

Iran Threatens to Overtake French Embassy

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — A prominent Iranian religious leader warned France today its embassy in Tehran would be taken over if France refuses to extradite ex-President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr and a leftist leader, Tehran Radio reported. The warning came from Ayatollah Meshkini, the Friday prayer leader in the holy city of Qom, who took over the post from Ayatollah Hussein Ali Montazari, the heir-apparent to supreme leader Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, according to the broadcast. Meshkini's first name was not given. Addressing French President Francois Mitterrand in a sermon delivered at a Qom mosque, Meshkini was quoted as saying: "If you do not agree to extradite these terrorists to Iran, in the same way that the Iranian nation stood up to America with clenched fists and the call of 'God is Great' and rubbed America's snout in the dust, it (the Iranian nation) will do the same to you."

This was a reference to the Nov. 4, 1979 takeover of the U.S. Embassy in Tehran and the 444-day ordeal of 52 American hostages held by Iranian militant students.

The attack on the U.S. Embassy followed the admission of Iran's deposed Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi to a New York hospital for cancer treatment at a time the Iranian authorities were demanding his extradition. Bani-Sadr and the other man Iran seeks, Massoud Rajavi, fled to France in an Iranian air force jet July 29 and were granted political asylum. Since then there

That feller on Tierra Blanca Creek says most people would tend to their own business if the government would give it back.

If life were a bed of roses, some people wouldn't be happy until they developed an allergy.

One of the great things about the Panhandle and West Texas areas is that we have a lot of people who serve as "Jumper cables" in community affairs. They give us a charge and keep us working on the betterment of our communities.

There appears to be too many negative responses to events; we need the jumper-cable people to provide positive thinking.

Reminds us of a story we heard at a recent press association convention. Dr. Don Newbury, president of Western College at Snyder, told how happy he was to get back to Texas after a recent trip east, where he had been treated rudely.

He was sitting in a cafe drinking coffee when he decided to experiment on his fellow Texans' helpfulness. Newbury went outside, turned on his car lights, and went back in the cafe to watch from the window.

Forty times, during a period of more than an hour, someone would turn off his lights. Newbury would then go turn them back on and wait for another good citizen.

Finally, as he decided to end the experiment, he went to his car and found a note under the windshield wiper. "You are the victim of a vicious practical joker. I have turned out your lights 10 times tonight."

Sid Shaw, chairman of the recent Lions Club Carnival, reports that the annual project should net the club approximately $9,000. The carnival is one of the club's big fundraisers of the year, and proceeds are contributed to a number of worthwhile programs which the club supports.

Castro County Must Pay Fees

Castro County has been ordered to pay a total of $25,157.85 in legal fees by 42nd District Judge Mary Lou Robinson in Amarillo as a result of a ruling on March 27, 1980 which declared the Castro County precinct boundaries unconstitutional.

The ruling stemmed from a class-action suit filed against the county by Carmen Catano and other. The lawsuit challenged the constitutionality of precinct lines used in electing Castro County Commissioners.

The judgement includes attorney's fees, paralegal costs and attorney expenses, which were awarded to the plaintiff's legal representatives—Texas Rural Legal Aid, the Mexican-American Legal Defense and Education Fund, the Southwest Voter Registration Project and independent attorney Al Kauffman.

The TRLA received a total of $14,423.40 in fees and expenses, while the Mexican-American Legal Defense and Education Fund received $4,945.45, and the Southwest Voter Registration Project $3,289.

Kauffman received a judgement of $2,500 from the ruling.

According to the legal memorandum issued in the judgement by Judge Robinson, the county precinct lines had not been reapportioned since 1967, and that apportionment had effected only a minor change in the precinct lines established in 1927.

The law requires that precinct lines be redrawn after every census, or every 10 years.

Realtor Board To Host TAR Meeting

The Hereford Board of Realtors will host the first of 21 Texas Association of Realtors fall regional meetings Aug. 31 as TAR president Benny McMahan of Dallas begins a trail of such meetings across the state.

McMahan will head a delegation of TAR and industrial experts at the meetings, which will conclude at Alice on Oct. 28. The purpose of the fall regional meetings is to update TAR members on legislation, education, legal caveats, and new contract forms.

"Because members are anxious to be apprised of the developments in the regular and special 1981 legislative sessions, high priority will be given to those sessions at the meetings," McMahan said.

"The impact of the amended license law on the education of our members is sure to warrant much discussion. We'll also update members on the special Associational services available to them from TAR's education, legislative and public relations departments," he continued.

The TAR broker-lawyer committee has completed eight new standard contract forms according to TAR's monthly publication, "Texas Realtor." The contract forms cover situations including new homes, vacant lots, and limited occupancy. The forms are scheduled for field-testing this fall.

How Many?

It's finally "official!" The city of Hereford's official population is now 15,853 as declared by the 1980 U.S. Census. Highway department employee Ron Matthews was busy today replacing the old city limit signs with the new ones proclaiming the new figure. There are 14 of the signs in town at seven locations. The sign above is on West Park Avenue on the TG&Y parking lot. (Brand photo by Bob Nigh).

Replacements Sought

By H. JOSEF HEBERT
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration, saying it considers the air traffic controllers strike over, is looking for replacements for the thousands of controllers who continued picketing for a fifth day today.

The Federal Aviation Administration, which reported 75 percent of all regularly scheduled air traffic flying, continued the massive task of sending out dismissal notices to the strikers. Letters eventually will be sent to about 12,000 controllers, none of whom will work again for the government as long as President Reagan is in office, officials said.

"We see this as the first day in our effort to rebuild the traffic controller system in the country," Transportation Secretary Drew Lewis said Thursday night. The job, he acknowledged, might take two to three years and plans are being made to handle reduced air traffic for a year or more.

He said he considers the strike, which began at 7 a.m. Monday, over, although he acknowledged that striking controller picketed at many airports and control centers around the country.

Deputy White House press secretary Larry Speakes said Reagan was "very encouraged by our ability to operate the system and the level at which we can operate."

House also considers the confrontation with the controllers over and added that he knows "of no possibility there could be any change in our position."

FAA Administrator Lynn J. Helms said 75 percent of regularly scheduled commercial flights were operating, and he said he is freezing that level of operations until Sept. 8.

After that, a six-month flight schedule will be put in place aimed at increasing flights to 80 percent or 90 percent of normal volume toward the end of the year, he said. But the controllers showed no signs of capitulating.

"We are more firm in our convictions and more determined in our resolve than we were when the strike started," union president Robert E. Poli declared as he visited a controller who had been jailed in nearby Virginia because of the strike.

"They can put our people in shackles and put them in jail. We will not go back to work," Poli said.

Administration officials said that option is no longer open to the strikers. They repeated there will be no amnesty and, as of 11 a.m. EDT Thursday, all striking controllers were considered subject for dismissal with no opportunity to return.

The air traffic system continued to be handled by about one-third of the 17,000 controllers who normally operate the centers and airport towers around the country.

Union members charged that the reduced staff — supervisors, non-striking controllers and some military controllers — threatened safety. The union claimed many were working excessive hours.

Lewis denied that the airways were unsafe and accused the union of using "scare tactics." While some controllers were working up to 58 hours a week none were working more than 10 straight hours, Helms said.

But he said the hours would be reduced to no more than 48 hours a week beginning Saturday out of a concern

Mrs. Cavness' Habit Is Having Fun

By DEBE GRAVES
Staff Writer

Rumors have a way of getting started and spreading like wildfire. That is what occurred this week when Hereford Hustler Chairman, Gladys Cavness, sent out letters reminding Hustlers to attend a meeting where she would, "make a very important announcement."

Naturally, the Hustlers interpreted this as meaning she was going to announce, as past generations put it, she was in the "Family Way."

Well, the rumor spread and ended when, at a surprise baby shower in her honor, Mrs. Cavness declared it all

"Vicious rumor." The shower was all in good fun and no one enjoyed it more than Mrs. Cavness. The gifts included rattles, bottles, and various other baby needs which she will donate to a friend who is preparing for her first child.

Fun seems to be the key to Mrs. Cavness' life as she makes it fun wherever she goes.

Born in Houston and raised in Houston and Austin, she married her husband, then a pre-dental student at the University of Texas. Hap Cavness in February of 1946. While Hap attended UT she worked for the City of Austin.

When he entered dental school at Baylor she went to work as bookkeeper for H.L. Hunt Oil Company in Dallas.

The couple had two children, their son Steven is now entering practice as a psychologist in Appleton, Wisc. while their daughter Cindy recently Mrs. Howard Vick. She is assistant to the Dean of Hotel and Restaurant Management at the University of Houston.

Cindy was six weeks old when the couple moved to Hereford in September of 1951. "When we moved to Hereford I had never lived in a small town before, but I loved it from the very moment we came into town, and I have never changed my mind," states Mrs. Cavness.

"One thing I hope never changes about Hereford is the friendliness of the people and the welcome newcomers receive here," she added.

Mrs. Cavness is employed in the Customer Service division of First National Bank, where she has worked since January of 1972.

"People have a misconception that there is nothing to do in small towns. Hereford is a town where there are more things and to do and interests to become involved in than you'd ever find time for to participate in all of them," said the avid sports fan. Mrs. Cavness serves as Chairman for the Hereford

Washington Star Says Goodbye

WASHINGTON (AP) — The legend under the nameplate on the front page of today's Washington Star said "129th year, No. 219." There will be no No. 220.

The Star said goodbye to its readers in an 80-page edition full of reminiscence about the glorious days when it dominated journalism in Washington.

It is going out of business, leaving The Washington Post as the only daily newspaper here and making Washington the biggest one-paper city in America.

Time Inc., the Star's owner of the last 3 1/2 of its 128-year history, says that in the last two weeks it talked to 60 potential buyers - and met with 11 of them - in an attempt to sell the newspaper.

But Time insisted that a buyer commit itself to spending

Showers Bring On Relief

Local thundershowers brought cooling relief and moisture to parts of the county Thursday evening.

Winston Roundtree, Easter Fertilizer, reported 1.10 inches of rain at Easter. Dan Hill, Walcott, and Tom Draper, seven miles south of Hereford, both reported 0.90 inches.

Other reports show 0.23 inches at Bootleg, 0.50 inches at Westway and 0.10 inches east of Dawn.

KPAN recorded 0.17 inches of rain for the city.

Today's forecast calls for 20 percent chance of rain and high temperatures in the low 80s.

Lack Of Cooperation

Ends Probation

After Only Five Hours

HOUSTON (AP) — Within a space of only five hours, State District Judge Allen Stillely changed a man's 10-year probation sentence to 10 years in prison.

Stillely said Gary Dale Smith, 25, refused to cooperate with the probation officer after being sentenced Thursday on a failure to stop and render aid charge.

Smith's driver license had been revoked and he had been ordered to pay $10,000 restitution for lost wages and hospital bills to John Bass, 42.

Smith had entered a no contest plea June 5 to charges he failed to stop after his car struck Bass, a pedestrian.

"He showed great disinterest in the whole proceeding, said he wouldn't fill out the forms and expressed the feeling he couldn't make the restitution, so I just decided to put him some place else," Stillely said.

Thomas J. Ryan, the defense lawyer, said Smith, who had been convicted in a 1979 theft case, was lucky to have gotten a probation sentence.

Stillely said Smith did not show much remorse when he found out his lack of cooperation had caused him to go to prison.

2 Die From What Could Be Botulism

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — Medical investigators are trying to determine if a can of fish, shared by one man who died and another who became seriously ill, was contaminated with a deadly bacterial toxin.

A patient admitted Thursday to Thomas General Hospital displayed symptoms Dr. Raul Portillo described as a "typical out-of-the-book base" of botulism, a deadly form of food poisoning caused by bacterial toxin.

Portillo, senior chief resident at the hospital, said the patient's cousin had died of suspected botulism poisoning several days earlier in nearby Juarez, Mexico.

Family members told Portillo the two men, whom officials declined to identify, became ill after they shared a can of fish.

The patient, complaining of bloody vomiting, blurred vision and difficulty in swallowing, respond to treatment with botulism anti-toxin, said Portillo.

Truck Spills Gas; Center Evacuated

TYLER, Texas (AP) — A 20-store shopping center was evacuated Thursday after a tanker truck carrying 9,000 gallons of gasoline and diesel flipped over and spilled part of its flammable cargo, officials said.

"We didn't waste any time getting people out of the area," said Tyler Fire Chief Jerry Weaver, who called the mishap "an extra dangerous situation."

There was no fire and no injuries were reported.

The accident occurred about 11 a.m. Thursday when the truck, driven by Joe Miles, rolled over as Miles swerved to miss an oncoming car at the intersection of Loop 323 and U.S. 65 near the French Quarter Shopping Center.

Weaver said firefighters used about 750,000 gallons of water to wash away the leaking fuel and keep the truck dampened in the 95-degree heat.

West Texas — Scattered showers and thunderstorms most of area today and south tonight and Saturday. Not so warm. Highs low 80s Panhandle to near 100 Big Bend. Lows upper 50s Panhandle to near 70 extreme south. Highs Saturday low 80s Panhandle to mid 90s Big Bend.

Another New Business

Monograms by Jan, 310 Miles, was welcomed as another new business in Hereford Thursday by the Hustlers. Owned by Jan Metcalf, the store deals in monogramming towels, sweaters, jackets, leather goods, some children's items, and even Levi's. The business was presented with their first profit dollar and a Chamber of Commerce plaque by Mike Carr, C of C vice president.

Senator Bill Sarpalius Named To Texas Sunset Commission

AUSTIN — Senator Bill Sarpalius (D-Hereford) Monday was appointed to the Texas Sunset Commission. The Sunset Commission is an arm of the Legislature that reviews the function of all state agencies on a periodic basis, and recommends to the Legislature whether those agencies should continue their existence. It is composed of four Senators and four House members.

"I promised in my campaign that I would work to eliminate waste and red tape in government, and this is my chance. I'm very pleased with this appointment," Sarpalius said.

Sarpalius said he also was excited about the opportunity to examine several agencies with rate-making authority. "We will examine the Public Utility Commission, the Railroad Commission and the State Board of Insurance. All these agencies set rates for the general public. All of them have a direct impact on the pocketbooks of the people. We will look at them very closely," Sarpalius said.

Sarpalius added that the Sunset Commission will also review several agencies that deal with banking, energy and industrial accidents.

"There is no one to look over these agencies and see if they are doing their jobs when the Legislature is not in session. For example, many people tell us that they have complained to a state agency about some industry that agency is supposed to regulate, but no one will listen to them. Others tell us that they have to go through so much red tape to file a complaint or open a new business that it's just not worth the trouble. That's the kind of thing we want to work on," he said.

The Hereford Senator expressed a hope that the people who have dealt with state agencies would come to him with complaints and recommendations.

"Many people have told us they are upset about utility rates, phone service, or insurance rates. That's what the Sunset Commission is all about. I hope we hear from every person in this state that has a complaint about these things," he said.

Sarpalius said the Commission will review 28 different state agencies during 1981 and 1982, reporting its findings and recommendations to the 68th Legislature in early 1983.

The Sunset Commission was established in 1977. Since that time, its recommendations have led to the abolishment of 11 agencies it considered obsolete and to the modification of many others.

"Government has a way of overstaying its welcome. We need to check it over continually to keep a lid on spending and red tape," Sarpalius said.

Supporters Of Deposed President Hold Hostages

WASHINGTON (AP) — Supporters of deposed Iranian President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr today occupied Iran's only diplomatic outpost here and held several persons hostage for less than an hour.

The Secret Service said one person had been shot and 15 to 20 arrested. The FBI, however, said four persons had been shot — two hostages and two captors — apparently before authorities arrived.

Secret Service spokesman Jim Boyle said one person sustained a broken knee. City police spokesman Bill Jepsen said one had been shot and two others injured.

The District of Columbia Fire Department said the injured were taken to Georgetown University Medical Center, where officials later said two persons were being treated.

As those arrested were led off, shouts rang out of "Long live the people!" and "Death to the Khomeini regime!" But from others gathered along police lines came cries of "Long live Khomeini!"

City police said 25 to 30 persons had been taken hostage, but the FBI said only eight were held.

FBI spokesman Ron Derwish said a pro-Bani-Sadr group known as the "Mujahadeen Khalq" had claimed responsibility for the takeover.

Leaflets found lying on the ground read "Death to Khomeini's regime. Long live freedom."

Brewton said the demonstrators apparently cornered several employees in the offices of the Iranian interests section, located in an office building in northwest Washington, about 8:30 a.m. EDT.

Brewton said the protestors locked themselves and the hostages in a room and "several shots rang out. We don't know who fired the shots — the hostages or the people who were holding them. ... Someone fired at least two or three shots."

He said the protestors later unlocked the room for police, who, he added, did not fire any shots.

8-Year-Old Fransie Geringer Suffers From Premature Aging

ORKNEY, South Africa (AP) — Like most 8-year-old boys, Fransie Geringer is full of laughter, mischief and innocence.

But his young spirit is trapped in the body of an old man by progeria, or premature aging, a disease his doctor says will kill him before he reaches adulthood.

Bald and emaciated, with only 40 pounds on his 3-foot-8-inch frame, Fransie scampers around his family's small, fenced yard, climbing the naked trees with old looking but strong hands, and digging in the winter garden of orange and yellow daisies.

The only concession at playtime to his octogenarian characteristics at playtime are rubber-soled slippers that provide soft padding for his bent toes.

Dr. Martinus van Zyl, Fransie's pediatrician, said in a television interview that the cause of progeria, which can age its victims as much as ten times faster than normal, is not known. It usually is less severe, and it can appear in adults who aged normally as children.

The identifying characteristics are small stature, loss of hair, wrinkled skin and other signs of old age.

Fransie is energetic and suffers no handicaps in his daily activities. But he does experience severe headaches that cause the blood to throb visibly through his scalp.

His parents say he never complains — just sits in a corner by himself when he's tired or doesn't feel well.

Otherwise, his joy shines through big brown eyes, bulging over a spindly nose offset by small elephant ears.

Fransie is happiest when his 10-year-old brother, Paul, is home from school and lifts him onto the back of his black and yellow bicycle for a ride around the family's corner plot in Orkney, a dusty gold-mining town 105 miles southwest of Johannesburg.

The boys adore each other. Fransie has average intelligence but studies at home with his mother, Magda, rather than risk teasing by classmates.

Once he asked, "Why do I look so ugly?" Mrs. Geringer, 31, recalled, her eyes misting behind dark-rimmed glasses.

"What can I say? I say, 'No, you're not ugly. You're a very pretty boy.'"

"It's not nice to be the only one," Fransie told her quietly.

Strike

that a longer work week eventually may cause fatigue.

The labor movement, meanwhile, began to rally behind the Professional Air Traffic Controllers Organization but stopped short of agreeing to a PATCO plea that other unions honor their picket lines.

AFL-CIO President Lane Kirkland said the 15-million-member federation supports the controllers but was leaving it to individual unions whether to honor the pickets.

Despite Reagan's 48-hour ultimatum early in the week to return to work or be fired, only about 1,000 of the controllers that walked out Monday are back on the job. Lewis acknowledged that about 12,000 remain on strike.

He said the administration was beginning to focus exclusively on searching for new controllers who can be put to work quickly — scanning an applicant list of 20,000 names and looking into ways to speed up the training process.

Reagan began a four-week vacation at his ranch near Santa Barbara, Calif., after a five-hour, cross-country trip aboard Air Force One guided by civilian controllers at various towers along the way.

Twenty striking controllers picketed the front gate of the seaside Point Mugu Naval Air Station as the president's plane landed. Reagan never saw them.

The controllers launched the first national strike by federal employees Monday morning after the union rejected a contract that would have provided a $105 million package over three years and, according to government estimates, roughly a 6.6 percent increase in wages and benefits. That's on top of a 4.8 pay increase that all government employees receive.

PATCO demanded a $10,000 pay increase for all controllers, a reduction of the work week from 40 hours to 32 hours and increases in retirement benefits. While the union said its package was worth $575 million a year, the government put the figure at $681 million. Controllers now earn an average of $33,000 with a low of $20,500 and a high of $49,200.

Neither side is talking about new negotiations.

Dr. van Zyl says his condition is "static." Muscle degeneration is not marked at this stage, and he doesn't have high blood pressure yet. But the doctor says his case is hopeless.

"Fransie can live to 16 or 17," he said. "Victims of this disease die of coronary heart disease gets a coronary, he'll die, just like that," he said.

Herman Geringer, 37, a demonstrative father, expresses sadness because he can't take the child to Disneyland to see Pinocchio, his idol. But he works at one of the mines as a bangman, loading the men to go underground, and "I'm not a rich man."

"My aim is to make him happy and let him enjoy his life for as long as he's here for us," said Geringer. "That's all I care about."

at least $20 million and to keep the Star going at least a year, spokesman Donald M. Wilson said.

"We didn't want someone to come in and dispose of the paper's assets in three months and leave its employees high and dry" without the severance pay and pensions they will collect from Time, he said.

None of the potential buyers would make that commitment, he said.

The Star's final press run of 425,000 copies, 100,000 above the normal press run, began at 3 a.m. Above the masthead letters 1 1/4 inches deep proclaimed "Final Edition." Below was a letter from President Reagan.

"There is a great silence today in Washington," Reagan's letter said. "A fine newspaper is gone and a noble tradition ended...It is a setback for the cause of diversity in the press and for that precious but always fragile freedom — the right to print and publish freely. All of us are losing a strong, reliable friend."

"We hope the press concept nourished by the Star for 128 years of responsibility for change and growth of the nation's capital will never end," Editor Murray J. Gart wrote in a final editorial. "Above all, we hope our journalistic successors will be fair. Farewell."

In a story about art imitating death as well as life, the Star quoted Gene Reynolds, executive producer of the television series "Lou Grant," as saying the final days of the Star will be the model for the final show in the series about newspapering when its ratings wane.

"It's a tough thing, all of these lives being reversed," Reynolds said. "It will make a hell of a last show for us."

Jobs

those predictions will come to pass.

Deborah Klein, an economist at the Labor Department, said the latest figures should not necessarily be viewed as the start of a lasting decline in unemployment, but so far, she said, the employment market is not bearing out indications of an economic downturn.

"It looks like employers are not letting people go," she said. "Either they don't feel the decline or they are waiting to see."

Over the last year, total employment has increased by 1.9 million, with all the rise accounted for by adult men and women, the government said. Meanwhile, the number of people who have lost their jobs because of layoffs or permanent separations has declined by 640,000 since July 1980.

Employment in the construction area remained at depressed levels in July, with 20,000 additional jobs lost during the month. In contrast, employment in manufacturing rose by 110,000, the government said. Employment in mining and the service sector also rose.

Threat

have been mass protests outside the French Embassy in Tehran.

On Wednesday, Mitterrand advised the approximately 140 members of the French community in Iran to leave. Sixty-two French citizens obtained exit visas but were barred from leaving Tehran airport Thursday on an Air France jet sent to pick them up. A second French aircraft was not allowed to land.

Later that same day Iran announced it would allow French nationals in Iran to leave on Iran Air flights Monday and Wednesday, and a Foreign Ministry spokesman in Paris said, "We are not worried at the moment, we have no reason to be."

In addition to advising French nationals to leave, the French government recalled Ambassador Guy Georgy for consultations and reduced the French Embassy to a skeleton staff.

Iran claimed it ordered the French diplomat to leave the country because of Paris' refusal to extradite Bani-Sadr.

Most of the French nationals in Iran are businessmen or technicians overseeing France's mainly mothballed projects there. About 14 or 15 priests and nuns and about a dozen other longtime residents have said they do not want to leave, French officials said.

Letter to the Editor

EDITOR'S NOTE: The following letter was sent to Brand staffer Debe Graves by a former prisoner of war here during World War II after the three-part series on the POW Camp written by Mrs. Graves ran in the paper. Pordenone, Italy July 29, 1981

Dear Mrs. Graves: It has been very kind of you to send me the beautiful pictures, and the interesting newspaper scraps about my visit to Hereford last month. Thank you very much, also on behalf of my brother! Let me congratulate you on your excellent series of articles about Hereford POW Camp: True, interesting, effective, and very well written. In my crystal ball I see a great newspaperwoman career in your future!

As a matter of fact there are a few misprints and mistakes here and there, but it's evident that it isn't your fault and in addition to this, they do not compromise at all the quality and the significance of the exposition.

As for the chapel of the old cemetery, I agree to Mr. Schroeter's proposal of removing the marble plaque to place it somewhere else (Museum? Church?) and of placing an historical marker where it now stands. Anyway I'm sure that the sensible and civil people of Hereford will do their best to keep the memory of the human drama which took place so many years ago in their territory.

Sincerely yours,
Franco Di Bello

Hudson Remembers Melvin Douglas

By DENISE SMITH
Staff Writer

"First thing he said to me was 'Have you come to work with us,' and I said yes, I have and Melvin Douglas said, 'Well, we're glad.'" This statement was made by Clyde Hudson of Hereford, while reflecting back to that year, 1962 at Claude and Goodnight during the filming of "Hud."

Hudson at the age of 60, was selected to be among five other men to play the role of a cowboy in the well-remembered movie, starring the late Melvin Douglas.

According to Hudson, Douglas, star of Hollywood and Broadway, won much respect and admiration from people who worked with him in May of 1962.

"He talked a common conversation and was really a nice gentleman," Hudson said. "With me he wasn't a person that felt like he was any better than anyone else. He was kind spoken," the cowboy continued.

Taking himself back 19 years, reminiscing on the sometimes humorous and truly treasured memories, Hudson says "I won't take a million dollars for it...but I wouldn't give 30 cents for another one."

Recalling his role as a cowboy, Hudson said he also played a pall bearer at the funeral for the character portrayed by Douglas.

"The funeral was at a little church in Goodnight, and at this funeral they had all the people of the community fill the church and park their cars outside, even my car, to make the scene as real as possible," Hudson remembered. The rancher and farmer was paid well for his role in the movie and for the use of his horse, pickup and trailer.

Hudson recollected the house where parts of the movie was filmed. It sat a half-mile off highway 287 and "is still standing; it was an early landmark," according to Hudson.

Having seen the movie three times, Hudson says that many of the scenes he thought were best, had been cut. "I remember that Douglas's health was bad at that time, and he had himself a chair at back in the shade. Many times when they were filming a scene, something would go wrong and the director, Martin Ritt, would yell 'cut,' so Douglas would slowly walk back to his chair and sit down. One time I went and sat beside him and told him that I thought with all the cutting and retakes, it would get monotonous...all that running back and forth. And I can still remember Douglas looking at me and saying, 'Clyde, that all goes with it.'" Douglas died Tuesday at the age of 80 at Memorial Sloan Kettering Hospital in New York, where he had been a patient for four days, of pneumonia and heart trouble.

During the 14 days Hudson was filming, he recalls many incidents when he would sit and talk with Douglas. A time or two, Hudson would strike up a conversation with co-star Paul Newman. As for Patricia Neal, cowboys would always have to leave when it was time to film her parts," said Hudson.

In one particular scene in the movie "Hud," which Hudson jokingly states was named after him, the 60-year-old cowboy is seen on a paint horse. Throughout the rest of the movie, he rode an Iron gray.

Hudson called to mind a time when three Texas Longhorns steers were brought to Goodnight from Oklahoma.

"In the movie the steers, which belonged to Douglas, were to have gotten hoof and mouth disease, and so they had to be killed. Well Douglas said he'd kill them himself, but his heart failed him and he couldn't."

Hudson was impressed with the fact that all the crew was fed well. A catering service out of Fort Worth would feed the cowboys and visitors.

Soon to be 79, Hudson was born in 1902. He has farmed and ranched his entire life, working eight sections at Goodnight for 21 years. Hudson and his wife have resided in Hereford for eight years at 425 Sunset Drive, in a King's Manor cottage, which they built themselves.

In 1968, Hudson quit cowboying, rode his last horse, hung-up his chaps, and sold his trailer and saddle.

Now the retired Cowboy helps with maintenance around the Manor. He is a master mason, member of Order of Eastern Star and First Baptist Church.

Ann Landers

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I want to stand up and give three cheers to that woman who left her husband (a clergyman)—knowing full well she would be roundly criticized in a small town—and went to work to help support her three children. How I wish I had her courage.

For 23 years I have been locked into a hellish marriage. On two occasions when I seriously considered leaving, I made the mistake of listening to my mother and aunt who told me I owed it to my children to keep our marriage together.

The children are grown now and I am alone with a miserable nut who is 48 years old and looks 60. He is in poor physical condition because of his drinking. We have no couple friends. He has alienated his relatives and mine with his foul mouth. My only lifeline to humanity is women acquaintances who come for coffee and cookies in the afternoon.

I am stuck because of a heart condition which makes it impossible for me to work.

How I regret I didn't make the move when I had my health and good looks. Don't answer this letter, Ann. Just print it.—20-20 Hindsight

DEAR 20-20: Here it is along with my thanks.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: My husband and I are both 29, married three years. He is a medical doctor in resident status and makes $15,000 a year. I recently graduated from law school and make the same. We have endured a great deal of financial hardship to get to this point in our lives. The problem is my mother.

Every time we are together she asks, "When are you going to have a baby?" The truth is I am not sure we want a family—ever. What's more, I feel hurt that my mother has never let me know she is proud of my accomplishment. Not once has she mentioned that I have done well academically or career-wise.

The clincher was last week when my aunt asked me in the presence of several family members, "When are you going to make your mother a grandma?" I was furious with her insensitivity and snapped back, "That is a personal question," turned my back on her and walked away.

My mother said I was extremely rude. (She really knows how to pile on the guilt.) DO I HAVE to have a child just because my mother wants to be a grandma? Nothing has upset me so much in my entire life.—Attorney On The Defensive DEAR ATTORNEY: First—your aunt's questions was out of order and should be stricken from the record. As for your mother's accusation that you were extremely rude, the verdict: NOT GUILTY.

Whether or not to have a family is a matter that should be decided by you and your husband. No one else's opinion should be considered.

I hope you will find the courage to tell your mother to get off your case...that you find her constant questioning and nagging upsetting and to please not bring up the subject again.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Here's a little something my wife slipped in my prayer book. I found it when I opened the book in church and broke up. Please print it. Thanks, Doll.—R.O. In Evanston

Where A Scar Is A Badge Of Honor

By MIKE STANTON
Associated Press Writer

GREAT BARRINGTON, Mass. (AP) — Snuggled in the Berkshires is an idyllic summer camp, a place where children hike and swim, fish and laugh.

They take nature walks in the morning, skipping across still dewy grass, and gobble peanut butter and jelly sandwiches at noon. When their weary counselors put them to bed at night, they are still bubbling with energy.

No one pays money to come here — there is a steeper price. The Madden Open Hearts Farm is limited to children who have had open heart surgery.

"The only thing you need is a scar to get in," said Keith Taub, 14, a Levittown, N.Y., boy.

"Some of the children come here shy. They don't want to show their scars to anybody at first," said Sue Coulon, the camp director. "But here, everybody has a scar and nobody tries to hide it. They're just like anybody else."

The camp was founded in 1960 by the late Edward Madden, operator of a New York blood bank and a heart surgery patient himself. Its joy, say those who come here, is that it provides an escape from a life where classmates, friends and even family treat them differently because of their surgery.

"When it gets hot, I like to take off my shirt and not have people say, 'Oh, you have a weird scar,'" said Danny Seplov of Newton, N.J., a 13-year-old who has had three operations for a weak heart valve. "I'd rather have an ugly scar than be dead."

"Nobody tries to stop you from doing anything here," said Christine Zawacki, a 14-year-old from Port Jefferson, N.Y., who enjoys hiking in the mountains that encircle the 400-acre farm.

Elizabeth Fields, 14, went to regular summer camp once. She didn't go back.

"The other kids looked at me like there was something wrong with me," she recalled. "They wouldn't let me in any games, and I was always the last one chosen for the softball team. In school, your teachers think you're a slower learner.

"Before I came here," she added, "I thought I was the only kid who had had open heart surgery."

The farm accommodates fewer children than most summer camps — 22 for each two-week session — and those who attend are given close attention. The camp accepts no children who require elaborate medical care.

A hospital with a heart specialist is just five miles away, but his services have never been required, Mrs. Coulon said.

Even with such careful supervision, the concept Madden envisioned 21 years ago survives.

"The Maddens wanted to get the children out in the country so they could run around and build up their strength," said Mrs. Coulon.

"Most summer camps are very large and the children are constantly on the move. We're more like one big family here," she said. "If a child can't participate in something or tires easily, we let them sit it out."

Most of the children required surgery to correct conditions such as birth defects or damage from diseases like rheumatic fever or staph infections. Several have had more than one operation, and some have come to the camp as soon as three months after surgery.

Many come from the metropolitan New York area, where Madden recruited his first campers at Long Island's St. Francis Hospital, one of the few hospitals in the United States then performing heart surgery on children.

More operations are operated on today, but Mrs. Coulon says the camp, funded

American Legion Auxiliary Installs 1981-82 Officers

The American Legion Auxiliary unit No. 192 met Tuesday evening in the American Legion Hall for a watermelon feed and installation of officers.

Beverly Jesko, out-going president, closed her year and the new officers were installed by Past Division President Pet Ott. The following were installed:

Edwina Thomas, president; Ruth King, first vice-president; Betty Jo Carlson, second vice president; Troyce Hanna, secretary-treasurer; Clara Trowbridge, chaplain; Pet Ott, reporter; Willie Vinton, sergeant at arms; Dee Wiseman and Carol Odom, members of the executive board at large.

Following the installation ceremony, Mrs. King gave a report on the recent garage and bake sale. She reported that the sales were a success and the scholarship goal had been reached. A memorial has been sent to the Department Cancer fund for Lois Clineard, a member.

Mrs. Jesko and Mrs. Thomas gave a report on the Department convention held in Fort Worth last month. A raise in unit dues was announced and will become effective in November, early dues will be exempt.

Mrs. Thomas also announced that plans for the beverage stand for the Town & Country Jubilee are about complete and the group will be selling drinks, popcorn, and snow cones.

Prior to adjourning, members of the Legion joined the auxiliary members for a watermelon feed.

Desegregation 'Could Have Been Much Worse'

By KEVIN NOBLET
Associated Press Writer

ALEXANDRIA, La. (AP) — When a federal judge's school desegregation order descended on Rapides Parish last year, there were parental protests, court battles and "white flight." Officials hope things go as well this fall.

They say it could have been much worse.

About 1,500 children fled the public schools. New private schools doubled in number, from four to eight.

Three white girls made national headlines when their parents steadfastly refused to obey an order that the girls no longer attend an all-white high school in Buckeye.

Parents in the mostly white community of Forest Hill attracted similar attention when they occupied an elementary school closed by the order and taught their own children.

Yet most of the parish's 25,000 schoolchildren rode the buses each day without incident, say school officials in this central Louisiana parish.

"We had a very good year, a very fine year," said James Cleveland, principal at Jones Street Junior High in Alexandria, a school often at the center of the desegregation furor.

Jones Street, with 750 students, saw more busing than any other school in the parish. It used to be almost all black, but U.S. District Judge Nauman Scott decided last year to send many of its children to rural, white schools outside the city.

At the same time, white children from towns like Pineville and Buckeye were bused as many as 25 miles to integrate Jones Street.

"A lot of people anticipated a lot of problems. We overcame that," Cleveland said. "For example, we had 79 kids who came out for football — 36 were white and 43 were black. They were the first white students ever to play on our team, and we won a championship."

Roughly 40 percent of the parish's schoolchildren are black. Proponents of desegregation said the black children attended inferior, often run-down schools while white children got better classes and teachers.

The integration plan was designed to get both races to mix and give blacks a better shot at a good education. But not everyone agrees it was successful — or should have been.

Joseph Page Jr., 10, was one of the black youngsters sent to Pineville Elementary to help integrate that school.

"I saw a change in his attitude, and it wasn't good," said his father, Joseph Sr., who said the boy was better off in his neighborhood school.

"The teachers and principal assumed from the start that the black kids were backward," Page said. "Most of them were shipped immediately into remedial classes, whether they needed them or not."

But many did need special help, said Gloria Hearne, a teacher who spent last year at Jones Street.

Her first visit to a predominately black parish school was six years ago.

"I nearly cried," she recalled. "The children were not reading in the first grade. They were so far behind it was pathetic."

Louis Berry, a civil rights lawyer who battled for more than a decade for an integration plan, said Page's experience was the exception.

"Black parents had some negligible complaints, but they centered mainly on the parent-teacher conflicts you find in any school," he said.

"Now, blacks sit with whites in the classroom, learn with them and compete with them in academics and sports. They're losing the feeling of inferiority."

"At the same time, it's purging white children of the notion that have been handed down by their parents that being 'white' is, per se, superior."

Rapides Parish's largely rural character may have had much to do with residents' general willingness to comply with the desegregation order.

People here are strong believers in law and order, and there was no violence even at the height of the Buckeye and Forest Hill protests. When the Ku Klux Klan tried to rally support with a cross-burning in Forest Hill.

most of the spectators were reporters.

The Forest Hill and Buckeye protesters took their cases to the courts. They lost. "Busing is here to stay," Berry said.

Charles Waites, the principal at Buckeye High School, hopes not.

Buckeye High has 600 students. It used to have more than 700, but 106 were ordered to Jones Street.

"With all this instability, you can't settle down to education," Waites said. Students were given parish-wide proficiency tests for the first time last year, so officials can't yet say whether learning has improved or suffered.

If Waites is worried as a principal, he is angry as a father.

Last year, he pulled his 13-year-old son, Brad, out of public school rather than see him bused to Jones Street. Brad attended the Philadelphia Christian School in Buckeye — one of the new private schools.

"Brad'll go there again this year," Waites promised.

But Berry predicts white flight will decrease, not only because the desegregation plan is working but also because private schools cost money.

"Unemployment in Rapides Parish is the highest in the state," he said. "The per capita income is among the lowest in the state.

"Once people get over the emotional part of it, they have to get down to economic facts. They can't afford white flight."

Hfd. Fire Dept. Receives $75 Check

The Hereford Fire Department received a check for $75 recently from Texas Farm Bureau Insurance Companies as an expression of thanks for the Department's work on the property of George Gabel.

The money will be used for their loss prevention program.

The Texas Farm Bureau Insurance Companies pay fire departments this amount when the department works at a fire in rural areas, involving property insured by them.

The Insurance Company believes fire departments have contributed to reduce the amount of loss involved by fire and more important, to prevent fires. It is their hope this money will help the Hereford Fire Department in their program.

Emerick Passes CPA Exams.

David Emerick of 245 Fir received notification on Wednesday of this week, that he has passed his Certified Public Accountant exams, which he took in May.

Emerick graduated from high school in Muskogee, Ok., in 1964. He then attended Oklahoma State University, where he graduated with a bachelor's degree in marketing.

In 1969 Emerick moved to Hereford to accept a position with Pitman Grain Elevator.

He is currently working as Controller at Carl McCasland Lumber Company, where he has been employed for five and one-half years.

Emerick is married to lifetime Hereford resident Sylvia Phipps and they have two children 11-year-old Kim, and eight-year-old Wendy.

DPS Will Conduct A Public Meeting

The State Department of Highways and Public Transportation will conduct a public meeting on August 10, 1981, at 7:30 p.m. in the Friona Community Center located on State Highway 214 north of Friona for the purpose of discussing the construction of U.S. 60 in Parmer and Castro Counties from 2.0 miles northeast of Texas-New Mexico State Line to Castro-Deaf Smith County Line.

This proposed improvement will consist of the construction of two additional lanes to form a four-lane divided facility with the exception of those sections through the towns of Bovina and Friona which have recently been reconstructed.

Maps and other drawings showing the proposed location and geometric design will be displayed at the public meeting and together with environmental studies and any other available information about the proposed project on file and available for

Lawmakers Pass $250,000 Bill

AUSTIN - Lawmakers of the 67th Texas Legislature turned their attention to the past as well as the future of the Lone Star State, and passed a bill creating a $250,000 state fund to aid qualified historic preservation projects.

The State of Texas has long been a national leader in heritage conservation programs, but this is the first time state funds have been allocated for a preservation grants program. And in light of reduced federal preservation assistance, the Texas program is again likely to be a pioneer in this field of state cultural resource conservation.

The Texas program authorizes the Texas Historical Commission to make matching grants to nonprofit and local governmental entities for the preservation of significant historic sites and structures.

Detailed grant guidelines have been formulated to assure that state monies will be distributed to the most feasible preservation projects in Texas. Key elements of the guidelines are that every state dollar granted must be matched by two dollars cash from other sources; that applications and expenditures of fund awards conform to a prescribed timetable; and that project properties meet specific criteria to determine historical significance.

To be eligible for grant assistance a property must: 1) be included in the National Register of Historic Places; or 2) be designated as a Recorded Texas Historic Landmark; or 3) be determined by the THC to be eligible for inclusion in the Register or for Landmark designation. In addition, certain properties in none of these categories may be specifically designated by the THC to be worthy of preservation funding, such as structures recorded as State Archeological Landmarks.

Preservation grants shall be made only to nonprofit organizations and local political subdivisions of the state. Deadline for 1981 grant applications is Sept. 15. Grants will be awarded in October, and recipients must spend their funds by July, 1982. All grant allocations will be at least $2,500 but not more than $50,000.

Detailed grant guidelines and application forms are available from the Texas Historical Commission, P.O. Box 12276, Austin, TX. 78711.

Team Honored

The Hereford Bronco League All Stars capped the season last night with an ice cream party at the community center after wet weather cancelled a planned swimming party. The players presented their coaches with plaques, and in turn received trophies. The team had a 2-2 record in the sectional tournament in Everman, placing second overall. Team members included (front l to r) Mark Artho, Ross Tor-

Preseason Opener

Dallas Cowboys Start With Rookies Against Green Bay

THOUSAND OAKS, Calif. (AP) — Saturday night's preseason opener against the Green Bay Packers will be a crucial game for many of the rookies still with the Dallas Cowboys, coach Tom Landry says.

"We'll start our starters, but we'll skip over our backup veterans to look at rookies in this game," Landry said. It's not that the rookies are better than the backup veterans, it's just that we've got to look at them."

"It's a very crucial game for the rookies because, after this one, it's just harder and harder to get people into games. There are too many veterans who need the work," Landry said.

Offensively, Landry said he and his staff will be looking very closely at tackle Howard

The Cowboys had a team meeting Thursday morning. Richards, the No. 1 draft choice, guard Glen Titensor, the No. 2 draft pick, free agent tackle Steve Wright and wide receivers Mike Wilson and Nate Lundy, the No. 9 and No. 12 draft picks, respectively.

No. 2 pick Doug Donley, a wide receiver who made the strongest impression early in camp, will not play because of a groin pull.

On defense Landry will be looking at even more rookies. He said he will be watching free agent defensive end Ron Spears, middle linebacker and No. 5 draft pick Danny Spradlin, outside linebacker and No. 4 pick Scott Pelluer and free agent outside linebacker Angelo King.

At cornerback, Landry wants to see free agent Ever- son Walls plus draftees Ron Fellows and Ken Miller, both 7th-round picks. Free agent safety Mike Downs also bears close watching, Landry said.

Of the returning starters, only wide receiver Tony Hill (hamstring), fullback Robert Newhouse (hamstring) and center John Fitzgerald (thigh) will not open against the Packers.

Landry said Hill and Newhouse could play, but they will be replaced by Butch Johnson, Ron Springs and Robert Shaw.

Landry said quarterback Danny White will split the game with backup Glen Cerano, but said he was not sure if he would alternate them by halves or quarters.

and an afternoon practice. The team leaves for Dallas Friday morning and will hold a brief workout at Texas Stadium Friday evening.

Simmons Named To His First American League Squad

NEW YORK (AP) — Ted Simmons, three times an All-Star in the National League with the St. Louis Cardinals, has been named to his first American League All-Star squad, Manager Jim Frey has announced.

On Thursday, Frey named 12 reserve players to his squad to supplement the contingent of All-Stars elected in fan balloting. Along with Simmons, now of Milwaukee, Frey named Bo Diaz of the host Cleveland Indians as the backup for catcher Carlton Fisk of the Chicago White Sox, who will start for the AL. It will be Diaz's first time on an All-Star team.

The AL will square off against the National League Sunday night in Cleveland Stadium as the major league baseball season resumes after a seven-week strike. The AL will be seeking to snap a nine-game losing streak. The AL has not won since 1971 at Detroit, and the NL leads the series 32-18. One game ended in a tie.

Simmons was hitting only .207 when the season was interrupted on June 12, but he had 30 RBI, six of them game winners, and nine home runs. Diaz was hitting .356.

Frey also named six outfielders to back up starters Ken Singleton of Baltimore and Reggie Jackson and Dave Winfield of the New York Yankees.

They were Gorman Thomas of the Milwaukee Brewers, who leads the major leagues with 15 home runs; Boston's Dwight Evans, the league's leading hitter with a .341 average; Fred Lynn of California (.274); Tony Armas of Oakland (.289); Tom Paciorek of Seattle (.328), and Al Oliver of Texas (.322).

Like Simmons, Oliver has been an All-Star in both leagues. He made the NL squad three times when he played with Pittsburgh and will be appearing for the second time as a Ranger.

The infield reserves were first baseman Eddie Murray of Baltimore (.259), second baseman Frank White of Kansas City (.271), shortstop Rick Burleson of California (.299) and third baseman Buddy Bell of Texas (.293).

The infielders elected by the fans were Rod Carew of California at first base, Willie Randolph of the Yankees at second, George Brett of Kansas City at third and Bucky Dent of the Yankees at shortstop. Four Yankees were elected to the starting lineup.

The reserves and starters join a 10-man pitching staff named earlier by Frey that includes the league's two top winners, Detroit's Jack Morris and Ken Forsch of California, each 9-3.

The other AL pitchers were Mike Norris of Oakland (8-3), Dave Stieb of Toronto (4-7), Baltimore's Scott McGregor (6-2), Britt Burns of the Chicago White Sox (6-2), Len Barker of Cleveland (5-3), Rich Gossage of the Yankees (2-1, 17 saves), Doug Corbett of Minnesota (2-2, 7 saves) and Milwaukee's Rollie Fingers (1-2, 12 saves).

Ten of the AL players will be making their All-Star debuts — Diaz, Paciorek, Armas, Thomas, Barker, Burns, Corbett, McGregor, Norris and Morris.

The Yankees head the AL with five representatives, followed by four from California and three apiece from Baltimore and Milwaukee.

Devision Champs Split

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — Managers of Texas' two major league baseball teams had the same reaction to Thursday's vote to split the season for deciding division championships, but their enthusiasm levels were markedly different.

Owners voted that teams in first place when the players' strike began June 12 would be declared first-half division champions. A second half begins Monday, with the second-half champion playing the first-half winner in a post-season playoff.

When the strike began, the Texas Rangers were 1½ games behind Oakland in the American League West, while the Houston Astros trailed the Los Angeles Dodgers by eight games in the National League West. Texas manager Don Zimmer, informed of the playoff decision, said simply, "Good."

But Houston skipper Bill Virdon said, "I think that's the only fair way to do it. I'm glad they voted that way."

Zimmer had said he favored a different format, offered by Rangers executive vice president Eddie Robinson, rather than handing Oakland a half-season title.

"But if we hadn't blown a three-run lead in our last game before the strike (a 6-3 Milwaukee victory), we'd have been leading Oakland on percentage points and you can bet I would have voted for this plan."

However, Zimmer declined an invitation to discuss his complaints with the system that was adopted.

"We'll just have to win the second half. What else can we do about it?"

Virdon, whose team was given new championship life by the vote, said the split-season would generate renewed enthusiasm for the game.

"Now all the clubs have an opportunity, and that's the way it should be."

Head Coach Biles Modest After Oilers First Win

HOUSTON (AP) — Rookie head coach Ed Biles went to great pains to be modest after his Houston Oilers won the first game since former coach Bum Phillips was fired last winter.

"It was good to win the first game, but I really didn't think that much about this being the first win for me personally," said Biles, whose Oilers beat the Philadelphia Eagles 13-10 in a National Football League exhibition game Thursday night.

"This is not 'Ed Biles' football team. This is the Houston Oilers and there were over 60 guys out there playing hard to win," he said.

He also praised new quarterback Gifford Nielson, who was pressed into service as the club's No. 1 quarterback after veteran Kenny Stabler surprised team officials and announced his retirement after summer training camp had opened.

But it was a couple of old hands — Earl Campbell and Tony Fritsch — who scored most of the points for Houston.

Campbell, who sat out the second half, scored a touchdown from four yards out on the Oilers' first possession, and Fritsch kicked a 41-yard field goal in the third quarter that broke a 10-10 tie and put the Oilers out front to stay.

Philadelphia unveiled a new shotgun formation which produced the Eagles' only touchdown, a 10-yard pass from Ron Jaworski to Alvin Hooks near the end of the first half.

The two teams earlier traded field goals — a 35-yard kick by Bill Capece of Houston and a 33-yard boot by Tony Franklin of the Eagles.

The Eagles' new shotgun was slow to get on track. Jaworski threw four incomplete passes and got sacked once in his first six tries.

But on the next two plays he scrambled 33 yards and threw the touchdown pass.

"(Guy) Morris did a good job with the snaps for the first time out," said Eagles Coach Dick Vermeil. He said he was generally pleased with the new formation, which he said he devised because of the success Dallas and Buffalo have had with it.

Nielson completed 15 of 25 passes for 156 yards, but quarterbacks on both clubs had trouble dodging defenders. Houston suffered five sacks and Philadelphia got caught for four.

Oilers veteran defensive end Elvin Bethea, who led the charge on one sack, said it felt great to win even though it was only exhibition.

"I believe if you can win the preseason games it will carry over to our regular season," he said. "It felt great to get out there."

Zimmer Still Not Sure About Position

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — Major league baseball returned to Texas with free admission and free parking Thursday night.

And Don Zimmer climbed back into uniform without full freedom of mind.

Zimmer still hasn't been told whether he will be retained as the Texas Rangers' manager next year.

There has been no word on his 1982 status although the Rangers finished just a game and a half behind Oakland before the strike.

In fact, if the Rangers hadn't blown a 3-0 lead to Milwaukee in their final game they would have finished percentage points ahead of the A's.

"It doesn't bother me but I would like to know by the middle of September if they want me," said Zimmer shortly before his Rangers took the field against the Houston Astros in an exhibition game.

Zimmer came to the Rangers after seven years with the Boston Red Sox on a make-good, one-year contract.

"I had to wait until November last year and the Rangers' job was the only one open," he said. "All my chips were on the table with them."

Zimmer said a new contract hasn't even been discussed with club vice president Eddie Robinson.

"If it (rehiring) doesn't happen by the middle of September then I would ask Eddie personally what my status will be," he said. "The sooner you know the better chance you have of getting a job somewhere."

Tips For Borrowers Wanting A Tax Deduction

WASHINGTON (AP) — Those who borrow money — and want to get an income tax deduction for the interest on it — could pick up a couple of tips from a tax court ruling handed down this week in a case concerning a Dallas man.

First, if you borrow money, don't let the lender deduct the interest charges from the principal.

Second, if you borrow money to pay for the interest on a previous loan, get the second loan at a different place. In a ruling made public Thursday, the U.S. Tax Court said money has to be under a person's "unrestricted control" before he can argue that he "paid" the interest to a lender.

If the amount of the interest is simply withheld from the principal at the time a loan is granted; or if a loan is granted in such a way that the lender never loses control of his funds, the IRS can rightfully conclude that interest charges were never "paid," the tax court ruled.

The decision was announced in an appeal brought by H.L. Franklin of Dallas, who retired in December 1979 as chief executive officer of Lone Star Co., a wholesale alcoholic beverage company with branches in several Texas cities.

Franklin took out loans totaling $337,000 in 1973 and 1974 to pay the interest on a $2.2 million loan he obtained in 1972 to comply with a divorce settlement.

But when he claimed a deduction of $120,124.99 on his 1973 income tax return and a deduction of $217,491.27 on his 1974 return, the IRS disagreed and increased his taxable income by that amount for the two years.

Franklin took out his loan of $2,225,000 on March 9, 1972, from Capitol National Bank of Austin, Texas, putting up as collateral, 8,000 shares of Lone Star Co., valued at $3,144,400 or $393.05 per share.

After deposited the money in an account at the bank, he wrote a check for $1,869,289.67 to his wife, Camille Fryar Franklin, in compliance with the property settlement agreed to in their divorce, to be granted the following day.

Franklin renewed the $2.2 million loan on March 9, 1973 and March 9, 1974, each time taking out other loans at the bank to pay the exact amount of interest due.

In 1973, the bank gave Franklin $120,124.99 and he turned around and wrote a check to the bank for that amount. In 1974, no money was exchanged at all, with the bank merely granting him a loan for $217,491.27 and applying it to the interest due.

The court said the 1973 interest transaction falls within a principle established in the Rubnitz vs. Commissioner, supra case, which said:

"It has been consistently held that a cash basis borrower has not paid interest when the loan transaction is structured so that a loan fee is 'withheld' by the lender from what is called the principal amount of the loan and only the supposed principal amount minus the loan fee is actually made available for the borrowing taxpayer's use."

The court held that in taking out subsequent loans at the same bank, and using the funds to pay interest on the earlier note, Franklin never had the unrestricted control over his funds needed to satisfy the requirements for a cash "payment" needed to get a tax deduction.

"The payment required to secure a deduction is the payment of cash or its equivalent. The giving of a taxpayer's note is not the equivalent of cash, but only a promise to pay," the tax court said.

"When a taxpayer borrows money from a lender to pay interest due to that same lender, deductibility turns on whether the taxpayer exercises unrestricted control over the borrowed money."

On the other hand, the court said, "interest paid to one lender by a cash basis taxpayer with funds borrowed from a separate lender is deductible," the tax court said.

On March 10, 1975, Franklin borrowed $2,850,000 from the Mercantile National Bank at Dallas on a 91-day note and used the money to pay the $2,847,052.59 — including $259,481.33 in interest — then due Capitol National Bank.

Franklin was able to claim the interest as a deduction in 1975 but not for the earlier years instead.

After giving Franklin the original loan, Capitol National Bank sold portions of it to other Texas banks. Franklin later argued that since portions of his second and third loans were disbursed to those other banks, the interest that went to them should be considered deductible.

The tax court disagreed, saying whatever transactions the bank had with other banks was its own concern and not a matter at issue in his case.

Senators Approve Property Tax Changes That Might Not Help

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Senators have approved property tax changes that some claim would shift a greater burden to homeowners and could make the funding of public schools even more difficult.

The Senate overhaul of the 1979 Property Tax Code was returned to the House with amendments on a 23-4 vote Thursday.

One change that possibly threatens 6½ months of legislative work would wipe out property taxes on oil and gas shipped into Texas for temporary storage.

Sen. Grant Jones, D-Abilene, said the amendment could have a "significant impact" on school revenue, especially in Harris, Jefferson and other counties with tank farms and petrochemical complexes.

"This will not be helpful to most taxpayers across the state of Texas," said Jones.

The sponsor of the proposal, Sen. Tati Santiesteban, D-El Paso, admitted he had no idea how much tax money the amendment might cost school districts, and he said he knew of no one who had asked for it.

Sen. Carlos Truan, D-Corpus Christi, called the proposal "the major oil company amendment," and Jones said, "Its impact will be unrealistically tough on a number of (taxing) entities." Jones also said an amendment that would extend the time for collecting signatures to roll back property tax increases "could throw a monkey wrench" into funding of public schools.

The tax code by Rep. Wayne Peveto, D-Orange, requires property taxes to be levied on full market value of real estate and income-producing personal property, as determined by countywide appraisal districts after Jan. 1, 1982.

The bill cleared the House 121-20 on Monday, but the House must vote on the proposal again because of the Senate amendments.

Jones said the only break school districts got in Senate debate was the adoption of an amendment 14-13 that would raise from 5 percent to 8 percent the tax increase needed to trigger a rollback election.

"A vote for this amendment is a vote for a stronger school system," said Sen. Ray Farabee, D-Wichita Falls. He said the 8 percent trigger would allow school districts to make up for inflation and federal spending cuts in education without facing an election that could block the increased expenditures.

A change in the 1979 law raises from five to 20 acres the amount of land on which a person may claim a homestead exemption.

Farm and ranch improvements would be exempt from property taxes.

The bill says elderly and disabled taxpayers need apply only once, instead of each year, for special homestead exemptions.

Local taxing units would be required to advertise future property tax increases in the newspaper only if they would exceed 3 percent.

The bill offers two options for delay.

Governing bodies of two-thirds of the taxing units in a county could postpone the start of the single-appraisal system for a year or phase it in over a three-year period ending in 1985.

On Santiesteban's amendment, Truan asked, "What is there in the public interest?" "Equality and fairness," said Santiesteban. "I just want to make one major corporation equal to another major corporation."

Goods, wares, ores — other than oil, gas and other petroleum products — and merchandise in Texas in interstate commerce for less than six months already are exempt from taxes.

The amendment was adopted 17-11.

Senators voted to remove a requirement that taxes could not be rolled back unless 15 percent of the qualified voters turned out. They also reduced from 15 percent to 10 percent the number of voters who must sign a petition for a rollback election and expanded from 60 days to 90 days the time to collect the signatures.

Jones said the additional time for collecting signatures would only delay the completion of tax rolls and "would make it extremely difficult to collect taxes."

"Several amendments were put in today that were poorly advised," said Jones.

The bill, however, gives taxpayers a better chance of winning appeals from appraisals they think are unfairly high.

Studies required by the bill — called ratio studies — would give Texans a better idea whether their property was over-appraised and provide evidence they could use in their appeals.

Also in the bill is a new provision designed to avoid situations, such as those that arose near Seguin last year, where agricultural land came out with a taxable value of zero.

The bill says estimates of income to rural land may not be less than half what the land would bring in rent.

The official state flower of Vermont is the red clover.

Tax-Deferred Accounts For Retirees Without Plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — Beginning next January, all working Americans will be allowed to open up a personal tax-deferred retirement account — an investment opportunity now set aside only for those without an on-the-job pension plan.

Under the new tax law, all 99 million working Americans could set up an Individual Retirement Account (IRA) or a comparable Keogh plan if they are self-employed.

The measure, approved by Congress and awaiting President Reagan's signature, is intended to stimulate savings and reduce dependence on the ailing Social Security system.

Under current law, only people without group pension plans can open an IRA. But starting next Jan. 1, an estimated 45 million Americans covered by pension plans can start individual accounts, too, and those already eligible will be able to put more away each year without paying taxes on the money until it is withdrawn.

A major reason for the change is to reverse a sharp decline in the nation's savings rate, one of the principal goals of Reagan's economic program.

However, it is not just coincidence that incentives to set up individual pension plans are being increased at a time when the administration is pushing to reduce future Social Security benefits, both to shore up the financially troubled system and to achieve budget savings.

"The primary reason (for the legislation) is to encourage people to make provisions for their own retirement income because we don't want to continue the burden on Social Security," said Norman B. Ture, undersecretary of the treasury for tax policy.

Congress, which is reluctant to enter the political maelstrom created by the administration's proposed Social Security cuts, appeared to act more out of concern for increasing personal savings so that more money would be available for investment and interest rates would come down. But the desire to reduce future pensioners' reliance on Social Security was also a consideration, congressional aides report.

Currently, those eligible to set up an IRA can place no more than 15 percent of their income in an account, up to $1,500 a year. The new law would let anyone deposit all of his or her income in an IRA, up to $2,000 a year.

A married couple with both spouses working can set aside up to $4,000 a year, providing each has a separate account with no more than $2,000 a year added. A couple with one working spouse can set aside up to $2,250 a year divided between two accounts, up from $1,750 under current law.

The broadened incentives for retirement plans will cost the Treasury an estimated $9.1 billion in lost revenue through 1986.

Tax-deferred pension plans, which first came into existence in 1975, have not been very popular with the public, but the administration hopes the new incentives will change that.

Clements Opposes Reagan Immigration Reform Plan

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Gov. Bill Clements says President Reagan's immigration reform proposals are "unrealistic" and he will oppose them if presented to Congress in their present form.

"This plan is no way meets what the governors of the border states have been talking about," Clements told a Capitol news conference Thursday.

Later, in a Dallas speech, Clements said he would oppose the plan unless it is "modified substantially."

"Our nation's immigration policy should place its primary emphasis on these temporary workers," Clements told a national convention of the American G.I. Forum in Dallas. "The Justice Department's proposal to admit only 50,000 a year (as guest workers) is unrealistic and is doomed to failure because it failed to deal with the other 99 percent of the three to six million workers now in this country." Clements also said he had talked to U.S. Attorney William French Smith about the shipment of 100 Haitian refugees to Big Spring and French told him the move was a "mistake."

"He said it was a temporary measure and they would be sent back to Florida," Clements said.

"I want no Haitian refugees in Texas. We have enough refugees now plus a lot of undocumented workers," he told reporters.

The immigration plan, which still has to be drawn up in a form to be presented to Congress, calls for an experiment in which 50,000 guest workers would be admitted annually to the United States to work for nine to 12 months then return to Mexico. It also calls for employers to be fined $500 to $1,000 for knowingly hiring illegal aliens.

Clements said the U.S. attorney general estimated there are about 600,000 illegal aliens in Texas although other sources say there are about 3 million.

"Even if we (Texas) got all the 50,000 guest workers, which we won't, that leaves a 550,000 deficit in illegal aliens in Texas alone," Clements said.

"Under the Justice Department's proposal, obviously there will still be hundreds of thousands of illegal Mexican aliens living underground in our society," he told his Dallas audience. "The illegal sub-class would continue to exist, and this is wrong. Further, their employers would be designated as lawbreakers. My proposal would require all employers of illegal aliens to pay a relocation fee to return the workers to their home."

Clements said the immigration proposals definitely would be on the agenda of the Oct. 5-6 El Paso meeting of U.S. and Mexico border governors.

Clements said he had long advocated a guest worker program "that gives legal status to those Mexican workers who come to the United States. Under such a program these workers would be issued a guest worker visa, and, with this visa, the worker would be entitled to full protection of our laws, medical care and other municipal services."

Blacks Praise Redistricting Plan

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — A congressional redistricting plan that would deny Republicans any gains in the Texas delegation while drawing a minority district in Dallas has won the endorsement of a group of Dallas black leaders.

The plan was expected to get a final vote in the House redistricting committee today, which would set up floor action in the House on Saturday.

Meanwhile, the leader of the House Democratic Caucus sought a way to eliminate Congressman Martin Frost's objections to his proposed district and, thereby, gain the support of another senator for the loyalist Democrat redistricting plan.

Rep. Bob Bush, D-Sherman, spent most of the afternoon with Frost in the office of Sen. Oscar Mauzy, D-Dallas, whose district lies mostly within Frost's congressional district.

Bush said earlier that "15½ senators" had expressed support for the Democrat plan, with Mauzy obviously the one who was halfhearted because of Frost's objections.

Sixteen senators are a majority, and Bush hopes to gain leverage in the House by demonstrating Senate support for the loyalist Democrat remap.

Bush said Frost's problems were "minor" and involved only a couple of census tracts.

Texas will have 27 United States representatives in the next Congress, three more than now, because of population growth shown by the 1980 census.

The hardcore Democrats' plan probably would result in the election of 22 Democrats and five Republicans, the same number the GOP has now.

Gov. Bill Clements said Thursday he would veto the plan because it divides Dallas County among five districts and takes Ellis and Navarro counties from Congressman Phil Gramm and gives them to Frost.

He contended the diehard Democrats were "out to get" Gramm, a former Texas A&M professor who helped President Reagan win congressional approval of federal budget cuts.

ASTIGMATISM

HEALTH

Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

Acne not limited to teens

DEAR DR. LAMB - I am 31 years old and have been having more trouble with blemishes the last couple of years than when I was a teen-ager. A dermatologist I consulted for a year gave me pills and some cream for my face. After I went off the pills it started all over again. I can't afford to keep seeing a specialist and I don't want to be on pills all the time.

I break out with big red bumps on both sides of my face and I also have a lot of blackheads. I wash my face twice a day and wash my hair every other day. Is it possible to have dry and oily skin at the same time? My forehead and just below my eyes is real flaky.

DEAR READER - You don't have to be a teen-ager to have acne; that is just when it usually begins. I do think that anyone who has persistent acne problems should see a doctor. In severe cases, treatment can prevent scarring and permanent blemishes.

There are three main aspects of treatment - drying up oily skin, promoting peeling to open pores to promote drainage and use of antibiotics to prevent bacterial action that leads to the red inflamed pustules.

You can't wash away blackheads. They are below the surface of the skin and are not dirt, but oily plugs of sebum formed by your skin glands. Soaking with warm water and gentle rubbing with a warm wet wash cloth helps.

Vitamin A acid (not vitamin A pills) is a good peeling agent for the skin (tretinoin, Retin-A). I prefer the gel product as opposed to the cream to avoid oily problems. It is a prescription item that your family doctor can provide. However, you should know that peeling agents and antibiotics used in acne treatment increase your sensitivity to the sun. You can use a liquid sun screen containing PABA in the mornings to help you. Don't use a cream if you have acne problems.

DEAR DR. LAMB - I am a 12-year-old girl and I read a letter to you about how much milk you need. My mother always says the same thing you said, that you need three glasses of milk a day. When I was younger I was fussy about everything. Now my only problem is milk. I hate it! My mother makes fresh yogurt every day. Would it be OK if I had four cups of yogurt every day instead of milk? She says I need the calcium for growth. Is it too late for me to benefit from it and have a healthy life?

DEAR READER - No, it is seldom too late to get some benefits from improved health habits. Yes, you can use the yogurt as a substitute for milk. The important point is to get enough good quality protein and enough calcium in your diet. The calcium supports your bone growth and at your age you are probably still growing. You will get about the same amount of calcium from your yogurt as you would from milk.

DEAR DR. LAMB - What are the chances of a woman becoming pregnant during her menstrual period? Doctors differ on this. What is your opinion?

DEAR READER - Very unlikely but not impossible. Ovulation occurs 14 days before the onset of menstruation, plus or minus a couple of days. If a woman were grossly irregular, it might happen. More often there is some midcycle bleeding in a few women. This may be caused by a temporary dip in the amount of estrogen being formed. Such midcycle bleeding is NOT menstruation and may occur near the time of ovulation. In that case a woman might get pregnant because she mistook midcycle bleeding for her menstrual period. In general, during the menstrual cycle is the one time that a woman is least likely to get pregnant.
