CANVASSING HOSPITAL VOTES: The Mitchell County Hospital board canvassed votes Thursday afternoon and saw a one-vote change for Kenneth Rogers as his vote total dropped one vote from 576 to 575. A recount of the election is scheduled for Wednesday, May 12 as Dale Geiger asked for the recount as he trailed incumbent Sybil Stevens' 530 votes by one. Here, board members Jay Craddock, Fred Thompson and Stevens look over the totals.

Texas Dept. of Commerce offers suggestions for economic growth

In a workshop sponsored by the Texas Department of Commerce in Midland, suggestions were made on economic development for Colorado City.

And while many of the ideas talked about were not new and had been discussed in the past by city and county leaders, workshops such as these always point out an area or economic development that triggers some positive thinking said those attending.

Their suggestions came as a result of a questionnaire submitted by the Chamber of Commerce.

The suggestions were presented as "food for thought" for the communities and attending from here were Jay McCollum of the Chamber and city councilman Bob Reilly.

Suggestions for Colorado City included:

(1) Developing a plan to ensure capacity to meet the demands on the community's infrastructure, housing needs, etc. with the 1000-bed prison being finished in 1994 and it was suggested that community officials attend a meeting in Austin on May 6 that will deal with enabling communities to gain the maximum economic benefit from new prison locations;

(2) Consider developing regulatory controls according to the community's priorities to include a comprehensive master plan and capital improvements plan. Also, to ensure controlled growth and development in adopting zoning and subdivision ordinance;

(3) Consider adopting a historical preservation ordinance to protect the integrity of community's historic properties;

(4) Rehabilitating of some existing housing; and,

(5) Construction of an adult softball field.

In the matter of new business development, the Department of Commerce suggested levying an additional sales tax for economic development with the potential additional revenue that will be generated from sales from the new antique stores. It was also suggested that with the additional revenue the city could encourage the local banks to make start up loans to entrepreneurs to encourage new business development. The city could then pledge revenue from the local option sales tax to guarantee these loans or consider establishing a revolving loan fund using the additional tax revenue.

To encourage the development of new "home grown" businesses, it was suggested the community consider the REA's Rural Economic Development and Grant program that is designed to provide zero interest loans and grants to rural electric cooperatives such as Caprock Electric/Lone Wolf Division Cooperative for projects that promote rural economic development and job creation.

Eligible projects under this program includes a small business incubator, project feasibility studies, start-up costs and other reasonable expenses.

Hospital Board recount scheduled for Wednesday

by Wade Warren

The recount of all the votes in last Saturday's Mitchell County Hospital Board election is scheduled for this coming Wednesday, May 12 at 2 p.m.

The exact location had not been decided by 5 p.m. Friday.

The law provides that personal notice must be given to the person asking for the recount and all opposing candidates at least 18 hours before the recount is to begin. It has to be held no later than the 7th day after the date the petition is approved.

Dale Geiger, Colorado City, turned in his petition for the recount Thursday afternoon along with a check to cover the estimated expenses of the recount.

In Saturday's vote count, Geiger trailed incumbent Sybil Smith's total by one vote, 530 to 529.

The board appointed Walter E. Smith, Jr. as the recount supervisor and he in turn must appoint a committee of at least four members.

The board was in agreement that the Mitchell County Ministerial Alliance would be contacted and the members of the recount committee selected from it.

All committee members must meet the same qualifications as election judges and clerks and will be paid $5 per hour. Individuals who served as a judge on election day are ineligible to serve on the recount committee.

Persons who will be permitted in the recount room besides the committee are the candidates and their representatives and the custodian of the voted ballots and the recount supervisor.

Most popular baby names listed by TDH

The annual report of the Texas Department of Health's (TDH) Bureau of Vital Statistics contains at least one list of interest to even the most preoccupied new parent, according to Richard Bays.

The list, based on 1991 birth certificate entries, is the Texas roster of most frequently chosen names for newborns during that calendar year. Bays is chief of the Bureau of Vital Statistics.

The report included the name list for the first time in 1990, although the U.S. Bureau of Census has released similar lists for years.

Some names have made the national lists for generations, since many parents name babies—especially boys—after themselves. Boys noted: "John and James are like permanent entries on lists of popular baby names. Only their ranking on the list ever changes," he said.

Also, when parents try to think of uncommon names, they sometimes pick celebrities' names. Later they are surprised to find that thousands of other parents shared their idea.

"We know that popular movie stars' names often inspire parents. We haven't verified it, but a member of our staff said that the Texas list seems to contain a high number of names matching those of TV soap opera characters," he added.

By order of most often chosen, the 10 most popular names for boys born in Texas in 1991 were: Michael, Christopher, Joshua, Jose, Matthew, David, John, Justin, Daniel and James.

For girls born during the same period, the 10 most frequently given names were: Ashley, Jessica, Amanda, Sarah, Stephanie, Brittany, Elizabeth, Samantha, Lauren and Jennifer.

Besides the separate lists for all boys and girls born during a year, the report also provides similar lists for ethnic groups. Although those lists contain many of the same names as does the over-all roster, there are some exceptions.

Among children of white parents, the most popular names for boys were: Michael, Christopher, Matthew, Justin, James, John, Ryan, Cody, Jacob and William. For girls, they were: Ashley, Jessica, Sarah, Lauren, Brittany, Amanda, Megan, Shelby, Emily and Elizabeth.

Black parents chose Christopher, Joshua, Michael, Brandon, Anthony, James, Jordan, Justin, Jeremy and Robert for their sons. For their daughters, they most frequently chose Jasmine, Ashley, Brittany, Jessica, Courtney, Mariah, Raven, Crystal, Tiffany and Ebony.

Hispanic parents chose Jose, Juan, Michael, Daniel, David, Jesus, Christopher, Luis, Joshua and Jonathan for boys. For girls, they chose Jessica, Ashley, Stephanie, Amanda, Samantha, Elizabeth, Jennifer, Crystal, Vanessa and Victoria.

TEXAS ANGLER

BY KEITH WARREN

Most people reading this article have never been out of this country on a fishing trip. You've seen them on television and read stories in magazines. Trips to Costa Rica, Mexico, South America and more. Each year the list of places to choose from gets larger and larger. Americans spend big money to go on these trips, but how do you keep from getting burned by con artists?

There are horror stories of fishermen that have gone on the fishing trip of a lifetime, and instead lived a nightmare. They wound up sick or lost or maybe in jail. I don't know how many of these horror stories I've personally heard throughout the years.

The financial investment for such a trip is certainly a substantial one. You would think that these fishermen would spend more time checking out the outfitter and lodge than they do. There are very few, if any, requirements on these lodges by government authorities to provide quality services to their guests.

I have had the opportunity to travel on two out of the country trips in the last year that turned out to be great. But they could have been disastrous if I had chosen the wrong people and didn't do my homework. If you do some research on the lodge you are considering, it will make you and your family feel much better about your trip.

Here is a checklist of things I recommend researching prior to making a decision; and some things to watch for:

1. Ask for all literature available that the outfitter provides to prospective customers. These brochures are relatively inexpensive to prepare and some outfits spend more money on these to get your attention than others do. Often times they'll show pictures of huge fish. Ask your outfitter who these people are in the pictures. Get their name and phone number or address and contact them and ask them what they thought of their trip, good points and bad points.

2. Most exotic fishing locations now have videotapes to help sell their trips. Ask for one. Review this tape with the greatest detail. Make notes and write down questions you have while watching this tape.

3. Ask for a list of references in your area that have visited the lodge within the past 6 months.

The reason to limiting it to 6 months is because you want someone who has been there recently and can tell you things (good or bad) while it is still fresh on his or her mind. Form a list of questions and ask these people to answer them. You may be surprised to find that these people will talk so positively with you that you have a hard time getting off the phone. Contact a minimum of three recent visitors and compare their answers to the questions.

4. Check out airline connections! I can't stress this enough! My trip to Venezuela was great except for one thing. The return trip included a five hour layover in Managua, Nicaragua. If you are changing air carriers, you run a great risk of losing your baggage. Pack light and if possible carry it on the plane with you and avoid checking your luggage. Most of these fishing lodges will provide a laundry service each day. Pack only two or three changes of clothes. If you want to relax after fishing before departing for home, make sure your travel agent gives you that time.

Both of my recent trips were great, but I regret not having the time to see other sights or go shopping while in a foreign country.

5. Most camps provide fishing tackle for visitors and guests. If so, is there an additional charge? Even if there is, I recommend using their equipment. Traveling thousands of miles on an airplane is not what I want my fishing tackle doing. You can carry on most of your equipment. Lures and reels (spooled with fresh line) are all I take. I'll ask to borrow rods when I arrive.

6. Food. These lodges should provide excellent food. Unfortunately, not all do. Many of these places are not as sanitary as America. Their kitchens are dirty or their water is bad. Ask past visitors what they thought of the food. On both of my trips I gained weight! The food was fit for a king. Large portions and an excellent variety was served at each meal. The owners of these lodges realize that this an expensive trip for you, they will generally provide excellent food and service for you.

7. Extras. Find out what extra charges there will be. For instance, taxis, transfer, departure taxes, tips, etc. These little extras can run up to a couple of hundred dollars quickly.

In summary, ask a lot of questions. Listen to everything that is said about the place by everyone. Deal with someone who is willing to work for you for your business. These are very expensive trips, and you deserve to be treated special. So do your homework-you'll be happy you did. It may save you from making a huge mistake or may help you enjoy the trip of a lifetime.

COMMERCE

Other suggestions included a water sports rental business, a Bed and Breakfast and "eco projects" such as making fertilizer from cow manure.

The report also suggested that an Existing Business Development Program be implemented to retain local businesses and encourage them to expand their operation in the community and to offer help where necessary.

The city should also consider preparing an inventory to determine unmet retail/service sector needs throughout the county and develop a recruitment program to attract desired businesses to the city. The report referred to this as the "hub and spoke theory" to economic development.

Businesses that would serve as suppliers to manufacturers in Colorado City, Big Spring, Midland, Abilene, etc. should also be recruited suggested the report.

A recruitment program should also be implemented to fill the vacant downtown buildings and develop a Downtown Merchants Association to organize sales, promotions and activities.

To promote tourism, a city-wide garage sale could be used to attract out of town visitors and have everyone in the community participate.

And besides the events currently held, additional events should be scheduled to create activity year-round.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Dear Editor:

Thank you, Thank you to Mitchell County. I cannot use individual names as there are so many that worked so faithfully for many weeks (months). Thanks begins with the legal & tax work done to get us incorporated and tax exempt. The unbelievably generous contributions were the beginning of a wonderful endeavor. Christmas In April (C.I.A.) received double or triple the funds hoped for.

The churches, clubs, organizations, banks, businesses, youth, Chamber of Commerce and individuals were super supporters either in food, donations, volunteers or organization.

Each committee carried out their duties to perfection to make this first effort so successful. The skilled volunteers (contractors, electricians and plumbers) were so patient, willing and agreeable and so talented and able to carry out the individual jobs in a "one day Blitz" (at least most work being done in one day). The unskilled also, so willing and agreeable and ready to work long hours. Many skilled and unskilled have worked several days before and after the one day they agreed to work. Thanks to the media for the wonderful coverage from day one till completion. The information, pictures and interviews were definitely the "best".

What a way to end a hard working day than with the delicious bar-b-que.

I love hearing stories relating to the fun experiences during that long working day and the closer friendships and acquaintances that were developed. Hopefully everyone will forget the smashed fingers, hurting backs, sore muscles and be ready to go again next year.

While visiting with homeowners, I believe each one is very happy with their "Out of Season Christmas Gift".

I invite you to attend a "C.I.A. Wrap Up", 7:00 p.m., May 25 at the Civic Center. On that evening videos, slides and snap shots made of the homes before, during and after will be shown.

A single "Thank You" is definitely not adequate for the appreciation I feel. Hopefully each of you individually know how grateful I am for YOUR making C.I.A. 1993 successful.

Thanks,
Jan Lemons
