

Tower, Park 'relationship' draws fire

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two Texas Democrats hoping to unseat Sen. John Tower called upon the Republican to explain his "relationship" with accused South Korean influence peddler Tongsun Park.

"I expected to have to put up with this," Tower said Wednesday when asked to respond to charges leveled by Rep. Bob Krueger and former state insurance board chairman Joe Christie. "It means the focus is on me even though there are an awful lot of people involved. No one promised me a rose garden when I got in this business."

"My own conscience on this is very clear indeed so I have no regrets about anything."

Krueger and Christie are entered in the May Democratic primary pitting for the opportunity to challenge Tower in November.

During a Wednesday press conference held down the hall from the room where Park was testifying before a House committee investigating allegations of influence buying on Capitol Hill, Krueger said "Texas stands embarrassed, for Texans do not expect the person who holds the highest office within the power of the people of the state of Texas to give to be standing with Tongsun Park."

"Tongsun Park is a man with a reputation for wine, women and money," Krueger continued. "If there is a friendship between our state's senior senator and Mr. Park, the people of Texas are entitled to know what is the nature of that relationship."

Krueger also charged that Tower did not really remove himself from the Park investigation by the Senate Ethics Committee of which Tower is a member.

In Texas, Christie said: "Why did he (Tower) wait until the eve of Park's testimony before the Senate Ethics Committee before disqualifying himself?"

"If Tower indeed is on the 'master list' of a small number of senators being investigated, he owes it to Texans to explain why the Korean government thought he might be willing to accept a bribe in return for continuing aid to Korea."

On Feb. 21 Tower sent a letter to the committee's chairman, Sen. Adlai E. Stevenson, D-Ill., disqualifying himself from "participating in the initial review or investigation pending before the committee regarding contacts of members of the Senate with the Korean government or agents of that government."

"I now understand that Sen. Tower did not really remove himself from the investigation, rather under the rules of the Senate he would be 'ineligible' to participate in this investigation because he himself is under investigation," said Krueger.

"This is not an investigation," countered Tower. "This is an initial review. The records of a number of senators have been asked for. Letters went out to about 156 present and former senators. I have supplied certain records to the committee and will supply any they ask for."

Krueger charged that Tower "made a tactical error when he attempted to sell to the American people the concept that his disqualifying himself was a noble endeavor when he had no real choice in the matter. The people of Texas are fortunate that subsequent investigation by the media clearly shows that he would be in violation of committee rules had he remained."

Tower repeated Wednesday that he had disclosed his "social acquaintance" of Park in the summer of 1975. "I have not seen him (Park) for 2½ years," Tower said.

Citing confidentiality requirements, Tower refused to relate the nature of any documents he had turned over to the committee or to verify reports he would be called upon to testify before the committee.

In his letter to Stevenson, Tower wrote: "To the best of my knowledge, there has never been an attempt by anyone connected with the government of Korea, or otherwise, to improperly influence my legislative decisions."

Tower also wrote that he had been a "strong supporter of the efforts of the peoples of the republics of China and Korea to maintain their freedom consistent with my perceptions of our own national interest."

"In connection with that endeavor over a period of years I have built up a number of acquaintanceships which have included some Korean nationals. Because some of these persons and those with whom they came in contact are the subject of the Korean inquiry, to preserve the credibility of that inquiry, I wish to disqualify myself from participation."

Krueger said "friendships with Tongsun Park can not be explained away as resulting simply from normal senatorial contacts with government officials, because Tongsun Park held no official position with the South Korean government. Thus any claims to have made those contacts simply in the line of senatorial duty or as a result of being a member of the Senate Armed Services Committee will not wash."

(Present and proposed rates above do not include Federal excise tax. The proposed rates do not include gross receipts tax, where applicable.)

All extension rates would increase from $1.50 monthly to $1.60 per month.

Southwestern Bell today asked the Texas Public Utility Commission for authority to increase telephone rates by $214.3 million in the 488 cities and towns served by the company.

The request represents an increase of 11.4 per cent on intrastate revenues for the company.

Only $37.7 million of the total increase would apply to basic residential telephone rates, said Doyle E. Rogers, Southwestern Bell vice president for Texas.

Under the proposal, one-party residential rates would increase in a range from 75 cents monthly in the smallest towns to $1.20 in the largest.

Local service rate would go from $5.50 to $6.40. Extension lines would rise from $1.50 to $1.60.

Proposed monthly two-party residential rate increases would range from 15 cents in smallest towns to 80 cents in the largest.

Requested increases for one-party business service would range from $1.60 to $3.80 per month.

Rogers said Southwestern Bell does not seek to increase rates for in-state long distance calls or WATS, nor for coin telephones or Directory Assistance.

In the Southwestern Bell proposal, gross receipts tax payments levied by and paid to 488 cities and towns would be separated from basic telephone service charges. These payments would be shown as a separate item on customer bills.

Rogers said that stating charges separately on bills would assure that city customers pay charges only for their municipality's tax rate, and also would assure that customers outside city limits do not pay the taxes.

The remainder of the rate request would be increases in miscellaneous rates and one-time service connection and rearrangement charges, plus restructuring of rates for certain business special services.

"We've delayed filing this rate request for months because of our appeal of the 1976 rate case," Rogers said. "We appealed because we consider the rates to be grossly insufficient. We also wanted to clarify certain legal questions, including how our rate base should be determined."

"The Supreme Court has agreed to hear and answer those legal questions. However, we have not solved our pressing rate needs through the courts."

"Therefore, we feel we have no choice but to seek rate relief from the Public Utility Commission," the vice president said.

"Our $214 million request must be placed in the perspective of Southwestern Bell's operations in Texas," Rogers emphasized.

"We have an investment of more than $5 billion in the state. We have more than 44,000 employees. We serve 7.5 million telephones in Texas, and we add more than 400,000 phones every year."

"Simply put, large amounts of money are required to continue providing quality telephone service to Texas."

"Southwestern Bell's construction expenditures were $983 million in the state last year. We must spend approximately $1 billion in 1978."

"Our construction expenditures are far larger than those of any other utility in the state. For instance, our

Commission hears proposal to settle deputies' suit

Without notification required by law, the Howard County Commissioners Court met this morning with Attorney Gerald Lopez, Attorney Malcolm Schultz, and County Attorney Harvey Hooser to discuss the wage suit being brought in federal court by two female Big Spring deputies.

In a closed session, which is legal when discussing litigation, the commissioners heard a proposal from Lopez concerning settlement of the pending court case. Suit has been brought in federal district court in Abilene alleging discriminatory wage practices in the Howard County Sheriff's office regarding deputies Rachel Shaffer and Bernice Nail.

The meeting was held at 9:30 a.m. in the county courtroom, with an emergency agenda posted by County Clerk Margaret Ray at 8:42 a.m.

Said County Judge Bill Tune when asked if he thought the meeting was held legally, "Probably not." Tune went on to say that he had known of the meeting prior to this morning, but that an agenda had not been posted and the media not informed because of an oversight by his secretary.

Tune also said that he did not receive notice that the meeting was planned until Wednesday morning, although Attorney Lopez's office mailed the letter informing the commissioner's court and the judge of the request for a meeting last Friday.

County Attorney Harvey Hooser was not available for comment on the legality of the meeting.

Of the text of the meeting, Deputies Shaffer and Nail referred queries to their attorney, who had not arrived back at his Odessa office by press time.

The case was scheduled to go to trial in mid-January, but was postponed due to the illness of one of the plaintiffs. The case was re-scheduled to come up on the May docket.

Malcolm Schultz is an Abilene attorney hired by the county to assist in their defense.

'Alive, healthy and loved today'

Clone's song: 'I gotta be me'

NEW YORK (AP) — The boy created from a cell of an unmarried man is "alive, healthy and loved today," according to the author of a book about the purported first cloning of a human being.

Science writer David M. Rorvik was quoted as affirming the alleged child's status in a statement issued Wednesday by his publisher, J.B. Lippincott Co. The publisher and Rorvik's agent declined to make the writer available for further questions.

Rorvik said in the statement that scientists refined a cell-fusion technique for the alleged cloning instead of using earlier microsurgical techniques in which cells were more easily damaged.

The book, "In His Image," originally was scheduled for publication in June but the date was advanced to March 31.

It says that a boy, now 14 months old, was created from a cell of an unidentified, wealthy, unmarried man.

"I have seen the child since his birth," Rorvik asserted in the statement. The statement did not give the child's name or location.

Rorvik declared that the cloning was "a feat achieved by a team with millions of dollars at its disposal." He did not identify the team or say who provided the funding.

Cloning, the process of duplicating living things from an individual cell, has been used in creating plants and a frog, but has never before been attempted with humans. Scientists have expressed doubt that such an achievement as a human cloning would have gone unnoticed in the scientific world.

But a Vermont doctor said Wednesday that Rorvik approached him two years ago to aid an elderly, New Jersey multimillionaire who wanted to create an exact duplicate of himself through cloning.

Dr. Landrum Shettles, a specialist in obstetrics and gynecology who had 27 years of experience in embryology at Columbia Presbyterian Hospital in New York City before he moved to Vermont in 1975, said in a copyrighted story by the Burlington (Vermont) Free Press that he had told Rorvik that he needed time to do research and find a laboratory. He said he heard no more of the request until the London Times recently asked him about Rorvik.

Shettles said he doesn't doubt Rorvik's story. "Apparently, I'm about the only one," he said. "From what experience I've had with him, I feel it's an obligation to speak up and express my confidence."

Shettles co-authored a book called "Choosing your Child's Sex" with Rorvik in 1970.

Edward L. Burlingame, senior vice president and editor-in-chief of Lippincott's adult trade division, said the publisher was not able to authenticate Rorvik's claims because of his pledge to conceal the identities of the participants in the purported cloning.

"The book he proposed to write would inevitably arouse much controversy, but would explore scientific, social, moral and religious issues of great import," Burlingame said. "We believed he would treat these issues in a revealing, responsible manner, and we decided to publish it."

annual outlays are more than twice as large as those of the largest power company operating in Texas," he pointed out.

"Our pressing revenue need is demonstrated by the earnings facts we've filed with the Commission," the vice president said.

"Southwestern Bell's rate of return in Texas is only 7.74 per cent. That's far below the 9.50 per cent authorized by the Public Utility Commission in 1976, and even further below the return we feel is necessary."

"We've never earned at the 9.50 level, and we cannot earn at that level in the future with our present rate structure," he declared.

"We have increased productivity. We have held down expenses. But our efforts have been eroded by the continuing growth of our expanding state, and by inflation."

Rogers said no legal expenses for the Ashley-Gravitt lawsuits are part of the rate filing.

Focalpoint

Action/reaction: Citizen's arrest

Q. Is a citizen's arrest legal in Big Spring? If so, just what is the procedure to be followed and what are the situations in which one can be made? I'm so tired of seeing illegal things done and the police never see seem to be around.

A. Perhaps one of the reasons they are never around is that you failed to call them. The District Attorney and the Chief of Police agree: Don't make a citizen's arrest. You are not trained, and you are not ready to do it properly. Leave it to the professionals. However the law does provide that a citizen may "make or assist in making...a lawful arrest if the citizen makes the purpose of the arrest known, unless he reasonably believes the purpose and reason are already known or it is impossible to make them known."

The best weapon you have against crime is your telephone; the authorities urge you to use it to call the police at 3-8311.

Offbeat: Wanna buy reading duck?

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) — Sir Lancelot, Drake University's reading duck, has added a new word to his burgeoning vocabulary.

Graduate students Roy Gilliland and Steve Yund say he now starts to quack when he sees the word "talk." Sir Lancelot already has been taught to respond appropriately when he sees "peck" and "turn."

Yund and Gilliland, under the direction of Dr. Kenneth Lloyd, chairman of Drake's psychology department, train the duck for about an hour every weekday. They say they taught Sir Lancelot to read by rewarding his correct responses with food.

DOLLAR PLUNGES—Clerks put a new yen quotation on the dollar-yen quotation board at the Bank of Tokyo main office in Tokyo this morning. The dollar was quoted at 235.25 yen for the spot buying. The U.S. currency plunged to a record 235.575 yen later in the day when the Tokyo foreign exchange market closed its afternoon trading with heavy selling of the dollar.

Ray Horton faces fraud raps

HOUSTON (AP)—A federal grand jury has indicted a longtime associate of Billie Sol Estes in an alleged mail fraud scheme in which a Los Angeles mortgage company contends it lost $700,000.

Raymond K. Horton, 49, a Midland businessman, and former Big Spring business executive, was named on 14 counts of alleged mail fraud.

U. S. District Judge John V. Singleton set bond at $10,000. Conviction on each of the 14 counts could draw maximum penalties of five years and a $1,000 fine.

The indictment alleges Horton borrowed $2.7 million from the Alison Mortgage Investment Trust Co. of Los Angeles to buy 42 acres of land in Houston and that the 1973 loan was based on a $3.7 million appraisal of the property.

Horton also is alleged to have paid $2.2 million for the property, paid other expenses and kept $400,000 of the loan for himself. It further alleges the mortgage company foreclosed on the property and sold it for only $2 million.

Santa Fe train derailed

JUSTIN, Texas (AP)—Fifteen cars of a 67-car Santa Fe freight train derailed early today, spilling a chemical irritant that caused the evacuation of several families and an elementary school near this North Central Texas town.

One farm-to-market road was closed as a precaution.

Emergency work crews dug ditches to catch the leakage so it would not run into a nearby stream.

None of the escaping fumes was poisonous, railroad officials said.

About 25 pupils from a Justin elementary school were moved to a high school about 10 miles away as a precautionary measure.

Neutron bombs fuss

GENEVA, Switzerland (AP)—The Soviet Union presented the Geneva disarmament conference with a draft treaty today to ban neutron bombs.

The United States immediately denounced the draft as a "one-sided propaganda exercise" trying to divert attention from serious arms control efforts.

Introducing the draft, cosponsored by seven Communist allies, Soviet delegate Viktor I. Likachev warned that development of the neutron bomb by the United States would deal a "great blow" to detente and would "unavoidably trigger retaliatory measures" by the Soviet Union.

"Those who advocate the production and deployment of the neutron weapon should clearly realize that if that weapon is adopted... our country will be confronted with the need of answering the challenge in order to ensure its security and the security of its allies. Consequently, the level of military confrontation will not decrease but will rise," he said.

In what amounted to one of the sharpest retorts in recent sessions of the 35-nation Geneva conference, U.S. chief delegate Adrian S. Fisher virtually accused the Soviet Union of hypocrisy.

Vance, rebels confer

WASHINGTON (AP)—Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance is meeting two guerrilla leaders who have vowed to take over Rhodesia by force. Joshua Nkomo and Robert Mugabe of the Patriotic Front have dismissed the current plan for black rule in Rhodesia as "the biggest sellout in African history." Their meeting with Vance today represents an intensified effort by the administration to bring them into the negotiations and thereby halt the raids conducted by the guerrillas from bases in Zambia and Mozambique.

Skyjack try ends in death

HONG KONG (AP)—A crewman waving an ax and a pair of scissors tried to hijack a Taiwanese jetliner to mainland China today but a security guard aboard the plane shot and killed him, police said.

The pilot and co-pilot were injured by the crewman, identified as flight engineer Shih Ming-Cheng, 34, before he was shot, police said.

The plane, a Boeing 737 carrying 101 persons from Kaohsiung, Taiwan, to Hong Kong, landed at Hong Kong and the "situation is under control," a government spokesman said.

Both injured crewmen were hospitalized in satisfactory condition.

A relative said the would-be hijacker was a native of Taiwan. It was not immediately known why he was trying to get from the Nationalist Chinese-ruled island to the communist Chinese mainland.

Officials said radar at Hong Kong airport tracking the incoming flight spotted the plane veering slightly off its regular course toward the China mainland when it was about 10 miles from Hong Kong.

The plane was carrying 92 passengers and a crew of nine.

The only American passenger, Hong Kong resident George Whitaker, said there was no panic during the attempted hijack.

Whitaker, from Escalon, Calif., said that when the flight was about 10 minutes from Hong Kong "I heard a number of men kicking about in the cockpit."

He said he then heard a Chinese voice over the loudspeaker.

"Immediately afterwards, I saw one cabinet attendant and another man in civilian clothes storm open the door. Later I saw a man lying on the floor of the cockpit."

Another passenger, Ma Waichi of Hong Kong, said he did not know there has been an attempted hijacking until the plane landed. He said he was asleep when a stewardess "asked me to put on a lifejacket. I felt the plane going down and it was rocking violently, but immediately it gained altitude, and before I knew it it had already landed."

A government spokesman said a Nationalist Chinese police delegation will come to Hong Kong to investigate the incident.

A police pathologist was examining the body of the would-be hijacker.

A body, tentatively identified as that of Thomas Corrigan, was discovered 10:30 a.m. today leaning against the back of the Jimmie Jones Oil Co. building, 301 E. 1st.

A wallet containing $119 in cash and identification cards from both El Paso and Davenport, Iowa, was found on the corpse. A gym bag with a Greyhound Bus Lines tag attached was found nearby.

An empty pint vodka bottle was found beneath the body, and its cap clutched in the dead man's hand. Officials at the scene speculate that death was by natural causes, possibly from exposure.

BILL HENKEL SR.

Bill Henkel for council

Bill Henkel Sr., 2606 Coronado, will oppose Harold Hall in the April 1 election for the place one seat on the Big Spring City Council.

Henkel, previous owner of two local Super-Save Stores, is 53 years old and has been a Big Spring resident for the last 17 years. He will soon open a new restaurant, Jo-Boys, at 1810 Gregg.

Henkel is a veteran, having spent three-and-a-half years in the U.S. Navy during World War II.

"Big Spring has been very good to me. I have raised three kids who graduated from high school here," said Henkel. "Now that I have extra time, I would like to use it to repay the people and city in a small way. I owe a debt to the citizens, and I would like to be the voice of the people in city hall," he added.

Henkel said that he would do all he could to attract industry to the city. He has personally contacted a firm in California to try to spread the word about Big Spring.

Mapping project results shown

The Howard County tax appraisal board saw the first results of the mapping project undertaken by the appraiser's office this winter.

County Appraiser Earl Dean showed the board one of the two maps received from the aerial photography of the county which has been taking place during the winter. According to Dean, the rest of the maps ought to be available within the next 60 days.

The board also asked Dean to submit a tentative budget for next year at the next meeting.

A tentative date of June 19-24 was set for the Board of Equalization's meetings.

Guardsmen used planes to import pot?

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP)—Federal authorities are investigating the alleged use of Oklahoma Air National Guard planes to import marijuana from Mexico, according to a story in the Thursday editions of the Daily Oklahoman.

A Washington dateline story by Allan Cromley quotes an unnamed official as saying federal indictments are expected in the case within the week.

Cromley's story said 14 guardsmen, who are members of the 137th Tactical Airlift Wing based at Will Rogers World Airport, are reportedly involved in the case.

'Not financially feasible' Mail delivery doomed?

(Compiled from local and AP reports)

In a final appearance on Capitol Hill Thursday, outgoing Postmaster General Benjamin F. Bailar said that daily mail delivery will probably not be financially feasible by the end of the century.

The reasons he cited for the prophecy of doom were that the "delivery of hard copy paper is dying," because it is being supplanted by computerized electronic communication.

The statement is in direct opposition to actual delivery statistics, and to a statement made by Bailar only a week ago in his farewell message to the Postal Service.

The Southern Regional Bulletin of the Postal Service, published March 2, 1978, contains a statement from Bailar recounting the accomplishments of the Postal Service during his term as Postmaster General, and the present situation of the service. The following is a direct quote from the story.

"Bailar noted that the Postal Service is today handling more than five billion more pieces of mail a year than it did six years ago (at the time of Postal reorganization) and is doing so with 74,000 fewer employees."

According to Big Spring Postmaster Frank Hardesty, the Postal Service has built into the annual budget a drop of one to one-and-a-half percent in expected mail delivery for each of the past five years.

"Instead, mail deliveries have increased in volume from one to two per cent each year," Hardesty pointed out.

"It seems that the postal service has always been a little scared about mechanization and computerized transmission," said John Gee, Big Spring Postal Superintendent.

Rumors from within the Postmasters Association stated in effect, that outgoing Postmaster General Bailar was not as much in the business to "improve the Postal Service, as to turn communication transmission completely over into the hands of private industry. Many individuals felt Bailar attempted to restrict and curtail the Postal Service's ventures into electronic transmission of mail.

But doctors have said Steve, who went home Tuesday after being hospitalized since Oct. 12, will live to grow up to it.

Soon after Steve was born June 3, doctors discovered a heart murmur. He had two holes in his heart and was missing a pulmonary valve.

"They couldn't do anything about it then — he was just too small," said Mrs. McLaughlin. After 10 days, doctors sent the boy home.

But three months later the infant caught a cold that doctors said threatened his life. When the cold turned into pneumonia, doctors ordered open-heart surgery Oct. 19.

Then, on Dec. 5, a heart catheterization disclosed that the stitches holding one of the "patches" on the heart had broken and open-heart surgery was scheduled for the next day.

Gee was referring to the mail-o-grams which can be sent over a teletype machine for an extra charge. The messages go from post offices like the Big Spring one, to the sectional office, where they are sent by teletype to the sectional office within whose territory the message is to be delivered. Same-day, or one-day delivery of the message can be accomplished, and the Big Spring office currently receives 12 to 15 of the mail-o-grams daily.

Plans shaping up for event

Cub packs, Scout troops, and Explorer posts were urged today to let W. D. (Bill) Priebe, general chairman, know what their exhibits will be in the Scout Exposition, set for March 18.

Boys are now selling tickets for the event, and there are 10 "mystery" homes in Big Spring and the rest of the Lone Star District. When the boy salesman contacts one of these, he gets a coupon which is equivalent to the sale of 10 tickets, and counts toward special prizes. Also, the boy's unit shares in proceeds of the sales — 40 percent of the ticket price goes to this unit.

Priebe said that during the afternoon of the Exposition in Highland Mall, prizes will be given away at hour intervals starting at 2 p.m. and continuing through 5 p.m.

Man suspected of manufacturing 'bootleg' black boxes charged

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — A misdemeanor complaint was filed Tuesday in county court against a man suspected of manufacturing "bootleg" black boxes which enable the owner to enjoy free Home Box Office television entertainment.

It reportedly is the first such case in Texas. John Roberts of the Travis County attorney's office said the complaint names Steve Natinsky for "theft of service."

The offense is punishable by up to one year in jail and a $2,000 fine. HBO is an entertainment network which beams unedited movies and other features to cable companies across the nation. It is available to local customers for $8 a month, plus a $.45 monthly cable charge, from Capital Cable Co.

HBO has 8,000 subscribers here, according to manager F.C. Malone of Capital Cable.

Downtown Lions tour school after lunch

Downtown Lions Wednesday got to see parts of the high school that most people don't know exist.

Holding their regular meeting there as part of Texas Public School Week observance, they divided after lunch with part touring the vocational department and part viewing a presentation of the planetarium.

John Beasley conducted the planetarium program, projecting the current position of stars at night, also talking about the Mars lander which failed to find signs of life as we know it on earth. There is now, he said, an inter-space vehicle aloft carrying a plaque and other information about planet Earth, its people and its position in the galaxy, on the chance it might encounter other forms of intelligence in the universe. Howard Shivers demonstrated an apparatus which measures the diminution of reaction time as vibration stress increases, a condition some space travelers have encountered.

John Bagnell conducted the tour of the vocational department, showing classrooms, shops and labs where distributive education (sales, etc.), ICT (Industrial Cooperative Training for a combination school and on-job instruction), Vocational Office Education, and VOE cooperative training, shop work (with welding, sheet metal, machine tools), building trades (construction), automobile mechanics, general mechanics (smaller

City of Faith spurs conflict

TULSA, Okla. (AP) — Charging a conflict of interest on the part of two members of the Oklahoma Health Systems Agency, Oral Roberts University officials Tuesday formally asked the OHSA to reconsider its action which was unfavorable to the proposed City of Faith Hospital at ORU.

Dr. James Winslow, ORU Vice Provost for Health Affairs, said the conflict was obvious on the parts of board members Lloyd Verret and Scott Graham.

Graham, a Broken Arrow banker, called the action "sour grapes."

Verret is associate administrator of St. Francis Hospital.

"There's no way in the world to get around the fact they have obvious conflicts of interest. They're obviously violating their own rules," Winslow said.

"They're just sore losers," said Graham. A letter hand-delivered to the OHSA outlines the reasons ORU believes it should have another hearing for the proposed $100 million hospital.

The Oklahoma Health Planning Commission is due to make the final decision on the fate of the project in late April.

On Feb. 27, the OHSA recommended that the project be turned down by the OHPC. That is the decision ORU officials want reconsidered. Oral Roberts officials allege that the OHSA "materially failed to follow its adopted procedures in reaching its decision" and that new "significant, relevant information" was not considered in the process of arriving at a decision.

The letter also claims that ORU's new idea of revising its initial expenditure downward to allow the opening of 294 beds instead of 777 as originally planned constituted "significant, relevant information not previously considered by the OHSA."

The ORU letter claims that according to OHSA procedures "any board member with a conflict of interest should refrain from discussion."

ORU said Verret "participated extensively." "I voted my conscience and my conscience was we didn't need any more beds. Tulsa has too many beds as it is," Verret said.

Graham, ORU alleged, had conflicting interests because he had served on boards of a Broken Arrow hospital and had been associated with W.K. Warren, founder of St. Francis Hospital.

Graham noted that "I'm also a member of the ORU Titan (booster) club."

"I'm somewhat incensed they raised the issue after the fact," Graham said.

Transfer sought to Puerto Rico

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico (AP) — The Puerto Rican government expects to file a petition within days to transfer to San Juan a federal bankruptcy request filed in San Antonio, Texas by the Commonwealth Oil Refining Co., the major supplier of gasoline and other petroleum products to Puerto Rico.

Secretary of state Reinaldo Paniagua said papers will be filed in Texas on Monday or Tuesday to have the case transferred to Puerto Rico, where CORCO owes the government a projected $84 million in $2-per-barrel oil import license fees.

Proposal may set off shock waves

Most of the political, artistic and social change, it is said with some authority, starts in the west and sweeps eastward.

A lot of interest throughout the nation is being focused on a movement to detonate a tax revolt in California. If it succeeds, citizen groups everywhere may use it as a model to map plans to dilute the power of taxing bodies all over the country.

Two men in California, Howard Jarvis, a conservative Mormon from Los Angeles, and Paul Gann, a former property agent in Sacramento, combined their energies to devise an initiative to get on the California ballot next June a rather remarkable property tax cut plan.

They needed half a million signatures to qualify the plan for the election. The people rallied behind it to such an extent that twice that many signatures were obtained.

The Jarvis-Gann proposal would put a ceiling on property taxes — a maximum of one per cent of the full cash value of the property in 1975-76; a yearly increase of no more than two per cent; no revaluation unless the property changes hands.

Needless to say, city and county officials are very vocal in their opposition to such proposals. They have turned to Gov. Jerry Brown for help and advice. Brown's efforts, however, are hamstrung for the moment.

The California tax revolt could knock $8 billion from local tax revenues in that state. Brown has summoned the state legislature, which has always been willing to spend every last nickel that tax payer had and then take his note for future levies, into special session to try and talk down the revolt.

At last reading, the split between liberals and conservatives in the California legislature applied the brakes on efforts to devise a state revenue-sharing plan that would take the load off local property taxes.

The liberals want most of the relief channeled to the poor. The conservatives are of the opinion everyone should share in a tax break.

California's state taxes are astronomical to begin with. The state exacts a six per cent sales levy and a state income tax devours $8 of every $100 earned by a Californian. State government reaps so many dollars that not even a squandering legislature can spend them all. California invariably comes up with a multi-billion-dollar surplus in the state treasury.

Texas, of course, has been showing a surplus in recent years but not because the legislature hasn't been trying to eliminate it with massive spending programs.

The fact that California does have a surplus did not bring on the tax revolt. Rather it was the constant increase in local property taxes. The market value of housing in California keeps going up, and tax appraisals along with it. It came to the point where property owners experience increasing difficulty in meeting their levies. When taxes get to the level where they threaten to force property owners into bankruptcy, it's high time something be done to reverse the process.

Not so bad

Around the rim

James Werrell

When I was 16 my dad used to tell me that the difference between a good haircut and a bad haircut is three days.

I think he said that his dad had told him that when he was a kid. I think all three of us knew it was bunk.

If Dad had said the difference between a good haircut and a bad haircut is three bucks or three weeks his credibility would not have been so strained. Unfortunately for him, our house had mirrors.

FIRST GLANCE revealed the large patches of skin over each ear: white sidewalls. To continue the car analogy, the cut curved back behind the ear like the sloping front bumper of a '34 Oldsmobile Coupe.

The style in back was a study in contrast. The barber, in my case "Earl The Butcher," would carve most of the hairs from the neck upward into a fine stubble until he reached the middle of the back of the head.

Here he would leave a pile of hair as if he hadn't felt like finishing the job. From the profile I resembled someone who had been dunked in hair remover up to about eye level.

Those were black days for us guys who wanted to look like Steve McQueen but were dealt a losing hand by the assembly line barber (not that we ever looked much like Steve anyway, but "The Butcher" didn't help matters).

But times have changed!

I have a conservative uncle whose dictum is, "I hate hair." And he proceeds to prove it by having his head molded into a flat-top every two weeks.

But the process has changed a little. His usual trim used to take about 10 minutes; now it takes about 45.

HIS "BARBER" first swivels back his chair so that his head rests in a sink. Then my uncle gets a shampoo and rinse, after which his hair is "styled" (not just cut anymore) and then wrapped in a net.

After a short neck massage, the old follicles are blown dry and sprayed to hold them in place. My uncle then stands, extricates from eight to 10 dollars from his pocket, and walks from the shop a new man.

This may seem a hassle, but when you consider the "good old days," it's probably worth it.

I, too, have since fled "The Butcher." I have taken refuge in the beauty shop where all I have to do is walk in and say, "Make me gorgeous, Madge," as I dip my fingers in the dishwashing liquid.

Really, men, it's not so bad! Not only do I get a great haircut, but I also get to pass the time of day with the oilfield roughnecks and the truck drivers in the dryers next to mine.

New defense mood

Evans, Novak

WASHINGTON — While President Carter decides whether Soviet African adventures are a cause for slowing the pace of SALT negotiations with Moscow, American voters, reacting less ambiguously, are switching to an anti-Soviet mood which signals the end of the post-Vietnam syndrome of low military spending.

That is the clear portent of a just-completed nationwide poll conducted by Opinion Research Corp. of Princeton, showing a sharp rise in the public's concern over Soviet military power. Most significant, the sample of 1,015 citizens, published here for the first time, shows that among Americans who feel the U.S. should be "superior" to the Russians in military strength — 48 per cent of the total — a surprising 74 per cent specifically endorsed higher taxes. They expressed willingness to finance up to $10 billion a year in new military programs to achieve that superiority, despite the nationwide tax revolt.

AS FOR THE current strategic arms limitation (SALT) negotiations with the Russians, the poll showed that 64 per cent believe that the Russians would not "live up to their part of the agreement" if a new agreement were reached. That obviously reflects the present low state of détente.

The sample was finished on Feb. 27, just before the administration mounted a major effort last week to persuade Congress that the Russians never have cheated on SALT I. But it followed by one month a Reader's Digest article called "The Russians Are Cheating," by former Defense Secretary Melvin Laird, which attracted heavy public attention and 20,000 letters from concerned readers to the magazine.

Commissioned by the Institute of American Relations, a tax-exempt defense-oriented organization, the new poll reveals a stark shift in public opinion on one of the most perplexing political issues facing President Carter: is the Soviet Union moving ahead of the U.S. in military power and, if so, what should the U.S. do about it?

ONE YEAR ago, a similar poll by Opinion Research found that 15 per cent of the public believed the U.S. was "much stronger" than the Soviets, 14 per cent that the U.S. was "somewhat stronger," and 30 per cent that the two had rough equality.

The new poll, reflecting public concern over Soviet military adventures in Africa and possibly greater knowledge about Moscow's nuclear and conventional arms progress, shows a marked decline of confidence in U.S. power: only 8 per cent believe the U.S. now is "much stronger"; 12 per cent that the U.S. is "somewhat stronger"; and 36 per cent that the two are equal.

Likewise, the percentage believing that the U.S. is "somewhat weaker" has risen from 22 per cent a year ago to 29 per cent today, while those judging the U.S. to be "much weaker" has remained constant at 5 per cent.

Totalling the "stronger" and "weaker" segments, the poll shows that the perception of a strong U.S. has declined from 29 per cent to 20 per cent, and the perception of a weak U.S. has risen from 27 per cent to 34 per cent.

For Mr. Carter, these findings carry both dangers and opportunity. They strongly suggest that, if the President decided to go to Congress for even a steeply higher defense budget, his bargaining power would be infinitely greater than any of his predecessors back to the early years of Lyndon Johnson.

Ringling, blood pressure can be linked

Dr. G. C. Thosteson

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I went to see my doctor about a terrible ringing in my ears. He checked them and said they were clean, then told me my slightly high blood pressure was causing it, and that I had better lose some weight. Is everything today caused by high blood pressure? It seems that's all you ever get no matter what you complain about. Can you do better than this? It is terribly annoying to have this whistling in your ears day and night. — Mrs. K.D.

I don't know if I can do any better than your doctor, since he has a better vantage point from which to judge your condition. I can say that if you do have a "slightly high" blood pressure (whatever you mean by that) you should be treating it. Losing weight can be a good starter.

As far as the ears are concerned, I can reel off a whole string of possible other causes such as bone changes within the ear (otosclerosis), anemia, thickening of neck vessels, pressure on nerves, thyroid imbalance and a whole slew of nasal ailments, including sinus or tonsil infection. Certain drugs can cause it, including some most folks don't consider as drugs — alcohol, coffee, or tobacco.

Your doctor is suggesting one of the most common causes — high blood pressure. In the absence of any signs of the other, less common causes, this seems a reasonable conclusion, at least temporarily. Get your blood pressure under control. The noises may disappear.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Until recently, my husband and I have had a perfect sexual relationship. Now he has changed. Rather he does what I believe some men would do without a mate — that is, masturbate. Most of this is done secretly, but occasionally he will tell me. This leaves me in a confused and frustrated state of mind. I feel a divorce is in the making. I stay attractive and he always seems proud of me when introducing me to his friends. Please give me some advice, because I really love him and want a lasting marriage. — L.L.

This is not an unusual problem, and can occur for various reasons. Since you have retained your attractiveness and he is proud of you on social occasions, he may be fantasizing about his sexual drive. Do not condemn. Try to discuss the situation with him calmly when he takes this "other route." Try to get him to tell you what is on his mind. Obviously, you have to let him know how you feel about this turn-off.

His sexual behavior is simply immature and must be treated in that light. Perhaps marriage counseling would help.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Can a person live on protein food alone? I don't mean the liquid protein, but regular protein food, like fish, etc. — J.J.

Not for long. It would lack many of the essential nutrients obtainable in other foods — fruits for vitamin C, etc. This is why doctors cringe when they hear of someone going on an exclusive "this or that" diet. But as long as there are charlatans around pushing crackpot schemes there will be thousands to take them up on it, usually to their detriment. The rest of your letter, which I couldn't use because of space, indicates you are getting ready to go off the deep end on this diet business. Before you do, at least give common sense a chance. If you need a conservative plan, see my booklet "Lost Secrets of Reducing," which you can have by sending 50 cents and a stamped, self-addressed envelope to me care of the Big Spring Herald. One of the "lost secrets" is not to deprive oneself of needed nutrients.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Can the body get along without sugar totally? I mean the sugar in the sugar bowl. Is it at all necessary? — Mrs. O.W.

Different kinds of sugars come from different foods (fructose from fruit, for example). Glucose is another sugar that is essential for brain function, and a lack of it may produce mental confusion, as with low blood sugar.

Refined sugar in the sugar bowl (sucrose) is a source of so-called "empty" calories. A person can dispense with that with no effect.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: What is "witch" milk? — H.S.

I think you mean the milk-like secretion from nipples of newborn (male or female). It is of no significance and usually disappears a few days after. Can't imagine how it got the name.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I am taking diet pills that contain kelp. Should a person who has had thyroid problems be taking kelp? Does it contain iodine? — Mrs. T.M.

Kelp contains rather large amounts of potassium iodide. I don't know what type of thyroid problem you have or had, but I certainly suggest you consult your doctor about taking any additional iodine-containing substances. In those sensitive to iodine, it can lower thyroid-gland function. You might feel sluggish, for example.

Are you bothered with ringing in the ear? If so, write to Dr. Thosteson, in care of the Big Spring Herald, for his booklet, "Ear Noises — Their Causes and Cures." Enclose a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope and 25 cents.

Dr. Thosteson welcomes reader mail but regrets that, due to the tremendous volume received daily, he is unable to answer individual letters. Readers' questions are incorporated in his column whenever possible.

My answer

Billy Graham

DEAR DR. GRAHAM: How can a person feel that he has the Holy Spirit within him? — D.O.

DEAR D.O.: Many people look for some type of emotional experience to convince them that the Holy Spirit has come into their lives. However, the Bible does not approach it in this way. The Bible points us instead to God's promises concerning the Holy Spirit, and we are to trust those promises. To doubt them is to doubt God.

What are those promises? First, the Bible tells us that all believers are indwelt by the Holy Spirit. The Bible says, "If anyone does not have the Spirit of Christ, he does not belong to Christ" (Romans 8:9, New International Version). It also tells us, "When you believed, you were marked with a seal, the promised Holy Spirit, who is a deposit guaranteeing our inheritance until redemption of those who are God's possession" (Ephesians 1:13-14, NIV). If you have put your faith and trust in Christ as your Lord and Saviour, God has given you His Holy Spirit. You may or may not feel any different, but God has told you the Spirit is in you, and God cannot lie.

Also, the Bible tells us that the presence of the Holy Spirit in our lives becomes more and more evident in a number of ways. For example, as we read the Bible, the Holy Spirit convinces us of its truth and helps us apply it to our lives. The Spirit also convicts us of sin, and one of the signs that we have been born again is our new desire to do right and to please God. The Spirit also gives us a new love for people, because love is one of the fruits of the Spirit (see Galatians 5:22-23).

The ministry of the Holy Spirit is a vital part of the Christian's life, and I suggest you begin to study what the Bible says about this. I am currently completing a book on the Holy Spirit, and I have been amazed and thrilled to see how much the Bible has to say about Him. But remember — don't just trust your feelings. Trust God's truth, and learn to know His presence every day as you yield yourself to His control.

Carter protests

Jack Anderson

WASHINGTON — It can now be revealed the U.S. Ambassador Malcolm Toon was cut off from Moscow for several months. Once he had to break through a security cordon at a diplomatic reception in order to deliver a letter from President Carter to Soviet leader Leonid Brezhnev.

In this instance, Brezhnev greeted him cordially and invited him to the Kremlin for a private chat. But the thaw was not complete.

All the while, Soviet Ambassador Anatoly Dobrynin had complete access to top officials in Washington. This infuriated President Carter who let Dobrynin know in no uncertain terms that the relationship would have to be reciprocal.

TO MAKE SURE OF IT, the White House served notice that no more presidential messages would be delivered through Dobrynin. If Brezhnev wants to communicate with Carter hereafter, the presidential mail will be delivered by Toon.

The ambassador has informed Carter, meanwhile, that his personal relationship with Brezhnev is now amiable but that access to other Kremlin insiders is still limited.

NEXT SOVIET MOVE: At last report, 11,000 Cuban troops, trained and supplied by the Soviets, were preparing to spearhead the final Ethiopian offensive against the rugged but outnumbered Somalis. The Cubans are backed by 400 Soviet tanks and 50 MIG jet fighters.

U.S. analysts believe the Cubans will halt at the Somali border. Then the worried American strategists expect the Cuban expeditionary force to shift battlefields quietly to Rhodesia.

Of course, the Cubans are merely pawns on the Kremlin's African chessboard. The Soviet moves have been followed closely by American analysts. Here are their conclusions, taken from secret national security studies:

The Ethiopian revolution last spring made Ethiopia a "target of opportunity" for Soviet seduction. The Somalis played into Soviet hands by pushing into the Ogaden desert. The Kremlin happily responded by offering the leader of the revolution, Mengistu Haile Mariam, massive military aid to repel the invaders.

The Soviets withdrew military stores, set aside for possible use against China, from their arsenals behind the Ural Mountains. A fleet of cargo vessels and jumbo transport planes began hauling artillery, jet fighters, machine guns, tanks and other lethal hardware to Ethiopia.

CUBAN TROOPS WERE flown in to bolster the Ethiopian army. Token "volunteers" from the most loyal Soviet satellites — Bulgaria, Czechoslovakia, East Germany and South Yemen — also showed up in Addis Ababa. This has given the conflict the coloring of a "people's war," with the Soviet Union playing the role of a valuable ally rather than a meddler in African affairs.

At the same time, neighboring African countries have been impressed with Soviet power and decisiveness. The United States, on the other hand, has appeared to be weak and reluctant, bandying words instead of weapons.

Washington could not support Somalia as long as its troops occupied Ethiopian territory, because of African sensitivity over border violations. Thus the Soviets had the United States at a disadvantage.

For the same reasons, the national security studies anticipate that the Soviets will halt the Ethiopian drive at the Somali border, take credit for repelling the invaders and pull the Cubans out of Ethiopia.

THE BEST estimate is that the urban mercenaries will then be tipped to the Rhodesian front, where the United States again would be caught off balance. It would be awkward for Washington to support Rhodesia's white-supremacy over against blacks.

Footnote: Most U.S. analysts believe the Ethiopian offensive, spearheaded by the Cubans and directed by the Soviets, will drive straight through to the Somali border within seven weeks. But other analysts point out that the Somalis are so pushovers. They could hole up in the mountains, where Soviet tanks are less effective. Then they might revert to guerrilla tactics, striking some punishing hit-and-run blows against the Cubans and Ethiopians. Intelligence reports say that the Cubans have already encountered rugged resistance.

CENSUS REVOLT: Many Americans, angry at the government's prying into their privacy, may refuse to respond to the 1980 census. A trial run in Oakland, Calif., and Camden, N.J., found that more than half the population refused to participate.

The stakes are high. More than $50 billion in federal aid is parceled out to states and cities on the basis of the population. Many states are still upset that the number of residents, especially minorities, was underestimated in 1970. This can cost seats in Congress as well as federal dollars.

Many people resent being asked new questions about their income and racial background. Nor do they like to be nagged for information about whether they have adequate plumbing, a flush toilet or a TV set.

Rep. William Lehman, D-Fla., has urged the Census Bureau to eliminate these touchy questions. More than 60 per cent of the census takers, meanwhile, have been quitting. And unlike 1970, large numbers of housewives are no longer available for short-term work. So the Census Bureau has been obliged to turn to the hard-core unemployed.

Dear Editor: If anyone would like to see Equal Rights for Women at work, just drive 12 miles south of town to one of an oil firm's offices.

The newest member of the field maintenance "gang" is a female with a masters degree in agriculture (small animals — pigs to be exact). It makes no difference that the major has nothing to do with the job. A high school diploma is the only educational requirement anyway.

The company would laugh if you applied for a typing job and did not know how to type. Yet, it hires a woman who does not have the physical stamina or expertise for the job.

Equal rights? Ha! It simply means women want equal pay — qualified or not.

Carter will ask judge to order miners back to work

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Carter administration, trying to end the 94-day coal strike, is set to ask a federal judge to order 160,000 miners back to work.

Justice Department lawyers planned to seek an immediate order in U.S. District Court today under the strike-stopping provisions of the Taft-Hartley Act.

One official said the government is prepared to seek contempt citations and fines against any union locals, leaders or coal companies that defy the order. "There's not much point in getting the order if you're not ready to enforce it," the official said.

Leaders of the United Mine Workers union and government officials expect widespread defiance of the expected court order.

A fact-finding panel appointed by Carter under the Taft-Hartley law sent its report to the White House today. The law requires that Carter receive the report before the government can seek a back-to-work order.

The government's move for a court order came as the Labor Department reported that 25,500 factory workers were laid off last week as a result of the strike.

The government said about 45 percent of the layoffs were in Indiana, with workers in Pennsylvania, Illinois, Maryland and Ohio also affected. The layoffs were up 2,900 from the previous week.

The board took testimony from union and industry representatives on Wednesday, then worked late into the night completing its report. By law, the report contains no recommendations for ending the strike, but includes findings on where the bitter dispute stands and chances of a settlement.

Meanwhile, Energy

Department officials said Wednesday that there has been an increase in coal deliveries from non-union mines to hard-pressed electric utilities in the East and Midwest, bolstering critically low stockpiles and, the administration hopes, postponing for several weeks the extensive layoffs and power cutbacks that have been predicted.

However, Energy Secretary James R. Schlesinger warned that the coal strike would put at least 3.5 million people out of work by the end of April if the walkout does not end within 10 days. Coal-related layoffs affected fewer than 23,000 people by late February, he said.

Labor Secretary Ray Marshall said the administration remains hopeful that a national settlement can be reached, but he acknowledged that local agreements might be easier to achieve in light of the miners' 2-1 rejection last weekend of a national accord.

The government planned to request a temporary restraining order directing miners to go back to their jobs and coal companies to resume "good faith" bargaining with the United Mine Workers union, said the administration official, who asked not to be named.

The temporary order presumably would remain in force until the judge could hear arguments on a request for an 80-day injunction. Under Taft-Hartley, the government must prove that continuation of a walkout would "imperil the national health or safety."

It remained uncertain, however, when — and if — miners would return to work under the order and when negotiations would resume.

Administration officials have said miners could be back on the job by next week, but UMW leaders and members have predicted mass defiance of a back-to-work order.

The miners would work under the terms of the union's 1974 contract, but to encourage their return, the administration has asked the coal operators to give the miners a $1 an hour raise agreed to under the rejected contract settlement.

The coal companies said they would grant the raise retroactively, but only if a final settlement is reached during the 80-day "cooling off" period.

There have been no industrywide negotiations since the last settlement was rejected, but preliminary indications of renewed national bargaining surfaced Wednesday, when chief federal mediator Wayne Horvitz reportedly met with two top industry officials.

Among provisions in the rejected contract that members have said they opposed were those covering pension benefits, imposing deductibles for health care that has been free and authorizing company sanctions against leaders of wildcat strikes.

Forced retirement

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — School districts have the right to force teachers to retire before age 65, the Supreme Court ruled today.

Without writing a new opinion, the court upheld a decision of the El Paso Court of Civil Appeals upholding a retirement policy set by the Monahans-Wickett-Pyote Independent School District.

The district set a mandatory retirement age of 62, beginning with the 1974-75 school year.

Lucille King, Addylene K. Lamb and Edna Snelson, all 63 at the time the policy took effect, were forced to retire and appealed to the courts.

They cited a 1963 state law prohibiting mandatory retirement below age 65 for most public employees.

But the court said a 1969 law gave each school district the right to set its own mandatory retirement age. It said that when a special law conflicts with a general one, and the special law came later, the special law controls the situation.

LEGAL NOTICE

General Telephone Company of the Southwest has filed tariffs with the Public Utility Commission of Texas to implement the Federal Communications Commission's telephone equipment registration program (FCC Docket 19528). The tariffs have an effective date of April 15, 1978. The proposed changes will reduce rates for extension telephones and 25 foot long cords; will restructure one-time charges for service connection, moves and changes, increasing some and reducing others; and will offer reduced monthly rates for one-party business and residence customers who provide their own primary telephone instrument. The proposed changes in rates, with some increasing and others decreasing, will reduce General's gross revenues from its Texas operations by $2,565,000.

Police shooting of teen probed

HOUSTON (AP) — City Councilman Judson Robinson says he will renew his request for the creation of a civilian police review board to help investigate incidents such as the police shooting of Randall Alan Webster more than one year ago.

"These are unusual times. The police department obviously needs help," Robinson said. "More than a year has passed since this incident, yet nothing would have been done except for the insistence of one of the civilian witnesses."

Webster, 17, of Shreveport, La., was fatally shot by Officer D.H. Mays, 31, on Feb. 8, 1977 following a high-speed chase here.

A witness to the incident maintained to police investigators and to a state grand jury that Webster already was under arrest and unarmed when shot by Mays.

Mays said he shot the youth after Webster pointed a pistol at him. An unloaded .22 caliber pistol was found beside the body of the youth.

A Harris County medical examiner's report said the gun reportedly discovered by Webster's body was used in a 1964 suicide of a retired Houston exporting company owner and later confiscated by police.

Robinson said his plan for a civilian review board calls for an indefinite number of unpaid appointees to be named by the mayor and confirmed by city council. They could seek lie detector tests on both sides and "work behind the scenes."

Robinson said the board would not hold public hearings or inquiries. "We don't want to make this a witch hunt or political football," he said. "No one has to feel threatened by this."

The U.S. attorney's office confirmed Wednesday it is presenting evidence to a federal grand jury concerning the possibility of Webster's civil rights were violated. It asked anyone with information about the incident to contact the FBI.

Harris County Dist. Atty. Carroll Vance said the state grand jury had no choice but to no-bill Mays in the case and added that the renewed investigation "absolutely shows the wisdom of a police internal affairs division."

Vance said evidence presented to the state grand jury last summer was developed by the police department's homicide division where investigations of shootings by officers were normally conducted prior to creation of the internal affairs unit.

Staff will be topic of talks

The meeting will begin at 7 p.m. in the school administration building.

Detox Center grant OKed

By MARJ CARPENTER

The Permian Basin Regional Planning Council board of directors approved four grants which affect programs in Big Spring and one in Stanton when they met Wednesday at Terminal.

The board approved a $30,000 grant for a four-year partial funding of the Big Spring Detoxification Center.

Begun by the city of Big Spring in 1974, the county last year provided some assistance at $1,000 per month. The city provides $33,580 to complete the grant for what is deemed the best facility of its kind in Texas.

It is toured often by groups from other Texas and New Mexico cities and serves up to 480 persons per year.

Three other grants approved by the council Wednesday directly affect Big Spring. One was approval of the region wide funding for part of the upkeep of the Planned Parenthood Centers, one of which is in Big Spring. Additional funds for these centers come from United Way patient fees and private donations.

The board also gave favorable comment to changing their CETA or manpower program over to the region. This may be done by putting it in the name of Ector County which has now passed the 100,000 population figure and has 100,900. An advance agreement has already been signed that it will be handled by the Permian Basin Council for the 17-county area. This will alleviate dealing directly with the state on the funds.

There have been some problems in the past.

A fourth request which directly affects Big Spring is a request for fourth year funding of Emergency Medical Systems programs and a request to be designated a full Health Systems Agency. The funding will include additional training courses during the year at Howard, Midland and Odessa colleges.

The board also approved a $360,300 grant for the Stanton Housing Authority which plans to construct an additional 15 housing units utilizing the turnkey method of development of low rent public housing. Pierce, Pace and Associates of Midland are architects for the project.

Other items approved include the annual Housing and Urban Development funds for Odessa, and naming of new members on the regional alcohol and drug abuse advisory council. One of the new members of the group is Sheriff Dan Saunders of Martin County.

The board also heard a report that following recent public hearings in Big Spring, Odessa, Midland, and Lamesa, the Health System Agency set priorities on a list of needs in the Permian Basin area.

The list includes in the order they were placed, maternal, pre-natal, child and adolescent health as one; followed by Emergency Medical Service, heart, cancer, communicable disease, drug abuse, mental health, alcohol, mental retardation, renal disease, dental, rehabilitation, and environmental health.

Counties and cities were reminded to send in an update of the report on all their parks or they would not be eligible for any additional park funds.

They were also told that they had learned there may be state funds for Permian Basin Historical Survey if member counties and cities were interested.

Both Harold Hall, Big Spring city councilman and Judge Bill Tune attended the meeting. Other area judges present included Judge Jim Burkett, Gail; Judge Leslie Pratt, Lamesa, and Judge D. W. Parker, Garden City.

Political forum March 28

The legislative action committee of the Chamber of Commerce has set open forums for political candidates. The forums are to be held in the Howard College Auditorium.

The forum Tuesday, March 28, will feature city, school and college board candidates and will last from 7:30-9 p.m.

The 17th Congressional candidates will be heard, with a tentative date set for April 16. The time will be announced.

They are also planning two night programs, April 25 and April 27 for county candidates.

Committee members at the meeting Monday included Mrs. Carol Hunter, chairman; Mrs. Polly Mays, Mrs. Johnnie Lou Avery, George Thomas, Tom Henry, Frank Hardesty, Ben Kirkland, Bill Fryear and Winston Winkler.

HAD TO LET BILLS PILE UP—Karen Cook, a 31-year-old divorcee from Bob White, W. Va., and a striking miner, folds laundry at a local laundromat. She and her 11-year-old daughter collect $96 worth of food stamps every month says Ms. Cook, who added: "I've just had to let my bills pile up." She said she voted in favor of the contract proposal and would go back under the Taft-Hartley Act. "That is, if I didn't get shot first."

Appalachia women bear weight of coal strike

MADISON, W. Va. (AP) — Women have always worked hard in Appalachia. They have raised the kids, canned the corn and nursed the injured mining men. Now, in the ever leaner days of the coal strike, they are working to survive.

Like hundreds of miners' wives, Jane Burns, 21, has become the family breadwinner during the 93-day-old strike.

"We're living on my salary," she said in an interview at the auto agency where she works as a $100-a-week secretary. "It's not much, but it keeps us going — barely."

Edith Burgess, a veteran of nearly 30 years of strikes and labor strife, is still feeding her family steak and roasts, even though they have received no food stamps and her husband, Roy, has not had a paycheck since last December.

"We bought a whole beef right before the strike," said Mrs. Burgess. "Of course, the meat is beginning to run low now, just like our savings."

The Burgessses, who have reared four children, said they had $5,000 in the bank when the strike began.

Is Mrs. Burgess pushing her husband to return to work?

"No, indeed!" she said. "Some women may be pushing their husbands but I'm not one of them. I want him to get a good contract."

"But you couldn't blame some of the wives if they were pushing," said her husband. "We own our own home and have some savings, but some families didn't have anything saved up for this strike, especially the younger miners just starting out." Jane Burns and her husband are in that category.

"We've been married for three years and we've got a lot of payments," she said. "We've got rent to pay, and payments on the pickup in addition to our food and utilities. Because of my job, we didn't qualify for food stamps."

She said she and her husband have been staying home, skipping on food and shuffling their bills.

"I don't blame the miners for voting against the contract but I do wish they'd get one they could work under," she said. "I told my husband

VETERAN OF THREE DECADES OF STRIKES — Edith Burgess, above, and her miner husband, Roy, have seen many strikes during the 30 years he has worked in the mines. They bought a whole beef just before the present strike. But both meat and money are beginning to run low as the strike continues. Both say this has been one of the hardest strikes to survive.

STAMFORD, Conn. (AP) — With left-handers representing from 10 to 20 per cent of the population, Gerald Glienhouse decided to publish a book giving them instructions for crocheting.

Compiled by experts in the field, "Basic Crochet for Left-Handers" aims, Glienhouse says, to help "this neglected group of people to acquire all the dexterity and satisfaction which crocheting has held for the rest of the population for so many years."

"Basic Crochet for Left-Handers" is published by Marketing Plus, Stamford, Conn.

Dear Abby

Where To Get Help In Family Planning

DEAR ABBY: Even though Planned Parenthood does an excellent job, you do your readers a disservice when you refer them only to Planned Parenthood.

There are only 190 Planned Parenthood affiliates in the United States with approximately 650 clinics, so obviously not all communities are served by Planned Parenthood offices.

You would be doing your readers a service to suggest that they check their yellow pages under "Birth Control Information Centers, Clinics and/or Clinics-Abortion."

There are numerous women's health-type centers throughout the country that provide complete gynecological services in many communities where there is no Planned Parenthood, or in some cases in addition to Planned Parenthood.

Such clinics provide reliable, quality health care to women, usually at a lower rate than private physicians, making these services available to women who would otherwise not be able to afford them.

Sign me . . .

HELPFUL IN ORLANDO, FLA.

DEAR HELPFUL: I appreciate the information. Planned Parenthood is not in competition with other reputable birth control centers. (It has even actively encouraged their establishment and funding.)

Planned Parenthood is listed in the telephone books of approximately 70 per cent of the U.S. population, so I suggest that the wise birth control shopper first check for Planned Parenthood in the white pages before scouring the yellow pages. Planned Parenthood has earned a national reputation for the highest medical standards.

DEAR ABBY: For the past few months we have been receiving magazines, books and record albums in the mail. We did not order any of this stuff and have no idea why they are sending it to us. (The bills are enclosed.)

Each time something shows up, I have to pack it up and mail it back to the sender because I don't believe in keeping things that don't belong to me. This is getting to be a real chore. I'm tired of making trips to the post office, but I don't know what else to do. Help!

IRRITATED

DEAR IRRITATED: When you receive a package you did not order, mark it "refused" and return it to the post office. (They will assume the responsibility of returning it.) If you open it, technically you have "accepted" it, and you must then pack it up again if you want to return it.

Do you wish you had more friends? For the secret of popularity, get Abby's new booklet: "How To Be Popular; You're Never Too Young or Too Old." Send $1 with a long, self-addressed, stamped (24 cents) envelope to Abby, 132 Lasky Drive, Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212.

She's 71, in wheelchair and still practicing law

WASHBURN, Wis. (AP) — Attorney Elizabeth Hawkes has been thinking about women's rights for half a century, and still figures she doesn't need them in a courtroom any more than she needs a law school diploma on the wall.

As a teenager, she was more concerned about bootleggers' rights and how they were being protected by the attorneys whom she would observe in action by skipping school.

Counselor Hawkes, 71, whose lumberjack father died when she was 3, overcame poverty to graduate with a law degree from George Washington University in 1931.

Heart trouble and arthritis have her in a wheelchair now. But she continues to practice in this northern Wisconsin community, engaging an associate for her previously one-person law firm which has a Depression-born sentiment for helping the poor.

The sentiment is reflected in her disinterest in unnecessary expense. For example, she has yet to send a check which the university told her two years ago it must have if she is ever to receive her diploma.

"Their letter provoked me because they were emphasizing a piece of paper," she said. "So I wrote back and told them that I no more had $25 for a piece of paper now than I did then."

She was one of seven women in her graduating class. There was no problem being accepted by her home town as a woman attorney, even in those days, she said.

"I know that I am going to sound old-fashioned for saying this, but I am not an equal righter," she said. "There is no such thing as equal rights. It is your approach to life and what you do with it."

Miss Hawkes, youngest of 11 children, related having skipped schools in the 1920s to watch lawyers at work in the Bayfield County Courthouse.

"I thought they were doing marvelous things defending those poor bootleggers who were just trying to pay off mortgages and meeting pressing needs," she said.

Later, she recalled, "my mother had told me that, as a lawyer, I had the ability to help the poor and shouldn't charge because it was something that God had given me."

A Washburn congressman for whom she was a secretary in Washington and Washburn helped her enroll in law school after she attended Boston University. Her motivation, she said, stemmed from her mother who insisted when she was a child that "little Liz will be a lawyer."

Hobby-turned-garden center offers wide range of plants and services

Big Spring (Texas) Herald, Thurs., March 9, 1978 11-A

By EILEEN McGUIRE

The best kind of occupation is one you'd enjoy doing in your after-work hours without pay. And that's exactly what Bill Crooker has in his new hobby-turned-business "Mr. G's Garden Center," located across the street from Gibson's Discount Center.

Three years ago, Crooker began growing foliage houseplants beneath fluorescent lights as a hobby. That hobby grew into a self-made greenhouse which continued to grow into the garden center he opened just three weeks ago.

Whatever ails your green thumb, Crooker, a third-term Howard County Commissioner, has an answer.

The center, three years in the planning, is a gardener's paradise offering a wide selection of seeds, cutting, potted plants, shrubs, trees, and everything the beginner and old-hand needs for indoor and outdoor gardening.

In addition, he offers every conceivable type of container for plants, including ceramic pots created by Vi Bell of the local Bell Ceramic Shop, pots of plastic, pewter and stoneware, and baskets of all shapes and sizes.

To display pots, there's a large array of macramé goods and indoor and outdoor decorative stands. Also available are macramé wall hangings made by another local woman.

Need some help with your not-so-green thumb? There's RELAXED ATMOSPHERE — is the effect Crooker is after and plans to achieve with a gardener's library nook where customers can help themselves to his own collection of gardening books. The library corner will be surrounded by a hanging garden. Three years in the planning, the center has been opened three weeks with still more features to be added. Crooker plans a formal Open House March 19 to which he and his wife, Joyce, cordially invite the public.

A variety of self-help books to choose from, ranging in subject from outdoor and indoor redecorating with plants to how-to-grow anything books designed especially for the West Texas gardener.

Crooker is also installing a gardener's library in a corner of the shop where customers can relax at tables or browse through his personal library of gardening books next to a hanging garden of greenery.

"What I'm trying to achieve here with the hanging baskets and library nook," Crooker said, "is a restful atmosphere where plant lovers can come for relaxed shopping or get help with their own plants. I've only just begun to achieve the effect I'm after."

Another feature of Mr. G's Garden Center is do-it-yourself plant gifts. You pick out the plant and the container and Crooker will pot it for you free of charge.

He also offers a free gift-wrapping service. A friend who's just given birth would appreciate a keepsake plant potted in a pair of ceramic baby booties, for example.

An additional feature is what Crooker calls the "Sick Bay", a special table where problem plants are observed and nursed back to health. The service is one he offers to his customers who don't seem to be having any luck on their own.

Some of the more unusual plant species that Crooker offers include Hawaiian-imported pineapple plants, variegated rubber trees and zebra plants. His tree nursery includes fruit trees, shade trees, flowering trees and pecan trees. And if he doesn't already have what you're looking for, he knows where he can get it.

According to Crooker, when shopping for plants, it's important to go to a reputable dealer and then to examine the plant for yourself to make sure that it's healthy looking before you buy it. And before you get it home, make sure you know how to care for it. Refer to the care tag that accompanies the plant or ask the dealer.

"Most people who end up losing plants are those who give it too much care, particularly in the form of overwatering," he said. "In most cases you need to water only when the dirt feels dry."

One of the best methods of watering a plant, he said, is to set it in some water, allowing the water to seep in through the draining hole in the bottom of the pot rather than douse it from the top. In this way, the plant gets the right amount of water it needs, rather than too much. For those unintentional "plant killers" who can't seem to make anything green thrive, Crooker suggests adopting one of the hardier species. Philodendron, pothos, spider plants, dracaenas, and jades require little care and are well-suited to those who have a history of failure when it comes to plants.

One of the hardest of all, of course, is the cactus, but, according to Crooker, this is not the plant for those who tend to overwater as too much water and too little light are the cactus' biggest threats.

Mr. G's Garden Center could have opened at no better time since the official start of spring, the gardener's season, is only 11 days away. Crooker said that though plants can be transplanted outside year-round in Big Spring climate, fall is the best time of the year to transplant, but most prefer to do it in the spring.

GARDENER'S PARADISE — Surrounded by a forest of green, Crooker shares some know-how with wife Joyce who is helping him launch his three-year dream. Neither have done this before, she being 24-year civil service employee and court reporter at the time of Webb's closing and he having worked 13 years at Cosden, achieving the rank of personnel manager before leaving. Nevertheless, Crooker's reputation as a plant expert is well known among Big Spring friends.

MISS DIAMONDBACK ASPIRANTS — Both of these young ladies will be competing in the March 14 Miss Diamondback Pageant. Debra Cox, left, 17, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jerald Cox and a student at Big Spring High School. She is being sponsored by Big Spring Automotive. Also 17 and a student at BSHS is Linda Holland, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Dean Holland. Her sponsor is The Cottage. Come and pick your own winner at the pageant. It starts at 7:30, Tuesday, at the Brass Nail. And if you are an unmarried female, age 16 to 23 and a resident of either Howard, Martin, Borden, Mitchell or Glasscock County, you, too, can compete for the Miss Diamondback title by calling Mrs. Neal Roberts, 267-5645, before the March 11 deadline.

TWEEN 12 AND 20
Mom thinks she's a teenager again

Dear Doctor:

What can I do to help my mother? Lately she thinks she has become a teen-ager again. Mother now dresses in the latest teen fashions and uses the latest teen talk.

Whenever my friends come over to the house, mother immediately joins into the conversation, even to the point of discussing cute boys. My friends haven't said anything to me about mother, but I feel they are laughing behind her back. Help!

Sonja, Colorado Springs,

Dear Sonja:

It seems mother has reached a point in her life when she is temporarily unchallenged and bored. With her great love for you, she wants to share in your life. Usually this unusual behavior by mothers is short-lived. Be understanding and above all else, don't be openly critical of her.

What does dad think of all this?

Dear Dr.:

I have saved enough money to buy my first used car but I've heard so many things about used car salesmen that I don't trust them at all.

What should I look for when buying a used car?

Flora, Elizabethtown, Ky.

Dear Flora:

In checking with a "friendly" used car salesman, I was informed that the engine was the most important and most expensive part of the car. Beware if the engine is hard to start, idles rough or noisy, or if the engine response is slow when given gas.

Next, check the interior and exterior looking for ripples in the body (probably sure signs of a wreck), and rust (usually covered by floor mats).

Check all accessories making sure they are operable.

Your last check should be the tires, tailpipe and muffler.

After looking the car over, take it for a test drive, checking acceleration, brakes and general riding comfort.

UNUSUAL VARIETIES — Bill Crooker, Howard County Commissioner, has several unusual plants available at Mr. G's Garden Center including these pineapple plants imported from Hawaii. In addition to the popular and unusual, he has a wide selection of hardier plants for the not-so-green thumb.

Refreshments should have high impact socially, nutritionally

Do you remember looking forward to a winter party and the chilly invigoration of outdoor exercise, contrasted with the warmth of the good food and drinks that followed?

That was probably back in November or early December. Certainly you've had your fill of winter by now, but it will be over soon. Rather than to simply endure the last month of this chilly season, perhaps the best way to deal with it is to plan an "It's Almost Over" party. Recapture the spirit of those early winter outings with a post-game gathering and good, hot food and drinks afterward.

Food serves an important social function, in addition to providing your body the nutrients it needs to work efficiently, energetically. Recall the last social event of which you were a part. Wasn't food an integral part of the occasion? From the most thoroughly mapped-out event to the most spontaneous gathering of good friends, food so often provides an opportunity for sharing — of food, of course, but also of good conversation and good times.

As you plan the food and drink for your last winter outings, take into account both the social and nutritional aspects of the food you'll serve. Certainly some foods carry more social impact and value than others, but the same is true with the nutritional value of foods.

If you choose to provide such treats as hot mulled cider and cheese popcorn for your friends and family, you're offering high-impact foods socially and nutritionally. The cider, a fruit drink, provides vitamins and minerals for regulation of body processes, as well as some calories for heat and energy. The popcorn provides calories for heat and energy, but because it's covered with cheese, it also provides protein for building and body repair as well as calcium and other minerals, also important for body building.

Contrast these pluses with the value of other foods you might choose to serve your guests. In providing potato chips and pop, you're offering your guests some highly social foods, but that's about all. Potato chips, pop, and other highly-processed foods offer the calories of concentrated sugar and fat. Calories, of course, provide energy for the body to work and play, but that's about the only value, nutritionally, of these highly-refined foods.

High social impact and high nutritional impact — that's what to look for if you really want to treat your guests.

Foods with a strong social impact and lots of nutrition are easy to find and easy to provide, with some forethought. Remember the Four Food Groups as you plan.

Steers swinging

Before the season started, Head Baseball Coach Tommy Collins voiced hopes that his pitchers would come through for him since he felt the hitting department lacked a little pizzazz.

Not only have the local moundmen shown their skill with smoke and variation, but the Steer batters have increased in efficiency with each outing.

If strong-armed catcher Tony Mann can maintain just a percentage of what he did against Lamesa and Ft. Stockton, by the time district rolls around, his bat will be one of the hungriest in West Texas.

By the time you read this, the Steers will have played their opening-round game in the highly-respected South Grand Prairie Tournament. They faced a tough crew of Dallas Hillcrest diamond men.

By this time, the Steers could no longer be undefeated. That won't be any disgrace. The SGP tourney is known to have some of the best teams in the state competing for the championship trophy.

After the Bold Gold humiliated a supposedly strong, veteran squad of Golden Tors in their home opener, many fans asked if they were for real. Yes. From all indications, it'll be another gravy year for the locals.

And I'll tell you one thing Jack, if Tom Collins' mixer-uppers come through this weekend's tournament unscathed, they are more for real than you can imagine. And if so... look out District 5-4A opponents.

JOKE: FINLEY FILES '07

Time was passing slowly on Noah's ark, so the lion suggested to the giraffe that they choose up sides for a football game. The giraffe agreed. The lion's team kicked off, and on the first play from scrimmage the monkey handed off to the rhino, who charged up the middle for 10 yards.

On the next play, the rhino rambled all the way for a TD. At halftime the giraffe's team was leading 42-0.

Early in the second half, the monkey again handed off to the rhino. The rhino headed for a hole in the line, but the centipede, who was playing defensive tackle, reared up, grabbed the rhino and threw him to the deck, causing a fumble.

The rabbit, who was playing free safety, picked up the ball and scored for the lion's team. The lion was elated. "Fantastic tackle!" he exclaimed to the centipede. "Just fantastic! By the way, where were you in the first half?" The centipede replied, "I was lacing up my shoes."

REMARKABILITIES

"I can count the five best teams in the country on one hand." — JUD HEATHCOTE, Michigan State coach.

"For four years I made the suggestions. Now I make the decisions. I used to carry the Maalox for the boss, now Mike Brunker (his first assistant) carries it." — DAVE GAINES, of Detroit, explaining the difference between the head job and an assistant's role.

"We'll turn the lights out when Michigan State has the ball." — FRED SCHAUS, Purdue coach, on his solution of sorts after the coal strike forced a 50 percent reduction in power usage.

ChiChi chatchats

MIAMI (AP) — The kids are coming, observes veteran ChiChi Rodriguez, but Jack Nicklaus still ranks as "The Man."

"He is still the man to beat," said the 41-year-old Rodriguez, a great booster of some of the younger players in the game. And, said ChiChi, Nicklaus may be tougher than usual the next couple of years.

"I think Jack is going to make an extra effort to win as much as he can in the next few years," Rodriguez said before today's first round in the $200,000 Doral Open Golf Tournament. It was an obvious reference to Nicklaus' age, 38, and his announced trimmed-down schedule.

As the best of the younger players, Rodriguez nominates Tom Watson, Jerry Pate, Ben Crenshaw, Andy Bean and Bill Kratzert.

"They're the men who will be dominating the game in the future," Rodriguez said.

"Watson already has proved his greatness."

Bean is the defending champion here. Pate has played well twice without winning this year. Kratzert lost in a playoff and Crenshaw lost last week.

The Watson vs. Nicklaus affair, however, was expected to draw most of the gallery attention in this 72-hole test over the 7,065-yard, par-72 Blue Monster course at the Doral Country Club.

Watson, the 1977 British Open and Masters champion and Player of the Year, already has won two titles this season and heads the money-winning list with more than $103,000. Nicklaus has won and finished second in his last two starts.

Among the other major challengers are U.S. Open champion Hubert Green, Tom Weiskopf, Lee Trevino and Ray Floyd.

The final two rounds Saturday and Sunday will be telecast nationally by CBS-TV.

NIT fireworks have begun

By the Associated Press

They've fired the first shots of the National Invitation Tournament — and not much separated the best from the rest.

In two down-to-the-wire games Wednesday night, Georgetown defeated Virginia 70-68 in an overtime thriller and Nebraska edged Utah State 67-66 as the far-flung NIT started first-round play in regional outposts.

At Charlottesville, Va., Mike Riley and Craig Shelton hit two free throws each in the final 10 seconds of overtime to lead Georgetown over Virginia.

With 47 seconds left in overtime, the Cavaliers took the lead 67-66 on a 15-foot jumper by Tommy Hicks before Riley and Shelton pulled out the game for Georgetown from the foul line. The score was tied twice and the lead changed hands six times in the overtime period.

The Hoosiers earned a spot in the quarter-finals against the winner of Friday night's Fairfield-Dayton game.

At Lincoln, Neb., Carl McPipe's free throw with 1:52 left put Nebraska in front and the Cornhuskers held on to beat Utah State by a whisker. Freshmen Andre Smith and Mike Naderer sparked Nebraska in the second half as the Huskers were helped by Utah State's foul trouble.

Naderer hit on six outside shots and played alert defense, and Smith, who alternated with McPipe at center, scored 18 points to lead the Huskers. Nebraska advanced to a quarterfinal meeting against the winner of Friday night's Texas-Temple game.

The NIT continues tonight with Army playing at Rutgers and Virginia Commonwealth visiting Detroit. In Friday night's action, Temple will play at Texas, Fairfield at Dayton, Illinois State at Indiana State and South Carolina at North Carolina State.

The quarter-finals will continue at regional sites next week, with the semifinals and finals to be held at Madison Square Garden in New York on March 19 and 21.

The NCAA playoffs begin Saturday, starting the long and winding road toward the national championship in St. Louis later this month. A 32-team field, including defending champion Marquette, will open first-round play at various regional sites.

TEAM'S EXTREMES — Pittsburgh Pirates third baseman Phil Garner gets a lift onto the training field at Bradenton, Florida, Wednesday from teammate Dave Parker, the 1977 National League Batting Champ. The two represent extremes, with Parker the tallest, and Garner, the shortest, player on the team.

Steer batmen open play today in tourney

By DANNY REAGAN

GRAND PRAIRIE — The Big Spring Steers, seeking to improve upon a perfect 4-0 seasonal record, opened competition at noon today in the 16-team South Grand Prairie Invitational Baseball Tournament.

In a phone conversation from that Metroplex city this morning, Coach Tommy Collins announced that his team was prepared for action.

"Their morale seems pretty good," the coach said, "and they are ready to play."

As a team, the locals are in top flight physical condition. The only sour note comes from junior, pitcher-outfielder Larry Smith who is slowed somewhat by shin splints, and veteran senior pitcher-outfielder Charlie Vernon, who is bothered by a sore throat.

The Steers left Big Spring Wednesday morning, and stopped briefly at Ranger Jr. College en route for a work out. Wednesday night, Collins met with all other coaches involved in the tourney.

"Most of the teams are in the same position we are,"

Collins stated. "Everyone has played just about four games."

The Steers faced Dallas Hillcrest in first round play today. "We haven't seen the field yet," Collins said this morning, "and we don't know much about Hillcrest.

All I've heard is that they have a couple of really good left-handed pitchers."

The local stickmen went with either Vernon (1-0) or senior Tony Jacobo (1-0) on the mound against the Dallas club. Jacobo whiffed eight of nine batters Tuesday in a Stockton.

Other starters for the senior Johnny Mize on first junior Ricky Myers on third

Regardless of the outcome of the today's ballgame, the locals will face another opponent at noon Friday, in either the winners' or losers' bracket. The finals of the tournament are slated for 5 p.m. Saturday.

When asked to give the main reason for the 4-0 record of the Steers so far,

Collins replied: "I can't really say there is one main reason. It has to be a combination of some timely hits and some great pitching."

"Collins' Mixers" will be back home Monday afternoon for a 4 o'clock

ballgame with Snyder in Rockets lose another

HOUSTON (AP) — Portland center Tom Owens has been making the best of his opportunity as a starter for the Trail Blazers in place of the injured Bill Walton.

Owens led Portland with 19 points as the Trail Blazers handed Houston its sixth straight loss with a 97-94

National Basketball

Association victory Wednesday night.

"Basketball is a game of opportunities and when you get them, you have to take advantage of them," said

Owens, who was traded by

Houston to Portland at the end of last season.

"It was an all right game,"

Owens said. "I rebounded okay. It was a good game because we won."

Portland overcame a sluggish first half and took a 12-point lead 66-54 late in the third quarter. The Blazers hit only 36 per cent of their field goal attempts in the first half, but managed to stay ahead of the cold-shooting Rockets, who connected only only 25 per cent from the field.

Calvin Murphy ignited a late Houston rally by scoring

24 of his game high 32 points in the second half. Houston pulled to within one point on two occasions late in the game, but Johnny Davis iced

the victory for Portland with a pair of free throws with 39 seconds left in the game.

"It was a struggle but we'll take the victory," said

Portland Coach Jack

Ramsay. "Tom Owens has done a great job for us. He played well but it wasn't his best game of the season."

Kevin Kunnert scored a season high 25 points and pulled down a season high total of 21 rebounds as

Houston dropped their third straight home game.

Tug took bike ride so kids could walk

CLEARWATER—Hurriedly, the 24 members of the Clearwater High School Tornado Band, boys and girls, set up in two rooms to form a narrow path inside the spacious Clearwater Shopping Mall. Their curly-haired leader, wearing a thin red windbreaker, jeans and sneakers, gazed down the corridor to make sure the ballplayers were there, poised on their bikes. Confidently, he gave the downbeat. The band struck up a stirring march, "Thunder and Blazes."

Nothing happened. The players on the bikes didn't budge.

Two or three hundred people, knotted around the reception stand inside the mall, stirred impatiently. Some grasped packages, some nibbled on ice-cream cones from the Baskin-Robbins store three doors away, some held small children and pointed into the distance, saying, "that one there; that's Tug McGraw."

The band played "Up a Lazy River," and "Proud Mary" (which everyone thinks is called "Rollin' Rollin' Rollin' Down the River"), and at last, "Rocky."

"Rocky" did it. Midway through the inspirational sound, the five men pedaled their bikes rhythmically down the corridor, through the path formed by the Clearwater High School Tornado Band, and came to a halt in front of the stand. Colored balloons, released from the balcony above, bounced off the heads of the applauding people.

Started As a Joke

The "You Gotta Believe, We'll Strike Out Muscular Dystrophy" Bike Caravan had reached its goal, 16 days and 1,200 miles from the start. Baseball history had been made. No one before, not even Sparky Lyle, had ridden a bicycle to a big league training camp.

Funny thing how it happened: During the winter, a band of Phillies and a few Philly Eagles, work out at Veterans' Stadium. One morning, Tug McGraw, exhilarated by a solid six hours of sleep, showed up banging his chest and shouting, "I feel great! Who wants to jog to Florida with me?"

When he was a Met, Tug had done amusing little things, like cut his teammates' hair, bang his glove against his thigh while walking off the mound, bull-pen them to a pennant, but never had he jogged to Florida.

Rudy Carpenter, bossman of the Phils, heard about Tug's proposal. "No way I can let you do that," said Carpenter. "You couldn't pitch with your kidneys hanging down on your ankles."

Roman Gabriel had an alternative. He had been working out with the Phils following his release by the Eagles. He wants to stay in shape, planning to catch on with a club that needs a veteran quarterback at backup.

YOUNG IDEAS

By DICK YOUNG

"Why not ride a bicycle to Florida," said Gabe. "I could go with you. It would be a lot of fun."

"Sounds good," said Tug McGraw.

One night, soon afterward, there was an awards dinner in Philly. Tug had been sports chairman for the Muscular Dystrophy Association in Philly and the Delaware Valley. MD presented him with an award that night.

"What for?" Tug said to an official, off to the side. "I had a picture taken with a kid in a wheelchair. Does that deserve an award? I want to do something."

He told of the plan to bike to Florida with Roman Gabriel. Why not make it for MD? He was advised to go to New York to sell it to the MD field director, Jerry Wineberg. He did.

A few days later, Tug got a phone call from St. Louis.

"Hey, this is Lefty," said Steve Carlton. "I hear you're biking to Clearwater. Is that for real?"

"For real," said Tug. "How about me? I'd like to go."

"You're in."

There was a call from Jerry Martin, and another from Larry Christenson. Gabriel said he had some other football players who wanted to join. "Whoa, wait," said McGraw. It's getting too big. He cut it off at five; himself, Carlton, Martin, Christenson, and Gabe.

On the morning of Feb. 7, delayed one day by The Big Snow, The Foolhardy Five mounted bikes and took off from Vets Stadium, peddling through the high wind. They had gone just eight miles when they had to dismount. Snowdrifts were piling up on the highway.

Averaged 70-80 Miles Per Day

They climbed into the pace-maker Winnebago camper and rode to the outskirts of Washington, then cycled the last 15 miles of the first day into the capital.

A big problem arose. At the start and finish of each day, there were publicity appearances at malls, on TV shows; there were visits to kids with MD in hospitals. "We were averaging only 30 miles a day on our bikes," said McGraw, "and doing too much riding in the Winnebago. We were losing our credibility. So, we phoned ahead to cut down on the morning press conferences, and after Richmond we averaged 70, 80 miles a day."

Along the way, people cheered them on, kidded with them. "You're crazy," one man yelled.

"The only thing that's crazy," Tug shouted back, "is kids in wheelchairs. Get them walking again!"

On Feb. 22, the Foolhardy Five pumped into the Clearwater Shopping Mall, the Clearwater High School Tornado Band played the theme from "Rocky," and Tug McGraw said, "We'll do it again next year, and better."

(AP WIREPHOTO) SMASHING IT BACK — Young Tracy Austin returns the ball against her opponent, Latham Anliot, during action Wednesday night in Virginia Slims tournament at Dallas. Austin easily won the match 7-5, 6-2 to advance in the tournament.

Navratilova fears crowd will like Tracy best

DALLAS (AP) — Martina Navratilova, the current kingpin of women's tennis, is afraid Tracy Austin's delicate and youthful looks will sway crowd sentiment away from her in her own adopted hometown.

Both won second round matches Wednesday night in a $100,000 women's professional tennis tournament to set up a quarterfinals clash Friday.

For Austin, the 15-year-old high school freshman from Rolling Hills, Calif., it will be her biggest chance for stardom since reaching the quarterfinals at the U.S. Open and playing Chris Evert at Wimbledon last year.

Navratilova crushed Australian Lesley Hunt 6-0, 6-1 to roll up her record 37th straight victory on this year's indoor winter circuit.

After a shaky first set Austin eliminated Sweden's Helena Anliot 7-5, 6-2.

"I hope the crowd will be behind me, but it probably won't," said Navratilova, who moved here after defecting from her native Czechoslovakia three years ago.

"She's so young. She'd be a real star if she beat me now."

Austin has failed on three previous occasions but the last time lost only 6-3, 6-4.

"Martina is a lot stronger than I am," said Austin, who weighs 102 pounds and looks more like one of the ball girls than a player. "It's unbelievable I'm playing her again. I haven't played many of the top players but this will be the fourth time against her."

In a first round match third-seeded Betty Stove of the Netherlands overpowered Nancy Richey of San Angelo, Tex. 6-2, 6-4.

In other second round matches sixth-seeded Australian Kerry Reid beat Romania's Virginia Ruzici 2-6, 6-2, 6-3; Pam Shriver of Luthersville, Md., downed Regina Marsikova of Czechoslovakia 6-0, 7-6.

In doubles action Kathy Harter of Culver City, Calif.

and Caroline Stoll of Livingston, N.J., defeated Australia's Diane Fromholtz and Mona Guerrant of Scottsdale, Ariz. 6-3, 6-3; JoAnne Russell of Naples, Fla., and Rosemary Casals of Sausalito, Calif., downed Renata Tomanova of Czechoslovakia and Maureen "Peanut" Louie of San Francisco 6-1, 6-3.

Also in doubles, Bunny Bruning of La Jolla, Calif., and Sharon Walsh of Mill Valley, Calif., defeated Mima Jausovec of Yugoslavia and Virginia Ruzici of Romania 7-6, 5-7, 6-0; Kate Latham of Palo Alto, Calif., and Anliot beat Florenza Mihai of Romania and Beth Norton of Fairfield, Conn. 6-3, 6-4; Trish Bostrom and Marita Redondo of National City, Calif., defeated Hunt and Marsikova 6-2, 6-1.

Boxer gets golden boos

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Dallas' Greg Singletary would rather have earned cheers than boos after a decision announcing him the victor in the Texas Golden Gloves tournament here.

But Wednesday night Singletary said the crowd's disapproval "doesn't bother me a bit."

"All I care is what the judges think," said Singletary after the judges gave him a decision over Eddie Gonzales of Houston.

In other bouts, former national Golden Gloves light welterweight champ Ronnie Shields took a three-round decision from Alex Contreras of Brownsville.

Shields' victory was clouded by news that he had a bone chip in a hand. X-rays were slated today for the hand. In the light heavyweight division, William Marshall of Tyler knocked out Robert Chavez of Wichita Falls in the first round.

Dan Levario, the defending featherweight state champion from Odessa, dethroned Ralph Reyes of San Antonio.

Tonight's action includes defending heavyweight champ Parris Flowers of Houston taking on Thomas Landry of Beaumont in a quarterfinal match. Action continues through Saturday finals.

Adrian has 'birth' in tourney

ADRIAN, Mich. (AP) — Perhaps Adrian College's cheerleaders will shake rattles instead of pompons when the Bulldogs' women's basketball team competes in the Midwest Association of Intercollegiate Athletics for Women tournament this week.

A news release from the college's publicity office said Adrian received an at-large "birth" in the tournament, which begins Thursday at Morris Harvey College in Charleston, W. Va.

Gagliano dies at age 61

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Tony Gagliano, who coached several Memphis high school baseball players into the major leagues, died Wednesday at Memphis Veterans Hospital. He was 61.

In 20 years of coaching American Legion baseball in Memphis, Gagliano's teams won 18 state championships, eight regional titles, were runnersup for the national title three years and won the national championship in 1969.

Among the players Gagliano coached were Tim McCarver, Ross Grimsley, Tucker Ashford and Mike Paxton, all currently on major league clubs.

Gagliano, who entered the hospital Jan. 27, gave up coaching a year ago when he became ill.

WBA approves Ali-Spinks bout

MEXICO CITY — The World Boxing Association (WBA) in Panama City, Panama, announced that it has approved a request for a rematch between heavyweight champion Leon Spinks and Muhammad Ali.

Elias Cordoba, president of the WBA's world champions committee, said the request was dated March 7 from Robert Arum, president of Top Rank, Inc. Cordoba said Arum said the title bout would be held in September in an African country.

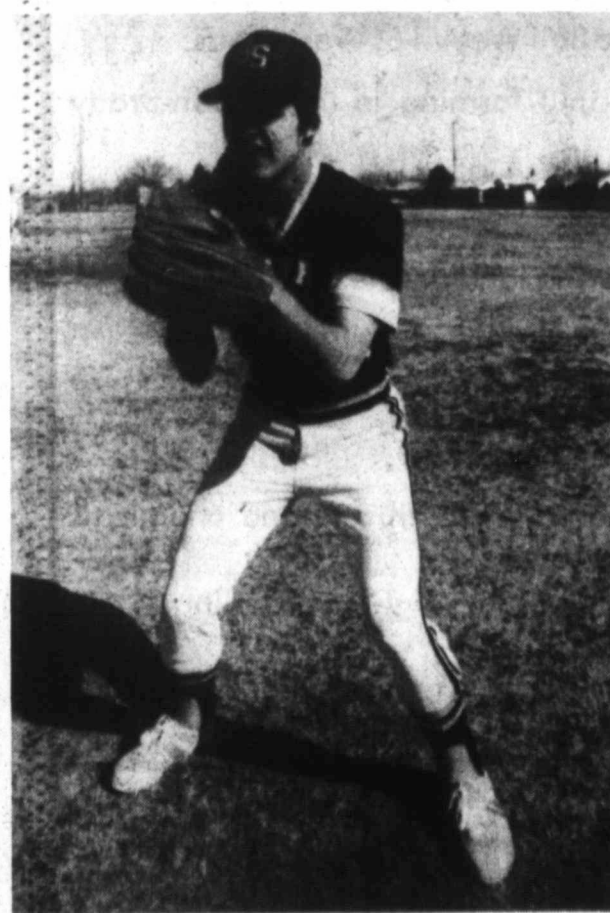

Cordoba said if Spinks wins the bout, he would be required to grant a title chance to the top contender, probably Ken Norton.

Four players admit shoplifting

HOUSTON (AP) — Principal A.C. Herald Jr. says four members of the state Class 4A champion Houston Wheatley High School basketball team have admitted participating in a shoplifting incident in Austin last week during the state schoolboy basketball tournament.

Herald declined to identify the four, even to Houston Independent School District officials, but said there would be severe disciplinary measures. He said some of the seniors involved may not be allowed to graduate.

Ali-Spinks September rematch is still shaky

NEW YORK (AP) — Bob Arum says he will switch the proposed site for a $14 million heavyweight championship rematch in September between Leon Spinks and Muhammad Ali if the president of the African nation of Bophuthatswana is unable to satisfy objections of leaders of civil rights and anti-apartheid organizations in the United States.

A spokesman for the NAACP said the "fighters would be selling their souls" if they went to Bophuthatswana, which is composed of six small, separated areas landlocked within South Africa. The only country in the world to recognize it as an independent nation is South Africa.

Prexy Nesbitt, associate director of the American Committee on South Africa, said he was "shocked" to learn the fight might be held there.

He called Bophuthatswana part of "the scheme of South Africa to set up what would be known in this country as 'reservations,' although 'concentration camps' might also be acceptable."

Arum, president of Top Rank, Inc., which owns promotion rights to Spinks' first three defenses of the title he won from Ali last month, said he had invited Chief Lucas Mangope, president of Bophuthatswana, to come to the United States this week to "meet the leaders of these responsible organizations and present his position to them."

"If the leaders of these organizations are not satisfied, we will not have the fight in Bophuthatswana," Arum told the Associated Press Wednesday night.

Arum offered Mauritius as an alternative site, describing it as "an island country off the coast of Africa whose president is the president of the Organization of African Unity."

Ali, conscious of his image as a leader to blacks, has refused numerous offers to fight in South Africa in the past.

In Detroit, Spinks told a news conference that he wanted his first title defense to be against Ali.

"It definitely will be Ali if I defend my title against anybody," Spinks said. "Ali is the first."

Meanwhile, Ken Norton's manager, Bob Biron, contends that he and Arum have a binding agreement for Norton to get the first shot at the title. Biron reacted angrily to Arum's announcement of an agreement for a Spinks-Ali rematch, as well as talk that Norton might fight someone else on that same card.

"They have continued to perpetrate this fraud as anticipated," said Biron. "As far as we're concerned there is no card without Spinks honoring his commitment to meet Norton first."

"We have a firm, binding, legal agreement with Bob Arum, Top Rank and Leon Spinks. We will exhaust our resources to see that the agreement is enforced. We intend on employing all legal remedies connected with this blatant breach of contract."

To further complicate the situation, the World Boxing Council has threatened to strip Spinks of his title if he doesn't fight Norton next.

WBC President Jose Sulaiman said both Ali and Spinks made written agreements before their fight that the winner would sign by April 7 to fight Norton by July 7.

Messbarger new ASU head coach

SAN ANGELO, Texas (AP) — Ed Messbarger, who won 13 Big State Conference basketball championships the last 15 years at St. Mary's in San Antonio, was named head basketball coach at Angelo State University Wednesday.

Messbarger, who has a career won-loss record of 397-320 in his 21 years of coaching, replaces Phil George, who had earlier announced his retirement from coaching. George will become full-time athletic director and associate professor of physical education at Angelo State.

Messbarger's teams have captured four NIAA Dist. 4 championships, went to the NIAA quarterfinals in 1963-64 and 1966-67 and made it to the tournament semifinals in 1973-74 and 1974-75.

He was named Big State Conference coach of the year five times, NIAA Dist. 4 coach of the year four times, and the NIAA national coach of the year in 1974-75.

Angelo State is in the Lone Star Conference.

Farm

Set-aside payment bill introduced by Talmadge

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Herman E. Talmadge, D-Ga., has put his political muscle as a veteran of the "Old Guard" in the Senate on the line with a move to get emergency farm legislation to President Carter by March 29.

The measure he and 15 other influential senators introduced Wednesday is a $2.3 billion program of mandatory payments to farmers who wish to take more cropland out of production than Carter says would be wise in the event of a major crop failure later.

Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland can make such payments now but has repeatedly said he won't, either for his own set-aside programs for wheat and feedgrains or the diversions Talmadge wants of land now slated to produce wheat, feedgrains, cotton or soybeans.

It does not come near the demands of the American Agriculture protest group, the Senate Agriculture Committee chairman told reporters. Bills to substantially change federal farm policy or rework last fall's revisions of existing policy will be handled later.

Resolution condones police brutality

By the Associated Press

A resolution adopted by the McAllen, Texas, City Commission commending law enforcement officers for breaking up a demonstration on an international bridge to Mexico was greeted Wednesday with disbelief by Oklahoma farmers who were among the demonstrators.

In the action last week, officers used night sticks and tear gas to clear demonstrators off the International Bridge spanning the Rio Grande. The striking farmers were protesting the importation of Mexican produce.

The resolution says police "showed remarkable restraint in handling a potentially dangerous situation."

Wheat farmers sign up 50 million bushels

WASHINGTON (AP) — Last week alone, Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland says, wheat farmers signed up 50 million bushels for the reserves program he is pushing as the way out of the current grain price slump.

That finding, the 100.3 million bushels of 1976-crop wheat already committed and figures drawn from a telephone survey Monday mean 183.9 million bushels in the farmer-owned stockpile, Bergland said Wednesday.

That amount is more than 55 percent toward his goal of 330 million bushels of wheat by the end of the sign-up period May 1, he said.

A week before, only 95.3 million bushels of 1976-crop wheat had been committed to the reserve.

His announcement did not mention corn and other feedgrains, only 2.1 million bushels of which from the 1976 crop had been registered by the end of business March 1 when 1977 surpluses could start coming in.

SUPPORT ASKED — An unidentified Curry County N.M., farmer tried to persuade Amarillo trucker Larry Stigall to support the farm strike. Farmers stopped truckers coming into the state at Texico to discuss the strike.

Congress and among farmers on how to solve the predicted cost-price crunch and slump in farm income, he said, "I do not believe the problems can be resolved before laying-by time this year."

The committee's minority leader, Sen. Bob Dole, R-Kan., joined in, while noting he has nine extensive measures awaiting action and more in his pocket. "But the laying-aside time has already come in the wheat belt," he said.

The Crop Reporting Board said later that corn planting in the southernmost areas is behind schedule this year because of either wet fields or cold soil temperatures.

All the senators involved urged speedy passage, with Talmadge saying he has alerted his House counterpart to be ready to move there. If his panel approves the bill Wednesday as expected, he said he will ask Senate leaders to hold up the Panama Canal treaty debate long enough to act on the emergency legislation.

The obstacles are clear: hostile budget committee chairmen in both chambers and traditionally rough going in the House for farm bills.

A veteran Midwest

Republican representative said privately, however, that such speed is possible if

Production expenditures averaged Production expenditures nationwide averaged just over $32,000 per farm in 1976, according to a survey conducted by the U.S. Department of Agriculture and the Texas Crop and Livestock Reporting Service. The total outlay to raise crops, livestock, and poultry ran up a bill of $89 billion.

The major expenditure was for feed, which accounted for over $14 billion. Next came rent cost of $8 billion; interest and taxes of $7.9 billion; wages at $7.4 billion; and purchases of fertilizer, lime, and soil conditioners at a cost of $7.2 billion.

The Texas Crop and Livestock Reporting Service, with help from producers, participated in developing this information.

Production expenditure information is a major ingredient in determining net farm income and is used as a guide in computing the parity index and other factors about the farmer's position in the national economy.

In order to update these expenditure figures, Verner Danielson and Betty House of the Texas Crop and Livestock Reporting Service will be contacting several farmers in Glasscock & Howard counties during February and March in an effort to establish expenditure levels for 1977.

Some producers will be asked a series of questions about their marketing practices for livestock, field crops, fruits, and vegetables.

All answers secured during the interviews will be confidential and used only in state and national summaries.

Investigation of delays asked

WASHINGTON (AP) — Thirty-five members of the House Agriculture Committee have joined Rep. Charles Thone, R-Neb., in asking the committee's chairman, Rep. Thomas S. Foley, D-Wash., for an investigation of delays in the shipment to Russia of U.S. grain the Soviets have bought.

A Russian delegation has been in the country since last week trying to find out why its grain hasn't been shipped in some cases, a problem officials attribute to bad weather, rail car shortages, elevator explosions and inspections.

The congressmen are worried about possible further cancellations that could trigger another price slump. "Something must be done to alleviate this logjam, and the sooner the better," Thone said.

farm-belt members cut a deal with urbanites who need votes for New York City aid measures.

Talmadge said his approach has two prime advantages. First, it would put money in farmers' empty pockets quickly, by giving them half their payments of up to $75 an acre as soon as they sign the contract.

Then, he said, "taxpayers may actually save money" since market prices would be forced up high enough by the restricted production that the government would not have to make some $3 billion in so-called deficiency payments to compensate farmers for low returns.

Talmadge threw in a couple hooks for the administration: the raising of loan limits and special programs Bergland seeks for his rural-credit operations, which a House committee has been struggling with this week and the Senate panel has had pending since October, and a boost in USDA's borrowing authority.

Farmers also would have to already be participating in the Bergland set-aside programs to be eligible for the program designed to trim by 31 million acres the roughly 275 million acres growers say they intend to plant to major crops this season.

Pair of teen pickets freed

MERCED, Texas (AP) — Authorities here have deported one juvenile and released a second on bond after the pair was arrested at a Texas farmworkers union picket line.

The youths, ages 14 and 17, were charged with disorderly conduct Wednesday as striking farmworkers completed their eighth day of picketing.

Officials said the juveniles shouted obscenities at vehicles crossing the picket line.

The 14-year-old, reportedly an illegal alien, was sent to Mexico. The older youth was released on a personal recognizance bond, according to officials.

The strikers are seeking higher wages and have been demonstrating at an onion field here.

Law enforcement authorities did not say how long they would allow the blockade to remain in place, but Breckenridge said it will be lifted when officers order it.

Arizona farmers plan blockade

NOGALES, Ariz. (AP) — With farmers and law enforcement officers assuring they will keep the peace, 100 farmers today prepared a symbolic blockade of Mexican produce trucks two miles north of the international border.

The demonstration, expected to get under way around midday, will be much smaller than had been hoped for by American Agriculture Movement organizers, who at first said they expected as many as 2,000 protesters.

The farmers will use 35 tractors to block a road two miles from the U.S. Customs Service compound, where one produce-laden truck has been crossing the border every minute during the current Mexican winter vegetable season.

At an informal session Wednesday night, demonstration organizers and Santa Cruz County Sheriff Jaime Teyechea said they were confident the protest will not result in violence.

"I'm happy to tell you that I am comfortable with you people," Teyechea told the farmers. "I don't anticipate any problems because there has been direct communication between myself and your leaders."

Jim Breckenridge a blockade organizer from Elfrida, Ariz., issued a warning to fellow farmers: "We're down here for a peaceful demonstration. The first guy who gets out of line, I'll break his arm. We'll control our own people."

Gov. Bruce Babbitt sent a member of his staff here to help coordinate law enforcement activities.

The governor also met Wednesday with Sonora, Mexico, Gov. Alejandro Carrillo Marcor, and the lieutenant governor of Baja California, Armando Gallago.

Babbitt said the Mexican officials were concerned because they felt the demonstration could result in damage to international relations and that the farmers' problems "have nothing to do with Mexico."

"I told them that the farmers have a constitutional right to demonstrate," Babbitt said. "I also said I have a constitutional duty to see that no laws are broken."

The protest is part of the continuing nationwide farmers' strike aimed at getting parity prices for farm products.

In addition, farmers here say they are concerned that Mexican farmers use the insecticide DDT on their crops, while that chemical is banned in the United States and U.S. farmers must use more expensive products.

There has been some speculation by farmers here that the Mexican government, unhappy with a similar blockade last week in Texas, will order produce trucks held on its side of the border to avoid the blockade.

"If the Mexicans don't send any produce across, we will be there the next day," Breckenridge said. "If they send some vegetables across, then we'll have done the job."

The organizers said they hope to back up 200 trucks with the blockade. The Arizona Department of Public Safety was expected to line up patrol cars as a buffer between the tractors and any trucks reaching the blockade area, organizers said.

Law enforcement authorities did not say how long they would allow the blockade to remain in place, but Breckenridge said it will be lifted when officers order it.

Food prices continue to skyrocket

WASHINGTON (AP) — The prices manufacturers receive for their products rose by the largest amount in three years last month as food prices showed unusually large gains, the Labor Department said today.

Consumer foods rose 2.9 percent in February, leading the increase of 1.1 percent for all finished goods.

These prices, charged at the last stage of production, usually show up at the consumer level within a few months.

Consumer prices have already begun to rise rapidly, going up 0.8 percent in January, about double the increases of last year.

The 1.1 percent increase in finished goods prices for January was the largest since a 1.9 percent increase in November 1974. It followed rises of 0.6 percent in November, 0.5 percent in December and 0.6 percent in January.

Unlike the January report, most of the increases were among foods, some of them in short supply because of the severe winter weather.

Wholesale prices turned up sharply for pork, eggs and dairy products in February after declining in the previous month. Beef and veal prices rose much more than in January. However, prices declined for roasted coffee. Prices rose less than in January for fresh and dried fruits and vegetables and processed poultry.

The 2.9 percent price increase for consumer foods followed rises of 1.1 percent in January and 0.5 percent in December.

If food is removed, wholesale prices were up 0.4 percent, about the same level as the last half of 1977.

Prices declined for jewelry, gasoline and home heating oil.

Prices rose less in February than in January for automobiles, household furniture and mobile homes. However, prices rose more rapidly for beverages, soap and synthetic detergents, footwear and tobacco products.

The Labor Department's Finished Goods Price Index is intended to replace the Wholesale Price Index, to make the monthly report coincide more with consumer prices.

The old Wholesale Price Index rose 1 percent in February, the largest increase since a 1 percent rise last April.

Raw farm materials rose 4.7 percent, contributing to a 3.2 percent rise in all crude goods. That was the largest increase since a 4.2 percent rise in February 1977.

Goods at the middle stage of processing, particularly steel, showed a 0.9 percent gain.

The finished goods index stood at 188.3, meaning these prices were 88.3 percent higher than they were in the 1967 period.

Officials said two weeks ago that the January increase of 0.8 percent in consumer prices was caused mainly by one-month factors not expected to be repeated throughout the year.

Spring classes are under way

YMCA spring classes have started. There are still openings in classes and of course, no limit for any fitness class. Men's and Women's Fitness Classes will meet three times a week through May, with an extra women's class meeting Saturday morning.

The baton twirling class has been postponed to Monday. This class will meet each Monday in the Y gym, from 5:00 to 6:00 p.m. until May 1. Linda Godwin will instruct and must have 12 students for the class to make.

There is a very special class at the YMCA for women. This class is geared to women who have not been "in shape" for years. It is recommended to women who cannot start themselves on an exercise plan, or to women who are overweight, or who have lost the elasticity required for more vigorous exercise. Our instructor, who has volunteered her services, knows the needs of the older woman. The YMCA wants to serve all of the people, so there is a fitness class for everyone. Call the program director at the YMCA for more information on this class: 267-8234.

Tolkien works talk subject

The Anthony Hunt Library of Howard College is readying a series of lecture programs to be held in the Cactus Room on campus. According to Mary Crawford, librarian, plans are for the lectures to be given once each month, or oftener, during the fall and spring semesters.

The first lecture will be held on April 3, 1978, as a part of the observance of National Library Week, which extends from April 2, to April 8, inclusive.

Susan King, English instructor at Howard College, will give the first program on the writings of J.R.R. Tolkien. Mrs. King has done an in-depth study of Tolkien and his trilogy, which she teaches in one of her literature classes.

All residents of Howard County and of the area which Howard College serves are invited to attend this program, which is free. The time is 7:30 p.m. The Cactus Room is the newest addition to the Dora Roberts Student Union Building.

Jimmy's White House Photo of FDR stolen

WASHINGTON (AP) — A sneak thief apparently has been at work in the White House. Gone without a trace is a 40-year-old autographed photo portrait of President Franklin D. Roosevelt.

This development, which has been reported to police, has cast a cloud of suspicion over all members of the White House press corps as well as executive branch employees who pass in and out of the West Wing press center.

FDR inscribed the photo to the press corps in the mid-1930s and signed himself, "Your ever-devoted victim."

It had been hanging on White House walls ever since.

The first "break" in the case came this week when a reporter found the empty frame for Roosevelt's likeness hidden behind a leather-upholstered lounge chair. The protective backing had been cut away.

That FDR was the thief's target seems beyond question. Left untouched were autographed photos of former Presidents Hoover and Truman and framed letters signed by Lyndon B. Johnson and Richard Nixon.

President Carter's grandson and namesake, James Earl Carter IV, has become almost inseparable from a Snoopy baseball cap given to him at a belated White House birthday party last week.

The son of Chip and Caron Carter became a year old on Feb. 25, but the party was delayed because he was traveling with his parents at the time.

Amy Carter was a catalyst for the festivities. She personally decorated the third floor solarium with crepe paper and balloons for the occasion.

Young James Earl received mostly gifts of clothing from his assembled kin, but a baseball bat and ball were provided to go with the cap.

When Carter unveiled new education proposals last week, he said he thinks the government's education efforts should have greater visibility. Toward that end, he had Secretary Joseph A. Califano Jr. and other key officials of the Department of Health, Education and Welfare join him on a press center platform for the announcement.

Straining to view the high-powered assemblage from a rear corner of the room was Ernest L. Boyer, the commissioner of education who oversees the distribution of $10 billion of federal education aid.

When a reporter asked why Boyer wasn't on the platform, he confessed to having trouble gaining entry to the White House because the uniformed police of the Secret Service had never heard about a commissioner of education.

So much for visibility.

ROUGH RUNWAY — A commercial airliner takes off from Phoenix Sky Harbor International Airport Wednesday despite crumbled hunks of concrete at end of main runway. Repairs to runway and taxiway, caused by last week's flooding of Salt River, are estimated to cost about $4 million.

Comment from capital Christie project axed

By JIM DAVIS
Austin — It wasn't exactly a Solomon, baby and sword routine, but Hugh C. Yantis Jr. managed to cut some corners and avoid a likely lawsuit. For sure, he prevented an emotional split of the State Board of Insurance.

After becoming chairman of the board last fall, Yantis threw out a pet project of his predecessor, Joe Christie: Methods and Procedures.

M&P has a unit Christie set up to watchdog other department employees and streamline the state insurance bureaucracy.

Axing the unit was popular with many employees, particularly longtime ones with their own ways of doing things.

The Methods and Procedures people tended to be young, bright and ambitious. Critics called them arrogant.

When the unit was dissolved, its employees were scattered among other offices. Three young women — Pamela Evans, Bonnie Kaderka and Rochelle Roach — were told their new duties involved a lower pay grade. They would get $311 a month less than their previous $1,345.

The three hired lawyers and took their protest to a hearing before the three-member insurance board.

Member Ned Price sympathized with the employees and said he couldn't vote to cut their salaries. Durwood Manford kept quiet but was expected to support his buddy Yantis.

Yantis handed out a written statement indicating nothing could be done for the employees, but he put off a vote for three weeks. Roach gave up and resigned. The other two stayed and their lawyers talked about injunctions.

Finally, Yantis proposed a different pay grade that would mean only a $45 cut in salary. The two remaining employees accepted. Now all the board has to worry about are other employees who think the two women are making more than their new jobs should pay.

Entire school board, superintendent arrested

JOHNSON CITY, Texas (AP) — Blanco County Sheriff W.J. Hass has arrested the entire Johnson City school board and its superintendent, the Austin American-Statesman said today.

Hass said the arrests, made on charges of failure to maintain the security of ballot boxes in a recent bond election, occurred Monday at a special meeting of the group in the school administration office.

Arrested and then released on $500 personal recognizance bonds were Superintendent Lloyd Smith, school board president Waymon Curry, and trustees

Jimmy Odiorne, A.G. Ulrich, Fielding Reiner, Martin Meier, George Danz and Carolyn Gibson.

John B. Stevenson Jr., attorney for the trustees, said he will attempt to have charges dismissed and if that fails, he will ask an early trial.

The action resulted from a Feb. 18 school board meeting which was called to canvass a Feb. 11 school bond election.

According to state election laws, canvassing officials are supposed to make a comparison of the votes cast with the votes tallied on each side of an issue, taking into account any voided or mutilated ballots.

Retired policeman with Marj Carpenter

J.D. Campbell, who retired Tuesday from the Big Spring Police force, had worked for them since 1953. That's a quarter of a century, man.

He's worked under five different chiefs including Everett York, C.L. Rogers, Jey Banks, Vance Chism and Stanley Bogard. "I liked them all," Campbell said and added, "They were all good to me."

Campbell was a patrolman for about half his career, becoming a sergeant under Chief Banks.

He's worked the streets and he's worked the inside of the police station, from helping with the jail to dispatching to whatever he was called upon to do.

"The worst thing I ever remember happening to me," he stated and then paused, "There were a lot of 'worst' things back in the tough days of the 50s — but the worst thing was the night a man bit me."

He chuckled and added, "I had to have all kinds of shots. They said it was more dangerous than dog bite. But he bit right through the sleeve of my heavy wool shirt. He was strong, angry, drunk, fighting and it took about four of us to ever get him arrested."

His wife, Willie, smiled at the memory, and said "I couldn't believe him when he came in and said he had to go to the doctor because a man bit him, but it sure was an ugly place on his arm."

Willie works in the school printing office at the administration building. She came to the police station Tuesday for the retirement reception for Campbell and so did most of the force.

They had it right at shift change time at 2 p.m. so that officers going off and coming on could attend. But several officers from the third shift also came down, and there was a sprinkling of other law officers from other departments. Campbell's been a policeman a long time and they were showing their respect.

One officer cracked, "We'll miss your smiling face" and another quipped, "When did he smile?"

ALL SMILES — J.D. Campbell, deadly serious during 25 years of police work, was all smiles as he was presented a plaque from the Big Spring Police Association by John Burson, association president.

Campbell, if he was in the midst of serious police work, didn't smile. He smiled later. He has also been active in the Five-Watter CB Club since 1969 and was interested in CBs a long time before they became a popular fad.

Born in East Texas, he moved out to the Lamesa area where he had several relatives and worked in a grocery store. He served in the European theatre with the army during World War II. He and Willie married in 1951. They have a son, David, who works for a Midland oil company.

The police association presented him a plaque denoting him a lifelong member. The police department presented him a badge which included his badge.

Fellow employees gave him a sweater, a fishing reel and golf balls.

"Well," he said, trying not to show his emotion, "when I'm not fishing or playing golf, I'll come down here and pester you all."

A quarter of a century is a long time at any job — but as a law enforcement officer — a policeman — often referred to by derogatory terms such as cop, flatfoot and pig — to serve in that capacity for 25 years is like 75 years on most other jobs.

So here's to J.D. Campbell — may he really enjoy that retirement — out where I ride fence.

Love scenes detain hero

By HUGH A. MULLIGAN
AP Special Correspondent

NEW YORK (AP) — A film critic on one of the big metropolitan dailies wrote the other day that because of the success of "Star Wars" family films are making a comeback.

Boy, there's good news. Wouldn't it be something if Hollywood again started turning out really great movies like "Gunga Din," "The Hound of the Baskervilles," "Four Feathers" and "They Died With Their Boots On"? Maybe even a "Shane Two" or a "Son of Beau Geste"?

Then she, for it was a she-critic, tipped her hand and gave her idea of "one of the best of the recent family films," and it sure sounded like a turkey to me. "A Hero Ain't Nothin' But a Sandwich" was the critic's choice, and she explained the plot:

"It's all about a 13-year-old Los Angeles ghetto boy who turns to drugs after his real father leaves the family and he has trouble adjusting to his mother's new boyfriend..."

How does that grab you? Well, according to the child star playing the young dope fiend, "what the movie is trying to say is that there's got to be some kind of communication between everyone in the household," which I guess is the way 13-year-old kids talk these days when they're brought up on movies like that.

On my 13th birthday my family took me to a family movie called "Imitation of Life," which the critics then probably said had something important to say about the need for communication, and I sulked for a week in my room communicating only with my best friends in the Owl patrol on my Boy Scout Morse code set. It was a weepie that wouldn't stop.

The lady critic went on to say that there were "several other PG-rated films around that, despite semi-nude love scenes or four letter words, most critics would agree are suitable viewing for children."

Well, fortunately, most parents I know have more sense than most film critics I know and so do most kids I know.

Love scenes, whether played in the buff or in Eskimo parkas on the back of a dog sled, are always a drag on the action, detaining the hero when he should be heading 'em off at the pass or coaxing on the lead dog to hot foot that penicillin to the old trapper's hut. Any kid worth his popcorn knows that.

A couple of years back Hollywood did a remake of "The Front Page" and brought in a fancy priced screen writer to insert a lot of four-letter words into the classic Ben Hecht and Charles MacArthur script. This not only made the film embarrassing and boring long for family watching but defused the great five-letter word ending when the son-of-a-you-know-what stole the fellow's watch.

Well, they reran "The Front Page" on television a few weeks ago with all the childish adult words deleted and, do you know, it played just as well, even better? Personally I've always felt movie dialogue went as far

Court orders new trial for convicted killer

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The Texas Court of Criminal Appeals ordered a new trial Wednesday for a San Antonio man convicted of capital murder and sentenced to death, ruling that the original trial should have been moved from Bexar County.

The appeals court said the state did not contest the request for a change of venue in the trial of Fred T. Durrough. Under Texas law, the trial should have been moved automatically.

"The record also reflects that the motion was timely presented to the trial judge and that he overruled the motion without hearing any evidence," the appeals court said.

In other cases, the court: —Overturned a heroin conviction because an Orange County judge allowed prosecutors to file as evidence an envelope with handwritten notations about the case.

The court ordered a new trial for Anderson Carrier, who had objected that the notations were a shorthand rendition of the state's case on one piece of paper.
