Bell to pay $88 million

WASHINGTON (AP) — A four-year dispute over allegations the Army was fraudulently overcharged for helicopter spare parts has been resolved, with Bell Helicopter Textron Inc. agreeing to pay the government about $88 million, the Army said today.

The settlement, one of the largest ever in a defense contracting case, grew out of findings by Pentagon auditors of numerous accounting and inventory irregularities at the Fort Worth, Texas, company, Pentagon sources said Wednesday night.

Maj. Phil Soucy, an Army spokesman, today confirmed a settlement had been reached and was scheduled to be signed on Friday. A company statement said, "We believe a settlement is in the offing."

"The Army is fully satisfied with this settlement and believes it has recovered every dime out of this that we can get," said Soucy.

The Pentagon sources said that in reaching the settlement, federal prosecutors had agreed to drop any potential criminal or civil charges and that Bell Helicopter would not acknowledge any wrongdoing.

Soucy agreed there would be no further prosecution in the case, but said the government had always hoped to strike a reasonable settlement rather than go to trial because of the case's complexity.

"This was a very complex case that turned on a bad accounting system (at Bell Helicopter) that was used in connection with contracts worth billions of dollars," the spokesman said.

Excel will open Monday

The Excel beef slaughtering and fabrication facility in Friona will reopen Monday, Cargill officials announced this morning in Minneapolis.

Cargill is the parent company for Excel.

The plant was closed Feb. 29 due to economic conditions, according to Excel officials.

"Economic conditions have improved enough for us to reopen," said William Fielding, Excel president. "However, we remain concerned about the impact of operating margins with the rising cattle prices and the marketability of beef compared with other meats and poultry."

Fielding said that all employees should report for their regular shifts Monday.

"We hope that conditions will allow normal operation of the plant so our employees are not forced to make special arrangements."

Many Excel workers live in Hereford and commute to Friona.

Bull Chip winner

Bell wins Bull Chip

Margaret Bell received an "Honorary Bull Chip Award" at the Deaf Smith County Chamber of Commerce Fun Breakfast this morning at the Hereford Community Center.

Winning a cellular telephone at the breakfast was Carolyn Baxter. The breakfast was sponsored by Southwestern Bell Cellular Systems, which gave the phone away in a drawing and explained the system, which will be available in Hereford after final testing this morning.

Bell joins her husband, Charlie, as a Bull Chip recipient—in fact, they are the only couple to receive the award since the first Bull Chip was bestowed in 1976.

Bell was honored for her work with last year's United Way campaign, which exceeded its $120,000 goal; her ongoing work with the Pilot Club, which she helped found; and other civic activities.

Bell, who holds masters degrees in English, Spanish and journalism and was a long-time teacher, has been the recipient of the Teacher of the Year Award from the Texas State Teachers Association and a Distinguished Service Award from West Texas State University.

Bell has served as a Sunday School teacher for 32 years and is a lay leader at First United Methodist Church.

"She has always done 110 percent at every job," said Mike Carr, executive vice president of the chamber who presented the award.

Breakfast-goers also participated in water balloon-tossing and Easter bonnet-making games. The Easter Bunny also made his first official appearance of the year at the breakfast.

Kemp, Hart bow out

By LAURA KING
Associated Press Writer

Republican presidential hopeful Jack Kemp quit the race today, saying "we may have suffered a defeat but our principles have not." Gary Hart was ready to drop out for a second time on the Democratic side as the shrinking field of candidates converged on Illinois, scene of the next big campaign test.

Kemp was crushed in the Super Tuesday landslide of Vice President George Bush, who rejoined the campaign trail today after taking a day off to rest and celebrate.

"I am folding my tent, but I plan to continue to carry the flag," said Kemp, the New York congressman and former pro football quarterback who had hoped to win the GOP nomination as the conservative heir to President Reagan, whose economic programs have included many of Kemp's ideas.

"I ran for the presidency to ensure that the torch that we lit in 1980 in Detroit — when we nominated Ronald Reagan and revolutionized our party — would burn even brighter and light the way into the 1990s," Kemp said in remarks distributed just before he spoke at a news conference. He said both Bush and Sen. Bob Dole have embraced conservative positions.

Meanwhile, sources said today that Hart intends to end his campaign on Friday after failing to generate significant support for his re-run at the nomination. The sources, speaking only on condition of anonymity, said Hart would not endorse any of the surviving contenders.

On Wednesday, Bush suggested to Dole, his closest competitor, that the race for the GOP nomination was becoming just a bit beside the point. It might be time, he said, to turn the attention toward the general election in November.

"I believe it is now time to look ahead to the issues which distinguish us from the Democrats," the vice president told Dole in a telegram in which he rebuffed the Kansas senator's request for a series of one-on-one debates.

"Good luck," Bush added.

Dole was having none of that, as he searched for a share of Illinois' 82 GOP delegates at stake in Tuesday's primary.

"I've got to win in Illinois," he said. Later, he told law students: "I feel like I've just taken the finals, and I didn't flunk but I didn't do too well either."

And he taunted Bush for refusing to agree to the no-moderator debates, saying: "Here's a chance, George, to finish me off right here in Illinois."

For Kemp, a former pro football player, the game was over. Dole said Kemp had telephoned him to say he would drop out today without endorsing either of his principal rivals. Kemp aides also had said he would end his campaign at a Washington news conference.

It looked like the end of the line for Hart as well. The Colorado senator refused to talk to reporters about the Super Tuesday results. But he scheduled a Denver news conference Friday morning, and news reports in Denver said he had told his staff he was abandoning his bid.

The Super Tuesday races left Hart disqualified for further federal matching funds. He technically lost his eligibility last month, but could have restored it with a 10-percent draw in any of the day's primaries.

Hart had already dropped out of the Democratic race once. In May, he quit amid reports of his relationship with a Miami model, and he amazed political observers by declaring in December that he was back.

"Let the people decide," he said. But the people accorded him few votes in any of the early contests.

The rest of the Democrats were gathering for a forum tonight sponsored by Illinois Democrats.

Two of the Democrats — Sen. Paul Simon and Jesse Jackson — were campaigning on home turf in Illinois, with its prize of 173 Democratic delegates. Simon, who bypassed Tuesday's contests and said he must do well in Illinois to continue, wasn't planning to spend any money on television advertising.

Jackson made a triumphant homecoming to Chicago on Wednesday, still thrilled by his showing the day before. He placed first in the popular vote, splitting a big delegate haul with Massachusetts Gov. Michael Dukakis and Tennessee Sen. Albert Gore.

"We get stronger every day," Jackson told plant workers in suburban Chicago.

Gore visited a steel-fabricating plant on Chicago's North Side, donning a hard hat and promising to "campaign full blast" in the state.

Rep. Richard Gephardt, who carried only his home state of Missouri in Tuesday's contests, said he was still in the running.

Leaders will discuss taxes

City, county and school leaders will meet to discuss possible strategies for tax abatement and learn how the city of Plano has been able to attract large industries during a meeting at 9 a.m. Friday at the Deaf Smith County Library in Hereford.

Although they are not looking at a specific plan, business or industry, local governments have been looking hard in the past two months at what the community can do to attract new business and providing more jobs in Hereford and Deaf Smith County.

The looking has become much more intense since the Department of Energy has begun its phaseout of the Salt Repository Project in Deaf Smith County. Although only about 60 employees could be classified as Hereford or Deaf Smith County residents, it has meant the loss of over 300 jobs in the region and dimmed the optimistic forecast of a business boom in Hereford that may have accompanied the project.

At the meeting, officials will look over laws affecting tax abatement, including the Property Redevelopment and Tax Abatement Act, establishment of county redevelopment zones, and The Texas Enterprise Zone Act.

Representatives from Plano will explain how their city has blossomed from a town of 5,000 (about the size of Dimmitt) 20 years ago to a town of over 100,000 that has attracted numerous new industries.

The most recent feather in the city's cap was enticing J.C. Penney to move its national headquarters to Plano from White Plains, N.Y.

Friday's meeting is open to the public.

The Branding Iron

Baer's never looked back since 1914

By ANDREA LAMB
Staff Writer

When 16-year-old Gaston Baer and his family left war-torn France in 1914 with only their clothes, he didn't play the part of Lot's wife and look over his shoulder.

Baer, now 89, recalled thinking that America was to be his new home, and as far as France was concerned, it only offered persecution to his family of German descent during World War I.

The Frenchman, channeling this sense of oppression, realized the American dream six years later and launched a successful business in Hereford called The Popular Store.

"I learned how to handle people and be friendly with everyone, black or white or Hispanic. It didn't make any difference," said Baer. "I have a lot of empathy for people and that's why they took to me."

Baer said he could empathize with his customers because he saw what it was like to be an outcast during World War I when his aunt and uncle, also of German descent, were sent to prison.

"They were made to live on opposite ends of France merely because the government was suspicious of the Germans. We weren't really considered enemies, but we weren't considered citizens either.

Baer said his uncle eventually committed suicide.

"It was a bad business, the war," Baer said without expression. "In Boulogue (suburb of Paris), I remember a shoe store with a German name above it, and at night people would break the windows and loot the store just because it was German."

The persecution which afflicted Baer's relatives was now knocking on his father's door.

"My father was born on France's border and had lived in France for 30 years, yet he was still considered German. In America, it's different because when you're born in America, you're considered American," said Baer.

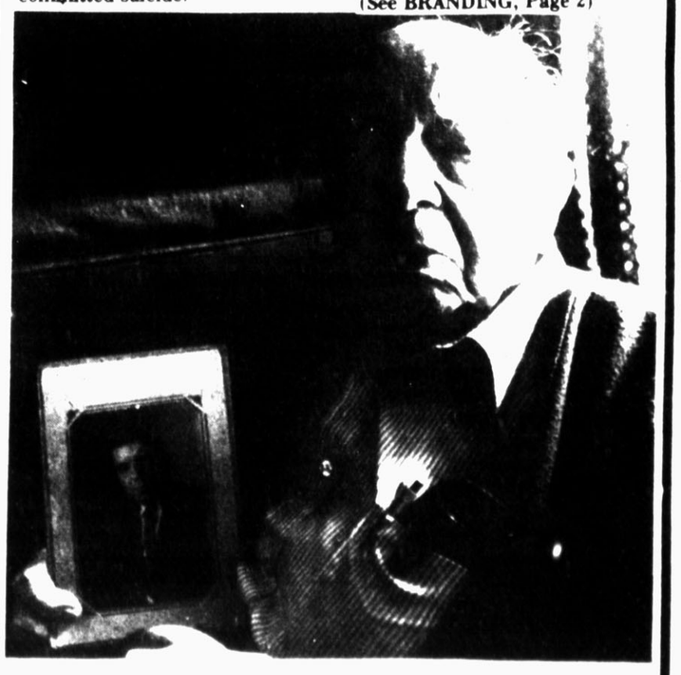

When the Baers decided to leave France, not much thought was given to preparation.

"I was a salesman for a wholesale house, and one day when I came home for lunch, my father was packing to leave because of the war. We just took our clothes on the ship and that was it. I didn't feel much remorse because at my age of 16 it was a good thing to leave because I'd have to fight in the war," said Baer.

Zigzagging to dodge the German submarines, the Baers arrived in New York a week later—a French family alienated by their inability to speak English.

However, the promise of a new life which brought joy to Baer didn't promise so much for his

Gaston Baer displays a ghost of his younger days when he first opened The Popular Store in Hereford. As an enterprising business man in his twenties, Baer found it as unnecessary to smile for the camera as he does now in his retirement.

Police investigate mischief

Hereford police investigated three cases of criminal mischief resulting in over $300 worth of damage Wednesday.

Police said much of the damage was done by some type of BB or pellet gun. Police said they have no leads and that people using easily-concealed pellet guns are "hard to catch."

The incidents occurred in the 100 block of Cherokee, 700 block of Ave. I, and the 300 block of Ave. I.

Police also investigated aggravated assault on a child in the 300 block of Miller; a family dispute in the 400 block of Bradley; a domestic disturbance in the 800 block of Brevard; criminal trespassing in the 600 block of S. 25 Mile Ave.;

Garbage dumped in an alley in the 700 block of Country club Drive; an incident involving a mental person in the 800 block of Brevard; a civil dispute in the 300 block of Ave. C; and an opened gate in the 400 block of Ave. C.

Police also investigated two non-injury accidents and issued 18 citations Wednesday.

EDSC meeting tonight

The Economic Development Strategy Council will meet at 7 p.m. today at the Deaf Smith County Library to select 50 persons to serve on the EDSC advisory committee.

The 15-member EDSC will consider nominations and names of volunteers wishing to serve on the committee in a closed session. The EDSC will vote on the advisory council members in open session.

Cooler, windy weather

Tonight will be windy and cooler, with a low of 32. Southwest winds will be 20 to 30 mph and gusty, becoming northwesterly after midnight.

Friday will be cooler and windy, with a high of 52. North winds will be 20 to 30 mph and gusty.

This morning's low at KPAN was 35 after a high Wednesday of 69.

Services held for helper to Hereford migrant workers

The Rev. Raymond Gillis, 84, died Feb. 22 in Graymoor, N.Y.

Mass of the Resurrection was held Feb. 26 in Graymoor.

Gillis, born in Canada in 1904, entered the priesthood in 1941. He worked in Europe during World War II, then worked for 30 years among the poor and migrant workers in Texas and Arizona.

He spent several years working with migrants in the Hereford area, and was named the Citizen of the Year in Hereford in 1952. He was pastor of the Sacred Heart Parish in Memphis, Tex., from 1977-82 when he retired to the Franciscan monastery in Graymoor.

REV. GILLIS

Much of his work was centered in Hereford, where he spent 21 years. He began his first church that year with barracks from the Prisoner of War Camp south of Hereford, which served as San Jose Catholic Church for nine years. Later, the old St. Anthony's Catholic Church, which had been the original county courthouse at La Plata and in Hereford, was moved, enlarged and remodeled.

In the San Jose area, Gillis also built a residence for lay Catechist and for teachers, and a hospital was built in 1952. In 1953, a school was completed near the church. The buildings are still being used today for various offices, special training and day care for area residents.

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Hispanic leaders say an English-only referendum overwhelming approved by Republican voters is a simplistic idea to solve America's problems.

About 93 percent of the Republican voters approved the non-binding referendum Tuesday.

Hispanic leaders said they were not surprised by the margin of approval, but were concerned about its ramifications.

"The English-only proposition doesn't come up with solutions to illiteracy, to the dropout problem, to discrimination, or with answers to economic development or the budget deficit," said Oscar Moran, national president of the League of United Latin American Citizens.

"It's a very simplistic approach to try to cure the nation's ills," Moran said Wednesday.

The question on the referendum read, "English should be established as the official language of the state of Texas and the United States of America."

Ruben Bonilla, president of the Mexican-American Democrats political action committee, said voters had no choice.

"The referendum was a loaded question. One would have to be a Marxist-Leninist to have opposed the question as it was framed," Bonilla said.

"I think that question, the way it was printed, might even have passed in the Hispanic community," he said.

Fred Meyer, Texas Republican Party finance chairman, said the idea behind the proposal is to help all Americans succeed at the jobsite and other areas in society.

"A high percentage of people feel that if people are not proficient in English, they are really not going to be able to share fully in what this country has to offer," he said.

But Moran, a Republican, said the referendum was another form of discrimination.

"You only see this movement as Hispanics, blacks and other minorities begin to assert themselves in the political arena," Moran said. "It's a very simplistic, backdoor approach that creates divisiveness and polarization in the community."

Jose Garcia de Lara, state director of LULAC, said he was not surprised by the vote.

"It's an unfortunate situation for the Republican Party because the issue is nothing more than a racist issue, a nuisance issue," de Lara said.

"I see the Republicans putting this on the ballot because they want to frustrate the Hispanic vote. They never would have put it on the ballot if more Hispanics voted in the Republican primary," he said.

But Lou Zaeske, chairman of the Bryan-based American Ethnic Coalition which helped place the issue on the ballot, said the opponents of the referendum would lose their followers.

"I have an abiding faith that Americans, of whatever ethnic ancestry, will ultimately recognize these self-styled political leaders for what they really are — modern day piped-pipers endeavoring to create special-interest groups by using ethnicity, which they think or feel will serve their own self-interests," Zaeske said.

"They are the ones practicing racism by forcing people to look into their group rather than outward," he said.

Gov. Bill Clements, a Republican, does not favor the issue.

"I don't think it's important one way or the other. I've said that before," Clements said Wednesday.

Bonilla, a Corpus Christi lawyer who has debated the English-only issue, said the vote destroyed the myth that Republicans were more enlightened voters.

"Their whole argument is that English is the prerequisite to participatory democracy, but the proposition did not address the more serious issue of educational shortcomings that we experience today and the growing problem of illiteracy," Bonilla said.

Jones promoted

Randy Jones has been promoted to Assistant Plant Controller at the Holly Sugar Coporation plant in Hereford. Jones, a Hereford High School graduate, has been with Holly since 1977, serving as senior clerk and payroll and farmers' ledger clerk until his promotion.

Nursing home law downed by board

ABILENE, Texas (AP) — State human services board members support delaying a new law that officials say is designed to help recover nursing home costs but has been misunderstood as working to force people from their homes.

The law lets the Texas Department of Human Services recover medical assistance payments through enforcement of liens or claims against estates of Medicaid recipients after they die. Some officials said Wednesday the legislation has been misunderstood.

The issue, hotly contested around Texas, was the source of a television ad that attacked State Sen. Grant Jones for supporting the legislation.

Texas Board of Human Services members, scheduled to meet in Abilene today, said they would favor a delay in adoption of rules for implementing the law until the issue is reviewed by the state Attorney General's office.

Jones, D-Temple, was handily defeated Tuesday by Sweetwater attorney Temple Dickson, who used the ad in his campaign. The ad was utilized in at least one other Texas campaign.

"I have not seen the commercials, but from what I heard, I think the issue has been structured and cast wrong," said J. Livingston Kosberg, chairman of the human services board, which governs the DHS.

"There is no legislative intent or requirement that people give up or sell their homes to receive nursing home care," Human Services Commissioner Marlin Johnston said in a written statement released by the board.

"The notion that we would kick a spouse or dependent or disabled child out of their home is not only mistaken, it's absurd," he said.

Dickson's ad, which Jones blamed largely for his defeat, depicts an elderly woman — played by an actress — sitting on the porch of her home and saying Jones gave people a choice between getting Medicaid or losing their homes.

Rob Mosbacher, a board member, said an attempt to use the issue, and "scaring elderly people to death" for political gain, was "a gross, gross distortion of the process.

mother. She died of a heart attack two weeks after arriving in America because of homesickness.

"She was very sad about leaving her homeland and all her belongings in France, and she couldn't stand the strain," said Baer.

After his mother died, Baer's uncle ushered him to Santa Rosa, N.M., where he attended high school, but his classes didn't sink in because "I felt so lost being as that I didn't know a word of the language."

English became easier to understand, but Baer quickly picked up Spanish, too, which he said has helped his business in Hereford with the large number of Hispanics living in the area.

After marrying Pauline Berg in 1921 at the age of 22, Baer's father-in-law bought some bankrupt stock on a store in Hereford and asked Baer to oversee it.

"When I came to Hereford, it was very small—about 4,000 people. I vowed that I would just stay here a little while, but I'm still here and too broke to leave," said Baer, making light of his financial success with the clothing store he spawned in Hereford.

The Popular Store didn't begin as just a clothing store, according to Baer. The name was first Popular Dry Goods (named after a store in El Paso) which handled general merchandise.

But just as Hereford quickly evolved from a "windmill city" (as Baer titled it) to the town it is today, so did Baer's store.

His 25-foot store had to be expanded several times and the sign above the door changed to The Popular Store as Baer culled the general merchandise and began concentrating on men's and women's clothing.

Then American free enterprise kicked in for Baer.

"I knew America was a place where you could buy something for a nickel and sell it for a dime. Buy cheap and sell high," said Baer.

Baer's sense of thriftiness didn't always hold true, however. During the Depression, Baer accepted everything from postdated checks to livestock for his merchandise. And because he understood the consumers' plight, they patronized his store often.

"The customers I had were very loyal. Even the migrants came back year after year because I gave them a fair deal and because I could speak Spanish," said Baer with his throaty French accent still audible.

With the constant flow of customers, Baer became known as the town's unofficial informant because "I knew everyone's business better than my own. If anyone outside of town wanted to know about someone's background, they would call me. I would shoot the breeze with people who came into the store, and I would be informed about everything."

But as the roads to Amarillo improved, Baer's business began to slide. People who were once his customers began to spend the day shopping in Amarillo, and the construction of the Sugarland Mall didn't help matters.

After owning and operating The Popular Store in its downtown location for 57 years, Baer closed the doors.

But this didn't mean Baer had thrown in the towel. He later opened the clothing store Gaston's in the mall which originally helped push his original store out of business.

His only child, Teddy Alexander (who owned a clothing store in Amarillo), soon took the reigns from her father and operated Gaston's herself.

Baer said he considers himself lucky that his daughter carried on his love of the clothing business, but that would soon come to a halt with her death of cancer two years ago.

Now Baer has no offspring to carry on his name, and he said he's the last Baer of his generation. One might ordinarily feel sadness, but Baer doesn't view it that way.

"It doesn't feel too good, but you can't tell what will happen. That's life the way I see it. Things like this will happen throughout your life, but there's nothing you can do but go on."

From the time Baer left his fatherland of France for a new adventure in the United States to the acknowledgement that no one will carry on his name, the man's attitude has always been "que sera, sera."

"Do you think I'll make it to 100?" the former Frenchman asked with a smile. "I don't know if I will or not—it's up to the good Lord."

Whether or not he does, whatever will be, will be.

Letters to the Editor

Dear editor:

I have read and listened to the news about our Hospital here in Hereford. We are very saddened by the turn of events. My family has had need of the services there many times.

I respect all the Doctors and nurses, they were always very capable and willing to help in any way they could. Gerry Hollinger was there many times, never once did he cause my family to doubt his ability in anyway. He is still needed by the community.

Mrs. J.A. King and Family

Hints from Heloise

DEAR HELOISE:

When we first bought our home, we weren't sure of how much paint we needed for each room or for the exterior.

We kept track of the amounts, recorded this information on 3-by-5 cards and filed them with important papers in our home-improvement file.

When it was time to paint again, we knew exactly how much to buy. Sometimes a second coat is needed when putting a light over a dark color.

This system sure beats guessing. — N. Laing, Ravenna, Ohio

It sure does. It can also save you money! Sure am glad you wrote. — Heloise

SCHOOL PICTURES

Dear Heloise: If you have children or grandchildren in their first year of school, begin to save their individual school pictures. Most of us already know this, but here is what I do. I arrange the pictures through the years in a frame, adding each year's picture as it comes along. Each child has his/her own frame and a special place where it is hung. — Mildred Mori, Belle Vernon, Pa.

TELEPHONE CORDS

Dear Heloise: There is a way to keep the telephone handset cord from tangling — preventive maintenance.

Form the habit of giving the handset a turn or two each time you pick it up, undoing the couple of twists it seems to get each time it is used.

A little regular care keeps the cord out of that hopeless tangle. — S.W., Washington, D.C.

NOTE PAD AND PEN

Dear Heloise: When I stopped to visit friends and found them gone or couldn't reach them by phone, I was frustrated that they were unaware that I wanted to reach them.

Now I carry a self-sticking note pad (which eliminates tape or push pins) and a pen in my purse at all times.

Presto, I can leave a note stuck to the door or a window. Let it be known, I was there! — Eleanor Tummonds, Penfield, N.Y.

STORING WRAPPING PAPER

Dear Heloise: I have a hint that has saved me time and quite a few rolls of wrapping paper.

When I save extra wrapping paper left on the long rolls of cardboard, instead of using tape to hold the edges, I use plastic wrap. Use enough plastic wrap to go around the roll at least once; it clings to itself and is easier to get loose when using the wrapping paper. — Jerri L. Rodgers, Hot Springs, Ark.

Morrow presents program

Mary Morrow presented a program on "Christianity in Russia" when the Women of St. Thomas Episcopal Church met reently in the home of Jerre Clark with Vera Threewit serving as co-hostess.

The speaker said that the people are still allowed to worship but in an "underground" manner.

After refreshments were served, Mary Fraser, in the absence of the president, presided the business meeting. Claudia McBrayer offer a prayer and gave the devotion on "Christ Speaking To Us."

Thank you correspondence was read from St. Judes and St. helena acknowledging the contributions made by the women.

The next meeting was planned for Saturday, April 2.

Spaghetti supper set

Tickts are on sale for a spaghetti supper to be served by the Hereford Rebekah Lodge No. 228 from 5-8 p.m. Saturday, March 26, at the Odd Fellow Hall, 205 E. Sixth St.

The meal will consist of spaghetti, pie and drinks. Tickets are priced at $3 for adults and $1.50 for children under 12 years of age and will be available from any member of the lodge.

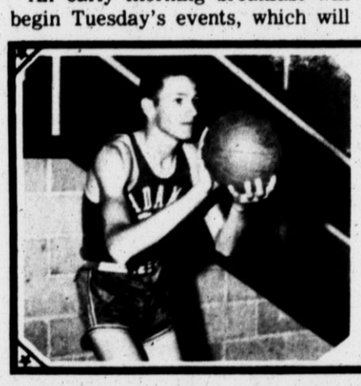

Noble Grand Thama Pearson presided at the regular business session Tuesday evening. Forty-five visits to the sick and 29 cheer cards were recorded.

Leona Sowell served as hostess to Pearson, Irene Merritt, Rosalie Northcutt, Erma Loving, Faye Brownlow, Susie Curtsinger, Jim Loving, Lydia Hopson, Jo Irlbeck, Sadie Shaw, Verna Sowell, Anthony Irlbeck, Merle Boozer, Peggy Lemons, Ada Hollabaugh and Shirley Brown.

In one of the most incredible coincidences of American history, the second and third presidents of the United States — John Adams and Thomas Jefferson — both died on July 4, 1826, 50 years to the day after the Declaration of Independence was adopted.

But both are headed into NCAA tournament

No. 1 Temple wins, No. 2 Purdue stumbles

By The Associated Press

Top-ranked Temple and No. 2 Purdue are headed for the same place, the NCAA Tournament, on different paths.

The Owls won their 15th consecutive game, beating Rhode Island 68-63 Wednesday night for the Atlantic 10 Conference tournament championship. The victory assured Temple, 29-1, a top seeding in one of the four NCAA regionals.

Purdue, which also seemed headed for a top seeding, stumbled at Ohio State, falling 71-60. The defeat won't cost the Boilermakers an NCAA bid, which was secured earlier by clinching the Big Ten title, but could affect where Purdue is placed in the NCAA field.

In the only other game involving ranked teams, No. 19 Illinois beat 10th-ranked Michigan 85-74 in the Big Ten.

Temple won its third Atlantic 10 tournament in four years as Mark Macon scored 25 points and Howie Evans restarted the offense after Rhode Island rallied for a 51-50 lead.

"The key to this team is that they know how to win," Coach Don Chaney said. "We are a good team, but I think we can be better if our team stays in its element."

That element is based on Evans dishing the ball to Macon, the freshman star, and sharpshooter Mike Vreeswyk, who scored 17 points against the Rams, 26-6.

"A good cake has all the elements in it," Chaney said. "Momma don't have the shortening, the cake falls. What is our necessary element? Howard Evans. Howie sets the table and the rest of the players just come and eat."

Rhode Island also hopes to feast at the NCAA banquet.

"We outrebounded Temple 39-30 and that's an unbelievable stat," Rams Coach Tom Penders said. "That helped keep us in the game. We played the No. 1 team in the country with an awful lot of heart and scratched back into it."

Ohio State scratched past Purdue behind hot free throw shooting late in the game and a 12-point second half by Jerry Francis. That left Boilermakers Coach Gene Keady scratching his head.

"After the game I wrote 'Finish the job' on the board. That's a question that was not answered," Keady said.

Buckeyes Coach Gary Williams said Purdue might have had a letdown after locking up the league title against Michigan last weekend.

"The toughest thing in the Big Ten is the game after a tough, physical game. It's hard to play well in that situation," he said.

As for the chance of Ohio State, 16-11, receiving an NCAA bid, Williams said, "The NCAA selection committee has a tough job. It'll be the greatest thing in the world if we make it, but I won't be disappointed if we don't."

Tournaments

A bench-clearing scuffle at the end of the first half marred Fairleigh Dickinson's 94-84 victory over Long Island in the semifinals of the ECAC Metro. Four separate altercations broke out, including two involving FDU's Charlie Roberts. Officials, coaches and security personnel needed four minutes to restore order.

When the teams returned for the second half, the officials levied three technicals against each team. Roberts sank six free throws for Fairleigh Dickinson, 22-6, and Glenn Daniels did the same for Long Island.

ECAC Metro Commissioner Chris Monasch visited both locker rooms and told players that any more fights would result in immediate ejections and suspensions for the tournament's title game on Thursday.

That game will match FDU against Monmouth, which beat St. Francis, N.Y., 61-48.

In the Western Athletic Conference, Reggie Cross scored 27 points and Chris Gaines added 23 as Hawaii defeated Air Force 84-76. Hawaii's reward: a date with host Brigham Young, the top seed and the nation's 17th-ranked team.

The Big Sky playoffs began with Weber State edging Nevada-Reno 96-93 in overtime and Montana beating Northern Arizona 77-72 at Bozeman, Mont.

In the Pacific Coast Athletic Association tourney at the Forum in Inglewood, Calif., Fullerton State took Fresno State 73-59. In the other contest, San Jose beat Pacific 76-60. It Pacific's 22nd consecutive loss.

Regular Season

Illinois, 21-9 after its seventh victory in eight games, registered its third straight victory over a ranked team as Ken Battle and Nick Anderson scored 25 points each. The Illini beat Indiana and Iowa in previous games.

High school golf tourney set Friday, Saturday

Seven boys' teams and seven girls' teams will compete in the Hereford Invitational Golf Tournament Friday and Saturday at Pitman Municipal Golf Course.

The tournament begins at 8 a.m. each day with a shotgun start for all teams.

Hereford High School's "A" and "B" boys' teams will compete, plus Canyon, Levelland, Dumas, and the Borger "A" and "B" teams.

In the girls' tournament, Hereford, Pampa, Borger, Levelland, Caprock, Palo Duro, and Canyon are entered.

Hereford boxer Ruiz wins state ABF bronze medal

A Hereford boxer, Jaime Ruiz, won the bronze medal in the bantamweight division at the state Amateur Boxing Federation championship on Saturday in Waco.

Ruiz also competing in the Golden Gloves regional tournament in Wichita Falls on Friday, placing second.

A 199-pound boxer, Ruiz is training on his own and is fighting with the Lubbock Warriors. Ruiz lost to Edwin Perez of Fort Hood in his semifinal match in the state tournament when the referee stopped the fight in the first round.

At the Golden Gloves regionals, Ruiz lost to Ruben Navarrez in the finals. The bout was stopped in the second round.

Ruiz said he plans to enter the western trials in April, competition that will determine which boxers from the western U.S. will go to the Olympic tryouts. Gomer Garcia, a 165-pound middleweight division boxer from Hereford, also plans to compete in the western trials.

"I thank my wife Amelia for keeping time at the gym and pushing us to do a little extra," Ruiz said.

Miners have unanswered questions

UT-El Paso seeks NCAA bid

By BOB BLACK
Associated Press Writer

PROVO, Utah (AP) — The Western Athletic Conference tournament has a lot of unanswered questions. Texas-El Paso Coach Don Haskins has one of the biggest.

He's wondering whether 6-foot-6 senior Chris Sandle will be effective for the Miners today.

Sandle, a second-team all-WAC selection and the team's leading scorer, sprained his ankle in practice this week and might not be 100 per cent for the tournament. The Miners played New Mexico this afternoon.

"He will be OK, but I don't know about tomorrow," Haskins said Wednesday. "I think in order for us to have a chance to win, he's got to play well."

After all, Sandle averages 16.3 points and six rebounds per game. He also was instrumental in UTEP's 83-80 double overtime victory over tournament host Brigham Young here last weekend.

Sandle scored 21 points and grabbed six rebounds in that upset and it was his basket with 36 seconds left in the first overtime which tied the score and kept the Miners alive.

UTEP's victory last weekend gives other teams hope they'll fare well in what many coaches say is one of the more balanced postseason tournaments in WAC history. The host has not won the postseason finale in three years.

The tournament opened Wednesday night with ninth-place Hawaii defeating Air Force 84-76 for the unenviable right to play 17th ranked and WAC champion BYU, 24-4 and 13-3 Thursday night.

Today, third-seeded Utah, 11-5 and 19-9, played sixth-seeded Colorado State, 8-8 and 17-11; second-seeded Wyoming, 11-5 and 23-5, played seventh-seeded San Diego State, 5-11 and 12-16; fourth-seeded Texas-El Paso, 10-6 and 21-8, takes on fifth-seeded New Mexico, 8-8 and 20-12, and Brigham Young will play Hawaii in night games.

Coaches say Brigham Young and No. 14 Wyoming are all but guaranteed an NCAA tournament berth no matter how well they do this week.

The looming question is how teams like UTEP, Utah, New Mexico and Colorado State will do when the NCAA invitations are released Sunday.

The tournament winner will get an automatic berth in the NCAA tournament, but others will have to rely on the selection committee for berths in the remainder of the 64-team field.

Boston edges San Antonio Spurs, 119-118

'DJ' clinches Celtics win with blocked shot

By BILL BARNARD
AP Basketball Writer

Dennis Johnson, having one of his worst seasons, is still dangerous at crunch time. Larry Bird, with a broken nose and a broken eye socket, is still dangerous anytime.

Johnson, with a career-low 41.5 shooting percentage and a 12.5 scoring average that is the lowest since his rookie year of 1977, had six points, two offensive rebounds and a victory-clinching blocked shot in the final 1:13 Wednesday night. The performance carried the Boston Celtics to a 119-118 victory over the San Antonio Spurs.

"DJ saved us at the end," said Bird, who had 36 points and 13 rebounds while wearing goggles for the first time in his career to protect his eye.

Bird said the goggles "bothered me throughout the game, but if I get hit there again it could mean surgery."

Elsewhere in the NBA, it was Washington 115, Phoenix 111; Cleveland 117, Milwaukee 91; Detroit 103, Utah 98; the Los Angeles Lakers 104, New York 99; New Jersey 97, the Los Angeles Clippers 93; and Seattle 106, Sacramento 97.

San Antonio scored 10 consecutive points to pull ahead 116-113 with 1:31 left before Johnson hit a jumper with 1:13 left and a layup with 56 seconds to go for a 117-116 Boston lead.

Mike Mitchell, who led the Spurs with 20 points, then sank a jumper with 37 seconds remaining, but Johnson rebounded a missed 3-pointer by Bird and was fouled after rebounding his own missed follow shot.

Mike Mitchell, who led the Spurs with 20 points, then sank a jumper with 37 seconds remaining.

But Johnson wasn't done.

The 6-foot-4 guard rebounded Bird's off-target three-pointer with 23 seconds left, missed the followup, but got his own rebound and was fouled by Frank Brickowski.

"On that (second) rebound he must have jumped about four feet off the ground," Boston Coach K.C. Jones said. "It's hard to catch your breath after a play like that and I thought about calling time to give him some rest."

Jones didn't, but Johnson made both foul shots.

With six seconds left, Boston's Danny Ainge fouled Johnny Dawkins. The Spurs, needing just a basket to win, put the ball in bounds near midcourt and it went to Jon Sundvold at the top of the key.

Suddenly, it went flying toward the side of the court as Johnson blocked Sundvold's shot with two seconds remaining. Bird picked it up and time ran out.

Lakers 104, Knicks 99

Los Angeles snapped New York's 13-game home winning streak as Magic Johnson had 26 points, 14 rebounds and nine assists to help Coach Pat Riley win his 400th NBA game.

Mychal Thompson scored eight of his 10 points during a 17-7 run in the first 7:42 of the fourth quarter, turning an 80-78 deficit into a 95-87 lead for the Lakers.

The Knicks were led by Mark Jackson with 17 points and 13 assists.

Bullets 115, Suns 111

Washington won its seventh straight game as Moses Malone scored eight of his game-high 24 points in the final four minutes.

The Bullets led 91-77 after three quarters, but Phoenix rallied for a 100-97 advantage with 4:29 remaining. John Williams' layup cut the lead to one point and Malone made a pair of free throws to put the Bullets ahead to stay with 3:18 left.

Pistons 103, Jazz 98

Detroit snapped Utah's five-game winning streak as Bill Laimbeer scored 21 of his 27 points in the first half.

The Jazz outscored Detroit 15-4 in the first 6:40 of the fourth quarter, closing to 87-86 on a 3-point field goal by John Stockton. But consecutive baskets by Isiah Thomas capped an 8-0 spurt and gave Detroit a 95-86 lead with three minutes left.

Cavaliers 117, Bucks 91

Ron Harper scored 23 points and Brad Daugherty 20 as Cleveland ended a six-game losing streak.

The Cavaliers scored the final seven points of the second quarter, the last four by Craig Ehlo, to lead 56-44 at halftime. Milwaukee got no closer than nine after that.

Terry Cummings scored 22 for Milwaukee.

Nets 97, Clippers 93

New Jersey, 3-26 on the road this season, won its second road game in three tries under new coach Willis Reed, limiting Los Angeles to 32 points in the second half.

John Bagley scored 10 of his 24 points in the final six minutes for the Nets.

Sonics 106, Kings 97

Dale Ellis scored 24 points and Seattle hit 24 of 25 free throw attempts against Sacramento.

The Sonics never trailed. Sacramento, which got 27 points and 10 rebounds from Otis Thorpe, pulled within one point three times in the final quarter.

The Kings hit only 61 percent of its free throws, with Kenny Smith missing seven of eight.

Ann Landers

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I am writing this to everyone whose newspaper is delivered to the home by a carrier.

I live in Wisconsin, where the winters can be brutal. With the wind chill factor, it can drop to 50 degrees below zero. These hard-working kids are out in the bitter cold trying their best to get your paper delivered. I have seen youngsters limping because their feet are practically numb, and people complain because they are taking too long.

Collection days are the worst. By now everyone should know what day the carrier comes to collect and how much the bill will be. You would not believe the number of people who hide on collection day and make the kid come back two and three times.

If you answer the door and have to get cash from a drawer or your purse,or wallet upstairs, please have a heart and invite the carrier in. I know it will take you only "a minute", but a minute in a warm place is heaven to someone who is freezing. These kids have no way toe scape the elements, and some of them are outside for hours.

Carriers work awfully hard and they deserve respect and encouragement. Most of the time your paper is where you want it when you want it. Right? So when it's raining, sleeting, snowing or hot as blazes, please praise the carriers for doing their best.–Milwaukee Reader

DEAR MILWAUKEE: Thanks for a well-deserved pat on the back. You couldn't have said it better.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: My wife and I have been happily married for more than 40 years. We are college graduates and have reared and educated two lovely children. Our social life is lively and we are active in the church. We've traveled a good bit and enjoyed life's many blessings.

During most of our marriage I have been unfaithful. My affairs have been with both married and unmarried women. They were conducted with the utmost discretion and nobody was hurt.

I love my wife dearly and wouldn't hurt her for the world. She is a beautiful person, a wonderful mother and ideal helpmate, but she was always uncomfortable with intimacy, disinterested in sex, and I'm sure she would just as soon not be bothered.

I place no blame on her. Perhaps I am to blame for my inability to help her overcome her negative feelings about sex, but it wasn't for lack of trying. We sought counseling, but it didn't help.

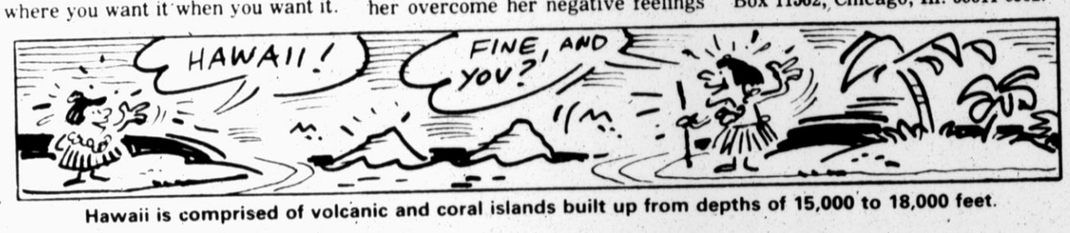

I am not particularly proud of myself, nor am I apologetic or sorry, but I don't believe that my affairs have hurt our marriage. On the contrary, they may have contributed to its longevity.

Do you agree that under the circumstances this solution was best for all concerned?–A Loving Husband in the Suburbs

DEAR L.H.: You gotta be kidding. Do you realize how much energy went into scheming, planning, hiding and lying, not to mention the act itself?

Had you expanded that energy in your own bedroom and worked at joint therapy, things could have been a lot better at home. Some men are so immature and insecure that they need to park their shoes under a variety of beds to prove they've got it. Welcome to the club, Buster.

Dressed For Spring

Sporting spring fashions of white cotton and gauze are several lifelike mannequins at Deaf Smith County Museum. The style of the clothing is representative of garments worn at the turn of the century. Serving as a backdrop for the displays are colorful quilts belonging to area pioneer famlies. Other quilts may be seen in the Bess Werner Room of the Museum.

Names in the News

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Madonna, Sylvester Stallone and Bill Cosby are among those nominated for an award they won't want to receive: the Golden Raspberry for complicity in last year's worst movies.

Norman Mailer, who directed the film of his novel, "Tough Guys Don't Dance," also took some lumps in nominations announced Tuesday by the Golden Raspberry Award Foundation.

Stallone, the all-time Razzie champ with four wins, continued the tradition with his arm-wrestling flick, "Over the Top," which got three nominations, including worst actor.

Cosby received three nominations for star, author and producer of "Leonard: Part 6," which he disavowed and almost no one saw. Madonna, last year's worst actress winner, is a contender this year for "Who's That Girl?," nominated for five Razzies.

In addition to worst director, "Tough Guys Don't Dance" was nominated for worst actress, Debra Sandlund, and worst supporting actress, Isabella Rossellini.

The Razzie ceremony will be held April 10. Winners, if they dare to show up, will receive a trophy of a golf ball-size raspberry glued atop a film reel and spray-painted with gold.

Preparing Decorations

Wilma Bryan, Jane White, and Carmen Angel, from left, are busily preparing western decorations for the evening entertainment set for Monday during the 42nd annual convention of Texas Garden Clubs. "Sunset on the Prairie" will be the theme of the 6 p.m. pre-convention buffet, which will also feature entertainment by the Hereford Senior Citizens Choir, directed by Jeff Love, and a style show of spring fashions by Little's.

--- ALONG THE BORDERS

WASHINGTON (AP) — The borders of the United States with neighboring Canada and Mexico total 7,458 miles.

The U.S.-Canadian border runs for 3,987 miles from Maine to Washington state. Between Alaska and Canada, the dividing line extends for 1,538 miles.

The U.S.-Mexican border, from the Gulf of Mexico to the Pacific Ocean, is 1,933 miles in length.

--- ENGINE PROTECTION

BRADFORD, Pa. (AP) — An oil pressure gauge offers no indication of how well a car's engine is being protected.

According to lubricant engineers at Kendall Refining Co., an oil pressure reading indicates only whether or not the proper volume of oil is being delivered to critical engine components, regardless of how old or contaminated the oil may be.

Ways with Wine

by David Hutchins

WINES ALONG THE LOIRE

France's Loire Valley stretches inland some six hundred miles from the town of Nantes on the Atlantic Ocean. This famous wine-producing region is often associated with summer retreats and summer wines. The majority of wines produced here are dry whites that consist of Sauvignon Blanc or Chenin Blanc grapes. Perhaps the most full-bodied wine of the Loire Valley is Pouilly-Fume, which is made solely with the Sauvignon Blanc grape. Contrary to popular belief the "fume" portion of the wine's name is derived from the morning mist that covers the area, not a smokey taste. A lighter dry wine of the Loire Valley is Muscadet which is made of only Melon grapes. A good compromise between Pouilly-Fume and Muscadet is Sancerre which, like Pouilly-Fume and Muscadet is Sancerre which, like Pouilly-Fume, is made only with the Sauvignon Blanc grapes

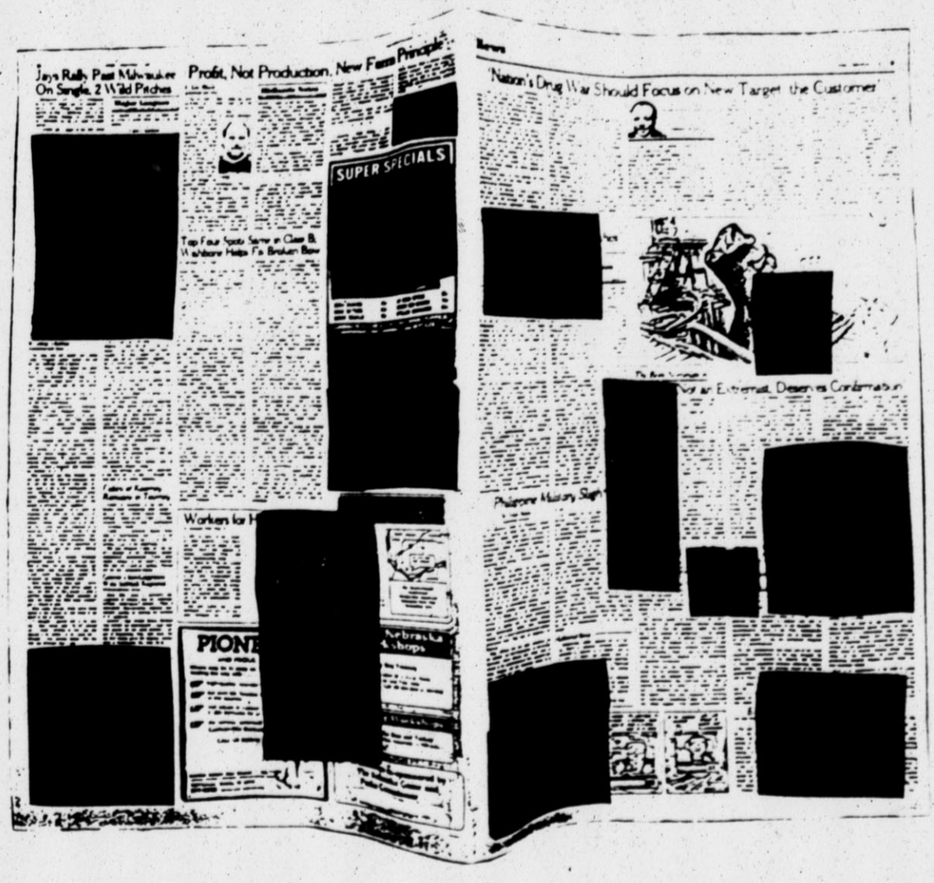

"A World of Wines" awaits you here at 400 N. 25 Mile, 364-7802. Let THE STORE assist you in your choice of wines to complement your menu and to insure you get the best value suited to your personal taste, and budget as well as your choice of food. Hours: Mon.-Sat. 10-9, use our drive up door until midnight for beer and wine, on Sun. only beer and wine is available from 12-12.

Vouvray ranges from dry to sweet, and is compromised solely of Chenin Blanc grapes.

Our Best Friends Are Cutting Us To Pieces.

Our best friends don't always give us the best treatment. Typically, they invite us into their homes, read us like a book, take what they need from us, and put us aside to use again at their convenience.

It's a tough existence, but we don't mind. In fact, we like it. The news, editorials, and advertising coupons clipped from our pages provide our readers with knowledge, enlightenment, even an occasional 30¢ off on breakfast cereal. We're kind of flattered that people enjoy hanging onto bits and pieces of us - sometimes for years. That's something no other local advertising medium can offer.

So, although our friends keep cutting us to pieces, we'll keep showing up at their homes. Our only request: sharp scissors and a steady hand.

Toy makers seek to nurture creativity

WAVELAND, Ind. (AP) — Indiana toymaker Mark Launer believes he can improve the world of tomorrow by nurturing creativity in children today.

"We have to realize that from age zero to adolescence is where the future occurs ... We must begin concentrating on development at the right stage to prevent conflicts in the world," says Launer, a 46-year-old father of three grown children.

"Children are born with what I call creative exuberance," he adds. "They're learning at 80 miles an hour and doing it enthusiastically. They learn because they want to learn ... It's this wonderful growth process at 80 mph that's driven out of adults."

Launer says today's adults must nurture their children's creative exuberance to ensure the world will have sound thinkers and problem solvers in the future. And the artist says he's trying to help that process along with his creative learning toys.

He launched Blocks and Marbles Brand Toys Inc., now based in nearby Crawfordsville, three years ago.

"I started in the garage with $300 and built it into a national company that's in the million-dollar-a-year sales range," Launer says.

The company markets only Launer's original toy, Blocks and Marbles — a set of grooved and holed building blocks that, if engineered properly, allows a marble to roll continuously from top to bottom.

The game debuted as a hands-on exhibit at the Indianapolis Children's Museum a few years ago and is being displayed now in more than 30 museums across the country.

"When I got this one off the ground, it gave me the ability to create new toys and a new company," says Launer, who is forming the Nova Development Co. to market four other toys.

Launer's second product, an architecturally updated block toy called Terra Nova, also is being exhibited at the Children's Museum and should be on the market next spring.

"What the kids make starts to look like the architecture around them," says Launer, who has initiated local Terra Nova building competitions at Indianapolis-area libraries and the museum.

"Mark's toys encourage creative thinking and problem-solving skills," says Mark Kesling, the museum's educator-curator of physical science. "The other thing they encourage is family learning. Parents are playing alongside their kids in those exhibits; parents play with kids they didn't know; kids play with other kids they didn't know," he says.

Kesling says he hopes to display Globe Tag, which Launer says is his answer to "the trend toward geographic illiteracy in this country."

"The problem is that we live right now in a two-dimensional era. You can't understand geography unless it's in a three-dimensional context," Launer says.

"In the last two generations, the world has lost a dimension. When I was a kid we had back yards and trees, distance and travel. You'd drive a car to Oklahoma and know what was in between. The distance between here and Los Angeles is now just one boring airport to another boring airport," he says.

With Globe Tag, which is in the final stages of development, players start at a point on a globe and roll dice to determine the distance they can travel. They are given resource materials to answer questions from competitors, who try to stymie their progress by guessing where they are. The winner is the first person to meet certain criteria while going completely around the world.

While Launer readies his newest developments for market, he continues to work out new ideas in a studio located on the first floor of his home in downtown Waveland, a quiet little community nestled among cornfields and state parks about 60 miles northwest of Indianapolis.

Ask Dr. Lamb

DEAR DR. LAMB: A year ago I went to my doctor for a Pap test. He told me that my uterus was tipped. This month I went for my test and he told me that my uterus had fallen way down and is on the verge of coming out. It causes some discomfort with urination, like frequency and a stinging pain. There seems to be pressure on my rectum when having a bowel movement.

I'm 51 years old and going through the menopause. What causes this to happen? I have never had children. My doctor didn't suggest that anything be done about it, just to be back in a year for another Pap test. What procedures are done to correct this?

DEAR READER: When a female begins to 'mature sexually and produces an increased amount of estrogen, there is an increase in the size of tissues and structures associated with maturation. When the amount of hormones decrease, these tissues atrophy and the support to the uterus and vaginal area may be considerably weakened. That, combined with having given birth leads to a group of hernias, including a prolapse of the uterus, a rupture of the bladder into the vagina and of the rectum into the vagina. While it is less likely for this to occur in a woman who has not had children, it can happen just because of weakened support.

If the condition is sufficiently troublesome, the only real approach is surgery. The bladder can be lifted back into place and supported. The rectal support can be reinforced and the uterus properly supported. I think you need to consult a gynecologist for a second opinion to find out just what your status is.

You will want to know more about these common hernias, so I'm sending you Special Report 56, Hysterectomy, Cystocele and Rectocele. Others who want this report can send $1.00 and a long, self-addressed envelope with 39 cents postage to THE HEALTH LETTER/56, P.O. Box 19622, Irvine, CA 92713.

"Tipped uterus" might need more explanation. Usually when the uterus is not in the ideal position, nothing really needs to be done, and it may not produce any symptoms. But in some cases, a displaced uterus can cause symptoms and may respond to support with a pessary.

DEAR DR. LAMB: What are some of the major causes of vaginal dryness? Could it be 'the use of tampons or because my boyfriend uses a condom? I used to be able to please him, but lately I've been having trouble because of the discomfort of vaginal dryness.

I've tried lubrication products from drug stores, but it's just not the same as natural lubrication. Are there any pills I can take? Can you suggest a good lubrication product?

DEAR READER: Unless you can be absolutely certain that your sexual partner has sex only with you and that he is free from sexually transmitted diseases, it is extremely important these days to use a condom. While the AIDS problem gets lots of attention, there are other sexually transmitted diseases that are also less likely to be transmitted if a condom is used. That includes genital herpes, hepatitis, and chlamydia. The latter may be asymptomatic and still cause female sterility.

A condom should not affect a woman's natural secretions. If you really are dry, see your gynecologist. You may need some hormone support. Otherwise, you might find that K-Y Lubricating Jelly (Johnson & Johnson) will help. Also, remember that adequate stimulation and excitement help to promote natural lubrication.

DEAR DR. LAMB: I seem to remember reading in your column something about a drug that athletes who are plagued with asthma use to ward off attacks when they are playing. If I am correct, what is the drug and can a 6-year-old boy uses it? Naturally, we would discuss it with his doctor. We have a frustrated soccer fiend.

DEAR READER: You remembered correctly. The medicine is cromolyn sodium, marketed for asthma as Intal. This medicine can be inhaled and may be used regularly to prevent asthma attacks. It is NOT used to abort or treat an attack that has already started.

The way an asthma attack is precipitated is rather complex. The simple example is an allergic response, but there are also non-allergic mechanisms, including a nerve reflex mechanism. Cromolyn sodium helps prevent attacks regardless of whether it is allergic or non-allergic asthma, or a combination of the two.

It is not used in children who are 5 years old or younger, so you are at the edge of its recommended usage. There are other medications that are also used to prevent or control exercise-induced asthma. There is a lot more to the question of whether children, or adults for that matter, who have asthma should exercise or not. I have discussed this in more detail in Special Report 40, Understanding Asthma, which I am sending you. Others who want this report can send $1.00 and a long, self-addressed envelope with 39 cents postage to THE HEALTH LETTER/40, P.O. Box 19622, Irvine, CA 92713.

Exercise can and does precipitate asthmatic attacks. Yet many asthmatics have been Olympic champions.

In addition to medicines, you need to consider such factors as pollution and temperature. Air pollution can significantly increase the likelihood of exercise-induced asthma. In some situations, breathing cold air may be more of a factor than the exercise itself. Many sporting goods stores do have air warmers to help with this problem.

The duration of exercise is also an important factor. Usually with an understanding coach or trainer and the cooperation of the physician and parents, most children can engage in some level of physical activity.

DEAR DR. LAMB: I have an ailment that is worrying me. My tongue is coated every night when I'm ready to brush my teeth. My health is good and I have told my doctor about it, but he gives me the brush-off. I'm counting on you to help me.

DEAR READER: Your worries are over. It is perfectly normal to have a coated tongue. Your skin sheds old cells eery day and you don't know it. That is because the old cells are constantly replaced by new cells. Your tongue must do the same thing. Most of the cells accumulate on its surface, thus, the coated tongue.

These accumulated dead cells are more prominent in some people than in others. Also, food and beverages (like coffee) can stain the coating and alarm some people. Bacteria can grow there and contribute to bad breath. When you brush your teeth, also brush your tongue. It won't hurt you, and you will remove the accumulation and go to bed with a clean, uncoated tongue.

Spouse should know financial picture

If your spouse always pays the bills, fills out the tax forms and handles other family finances, you could be seriously uninformed about your financial picture.

"While it used to be that many wives were in this situation, it's now just as likely to be a husband," says family economics expert Nancy L. Granovsky.

"Although having each spouse specialize in certain chores can be a time-saver, finances are important enough that both should have a working knowledge of their situation," she adds.

"It's very difficult to consider the possibilities of divorce or the death of a spouse, yet these two events cause the most financial devastation for a family," observes the Texas A&M University Agricultural Extension Service Specialist.

While gathering materials together to prepare this year's income taxes, she suggests that both spouses review their financial picture, make sure they have the answers to the following questions:

-Are family assets, including bank accounts, available to both spouses, so they won't be tied up in probate in the case of a partner's death?

-Do both spouses have current wills that take into account guardianship of minor children in the event both of you die?

-Do each of you have adequate life insurance protection to ensure the maintenance of the household?

-Do you each have credit established in your own names, so that you won't be caught without a credit rating?

-What are your rights to group health insurance continuation through your spouse's employer?

-What pension or survivors' benefits would you be entitled to from your spouse's employer, the Veteran's Administration of Social Security?

-Can you easily locate important papers, including past tax returns, deeds, insurance policies, wills, marriage and birth certificates?

-Do you both know the location of the key to your safety deposit box and have a separate list of its contents?

Satellite dish well-used by former major league pitcher

Fergie keeps in touch with baseball world

By STEVE CAMPBELL
Fort Worth Star-Telegram

PORT CHARLOTTE, Fla. (AP) — Through the wonders of a home satellite dish, Ferguson Jenkins stayed in touch with the baseball world he had left.

Out of sight, going out of his mind.

From his 100-acre farm in Blenheim, Ontario, Jenkins dropped in on major-league ballparks across the continent. What Jenkins saw the last two years was enough to prompt him to start looking for a way to make a difference.

Jenkins, whose major-league playing career ended in 1982, is in the Texas Rangers spring training camp as a pitching coach for their Oklahoma City (AAA) affiliate. Look at it as his way of trying to put a stop to the senseless abuse of baseballs.

"I had never seen hitters jack out so many fastballs right here," Jenkins said, putting his right hand waist-high. "Crushing the ball. I thought pitchers weren't setting up hitters to the point where they're pitchers instead of throwers. Pitching is an art form."

Jenkins created a museum's worth of masterpieces in 19 seasons, painting the corners of the plate for a 284-226 career record and 3.34 earned run average. He took seven 20-victory seasons, 49 shutouts, a 1971 Cy Young Award and a lot of know-how with him when he retired.

This winter, Rangers pitching coach Tom House took the time to analyze some old films of Jenkins, who won 93 games in a Texas uniform from 1974 to 1975 and from 1978 to 1981.

"With a couple of minor exceptions, he's as good a model as he could be," House says. "The bottom line with Fergie — how we got what we wanted through to him — is, if he could teach the way he pitched, it would be perfect."

If Jenkins can teach pitchers how to match his Rangers-record 25 victories of 1974, he will be on to something. If Jenkins can teach pitchers what it takes to match his 267 complete games in 594 career starts, the Rangers will be on to something. Of course, Jenkins will be working with pupils who aren't quite so advanced.

"You never know what kind of teacher someone is going to be," says Texas general manager Tom Grieve, who played with Jenkins in 1974-75. "You have to find out. But Fergie is a guy who throughout his career did not rely on great ability. He relied on know-how and finesse."

Jenkins credits former Chicago Cubs pitching coach Joe Decker and manager Leo Durocher for demanding the use of more than raw ability. Long after Jenkins started losing zip from a fastball that once went 90 mph, he overmatched hitters with sinkers, sliders and control.

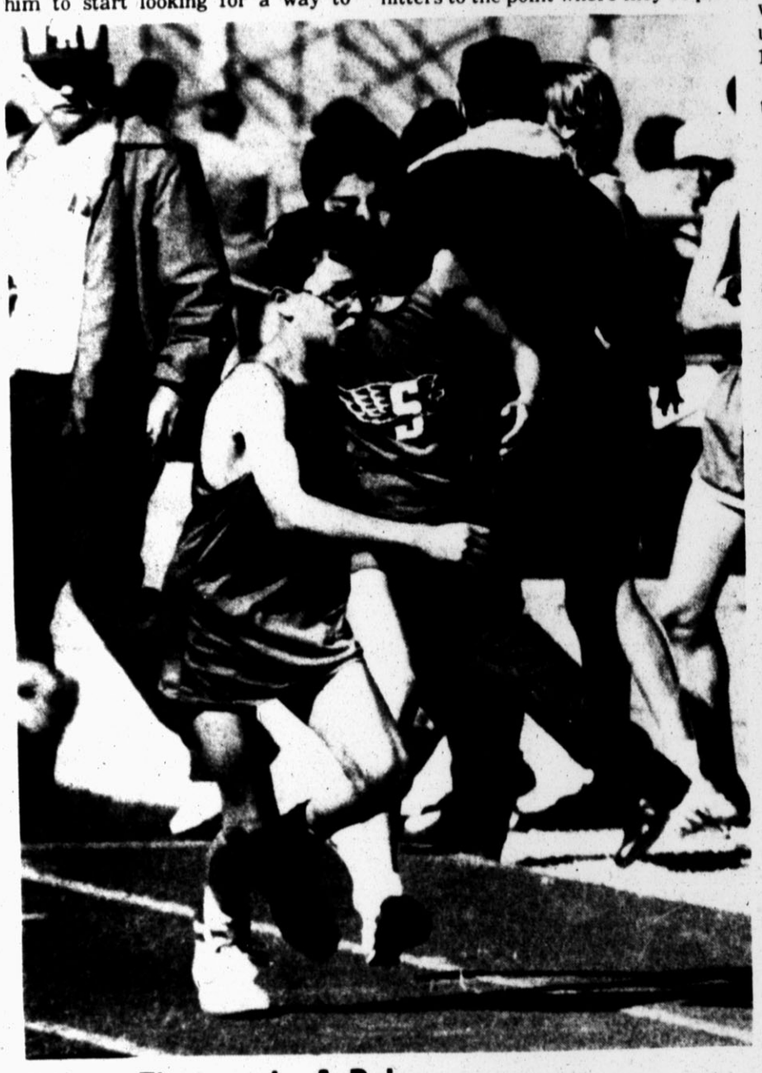

"My theory is you don't intimidate people by throwing at them; you intimidate people by throwing strikes," says Jenkins, who pitched for the Rangers, Cubs, Phillies and Red Sox.

"The games are extremely long now. You have to have an idea every inning who is coming up, what kind of pitch you want to throw. Pitching is a quick-thinking position. You can't be mechanical. You're not out there being a robot."

Think, think, think. House and assistant pitching coach Dick Egan already have laid out the conditioning programs and mechanics to be taught, so Jenkins has spent much of his time this spring trying to instill some mental principles of pitching. Moving the ball inside and out. Challenging hitters. Studying opponents.

"If you look at the record book, Dick and I weren't exactly Hall of Famers," House says. "He brings that credibility to the coaching staff. It means something, a guy who wins 300 games talking about the mound being your home, and taking care of a house."

Or at least helping a House by developing the Rangers' Triple-A pitchers. Oklahoma City manager Toby Harrah, a big-leaguer for 15 seasons, calls Jenkins "the greatest pitcher I ever played behind." During an eight-season stretch from 1967-74, Jenkins averaged 21 victories, 14 defeats and 304 innings.

Discus Thrower In A Relay

What Does a typical Brand Reader Look Like?

That's difficult to say because you are as different as your substantial number would imply! You are one of the 4,100 households we're invited to every evening. That's quite a few. According to the most recent census, our township has slightly less than 5000 households.

Your vocation is part of a broad spectrum as well -- white collar, blue collar, owners, managers, cowboys, teachers, housewifes, students and professional.

Yet, with all your individual complexities, your interest in local issues and news gives you and other readers a common bond which is separated only by your level of curiosity.

You are an informed, intelligent and often vocal audience, and we're happy to be a part of your household every evening!
