IF JAPAN TAKES PORT ARTHUR SHE CANNOT CARRY OFF PRIZE

Too Much Strength to the Yellow Race Would Be a Permanent Danger to Germany's Holdings in North China and Ambitions in Asia Minor.

NO AGREEMENT IS IN EXISTENCE

The Kaiser Simply Wants to Keep the Czar Busy So as to Prevent Any Alliance With France Which Would Menace the Interests of the Fatherland—Defeat of the Russian Bear Would Cause Him to Fall Back on Balkan States

CHICAGO, June 18.—Commenting on the attitude of Germany toward the Far Eastern situation, a correspondent of the Daily News sends the following special cablegram:

HANOVER, June 18.—"Japan might just as well fight on the hills of the moon as at Port Arthur. It will do her no good if the kaiser does not permit her to carry off the prize," was the declaration to the Daily News correspondent today by a financial magnate close to the Berlin government, whom also the kaiser frequently consults with regard to the commercial and shipping policy of Germany abroad.

"No specific agreement exists between Russia and Germany relatives to the war, but the policy of the fatherland is fully dictated by Germany's colonial possession in North China, its relations to France and its ambitions in Asia Minor. The kaiser believes that Japanese victory would strengthen the influence of the yellow race on the policies of the countries interested in the Far East, create a permanent danger to Germany's ninety-nine years' leasehold of Kai Chow and be the beginning of Japans' rule over the Chinese sea at the expense of Germany's vast shipping interests there.

"Apart from this Germany's own safety leaves it no choice as to which country it must support in the war. France is waiting for revenge and the kaiser is persuaded that if Russia were not occupied in the Far East, France would attempt to enlist the aid of its ally against the Fatherland. Therefore his majesty is determined in order to keep Russia busy in East Asia, to preserve something for her to reconstruct. He holds that if the czar were dispossessed by the Japanese he would fall back on the Balkan states or begin to intrigue in Central Asia, Armenia or Asia Minor, whereas, if he were tied to a different task in the Far East he would leave Germany free to mature its plans, build up a navy and, above all, fortify his position in Asia Minor a country which the Bagdad Railway will traverse to the Persian Gulf. Upon that section of Asia Germany has fixed its attention and intends to win the prize.

"Although it is true that no hard and fast agreement exists between Russia and Germany, the matter has been thoroughly discussed by the higher officials. Financial and shipping magnates in the confidence of the kaiser have been advised regarding the official attitude toward Russia, in order that they may, first of all, use their influence in fostering popular sentiment in favor of that country and then lay their plans early for gaining the coveted territory in Western Asia."

Herein is the explanation of the remarkable suppression of pro-Japanese sentiment so manifest during the first weeks of the war.

BETTER EDUCATION FOR THE MASSES

LONDON, June 18.—Russia, close observers believe, is hopeful of great changes, although many who are familiar with the country say these changes will come so slowly as to make their promoters fear they may never come at all.

The first sign is a movement in high quarters, advocated by the Nivoe Vremya, "for better education of the masses." It is seen that the Japanese soldiers are educated, while the Russians in the ranks are for the most part illiterate. But education is a slow affair and parliamentary institutions can not be expected until some progress has been made in it. Then when political reforms come they are not likely to be on western lines, but a revival of ancient Russian institutions. One of these is the States General. This was for nobles, the ecclesiasts and the richer merchants. Its last act of power was in 1730, when it called the Empress Anne to the throne. Later Anne "suspended" it and it has remained suspended to this day. Possibly Nicholas will regard the present national emergency great enought to warrant calling it together again.

If a new States General should resume affairs where the last left off it might revive the following proposal for legislation, which was submitted to the Empress Anne:

First—The emperor shall only govern according to legislation and the supreme council.

Second—Neither war shall be declared nor peace be concluded without the advice and approbation of the senate.

Third—No taxes to be imposed or important offices conferred without the authority of the senate.

Fourth—Provision for fair trial of noblemen.

Sixth—The crown lands not to be alienated or sold except by the advice or consent of the senate.

Seventh—That the czar should neither marry or approach the subject without the approval of the senate.

Legislation along this line would put the authority in the hands of the higher officials. The senate present still exists, but mainly as an honorary body, to which superannuated statesmen may gracefully retire. There is no word of universal suffrage or anything of that kind.

LOSS OF TRANSPORTS WAS BY NEGLIGENCE

TOKIO, June 18.—There is a widespread tendency throughout the country to blame the naval authorities for not taking precautions to protect the transports. The national proverb, "Yudan Tai Teki," (negligence is a great enemy) is frequently quotted.

The fighting which took place in the narrow, mountainous districts about Telissu between Generals Nodzu and Sakelberg's armies was momentous. Had the Russians defeated the Japanese they would probably have been able to effect the desired relief of the Kin Chou peninsula. The actual result is most disastrous for the Russians.

Japan's second domestic loan of 100,000,000 yen ($50,000,000) has been oversubscribed three times, the total subscriptions amounting to 21,000,000 yen ($160,500,000). This evidence of the country's remarkable finances resources is very gratifying to the authorities.

ITALIANS COMING TO TEXAS COLONY

To the Southern Pacific railway company is due the credit for much of the immigration to Texas during the past few years. Other lines, however, have done considerable in the way of settling the lands in the state, particularly in West, Southeast and Southwest Texas.

It was ascertained in Fort Worth yesterday that the Rock Island is probably behind a big colonization scheme about to be sprung. From what could be learned the Rock Island is to colonize a party of 10,000 families of Italians direct from the old country somewhere in Southwest Texas, the exact location not being given by The Telegram's informant.

The information of this colonization proposition came in a message received yesterday from a representative of the White Star line, New York.

ENFORCING SEIGE OF PORT ARTHUR

ROME, June 18.—The minister of marine has received a telegram from the Italian consul at Tien Tsin which states that the Japanese have renewed the seige of Port Arthur with great vigor, both from sea and land. The entrance to the harbor is again partially closed, but the Russians are destroying the hulks sunk in there with heavy explosives and it is claimed, expect to be able to clear the passage for their largest ships within a few days. Several of the largest of the Japanese armored ships are taking turns in enforcing the blockade and the junk trade with the mainland is entirely cut off.

MORE MASSACRES BY THE ARMENIANS

CONSTANTINOPLE, June 18.—Further details have been received here of the massacres of Armenians by Turks, which prove conclusively that the earlier estimates that 3,000 had been killed are in no way an exaggeration. The Armenian patriarch here states that in order to destroy the traces of their bloody work the Turks piled the bodies in heaps and burned them, while others were thrown in the river. Hundreds of young girls were ravished and then disemboweled and chopped to pieces. Troops have been sent to the district by order of the Sultan and the Vali of Bitalis has issued a proclamation directing all inhabitants who have taken refuge in the hills to return to their homes promising them protection.

MINERS DID NOT ORDER A STRIKE

SCRANTON, Pa., June 18.—Contrary to expectations, the miners of the Ontario and Western company, whose representatives, two from each of the thirteen mines, held a convention in this city, did not declare a strike. Instead they referred their grievances to a district convention, which will be held on July 11. The grievance is the refusal of the company to withhold from the pay of the men the amounts necessary for the salary of the check docking bosses without formal assignments being made.

The remains of Colonel R. J. Hinton, one of the Ossowatomie John Brown's close friends and commander of the first colored regiment raised during the Civil war, have arrived at Washington from London and been interred at Arlington.

PARKER MEN WILL BE IN THE SADDLE

Forecast of Convention Which Is to Be Held This Week in San Antonio

A SLATE IS SUGGESTED

Hearst Men Not for Instructed Delegation, But Does Not Suit Parker's Friends

DALLAS, Texas, June 18.—The indications are that the Parker men can control the San Antonio convention next Tuesday, if they so desire, both for instructions for Judge Parker and for a full state delegation of his partisans. It is probable that instructions will be voted for Judge Parker but it is not by any means certain that an out-and-out Parker slate will be put through for delegates at large. If the Hearst men had been able to win a sufficient number of delegates to control the state convention they would have sent a full list of Hearst delegates at large to St. Louis and they probably would have been Governor Hogg of Columbia, R. M. Finley of Austin, John M. Duncan of Tyler, E. G. Senter or W. A. Shaw of Dallas with the four alternates made up from other prominent Hearst leaders.

District delegates from the sixteen congressional districts were never forecasted by the Hearst managers during the campaign, and it is, therefore, impossible to ascertain who the district delegates would likely have been.

There is a large contingent of influential democrats going to the convention who are opposed to both Hearst and Parker. This is notably the case in the Dallas county delegation, where such conspicuous men as M. M. Crane, N. W. Finley and W. H. Clark are opposed to instructions and will strive at San Antonio to have a course pursued that shall not leave the dissension in the party ranks after the convention shall have done its work and adjourned.

This spirit will probably actuate the Parker majority to adopt a policy in the selection of delegates at large that shall be conciliatory and tend to preserve party harmony.

THE PARKER SLATE

In order to make such a condition possible the following "slate" has, in the last week, been seriously canvassed from which to select the eight delegates to the national convention: United States Senators J. W. Bailey and C. A. Culberson, Judge John H. Reagan, State Chairman James B. Wells, ex-Governors Joseph D. Sayers and James S. Hogg, Judge Edward Gray and Judge Howard Templeton.

It is understood that no alternate will be elected, according to the Parker men's present plans.

Difficulty may be experienced in shaping up the list of delegates at large from the fact that former Congressman Tom Ball of Houston and T. D. Cobb of San Antonio are anxious to have places made for them on the delegation. There seems to be more aspirants than there are positions.

The more radical of the Parker men balk stubbornly at these conciliatory plans as above outlined. They insist that none but out-and-out Parker men of the most active class be honored with convention positions at San Antonio and with delegate commissions to St. Louis. They have prepared slates which call either for former Governor Joseph D. Sayers of Austin as temporary chairman of the state convention, and C. L. Potter of Gainesville as permanent chairman, or for Clarence Ousley of Fort Worth and Judge George Clark of Waco for these respective honors. For delegates at large they favor J. W. Bailey C. A. Culberson, J. H. Reagan, J. B. Wells, E. B. Perkins, Judge Howard Templeton, T. H. Ball and either T. D. Cobb of San Antonio or Edward Gray of Dallas as the eighth man. For electors at large they present the names of L. A. Clark of Greenville and R. C. Duff of Beaumont. This slate may be accepted at San Antonio in its entirety; it will surely go through in part, at least.

WEATHER FORECAST

Oklahoma and Arkansas—Showers and cooler Sunday; Monday, fair.

Some of the names may be shifted about from positions in the state convention to delegates to St. Louis or vice versa.

HOSTILITY TO HEARST MEN

The elements favoring these last castings of the Parker honors, declare uncompromising hostility to Crane, Finley, Hogg, Duncan, Shaw, Senter and other uncompromising anti-Parker men, just as the ultra Hearst men, during the recent campaign, took for their motto: "Straight-out Hearst men for everything." These ultra Parker men hesitate about bestowing any honors upon Judge George Clark, fearing a re-opening of the old bitter Hogg-Clark feeling and also because of the bitter opposition Judge Clark has always exercised toward William Jennings Bryan; but it looks as if Judge Clark will be given something at San Antonio.

If Judge Gray of Dallas does not get on the list of delegates at large his friends will make an attempt to secure his election as a delegate from the Fifth district. Other aspirants are W. H. Clark, N. W. Finley and M. M. Crane, all of Dallas.

"NO INSTRUCTION" MEN

If it so happens that the contingent in the convention favoring an uninstructed delegation to St. Louis should be able to have its policy adopted then the above slate would have to be materially changed.

The men favoring no instructions would very materially expect recognition on the delegation. M. M. Crane and N. W. Finley would be strong bidders for a place and, of course, it would be desirable to keep Governor Hogg on the delegation to preserve the appearance of harmony. Who, in the slate above outlined, would suffer in the "dropping-out" process, it would be rashness to predict.

The candidates in the fifth district would depend largely on the possible changes noted above. At present the Parker men figure that Dallas and Bosque counties should be honored with delegates for the reason that Hill county now has a candidate for attorney general and Ellis county's congressman, Jack Beall, wants to be re-elected. Rockwall county's three votes are not considered powerful enough to secure for it enough inflence to capture a delegate. The same argument could be turned against Dallas county because it has a United States senator who will be on the delegation from the state at large. The possibilities seem bright for a dark horse if there is a contest and that dark horse may be from Dallas county.

INTEREST IN WASHINGTON

WASHINGTON, June 18.—Considerable interest is manifested in the democratic state convention to be held next week. It is considered that whatever of a struggle there is left will be chiefly in the south, and there it will be hardly tense.

The impression here seems to be that the Texas Democrats at the San Antonio convention next Tuesday will be inclined to instruct for Judge Parker. Both Senators Bailey and Culberson are understood to be favorable to the nomination of the New York jurist.

The largest of the other democratic conventions yet to be held is in Missouri June 29, but it is not anticipated that there will be much strife there over instructions. It is the intention of the Missouri leaders to instruct for Senator Cockrell.

The North Carolina convention at Greensboro June 28 will, in all probability, follow the example of Virginia. While entirely friendly to Parker, the precedents in North Carolina have been against instructions.

THREE PERSONS ARE DROWNED IN RIVER

LONDON, Ohio, June 18.—Three people were drowned in the Meome river at a point above Grand Rapids this afternoon. Mr. and Mrs. H. N. Bryan and an adopted daughter of M. A. Combe and a Mr. Holbrook of Hoyetsville were fishing from a rowboat when an oarlock broke and the shifting of the weight of the oarsman capsized the boat. Mrs. Bryan was able to get hold of the boat and held to it until she was rescued by some boys, who were swimming in the vicinity. The other three were drowned. The bodies have been recovered.

SUDDEN RUSH OF GAS KILLS TWO MEN

KITTANING, Pa., June 18.—This afternoon a sudden rush of gas from a new well drilling on the Foster farm caused the death of two workmen and the fatal injury of a third. The gas ignited from the furnace under the boiler and enveloped the men working on the derrick floor in a sheet of flame. Two of the men fell in their tracks and were completely incinerated. The third, John Patterson, a contractor, was fatally burned while trying to rescue his men. The names of the dead were not learned. The derrick and engine house were consumed.

FAIRBANKS AND CANNON BOOMED

The Indiana Man Is Willing to Accept Vice Presidency, But Speaker Cannon Says He Will Not Have It—Gallinger Will Offer Resolution Pledging the Party to Extermination of Polygamy—Decorations Are for Hanna's Memory

CHICAGO, June 18.—Two definite steps have been made toward a settlement of the vice presidential and national championship muddles. Friends of Senator Fairbanks of Indiana, who wishes the nomination for second place, but declines to say so publicly, announced today that while the senator was in no degree a candidate, he felt the office was such an honorable one that he could not but accept if the convention deemed him fitted to fill the post.

Governor Murphy this afternoon consulted with Temporary Chairman Elihu Root relative to permitting the national committee to select its own chairman, in lieu of that position for Cortelyou he would create a board of twelve members, to be known as the executive committee, to be presided over by the man whose purposed selection by the president to manage the coming campaign has created such consternation among the republican leaders. Cornelius Bliss has, it is understood, been suggested as the intermediatory to bring the matter to the president's attention. Mr. Root seemed to favor the plan, but deferred a final answer until after the arrival of Mr. Bliss.

Another objection to Secretary Cortelyou as manager of the presidential campaign has just been raised. It is charged by the leaders that the head of the department of commerce and labor insists upon a salary of $10,000. They say that a salary has never before been paid a national chairman and openly declare that this amount should not come out of the campaign funds, but that it should be contributed by President Roosevelt and his friends. Coincident with the arrival in the city today of Senator Depew of New York reappeared the Cannon vice presidential boom, that "Uncle Joe," the speaker of the national house of representatives, has openly and formally cussed and stamped upon and choked more times than he has fingers and toes.

Friends of Mr. Cannon are irritated, while Senator Depew, laughingly declares his belief that the Illinois leader will be selected as President Roosevelt's running mate. It is reported upon excellent authority tonight that if the president's wishes are respected there will be made in the convention no special reference to the friendly interest Mr. Roosevelt has manifested in the negro race. L. W. Cummins, the negro lawyer of Baltimore, has been cautioned, it is said, to forego his intention of lauding the president's course toward the members of the colored race, not only politically, but personally, when he seconds Mr. Roosevelt's nomination.

The first touch of convention enthusiasm manifested itself today when the California delegation arrived with banners flying, a band playing and each delegate wearing upon his breast a leather badge as elaborate as it was mammoth. The hotels are filling rapidly. By Monday morning, it is believed, all headquarters will have been established. Then will follow the organization of the respective delegations.

Adverse criticisms of the decorations in the convention hall have been raised by the friends of Roosevelt. They charge that the friends of the late Senator Hanna, in paying special honor to the memory of the late chairman have unwittingly done an injustice to Mr. Roosevelt. Over a score of Hanna pictures grace the hall, but few Roosevelt portraits have thus far been exhibited. Suspended above the platform, over the spot where the chairman will be seated, is a monster Hanna portrait. It has been suggested that before the convention opens this may be moved slightly to one side to enable the hanging of a Roosevelt portrait alongside. Senator Gallinger of New Hampshire, whose name has been prominently mentioned as a suitable candidate for national chairman, has joined the ranks of anti-Mormon agitators. He will offer a resolution in the convention, he declares, pledging the republican party to extermination of polygamy. He insists that the party should abolish the evil as thoroughly as it did slavery.

Some one has started the story that Secretary Cortelyou was once a democrat. Major E. G. Rathbone of Ohio declares that G. B. Cortelyou, secretary of commerce and labor and the prospective national chairman, never was a democrat and says he first entered the postal service under a republican and not under a democratic administration. When Rathbone was chief postoffice inspector he recommended Cortelyou as stenographer to Colonel Wheeler, the inspector in charge in New York City. A year later, about 1890, when Rathbone was appointed fourth assistant postmaster general, he selected Cortelyou as his private secretary.

FAIRBANKS PEOPLE DISPLEASED

The Fairbanks adherents are not pleased over the talk filling hotel lobbies tonight of other vice presidential timber than their favorite. So strong has the Cannon and Hill agitation become that the Indiana leaders here have decided upon a conference Sunday the situation will be carefully canvassed. They realize that a definite word one way or the other will determine the matter in so far as Fairbanks is concerned, but the senator will make no stronger declaration than has been noted.

ODELL FOR CANNON

Governor Odell of New York who arrived this afternoon is an earnest advocate of Speaker Cannon for vice president. He has no personal objection to the Indiana statesman but does not hesitate to say that Cannon would strengthen the ticket and add more enthusiasm to the campaign. Another reason presented by those who favor "Uncle Joe" is that his selection as Roosevelt's running mate would add greatly to the ticket from the standpoint of practical politics. The same leaders declare that Mr. Cannon is as positive in his ways as the president is in his and would have more to say as to the management of the campaign than Mr. Fairbanks would.

Senator Scott of West Virginia is booming his colleague, Senator Elkins. Senator Platt, the "Boss of New York," arrived this afternoon. He favors Fairbanks for vice president. Other New Yorkers who came today are: Congressman Sherman, W. L. Ward, who wishes to be national committeeman, and Executive Chairman Barnes. Senator McComas of Maryland is to succeed himself as national committeeman.

A significant fact developed late tonight. Some of the Indiana leaders are trying to get Senator Fairbanks to decline to permit his name to go before the convention. The fact is apparent, however, that unless the convention is stampeded for Speaker Cannon, Senator Fairbanks will be nominated. It was announced tonight that Senator McComas of Maryland is to be the chairman of the committee on credentials. He is a warm adherent of the Spooner-Quarles-Payne faction in Wisconsin.

CONGRESSMAN HITT ILL

WASHINGTON, June 18—Representative Hitt of Illinois, who has been ill at his residence here for several days, is reported materially improved today, although still confined to his bed. His physicians cannot yet predict when he will be able to reach Chicago, whether in time for the republican convention. Mr. Hitt is suffering from acute indigestion, to which he has been subject for several years. His condition, however, is not regarded as serious. It has been the intention of Mr. Hitt, who is prominently mentioned as a possible vice presidential nominee, to be in Chicago last Wednesday and there review the situation to learn his chances.

STREET CAR MEN WILL LOSE STRIKE

HOUSTON, Texas, June 18.—The striking street car men are still out, but cars run unmolested and people are beginning to ride. It is believed the men will concede they have lost early next week.

The bakers struck Thursday, got a raise of a dollar a week Friday and went back to work.

The Magnolia Brewery coopers struck, alleging violation of contract. Both parties referred the question to the International Society of the Cooperss' union. In the meanwhile the men are at work.

DALLAS CITIZEN IS RUN DOWN BY CAR

DALLAS, June 18.—Tonight at 9:45 o'clock A. Ehrhardt, a German residing at 196 Gano street, was run down by a westbound Main street car on Main street at the intersection of Murphy street and very badly injured about the head. He was knocked down and rendered almost unconscious. Bystanders hurried to his assistance and when the injured man was picked up he was found to be bleeding profusely from a wound in the back of the head and from the left ear. He was taken to a near-by drug store and Drs. Rosser, Howard and Blaylock examined and dressed the wounds, after which the injured man was taken to his home in an ambulance.

Mr. Ehrhardt's injuries are not considered of a very serious nature.

The motorman and conductor in charge of the car claim that the gong was sounded and every effort possible made to stop the car before striking the man.

FOR A SPUR ROAD

SAN ANTONIO, Texas, June 18.—A survey is to begin July 1 for a railroad spur from Carrizo Springs to Cotulla for the shipment of onions. The crop is very heavy in Dimmit county and there is as much excitement there now as in Beaumont during the oil boom.

Mrs. William B. Leeds, whose husband is president of the Rock Island road, has taken a fine apartment in Paris and will use it as headquarters for a day or two occasionally in pauses of her journeyings about Europe. While traveling Mrs. Leeds uses a private train whenever she can obtain one.

ZACK MULHALL SHOOTS 3 MEN

The Affair Occurred at a Concession on the Grounds of the Exposition

ROW WITH STABLE BOY

Innocent Bystander Wounded and Man Who Interfered Is Shot in the Chest

ST. LOUIS, June 18.—A shooting scrape took place this evening at Cummins' Wild West concession at the World's Fair, which bids fair to be a very serious matter. Colonel Zack Mullhall had trouble with Frank Reed, a stable boy, before the show. After the show this evening the trouble was renewed and Mullhall pulled his six-shooter, emptying it at Reed. One ball entered his chest, another grazed his neck and hit an innocent bystander, named Charles Morgan, in the stomach. He may die. A cowboy named John Murray came to Reed's assistance and was shot in the chest by Mullhall.

The wounded were taken to World's Fair emergency hospital. Mullhall is in jail. Reed, Morgan and Murray are dangerously wounded and will probably die.

Mullhall and Reed had been at outs for several days. Tonight as Mullhall and his daughter, Lucille, came out of the show they met Reed, who was unarmed. Mullhall drew a revolver and defied Reed to shoot him. Murray attempted to interfere. In the struggle Mullhall's gun was discharged and Murray was wounded. Mullhall then turned the gun on Reed and fired. The first bullet struck Reed's arm. The second grazed his neck, also striking Morgan. Mullhall also fired two more shots without effect.

An immense crowd of women and men witnessed the shooting. The wounded men were removed to the hospital. Mullhall was jailed and refused bail.

DEATH OF ONE OF PROMINENT ELKS

HARRISBURG, Pa., June 18.—Meade D. Detwiler, past grand exalted ruler of the B. P. O. E., died at his home this evening after a brief illness, aged 40 years. He was for two terms district attorney of Dauphin county and one of the most eloquent speakers in the state. He was president of the board of governors at the national home of the Elks at Bedford and was exalted ruler of the new lodge of Harrisburg Elks.

PRESIDENT IS GUEST OF PHILANDER KNOX

DEVON, Pa., June 18.—President and Mrs. Roosevelt are tonight the guests of Attorney General and Mrs. Knox at their Valley Forge home. They will remain there until Monday. Special precautions have been taken by the secret service to guard the president during his stay and three men are on duty on the grounds about the old farm house.

BATTLESHIPS GOING TO GO TO GIBRALTAR

NEWPORT, R. I., June 18.—The United States battleship Illinois and the gunboat Mayflower coaled and took on board supplies this afternoon in preparation for their run to Gibraltar, which will begin next Monday. Upon their arrival there they will join the battleship squadron for a cruise in European waters.

Thus far New York has contributed only two presidents by election—Van Buren and Cleveland. New York has contributed nine vice presidents, however—Burr, Clinton, Tompkins, Van Buren, Fillmore, Wheeler, Arthur, Morton and Roosevelt.

SENATOR BAILEY SAYS HE WILL NOT BE A DELEGATE TO THE ST. LOUIS CONVENTION

Senator Bailey will not be temporary chairman of the national democratic convention to be held in St. Louis.

Senator Bailey will not be a delegate at large from the state of Texas to the national democratic convention in St. Louis.

This statement was given out by Senator Bailey last night. He passed through the city after a visit of several days to his home at Gainesville, and was en route to San Antonio to attend the state convention. He will probably stop at Austin en route. While here he gave out the information that he will not be a delegate to the national convention. He said that there are a great many people in this state who are worthy of the honor of attending the national convention, that the people of Texas have honored him with a high office, with their confidence and their friendship, and he is not disposed at this time to stand in the way of those who might desire the honor of attending a national convention of the party. Senator Bailey does not believe that in federal officers alone rests all the knowledge of the principles of democracy, and that there are private citizens in this state who are sufficiently posted upon the demands of the time, upon the knowledge of democratic principles and men worthy to be the standard bearer of the party, and he is willing to give way to some one else.

The announcement was made by Senator Bailey because there has been much talk about him being one of the "Big Four" from this state to the convention, and because he has been suggested for temporary chairman of the convention. He was asked about the matter by The Telegram, and he states positively that he will not be a delegate. It is understood that when the convention meets and there is the slightest suggestion made that he be named as a delegate that he will decline emphatically.

Senator Bailey will probably be a visitor to the St. Louis convention.

TAGGART HAS HIM SLATED

DALLAS, Texas, June 18.—It is known that Senator Bailey is slated for temporary chairman of the convention and possibly his announcement is made because he has been so advised. A letter has been seen here from Hon. Thomas Taggart of Indiana, to a friend of Senator Bailey, telling him to tell Senator Bailey to be ready to act as temporary chairman of the convention. The announcement made by Senator Bailey in Fort Worth tonight is possibly a reply to that warning from his Indiana friend.

MANY PEOPLE HAVE CATARRH OF STOMACH AND DON'T KNOW IT.

A Beautiful Ohio Belle Cured of Catarrh by the Use of Pe-ru-na.

Miss Althea Glynton, 1,521 Chapel St., Cincinnati, Ohio, writes:

"My system was very much run down, from an excess of parties, late suppers and unreasonable hours without the proper rest.

"My appetite had failed me, I had frequent headaches and a lassitude which left me no ambition whatever. I lost nearly twenty pounds, and was advised to take a good tonic and rest. I had heard so much of Peruna that I decided to try it. What a wonderful remedy it is, to be sure. In a very short time my appetite returned and with it ambition and a rested feeling, and I was soon my usual self, had regained most of the flesh lost and am very grateful to you for what Peruna has done for me."---Althea Glynton.

No medicine in the world has cured more cases of dyspepsia than Peruna. The reason for this is that dyspepsia in a great majority of cases depends upon catarrh of the stomach.

MISS ALTHEA GLYNTON

MISS IDA FREYBERG.

Catarrh of the stomach may have been set up by an extension of the catarrh from the throat or head. It may be induced by late suppers, indigestible diet, rapid eating, drinking ice water, the use of alcoholic stimulants and many other indiscretions.

Miss Ida Freyberg, 520 North 4th St., Sheboygan, Wis., writes:

"It is with great pleasure that I recommend Peruna to all who are afflicted with catarrh. I was much troubled with that disease and had tried many doctors' prescriptions and many proprietary medicines, and had about given up in despair of ever being cured of my trouble, when a friend persuaded me to try a bottle of Peruna. I took one bottle and felt so much relieved that I got another, which benefited me much, and a third entirely cured me. I can always say a good word for Peruna."--Miss Ida Freyberg.

Mrs. Jessie Colton, 439 East 19th St., New York City, writes:

"Through overwork and anxiety in my business I was very much run down. Had loss of appetite, and, what was worse than that, loss of sleep at night. I was afraid I would have to consult a physician, when one of my customers advised me to try Peruna, as it had made her well and strong. I began to take it, and in a few days began to feel stronger, and from the first dose I slept at night without awakening. I took only two bottles; now I am well, but I am never without Peruna in the house."—Mrs. Jessie Colton.

Peruna cures all such cases of dyspepsia, simply because it cures catarrh wherever located. The reason so many cases of dyspepsia suffer on and on without any relief, trying this medicine and that medicine, is that these conditions are not recognized as catarrh of the stomach.

Any one suffering from dyspepsia, having tried the ordinary remedies without relief, would be safe to assume that their case is one of catarrh of the stomach, and should at once begin a course of Peruna. Peruna is sure to cure these cases. It never fails.

We have on file many thousand testimonials like the ones given above. We can only give our readers a slight glimpse of the vast array of unsolicited endorsements we are receiving every month. No other physician in the world has received such a volume of enthusiastic and grateful letters of thanks as Dr. Hartman for Peruna.

BAD LUCK FOLLOWS THE BREAKING OF A MIRROR

CLEVELAND, Ohio, June 18.—Six years ago a mirror was broken in the home of Mrs. Jos. Bauers. Yesterday afternoon the house was struck by lightning. Great holes were torn in the roof and ceilings, pictures were scattered and carpets and rugs were thrown in heaps.

"This is only a part of the bad luck that has followed that day," Mrs. Bauers said. "You know they say that seven years' misfortune will result from the breaking of a looking glass. I believe it, too. There have been two deaths in the family since then, and now the house has been struck by lightning."

Although the damage to the property was serious, not one of the four persons who were in the house were injured. When the flash came Mrs. Bauers was upstairs with her son, 7 years old. Downstairs Mrs. Henry Gartner and her daughter Margareta were preparing to entertain Mrs. Bauers. There was a blinding flash and a terrific roar. The house was filled with fire and smoke. Mrs. Gartner was thrown across the kitchen, striking a refrigerator. Mrs. Bauers was stunned for a moment only. She found that the lightning had started a fire in one of the carpets. She smothered the blaze and then ran downstairs with her boy.

The bolt had struck near the chimney and passed down through the roof to the sitting room on the first floor. Pictures on the walls upstairs were smashed and the plastering was torn from the ceiling.

TWO HUSBANDS AND TWO WIVES

Very Peculiar State of Affairs Caused by Each Believing the Other Was Divorced

MUNCIE, Ind., June 18.—To the fact that a young woman, who was formerly Miss Allie Frazee of this city, apparently has two living husbands, to both of whom she was legally married, and that one of her husbands has two legal wives, are due to complications which are puzzling local jurists.

Several years ago Miss Frazee was married to William Studebaker of this city, and they lived together until her husband moved to Missouri. Later she understood a divorce had been granted to her husband, and she again married, this time to Joseph Miller. A short time before her marriage to Miller Mrs. Miller conveyed to Reuben Minnich a deed to one of the most valuable farms in Delaware county, signing the deed as an unmarried woman.

A few days ago the first husband, William Studebaker, returned to Muncie with a wife to whom he had been married in Missouri, he having understood his first wife had secured a divorce.

The deed which had been signed by Mrs. Miller was not valid without the signature of her first husband, William Studebaker, so Minnich, who received the land, is now demanding a correction of the deed. In the meantime William Studebaker, hearing of the state of affairs, has left Muncie with his second wife and Miller, from whom the former Mrs. Studebaker was separated, has also departed. As it now is, the former Miss Allie Frazee has two living husbands, while William Studebaker has two wives. Minnich is still holding possession of the land, valued at $50,000, although he has not a valid deed for it.

GEN. TYNER MAY SUE THE PRESIDENT

WASHINGTON, June 18.—General Jas. N. Tyner, once assistant attorney general for the postoffice department, will institute suit against President Roosevelt if the latter should ignore his letter of June 11, asking for a retraction of the president's criticism of his conduct. The allegation will be defamation of character and the damages will probably be set at about $100,000. The law is now being carefully investigated by General Tyner's attorneys unless there is word from the white house soon the case will be filed. Just what the president will do in the matter is not known. He has held several conferences with the attorney general and with officials of the postoffice department in the past week.

REPUBLICANS WILL HAVE PRIMARIES UNDER NEW LAW

Meeting of the County Executive Committee Yesterday to Arrange All the Details of the Affair

L. M. Barkley, chairman of the county republican executive committee, presided over a meeting of the committee yesterday evening in the city hall.

The object of the meeting was to discuss matters pertaining to the coming county convention, July 9.

There were eight members of the executive committee, including the chairman.

Sam Davidson made a motion that the chairman notify the county judge of the intention of the republicans of Tarrant county to hold a county convention on July 9, for the selection of delegates to the state, congressional and judicial conventions, and also to arrive at a decision as to whether a county ticket will be placed in the field.

Thomas Bush made a motion that July 7 be the date on which to hold primaries for the election of delegates to the county convention, and that the hour in the city be at 8 o'clock. It was decided that the primaries be held in the country precincts during the afternoon between the hours of 2 and 4 o'clock.

The representation to the county convention was consideded on motion of Thomas Bush that it be on the basis of one vote for the precinct, one vote for the organization (where there is an organization) and one vote for every fifty votes or a majority fraction thereof cast for McKinley in 1900.

To this Sam Davidson objected. He thought that however small the vote in any precinct there should be representation.

On motion Thomas Bush, Sam Davidson and J. M. T. Pitkin were named a committee to report a basis of representation. The committee reported as follows:

Be it resolved, That in compliance with the Terrell law the county chairman and secretary of this committee be and are hereby instructed to call a counuty convention at the city of Fort Worth, to be a deelgated convention, said county convention to be held at the city hall, July 9, 1904, and said convention is to be called for the purpose of electing delegates to the state, legislature, senatorial and congressional nominating conventions. The basis of representation to be one vote for the precinct, one for the organization, no organization to be recognized unless they cast at least two votes for the republican ticket in 1900, and one delegate for each fifty votes or majority fraction thereof cast for William McKinley for president in 1900, and also at same time and place to nominate a county ticket, and consider such other business as may properly come before that convention.

Proper precinct primary convention to be called by the respective chairman to carry this order into effect. The county chairman, in his call, to designate time of meeting of precinct primary convention.

The above resolution was finally adopted.

It was decided that delegates could represent not more than one precinct.

Chairman, Lon Barkley; J. M. Dihel, Eighth ward; Thos. Bush, Seventh ward; J. M. T. Pipkin, of Keller; J. M. Phillips, of Grapevine; George Nies, of Fifth ward; D. R. Foust, of Johnson Station; William Robinson, of Lennard's Store; H. McGar, Third ward.

SHE HORSEWHIPS A MOTORMAN ON MAIN STREET

She Lashes Him as He Sits at Lunch at the Counter in a Restaurant

Arrests were made yesterday of several parties charged with fighting, among them being a woman. Soon after noon yesterday this woman went into a North Main street restaurant armed with a horsewhip. She was not long in getting down to real business and to a certain extent, apeased her anger. Walking up to where a certain street railway motorman was seated she quickly drew from under the folds of her dress a long, keen whip and at once sailed in, lashing the man as best she could with the resistance he was able to offer. He grabbed the woman and kept her from striking him as best he could. She left the building and it was thought the trouble was ended, but later in the day she came across him and again assaulted him with a whip. The attack caused considerable excitement in the vicinity of the court house when the set-to occurred. A warrant was sworn out and the woman taken into custody by an officer, charging aggravated assault. She gave bond and was liberated. The preliminary hearing will probably come up in the justice court Monday morning. The cause of the assault is said to have been prompted by remarks by the man.

AUSTRALIA IS ON VERGE OF CIVIL WAR

Bitter Dispute in Which Question of State's Rights Will Play an Important Part

LONDON, June 18.—In Australia there is a bitter dispute between the commonwealth government and the state government of South Australia, which some of the politicians concerned describe as a "germ of civil war."

Previous to the establishment of the commonwealth, it was the practice of the state government to furnish persons desirous of revisiting their native country letters of exemption from the local laws prohibiting the entrance of Chinese immigrants into the state. The other day the steamer Ching Tu arrived at Port Darwin with nine Chinese carrying letters of exemption given by the South Australian state government prior to the inauguration of the commonwealth, but the federal customs officers refused to recognize the validity of the documents and telegraphed to Melbourne for instructions. Mr. Hughes, new labor minister of interior affairs, sustained the local officials and ordered the Chinese to be deported. But there Mr. Jenkins, the South Australian state premier, stepped in and, sending state police, forcibly brought the Chinese ashore. The supreme court of the colony now has the matter in hand but the bitterness is growing and there is much talk about state rights on one side while the labor party advocates the abolition of all state governments and boundaries.

Cupid's Captain Of Industry

BY COLIN S. COLINS

Copyright, 1903, by Colin S. Colins

Mrs. Carleton always contended that her Jimmy was destined to become a man of mark in the world of finance.

At the early age of six he had been caught putting pennies into the contribution box, when his mother had always made it a point to give him a nickel.

This being brought to the attention of the youthful James did not abash him. He merely quoted his father to the effect that all the heathen were not located in Africa. His mother afterward remembered that on the same occasion James himself was the heathen referred to by his father.

The inference was obvious, but a six-year-old logician is not to be argued with. A compromise was effected by turning over to the superintendent a sum double the amount of a year's contribution.

When Jimmy was eight, he started in at a regular school. He acquired knowledge promptly; also the nickname of "Swaps," as a delicate tribute to his accomplishment. The first day he was in school he started with a ten cent jackknife and went home with a new one worth half a dollar. When he went into the second reader he set aside the dollar which had been given him for the purchase of a book and by a succession of swaps had acquired a secondhand volume at an outlay of 10 cents.

The 10 cents had first been invested in bullseyes, a confection recommending itself to the youth of the land because it was hard enough to last through the whole of the morning session. The final trade had been three bullseyes, a knife with one blade and the stump of another, a stub of indelible pencil, a red, white and blue holder and three pens which had not been used past a point where they would write with a little coaxing. This was the seventeenth of the series, from which it may be argued that James was somewhat energetic, since the book was required for the afternoon session.

And yet Jimmy was not miserly in his habits. He was quite willing to sell a dilapidated watch case, for which he had given a penny lead pencil, to another boy for 10 cents and then treat him to a soda at the corner stand, where soda might be had for 2 cents the small glass.

Had he been penurious Mrs. Carleton might have intervened. He was even generous, and so his trading was looked upon as the diversion of an ingenuous youth.

This until Mrs. Carleton had caught him trading her buttonhole scissors for a gold plated pencil holder, three white mice, an old whitewash brush, half a tin of blacking, a mangy daub to be used with the same and two five cent tales of adventure on the western plains, participated in by a most strenuous person named Diamond Bill. Then she set her foot down and would not be pacified even when Jimmy declared that all he wanted was the books and mice and that, after deducting these as commission, he was going to give her the rest of the goods.

The story came out at the supper table and was hugely enjoyed by Mr. Carleton, whose Yankee blood had evidently transmitted to Jimmy the passion for trading.

"Leave the workbasket alone, Jimmy," he admonished. "When you want to make a swap on commission take something big. Take your sister Lutie, for instance. You take what you want from Sandon, and I'll take a couple of boxes of cigars for my share."

Then everybody laughed, for it was a standing joke that Lutie was apt to become an old maid simply because she insisted on waiting for Harry Sandon, and Sandon was too bashful to speak his mind. Lutie was out driving with Sandon even then and did not hear the terms of the agreement. The others promptly forgot it—all save Jimmy.

This was a rather larger order than he had yet filled, but he was not to be set aside by a minor consideration like this. Promptly the next afternoon he turned up at the grocery store which bore Sandon's name over the door. Sandon was all alone, for both clerks were out with the wagons. He was putting up sugar in packages ready for the Saturday trade, but looked up pleasantly when Jimmy came in.

"Got a trade, 'Swaps?'" he called as the youngster perched himself on a stool. The last trade had been one of Lutie's hair ribbons for a half pound of figs, and the ribbon even now was resting over his heart.

James nodded gravely. "Got a big trade," he declared. "I've got to have two boxes of good cigars anyhow and what else I can get."

Sandon started. This was rather more important than a half pound of figs.

"I want to swap Lutie for two boxes of good cigars, a whole big box of raisins, some candy (like chocolate cigars best), a box of sardines, some crackers, a pound of cheese, a pair of skates and—and"—his gaze wandered—"that watch," indicating one of the dollar variety that lay in the notion case.

For a moment Sandon was nonplused. He loved Lutie Carleton and some day hoped to make her his wife. He had more than enough for two, and he felt that he was in every way eligible, but he couldn't propose. The set forms he found in guides to courtship were too flowery, and the set speeches he formulated himself were too blunt.

By skillful questioning he arrived at the truth of the matter and saw that "Swaps" had accepted the proposition seriously. Why should he not turn the joke the other way and be as serious as "Swaps?" He reached out his hand. "It's a trade, 'Swaps,'" he assured him, "and here, give her this ring." It was an engagement ring he had purchased when he had visited New York the summer before. He had always carried it with him, but had never had the courage to offer it.

"Swaps" was not without a poetical vein, and the ring gave him an idea. He sought out his sister.

"Want to make a trade, Lu?" he prefaced. She shook her head laughingly.

"I don't think I do, Jimmy. The last pair of scissors you traded with me won't cut."

"They had beautiful handles," observed "Swaps." "Besides, you should have tried them first. It's this." And he pulled from his pocket the sparkling diamond, but little the worse for the fact he had been carrying a tar ball in his pocket the day before.

Lutie gave a cry. "Where did you get this?"

"It's mine," he protested stoutly. "Mr. Sandon gave it to me to swap with you. You see, pop said I could swap you with Harry Sandon for two boxes of cigars and what else I could get. You get the ring if you promise to marry him. Is it a trade?"

Lutie grew very red. She was angry with her father for the jest, angry with "Swaps" for what he had done, but most of all she was angry at Sandon. It was unmanly, she declared to herself, to make her the subject of a jest.

For a moment it looked to "Swaps" as though the elegant trade was off. Before he could spoil things by arguing, a note came from Sandon.

"Don't think," he wrote, "that I was joking when I let Jimmy have the ring. It wasn't that, dear heart, but I have been trying for so long to tell you what is in my heart, and I could not find the words. Now an idle remark of your father's has given me a chance to speak. I no longer fear to ask you to be my wife. I have loved you, dear, longer than you have known. Won't you forgive what is an impertinence because I saw in it my only chance to tell you that I love you? Now that I have found my voice I shall say it to my dying day."

Lutie cried a little, but she put on the ring, and "Swaps" knew that he had made the trade of his life. Mr. Carleton was taken aback when he saw the turn affairs had taken and added his apology to Sandon.

They had Sandon over to supper, and a merry party it was after the ice had been broken by "Swaps" naively remarking: "Say, Harry 'd make a bully swapper. He gives Lutie a ring to be his. What's hers is his, so he's got his ring back."

Teaching the Teacher.

A Kansas convention was on in Lawrence. It was in the opera house, and much interest was attached to it. A university professor came into the editorial room and asked for a private conference. When the doors were closed he explained: "I would like to attend that convention tomorrow, but I do not know how to get in. Can you help me? I do not usually take up with such things, but just now I am writing a book on 'The Workings of Practical Politics' and would like to attend a convention just to see how things are done, don't you know." It may not strike you that way, but we always thought it was the funniest thing we ever heard. Without authority and without hesitation he was given a ticket admitting him to the platform and told it would be honored if presented at the stage door. Of course it was honored without question, and the man who was writing a treatise on "Practical Politics" proudly sat on the stage next to the chairman during the session.—Lawrence Gazette.

Pool Balls.

Here is an interesting peculiarity about billiard or pool balls. You can go to a pool table yourself and try it, as there is no trick about it: Take a half dozen balls or the full fifteen of the set, as you please. Line them up solidly against the cushion. Take one ball in your hand, held against the cushion, and push it against the balls still in line. You will find that but one ball will leave the other end of the line and go into the pocket.

Now take two balls and follow the same operation. Two balls will leave the other end of the line and go into the pocket. Now take three, and three balls will leave the other end of the line. Go still farther and take three in each hand, held closely together, and six balls will go into the pocket. You may push the balls as hard as you please, but you can't move a greater number than you push.

Easy, Yet Hard.

The merchant was booking an order for a customer whose name he had entirely forgotten. He tried to get the name without betraying himself and made a mess of it, as is usual in such cases.

"Let me see," he said. "You spell your name the easy way, don't you?"

"Yes," replied the customer. "I suppose it seems easy to most people, but it's really Hard."

This did not help the merchant any.

"I beg your pardon," he confessed, "but I shall have to ask you how to spell it."

"Oh, it's quite easy to spell."

"But didn't you say a moment ago it was hard?"

"Yes, and so it is. But it's easy too."

"How do you make that out?"

THE OUTLOOK FOR THE GRADUATES

President of the Illinois Central Railroad Says "Work" is the Keynote of Success

CHICAGO, June 18.—Stuyvesant Fish, president of the Illinois Central railroad, son of the late Hamilton Fish, secretary of state in Grant's administration, though wealthy through inheritance, can be called a self-made man.

Mr. Fish is worth a dozen or more millions of dollars today, and he started life as a clerk in the New York office of the Illinois Central.

"MUST A BOY OR GIRL BE A COLLEGE GRADUATE TO SUCCEED IN BUSINESS OR PROFESSIONAL LIFE TODAY?"

The railroad president was seated at his desk, wearing neither coat nor waistcoat, at work over a mountain of documents, when at reporter put the question. He is a great man physically as well as in many other ways, and when he swung about his chair groaned. For a moment he looked out of the Broadway skyscraper window down upon the scenes of activity in street and waterway.

"If it is in a man I guess he will succeed anyway," said the millionaire at last. "A college education is a great thing, but something more is necessary for real success in these times. Men work for what they get. I believe that the great educational trouble of today is that men and women are too much inclined to stop studying when they leave university or school. They forget that it is necessary to keep up with the times and you can only do it by studying constantly.

"There is everything in opportunity and a man should equip himself so as to be able to seize his chance when it presents itself. There is where a college education is a great thing. They do not study one thing—they graduate combination lawyers, doctors, engineers, linguists, etc. A properly educated man can accept what offers rather than be compelled to wait, perhaps for a lifetime, for the one thing he is trained to do.

"But it does not hold that a successful man must be a college graduate, and I would by no means advise all boys to take a university course. If a boy has the right mental attitude and all else is equal he will get there all right. It would be a waste of time for many boys to go through college. Their natural make-up would make it possible for them to get only so far. They would stop at the same place whether they had seen 10 years of college life or had only been through the public schools.

"I think there are just as many chances for bright men as there ever were; perhaps there are more.

"A few years ago the officers of the Illinois Central railroad were simply pestered to death by applications for work by young civil engineers. The supply was greatly in advance of the demand. Bright young fellows with college educations came by the score begging for positions. They would work for nothing to get a start. Our chief engineer hit upon a plan to care for the worthy ones. He employed those who were not afraid of work to do section jobs. They were sent out along the line and worked with the laborers of that class for $1.50 per day. They laid rails and shoveled track bed. The result was that section superintendents all along the line began to demand these fellows and many got a start this way. A number have advanced to good positions. Those who were not desirable demonstrated it by giving up their jobs because it was too hard work. Those who stuck are real railroad engineers, for there is nothing about the primary rules of the business that they do not know.

"My advice to the season's crop of graduates may be summed up in the one word, WORK."

A FRIGHTENED HORSE

Running like mad down the street, dumping the occupants, or a hundred other accidents, are every day occurrences. It behooves everybody to have a reliable Salve handy and there's none as good as Bucklen's Arnica Salve. Burns, Cuts, Sores, Eczema and Piles disappear quickly under its soothing effect. 25c at Matt S. Blanton & Co.'s, and W. J. Fisher's drug stores.

CHEAP RATES AT HARVEST

DENTON, Texas, June 18.—The farmers and wheat raisers of Denton county are strictly in the swim this season when it comes to getting their wheat threshed. There are a large number of threshers in Denton county this year on account of the fact that much of the territory surrounding this is short on wheat and other small grain and owing to the competition arising between rival threshermen, the farmers are getting a much cheaper rate than usual.

THEY DIG POTATOES

SHERMAN, Texas, June 18.—Growers are taking advantage of the sunshine to finish digging their potatoes and probably three or more cars will be ready for shipping by evening. It is thought that only about ten cars will go out from this place, the bulk having fortunately been gathered and marketed before the wet spell and lowering of prices. The top today is only about 50 cents.

GOOD ALFALFA CROP

SHERMAN, Texas, June 18.—Colonel R. E. Smith, the "Alfalfa King," spent yesterday on his famous meadow and declares that the crop was never finer in this section, being waist high nearly all over his place. This is remarkable in consideration of the several reverses had in the early spring.

FORT WORTH WINS GOOD BALL GAME

Young Baylor College Pitcher Loses His First Contest Since He Became a Twirler

Wicker, the young Baylor collegian who stepped upon the Fort Worth diamond with a record of having never lost a game in college or amateur ball that he had pitched, went away from the diamond with a battered record. The Fort Worth swatters had not only administered defeat, but had coated it with a shut-out.

For four innings, which were marked by an absence of hits or even of tenants of first by any route, it looked as if the young man's record would be kept up. But in the fifth, Wells, first up, plowed up the left garden for a double. Hubbard followed with a single to left, but Wills in stretching to the plate was caught, Coyle's interference at third delaying long enough for the throw in to be effective. Reitz's single to right, a long drive that added an ugly bound to its effectiveness, scored Hubbard.

Fort Worth continued to gather in hits for the remainder of the game. Dunn's single to left in the sixth brought in Sullivan, who had added a steal to his base on balls. Hubbard's single and steal to second was followed by three outs via the fly and strike out route.

In the eighth Jackson's out to Wicker merely introduced a shower of hits. Sullivan singled to right and McMurray selected the center for his drop safety. Dunn filed out to Coyle, Wills dropped a hit to center that tried to get to the fence, Sullivan scored and McMurray got to third. A single by Hubbard brought Mac home.

Thebo whacked out a single to center as a starter for Corsicana in the first and McCarthy's sacrifice worked as if it had been oiled. Coyle went out to Boles and before Thebo could get his tally recorded Sullivan made a desperate catch of Longley's foul.

Occasional hits encouraged the Oil men but none delivered anything even with the aid of an occasional error by Fort Worth, flies to Dunn or grounders to Hubbard or Boles cutting off prospects.

In the seventh with one out Salm got a good start on Sullivan's muff of his fly and McMurray's catch of Blassingame's foul fly held him on second. Gilreath made first via a hit to right and stole second. Wicker struck out and hope died. The shut-out appeared inevitable. Salm's and Blassingame's singles in the ninth were wedged in between Maloney's fly to Wills and Gilreath's out to Boles, with Wickers out to Poindexter the sad end.

NOTES

It was Hubbard's batting day.

Hubbard will probably remain at third.

Jackson gave one base on balls and struck out one. Wicker gave one base on balls and struck out three.

The throw of McMurray to Reitz that got Thebo stealing second was so smooth the eyes skated on it.

Tullar left yesterday for Paris to don the red uniform.

Wills' playing away from the bag enabled him to capture several hot put outs. On Wicker's liner his extended length of limb turned the trick.

DALLAS DEFEATS PARIS

DALLAS, Texas, June 18.—Today's game between the Giants and Paris Reds was a comedy of errors throughout, in which the visitors took the lead and did the stunt to a rich brown. The home team, realizing the fact that they were the stronger of the two aggregations, played a rather slow, listless game after the third inning. The crowd in the grandstand seemed to regard the exhibition as a huge joke, rather than a contest, and O'Connor's bunch piled error upon error of the most expensive kind, one upon the top of another, until their efforts were really pathetic. The most terrific error soon on the local diamond this year occurred in the fifth inning, when Arbogast attempted to field a ball to Mulkey, who let it go past him and over the wire fence behind first base, permitting Corcoran, the base runner, to circle the sacks and also two men who were in front of him crossed the rubber.

Russell drove a hot bounder out in right field in the fourth inning, which hit Deskin in the mouth cutting an ugly gash in his upper lip and causing him to retire from the game. He made two costly errors during the short time he played, and Zook, who replaced him, put up a better exhibition in right garden during the remainder of the game.

Tullar, the ex-third baseman of the Panthers, who has just signed with Paris, played short yesterday, and while his exhibition was not up to his usual standard, he is partly excusable on the ground that he has not been playing that position this season.

The visitors were unable to hit Richard Clarke very effectively, as the score will show, only five hits being made off him. Arbogast, the utility man of the Reds who has been pressed itno service in almost every position on the field, was sent in to pitch yesterday's game, and everything being considered, he made a very good out of it.

To describe the game throughout would be an imposition upon the readers, as it was virtually featureless. The block score is shown below and will suffice to give one a slight idea of the performance of the two teams:

DIAMOND DUST

The Giants and Paris Reds will play a double header this afternoon. The first game will be called at 3 p. m.

Manager Moran received a wire from B. Rickey, the new catcher, yesterday, stating that he left Delaware, Ohio Friday night. If he makes all connections he should arrive in Dallas in time to participate in today's games.

Hunter has been playing with a bad finger on his throwing wing for a week, which partly accounts for his poor throwing during one or two games.

The Giants will play with Corsicana all this week. Three games will be played at Corsicana during the first of the week, and the two clubs will return to Dallas and play Friday, Saturday and Sunday.

Doyle made a fine running catch yesterday.

Paris has been saving Cy Mulkey for one or both of this afternoon's games. Ragan will go in the box for the home team.

Johnson got another three-bagger yesterday.

NATIONAL LEAGUE

McGINNITY INVINCIBLE

NEW YORK, June 18.—McGinnity was invincible this afternoon and the New York Nationals had little trouble defeating the Brooklyns in a game which was filled with excellent ball playing. The New York infield was like a stone wall, some of the stops being of the highly spectacular kind. The score:

New York ....2 0 0 2 0 0 1 0 *—5	9	1

SHUT-OUT TAIL-ENDERS

BOSTON, June 18.—The local National League club whitewashed the tail-enders this afternoon. Willis pitched a splendid game, holding the Phillies down to three hits. His support was almost perfect and the locals batted freely. The score:

	R.	H.	E.

LOST ALL THE WAY

CINCINNATI, June 18.—The Cincinnatis were at the mercy of Pitcher Brown of the Chicago Nationals today, and lost all the way, the result never being in much doubt. Chance's batting was the leading feature. Kelly was taken ill in the fourth and had to quit. The score:

	R.	H.	E.

PLAY POOR BALL

PITTSBURG, June 18.—After eight straight victories, Pittsburg dropped today's game to St. Louis, 10 to 5. Scanton started to pitch for Pittsburg innings. Camnitz replaced him. Both teams played poor ball in the field, each having five errors. The score:

	R.	H.	E.
Pittsburg ..0 0 0 0 4 0 1 0 0—5	8	5
St. Louis ..2 3 2 1 0 1 0 0 1—10	10	5

AMERICAN LEAGUE

PLAY ELEVEN INNINGS

CHICAGO, June 18.—Boston won out today at American League park in the eleventh inning of a wild and long continued battle. White was knocked out in one inning and both Dineen and Walsh were hit hard all through the game. The score:

DONOVAN IS EFFECTIVE

DETROIT, Mich., June 18.—Donovan was again effective against the Philadelphia Americans today, allowing bunched hits in but one inning. Bender was hit hard at critical stages. Davis made the longest hit ever seen on the local grounds, batting the ball over the center field fence, a feature not accomplished since this city has had an American League team. Score:

Detroit .....0 0 0 0 4 0 0 3 *—7	11	0

KNOCKED OUT OF THE BOX

CLEVELAND, June 18.—The Senators knocked Joss out of the box in the third inning today and hit Bernhard, who succeeded him, vigorously, but the Clevelands pounded Towensend still harder and won by a comfortable margin. The game was replete with brilliant fielding plays. Score.

COLLEGE GAMES

PRINCETON DEFEATS YALE

NEW YORK, June 18.—Princeton 10, Yale 4. This was the result of the final struggle for baseball honors between the New Jersey and Connecticut University teams which took place at the American League park. From the opening until the close of the game Princeton held the lead and maintained a decided advantage over the New England Collegians. Good work by both teams in the early part of the contest was well maintained. During the latter half of the game, however, Yale's fielding became erratic and Princeton scored an easy victory on this account. Never since the new grounds of the New York American League Club became an attraction for baseball crowds has such a brilliant assemblage been seen there as that which witnessed the game this afternoon. The official count of the attendance was 22,000. College songs and rival yells, as well as the waving of partisan colors, never ceased during the contest, but the utmost good humor prevailed. The score:

Batteries—Byram and Cooney; Bowman and Winslow. Umpire—Hurst.

OTHER GAMES

At Williamstown, Mass.—Amherst 4, Williams 11.

LOCKHEAD IS LOCATED

El Paso Herald.

The disappearance of Pitcher Lockhead last year has at last been solved, or rather his whereabouts is now known, although the reason for his suddenly shaking the dust of El Paso from his feet still remains a dark unfathomable mystery.

Lockhead came here to pitch for the local team, and in his one game with Silver City proved himself a crackajack ball tosser. He had been pitching for the Fort Worth team, and it was rumored that he was to captain that organization this season.

However, on the following Sunday, when the Colts were going to wallop Alamogordo, Lockhead, who was to have again occupied the pitcher's box, was non est very much. It afterward developed that he had left a couple of grips here, one at the fire engine house, containing his ball togs, and another containing clothes where he boarded.

Many and various were the guesses as to where he had levanted, and it was only a short time ago that Fireman J. J. Sullivan was apprised by Asher, another former pitcher here, that he had seen Lockhead in Stockton, Cal., sometime before that. He did not volunteer any explanation, though, of why he deserted El Paso. Asher is now playing on the Dodge City (Kansas) team.

AMERICAN DERBY GONE TO HIGH BALL

For Another Time an Eastern Horse Has Captured First Prize of Western Turf

NO OPEN BETTING THERE

Swarms of Police on the Alert and But a Look and a Nod With the Bookmakers

WASHINGTON PARK RACE TRACK, Chicago, Ill., June 18.—Highball won the great American derby today easily by a length, with Woodson second, two lengths in front of Rapid Water. English Lad, the heavily played favorite, finished fourth, close up. A silent betting ring, a total absence of open wagers, swarms of police on the alert and a few minor bookmakers taking bets from persons without even an entry in a notebook, these were the conditions under which the derby was run this afternoon.

The derby crowd, in its proportions, was visibly affected by the lack of betting. While there were nearly 30,000 people at the track when the derby field went to the post, it was nothing like the crowds which attended last year. The appearance of the derby colts sent the crowd into a frenzy of delight. Each horse received some applause, but the most of the eyes were on the hope of the Cook stable, the great English Lad.

Moharib and Rapid Water delayed the start several minutes. Rapid Water broke through the barrier on the first attempt at a start and it took some minutes to get the horses into line again. The jockeys were anxiously working for place and their attempts to get into an advantageous position made the start a difficult one. As the delay continued the excitement grew. The stand was filled with a breathless audience, every eye fixed on the horses. Time and again they lined up and were called back. They lined up and started for the barrier.

Up it flew. "They're off!" the cry rang like one voice and the great American derby was on. Proceeds, with Helgerson up, leaped to the front as the barrier flashed up after the long wait at the post. In close pursuit was Rapid Water and behind him came Volney, at 150 to 1. English Lad was off fourth in a commanding position, while Highball, shut off, was leading the rear division. Turning into the stretch, Proceeds was still making the running. Helgerson evidently trying to run the head off the field, but Highball, laying near the rail and perfectly ridden by Fuller, was trailing Proceeds, apparently without effort. Behind him Rapid Water and Fortune Hunter and Moharib were fighting it out. Woodson was next, preparing to make his run. English Lad, apparently defeated, had been cut off and had dropped back next to last position, just ahead of Elwood. Right there Highball made his run, coming on with a rush. Apparently without effort he ran over the tiring Proceeds, now beaten. Woodson was coming like a shot and ran into second place, and they finished in that order, Highball winning by a length from Woodson, with Rapid Water third, two lengths behind. For another time in the history of the race the east had captured the first prize of the western turf.

A Triumph For A Texas Industry

The Texas Anchor Fence Company of this city, in competition with fence companies from all parts of the United States, is awarded the contract TO BUILD ONE OF THE LARGEST CEMETERY FENCES IN TEXAS.

The above fence, over 2,000 feet in all, has just been erected at Hearne, Texas, around the Norwood Cemetery, and as an expression of the complete satisfaction given, we publish the following self-explanatory letter from Messrs. Wilkerson Bros., of Hearne, who were the agents of the Cemetery Association:

"Hearne, Texas, June 11, 1904.

Messrs. Texas Anchor Fence Co., Fort Worth, Texas:

Gentlemen:—With a committee from Norwood Cemetery Association, we have carefully and critically made inspection of the fence recently completed for this association, and without a dissenting voice it was pronounced entirely satisfactory.

This structure has been under discussion for several years, and acting for the ladies of the institution, we have had designs and figures on various kinds of iron fences, each of which has in turn been found to have its defective features. After so much thought and consideration, that your fence meets every requirement is an unusually strong endorsement of its superiority.

We will add that the erection of this fence was rather a remarkable piece of work. The location being a very rough and rugged site. Notwithstanding this the lines are perfect. Yours very truly, (Signed) WILKERSON BRCS.

Fort Worth, and for that matter, all Texas, should feel proud of this achievement of a strictly home industry, owned and controlled solely by Fort Worth capital. Not only does this Company manufacture the highest grade of ornamental and stock fences, but they are also extensively engaged in making grill work for bank and office fixtures, screen and window guards, skylight guards, etc. We bespeak for them the success they merit.

BRUTALITY IN AN INSANE ASYLUM

NOTHING BUT A PRISON

Very Easy for People to Hide Out Their Relatives Who Are in the Way

COLUMBUS, Ohio, June 18.—In the court of common pleas, before Judge Rathmell, the alleged condition of affairs in the Ohio Institution for Feeble-Minded Youths has been thoroughly aired during the past four days, and some sensational testimony has been adduced. Joseph F. Fleming, a former inmate, brought suit against Dr. Gustavus Doran, superintendent of the institution, for $10,000 damages.

The testimony showed that the superintendent and trustees of the asylum are almost autocrats, and if it is the mosfortune of a person to be committed to the institution it is practically impossible for him to be released, unless the person who made application for his incarceration, or care, as it may be considered, asks for the discharge or acquiesces in it.

During the last session of the legislature Senator Cassatt of Cincinnati, introduced and had enacted into a law a bill that made the superintendent more of a dictator than prior to that time. That law, which pertains to all institutions, says that if any person harbors or gives aid to an escaping inmate he shall be guilty of a misdemeanor. In the case of the Feeble-Minded Asylum it would mean that if a man or woman escaped therefrom and was harbored by a relative or friend such charity could be punished.

WAS HELD THERE

It was charged in Fleming's case that he was held at the institution in spite of the fact that he was fully competent to make his own way in the world. He had escaped three times, and on every occasion demonstrated that he could at least make his own living.

Joseph F. Fleming, as shown in the testimony, was taken to the asylum Oct. 3, 1892, when 16 years of age, though then employed as a delivery boy in this city, because, he claims, of the anxiety of relatives to get rid of him. The testimony showed that he had attended the Holly Family school, was through the Fourth reader and had stood well in his studies, but that this did not prevent his imprisonment. He was kept among the imbecile and idiotic inmates until July, 1902, according to the evidence, and was compelled to perform the hardest kind of manual labor, such as making brick, mixing concrete, shoveling coal and doing farm work from ten to fifteen hours a day.

The testimony showed that in July, 1902, he escaped and was employed by the Columbus Railway company, where he remained several weeks until, without any warrant, Dr. Doren and three guards dragged him from his bed at an early hour one morning and hauled him back to the institution.

The third floor of one of the buildings is used as a prison and to confine the worst class of imbecility, and here the evidence shows Fleming was kept a prisoner for weeks, undergoing punishment claimed to be inhuman and fiendish.

He testified, and was corroborated by others who, it is said, were subjected to the same punishment at the same time; that he was compelled to lie flat on his back in a bed, not being allowed to turn on his side for relief, and had to maintain this position for several weeks.

REVOLTING SPECTACLES

His cot, it was said, was placed between that of a boy ill with consumption and that of a low-grade imbecile, with the instincts and habits of a brute, and was often forced to partake of his food while the idiots and imbeciles about him drooled over themselves and their pillows, and was forced to witness even more revolting spectacles than these.

Fleming said that his mental condition during that time was such that he could not describe it, for the mouthings, screams and moans and frequent spasms of the afflicted ones about him were almost continuous and prevented sleep or repose of any kind during the time of his punishment. Fleming said he was given one small piece of bread and a half bowl of milk three times a day, and when released from the bed he was so weak that he could scarcely stand. When almost insane from his suffering and loss of rest, Fleming said he was taken out and put at the hardest kind of labor, but was forced to return to the third floor to sleep among the horrible scenes there and the distressing noises and odors. In March, 1903, he again escaped, and realizing, he said, that the laws of Ohio would not protect him, he changed his name and fled the state.

Finally he returned by stealth, and managing to see Attorney M. E. Thrailkill, engaged his sympathies, and that gentleman, calling Dr. Doren up, informed him of Fleming's return, and added:

"And, doctor, I have advised him that if any more attempts to deprive him of his liberty without proper warrant are made to shoot the one attempting to arrest him through the heart."

Fleming was not molested and the suit was instituted by Lawyer Thrailkill.

CORROBORATED FLEMING

Among other developments at the hearing which has just ended was the testimony that many of those now held in the institution have been able to master a course of education such as would admit them to any high school.

William Farrell, one of the eight boys undergoing punishment with Fleming, was the witness. He gave his age as 25 and stated he had been an inmate of the institution since 1890. He corroborated all the details as given as to Fleming's punishment. The odor in the room, he said, was sickening, and frequently the milk given them as a part of their food was sour.

Herbert Tenent and George Hill told the same stories, as did also a number of others.

Catherine Cahill, who stated that she had cooked for the third floor for one and a half years, testified that for from twenty-five to forty boys she cooked for breakfast for all five or six eggs, one and one-half pounds of beefsteak and one-half pound of bacon, and that each had a small piece of bread. For dinner she said she cooked about a pound and a half of steak and each had small portions of two vegetables. The whole number, she said, used a small bowl of butter, holding about a pound in a day.

Dr. Doren was put on the stand and testified that there were no laws or rules to determine the mental condition of a patient before they were admitted; that no examination by a physician was required, except to show that patient was free from contagious diseases. No hearing, he said, was necessary except to answer certain questions as to antecedents, and he reiterated his statement that he would hold there any one committed until the persons putting him there should apply for his release.

Dr. Frank Gelhard, a native of Germany, and whose title as doctor, as shown by his own answers, was based simply on a letter from the mayor of his native town, testified, that he had been in the institution nineteen years and had charge of the third floor. When asked about the alleged revolting happenings, he acknowledged that these things occurred frequently.

FOOD'S WORK

Sometimes Cures the Incurables

A simple change of food worked a remarkable cure for a well known elderly lady of Rockford, Ill., a story that will interest many so-called "incurable" invalids. She says:

"I was taken ill in 1889 and in the succeeding years had eight different physicians, beside some who refused to take my case at all, saying I was incurable.

"They variously diagnosed my case as indigestion, cancerous tumors, enlargement of the spleen, ulceration of the womb, etc., and although one of them was correct the looked for relief never came and I suffered intensely, sometimes in pain all over, but most of the time my greatest agony was from pains in the left side, lasting five or six hours at a time, which nothing but morphine would relieve. Life was a burden and many times I would have welcomed death.

"When the pain would leave my side it would go to my stomach or head and I spent many nights doubled up with pain and unable to sleep, and as a consequence when I got up in the morning I would be so weak I would have to hold on to the furniture to get around the room.

"I tried many kinds of diet, but none seemed to help me, and when my husband suggested Grape-Nuts I thought it was foolish to suppose a 'breakfast food' could help me any, but as I finally got so I could eat almost nothing at all he finally got a package and insisted upon my trying it.

"To my surprise I found I could eat the Grape-Nuts food without any distress following. I ate the first package and got a second one. Before the second package was gone all the distress in my stomach had disappeared. That was two years ago, and although I am now over 60 years of age, my health is good and every trace of the terrific suffering is gone and I again enjoy life. My doctor advises me to keep on with the Grape-Nuts, but said he feared I would soon grow tired of the flavor, but I eat my four teaspoonfuls every morning and still like it as well as ever, not only for the wonderful good it has brought me, but because of its crisp, nutty flavor. You may give my name on request."

MOTHER'S HELPERS

By Monte

Newspaper Enterprise Association.

The first principles of household cares may be developed in children through their play. By using forethought, the mother may early in life lay a foundation for their help in later years.

Little housekeeping cares should be as much a part of boys' work as of the girls'. Outdoor play and work which seems to be for boys should belong to the girls as well. There should be little discrimination between the play of boys and girls up to the age of 10 or 11 years. No mother need fear raising a "sissy" boy nor a "tomboy" girl.

In the playroom with the dolls, where many of the children's hours are spent, the foundation is laid for future household duties.

When the children wash their toy dishes, the mother should watch over them once or twice, suggesting her way. The children will soon learn her way and the labor is lessened for her when they begin to wash the family dishes.

Make it a special privilege for the children to handle mother's dishes and drudgery becomes a pleasure.

If the home is to be made "the cheeriest spot in the landscape" the feeling of "I've got this or that to do" must be eliminated.

The first lessons in bedmaking may be given in the playroom. Dolls are always put to bed. If the dolls' beds are furnished as the children's beds are the preparation of the beds for the night, the airing and making of the beds next day may become lessons the children will always remember.

Teach the children how to make the toy beds and their own will be made with the same care.

Dolls' clothes, too, may be helpful in the early training of children in teaching them the care of their own clothes. How can we expect children to mend their clothes and keep button on if holes and pins are good enough for the doll?

So through all the household duties the children's play will be instructive.

Bits of poems may be recited, stories suitable for the various duties may be told, songs of activity learned. All these have a tendency to lighten the work for the mother.

All parents want children to be factors in the home. The tasks allotted to them are willingly done if the parents have the tact to make the children feel that work is play.

GOLD BADGES FOR REPUBLICANS ON THE COMMITTEE

It Requires an Outlay of Four Thousand Dollars to Supply Each With a Jewel

CHICAGO, June 18.—Realizing that they are in Chicago, members of the republican national committee speak of their new badges only in whispers, despite the admonition of Senator Scott of West Virginia at the time of their distribution, that "members of the committee are expected to wear their badges."

"Oh, joy! Oh, rapture!" exclaimed the Chicago thug when word was passed around among the fraternity that these ornaments were of pure gold and worth $75 each, representing an outlay of about $4,000. The goldsmith has had his order for them many, many months ago; as a matter of fact, so long ago that one was made for the late Senator Hanna. This badge was handed to Secretary Elmer Dover with the request that he present it to Mrs. Hanna with the committee's compliments. Every member of the committee, including Secretary Dover, has his name enameled on a bar of the badge, and each badge is inclosed in a rich leather case.

The top of the badge represents the dome of the capitol at Washington, and the lower part a woman with outstretched arms, holding in each hand a cornucopia, from which numerous good things flow. A steamboat and a locomotive, typical of the commerce of the union, complete in the design.

DUG CAMPBELL GETS OUT OF THE WAY OF DALLAS GUN

Fort Worth Man Went to the Neighboring Town to Serve a Warrant

A few days ago Dug Campbell, special constable, was sent to Dallas to arrest a party wanted in this city. In some manner Campbell got into the wrong house and when he told the man his errand, the fellow flew into a frenzy and made a dive for his gun under a pillow near him. "I've killed many a constable before, and I don't mind sending you to h—l," said the frenzied man. Campbell quietly told the fellow that he had never slain a human being, but if he made further demonstrations, he would riddle him with bullets, at the same time the officer kept on backing toward the opening in the door. Once outside, Campbell made a hasty retreat. He told his friends yesterday at the court house that the reason he did not go faster when he reached the door was because he was unable to fly.

NORTH SIDE AND ROSEN HEIGHTS

Nash Furniture Company.

"The effects of the new city's administration of North Fort Worth are beginning to be felt," said a prominent north sider yesterday. "Since the new officials went into office they have been busy looking after the interests of the city and have already taken active steps in work that for the past year has been needed the attention of the city government. Bridges have been repaired, ponds and stagnant pools of water have been drained and put in a sanitary condition, and last, but by no means least, some of the streets which have needed attention for months have been and are now being graded."

At present grading work is being done on North Rusk street between Eleventh and Fourteenth street and as soon as completed the grading of Ellis avenue and Twentieth street will commence.

"The finance question seems to have been solved by the present administration," he continued. "The finance committee of the city council at a recent meeting reported a deficiency of several thousand dollars, but since the talk of floating $100,000 in bonds the city's credit has according to the committee advanced a few points. I believe in another year we will have, or partially have, a complete waterworks system, electric light plant and good school buildings. Since the raising of our taxes from 25 to 50 cents on the $100 we will now realize something like $18,000 in tax revenue, enough to meet the running expenses of the city and keep up interest on our $100,000 bond issue."

"For one I am enthusiastically in favor of the present course as pursued by the city and think that with the cooperation of the people we can have as many advantages as are offered residents in the city of Fort Worth and at the same time at a much less expense."

JUDGE B. R. WEBB ON DEMOCRATS

He Talks of the Unterrified of Callahan County and Its Recent Action

"The unterrified democracy of Callahan county," said Judge B. R. Webb to a Telegram reporter yesterday, "refuse to crook the pregnant hinges of the knee that thrift may follow fawning. They send an uninstructed delegation to San Antonio and favor an uninstructed delegation to St. Louis. True, they expressed a preference for a national ticket with George B. McClellan and James S. Hogg as its head, but as they did not instruct for these gentlemen, that action must be taken cum grano salo. I am proud of the democrats of Callahan county, one of whom I used to be, and am glad to know they are not departing from the faith as once expounded to them by the undersigned.

"When I reflect that under the administration of Grover Cleveland Texas furnished ministers to Turkey and Japan at about $15,000 a year each, and that hope springs eternal in the human breast, I am not surprised at the present drift here of affairs political. By the way, they do tell that when the American minister to the latter country was presented at court, and his sacred majesty and divine excellency, the Mikado, expressed the hope that the representative of the highly esteemed and honored government of the United States was pleased with the country there, the said jovial and rotund minister replied, 'Yes, but it's d——d hot.' However, you can't believe half that you hear; but I am sure Texas is now ready to furnish another minister to Japan."

PRIZES OFFERED BY ASSOCIATIONS TO THE BREEDERS

Something of the Premiums Which Will Be Given at the Fat Stock Show to Be Held Next March

Editor of The Telegram: I desire to call your attention to the fact and through you the people at large, that the Texas Southern Breeders' Association and the Texas Hereford Association have each offered $1,000 as special premiums on steers sired by registered Shorthorn or Hereford bulls, said steers to be shown at the Fat Stock Show next March. The claim has frequently been made that the owners of registered cattle are receiving too much money from this city in the way of premiums at the fat stock shows, the above offer of $2,000 by these breeders is ust $600 per year in excess of the amount that these same breeders have ever received in any one year in the way of premiums from our fat stock show. The competition for this $2,000 is open and not confined to members of the registered associations. I am of the opinion that this is a sufficient answer to all criticisms that have been aimed at the fat stock show committee by people who do not stop to think what it takes to constitute a good fat and breeding show. The distribution of this money will be as follows:

Shorthorns—Best 2-year-old steer, $100; best 1-year-old steer, $100; best steer calf, $100; second best in each of above classes, $75, and third best, $50, fourth best, $40; fifth best, $30.

I am informed that the Hereford premiums will be arranged practically the same. Very respectfully,

STUART HARRISON,
Chairman Committee.

BOYS AND GIRLS TO GO OUT IN WORLD TO MAKE LIVING

Graduates of Masonic Home Are Equipped to Be of Value in the World

On the 24th of June, St. John's day, Fort Worth lodge No. 148, Ancient Free and Accepted Masons, and all the other Masonic lodges of Tarrant county, will assemble at the Masonic home about 10 o'clock in the morning and during the day will install the officers of their respective lodges, before the public, in the home chapel. The families, relatives and their invited friends will accompany the Masonic brethren, bringing baskets of provisions, that they may have a basket dinner, for the home will not undertake to furnish dinner to any excepting the inmates and the directors and grand lodge officials who may be present. Ice water will be plentiful.

The closing exercises of the Masonic school for this term will occur on that day. The exercises will take place in the chapel, beginning at 11:30 a. m. Handsome diplomas will be given to eleven graduates, five young men and six young ladies. The latter will be elegantly fitted up in costumes prepared for them by the various Eastern Star chapters. The salutatory will be delivered by Miss Frances Rainey of Gonzales county and the valedictory by Miss Mary Lee Brittain of Liberty county.

Immediately after the delivery of the diplomas by Colonel Marcos F. Mott of Galveston, the students will follow with an elaborate concert, consisting of recitations, calisthenics, solos, duets, quartets, "Old Black Joe," a darkey selection; a new and elegant grand march by twenty-four girls, pantomime of the "Star Spangled Banner," etc.

Those who desire to see the closing exercises and concert should be there promptly at 1:30 a. m. Vehicles will be ready at the Polytechnic to take all persons to the home who have no vehicles of their own.

The boys who will graduate have been students in the Sloyd school or shop for two ten-month terms, where they learned to handle, correctly, all kinds of woodworking tools, and besides have served as apprentices under an excellent engineer, receiving instruction in firing and caring for boilers, studying by theory and practical demonstration the uses of engines, boilers and electric dynamos. They have also acquired a practical knowledge of the methods of using and handling the machinery used in planing mills, such as the jig saw, band saw, turning lathe, planer and Freizer or shaper, etc. In fact, they are useful either in planing mills, in engine rooms and boiler rooms and can readily handle electric lighting. They know how to milk and handle dairy cows, how to feed and care for horses and can bale hay, etc.

These boys should be eagerly sought after by any one who needs an intelligent assistant in machinery rooms or in nice woodwork; such as previously mentioned. Their services may be had for a moderate salary the first year.

The girls are good at bookkeeping, typewriting, shorthand and sewing and know how to serve nice meals. They are intelligent, well behaved and have been accustomed to the society of good people—worthy young ladies in every way. They, too, will work for moderate wages until their services are appreciated.

GEORGE NIES TALKS OF TROUBLES IN COLORADO

Fort Worth Man Tells What He Learned While on a Trip in the West

Speaking of his return trip from California, George E. Nies said yesterday:

"On our way home from California we stopped one Sunday at Salt Lake and in the afternoon attended a meeting at the Mormon tabernacle.

"This immense building, seating over ten thousand people, having no parallel in architecture, said to have been the product of Brigham Young's own brain, was nearly full at the service. It was not a regular church service, for their custom is not to have regular services on the first Sunday of the month, but to observe it as 'fast' day, but for the benefit of tourists the choir will sing and the great organ play at the usual hour, 2 p. m. However, on the day we were there a young people's mutual improvement association, which they claim had representatives present from all states, territories and provinces, and in an address to this body we heard President Joseph F. Smith deliver an address on the subject of marriage. He had been preceded by Brigham H. Roberts, who was excluded from congress because he owned up to three living wives, who proceeded to speak in most glowing terms of President Smith and held him up as worthy of following.

"President Smith said:

"No divorce should be granted except for adultery and apostasy, and said for apostasy a man's wife should be taken from him that had one and given to the man that had ten, classing a wife as a talent or a pound in the parable.

"Unlike Brother Abe Mulkey he thanked God for his mothers-in-law, and said they were all good women; they must be he said to be the mothers of such daughters as his wives.

"We left for Denver and while there the news of the Independence mine horror reached us. Denver was very much excited on account of the outbreak and after a day or two we went to Cripple Creek and saw a few things for ourselves.

"We ascertained these facts: The strike in the Cripple Creek district was purely a sympathetic strike, forty or fifty men having struck in the Colorado City ore mills, forty miles away, or a small advance in pay. In order to make this strike effective a strike was ordered in the Cripple Creek and Telluride districts that supplied these mills with ore. The strike was not voted upon by the men whom it is said were overwhelmingly against it, but the power to order strikes had been delegated to an executive committee, which ordered the men out. This occurred in August, 1903.

"The mine owners had succeeded in replacing the un'on men sufficiently to run the mines, when the union miners became desperate and resorted to violent means. Our investigation did not indicate that all were in sympathy with these violent measures, but many doubtless were, and as these various mining camps were almost wholly made up of miners and the former union miners exercised a large influence politically very little protection was afforded the nonunion men by local officers. We saw the depot or what was left of it at Independence. We were also in Victor the day after the Record office of that place was wrecked by masked men and two days after the riots. Blue coats and deputy sheriffs were in evidence everywhere and the leaders of the union miners were in the "bull pens." Citizens and miner owners were taking such steps as would drive the miners' union from that district, and with the aid of the military and the courts it looked as if they would succeed.

"I met a citizen of Victor who said the outbreak was not unexpected, as threats that these things would be done had been made for months. He said the miners' federation of this district had adopted the principles of socialism openly and that the outbreak was a logical outcome of this action.

"We were in Colorado Springs when a train load of deported miners arrived. The police immediately boarded the train and forbade its landing the men in that city, so they were compelled to run them east. The excitement incident to the attempts at dynamiting and rioting have doubtless inflamed the public mind and there was grave danger that the citizens would go too far, but matters quieted down very much, and no further extreme measures are looked for.

"The irony of the situation lay in the fact that the original strikers have long since gone to work in the Cripple Creek district and are no longer on a strike."

SLOCUM VICTIMS BORNE TO GRAVES

Sunday Set Apart for Three Hundred Funerals of Those Who Met Their Death

UNDERTAKERS BRUTAL

They Combine in Order to Get Advanced Prices in This Great Emergency

NEW YORK, June 18.—The formal inquiry into the disaster of the steamer General Slocum will begin Monday in the borough of the Bronx and it is stated that more than 100 witnesses have been subpeonaed. The owners of the Slocum have to produce all of the books and records of the ill-fater craft and to do everything in their power to help the authorities in fixing the blame.

The Knickerbocker Steamship Company has also announced that it will turn over to the mayor's relief committee the $70,000 insurance on the Slocum which it will receive.

The funerals of the 114 victims whose bodies had been claimed by relatives were held today. Beside these twenty-nine bodies were buried at the expense of the city and each grave has been carefully marked, so that if relatives finally succeed in locating them they can be recovered.

NINE TINY CASKETS

A sad feature of this and one which brought tears to all who saw it was the presence in one hearse of nine tiny caskets, each containing the body of an infant child.

The board of aldermen met in special session this afternoon to take action on the Slocum tragedy. A resolution appropriating $50,000 for the relief of the families of the victims was introduced and made a special order for the next regular meeting and resolutions of sympathy for the bereaved were submitted. General Daniel S. Sykles, who is a member of the board, made a speech, in which he scathingly denounced the local board of ship inspectors and introduced a resolution directing the city officials to call upon these officers for the inspection of all craft plying the local waters.

The fund for the relief of the families of the victims now exceed $22,000 and checks and cash are being received in every mail. The committee went energetically to work today and agents were sent into the stricken district with money to use as it deemed best. Where families were found in actual need, and there were many such, their immediate wants were supplied and those who had not funds enough to bury their dead were given money or were furnished with an undertaker, who was directed to give the corpse a decent Christian burial.

Baron Von Sternberg, the German ambassador to the United States, sent the mayor a telegram today, expressing by command of the kaiser the latter's sympathy with the members of St. Marks' parish.

NINETEEN MORE BODIES

Deep holes in the head of the East river off North Brothers Island yielded up nineteen additional bodies today. They were recovered by divers, who declare that there are a number of others still below the surface of the river. Besides this, it is known that there are many bodies in the wreckage of the Slocum, and they will be recovered when the Merritt-Chaplain Wrecking Company raises the steamer's hull. An official of the company told Commissioner of Police McAdoo tonight that they would begin the work of raising the burned craft at once and that the work would continue night and day until completed. The city will pay for the work, which will cost about $11,000.

UNDERTAKERS IN COMBINE

It became known late this afternoon that many of the undertakers of the East Side have combined and have tripled their usually high rates. This was done, it is asserted, because they knew that all families that are too poor to pay for the interment of their dead could obtain the needed funds from the relief committee. This has caused intense indignation and the members of the committee will see that outside undertakers will be called in wherever possible. There is a great scarcity of hearses and in several instances today undertakers' wagons had to be presed into service to convey the bodies to the cemeteries.

THREE HUNDRED FOUND

There will be more than 300 funerals Sunday and those in charge have been put to it to perfect the arrangements. Pastors from all over the city have been called on and even then many of the families have been unable to secure any one to conduct the services. New facts in connection with the disaster are constantly coming to light.

Charles H. Lang of 1843 First avenue told the police today that the fire broke out as the biat was passing Fifty-sixth street, less than ten minutes after the Slocum left her pier. He claims that it could easily have been extinguished had the crew gone about the matter in a systematic manner. Lang declares he was on the steamer with his entire family and that he saved all of them but his daughter, Amelia, who is recorded among the missing.

Among those buried this afternoon were Mrs. Anna Haas, wife of the pastor of the stricken parish, and Mrs. Pettamore, his sister. His daughter, Gertrude, is still missing. He is under the care of his physician and was unable to attend the funeral.

AWFUL SCENES WHEN THE SLOCUM BURNED

BY MARLEN E. PEW.

(Staff Special to the Newspaper Enterprise Association.)

NEW YORK, June 16.—Picture 800 women of a crowded tenement section, dressed in church attire, aboard a handsome steamer gay with flags and bunting, off with a thousand loving children for an outing in sweet country air. Witness the frolicking youngsters at play, intoxicated witn the simple joys of pure air, blue sky and a landscape unmarred by sight of brick and mortar. Hear the brass band on the hurricane deck crashing out bright music of the day. Eighteen hundred obscure living souls have shaken off the fetid heat of the city and are blissfully happy.

Then, imagine, if it is in the power of human mind, that scene suddenly transformed into seething inferno, and those women, children, babies writhing in a hell of flames, surging in panic along the blazing decks with a choice of death by fire or water. Frantic mothers are throwing their infants into the turbulent waters of Hell Gate, and are themselves leaping to sure death. Scores are raving maniacs.

A deck rail, against which 200 people are crowded by flames, gives way and all plunge overboard. Screaming children are trampled to death. Panic reigns beyond description. Eight hundred souls ascend.

This is the sorrow of the metropolis today as she buries the dead cast up by the waters of the East river. How many of its precious prey the sunken hulk of the steamer General Slocum still holds, divers will be days determining. At the best, nothing but charred human remnants can be found. The rushing tide carried dozens of bodies up the sound, and few of these ever will be recovered.

A CRY OF TERROR

Twenty minutes after a pan of frying fat in the Slocum's kitchen sent up a sheet of flame and the cabin began to burn, a cry of terror spread through the city. Fifty-six ambulances laden with doctors and nurses were flying through the streets for Harlem. Firemen and police manned rowboats and launches and started to the rescue. Tugs and river craft churned to the scene. Acres of water were freckled with human heads.

After a while the crowds on the piers saw the rescuers return with the dead and injured. Two policemen bring ashore on one stretcher the dead forms of five babies in diapers. The right hand of one is burned off.

SOME OF THE SCENES

Young girls, middle-aged mothers, grandmothers, boys, a few men and the babies, many burned beyond recognition, are corded up in patrols. Ice wagons, grocery carts, anything on wheels, and horses, strain under the ghastly weight. Ambulances rush away with the merely injured, but they are few in comparison.

A deckhand brought a baby off a tug, holding its stomach in the palm of one hand and its feet in the other. The writer bent down to look at the infant's face, and saw the froth covering its mouth quiver. In heaven's name, it was alive! An ambulance surgeon worked for ten minutes to resuscitate it. Then it died. It had laid piled up as dead with fifty bodies for twenty minutes.

Clara Hartman, aged 20, tagged and placed among the dead at the Alexander avenue station, was seen to move. An ambulance surgeon, after three hours, returned her to consciousness, and she will live. The bodies of six mothers washed ashore with dead infants still clutched in their arms. For two hours a body a minute was picked up. Scores of men lost their entire families.

North Brother island, where the steamer was beached, is a reservation for contagious disease hospitals. A hundred women nurses ran down to the shore, waded out and dragged in bodies. Consumptive patients broke away from wards and aided in the rescue. More than 200 bodies were laid out on the grass on the island, covered with newspapers.

One of the girl nurses, Florence Denaing, ripped off her skirt, swam out and towed in unaided the bodies of three women and two children. Peter Wingerter, aged 13, braved the flames until he had tossed four deserted babies to the deck of a tug. Then he jumped aboard.

Pauline Petz, a young girl, swam out and rescued the bodies of five children. Dozens of policemen and firemen leaped overboard from boats to pick up the drowning or drowned. Policemen James Collins and Herbert Farrell rescued twenty-two living women and children in a rowboat. Arthur Link, 14, swam ashore with an unknown boy baby alive, fastened to his back by his suspenders.

There were a thousand heroic acts. There were a thousand sickening sights. A black crepe is draped over the altar of St. Mark's Lutheran church. Its annual Sunday school outing cost the lives of one-half its congregation and marked one of the most horrifying disasters known.

Bright's Disease and Diabetes News

1737 Broadway, San Francisco.
Feb. 27, 1904.

To the Church Women of Fort Worth.

It is so hard for people to believe that Bright's Disease and Diabetes are now curable that I am asked to permit reference to my own case. I shrink from it but there are too many dying to remain silent. To be brief I had both Bright's Disease and Diabetes for over five years. Usual Dropsy, nails came off, and the case was so hopeless that the physicians told us there was no need to diet and to give me anything I craved. I heard that people were being cured in this city and procured the treatment. In a few months the nails came back, dropsy disappeared and in a year I was well. To show how well, will say that several years after my recovery I stood a capital operation at the Waldeck Sanitarium in the presence of six physicians. Many friends, including Dr. Markell of Cloverdale and Judge E. B. Cutler of Pine street, are fully cognizant of my recovery from Bright's Disease and Diabetes. In fact Judge Cutler is himself now recovering from Diabetes under the same treatment. Let the cure be proclaimed to the world.

MRS. S. E. CLINE.

This is entirely correct. E. B. Cutler.

The above refers to the newly discovered Fulton Compounds, the first cures the world has ever seen for Bright's Disease and Diabetes. We are the sole agents. Ask for pamphlet.

SIN KILLER GRIFFIN IS UNDER ARREST

HOUSTON, Texas, June 18.—Sin Killer Griffin, a colored preacher well known throughout the south, arrived in Houston a few days ago and opened a warfare on satan. A big revival of colored people ensued. His flock was thrown into consternation by the arrest of Sin Killer today, charged with swindling. The arrest is based on a warrant from Orange, where he recently conducted services. The charges grew out of his mortgaging a tent which he did not have. Upon habeas corpus he was this evening released in time for services.

The first organization of coal miners in this country was in 1861 by some miners who came from England and settled in the Belleville district of Illinois. They brought with them their union education and ideas, and announced their purpose in an address to the miners of the country, in which they declared the purpose to be "mutual protection, improvement and education." In response to this appeal representatives of coal miners in Missouri and Illinois met in St. Louis in January, 1861, and organized the American Miners' Association. One of the principal objects of this association was to secure better mining laws in the different coal-producing states.

REV. ABE MULKEY MAKES LOCAL TALK

Evangelist Asks His Congregation Whom They Serve, God or the Devil

SUNDAY BASEBALL GAME

Names Two or Three Methods of Amusement Which He Says Are Hell Routes

From a standpoint of earnestness and eloquence, Rev. Abe Mulkey's sermon delivered at the Glenwood tabernacle last night was one of the finest ever heard in this city.

The evangelist took for his text no rambling thought, but the few simple words from Joshua, "Choose you this day whom you will serve." The text itself is forcible, for it means either support God or the devil.

From these few words the great evangelist built up his sermon. Expanding, giving illustrations and moving the audience with his great power of speech and eloquence, yet always keeping the vital point before them: "Take God and love or the devil and hell."

"Oh! friends; Oh! friends!" said the preacher, "every one of you in this great audience tonight is doing one of two things. You are either living right or living wrong. There is no half way station; you can not have two masters and you must decide.

"Some of you soft-brained folks say, 'Oh, I don't know whom I am serving.' Yes, you do; you know whether you are serving God or not. Don't you think that if they put me on a train, blind-folded, and then unbind my eyes, I could tell which way I was going? Yes, but how? I could tell from the stations, and so can you. You can tell whether you are on the hell route or not by the stations.

SUNDAY BASEBALL

"Sunday baseball-hell route; drunken-hell route, gambling-hell route; bless God you can tell, but you won't look to see.

"Oh, shame on your people who go to Sunday baseball games and sit beside the gambler and the drunkard and go to church that night. Shame! Shame! Shame on you, hypocrites, who serve God one day and the devil the next.

"Wiser heads than yours have accepted this great religion of our God, and you, you insignificant things, know too much to believe in God. Oh! these people who think they are educated above God! Look at some of the Fort Worth's young doctors. Why, some of them have been as far as Louisville, Ky. They know too much to believe in simple Christianity. They are scientists and while the great heads of the nation are bowed in prayer these young upstarts scoff at Christ and say, 'I am a skeptic.' Shame to them who because of a smattering of education deny the Lord.

"The net biggest fool to the young doctor is the little, measlin' lawyer who has been all the way to Austin and spent $73 gettin' his education. He, too, scoffs at our God. He, who doesn't know enough law to get a horse out of the pound.

THE SOCIETY WOMAN

"Next in the fool and skeptic list comes the society woman. Oh! God, if she but knew! She hasn't time for church; she must dance and go to the theaters and have a good time. She belongs to about thirty-five clubs and hasn't time for the husband or children. Why, bless God, if the baby was taken real sick and needed the mother's attention, the child would die before she could be found. Why, bless God, I know some husbands who haven't seen their wives in a week.

A CHRISTIAN MAYOR

"Oh! my brothers," continued Rev. Mulkey, "what we need is true, honest service to God. A city needs a Christian mayor and a Christian government. I don't know anything about your mayor. I can't say whether he drinks or gambles or not. But I can say that this city is corrupt and that vice reigns with a free hand in your city. You need clean, good, Christian men for the rulers of your city or else your city will be morally and religiously a cesspool.

"Friends, have you ever thought what hypocrites you are? How you say you love God and yet serve the devil. Oh! the burlesque of it all.

SELL YOUR JEWELS

"Look at those Missouri Avenue church members. Just look at them. Their building has been destroyed and they whiningly complain that they haven't money to rebuild God's house. Oh! the lie and the shallowness of it all. They say they love God, yet they let their pleasure and their beautiful homes come between them and His work. Look at the pianos and jewels that could be sold to rebuild that church, and still they say, 'We are poor and can't rebuild our church.'"

STRIKES THE LODGES

In the course of his sermon the evangelist took up the subject of lodges. "You men," he said, "who place your lodge before your God are sinning. Your organizations, no doubt, do a deal of good, but when they come between you and your religion they are a rank evil. Oh! God, that you could see the true light of things and choose tonight which you will serve, God or the devil."

THANKS THE TELEGRAM

In his opening prayer Rev. Mulkey thanked all those who had helped to make the revival meetings a success. Among others he prayed that a blessing might fall on The Telegram, which, to use his own words, "has aided me so materially in carrying out God's work."

SEEMED DISAPPOINTED

The evangelist ended his speech with an eloquent appeal for converts and requested all those who wished to live a better life to stand. For fully a minute not a soul stirred and the great evangelist, with the perspiration streaming down his face as a result of his earnest appeal, stood almost downcast.

It seem as if a shade of disappointment and grief passed over the preacher's face, but it did not last long. With a sigh and a smile he turned on his heel and left the platform.

Many were surprised at the abrupt action of Rev. Mulkey. The only solution is that when no one answered his appeal grief overcame him.

TODAY'S MEETINGS

There will be a special meeting for men only at the tabernacle tomorrow morning at 10:30. Rev. Mulkey requested that all boys under 12 years of age, unless accompanied by their fathers, should not be allowed to attend.

At the same hour, 10:30, Mrs. Mulkey will give a talk to women at the Glenwood Methodist church.

There will be revival services at the tabernacle at 8:30 this afternoon, and the closing revival at 8 o'clock tonight.

BAPTISTS GOING TO WATERS EDGE FOR AN OUTING

Young People's Annual Picnic Will Be Held on the Bay Shore at Sylvan Beach This Week

The fourteenth annual convention and third annual encampment of the Baptist Young People's Union of Texas will begin next Tuesday, the dates being June 21 to July 3, inclusive. The place for the meeting will be the same as for the last two years—the Sylvan Grove near La Porte, on Galveston bay. The large increase of attendance last year over the first year, and the numerous expressions of pleasure to be heard from all sections, justify the officers in anticipating a fine attendance this year.

The program embraces the morning hours from 9 to 12:30 o'clock and the evenings from 8 to 9:30 o'clock, while the afternoons are left open for rest, recreation, social intercourse and bathing.

The program for this year promises to be unusually good. One of the best features is the series of B. Y. P. U. workers' conferences, with such subjects as: "Organizations," "Committees and Their Work," "Devotional Meetings," "Social Meetings," "Missionary Meetings," "The Christian Culture Courses," "Libraries and Literature," "Our Junior Work" and "City, County and District Rallies." These will be conducted by such experienced workers as Joe W. English, Dallas; S. W. Kendrick, Garland; Lee R. Scarborough, Abilene; Leroy Taylor, San Marcos; E. E. Lee, Muskogee, I. T.; H. C. Smith, Navasota; George W. McCall, Beaumont; Miss Aimee Roussel, Sherman, and John A. Held, McKinney.

Another important feature of the program will be the Sunday school work, in which Rev. B. W. Spillman of North Carolina will speak each day on "The Teacher and His Work," and Rev. R. M. Inlow of Missouri will speak each day on "Organization and Methods."

Then there will be a series of missionary addresses by such men as A. J. Barton, Arkansas; M. P. Hunt, Missouri; R. J. Willingham, Virginia, and J. B. Gambrell, B. H. Dement, B. H. Carroll, T. J. Walne and others, of Texas.

Another important feature will be the evangelistic addresses and sermons by such men as George W. Truett, Dallas; George W. McDaniel, Dallas, Geo. W. McCall, Beaumont; Lee R. Scarborough, Abilene; J. W. Gillan, Fort Worth; Will A. Hamlett, Tyler. In addition to these, President S. P. Brooks of Baylor university, will deliver one, and possibly more, addresses on such themes as "The Culture of Christian Living."

The bathing, while it enjoys the advantages of a good surf, is not accompanied with any danger, as there is absolutely no undertow.

The boat riding and fishing form a very delightful part of the outing. Then the camping in tents on a green sward, under the shade of trees, and fanned by the delightful gulf breeze, makes one forget business cares and the burning heat of the summer.

The officers of the state B. Y. P. U. convention are: President, W. B. Kendall, Terrell; vice presidents, George W. McCall, Beaumont; Joe W. Pender, Denison, I. E. Gates, Caldwell; recording secretary, Le Roy T. Taylor, San Marcos; treasurer, B. J. Robert, Dallas; corresponding secretary, R. H. Coleman, Dallas.

Trustees: Fred W. Freeman, Corsicana; T. C. Jasper, Plano; A. N. McKay, La Porte.

The executive committeemen are: E. G. Townsend, Belton; A. N. McKay, La Porte; Fred B. Ingram, Dallas; F. M. Masters, Weatherford; M. H. Wolfe, Wolfe City; M. E. Hudson, San Marcos; R. G. Bowers, Waco; W. P. Pledger, Henderson; George Stroheker, Dallas; A. B. Ingram, Gainesville; M. J. Dowlin, Fort Worth; J. Lee Tarpley, Bonham; Robert Wilson, Houston; J. W. Stephens, Austin; J. H. Coleman, Abilene; Joe W. English, Dallas, Hal E. White, Lancaster; O. A. Teal, Dallas.

Kansas' wheat crop this year will be $0,000,000 bushels. No wonder populism is dead in that state.

Exceptional Values Women's Wear

We're forcing selling under the strongest possible pressure of value-giving. We're "rounding up" the suit stock for the season, and in many instances you'll pick up garments as low as half former price : : : : : These occasional sales arouse all the enthuiasm one would expect from the bargaining of the class of garments we handle. There is nothing better at any price, for it's only saying what every woman who knows this stock says. So when it comes to the time of clearance, the excellence of the goods emphasizes the importance of the bargains at the reduced price—well to look over this line for suits to wear traveling and at the resorts this season. Suits from $10.00 on up; all prices reduced.

Fine Dress Skirts Reduced

Another very important attraction in the women's section is the reduction of fine Voile, Net and Crepe Skirts. Lower grades than quoted here are also reduced, but these finer high class novelties are the attraction. Note the reductions:

DALLAS LABORING MEN TURN TO REPUBLICANS FOR TICKET THEY CAN SUPPORT IN NOVEMBER

They Denounce the Democracy for Going to Parker and Laud Hearst for His Work for the Benefit of Humanity. Promise Hundred Thousand Votes in Texas for Reform

DALLAS, June 18.—The following letter has been addressed to the chairman of the county republican executive committee:

D. A. Robinson, Chairman Dallas County Republican Executive Committee, Dallas: Dear Sir—A general dissatisfaction exists among the laboring men of Dallas and Texas who for years have been blindly following the leadership of the democratic politicians at the high-handed methods employed to carry Texas for the candidate of the trusts and special interests—Judge Alton B. Parker. To encompass this result the Terrell election law, a democratic measure, was openly set at defiance, both in the primaries and the conventions.

The laboring people of Texas have yielded a blinded allegiance for years to as faithless a set of politicians as ever ruled the destinies of a great state and for as long have lived on vain promises of reform and, having given up all hope of ever obtaining just conditions through the agency of the democratic party, they turn to the republican party for redress of their grievances and for pure elections and honest government, and if the republican party will pledge them their reforms and the passage of just laws for all the people, in return the laboring people will give them 100,000 votes. There was only one friend of the masses before the democratic party for the presidential nomination, William R. Hearst, the man who came to the relief of the Galveston storm sufferers with three train loads of clothing and provisions, and $50,000, and his claims for consideration have been utterly ignored by the fossils of the Texas democracy.

If all the people who favor pure elections and honest government would rise in their might at the ballot box in November this gang could be hurled from power and the prosperity of the state placed upon a firm foundation.

The above was signed by James Fitzgerald, who up until a few days ago was a candidate for representative from Dallas county in the state legislature, and others prominently identified with the labor movement.

AN ELECTRIC ROAD GRAND SALINE TO DALLAS

NEW YORK, June 18.—The Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company are preparing plans, specifications and estimates on contracts for a complete electric consttruction and equipment of a sixty-five mile trolley from Dallas to Grand Saline. Information as to parties for whom the estimates and plans are made are not disclosed. No information as to the details of the plans or figures of estimates are given out or will be till accepted or contracts signed. Wall street reports that Dallas capitalists are promoting the road and have instructed a New York and eastern syndicate of investors who will finance the road if estimates are satisfactory, when the work of organization and construction will begin immediately.

MOTHER SECURES HER CHILDREN

HOUSTON, Texas, June 18.—While trying to get to North Dakota with two little girls, aged 13 and 9, Captain F. Conlin, a prominent ranchman of Brazoria county, was intercepted in Houston today by officers. He is the father of the girl. Due to domestic trouble, he left home and possessions in Angleton some months ago and went to Dakota. His wife instituted divorce proceedings, which are now pending. The girls were placed in a convent at Lampasas. Conlin appeared there yesterday and managed to see the girls and got them to go with him. The flight with them begun. Wire communication by the sisters to Mrs. Conlin resulted in a warrant for his arrest. He was found aboard a Santa Fe train this morning. A habeas corpus hearing followed and District Judge Hamblem ordered the girls placed in the custody of their mother at Angleton. Conlin was released.

Captain Conlin was once one of the wealthiest men in Brazoria, having owned nearly all of the town of Angleton. His two elder daughters are prominent in society. Domestic troubles, after twenty-two years of married life culminated recently in a separation and the departure of Conlin. Conlin persists that he will yet have the little girls. He says they are all he desires to take with him to Dakota.

BICYCLE THIEVES SEND OFF WHEELS

An investigation of a stolen bicycle taken from a drug store in the heart of the business district in broad daylight a few days ago led to the statement by an officer of the local police force that the appropriation of bicycles during the past month was becoming almost a daily occurrence and that the police department had experienced considerable trouble from this source, as only a very few of the wheels have ever been recovered.

This statement led out to the fact that in this city there is, or at least it is believed, a clique of thieves who steal bicycles and send them out of the city, where they are disposed of at a less risk of detection and recovery by the authorities here.

Second-hand dealers and pawnbrokers are always suspicious of goods brought to them and the local market for this class of property is rather limited. In fact, out of six cases investigations and searches for bicycles stolen have proved fruitless, hence the general conviction that Dallas and nearby towns are furnishing an outlet for a large part of Fort Worth's stolen property.

When asked regarding the matter of a proposed gang of thieves operating in this city one of the officers last night said that he could see no difference in present conditions and those of a month or more ago. He stated that petty crimes of this character had been rather numerous for some time past. In many cases, he said, stolen bicycles had been recovered in the city, but when they were taken out of town only a very few had ever been found.

OPINIONS DIFFERON ANT DISCOVERY OF CASSAINO

DALLAS, Texas, June 18.—Some weeks ago Joe Cassaino, a well known San Antonian who has held various public offices of trust and importance in the Alamo city, and who is a large ranch owner and farmer, while on a visit to one of his cotton plantations was surprised to find that his fields were litterally filled with boll weevils and was very much discouraged as a consequence. Upon a subsequent visit to the same field a few days later he was very much astonished to find that the rows were covered with dead weevils and that the fields were alive with red ants busy in the occupation of carrying off the dead weevils to their holes. After leaving the field he saw that there were long lines of the little ants in the road tugging at the dead insects. He afterwards made a careful inspection of the cotton stalks and was amazed to find that there was not a live weevil to be seen.

He returned to his home at San Antonio and made his discovery known and it was judged to be of such importance that it was sent all over the country in the Associated Press dispatches under the heading of a new means of destroying the cotton pest. The matter was taken up by the government agricultural experts at Washington and expert entomologists are coming here for the purpose of making a careful and scientific investigation of the subject.

Mr. assaino stated that the ants so far as he was capable of judging, were of the common red variety, so common on the South Texas prairie, and that while he did not see any of them actually kill a weevil he assumed that they had done so from the fact that he could not attribute the wholesale slaughter of the insects to any other cause. If Mr. Cassaino's surmise is the correct one it is needless to say that he has unconsciously discovered the greatest boon that the cotton grower has had since the pestiferous boll weevil has begun its devastation of the cotton fields, and a remedy that the state has offered a prize of $50,000 for.

Apropos of the above discovery and the benefit that may be hoped to be derived from its practical use the remarks of two well-known and prominent farmers of this state, each of whom claim to have had some practical experience with the red ant and to be more or less familiar with its habits, may be of interest. It will be noticed that the observations of these two gentlemen are the direct antitheses of each other.

SAYS IT IS A FAKE

Elrod Hanafourde, who is well known to most Texas farmers, said:

"The papers for the past few weeks have been filled with an alleged wonderful discovery for the destruction of the boll weevil by means of red ants and the matter has gone so far that government experts are coming down here from Washington to make personal investigations of the merits of this new method of doing what every farmer in Texas is so anxious to know how to do. This means is, in my opinion, one of the most monumental and overestimated fakes that I have ever heard of. I do not mean to infer that Mr. Cassaino, the dicoverer of the remedy, and the others who advocate it are not perfectly honest and sincere in their belief in its efficacy, but they are simply wrong, that is all.

"Boll weevils are a great deal more plentiful and numerous in South Texas than red ants are, especially in the cotton fields, and any one who knows anything about the habits of the red ant will tell you that it is the most cowardly insect that crawls and that it will not attack any creature that is alive, if it knows it. They will pounce upon a dead insect, as thick as flies around a sugar bowl, and carry it quickly to their hole, if they can. I have put a dozen or more red ants in a bottle with a single weevil and they would not touch it. I believe that the weevils in Mr. Cassiano's fields were killed in some other way than by the ants and that when he saw them carrying away the dead bugs he was misled in the belief that they had been killed by the ants, and that future investigation will confirm the correctness of this belef.

"It will be remembered that Mr. Cassiano said that he did not see the ants kill any of the weevils but that he did see them carrying them away after they were dead."

ANTS KILL GRAYBACKS

The experience of O. F. Dornblaser of Hillsboro, a Texas pioneer, seems to have been somewhat different from Mr. Hanafourde's with the red ants. "I am a firm believer," said he, "that the ants did just what Mr. Cassiano believes that they did. Red ants are among the greatest destroyers of small insects that we have. I first learned of their usefulness in the early days when I first came to Texas. I was then engaged at that time in the occupation of trading with the Indians. I remember that after one of these trading expeditions among the Indians up in the Territory that the members of our party became infected with body lice and that our life was rendered very miserable t o us as a consequence. It was a new experience to us tenderfeet and we didn't know what was the matter with us and were doctoring ourselves for the itch and every other kind of scratching affliction.

"An old timer who had been here for many years saw us frantically scratching and told us what was the matter. 'You fellows have got body lice, said he, 'and the only way to get rid of them is to take off your clothes and put them in a red ant bed and let the insects kill them.'

"We did as he told us to do, although we were somewhat skeptical regarding the efficacy of the remedy, and the ants crawled into our garments and went after those 'gray backs' in a way that was fierce, and killed every one of them. After an experience of this kind I feel reasonably certain that they would do the same thing to a boll weevil and for this reason feel that the remedy will prove to be one of the greatest blessings that the Texas farmers have had given to them in many years."

THE RHODES-HAVERTY FURNITURE CO.

He makes a bad guess who jumps to the conclusion that the trusts have a monopoly of the combination business. There is a furniture house in this good town that every now and again does a stunt in the combination line that would make the operations of a good sized trust a bad second on the course of commercial doings. These combinations are combinations of capital for the purchase of vast quantities of furniture. Those of us unfamiliar with the facts would perhaps never suspect that the Fort Worth house pictured above is but one of a great number of branch stores scattered from the Atlantic coast to Texas, and from Texas to the great lakes and back again to the coast. There are five Rhodes-Haverty stores in Texas alone. The buying for this vast combination of stores demands the ability of a master mind. Some of the Rhodes-Haverty stores are cheap stores, others carry cheap and medium grades of furniture, while yet others cater exclusively to the most expensive trade. These latter houses are invariably characterized by the most elaborate appointments, and occupy the most exclusive centers of fashionable trade.

The policy of the Fort Worth house since its location has been chiefly to sell the cheaper, installment trade, but the firm has decided that the rapid growth and trade demands of Fort Worth justify a complete reversal of this policy. At this time the Rhodes-Haverty concern is bidding for the trade of the "good to best" part of the buying public.

While the stock now carried embraces all the good and medium grades of furniture it is reasonably certain that no other local concern can show the very rare and expensive pieces displayed by this firm. Large quantities of furniture carried by the local house are veritable works of art and represent an enormous outlay of capital.

Coincident with the change of policy with reference to the Fort Worth trade, the Rhodes-Haverty firm have purchased the large building on the southwest corner of Houston and Third streets and are now spending thousands of dollars in decorating and beautifying the building. When completed it will be by all odds the handsomest store in the city, and the plate glass show windows will be the largest in the state. The improvements are being pushed as rapidly as possible and upon the completion, about July 1, the store will be one of the show places of the city.

The Rhodes-Haverty store in this city is under the management of Mr. W. C. Hathaway, who was formerly in charge of the Memphis, Tenn., branch store of the same firm. Mr. Hathaway is not only a furniture man, but also an enthusiast on the subject of scientific agriculture.

For some years prior to taking up his permanent residence in Texas in addition to his furniture connections, he had large farming interests in Eastern Arkansas. This latter line of endeavor he has suspended for the present, however, until he has, to use his own expression, "a little better than the best part of Fort Worth's furniture trade."

POSSE PURSUES TRAIN ROBBERS

PHILLIPSBURG, Mont., June 18.—Sheriff Thompson and a number of deputies, accompanied by several members of the posses pursuing the Northern Pacific train robbers, who stoped the North Coast Limited on Thursday, arrived here today, after having been in the saddle for more than twenty-four hours.

They report that they have found no trace of the men. They are inclined to the opinion that the robbery was committed by men who have lived in the wilds of this county for some time. These men have caused a great deal of trouble among ranchmen and are openly charged with having committed a number of depredations. Their identity is, of course, withheld until the robbery is fastened upon them, if that be possible.

Northern Pacific detectives are active in the search for the men. It is not known by any of the officers who have arrived here how much booty was secured by the robbers. The chase is still going on and so soon as the officers have rested they will relieve those now in the field. The region where the robbers are supposed to be is rough and mountainous and is an extremely difficult country in which to conduct operations of the character in which the posse are engaged.

MANY LIVES LOST IN A HURRICANE IN CUBA

HAVANA, Cuba, June 18.—President Palma this evening received a message from the Governor of Santiago province stating that the work of recovering the bodies of those who lost their lives in the hurricane at El Cobre earlier in the week is proceeding as rapidly as possible. He states that a total of eighteen bodies have been taken from the flooded copper mines and that there are still twenty-three which have not as yet been reached. Among the dead are two Americans, James Bilhey and Herbert Rundle, but their home address is unknown.

The suffering throughout Santiago province resulting from the rains and overflowing of the rivers is very great and hundreds of natives are declared to be on the verge of starvation.

The Cuban congress will be asked to provide an emergency appropriation of $10,000 to be used in relieving the sufferers. The damage to property is very large.

At El Caney nine persons were drowned and the suffering there is said to be great.

SONS RETURN WITH HIGHEST OFFICE

N. R. Tisdal Is Commander-in-Chief of the Sons of Confederate Veterans

A WEEK OF PLEASURE

General Van Zandt and Members of Staff Reach Home After the Reunion

Both the veterans and the sons who attended the reunion at Nashville reached home yesterday, the sons in the morning and the veterans in the afternoon, after spending a very enjoyable week seeing the sights at Nashville and attending the meetings of the veterans and the sons.

Both the Texas and Pacific and the Cotton Belt made very good time returning to Texas from Tennessee, except at Humphreys, Ark., the Cotton Belt, which was a special train the entire distance from Nashville, was laid out two hours on account of repairs being made on the line made necessary by the recent storms. At this point all on board disembarked and the events of the week were re-enacted to a certain extent. Speeches were made by several mmbers of the party, the leading address being delivered by General Gano of Dallas. The entire party assembled beneath the shades of several large oak trees, and at intervals the Mount Pleasant band, which won laurels at the reunion, dispensed music.

Among those who added their part to the impromptu program was Miss Keller, who sang several southern airs. She was followed by Miss Burnett of Ardmore in her "whistling act" and cake walk, assisted by Traveling Passenger Agent Schaeffer of the Cotton Belt, headquarters Pine Bluff. Miss Eva May Scott gave a skirt dance, the program being concluded by the entire party taking part in an old-fashioned Virginia reel.

A vote of tnanks was tendered the Cotton Belt and tne officials who accompanied the special train to Nashville for the successful trip and the general good service given, going and coming.

RETURN OF VETERANS

General K. M. Van Zandt, commanding the department of Texas, United Confederate Veterans, and his staff, including Assistant Adjutant General Georke Jackson, Inspector General Duke Goodman and Division Historian C. C. Cummings, and other members of his staff, also returned today from Nashville. They came over the Texas and Pacific which railroad gave the old veterans a first-class service from Texas to Nashville and return. The Van Zandt party reached the city yesterday afternoon at 5 o'clock.

The sons returned feeling well repaid for having made the trip to Nashville, for they succeeded in capturing the highest office within the gift of the federation—commander in chief. This position, as has been mentioned in The Telegram, went to N. R. Tisdal of Fort Worth, as was anticipated that it would in this paper some days before the reunion was held. He went into the convention with a big lead and kept his pace to the end.

Texas, in fact, had things pretty much her own way. If she had desired to be "hoggish" other big offices would have been captured. But the Texas sons don't care to take everything in sight, and didn't.

Quite an ovation was tendered Mr. Tisdal by Texas friends after it was announced that he had won.

Commander in Chief Tisdal will soon announce several important appointments and instead of their being made from New Orleans the official documents will be sent from Fort Worth. It is known that the commander in chief has decided on who will hold three or four of the positions under him, but until the official circular is issued publicity cannot be given the appointments.

The meeting this afternoon and of the sons and daughters in the court house basement will be one of the most interesting held in many months. Several short addresses will be made in addition to songs by Miss Keller and one or two other young ladies. It is expected that there will be a very large attendance, and a general "love feast."

LAKE ERIE PARK IS A POPULAR PLACE

Lake Erie Friday was a lively scene, the occasion being a Sunday school picnic by the members of the First Methodist Episcopal church. All those present enjoyed the day. The Traction Company has done much to provide a place suitable for picnics and outings, and as a consequence, Lake Erie is the scene of many happy gatherings.

During the morning quite a number of business men and their families went out to the lake and took part in the festivities—particularly the spread.

The day was spent in boating, games, etc.

Those who attended the picnic had nothing but words of praise for the Traction Company in putting the lake grounds in such elegant shape.

It is extremely doubtful if there is another place in the state that is as delightful as Lake Erie. Citizens are fast realizing this fact and are spending their leisure time out there.

MOYOR IS CHARGED WITH MURDERS IN A MINE

President of the Western Federation Will Be Called on to Answer for Crimes of Last November

CRIPPLE CREEK, June 18.—Charles H. Moyer, president of the Western Federation of Miners, who is now in charge of the civil authorities in Telluride, will be brought back to this city and made to answer to the charge of complicity in the murder of Superintendent Charles McCormick and Shift Boss Melvin Beck in the Vindicator mine on November 26 last.

The warrant for his arrest was sworn to by K. C. Sterling, chief of the secret service of the Mine Owners' Association, before Justice of the Peace S. G. Patrick. Detective Sterling left here for Telluride, and will return Sunday with Moyer.

The work of ridding the district of everyone connected with the Western Federation of Miners or anyone who lends them any support as an organization is being carried forward as rapidly as possible. It is the intention of the mine owners that everyone connected with the organization shall leave the district. No distinction will be made at all and those who have been deported will not be permitted to return, in fact, it would not be safe for them to come back.

So far there has been a total of 140 men deported, while about twenty-five were given a fixed time in which to arrange their business affairs and permit them to get away without being interfered with.

MANY WARNED TO LEAVE

Any number of men are quietly warned to leave here and they are going as fast as they can get away. Besides that, a great number have left. In the first deportation twenty-eight men were sent away, in the second seventy-nine, and the last train carried thirty-three.

The investigating committe claims that the Western Federation was most lax and indiscriminating in accepting members. The committee was in session again last evening and today and a number of men are being held for deportation, but when they will be sent away is not known at the present. In accordance with the agreement made the other day between a committee representing the labor unions and the committee of employers, the local unions will withdraw from the State Federation of Labor and the Trades Assembly.

The Musicians' union has already withdrawn from these two bodies, and the others will follow as soon as they meet and ratify the action of their committees. There was a rumor that the cooks and waiters would go out, but that is not true. They will remain at work as long as the present scale of wages is paid. The members of this union met in Miners' Union hall by permission of Sheriff Edward Bell.

COMMISSIONERS OFFER REWARD

J. W. Ganley, a grocer of this city, has been notified by the board not to sell any groceries on Western Federation of Miners orders.

The county commissioners have offered a reward of $10,000 for the apprehension and conviction of the dynamiters who blew up the mine secreted under the depot at Independence, when so many men were kil[illegible]. The reward was offered on the request of the Mine Owners' Association, and the Citizens' Alliance, representing the majority of the taxpayers of the district. The money will be devoted toward paying special prosecutors' fees, employing detectives and for obtaining testimony.

The deputies and soldiers who were in charge of the deportation train that left here day before yesterday have returned. It is said that none of the men made any remarks when they got off the train but one. A Bull hiller swore that he would get even with the men responsible for his sudden departure from the district.

CAN CITY FORCE AN OUTSIDER TO PUT ON A NUMBER

New Question Is Called Up in Regard to the Ordinance Regulating the Automobiles and Their Owners

With the legal advice of the North Fort Worth city council, advising that body against the passage of laws which can not be legally enforced and which at all times hold the city liable to a test case, with its accompanying expense, the question has been raised if this city's automobile ordinance recently passed can be enforced.

The greater part of the measure is admitted to be all right, but attention has been called to the fact that non-resident persons passing through the city are required to register their machines in the same manner as one living here. The wording of the ordinance merely names a fine for the operation of a machine run on the streets of the city unregistered or unnumbered without saying anything as to the residence of the owner.

Thus a tourist en route going through the city would be liable to be hauled before his honor and assesed a fine.

Such a law, it is claimed, is incompatible with the right of passage the public has over thoroughfares and streets. Residents of North Fort Worth and the surrounding suburbs, who frequently visit this city, have registered their machines in compliance with the law, but should some principle-loving citizen of one of the surrounding municipalities purchase an auto and decide to test the law an interesting point will be raised.

Lawyers say that even the known leaning of the courts toward supporting police regulations will not lead them to the point of upholding the automobile ordinance.

M. R. Sanguinett is in the position of an outsider. He lives at Arlington Heights, which is outside the city limits. He has registered his machine in the city of Fort Worth, however, making no contest of the law.

LOCAL POLITICS IS CAUSE OF AFFRAY ON STREETS

J. F. Hovenkamp and Hamill Scott Have a Disagreement About the Sheriff's Race

Warrants were sworn out in Justice Rowland's court yesterday against Hamil Scott, deputy sheriff, and J. F. Hovenkamp, charging them with an "affray," which occurred on Weatherford street within half a block of the court house. The difficulty came up over differences regarding the candidates for sheriff of this county. Scott, according to the story, approached Hovenkamp and asked him regarding a bet Hovenkamp attempted to make with another gentleman. From this the conversation warmed up. Hovenkamp made a reference to the fact that the county peace officers should do their duty. This brought out the remark by Scott that they did. Finally the "lie" was passed by Hovenkamp, who followed it up with striking Scott over the head with a buggy whip. From this juncture there was a regular John L. Sullivan slugging match—all on the part of the deputy sheriff. Friends interfered and stopped the fight.

When the battle was fought Scott furnished bond for his appearance. Hovenkamp had not been served with the papers late last evening.

The case will be heard in the justice court during the present week.

LABOR NOTES

"The first gleam of light in the present reign of legalized lawlessness," was the way C. G. Hammond, a representative of the Western Federation of Miners, who is in this city in the interest of that organization, characterized the recent action of Judge Thayer of the federal court of appeals at St. Louis in granting a writ of habeas corpus against Governor Peabody and other state officials of Colorado in the matter of the imprisonment of President Moyer of the federation.

Moyer is held by the Colorado authorities on charges growing out of the explosion of an infernal machine at Victor on June 6, when thirteen nonunion miners were killed.

He and several other of the union officials were implicated in the killing by the coroner's jury. Efforts have been made to have the Moyer case brought before the United States supreme court, but it was at last decided to endeavor to have Judge Thayer issue the writ.

Attorneys Hawkins and Richards of Denver, representing the miners' union, visited St. Louis. They at once went to the Federal building to see Judge Thayer.

For more than three hours they were closeted with him presenting arguments for Moyer's release. They asserted that the labor leader was being held in the "bull pen" without the slightest authority and was unlawfully being restrained of his liberty.

At the conclusion of their arguments Judge Thayer finally granted the writ of habeas corpus, making it returnable at St. Louis on July 5. The attorneys wanted a nearer date, but expressed themselves as satisfied with the action of the court.

The writ is directed against Governor James H. Peabody, Adjutant General Sherman A. Bell and Buckley Wells, another Colorado state official.

Governor Peabody and those against whom the writ was issued have been cited to appear in St. Louis with President Moyer and show cause why the labor leader is being held a prisoner in the stockade without due process of law.

The granting of the writ is the result of the fierce war that has been going on between the Western Federation of Miners and the Colorado officials for more than three months.

Several other officers of the miners' federation are being held in the "bull pen," and it is understood that efforts will be made to have them released by habeas corpus proceedings.

BUTCHERS' PRESIDENT COMING

Word has been received in this city to the effect that President M. Donnelly of the Butchers and Meat Cutters' union will be in this city during the coming week coming from Chicago as a part of his regular visits to various unions in the country.

A movement upon the part of butchers to prohibit the employment of women in all work requiring the use of a knife is coming in for general approval, because of the danger to which such employment exposes the women and girls at this sort of work.

Whether action will be taken by the local butchers or not upon this proposition is still problematical.

Thirteenth Quadrennial Republican Convention Opens Next Tuesday

GATHERING OF THE NATIONAL REPUBLICAN PARTY IN CHICAGO

President Roosevelt Will Be Named as the Standard Bearer—Some of the History of a Political Organization Which Has Been Successful on Many Occasions and Men Who Have Been Prominent

The thirteenth quadrennial convention of the republican party, to nominate a candidate for president of the United States of America, will assemble next Tuesday in the city of Chicago, the only candidate before the convening being SECRETARY ELMER DOVER.

Theordore Roosevelt, the present executive, who is serving the last year of a term to which William McKinley was originally elected, but whom tragic death removed.

It was just twenty years ago that the same conditions in the affairs existed. Chester A. Arthur was serving then the unexpired term of James A. Garfield, who was killed by an assassin, except that Mr. Arthur did not have the assurance of nomination that Mr. Roosevelt now has. More than this, Mr. Arthur was not nominated and in that year the democrats succeeded in electing Grover Cleveland. It remains to be seen whether, after two decades, history will repeat itself in regard to the success of the attacking party.

Twelve times have the representatives of the republican party met in national convention. When the first of these gatherings was held in Philadelphia on June 17, 1856, the party had been less than four months born, but there have been few assemblies in America inspired by nobler enthusiasm or larger hopes for the future. These hopes were well founded, for the Philadelphia convention marked the entrance of an organization that was to conduct the greatest war of modern times, abolish slavery and maintain its power unbroken for a quarter of a century.

One of the surviving participants in that historic gathering is the now venerable Galusha A. Grow of Pennsylvania, who delights on occasion to talk of its labors. "The great question in 1856," said he not long ago, "was that of slavery. The naturalization or Know-Nothing question, however, was also a dominant issue.

"The loss of the presidency in 1856 prepared the way for the great struggle with slavery and assured the victory of 1860. With a temporary success in 1856, the republicans might have been defeated in 1860 and might have inaugurated a series of compromises with slavery which would have made its abolition almost impossible."

NOMINATION OF LINCOLN

When the republican national convention met in Chicago, May 16, 1860, the nomination of William H. Seward for the presidency seemed a foregone conclusion, and until well toward its close his selection was regarded as a certainty by all save a handful of delegates. Why, in the end, was he put aside and Lincoln taken in his place? Andrew G. Curtin of Pennsylvania, some years before his death, gave the answer to this question. A few weeks before the meeting of the national convention Curtin was made the republican candidate for governor of Pennsylvania. Curtain believed that Seward was especially weak in Pennsylvania, and that his nomination would mean the defeat of both the state and national tickets.

"Seward led on the first ballot, but on the second, as had been previously arranged, the Pennsylvania delegates changed from Cameron to Lincoln, which caused an immediate and fatal break in the lines of the Seward men. Before the ballot closed the Vermont and New Jersey delegates, among whom we had done effective work the night before, asserted Seward for Lincoln, and the announcement of the vote showed Seward leading. Changes to Lincoln followed each other in rapid succession during the progress of the third ballot, and before it was ended he had 231½ votes, 233 being required to nominate. Then four of the Ohio delegates changed to Lincoln, assuring his nomination, and before the ballot closed 354 out of 446 delegates had declared in his favor. The Seward leaders, who had been confident of his nomination until the last, were amazed and dumbfounded at the result, but William M. Evarts promptly moved that Lincoln's nomination should be made unanimous, and with the enthusiasm that usually attends an event of the kind the motion was carried. Lincoln carried Pennsylvania by a decisive majority, and his nomination proved, as I had all along believed that it would, the very strongest that could have been made."

LINCOLN'S RUNNING MATE

There was during the opening months of 1864 a determined and more or less noisy opposition to the renomination of Lincoln. This came from two sources—the radical abolitionists, who cafed it what they called the president's half-hearted policy in regard to slavery, and another element, which, while supporting the union, believed that slavery should be let alone; but it shrank into insignificance as time went on, and when the republican convention met at Baltimore, on June 7, Lincoln was renominated on the first ballot. However, this confirmation of the people's choice was but an incident. The convention's most important work, as the sequel proved, was the nomination of Andrew Johnson for vice president. Hannibal Hamlin, who then held that office, had been nominated in 1860 because he was a representative republican fresh from the democratic party, while Lincoln, the head of the ticket, was an old-time whig.

FOR THE VICE PRESIDENCY

Grant's consent to become a candidate for the presidency made his nomination by the republican national convention, which met in Chicago on May 20, 1868, a mere matter of form. There was not a dissenting voice to his selection in the entire convention. However, considerable interest and excitement was attached to the choice of a candidate for vice president. The names of Ben Wade, Reuben E. Fenton any Schuyler Colfax were presented and each had strong and able supporters, the friends of Wade, who, as presiding officer of the senate, would have been president had Johnson been convicted on the impeachment charges, being especially earnest and active in his behalf. Their fight, though stubborn, was a hopeless one. On the fifth and final ballot Wade had but 38 votes to 541 for Colfax and 69 for Fenton.

A struggle over the nomination for vice president was also the principal feature of the republican national convention held in Philadelphia on June 5, 1872. Grant's course as president had arrayed against him many of the ablest leaders of his party, but these, when the Philadelphia convention met, had already deserted the republican standard to support the candidacy of Horace Greeley, and the president was renominated without opposition on the first ballot. Vice President Colfax was not so fortunate. He had suffered from ill health during the preceding winter, and announced that he would not be a candidate, but later changed his mind and made a desperate battle to win what he had thrown away. The tide was turned against him by the Washington correspondents, who had become estranged from him, and on the second ballot he was defeated by Henry Wilson.

FIRST DEFEAT FOR BLAINE

The republican national convention, which assembled in Cincinnati on June 14, 1876, marked the opening of a new era in the history of the party. It met with an open field and with a stage filled by men who had become prominent since the civil war. The most conspicuous candidate was James G. Blaine, who, though still under 50, had already gained a hold upon the masses equaling in warmth and enthusiasm that enjoyed by Henry Clay in earlier years.

All of the enthusiasm, however, was for Blaine, whose plurality on the first ballot was so great that his friends believed that the victory had been practically won.

Perhaps it might have been had not Blaine been ill in Washington and unable to counsel with his friends, while shrewd enemies were on the field, determined to defeat him. Thus in the end a combination was effected looking to the nomination of Hayes, who had the advantage of having entailed no personal enmities and the prestige of having lately defeated Allen G. Thurman in a desperate battle for the governorship of Ohio. Michigan on the fifth ballot set the cue by going over to Hayes. On the seventh ballot the New York delegates agreed to support him, while Pennsylvania split its vote, giving Hayes a part and Blaine a part, and when the result was announced Hayes had 384 votes—five more than was necessary to a choice.

In 1876 it was Blaine against the field. When the republican national convention met at Chicago on June 2, 1880, it was Blaine against Grant, who had been put forward for a third term. John Sherman was also in the field as a possible compromise candidate. The result was a battle royal.

NOMINATION OF GARFIELD

The nominating speeches were made on Saturday. There was a respite during Sunday, and Monday the balloting began. It soon became evident that Blaine could defeat Grant, but could not nominate himself, while Grant could defeat Blaine, but must fall with him. "I congratulate you upon being the dark horse," was the message Conkling had sent to Garfield at an earlier stage of the convention, and events now confirmed his foresight.

Six months before the republican national convention assembled at Chicago on June 3, 1884, Blaine declared to a friend that he neither desired nor expected a nomination, but that he did not intend that Arthur should have it. The history of what followed is written in this declaration.

Defeated at the polls, yet still strong in the popular regard, Blaine's peremptory refusal, on account of ill health, to permit his name to be considered, alone prevented his renomination by the republican national convention which met in Chicago on June 21, 1888.

His withdrawal turned the contest into a free-for-all scrub race between Sherman, Alger, Depew and Harrison, which lasted several days.

Harrison thus became the logical candidate, and in the end was nominated without a serious contest. Levi P. Morton of New York was named for vice president, not only because he occupied a strong position in the politics of the country, but because he was able to financier the campaign.

PASSING OF BLAINE

The republican national convention of 1892 witnessed Blaine's last appearance as an aspirant for the presidency. It was a great party's proud and sad farewell to its greatest leader. It was the passing of Blaine. The first ballot showed a clear majority for Harrison, with whom Whitelaw Reid of New York was nominated for vice president. Six months later Blaine was dead.

In the republican national convention held in St. Louis, beginning on June 16, 1896, the only serious struggle, and that a brief one, was over the money plank in the platform. The candidacy of ex-Governor William McKinley of Ohio, which had been in long and skilful preparation, triumphed over all opposition, and he was nominated for president on the first ballot.

Garret A. Hobart of New Jersey was then taken because he had the greater organized strength and was the choice of most of McKinley's adherents.

President McKinley was renominated by acclamation by the republican national convention which met in Philadelphia on June 19,1900, but a more important issue of that gathering was the choice of Theodore Roosevelt as the candidate for vice president. The rest is history.

CHAIRMAN GEORGE B. CORTELYOU.

George Bruce Cortelyou, secretry of commerce and labor and formerly secretary to the president, has been chosen chairman of the national republican convention.

(Copyright, 1904, by W. R. Hearst.)

NEW YORK, April 18.—These are the men who will represent New York state as delegates at large to the republican national convention. They are Senators Platt and Depew, Governor Odell and former Governor Frank S. Black. They dominated the recent state convention.

HENRY CABOT LODGE WRITING PLATFORM

Senator Henry Cabot Lodge of Massachusetts, who is writing the republican national platform, is the president's chum. The president calls him Cabot and he addresses the president as Theodore. They go horseback riding together and take long walks. They visit much and talk of books, of which they know more than 'most anybody.

Their friendship is of long standing and time seems only to make it stronger. In 1895, working together, they made a notable literary production called "Hero Tales from American History."

Of course, this writing of the platform by Lodge smacks a little of party proprietorship, but it is, in fact, not extraordinary. It is the customary thing for the dominant element in every political convention to prepare the platform in advance.

The rule is to have conferences of the leaders to decide upon the line of talk to be embalmed in the platform and then designate one or two fellows to do the literary work. The finished product is revised and finally approved by the leaders and is then submitted to the committee on resolutions appointed by the convention.

In committee, the cut and dried platform is open for discussion and and amendment. The changes made depend a good deal upon the strength and obstinacy of the dominant convention element.

POSTMASTER GENERAL GREAT POLITICIAN

WASHINGTON, June 17.—Postmaster General Henry C. Payne of Milwaukee was formerly vice chairman of the republican national committee and was in charge of the Chicago headquarters during the campaign of 1900. Mr. Payne succeeded to the chairmanship of the committee upon the death of Senator Hanna last winter.

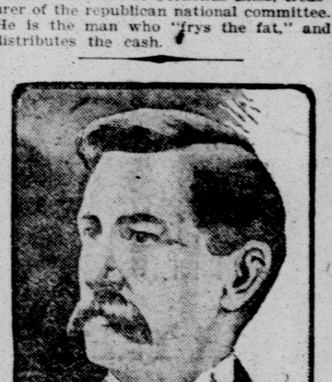

He is in feeble health. Were he robust there is no question that he would be the chairman of the national committee this year. When he was appointed postmaster general, two years ago, there was an understanding that he would be a sort of field marshal in charge of the president's political interests. His poor health will prevent him from taking an active part in the campaign. It may even force his retirement from the cabinet.

Payne is recognized as one of the most accomplished political managers in the country. His services to McKinley and Hanna in the campaigns of 1896 and 1900 were just about invaluable.

One of the closest friends of Roosevelt in the convention is Henry C. Payne of Milwaukee, who besides being a member of the president's official family, represents Wisconsin on the republican national committee.

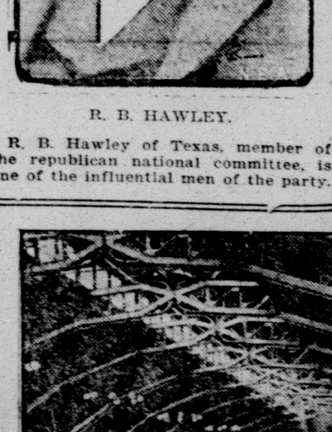

The tremendous row among Wisconsin republicans places him in rather an embarrassing position. As chairman of the national committee he will have an important part in the job of deciding whether the La Follette or stalwart faction delegates are entitled to seats in the convention. He has been identified with the stalwarts. If La Follette wins, Mr. Payne may lose the place on the national committee that he has held for twenty years as the representative of Wisconsin.

Mr. Payne was born in Massachusetts in 1843 and removed to Milwaukee in 1863. In 1872 he organized the young men's republican club which was the nucleus of the republican central committee of Milwaukee county. He served at various times as secretary and chairman of the county committee and chairman of the state central committee. From 1876 to 1886 he was postmaster of Milwaukee. He has grown rich through bank, railroad, telephone and street railway enterprises.

LESLIE M. SHAW

Secretary of the Treasurer Leslie M. Shaw is one of the big men in the councils of the president. He is a prominent figure at the convention.

CORNELIUS BLISS

Every politician in the republican party takes off his hat to Cornelius Bliss, treasurer of the republican national committee. He is the man who "frys the fat," and distributes the cash.

R. B. HAWLEY.

R. B. Hawley of Texas, member of the republican national committee, is one of the influential men of the party.

J. W. BLYTHE TO RUN CAMPAIGN IN WEST

Joseph W. Blythe of Burlington, leader of the controlling "stand-pat" faction of Iowa republicans, may take charge of President Roosevelt's campaign for the presidential election in the western states. Since the announcement came from Washington that Secretary George B.

JOSEPH W. BLYTHE.

Cortelyou of the department of commerce and labor would be made chairman of the republican national committee, the belief that Mr. Blythe would be named to take charge of the campaign in the west has grown. Even if he does not take the vice chairmanship, he is certain to be an important factor in the campaign as an adviser. Mr. Blythe was last week named by the Iowa republican convention as one of the state's four delegates at large to the national convention at Chicago.

Mr. Blythe is the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy's political representative in Iowa. He does his work incidentally with his duties as general solicitor for the Burlington. He has been active in Iowa politics for ten years, and became most prominent as manager of the campaign of his father-in-law, the late Senator John H. Gear, four years ago, when Albert B. Cummins, now governor of Iowa, gave Senator Gear the hottest race of his life for re-election to the senate. Blythe's marvelous power over men was given its greatest demonstration at that time. Since then his place as the boss of the republicans of Iowa has been secure.

JOS. BELL COTTON.

WASHINGTON, June 16.—Joseph B. Cotton, one of the men chosen to second the nomination of President Roosevelt at the Chicago convention, is a Duluth lawyer. He is well known throughout the state. Folks out there have applauded his selection as a tribute to his good nature and popularity, but a good many of them doubt the wisdom of the selection as a matter of policy.

Cotton represents the Standard Oil Company in Minnesota. He is also the representative of John D. Rockefeller, who has large property interests in the state.

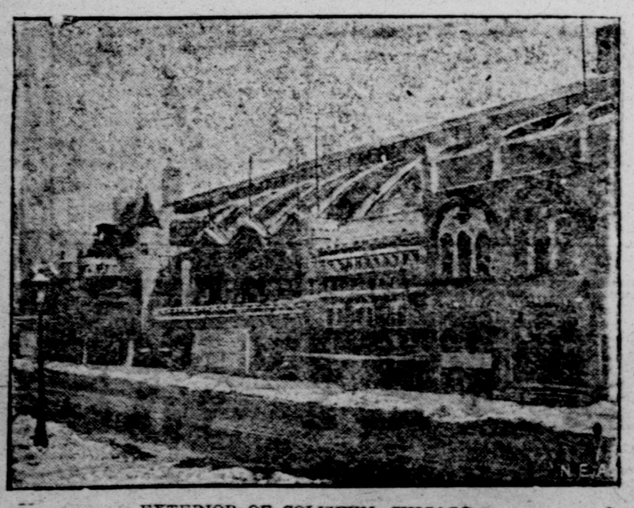

Cotton is a liftle under 40 years of age. Early in his professional career he made a specialty of corporation law and that he achieved eminence is certified by the fact that the Standard and Rockefeller have employed him. He is an accomplished orator, a good mixer and his fellow citizens are certain that his speech will be a credit to him and to the state.

Nearly ten years ago Cotton served a term in the Minnesota legislature. Both Cotton and Edwards of Georgia have visited the White House to discuss their seconding speeches with the president.

G. H. BAKER.

G. H. Baker represents Washington on the republican national committee.

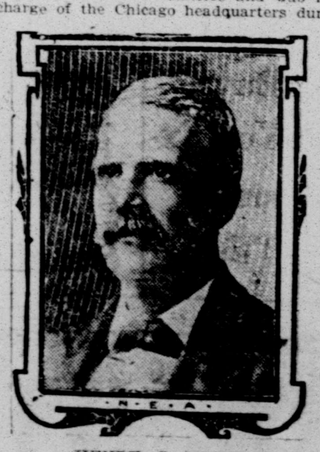

EXTERIOR OF COLISEUM, CHICAGO.

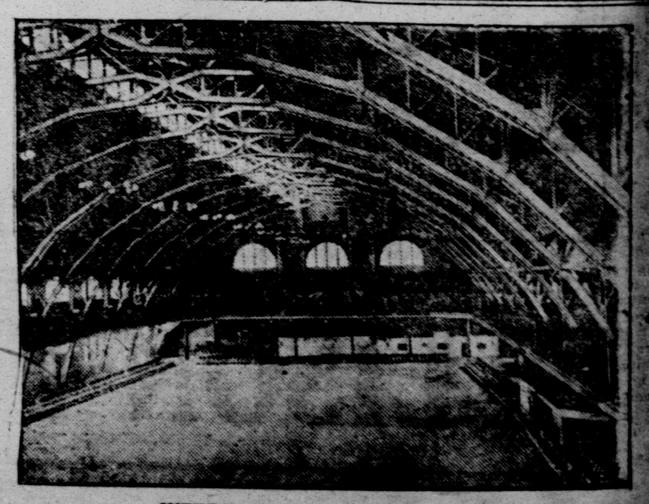

CHARLES R. BRAYTON.

One of the picturesque figures of the convention is General Charles R. Brayton, who is blind, but who is the big boss of the republican organization in Rhode Island and represents his state on the national committee.

GATHERING OF REPUBLICANS

THE TREASURER OF THE NATIONAL REPUBLICAN COMMITTEE FRYING THE FAT.

FRANKLIN MURPHY.

One of the big bosses of the republican party is Franklin Murphy, governor of New Jersey, and member of the republican convention.

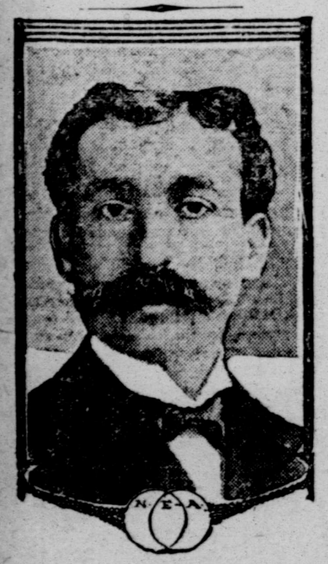

SENATOR J. H. GALLINGER.

Senator Gallinger of New Hampshire, is the "big man" in republican politics in his state. He will play an important part in the national campaign.

W. P. BROWNLOW.

ABRAHAM REUF,

The California delegation to the republican national convention at Chicago will be headed by Abraham Ruef, whose rise in the world of politics has been so phenomenal as to make him one of the most talked of men in this part of the country.

Mr. Reuf graduated from the University of California in 1883 at the age of 18 years, and since that time has amassed a large fortune in the practice of law. As a politician he is looked upon as one of the most powerful men on the Pacific coast.

mayor for San Francisco and is a leading factor in state politics. He will take an active part in the coming convention and will guide the California delegation in this work.

JOHN W. YERKES.

John W. Yerkes is a Kentuckian and represents that state on the national republican committee. He is also commissioner of internal revenue. He has long been a factor among Kentucky republicans. Politics are strefluous down that way and Yerkes has gained and held his honors only after battles that stirred the blood and tried the nerve of men.

In one campaign Yerkes received notice that if he voted at a certain polling place he would be killed. He met the challenge by placing a couple of revolvers in his overcoat pockets and voting. The killers, upon witnessing his courage, changed their minds and did not attempt to molest him.

Yerkes has the presence and accomplishments of a leader. He is more than six feet tall, a convincing orator and a clever story teller. He is a lawyer with a great reputation as a jury pleader.

J. W. BLODGETT.

J. H. MANLEY.

IF YOU HAVE A KICK TELL IT TO DOVER

Elmer Dover, secretary of the national committee, is charged with the duty of arranging for the preliminary organization of the republican convention. His first job is to get the contests for seats in shape for the consideration of the committee at a meeting to be held in Chicago June 15. At that session aspiring republicans will come to the front with their grievances. They will tell how (in their opinion) they were beaten out of the election to seats in the convention by sharp parliamentary practice, deception, fraud and riot. It will be a kind of hard luck congress.

When the contests for seats have been decided Dover will make up the temporary roll of delegates and the convention program, subject to the approval of the committee. Meantime, he will wrestle, as he is wrestling now, with a mass or correspondence from all sections relating to the convention. He will remove the committee headquarters from this city to Chicago on June 1.

Dover will probably be made secretary of the committee during the campaign. It seems probable that he will be given the appointment because it would be difficult to get along without him. As secretary to Senator Hanna he was placed in touch with every detail of the great Hanna organization. He knows the conditions in every state; the men whose influence is valuable and the men who claim to be great, but are counterfeits. He knows the factional troubles and the political problems in every section, and how Senator Hanna dealt with them. He will be personally acquainted with about half the delegates to the convention. All this information will be just about invaluable to the campaign managers, and that is why it seems probable that they will keep Dover at the front.

J. W. DIMMICK.

Alabama is hopelessly democratic, but it has a representative on the republican national committee in the person of J. W. Dimmick.

HARRY S. NEW.

In Indiana, republican office seekers must "see Harry New." He is a newspaper man, member of the republican national committee and declined the assistant postmaster generalship under Roosevelt.

J. M. GREENE.

J. M. Green, South Dakota's representative on the republican national committee.

HARRY STILLWELL EDWARDS.

Harry Stillwell Edwards, novelist, poet, story writer and postmaster at Macon, Ga., will second the nomination of President Roosevelt on behalf of the south. He is a gifted orator and his speech will probably be one of the notable features of the convention.

Edwards is one of the scions of the new south. He told of it in prose, sang of it in poetry and recited its glories on the lecture platform. He is for progress and Roosevelt.

This seconder of the presidential nomination was born at Macon in 1855, the son of James Carson Edwards, a celebrated Georgia poet. Young Edwards practiced law for a time. Then he joined the force of the Macon Daily Telegraph, working his way up from reporter to editor in chief. His leisure time was employed in the writing of stories of southern life for the magazines. He also wrote a novel of southern life that won a prize of $10,000. He has also given public readings from his stories in all parts of the country. With his wife and four children he lives on a beautiful plantation a few miles out of Macon.

FRANK S. BLACK.

President Roosevelt and his advisers have completed the arrangements for the program of the national convention.

It has been decided that Elihu Root, ex-secretary of war, will be temporary chairman and that Frank S. Black, ex-governor of New York, a speaker of national renown, will present the name of the president to the delegates.

Black will be followed by several other speakers who will second the nomination, among whom will be Harry Stillwell Edwards, the author, of Macon, Ga.

Illinois is represented on the republican national committee by Hon. Graeme Stewart of Chicago.

LOUIS E. McCOMAS.

RECALLS A STORY OF COURT DENTIST

(Copyright, 1904, by W. R. Hearst.)

LONDON, June 18.—The recent news of Dr. Evans shooting himself in the presence of the woman with whom he had fled recalls to the minds of all the name of his illustrious uncle, the Dr. Evans, court dentist of the Second Empire, who aided a woman's flight and saved from the fury of the mob one who had been the queen of European beauty.

With the crumbling of the second empire into dust before Prussian guns arose the Commune forerunner of the republic.

Along the streets mobs played football with the busts of the emperor who only a few months before had been the little tin idol they all worshipped. Others moved in thousands toward the palace of the Tuilleries, mad for vengeance on the woman who had said: "There must be war, or my son will never reign over France."

The thought of the ten thousand wives made widows and children made fatherless by the act of this woman of the sweet and gracious presence drove them blood crazy.

"We will have one life for ten thousand—the life of the Spaniard!" they cried.

But while the crowd was battering at the doors of the Tuilleries the empress hidden in the cloak of an old market woman, was slipping out of the building by the rear gate.

She possessed the quality of courage. "As we pressed through the crowd," said one of her attendants afterward, "I held her arm. It was as cold and steady as her heart."

The lust for gain had taken possession of the lust for blood on the part of the mob, and to this fact the empress owed her safety from the mob, some of whom recognized her in passing.

She whose lightest word had been all-powerful now sought shelter at house after house. Each door was closed in her face.

But she presently came to the home of Dr. Evans. "Sit among my patients and hide your face," he said.

Within five minutes she had passed into his private room.

Then, with a resource only possible in an American, Dr. Evans proposed his plan. The empress must travel as a dangerous lunatic in his charge.

Thus, as doctor and patient, they got to the coast. Wherever they stopped to rest the doctor took a back room guarded by shutters, in which to keep safe the "dangerous homicidal maniac" he was taking to a private asylum.

The empress had nothing save the clothes in which she stood. Her two handkerchiefs were drenched with tears.

The doctor stopped at a wayside stream, washed the handkerchiefs, and hung them out to dry. At the coast they found the yacht of Lord Burgoyne, which had been waiting in view of just such an emergency.

In after years Dr. Evans often came to England, but it suited the purpose of Eugenie, safe in the love of generous Queen Victoria, to forget Dr. Evans.

"Dr. Evans?" said the empress wonderingly when some one made chance mention of his name. "Y—e—s, I have some recollection of h—i—m, an American—and a very capable dentist."

It needed the wit of the Countess of Blessington to meet such a situation. Napoleon III, meeting his former benefactress in Paris after his accession to the throne, gave her the tips of his fingers and said: "How—do—you—do—ah—Lady Blessington. How—long—do—you—remain—in—Paris?"

"Oh, about three weeks," replied the countess. "And you?"

The jaded aristocracy, ever seeking a new sensation, have now turned to curiosities of the Georgian period, and the people who live by fabricating curios for the market have made a rich harvest from inexperienced collectors, smoothly palming off on them old objects made yesterday.

For smooth, conscienceless swindling the British tradesman is unapproached in the world. But he is, perhaps, at his finest in the creation of sham antiques.

Many of the old pictures and medallions in tea cup and saucer give quite a new character to some personages. Frederick Prince of Wales becomes positively attractive in appearance.

Poor old Farmer George, who knew how to take defeat like a gentleman, as witness his greeting to Franklin at the close of the war of Independence, ceases to be the poor old simpleton and becomes the handsome dandy who promised so much and did so little.

PACHYDERM MEAT IS SOLD BY BUTCHER AND PEOPLE ILL

Elephant in the Zoo Was Killed and the Carcass Was Made Into Sausages for the Trade

(Copyright, 1904, by W. R. Hearst.)

BRUSSELS, June 18.—Hundreds of people in the neighborhood of this city are walking around with a most peculiar feeling in their stomachs. A large elephant in the zoological garden had to be killed and the carcas was bought by a butcher, who lost no time in transforming it into sausages. No less than 4,000 of these were made out of the elephant meat and sold like hot cakes until the buyers found out from what kind of meat they had been made. Several of them then declared that they had been feeling ill from eating the sausages, but had not known the reason why and a complaint was made to the police.

In court, however, the butcher declared that the meat was perfectly sound and that as none of his customers had asked him as to the ingredients from which the frankfurters were made he had not felt obliged to inform them. As there is no law in Belgium against making elephant sausages, the butcher was discharged, especially as a number of people whom he had invited to a special dinner consisting of dishes made from the heart of the elephant and who knew what they were eating, declared the taste of the unusual meat to be excellent and that they had suffered no ill consequences from indulging in it.

SUCCESS OF FULTON MAKES KAISER BITTER

(Copyright, 1904, by W. R. Hearst.)

BERLIN, June 18.—The success of the new American submarine boat Fulton is said to have filled the kaiser with bitterness.

For years he has watched the building in France of a large number of powerful submarines, which in case of war would have the German navy entirely at their mercy, but he had placed great hope in a German submarine of a new pattern which was to have been shown to King Edward during the coming Kieler week.

Great was his disappointment, therefore, when the completed boat proved an absolute failure. It would float and dive to perfection, but it could not be brought to the surface when it had dived, a most serious defect in a submarine.

The kaiser read the news of the splendid achievements of the Fulton and is said to have remarked to Prince Henry that it was strange the Americans should succeed in everything they undertook, while Germans, in spite of their long and conscientious training in technical colleges, hardly ever succeeded in making any invention of practical value.

A special order has been sent to Captain Hebbinghaus, the new naval attache at Washington, to be on continuous lookout for new developments in American shipbuilding which might be used in the German navy.

That the German government begins to consider the post as naval attache at Washington of more importance than ever is shown by the fact that Captain Hebbinghaus, who is one of the most talented younger officers in the German navy, will remain in the United States at least three years, while all his predecessors have remained only a short time.

The kaiser is being sharply criticised in the press as far as the strict German laws allow this, because of a rather sensational speech which he recently made to a brigade of light artillery, which will leave for Southwest Africa within a short time.

In his speech the kaiser in his Napoleonic manner said:

"Soldiers! I have come to see you once more before your departure for far-away battlefields! May you do honor to me and the GeGrman army, which you will have the honor of representing. Never forget for one minute that you have been sent out to take revenge for the blood of your brethren! Never forget that you have to fight a courageous, energetic and crafty enemy, and under no condition give quarter to anyone."

"The government for whom the kaiser spoke when he addressed this body of soldiers seemed to forget that the Herreros only rose to rebellion after they had been goaded into fury and tortured in the most cruel manner by German soldiers under orders of Christian officers,' writes a socialist paper.

BIG MEXICAN STAMPEDE

J. M. Godfrey is in the city from Sinaloa, Mexico. Mr. Godfrey is a mining man who has been engaged in prospecting for the past three months, says the El Paso Herald.

He tells of an unusual and thrilling experience by which he nearly lost his life. It was a stampede of cattle. What frightened them Godfrey says he does not know. However, they came upon him in a narrow defile surrounded by steep mountains. He was on a horse at the time, but in the mad wild raid of the frightened animals he was run down and thrown from his horse. He was trampled upon by one of the passing herd, but not very seriously injured. His horse was instantly killed. He states there were at least 1,500 in the bunch, and the cattle belonged to Don Jesus Aquirrilar, who owns an extensive ranch in Northwestern Sinaloa. Godfrey reports that he heard the herd for half a mile as they tore down the narrow pass, but there was nothing to do but put spurs to his horse and hurry onward as fast as he could. But his horse was not a rapid traveler and he was soon overtaken.

The herd had been collected together to cut out some young cattle for shipment, but had got beyond control of cowboys and started down the valley. They were finally overtaken and stopped by the outriders, who started in pursuit.

SOME ARIZONA SHIPMENTS

Last week 563 head of twos were shiped from Wilcox to Pearce City, S. D. The shipment was made up from ranches of the following cattlemen: Riggs cattle outfit, Scow & Newell, Monk Brothers, Frank Halderman, Dave Johnson, Thomas Allaire, R. M. McKinney & Sons, W. E. Servoss, J. A. Rockefellow, Gus Moore, John R. Gilman, Fred Waughtal and Charles Busenbark. The consideration was $15 per head. M. J. Galindo accompanied the stock to their destination and will visit the World's Fair before his return to Wilcox.—Wilcox News.

ARIZONA CONDITIONS BAD

D. J. Teeter, the Tonto cattleman, who was in town on Tuesday, reported the range condition in that section as deplorable. On parts of the range, particularly where sheep have grazed, there is n ot a vestige of grass, and the drouth is so severe that the oak brush has been killed. On Salome, Armer and Long gulches, Lower Tonto, Mr. Peter estimates that two-thirds of the cattle will die. Tom Armer recently counted seventy-six dead cattle while traveling two miles.—Globe Silver Belt.

IN GOOD SHAPE

R. R. Russell writes us from Cedar Vale, Kan., that the Osage reservation is in the best shape he ever saw it. He says: "Cattle are doing fine, grass good, plenty of rain and abundance of water. I have just looked over R. S. Winslow's, W. B. Ellis', J. F. Ellis', A. H. Murchison's, in fact all of the Menard county cattlemen's cattle and they are all doing fine.—Menard Enterprise.

DEVIL'S RIVER STATISTICS

Live stock, wool and mutton sales of the Sonora country for the year 1903 was as follows: Shipped to the Territory, 15,000 cattle; sold, 1 and 2-year-old steers, 12,000; mutton sheep shipped to market, 75,000; wool shipped and sold at Kerrville and San Angelo from the Sonora country, 500,000 pounds, at an average price of 13 cents per pound, and the year 1904 will lead 1903 in both cattle, mutton and wool.—Sonora News.

GENERAL RAIN REPORTED

Sunday morning this section was visited by one of the hardest downpours that has fallen in many years. The creek rose some ten feet Sunday morning, but by night had fallen six feet. It commenced rising again about 7 o'clock, the rise coming from the head of the creek. By 2:30 o'clock Monday morning it was out of its banks. It didn't take it long to run down when it started, which was about 4 a. m. The rain was a general one, and is a great blessing to this section of the state, as things were getting in a hard shape. The San Saba was on an eighteen-foot rise.—Brady Enterprise.

IKE PRYOR'S VIEWS

Colonel Ike Pryor came in Wednesday morning from Fort Worth, where he attended the quarterly meeting of the executive committee of the Cattle Raisers' Association of Texas. He said to a San Antonio Express representative: "Cattlemen generally are pleased to note the late improvement in the cattle market and while there are only a few fortunate ones with fat cattle on hand just now to reap the benefits, nevertheless there is an abundance of hope accompanied by more or less expectation that the demand will be good for several months at any rate." Speaking of conditions generally he continued: "I have no desire to minimize the evil effects of the tacit understanding between packers nor of the decreased use of meat by the masses as a result of the high prices demanded by the retail butchers, but there are other millstones hanging about the neck of the cattleman which require speedy attention. The Cattle Raisers' association is doing what it can to afford relief from the burden on interstate shipments which includes equitable rates, better service and the abandonment of the tonnage system, but there are some things the individual must look after himself. He must produce what he has to sell at the minimum of cost, and what he produces should be of the best quality possible under the circumstances. In most instances his pasture costs him too much and again he pays from $3.00 to $5.00 too much for cotton seed meal or cake, as well as a correspondingly excessive price for hulls. Taking the excessive cost of pasture, feed and freight on a steer, which will amount to between $4.00 and $6.00, together with the fact that the packer will buy him for $4.00 or $5.00 less than he is reasonably worth, you will find that a ten dollar bill has vanished over 50 per cent of which could have been saved through the proper effort on the part of the individual to keep down expenses. In my opinion the state should reduce the lease price of her school lands. There will be a day no doubt when the homeseeker will need these lands but our land commissioner's experience thus far is that not only is he not ready now, but the cattleman is not going to pay the advanced price. That a 'half loaf is better than none,' (if the quotation is applicable) is no less true of a state than of an individual."

BIG LAND DEAL

Wiley Wyatt informs the Times that he has sold to W. E. Parker of Tennessee one of his farms, which is known as the T. A. Heim place and located eight miles down on the north side of the Wichita river, for which Mr. Parker paid him the sum of $25,000 cash. The purchaser has secured one of the best farms in this section, which has always been known for its productiveness. Mr. Parker left for Tennessee and will bring back with him his family in about two weeks. This is not the original Wyatt farm. Mr. Wyatt is still the possessor of that, but it is for sale, and will probably be bought in by some of Mr. Parker's Tennessee neighbors who are figuring on coming to Texas.—Wichita Falls Times.

BOUGHT FINE BULLS

W. P. Goode, formerly of the firm of Breyfogle & Goode, who owned a large range on the Washita southeast of here, shipped to this place from Kansas a car load of fine bred Hereford bulls, which were sold at public auction last Thursday. Colonel James, formerly an employe of the United States in the sale of government lots in Oklahoma, was the auctioneer. This was an opportunity rarely presented to our stockmen to purchase high-bred stock right at home, and at such reasonable figures, the prices ranging from $25 to $215. The first at the very low figure was sold to Ed George; yet, while the price was extremely low, the animal was by no means an inferior one, as they were all above the average. Probably the finest ever seen in the Panhandle, "Antonio No. 118430," by imported Roderick, at the head of the herd, was purchased by C. H. Shaller. This bull would ordinarily have sold at from six to eight hundred dollars, but Mr. Goode brought them here to sell at the people's prices and Mr. Shaller may consider himself fortunate in making the purchase.—Canadian Record.

MARTIN COMMENDED RAILROADS

"Stockmen ought to quit kicking at the railroads now," said Charley Martin of the National Live Stock association in the Drovers' Telegram. "They have got everything they have gone after, from return passes to the abrogation of the tonnage system. The time now being made by stock trains is excellent, as a general thing. I left Denver on Sunday, and after our train had traveled twenty miles we got off one a sidetrack, where we hung up twenty-five minutes. What was our surprise at the end of that time to find that a cattle train whizzed by us at the rate of forty miles an hour, as fast as any of those western roads speed their passenger trains.

"But," continued Mr. Martin, "there are already complaints by the roads that the pass system is being abused again. Seventy-five cars of cattle left a Nebraska town the other day in three sections. On one train of twenty-five cars were fourteen passes, including a preacher, a school teacher and a banker. On another train were thirteen deadheads, and the roads will not stand for such business much longer."

GOOD DEMAND EXPECTED

There is a disposition in some quarters to predict more grief for the range cattle owners next fall on the ground that there will be a heavy run for market. While the west admits that there will be a heavy run to market next fall, those who are posted on the situation claim that the west will have the bulk of the cattle to be marketed and that they will all be wanted by a demand that will hold prices fairly firm. "Suppose we even have 500,000 head for Chicago, and that is an outside figure," said a prominent dealer yesterday, "what does that number amount to when the demand is considered?"

The indications are that for the next few years at least the country will look for the bulk of its beef supply from the west. The eastern farmers who went into breeding again during the boom and had their first crop on the market last year are very much disgusted and are more convinced than ever that breeding cattle on the high-priced farms of the east is no longer profitable. Many have sold their cows and have quit the business, while others will secure young stock from the west to finish. This accounts in part for the unusually strong demand for young cattle on the eastern markets—a demand that is greater than the supply.

Taking the situation as a whole, the western men are inclined to the belief that while boom prices can not be expected, the market has taken a turn for the better and that fairly good prices will prevail next fall. The west has big grass in sight at nearly all points, and with plenty of old hay left over and a big crop coming, the cattle growers feel pretty independent. Another feature that is certain to cut more figure next fall than expected is the Pacific coast demand, which is increasing almost daily. It is reported here that Pacific coast buyers will operate down into Montana and Wyoming this season, and this demand is likely to take care of any surplus that might exist.—Denver Record-Stockman.

IMPROVING MEXICAN CATTLE

E. C. Houghton, manager of the Corolitos Cattle Company of Chihuahua, Mexico, is in the city again, looking around some of the stock farms of this section at breeding stock, says the Kansas City Drovers' Telegram. He is accompanied by W. W. Tuttle of El Paso. The company over the affairs of which Mr. Houghton presides is one of the largest in Mexico, if not the largest. He is contemplating taking a lot of bulls to the ranches of the company and will remain in this locality until his purchases have been made. He says that Northern Mexico has suffered during the winter and spring for want of rain, but that on the whole the grass of the ranges is doing well and cattle look as well as usual for this time of the year.

Mexico is improving as a cattle raising country according to Mr. Houghton. Few of the animals raised in the republic find their way into this country, in proportion to the number raised, and the number shipped in here is not increasing. Most of the cattle raised there are killed at home, though quite a number are shipped to Cuba. When Mr. Houghton learned from Colonel Dean of the bureau of animal industry that tobacco mixed with lime and sulphur was a good remedy for the extermination of lice from cattle he said that few remedies could be cheaper in the republic, as Sonora tobacco was the cheapest in the world. This tobacco, he says, grows in that province almost like alfalfa does in our western country.

TIME FOR INVESTING

A cowman attending the meeting in Denver this week ventured the assertion that now is a good time to go into the stock raising business. Stock is so low that it can go no lower. On the other hand, it must go higher. To show how low cattle are, mortgage holders are not calling in their loans. They want the cattlemen to keep on caring for their stock, waiting for a rise. If the war holds on it will double the fortune of every cattleman in the country. A continuance of prosperity will make markets respond and prices go up. Cowmen are selling their she stock, which means that breeding is being cut off. This exhausts a market in four years and compels an answer in two years. There is not the slightest possible means by which stock can go much lower while there are a hundred by which it must go higher, and this repetition of history encourages range breeders to continue operations.—Denver Field and Farm.

AN IMPORTANT FENCE

The longest fence in the world is probably that which has been erected by the Erie Cattle Company along the Mexican border. It is seventy-five miles in length and separates exactly for its entire distance the two republics of North America. The fence was built to keep the cattle from running across the border and falling an easy prey to the Mexican cowpunchers. Although it cost a great deal of money, it is estimated that cattle enough will be saved in one year to more than pay for it. It is a barbed wire fence, with mesquite and cotton wood poles, and for the entire length it runs as straight as the crow flies.—Dallas News.

GRAY COUNTY RANCH

Elmer Reeves sold to G. W. Morris of Memphis, Texas, the Fritz ranch, consisting of five sections owned and seven sections leased. Mr. Morris passed by last Thursday, driving about 800 head of cattle on the road to his new purchase. This place is considered cheap at the price he paid, $10,000. It is plains and hillside lands. Much of it is suitable for cultivation.—Gray County Eagle.

RAIN AT AMARILLO

Thursday evening about 7:30 o'clock a heavy rain and hail storm came up and lasted for about an hour. The hail did considerable damage to gardens, and a number of window glasses were broken. The volume of rain that fell will make plenty of stock water and be of great benefit to crops that have been planted.—Amarillo Champion.

PRICES ARE BETTER

A. E. de Riegles has returned from a trip south. He purchased the Figure 8 two-year-olds from Burke Burnett at $20, which is one of the best sales reported this season, but these cattle are exceptionally good and rank with the tops of that section. Mr. de Riegles reports that trade is not active, though there are many buyers south. The trouble is not so much with prices as the condition of the cattle. Buyers think prices high for the condition the cattle are in. I. M. Humphrey of South Dakota bought the Long S cattle at $17 around. Prices are looking better and when the cattle are in good shape there is no trouble to make sales.—Denver Record-Stockman.

PECOS COUNTY CONDITIONS

Jim Martin, foreman of the Dull ranch, shipped six car loads of cattle on Friday to the Osage Nation, I. T. Grass and water are at a premium in this section of the country, and if it doesn't rain soon more ranchmen will be obliged to follow Jim's lead.—Sanderson News.

LOSSES CAUSED SUICIDE

The city was startled Saturday by W. H. Wilton, a ranchman on the Bib Lou, twenty miles east of Clifton, committing suicide.

He was in town for the past two weeks and felt depressed over his losses in goats and horses from the drouth.

His son, Lee, came in from the ranch Friday to see what was detaining his father so long. Saturday forenoon the father left the boy on the street, saying that he would go down to his friend, Boomerang Smith's, and lie down awhile. Late in the afternoon Lee went there to get his father up, and was horrified to find him dead on the couch with a bullet hole through his head and a six-shooter by his side.—Clifton (N. M.) Herald.

NEW MEXICO CONDITIONS

John McCabe came in the first of the week from his ranch on the Animas, says the Lordsburg Liberal. He says his loss on cattle has been light so far, not over two a day, but he says they are getting in good condition to die, and to raise this average, unless there are early rains in that section. He has a well-boring outfit at work, which has drilled 180 feet, where there are good indications of water, and the hole is as dry as a powder horn.

PARTIAL RAINS REPORTED

Reports from the vicinity of Clayton, Folsom and Bueyeros, Union county, have it that while heavy rains have fallen in some parts of the county and stock is doing well, still in other parts the drouth is unbroken. In the favored sections 70 per cent of the lambs were saved, while in other parts not 5 per cent were saved. In Lincoln county out of many large herds not a single lamb was saved.—Albuquerque (N. M.) Journal.

THE CALIFORNIA RANGE

T. F. Gates of the Greene Cattle Company has been to California on cattle business. On his return to Bisbee he was queried by newspaper men relative to live stock matters, and in speaking about the range controlled by his company, said that the outlook is most encouraging for this season. The recent rains have filled the water holes in the San Pedro valley, and the grass back from the river is growing well. Before the rains the cattle were bunched along the partly dried water course and had eaten off the grass completely; starvation had set in, and many cattle were giving out. As soon as the rain came the big bunches of cattle broke up and spread out over the range back from the river and are rapidly regaining their strength. Mr. Gates said that the report that the southern California ranges were in a terrible condition is a mistake. Those ranges have received plenty of rain, and the grass is thick and high. His company has a big herd of cattle on the southern California range and he said that these cattle are in splendid shape, all being fat and strong.—Arizona Stockman.

BEEF TRUST INVESTIGATION

The "beef trust" investigation by the department of commerce or properly speaking, the federal government investigation, into live stock and meat trade conditions is drawing to a close. The probers assigned to trans-Missouri territory have concluded their labors and those working at Chicago will wind up their work in about two weeks. The task, which has been thorough, has lasted longer than expected. The report will be ready for presentation to congress when it convenes.—Chicago Live Stock World.

UNIQUE COWBOY RACE

ALBUQUERQUE, N. M., June 30.—F. H. Leland, a veteran cavalryman, and William Closson, a well known cowboy of this section, are organizing a 1,200-mile relay race for cowboys, open to riders in New Mexico and Arizona, with the starting point at Albuquerque and the finish at the gates of the World's Fair grounds in St. Louis.

The purse will be $1,500 and will be offered by New Mexico stockmen. There are already six entered in the contest, and it is probable that the start will be made during the first week in July. The distance from Albuquerque to St. Louis by rail over the shortest route is 1,150 miles.

NEW MEXICANS THIN

George Chessman, who has been down in New Mexico buying cattle was at the yards. He says the cattle in New Mexico are very thin and few are in condition to move at this time. He believes that after the cattle are in better shape the bulk of them will be shipped to California.—Denver Record-Stockman.

SOLD TERRITORY CATTLE

Charles Flippens has sold his territory cattle to R. L. Boog-Scott. The sale includes about 500 head of mixed cattle, mostly cows, 300 stripe steers and 800 partnership Busk cows. Terms are private.—Coleman Democrat.

HUNTING FOR GRASS

W. R. Cole and J. W. Allen shipped 200 head of steers to Wheeler county Tuesday.—Big Springs Enterprise.

BUILDING DIPPING PLANTS

GUTHRIE, Okla., June 20.—Throughout northwestern Oklahoma, which is practically all there is left of Oklahoma as a cattle country, the owners of the big herds are constructing dipping plants of their own for the purpose of killing mange mites and fever ticks on their cattle, whenever either of these pests makes its appearance. James W. Wiggins of Beaver county was among the first to construct such a plant for private use, but his lead has been followed by Harrington & Cornish and other big ranchers.

Wiggins constructed a plant on the principle of an elevator and can dip two hundred head daily, one at a time. He can let them remain in the vat as long as he desires and can "souse" them under as often as he wishes; he claims repeated dipping is necessary in extreme cases. He also makes a side business of dipping cattle for his neighbors.

All cattlemen are using the formulas prescribed by the government in preparing the liquid in which the cattle are dipped, and in this way the dipping becomes just as effective, so far as the laws are concerned, as the dipping done by government inspectors.

From southern Colorado, northern New Mexico and some parts of Kansas and Oklahoma, cattlemen claim that mange mites are hard to get rid of; they claim that dipping will kill the pests on infected cattle, but that such cattle soon become again infected, and the matter has been taken up with the government to secure, if possible, some plan to eradicate the disease.

Cattle prices, it is claimed, are somewhat buoyant in northwestern Oklahoma. Recently buyers from other states have tried in vain to pick up bunches of yearling steers at $12.50 per head. The calf crop is reported good in that locality, although the grass for several weeks was delayed by the continued drouth that existed in the spring, and the delay made the spring a hard one on the cows and young calves. One cattleman in that locality, Green Davis, lost seven head of cattle from eating oak leaves, and another ranchman, James Christian, reports twenty lost from the same effects. The grass shortage caused the cattle to eat too greedily of the leaves and death resulted.

TRADING GETTING LIVELY

"The trading is becoming a little livelier in the southwest," said Marsh Parker, who has just returned from a short stay in Texas. "Cattle down there wintered well and would have been in fine shape this summer, had it not been for the general drouth. In many parts of Texas and Arizona they have had no general rain for over seven months and cattle have suffered severely. Lately they have had some good rains in spots and it is this fact that to a considerable extent determines the prices at which the cattle are held. If a man has had a good rain he is not disposed to accept the prices offered. While a man who has not seen a dust settling rain for seven or eight months is frequently very anxious to trade in order to get his cattle off his hands before they starve or perish from thirst. Another thing that naturally affects the price is the quality of the cattle. The day when all Texas steers looked alike is past and there is just as much difference in the cattle now raised in the southwest as there is in native stock. For these reasons the spread in prices this year is rather wider than usual and any statement as to what Texas yearlings, twos or threes, are bringing would be entirely misleading unless the character and breeding of the cattle were known."—Omaha Journal-Stockman.

SHORTHORN PREMIUM LIST

At a meeting of the executive committee of the Shorthorn Breeders' Association held here last week the following was adopted as the premium list for shorthorn cattle offered at the next Fort Worth fat stock show:

Grand champion steer, none but the holders of blue ribbons in these classes eligible, $100.

Best steer, 2 years and under 3, $100.

Second best steer, 2 years and under 3, $75.

Third best steer, 2 years and under 3, $50.

Fourth best steer, 2 years and under 3, $40.

Fifth best steer, 2 years and under 3, $30.

Best steer, 1 year and under 2, $100.

Second best steer, 1 year and under 2, $75.

Third best steer, 1 year and under 2, $50.

Fourth best steer, 1 year and under 2, $40.

Fifth best steer, 1 year and under 2, $30.

Best steer calf, under 1 year, $100.

Second best steer calf, under 1 year, $75.

Third best steer calf, under 1 year, $50.

Fourth best steer calf, under 1 year, $40.

Fifth best calf, under 1 year, $30.

WHY BEEF ADVANCED

Prime beeves continued to run scarcer and higher. Packers have not figured on this lack of natives during the past thirty days, and do not know how to account for it, except in the assumption that the winter was harder on stock than at first believed, and upon the further assumption that farmers, expecting a repetition of the market of 1902, are holding back their stock for this contingency, says the National Provisioner. Feeders held aloof from the market, preferring to profit by their losses of last year, rather than rush into additional losses, feeling that the higher feeding conditions offset the lower range of cattle prices. These again were neutralized by the relatively lower prices for dressed beef in the consumptive trade. The combined effect has been the steadily smaller receipts of good native cattle at points and the persistent rise in the prices of prime steers, which brought as high as $6.40 this week. The cattle will reach 7 cents soon. Carcass beef has been pressing up, too, but not in proportion to the rise in cattle prices. The winter was generally hard on beef stock, and their frames responded slowly to conditioning. That made fattening and finishing tedious and expensive. The result is as above stated. The grasser has really not begun to come, and is not likely to get its run in progress much before August, because both grass and cattle had a late start this spring.

DANGEROUS TO RAILWAYS

At St. Louis this week the interstate commerce commission is busy with the complaint of the Texas Cattle Raisers' Association regarding excessive live stock rates from the Lone Star state to northern markets. That the complaint is based on reasonable grounds admits of no doubt. Judge Sam Cowan of Fort Worth is handling the cattle growers' side of the case with his usual ability and making an effective showing. The work done by Judge Cowan recently justifies the prediction that he will soon be eligible to an offer as corporation lawyer on fancy terms, if he has not already received and declined it. He is too dangerous a man, from the railroad standpoint, to be allowed to remain in the service of the cattle growers of Texas, if salary will detach him from his present allegiance.—Chicago Live Stock World.

HELPING THE NATIONAL

The officers of the National Live Stock Association are very much encouraged over the financial support which it is receiving from several of the leading cattle and sheep growers of the country in order that the organization may be able to continue its efforts to have the interstate commerce act amended, as well as to prosecute other bills which it has before congress and to secure a readjustment of freight rates.

Recently ciriular letters were sent to members of the association advising them that in order to carry on this work successfully it would be necessary to raise a reasonable legislative fund. The success of the association in its meeting with the traffic managers in Chicago in February has not only justified, but has caused a number of the progressive stockmen to comply with this request, but as yet not to the extent necessary. One of the most prominent cattle and sheep growers in California in remitting the check of his company for $500, stated that "the association is to be congratulated upon the work which it has accomplished this year, especially in its success in securing the abrogation of the tonnage system and return transportation to bona fide shippers, the latter meaning to the shippers of this state many thousands of dollars annually. I have no doubt that a continuation of the efforts of the association, assisted by those of the Interstate Cattle Growers' committee, will result in the stock growers securing whatever reasonable and just requests they may make."

Two leading stockmen of Arizona remitted $250 each and one of them in his letter states: "It seems to me that no mistakes have thus far been made in the work of the National Live Stock Association in the presentation of its claims to the railroad officials. Your demands have been conservative and reasonable."

PANHANDLE FEEDING CATTLE

Although the Live Stock World has made strenuous efforts during the past year to impress on corn belt beef makers the superlative excellence of Panhandle feeders, there remains some educational work to be done along this line. William L. Seltzer of Manhattan, Ill., for instance, writes, asking if danger of southern fever need be feared should he put Texas yearlings and 2-year-olds in his feed lots. He adds that he has been deterred from investing in Panhandlers because of an impression that they might develop sickness and communicate it to native cattle.

Mr. Seltzer need have no fear on this score. Panhandle cattle are the healthiest kind of stock the feeder can handle. They are bred and raised above the quarantine line, where the southern tick has never existed and fever is unknown. They are not to be confounded with Texas raised cattle from below the quarantine line, there being in fact as much difference between the two as between stock grown in central Illinois and Mississippi.

O. H. Nelson of Fort Madison, Iowa, who has, during the past half decade distributed Panhadle cattle in feed lots all over the east from Kentucky and Missouri to New York, has hundreds of letters from satisfied finishers, who prefer them to natives. He points out that every steer leaving the Panhandle is subjected to a rigid inspection by federal officials, which is an unquestionable safeguard.

The Panhandle steer has been taken by the million in decades past to northwestern pastures. He has stood the test of climate and matured so satisfactorily that his popularity is firmly established. But for the steady contraction of northern ranges, corn belt feeders would be able to secure but few of them.

Panhandle cattle are no longer strangers in corn belt feed lots. They are coming east of the Missouri in increasing thousands annually, and it is to that source of supply that the feeder must look hereafter for any considerable number of young cattle of the distinctly best breeds.—Chicago Live Stock World.

ERADICATING THE TICK

Texas has accomplished its long desired mastery of the cattle tick. A remedy has been discovered fatal to the pest, but not to the cattle. For many years this quest was regarded as visionary as the time honored but so far less successful pursuit of the philosopher's stone. Beaumont oil and painstaking experiment did the work, and the deadly tick no longer limits the sphere of the South Texas steer to pastures below the quarantine line.

This means much to Texas and not a little to other sections of the country. Pastures below the line will ultimately be entirely freed of the pest. Texas cattle may be moved to northern feed lots without danger of infection and the ever-present danger of spreading the parasites by the agency of stock cattle brought in live stock marts will be eliminated. Northern bred registered cattle will be able to go with safety into the south, permitting retirement of the race of knot heads, and bovine scrubs now holding possession of a large area of the southland.

Now that an effective means of exterminating the tick has been discovered, no expense or energy should be spared in applying the remedy.—Chicago Live Stock World.

RAILROAD HEARING CONTINUED

The hearing before the interstate commerce commission in the case of the Texas Cattle Raisers' association against the southwestern lines on charges of poor service and excessive rates was continued yesterday until some time in the future owing to the fact that the case could not be concluded this week. The railroads have been trying to prove that the cost of handling live stock traffic is greater than any other freight. All testified that live stock rates were too low and should be advanced very materially. They claim that but for the refusal of one or two lines to concur rates would have been advanced long ago.

Efforts of the Cattle Raisers' attorney to find out what lines were opposed to any further advance failed, as the witnesses either did not know or declined to tell.—St. Louis Live Stock Reporter.

SOME PROLIFIC CATTLE

D. M. Jay, of the northeast part of the county, was in to see us Tuesday and was telling us about having a 2-year-old heifer that has lately brought twins and a 4-year-old that is now suckling her fourth calf, none of which were twins.—Lubbock Avalanche.

In the Argentine Republic, where nearly all the railways belong to English companies, the English language is spoken to a considerable extent, whereas in Brazil no effort is made to make it easy for foreigners, who are obliged to learn the language of the country.

A Strong Man

Is strong all over. No man can be strong who is suffering from indigestion or some other disease of the stomach and its associated organs of digestion and nutrition. For when the stomach is diseased there is a loss of the nutrition contained in food, which is the source of all physical strength. When a man doesn't feel just right, when he doesn't sleep well, has an uncomfortable feeling in the stomach after eating, is languid, nervous and irritable, he is losing the nutrition needed to make strength.

Such a man needs to use Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It cures diseases of the stomach and other organs of digestion and nutrition. It enriches the blood, stimulates the liver, nourishes the nerves, and so gives health and strength to the whole body.

Mr. Thomas A. Swarts, of Sub. Station C, Columbus, Ohio, Box 103, writes: "I was taken very sick with severe headache, then cramps in the stomach and my food would not digest, then kidney and liver trouble and my back got weak so I could scarcely get around. The more I doctored the worse I got until six years passed. I could only walk in the house by the aid of a chair, and I had given up to die. Then one of my neighbors said, 'Take my advice and take Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and make a new man out of yourself.' The first bottle helped me and after I had taken eight bottles in about six weeks I was weighed and found I had gained twenty-seven (27) pounds, and I am as stout and healthy to-day, I think, as I ever was."

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets cure constipation.

What She Saw In The Looking-Glass.

She stood before her glass in the sitting-room. The girl she saw there had a well-rounded face and figure, expressive eyes, and her cheeks had the freshness of rose petals; her hair was wavy and beautiful. She looked well and strong. The reason for it is given in her own letter, as follows:

"I am glad to be able to testify as to the merits of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription for the many ills that women suffer with," writes Miss Gertrude Mitchell (President Young Ladies' Christian Endeavor Society), 43 Columbia St., E., Detroit, Mich. "After many years of suffering and pain, I took your medicine, and in a short time began to feel stronger, became more regular and didn't have the bearing-down pains which had been my lot for so long. Continued to use until I was a well woman, and shall never cease to be very grateful that it was brought to my notice. I have no pains, and feel much stronger generally."

The above is a fair portrait of Miss Mitchell, in the looking-glass, although it by no means does her justice, as she is much handsomer than a mere picture like this can portray. The fact is a woman can't look beautiful that is dragged down with pains at regular intervals, who suffers from headaches, backaches, or spine-aches, frequently. Such a woman soon acquires wrinkles, a sallow complexion, dark circles about the eyes, and a general feeling of weakness, which brings misery of mind and body. To keep one's good looks the body must be healthy—the feminine functions must be regular. Woman was not intended to suffer, and there is no reason why she should. A healthy body will usually be a shapely body, and no means at hand will more quickly restore the womanly functions to a healthy state than Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription.

Dr. Pierce, during a long period of practice, found that this prescription made entirely of roots and herbs, without the use of alcohol, was positive in its action. After using this remedy for many years in his private practice he put it up in a form that would make it easily procurable, and it can be had at any store where medicines are handled.

THE MARRIAGE QUESTION.

Although many people marry without reasoning about it, and do not know the word romance, they feel it and act it all their lives and are content. There are unhappy married lives, but a large percentage of these unhappy homes are due to the illness of the wife, mother or daughter. The more civilized or cultured a race becomes, doing with less and less physical exercise in the outdoor air, and with the wearing of corsets and other modish customs, the more likely are the women to suffer from womanly ills. Every woman should know what right living is—for perfect health and a fair complexion she should occasionally take a vegetable laxative such as Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets.

Backed up by over a third of a century of remarkable and uniform cures, a record such as no other remedy for the diseases and weaknesses peculiar to women ever attained, the proprietors and makers of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription now feel fully warranted in offering to pay $500 in legal money of the United States for any case of Leucorrhea, Female Weakness, Prolapsus, or Falling of womb, which they cannot cure. All they ask is a fair and reasonable trial of their means of cure. Could any test be more fair showing the faith of the makers? Do not listen to the arguments of the dealer that his own make is better. It means better profit to him, that's all. He insults your intelligence when he tries to make you change your mind, to take a substitute for the standard remedy which has enjoyed years of success and the testimony of thousands in its favor.

Dr. Pierce by no means confines himself to prescribing his well-known medicines. He tells you in the most common-sense way what ails you, what you ought to do, what line of treatment should be followed out in your particular case, and if your case does not indicate the need of his proprietary medicine, he tells you plainly and frankly what you do need, and the best possible method of improving your health. If you are a young woman just entering upon the duties of life, you should have good medical advice of a confidential nature. If you're a mother of children, you may want advice about yourself and how best to put your system in order that your children may be healthy. To sufferers from chronic diseases which do not readily yield to treatment, or to people who are past the youthful stage of life and want confidential advice about their ailments or their physical condition, Dr. Pierce offers to carefully consider your case and give you the best medical advice within his power, free of cost to you.

NO MORE COURTS ENGLISH ROYALTY

Twenty-five Ambitious Mothers Have Been Presented to King and Queen

SEVENTY-FIVE WAITING

So Far Contingent of Americans Have Made No Attempt at Display

(Copyright, 1904, by W. R. Hearst.)

LONDON, June 18.—he season is rapidly approaching the apex of its brilliancy.

No more courts remain to afford opportunity for the woman of New York, Chicago or Boston's Back Bay to reach the summit of her ambition and make her curtsey to the king and only twenty-five of Columbia's daughters have passed the royal throne.

Mr. Choate's list still holds the names of seventy-five maids and matrons who may wait from youth to old age for the summons to the royal presence.

The most notable of the presentations of the present year have, of course, been those of the Duchess of Roxburghe on her marriage, of Mrs. George Vanderbilt, and Mrs. George Law—the last named radiantly handsome in her court dress.

But so far the contingent of fair Americans in London has made little or no effort at sensational display.

The reason of the temporary retrenchment in the Marlborough menage has already been indicated, though it is probable that the duchess of Marlborough will give one or two big dinners before the Goodwood races.

The health of the duchess of Roxburghe will not permit of the physical and mental strain incidental to elaborate entertainment, and the field so far has been left to Helen, duchess of Manchester, who has already given a few musicales and after-dinner dances.

Mrs. Frank J. Mackey, formerly of Chicago, spectacularly driving a four-in-hand through Piccadilly and the parks with an ease and command that have won for her the adoration of every cabby and every coachman in London, alone has aroused a certain piquant interest.

Her achievement in driving a large party to the derby and successfully tooling her four horses along the crowded roads has established her reputation as the best woman whip in the world.

Never once in the journey of sixteen miles did she even graze the wheel of a coster's barrow, and the cheers of 'Enry Hawkins following her all along the line were fitting tribute to her skill.

No torture to that of a rheumatic. Prescription No. 2851, by Elmer & Amend, quickest relief of all.

An Investigation More Than Proves Dr. J. H. Terrill's Claims

Texas Farm Journal.

The readers of this publication have J. H. Terrill's ability as a physician and the J. Terrill's ability as a physician and the remarkabel success which he is having in curing diseases that other doctors had treated and failed to effect a cure, but under his treatment a radical cure was effected in a short time. This caused a jealousness on the part of a few physicians in Dalas, who tried to injure the doctor's standing and good name by causing an erroneous article to be printed. This, however, brought on an investigation by the publisher of the periodical in which they tried to harm him, the result being that it shows he not only stands pre-eminent as a physician and specialist in Dallas and the southwest, but that the banks, business men, commercial agencies and city and county officials indorse him in the highest terms. We quote from the finding of the investigation that was made as follows:

"I called on the heads of both commercial agencies in Dallas, on bank officials, on professional men, on business houses, on the postmaster, newspapermen, hotel keepers and others throughout the city of Dallas, and the consensus of local repute was that he stands first as a physician and specialist; that his good name and reputation are second to none in Dallas. In all candor, it was the most one-sided affair I ever undertook; one after another of those on whom I called seemed scarcely able to say enough in favor of rather than one word against him. The manager of one of the commercial agencies there chanced to be undergoing treatment at this doctor's hands and so well was he satisfied with his improvement and notable progress; and so favorably impressed was a brother official, that he expressed to me his own intention of at once placing himself as well under the doctor's care. The bankers spoke of him in the very highest terms, assuring me that his name was without reproach. The postmaster informed me that he had not received one single complaint concerning either the doctor himself or his method of doing business, which information, in view of the fact that the doctor transacts an immense amount of business through the mails with patients in various parts of the country—those who would be prompt to file complaints had any grown suspicious that all was not as it should be, speaks volumes in his favor. Various firms of business men stated that their relations with Dr. Terrill had been and were most satisfactory, a number of them remarking that they neither desired nor could have a more satisfactory customer on their books. One of Dallas' leading lawyers, one indeed of the most eminent and respected jurists of this country, commended the doctor most highly. While speaking of Dr. Terrill, more than one took occasion to state that he was not only very progressive and public-spirited as a citizen, but that seldom if ever was any list circulated for subscriptions toward a worthy end of charity but had Dr. Terrill's name at or near the head of the list and subscribed for a goodly sum. But a little while ago he gave five hundred dollars toward a fund for building a stately church. He is a member in good standing of one of his city's leading churches and takes an earnest interest in its work and general affairs."

In other words, after a most thorough investigation, it was found that the erroneous report was instigated by a few jealous doctors. Copies of the publication containing this article in full can be had by addressing J. Guy Reed, publisher Reed's Isonomy, St. James hotel, San Antonio, Texas.

Send us your name on the following coupon after reading all of this article and we can convince you more thoroughly than words can that your health will quickly improve as a result of our advice.

Cream the Best Medicine

The mucous lining of your mouth, throat, lungs, stomach and intestines is a the outside of the body. When your hands are chapped, or your lips are cracked you use some soothing lotion such as cream to soften and heal the affliction. You would never think of applying the strong, acrid nostrums to your sore hands or chapped lips that you take into your stomach for your internal ills and that is just why you and thousands of others are chronically suffering from asthma, bronchitis, indigestion, dyspepsia, catarrh of the stomach, constipation, etc.

MILKS' EMULSION CURES LIKE MAGIC

When the mucous membrane is afflicted, either as the result of colds or abuse in diet, it is unable to perform its functions and, therefore, the secretions of the membranes are cut off or impaired and thus your food is not digested and the air you breathe does not properly supply the requirements of your lungs. The nasty medicine you have taken will not cure a case like this and you know it from experience.

Why not apply the remedy to your internal organs that you know will cure the soreness of the skin? Milks' Emulsion is as soothing to the membranous lining as cream is to the lips. It immediately heals the afflicted parts and restores them to normal conditions so that all the secretions are produced and health is

You will like Milks' Emulsion because it tastes good. It does not upset your stomach like cod liver oil and its flesh-building and strength-creating properties are far superior to that nauseating medicine. You will know that this is an absolute fact if you will accept our generous offer. We want to give you a bottle of Milks' Emulsion and at the same time a list of prominent persons, some of whom you probably know, who have been cured by this great remedy.

How to Get a Fifty-Cent Bottle Free

We want you to take Milks' Emulsion for any affliction of the mucous membrane. We will give you the first 50-cent bottle. In accepting this free offer you do not obligate yourself to us beyond a promise to faithfully follow out the directions printed on the bottle. Fill out and mail this coupon to us.

SCANDAL IS CAUSED BY LIBRARY THEFTS

(Copyright, 1904, by W. R. Hearst.)

PARIS, June 18.—A great scandal has come to light at Brussels in which a number of the officials of the Royal library are involved.

During a recent meeting of the Belgian senate one of the members, Alexander Braun, stated that an editor at Munich, M. Rosenthal, had informed the government that an official of the library had offered to sell him a priceless volume, of which there are only two in existence.

The volume had been shown to him, and an investigation showed that it had disappeared from the library at Brussels, and that several other books of great value were also missing.

Immediately after this speech in the senate the first secretary of the library, M. Petit, mysteriously vanished and no trace of him has been found.

It is believed that he has committed suicide, as a revolver which he was known to keep in his desk can not be found. It is thought, however, that persons of much higher social standing in society are responsible for the thefts, the extent of which will not be known until an exact inventory has been taken, and there is the greatest consternation in Brussels society, as it has been found that the manuscript of "La Brabanconne," the Belgian national hymn, which is last known to have been in the hands of a man very closely connected with the royal court, can not be found anywhere.

It is rumored that it, with other valuable manuscripts, has found its way to the library of an American millionaire.

MARY ANDERSON HAS A LIFE OF PEACE

(Copyright, 1904, by W. R. Hearst.)

LONDON, June 18.—While the world wondered at the self-denial of Mary Anderson Navarro in refusing a guarantee of $200,000 to deliver readings in the United States, it is left to Mrs. Navarro herself to tell her story in the simplest way.

"Why venture once more into the glare of the footlights," she says. "My life lacks nothing. It is one endless dream of peace. I have all that I could want or wish for. The glory of a woman is in her husband, her home, her children. In one word, I have learned the lesson of content."

THE KAISER SPENDS MUCH TIME IN PARIS

(Copyright, 1904, by W. R. Hearst.)

BERLIN, June 18.—The people of Berlin are greatly surprised at the disclosures regarding the Kaiser's personal life and habits made in a book by a French author, which has just been published. The writer says that the kaiser is a constant visitor to Paris and that he never lets a year pass without spending at least a few days in the metropolis of the world. On these vacations he always stays at the Ritz hotel, under the guise of a German count, and always changes his title from one time to the other. The French police are always aware of his presence, but his careless conduct gives the detective inspectors, whose mission it is to watch over him, many sleepless nights.

The author says that the kaiser was once recognized two years ago by a well known Paris newspaper man who started to interview him. His first question being what the kaiser thought of the Alsace Lorraine question, but before his majesty had any time to answer the newspaper man was surrounded by four detectives and hustled out of the station.

FRENCH MOB BURNS A CATHOLIC CHURCH

(Copyright, 1904, by W. R. Hearst.)

TOULON, June 18.—The bishop of this city is looking into an affair the other day which resulted in the sacking and burning down of a Roman Catholic church by an angry mob. The priest of the church declares that the attack was entirely unprovoked, while the civil officials declare that the anger of the people was aroused by the fact that the priest had refused first communion to a number of children whom he had found some days before in the street singing the "Internationale." The behavior of the mob is described as having been most disgraceful and the priest narrowly escaped with his life, while statues of the virgin and the saints were dragged into the street and burned up. In spite of this the priest says several policemen who were looking on did not attempt to interfere until the mob put fire to the church.

PRISONERS ASSAULT COURT AND JURORS

VIENNA, June 18.—During the last few weeks a series of disorders have taken place in the public courts in different parts of the empire which culminated at Budapest when the judge who had sentenced two burglars to a term of two years in the penitentiary, was attacked by the criminals, who threw a heavy chair at him and started a general fight in which burglars, judge, jury and policemen were all mixed up. Before the row occurred one of the burglars had bitten the judge severely in the hand and had broken the nose of one of the jury. As a result of this it is intended to have a number of soldiers in the court rooms besides the regular number of policemen.

PARIS POLICE MAKE WAR ON POOLROOM WITH NO RESULT

It Is Rather Spectacular and the People Consider It as Ridiculous

(Copyright, 1904, by W. R. Hearst.)

PARIS, June 18.—The police of this city are waging war against the bookmakers and owners of pool rooms in a way almost as spectacular as that practiced by the police of New York. So far the results of the campaign against pool rooms has been rather negative in its results.

The other day the chief commisary of police for the fashionable St. Germain decided to take a personal hand in the fight and started out in citizen clothes with two of his inspectors to arrest the owner of a pool room which was reported to do a vast amount of business. They succeeded in breaking into the house, but the pool room keeper escaped to the roof, where he was followed by three policemen. Two factory girls who saw the four men running across the roofs commenced to cry "burglars," with the result that the inhabitants of all the houses in the neighborhood surrounded the three policemen and locked them up in the room while the pool room keeper escaped. They did not suceed in effecting their release until the arrival of the chief of police, who was very much amused at their plight.

Altogether the people of Paris are greatly amused at the mishaps of higher police officials. Today a police inspector in full uniform, who swears that he was very much awake, was robbed of all the medals which he wore on his breast by a practical joker of a pickpocket, who cut them all off with a pair or scissors while the inspector was busy looking for criminals around the Madeleine church.

TO PROVE ABILITY WITH RACING CRAFT

(Copyright, 1904, by W. R. Hearst.)

BERLIN, June 18.—During the Kieler week both Prince Henry and the crown prince will have a chance to prove their ability to handle a racing craft.

In a special race for small yachts both will be at the helm of their own boats.

The crown prince intends to pilot his new yacht Angela, while Prince Henry says that he is sure he can steer his yacht Tilly to victory.

The Angela was finished only a few weeks ago in a Hamburg shipyard, and the young prince has been busy sailing it on the Waunsee near Potsdam.

The widow of Count Reinelt, member of the Austrian senate and president of the Triest chamber of commerce, who at present is at Venice, recently received a letter from Milano in which she was told that if she did not send the writer $90,000 to a bank at Triest, he would make public a scandal in which she played a prominent part.

The story of this scandal had already been written by him and placed in the hands of Dr. Dampieri, a prominent lawyer at Triest.

The countess immediately turned over the letter to the chief of police, at Triest, who sent a detective to the office of Dr. Dampieri, who declared that he know nothing of the afffair, except that a man who gave the name of a member of one of Austria's most aristocratic families, had handed him a sealed letter with instructions to hold it until he heard from him.

The letter was opened, and found to contain a report of scandals implicating not only Countess Reinelt, but a number of noblemen prominent in Austrian national affairs.

The police remain absolutely silent, and great efforts are being made to induce the countess to drop the affair because of the prominence of the author of the letter, who is said to be closely connected with the court of Emperor Francis Joseph.

A WHOLESALE TRADE IN EVERY CRIME

(Copyright, 1904, by W. R. Hearst.)

BERLIN, June 18.—A woman in Warsaw—Mme. Belna Frenkl—has been found guilty of the heinous crime of doing a wholesale and retail business in devils.

Mme. Frenkl, who lived in a cottage in one of the suburbs of Warsaw, informed all her neighbors that, owing to her close connection with his satanic majesty, she had at her disposition a large number of minor devils, which she was willing to sell at very reasonable prices.

These imps of satan were most obliging little creatures, willing to do any dirty work you might desire, such as killing your enemies or steal money or valuable papers for you. Sad to say, the good people of Warsaw had very much use for devils, and Mme. Frenkl sold so many of them that she soon became very wealthy.

But one of her clients, Vladimir Szlmanski, who had been sentenced to prison, though he had paid $10 for a devil to take the blame for his offense, made a complaint, and Mme. Frenkl is now behind bars.

AUSTRIANS OPPOSE BRUTAL BULL FIGHTS

BUDAPEST, June 18.—It is not thought likely that any more bull fights will take place in this city, though the two first ones which were held on Saturday and Sunday last were a great financial success. Amongst a certain class of the people there is a demand that all the scheduled fights be allowed to come off, but the majority of the decent people are entirely disgusted with the bloodshed and the wounding of two toreadors and a petition has been sent to Emperor Francis Joseph to forbid any more of these barbaric entertainments.

ACUTE RHEUMATISM

Deep tearing or wrenching pains, occasioned by getting wet through; worse when at rest, or on first moving the limbs and in cold or damp weather, is cured quickly by Ballard's Snow Liniment. Oscar Oleson, Gibson City, Ill., writes, February 16, 1903. "A year ago I was troubled with a pain in my back. It soon got so bad I could not bend over. One bottle of Ballard's Snow Liniment cured me." 25c.

HIGHER JOURNALISM

The cubs of the newspaper profession, who, because they manage to hold their places, imagine they are specially endowed by Providence, have long been making merry over Joseph Pulitzer's college of journalism.

But it should not be forgotten that Mr. Pulitzer has had some practical and successful experience in the newspaper business, and enjoys a right to have opinions and theories of his own regarding the profession, particularly when he backs them up with big money made in the business.

"Before the century closes, schools of journalism will be generally accepted as a feature of specialized higher education, like schools of law or of medicine."

So says Mr. Pulitzer in the leading article of the May issue of the North American Review. He writes in reply to sundry criticisms of the college of journalism, for which he has furnished the foundation and permanent endowment in Columbia University, and the phrase quoted not only expresses his conviction of the permanent value of such a school but indicates the high ground on which he bases his judgment.

He regards journalism not as a trade but as a profession, not as an accidental occupation recruited by natural selection and the survival of the fittest, but as a special vocation for which special training is necessary in order to produce the best results.

And what such training should be, along broad lines, he sets forth with great clearness in an essay which shows a masterly grasp of the subject in its broadest and highest aspects.

No self-respecting newspaper man is content to look upon his profession as one of mere money making. Mr. Pulitzer differentiates journalism from the "newspaper business." A journalist is not, he says, a business manager or publisher or even proprietor, although some rarely endowed minds may compass all the varied requirements of these positions.

The commercial side of newspaper making will not be taught in his college of journalism. But there will be the training of the conscience, of the moral sense, training in moral courage, in ethical principles; and this should underlie everything.

"Above knowledge," writes Mr. Pulitzer, "above news, above intelligence, the heart and soul of a newspaper lie in its moral sense, in its courage, its integrity, its humanity, its sympathy for the oppressed, its independence, its devotion to the public welfare, its anxiety to render public service."

There could hardly be a more lofty conception of the profession of journalism than that which Mr. Pulitzer expresses in his broad outlines. It has been called visionary. Only time can tell. But it is a noble vision. It is a conception worthy of journalism's tremendous moral and educational power.

WILHELM'S CREED

One of the most interesting documents recently printed is the confession of faith of Emperor William of Germany. It is embodied in an address made to his sons, August, Wilhelm and Oscar, on the day of their confirmation. A special translation, made by the approval of the emperor, appears in the Saturday Evening Post.

It is the expression of the personal Christianity of one of the remarkable men of the age, the motto of whose house is: "With God, for King and Fatherland."

The following is the heart of the confession:

"The word of man has never been able uniformly to inspire people of all races and of all nations to attain the same aim, to endeavor to be like Him, and even to give their lives to Him. This miracle can only be explained from the fact that the words He spoke were the words from the living God, which awaken life and which remain alive even after a period of many thousands of years, while the words of the savants are long forgotten.

Now, when I look back on my personal experience, I can only assure you —and your experience will be the same —that the cardinal and main object of human life, and principally that of a life full of responsibility and activity—this has become clearer to me from year to year—lies solely and alone in the position we take regarding our Lord and Savior."

The reading of those words is like looking into the soul of this man as through a window.

He believes in a personality.

Doctrines and dogmas have but little place in his creed. He puts his personal faith not in an infallible church nor an infallible book but in an infallible personage. This is the tendency, be it remarked, of modern Protestantism. And William is a modern of the moderns.

He may be clever and eloquent and successful, in a way, by the force of qualities aside from any personal faith.

The man who develops a virile character must of necessity believe with all his soul, mind and strength in something higher, nobler, better than himself.

We are not saying that the personal belief of Emperor William is well or misplaced. That is for his selection. Every man must settle that for himself.

But this is true: The men who have done great things have been men of robust faith. The human soul is so constituted that it can only do its highest and best work after it has arrived at well-settled convictions concerning this life and another.

The sublimity of the emperor's personal creed does not necessarily make him sublime, but it accounts largely for the man William.

Several thousand immigrants have been detained at Ellis Island for various reasons, but principally because they are looked upon as undesirable citizens. The steamship companies have lately been cutting rates for steerage passengers from the old countries and as a result the boats have been crowded with the poor of foreign countries who are coming here to better their condition. So long as these newcomers are fairly respectable people there can be no great objection to their coming, but of late years Europe has contracted the habit of dumping not only its very poor but also its criminal class on these shores. A halt should be called on the latter practice. We have enough of our own vicious to contend with and should be spared those of foreign countries. The lax immigration laws of the United States are responsible for this condition of affairs and it is very evident that they need a thorough overhauling. Much of the discontent among laboring people here springs from the seeds of discord sown by this vicious foreign element that has been taught from the cradle to be against the government and all authority on all occasions, no matter what is at issue.

It seems that that story recently published through the papers of Texas that the Burlington road was going to build a line from Kansas City to the Gulf was more or less of a pipe dream. One of the officials of that road in Houston this week denied the slightest knowledge of any intention of the Burlington to build to the south, or even to form a traffic agreement with any southern road with a view to getting an outlet for foreign shipments from the Burlington's territory in the north, and there is no more reason why it should want an outlet to the Gulf than any other roads in the north that have not as yet been credited with any such intention. As a matter of fact there is less. The Burlington is a Hill road, and Hill has steamship lines running to the Orient from Seattle that will continue to bring and take away freight to this country even after the Panama canal is built. Naturally every effort will be made to deflect all freight shipments that way, rather than by the Gulf of Mexico.

In accordance with an order issued by Secretary Hay, the inscriptions "United States Embassy" and "United States Consulate" no longer will appear on the embassy and consular seals and in other places where they formerly stood. In their place, on all the new record books and seals, will appear the words, "American Embassy" and "American Consulate" and "American Consular Agency." There is a dignity and simplicity about the term "American" that the secretary likes, and there also are about a dozen countries called "United States" aside from the United States of America, a fact which leads to a great deal of confusion in foreign countries.

Why any one would want to dig gold in Colorado several hundred feet under the ground when it can be raised right here in Texas on the surface of the earth, in the bright sunshine, passes comprehension. There is not a miner in that state that could not do better for himself somewhere in Texas if he applied himself industriously. And here there would be no friction nor trouble with employers. A man with a very little capital here can be his own employer. This is the best solution of the trouble in Colorado, for the miners, and if they are law-abiding people Texas will be more than glad to welcome them and help them get a start.

The young couple that committed suicide together because their parents would not consent to their marriage are probably better off in the next world than in this. Life here has far greater discouragements than a parent's vete, as marriage. For instance, there is the problem of making a living after one is married. The faint-hearted will find it uphill all the way in this world, and obstacles, if recognized as such, loom up big as houses at every turn.

A man in New York was operated upon for appendicitis and the doctors found a valuable pearl in the appendix. It was sold to a jeweler for $372, leaving a net profit to the patient of $272, as the operation only cost $100. Similar operations are not to be recommended to Fort Worth people unless they have been dieting exclusively on clams for some time. In that case pearls are apt to be found most anywhere in them.

Every citizen who has any regard for the general aspect of the city, to say nothing of the healthfulness, will go to work promptly and clean up his premises. This in ninety-nine cases out of a hundred applies to the reader and not to the man netx door. C. C. McMichael, city health inspector, has promulgated an interesting piece of literature on this question. In case you haven't read it or don't intend to, here's the gist of it: Clean up or be prosecuted.

Henry George wants no special consideration in Colorado different from that given every law-abiding citizen. He would prefer to be treated as an ordinary laboring man would be. He goes there in the interests of the man that works for his living by the day and any special attention from General Bell would be as odious to him as it would be the cause he represents.

Two Fort Worth men have set out in an automobile for St. Louis, where they will prove to the world at large that in Texas the bronco as a means of locomotion has gone the way of the long-horn cow. Incidentally they may treat the St. Louisians to a spectacle of fast riding that will make them dizzy.

The Indian Territory Indians don't seem to be any better at a bargain than their ancestors were 200 years ago. Their lands are getting away from them about as fast as when the first white settler in America would take all they could step off in a day in exchange for a demijohn of whisky and some powder and bullets.

At the Goelet-Whelan wedding in Philadelphia the crowd pulled at the bride's dress and eventually stripped the church of the decorations. The ushers were stoned and the police were required to keep order. In many respects it was more interesting than a prize fight.

If every city in the country had a citizen like Attorney Jerome of New York they would be much better off. Jerome differs from most reformers in that he does not scatter his shots and is persistent. When he goes after a man he generally lands him or drives him out of the city.

Our old friend, the beef packing combine rumor, has again made its appearance. It properly should have been here some weeks ago. It may be looked for again just after election.

Roosevelt is taking his time to reply to General Tyner's letter. It will take quite a little cogitation for him to so answer it that he will appear to any advantage in the exchange.

If Parker is nominated and elected, what is to be done with David B. Hill? Does any one fancy him at the head of the state department, for instance?

Gleanings From the ....Exchanges....

It must be conceded that Mr. Roosevelt's nomination is quite as much a certainty as his defeat.—San Antonio Express.

Roosevelt's defeat is far from a certainty. If any democrat has that idea in his head it is time to get it out. The indications are that it will be a close race all the way, and no man can yet see the finish. Much depends on the nominee of the St. Louis convention. The democrats must harmonize every element in the party and poll a united vote.

Bailey and Williams as temporary and permanent chairmen of the St. Louis convention would make a great parliamentary pair.—Austin Statesman.

They would make a great pair for the national ticket, too, though it would be hard to say which should lead. Why not put Parker and Bryan in as temporary and permanent chairmen and nominate Williams and Bailey. Geographically they are a little off, but they would make up for it by the distance they tower above the other candidates in ability.

Roosevelt declines to commit himself on the Colorado situation. So does Parker.—Fort Worth Telegram.

Parker has no commit coming, while Roosevelt has. Parker is a New York judge and Roosevelt is chief executive of the United States, and as such is expected to co-operate with state governments in the maintenance of peace and order in this country.—El Paso Times.

Remark about Parker was intended to be facetious. Does anybody remember that he ever committed himself on anything?

Seems we acquired forty-nine volcanoes with the Philippines, but by an oversight in the treaty with Spain none of them is located down in the Moro country, where it would do the most good. However, Dr. General Wood is much the same thing.—El Paso Herald.

If the Japs have really bought the Philippines, do they take General Wood off our hands, too? As a surgeon he might be valuable in their war.

Thanks to the enterprise of Texas people, the world is being shown something that astonishes them at the World's Fair. A New York horticulturist, for instance, who is supposed to be an eminent authority in his line, when he saw the Texas apple exhibit, was thunderstruck, and could not believe the fruit was produced in Texas. When assured that it was, his only reply was: "I had always understood Texas could not produce apples!" So it is with many other things. Texas is teaching the north and east. The World's Fair advertisement is going to be worth millions to Texas.—Denison Herald.

Carter Harrison, mayor of Chicago, thinks it is visibly all up with Hearst's chances—whatever they may have been—and with Judge Parker's. The feeling that two terms in the presidency are enough for any body will effectually bar out Mr. Cleveland, he thinks, and the circumstance of having been born in Europe will be fatal to Mayor McClellan. He can not discern any democratic enthusiasm for Mr. Gorman or Mr. Olney. Judge Gray strikes him as a possibility. "I regard Judge Gray as a very strong man," he says. Another of the possibilities on his list is Nelson A. Miles. "Stranger things have happened in national conventions than the nomination of the general," he says.—Galveston Tribune.

Carter Harrison is a sore-head. Defeated in all his political aspirations of recent years he keeps in sight only by virtue of his being mayor of Chicago. His term will expire next spring and he will sink into that obscurity that he will become so well.

Marshall Field of Illinois is being boomed for second place on the democratic ticket. Mr. Field is one of the most successful business men in the country and is said to be worth $2,500,000. The democrats feel that in a campaign of education the hoops should be removed from the barrel early in the engagement.—Dallas Times-Herald.

The Times-Herald has Marshall Field's wealth estimated at only a fraction of what it is. Men well posted say he is worth $100,000,000 at the lowest and is probably the second richest man in the country. As a candidate he could turn loose a fund that would carry Pennsylvania, even to the democrats. But he will not be nominated. He is too rich. Let the republicans nominate the millionaires. The democrats will stick to statesmen.

GOOD SIDEWALKS IN SIGHT

Probably not a city in the United States as large as Houston is equipped with such wretched sidewalks. It would possibly be more accurate to say that such sidewalks as we have are not so bad, but that on a majority of our streets we have no sidewalks at all. We may be sure that the growth of the city will be seriously hindered unless this grave defect is remedied. Manifestly, hundreds of people hesitate to move to the suburbs and build because pavements and adequate sidewalks are lacking on the intervening streets.

But there is hope for Houston, we are glad to say.

The supreme court of Texas has handed down a decision which sustains the constitutionality of the district taxing law provision of the Dallas city charter. The effect of this decision is to enable a city, where the charter authorizes it, to divide into taxing districts for the purpose of extending sewers and building streets and sidewalks. Such improvement undertaken in a taxing district, which is formed by the property owners in such subdivision, is taxed against the abutting property.

For the present, there is no relief for Houston, but we can get our charter amended by the next legislature so as to provide for the establishment of taxing districts, and then it will be feasible to inaugurate a movement for sidewalks that will produce results. With such a charter provision, the building of sidewalks will be made easy, for it can be undertaken under the supervision of the city government and economically prosecuted until the entire city is supplied with sidewalks.

After we have a system of sidewalks, we can then see what can be done in the way of paving the streets.

Many people do not realize how great a factor in the upbuilding of a great city good sidewalks and paved streets are, but it ought to be plain to thinking people that hundreds who are able and willing to build homes refrain from doing so, when bad weather makes the streets between home and place of business well night impassable. The Post believes the decision of the court in the Dallas case one of farreaching importance to the cities and towns of Texas, and when the legislature meets, it is to be hoped there will be no difficulty in the way of getting such charter amendments as are necessary to afford paved streets and sidewalks.—Houston Post.

LORD FARQUHAR IS COMPANION OF KING

(Copyright, 1904, by W. R. Hearst.)

LONDON, June 18.—There are perhaps few men whose name is more familiar to Americans than that of the young soldier, who, forty years ago, then a mere stripling, spent several months in the United States, and who now as Lord Farquhar, a dapper figure of sixty years, is the constant companion of the king.

Smart and suave, he looks fifteen years younger than his actual age.

His home, Castle Rising, Norfolk, is imperishable in history as the place wherein Isabella was imprisoned by her son, Edward III, after the execution of the wretched Mortimer.

When I feel bad and have that tired feeling, I take a dose of Herbine. It is the best medicine ever made for chills and fever." 50c at bottle. Sold by H. T. Pangburn & Co.

A SUMMER'S HOLIDAY

WORTH ITS WEIGHT IN GOLD

Miss Carolina Strauss is treasurer of the Harlem Schiller Club and resides at 289 Amsterdam Avenue, New York City. Like many young women of the present day and time, Miss Strauss was troubled with poor digestion. She despaired of getting cured. As it has done in hundreds of similar cases, however, brought her speedy and permanent relief.

Dr. Caldwell's
(LAXATIVE)

Pepsin Syrup Company, Monticello, Ill.:
Gentlemen—For several years I suffered with dyspepsia, heartburn and insomnia, all caused by poor digestion. I was in despair of getting cured when I heard of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. After taking 5 bottles I was restored to health. The intense heat of the summer does not prostrate me as formerly, but I have enjoyed every day, because my health was good. I do not wonder at Syrup Pepsin finding such ready sale, as it is certainly worth its weight in gold.
Yours truly, CAROLINA STRAUSS.

REVIEW FOR PAST WEEK

The local market has been bountifully supplied with cattle this week, and, under the strain of the heavy receipts and liberal runs at all of the northern markets, values have suffered a big decline. The bulk of killing cattle has been of mostly medium grade steers and common to medium cows, very few strictly choice cattle of either class arriving during the week. Of the best heavy prime finished steers probably not more than a dozen loads have been included in this week's supply, but of the medium to good and common to fair kinds the market has been overrun.

This condition did not only apply here, but at the other markets as well, the advance of a week or ten days ago causing a regular stampede of shippers to market with little discrimination on the classes of cattle thrown on the market. From Chicago to Fort Worth the tone of the market has been on a downward course, the packers especially taking it off here where the receipts have been far in excess of the demand. In the face of heavy runs and a continually declining market, speculators have not shown their usual activity and salesmen have been forced to use their best judgment in disposing of their offering in order to bring the best results to the shipper.

Commission men at every opportunity are advising their friends and customers to hold their thin and half fat stuff and, instead, ship cattle which are already in good flesh. This advice in some cases has been followed, but in most instances shippers have sent in their stock without using any judgment as to the class and grade of cattle wanted by the packers on advancing values.

The heaviest decline during the week has been on medium to ordinary killing steers, this class of stuff losing anywhere from 25 to 50 cents, with about the same decline in ordinary cows. Best heavy steers have stood the erratic downward course better than any other class and show a loss in values of about 10 to 20 cents. Good fat butcher cows have declined probably as much as 15 to 25 cents, with a marked scarcity in proportion to the common grade.

Calves and bulls have held up fairly well, but in sympathy with the general decline have lost 10 to 25 cents since last week.

Another exceptionally light supply of hogs were received at the hog division of the yards this week and, with strong influence from the northern markets and actuated by a good local demand, the market has advanced 10 to 20 cents. The bulk of this week's supply has been from Oklahoma, with only a light sprinkling from Texas and the Indian Territory. The bugaboo of a heavy summer movement and poor quality of light, immature hogs seems to have been a joke, as now the very points from which the prediction originated are leading in the general inauguration of advances in values. While the market has shown a good advance and the prospects are good for a gradual gain in values, salesmen are advising their shippers to ship heavy well finished stuff and, where it is possible leave the light kinds and pigs for late marketing.

Best medium and heavy weight, smooth finished hogs are selling at $5@5.02½; mixed and packers at $4.90@5, and pigs and lights at $4@4.75.

Shippers do not put much confidence in the sheep market, and this week have given it a wide berth. Other markets have been liberally supplied with the result that values have declined 25c to 50c. The total shipment of sheep this week will not aggregate fifteen cars, with the offering sold here generally going at steady prices. Good weighty wethers are quoted at $4.10@4.35 ,and mixed ewes and wethers at $3.75@4.10. There is practically no demand for light, thin sheep and shipments of this kind should be sent elsewhere.

REPRESENTATIVE SALES

CATTLE—The bulk of the light run of cattle received today consisted of common to medium quality steers, thirteen cars of which were forwarded out, the local packers being unable to use them at satisfactory prices to the shipper. The sales:

COTTON

NEW ORLEANS, June 18.—Liverpool shows astonishing resistance to further decline around 6d for the summer positions. That the extreme advance in spring has hampered trade seriously is now an undisputed fact, and had we stayed even around 14 cents, consumption might not have revived, but declining to 11 cents, consumers have a chance to strike a fair average for their season's purchases and the consequence is that mills are now again consuming what is to be had at present prices. They undoubtedly could use a good deal of raw material until new supplies arrive, and the question for operators in summer months is, will enough cotton out of the present stock go to the spindles to reduce supplies to an easily manageable minimum. Then, careless shorts in the summer positions might be successfully squeezed. Against half a cent decline in July on our side yesterday, Liverpool closes 7 English points higher on near months. Spot sales were 4,000 bales, including 3,400 American, at 4 points decline. This is a Saturday and everybody should bear in mind that Saturday markets are very deceptive, therefore, better watch and see whether this improvement in Liverpool takes on a tendency before acting on it. New crops in Liverpool only gained 1 to 2 points, although they are low compared with our fall months and should be at 4 English points higher today. This shows lack of support for new crops in the English market. The effect of the Liverpool surprise caused an 18-point higher opening for July and August in our market this morning, but there was not enough support to go on with the improvement; people did not trust a Saturday Liverpool, fearing it may have been local week-end short covering, causing a temporary turn. New crops opened 4 point higher, on short covering over Sunday, which held the market on them today. The weather in the belt continues perfect and the professional propaganda to buy new crops is pushed as vigorously as ever. People are told all sorts of things; first, that 9.50c is cheap, and with an 11,000,000-bale crop we should go to 11c anyhow. What about the decline this year with a 10,000,000-bale crop; secondly, there there is an enormous short interest in new crops, which is not the case at all. People never sold new crops very largely, the heavy discounts kept them from it, and the last reaction from 9.25c to 9.80c also eliminated short interest. Now they find the price too low to sell and do nothing. Of course, there are some shorts at higher prices, but there is also nothing to scare them into buying. In short, new crops are in a weak position. The consuming trade is caught long of them at high prices, and if everything goes on fairly well with this crop, present prices are untenable. At the request of New York, where the boys wish to enjoy a full half-holiday, we close this report ahead of the usual hour. There is really nothing exceptional in the market. Trade in July is around 11c and winter months are about 7 points above last night's figures. Unless bulls make a drive in summer months before the close, to give Liverpool a set-off and some more shorts in new crops over Sunday at that there will not be much change from now until closing time for trading. The one feature in the spot department is that holders want to get rid of the stuff and that desire will increase as we get closer to notice day, which is the 24th. There was little actual spot business today.

GRAIN

CHICAGO, June 18.—Corn was entirely in the hands of pit traders. Prices held firm until wheat weakened. Estimates for Monday were larger than anticipated and this, with further liquidation of July, carried prices off sharply. We expect a falling off in receipts before long. Cash demand is still poor. Liverpool closed ¼c to ½c off. Local receipts, 364 cars, with 440 estimated for Monday.

Oats—There was a small trade in oats, with the only feature being further liquidation in July. The deferred futures held relatively firm. The cash situation continues strong and crop prospects are bright locally. Receipts, 94 cars, with the same number estimated for Monday. Clearances, 10,000 bushels.

Provisions held firm on a moderate trade. The undertone was strong and the market looks to be a purchase on the breaks. Hog receipts were but 9,000 and the market was strong. Receipts at all western points were 26,000 smaller than a year ago. Receipts last week were 34,000 less than the previous year. Estimated receipts of hogs Monday are 40,000 head.

Wheat—Liverpool cables came up unexpectedly higher, based on anticipated light world's shipments Monday and on unfavorable Russian and Argentine crop advices. Local operators were short over night and were quick to cover at the opening, making a strong market in the first hour. The weather was fine and the forecast contained unfavorable features. Cash demand was slow. World's shipments for Monday were estimated at 8,000 bushels. Liverpool closed ½ point up. Local receipts, 16 cars, with 29 estimated for Monday. Northwestern receipts, 285 cars ,against 242 a year ago.

STOCKS

(Furnished by Fort Worth Brokerage Co.)

NEW YORK, June 18.—Today's stock market was quiet in early dealings, but steady in price and in Southern Pacific the extreme decline from last night was ½ point. Union Pacific made no recession whatever, but closed with the net gain of a substantial fraction. There was absolutely no pressure of longs, and the bear element was apparently afraid to test the speculation even in the case of Southern Pacific. Toward the end of the first hour there was an improvement in copper and the movement produced a favorable effect upon sentiment. The disposition in the last hour was toward an increase in volume of business and at the same time prices hardened slowly. Southern Pacific advanced 1½ points from the lowest. The bank statement had some influence in supporting prices from the effect of fresh bear sales of the Harriman stocks. The statement was regarded as a highly favorable one. Crop news of the day was generally optimistic and some of the railroad weekly reports were encouraging. The market closed firm. Bonds were quiet but firm. Total sales, 76,700 shares.

NEW YORK, June 18.—The stock market has been broader and more active this week, but fluctuations have not carried prices far from last week's level. The proposition to authorize $100,000,000 of 7 per cent preferred Southern Pacific stock and to issue $40,000,000 to stockholders at par, has been the leading event of the week in financial affairs. An unsettled feeling has followed and opinion is much confused as to the merits of the plan and the results to be expected. Crop conditions were favorable and kept the undertone firm. Railroad traffic and iron trade conditions were not satisfactory and were a drug upon the market. Great improvement in the investment demand was reported as a consequence of the redundancy of money.

NEW MEXICO SHIPMENTS

W. P. Anderson of Colorado City, Texas, unloaded yesterday and now has on exhibition at the corrals of the Deming livery stable, as fine a lot of young bulls as one would care to look at. The bunch consists of forty-eight head altogether, forty-two head of which are fine grades and six head are registered. There are some shorthorns in the shipment but the most of them are pure blood white faces, all are, however, of the best and having been bred and raised near Colorado City, in Texas, are already acclimated and in just the proper condition to place on the ranges in this section.—Deming Headlight.

CONDITIONS IN OKLAHOMA

"In the next fifteen days there will be quite a movement of good grass cattle to market from Noble county, Oklahoma," reported P. C. Sloan, who was here yesterday with two loads of quarantine calves that sold at $4.25. "The pastures have been fine of late and the cattle are in very good condition. The country is well stocked up with cattle, and from one section alone in Texas 5,000 head were moved up into that county.

"There is a big acreage of wheat there this season, and the prospects are now very bright. The growth was retarded early in the season because of dry weather, but of late an abundance of moisture has been secured."

Mr. Sloan remarked that he was well pleased with the sale of his calves and that he got a fine run in from Red Rock.—St. Joseph Journal.

RAIN IN SOUTHWEST

The rain of Sunday evening last preceded by a most disagreeable dust-storm was almost as unexpected as a bolt from a blue sky. It was more general, too, in Maverick county than thunder rains commonly are. In Eagle Pass an inch and a half fell, but south and east it was still heavier. Probably every creek was running, from three to six or eight feet deep from Elm southward. The result is that most tanks and water holes are filled, insuring stock water for the hot summer months. Grass will take on new life and in two or three weeks there will be good pasturage everywhere. The rain came as a great relief to stockmen.

There was another good rain here very early this morning—upwards of an inch certainly. Its extent is not yet known.—Eagle Pass Guide.

AFTER SOMEBODY'S SCALP

The news comes from Denver this week to the effect that the interstate commerce commission will come to Denver soon and make an investigation of live stock freight rates in conjunction with the newly organized cattle growers' interstate executive committee, and that the National Wool Growers' association would be invited to assist. The plan is a very laudable one, of course, but just what has caused this radical change of front on the part of the cattle growers' committee is a mystery to many. These same cattlemen at their meeting in Denver several weeks ago wanted to push the wool growers off the face of the earth, and now they are wanting to hold a joint meeting with the woolmen. Verily, the real intentions of some of the leading promoters of the cattle grower's committee will soon come to the surface, and the stockmen will find that one certain individual (he does not own a hoof of stock) who poses as the stockman's official adviser, has been working the live stock interests to a deep brown finish. We know whereof we speak and the half has not yet been told.—Hugo (Colo.) Range Ledger.

SECRETARY LYTLE TALKS

Captain John T. Lytle, secretary of the Texas Cattle Raisers' association, arrived this morning to pay a visit to the St. Louis market. He will probably remain several days. He came north on business connected with the railroad committee of the Interstate Cattle Growers' committee of which he is a member.

Asked about the conditions in Texas, he said that rains were being reported over several districts about the time he was leaving, which he has since learned were almost general. Showers had been scattered nearly all over the state, which had freshened up conditions and caused renewed growth. "If the rains have only extended into the Panhandle," he added; "the whole of the state will have been well provided."

"Southern Texas, so I am informed is in excellent condition," continued Captain Lytle. "I had a visit from Tom Coleman from down around Encinal shortly before I left, and he informed me that Southern Texas was in better condition than it has been in many years."—St. Louis Live Stock Reporter.

THE DAKOTA RANGE

Hugh Chittick, live stock agent for the Northwestern, returned Friday from a couple of weeks' trip over the range country. Mr. Chittick says the range is in the very best of condition at this time considering the lateness of the spring. Grass is much thicker on the ground than usual, probably owing to the large amount of snow last winter and the cold spring, which allowed it to grow gradually. The heavy rains that fell last week over the entire range contiguous to Belle Fourche, will assure a most excellent range for cattle and sheep, and when the shipping season opens up it it confidently expected that this section of the range will show some prime beef. The warm weather following the rains last week is making grass and plenty of it, and should good rains follow later there will be plenty of hay in many localities on the open range.—Belle Fourche Bee.

SMALL DAKOTA MOVEMENT

E. T. Soper left Friday for Denver, Colo., where he went to receive some cattle for his range. While there has been no cattle to speak of put in by the large outfits there are a number of the smaller cattlemen who have not been scared out yet. The number of cattle placed on the range here this year will doubtless be far below the usual number. This will be largely due, however, to the greatly reduced number to be placed on the range by the big outfits, and also to a certain extent because of the large number of cattle held over from last year.—Belle Fourche Bee.

Chief of Detectives Desmond has commenced increasing his force of detectives and special officers for service during the World's Fair. Seventy-five new men, taken from the various districts are to be assigned to districts in the city as "plain clothes" men, making a force of over 200 men on Chief Desmond's staff.

GERMAN OFFICERS TO GET CONSENT TO MARRY

Restrictions Surround Officers of Kaiser's Army, Who Must Ask Permission Before They Can Lead Bride to the Altar

BERLIN, June 18.—Germanofficers possess privileges which are denied to ordinary mortals in the German empire, but they have to submit to vexatious restrictions from which civilians are free. The principal restriction is state interference in the choice of the ladies whom they marry.

Junior officers with salaries of less than $900 a year may not even apply for permission to marry unless they possess a private income of at least $750 per annum, which must be invested in securities approved by the government.

Officers who have a salary of $900 but not more than $1,150 must prove that they possess a private income of at least $525 per annum. Officers with salaries exceeding $1,200 must prove the possession of private incomes of at least $400 a year.

On the other hand the officer's bride must also receive a dowry, the minimum amount of which is fixed by an official schedule according to the military rank of the bridegroom. The genuineness of the dowry must be proved to the satisfaction of the military authorities, who also see that it is invested in securities approved by the government.

The financial arrangements being satisfactory, there are other requirements. The officer must send in a formal application for permission to marry, stating with great precision the name of the proposed bride, the nature of her father's profession or business, the reputation of her family and other similar details.

If the proposed bride is a divorcee, the name and profession of a former husband, together with the details of the divorce proceedings, must be given. This application must be accompanied by a declaration from the colonel commanding the regiment stating that after a careful investigation he is convinced that there are no objections to the match.

The military authorities can refuse the desired permission to marry without stating the reason. A breath of scandal in connection with the name of a girl in the highest character would spoil her chances of becoming the wife of an officer of circumstance that gives great scope for envious enemies to concoct slander about innocent victims.

The fact that her father is a tradesman can debar a girl from becoming the wife of an officer and a percentage of Jewish blood in her veins will probably lead to her being vetoed, though there are exceptions to this rule in the case of Jewesses who are great heiresses and thus bring welcome millions in to the officers' corps.

Whether the permission be granted or not, the investigations made by the military authorities invariably lasts some time, so that the eager bridegroom and anxious bride are in suspense for an unreasonable lengthy period before they are informed how their case stands. Officers who marry without formal permission and officers who marry in opposition to the prohibition of the military authorities are dismissed from the army.

HOSPITALITY AT SMALL EXPENSE

Entertainment—that is, pleasure to your guests—does not depend on the money you spend, but on your own knowledge of how to receive and extend hospitality. Christine Terhune Herrick tells you all about it. Postpaid, 50 cents.

BRIDGEPORT ORGANIZED

C. W. Woodman returned last night from Bridgeport where he has been for the past week successfully organizing every branch of labor in the town and incidentally securing the first union contract with a drug store in this state.

Speaking of the trip last night Mr. Woodman admitted that he was greatly pleased with the results attained. About twenty-five contracts, he stated, were secured embracing every branch of industry. In fact, the town has been completely unionized.

With the new contracts secured wages have been raised varying from 20 to 40 per cent, an increase and hours have been shortened from three to five hours in the different lines, besides the abolition of Sunday work.

Among the leading industries signing contracts was the Bridgeport Coal Company.

IRON MOULDERS' OFFICERS

At the meeting of the Iron Moulders' Union held last night officers for the ensuing year were chosen as follows: President, Thomas Murphy; vice president, James Dobbins; recording secretary, Thomas Murphy; financial secretary, E. H. McKinley; treasurer, Herman Brandt, and corresponding secretary, Thomas Stewart. J. M. Belzner, E. H. McKinley and Herman Brandt were chosen delegates to the Trades Assembly.

Nervous Disorders

include all affections of the brain, spinal cord and nerves; they embrace head troubles, such as Dizziness, Dullness, Headache, Fits, Blues, Melancholy and Insanity.

Also, Backache, Neuralgia, St. Vitus' Dance, Epilepsy, and all disorders arising from a weakness of the nerves of any organ or part, as Weak Lungs, Heart, Stomach, Kidney, Bladder, etc.

The nerves furnish energy that keeps in motion every organ of the body.

If you have any of these ailments, your nerves are affected, and you need

Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine

because it reconstructs worn-out nerve tissues, is a refreshing, revitalizing, tonic food-medicine, prepared especially to rebuild the worn-out nerves.

"My son, when 17 years old, had epilepsy, could not attend school. Following the failure of physicians to cure him, we gave Dr. Miles' Nervine, and Nerve and Liver Pills. In ten months he regained perfect health."—J. S. WILSON, Dep. Co. Clerk, Dallas Co., Mo.

UNITED STATES IS A BACK NUMBER

Local Employes of Government Notified to Use Term American for Foreign Offices

Government employes in this city hereafter having occasion to address any of our foreign embassies on departmental affairs will use a new style in the address of communications.

From now on there are no more United States embassies or consulates, such institutions having been superseded all over the world by the American embassy and consulate.

This order to local employes is in accordance with direction of Secretary Hay which is one largely in the direction of euphony.

It is also a concession to popular usage. For years the diplomatic representative of this government in England has been called the American ambassador instead of the United States ambassador. The word American is believed by the president and Mr. Hay to be far more dignified and impressive than those of United States, as well as being more brief.

Then, too, there are other United States in the world besides ours—United States of Colombia, for instance. In Europe, the term American has come to signify simply the people of the United States of North America. Those from other parts of the Western hemisphere are called South or Central Americans, Mexicans, Brazilians, and so on, while this country's neighbors on the north are always referred to as Canadians.

In accordance with these orders, all the new stamps, record books and stationery will be engraved as may be proper with "American Embassy," "American Legation," "American Consulate," or "American Consular Agency." The state seal will be similarly altered.

LADY SOMERSET ON FEMALE BURGLARS

"LAST OF THE DANDIES"

Something of Play in Which Beerbohm Tree Is Delighting Theater Goers

By Lady Henry Somerset.
(Copyright, 1904, by W. R. Hearst.)

LONDON, June 18.—Women are starting on many new careers, some to be commended, some to be regretted; but a lady burglars' school of crime certainly takes its place among the latter.

The enterprising woman who inaugurated this regrettable opening for women is Annie Morgan, and her history has been without parrallel for many years.

Annie, who was known as "the lady burglar," and has been associated with several notable robberies, is a handsome woman of barely 30. On leaving school she became a dressmaker's apprentice, but she was not contented with so unambitious a career and she left her firm in order to embark upon her first experience of crime.

She became an expert shoplifter and pickpocket, and by the money she earned she soon became possessed of a suburban villa in North London, elaborately furnished. A handsome carriage would drive up to the door, and she would often be seen, accompanied by one of her visitors, starting for her afternoon drive, her real object being to prospect for a house which could be broken into. It was her habit to place advertisements in the country papers for a good-looking girl as companion, and when she had secured her services she initiated her into the school of burglary.

Her conviction, however, was caused by her jealousy of one of her employes, who had attracted the attention of the man who had launched poor Annie on her regrettable career.

She gave information to the police which led to this man Mason's arrest, but in doing so she excited their suspicions, which ultimately led to her own downfall.

Among the many devices which this woman employed was a dummy wax hand, made to strap to her own, which gave her freedom to steal without suspicion, and a bag for receiving the stolen articles beneath her skirt.

There is something pitiful in the idea of a bright and beautiful woman exercising such ingenuity in so lamentable a manner.

"LAST OF THE DANDIES"

There are many women who stand as types of beauty in all generations, and the question of what they wore, and how they looked and what enhanced their appearance, has been one of unfailing interest to most women, but few men's names have been immortalized for the same reason.

There is, however, one notable exception, and that is the character who was well known nearly a century ago, namely the fashionable Count d'Orsay.

Mr. Beerbohm Tree is now acting in a play which is entitled "The Last of the Dandies," and it may be therefore historically interesting to know that the clothes which this well-known actor wears are made by the son of Count d'Orsay's tailor, who had in his possession the count's measures, which happened to be exactly those of Mr. Tree.

The hat which he wears is from Count d'Orsay's block, and the beautiful dressing case which he uses in the first act belonged also to this famous beau.

So great was Count d'Orsay's reputation as a well-dressed man that the story goes that, one day, when a new pair of trousers was sent home to him, his tailor the next morning received the following letter: "You have forgotten to line the pockets" (for it was the tailor's custom to put a banknote into every new suit Count d'Orsay ordered, in return for the great privilege of being able to dress the greatest dandy, for Count d'Orsay's custom brought a whole army of young imitators to the tailr whom he favored.)

FASHION A CURIOUS STUDY

Fashion is always a curious study. There is nothing by which we can guage the extraordinary proclivity of human nature to run in the same groove as a fashion in names. It is said that owing to Mr. Barrie's last play the name of Mary will become unpopular, but I think that the associations which have made that name forever sacred will be too strong to be in any way influenced by the charming, but farcical play of that great author.

In England the royal names of the moment are always to the front. Fifty years ago Albert and Alberta were the rage; Victoria, shortened to Vera; Alexander now is in vogue, often abbreviated to Aline and Alex. If we penetrate into the country provinces we shall find that fashions prevail there also to an almost ludicrous extent.

It would be difficult to count, on a visit to Devonshire, the number of children who are called Redvers, after General Sir Redvers Buller, who was a great Devonshire hero. Thus Stanleys are to be found innumerable around Liverpool, and in the neighborhood of Arundel, Howards abound.

And if we go across the water we shall find that at Chantilly the various names of the late Duc d'Aumale were given not only to French, but also to English children whose parents were resident in the neighborhood.

It would be interesting to piece together the history of current events by names to be found in the baptismal register in individual places.

A PRINCE TO LECTURE

It is difficult to associate anything scientific with the residence or the rule of the Prince of Monaco, and it is certainly startling to find that the present prince has started on the career of a lecturer, and undoubtedly those interested in zoology owe him a debt of gratitude for the discoveries that he has made with regard to some of the deep sea fish.

Speaking the other day at the Royal institution, many people who were not interested in the question flocked thither in order to see what the man was like who owned the greatest gaming tables in the world. Tall and broadly made, with a thick beard and heavy mustache and a tanned countenance, the lecturer spoke with quiet confidence, and told of his adventures on the deep, while studying maritime biology, in good English.

The prince has been occupied in causing the Mediterranean whale to be caught, and in classifying the different families of this huge sea monster.

It has been found that they can be divided into several species. Some feed at an immense depth from the surface of the ocean, and they have thus been able to discover in the stomach of the whale, fish, of which, hitherto, the scientific world have not been cognizant. They have further identified wounds on the whale's back, said to have been inflicted by the arms of a gigantic jelly fish which they have tackled fathoms below the surface of the sea, remains of which were found inside the animal. It seems, therefore, that Jules Verne's grusome stories of ocean monsters are not far beside the mark.

A BIRD-CATCHING SPIDER

Speaking of zoology, it may be interesting to know that in the insect house of the Zoological society in London there is now a specimen of the giant bird-catching spider from Trinidad.

This hideous tarantula is dark brown in color, and clothed with short, bristly hairs. The lower surface of the feet is furnished with silky pads, with the aid of which it climbs. The hairy fringes with which it is adorned offer resistance to the air, so that the spider is enabled to fall from considerable heights.

They leave their homes at night, and will devour any living creature, such as mice and other vermin, but more especially small birds. They spin no web, but in their retreat in the hollow stump of a palm tree they spin a silken covering to the entrance in the form of a cylinder.

Science has many hard and devious paths which those are called to cross who would arrive at an understanding of all her marvels. But certainly, when a woman the other day, delivering a lecture under the title of "The Esoteric Woman," at the Woman's Institute, told her hearers that everything has a soul, that a cabbage has a soul, that the piece of chalk which she held in her hand had many hundred souls, the news was a little startling.

To illustrate her proposition the lecturer drew many crosses and circles and intersected lines on a blackboard, and endeavored to explain to her hearers that "the universal" was that which inhabited her female audience as surely as the cabbage and the chalk.

Many ladies in the front rows were much occupied in taking copious notes, and so it is to be hoped that they understood the meaning of the lecturer, which to the ordinary and uncultured mind seemed a little mixed!

IMITATION OF PAGAN WORSHIP

Is the miserable imitation of pagan worship, which was inaugurated in the French revolution, to become the fashion at the beginning of the twentieth century? And is France once more to return to the pedantic folly of the eighteenth century?

A great company is to assemble on the evening of the 21st of June on the Eiffel tower to pay homage to the rising sun on the following morning and to introduce a revival of the Fete de Soliel, at which Mr. Camille Flammarion, the French scientist, is to pay an oratorical tribute to the sun.

As a matter of fact, there is no night from the 21st of June to the 22d, for the sun only descends eighteen degrees below the horizon, and consequently continues to illuminate the western world through the night watches until the break of dawn.

There is certainly no sight more beautiful than the burst of sunrise on a midsummer day. I remember spending the whole of one dark night standing among the ruins of Stonehenge in order to watch the sun touch the axis of the oval, for Stonhenge was constructed undoubtedly for solar worship. Before that wonderful moment, the world was wrapped in a gray silence, the occasional chirping of a bird being the only sign that any life was at hand. Then, as the flaming disc appeared, which set the gray stones blazing with its fiery glory, as though by the touch of a magnic baton, a chorus rose in the sky, and ten thousand larks mounted from the grass, pouring their chorus of song into the morning air.

It was a moment never to be forgotten, and perhaps I understand that day, for the first time, the possibility of the fascination of sun worship.

Throughout all ages, astronomy has undoubtedly been interwoven with all religious, and the lamps kept burning in holy places are a survival of the antique fires that symbolized the sun.

All that ancient churches, properly constructed, were so built that the setting sun illuminated the high altar, and this may be verified by a visit to Notre Dame, to Saint German-des-Pres and many other notable buildings, and the most insignificant village churches are all built in this position.

Even up to the time of the French revolution, the solar festival was still observed in France, although it went by the name of the Feux de Saint-Jean, and the king himself used to apply the light that fired the great pile upon the Place de Greve.

In view of this revival of mythological taste, it is of some interest to know that a song written 280 years before Christ has been given for the first time in London, in the performance in reek of "Electra." This ancient song is the hymn of Apollo, which was discovered in the treasury of the Athenians at Delphi, eleven years ago, and was written to celebrate the victory of the Phonecians over Brennus the Gaul. The song begins,

Oh, god of the golden lyre,
Oh, son of the mighty Zeus!

And while this ode is being sung, on the altar burns the flame, and toward Olympus rises the sweet incense of Arabia, while amid a murmur of flutes and lyres is heard the chant of the pilgrims who sing "to the god of the conqueror."

AN ILLUSTRATION OF THE WIT OF KAISER

(Copyright, 1904, by W. R. Hearst.)

BERLIN, June 18.—Here is an apt illustration of the wit of the kaiser:

Two young members of his family were discussing the Emperor's love of self in blissful ignorance that the kaiser was standing behind them.

They said among other nice things that Wilhelm was inordinately fond of the personal pronoun, and that in his communications to the reichstag he used more I's than went with any average argus, and they wondered at his modesty in permitting himself to be called William the Second.

"Excuse me, gentlemen," said the emperor, quietly stepping between them; "I do not call myself Wilhelm the Second, but Wilhelm the Two I's."

There is a grave-digging school in Brussels and all candidates for the post of sexton in Belgium to be eligible must have graduated from this school.

AMERICAN CAKE-WALK

The French Hate It, But Have Caught Fever From This Side of Atlantic

(Copyright, 1904, by W. R. Hearst.)

PARIS, June 18.—The time has passed when Paris, secure in her position as the metropolis of the world, found it perfectly natural that all other great cities on both sides of the Atlantic should imitate her, while no Parisian would ever think of adopting anything in use anywhere else.

Now we take many of our fashions from London, while we still more readily adopt amusements and fads invented by the fertile brains of pleasure-loving New York.

From New York came the craze for coon songs, ragtime and the cake-walk with which we are still afflicted, though, to be honest, most of us heartily hate it.

As New York society for years has had its horse shows and dog shows at the Madison Square garden, it comes perfectly natural that we must also have these fashionable shows, though the true Parisian takes very little interest in horses, except those entered in the great races at Longchamps, and absolutely no interest in creatures of the canine family. Nevertheless, we have had our dog show, and it was quite a success.

It was held in the very heart of the city, in the Palais des Tuileries, and was attended by the very creme de la creme of French society.

Parisian society butterflies in their most elegant robes and accompanied by counts and marquises dressed most faultlessly a l'Anglaise, spent hours walking around among the stalls, trying to convince one another that nothing was of more interest to them than fox terriers, greyhounds, spaniels or daschunds.

The members of the committee on prizes all belonged to our most blue-blooded aristocracy, and with much dignity and no hesitation they awarded medals and ribbons to animals of which they knew nothing.

It was a most amusing affair, and everybody present pretended to be greatly interested, though the judges felt immensely relieved when the affair was over and no one had even attempted to criticise their judgments.

PLAYWRIGHT'S HOUSE A HISTORIC MONUMENT

(Copyright, 1904, by W. R. Hearst.)

PARIS, June 18.—The French government has declared the country house of Armaude Bejart, the wife of the famous Moliere, a historic monument.

This house, which is situated at Meudon, in the midst of a beautiful park, has remained absolutely unchanged since the year 1676, when it was bought by the great playwright.

Even some of the original furniture is still there.

It is at present occupied by M. Cartier, one of the directors of the Comedie Francaise, it will now be opened to the public as a museum, and all the belongings of Moliere will be permanently placed on exhibition there.

D. W. Vitum Jr. of Canton, Ill., a member of the state board of agriculture and World's Fair commissioner, though 76 years of age, last week while hunting in the Wichita mountains discovered a young bear skipping over the rocks. He immediately gave chase and after a race of a few rods captured the little black animal and brought him back in his arms.

THE BANK SCANDAL STIRS SOCIETY

Corruption Exposed by Investigation Has Startled the Public

GAVE TO THE CHURCHES

(Copyright, 1904, by W. R. Hearst.)

BERLIN, June 18.—German society is stirred to its very depths by the disclosures being made in the investigation of the Bank of Pommeru scandal.

This scandal dates back many months and has been dealt with in the criminal courts before, but while it was known from the first trial that the two directors, Schultz and Romeike, had swindled the bank out of considerable amounts of money, the latest examinations by the supreme court reveal a maze of corruption which has startled the public, especially so as the names of members of the kaiser's own family have become involved in the affair.

The two accused directors, it is proved, drew 700,000 marks from the bank and turned this amount over to the cabinet secretary of the empress, Count von Mirbach, asking him to divide it between churches and religious institutions, and in return they were given permission to call their institution "Court Bank of Her Majesty the Empress."

With this high sounding name, they enticed thousands of people to deposit in the bank, though its financial status was very poor.

The evidence so far tends to show that Count von Mirbach used his personal influence with the empress in favor of the men who had impressed him by their magnificent gifts, but of whose personal character or honesty he know absolutely nothing.

His own reputation, however, is excellent, and not one person who knows the court would think af suspecting him of having benefited personally by the transaction, but in the eyes of the great public it may be difficult for him to clear himself.

Privy Councillor Budde's name has also been connected with the scandal and there is no telling where the disclosures may end.

FORT WORTH BUNCO GAME GOES IN PARIS

(Copyright, 1904, by W. R. Hearst.)

PARIS, June 18.—A few weeks ago a Frenchman, M. Joseph Meulier, returned to this city from New York, where he had made a small fortune as chef de cuisine in one of the fashionable clubs.

On board the French steamer which brought him to Havre he made the acquaintance of a pleasant young Englishman, Jonathan Wild, who, like himself, was bound for Paris.

The two were soon inseparable, and, arrived here, they took adjoining rooms in the same hotel.

Some days later Joseph Meulier went to a bank and cashed a draft, representing all his savings, 30,000 francs.

When he returned he sat down to have a drink with his English friend outside a cafe on Boulevard Sevastopol.

A few minutes later they were joined by another Englishman, whom Wild introduced as a friend of his. During the conversation the newcomer asked the chef to buy him a cane in a store to take with him to London as a souvenir of Paris.

"Here are thirty francs," he said, "you are a Frenchman and naturally have much better taste than I have, and as I am a little tired you might go alone. However," he added with a smile, "as you might run away with my money to New York, let me have your pocketbook as security."

Meulier thought this a good joke and handed the stranger the pocketbook containing the 30,000 francs.

When he returned with the cane his two English friends had disappeared, and the police have been unable to find them.

TO MAKE CITY OF ROME A SEAPORT

(Copyright, 1904, by W. R. Hearst.)

PARIS, June 18.—The idea of making the city of Rome a great seaport by the digging of a great canal to the Tyrrhenian sea, which has repeatedly been brought up during the last fifty years may be realized in the very near future.

The young King Victor Emmanuel is personally very much interested in the plan and recently was preesnt at the meeting of a committee of prominent engineers and business men from the Eternal City, where the subject was taken under consideration.

M. Orlando, the most famous engineer in the kingdom, stated that he had the plan worked out, even to the smallest details, and was convinced that the difficulties were insignificant and that the enterprise would pay well within a few years.

The first idea of utilizing the Tiber has been given up, as it has been found that the cost of dredging its winding course would be too great and that a new canal could be dug much cheaper, while enabling the building of a far superior port.

This canal will then start from the old village of Ostia. It will be sixty-three meters wide and eight and a half meters deep, large enough to admit the passage of very large ships.

The work is calculated to take five years at a cost of 60,000,000 francs, or about $12,000,000.

JOURNALIST GETS A JEWEL OF HIGH ORDER

(Copyright, 1904, by W. R. Hearst.)

PARIS, June 18.—Pierre Loti, the famous French author, who in civil life is an officer in the navy and whose real name is Julian Viaud, can testify as to the power of the press in Persia. During his recent trip in thta country the French ambassador at Teheran, who is one of his most ardent admirers, went to the persian minister of foreign affairs to ask him to decorate the author with a Persian order. The minister did not seem much inclined to do so at first.

"Who is this man Loti?" he asked.

"A very famous man and a member of the French Academy," the ambassador replied, somewhat hurt.

"French academy, what is that?"

Now the ambassador was real angry—the idea that there was a person living who did not know the French Academy!

In glowing words he explained to the minister the fame and grandeur of that celebrated institution and said at last:

"Well, Monsieur Loti has come here to describe to his readers all over the world what he has seen and heard in Persia."

"Oh, he is a journalist," exclaimed the minister, very much interested. "Why did you not tell me so right away. I shall immediately make him grand commander of the highest order."

And when the famous writer was introduced to him he personally pinned the bejewelled star on his coat lapel.

THESE PRINCES ARE LIKE KING GEORGE

(Copyright, 1904, by W. R. Hearst.)

LONDON, June 18.—Princess Charlotte of Wales smiles in all her beauty.

And here may be noted a curious contradiction. While the children of King Edward and Queen Alexandra have all favored the house of Denmark those who look at the photographs of Prince Edward of York of his brothers and of the little Princess Helene will see that they have much of the heavy jawl of the Georges. This apparent contradiction is explained by their line of direct descent from King George III and the old Queen Charlotte.

The beauty of the royal family is beyond doubt the Princess Victoria Eugenie of Battenburg—fittingly the godchild of the ex-Empress Eugenie, from whom she will inherit a vast fortune. More than all, she is one of the few women among the royalties who know how to dress.

PRINCE AND PRINCESS ARE TO ENTERTAIN

(Copyright, 1904, by W. R. Hearst.)

LONDON, June 18.—The Prince and Princess of Wales have at last determined to relieve the king and queen of much of the labor of entertaining.

The first royal garden party of the season will be held at Marlborough house and the balance of the summer will be dotted with levees, receptions and the attendance at public functions, all designed to afford the king a much needed relief.

RICH PLATE OF THE HOUSE OF ORMONDE

Something of a Family Which Was Long Entitled to Levy Tribute

(Copyright, 1904, by W. R. Hearst.)

LONDON, June 18.—The recent visit of the king and queen to the home of the Marquis of Ormonde at Kilkenny revives the story of the wonderful gold plate, the like of which is not to be matched anywhere in the world.

This plate, valued at $6,000,000, includes many drinking cups, in one of which is an ivory medallion given to an Ormonde by Charles I.

The Lords of Ormonde have for centuries been hereditary grand butlers of the kingdom, and at one time had the right to levy taxes on all wines imported into Ireland—a right sold to the government a hundred years ago for a fee of $1,075,000.

All the greatness and wealth of the family may be said to have begun with James, the first Marquis of Ormonde.

This dashing devil-may-care nobleman had the misfortune to be grandson of an earl who had earned the severe displeasure of King James I.

The family was poverty stricken, but young James, reckless, cared but little for these things until he fell in love with the beautiful Lady Elizabeth Preston.

Her heart was given to the buoyant James, and her family straightway whisked her off to Holland house, Kensington, where they determined she should make a marriage worthy of her rank and her purse.

There came to the Holland House one morning a handsome pedler. He first won the hearts of the daughters of the Earl of Holland, who ran to the Lady Elizabeth begging her to come downstairs and look at the handsomest pedler ever seen.

There can be little doubt that Lady Elizabeth, a true daughter of Erin, at once guessed the truth.

The rest of the story is found in an old family manuscript, the privilege of reading which is granted to only a few persons.

"Beholding at the back door," runs the record, "the merchant and his wares, she fain would buy of him certain silk gloves of which she had had the handling. The Ladies Holland offered to lend her the money wherewith to complete the purchase, but she, unheedful, went to her chamber to fetch her some. Being private, she drew from the gloves a letter, which she perused and writ the answer, all in the shortest space. Furthermore, the gloves proved to be misfit and had to be returned to the pedler, whereat he showed no sort of discomfort."

The man who could outwit an Irishman in the game of love is not yet born, and James and Elizabeth contrived to get married.

History here records one of the few kingly acts credited to Charles I, for the king forgave the young couple, took them to his heart, and made James the marquis of Ormonde.

In the dark days of the civil war he was lord lieutenant of Ireland and safely out of harm's way. In the era of Clarendon incidental to the restoration and the reign of Charles II he and his wife lived and died in an atmosphere of righteousness, nobility and cleanliness, shining almost alone as the exemplars of virtue in high places.

DEAFNESS CAN NOT BE CURED

by local applications, as they can not reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that can not be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

FOR THE SUMMER GIRL BY THE SEA

BLACK STITCHED WITH WHITE

OF CRAVENETTED SILK

WITH TOUCHES OF WHITE

BANDED WITH BRAIDS

[By Our Special Correspondent.]
MIRIAM SPIER.

'Tis perhaps difficult for some of us to admit, but nevertheless true, that to appear beautiful is woman's principal mission at the gay seaside resorts, where there is little else to occupy the feminine mind from the beginning of the week to the end, when the countless opportunities to pursue the ever-tempting flirtation more or less mild or exciting is to be found.

There is little surprise, then, that sylphlike forms in the prettiest costumes imaginable float happily along on the crest of the waves or contribute bright rays of color upon the white sands of the beach. There is a tone of style and finish about the up-to-date bathing costume that suggests the chic appearance justly applicable to our Parisian sisters. No longer are women compelled to take their dip at the seaside in the unbecoming garments of a stereotyped style, not so many years ago. Women, and children, too, are as attractive at the seaside as in the boudoirs of home; their draperies are arranged with fastidious care, the fit of their garment is molded to their forms in lines of grace and the colors selected are those which are not only becoming, but also in keeping with the bright summer landscape and the shining blue sea.

This season there is a particularly large assortment of materials to select from for the bathing suit. Of course, mohair will be used extensively in the plain colors, and the well-dressed woman will go into the surf in striped or figured silk. Then there are seen also the poplin and alpaca garments, trimmed abundantly with pretty silk and braid of almost every description. These fabrics are all light in weight and promise to keep their shape in water and even after the fair bather has stepped out of the water. They will not cling in the all too close folds common to old-time bathing suits, but will gracefully hold their own shape, but little affected by the water which saturates them. White, scarlet, blues and lavender and green all find favor among seekers after suits in which they will look most fascinating. Serges, flannels and woolen suits will be donned by those who bathe in chilly waters in the most quiet places, but the well-dressed woman at the fashionable resorts will appear in silk as shining as the sea and as bright as the colorings of the rainbow.

Very new and particularly favored this summer are the silks, and there are suits made up in fine striped and charmingly figured designs, while just as elaborate are some fashioned in the plain shades. The softer silks are not quite as practical as the stiffer ones, and of these there is a beautiful and endless assortment in pretty grounds, figured with bright colors, as well as everything attractive in the vast line of taffetas that the manufacturer can produce. Naturally, there are some women who will wear the softer silks, but it would be advisable for only those who can display a faultless figure and form to attempt these materials.

Mohair is mostly used in plain colors and is trimmed profusely with braid. Poplin and alpaca are also much used with the plain ground more than any other style, and they look charming and attractive with silk and braid trimmings.

One especially rich bathing costume was made of white mohair, trimmed with rows of blue soutache braid, and worn with a blue sash and blue hose. The tunic is not quite knee length and has a triple box plait in the front and back, the bottom edged with five rows of the soutache braid. The tiny V at the neck, the shoulder straps, which are the width of the shoulder seam, and the sleeve, cut to resemble handkerchief points, are also trimmed with four rows of blue soutache crossing at the corners. The shoes were of white canvas, embroidered on the toe with a blue silk chevron and tied with blue ribbons. The finishing touch is attained by a pretty little oilskin cap covered in silk, a blue band being run about the drawstring and tied at the top with a dainty bow.

Another stunning costume was in dark blue taffeta, trimmed in white silk, striped in light blue and worn with a big Alsatian bow of light blue as a finish to the sailor collar, a stock collar of the same, and a band of the silk at the edge of the skirt. Both the blouse and the skirt have small tucks in them, and the full sleeves are elbow length finished by a shirring. The hose and slippers are the same shade as the costume, and a becoming blue silk cap protected the abundant tresses from the water. Among the sights that attracted attention recently at one of the summer resorts, was a dear little tot on the beach in a bathing suit of red mohair, trimmed with plain white braid in double rows. The little blouse has a sailor collar edged with a double row of the braid, and the vest was trimmed crosswise with double rows of the braid at intervals. A white belt and tiny shoulder puffs for sleeves completed the suit. The little accessories that added greatly to the get-up were tiny white silk ribbon bows in the hair, white lace silk stockings and white slippers laced about the ankle with ribbons of the same shade of red.

One of the cutest features in this season's bathing gowns is the dainty little white chemisette, which is not only applied to the chic Parisian costume, but to the natty bathing suits as well. It adds to the color effectiveness of a bathing suit and the touch of white is becoming to even the brownest of sun-tanned faces.

Conspicuously attractive is a bathing costume of scarlet wash silk, with a chemisette of tucked white silk that is trimmed across the front with white silk braid, and heads a full shirred vest of the same material. A fancy white silk braid is used in two rows around the skirt and the bodice, which has a collar turned quite far back across the back and merging into cute little bolero fronts over the bodice in front. Two bands of the braid finish the little sleeve in the shape of a shoulder puff. White high laced shoes are worn with scarlet hose. White ribbon confines the skirt at the waist, and scarlet ribbons trim a white silk cap, which is arranged artistically upon a very pretty pompadour.

A becoming costume that will afford comfort as well as good style is the new Russian bathing suit. Fashioned in pale-blue pongee silk, the blouse and skirt are in one in the Russian coat style. The back sets smoothly over the shoulders and is made with a center seam. The fronts are also plain, closing at the center with buttons and buttonholes to the lower edge or stitched together from the waist line down. The neck is open, disclosing a removable chemisette, with or without a standing collar or a narrow band for a finish. A broad collar in sailor or stole outline provides completion, and the sleeves may be of the popular bishop shaping or in short puff style. Leg bands confine the knickerbockers below the knee. Four varied widths of white silk braid (the broadest to the edge) trim the sailor collar, neckband and sleeve puff. A white silk shield ornaments the chemisette, and white ribbon sash, with bow and ends to the front, gives the waist a chic finish. Either the white or blue hose may be worn, and white slippers laced sandal fashion to the ankle.

This same costume can be carried out in the plain or checked waterproof taffeta, surah or peau de soie, and are very effective with mohair braid or silk-stitched bands for trimming. Regarding the details and accessories of the bathing outfit, a great deal of thought and taste should be exercised. Hosiery, shoes or boots and caps must be selected with care, each harmonizing in every respect with the costume. There are hose of endless description and variety to be seen in the shops, affording a choice for every woman to select from. Although the assortment of shoes and boots is more limited, many changes may be achieved by the addition of silk laces to correspond in shade with the garment. Of course, there are the high laced boots of canvas, which are very trim and neat, finished by the silken string and tied in dainty bows; then some of our fair sisters may select the prettily embroidered sandal with the crossed ankle ribbons that were worn many years ago, and still have a fascinating touch, particularly upon a small or well-shaped foot. Lastly, there are the plain little sandals with absolutely very little to them besides the sole and a strap to hold it on, and many of the bathers do not wear any shoes at all, but have the finest silk hosiery made to match the color of the bathing dress or its trimmings. To return for just a moment to a few suggestions regarding the hosiery, it might be well to know that some of the daintiest silken affairs worn are embroidered in small floral designs scatteerd at intervals, and giving a touch of inconspicuous color to a dark ground, while others are woven in fine lace patterns and smart openwork stitches that reveal a hint of a white ankle peeping through the mesh.

Ribbons and sashes flutter showily upon the new bathing garments, and give them an airiness and a touch of charming carelessness very becoming to them. A big Alsatian bow often will form all the cap which the little feminine bather will wear, artistically arranged upon her glossy hair. This style is particularly fascinating when one has a head of curly hair, with cunning little ringlets escaping all about the face. When caps are worn they will be trimmed with bows of ribbon or frills of silk of the color of the cap, and in the case of the handkerchief cap, which will make its appearance again, none but the fairest face will look charming under it.

Of very great importance, particularly to our stouter sister, is the fact that in order to appear trim and neat it is absolutely essential to wear a corset. Possibly a more comfortable one than is worn with the dinner or evening gown will answer. For our more fortunate slight women simply a girdle is required to give necessary graceful lines to waist and hips. A regular bathing corset can be obtained that has no steels that might rust, but just enough stiffness acquired by featherbones to hold the shape sufficiently neat. A strikingly attractive costume seen on an equally as charming a fair bather, who was rather enjoying her sun bath on the beach than the surf, was in white poplin, with narrow black silk braid for trimming. The skirt blouse was tucked in Gibson style and had a Russian closing at the left side. An applied round yoke without a standing collar was a pretty feature and the short puff at the shoulder adopted for the sleeves. The fulness of the blouse at the back was gathered at the waist line and the fronts were allowed to pouch over the belt. Three-piece shaping was given the skirt and the fulness at the top disposed in tucks. The black braid outlined the round yoke, edged the shoulder puffs and appeared on the skirt, forming a panel in front and extending in three rows around the skirt at intervals. A fringed black silk girdle was worn. A white cap, with large black bow at the front, white silk hose and white sandals completed an exceedingly chic costume.

Laces and Embroideries.

A library might be filled with the mysteries of trimmings and still the wonderful story remain incomplete. Since womankind first learned the art never has the use of laces and embroideries been more lavish. Sumptuous passementeries showing encrusted leaves, fruits and figured designs are in all the shops, and the fiat of the fashion molders has gone forth that everything my lady wears from a robe de nuit to her wedding gown—shirtwaist suits included—must be burnished up and edged off with jeweled braids, glittering passementries and elaborate embroideries.

Fruits made of padded plush are shown swinging from stems of white and green braid. In between the fruits are leaves of white open work and gold braid. Small green braid is used to show the veins and outlines of the leaves. Purple velvet was used for one exquisite gown lately shown in Paris. The velvet was made up so as to form clusters of delicious appearing purple grapes, while green braid attaches the bunches to the waist and skirt. This design was carried out with elaborate fulness—the branches of the grapevine were shown by brown braid held in place by tiny balls of gold gauze, and the slender tendrils of the vine were of green braid. The purple velvet of the grapes themselves finished off one of the most daring yet successful creations of the present Parisian season. The gown was worn by the Marquise de Lorme at the spring races and was widely admired. In fact, no flight of fancy in the piling on of rich trimmings of lace and embroidered material can excel the present craving for these delights of the feminine instinct.

Japanese Crepe.

For summer kimonos Japanese cotton crepe is an excellent fabric. It washes like the traditional iron, and no matter how delicate the coloring may be there is seldom a piece that fades with tubbing. This material can be procured in an infinite variety of tints and designs. Stripes are effective and a plain crepe to match the colored stripe makes a pretty border for the collar, front and loose sleeves. There is one distinctly Japanese pattern that has taken remarkably well. It represents Japanese letters of the alphabet stamped in white on dark blue, China blue or any color that one happens to fancy.

Description of Above Models.

Sicilienne Bathing Suit.

The siciliennes are ideal for beach and bathing suit wear, for they shed both the sand and the water with equal thoroughness. This season black is in the lead as heretofore, with navy blue a very close second. Some shades of brown are favored by those who desire a little novelty, and the darker shades in the shot sicilienne attract many. The model illustrated in black has the collarless chemisette, and the broad sailor collar in narrow tucks, and this and the little cravet and puffed sleeve ruffle are edged in white with black soutache and French knots. The skirt is gored with a pretty flare just above the knee, and a narrow featherboned belt completes the natty outfit.

With Touches of White.

Black mohair blouse with short puff sleeve edged with white, and a broad sailor collar in white with fancy pattern in black mohair braid fashions this plain and sensible bathing suit. The skirt is full, pleated to the waistband, and a deep belt of white has four rows of the fancy black braid as a trimming.

A Model In Gray.

Some of the lighter sicilennes, and especially in the fashionable shades of gray and tan, are liked by some bathers as being distinctive when compared with the multitude of black and blue bathing suits. The model is fashioned with tucks forming a yoke, the fulness being caught down at the waistline by the narrow belt. A fancy collar with stole ends, which pass beneath the ceinture, is edged with a novelty braid of black and white which tones in prettily with the gray. The stole ends are repeated by strappings down the front of the skirt, these too edged with braid. The skirt is gored to fit over the hips without fulness, and there is a shallow band of princess haircloth inserted in the stitched hem, which prevents the skirt from sagging forlornly about the knees when wet.

Black Stitched With White.

Black taffeta has made quite a niche for itself in the affections of the beach girls, for not only is it smart and stylish, but it is comfortable to swim in, being light and shedding the water well. An unusually good model is the one illustrated, in which there is a shallow shoulder yoke, to which the blouse portion is shirred, the broad sailor collar concealing the yoke. The neck is cut in V shape and filled in with a collarless chemisette of tucked white mohair. The skirt is pleated to the waistband, each plait being heavily stitched in white over the curve of the hips, the oscillating stitch of the sewing machine making a pretty finish. A narrow black beading threaded with white velvet ribbon appears on the sailor collar and edges the pointed belt.

Banded With Braids.

The larger suit of dark gray mohair is banded with a white linen braid, this fashioning the round yoke, to which the blouse is applied in a broad double box pleat, and the fastening is at the left side. The skirt has a round hip yoke decorated with braid and three bands appear above the hem. The fastening of the skirt follows the line of the waist. The little suit is of navy blue serge trimmed with the same linen braid. The throat is open, the broad sailor collar forming a V. The little skirt is pleated to the waistband and double rows of braid appear on the sailor collar, sleeve, belt and hem.

Of Cravenetted Silk.

Somewhat more elaborate is this bathing costume of black moneybak taffetas, with its chemisette and shawl collar of white banded with a handsome novelty silk braid. The blouse is pleated to the long shoulder seam, the shallow puff sleeve being edged with the braid. The skirt has tablier effect outlined with the fancy braid, which is semitransparent, and the circular cut affords snugness at the hips with flare at the hem.

Fagotting the Latest Modiste Fad.

Among the new summer neckwear one of the most attractive is the fagotted stock. These stocks are easily laundered, merely needing to be stretched into shape before ironing; and there is no other neckwear so comfortable and dainty on either a shirtwaist suit or a gown for afternoon wear. They are very simple to make, as all that is required is bias bands of neatly folded linen fagotted together with a coarse mercerized cotton. The shops are now selling the linen bands all ready to use, and the woman with the merest knowledge of needlework may make for herself any number of artistic trimmings.

Yokes of fagotting are particularly pretty on organdies or the light flowered silks if the bands are made with ribbon of the prevailing shade, and the heavy crochet silk is used for the handwork. Some of the most elaborate skirts are made with yokes, which consist of clusters of hand-run tucks, alternating with fagotted bands and over a drop skirt. The effect is unusually pretty.

A woman with a taste for simple needlework could create a very beautiful gown, almost entirely made of shirring and fagotting. The yoke, the deep cuffed sleeve and the panels of the skirt should all be done in straight pieces. In one of the newest models the fagotting in the yoke of the skirt ran horizontally and in the remainder of the skirt the work was put in vertically. Fagotting is being used extensively in the making of all underwear and is holding a conspicuous place in children's dresses and the little caps.

CHECKING BAGGAGE

BY WALDON FAWCETT.

The season is at hand when the twentieth-century woman who has the slightest chance of realizing the inevitable and universal feminine ambition to go abroad begins to actually prepare for the journey, or, as the next best thing, to turn the matter over in her mind to discover if there is not some means whereby she can manage to "go across" this year, after all. Who shall explain the peculiar, irresistible fascination which European travel has for Miss Columbia's daughters? The burden of this longing for Old-World jaunts is placed on the shoulders of the fair sex because there can be no doubt that they are the leaders and instigators of the American stampede across the Atlantic each vacation time.

There are, to be sure, hosts of American men who are just as enthusiastic about the sights of Great Britain and the Continent as are their wives and sisters and daughters; but at the same time there is a vast army of sons of the republic who, from patriotism or some other motive, would prefer to go out to the Yellowstone, or to get into a suit of old clothes and hie themselves to the depths of the Maine woods rather than look at old cathedrals and wrestle with a lot of antiquated customs, such as the foreign baggage system, calculated to drive a live Yankee to sudden desperation.

Among American women, however, there is no such division of opinion. Whether the Paris shops are the magnet or some other influence is most potent may never be determined, but certain it is that Europe is the loadstone which ever and anon draws American femininity. The woman who has been abroad once scrapes and saves to go again—she would like to go every year if she could have her way; and as for the woman who has never been across, not all the conjured terrors of seasickness can quite convince her that there is any more dire calamity than to die without seeing Paris.

What is more, the self-reliant American woman is quite getting into the habit of going abroad alone. When our mothers were girls the idea of a young woman crossing the ocean alone, without friends or chaperon, would have been quite sufficient to induce an epidemic of nervous prostration at any family council at which it was suggested; but nowadays every outgoing steamer carries a contingent of fearless and independent young ladies, who appear fully competent to take care of themselves. Nor is it only the bachelor girls who make up this newest form of the "American invasion." In the ranks of the unattached petticoated tourists are many women who have husbands at home—husbands who are too busy, or imagine they are too busy, to take a vacation. So the wives, under the new order of things, instead of going to the country or seashore, just pack off for that long-anticipated trip to Europe, which they have become quite convinced they will never get if they wait for hubby to come along, and, strangely enough, many of these wives manage to make the trip with no greater outlay than would be necessary for a few weeks at a fashionable summer hotel.

The feminine novice about to go to sea for the first time usually feels that she has so much to learn that it quite appals her. For her consolation it might be explained that most of this knowledge can be acquired best by first-hand experience. Well-meaning friends will give the fair voyager all sorts of advice and suggestions; but, after all, the first requisite is to confess ignorance after getting aboard and quickly acquire an ability to ask all sorts of questions in pleasing fashion from those likely to be able to give the needed information. People who are afraid of appearing "green" miss most of the fun and half the good of an ocean voyage.

The first problem which confronts the woman who is going to paddle her own canoe in the occupation of globe-trotting is found in the choice of a ship in which to make the journey, and just here it may be noted that the size and speed of the ocean hotel is really not half so important as the consideration of the style of cooking and the manner in which the food is served. The fair passenger is pretty sure to be seasick, but likewise she is pretty sure to recover before the end of the voyage, and when, after such an ordeal, the appetite is a-flutter, it makes a decided difference whether your food is served to meet the taste of a German, a Frenchman, an Englishman or an American. There is such a difference that old travelers often select not only one line, but choose a given ship of that line for all their journeys. Then, too, the port of destination is a consideration, if one wishes to save time and money in reaching that portion of Europe where actual sightseeing is to begin.

The average woman who goes abroad on her own hook needs to count the pennies carefully, and so it is worth her while to consider carefully whether she will travel first class, second class or steerage. Just here a word must be said about the transformation which has taken place in steerage accommodations. The old-time steerage of unsavory repute is gone and in its place we find a plainly, but perfectly appointed, section of the ship, where a woman may for $28 have a comfortable bunk, with clean bedding and woven-wire mattress, and eat at a table covered with clean linen, being served by a waiter attired in clean clothing. Four meals a day are served, and that the fare is by no means bad may be judged by a specimen dinner bill, which includes noodle soup, boiled beef, turnips, potatoes, fresh bread, stewed apples and rice.

There is a separate compartment of the steerage for single women, two being assigned to each stateroom. The great disadvantage of the steerage from the feminine point of view is found in the fact that these passengers are confined to their own quarters and are not allowed the run of the ship. For this reason vanity keeps out of the steerage many women who might otherwise get along very comfortably with such accommodations. The second-class accommodations on shipboard are to the first cabin what a seat in a chair car is to a Pullman when traveling on land. The cost of a second-class ticket from New York to Europe ranges from $40 to $45, according to the ship and the season of the year.

The first cabin on an ocean liner is vastly superior to its counterpart on land—a sleeping car, supplemented by dining and observation cars. The cost of passage on the six-day or fastest steamers ranges all the way from about $100 to, say, $600, for which latter sum one may enjoy a suite of rooms, including private bath. Probably the ideal way, however, for the woman who wishes to go abroad on a minimum expenditure is to choose one of the slower steamers. These vessels require 10 or 11 days to make the trip which the ocean greyhounds make in six, but for $65 or $75 one may obtain on these vessels accommodations quite as good as those for which double that sum is demanded on the fleeter craft. The slow boat also offers the advantage that a tourist is enabled to enjoy a portion of the ocean voyage after recovery from seasickness, whereas on the six-day boat the chances are that the attack has barely passed ere it is time to go ashore. The table on the slower boats is usually all that could be desired, but some of these vessels do not carry a physician, a point regarding which it were well to seek information in advance.

Women going abroad usually find it more pleasant to travel in pairs or parties of four, since on all steamers each stateroom contains two bunks or berths, and, in the busy season at least, a single woman must always share her room with some other fair traveler, and if she has not provided a friend to fill the vacancy the soulless steamship corporation may assign to the room some woman who will not prove congenial to the first occupant. The occupants of each stateroom also find it necessary to make a choice between the upper and lower berths. Light and ventilation are better above, but, of course, the danger and discomfort of getting into and out of the berth are greater than in the lower bunk.

The matter of clothing is one where the inexperienced and uninformed feminine tourist is likely to pay the penalty of personal discomfort. It is usually colder at sea than on the mountain tops at home, and a storm cap of some kind and a good mackintosh or its equivalent are virtually necessary, whereas one or two blankets of the kind known as steamer rugs will come in decidedly handy. For the benefit of the prospective petticoated tourist who dislikes to be made conspicuous by her attire it may be said that women may wear clothes of almost any style on shipboard, but a large proportion of the fair passengers on the average transatlantic steamer appear to have a penchant for yachting costumes.

Veteran travelers declare that a woman who will consent to wear it will get more comfort from an old-fashioned hood than anything else in her wardrobe. Sweaters and short skirts are much in vogue, and gloves that come high on the wrist. Women who have an outside garment lined with fur will not act amiss in taking it aboard. The woman who has been abroad is invariably the strongest possible advocate of her sisters traveling in "light marching order." If she will listen to advice from such a source the novice in ocean traveling will go abroad with only a couple of dress-suit cases, containing merely changes of underclothing, plenty of shirtwaists, a traveling suit and not more than one dinner gown. The woman who is fond of dress is likely to be deluded by the fact that the steamship company allows her to take two medium-size trunks in addition to a steamer trunk (not over 13 inches in height) and hand luggage which goes into the stateroom. She will, however, rue it later if she goes to such a limit, not so much from the fact that the average European railroad allows only 50 pounds of baggage, and she will, consequently, have excess charges to pay, as by reason of the fact that there is no baggage-checking system abroad, and when it comes to attending personally to the loading and unloading of trunks at every railroad station they soon become a nightmare.

Regretfully must it be confessed that there are many supposed partial preventives, all less effective than that of having the system in the best of condition at the beginning of the voyage. Many women who have crossed the ocean dozens of times make it a practice to lie quietly in their berths during the first 24 hours, no matter what the weather, in order to get in some degree accustomed to the roll of the ship. The veteran feminine tourist after she has passed through the siege of seasickness, and is ready to enjoy life again, follows the plan of having the steward bring a cup of hot coffee to her stateroom as soon as she is awake. Then comes a bath in warm salt water, followed by a turn on deck for the sea air.

The unattached feminine tourist who is well enough to be up and about need not have the least fear of having a dull time on shipboard. All sorts of games are constantly in progress. Card-playing is universal, and then there is tossing the rings and that favorite diversion, shuffleboard, a sort of deep-sea Scotch curling, in which women ranging in age from 16 to 60 use things shaped like boat oars to shove along the deck other things shaped like poker chips or uncrowned "checkers." There is a good library on every steamer, but the woman who is fond of reading will do well to bring her own store of literature, and in this line there is nothing to quite compare with a stack of old magazines. An ocean journey, particularly on one of the slower steamers, also offers splendid opportunities for fancy work which are taken advantage of by many tourists.

The mooted question of tips is one which will rise up toward the close of the voyage to puzzle the novice. This is, as in railway travel, a matter in which every person must be a law unto himself, but there is at the same time an approximate scale which is followed by people of moderate means and sane reasoning power. On the fast steamers it is customary for the average tourist to bestow $2.50 on the table steward or waiter; $1, or perhaps $2, on the deck steward, in case he is particularly good about looking after the steamer chair which you have rented for 50 cents; at least $2.50 for the bedroom steward, if you have had a severe attack of seasickness; $1 for the steward of the bath and 50 cents for the library steward.

On the other hand, a bachelor girl who has made many trips on one of the slower and less pretentious steamers says that her fees seldom exceed $5.50 each way, divided as follows: Saloon steward, $2; stewardess, $1.50; bedroom steward, $1; deck and bathroom stewards, 50 cents each. This same girl, it may be noted, always makes it a practice to buy a return ticket, thereby saving 10 per cent., and she engages accommodations months in advance, sometimes engaging in January or February her passage for June or July. Of course, such a reservation can readily be surrendered if circumstances arise to disarrange plans.

Fruit Baths.

If you can afford to indulge yourself in a tubbing of fresh strawberries, it is said that you will be able to work marvellous improvements in your complexion and the texture of your skin. No milk bath can equal the beauties of one composed of the juice of certain fresh fruits, strawberries preferred. They cleanse the skin, freshen it, and, besides giving it a delightful tone, impart a delicate and lingering odor that hasn't the cloying effect of perfumes or scented soaps. To be sure, about 20 pounds of delicious fruit is required for a single immersion, but even this is not too dear a price to pay for the cause of personal beautifying.

Only the juice of the fruit is used. The berries are carefully strained, so that there is no hard substance left, and to this quantity of rich red liquid a good deal of water is added, so that the bath is not sticky. For want of strawberries, as their season is so short, other small fruits can be used, but they lack the toning qualities of this expensive fruit. However, a strawberry bath is by no means a daily occurrence, so if one is managed in a season a woman may consider that she has accomplished something in the way of personal improvement.

After the poison is extracted from cucumbers, which is done by peeling them, cutting one end off to a depth of an inch or so and then rubbing these two sections together vigorously until the cucumber foams, slices of it thrown into the bath are said to make an excellent tonic for the skin.

The Popularity of Embroidery.

The use of embroidery for trimmings has grown into the proportions of a fad of the most violent kind. It has come not only to fill the place of laces for trimmings, but now the ultra monde insists on wearing costumes made up entirely of embroidery. The craze has even gone to the extent of having underwear made up altogether of embroidered linen. A recent creation of the Faubourg St. Germain was a costume formed solely of embroidered pale yellow linon de sole.

This rage for embroidery has one consolation for the women with a longing for modish apparel—it offers an opportunity for the handy woman to compete successfully, with only home resources, with the maiden whose purse can command the aid of the Paris shops. Embroidery of the sort that counts is handwork—but, of course, machine embroideries have reached a stage of great perfectness. The flouncings themselves come ready for the embroidery from 12 to 50 inches in depth and nainsook, batiste, lawn and the finer organdies form the best backgrounds for the hand embroidery.

After the desired pattern has been worked to the required depth—say 12 inches in an open pattern—the upper edge may be gathered, or, if a richer effect is desired, tucked and attached to the skirt. The latest designs show six or seven of these flounces falling over each other, the different lengths of the flouncings giving a flower-like fullness to the drop of the skirt. If the scolloped edge is used, a beautiful effect can be obtained by trimming with lace or embroidered insertion cut to follow the edge shape.

"Has your son benefited by his stay abroad?"

"Yes," answered Mrs. Cumrox. "When he used to say the weather was bad he now says 'the climate is beastly.'"—Washington Star.
