite vigorous protests by the center-right minority government, the opposition Social Democrats mustered a majority and passed the bill 83-70 with two abstentions. Twenty-four members of the Folketing, or Parliament, were absent.

The bill also advocates "an extension, if necessary," of the negotiations between the United States and the Soviet Union to reduce medium-range nuclear missiles. Those talks are now underway in Geneva, Switzerland.

Photos back charges

WASHINGTON (AP) — Aerial photographs released by the White House are being used by President Reagan to back up his contention that Soviet ships are using Nicaraguan ports to send weapons to El Salvador's leftist rebels.

"There have been several Soviet vessels recently unloading weaponry in Nicaragua and for use in the effort to overthrow the government of (El) Salvador," Reagan said Thursday in an interview with six foreign reporters.

"We don't look upon those as friendly acts," the president said in answering a question about why the United States seemed to follow tougher anti-Soviet policies than its allies.

The two pictures were released without comment Thursday night.

Pakistan preparing to close 'supply line' to Afghanistan

By KINGSBURY SMITH
National Editor, The Hearst Newspapers

WASHINGTON — Pakistan has served notice on the American government that it will not continue indefinitely to be used by the West as a military supply line to the Afghan freedom fighters in order to keep Soviet Russia militarily bogged down in Afghanistan.

This was made clear by Pakistan Foreign Minister Sahabzada Yaqub-Khan during a visit to Washington this week which included talks with Secretary of State George Shultz.

While the American government has never officially admitted supplying weapons to the Afghan rebels, it is no secret it has done so under both the Carter and Reagan administrations. It has not sent weapons directly to the rebels, but it has sent some through Egypt and funded the cost of other supplies sent through Third World countries, which in turn has smuggled them to the Afghan rebels, mostly through Pakistan.

The New York Times reported from Washington May 3 that the quantity and quality of U.S. covert military support for the Afghan insurgents has recently been stepped up. Administration officials, according to the report, said President Reagan made the decision to increase the covert support last fall with the purpose of forcing Moscow to pay a higher price for its more than 3-year-old effort to crush the rebellion against the puppet communist regime it installed in Kabul when it militarily invaded the country in December, 1979.

The Carter administration first started sending military aid to the Afghan freedom fighers under a secret agreement with the late Egyptian President Anwar Sadat, who trained and armed Afghan guerrillas.

Santa Rita No. 1 started it all

By DAVID C. SODAMANN
Business-Energy Editor

"It was the dawn of a new age" is a time worn and hackneyed phrase, but one that seems appropriately applied to the discovery of oil in Reagan County 60 years ago tomorrow, May 28, 1923.

As morning's first light filled the West Texas skies that Monday a loud rushing noise, something we'd today probably call a jet-like roar, swept away the silence. A leaping black spray stretched toward the blue. And quite literally at dawn a new age arrived in West Texas as the famed Santa Rita No. 1 came gushing in.

The Santa Rita well was a rank wildcat; drilled nearly 100 miles from the nearst producing oil field. It was put down in a region then known as "the petroleum graveyard of Texas" by men who weren't afraid to take a chance. Perhaps, they were men who didn't know enough to be afraid. They were amateurs. Santa Rita No. 1 was the very best kind of beginners' luck.

The Santa Rita's black spout caught the attention of oil men everywhere. Like the fabled Star of Bethlehem it lured the hopeful and curious to the broad, empty expanses in West Texas. It catalyzed the relentless and as yet unfinished search for oil in what has come to be known as the Permian Basin — the place where nearly one-fifth of all the oil and gas in the United States is found.

The story of the Santa Rita No. 1 begins in 1916. In June of that year, Johan Udden, a geologist, submitted a map and report to the Univeristy of Texas Board of Regents, in which Udden said there was a chance oil or gas could be found in West Texas beneath Pecos, Upton, Reagan and Crockett counties.

RUPERT RICKER, an attorney, son of a Reagan County rancher, learned of Udden's report and became convinced there was oil beneath his feet.

In 1919, with the help of friends, Ricker filed 171 applications for drilling permits on 674 sections, or 431,360 acres, of university land in Crockett, Irion, Upton, and Reagan Counties.

Upon filing, Ricker and associates had 30 days to pay a 10 cents per acre rental fee on the land, or lose the leases. Ricker didn't have the $43,126 required. It seemed to him Fort Worth, then the center of oil activity in Texas, might be the place to find it.

Ricker scoured Fort Worth for investors. Every prospective buyer turned him down until, entirely by accident, he met a couple of men from El Paso — Frank T. Pickrell and Haymon Krupp.

Pickrell and Krupp had known each other but a short while. They were casual acquaintances. Pickrell was a young man looking for his fortune; Krupp an experienced businessman whose fortune was already in the bank. The two had an interest in oil. Ricker, it turned out, had what they were looking for — a deal.

DURING THE WAR to End All Wars Ricker had been a captain and Pickrell, a sergeant in a unit commanded by Ricker. It didn't take long for Ricker to learn his old "war buddy" and Krupp were interested in what he was offering.

They hustled off to Ricker's hotel room, where, among a scattering of maps and official papers, Pickrell and Krupp heard the promoter's pitch. Ricker told the pair he would sell them the whole deal for $50,000.

Pickrell and Krupp stepped out to discuss the offer. They toyed with it for a couple of hours. They went back to Ricker's room. They told him it was too rich for them; $2,500 was the best they could do.

Ricker thought over the counter offer. It was better than nothing, and nothing was all he had so far, so he took the bid.

Pickrell immediately went to work putting the applications to drill in order. Krupp went to New York to raise the rent money. Unable to find investors interested in the venture, Krupp borrowed the $43,136 needed to pay the state from Hanover National Bank.

PICKRELL AND KRUPP were issued drilling permits in June, 1919. They were given 18 months to start drilling or lose the leases.

They organized Texon Oil and Land Company. Krupp was president; Pickrell became executive vice president. The venture was to be capitalized with the sale of two million shares of stock.

Stock sales were slow. The value of the shares dropped. Pickrell and Krupp saw trouble ahead. They lobbied for changes in state law that would make financing the business easier and give them more time to drill. They won. In 1919, and again in 1921, the law regulating development on university lands were changed.

Pickrell and Krupp worked hard to raise money for a well. The deadline for drilling, January 8, 1921, was nearing. They almost let it pass.

Pickrell, in New York raising funds, realized time was slipping by. He rushed to San Angelo, arriving there two days before the deadline, and rounded up drilling machinery to spud a well on the university leases.

PICKRELL PERSUADED the railroad to hold a west-bound train half a day while he loaded his rig, a wagon and team and two men who had agreed to help.

The train rolled out of San Angelo around noon, January 8. That evening it pulled onto the siding at Best, east of where the Santa Rita well was drilled.

Walter Brown, a water well driller; W.C. "Uncle Bill" Latham, the teamster and Pickrell loaded the drillig rig in the wagon and hauled it to the drill site. They rigged up and spudded a well by midnight, meeting the deadline and saving the leases.

They continued drilling the well until April 5, 1921, when it was completed as a water well.

In time, Pickrell met and hired Carl Cromwell, an experienced and expert oil well driller. In the summer of 1921 R.S. McDonald, a rig builder from Big Spring, was hired to dig a cellar — a big hole, where well drillers could work — for the planned oil well, build an 84-foot wooden derrick needed to drill it and build two shacks to house those who would be living at the site.

Pickrell and Cromwell bought the drilling tools. The found what they needed in Ranger, where a big oil boom had fizzled, where drilling gear could be bought cheaply.

The Santa Rita No. 1 gushing black gold. The well, named for the patron saint of the impossible, brought fortune to the Permian Basin. The well first spouted oil 60 years ago, May 28, 1923.

AUGUST 17, 1921, they started drilling the hole that became the Santa Rita No. 1.

Work progressed. The drill site was remote. Good help hard to find. Cowboys were often put to work drilling. Cromwell was the only man there who really knew what he was doing.

Two experienced tool dressers, men who kept the drill bits sharp, came and went. A third, Dee Locklin, came and stayed. He was there that day 60 years ago when the well blew in.

They drilled for 21 months. The work was slow, laborious, monotonous. Days and weeks and months went by.

They set 15 1/2-inch casing and drilled some more. They set 12 1/2-inch and drilled some more. They set 10-inch casing and drilled some more. They set 8 1/4 inch casing and drilled some more.

TRACES OF OIL were found as the hole went down, but not enough to shout about. Potash was discovered between 1,200 and 1,300 feet below the surface. At that time Germany provided nearly all the world's supply of the vital substance. The find caused much excitement. But oil was the goal; they continued making hole.

The well bore was stretched to 3,050 feet, when, about supper time, May 25, 1923, oil and gas began to show on the surface. Cromwell and Locklin pulled the tools out of the hole and boarded up the sides of the derrick, to keep intruders out.

The men were convinced Santa Rita No. 1 would be completed as a producer. They took Saturday off to lease land from ranchers in the vicinity.

Monday morning, May 28, 1923, Cromwell and Locklin were having breakfast with their familes in the two shacks near the well. Shortly after 6 a.m. the well began to roar. The families rushed out to see black gold blowing over the derrick.

Nature brought the Santa Rita in.

The well gushed three times that day, two the next, and once each day thereafter until June 25, when the last string of casing was finally set.

HUGE QUANTITIES of oil streamed from the well. Wind blew it every direction. The little world around the gusher — shacks, chickens, everything — was blackened by the stuff.

Crowds came to see the sight. June 10, 1923, a special train rolled out of San Angelo carrying hundreds of people who wanted to see the show. The well gushed 43 minutes for them that afternoon. The noise was so loud onlookers had to shout to be heard.

The well was under control by July 2. Between 75 and 100 barrels of oil flowed into the storage tanks that day.

The rush was on. The big oil companies started taking an interest in West Texas. Lease hounds started buying up drilling rights throughout the region. The tiny towns of Big Lake and Best started to grow.

Boosters in San Angelo wrote letters to oil companies all over the United States, inviting them to headquarter their West Texas operations in that little city.

Pickrell and Krupp soon realized their Texon company had bitten off more than it could chew. They had a great oil field to develop, but didn't have the money to do it. Drilling the Santa Rita had taken much of what they had.

They invited a number of large companies to participate, but none would take the offer. Finally, Pickrell invited Michael Benedum, a famed and wealthy wildcatter, to join with Texon in developing the field. Benedum who, much like Pickrell and Krupp, had struck it big by taking big risks, accepted the offer. Out of the Benedum-Texon deal The Big Lake Oil Company emerged.

The rest is history. You're living it today.

Saint's blessing invoked

The Santa Rita No. 1 was named in honor of Santa Rita, patron saint of the impossible. The name originated in New York.

It was suggested by a group of Catholic women who invested in the well. They were worried about the safety of their investment. A priest suggested they invoke the help of the saint.

As Frank Pickrell, the man who oversaw the drilling of the Santa Rita No. 1, was leaving New York on one of his many trips back to the well, he was handed an envelope containg a blessed red rose and asked to climb the derrick and sprinkle the rose petals over the rig and christen the well Santa Rita.

Several months after the well was spudded, Pickrell did climb the rig and christen the well. There was no ceremony. Only a few people were present for the event.

Santa Rita, the woman, is said to have lived in thirteenth-century Italy.

Her husband was killed and her sons vowed to avenge his death. Rita prayed for the death of her sons before they too became murderers and they did die. Rita entered a convent and devoted herself to the care of those in hopeless circumstances. In a dream Christ placed a crown of thorns upon her. She developed a stigmata, or mark, where the thorns were said to have injured her.

Well brings wealth to university

The Santa Rita well was drilled on university lands; lands set aside for the Permanent Fund. Interest on this untouchable investment fund is the endowment of the University of Texas.

"Of course, all the schools in the system benefit from the Permanent Fund — not just UT-Austin. Two-thirds of the money is dedicated for the University of Texas System, and one-third goes to Texas A&M," said University lands administrator Laddie Long.

Lands were first set aside by the Third Congress of the Republic of Texas in 1839. Fifty leagues, or 222,000 acres were apportioned. This land was later sold.

In 1876, when the state constitution was rewritten, the University was alotted one million acres from the public domain. (Texas, unlike the other states, retained its public lands. There are no federal public lands in Texas, as there are throughout other western states.) Later, an additional one million acres was parceled out for university use.

Into the Permanent Fund go royalties from the operation of 7,200 producing oil and gas wells today, Long said. "Cumulative production is a hard figure to chase down, but the wells produce about 28 million barrels of oil (or equivalent) per year."

The total in the Permanent Fund, Long said, "Changes rapidly — it has seen fantastic growth in the last few years. Right now it's in the neighbor hood of $1.8 billion."

Investors that make the Pemanent Fund make money have gained freedom in the last few years to move the money from government bonds to blue-chip stocks, certificates of deposit, and other high-interest investments, Long said. This has increased the amount of money the investments of the Fund are making.

Surface rents from the lands, and any interest in the untouchable Permanent Fund investments, go to the Available Fund. The Available Fund monies are used, in turn, to get financing for construction bonds.

The Santa Rita well was the first producer on University lands. Income from it and the thousands of wells that followed have made the University of Texas System and the Texas A&M system, which share the wealth, richer than any other schools in the world.

Happy coincidence made Santa Rita work

By JIM PRESNELL
Business-Energy Writer

Berte R. Haigh says "one extreme element of luck" describes the coincidence that brought about drilling West Texas boom well, the Santa Rita No. 1. "It's a long, long story," he says.

The Santa Rita gave birth to the Big Lake oilfield, and since it was on university lands, the University of Texas grew rich. It moved into multi-million dollar facilities from WWI barracks buildings. Haigh has worked for the Midland office of university lands for as long as many can remember. He is in his mid-nineties.

Haigh interviewed Santa Rita No. 1 wildcatter Frank Pickrell, who called himself a "stubborn Irishman," three times. Duplicate tapes of those interviews can be listened to at the Permian Basin Petroleum Museum.

The tapes, as one may imagine, are the most reliable source of information available about the event — which Haigh said recently is "the subject of a lot of tall tales and stories."

"Clayton Williams Sr. and I interviewed Pickrell. And it seems to me, that one extreme element of luck was involved in the major discovery at Santa Rita No. 1. It was a fortunate meeting between Krupp, Ricker, and Pickrell that brought about the Santa Rita drilling.

"YOU SEE, Rupert Ricker — who was from east Texas — was a lawyer," Haigh said. "He graduated from the University of Texas in 1915. He moved to Big Spring with his parents, went into the Army in 1917 and was stationed at the intelligence unit in San Antonio.

"Ricker thought, there's nothing on the surface of the land here, so there must be something underneath," when he opened his Big Lake law office in oil-laden Reagan County, Haigh said.

Ricker saw in The Permit Acts of 1917 a black-golden opportunity to file to explore for oil or gas on University of Texas lands. He filed on the land with help from several friends.

No individual could file on more than four contiguous sections of land. Ricker needed investors to put their names on the 171 applications filed with the appropriate county clerks. The applications covered 674 adjoining sections (431,360 acres) of University land.

Ricker tried to raise the 10 cents per acre rent due on the Crockett, Reagan, and Upton County lands. He went to Ft. Worth oil companies — they would not help him raise the $43,136.

FRANK PICKRELL, of Ennis, "...was a young man wanting to get wherever he was going in a real hurry," Haigh noted. He lived in many parts of Texas, an orphan, he settled with his uncle in El Paso in 1905.

Pickrell worked in his uncle's candy store — and later turned down participating interest in it. It was too humdrum, Pickrell told Haig.

He tried to enter the Navy at San Francisco as World War I started up, but was rejected. He then enlisted in the Army — and was assigned to Capt. Rupert P. Ricker's spy unit.

He and Ricker — separately — caught the oil bug from hearing of north-central Texas oil discoveries, at Burkburnett and Ranger.

After leaving the Army, Frank Pickrell went to Ranger to make an oilman's 'fast' fortune. On the way he teamed up with a financier, Haymon Krupp, who was impressed with Pickrell.

SIDETRACKING WITH Krupp to Burkburnett — then finally going to Ranger by way of Ft. Worth — Pickrell and Krupp happened to have their extreme storke of luck.

"They walked out of the station to look for lodgings — then they met Ricker," Haigh said.

"Ricker said, 'I've got the hottest thing (oil prospect) that ever came down the pike'," according to historian Haigh.

They made a deal. Krupp and Pickrell bought the pertinent papers and quitclaim statement for $2,500. Rupert Ricker had asked for $50,000 for himself — which with the $43,000-plus rentals put the project out of Pickrell and Krupp's price range.

ALL THE RICKER applications had to be refiled, and when Krupp had raised the $43,000 and drilling money besides, Pickrell began his famous prospecting-race against time.

"It was just one incredible stroke of luck," said Haigh, whose book on University lands history (and with two million acres there's history aplenty) will be published next month for the UT press.

"It's a long story — about a man's hardheaded persistence," Haigh said. "He must have been favored in some way by the almighty."

Ricker never made any money to speak of when Santa Rita came in.

"Pickrell asked him to come back in on the deal but he was frustrated, discouraged," Haigh said.

Berte R. Haigh, geologist and historian, heard the story of Santa Rita No. 1 firsthand from the men who drilled it. He's standing in front of a map of the University lands. Income from these lands endows Texas schools.

Great discovery inspired social experiment

By LESLIE HAINES
Business-Energy Writer

Crude oil wasn't the only thing produced by the Big Lake Oil Company at the site of its Santa Rita No. 1 well. A social experiment of sorts - the oil camp called Texon — was also produced, and it lasted from 1923 until 1962.

Company engineers laid out wide streets with a view to future growth. The population eventually rose to about 2,000.

The friendships made between the families who lived and worked in the dusty little town have lasted for 30 or 40 years, as many former residents can attest.

A Midland woman who made her home in Texon for 24 years said it was not a boom town filled with the usual transients, but something very different — a town with a sense of purpose and closeness.

"It was owned by one company," explained Fay Grissett. "In a boomtown, there are many different companies and a lot of drifters go there. In Texon you were called to be there (hired by the company).

"IF YOU 'passed the test' you were hired, and you stayed 30 years, so it was a fine community."

Texon was a project of the Big Lake Oil Company, which took over its portion of the Big Lake field in November 1923. It was about half way between Rankin and Big Lake, Texas.

Located just south of the Kansas City, Mexico and Orient Railroad, the little community started as a group of wood frame gray houses.

Company president Levi Smith did not want Texon to be just another rowdy "boom town." He dreamed of creating a model oil camp, or town, and he pushed for the community's success.

Employees were recruited from all over the United States; many of Texon's residents had been to college, Mrs. Grissett recalled.

IN 1924, the field was producing enough that J. J. Isbell was shipping five railroad cars of crude oil to El Paso and about 25 cars to Fort Worth each day.

As the men settled into the routine of operating the many wells in the field, they sent for their families and relatives. Many nurses and teachers in the surrounding area came to Texon and married workers there.

"The social life revolved around bridge clubs, the youth group, the study club and library," said Mrs. Grissett. "Occasionally we'd have dances with name bands out of San Angelo."

In 1924, the first baby was born in Texon, Dorothy Pearlene Criswell. When the workers pointed out she was the first baby born in the community, her parents, changed her name to Dorothy Texon.

Today, she lives in Midland as Mrs. Jim Sawyer.

BY THE END of 1925, the company had built homes, a community clubhouse, swimming pool, stores, a church, golf course and other amenities for the inhabitants, who were nearly all employees of the company.

There was a polo team which played Midland's team. There was an active social life: little theatre, Boy and Girl Scouts, a library and study club, PTA, a women's basketball team — and lots of dinner parties, Mrs. Grissett said.

The town even had a semi-professional baseball team, the Texon Oilers.

The latter won the national title in 1928 in a Denver tournament.

The Big Lake Oil Company provided police and fire protection and gas, water and lights. In 1926, a post office opened.

EVERY CHRISTMAS, the company gave gifts to all Texon children up to age 12.

"The most important thing was, it was a family," said Mrs. Thelma Gardner. She and her husband, Roy, lived in Texon for several years. Roy was named most valuable player on the Texon Oiler team at the tournament in Denver in 1928.

"We knew the majors like Humble had more benefits, but they didn't have the same closeness," Mrs. Gardner said. "We talk about each other a lot, but boy, you'd better not talk about us."

Company officials took a big interest in the future of the employees and their families, according to Mrs. Grissett.

"Texon's general manager influenced all the young boys to go to college. From the time they were about 15, the company hired them to do odd jobs around the town in order to make money toward a college education."

PEOPLE OFTEN came to Texon for entertainment from Big Lake, Santa Rita and other small towns in West Texas.

"We were busy all the time," Mrs. Grissett recalled. "We could take part in everything. When I came to Midland in 1956, I found I couldn't take part in everything; I had to make a choice."

Texon's population declined in the late 1930s and early 1940s when oil production began to decline. After 1940, a few water injection wells were drilled, but most remaining activity was limited to production.

By using more sophisticated equipment, the company could operate the field with fewer employees. In addition, a large oil strike in south Texas called many men away through company transfers.

In 1962, Texon was "closed" by Marathon Oil Company, which through mergers and acquisitions had bought the Big Lake Oil Company years earlier.

The closeness and camaraderie of Texon lingers to this day, according to Mrs. Gardner.

The friendships which grew in Texon have survived 30 or 40 years; many of the residents still keep in touch, she said.

Big Lake Oil Company president Levi Smith knew living conditions were important to the success of an oilfield camp in an isolated area like Texon. Under his leadership, Texon became a model camp. The post office opened in 1926 to allow mail service for the 2,000 residents. Today the post office is one of the few remaining buildings in Texon.

First baby named Rita after well

BY LESLIE HAINES
Business-Energy Writer

When the Santa Rita No. 1 well came a gusher in 1923, it caused the birth of the Permian Basin oil industry.

The Big Lake Oil Company created a tiny oil camp called Texon just south of the well; the Texon Oil and Land Company, the company that drill the Santa Rita well, established Santa Rita two miles east.

Roughnecks and engineers from each company worked day and night, in heat, dust and wind, to develop the Big Lake oil field.

Two years later, the atmosphere of the two camps changed, as men sent for their families. The camps slowly evolved into small towns, especially when a baby girl was born June 28, 1925.

She was the first child born in the oil camp known as Santa Rita, Texas.

She was named Rita.

Mrs. Rita Nutter Wheeler of Midland recounts the tale, as told to her by her parents and by yellowed newspaper clippings from the day:

Her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Harry B. Nutter, lived in Girvin, Texas, after their marriage. Harry and his brother-in-law operated a trucking business and frequently hauled oilfield equipment to nearby Texon, the site of the Santa Rita well and many other wells in the Big Lake field. Later, Nutter operated a Humble gasoline station in Girvin. Eventually, he became a cable tool driller.

When it came time for the birth of the Nutter's first child, they went to Santa Rita, where the hospital was located. Nutter knew a Dr. Patterson there.

The Nutters were blessed with a baby girl — it seems they almost had no choice but to name her Rita.

The mother, Inez, had another name picked out for her before her birth, Rita said.

"Mr. Williby, the camp superintendent, said to her, 'You simply have to name her Santa Rita.' Mother said no. She was afraid I would be called Santa Claus.

"She did say she would go along with 'Rita', so I was named Rita Marie."

Little Rita was given an enthusiastic welcome by the oil field workers at Santa Rita camp, according to news accounts of the event.

The San Angelo Standard said, at the time, "The members of the Texon Oil and Land Company's working force have been filing in to see the new arrival."

In those days, newspaper accounts were more personal than they are today. The proud father wrote, "Mrs. Nutter and I, in viewing our past, feel that we have a continuance of romance. We feel greatly honored to know our little girl is the first baby born in Santa Rita."

Rita Nutter Wheeler

The event was not without a worrisome side, however. At birth, little Rita was blue from the waist down, having been a breech baby. The attending doctor said she was not expected to live, or if she did, to walk.

But Rita Marie did live, and walked.

"Later on, when Dr. Patterson would see me coming down the street, he would always say, 'Rita Marie, I didn't expect you to walk.'"

Rita's brother, Clifford Nutter, (also now living in Midland), was born in the hospital at Santa Rita 13 months later.

Rita, Clifford and the three other brothers who came along later never lived in Santa Rita, or in Texon, the oil camp just two miles from there. They grew up in Girvin and Big Lake, but they remember going to both Santa Rita and Texon for entertainment.

"If you didn't have anything to do in Big Lake, why you went over to Texon," Rita said.

When she grew up, Rita met and married Floyd Wheeler in Big Lake. Their first child, Larry, was born in Texon in 1947.

Energy use increase predicted by IPAA

By SCOTT MAIER
Hearst Feature Service

SEATTLE — Energy consumption will grow slightly in 1983, reversing a three-year decline in the nation's use of oil and other fuels, industry officials predicted.

The modest rise in energy consumption, however, will not keep pace with economic growth, the Independent Petroleum Association of America said in a report released Thursday.

Meeting in Seattle, the association's supply and demand committee predicted energy consumption will increase less than one-half percent this year, well below the 2.6 percent increase in economic activity expected in 1983.

The supply and demand committee, in its semi-annual report, also forecast that national consumption of oil will fall for the fifth year in a row, an unprecedented decline. "Conservation and substitution of other fuels will more than offset the demand stimulus from economic recovery," the report said.

With projected oil demand down almost 100,000 barrels daily in 1983, production of U.S. crude and natural gas liquids will decline slightly, the report said. Higher Alaskan North Slope output will nearly offset a decline in Lower 48 production, the industry forecasters said.

Motor gasoline demand was projected to remain near 1982 levels of 6.6 million barrels daily, providing a pause in the long decline of gasoline consumption.

Import volumes probably will remain at last year's level of 4.9 million barrels a day, the report said.

The association, which represents independent oil producers, also forecast ample supplies of gasoline and aviation fuel as consumption and production hold steady.

The industry group predicted that coal consumption will increase 2.5 percent in 1983, a sharp turnaround from the 3.5 percent drop last year. Cheap electricity prices and a depressed iron and steel industry caused last year's drop in coal consumption. Coal markets are expected to improve along with the economy, the report said.

Hydroelectric and geothermal power is projected to rise modestly in 1983, following an exceptionally large 15 percent jump last year. "Above average snowmelt and heavy rainfall in the past two years have increased available hydropower to historically high levels," the report said.

Electricity generated by nuclear power is expected to increase 6.7 percent in 1983, following last year's 3.7 percent rise.

The report predicted an overall increase in energy consumption for 1983, but said that energy demand in the first three months of the year actually fell. The decrease was caused by an unusually mild winter which sharply reduced demand for heating fuels, and by ongoing conservation measures.

As economic revival takes hold in the remainder of the year, an increase in energy consumption will more than offset the first-quarter decline, the report said.

In other news released at the semi-annual meeting of the Independent Petroleum Association of L America, industry officials said:

Despite a rapid falloff in the cost of goods and services, the cost of drilling index increased in 1982.

Prices generally fell last year, but long-term contracts pushed up the average price of drilling, according to the association's cost-study committee. However, an informal industry survey indicated that oil drilling costs had fallen by the year's end, the committee said.

Production of crude oil from the nation's stripper (low-volume) oil wells was substantially higher last year than in 1981, the National Stripper Well Association reported.

The industry group estimated that last year's stripper wells produced 439 million barrels, about 12 million more barrels than in 1981.

Stripper wells, which produce 10 barrrels or less a day, account for 85 percent of the nation's oil wells.

Automation maximizes workforce

DETROIT — A top General Motors official says projections that call for 20,000 to 25,000 robots in the auto industry by the 1990's are correct.

But Robert Eaton discounted estimates that such automation will knock out up to 40,000 more jobs.

"Unless we increase productivity (through computer-aided automation and robots) we will have substantially greater unemployment than we face with it," Eaton told newsmen Thursday.

High-tech automation, he added "is the way to maximize, not minimize the size of the work force."

By streamlining production, he said, General Motors and other automakers can put money to work to increase markets here and abroad. In addition, automation will open up new jobs in programming, maintenance and control systems.

Eaton, GM's vice president for both advanced products and manufacturing systems, is part of a panel invited to discuss automation and the economy at the American Association for the Advancement of Science meeting here.

"The factory of the future," he reported , will have to respond to world competition with widespread computer automation. "There will hardly be an area in the factory that won't be computerized," he added.

One computerized machine already at GM, he says, is programmed to make seven different types of cylinder parts for gasoline and diesel engines, and the same machine can also be programmed to make axle parts.

This machine, he noted, requires two full time employees, but several others for maintenance and programming part-time.

In contrast to Eaton's views, remarks prepared for the panel by United Auto Workers vice president Donald Ephlin said it is "commonly accepted" that one robot displaces two workers.

That would mean up to 40,000 to 50,000 lost jobs in the next seven years, Ephlin said.

And those projections don't even count what happens when old factories are completely closed and "newer plants take the technology well beyond mere robotics."

The recession and high levels of unemployment make it difficult to estimate the actual impact of automation on job loss, Ephlin added. But he noted that the Congressional Budget Office suggests 3 million jobs may be at risk as a direct result of full-scale automation in all manufacturing industries.

Talk of retraining skilled workers for high-tech computer jobs, Ephlin said, is as realistic as "the tooth fairy."

Even if there was enough money to retrain them and the workers could learn the necessary skills, the jobs won't be there, he said.

"The U.S. Department of Labor projects that jobs for computer programmers will grow by up to 150 percent during the 1980's," Ephlin said. "That's great news until you realize the actual number of jobs they are talking about is only 150,000."

By contrast, the department estimates 1.3 million new jobs for janitors, nurses aides and orderlies, and 800,000 for kitchen workers. "The future of dislocated workers is not in the high-tech sector," he added, but in lower-paying service jobs.

Ephlin called for a government commitment to full employment and new tax policies that favor refurbished old plants over new plants and the use of domestic over foreign labor.

Frank P. Stafford, chairman of the department of economics at the University of Michigan agreed that more favorable tax policies are preferable to higher protective tariffs.

He also suggested that if Japan's experience is typical, the U.S. economy can absorb workers displaced by automation.

Recent statistics from Japan, he said, showed a drop in manufacturing jobs throughout the 1970's. But the lack of a recession, and the increased demand for more suppliers and distributors generated by higher productivity, Japan has enjoyed high employment, Stafford said.

Steel asks Reagan for tougher restrictions

NEW YORK (AP) - The nation's specialty steel industry is asking President Reagan to toughen an import restriction program proposed by the U.S. International Trade Commission.

"We honestly believe that the president can be persuaded," Dr. Adolph Lena, chairman of AL Tech Specialty Steel Corp., told the American Iron and Steel Institute convention Thursday.

"I think you all recognize the difficult battle we will have to convince the Administration to undertake an import relief program greater than that recommended by the ITC," Lena told industry executives. "Nevertheless, that is what is required."

Specialty steel is higher priced than carbon steel used in automobiles and buildings and is distinguished by hardness and resistance to rust, heat and abrasion. It is used in products such as tools, jet engines and communication satellites.

Imports of stainless steel, the largest specialty steel product, reached 202,500 net tons in 1982, the same year the domestic industry shipped 894,000 net tons, according to the AISI.

In 1978, stainless steel imports were nearly 200,000 tons and the domestic industry shipped 1.2 million tons.

On March 24, the U.S. International Trade Commission found the domestic specialty steel industry had been injured by imports of alloy tool steel and some stainless steel products .

Here's Why At ClayDesta National Oil & Gas Is Our Business.

Ever since the discovery of gas and crude in the Permian Basin, Midland has attracted countless independent energy pioneers who came here with a hat full of dreams and a pocket full of leases.

And with the kind of hard work (and a little luck) that only oil and gas people can understand, these operators have made our city one of America's great energy centers.

But factors like the economy, government regulations, and imports have changed the face of the oil and gas industry forever. And as a result, the kind of financial backing an oil and gas man needs now is a lot different from what he needed just a few years ago.

Backing the oil and gas industry is a major part of ClayDesta National Bank's business. It makes up the biggest single component of our loans. And because our bank was built by oil and gas men, we know how to handle the special needs of independent operators.

Quick response. Sometimes you've got to have an answer now! Oil men who deal with ClayDesta National will tell you they can usually measure response time in days not months.

Personal attention. Any oil man's relationship should be one-on-one with his banker, not with a department. And frankly, our oil and gas customers tell us ClayDesta National is the friendliest bank they've ever been in.

Commitment. There aren't many things more important to an oil man than knowing his bank will stand by him. You get a commitment from ClayDesta National, and you've got a commitment.

Asset strength. We opened just a few months ago with the largest capital structure of any bank in West Texas history. Since then our deposit base has grown more than 300%, while our loan-to-deposit ratio is less than 40%. But most importantly, because of our sound relationships with other financial sources, truly no oil and gas deal is too big for ClayDesta National to handle.

Expertise. Not many things are worse than talking to a banker who doesn't understand your business. We're one of just a handful of Texas banks who have full-time oil and gas lenders on staff, ready to work with you.

Positive attitude. Let's be honest. A lot of people think energy loans are a dirty word these days. But those independent oil and gas operators who risked all they had to establish this great industry are still the backbone of it today. And we stand behind 'em. At ClayDesta National Bank, energy lending is OK!

The oil and gas industry has kept this part of Texas looking great for nearly a century.

And at ClayDesta National Bank, we think it's looking better all the time.

Longhorns whitewash NCAA foe

AUSTIN (AP) — University of Texas pitcher Roger Clemens says that a lot is at stake in the NCAA Central Regional baseball tournament and his throwing has to be up to the task.

"We know that if you lose here, you go home, and we don't want to do that," said Clemens, who pitched a no-hitter for 5 1/3 innings to help the Longhorns to a 15-0 shutout of Northeast Louisiana on Thursday.

Clemens, 11-5, combined with Longhorn pitchers Wade Phillips and Kirk Killingsworth to hold the Indians to just two hits. Clemens said he had hoped to continue his no-hitter longer.

"I was disgusted with the pitch" on the first hit, he said. "I just couldn't get around to hit the ball."

THE LONGHORNS face Mississippi State at 8 p.m. today, while the Indians play Pan American at 5 p.m.

In other pairings, Tulane will face Grambling in a 1 p.m. elimination game.

Texas rocked five Northeast Louisiana pitchers for 18 hits.

"I thought early in the ball game there was some sloppy play on our part, but we got ourselves righted and played pretty well the last four or five innings," Texas coach Cliff Gustafson said. "I thought we hit the ball pretty well."

The Texas hitting spree matched a season high in both hits and runs.

Longhorn designated hitter Darren Loy had four RBIs, two in the Longhorns' sven-run seventh inning. Catcher Jeff Hearron had two doubles, a triple and two singles for Texas, accounting for two RBIs.

Mike Brumley and David Denny also had two RBIs for Texas.

TEXAS, 57-13, had eight hits in the seventh inning. The seven-run outburst followed a four-run sixth inning by the Longhorns.

Mississippi State pitcher Jeff Brantleytossed a four-hitter to lead the Bulldogs to a 4-2 first-round win over Tulane, 44-16.

The Bulldogs stranded a runner in each of the final eight innings. Brantley improved his record to 11-3 while loser Marc Desjardins dropped to 12-6.

Mississippi State had 13 hits off Desjardins. Brad Winkler paced Mississippi State with three hits and three RBIs. Will Clark also had three hits and scored three runs.

In the eighth inning, the Green Wave capitalized on an error by first baseman Clark and scored two unearned runs. Greg Barrios and Steve Riley had RBIs for Tulane in the inning.

The Bulldogs scored single runs in the second, third, fourth and eighth innings.

EARLIER, Pan American's Jim Hickey threw a three-hitter to give the Broncs a 5-0 first-round win over Grambling.

Hickey struck out eight and walked two and improved his record to 16-2 with the win.

Hickey got all the runs he needed in the first inning when the Broncs scored three times off losing pitcher Martin Foley.

Mark Reissener had the big hit of the innin with a two-run bloop double to left field. Mitchell Moran gave the Broncs additional support in the fourth with his 20th home run of the year, a two-run shot to left field.

Both runs off Moran's homer were unearned, and Foley, 9-3, retired 13 of the last 14 batters her faced.

The right-handed Hickey retired 14 of the final 15 Tiger hitters. Grambling's only scoring threat came in the 5th inning. With two outs, Ira Tieuel and Moses Clerk singled, and advanced to second and third on a wild pitch.

Lead-off batter Don Reed then popped out to third base to end the threat.

Pan American is now 63-17-1. Grambling, one loss away from elimination, dropped to 30-11.

Win without Moses

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — A sticky defense that shut off the Los Angeles Lakers for most of the fourth quarter saved the Philadelphia 76ers when Moses Malone, who had saved them many times before, was not around to do the job.

The 76ers beat the Lakers 103-93 Thursday night, rolling to a 2-0 advantage in the best-of-seven National Basketball Association championship series.

Philadelphia held the Lakers to 12 points in the first 11 minutes of the fourth quarter, breaking open a close game to take a 103-90 lead with 23 seconds left.

WITH MALONE on the bench with five fouls, 7-foot-2 Lakers center Kareem Abdul-Jabbar scored 10 of those 12 points and finished with a team-high 23.

"We knew they would go to Kareem Abdul-Jabbar more, because it definitely was a mismatch with me giving up five inches," said Earl Cureton, the 76ers' 6-9 reserve center who was called to fill in for Malone.

"But I've played him before, and I knew my best bet would be to try and get in front of him and deny him the ball."

"We tried to make them beat us from the outside," added Sixers guard Maurice Cheeks. "We got some steals, and good weakside help."

Malone led all scorers with 24 points and hauled down 12 rebounds. Cheeks and Andrew Toney added 19 points apiece for Philadelphia and Julius Erving and Bobby Jones had 14 each.

The Lakers held a 55-51 lead at halftime after outrebounding Philadelphia 26-17.

The 76ers also held an advantage at the foul line, where they connected on 23 of 32 shots while the Lakers made only three of five.

Cureton, who became Malone's backup when regular reserve center Clemon Johnson developed an infection earlier in the week, said he was thrilled just to get the playing time. He only scored two points, but they came on a hook shot over Abdul-Jabbar with 4:36 left to give the 76ers a 91-85 lead.

"It was sort of ironic that when Moses got his fifth foul, they opened up the game," Lakers Coach Pat Riley said.

"It wasn't a matter of who we were going to in the fourth quarter. You have to give them credit for being aggressive."

"We're going home now," the Laker coach added. "We have to regroup. And I'll guarantee you this: They won't take our title from us the way they did tonight."

Los Angeles, which beat Philadelphia in the finals in 1980 and last year, wants to become the first NBA team to repeat as champion in 14 years.

Cubs Pryce is right

'Hall's ready now,' says Espy

By ROBERT BRUNDAGE
Sports Writer

Midland Cubs pitcher Ken Pryce picked up his second victory of the season Thursday night in the first game of a doubleheader at Cubs Stadium. Coming out of the bullpen in the fourth inning, he allowed only three hits while shutting down the Shreveport Captains for a 14-7 win.

In the nightcap, Shreveport pitcher Kevin McKenna gave up the only hits and runs the Cubs would get as the Captains claimed a 3-2 decision.

With the score tied at seven, one runner on base and two out, Pryce came in for starter Ron Richardson and proceeded to shut down the Captains' attack with a little double play help from his teammates in the sixth inning.

"Ken Pryce did an outstanding job for us," said Midland manager Tommy Harmon. "He came in and held them down."

MEANWHILE, MIDLAND hitters, after spotting Richardson a 7-0 early lead, kept their bats ablaze and finished the game with a 15-hit performance.

Mel Hall, who is in Midland for a five-day, six-game rehabilitation, broke the deadlock in the bottom of the fourth with his second home run in two days, a solo shot over the left field fence. It was the third time he'd scored in the game.

Second baseman Trey Brooks followed in the fifth with a three-run shot to the same field to score Bill Hatcher (for the third time) and Hall for the fourth.

"I'm going to call Dallas Green tomorrow (Friday) and tell him to forget about waiting for Monday (to recall Hall to the majors)," said Shreveport manager Duane Espy. "He's ready to play now and he's just wasting his time down here."

In three games for Midland (counting the second of the doubleheader), Hall has a .545 batting average, scored five runs on six hits and knocked in four others. Good enough for Espy to want to see him leave.

However, Hall wasn't the only Cub to plague the Captains in the first game. Hatcher was 3-for-5 with a double and Mike Anicich went 3-for-3 for two RBI.

IN THE second game, Shreveport backed McKenna's two-run, three-hit effort with two innings of perfect relief by Pat Larkin and back-to-back home runs by Rob Deer (his 13th) and Mark Schuster (11) in the second inning.

Ken Pryce
...posts second win

"McKenna pitched well with just three days rest," said Espy. "He pitched Sunday in Beaumont and won a tight game. He held Midland in the second game after they beat us to death in the first."

It was a pitching performance the Captains needed. In the first game, Espy kept Craig Chamberlain on the mound even though he was being hit hard — 11 hits for 11 runs — because his pitching staff was low on numbers.

"We've played eight games in the last five days with three doubleheaders," said Espy. "In the first game Chamberlain stayed out there and took some lumps. We only had two relief pitchers available for today (Thursday). I'm gald to get out of tonight's games with a split, especially after the way we lost in the first game."

Midland had its share of good pitching in the second game too. Ray Soff, getting his first start of the season, gave up five hits for three runs before being pulled in favor of Jim Gerlach with two out in the fourth. Gerlach stayed for one inning, allowing one walk, and was taken out for newly-acquired Bill Johnson.

Johnson, the hard-throwing right hander who came to Midland on a trade with the Philadelphia organization, went 2⅓ innings and allowed a hit and walk.

"Ray threw all right and Gerlach did what he was supposed to do," said Harmon. "Johnson came in and gave a good outing."

With that kind of pitching, why the 3-2 loss?

"It's the way we've been all year," said Harmon. "We hit the ball hard in one game and come back for a game or two and don't hit. That kid (Larkin) who came in to relieve did a good job for them, too."

CUB NOTES—Three stolen bases in the doubleheader gives Hatcher 20 on the season to tie teammate Rick Baker...The split puts Midland 5½ games out of first place in the Texas League West behind San Antonio while Shreveport maintains a 4½-game lead over Jackson in the East...Shreveport leads the six-game series with Midland, 2-1...Tonight at 7 p.m., the Captains will throw Mark Grant, 4-3 with an earned run average of 2.04. Midland will counter with Carlos Gil, 3-4, 6.02.

San Antonio tops Travelers

By Associated Press

San Antonio's R.J. Reynolds singled to drive in two runs in the fifth inning and the Dodgers went on to defeat the Arkansas Travelers 6-4 in a Texas League game.

The win kept the Dodgers in the West Division lead, one-half game ahead of El Paso. The Diablos came from behind to beat Jackson 7-5 Thursday night.

Reynolds' two-run single in the fifth drove in Stu Pederson and Tom Beyers, both of whom had singled. Reynolds scored a run in the fourth when he doubled and came home on a single by third baseman Larry See.

Winning pitcher Jody Johnston improved his record to 2-4 while Arkansas starter Walt Pierce dropped to 2-5 with the loss.

Carlos Ponce slugged the game-winning RBI for El Paso. Jackson was ahead 5-3 until the Diablos scored four times in the top of the eighth.

Ponce drove in Juan Castillo and the insurance run came when Bill Max drove in Ponce.

The winning pitcher was Bob Schroeck, now 6-2. The save went to Phil Hinrichs. Bryon Ballard, 2-3, was the loser.

TED BATTLES
BATTLE SCENE

Don't sell Texas short

After witnessing such recent Cubs Stadium classics as 20-19 and 13-12, typical of this year's Texas League rumbles, one relative newcomer to West Texas remarked, "Well, one thing about this league, it obviously doesn't develop any pitchers."

That might seem to be the case in the land where the hitters swing free and pitchers wind up howling at the moon, but it's not as simple as that. True, West Texas baseball can be a sobering experience for a young pitcher, but it's not quite like Don Adams said when he addressed his rookie umpiring class.

"This is a tough, back-breaking course. But some of you survive it and go on to bigger and better things. Others of you will crack. Those of you who crack will become umpires."

The Texas League does separate the wolves from the sheep. But it's a case of not letting the high altitude, thin air and the unrelenting wind pysche you out.

"PITCHERS are tight when they come into the game in El Paso or Midland," says Midland Manager Tom Harmon. "They go out there worrying about making a mistake. And, as a result, they make plenty of them. If they'd only go out there and concentrate on pitching their game, keeping the ball low, getting it over the plate and staying ahead of the hitter. They'd be able to pitch here successfully. Sure, they'd give up some runs, but that's something every pitcher has to accept."

There's plenty of proof of that in the major leagues and the Texas League has been especially productive when it comes to relief pitchers.

MAYBE IT'S because they not only come into a game with the sacks loaded and the opposition's ugliest hitter striding to the plate, but they arrive on the hill to find themsleves facing the most hostile elements.

Dan Spillner, once a starter, has become an effective relief pitcher for Cleveland and lefthander Len Whitehouse, who toiled three seasons at Tulsa, is one of the bright young faces on the Minnesota Twins.

Since the Texas League is primarily a National League farm circuit, there are, of course, more firemen there. Tom Niedenfeur of the Dodgers (9 saves in '82) was at San Antonio two years ago. And teammate Steve Howe (15 saves) toiled for the San Antonio. Ted Power is another former San Antonio pitcher who is gaining attention as with Cincinnati this year, his first real shot at the Bigs.

Jeff Reardon (26 saves) and Neil Allen (19 saves) both came through this league with Jackson. Reardon is now one of the premiere relief pitchers in the NL at Montreal and Neil Allen has had as much success as one can expect with a team like the Mets.

SID MONGE has kicked around for years since leaving the TL, but is a 3-0 relief man for the Phillies and Rick Rhoden, once a Dodger, is now a mopup man with Pittsburgh.

The Giants' Greg Minton (30 saves) and the Padres Luis DeLeon (14 saves0 and Gary Lucas (16 saves) are products of the Texas League.

No one, however, has had any more success in producing relief pitchers than Midland. Bruce Sutter, now with the Cardinals, has saved more games than any pitcher in National League history. Last year he rescued 36 games. Chicago's Lee Smith (17 saves) has been one of the hottest short relief men in the game over the last year. And Ron Davis (22 saves), if he weren't famous for his verbal jousts with Calvin Griffith, the penny-pinching owner of the Minnesota Twins, would be famous for his relief pitching.

Colts may contact Art during treatment

WESLEY CHAPEL, Fla. (AP) — National Football League Commissioner Pete Rozelle says the Baltimore Colts will not be prevented from maintaining contact with suspended quarterback Art Schlichter, undergoing treatment for compulsive gambling.

"There is no prohibition against that," the commissioner said without further elaboration Thursday as NFL owners concluded two days of meetings at a resort north of Tampa.

Schlichter, a former Ohio State star and first-round draft choice of the Colts in 1982, was suspended indefinitely by Rozelle last week for gambling activities. He is undergoing treatment at an undisclosed hospital.

Asked to comment on a Sports Illustrated article which said Schlichter had accumulated debts almost double the amount previously reported, Rozelle said:

"We haven't said anything . . . Our situation is he's undergoing his treatment. We'll monitor (his progress) during the course of the next year and see how he does and hope he succeeds."

There were several important items on the owners' agenda here, but few that carried the potential economic impact of the possible conversion from the use of film to videotape by NFL teams.

The consensus of league officials is that such a move is inevitable, said Dallas Cowboys President Tex Schramm, and when it does come, it could cost the 28 clubs between $8 million and $11 million.

"Everybody feels that tape is the coming thing," said Schramm, adding that conversion costs could run between $300,000 and $400,000 per team. "The problem we have is that it's almost a thing where all 28 are going to have to go at the same time because of the exchange of tape or films on games. You can ease into it, but easing into it is just about as expensive as going all the way."

CHICAGO (AP) — Manager Doug Rader was full of quips Thursday night after his Texas Rangers had broken a four-game losing streak with a 3-1 victory over the Chicago White Sox.

"If his face holds up he's going to have a heckuva year," said Rader of outfielder Larry Parrish, who rapped out three hits, drove in the first run, scored what proved to be the winning run and crashed into the right field wall making a tremendous catch.

Of Rick Honeycutt's two-hitter in eight innings, Rader said: "He struggled the whole game, his location was less than perfect and frankly I don't know how he did it."

HONEYCUTT, 6-3, gave up a leadoff single to Rudy Law in the first inning and then didn't allow another hit until Marc Hill hit his first homer with one out in the eighth.

"It was a strange two-hitter," said Honeycutt who gave way to Odell Jones in the ninth. "I struggled all night. They hit a lot of balls hard to the warning track but there was somebody there to catch 'em."

One of the best shots, hit by rookie Ron Kittle, sent Parrish crashing into the right field wall head first to make the catch.

"I had a headache the rest of the night," said Parrish, who obviously didn't let it bother him.

Parrish singled to drive in Billy Sample with what proved to be the game-winning run in the third inning. He also singled and scored the first of two more Texas runs in the eighth inning and added another single in the ninth.

"He's 90 percent of our offense," said Rader. "If he doesn't hit, we virtually have no chance of scoring. Lately, he's been about it."

Rader decided to go with Jones, who picked up his sixth save, in the ninth inning "because I wanted the sure thing. So what does he do? Scares the heck out of me by walking the first guy up in the ninth."

Jones issued a walk to Tony Bernazard but then put down the next three batters to lock up the victory.

THE LOSS went to Floyd Bannister, 2-6, who pitched well until he ran into trouble in the eighth, when Parrish, Pete O'Brien and George Wright all singled for one run and relief pitcher Dick Tidrow walked Bucky Dent with the bases loaded to force in another.

Tidrow later worked out of a bases-loaded jam in the ninth and that gave White Sox Manager Tony LaRussa some hope.

"I felt we had a chance when they were unable to score in the ninth," said LaRussa, "especially when the leadoff man got on. But that was it. We just didn't score enough. We hit the ball hard early but couldn't score. We're going to have to do something about it."

The White Sox now have had a total of five hits in their last two games and broke a string of 21 scoreless innings when Hill hit his homer.

Cooney suffers injury

PROVIDENCE, R. I. (AP) — The damaged knuckle on heavyweight Gerry Cooney's left hand won't prevent him from returning to action June 18. But it might be operated on later.

"It's OK," an obviously relieved Cooney said Thursday after having the badly swollen knuckle examined by Dr. Richard Smith

Unbeaten filly heads Kansas Futurity field

RUIDOSO DOWNS (AP) — The unbeaten 2-year-old filly Easily A Twelve heads the 10-horse field in Sunday's 33rd running of the Kansas Futurity, a quarter horse dash with a total purse of $655,615.

The Kansas Futurity is the first of three major stakes races at Ruidoso Downs this summer for 2-year olds. Along with the Rainbow Futurity, run in July, and the $2.5 million All-American Futurity on Labor Day, the three races make up the quarter horse industry's version of the Triple Crown.

The winner of Sunday's 350-yard race will earn $216,654 and Easily A Twelve, winner of her first four races this year, looms as the horse to beat.

Owned by the partnership of H. Don Farris and Don E. Keith of of Sunland Park, N.M., Easily A Twelve goes into the Kansas with earnings of $86,530. The filly posted only the sixth fastest qualifying time for the race, but won her trial race with ease.

Farris also trains Easily A Twelve and will saddle two other entries in the race.

Three other fillies, Allotta Dial, Jest Real Easy and Firewater Fancy, along with the colt Fine Looking Man all have made impressive debuts this spring.

Allotta Dial was the fastest qualifier for the futurity with a clocking of 18.08 seconds in the trials two weeks ago.

Jest Real Easy has won four of her five starts while Firewater Fancy has won three of four races. Fine Looking Man had the second fastest qualifying time in the trials and also has won three of his first four starts.

80s bring more rookies to Indy

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — In the 1970s, 47 rookies made it into the Indianapolis 500. In the 1980s — only four years — 35 have made it.

But this new generation is not just new faces. It's a new breed — faster, better educated and, some say, less skillful.

Six rookies have qualified for Sunday's 67th Indy 500. Al Unser Jr., the son of a three-time Indy 500 winner, is the youngest at 21 and Pat Bedard, a veteran racing journalist, is the oldest at 41.

OF THE six, Chris Kniefel wants to play professional basketball, while foreign drivers Derek Daly and Teo Fabi arrived as experienced road racers. Only 38-year-old Steve Chassey took the traditional path through sprint and midget car races.

Nineteen of the 33 drivers in this year's field weren't here as recently as four years ago. Four are from last year's group of nine rookie qualifiers and six are left over from the 10-rookie crop in 1981.

The newcomers hope to become the men who will replace the likes of Bobby Unser, Al Unser, A.J. Foyt, Gordon Johncock, Mario Andretti and Johnny Rutherford — men who dominated the sport until Rick Mears joined them in 1978.

Those seven drivers have won every Indy since 1967, with the exception of 1972 when the late Mark Donohue made the coveted trip to Victory Lane. Bobby Unser is retired, Rutherford spent more time in the hospital this month than he did on the track after crashing twice during practice, while Foyt, 48, is prepared to add more statistics to his collection of records as he starts an unparalleled 26th race.

AGE HAS caught up with names like Lloyd Ruby, Joe Leonard, Roger McCluskey, Jim McElreath and Wally Dallenbach, while Bob Harkey's dream of Cnother Indianapolis start at age 52 ended when he was seriously injured in practice this year.

Drivers like Chet Fillip, Bobby Rahal, Howdy Holmes and Tom Sneva arrived with college degrees. Other had to sell themselves to sponsors before they could get into a race car.

"You used to have to work yourself through to get to Indianapolis," says former driver Jerry Grant. "We didn't have to get money to buy a ride and we weren't born with a golden spoon like some of today's drivers. To get here before, you had to be a proven winner with a certain amount of time in grade ... Now you can get here with a little talent and money."

Yaz making presence felt in last hurrah

By Associated Press

About the only honor that has eluded Carl Yastrzemski in his 23-year major league career is a world championship. And in his last hurrah, the 43-year-old slugger is finally making his presence felt.

Playing in just his 19th game of what he has said will be his final campaign, Yastrzemski hit his first home run of the season and 443rd of his career Thursday night and Dwight Evans and Jim Rice also homered, powering Boston to a 7-2 victory over Toronto. It gave the Red Sox a one-game lead over the Blue Jays in the American League East.

With a .258 batting average entering the game, only three previous runs batted and a nagging back problem, Yastrzemski's final season seemed destined to be one to forget. But his two-run homer in the second inning gave the Red Sox a 3-0 lead against Toronto ace Dave Stieb and the old warhorse also singled for a 2-for-2 night.

Stieb, 8-3, who had allowed only three runs while winning his last five starts and hadn't surrendered a home run in 80 2-3 innings, lasted only three innings and gave up five runs on five hits. Evans hit a wind-aided, opposite-field homer to right for a 1-0 lead in the first inning and Yastrzemski made it 3-0 in the second after a leadoff walk to Wade Boggs.

Boston added two runs in the top of the fourth — Yastrzemski contributed his single — and sent Stieb to his earliest exit of the season. And Rice hit a two-run homer in the sixth.

Boston reliever Bob Stanley entered the game with two out in the fourth after Bob Ojeda walked three consecutive batters following a two-run homer by Cliff Johnson. Stanley went the rest of the way, allowing two hits.

Royals 8, Orioles 2

At Kansas City, Frank White's three-run homer capped a four-run third inning as the Royals extended the Orioles' skid to the longest of the season in the AL. Kansas City's Steve Renko survived a rocky start and scattered six hits through seven innings. Mike Armstrong pitched the final two.

Dodger Blue makes Laskey see red

St. Louis decks Astros

By Associated Press

"Dodger Blue" makes Bill Laskey see red.

"It really pumps me up," says the San Francisco pitcher of the Giants' rivalry with the Los Angeles Dodgers.

The adrenaline was obviously flowing for Laskey Thursday night when he helped the Giants beat their intrastate California foes 5-3 for his sixth straight victory.

"I really didn't learn about this rivalry until last year, when I beat Fernando Valenzuela, and then I saw how our guys and the fans reacted," said Laskey, 6-4, who pitched into the eighth inning before needing relief help from Greg Minton.

Jeff Leonard slugged two home runs and Jack Clark added a solo shot to power the Giants to their sixth straight victory in Los Angeles. The loss snapped the Dodgers' four-game winning streak.

Leonard hit a two-run homer in the second inning, then belted a solo shot in the fourth. Jack Clark also walloped a home run for the Giants to offset a two-homer night for Los Angeles' Rick Monday.

Pirates 6, Reds 4

Mike Easler drove in three runs with a sacrifice fly and two-run homer to lead Pittsburgh over Cincinnati.

Easler's sacrifice fly drove in the second run in a four-run rally in the fourth inning that gave Pittsburgh a 4-1 lead. In the sixth, Easler's homer made it 6-1 and provided the Pirates with their eventual winning runs.

Lee Tunnell, 1-1, pitched 5 1-3 innings to gain the victory. Two relievers finished up, including Kent Tekulve, who recorded his second save.

"I feel we're about to jell," Easler said. "What we've been in, you can't call it a slump. We're just not getting the hits with men on base. I feel it's starting to come. I think we've had our rough time."

Cubs 5, Braves 1

Bill Buckner hit a two-run double and Jay Johnstone slugged a homer as Chicago defeated Atlanta behind the combined pitching of Paul Moskau and Bill Campbell.

Moskau, 3-2, scattered nine hits, walked one and fanned five before needing Campbell's relief help in the eighth, when the Braves scored on a triple by Brett Butler and a single by Rafael Ramirez.

Buckner's double came after consecutive two-out singles by Ryne Sandberg and Larry Bowa in the seventh inning. Johnstone belted his second homer of the season in the eighth, giving the Cubs a 5-0 lead at that point.

"Everybody's got a different idea about what you're doing wrong, and I've been listening to all of them," said Buckner, who had entered the game with only a .228 batting average.

Cardinals 5, Astros 3

George Hendrick's three-run double keyed a four-run first inning that triggered St. Louis over Houston.

Tom Herr opened the game with a walk, took second on Ken Oberkfell's single and went to third as Lonnie Smith hit into a forceout. Keith Hernandez was intentionally walked to load the bases before Hendrick stroked a two-bagger to left-center field to make it 3-0.

Dave Von Ohlen, who relieved starter Bob Forsch in the third, gained the win in his first decision of the year. Von Ohlen pitched 5 1-3 innings and gave up three hits before getting relief help himself from Bruce Sutter, who picked up his fourth save.

Cowboys sign three draft picks

DALLAS (AP) — The Dallas Cowboys of the National Football League have signed three more draft selections, including two running backs.

On Thursday, Dallas signed No. 5 pick Chuck McSwain, a 6-foot, 190-pound running back from Clemson; No. 7 selection Chris Schultz, 6-8, 259-pound tackle from Arizona; and No. 12 pick Lorenzo Butler, a 6-foot, 206-pound running back from Maine.

Angry McEnroe wins again

John McEnroe defeated Alberto Tous 6-3, 7-6, 6-3, demanding the removal of an umpire after long arguments with both the official and a tournament supervisor, and was joined in the third round of the French Open by Ivan Lendl, Guillermo Vilas, Yannick Noah, Eliot Teltscher Jimmy Arias and Brian Gottfried. In the women's division, Martina Navratilova, Chris Evert-Lloyd and Tracy Austin advanced but Sylvia Hanika and Virginia Ruzici lost. McEnroe, after questioning a number of line calls, he said he wanted the umpire changed, appealing to a supervisor. McEnroe argued at length over a line call in the second set and French umpire Patrick Flodstrop told him to get on with the match.

"What do you mean, get on with the match?" McEnroe said. "I'm talking to you. Aren't I allowed to talk?" "I have a bad relationship with this umpire," McEnroe told newsmen later. "I didn't think he was treating me fairly."...

Crenshaw fires 67 at Dublin

DUBLIN, Ohio (AP) — Lanny Wadkins always knew he could play Muirfield Village Golf Club.

He proved it again Thursday, grabbing a share of the first-round lead in the Memorial Tournament.

"I love playing courses in good condition. It goes with my game. With good fairways and the greens holding, I can do what I want with the ball," said Wadkins, this year's leading money-winner bidding for his third 1983 title.

Wadkins has finished in the Memorial's top 10 three of the past four years. Twelve of his 21 rounds have matched or broken par on this course of swift, undulating greens.

"I have a history of putting well on faster greens. That's why I've done well here," said Wadkins, the winner of $251,000 this year.

Crenshaw and Wadkins both posted their best performances over Muirfield Village in the cool, sunny weather. However, it was only the fifth time in 25 rounds that Crenshaw had been under par here.

"I've hit too many bad shots," said Crenshaw, reflecting on the fact he's been no higher than 18th in seven Memorial attempts, missing the cut twice. "I wouldn't think my way around this course properly. You can't get upset with bogey or double bogey here. It's going to happen to everyone."

Martin deserves cautioning label

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent

Billy Martin should be equipped with a sign like the big oil trucks: "Caution — Inflammable." The public should be warned: "Explosive — Handle With Care" or "Approach at Your Own Risk."

He is an exposed electric wire, a stick of dynamite with a short fuse.

His life has become a modern soap opera — a throbbing story of suspense, confrontation, bar skirmishes and repentance.

Don't touch that dial. Be sure to tune in next week.

The volatile New York Yankees skipper and his coaches were living it up in the local saloon — actually the lounge of a high class Anaheim, Calif., hotel — the other early morning after another frustrating New York defeat at the hands of the California Angels.

According to various versions, including those given by both parties to the Anaheim police, Billy and coaches Dom Scala and Art Fowler were minding their own business, partaking a little refreshment before retiring.

Up comes a stranger who apparently has read a lot about the pugnacious Martin and seen his slick beer commercials on TV.

Billy mumbled something under his breath. Maybe he just said, "Thanks, bud, now leave us alone." The guy insists Billy called him a bad name.

The guy exits but soon returns, urging Billy to retract the name. The Yankee group, in effect, told him to get lost. The guy goes out and returns again, wishing to press the issue.

This time he hurls something in the direction of Martin. Scala, with quick reflexes, thought it might be an ashtray, tackles the guy and bodily escorts him out the door.

But, although he insists he never touched the guy, Billy the Kid is all over the newspapers and TV screens again as the center of another barroom brawl.

It's Billy's heritage.

The fellow in the bar, Robin Olson, 27, of El Toro, Calif., said all he wanted to do was to make Martin's acquaintance but that Billy called him a bad name and somebody grabbed his shirt, pulled him down and banged his head on the floor.

"My bubble burst," he said of his hope to meet the Yankees manager.

So the scenario rolls on for Billy "The Kid" Martin, the reformed terror of the West.

Early in his career he got a reputation as "The Bad Boy of Baseball" after skirmishes with Clint Courtney of the St. Louis Browns in 1959 and with the Dodgers' Roy Campanella in the 1955 World Series.

AUSTIN (AP) — Southwest Conference faculty representatives have recommended that one of their colleagues — a 37-year-old University of Texas chemistry professor — get another chance at college football.

SWC president James Castaneda of Rice said Thursday that Richard Lagow, a former Rice lineman who last played in 1967, had asked for one more year of eligibility, claiming his "speed and strength are definitely adequate."

SWC faculty representatives recommended that the conference office forward Lagow's petition to the NCAA, with a comment, according to Castaneda, that "we would like as much favorable consideration as possible to be given to the request."

Faculty representatives also voted to ask the NCAA to make basketball, in effect, a one-semester sport by starting the season after Christmas.

Eric Holle, starting end for the Texas Longhorn football team, was among several athletes given another year of eligibility because of injuries. Holle, 6-foot-5 and 235 pounds, hurt his shoulder in a junior varsity game on Oct. 8, 1979, and did not play any more that season.

Castaneda said Lagow was told at Rice that the only way for him to play his final season was to fail or drop courses, because he would graduate prior to the football season. Instead, Lagow got his bachelor and doctorate degrees at Rice and taught at MIT before joining the UT faculty.

Castaneda said Lagow had petitioned the SWC because of a 1978 NCAA rule that allows graduate students to play intercollegiate athletics. The NCAA would have to waive a rule that requires a student-athlete to complete his eligibility within a five-year span.

Lagow's petition included his statistics — 6-1, 238 pounds, 4.9-second speed for 40 yards and leg strength that enables him to squat-lift 600 pounds "relatively easily." Lagow also said for the past three years he had been lifting weights, running and playing squash and handball to get in shape.

Lagow "honestly and seriously" wants to play another year of college football, Castaneda told a news conference.

Robin Blake ups record to 19-0

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Unbeaten Robin Blake of Levelland, Tex., raised his record to 19-0 by stopping J.C. Kim of West Jordan, Utah at 1:20 of the first round in their main event scheduled for 10 rounds at the Showboat Hotel Thursday night.

Blake, 21, ranked as the fifth-leading lightweight challenger by the World Boxing Association and the ninth-ranked challenger by the World Boxing Council, floored Kim twice before referee Richard Green stopped the one-sided bout.

Kim, a southpaw who weighed 133¼ pounds, never landed a punch. He has an announced record of 12-2.

O'Brien soothes ruffled referees

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — National Basketball Association Commissioner Larry O'Brien, who played a key role in negotiations that averted a players' strike in April, now is soothing the feelings of disgruntled referees.

Richie Phillips, general counsel for the NBA referees union, said Thursday that a 5½-hour meeting with O'Brien on Wednesday averted a possible playoff strike by the union.

"There was a serious chance that if O'Brien had not stepped in, there would have been a work stoppage for the rest of the playoffs," Phillips said.

An NBA spokesman, however, said the union's charges of unfair labor practices by the league were unwarranted in the first place.

"This action appears to be a poorly disguised attempt on the part of the referees' union to involve the NBA league office in an internal union dispute," Granik said.

Phillips, head of the National Association of Basketball Referees, said O'Brien managed to reconcile a number of union-management differences at Wednesday's meeting.

McLain denies charges

'Not bum...dope peddler'

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — Former major league pitching star Denny McLain, responding to local television reports that he is under investigation by a federal grand jury, said he is "not a bum, not a crook, not a dope peddler."

"Look, I am guilty of many things — bad judgment, bad investment, being a little rowdy maybe," the big league's last 30-game winner told Tom McEwen of the Tampa Tribune in a column written for today's editions.

"Like I said, I'm no angel, but I am not guilty of any of the charges that TV station has made."

McLain, who offered himself for interview to long-time friend McEwen, has been the subject of a multi-segment series broadcast by WXFL-TV in Tampa.

The station has aired reports saying a federal panel is investigating McLain's links to a possible conspiracy to smuggle cocaine. WXFL-TV also reported a grand jury is probing a 1982 Florida civil suit alleging the former baseball star was involved in loan sharking.

McLain has denied the charges, calling them "lunacy — just like 'Charlie's Angels.'"

U.S. Attorney Robert Merkle has flatly refused comment on the matter.

The former Detriot Tigers hurler, who won 31 games in 1968, said he called the Tribune because he felt "it is time to speak out, to fight back."

"But I won't get in a shouting match with a TV station. Can't win with the electronic media. They cut you in, cut you off, clip, slice, suggest, hint and pfft, it's gone without verification.

"I have four kids," McLain continued. "They are in school. The 10-year-old came home crying. I am speaking out in large part because of them. I am not a bum, not a crook, not a dope peddler."

"I have become a mini-series and I don't know why," said McLain. "Why me? Who have I hurt? They are being judge and jury."

The station has aired four segments, and reporter Rob North told viewers Wednesday: "We stand by our story and we stand by our sources."

In an interview with a Detroit newspaper Tuesday, McLain denied the allegations and claimed they were made by "a very, very high official in the state of Florida (who) milked" McLain's former firm, First Fidelity Financial Services Inc., of $60,000 in forced campaign contributions. He refused to name the official.

'Tighter control' aids MMH financial status

By GAIL BURKE
Staff Writer

Through the end of April revenues topped expenses by $2.3 million.

MMH's governing boards were told Thursday that a reduction in costs and an increase in patients have contributed to the profitable year.

"We've got a tighter control in overtime, watched supplies and the patient load has steadily increased," said Dale Miller, MMH vice president of finance.

In other news, MMH President Ray Branson announced that a kidney specialist, Dr. Larry Oliver, will be arriving soon.

"After all these years, we'll be able to get all the dust off the dialysis and use it," Branson said, referring to a kidney dialysis machine that was donated to the hospital five years ago.

Because there has not been a kidney specialist here, the machine has been in storage, still in its original crate.

In other action, the board of directors voted to begin preparing property south of the hospital for a parking lot.

With the lease ending July 4, the Conoco Service Station south of Illinois Avenue on Andrews Highway will be vacated.

Eugene Abbott, MMH trustee, said the building and gas tanks will be removed. According to Abbott, the lot is needed desperately for parking. He said bids will be opened for the project at a later date.

Directors paid MMH $83,235.87 and Fort Worth Children's Hospital $74,891.51 for indigent care.

Miller said the Fort Worth case involved an infant who was transferred from MMH to the children's hospital in November 1982.

"We're late getting this bill to you because we tried to qualify the patient for some kind of funding for this," Miller said.

"We tried AFDC (Aid For Dependent Children), Medicaid and crippled children, but it didn't help," he said, adding that the infant was in the hospital about two months.

Miller said indigent care to date totals $804,000.

And the directors paid $30,511.25 to the Midland County Tax Appraisal District. The money was 20 months of accumulated interest on $100,000 tax revenues mistakenly deposited in the hospital district instead of the Midland County School District.

Also directors accepted bids totaling $46,800.30 for budgeted equipment.

Victimized woman sent to prison for robbery

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

A 32-year-old victimized woman who admitted helping her shotgun-toting husband rob Odessa Savings Association of $3,911 on May 13, 1982, was sentenced to 20 years in federal prison Thursday by U.S. District Lucius D. Bunton.

The woman, Marcianne June Macklem, who admitted she was abused by her alcoholic father and her "brutal" husband, wept even as she allowed, "I know I've done wrong and will have to pay for it."

Last March, her husband, 31-year-old Robert Max Macklem, was sentenced by Bunton to 20 years in prison for the robbery to which the couple had pleaded guilty. As did her husband, Mrs. Macklem requested that she spend her sentence in federal prison rather than in the Tennessee state penitentiary, where the Macklems are serving 20-year sentences for kidnapping while planning a robbery.

In arguing for a mitigated sentence for his client, Mrs. Macklem's attorney, Roderick Price of Odessa, said the woman was a victim of a violent environment. Her alcoholic father beat her on the family farm until the woman became "easily cowed" and "easily controlled," he said.

Afterward, her husband, whom Price described as a "brutal man and an egomaniac," found "enjoyment in doing things," including compelling his wife to go into prostitution "to support him." The attorney requested that Mrs. Macklem be sent to a federal prison wherein she could benefit from counseling and vocational training.

"He's telling the truth there," Mrs. Macklem said in a broken voice. Her attorney noted that his client had "expressed regret" over her role in the robbery.

The judge ruled on the case and allowed that armed robbery was an extremely serious offense.

"It doesn't take too much to kill someone," he told the defendant.

"If I hadn't been there," Mrs. Macklem answered, "someone might have gotten hurt...killed."

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Two of the men, Frankie Keller, 30, of 4718 Laura Drive and 1608 Garden City Highway, and Steve Dudley Quain, 40, of 3604 W. Shandon Ave., are accused of shooting two bears in Mexico from a helicopter allegedly piloted by James Clyde Short Jr. in June 1981.

They also are charged with conspiracy to smuggle and with smuggling two bearskins, valued at $500 each, from Mexico to the United States without processing the skins through U.S. Customs.

If convicted, Keller and Quain could be sentenced up to five years in prison and fined $10,000 on each of three counts of conspiracy to smuggle, smuggling and importing the bearskins in violation of the U.S. Customs Act.

Under a fourth count, the men, if convicted, could be jailed for one year and fined $5,000 for importing products of game mammals without obtaining a permit from the U.S. Secretary of the Interior.

David Hamm is wheelin' along to get in shape for the triathlon event in the June 4 "Life. Be In It" day.

'Life. Be In It' set for June

The National "Life. Be In It" extravaganza will include dozens of fun events for the whole family, beginning at 8 a.m. June 4.

The event is a national celebration to kick off June as recreation and parks month and Midland is joining the fun with activities for everyone. Bring a picnic dinner and plan to stay through the evening.

—Mini-mini triathlon starts at 8 a.m. with a 100 yard swim at the City of Midland pool, a three-mile bicycle race and 1¼-mile run (or walk) at the Petro Parcourse.

—Co-ed softball will begin in the morning, continuing throughout the day.

—Horseshoe pitching will start at 9:30 a.m. at the Midland Senior Center.

—Bingo at the Senior Citizens Center is scheduled from 12:30 to 2:30 p.m. with prizes.

—Canoe races and free canoe rides will get rowing at 1 p.m. in Wadley-Barron Park, sponsored by the Boy Scouts of America.

—Splash day at Doug Russell Pool will start at 2 p.m. and will include free soft drinks. KCRS will do a live broadcast from the pool.

—Orienteering course will be sponsored by the Camp Fire Girls at 4 p.m. in Hogan Park with participants attempting to get from one point to another by using a compass.

Evening fun will kick-off with a parachute play and new games from 7 to 7:45 p.m. at Hogan Park.

Then at 8 p.m. Susie Hitchcock and Tony Corbell will kick-up their heels for a special stage performance. Also there will be clowns and a magician.

At 9 p.m. there will be dancing under the stars with music by the "Roadrunners."

For more information call the Parks & Recreation office at 683-4281, extension 316.

Study indicates that women officers try harder than male counterparts

By RICHARD ORR
Staff Writer

Women police officers may try harder than their male counterparts.

That's one finding that emerged from a recent Stephen F. Austin University study that included a survey of the Midland Police Department, which employs seven commissioned women patrol officers and one female detective.

The study delved into the perspectives of policewomen in Texas and Oklahoma and, overall, boosts the case for female cops — at least so far as their attitude toward their work is concerned.

For instance, the study concluded that policewomen are more authoritarian than policemen and significantly more inclined to intervene when infractions occur.

On the other side of the coin, danger is a more important factor to female officers and they are less self-confident than male officers.

More than 2,900 police officers participated in the study, representing 45 departments in the two states. They ranged in size from an eight-person department to Houston's 3,000-member force.

Other study findings concluded that: policewomen are more cynical about human nature as it pertains to motivating citizens to obey the law; the levels of work anxiety are similar for both sexes; women are about as capable as men in handling angry or violent citizens; and that the "approach" of policewomen is often less threatening, actually giving them some advantage over men in handling dangerous situations.

Both sexes feel more public support is needed in maintaining law and order, according to the study.

A California man with a "peculiar rolling gait" and who is suspected of impersonating a woman and then a cowboy in holding up savings associations in Midland and Odessa has been bound over to a federal grand jury following a preliminary hearing Thursday before U.S. Magistrate J. Michael Cunningham.

The man, Bryce Aldon Frazier, alias Bryan Allen Frazier, 29, has been in federal custody since his arrest last week in Odessa for possessing and distributing amphetamines — speed — following investigations by the Midland office of the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

Police records indicate Frazier, a carpenter, has been arrested more than 40 times in California on drug-related charges.

In tracking Frazier, the FBI says that a "lone, white male person disguised as a female" wearing peach-colored pants, a tan coat, black wig, heavy make-up and carrying a large grocery bag and a handgun held up the Odessa Savings Association of $10,685 on Dec. 9.

On March 4, according to the FBI statement, a man dressed in a cowboy hat, blue jacket, pants, a black wig and fitted with a rubber Halloween mask and wielding a revolver held up the First Federal Savings Association in Midland and got away with $1,940.

"This person had a peculiar rolling gait manner of walking," said the report. Another person told the FBI that the suspect displayed an "odd bounce and knee jerk manner when he walks."

In each case, the robber's get-away car was a stolen vehicle.

Fired Odessa policeman files suit

An Odessa policeman who was fired from the police force after he allegedly frisked a woman prisoner in violation of police procedure has filed a suit in federal court in Midland to be reinstated on the force, for back pay and for $175,000 in actual damages.

The former officer, Stephen M. Nichols, who is claiming violation of his constitutional rights, was on a probationary period with the force at the time he allegedly searched the woman, Elizabeth Harris.

Representatives' bills pass Senate without debate

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Bills sponsored by Reps. Jim Rudd, D-Brownfield, and Gerald Geistweidt, R-Mason, have passed the Senate without debate and now go to Gov. Mark White for consideration.

HB 1518, by Rudd, requires the Texas Commission on Jail Standards to give a sheriff whose jail has not been brought up to state standards a list of qualified detention centers to which prisoners could be transferred. The measure also permits county commissioners courts to contract with private organizations to house low-risk prisoners.

HB 861, also by Rudd, authorizes judges to require offenders to do community-service work as a condition of probation. Under current law, such community work is not required as a condition of probation except in cases of deferred adjudication.

HB 2083, the last measure by Rudd, relates to deferred suspension of certain licenses issued by the Department of Agriculture. Under the measure, the department does not have to suspend a license for a violation "if the department finds good cause," which includes violations that could not have been prevented or foreseen.

HB 2005, by Geistweidt, regulates disposal pits used to store or evaporate oil field brines.

HB 2135, also by Geistweidt, exempts landowners from certain responsibilities concerning the plugging and replugging of abandoned oil and gas wells. The measure amends the Natural Resources Code and has no specific date for enactment.

For Texas woman, dolls not child's play

WEST COLUMBIA, Texas (AP) — Don't try to tell Kaye Martindale that dolls are child's play. Just take a look at her delicate creations and you'll know it's not true.

Ms. Martindale is a craft enthusiast who has loved dolls since she was a little girl. It's only natural, then, that she enjoys making dolls.

Her mother instilled that love in her. Ms. Martindale, however, only has two sons to share her passion with.

"It's probably a good thing I didn't have girls," Ms. Martindale said. "We'd probably spend all our time playing."

She has made dolls for the boys, but her nieces serve as the main outlet for her dolls.

"Dolls from Aunt Kaye" are a Christmas tradition in the family. And Ms. Martindale is adamant that the dolls should be played with, not displayed.

"A doll on a shelf isn't any good, really," she said. Dolls are made to be played with and hugged by little girls, she maintains.

Or little boys. She made each of her sons a soft sculpture, about 32 inches high, of Yoda from "The Empire Strikes Back." Soft sculpture uses old pantyhose or polyester to form faces and bodies.

"I don't mind giving boys dolls," she said. Her gifts have sometimes been accepted with less than enthusiastic response, but usually are appreciated.

Ms. Martindale has made rag dolls from patterns, soft sculpture and wooden dolls, but her latest little people are original. She designs them and turns them out assembly-line style as gifts and to sell at miniature shows.

The bodies are made of stuffed felt; the heads are of the modeling clay used by miniature enthusiasts.

After the bodies are assembled, Ms. Martindale starts the delicate work of giving the doll its personality. The faces are painted on, and embroidery thread hair is added in an elaborate coiffure.

"I guess the part I like best is dressing them," Ms. Martindale said. She doesn't start with any particular look in mind, creating as she goes.

For some dolls, Ms. Martindale designs the clothes to go with the face, and others come to life in reverse order.

Ms. Martindale sews up five or six bodies at once, then takes her time finishing them.

Midland police investigate burglary of stereo, guns

Midland police are investigating the burglary of stereo equipment and guns valued at $2,640 from the residence at 4513 Monty Drive.

According to police reports, the owner, Floyd Clay, returned from a camping trip Thursday to find a receiver, turntable, two speakers, three tape players, three guns and a jewelry box missing. Police have two suspects in the burglary, which occurred sometime between Monday and Thursday.

In other police reports, Nhu Nguyen, of 4502 Mercedes, reported a $500 bicycle stolen from his driveway between 9 p.m. Wednesday and 7 a.m. Thursday.

A K mart employee reported that at about 5:55 p.m. Thursday, she saw three Hispanic males stealing three ceiling fans from the store at Midland Drive and Illinois Avenue. The fans are valued at $444.

According to a Midland Sheriff's Office spokesman, the U.S. Border Patrol in Marfa Wednesday apprehended four Hispanic men in connection with the theft of about $600 worth of truck parts, clothing and assorted items from the Warfield Truck Terminal on Interstate 20.

The Border Patrol stopped the four men about 10 miles north of Presidio. One man, 26-year-old Carlos D. Madrid, no address available, was arrested and released after posting $10,000 bond in Marfa. The three others, undocumented workers, were handed over to the Border Patrol.

Safe stolen from Odessa hospital

ODESSA — A safe containing several thousand dollars in cash and checks was stolen from the business office at Medical Center Hospital sometime late Thursday or this morning, according to Odessa police reports.

A police spokesman said the safe was stolen from the first floor office between 11:30 p.m. Thursday and 8:30 a.m. today. The office was reportedly locked at 9 p.m. and found locked this morning.

Police said the office exhibited no signs of forced entry.

Senator introduces brucellosis measure for consideration

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Despite a federally-imposed quarantine of Texas cattle due to start June 1 because of the presence of a bacterial disease that causes abortions, Sen. Bob Glasgow of Stephenville, sponsor of a bill updating law on control of the disease, said he would wait until today to bring the measure up for consideration.

"We don't want to pass legislation by panic," Glasgow said, noting that HB 701 would force removal of the quarantine by the U.S. Department of Agriculture, which fears brucellosis could spread to other states if affected cattle leave Texas.

The measure, introduced by Rep. Bruce Gibson, D-Cleburne, was passed on second reading by the Senate earlier this month, but failed to get enough votes to be considered for final passage. HB 701 was passed by the House one month ago.

"No one on the Senate floor wants to kill the cattle industry in Texas," said Glasgow, who noted he had enough votes to pass the bill.

The USDA quarantine issued Tuesday states "there is a high incidence of brucellosis in Texas and the measures in effect in that state to eradicate brucellosis are not adequate to prevent the interstate spread of the disease."

"I would have been extremely disappointed in the federal government if they had not quarantined Texas," Glasgow said. "If they didn't enforce the law, how are they going to regulate anything?"

HB 701 conforms state regulations to federal ones, and permits the Texas Animal Health Commission to classify areas of the state according to their incidence of brucellosis, and to prescribe different disease-control procedures for each area.

According to the USDA, the quarantine would result in a cutoff of most federal funds to fight the disease in Texas, including indemnity payments for ranchers whose cattle are found infected.

The Stephenville Democrat said he talked to one auction barn in his area which expects to lose about $200,000 a month if the quarantine goes into effect. Half of the cattle sold at auctions are for out-of-state interests, he said.

Under the quarantine, breeding cattle may be shipped out of Texas only from qualified herds which have passed two tests for brucellosis 120 days apart. Cattle must also be tested and found negative within 30 days of shipment under the USDA order.

"A bunch of senators who don't have cattle don't understand brucellosis," Glasgow said.

After his services were terminated Dec. 13, Nichols had a hearing before Odessa Personnel Manager Jim Hall and then appealed his termination to City Manager John Harrison, who upheld the firing.

In a Dec. 30 letter to Nichols, the city manager wrote that "...your search of a female prisoner was conducted without sufficient justification and outside of normal procedure."

Harrison, Police Chief Allen Stewart and the city of Odessa are co-defendants in the suit.

Since his firing, Nichols maintains that he has been "unable to secure" employment on other city police departments because of the termination on his record.

Nichols, who says his reputation has been damaged by his firing, contends that he "has neither been charged with nor terminated because of incompeteny, corruption, misconduct or malfeasance of office."

Three indicted for airborne hunting

A third Midlander, Michael Wesley Nickell, 22, of 1300 W. Tennessee Ave., was indicted for shooting a Barbado sheep and a mule deer in January 1982 while flying in a helicopter. Punishment for shooting an animal while airborne is one-year imprisonment.

In lining up the hunts, Nickell is accused of conspiring with Short and Lee Milton Bell, co-conspirators but not defendants, and "with diverse other persons."

The federal government is alleging that Nickell agreed to pay Short $600 to take him on the hunt in Short's helicopter.

Both indictments were signed by Jose A. Toro, special attorney in the U.S. Department of Justice's Land and Natural Resources Division.

Allegation of airborne hunting of game in West Texas has been under investigation for months by the agents of the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service and the grand jury.

Baby's abductor in custody

TYLER (AP) — A woman sought in connection with the abduction of a baby in Los Angeles was in custody and the infant was reunited with its parents late Thursday.

The parents, Tammy and James Brawley, flew from Los Angeles to Dallas and then drove to Tyler. "They were elated," Knapp said.

Copley New Service

LOS ANGELES — Contrary to popular belief, witches don't cast evil spells or have hooked noses or warts or wear pointed black hats — and they don't all cackle when they laugh.

The mythical occult creatures which flourish in children's fairy tales are alive and well and living in the United States of America, says a San Francisco witch who calls herself Starhawk.

In an interview at her mother's West Los Angeles home, Starhawk talked about her faith and tried to dispel some of the myths surrounding witchcraft.

FACT ONE, ACCORDING to Starhawk, is that witchcraft is the old religion of the Goddess, predating Christianity. Similar to native American traditions, witchcraft is nature- or Earth-based, with the basic belief that all things are interconnected, Starhawk said.

Fact Two, she says, is that witches are not satanists. Witches don't believe in good and evil, black or white.

"We don't have a concept of evil the way Christians do," she said.

"We have a saying in witchcraft, that anything you send — anything you do — will return on you three times over. That's our built-in safeguard against doing evil."

Witches contour their lives around a strict code of ethics which emphasizes positive ways of benefiting Mother Earth and her residents, Starhawk said.

AN ANTI-NUKE activist, Starhawk says witches express their communal spirit with nature in a variety of ways, fdom being publicly vocal about government issues to retreating to the hills for private mediation.

Fact three, she says, is that witches don't look like witches.

A profile of a modern witch is of a woman in her mid-20s who usually has a job working with people. She is a vegetarian and rarely discusses her religion outside her witch clan, called a coven.

Except for the ones who step out of the "broom closet," there is no way of distinguishing a witch from a non-witch, she said.

"The truth is," Starhawk said, "that there is no 'typical' witch."

CNS Photo

CONTRARY TO WIDESPREAD beliefs, witches don't use their powers to convert, she said.

"We believe everyone must seek their own paths. No ethical witch would try to change another person's mind. That would be against what our religion stands for."

The structure of witchcraft involves small covens which remain autonomous. There is no governing board dictating guidelines and so there is no way of estimating how many witches there are in this country, she said.

Older witches, afraid of public persecution, shy away from publicity, she said, noting that an increasing number of children, attracted by the ceremonial dances, chants and bonfires, are becoming involved with witchcraft.

"I just know from the hundreds of people who come to hear me and talk with me after I give a lecture that the number of witches seems to be growing each year," said Starhawk, who spends several days a month giving witchcraft talks.

CURIOSITY AND A genuine interest in the occult draw people to her lectures, she said.

"People think that if someone reads tarot cards or dabbles in astrology, they are a witch," she said. "There are a lot of people who just don't understand that witchcraft is a real religion."

A self-proclaimed "nice, Jewish girl" and daughter of liberal parents, Starhawk said she decided to become a witch after doing a research paper for an anthropology class at the University of California at Los Angeles.

Fascinated with what she discovered, Starhawk, who remembers being attracted to the occult at 16, decided to become a witch.

"AT FIRST MY mother thought it was a phase. In fact, I still think she thinks it is a phase," she said.

Nice, Jewish girl Miriam Simos became Starhawk the witch, after being inspired by a dream. She was indoctrinated into witchcraft during a bonfire initiation ceremony and ritual bath.

Witches hold outdoor ceremonies eight times a year in conjunction with the seasons. Each May 1, witches across the nation dance around a maypole to welcome spring.

Life could be endless

Out on the fringes of the biomedical establishment, a growing community of scientists and lay followers has decided that life is too short.

Sooner or later, humans will be living to 120, 140 and beyond — the Life Extenders are unanimous on that point. But they want it to happen sooner rather than later, and if their bodies will oblige, they want to play a direct personal part in the phenomenon.

"People are taking all kinds of things right now to expand their life spans," says Saul Kent, author of "The Life-Extension Revolution" and president of the Florida-based Life-Extension Foundation, which publishes a newsletter called "Anti-Aging News."

It will be a while before the world can pass final judgment on the value of this activity, but if by any chance the Life Extenders know what they're doing, they could be the first specimens of an elite new race of human beings — and they could be in a position, a few years down the road, to say one of the more resounding "I told you so's" in the history of the species.

For now, they base their faith mostly on inspiring examples of scientifically induced longevity in the animal kingdom. To wit:

— A black mouse will live an average of 653 days (nearly 20 percent longer than normal) if it is given large doses of pantothenic acid, a member of the Vitamin B family.

— A female octopus will survive up to nine months after spawning (compared to the usual 10 days) if its optic glands are removed.

— Laboratory rats, when placed on an extreme low-calorie diet, have been known to reach the ripe old age of 1,800 days (the apparent equivalent of 200 years in a human).

Listen to some of the more enthusiastic of the Life Extenders, and the word "flake" may come to mind. But their ranks also include people who could only be called "respectable members of the medical community." And their ideas have aroused the interest of at least one candidate for the presidency in 1984.

"We are on the brink of a major leap forward in medical science — nothing less than a profound redefinition of human life," says Sen. Alan Cranston, D-Calif., the 68-year-old marathon runner and founder of the Fund for Biomedical Research, which is devoted to "productive prolongevity." Cranston holds frequent meetings with Life Extension experts, and reports that "what I learn from these sessions is mind-boggling."

Cranston is a friend of UCLA gerontologist Roy L. Walford, and he has written a book-jacket blurb for Walford's "Maximum Life Span," which describes the near-starvation diet the author has adopted in hopes of living as long, in human terms, as underfed laboratory rats.

Walford's program, which he calls "undernutrition without malnutrition," is one of the two basic approaches to Life Extension that have emerged from the animal research. The other, spelled out in the best-selling book "Life Extension — A Practical Scientific Approach" by an upbeat pair of Southern Californians named Durk Pearson and Sandy Shaw, emphasizes megadoses of "antioxidants," a diverse group of chemicals that includes Vitamins E and C, selenium, cysteine and the food preservative BHT.

Pearson and Shaw are not without their own celebrity connections. In their book, they cite a disciple they call "Mr. Smith," a "professional movie actor, well-known for his physically vigorous roles," who has been feeling unusually youthful of late, and who requested pseudonymity "because of his concern that irresponsible tabloids might take quotes out of context."

Mr. Smith's fears may have been confirmed when a reporter recently cornered him at a celebrity golf tournament, and wrote a story that showed up in the tabloid The Star under the headline "Bucket-a-Day Vitamin Regimen That Keeps Clint Eastwood Young at 52."

Portugal port wine vineyards produce official drink of royalty

By TOM HOGE
AP Wine and Food Writer

On a recent visit to Portugal, I spent a memorable weekend in the ruggedly beautiful region of Douro, home of port wine.

This noble wine, fortified with grape brandy, has been made by the Portuguese for hundreds of years and has been the official drink for toasts by Britain's royal family for about two centuries.

These vineyards are planted in rocky soil, often requiring blasting so that the roots can make their way deep enough to find moisture during the dry summers.

However, drenching rains lash the region between October and May and if the terracing had not been painstakingly built up over generations, the vineyards might well be washed down into the river below.

Graceful white villas dot the hillsides. They are the "farmhouses" inhabited by the owners of the vineyards, much like the chateaus in the wine country of France.

Port wine comes in many hues, from pale straw to ruby red, and ranges in taste from intensely sweet, drunk after dinner, to very dry, popular as an aperitif. The main types are ruby, tawny, crusted and white.

Most ports are generally aged in wood barrels until they reach their peak and are then bottled and shipped to market.

However, if it has been a great year, some growers will set aside the best of their wine to make vintage port. The wine thus selected is shipped, usually to England, one of the chief consumers, about two years after its vintage and quickly bottled. These wines require 10 to 15 years to mature in the bottle and often do not reach their true prime until many years later.

My previous experience with port had involved sweet reds, but my hostess in Douro, Teresa Vanzeller, served a chilled dry white before dinner that I found delicious.

Because it is mainly a sweet wine, port does not lend itself to cooking, except in desserts. But I did run into one recipe for an hors d'oeuvre made from raw chopped beef where port was a key ingredient.

⅓ cup finely chopped onion
1 tablespoon Worcestershire sauce
3 dashes Tabasco
1 teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon gound black pepper
1 teaspoon dry mustard
1 clove garlic, crushed
2 egg yolks
1-3rd cup ruby port
1 tablespoon finely cut parsley

Mix beef well with all other ingredients. Shape mixture in a mold or bowl. Refrigerate mixture until ready for use. Unmold, surround with thin slices of rye or pumpernickel bread. Cut into small squares or crisp crackers. Let guests spread their own canapes.

DIET FACTS & FALLACIES
HIGH BLOOD PRESSURE
May is National Blood Pressure month. Having your blood pressure checked is a painless, yet informative way to help you understand what is going on inside your body. It measures the pressure exerted by the blood upon the walls of the arteries and veins.
Your blood pressure is affected by what you are thinking, what you are doing, by stress, obesity, high-salt (sodium) intake, etc. It is therefore important for you to know within what range your blood pressure usually falls. Blood pressure above your normal range for extended periods of time can be dangerous. Frequent blood pressure checks can be helpful, and perhaps you may want to learn to monitor it yourself.

Excess weight is a major contributing factor in high blood pressure. Your Diet Center Counselor can provide you with assistance in planning a program for good health and proper weight control.

DEAR ABBY

Uncle Sam recruits canines

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR READERS: Just when I think I've heard everything, I get a letter from the Department of Defense Dog Center at Lackland Air Force Base, Texas, asking me to help recruit dogs for a rewarding career in the military!

Dogs are needed to be trained for guard duty, narcotic detection and explosive detection work.

Some facts: The dog must be between the ages of 1-4, weigh a minimum of 50 pounds and can be either male or female. German shepherds and Rottweiler breeds are desired. The dog does not have to be purebred or registered, but it must have the predominant features of the breed it represents.

The Defense Department will pay $250 per dog. If you have a dog that you think qualifies, write to: D.O.D. Dog Center, Detachment 37, Lackland Air Force Base, Texas 78236.

You will receive a form to fill out. If your dog qualifies, take it to a local military veterinarian to be evaluated and examined. The examination is free. If you use a private veterinarian, YOU must pay the charges.

If your dog passes his physical, a large metal crate will be provided for shipping purposes. All you have to do is take the dog to the airport and put it in the crate. It is then flown to Texas at government expense.

So if you want to do something patriotic for your country, send your dog. – ABBY

DEAR ABBY: I have a friend who worries me. When she is in a group, she either does all the talking or she is completely withdrawn. There is no conversing with her. She either talks non-stop without letting anyone else get a word in, or she just sits there and pays no attention to what's being said.

Every once in a while she will break into a conversation while others are talking and introduce an entirely different subject!

What on earth could be wrong with her? She is very intelligent and extremely well-read. I really care for her. – A FRIEND

DEAR FRIEND: Your friend's behavior is typical of one who has a serious hearing loss. If you "really care for her," tell her in a kind and gentle way what you have observed. Urge her to have her hearing checked. And if she IS hard of hearing, encourage her to get the help she needs immediately.

(If you hate to write letters because you don't know what to say, send for Abby's complete booklet on letter-writing. Send $2 and a long, stamped (37 cents), self-addressed envelope to Abby, Letter Booklet, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.)

Unborn baby may have sex life

WASHINGTON (AP) — Doctors have photographic evidence that even a fetus in the womb has a private sex life, says a sexual researcher.

Sexuality and functioning sex organs appear to be present even before birth and in the absence of a mature reproductive system, Dr. Mary S. Calderone told an international sexology meeting Wednesday.

Ultrasound pictures of male fetuses in the womb show that they regularly have erections of their tiny sex organs, an indication that sexuality is present in children even before birth, she said.

The researcher said the pictures show that the sexual response system of humans is as natural as breathing or walking. Therefore, she said, parents should not try to suppress the sexual expression of their children.

Ms. Calderone, an author and adjunct professor in the New York University Human Sexuality Program, said parents should refrain from stopping children from exploring their sex organs and the feelings that subsequently arise because this could hurt the child in later life.

"If you stop a child from learning to walk, you will cripple the child," she said in an interview. "If you stop a child from talking, it starts stuttering.

"The same holds true for sexuality," she continued. "If you stop a child from expressing it, he will stumble. Much of the sexual 'stuttering' we see in adults probably began with early suppression."

Ms. Calderone said parents should accept childhood sexuality as a part of being human and, rather than deny it, should teach children the proper time and circumstances for expressing it.

"Rather than teaching a child that sexuality is wrong," she continued, "parents should teach responsibility, such as expressing it in private and not exploiting others or being exploited."

In a presentation at the Sixth World Congress of Sexology, Ms. Calderone said sonograph pictures show that male fetuses have about one erection every five hours, about the same rate as sleeping adults.

Although the external sex organs of female fetuses are too small to be recorded by a sonogram, the researcher said the same innate sexuality also would apply to girls.

She said this confirms the theory of Dr. William H. Masters, the well-known St. Louis sexual researcher, that all the physical systems of the body are functioning fully at birth — with the exception of the reproductive system which begins functioning at puberty.

Sexual specialists began discussing the concept of fetal erections only recently, Ms. Calderone said. Doctors began to notice them about two years ago as the use of ultra-sound pictures during pregnancy became more common.

Pets may spread dangerous diarrhea

BOSTON (AP) — Household pets may spread a type of diarrhea that poses little threat to most people, but is potentially fatal to those with weakened immune systems, a researcher reported today.

Until now, this form of diarrhea — called cryptosporidiosis — was thought to be rare among humans. But the new study, directed by Dr. William L. Current of Auburn University in Alabama, found that the disease is easily picked up by humans who contact sick pets and farm animals that carry the obscure, highly contagious microbe.

"I think we are going to find that it is a very significant cause of diarrhea," said Current, who reported the findings in today's issue of the New England Journal of Medicine.

Many cases of diarrhea, especially among children, are never diagnosed. They are simply called "non-specific gastroenteritis."

"Right now, I would not be surprised if cryptosporidiosis would comprise a fairly large percentage of those that are not diagnosed," he said in an interview.

No drug on the market will cure the disease, but most people get better within a few days.

The ailment is, however, potentially fatal for those whose natural disease-fighting systems are weakened. Among these are victims of acquired immune deficiency syndrome, or AIDS, and people who are taking cancer drugs. For them, the ailment can linger for months or years.

Humans get diarrhea and cramps when they are infected by the organism, a parasitic protozoan called cryptosporidium. The disease was first spotted among calves in 1970. It has spread and afflicts the newborn animals with often-fatal diarrhea.

"There are a number of dairy operations that indicate they're losing up to 90 percent of their replacement herds due to this organism," Current said. "Just about every bovine herd that you look at is going to have cryptosporidiosis."

Although the disease is most often reported among young cows, Current's report showed that it can also be carried by kittens, puppies, goats and mice.

Keep hands youthful

Copley News Service

Everyone knows that part of maintaining a youthful appearance is taking care of your face by using moisturizers, sun screen and avoiding soap.

But did you know that your hands are one of the first places to show your age? Or that the same care you use on your face can help keep your hands youthful-looking? It's true.

The latest research shows that "facials" used on a regular basis on the backs and palms of the hands keep them softer and younger looking, help to avoid age spots and wrinkles, and de-emphasize prominent age-telling veins.

To begin caring for your hands, try a monthly facial that begins with a mask to stimulate circulation. This should be followed by a mask that replenishes and restores moisture, especially one that contains aloe vera juice or gel.

Any products you normally use on your face will work well on your hands, or you can try this recipe for a once-a-week hand treatment.

Once a week blend together a handful of cornmeal or almond meal with enough aloe vera gel to form a thick paste. Rub together over both hands in a "washing motion" and then smooth over. Wait 15 minutes and then soak hands in warm water for two minutes. Follow with a thin application of almond oil or cold pressed sesame seed oil to smooth and soften.

Safer steel-shielded shoes now also stylish

NEW YORK (AP) — Every morning, nearly 6 million Americans go off to work with secret defensive weapons hidden in their shoes — in men's shoes, women's shoes, black wing-tips, cowboy boots, laced high-tops, loafers, oxfords and sneakers.

They're steel safety toes.

Better than anything "007" could invent, these invisible steel shields built into dressy, casual and rugged footwear are "weapons" to defend people against on-the-job foot injuries.

Since 1970, the use of safety shoes in the United States has increased over 250 percent, according to The Footwear Council. The rise is partly due to requirements of the U.S. Occupational Safety and Health Administration (OSHA), founded in 1970. OSHA has mandated safety shoes in more industries than before.

As an example of safety gains, the New York State Workmen's Compensation Board reports that in 1979 (the latest available data year) leg-injury cases involving feet were 8 percent lower than in 1970.

Foot injuries actually have declined far more, believes Dr. Samuel Heller, the Board's Chairman of Podiatry Practices, because "With safety shoes, accidents that might have seriously injured feet now result only in minor bruises, which may not even be reported."

Besides OSHA rules, another major factor in increased safety shoe usage is the great progress in styling, The Footwear Council points out.

At one time, all safety shoes were clunky high-tops with rigid soles, weighing a ton and looking it. Now manufacturing innovations have made possible more flexible soles, and uppers in current fashions. Workers prefer safety shoes that are styled like footwear they wear off the job.

This is confirmed by Republic Steel Safety Director Patrick J. O'Neal. "Our steel operations still require the heaviest-duty models," he notes, "but in the fabrication divisions and for guards and health workers, we approve safety shoes in many modern styles, and they're very popular, particularly with the fashion-conscious young people."

It's not only men who've begun protecting their feet in style. Women moving into OSHA-regulated jobs are spurring demand for oxford, moccasin, and sneaker-style safety shoes, the Council notes.

People also are increasingly wearing safety shoes while doing home chores such as mowing lawns, chopping wood, or do-it-yourself construction projects.

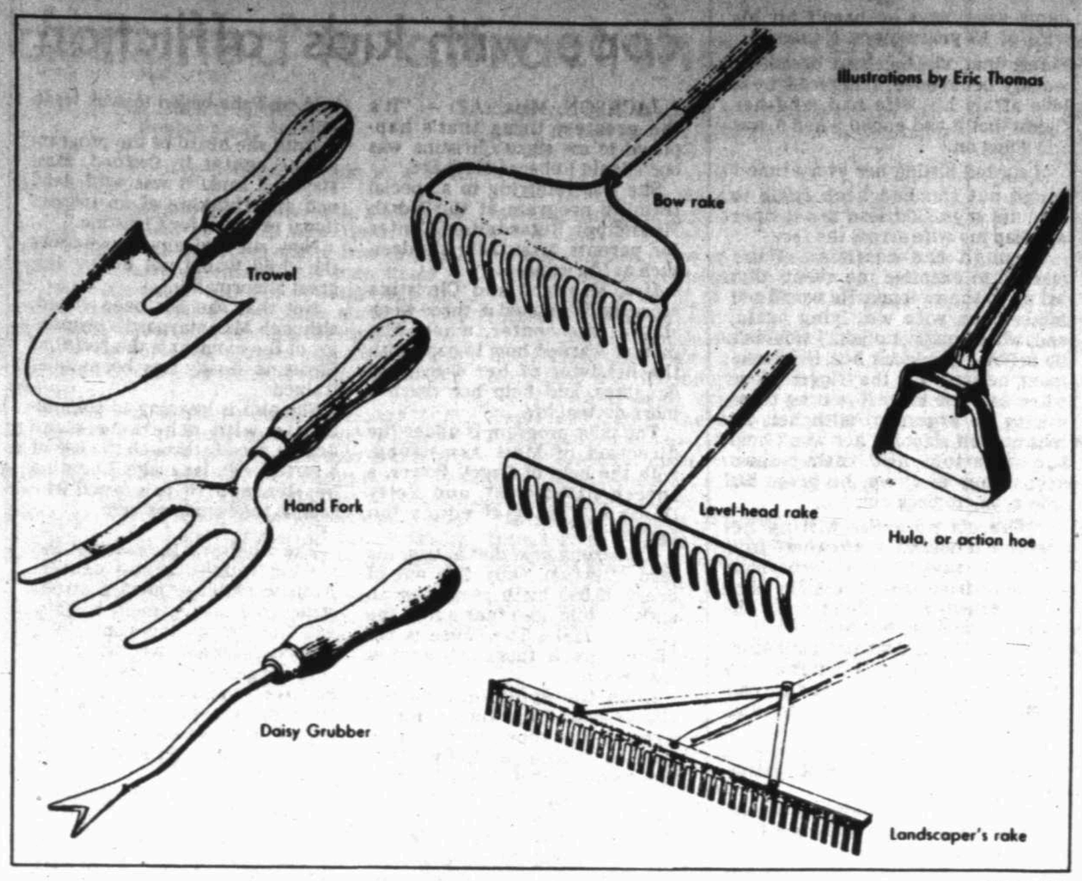
Guide describes best tools for easiest gardening



CNS Graphic

Whether shopping for a specific type of heavy-duty rake or a small daisy grubber, it is important to remember that gardening tools are investments. Carefully selecting well-made, good quality tools may help keep garden work pleasurable by preventing a great deal of future trouble and aggravation. Be sure also to pick the right implement for the job.

Copley News Service

Inasmuch as gardening is a craft, the selection and proper use of tools will reward both the gardener and the garden. Well-made tools greatly enhance the enjoyment and productivity of one's labors, and are good investments, as well.

The following tips are from an article written by Paul Hawken, co-founder of Smith and Hawken Tool Co., for "Country Journal" magazine.

SPADES — Great confusion exists over the difference between a spade and a shovel, especially because many shovels are spade-shaped (like the spade on playing cards). Digging spades are rectangular, flat, longer than they are wide, and are used for digging or cutting straight into the ground. The late Jim Crockett, author of "Crockett's Tool Shed," wrote that a good spade is good for just about everything, including transplanting, cutting heavy weeds, slicing and tamping sod, prying up rocks and stones, edging lawns, splitting small pieces of wood and chopping the winter ice.

In order for a spade to do its many jobs, it must be well made. Die-cut, sheet-metal blades will fold up and bend under moderate use. To hold up to heavy use for long years, a spade should be forged and preferably should be made of solid-socket construction. When buying a spade, check for treads on the blade. A treadless spade requires the digger to have a heavy-soled boot or shoe. With a turned or welded tread, the top portion of the blade will not cut into the user's foot. Finally, avoid a spade with too much lift, the distance between the tip of the blade and the ground when the spade is laid flat. A spade should come off fairly straight from the handle, with no more than 3 or 4 inches of lift.

FORKS — Like the spade, another tool that is invaluable for cultivating is the garden fork. The English cultivating fork is a marvel in the garden. Standard forks have 12-inch tines and can cultivate deeply, loosening the subsoil and allowing air and water to penetrate. Whereas the broad tines of the more common spading fork tend to compress the soil, the cultivating fork moves easily, even in dense soil.

An inexpensive fork will cost $12 to $16. Avoid it. A professional quality fork will cost between $30 and $40. What you are looking for when you buy a fork is a forged head with a solid-socket attachment to the handle.

SHOVEL — Whether or not you use a spade or fork, most of us also want and use a No. 2, round-point shovel. Its 48-inch handle is always nice to lean against, and years of familiarity make it a comfortable tool to have around. It doesn't matter what manufacturer you choose, but it does matter what quality you buy. Each company produces about four different versions of the same shovel; the cheapest and worst are called "promotional quality." What that means I am not quite sure, but these are the tools most often sold to consumers. Try to buy the next two or three rungs up in quality; these are the shovels generally sold to contractors. The better shovels are solid-socket or solid-shank, a style of construction that improves their strength and durability.

TROWEL AND HAND FORK — Once you are down on your hands and knees, nothing is handier than a good trowel, and in my opinion, nothing is rarer. The standard sheet-metal trowel is a decidedly unpleasant tool to work with, and if you wish to have a trowel that doesn't bend you should buy a forged or cast trowel. Now, for between $5 and $7, you can get a cast-aluminum trowel that is guaranteed against breakage. The shiny aluminum has the added advantage of being easily spotted if the tool is misplaced. Forged trowels are rare. If you can find one, buy it; it is practically a disappearing species. It will cost upward of $10, but will last a generation. It can be sharpened to a fine edge, and does thrice the work of its sheet-metal cousin.

There are two other tools to use when you are down on the ground. Along with a trowel, a hand fork is perfect for working the top few inches of a bed, as well as for lifting and transplanting seedlings from flats. Again, look for forged construction, and don't worry about the extra few dollars these will cost. One of the reasons we lose cheap tools so often is the subliminal wish that they be gone. If you spend money on a good tool and enjoy it, chances are you won't misplace it.

For weeding, both the trowel and fork are handy. But to reach down and pick out stubborn invaders, nothing is quite like a daisy grubber. Also called an asparagus knife, it is the most effective hand tool for loosening deep-rooted weeds, saving much pulling and strain. It is inexpensive, $3 at the most, and works like a charm.

Just as it takes time and effort to create an abundant and fertile garden, time is required to build up and create the proper implements for your work. The wonderful effect of good tools is that the care and effort put into making them call upon us to use like care in maintaining them, which in turn makes them last. Good tools become familiar and important parts of the garden.

Make sure that all tools are cleaned after use, and that those that are exposed to moisture are wiped with an oily rag to prevent rust and corrosion. Handles can be given a coating of linseed oil before and at the end of every gardening season to ensure long life. Shears should be oiled, and carts and wheelbarrows should be stored out of the weather and kept clean. One of the secrets of a productive garden is to buy and maintain productive tools.

Begonias sport 'Non Stop' foliage

By ELVIN McDONALD

Indoors and out, begonias are a major source of beautiful flowering and foliage plants. Try bringing them up close to summer living and work spaces. Here are some choice candidates from top growers' favorites:

Among the "ooh and ahh" tuberous begonias, the name to watch for is Non Stop, a new strain from Europe that makes this beauty as accessible as today's hybrid geraniums. Seedlings start blooming at age four months and can be purchased from local growers at planting-out time, spring and early summer.

The Non Stops can also be started from tubers, these too readily available. Four major color groupings — yellow, orange, pink, red — are in the current catalogs of Burpee and Park.

What makes the Non Stops extra special is tolerance of warmer weather than most tuberous types. Use a humus-rich, sandy growing medium and keep it evenly moist. Situate in bright, dappled light, mostly shade, with good air movement but shielding from searing winds.

Also worth your efforts are several summer-flowering tuberous begonia species. My all-time favorite is Begonia sutherlandi, which has thin, bright green leaves and an abundance of airy orange flowers. It is choice for any hanging garden, or to grow on a shelf or pedestal that allows the branches to cascade. Others I admire are the hollyhock begonia, B. martiana, and the Northern garden hardy Evansiana, now called Begonia gracilis.

Last summer one of the prettiest hanging begonias I saw in my travels coast to coast was an angel-wing created by breeder Michael Kartuz and named 'Wayne Newton.' The ever-blooming flowers are salmon-orange, with silver-spotted leaves set thickly over a low, spreading bush.

The beautiful-leaved rex begonias also make their best show in summer. They can be sensational on a shady porch or protected balcony.

In tougher situations, go for wax begonias, also known as semperflorens and everblooming. I've seen them grown well in full sun and full shade, indoors and out, just about everywhere. A related hanging type called "Catalina' is also excellent.

More begonia grow-how and specialist catalog addresses are in my newest notebook newsletter: Send 50 cents coin and a stamped, self-addressed, long envelope with "Begonias" written on the back flap to Elvin Mcdonald Reader Service, Box R, Niagara Falls, N.Y. 14305; in Canada, 4141 Glenayr Ave., Niagara Falls, Ont. Q. I've never seen so many garden violets blooming as this year. Quick! Can you give me a recipe for crystalizing the petals?

A. Clean, healthy petals (in no way chemically contaminated as from a systemic pesticide applied earlier to the soil) from primrose, pansy, rose and sweet violet can be crystalized as follows:

Beat egg white to a foam and cover each side of flower petals. Fingers do the job best. Do not leave excess on petals. Shake super-fine, granulated sugar on both sides and arrange on a tray to dry in a cool place, or refrigerate several days.

Whole small flowers can be covered with egg white by the use of a small artist's brush, before covering with sugar. Store in an airtight container after the petals have become crisp. Use as a garnish for desserts, or serve as candy. Bon appetite!

Q. My peach amaryllis blooms every year, truly spectacular, but what about the baby that started alongside the parent bulb several years ago? It has steadily increased and is sending up strong leaves.

A. Unpot, crumble away most of the soil, and study the root system. Remove the offset with any roots it has, by breaking or cutting from the parent. When amaryllis offspring are removed at the beginning of their second year, and potted separately, it is not unusual to get bloom the following spring. Amaryllis are a major source of flowers in my indoor garden; summer is when they need sunny warmth, lots of water and fish emulsion or bone meal, all of which adds up to a renewed bulb, fattened with the bloom of new life.

Quick Take: According to an article in "Green Scene" (six times yearly, $7.50, from the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society, 325 Walnut St., Philadelphia, Pa. 19106), late May or early June, after bloom wanes, is when to begin propagating azaleas from year-old wood.

These cuttings, which need some of last year's "old" wood, topped by this year's faded flowers and pale new shoots, are dipped in Rootone, then set to root in a well moistened mixture of 1 part sphagnum peat moss to 3 of sharp sand or perlite. Enclose in plastic and set in a shady spot. This process prunes the parent and provides enough cuttings to start a potential nursery.

Hi honey!
Just got back from Fairgate and I couldn't be more pleased! They have a townhome that's 'perfect' for us! You're gonna love the location too! It's in Northwest Midland close to lots of shopping, schools and Loop 250. I love the 3 bedroom, 2 bath floorplan. It's more than 1600 square feet! It's a beautiful home and just what we've been looking for. I'll let you handle the financing. Call 697-4151 and ask about Fairgate's "Nothing-Down" plan.

Children learn from play with summer sand, water

STILLWATER, Okla. (AP) — Summertime play with sand and water not only keeps young children occupied but provides a learning experience, says Kerry Morford, a graduate student in family relations and child development at Oklahoma State University.

In pouring, mixing and experimenting, children use muscles in their hands, fingers and arms, she says. Placing small plastic animals or figures, toy boats, cars, dishes or artificial flowers in the sand encourages a young child to express emotions through role playing, she adds.

Other objects that can be used in dry or wet sand include cardboard tubes, measuring cups and spoons, plastic bottles in various sizes, empty milk or egg cartons, sifters or sieves with different-size holes.

REMOVATRON
Because sometimes even nature makes mistakes. The sudden appearance of unwanted facial hair can be embarrasing. Now thanks to Removatron-the new no needle, painless method-there's an effective way to get rid of unwanted facial and body hair from the first treatment on. The Removatron method is safe and effective even on sensitive parts of the body and uses only electronic tweezers that never touch your skin. You won't feel a thing . . . you can even nap during treatment. Best yet, you can even apply make-up immediately after treatment.

Men learn alternatives to battering women

Hearst Feature Service

ALBANY – Before Michael moved in with his girifriend five years ago, he warned her he had been violent with women before and was "really frightened" by this.

His fear became reality in a short time. Whenever he wanted sex and she didn't, they'd argue. And arguments invariable turned to violence. Sometimes he would hit her, more often he would shake her by the shoulders and slam doors. Always, he would verbally abuse her, telling her she wasn't normal and there was obviously something physically or mentally wrong with her.

"It got to the point where we would be arguing maybe three days out of the week," admits the 39-year-old communications worker. But that was before Michael, which is not his real name, joined the Men's Coalition Against Battering, an organization of men working on non-violent alternatives to beating – physically and verbally – their wives or girifriends.

The coalition is one of about 30 grass-roots self-help groups in the United States run by men for men who batter. In all, approximately 80 organizations around the country are trying to help men stop beating women, many with the support of women's organizations and shelters (temporary residences) for battered women. While there are no reliable statistics on the number of men who batter, an estimated 1.8 million married women are said to be the victims of their abuse each year.

"We look at this as a male problem, primarily," says Jeffrey L. Edleson, an assistant professor of social welfare at the State University at Albany and one of the founders of the coalition. "We all as men have been socialized to behave in certain ways with women."

The focus of the coalition is to give men other ways of coping with stress than to physically or verbally lash out at their wives or girifriends. To do that, facilitators build their skills and awareness in small groups of four to seven men, helping them get in touch with their emotions and communicate what they are feeling. Twenty men have either completed or are in the process of finishing the 12-week program. An ongoing support group for the men who have gone through the program is also held weekly.

Participants have ranged from the unemployed to professional white-collar workers, from high school drop-outs to men with master's degrees. They have different religions and ethnic backgrounds, as well as different histories of violence within their relationships.

Organizers say one man has beaten his wife for more than 30 years; another was kicked out of the house after his first attack on his wife, and a third was battering his partner about three times a week.

"Basically, it's a grab-bag," says Edleson. "There's no stereotype." What many do have in common, however, is the feeling that battering is wrong, even when they maintain their partner deserved it.

"Immediately afterward, I had this terrible feeling of horror of what I had done," admits Michael. "There's the sadness, the despair, the anguish, the guilt."

Many of the coalition's clients joined the group because they were feeling lost and didn't know where else to turn, says David M. Miller, coordinator of the State University of New York-Albany Crisis Intervention Center. Often, their partners have left them, have threatened to leave, or have a court order for protection.

Some come to the coalition because they don't want their children to grow up to make the same mistakes. Others just want to get their wives back and think the coalition is the way.

"We're not there to reunite couples," emphasizes Miller. "We're here to have men take responsibility for their actions and to develop skills to ensure they don't have to revert to violent behavior."

The coalition has apparently been successful in this goal, organizers say. Most participants report they have not battered their spouses or girifriends since joining the group; all who have finished the program say violence to them is a thing of the past.

Dana, a 32-year-old chemical worker who didn't want his real name used, says he hasn't hit his wife of 13 years since November. Before that, violence had become a weekly occurence, triggered by a love affair his wife had, and her claims that it had ended when it was still going on.

"I started hitting her every time I found out she had been lying to me," he says. "I'd lose my temper and slap my wife across the face."

Through the coalition, Dana learned to examine the events that led up to the violence. He would tell himself his wife was lying again, and, when she protested, "I wouldn't lie to you," would hit her. Her statement, he says, was the trigger. Now, when he feels himself getting tense during an argument with her, he tells himself slapping her won't help the situation. And rather than accuse her of lying, he gives his wife a way to back out.

"There's no sense hitting her because it doesn't go anywhere from there," he says. "I never derived any pleasure from that. The main thing I've learned is you don't make the other person feel trapped."

The coalition does not limit itself to physical abuse. Facilitators say they consider emotional and psychological battering just as devastating, and they include threats, verbal abuse, throwing things and hitting the dog when they talk about battering.

Autism: Parents learn to cope with kids' affliction

JACKSON, Miss. (AP) — "It's the greatest thing that's happened to me since Christina was born," said Rebecca Maynard.

She was referring to a special training program at the North Mississippi Retardation Center for parents of autistic children such as Christina.

Mrs. Maynard and Christina recently completed a three-week stay at the center, where the mother learned how to cope with the behavior of her 4-year-old daughter, and help her reach a more normal life.

The pilot program is under the direction of Matt Armstrong, with the help of Peggy Power, a speech pathologist, and Betty Danials, a special education teacher.

Armstrong says that autism is a rare affliction. Only five out of every 10,000 birth results in an autistic child, and four out of the five are males.The cause is not known, nor is there any cure at the present.

Even the symptoms do not always come from autism. But, if a child shows repetitive behavior, such as rocking back and forth constantly, the possibility is there. Autistic children tend to be very self-centered; they have a limited understanding of ideas or show abnormal response to stimulus. Unusual eating habits also are a symptom.

Some of the indications come early, but they are most noticeable after about 13 months when it becomes apparent the infant is not developing normally.

That's the way it was with Mrs. Maynard and Christina.

"She was different from the beginning, and I knew something was wrong," the Biloxi woman said.

But at about 2, her daughter developed many of the classic autistic symptoms, Mrs. Maynard said, and she began to seek treatment.

Until she heard of the program at the center in Oxford, Mrs. Maynard said, "I was at a dead end and thinking of an institutional program for Christina."

Now, she said, anyone who sees the child would not notice any great abnormality.

Not that she has been cured, although Mrs. Maynard's primary joy at the moment is the fact that Christina finally has been toilet trained.

She also is learning to communicate with others to some degree, mostly through the use of a sort of sign language. Christina has learned to use word-like sounds for certain objects.

The progress is the result of the system taught at the center. Autistic children need a strict, structured management so they will learn to do the same thing properly over and over again.

The three-week course for parents is free and is funded by the state through the University Affiliated Program and by the National Society for Autistic Children.

The first week, the parents attend class and watch special education teachers at work. The second week, they work with their children under supervision of the experts, and in the third week, they care for their own children with the teachers observing and helping after the day's sessions.

Mrs. Maynard said for her, the greatest help was learning what she calls the heart of the program, getting rid of bad behavior by reinforcing the good.

Always, she said, the parent must concentrate on success, not failure. She tries not to put Christina in a situation where she knows the child will fail.

Potential heart attack victims reduce risk with calm lifestyle

Hearst Feature Service

NEW YORK – After 20 years of popularity, the idea that ambitious, driven, impatient men – so-called Type A personalities – are at high risk for heart attacks is fighting for its life.

The theory, developed and still defended by Drs. Ray H. Rosenman and Meyer Friedman at San Francisco's Mt. Zion Hospital, holds that nearly all heart attack victims are Type As. It further suggests that if Type As can be converted to Type B behavior, marked by a calmer, more patient, less intense lifestyle, their risk of heart attacks drops significantly.

Friedman recently reported that behavior modification programs tailored for Type As are so effective that if widely applied they could prevent 15,000 heart attacks a year in men who have already had one attack.

The programs concentrated on ending the smoking habit, avoiding heavy meals and overexertion, training patients to ignore or cope better with situations that generally aggravate, irritate or anger them, and eliminating emotionally exhausting schedules, high altitudes, caffeine, alcohol and extreme weather.

Even getting wound up over a televised football game can trigger a heart attack in a Type A personality, he said. Three of his patients suffered second attacks doing just that.

Friedman based his report on a study of 600 heart attack victims who received relaxation and other behavioral therapies. Their rate of second attacks was 2.8 percent a year, compared to the national rate of second attacks of 6 percent.

Past research has also supported the Type A-B split and the personality links to heart attack risk. Top among these was a study of 3,400 men in the Western Collaborative Group Study. The Type As – almost all of whom smoked, had high blood pressure and high cholesterol rates – had double the heart attack rate as Type Bs.

But recently, a study has seriously challenged such results and suggested that programs to reduce risk in Type As may increase stress that in itself is potentially dangerous to the heart. The study analyzed information over a seven-year period on 1,550 middle-aged men who participate in the Multipe Risk Factor Intervention Trial, also known as MRFIT.

According to Dr. Richard Shekelle, a preventive medicine expert at St. Luke's Medical Center in Chicago, Type As were no more likely to die of heart attacks or have coronary artery disease than Type Bs. The study took into account such things as smoking, age, cholesterol and high blood pressure, but still found no differences.

Adding fuel to the flames licking the Type A-B theory was an investigation of 1,447 men in the MRFIT trial led by a psychiatrist in Freidman's home town.

Dr. Mardi J. Horowitz studied men considered at high risk for heart disease at a young age over a three-year period. One group received the routine medical care given such patients. A second participated in a special program designed to force home the risk the patients faced.

Results showed that both groups may have increased stress for those exposed to them, probably because there was so many reminders of their high risk and the danger they faced. All together, 227 of the men reported increased worry and upset as prevention efforts continued over the three-year period.

"Such data," according to Horowitz, "indicate that prevention efforts may themselves impose a stress on some persons, although the majority feel able to cope with the concept of being at higher than usual risk." The National Institutes of Health has recently given Horowitz $150,000 to further study the effects of stress on heart disease. Past studies by this group have failed to link stressful life events to high blood pressure or high cholesterol.

Arts endowments

WASHINGTON (AP) — Nineteen grants totalling $600,000 are going to state and regional arts organizations, according to the National Endowment for the Arts.

The grants will assist the organizations in booking dance companies for the 1983-84 performance season.

In another action, the endowment said fellowships were awarded to 104 choreographers across the country in grants totalling $382,000 for fiscal 1983.

Cross-section of women attracted to actor

Copley News Service

For some men, the concept of looking sexy begins with unbuttoning their shirt to waist level and adorning their furry chests with lots of gold chains.

Other men choose to exude their sexuality with tight muscle shirts and jeans to match. And still others find they feel and look their sexy best clad in formal attire.

And then there's actor JOEL HIGGINS. All he has to do is stand there, flash one of those devilish grins, eyes sparkling with mischievous delight and your heart is stolen.

Portraying the role of Edward Stratton III on NBC hit show "SILVER SPOONS," Joel seems to appeal to all women. I'm not sure if it's his boyish charm that makes you want to cuddle him to near suffocation or if it's the twinkle in his eye that makes you want to ... well let's say it makes you want to!

But whatever it is, multi-talented Joel is a brand-new kind of sex symbol — the all-American boy, all grown up — and he has the kind of chemistry that never quits.

To go along with this clean-cut image is a fairly clean-cut lifestyle, with special emphasis on eating good foods and a decision to quit smoking.

"I'm not a fanatic about it all," says Joel, "but I do think that moderation is the key to staying healthy. And if you feel good, you look good, so it all boils down to eating the kinds of things that make you feel good.

"About 10 years ago," he continues, "I stopped eating red meat, simply because I didn't feel all that great when it was a part of my diet. Now I stick to chicken and fish, and lots of steamed vegetables and I definitely feel better."

Also 10 years ago Joel was a three-pack-a-day smoker, and found that his decision to quit made a big difference in his life.

"It was hard at first," he confesses, "but I think my turning point came when I arrived at a complete understanding that it was poison for my body. That it was killing me and made me feel and look and sound awful. When I get to that kind of understanding about anything, something clicks off in my head and I just have the willpower to stop."

In addition, Joel also avoids coffee and soft drinks and has virtually eliminated sugar from his diet.

When it comes to keeping his body looking as good as his adorable face, Joel is a firm believer in exercise and lots of it. Forced to quit running due to a hip problem that developed from working out on pavement, he now combines both body dynamics and calisthetics to keep in shape.

Aerosols may be cancer-causing

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Some aerosol hair sprays and a leading feminine deodorant spray contain a chemical suspected of causing cancer in laboratory animals, according to a copyright story in the San Antonio Light.

A draft report by the National Toxicology Program said cancer was found in rats and mice who were force-fed large amounts of methylene chloride — a chemical used as a solvent and propellent in some aerosol products, the newspaper reported Sunday.

Revlon, Vidal Sassoon, Chesebrough Ponds, Faberge, La Maur, Wella and Alberto-Culver, which also includes methylene chloride in a feminine deodorant spray, list it as an ingredient in some hair sprays, the newspaper reported.

Spokesmen for the firms said they consider it safe. They say nothing definitive has yet been determined about the chemical's cancer-causing potential.

Help for cancer patients is free

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Cancer patients in Kansas and Missouri who want a second opinion on their treatment can get free advice from doctors under a program started by the co-founder of H&R Block Inc.

The patients' cases will be reviewed two days a week at the R.A. Bloch Cancer Treatment Center at the University of Missouri-Kansas City. The center, established by Richard Bloch and his wife, Annette, previously charged $500 per patient for second opinions.

"We believe this caused us to get people too late in the game," said Bloch, 57, who successfully fought a painful two-year battle with lung cancer.

"We want everyone without spending money needlessly or receiving charity to receive promptly a second opinion from a panel of specialists trained in the various facets of diagnosing and treating cancer," Bloch added.

He said the center would provide panels of about 90 local doctors specializing in lung, breast, gastrointestinal and other cancers.

Supermarket merchandising designed to attract shoppers

By JIMMY THORNTON
Copley News Service

Perhaps you have noticed it while in a local supermarket.

When you go in to buy apples, milk, a pound of hamburger, a loaf of bread, some pasta, frozen peas, cooking oil, detergent and a box of facial tissues, you have purchased only nine items — which, with cash, will get you through the express lane — but if you think about it, you have just about walked through the entire store.

That's no accident, reports the Cooperative Extension of the University of California at San Diego.

"Food stores, like other retail stores, are 'built in the tracks' of shoppers ... (store) designers study how shoppers shop, which departments are most appealing, which way shoppers travel through stores, etc. ... The most-often purchased items are located in key areas and and placed so consumers are drawn past all of the 10,000 to 12,000 items in each store," reports the extension's latest marketing memo.

Also, stores use special banners and signs and displays to make shoppers "feel" what they see is a bargain, which usually is — but not always.

It's called good merchandising. Some people may call it deception, and if a special display fools you into thinking it contains unusual bargains, in that sense it is, in the view of Consumer Watch.

— A sign in front of a product display can increase sales 33 percent.

— If there is a special price on the sign that has been advertised, sales can go up 194 percent (according to a 1980 industry report).

— If related items, like soup and crackers, are displayed together, the sales can net 170 percent more than if sold separately.

— Stores that make extensive use of point-of-purchase banners have 153 percent more sales than stores that don't.

The only way you can know whether special displays are bargains is to know what competing prices are, what the store's regular prices are and what sales are going at other supermarkets. That takes comparative shopping, the old consumer standby.

Zucchini-stuffed crepes tempting

Copley News Service

Summer isn't far away and summer brings with it those big, beautiful crops of lovely green zucchini.

ZUCCHINI-FILLED CREPES

Basic Crepes:

2 tbsps. melted margarine
¼ tsp. salt
¾ cup sifted flour
1 cup milk

Combine eggs, margarine salt and flour in mixing bowl; mix well. Add milk ad mix to blend all ingredients. Set aside to make zucchini filling.

Zucchini filling:

6 tbsps. margarine
3 cups chopped onion
4 cups coarsely shredded zucchini
Dash of black pepper
1 tsp. salt
2 tbsps. parsley flakes
1 tsp. oregano

Saute onions in margarine in large skillet until limp, then add zucchini. Mix and blend ingredients, cooking and stirring until zucchini is tender. Add seasonings, mix and set aside.

Cheese sauce:

4 tbsps. margarine
4 tbsps. flour
Salt and pepper to taste
1 cup milk
1½ cups grated cheddar cheese

Mix and melt margarine and flour in saucepan. Add seasonings. Stirring over ow heat, add milk and cheese. Continue to stir until mixture is smooth.

Making crepes: Heat 1 tsp. vegetable shortening in skillet. Pour in ¼ cup crepe batter. Tilt pan this way and that to cover bottom quickly. Lightly brown crepe on each side. Place about 5 tablespoons of zucchini filling on each crepe and roll up. Make all the crepes. Store in warm oven till ready to serve. Pour cheese sauce over crepes before serving.

Copley News Service

There have been many great beauties who subscribed to the theory, "To be beautiful on the outside you must be beautiful on the inside."

However, there is probably none quite so beautiful or so faithful to this adage as CYNTHIA SIKES, the stunning brunette who portrays Dr. Annie Cavenero on NBC's "ST. ELSEWHERE."

"I really do believe that beauty comes from within," says Cynthia. "But I mean it literally. It starts, and has a lot to do with how you feel about yourself, but it has even more to do with taking care of yourself, from the inside as well as from the outside.

"It's taking responsibility for your health and knowing that your general condition has more to do with how you look than any beauty routine in the world."

Although you may know Cynthia from her many television commercials, as well as for her portrayal of Sandy Swanson on the nighttime soaper "FLAMINGO ROAD," it was her role as a doctor on "St. Elsewhere" that really changed her life by introducing her to a whole new way of living.

"I was always getting sick," confesses Cynthia, "and just feeling dragged out and tired all the time. And I knew that the way I felt was reflected in the way I looked.

"Well," she continues, "because of the research I had to do for my part on the show, I began to learn a great deal about preventive medicine, nutrition and the importance of diet and exercise."

One of the first steps Cynthia took was to eliminate sugar and most dairy products from her diet and to concentrate on meals consisting mainly of fresh vegetables, chicken and fish, with very little red meat.

"I was truly amazed at the difference in myself," she says. "My skin took on a whole new glow and my hair, which used to be so limp and lifeless, suddenly had body and shine.

"In a sense I'm trying to purify my body through nutrition and the changes are truly astonishing. I need less sleep and I have more energy than I ever thought possible."

Cynthia also takes brewer's yeast and vitamin B shots, long heralded for their beneficial effects on hair and skin, and avoids coffee and alcohol, which tend to dry and age the skin.

When it comes to cosmetics, this super beauty has found that her new diet means using fewer products and spending less time on beauty routines.

"I have combination skin," reports Cynthia, "and it is sensitive to most perfumes, so I try to use products that are fragrance-free, like items from Clinique and Aida Grey. Also, I give myself a facial about once a week using cleansing grains and a mask.

"I have found," she adds, "that by avoiding soap I can avoid a lot of problems with dry skin. In place of it I use a mint pore cleanser which is very mild and less drying than most soaps."

But even with beauty routines such as these, Cynthia still subscribes to the theory that by taking care of your general health you will have fewer beauty problems.

A rich assortment of exotic summer bulbs from all over the world can bloom in your garden this summer. Dahlias, for example, produce a profusion of flowers in many colors and sizes.

Production company may gain 'Fame'

Debbie Allen

LOS ANGELES (AP) — "Fame" stars Debbie Allen, Lee Curreri, Erica Gimpel, Carlo Imperato, Carol Mayo Jenkins, Valerie Lands-burg, Gene Anthony Ray and Albert Hague may be performing again soon on the home screen.

MGM-UA Television has announced it is negotiating with Metromedia Television to film all-new episodes of "Fame" for non-network syndication.

The plan is to produce 24 original hours with 24 reruns, with a possibility of foreign co-production with the British Broadcasting Corp. and Italy's RAI.

The series, based on the hit movie about the talented students and teachers of New York's High School for the Performing Arts, was canceled after two seasons by NBC when it failed to catch on in the ratings.

Richard S. Reisberg, president for television production for MGM-UA, said Thursday, "We plan to have the original cast back for the new season's production. The final decision is expected within two weeks."

"Fame" would not be the first series to find new life after network cancellation.

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The widow of assassinated Egyptian leader Anwar Sadat, accepting a statesmanship award on his behalf, called on world leaders to make the same kind of "leap of faith" Sadat did.

"We cannot afford not to struggle if we are to remain alive and be spared a global holocaust," Jihan Sadat said Thursday in accepting the International Stateman's Award from the World Affairs Council of Philadelphia.

Urging world leaders to stop "bandying slogans and adopting frozen attitudes," Mrs. Sadat said, "The cause of peace is served by a leap of faith, if not by both sides in a conflict, then, at least, by one side."

Mrs. Sadat said her husband was a peacemaker whose faith "was based on a profound belief in the waste of war and the dignity of man."

Stephen King

BANGOR, Maine (AP) — Stephen King, author of such best-selling horror novels as "Carrie" and "The Shining," is buying a Bangor rock 'n' roll radio station and says he's "delighted to be investing in the future of my home town."

"I've been interested in radio since I was about 3 years old, but this is the first involvement of this kind," said King as it was announced Thursday that he had signed a purchase agreement with the Massachusetts-based Acton Corp., current owner of WACZ-AM.

King, who recently returned to his home in Bangor after a promotional tour in England for his latest novel, "Christine," has been long been involved in charity fund-raising events sponsored by "Z-62."

"I'm proud of the 'Z' and happy to own it," he said.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Pioneering female journalist Adela Rogers St. John was feted on her 89th birthday — more than 71 years after William Randolph Hearst hired her as a reporter.

Fourteen speakers from the entertainment and journalism professions toasted the writer at a luncheon at the Ambassador Hotel on Thursday.

She also was known for her coverage of the Lindbergh baby kidnap trial in 1932 and was one of the first reporters on the scene after Japan bombed Pearl Harbor in 1941.

Following her 1952 retirement, she became popular as a lecturer and enjoyed success as as author of fiction and non-fiction books. Such books as "The Honeycomb" and "The Verdict" became bestsellers.

FRONTERA, Calif. (AP) — Emily Harris was released from prison early today after serving eight years of an 11-year sentence for kidnapping heiress Patricia Hearst, a prison spokeswoman said.

Authorities at the California Institute for Women freed Mrs. Harris, once a member of the Symbionese Liberation Army, shortly after midnight.

Mrs. Harris was sentenced to 11 years after she and her husband, William Harris, pleaded guilty in 1978 of Miss Hearst's 1974 kidnap.

Hearst Feature Service

INGLEWOOD, Calif. – How do you airfreight an elephant, a rock band, or 80 purebred racing horses?

Believe it or not, F.B. Vandegrift & Co. has the answer. The customs brokerage firm has only been in business for three years, but in that short time has made a specialty of clearing and forwarding some of the most bizarre air and sea shipments in the world.

Now it will get its biggest challenge: the customs business of the entire 1984 Los Angeles Olympics.

Whether the item is horses for the British Equestrian team, judo mats for the L.A. organizers, German bicycles or Australian yachts, virtually nothing of any size is going to move through the ports of Long Beach or Los Angeles or be flown into Los Angeles International Airport without going through F.B. Vandegrift's computers.

Paul Lippe, 41, president of the company, played volleyball at UCLA in the early '60s, but never reached Olympic-level competition. He said he was seized by a determination to hook the Games, and "I wrote Peter Ueberroth (Los Angeles Olympic Organizing Committee chairman) in 1981 and asked, 'How can I help?' "

Dave Simon, LAOOC director of government relations, said while the committee received applications from several big nationwide brokerage houses, it chose Lippe's operation because it was local, offered "better terms" and "because of the enthusiasm, integrity and sincerity of Paul Lippe."

Neither party would disclose the terms in the contract, but Lippe said his customshouse fees conform to the "industry standard" of about $100 per shipment, and the firm will pay a royalty to the LAOOC of 10 percent.

Lippe has had some unusual assignments before, including the trans-shipment of rock bands (Kiss) and star attractions (Rod Stewart, Joni Mitchell).

"We shipped Queen's equipment on a Flying Tiger 747. Including lights, sound and an entire stage, that was 175,000 pounds," recalls Lippe. "And we had to route it from Tokyo to Buenos Aires to Rio to London. One reason we've been so successful in the music business is that it doesn't bother us to have to pick up 75,000 pounds from a rehearsal at two in the morning."

He tells the story of having to ship a 4,000 pound baby elephant to Australia, for producer Michael Edgely ("The Man from Snowy River"). "It banged its head on the cage in the plane, but when it arrived in Sydney it performed like a trooper," says Lippe.

He also recalls the time when he had to clear 80 horses being shipped by sea for Rex Ellsworth, the famed race horse breeder. The animals arrived in good condition, but the captain of the ship wanted Lippe's crew to take charge of the wooden stables on board. The U.S. Department of Agriculture decreed that the wood had been contaminated and wouldn't be allowed off the ship.

Media focus on Rather

Hearst Feature Service

LOS ANGELES – Attorney Bruce A. Friedman pointed at the swarm of television camera crews, boom mikes and lights clustered outside the doors of the courtroom. He was about to be eclipsed by a media star.

"It bothers me to have to fight my way through these vultures," said Friedman, representing a doctor – who claims that the CBS news program "60 Minutes" slandered him to the tune of $30 million – in the Los Angeles Superior Court trial.

But Friedman didn't have to worry about fighting the vultures Wednesday. The TV crews and reporters and the spectators had absolutely no interest in the lawyer or his client, Dr. Carl Galloway.

The former "60 Minutes" reporter and successor to Walter Cronkite made his long-awaited first appearance in court in the suit filed by Galloway against CBS, "60 Minutes" and Rather himself. Galloway charges he was slandered in a 1979 segment which examined phony accident insurance schemes and in which Rather was the on-camera reporter.

Although Rather did not testify his very presence turned what had been an interesting courtroom drama into a genuine media event. Women gaped, men gawked. The court bailiff asked for, and received, Rather's autograph.

A sheriff's deputy escorting what appeared to be a criminal defendant down the corridor had to pause and give his charge a chance to gaze at the star, finally taking the miscreant by the arm and saying, "C'mon, c'mon, you can see him on TV!"

But like so many people who have faced the "60 Minutes" cameras, Rather declined to comment as he waded through the crush of reporters outside the courtroom.

Like everyone else in the crowded, 46-seat courtroom – court officials roped off a waiting line for spectators vying for the few seats reserved for the general public, while news reporters stayed close to their seats for fear of losing them – Rather, dressed in a blue pin-stripe suit, sat through hours of testimony by two "expert" witnesses called by the defendant, CBS.

One expert, Pulitzer Prize-winning investigative reporter Nick Kotz, testified that "60 Minutes" did not violate journalistic ethics in preparing the broadcast, in which Rather showed a phony medical report that he said was signed by Galloway. Galloway has testified that the signature was forged.

On Monday, the former Republican state senator and congressman will earn a master's of government degree from Oberlin College. Officials believe he is the the oldest person to receive such a degree in the college's 150-year history.

Mosher also will receive an honorary Doctor of Laws degree.

Clark Gable's widow dies at 66 in Houston hospital

HOUSTON (AP) — Kay Gable, the widow of Clark Gable, had suffered from heart problems for years before dying in a Houston hospital where she was undergoing cardiac tests, a friend says.

The fifth wife of the late matinee idol died about 5 p.m. Wednesday after a "lengthy illness," a spokeswoman at Houston's Methodist Hospital said Thursday. She was 66.

"She's had a long history of heart problems," said Eugene Landau, a Los Angeles attorney who has represented the Gables for more than 25 years. "She's had a couple of heart attacks in the last 13 years and she was there (at Methodist) trying to take tests and figure out what could be done and I guess she just expired."

Mrs. Gable, a Los Angeles area resident, was admitted to Methodist about three weeks ago for tests.

Born Kathleen Williams, she married Gable in 1955 when she was 37 and he was 54. It was her fourth marriage and the fifth for Gable.

She had two children from a previous marriage to sugar heir Adolph Spreckels, and a son by Gable, born after his death. Gable died of a heart attack Nov. 16, 1960. His widow never remarried.

Gable perhaps was known best for his performance as Rhett Butler in the 1939 movie, "Gone With The Wind." He won an Academy Award as best actor for his role in the 1934 movie, "It Happened One Night."

Mrs. Gable is survived by John Gable, 22, the son by Gable, and daughter Joan Spreckels, 34. Another son, Anthony Spreckels, died of a heart attack in January 1977 at age 29, Landau said.

After Gable's death, Mrs. Gable lived at the couple's 19-acre ranch in the Encino area of Los Angeles until 1973, when the ranch was sold. She then moved to Beverly Hills, Landau said.

Mrs. Gable was involved in a number of charities for children and unwed mothers, Landau said. She continued to answer fan mail addressed to her late husband.

"She was a very generous, outgoing individual and a wonderful mother," Landau said. "She loved her children and that was her main concern, other than her charitable work."

In an August 1961 Look magazine article condensed from her book, "Clark Gable: A Personal Portrait," Mrs. Gable talked of her marriage to the famed movie star.

White may use veto to prod Legislature

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Mark White's next move to squeeze a teacher pay raise out of a reluctant Legislature might include a veto of an unrelated bill extending the life of the Railroad Commission, says a commission member.

The scenario features a special session forced by White's veto of a measure keeping the commission in business until 1991.

Railroad Commissioner Buddy Temple, after meeting with White on Thursday, said the governor acknowledged considering vetoing the bill needed to keep the commission operating beyond Sept. 1.

Temple said White might veto the bill, then call a special session to push his 24 percent pay raise plan for teachers. The governor sets the agenda for special sessions, meaning he could force lawmakers to approve some version of his teacher pay raise and tax plan before considering legislation to continue the Railroad Commission.

A governor's veto can be overriden by a two-thirds vote in each house. Because the Railroad Commission bill started in the House, lawmakers there would get first shot at an override.

Speaker Gib Lewis opposes overrides, but Speaker Pro Tem Hugo Berlanga said there were 110 votes in the 150-member House for an override.

House Majority Leader Bob Bush, D-Sherman, said he was cautioning colleagues that an override could trigger further vetoes by White. Bush said he would vote against an override.

But Temple, a former House member who lost to White in the 1982 Democratic gubernatorial primary, was in the House on Thursday talking override. He said he doubted White would risk the possible repercussions of threatening lawmakers who vote to void the veto.

The future of the Railroad Commission is in doubt because of the state's "sunset" process, which requires periodic review of all state agencies. Several other major agencies also have "sunset" bills pending, and White could choose to veto bills continuing the State Securities Board, Public Utility Commission or State Board of Insurance.

Temple said White's talk of a Railroad Commission veto is based on the governor's concern about a portion of the bill that could create monopoly taxi service between Dallas-Fort Worth Airport and nearby cities.

Temple said the legislation does not create the monopoly feared by White. Temple, Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby and Lewis said White is simply looking for a veto that would force a special session.

Hobby said White thinks the veto would "give him some kind of leverage in a special session."

Southwestern Bell to seek rate hike

DALLAS (AP) — The breakup of American Telephone & Telegraph will force Southwestern Bell to seek a rate hike this summer that could more than double the average Texas consumer's monthly service bill and total more than $1 billion, Bell officials said.

Southwestern Bell Vice President Paul Roth said Thursday that the rate hike is needed because the company will not be able to use long-distance revenues to pay for local service after AT&T is broken into eight companies on Jan. 1.

The increase, if approved by the Public Utility Commission, would more than double the average Texas consumer's monthly service bill of $10, The Dallas Morning News reported today. That charge does not include the cost of leasing telephones or special features such as Touch-Tone dialing or call forwarding.

Company officials estimated Bell will lose 15 percent of its expenses and 80 percent of its revenues in the divestiture.

"This is really not comparable to any other rate case we've filed before. It could be $1 billion, and it could be more than that," Roth told community and business leaders at a Bell-sponsored seminar.

"We're going to lose $600 million in intrastate long distance. That alone is bigger than any rate case we've ever filed before," he said.

Roth said the increase, which he expects to be filed at the end of June, also is needed to help Bell increase its profits and become more attractive to investors as an independent company.

As part of the federal court divestiture agreement, seven local companies — including Southwestern Bell — will provide local service and some intrastate long-distance service. The new AT&T will receive all out-of-state long-distance revenues and about 80 percent of the in-Texas long-distance revenues.

AT&T's subsidiary, American Bell Inc., will take over all the telephone-equipment sales and leasing from the local companies.

Senate passes bill protecting rights of interracial couples

AUSTIN (AP) — The Senate approved and sent to the governor Thursday a bill that would make it against the law for a justice of the peace to refuse to perform a marriage ceremony for an interracial couple on grounds of race.

The bill was prompted by a controversy in Fort Worth this year when two justices of the peace refused to marry interracial couples.

In March, the state attorney general's office issued an opinion saying the refusals violated the U.S. Constitution's equal protection clause.

But Rep. Jesse Oliver, D-Dallas, said the opinion was not binding in court, and he introduced the bill to outlaw refusals based on race, religion or national origin.

His measure would not apply to ministers, rabbis or priests but only state-paid persons eligible to perform civil marriages.

Legislature OKs wiretap bill

AUSTIN (AP) — The Legislature completed action Thursday on a bill that would allow law officers to use wiretaps and other electronic devices in life-threatening situations.

Under Houston Rep. David Patronella's bill, police could use electronic devices in incidents involving hostages or an armed suspect who is barricaded.

Houston police told a House committee that the devices help SWAT teams know where hostages and suspects are located within a building.

The Senate passed the House-approved bill 31-0 and sent it to the governor to be signed into law.

Ultralight pilot in burn unit

HOUSTON (AP) — The pilot of an ultralight airplane was in stable condition in a hospital burn unit after he buzzed the crowd at a high school graduation, then crashed about a mile away, officials said.

A suburban police officer said the plane was reported over the crowd at 7:46 p.m. Thursday. Another caller reported the crash four minutes later, said Officer S.L. Shafer of the Deer Park police department.

Witnesses said the plane hit a telephone pole guy wire, flipped over and caught fire near an elementary school about a mile from the outdoor graduation, Shafer said.

Rancher may be retried for abusing wild horses

MARSHALL (AP) — An East Texas rancher accused of abusing wild horses may have to go on trial again as early as June because jurors could not reach a verdict during his trial on the misdemeanor federal charges, a prosecutor said.

Joe Corbett is accused of abusing and abandoning three wild horses obtained through the Bureau of Land Management's "Adopt-A-Horse" program.

U.S. Magistrate Houston Abel declared a mistrial Thursday after jurors had tried and failed to reach a verdict in five hours of deliberations.

The six misdemeanor counts each carried a maximum penalty of a year in prison and a $2,000 fine.

Assistant U.S. Attorney William Cornelius of Tyler said that Corbett would be retried in June at the earliest and in September at the latest.

Corbett's attorney, Edward McFarland of Lufkin, said he was unsure of his client's next move.

"I don't honestly know," McFarland said. "We will wait until we hear from the court."

A court official, who declined to be identified, said the mistrial came after "it became apparent to the court through the jury's communications that they had reached an impasse and were not advancing in their deliberations."

Foreman Lorenza Washington was asked by Abel if jurors needed more time to enter a verdict. "No sir, I believe we've had enough time," Washington said.

The jury favored acquittal 8-4, Washington said.

Jurors asked the magistrate earlier Thursday if they needed to consider if the acts were willfully done, and asked to hear the charge again.

Abel said jurors were obligated to return a unanimous verdict and he would not hesitate to declare a mistrial if they could not.

Corbett took the stand late Wednesday morning and testified that the mustangs he received in Nevada in December 1981 were "smaller, picked-over horses."

He leased a Camp County ranch at which 38 dead horses and dozens of malnourished ones were found in November 1982.

Public television began in Houston 20 years ago

HOUSTON (AP) — On May 28, 1953, engineers threw switches, lights blinked and suddenly television screens all over Houston showed a college professor lecturing on psychology. Public television was born.

Other non-commercial stations received their licenses earlier, but it was KUHT-TV in Houston that went on the air first, putting out a weak, 15,000-watt, black and white signal that was received as faint, fuzzy images on the primitive sets of that era.

Nearly all the programs were college courses and this non-commercial television system was called Educational Television. The station was on the air six hours daily, and shut down on weekends.

Only a few thousand households tuned in. Most viewers during those daylight hours watched the soap operas or old movies offered by the commercial stations. KUHT-TV, Channel 8, was a distant last in a growing market of four TV stations.

But experts forecast that this modest start would lead to a major change in American education.

Televised teaching, they predicted, would bring culture and knowledge into the living room and revolutionize the nation's enlightenment. In an era before the terms "boob tube" or "vast wasteland" gained currency, television was seen as the great educator.

It hasn't worked out.

IN THE THREE decades since that first public television broadcast, the non-commercial television station here, and scores of others like it across the country, are still struggling to solidify their place in the American scene.

Channel 8 has gone from a budget of $108,000 in 1953 to a 1983 budget of $3.8 million. It now televises in color, for 18 hours a day, including weekends. Six hours a day are programs of instruction for school children. On weekends, college courses are offered.

But public television has not revolutionized education here. Nor has it gained a much larger share of the local market. Where once it was the distant last of four stations, it is now the distant last of six. An average of 388,000 households watch Channel 8 at least once a week, almost 200,000 households behind the fifth place station in Houston.

"In all honesty," says Dr. Richard Evans, head of the University of Houston psychology department, "using public television for teaching has become only a minor thing."

Evans, who conducted that first college course on television back in 1953, said a series of studies have shown educational television has had no measurable effect on the teaching of Americans.

"YOU WOULD be hard pressed to prove that it has had a significant mass effect," he said. "It was extremely naive to believe you can improve society on the basis of a TV series or two."

Studies at the University of Houston and at other colleges, said Evans, have shown that students do not learn more or faster from a television set than from a teacher lecturing in person. This finding, he said, has been a disappointment to educators who had such high expectations for TV teaching.

The euphoria of hope for education television died slowly, recalls Evans, who taught a TV course for 10 years. But eventually the industry began to realize that public television could not survive only with education courses.

"THE IDEA OF teaching by television would never provide the support that public TV had to have to exist," says James Bauer, manager of Channel 8 and a 27-year employe of the station. "In order to effectively compete, you've got to have programs that will create audiences."

To attract and hold those audiences, said Evans, public television was forced to drift away from pure education and to come up with what he calls "a mosaic of offerings, ranging from culture to cult films to fine dramas." Education, he said, became only a "minor role" in the public television industry.

Channel 8, as did most public television stations in the country, increased the hours of general audience programming and cut back on college lectures. At one point, KUHT dropped college courses altogether.

Production values — scripts, scenery, filming, casts and wardrobe — began to take on the look of commercial television. Money taken from large corporations enabled the Public Broadcasting System to make films and specials that differed little in basic technique from what was offered on the for-profit stations.

Changes continued until now, says William Hawes, a professor of communications at the University of Houston, "Public television has become quasi-commercial television."

THE BASIC difference, he said, is that public television has been more innovative and less bound by viewership numbers. Non-profit TV, he said, is not forced economically to program for the lowest common denominator in order to harvest the highest number of viewers.

Programs such as Masterpiece Theater, the National Geographic specials and news analysis programs catered to college-educated adults and broke new ground in television, said Hawes. Commercial television followed the Public Broadcasting System's lead, in some cases, transferring into the play-for-pay TV programs and personalities first seen on PBS.

"In this way," said Hawes, "public television has had a profound effect. For instance, we probably wouldn't have Sesame Street without public television. Regular children's programming on commercial television was cartoons and shows of that type."

The next 30 years, predict the experts, will be a continuing struggle for the non-commercial television stations.

Warm winter helps slash country's heating costs

WASHINGTON (AP) — The warmest winter in a quarter century — with temperatures averaging 5 degrees Fahrenheit above normal — helped cut the nation's heating bill by 4 percent, according to government figures.

Preliminary temperature figures issued earlier this week by the National Weather Service indicate the nation enjoyed a warmer-than-average winter along with much of the northern hemisphere.

Last winter was the warmest since 1957-68 when temperatures were 3.1 degrees above normal, said James K. Angell, a research meteorologist. In 1980-81, winter temperatures were 2.2 degrees above normal.

The nation's heating bill was $1.98 billion below normal for the period from last summer through May 7, according to estimates by the Environmental Data and Information Service. The total bill was estimated at $44.58 billion.

Since 1958, winter temperatures have averaged about 20 degrees Fahrenheit in a region that includes most of the United States, Canada, Europe and Asia, from central China to the central portion of the Soviet Union.

Man's complaint lasts for more than a century

GRANTS PASS, Ore. (AP) — Lots of people gripe about their wages, but H.F. Bartlett's complaint has lasted nearly a century.

Bartlett's lament was found by Annette and Dennis Harmon after carpenters began dismantling the front porch of the farmhouse in which they live.

The message — written in carpenter's pencil on a piece of siding, signed and dated Oct. 17, 1886 — reads: "Working on this house for $1.50 a day. Pretty tough. Amen."

Carpenters had thrown the board in a pile where Annette found it. The message, apparently left in the porch attic just before the work was completed, is darkened with age.

Harmon plans to frame it as a reminder of hardships in earlier times.

Ed Rosenwasser, 54, a quadriplegic due to polio 33 years ago, uses a rubber-tipped stick held between his teeth to hit computer keys, telephone dials and tape recorder buttons. Rosenwasser, who breathes with the aid of a respirator, operates a computerized scholarship locator service for high school students from his Houston home.

HOUSTON (AP) — Ed Rosenwasser, who spends his nights in an iron lung, uses his days to run a successful business — a service to locate financial aid for college students.

Using a rubber-tipped stick which he holds between his teeth, Rosenwasser operates computer keys, makes telephone calls and records messages. He receives about 1,000 calls monthly from high school students across the country.

Rosenwasser has been unable to move his arms or legs since 1950, when he was stricken with polio. During the day, he uses a respirator. At night, he sleeps in an iron lung.

For a $45 fee, Rosenwasser will locate five to 12 funding sources for which the student qualifies. If he cannot identify at least five realistic possibilities from his data bank containing over 250,000 scholarships, Rosenwasser said, he returns the money.

"There is about a half-billion dollars available each year for private scholarships," Rosenwasser said. "A fourth of that — more than $100 million — goes unused. But if students know where to look for scholarship funds, many of them will be successful."

"Happiness is not in your left hand or your right leg, it's in your head," he said. "If most of us are persistent enough, we can succeed at something."

Rosenwasser was stricken with polio in 1950 after completing a year at the University of Texas Medical School at Galveston. He was vacationing in Europe when he became violently ill and within a day was paralyzed from the neck down.

"Now I had to figure out what to do with the rest of my life," Rosenwasser recalled. "I had always wanted to be a doctor, but I didn't think it was practical for me to return to med school."

So Rosenwasser embarked on a series of businesses including a magazine subscription service and a trading stamp exchange. He also imported sweaters from Hong Kong and operated a retail clothing store.

Rosenwasser received a masters degree in biostatistics from the UT School of Public Health but was unable to find work in that field because of his handicap, he said. He said he conceived the idea for his present business, Student College Aid, in the early 1970s.

NEIL SOLOMON, M.D.

Stop-watches should be reserved for track meets

Dear Dr. Solomon: How would you define premature ejaculation? Is there a specific time limit that decides what it is? — Mr. J.F., San Antonio, Texas

Dear Mr. F.: I like the definition of premature ejaculation offered by Dr. Joseph C. Finney, of Loyola University of Chicago Stritch School of Medicine: Premature ejaculation occurs when the two individuals involved consider it a problem.

My personal opinion is that stop-watches should be reserved for use at track meets.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I've read about orphan drugs in the newspapers but I don't understand what they are. I know that they are not meant only for orphans, but I can't figure out what they are. — Joe, Philadelphia

Dear Joe: Orphan drugs refer to drugs that are needed by so few patients that pharmaceutical companies do not find them profitable enough to produce. One such drug that will be produced is triethylene tetramine dihydrochloride. It is estimated that only about 100 patients require the drug, but for these patients the availability of the drug can be a matter of life or death.

Dear Dr. Solomon: It is not unusual to be watching any kind of sporting event and seeing someone get knocked unconscious. Sometimes he is taken off the field or the court on a stretcher, but more often than not he goes right back into the game within a few minutes. Is this a good idea even when the game is a non-contact sport like baseball or basketball? I'm not even talking about boxing. — Doug, Rochester, N.Y.

Dear Doug: Athletes who return to action too soon following a concussion are risking serious injury. When they can return to competition without risking such injury depends on the nature of the initial injury.

Dr. Herman Hugenholtz, of the University of Ottawa and Ottawa General Hospital, says that where the concussion has been mild — for example, with no loss of consciousness — the athlete should not return to action until he undergoes a complete evaluation. The person who has had a moderate concussion with a period of unconsciousness of up to five minutes should avoid competition for a few days until all symptoms have disappeared. Athletes who suffer a severe concussion should avoid competition for at least a month and should be hospitalized for a thorough evaluation. Should the symptoms reappear at a later date, the athlete should withdraw from competition.

High school and college athletes in particular should err on the side of caution. There is no athletic event worth the risk of serious, permanent injury.

For Selma, Grand Rapids, Mich.: I would not automatically assume that the side effects your husband has been complaining about since starting on the medication are all psychological. Drugs do cause side effects, and ignoring them can be dangerous.

(If you have a medical question, write to Neil Solomon, M.D., 1726 Reisterstown Road, Baltimore, Md 21208. Dr. Solomon cannot give personal replies but will answer as many questions as possible in his column).

Congress apparently buys Reagan's reassuring message

By WALTER R. MEARS

An Analysis

WASHINGTON (AP) — The hot line doesn't go to Congress, but President Reagan's message did. It was one of reassurance — and it has been issued three times now in tandem with major decisions on administration weapons and arms control proposals.

Shortly before the House approved funds for the MX missile program on Tuesday, Reagan once again recommended steps in Moscow and Washington to reduce the risk of accidental nuclear conflict.

It wasn't billed as part of the effort to lobby the MX through Congress, but it meshed with Reagan's emphasis on arms reduction efforts as he sought to round up votes in favor of the new missile.

The president wants to improve the 20-year-old teleprinter hot line between Washington and Moscow. He seeks an exchange of military information, and an arrangement for international consultation in the event terrorists provoke a nuclear crisis. The administration has described the proposals as an effort in confidence building, and one that could further the process of negotiation for arms control.

"Extending the range of rapid communications between the United States and the Soviet Union would make an important contribution to stability," Reagan said.

His plan would scrap the 60-word-per-minute hot line installed after the Cuban missile crisis of 1962, replacing it with a system permitting nearly instant communications between Washington and Moscow. He also advocates high-speed communications lines between the State Department and the Soviet Embassy in Washington, and between the Foreign Ministry and the U.S. Embassy in Moscow.

He said that package would "add new dimensions to our communications efforts, allowing us to contact each other rapidly at political, military and diplomatic levels, improving our ability to contain crisis situations."

Reagan's proposals date back to Thanksgiving, and the speech in which he proposed the short-lived dense pack plan, which would have based the MX missiles in a bunch near Cheyenne, Wyo. Congress balked, and the current plan is to put the new weapons into existing missile silos in Wyoming and Nebraska.

Rising market increases values of all stocks, even speculative ones

By CHET CURRIER

NEW YORK (AP) — To judge by the behavior of the stocks in the Dow Jones industrial average over the last nine months, a rising tide does indeed lift all boats — even some leaky ones.

From last Aug. 12 through May 12, a study by analyst William LeFevre at Purcell, Graham & Co. shows, all 30 of the stocks that make up the venerable average contributed to its rise from 776.92 to record highs above 1,200.

By far the biggest percentage gainer in the group was International Harvester, up 180 percent despite the severe problems afflicting the company. Last week, Harvester reported a loss for the quarter ended April 30 of $159.1 million.

The smallest increase in price was recorded by blue-chip Eastman Kodak, which soared from $71.75 to $98.12 in the early stages of the rally, but fell back to $74.75 by mid-May. Kodak's net gain came to only 4.2 percent.

The Dow is determined by adding up the prices of its component stocks at any given time, and dividing the sum by a divisor that is adjusted periodically for any stock splits. Currently it stands at 1.292.

So raw point changes, rather than percentage changes, determine how much the average rises or falls. As LeFevre says, "It makes no difference to the Dow index which stocks go up or down — a point is a point, whether it is in International Harvester, the least expensive component, or IBM."

On that basis, Harvester's $6.75 rise from $3.75 to $10.50 in the nine-month rally, though the largest in percentage terms, ranked it No. 29 among the 30 stocks, besting only Kodak.

International Business Machines came out on top in this tabulation with a $53.12 gain to $115.37. By itself, IBM accounted for 41 points of the average's overall rise.

In fact, LeFevre notes, the top eight stocks on the point-gain list were responsible for about half the average's advance. After IBM, they were General Electric, up $45.75; American Express, up $40.94; Minnesota Mining & Manufacturing, up $34.25; United Technologies, up $33; General Motors, up $28.12; Merck, up $27.12; and Union Carbide, up $22.25.

Dow Jones editors occasionally make changes in the average's roster because of mergers, or to reflect shifts in the standing of companies and industries in the economy. In 1976, Minnesota Mining was added to replace Anaconda, which was acquired by Atlantic Richfield.

Since then, there have been three other substitutions — IBM and Merck for Chrysler and Esmark in 1979, and American Express for Manville last summer.

These changes were seen, in each case, as the substitution of a vigorous, top-grade company for one that was troubled, or at least tired. And as events have proven out, IBM, Merck and American Express have all done their bit in pushing the average to new highs of late.

Global economy recovers

NEW YORK (AP) — Gauges of future economic activity are rapidly rising in all major industrial nations except Japan, a sign that a global economic recovery is under way, the Conference Board said earlier this week.

A composite index of leading indicators for the seven nations rose at an annual rate of 7 percent in February, compared with no growth in November 1982 and a decline of 1 percent in August 1982, according to the business-financed study group. The survey is done every three months.

"The leading indexes now strongly support the conclusion that the worldwide recession is ending and that recovery is under way," said Geoffrey H. Moore, director of the Center for International Business Cycle Research at Rutgers University, who prepared the report.

"The 7 percent rate recorded for the major industrial nations is well above the long-term rate of 4 percent achieved by these countries during the 1966-1976 period," Moore said.

The indexes are made up of 65 indicators believed to anticipate by several months changes in national output of goods and services or employment. These indicators include stock prices, profits, new orders to factories, construction contracts and changes in consumer debt.

Japan's index of leading indicators fell 2 percent in February compared with a rise of 3 percent three months earlier and an increase of 2 percent last summer.

Based on the most recent indexes, increases were recorded for the United States, up 11 percent in March; Canada, up 9 percent in February; Britain, up 4 percent in February; West Germany, up 5 percent in February; France, up 7 percent in February; and Italy, up 4 percent in December.

Florida displays symbols

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — What do Mickey Mouse, orange juice, plastic flamingos, the space shuttle and suntan lotion have in common?

They are all unofficial symbols of Florida, says Pat Wickman, a state historian. And they are part of a permanent display opening this week at the restored Old Capitol, which has a new role as a museum of Florida's government.

Most of the symbols in the first display are official ones established by state law, including the state animal and newest official symbol, the Florida panther. Also represented are the horse conch, which is the state shell; orange juice, the state's beverage; the sabal palm, the state tree, and mockingbird, the state bird.

One unusual official symbol is the state gem — feldspar. It can be found in the Swiss Alps, Australia and California, but not in Florida. The Legislature chose it in 1970 because of its nickname — moonstone.

"This was undoubtedly an attempt to perpetuate Florida's ties to the moon program," Ms. Wickman said.

ADVERTISEMENT FOR BIDS
NOTICE TO BIDDERS

Sealed proposals addressed to the Honorable Mayor and City Council of Midland, Texas will be received at the office of the City Secretary, City Hall, Midland, Texas, until 2:00 P.M., July 14, 1983, for furnishing all necessary materials, machinery, equipment, superintendence, and labor for constructing certain improvements at the Midland Regional Airport, Midland, Texas.
Immediately following the closing time for receipt of bids, proposals will be publicly opened and read aloud. Any bid received after closing time will be returned unopened.
This project consists principally of the construction of approximately 112,000 square yards of flexible pavement on entrance, access and service roads to the terminal, construction of approximately 130,000 square yards of flexible pavement in the several parking areas around the terminal building, construction of approximately 13,000 square yards of rigid concrete pavement on entrance roads and in the parking areas, construction of approximately 45,000 linear feet of curb and gutter on the roads and approximately 13,000 linear feet of curb and gutter in the parking areas, construction of five attendant's buildings in the parking area, construction of area lighting, installation of parking control equipment, installation of approximately 16,000 linear feet of storm sewer and appurtenances, installation of water and sewer lines, construction of concrete slabs, removal of existing pavement and structures, marking of roads and parking areas, installation of fencing, installation of signs and other related items of work.
A bid proposal guaranty is to accompany the bid, thereby guaranteeing the good faith of the bidder and that the bidder will enter into the written contract. The guaranty is to amount to five percent (5%) of the total bid and must be in the form of cash or certified check, issued by a bank satisfactory to the City of Midland, or a bid bond. If in the form of cash or certified check, it is hereby expressly understood and agreed that the City of Midland is given the right to retain such as liquidated damages if such bidder withdraws its bid anytime after such bid is opened and before official rejection of such bid, or, if successful in securing the award thereof, such bidder fails to enter into the contract and furnish satisfactory performance bond and payment bond. If a bid bond is submitted, it shall be executed on forms contained in these contract documents by a corporate surety authorized to do business in the State of Texas, and accpetable to the City of Midland.
The successful Bidder will be required to furnish a Performance Bond and a Payment Bond each in the amount of the contract, written by a responsible Surety Company authorized to do business in the State of Texas, and satisfactory to the Owner, as required by Article 5160, V.A.T.C.S., as amended by H.B. 344, passed by the 56th Legislature, Regular Session, 1959.
All lump sum and unit prices must be stated in both script and figures. The Owner reserves the right to reject any or all bids and to waive formalities. In case of ambiguity or lack of clearness in stating the prices in the bids, the Owner reserves the right to consider the most advantageous construction thereof, or to reject the bid. Unreasonable (or "unbalanced") unit prices will authorize the Owner to reject the bid. Bidders are expected to inspect the site of the work and to inform themselves regarding all local conditions.
NOTICES FOR ALL AIP CONTRACTS
A. Policy. It is the policy of the Department of Transportation (DOT) that minority business enterprises as defined in 49 CFR Part 23 shall have the maximum opportunity to participate in the performance of contracts financed in whole or in part with Federal funds.
B. MBE Program. All bidders assure they will make sufficient reasonable efforts to meet the Minority Business Enterprise goals as established for this prime contract. The MBE goal for minorities is five percent and the goal for women is two percent of the dollar value of this contract.
After opening of bids, the apparent successful bidder will be required to submit the names and addresses of MBE firms that will participate in the contract along with a description of the work and dollar amount for each firm. If the responses do not clearly show MBE participation will meet the goals above, the apparent successful bidder must clearly demonstrate, to the satisfaction of the airport sponsor, that a good faith effort has in fact been made and that meeting said goals is not reasonably possible. If any apparent low bidder cannot do so, the contract may, at the option of the airport sponsor, be awarded to the next low bidder able to meet these requirements.
C. Required Notices for Contracts Over $10,000. The regulations and orders of the Secretary of labor, OFCC, and FAR 152.61 require the following notices:
1. The proposed contract is under and subject to Executive Order 11246 of September 24, 1965, and to the Equal Opportunity Clause, and
2. The Bidder must supply all the information required by the bid or proposal form.
3. The successful bidder will be required to submit a Certfication of Nonsegregated Facilities prior to award of the contract, and to notify prospective subcontractors of the requirement for such a Certification where the subcontract exceeds $10,000. Samples of the Certification and Notice to Subcontractors appear in the specifications.

4. Women will be afforded equal opportunity in all areas of employment. However, the employment of women shall not diminish the standards or requirements for the employment of minorities.
Notice of Requirement for Affirmative Action to Ensure Equal Employment Opportunity (Executive Order 11246, as amended)
a. The Bidder's attention is called to the "Equal Opportunity Clause" and the "Standard Federal Equal Employment Opportunity Construction Contract Specifications" set forth herein.
b. The goals and timetables for minority and female participation, expressed in percentage terms for the contractor's aggregate work force in each trade on all construction work in the covered area, are as follows.
Goals for female participation in each trade
These goals are applicable to all the contractor's construction work (whether or not it is Federal or federally assisted) performed in the covered area.
The contractor's compliance with the executive order and the regulations in 41 CFR Part 60-4 shall be based on its implementation of the Equal Opportunity Clause, specific affirmative action obligations required by the specifications set forth in 41 CFR Part 60-4.3(a), and its efforts to meet the goals established for the geographical area where the contract resulting from this solicitation is to be performed. The hours of minority and female employment and training must be substantially uniform throughout the length of the contract, and in each trade, and the women evenly on each of its projects. The transfer of minority or female employees or trainees from contractor to contractor or from project to project, for the sole purpose of meeting the contractor's goals, shall be a violation of the contract, the executive order, and the regulations in 41 CFR Part 60-4. Compliance with the goals will be measured against the total work hours performed.
c. The contractor shall provide written notification to the Director, OFCCP, within 10 working days of award of any construction subcontract in excess of $10,000 at any tier for construction work under the contract resulting from this solicitation. The notification shall list the name, address, and telephone number of the subcontractor; employee identification number; estimated dollar amount of the subcontract; estimated starting and completion dates of the subcontract; and the geographical area in which the contract is to be performed.
d. As used in this notice and in the contract resulting from this solicitation, the "covered area" is nationwide.
D. Contracts in Excess of $50,000. For contracts of $50,000 or more a contractor having 50 or more employees, and his subcontractors having 50 or more employees, and who may be awarded a subcontract of $50,000 or more, will be required to maintain an affirmative action program within 120 days of the commencement of the contract.
E. Additional Notices for $1 Million Contracts. For each contract which may result in a bid of $1 million or more, the following notices shall also apply:
1. Preaward Equal Opportunity Compliance Reviews. Where the bid of the apparent low responsible bidder is in the amount of $1 million or more, the bidder and his known all-tier subcontractors which will be awarded subcontracts of $1 million or more will be subject to full, on-site, preaward equal opportunity compliance reviews before the award of the contract for the purpose of determining whether the bidder and his subcontractors are able to comply with the provisions of the equal opportunity clause.
2. Compliance Reports. Within 30 days after award of this contract, the contractor shall file a compliance report (Standard Form 100) if:
a. The contractor has not submitted a complete compliance report within 12 months preceding the date of award; and
b. The contractor is within the definition of "employer" in paragraphs 2e(3) of the instructions included in Standard Form 100.
The contractor shall require the subcontractor on all-tier subcontracts, irrespective of dollar amount, to file Standard Form 100 within 30 days after award of the subcontract if the above two conditions apply. Standard Form 100 will be furnished upon request.
Information for bidders, proposal forms, specifications and plans are on file in the office of the Director of Aviation, Midland Regional Airport, Midland, Texas, at the office of Parkhill, Smith & Cooper, Inc., Consulting Engineers, 4010 Avenue R, Lubbock, Texas 79412, and at the office of Parkhill, Smith & Cooper, Inc., Consulting Engineers, 5214 Thomason Drive, Midland, Texas 79703.
Copies of the Plans and Specifications may be secured from Parkhill, Smith & Cooper, Inc., Consulting Engineers, 4010 Avenue R, Lubbock, Texas 79412, or from Parkhill, Smith & Cooper, Inc., Consulting Engineers, 5214 Thomason Drive, Midland, Texas 79703, upon a deposit of ONE HUNDRED TEN DOLLARS ($110.00) for documents with half-size drawings, or TWO HUNDRED FIFTY DOLLARS ($250.00) for documents with full-size drawings as a guarantee of the safe return of the plans and specifications. FIFTY-FIVE ($55.00) of the ONE HUNDRED TEN DOLLAR ($110.00) deposit, or ONE HUNDRED TWENTY-FIVE ($125.00) of the TWO HUNDRED FIFTY DOLLAR ($250.00) deposit will be returned to the Bider on submission of a bona fide bid on the work, with such plans and specifications; or upon returning the plans and specifications immediately after examination of same, and advising the Engineer that bid will not be submitted; otherwise, the entire deposit shall be forfeited.

ATTENTION BUILDERS

of our new home inventory has closed or gone under contract in the last six weeks. Four of our builder/clients are now involved in lot acquisitions, plan approval, etc. to begin more new homes.

But while these new houses are being framed we need additional homes to show our customers and sell!

Our firm features a unique combination of years of experience and education in advertising, marketing and promotional strategies with a proven sales record in residential property and a thorough, on-going knowledge of new home finance.

If you need assistance in marketing your residential products give us a call, or drop by our office in San Miguel Square (next door to Mortgage & Trust).
