Accent is on Easter up and down Main Street.

With a hop, skip and a jump! That's how Easter bunnies get around and some of the Easter toys we've seen at Collier Drug and Wacker's are no exception. Most of the toys are washable and durable and will be enjoyed long after the wear and tear of Easter day. If you need Easter baskets for the tots to gather eggs in, you'll find all kinds and colors at Wacker's.

Easter cards galore are on display at Warren's Drug, Collier Drug, Hamilton Drug, and Wacker's. Easter Candles in gaily colored boxes suitable for the season are also on sale at these stores.

Bill and Mary DeWalt are already receiving orders for corages, cut flowers and pot plants. You're advised to turn your orders in early in order that you'll have a "first choice" selection.

Head first into Easter with a beautiful bonnet from Maxine's. You'll find a fine selection from which to choose.

Blouses lead bonnets a close second in wardrobe importance. The cream puff of your dress parade will be a nylon blouse to complement your suit. Parsons' dress shop has just unpacked an interesting array of blouses. Head Parsons' ad for colors, prices, etc. You'll find an excellent buy on spring suits too.

Going places? If so, check with Wilson Bros. personnel about the travel cards supplied by Standard Oil company. The travel information department of this company is operating again for the first time since the war. Your itinerary will be mapped to include all the most interesting places, the best possible route. Get the most out of your trips by letting the travel department help you.

If you don't plan a trip for the family this summer get set to have fun in the sun in your own backyard. If you need lounge chairs, barbecue tables, trellises, fences, gates or "what-have-you" consult Forrest Lumber company's new man. He not only can build your out-door yard accessories but is an expert cabinet man.

One cent sale on wallpaper is being offered by Robert Cox and his crew at Cox's Lumber company. In fact, you'll find "hundreds" of values at Cox's this week. Go adventuring through this firm's Cook's Paint and Wallpaper ad. You'll be sorry if you don't take advantage of the values offered by Cox's.

"The biggest little store in town"—Joseph's—is holding open house Saturday to show off all the new equipment and the enlarged space. The store which is outstanding in many ways for its services to the public, has doubled in size in the last year and is now better equipped and arranged to take care of the hordes of people who patronize it seven days a week. Twenty-five baskets of groceries and special prizes, to be given away at hours announced in a large ad in this issue of the paper, refreshments and souvenirs are to be features of the day. "Jolly" Joe and his cute and most capable little wife are inviting all you folks to the opening Saturday.

Sellers, the market manager at Hilway Grocery and Market, has worked up some "extra special" specials in his department. "Oleo" is a good buy come Friday and Saturday. Read the ad for listings, ladies!

Baked apples in a can! What next? Mohoto and Dick Allen showed us this newest product, gave us a sample, and after trying it, we heartily recommend that you femmes find room on your pantry shelves for several cans. No need to tell you how handy it will be having such an item ready not only for emergencies but for pop and the kids. Mohoto and Dick, who are operating the Post Kash and Hilway Grocery in the middle of Main St., are striving to secure many such food items for your family.

The three way dress is a new innovation. You'll find this most practical garment, which can be used for a brunch coat, a maternity dress or just a plain practical all-purpose cotton frock, at Haws Department store. Call for details.

GIRL MEETS BOYS—Little Mary Beth Bryant, four-year-old daughter of a Baylor University employee, makes friends with two new boys on the Waco campus. The boys are the 10-week-old male cubs of Josephine, one of Baylor's three adult bear mascots. The cubs were born Jan. 17 and got their first trip to the big outdoors when they were taken from their cage for this picture last week.

The $166 was the gross take for the play. The audience filled the auditorium and some were standing. Senior class members described the play as a "huge success."

Special hits with the audience were Catherine Carter as the hefty forewoman and Charles Bowen as the overgrown coward, Rex Simmons.

Ushers were Jimmy Smith, Calvin Store, Bennie Wilks, Robert Craig, Boyd Bowen, Wanda Runnels, Melba Carpenter, and Henrietta Cary. Wayland Hood and Don Howell were stage managers. George Samson Named Post Chamber of Commerce Head

George Samson was elected president of the local Chamber of Commerce at an organization meeting Tuesday night in the City Hall.

Seven new directors were chosen by the 60 or more business men present in a move to completely reorganize the practically defunct chamber. They are Samson, O. L. Weakley, Tom Power, Shelley Camp, Bob Collier, Homer McCrary and A. B. Haws, Jr.

Weakley acted as chairman of the meeting and discussed the need for a chamber of commerce in a growing town. He also pointed out the need for a paid secretary. The group will have their first meeting tomorrow morning in the city hall to make plans for the hiring of a secretary.

Several spoke on the desirability of a chamber of commerce here and pledged liberal monthly contributions. Some gave their dues for the entire year.

Although this is the year to elect only four directors, the incumbent board asked that all new directors be chosen to make a clean sweep of the reorganization.

Samson is outstanding in chamber of commerce work, having formerly been a CC secretary. He has been active here for years in chamber of commerce projects. When he prepared the Garza county agriculture exhibit, he won first place in the state fair. He has been outstanding in preparing agriculture exhibits for county fairs.

Garzas Purchase 157 More License Plates

Garza countians bought 157 more license plates between Feb. 1 and April 1 this year than they did during the same period in 1949, Carl Cedarholm, deputy tax assessor-collector announced.

Passenger automobiles increased in the county by 192, as shown by the sale of 1489 licenses this year against 1297 last year. Four more commercial trucks were licensed here, making a total of 211.

Farm trucks decreased by 30 this year, dropping from 176 in 1949 to 146 in 1950. Two more house trailers, making a total of nine, were licensed. Ten less regular trailers were registered, making 46 in Garza.

Only half as many motorcycles, five, were licensed this year. Cedarholm reported. Nine dealers' licenses were sold against five last year.

Five hundred extra plates were ordered but did not arrive before the supply ran out.

The REA approved a $193,000 loan, covering 138 miles and serving 265 consumers in the district. New line will also be constructed in Borden, Kent, Stonewall and Scurry.

R. H. Tate Denies Water Shortage

R. H. Tate, city water superintendent, said this week that there is no danger of the city running out of water, as far as he knows.

Plans are underway to drill two more wells, Tate said, but the present water situation is not in the least serious.

Post now has its first windmill. A well used for irrigation purposes on the H. A. Caywood property is now being pumped by a windmill. This is not a city well—all city water comes from out on the plains.

Close City Baptists To Have Revival

A revival meeting will begin at the Friendship Baptist church at Close City Sunday. The Rev. R. E. Bratton, pastor, will do the preaching and Mrs. Will Teaff will direct the choir.

GETTING OUT
On the LIMB
by EDDIE the EDITOR

Everybody but me has been knowing for six weeks that next Sunday is Easter but as I have worn a tie only two or three times in my adult life, it didn't dawn on me until just now what I've been missing.

The women—God love 'em—get all het up each year about getting a new Easter outfit. For the past 40 years, I've struggled along in my ignorance without even a new pair of socks on that day.

My socks are usually all worn out by that time anyway, since I get my supply each year off the Christmas tree.

Lately, I've had time to do a little reading and looking through some magazines and newspapers. I've come to realize that men need an Easter ensemble as well as women, only probably more so.

Me, I bought a new coat and several pairs of slacks some time back from a local men's store, but the time never has been right for me to get them out of hock. It's been so long since I ordered the coat, a brown tweed which appears yellow to the natural eye, that I'm really not sure it is in style now.

I see by the Dallas paper that there are no revolutionary changes in men's coats. I never have found much change in mine, or in my pants either.

This article was written by the woman fashion editor and she gave a lot of good advice that I was particularly glad to get hold of. For instance, there will be more of the two-button coats with a longer lapel available.

The double breasted suit coat, she says, has two popular versions. The six-button long model is worn with the middle button fastened. Young men like the long roll of the lapels of the four button suit, known as the two-button front, the lower one to button.

Them are her words. Logical, too. Anybody would know that you only buttoned one button out of four when you called the front a two-button deal.

Another remark in this Dallas article, I won't take too much issue with is, "Draped clothing is still popular in this region where man likes his clothes easy." Exactly what she meant by that who knows?

This woman knows all about men's clothes and their likes and dislikes. I think she is a Miss. She says there is leeway in the length of the trousers but most men like a slight break or none the younger he is, the less he likes. A big man with big feet, she cautions, needs a slight break. Judging from all this, I would say my coat had better have a medium-slight break, if my new slacks don't.

This fashion article insinuates that women have come to prefer blonds and that's where I fit in, too, with my blond hair. Suits are now being made, I understand, in blond tones. These range from pale gray through sand and smoke.

Now I realize that nobody in Garza county has to go to any trouble to get a sandy look and a cigar is a good smoke. But to young men like Junior Richardson and Alex Webb who always have to look their best, I have this information to pass on:

"Aspen or sage green, a virile blue green, first seen at ski resorts, is a smart new color conservative enough for suits as well as sports-wear."

Let me tell you, boys, now is the time to begin letting Nora and Jo wear last year's navy blue while you swagger out in aspen or sage green. You will never regret it.

Present Attitude Toward Workers over 65 Will Create Problems

NEW YORK CITY—With a downward trend in the business cycle in the not too distant future, I am concerned about what will happen in the employment market to workers over forty—to say nothing of those sixty-five years and older. Assuming our present attitude and policy toward men over forty continues, we will have a real social problem.

Population Trends
One hundred years ago, we were a nation of youngsters in short pants. Our population is, however, gradually growing old.

Mortality tables show that the average life expectancy has increased from about 48 years in 1900 to around 65 years in 1946. For example, the U. S. Bureau of Census reports indicate that at the turn of the century, only one in 25 persons was 65 or older, or about 4 per cent of the population. By 1940, almost 7 per cent of our population, the 65 and over group composed the 1940 census will probably reveal a good 9 per cent of our population in this older age bracket.

Assuming normal fertility and mortality and with immigration laws remaining constant, this has serious possibilities. Add to this those between the 45 and 65 bracket, project to the year 2000, and you will find 40 per cent of the population over 45! This maturing of our population is the result of advances in medical science, a declining birth rate, a markedly reduced number of young immigrants coming in to our country, higher living standards resulting in a less hazardous physical life, etc.

Economic Problems of Over-Age Workers
There are already today a number of men over 45 who are jobless and tramping the streets. The Forty-Plus club can give you some soul-shaking stories. In 1900, 65 per cent of the men 65 or over were employed. In 1949, there were but 45.6 per cent with jobs. This is largely the result of the so-called "welfare legislation" due to which employers don't want to get loaded with older men who demand more unemployment insurance and who are more liable to accidents and sickness.

Back on the farm, the older worker could assume the role of manager and let younger hands do the more arduous tasks. The basic employment problem of old-age workers is something more than a problem of business cycles. It is the problem of the slowing down of physical and mental powers after 40: loss of dexterity, poor coordination, weakening eyesight, greater fatigue. But the conveyor belt continues to move just as fast whether you are young or old.

Prejudice Against Old Workers
Too many employees seem to identify oldness with a certain fixed age regardless of individual differences. There is no question but what the various compensation plans set up to protect the worker often militate against him because, in the words of one official, "Older employees add substantially to the cost of workmen's compensation, group insurance, and other welfare plans." Employment managers also tend to look upon older workers as unable to learn new methods, hence they are poor employment risks.

Psychologists tell us that while there is some slight decline in motor reactions and manual dexterity, the capacity to learn at eighty is as great as at twenty.

This suggests that the older worker may not be such a poor investment after all. As a matter of fact, the Bureau of Labor Statistics claims that the older worker has a lower absentee rate, is less prone to accidents, and is more stable, and more loyal to his firm. Further, the older worker possesses a background of experience and maturity that often cannot possibly be matched by the younger worker.

Seniority Rules
What would help men over 40 years of age most, is to have the Unions revise their seniority rules. Certainly this whole problem could well become an effective political football—and in fact already is. If private enterprise does not solve this problem, then the Government surely will step in. Here then is another challenge for management! Let's hope management takes some constructive measures before it is too late!

We are really getting rather tired of the tactics of certain headline-hunting members of Congress and their demands for FBI and State Department files. For about the only time in our life we agree with President Truman in withholding them. It is our belief that Congress is the legislative branch of the government and that perhaps investigations are better carried on by more qualified branches such as judicial or executive. J. Edgar Hoover is a longtime public servant who has done a good job in his field. We believe he knows better how to handle his work than some members of Congress who should be making laws, not enforcing them. We feel pretty certain that there are some Communists and a number of fellow-travelers in high places. We also feel it is the place of a duly constituted agency to ferret out these spies. Better that Senator McCarthy and others in Congress devote their time to removing wartime excise taxes, equalizing income taxes, passing a uniform divorce law for the protection of children, and in general attending to their Constitutional business. About the only thing we can do locally is write to Congressman George Mahon and Senators Johnson and Connally and give them our views. After all, we are paying for the investigations.

What Our Contemporaries Are Saying:
IT SEZ HERE—A few years ago a wise guy with whiskers invented the telephone, and thus introduced an otherwise happy people to such aggravating distractions as wrong numbers, party lines, souped up idle chatter and Don Ameche. It was a luxury item, and as such it got testimonials from all the big shots; then it became a necessity, of course. But here in Dallas we are glad to say the telephone is definitely not a luxury item. Nobody in his right mind would consider cranking up Alexander Graham Bell's original creation for any purpose short of a life-or-death emergency. In our pioneer way, this is good because it keeps the mother-in-law off the other end, ends inconsequential teenager gabfests, and keeps the wires clear for REA hum, police calls and Sunday night give-away radio programs. But patrons should try to look on the brighter side of the telephone business here, especially when the receiver and hand-cranking box comes apart in your lap and you're trying to get it together to finish a conversation. Just remember that if the Southwestern Associated Telephone Company can successfully find a way to run a telephone system that doesn't work, there is always hope that someone can build a hydrogen bomb that won't work either. If only the government will employ the high brass of the telephone company to apply its talent and experience to fixing an H-Bomb that won't go off, then we won't feel so badly about having to employ a pony express rider, maintain two carrier pigeons and one Indian smoke artist who now carry our messages to a waiting world.—The Ralls Banner

There is no breakdown as to their frequency in different parts of Texas, but an idea can be obtained from records they have on other states. In April, over a given period of years, there were 20 in Louisiana and 60 in Kansas. In November, over the same period, there were five tornadoes in Kansas and 12 in Louisiana.

TEXANS IN WASHINGTON
By TEX EASLEY
Associated Press Washington Service.

WASHINGTON, April 5 (AP)—Texans can expect five days of tornadoes a year, the U. S. Weather Bureau advises.

This and other information about tornadoes was supplied by the weather bureau and Federal Communications Commission to Rep. Lindley Beekworth of Gladewater.

Beekworth, prompted by the storm of a few weeks ago which did considerable damage in Upshur County and nearby Louisiana, had asked the agencies if the warning service could be improved.

"I wasn't criticizing them," Beekworth said. "I was wanting to see what they are doing, and if they couldn't improve the warning service."

He found that there is close cooperation between the weather bureau and FCC in use of radio communications to get warnings to isolated communities as well as the larger towns, and with the Red Cross in relief work.

Officials of the agencies acknowledged the warning system isn't perfect. Sometimes a storm will originate in a remote area and move into populated sections before anyone knows it's coming.

The Weather Bureau's storm expert, I. R. Tannehill, says a tornado and a "twister" are the same thing, and both come under the general classification of cyclones, "like a horse comes under the heading of quadruped."

His report continued: Hurricanes generate out in the Gulf of Mexico, and are different. They are not so violent, but last much longer. A "water spout" is a land tornado that has moved out to sea and stirred up the water. Sometimes "water spouts" move inland and become regular tornadoes.

Tornadoes move along at a rate of 25 to 40 miles an hour. In an ominous funnel with the point at the ground, cutting a swath some 1,000 feet wide. They take about 30 seconds to pass over a given point.

Hurricanes approach at a rate of 12 miles an hour, and may extend over a breadth of 200 miles. They build up slowly in intensity, with the maximum winds being reached several hours after the first strong gales. They have an "eye," or lull in the middle, which may last about an hour; the wind then returns with a blast at its full strength, or even greater than when it had suddenly ceased. Then the wind gradually diminishes.

If you find a tornado headed your way, Tannehill advises: If the funnel is coming straight toward you—appearing to get bigger and bigger—run to the right. (Run to the left, if you are facing the oncoming funnel.) If you are somewhat to the left of it, lose no time in getting much farther to the left.

A gutter or any depression is better than nothing, if you find yourself caught. If you are in a cellar, an excavation or any such size pit, get to the southwest corner. That holds true wherever you may be in the country; the wind in the funnel is moving from southwest to northeast.

Incidentally, the weather bureau knows of only two men who have lived to see up the inside of a tornado funnel.

A farmer in Oklahoma saw a storm coming and ran for his cyclone cellar. He made it—but just barely. As he looked up to pull the door shut the center of the funnel, with its clear, partial vacuum, passed directly over him. He was so scared he was unable to give the weather bureau much helpful information. A Kansas farmer had a similar experience.

Since 1880 the weather bureau has kept a close account of tornadoes in Texas. In a 60-year period they recorded the following total members of tornadoes for each month: January, 15; February, 11; March, 34; April, 77; May, 74; June, 35; July, 24; August, 17; September, 4; October, 12; November, 14; December, 11.

As Tannehill points out, Texas is so big that you have to keep in mind the part of the state you are talking about when you talk about the frequency of tornadoes.

In the north central, western and Panhandle sections they are more likely to occur in April, May and June. In the Gulf coastal areas they are more likely in the late fall.

Any erroneous reflection upon the character of any person or firm appearing in these columns will be gladly and promptly corrected upon being brought to the attention of the management.

WASHINGTON, April 5 (AP)—Texans can expect five days of tornadoes a year, the U. S. Weather Bureau advises.

This and other information about tornadoes was supplied by the weather bureau and Federal Communications Commission to Rep. Lindley Beekworth of Gladewater.

Beekworth, prompted by the storm of a few weeks ago which did considerable damage in Upshur County and nearby Louisiana, had asked the agencies if the warning service could be improved.

"I wasn't criticizing them," Beekworth said. "I was wanting to see what they are doing, and if they couldn't improve the warning service."

He found that there is close cooperation between the weather bureau and FCC in use of radio communications to get warnings to isolated communities as well as the larger towns, and with the Red Cross in relief work.

Officials of the agencies acknowledged the warning system isn't perfect. Sometimes a storm will originate in a remote area and move into populated sections before anyone knows it's coming.

The Weather Bureau's storm expert, I. R. Tannehill, says a tornado and a "twister" are the same thing, and both come under the general classification of cyclones, "like a horse comes under the heading of quadruped."

His report continued: Hurricanes generate out in the Gulf of Mexico, and are different. They are not so violent, but last much longer. A "water spout" is a land tornado that has moved out to sea and stirred up the water. Sometimes "water spouts" move inland and become regular tornadoes.

Tornadoes move along at a rate of 25 to 40 miles an hour. In an ominous funnel with the point at the ground, cutting a swath some 1,000 feet wide. They take about 30 seconds to pass over a given point.

Hurricanes approach at a rate of 12 miles an hour, and may extend over a breadth of 200 miles. They build up slowly in intensity, with the maximum winds being reached several hours after the first strong gales. They have an "eye," or lull in the middle, which may last about an hour; the wind then returns with a blast at its full strength, or even greater than when it had suddenly ceased. Then the wind gradually diminishes.

If you find a tornado headed your way, Tannehill advises: If the funnel is coming straight toward you—appearing to get bigger and bigger—run to the right. (Run to the left, if you are facing the oncoming funnel.) If you are somewhat to the left of it, lose no time in getting much farther to the left.

A gutter or any depression is better than nothing, if you find yourself caught. If you are in a cellar, an excavation or any such size pit, get to the southwest corner. That holds true wherever you may be in the country; the wind in the funnel is moving from southwest to northeast.

Incidentally, the weather bureau knows of only two men who have lived to see up the inside of a tornado funnel.

A farmer in Oklahoma saw a storm coming and ran for his cyclone cellar. He made it—but just barely. As he looked up to pull the door shut the center of the funnel, with its clear, partial vacuum, passed directly over him. He was so scared he was unable to give the weather bureau much helpful information. A Kansas farmer had a similar experience.

Since 1880 the weather bureau has kept a close account of tornadoes in Texas. In a 60-year period they recorded the following total members of tornadoes for each month: January, 15; February, 11; March, 34; April, 77; May, 74; June, 35; July, 24; August, 17; September, 4; October, 12; November, 14; December, 11.

As Tannehill points out, Texas is so big that you have to keep in mind the part of the state you are talking about when you talk about the frequency of tornadoes.

In the north central, western and Panhandle sections they are more likely to occur in April, May and June. In the Gulf coastal areas they are more likely in the late fall.

Any erroneous reflection upon the character of any person or firm appearing in these columns will be gladly and promptly corrected upon being brought to the attention of the management.

Let's Go To Church Sunday
EVERY SUNDAY . . . Easter is more to every grateful heart than the thrill of wearing smart new clothes . . . more than gladness that the long Winter is over and Spring has come again . . . more than looking forward to the full blooming of a happy Summer!

It is the renewal of hope in every heart that life can be good, a renewal of faith in the future, an acknowledgment of the joyous reassurance in those immortal words, "Let not your heart be troubled, neither let it be afraid." The glorious words that have rolled down the centuries bringing solace and relief to the burdened, are needed in today's confused and anxious world. To Him who said them, let us pay the tribute of our presence in His House. He is Risen! Come to Church on Easter!

Minute Editorial
We are really getting rather tired of the tactics of certain headline-hunting members of Congress and their demands for FBI and State Department files. For about the only time in our life we agree with President Truman in withholding them. It is our belief that Congress is the legislative branch of the government and that perhaps investigations are better carried on by more qualified branches such as judicial or executive. J. Edgar Hoover is a longtime public servant who has done a good job in his field. We believe he knows better how to handle his work than some members of Congress who should be making laws, not enforcing them. We feel pretty certain that there are some Communists and a number of fellow-travelers in high places. We also feel it is the place of a duly constituted agency to ferret out these spies. Better that Senator McCarthy and others in Congress devote their time to removing wartime excise taxes, equalizing income taxes, passing a uniform divorce law for the protection of children, and in general attending to their Constitutional business. About the only thing we can do locally is write to Congressman George Mahon and Senators Johnson and Connally and give them our views. After all, we are paying for the investigations.

What Our Contemporaries Are Saying:
IT SEZ HERE—A few years ago a wise guy with whiskers invented the telephone, and thus introduced an otherwise happy people to such aggravating distractions as wrong numbers, party lines, souped up idle chatter and Don Ameche. It was a luxury item, and as such it got testimonials from all the big shots; then it became a necessity, of course. But here in Dallas we are glad to say the telephone is definitely not a luxury item. Nobody in his right mind would consider cranking up Alexander Graham Bell's original creation for any purpose short of a life-or-death emergency. In our pioneer way, this is good because it keeps the mother-in-law off the other end, ends inconsequential teenager gabfests, and keeps the wires clear for REA hum, police calls and Sunday night give-away radio programs. But patrons should try to look on the brighter side of the telephone business here, especially when the receiver and hand-cranking box comes apart in your lap and you're trying to get it together to finish a conversation. Just remember that if the Southwestern Associated Telephone Company can successfully find a way to run a telephone system that doesn't work, there is always hope that someone can build a hydrogen bomb that won't work either. If only the government will employ the high brass of the telephone company to apply its talent and experience to fixing an H-Bomb that won't go off, then we won't feel so badly about having to employ a pony express rider, maintain two carrier pigeons and one Indian smoke artist who now carry our messages to a waiting world.—The Ralls Banner

There is no breakdown as to their frequency in different parts of Texas, but an idea can be obtained from records they have on other states. In April, over a given period of years, there were 20 in Louisiana and 60 in Kansas. In November, over the same period, there were five tornadoes in Kansas and 12 in Louisiana.

Walter B. Holland Home on West Main Features Comfort

Mrs. Walter B. Holland will often be found in the master bedroom of her new ranch-style white frame house on West Main in street.

Reason for this is 5-month-old Scharlene who arrived too late to speak for a room of her own. Her crib is an essential piece of furniture in this 12 x 12 foot room. Another item of furniture especially her own is the chest of drawers the Hollands built in the wall to hold her clothes.

A cabinet is on top, then an open shelf, then four deep drawers to hold Scharlene's belongings. Another unusual feature of the master bedroom is the 8 x 4-foot closet. It opens with double doors and besides holding rows of clothing on hangers and shoes and hats on shelves, it has enough space for Mrs. Holland to store her sewing machine out of sight and dust.

A back room on the northeast corner of the house, this bedroom is furnished with a walnut bedroom suite, consisting of a double bed, Mr. and Mrs. chest with large mirror, night stand and bedroom chairs.

Throughout the house, Mrs. Holland used quiet, unobtrusive wallpaper. In the master bedroom, it is a faint white floral vertical stripe on a pale aqua background.

"I've tried papering with large, bright flowers before," explained Mrs. Holland, "and they just kill everything. You can't even hang a picture."

The bedspread is yellow quilted satin. Upholstery on the rocker and straight chair are yellow and yellow chenille throw rugs are on the floor.

Mr. and Mrs. Holland drew up their own plans and Robert Cox made them a working blueprint. Each feature of the house and all the interior decorating was planned by them.

The southeast bedroom, in front of the master bedroom, belongs to Marcia Dean, the Holland's 8-year-old daughter. It is 12 x 12 feet in dimension with a 6 x 4-foot closet. Marcia's dolls fill up a number of the closet shelves.

Her wallpaper is feminine and dainty. In keeping with the quiet tone of the interior of the house, it is pale pink with outlined roses. Her furniture is in a natural finish and includes a twin-size poster bed, a dresser, chest and toy shelves. She also boasts a rolltop desk.

Marcia's chair is upholstered in old-fashioned, small-patterned chintz. Her fuchsia quilted spread matches the shade on her floor lamp and like the lampshade is trimmed with a flounce of the chintz. White priscilla curtains are at the windows.

All the closet doors and most of the doors in the house are slab doors, of gumwood.

A 16 x 4-foot hallway connects the sleeping wing of the house with the living area. It is papered in a textured pattern of beige and gray tones, identical to the wallpaper in the living room. The hall features a large storage closet, holding everything from fishing tackle to blankets.

In the 8 x 8-foot bathroom, west of the master bedroom and opposite the guest room, Mrs. Holland relaxed her ban against splashy florals. Huge roses with green leaves on a white background paper the walls above the rose tile wainscoting.

Floor is covered with green linoleum. Bathroom fixtures are white. The hot water heater is placed above the linen closet. Below it is the traditional built-in dirty clothes hamper. A green plastic curtain is at the window.

The color scheme in the guest bedroom is pale blue and dusty rose. Dimensions are 11 x 12 feet. Wall paper is blue with a shaded pattern. A rose chenille spread is on the double bed. A walnut chest, cedar chest and vanity are included in the furnishings. White priscillas cover the windows. Guest room closet is 4 x 4 feet.

Mrs. Holland's kitchen is another unique room. It too opens of the hall. Long and narrow, dimensions here are 16 x 8 feet. Floor is covered with green linoleum. Wainscoting is yellow tile board. Above the wainscoting is a green wallpaper in a criss-cross pattern.

Cabinets in the kitchen are natural-color, because Mrs. Holland finds this much easier to clean than ordinary white. In West Texas. Cabinets are built in on two walls. A double sink is on the back wall and the work counter and cabinet is built all-around the corner.

An electric range and refrigerator are among Mrs. Holland's kitchen appliances. A small breakfast set is in the kitchen which is completed with a small broom closet with storage space above it. The back-

Joe Lewis picked Waco, to make a decision that probably is far more important than any he ever won in the prize ring.

The great fighter said at Waco he would not attempt a comeback, to try to regain the heavyweight championship he gave up voluntarily.

A $1,000-a-day offer to tour with the Dailey Brothers Circus no doubt influenced his decision to stay an undefeated, retired champion.

The fight game to a lot of people is a cheap, racket-infested business—second rate fighters being palmed off as championship contenders, set-ups being offered as sacrifices to build synthetic reputations.

For more than a decade Louis ruled it in a truly magnificent manner. He met all comers and beat them all. He fought anybody his managers signed, fought some more than once.

An explosive punch kept him world's champion. And in all the fights in which he defended his title—more than any other champion—Louis probably hated only one opponent. That was Max Schmeling, the German who was the only person to beat him during his professional career—just before the Detroit Bomber won the title. That second Louis-Schmeling fight lasted less than a round and Schmeling fell to the canvas, quivering and broken.

Because he was a great champion, such a credit to his race, it would have been a shame for the 35-year-old Brown Bomber to risk being beaten by a fighter whose only asset was youth.

And that is why his decision at Waco may be far more important than any he ever won in the prize ring. It kept a great fighter a great undefeated champion.

Fred Johnson, Michigan State's all-around track star, piled up more points in the Central Collegiate Conference indoor meet than five competing schools.

Cotton for the Mills of China Poses Problem for Mao Tze-Tung's Communists

WASHINGTON April 5. (AP)—The spindles of China's cotton mills are whirling slower and slower for lack of raw cotton. That's bad for Mao Tze-tung.

It will greatly complicate the problems of his communist government. The Office of Foreign Agriculture Relations of the U. S. Department of Agriculture reports that China's mill operations this year will be no more than 45 per cent of last year's level. The seriousness of this lies in the fact that cotton textile production is by far China's largest manufacturing industry.

The cotton shortage is caused by two factors: (1) Chinese farmers aren't raising as much cotton as they used to and (2) cotton imports are declining drastically. Cotton acreage has dropped from 9,300,000 in the 1937-1938 period to 5,300,000 this year. Farmers are finding it more profitable to raise grain.

Agriculture department observers in China estimate that the Chinese cotton crop this year won't exceed 1,700,000 bales. This is one of the smallest crops in years, less than half the production in the 1936-1938 seasons. To keep the mills running at the present rate, 1,575,000 bales would be needed for the year. But the mills don't get all of the native cotton crop.

Normally about 1 million bales a year are used in homes to make padded winter clothes.

The Chinese Communist regime hopes to cut down the home use of cotton this year to 825,000 bales. Then it hopes to import 400,000 bales. This would provide a total of 1,225,000 bales for the mills—still far short of current rate of use.

But the Agriculture department men see little chance of any such volume of imports. They estimate that no more than 150,000 bales will come from the United States. And the prospects look even dimmer elsewhere. World prices of cotton are high, and except in this country supplies are scarce. India has announced it will permit only a very limited export of cotton. China uses little of the Egyptian type.

China's position as an importer is unfavorable at this time. The Nationalist blockade of ports has discouraged shippers. The country has little foreign money on credit. And exporters in other countries don't like the terms of present contracts to supply goods to China. They don't feel too sure they will get their money.

The United States in post-war years has supplied about 300,000 bales of cotton a year through the Economic Cooperation administration—all given free for sale to the mills. This country is not helping Communist China through ECA. The mill owners are going to have to pay with dollars for whatever American cotton they get. At this time, according to the department's men, Mao's government is exerting all kinds of devious pressures on the mill owners to make them use their hoarded dollar reserves to buy cotton in the United States.

Post Has Changed Since 1915, Says Mrs. B. K. Bowen, but Sand Remains

Post has changed a lot since 1915 when Mrs. B. K. Bowen came here with her husband and family from McCulloch county, but the sandstorms remain the same.

At least, they are almost the same, although Mrs. Bowen cannot remember one in recent years to compare to a two-day duster that occurred while her children were in school.

"The sand blew and blew for two days and nights," recalled Mrs. Bowen. "On the third morning when we got up, the only clean surfaces we could see were where our heads had been on the pillows that night."

There was no natural gas in Post then and very little wood in this part of the country to burn, so the Bowens were burning coal. The family swept up the sand in the coal shovel, loaded it into the scuttle and carried it out of the house.

Mrs. Bowen was born Mattie Dockum. She was reared in Erath county and lived in Concho and McCulloch before coming here.

"I was always used to trees and then when we came here and there was nothing but this bleak country as far as the eye could see—I'd hate to tell you what I thought about it," she said.

"When the sandstorms came," she recalled, "I was ready to leave."

Tiny, alert Mrs. Bowen was 80, October 22. She is the mother of nine living children and had three children to die in infancy. She has numerous grandchildren and 14 great-grandchildren.

Her children are Mrs. Noah Reeves of Snyder, Aaron Bowen of Stacy, Willie Bowen of Brownwood, and Charlie, Mitchell, Lee Oscar, Mrs. Lell Pearce and Mrs. W. W. Stephens, all of Post. Her husband died in January 1949.

When the family came here, only three of the children were married. They lived on a farm on the plains but during the cold winter, they moved to town so the children could attend school. When the weather got warm enough for them to go back and forth, the family moved back to the farm.

At that time, there were very few residences in Post. The jail, courthouse, mill and three or four stores were here. C. W. Post had "built himself a fine house here," Mrs. Bowen recalled.

"There were very few residences here. In fact, where I'm living now was completely out in the country," she said.

She recalls that the year they moved here, every day wagonload after wagonload of lumber passed on the way to the plains. Houses were built there for the first time and that country was just beginning to be settled.

Mrs. Bowen remembered the building of Close City. At first, she said, there were no frame houses there, just tents. A storm came and tore them all to pieces, leaving a bunch of rags. Hence the name, Ragtown. At that time, there was no schoolhouse there and school was kept in the church.

Mrs. Bowen's son, Mitchell, went into the army during the first World War. Just as he was about to be shipped overseas, the Armistice was declared. Sugar was hard to get, Mrs. Bowen recalls, and they had to eat cornbread for breakfast.

"I've never witnessed such a winter as this one," Mrs. Bowen declared. "We usually have some rain and snow. One time the snow was on the ground a month before it melted. Always before the last two or three years we have had rain in the fall usually right at cotton picking time."

The Bowens confined their crops to cotton and feed, never planting much oats or wheat.

Mrs. Bowen is a member of the Tel Sunday school class as often as she can.

There wasn't much to do here when the Bowens first came, Mrs. Bowen said. Their children weren't allowed to go out on school nights and about all there was to do was go to church and Sunday school and to home singings occasionally.

"Children are as different now as they were when mine were young as daylight and dark," Mrs. Bowen stated. "Now parents mind their children, instead of children minding their parents. The children are not to blame. They are not polite or mannerly any more."

Post has certainly changed in every respect, Mrs. Bowen feels. There is now a large number of houses and stores here and people have something to do every night. Even the sandstorms are not quite as bad, she says.

Mr. and Mrs. Tom Garner, grandson-in-law and granddaughter of Mrs. Bowen, live with her in her home in north Post.

FOODS FOR SPRING MEALS—

Membership of the Mystic Sewing club is varied, being made up of women of different ages from Post and surrounding communities. They meet twice monthly and sew.

Several members are this week sharing some of their favorite recipes with readers of the Post Dispatch.

Mrs. Iven Clary has a favorite salad recipe which she describes as a pineapple, cherry salad. Ingredients are:

- 1 3 oz. pk. Philadelphia cream cheese
- 1 cup mayonnaise
- 1 cup cream, whipped
- 1/2 cup maraschino cherries
- 1 No. 2 can crushed pineapple, well-drained
- 2 1/2 cups diced marshmallows
- 1/2 cup green cherries

Combine the cheese and mayonnaise, blending well. When smooth, fold in cream, fruit and marshmallows. Pour into one-quart tray and freeze. Serve on lettuce leaves.

Mrs. B. C. Henderson presents a very popular salad recipe, that for raw cranberry salad. It calls for:

- 2 packages gelatin
- 1 pound cranberries
- 2 oranges
- 2 cups sugar
- 1 cup nuts

Grind cranberries and oranges in food chopper. Mix with sugar and nuts and add to congealed gelatin. Keep in ice box until time to serve.

Mrs. Odean Cummings' recipe for hot rolls is a prime favorite with her husband. She likes it too. Ingredients include:

- 1/4 cup sugar
- 1/4 cup shortening
- 2 cups milk
- 1 cake yeast
- 1/2 teaspoon salt
- 1/2 teaspoon baking powder
- sifted flour

Mix sugar, shortening and milk and boil together in a saucepan. Allow to cool and crumble in one cake yeast. Add enough flour to make a thick batter. Put in a large container and let rise for two hours.

Take out of container, add baking powder and salt with enough flour so that the dough will not stick to the hands. Set back to rise for two more hours. Make into rolls and brush top with melted shortening. Let rise an hour, then put in over and cook.

Now that strawberries are in season, Mrs. Dan Cockrum, another Mystic Sewing club member, suggests an angel berry pie. Here ingredients are:

- 6 egg whites
- 2 cups sugar
- 1 teaspoon vanilla
- 1 teaspoon vinegar
- 1 cup whipping cream
- almond extract
- 1 pt. strawberries

Grease a 9-inch pie plate and sprinkle it with a complete coating of flour. Beat egg whites with salt to a stiffness but not dry. Add one cup sugar gradually, beating after each addition. Add vanilla. Alternately with the remaining sugar add one teaspoon vinegar, beating as you go.

Put meringue into pie plate, smoothing it into a pile, higher in the middle. Bake for 30 minutes at 275 degrees F, then for 30 minutes at 300 degrees F. Cool. Whip cream stiff and sweeten to taste. Flavor with almond extract and spread on pie.

Cut or mash strawberries and arrange on cream. Do NOT put this pie in the ice box. Cut as any pie, loosening edges with a spatula.

Mrs. Lester Nichols' recipe for upside down cake is not only delicious, but a boon to the busy housewife who has not time to make an icing. Ingredients include:

- 3 tablespoons butter
- 1/2 cup brown sugar
- 1 egg
- 1/2 cup sugar
- 1 cup pastry flour
- 1 teaspoon baking powder
- 1/4 cup milk
- 1 tablespoon melted shortening
- 1 tablespoon vanilla
- 8 slices pineapple.

Melt butter in heavy frying pan. Add brown sugar and stir until melted. Let cool while

Navy Protects Electric Gadgets

WASHINGTON, April 5—(AP)—A Navy scientist says private industry can profitably borrow a page from the Navy's book on how to protect electrical equipment from fungi and moisture.

Dr. Walter N. Ezekiel says electrical equipment in transit or stored in Washington, Philadelphia or other places with temperate climates are subject to the same fungi or moisture damage sometimes seen on the electrical power drives of guns in the tropics or aboard ships.

And such damage can largely be avoided, declares Ezekiel, chief mycologist of the Navy's Bureau of Ordnance. Writing in "Electrical Manufacturing" magazine, the scientist says an important factor in preventing such deterioration is the use of materials naturally resistant to moisture and fungus in electrical equipment of all kinds.

He lists as "fungus-encouraging" such products as starch sizing, cotton, paper and cardboard, and plastics utilizing these materials as fillers. Ceramics, nylon and plastics that are filled with either mica or glass are "inherently better materials that do not support growth," says Ezekiel.

County Agent Lewis Herron Warns Farmers, Ranchers to Control Bugs

County Agent Lewis Herron states that Guy E. Carpenter, service entomologist, has released a report saying that indications of the South Plains. Preliminary experiments indicate that the pest can be controlled, but whether it is practical for large scale use is not known.

"It may be a little early to start talking about grasshoppers," Herron said, "but farmers and ranchers are urged to be ready to stop them this year before they leave their egg beds. Once they begin moving out of the areas where they hatch, effective control becomes more difficult. Surveys show heavy infestation of grasshopper eggs in parts of West Texas."

The current cotton allotment makes it more important than ever that insects are not allowed to destroy crops, Herron reminded. He urged farmers to be on the lookout for insects as soon as the cotton comes up.

Thrips and aphid damage Texas cotton and there are possibilities of having one or both of these insects. The flea hopper does its damage after the cotton begins to square. Many are familiar with this insect from their experience last year.

"Remember," said Herron, "a sound cotton program leads to balanced production, lower costs, better cotton and higher profits. Insect control is one of the most important steps in such a program."

Mexican Soil Was Cultivated Years Ago

BERKELEY, Calif. April 5 (AP)—Intensive cultivation of Mexican soil was started 3,000 to 5,000 years ago, says Dr. Sherburne F. Cook of the University of California. Most experts have placed the time at about 2,000 years ago.

Basing his estimates on soil conditions, he says Mexico's ancient population was so big and the soil so cultivated that much of the land was near ruin long before the white man arrived.

Biometrics Is Plan For Selecting Flyers

RANDOLPH FIELD, April 5. —(AP)—The School of Aviation Medicine here is using higher mathematics to aid in solving its human flying problems. Mathematics is to be used to find out why some pilots live longer than others at high altitudes, how to select flyers with some immunity to blackouts at high altitudes and how to train flyers to stand higher altitudes.

The mathematics used for these purposes is known as biometrics. Randolph Field has the first and only biometrics department in medicine in the south and southwest. The mathematics does not tell how to train flyers, but after the training plans are made by doctors, it checks them against mathematical probabilities. The mathematics is likely to show which of several plans of training is most likely to succeed, or which is quickest.

Editor, Writer Rancher, Radio Man, Jake Trussell Is Also Jazz Expert

By WILLIAM C. BARNARD Associated Press Staff

KINGSVILLE, April 5.—No list of busy Texans would be complete without the name of Jake Trussell, a hefty human rocket of the ranch country.

The alert, friendly Trussell is sports editor, feature writer, reporter, columnist and assistant advertising manager for the weekly Kingsville Record.

In addition, he:

1. Manages his own stock farm.
 2. Writes, produces and takes the leading part in a sports radio show, three times a week.
 3. Conducts a weekly radio jazz program. The show is so popular it has 15 sponsors.
 4. Corresponds for several newspapers and the Associated Press.
 5. Writes articles regularly for national jazz magazines.
- Trussell, who wears boots and a moustache, travels at high speed whether walking, driving or playing a typewriter. Ed Erard, editor of the Kingsville Record, says of him: "I never in my life saw a man who could turn out more words in less time than Jake. When our day of publication gets close, Jake asks me: 'Well, Ed, how much space do I have this week?'"
- "When I tell him, he sits down at the typewriter and starts rattling out the words and doesn't stop until his allotted space is filled. He can turn out five or six columns of type as easily as some newspapermen can fill one. And it's always good reading. I think if I told him to go ahead and write the whole newspaper he might do it."

Erard, who has won fame in the Southwest with his own column of spicy satire, "Building Blox," added: "Jake knows everyone in this part of the country and doesn't miss any tricks. When something is going on, he hears about it."

Trussell, in his mid-thirties, is a graduate of the Texas College of Arts and Industries and settled down to his frantic pace at Kingsville after a hobo trip across the country during the depression.

"Got stranded in the California desert," he remembers, "and that cured me of traveling."

Nowadays Jake confines his trips to places like New Orleans for interviews with the leading lights of jazz. He seems to know them all and is a recognized authority on all forms of jazz from BeBop to the original Dixieland variety. He has more than 2,000 records in his personal collection of jazz at his ranch home.

In his breezy column "Brahma Bull" Jake presents interviews with everyone from fan dancers to preachers and dotes on feuds with fellow columnists all over the region.

He will aggressively discuss almost anything in the column. Here are his alarming views on the card game, Canasta:

"There is nothing good about the game. It irritates the nervous, maddens the sane, drives the unlucky to suicide and the lucky to extreme braggadocio and bullying seldom if ever tolerated in any other form of alleged civilized entertainment."

"It is the first game in human history that combines all the worst features of bridge, poker, rummy, dice, old maid, spit-in-the-ocean, bridge, dominos, pool, down-the-river, bridge, washers, monopoly, horse shoes, shuffleboard, boxing, wrestling, judo, and bridge."

"Just before he was shot to death, Dr. Luscious Brindimple said any six-year-old child can master the game. I am looking for a six-year-old child to sit for me at my next canasta session."

Italian Schools Ban World War II

ROME April 5. —(AP)—World War II? What's that? Officially, Italy's postwar high school graduates have never heard of it. Nor, in the classroom, have they ever heard of Benito Mussolini.

For the past five years, in Italy's grammar schools and high schools, history has stopped in 1918. Allied Military Government first placed a ban on secondary school teaching a Fascist history and the events leading up to the war.

The occupation authorities wanted to avoid "classroom controversies." They ordered references to Mussolini and Fascism edited out of textbooks. Sometimes with the rough expedient of paper and paste. The ban has never been revoked, although Allied military rule ended with the Peace Treaty in 1947. An Education Ministry commission has been studying the problem of objective presentation in the classroom of the controversial Fascist era, but a spokesman said he does not know when they will finish the job.

Neil Gwynn Portrait May Be Big Fake

LONDON April 5. —(AP)—"Neil Gwynn" by Sir Peter Lely in the National Portrait Gallery may not be Neil after all, and it may not be by Sir Peter. Officials of the solid old government institution pondered this horrid possibility and began searching yellowed catalogues to find out where they stood.

The picture has hung there 39 years with a discreet label setting out that it shows the actress of Charles II's day who "attracted the favor of the king and had apartments in Whitehall," then his palace. But one gallery functionary admitted the identification may be a mistake.

"There are numerous portraits said to be of Neil Gwynn, but all differ," he said. "This one bears no resemblance to any."

Zebras Are too Lazy To Be Domesticated

NAIROBI, Kenya Colony April 5. —(AP)—You can tell a zebra by his stripes—and they mean he's lazy. Wild game authorities here say that though the zebra is many physical ways resembles a horse or mule, he has proven worthless as a domestic beast.

A zebra can be harnessed, they say, but just can't be induced to pull a load. He has no heart for the task and gives up without trying. Thousands of zebras are running around free in the African wilds, unwanted by humans because of this lazy streak.

Grass Fires, Baboons Bad As Partyliners

Big Bull Moose Holds Up Mail in Montana

WEST GLACIER, Mont. April 5. —(AP)—A big bull moose proved he could blockade the U. S. mail for 23 hours near here recently—but got a fatal bullet for his trouble. Mail Carrier Ralph Day and his jeep were halted just west of Glacier National park when he tried to get through to Polebridge with a load of letters.

The road was one way between deep snowbanks and the moose had no trouble preventing Day's advance—as a damaged radiator grill proved.

Day retreated to a telephone and called for help from park rangers. They tried shooting rifles into the air but the moose was unimpressed and darkness halted the argument. Next morning, the persistent critter still held the road. More bullets and buck shot were wasted in the air. Finally, a ranger had to put a finishing slug into the animal to get the mail through.

The moose was just as recalcitrant after death when its meat proved too tough and stringy for use on a hospital menu or school lunch programs.

Banana Plantations Ask Government Aid

TIBERIAS, Israel April 5. (AP)—The Israeli government is being asked to loan $560,000 to owners of banana plantations and vegetable growers in the Galilee district. The growers were hard-hit by the record-breaking snowstorms and cold wave which affected the Tiberias area and all of Israel early in February.

The banana plantation owners estimated their losses alone at over $1 million. Many banana trees were destroyed by strong wind and snowstorms. The tomato, potato and vegetable crops generally were wiped out, causing a severe shortage of such commodities in the Israeli market.

Home Demonstration Agent Gives Tips On Stopping Yellowing in Stored Linens

Homemakers often make an unpleasant discovery when they go to the storage closet for their favorite white cotton or linen goods.

They may find that sheets, curtains or tablecloths have been in storage too long and that the fabric isn't as white as it once was—may be yellowed in spots or even all over.

Then comes a very logical question, what can be done to restore the original whiteness? Mrs. Jewell Strasser, county home demonstration agent, advises trying the simplest method first. Launder the yellowed article carefully and hang it in the sun to bleach as it dries or dampen the discolored areas and spread it in the sun. If this method isn't practical or doesn't work, she recommends using a chemical bleach.

The chemical bleach, she warns, must be used with care. If left too long on a fabric, the material being treated will be weakened or may even rot. If a commercial packaged bleach is used, follow the directions given on the package.

You can make your own bleach from sodium perborate. It is one of the safest to apply and for treating a small stain, dissolve two or three teaspoons of sodium perborate in a cup of water and soak the stained area for a minute or two. Rinse thoroughly, and repeat the treatment if necessary. To treat a larger stain, she says to prepare the solution in larger proportions, but regardless of the kind of bleach used, be sure and wash it out of the fabric immediately after the treatment.

It is a good idea, she says to try to locate the cause of the yellowing and then correct it. Check and air materials that must be kept in storage over long periods of time. Heat and light in the storage places may hasten the aging effect and soap left in a fabric too long may cause yellow stain. Tea and coffee stains may darken with time and iron rust stain can develop from some iron compound in bluing or wash water.

Mrs. Strasser says that white articles should be thoroughly cleaned before storing—wash out any soap or bluing. If fabrics have been treated with chlorine bleaches in laundering, neutralize the chlorine by adding a little vinegar to the rinse water, and then rinse in clear water. Store the articles where they will get the best possible protection from heat and light.

JAPAN TO DRINK MORE

TOKYO April 5. —(AP)—The Japanese government will allow breweries and distilleries to produce 22 million more gallons of alcoholic drinks in the fiscal year beginning April 1. Raw materials are more plentiful. Allowed production this current fiscal year was 94 million gallons.

Belgian Roads Get Face Lifting Job

BRUSSELS April 5 —(AP)—Belgian roads are undergoing a 46 million dollar face lift. Med leval highways, left behind by rail and canal in the transport race, are getting ready to help bolster Belgium's boast as the "Turntable of Europe."

However, the 46 million dollars is only a fraction of what the Ministry of Public Works estimates is necessary. The director general of roads at the Ministry says it will take ten years and 400 million dollars to give the country a modern road network. Belgium's roads are about 100 years behind the times. Even main highways are still paved with stone cut blocks hewed by hand in southern Belgium.

Beer-Drinking Limies Lose out to High Tax

LONDON April 5. —(AP)—Beer-drinking Britons are drinking less beer nowadays. Latest figures show the country's production of the stuff dropped to 1,831,769 bulk barrels a month.

Analysts say the slump is due probably both to high beer prices—resulting from high taxes—and the growing popularity of entertainment found outside sa loons. "They guess the onset of home television may aggravate it."

Various Grasses Planted in Area By Duck Creek District Cooperators

During the past weeks, several cooperators of the Duck Creek Soil Conservation district have made grass plantings, soil technicians of the local work unit announced.

Wesley Scott on the W. E. Kittrell farm near Pleasant Valley planted three acres. He planted a mixture of sideoats grama, blue grama, little bluestem and buffalo grass. These grasses are native to the district.

Rex Welch made two 10-acre plantings on his ranch near Grassburg. The first was a mixture of native bluestem, which he planted for seed production, as part of his coordinated conservation plan. The other planting was weeping lovegrass.

Will Teaff made a two-acre planting on a plot bordered for irrigation. This planting consisted of a pasture mixture of alfalfa, crested wheat and perennial rye. Teaff also put 600 pounds of 20 per cent superphosphate fertilizer on his ground.

Technicians have run terrace lines on the Allen Bird farm near Verbena, the J. C. Owens farm near Pleasant Valley, and the J. A. Johnson and Bruce Shepherd farms near Graham.

Permafrost Affects Heavy Buildings In Alaska Raising Construction Costs

WASHINGTON April 5 (AP)—Permafrost has become the scare word for United States military engineers in central Alaska. They knew very little about it until they began to do heavy building in the areas of Ladd and Elson Fields, near Fairbanks, in the last war.

Now they have learned that permafrost must be a major consideration in planning any construction in that region. Permafrost is ground that is frozen the year around. If you try to build on it, it thaws and becomes oozy as quicksand.

It is generally covered with low, thick, mossy vegetation, which insulates it against summer heat. When you scrape off the surface cover it begins to melt. It goes two to 100 feet deep, averages 15 feet. Much of it is a fine silt.

When attempts have been made to build on it, the buildings settled and tilted. Runways for airplanes or heavy duty roads built on permafrost usually sink, crack, or heave—unless special precautions are taken.

The Army Corps of Engineers and others who have worked in the central area of Alaska—Anchorage and areas to the south are not affected by permafrost—have found that the best thing is to find a location where there is little or no permafrost. It comes in patches—some deep, some thin; and in some places it does not exist.

Where it becomes necessary to build over permafrost, deep excavations have been found to be the best solution. A very large area under and around the building site is scooped out; then all the basement space is filled in with coarse material, such as gravel.

Contractors for the Corps of Engineers recently excavated for a typical row of eight houses. Only 1,120 cubic yards of earth would have had to be moved for the excavation for the basements $1 a yard. But for those houses in this country, at a cost of about in Alaska 6,220 cubic yards of permafrost had to be dug out, then 5,100 cubic yards of gravel had to be back-filled. The total cost of the operation was $30,130, as compared to a cost of $1,120 here.

When building a heavy duty road in this country, engineers normally excavate for 2 1/2 feet before laying the roadbed. In silty permafrost, the excavation for such a road normally is 9.7 feet deep.

Some attempts have been made to put up building on pilings in the permafrost. But often the piles have heaved up and tilted the houses as the deep ice froze around them.

The engineers are now trying to work out a new technique for building small homes in the Ladd and Elson areas. They would scrape off the surface vegetation and lay a layer of gravel on the top soil, about 18 to 36 inches deep. On top of it they would lay concrete slabs to form the foundation for basementless houses. The gravel they believe, will act as insulation and prevent the permafrost from melting. Another problem is laying sewers and water lines in the permafrost. They freeze up and twist. To get around this the engineers build underground tunnels of concrete, called "utilidors," through which the water, heat and other utility pipes and lines are run. The heated pipes keep the water from freezing and keep the utilidors warm.
