Proclamation

By the President of the United States

"Both the State and Federal governments have been especially concerned with the problems of older workers, many thousands of whom, despite their persistent ef-orts, still lack a place in industry. Among these are a considerable number of World War Veterans who now average 47 years of age, and who, I feel, have a particular appeal to our national sense of responsibility.

"Our public employment service—a nation-wide network of sixteen hundred offices now operated jointly by the State and Federal governments—has made special efforts in behalf of workers past 40 years of age, including veterans. We know from the facts gathered by this agency that men and women in middle life possess abilities and skills which would fit them for employment in their tasks which in many callings outweigh the physical advantages of youth.

"With these considerations in mind, I issued a proclamation last year designating an Employment Week and requesting that all our citizens give particular and active attention to the problems of older workers lacking employment. During the month in which Employment Week occurred over a third of a million jobs—a third more than during the same month of the previous year—were filled through the public employment offices, and a quarter of a million of these placements were in private industry. Moreover, placements proceeded at an accelerated rate in the month following Employment Week. Because of the concerted efforts of government, of public-spirited groups, and, particularly, of employers throughout the land, thousands of workers over forty years of age, among the veterans, shared beneficially in this fine result.

"I am grateful for the wholehearted response to my first appeal; and as President, I desire to encourage a continued nationwide interest in this persistent problem."

"NOW, THEREFORE, I, FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT,

President of the United States of America, do hereby designate the week beginning May 1, 1940, as National Employment Week, and Sunday, May 5, 1940, as National Employment Sunday, and I urge all churches, civic organizations, Chambers of Commerce, Boards of Trade, veterans' organizations, industry, labor, public-spirited citizens, the radio, and the press throughout the United States to observe that week as National Employment Week, to the end that interest in the welfare of the unemployed and especially the workers over forty years of age, may be stimulated and employ-

ENGLAND HAS BIG PROBLEM OVER NORWAY

By LOUIS F. KEEMLE

United Press Cable Editor

The Allies were faced today with the possibility that they may have to withdraw from Central

Norway and leave the main part of the country in German hands.

The campaign could not yet be said to be lost, but the successful

German drive up the Gudsbrands and Oester Valleys towards Trondheim has imperiled the entire Allied position.

Withdrawal would be a bitter pill for the Allies to swallow. It would not mean the loss of the war, any more than the collapse of the Gallipoli campaign spelled defeat in the World War, but it would leave the Germans in a highly strategic position for attacks on the British Isles.

Moreover, it would be a tremendous blow to Allied prestige among the European neutrals, including the all-important southeastern countries. It might be the factor which would decide wavering Italy

on which way to jump.

Failure of the Allies to save either Finland or Poland made a bad enough impression on the neutrals, but they had the excuse that they were geographically unable to get to the aid of those two countries.

In this case, they have gone into action and would be placed in the position of important saviors of the victim of aggression. If the Allies withdrew, Norwegian resistance would have to cease, just as Finnish resistance did.

The Allied supreme war council

thus may be called upon within a matter of days to make a vital decision. What it will be, no one

Attempt of Government to Regulate Oil Production Is An Attack On Fundamental Rights Producer Says

WASHINGTON, D. C., May 1.—

The attempt of the Federal

"Whether the principle that State regulation of oil production fate of the oil industry and all who are engaged therein," Mr.

Hill declared. "There is involved

Fighting Fire With Fire

You can't fight a war against a totalitarian country without going totalitarian yourself—at least for the time being.

The British and French are finding that out. For seven years, Hitler's Germany has been making its people work longer and harder. The extra production, instead of going to the people to make life better, has been flung into preparation for the war.

Now the British and French, out to destroy such a system, find that in fighting it they have to do about the same thing.

As early as last November, John Maynard Keynes, British economist, put forth a plan now elaborated into a book, "How to Pay for the War." Details aside, Keynes proposes that each wage earner or family be allowed only a specific income, based on present normal subsistence needs. The rest of its income would be taken at the source and credited to him as savings.

After the war at such times as the government decided purchasing power was needed (that is, when the inevitable slump comes) those compulsory savings would be paid back to those who had earned, but not received them.

It will be readily seen that this is just about what is done in a war anyway, except that it is compulsory and systematic, whereas voluntary war savings (remember Liberty Bonds and Thrift Stamps) are hit-or-miss. Keynes argues that civilians must consume less, so that more can be put into the war effort. The way to do it is simply to see to it that they don't have any money beyond actual need. Then, the war over, war production turns to civilian goods again, and the savings funds are paid back to people so they can buy them.

It won't be any harder to pay those savings back to everybody than to pay war debts back to those who now put up the money, Keynes argues, but if it is, you just have a whopping capital levy.

Whether Keynes' plan is adopted in full, total war must eventually mean something very like this. Free countries fighting totalitarianism have no choice but to become themselves totalitarian with the hope that after the war they will be able somehow to scramble back to a free way of life again.

Diabetes Takes A Heavy Toll In State Last Year

AUSTIN, Texas.—Diabetes, the price America pays for indulgence in living, took a toll of 739 lives in Texas last year, according to Dr. George W. Cox, State Health Officer.

"While the controllable diseases, such as typhoid fever, malaria, diphtheria, and smallpox, are causing a smaller number of deaths, such year in this country, diabetes, which was notably absent in the early pioneer days, is now causing a staggering number of lives," Doctor Cox said.

"Up until the highly mechanized age diabetes was not a health problem, but the disease became noticeable in direct ratio to the encroachment of luxury living, soft eating, soft habits, and general disregard for basic hygiene laws in our daily lives. Diabetes is nature's back-slap at coddling and pampering the body," Dr. Cox pointed out.

"Diabetes is a class disease. It attacks the indoor, sedentary type of person more often than a person whose work is vigorous or who combines work with sufficient exercise. Whatever the actual cause of the development of the disease may be, vacation or economic status are factors, for it is apparent that those persons who cannot indulge in luxurious living and whose occupation calls for physical effort are not frequently affected.

"There would be fewer victims of ravishing diabetes," Doctor Cox added, "if those who are indulging in unnatural living would realize the folly of their ways. Persons of middle age and those beyond that age should exercise particular attention to avoiding diabetes. Sim-

Miss Oppenheimer Oil Industry Is To Be Presented Hiring Chemists To Create Mud Pies

Mrs. Hollis Bennett, president of the Las Leñas Club of Eastland, announces that arrangements have been completed to present Miss Evelyn Oppenheimer of Dallas as reviewer of the new and popular book "How Green Was My Valley" by Lewellyn. The review will be given at the Eastland High School Auditorium on the evening of May 6th, 8:00 p. m.

ple living, annual physical examinations, and it already showing the results of indulgence, obtaining and abiding by the advice of the family physician, could drastically cut down the power of diabetes and its threat to an alarming proportion of adult America."

NEW YORK—Mud pies are the eternal spring-time topic of housewives, and the eternal joy of the small boy. At least one American industry, however, takes these small boys when they grow up and become chemists and physicists, and gives them full-time jobs just making mud pies. For to the petroleum industry the drilling of today's deep oil wells, two to three miles deep, is possible only because of drilling muds, muds that do not one, but at least three jobs.

Deep wells are bored with a drill on the end of a rigid pipe which is rotated. The pipe is hollow, and throughout the drilling of the well, drilling mud is forced down through the pipe, and back up to the surface outside the pipe, to be used over again.

This mud must hold back the gas pressures encountered in underground formations, so that the well doesn't blow out. Second, as it passes through the drill at the bottom of the hole, the mud must pick up the drill cuttings and hold them in suspension until they can be settled out on the surface. Finally, as the mud passes back up to the surface outside the pipe, it must plaster the sides of the hole with a thin, but impenetrable wall, so that the water used in drilling does not escape, so that underground water formations that may be penetrated by the drill on the way down do not enter the hole, and so that the walls of the hole don't cave in.

To do all of these jobs properly, the drilling mud must have many carefully predetermined properties. Drilling mud looks like any other glutinous mixture of dirt and water, but its ingredients are as carefully measured and mixed as a doctor's prescription. Heavy-weighting materials, like barite, are added to make the density, and weight, as great as possible, to hold back the extremely high pressures encountered underground. Clay muds are used to attain the viscosity needed to pick up and hold cuttings in suspension and to plaster the sides of the hole. In quantities of fluid materials, like bentonite, are added.

Proper mixture and maintenance of these properties in drilling muds are so important that oil companies must employ chemists and physicists at well-drilling locations as well as in their laboratories, scientists whose sole concern is making industrial "mud pies."

THE GENERAL SHOWER

BET ON LOVE BY CHARLES B. PARMER

YESTERDAY, Wharton wins the horse, but Uncle Willie shows his claim and that of the other trainers were made in violation of Jockey Club rules. The horse is returned to Sherry. Later, Paul explains he was trying to save Pepper Boy for Sherry, begs her to marry him now. She starts to answer.

CHAPTER VII

EAGERLY, Paul Wharton waited for Sherry to continue. "Yes, Sherry, go on."

But Sherry's sentence was never finished. At that moment a tall, thin chap, with a great mop of blond hair, stepped into the box. "Sherry Bond!"

"Sherry Grant! What are you doing here?" She jerked her hand free, grasped Grant's outstretched hand. Wharton looked up, making little effort to conceal his resentment. "My friend, Paul Wharton, Sherry, this is Sherry Grant. Sit down, Sherry."

"Swell colt you've got, Sherry," Grant was saying. "He's got everything. And can he run! And Madden--I couldn't have ridden Pepper Boy much better myself. I intended offering, but I couldn't make it in from Chicago in time."

"Since when have you been riding on the flat?" Wharton asked. "Thought you were the white-haired boy in steeplechasing."

"I do ride over the sticks," Sherry Grant answered nonchalantly, his eyes never leaving Sherry's face, "but I'm light. Going to ride on the flat this season, too. But say, Sherry, about the Derby--"

"Paul was just speaking of it," she said, tonelessly.

"Yeah? About Pepper Boy? Say--heard there were a couple of claims--did you lose him?"

She shook her head. "Paul says he was ready to save him."

"That so?" The intruder looked suspiciously at Wharton. The latter ignored his glance.

"Paul advised me twice not to start the colt in a claimer. When I did, he tried to claim him for me. He--and the other fellow--both lost on technicalities."

"Let me get this straight," the rider looked from Wharton to Sherry. "He was going to let you buy him back, at the claiming price?"

"Yes."

The blond chap whistled--softly. And grinned. Sherry saw Wharton's face turn fiery red. She looked at the second man. "Sherry Grant, what's up?"

"Not a thing," he said with an exaggerated drawl, "not a little thing. But you ought to bone up on claiming rules, before you fall for bedtime tales."

WHARTON was on his feet. He said in low tones: "You might explain that--and you might explain where you come in on this."

"I come in right here, fellow," Sherry Grant got to his feet, faced Wharton. "Maybe that's business, Wharton--you're a whiz at business; but racing's something else again."

Sherry's voice rose insistently, "Please explain, Sherry."

"Nothing special to explain," he turned to her. "But you should know that no horse claimed can start in the name of its former owner till 30 days have passed--and 14 days from today the Kentucky Derby is run. Seems as if Wharton was going to be in the Derby--with Pepper Boy carrying his colors. Later, the colt might run in yours again."

"You may know racing," Wharton's voice cracked, "but you've got a lot to learn about human nature. My colors are going to be in the Derby, carried by Red Soldier, the only colt of real Derby caliber on this track--as you'll see when the Handicap is run. He's going to spreadeagle that field. I don't need Sherry's colt--and if I did, I haven't sunk that low." He turned his shoulder, then spoke over it to the gentleman rider, "Good day, Grant."

GRANT stood there for a moment, reddened from top of soft collar to edge of his fair hair, then quietly turned and left the box. Sherry, over Paul Wharton's shoulder, watched him move off in the aisle crowds.

"Paul," she asked, "is it true--what Sherry said? That I couldn't buy the colt back in less than 30 days?"

"You could buy him back the next minute--but you couldn't race him until 30 days passed."

"I see." She glanced out toward the track, where a field was parading to the post. "Paul, then the colt couldn't--"

He broke in, sensing her question. "The colt would have run in your name, silly." He spoke the words lightly.

"How could he?" she asked, a cloud gathering in her face.

"Silly!" he repeated, as if to a child. "He'd have run in the name of Mrs. Paul Wharton, of course!"

"Oh, oh!" she repeated, eyes focused on his face. "How very sweet of you! Using my Pepper Boy as a sort of bribe--to get me to marry you!"

HOT tears burned Sherry's eyes as she hurried through the crowd to the big man standing at the rail.

$25 Wardrobe For Farm Women Is Designed By Class

COLLEGE STATION--An attractive wardrobe costing $25 a year.

That's what advanced students at the Texas State College for Women, Denton, have planned for the 1940 farm women of Texas. And not only planned, for they've actually purchased accessories and underwear, made inexpensive dresses, and secured necessary cosmetics, all within the slim $25 budget. The work was done under the direction of Miss Gladys McGill, associate professor of the department of home economics.

More than a thousand home demonstration club women from North, Central, and East Texas viewed articles in this phenomenal wardrobe during the recent home demonstration women's short course held on the TSCW campus in cooperation with the Extension Service of A. & M. College.

In addition to modeling these attractive clothes which they had either made or purchased, the students told how many of the articles or piece goods had been purchased at end-of-the-season sales. The wardrobe included such diverse articles as cotton anklets for garden or household wear, a sunbonnet, galoshes, three pairs of work gloves, three house dresses, and lipstick from the five-and-ten-cent store.

The budget included a list of "necessities" which have to be added to the wardrobe each year plus special purchases for the

Jehovah's Witness Facts Enumerated In Magazine Story

Editor's Note: The following article, which appeared in the Fact Digest, under the title "Jehovah's Witnesses", is being reprinted at the request of advocates of the sect in this part of the country, because many facts concerning the movement are brought out. The article was written by G. R. Moyle.

Whirring presses, clacking typewriters, heavily laden trucks coming and going, and the clatter of other machinery, give evidence of the busy activity of Jehovah's witnesses at their factory on Adams Street in the Borough of Brooklyn, New York City. A well lighted, immaculately clean and neat eight-story concrete building is the starting point of the millions of books, pamphlets and periodicals of the organization that go forth to the ends of the earth in English and scores of other languages. Another building of similar size on Columbia Heights in Brooklyn shelters the two hundred volunteer workers engaged at the plant and headquarters offices.

In general appearance Jehovah's witnesses are like other people. They wear no distinctive form of apparel. You will not find long whiskers, sanctified appearance, or any holier-than-thou atmosphere among them. They claim to be genuine, honest-to-goodness Christians. Their devotion to principle, to their tasks, and the absence of desire for honor of men, or monetary profit, gives merit to their claim.

Ask one of Jehovah's witnesses for a statement concerning his belief, or reasons for his convictions, and his answer brings you immediately to the Bible. The Bible is their guide. They cut through and reject any and all creeds and practices which are not upheld by the Scriptures. They engage in much independent research of the Scriptures and from it express their belief to the whole world.

They flatly deny many doctrines upheld as fundamental by religious denominations. A sample is that of the inherent immortality of the soul. The overwhelming majority of churches assert that there is within the human creature an immortal spark of life, termed the soul, which does not die and cannot die. Ask one of Jehovah's witnesses for his opinion concerning the subject. He will promptly bring to your attention Ezekiel 18, verses 4, which in part reads as follows: "... the soul that sinneth, it shall die." This will be followed up by Psalm 89, verse 48, "What man is he that liveth and shall not see death? shall he deliver his soul from the hand of the grave?" If this does not convince you that the soul actually dies, he will cite half a dozen more Scriptures, and inform you that it is not a matter of interpretation but of accepting the plain and definite language of the Bible on the subject.

As to the condition of the dead, Jehovah's witnesses likewise differ from the religious denominations. They assert, and present voluminous Scripture citations to support it, that the dead are out of existence, that this unconscious condition is likened to sleep in the Bible, and that therefore all the creeds and theories which claim the dead are being tormented or punished with conscious suffering in a place called hell or purgatory are false and a defamation of the good name of Almighty God. "His breath goeth forth, he returneth to his earth; in that very day his thoughts perish" (Psalms 146:4) is one of the many scriptural passages presented to prove their point that the dead are unconscious and unable to know anything or suffer anything. The teaching of eternal torment in hell, or temporary torture in a place called purgatory, is strongly condemned.

Some opponents of Jehovah's witnesses claim their message is vindictive and provocative of strife or religious bigotry. It is alleged that such overlook much of what is disseminated. There is one important teaching which Jehovah's witnesses emphasize greatly. That is the gospel of the Kingdom of Almighty God. They refer to the statement of the Lord's Prayer, which says, "Thy kingdom come; Thy will be done on earth, as in heaven." Citing other Scriptures corroborative of this, Jehovah's witnesses tell of the early establishment and manifestation of a theocratic government on this earth which will eliminate the misfortunes and injustices of this day and usher in a reign of righteousness for all people, who will be submissive thereto. They state that the time is at hand for the complete manifestation of this new kingdom and that a great time of distress and trouble resulting in the forcible destruction of all earthly governments by Almighty God is close at hand. It is vitally necessary, they say, for all people to give attention to the promises in the Divine revelation and take their stand definitely on the side of the Lord and His Kingdom.

That in so doing they will inherit the promises of protection during the last great battle, and be ushered safely into the Kingdom and receive its blessings.

Judge J. F. Rutherford, a former Missouri attorney, is the visible director of activities of Jehovah's witnesses. He doesn't claim to be a prophet, nor does he fit the ordinary idea of a prophet. There are no long whiskers covering his countenance, and he wears no distinctive style of robe or clothing, not even a frock coat. Some years ago he gave up his law practice to use all his time in proclaiming the "Kingdom message." These years have been years of tremendous industry. His writings have reached the tremendous circulation of two hundred seventy-nine million, a record unequalled by any publication except the Bible. He is the chief contributor to The Watchtower, a semi-monthly periodical, and oversees the activities of the organization from one end of the earth to the other. As a radio speaker of the world renown, his voice has on many occasions encircled the earth on the largest radio hookups in history—on one occasion some 163 stations comprised the chain, supplemented by electrical transcription of the speech over 300 stations. Every year about 25,000,000 books and booklets go forth from the headquarters at Brooklyn to all countries, kindreds and climes. Sound cars, sound boats, portable phonographs, radio, and the printed page are thus all used to carry a Bible message to all who hunger and thirst after truth and honesty in the treatment of the scriptures.

All of this tremendous widespread circulation of Biblical matters does not go forth without opposition. Religionists greatly oppose criticism of their doctrines and practices by Jehovah's witnesses. It has by them been challenged to produce its best speaker and debate the issues on the public platform, but has not met the challenge. But they have opposed the work in various ways. In the United States two thousand of Jehovah's witnesses have been subjected to arrest and imprisonment during the past two years. It has been a multiple-law inquisition. Some twenty odd varieties of laws, such as circular-distribution laws, peddling ordinances, offensive-literature laws, vagrancy laws, solicitation ordinances and similar enactments have been used to interdict and suppress the work. In Germany six thousand of Jehovah's witnesses have been thrust into concentration camps and treated with barbaric cruelty. Boycott campaigns against radio stations broadcasting Judge Rutherford's lectures have been initiated. And when other methods have failed, narrowminded religionists have stirred up the mob element to attack and inflict physical violence on these Christian people.

And through it all Jehovah's witnesses go cheerfully on their way, spending their time, their money, and their strength in fulfillment of what to them is a Divine mandate to preach the gospel of the Kingdom to all people.

Oil statistics show that to find each billion barrels of petroleum the oil industry has to drill 4,000 dry holes. At an average of $20,000 per dry hole that's a cost of $80,000,000 to find one large new Texas field.
