BABY NOT SERIOUS

Husband of Slayer Refuses To Talk After Shooting

WACO, Aug. 3. (AP)—Calmly, 24-year-old Mrs. B. O. Ashworth walked into the joint offices of the Waco News-Tribune and Times-Herald today, engaged Miss Charlie Lawson, 24, in a brief, low-voiced conversation, and a moment later shot her to death as she ran screaming for security behind a concrete pillar.

Menacing other clerks with a tiny automatic pistol, Mrs. Ashworth sought to force acid down the throat of her 18-months-old daughter, whom she carried in her arms, and then drained the fatal contents of the phial just as her husband, cashier for the newspapers, rushed upon the scene.

Baby May Live

Mrs. Ashworth died a few minutes later at a hospital. The baby was said by physicians not to have been injured seriously.

Ashworth declined to make a statement. After an investigation the police reported that they believed Mrs. Ashworth had slain Miss Lawson while temporarily deranged.

Nobody heard the conversation which preceded the shooting. Ashworth said he had not known of his wife's presence until he heard three shots.

Inquest Today

Newspaper employes said that Mrs. Ashworth appeared to be composed as she entered the office, carrying her baby daughter in her arms. Nothing unusual was noticed until Miss Lawson leaped to her feet, shrieked and raced towards the concrete pillar. Without another word Mrs. Ashworth whipped out the little pistol and began shooting. She still grasped the weapon in her hand when she sank to the floor unconscious from the acid.

An inquest was set for tomorrow.

Confession Fails to Save Husband

Although Mrs. Eula Mae Thompson, above, declared in a confession yesterday that she had framed the murder of a Georgia storekeeper, her husband, Clifford Thompson, and Jim Moss, a negro, were electrocuted for the crime when Governor L. G. Hardman refused to accept the confession. Mrs. Thompson is also condemned to die for the killing but her case is under appeal.

Wife's Confession Fails to Save Her Husband From Death in Electric Chair

Uneducated Georgia Youth and Negro Are Executed When Governor Refuses to Accept Story of Bride

MILLEDGEVILLE, Ga., Aug. 3. (UP)—Two men paid with their lives today for the murder of another when Governor L. G. Hardman refused to accept a last minute confession by the wife of one of them that she had "framed" them.

Clifford Thompson, 22-year-old country youth who could neither read nor write, went to the chair at 2:10 p. m., for the murder of Coleman Osborne, Chatsworth, Ga., storekeeper. Jim Moss, negro, followed Thompson a few minutes later.

In his reusal to grant a respite to the men, Governor Hardman said their lawyers had had a year to investigate the murder and had not brought forward such a confession until the last minute. He added he was convinced the courts had rendered a righteous verdict.

Wife Makes Confession

Mrs. Eula Mae Thompson, wife of Clifford, made the confession early today in the presence of newspaper men and officials of the Fulton county tower, where she has been confined the past few weeks. Mrs. Thompson also is under death sentence for the murder, but an appeal is pending in her case.

In the confession she said that she and B. W. Swan, an elderly Chatsworth man, had Osborne murdered because he "found out about our affair." Swan brought her the pistols, Mrs. Thompson said, and she hid them in her husband's trunk where the police found them.

"I never loved Clifford," Mrs. Thompson said, "but I can die easier now that I have confessed."

Both Claim Innocence

Thompson and Moss went to the chair affirming their innocence. Both were calm, and both expressed a belief in a future life.

"I feel all right," Thompson told newspaper men a few hours before the execution, "but I'll feel better tonight."

The young, unlearned mountaineer would not believe his wife's confession. He has steadfastly maintained that the three of them were innocent.

"If she said she killed Osborne, she isn't telling the truth," he said when he was told of the confession.

Mrs. Thompson had exhausted every opportunity to save her husband's life. Until the confession today, she maintained she and Thompson were "framed" by a jealous lover.

No one saw Osborne murdered, but Mrs. Osborne said she heard Thompson's voice just before the fatal shots were fired in the darkness.

JURY ADJOURNS UNTIL MONDAY

Special Investigators Make No Report

The special session of the Wichita county grand jury, convened here Friday morning by order of Judge W. W. Cook of the 78th district court, adjourned until Monday morning at 5 o'clock Friday afternoon without making a report of its further findings to Judge Cook.

The special session of the grand jury, it is understood, was called primarily for consideration of further testimony against Ed Pryor, constable, and Tom Shook, former chief of police, both of Electra.

Henry Shumate, escaped prisoner from the county jail who was recaptured while sleeping with Pryor at the latter's home in Electra, was questioned at length by the body Friday. Shumate is said to have given a statement to Ben F. Allred, district attorney.

This statement is said to have been the basis for an indictment charging burglary which was returned by the grand jury during its regular July session.

The grand jury, of which Oral Jones is foreman, is that convened by Judge E. G. Thornton of 30th district court for the July term. The law provides that the judge of the 78th district court shall have authority to recall the jury of the 30th district court after its regular term has ended.

Heavy Showers Cover Section West Of Wichita Falls; Downpour Here

NEWS AWAITED FROM POLISH OCEAN FLIERS

Two Continents Hope For Word of Aviators Over Atlantic

NO RADIO CARRIED

Plane Expected to Reach New York City At Noon

NEW YORK, Aug. 3. (US)—Somewhere out over the dim reaches of the North Atlantic the two Polish airmen, Majors Idzikowski and Kubla, last night were believed winging their way toward America.

If aloft, their big white and blue sesquiplane, Marshal Pilsudski, was hurtling through the air at a tremendous speed, possibly 150 miles per hour. They had a 700-horsepower engine, capable of driving their steel-nosed eagle through all but the most terrific storms.

Despite lowering skies they hopped from LeBourget field, France, at 12:48 a. m. (New York daylight time) today and they are are due in New York about noon tomorrow if all goes well.

As with the Bremen fliers, theirs is a case of "Mitchel field or Heaven." Although the Polish argonauts carried the latest aeronautical navigation instruments, they planned to chart their course with the weather.

Swing In Arcs

They intended to swing in wide arcs, soaring over the Azores islands and Halifax, Nova Scotia, then speeding on a bee line to this city. Mitchel field is to be their ultimate goal, but on starting they frankly asknowledged they might be obliged to land anywhere between Newfoundland and the Carolinas.

If weather along the ship lanes prove unpropitious, it was their intention to swing far to the south, possibly touching Bermuda, and then circling north again to Philadelphia or New York.

They had gasoline sufficient they estimated, to keep them in the air from 45 to 50 hours.

The Polish aces carried no radio. Hence a night and possibly a day of anxiety on two continents is inevitable. Unless some watchful mariner catches a glimpse of the Marshal Pilsudski's gleaming hull there is only the remotest chance of the world learning of the outcome of their adventure until they reach the shores of this continent.

Their course, if flown from the Azores to Halifax, will take them almost over the spot from which Captain Courtney and his three aides were dragged from the waves Thursday.

Must Stay Aloft

Unlike the English flier, the Poles have no reliance save the power of their plane. If it comes down they face almost certain death. They have aboard a frail, collapsible rubber boat, but it could scarcely sur-

'DOG DAYS' MYTH

Rabies As Prevalent In January As Aug. He Says

WASHINGTON, Aug. 3.—The traditional "dog days" are a myth, according to the District of Columbia health officer, Dr. William C. Fowler.

"The public has been unnecessarily concerned over this old myth," said he. "With the approach of August too many people get nervous when they leave home. They fear for their safety because of dogs on the streets."

Dr. Fowler declared that rabies among dogs are just as prevalent in January as August. He said that dogs in thickly populated centers should be muzzled the year round.

During the present month, he asserted 96 Washington people have been bitten by dogs.

SMITH SPURNS FEE PROVISION

Nominee Rejects Program For Farm Aid

NEW YORK, Aug. 3. (AP)—The equalization fee provision of the vetoed McNary-Haugen farm relief bill is unacceptable to Gov. Smith, and so far as he is concerned it can stay in the scrap heap for good.

The Democratic presidential nominee recognizes, and feels that his party by its platform is committed to control of the sale of agricultural surpluses with the cost borne by the crop group benefited, but his thumbs are turned down on the McNary-Haugen method.

Facing newspaper men today in his suite, Smith went further on the farm question than he did yesterday after talking things over with George N. Peek, Illinois farm leader who has cast his lot with the Democrats.

Someone recalled this sentence in his statement of yesterday—"Control of the sale of agricultural surplus is recognized by our platform as an essential need, its cost to be imposed on the unit to be benefited"—and asked whether that was to be construed as an endorsement of the equalization fee principle.

Smith turned to an editorial declaring that it summed up his views "concisely." It said that the plan for assessing the cost of controlling surpluses contained in the legislation which President Coolidge branded as unconstitutional was "unacceptable" to him; that Smith had no plan of his own as yet for carrying out the principle of having the unit aided stand the expense and that if elected he had promised to get down to work on evolving a satisfactory method.

That was all the nominee would say dismissing it to disclose that he had invited Senator Walsh of Montana to confer with him soon. He said Mr. Walsh had expressed a willingness to meet with him, but that definite date and place for their conference had not been determined.

COUNTY DEMO COMMITTEE TO HEAR PROTESTS

Candidates Promise Fight Over Arrangement Of Names

STATUTE ARGUED

Constitutionals and Regular Democrats to Clash In Meeting

Prospects for the fight before the Democratic county executive committee which meets Saturday morning at 10 o'clock loomed Friday night, with the announced intention of a number of candidates to protest the rearrangement of names on the official ballot.

E. C. DeMontel, county chairman, declared Friday that he would interpret the state primary statutes as authorizing the county committee to draw for the position of candidates on the ballot of the second primary.

Ben P. Allred and Wayne Somerville, candidates in the second primary, on the other hand, interpreted the statutes as holding that the arrangement of names as decided for the ballot on the first primary should prevail in the second primary.

Protest Promised

"I will be on hand at the committee meet Saturday morning to protest any effort of the committee to take my name out of first place on the official ballot of the second primary," declared Mr. Allred, candidate for judge of the 78th judicial district.

"The statutes provide (article 3102) the second primary shall be conducted in accordance with the laws governing the general primary. Article 3117 provides that the various county committees of any political party, on the third Monday in June preceding each general primary, shall meet at the county seat and determine by lot the order in which the names of all candidates for all offices requested to be printed on the official ballot shall be printed thereon.'

"The law provides," Mr. Allred continued, "only one day before the primary for the drawing of places on the ballot, and that day is the third Monday in June. I do not believe the executive committee has any power to rearrange the names on the ballot."

In addition to arrangements for printing of ballots for the second primary, to be held August 25, the executive committee also will canvass returns from the primary election of July 28, Mr. DeMontel said.

Sides About Even

Following the meeting of the executive committee, the Democratic county convention will assemble to thrash out the differences between Constitutional and Democrat at the courthouse Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock.

Indications Friday were that forces of the two party factions would be about evenly divided for the fight for county control which is expected to be settled at the convention. Only 16 precincts has certified lists of delegates to the county conevntion, Mr. DeMontel said. The county convention will name Wichita county's delegates to the state convention, to be held at Dallas September 11. At the state convention the new state organization of the party will be effected, a platform adopted and the results of the second primary declared.

The county convention also will officially "declare" the results of the primary of July 28.

Senator Wars On Al In Correspondence

NEW BERN, N. C., Aug. 3. (US) Senator Simmons of North Carolina, who resigned from the Democratic national committee in the face of his militant pre-convention opposition to Governor Al Smith, is still attacking the Democratic persidential candidate in "personal correspondence."

This was revealed today when the senator admitted he had written a number of "personal and private" letters recently charging the New York governor with being "hostile and antagonistic to the fundamental principles of Democracy."

ALAS, BOYS

Knees Not To Be Seen, Says Latest Style Prediction

CHICAGO, Aug. 3. (UP)—It might interest the girls to know that knees were made to be used and not seen. Chicago women's apparel manufacturers predict that some of the smartest feminine haberdashery to be worn next fall will be from two to five inches below the knee.

Although Paris has been broadcasting the unimportance of knees sartorially, this is the first indication that American manufacturers are taking the tip seriously.

At a formal fashion show which opened here today even the sport dresses exhibited were draped a few inches below the knee.

LANCASTER, Pa., Aug. 3. (AP)—Mrs. Jean Mellinger Beltzel, wife of Russell Beltzel held in Los Angeles in connection with the death of a girl whose body was found in the mountains north of Hollywood, was located here tonight.

Mrs. Beltzel said she and her husband separated about a year and a half ago. They have no children.

Russell Beltzel is the son of Mrs. Catherine Beltzel of York, Pa., and is a graduate of Temple university, his wife said.

Barbara Manger was about to become a mother, Mrs. Beltzel said. She asserted that Mr. Mauger came to her last winter and asked her to divorce Beltzel so that he could marry Barbara.

ATTACKER OF GIRL ADMITS RAGE MURDER

Warden Procures Admission of Brutal Killing From Inmate

PLEADS INSANITY

'Mind Went Blank,' He Tells Officers In Story of Death

OMAHA, Neb., Aug. 3. (UP)—A plea of insanity will probably be made by Clarence Lukehart, 21, in the maniacal slaying of little Harvey Boyd, 8-year-old Omaha boy whose body was found in East Omaha.

Prosecution of the case will rest with Iowa officials, it was decided late today, after an investigation by surveyors revealed that the body of the murdered boy was found 345 feet within the Iowa boundary. An inquest will be held in Council Bluffs soon.

Attacks Girl

The possible insanity plea was indicated in a statement made late today by Lukehart, an inmate of the Iowa reformatory at Anamosa, Iowa. The youth is serving a 12-year term for a criminal assault on an 8-year-old girl. Both the girl and the Boyd youth were neighbors of Lukehart.

"I, Clarence Lukehart, do on this day, Aug. 3, confess the Harvey Boyd crime on July 1, and I want to plead insanity," Lukehart's confession to Warden J. M. Blumel, of the Iowa reformatory, read.

One of his "hot spells," that caused him to assault the neighbor girl, had also prompted him to attack the boy, Lukehart said. The assault on the girl took place two days after he killed the boy.

Killer Uneducated

The boy was beaten to death with a stone after a degenerate attack, Lukehart confessed. He said he did not remember murdering the boy because his mind "went blank," but he told of walking up the road with the boy on the afternoon of July 1, to the dump, across from which the skeleton of the boy was found yesterday.

Lukehart has had little schooling and is weak-minded, officials of the reformatory reported. The youth did not finish the eighth grade at Red Oak, Iowa, a former home.

Young Boyd's body was found yesterday after a month's search had been made. It was badly decomposed and injuries showed he had been beaten over the head.

Motion Filed to Increase Bond Of Administrator of Clay Ranch Estate

Hearing on a motion in probate which asks that the bond of W. H. Hyers, administrator of the estate of the late J. L. Huggins, pioneer Henrietta cattleman, be increased to $3,000,000, is set for September 3 in Clay county court. The motion was filed Friday, by the firm of Taylor, Muse and Taylor of Wichita Falls.

The motion in probate follows filing of a suit for one-half interest in the community property of Mr. Huggins by Mrs. I. L. Turner Huggins of Fort Worth, who claims to have been the common law wife of Mr. Huggins over a period of nine years preceding the ranchman's death a few months ago. The community property in which Mrs. Huggins claims half interest is estimated by petitioners at $900,000. The petition for partition of community property was filed in Clay county district court several weeks ago.

The motion filed Friday contends that under the law an administrator is required to give a bond amounting to twice the value of the estate to be administered. The value of the estate is estimated by petitioners at $1,500,000. Mr. Myers' present bond is $250,000.

GRAND JURY NAMES CLERK

Chicago Official and Son Are Indicted

CHICAGO, Aug. 3. (US)—True bills were returned today by the special crime and fraud grand jury against City Collector Morris Eller, "boss" of the famous "bloody" twentieth ward, and his son, Judge Emanuel Eller of the Chicago superior court.

They were named with State Senator James B. Leonardo and fifteen alleged "henchmen" in a blanket conspiracy indictment charging them with conspiring to murder, assault and kidnap.

The charges are the outgrowth of ballot thievery and terrorism which featured the last primary election in which Octavius Granady, Eller's negro political opponent was shot down in the streets by assassins who escaped in an automobile bearing Eller banners.

Immediately after the grand jury had returned the indictments, the Ellers, through their attorneys Michael Ahern and Thomas B. Nash, demanded immediate trials.

Chief Justice William V. Brothers of the criminal court, before whom the indictments were returned, directed the attorneys to get together with special prosecutor Frank J. Loesch and agree on three judges acceptable to all as trial judges. From the three judges, he announced he would select a trial judge and let him set date for the hearing.

City Collector Eller, when informed of the indictment would make no comment except to say that "I will do my talking at the trial." He decided, however, that he would resign from his office or withdraw as a candidate for the office of sanitary district trustee.

Judge Eller expressed no surprise concerning the indictments.

C-C to Inspect Sherman Plants

The unusual situation of a city of only 20,000 population being sixth in industries in Texas has resulted in a decision of the Wichita Falls Chamber of Commerce to take 25 Wichitans to Sherman to study its industries and its industrial system Wednesday.

Several business men had signified their intention Friday of making the trip, and Hubert M. Harrison, manager of the chamber, said that he expected a large group to be ready to start when the automobiles left the Chamber of Commerce at 7 o'clock Wednesday morning.

Most of the varied industries of Sherman have been made possible with Sherman's own money. It is for the purpose of studying the system as well as the industries that the trip is being made. Responsibility for the trip is credited to J. B. Marlow, who suggested some time ago that a large fund be created here to encourage new industries.

WILD MAN

When officers approached the man was applying the lipstick rather freely, according to the police. He struggled frantically against arrest, but Pat Allen and Will Allen finally overpowered him and carried him to jail.

Friday night Fred Fountain and Elmer Thornton, city detectives, were called to the negro section of town to quell a wild man. A negro was overpowered and taken to the city jail.

SCHOOL FIRE STIRS TOWN

'Everybody Suspected,' Says Official

BLAIRTOWN, N. J. Aug. 3—State Police, the Board of Eudcation Justice of the Peace A. B. Craig and many mill workers here worked together to find the man who set fire to the Blairtown public school prompted, it is believed, by an urgent desire to have a modern schoolhouse built.

The culprit left behind a 40-quart milk can once filled with either kerosene or gasoline, but no clue to his identity.

"We suspect everybody big enough to carry the can," said Dr. William Penn Vail, president of the board of education. "I, too, am suspected. The case against me is bad. It would have been almost logical for me to do it."

The fire occured less than 24 hours after the town meeting at which the board of education's proposal for a $100,000 appropriation to build a new school was not passed, lacking one necessary vote for the majority needed.

When firemen, including the justice of the peace, ran to the schoolhouse they found the flames so high in the frame building that their hose lines were useless to combat the flames. The building was destroyed in four hours.

The fire will make an appropriation and new building inevitable, Dr. Vail said.

"We will find the $22,000 insurance useful," he added.

The burning of the old school ends a lively town dispute of many years' standing. The school had no electric lights, no proper washrooms and inadequate ventilation facilities, and the state board of education had threatened to take away its appropriation if a new school was not built, according to Justice Craig. The two-story frame building held about 30 pupils.

The state police in Newton, N. J., reported no suspect tonight, but there has been no lack of suggestions. The janitor of the school, who found the milk can in the brush outside of the grounds, is hoping it will help in the identification.

The police and the board of education, believing the fire a deliberate act, say the search will be carried on until they suspect only one person.

Pedaling Around U. S.

PORTLAND, Maine.—Mellen C. Plummer, 70-year-old cyclist, is on his way around the United States on a bicycle. He plans to circle the country, touching all the main southern cities, continuing west to California and Washington and coming back through the northwest. His tally sheet shows that he has pedaled some 330,000 miles since he started the trip.

COUNTY COURT CALL

SEMINOLE MAY INCREASE YIELD

Many New Wells Due In Next Week

TULSA, Okla., Aug. 3.—A large increase in daily production for the Seminole field is expected a week from today. Just how much of an increase field men are not yet figuring.

The increased output is expected from a flock of 131 drilling wells in the Little River pool, where tests now pounding away are to be allowed to come in after 12.01 o'clock Sunday morning, Aug. 12.

These wells can flow at their maximum until Aug. 15, when the wells will be allowed to flow at the rate of 1,600 barrels per day for all 40-acre leases, and 800 barrels a day for all 20-acre leases.

Production from the Little River wells will be permitted at this rate until Sept. 10, when a policy of proration on the basis of acreage and potential output, will be determined. Just what it will be is not known, the Seminole advisory committee and umpire wanting to study the wells when they come in before outlining a plan. Operators are to summoned together after Aug. 15.

Production Holding

Daily production in the Greater Seminole field is holding almost stationary, with the exception of minor changes in the pools. This is shown by the comparative report of the past week, with the previous:

Pools—	This Week	Prev. Week
Maud	85	80
Bowlegs	56,554	57,344
Earlsboro	77,363	77,667
Little River	40,881	40,215
Searight	13,358	13,212
Semi. City	50,842	51,317
Totals	239,083	239,835

Watch St. Louis Area

Oil men are watching the St. Louis pool of eastern Pottawatomie county much closer than the Seminole pools, and its potentialities are being variously reported. The 82 wells in the Hunton lime, Viola lime and Wilcox sand the past week averaged 40,122 barrels.

Three of the 82 wells accounted for one-third of the whole output there, but some 96 wells are drilling and a flock of wells should be in within the next week or two, and then the area will have its future told as a rich small pool, or a pool with an array of sands, which yield well in some wells and poorly in others.

St. Louis Pool

Unless the Wilcox sand should prove elusive, the St. Louis pool of Pottawatomie county, should enjoy some increased production right away.

Thursday found the 82 wells there producing 40,122 barrels, a gain of 269 barrels over the previous day.

Three wells there accounted for half of this, or 20,790 barrels, viz: Magnolia Petroleum company's No. 1 Hembree, in 19-7-5, doing 8,641 barrels, and its No. 1 Fyke, in 20-7-5, making 3,387 barrels, while Tom Slick, Inc., No. 1 Harper, in 19-7-5, produced 8,862 barrels.

Gilcrease Pool May Come Back

TULSA, Okla., Aug. 3.—The old Gilcrease pool in Hughes county, one of the active areas of Central Oklahoma in 1922 and 1923, may be given a comeback by Burkgreis Oil company of Tulsa. Its No. 1 Oliphant ranch, in the southeast of the northeast of the northwest of 18-9-9, found the Papoose sand from 3,208 to 3,210 feet and it made several flows by heads in 20 hours. Drilling was suspended for tankage. The oil is accompanied by a good flow of gas. The oil tests 39 gravity. The Burkegreis well has caused considerable excitement in Holdenville, which anticipates an oil boom such as it enjoyed in 1923, 1924 and 1925.

Dance Pavilion Is Wrecked by Explosion

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Aug. 3. (UP)—Officers were without a clue late today to the solution of the fire and explosion which early today partially wrecked the dancing pavilion at Winnwood beach, near here. Youths who several weeks ago were excluded from the pavilion because of their rowdyism, may have been responsible for the attempts to wreck the place, officers said.

CAMP FIRE MEET DELAYED

A meeting of the girl's council of the Camp Fire Girls, scheduled for Saturday afternoon, has been indefinitely postponed because of weather conditions, according to announcement made Friday by Mrs. Maude Bartholomew, acting executive.

Noted Comedian Hurt in Plunge

NEW LONDON, Conn., Aug. 3. (AP)—Fred Stone, whose stage antics have provoked mirth for nearly half a century, may have to forego his career as a result of injuries he suffered in a plane crash near the Groton airport today.

The veteran comedian received a double compound fracture of the left leg, fractured right thigh, fractured lower jaw, fractured left wrist, dislocation of the left ankle and right shoulder, lacerations of the scalp and hands, and abrasions of the face.

Stone has been practicing of late to fly in his biplane with the intention of getting a pilot's license. Today, while in the air alone, his machine went into a nose dive when the motor failed and he was pinned beneath the wreckage when he crashed into a bed of beets on a farm near the airport.

Egyptian Given Life For Slaying Daughters

CAIRO, Egypt, Aug. 3. (INS)—A murderer who reported his double crime to the police as the work of his brother-in-law has just been sentenced for life by the Cairo Assizes.

Abdel Aziz Ashour, a native of Giza, killed his two daughter aged nine and 12, after a quarrel with his wife who had left him to live with her family, taking her eldest daughter with her. The next day the girl called for her sisters to go to school. She was met by her father with the information that her sisters would be meeting him to buy new clothes.

The crime was at first reported to the police by the criminal himself who said that on entering her house, he found his two daughters, murdered, and suspected his brother-in-law.

English Shops Write Prices in U. S. Money

LONDON, Aug. 3. (INS)—American visitors to London this year will not have to juggle pounds and shillings when doing their shopping.

Most of the large shops display both English and American prices, later computed according to the rate of exchange.

Visitors from the states, as a consequence, are treated to an unexpected thrill by seeing goods marked $1.98 for example, but the London storekeeper has not yet awakened to the master-stroke of adding "Reduced from Two Dollars."

Women Hooverites Start Western Drive

CHICAGO, Aug. 3. (AP)—Oraganization of western women for the Hoover-Curtis ticket was launched today by Mrs. Alvin T. Hert of Kentucky, vice chairman of the national committee, with the appointment of Mrs. Bertha Baur, national committeewoman for Illinois as head of the western division.

The campaign for the votes of the nation's homemakers, all ready begun in the east, was brought officially to the west today, with "a vote for Hoover is a vote for the home" as the possible slogan to be adopted for the drive.

Horton Leads Tennessee Race for Governor

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Aug. 3. (AP)—Gov. Henry H. Horton entered the stretch in the Democratic gubernatorial race today with an unofficial advantage of approximately 2500 votes over Hill McAlister, but the latter's headquarters declined to concede the nomination.

The governor had a plurality of 2528 when all but 205 of the state's 2230 precincts were reported unofficially. The count stood: Horton 91,022; McAlister 88,494. Only a plurality is necesary for the nomination.

Downpour of Rain Causes Flood Threat

SMITH CENTER, Kan., Aug. 3. (UP)—Flood conditions in this section became acute again today after a heavy downpour which lasted several hours. The precipitation ranged from one to three inches in the county.

Solomon river was at high stage and many of its bridges were reported unsafe. At Lebanon a bolt of lightning struck the Rock Island station and knocked Walter Bradley, telegraph operator, unconscious.

Comedian Improves After Plane Crash

NEW LONDON, Conn., Aug. 3. (US)—Fred Stone was reported to be progressing satisfactorily in Lawrence hospital tonight after failing to earth in his bi-plane.

The comedian, who holds a student pilot's license, was flying alone when the engine went dead and the plane came down in a potato patch near Grotan air field. His right leg was crushed and his left leg and face bruised and lacerated.

POLISH FLIERS TO NEW YORK

Two Continents Await News From Aviators

vive a heavy sea long enough to permit a rescue.

So, as they soar over the treacherous waters that have claimed so many gallant birdmen, they risk all for the honor of their country, for they fly under the official auspices of the government of Poland.

Despite their knowledge of the disaster that had overtaken Captain Courtney, the Poles took off with the utmost sangfroid, according to cables from France.

Their plane was heavily loaded with fuel, but they got it aloft at the end of 2,700-foot run, while spectators gasped in amazement.

Major Idzikowski was at the forward controls and Major Kubala sat just behind him. They went about preparations for the take-off with calm of veteran army men. They had been chosen by the Polish government from scores of applicants as the men best fitted to achieve the hazardous westward passage.

Carry Bouquets

For omens of good luck, the fliers had bouquets of red roses, presented them by admiring French girls. They also had an amulet of ribbons presented them by an aged woman whom they had chosen to be "godmother" of the flight.

Their sesquiplane got up with a speed that astonished onlookers. It almost grazed the roofs of the buildings that encircle LeBourget. Even as the spectators gasped and shuddered in dismay, it seemed to be lost in the distance.

Indicative of the terrific speed which the Poles' airplane may be expected to conquer the Atlantic was the report of a trawler about 60 miles off the coast of France.

Less than three hours out of Paris, the intrepid birdmen had flown 350 miles, or at a speed of better than 100 miles an hour. As their load lightens they may be expected to gather momentum, and unless they encounter strong headwinds they might easily realize their wish of being on American soil within 34 hours.

Neither of the fliers seemed particularly nervous. Major Idzikowski remarked:

"All we want is a chance to get to Halifax. After that we'll pick a field to land on."

Girl to Teach Co-eds How to Handle Horses

AUSTIN, Aug. 3. (AP)—A riding school for co-eds with a curly-haired cowgirl as riding master is the innovation which Helen Ball, University of Texas senior, has induced the physicial training department to introduce next fall.

Miss Ball was born on a West Texas ranch. For the last 10 years she has done the work of a regular cow pncher, aiding in round-ups, doctoring sickly "mavericks" and baby sheep and breaking stubborn ponies.

Last summer, while her family was in California, she was the sole manager of the six-and-one-half section ranch, near San Angelo.

Showers Cover Western Area

were still falling at Stamford, this side of Spur, the Wichita Valley dispatcher reported. A half-inch rain fell at Abilene during the morning, and cloudy skies threatened other towns west of here through the day.

The rains in the Spur region, according to word received here, were considered beneficial, little crop damage being reported.

Lighter showers were reported to the north, from Wichita Falls to Grandfield, and from Woodward, Okla., to Altus, by the Katy dispatcher. Rain fell in this area intermittently, however.

Towns along the Fort Worth and Denver line reported no rain.

The heavy downpour of Friday afternoon struck here without warning, creating more apprehension than damage. The minimum temperature of the day, 77 degrees, followed this rain. However, the mercury soon after took the upward route, and at 5 p. m. stood at 88 degrees.

LOCKNEY, Texas, Aug. 3.—A slow drizzle last night and today netted six-tenths of an inch of additional moisture, with clouds promising more. Many crops in this section are very weedy as recent rains have kept farmers out of the fields.

Special to The Record News.

DALHART, Texas, Aug. 3.—Rainfall amounting to an inch fell here late yesterday and last night, this bringing the total rainfall to 15.25 this far this year in the Dalhart area. Row crops looking exceptionally well.

Seven Arrested When Cops Raid Residences

Six men and one woman were arrested and lodged in the city jail and 152 bottles of beer were seized by city police in two raids on Wichita Falls residences Friday night. At one of the places raided officers emptied eight gallons of brew and at the second place confiscated 100 empty bottles and beer-making and bottling paraphenalia.

Officers conducting the raids were: City Detectives Noah Daves, L. N. McKelvey, W. P. Belcher, Ellis Summers and Motorcycle Officers Homer Bentley and O. A. Roberson.

Nebraska Farm Head Votes as Republican

LINCOLN, Neb., Aug. 3. (UP)—C. B. Steward, president of the Nebraska Farm Bureau federation, announced today that he will support the Republican ticket in Nebraska this year. Steward was recognized as a lieutenant of Governor Adam McMullen in the proposed farmers' march upon the Republican convention, and has been a proponent of the McNary Haugen bill.

BASEBALL POOL NETS MILLIONS

Two Questioned by New York Jury

NEW YORK, Aug. 3. —J. J. Kelly and Samuel Cohen, who two weeks ago received eight months sentences for complicity in the operation of the Albany baseball pool, were brought from the Westchester county penitentiary and taken before a federal grand jury investigating the Albany enterprise and another similar one commonly known as the Rensselaer pool.

What was sought from them Assistant District Attorney Thomas Cooke declined to say after they had been closeted with the jurors more than an hour. He did say, however, that the annual intake of the two operations had been roughly estimated at $8,000,000.

It is understood that Kelly and Cohen were questioned in an attempt to determine where the 40 per cent clear profit of the Albany pool went—that is, to find who are the men higher up in the organization.

William J. Pringle of Albany, indicted with Cohen and Kelly in the Albany pool case, was scheduled for arraignment yesterday, but it was postponed until Wednesday.

During the day George D. Hammond, who was chief county detective when William Travers Jerome was district attorney, called on Mr. Cooke. He is connected with the Society for the Prevention of Crime.

He said the Albany pool, which was announced suspended some time ago and since has been renewed, lately had an estimated weekly intake of $150,000 and a distribution of $75,000 in prizes.

The overhead and agents' percentages cut the profits to about 40 per cent, he said, but he added he is convinced that these pool operators, not satisfied with their huge earnings, are regularly fleecing customers by inserting fake tickets in agency bundles after it has been determined which number is most likely to win a prize.

Arthur G. Malloy of Albany was again taken before the grand jury by Mr. Cooke in a second attempt to obtain desired information from him.

INSURANCE FOR FARMER URGED

Government Plan Offers New Remedy

By MERRYLE STANLEY RUKEYSER

NEW YORK, Aug. 3. (US)—If risks of farming, about which politicians wail sympathetically prior to elections, are not avoidable, perhaps they are insurable.

Theodore H. Price, authority on cotton problems, suggests a non-political remedy for the farmers' problems through government insurance. "Insurance," Mr. Price, who is publisher of "Commerce and Finance," points out, "is always written against rain, hail, tornadoes, frost and the other metereological conditions that are unpropitious. Why should it be impossible for the farmer to insure himself against any injurious variation from the normal in the weather? Such insurance would eliminate the greatest risks that he is compelled to face, and would put his industry upon a far safer basis than at present.

"Insurance is an application of the law of averages. There is nothing surer than this law in its operation, but the averages must be ascertained before any conclusions based upon them can be applied in the fixation of the premiums that should be charged for assuming the risks insured against.

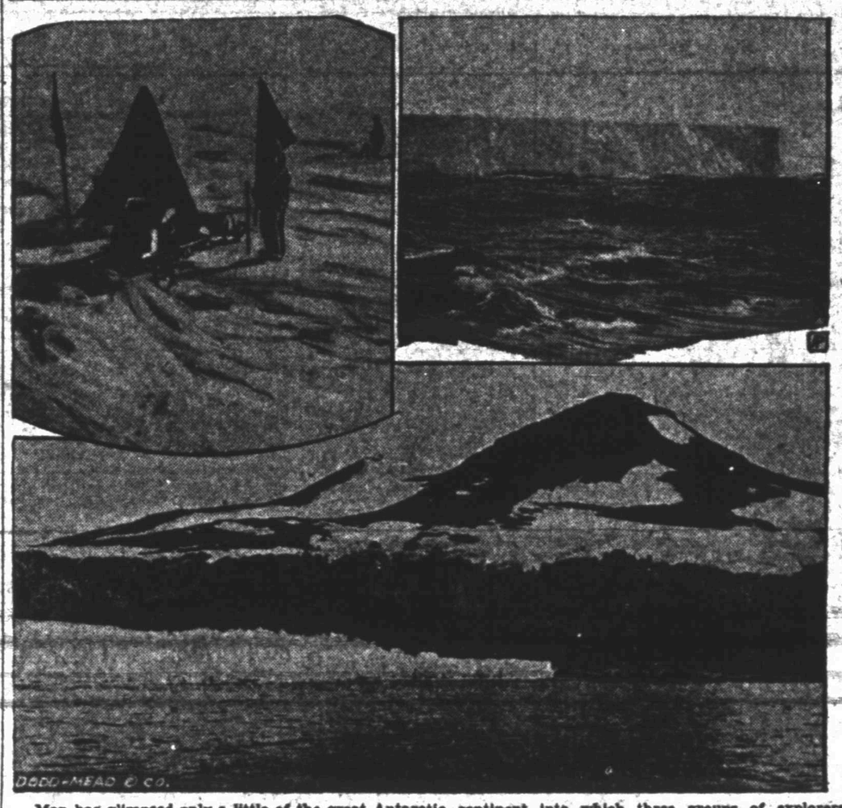

"Most of those who have studied the subject agree that it is practicable to insure the farmers against hazards of the weather and the market, but they are also agreed that it is only by experiment that the costs of such insurance can be ascertained.

"The government is the one agency that can afford to make the experiment. It has already made two ventures in the field of insurance. Both were successful."

The idea has the appeal of novelty, but it seems to oversimplify the problem. The purpose of any insurance is indemnification against loss. Before the farmer could develop an insurable risk, it would be necessary to establish a standard of costs and profits. That would be tantamount to price fixing, and would entail most of the objectionable flavor of the McNary-Haugen bill, which President Coolidge twice vetoed and excoriated.

As an economical principle, however, insurance against risk is a wise step in the direction of a higher economic civilization. Intelligent large scale farmers could under existing facilities insure themselves against price changes through use of the cotton futures market, and smaller farmers by banding together could also do so. So doing would of course give farming the outward tinge of speculation, but against that object it may be added that the farmer at present is tacitly assuming huge speculative risks.

Land of the Dead, Barren, Bitter Cold and Jagged With Ice Peaks, Lures Three Groups of American Explorers

Man has glimpsed only a little of the great Antarctic continent into which three groups of explorers will press shortly. It is known, however, that it embraces great level wastes of snow and ice like that at the left, taken by a party from the Carnegie institution near the magnetic pole, and that about it loom great icebergs which tower, like the one at the right, 500 feet above the water and stretch for five miles. Below is a vista at Cape Crozier, at the end of the great ice barrier.

(Editor's Note: This is the third of a series of stories on forthcoming expeditions of exploration into the Antarctic.)

By JOHN L. COOLEY

(Copyright, 1928, Associated Press)

NEW YORK, Aug. 3.—A barren continent of ice, crossed in places by high mountain ranges, swept by the severest gales and frozen by the coldest weather on the earth—such is Antarctica, the forbidding land to which Commander Richard E. Byrd, Captain Sir Hubert Wilkins and Douglas George Jeffery are taking their planes for three separate reconnoissances by air.

This south polar waste, known so imperfectly that even its coast lines cannot be accurately mapped, offers striking contrasts to the more familiar Arctic regions. In the first place, of course, it is a land, and although its terrain is all but completely buried under an ice blanket, the continentality of the mass is now generally accepted. In the Arctic, as everyone knows, there are many sizeable islands, but the northern ocean dominates the top of the world.

Animal Life Scarce

Birds and animals are fairly plentiful in the far north; Antarctica itself, on the other hand, sustains almost no life, although the waters and cliffs along its coast are rich in seals, sea elephants, penguins and other polar fauna.

There are flowering plants in the Arctic, too—400 species of them; but in only one spot on Antarctica has this advanced vegetation been reported, although several varieties of moss are found.

The Arctic summer is comparatively mild, whereas the mean Antarctic temperature for December and January, the warmest months in that part of the world, is nearly always below freezing.

Vegetable, animal and bird life is rather abundant on nearby islands, but the three exploring parties will not concern themselves with these more friendly neighbors of the big white continent. Their work will be done in a land that is still in the grip of an ice age of comparatively recent origin, a land that died ages ago.

There is plenty of evidence, however, that Antarctica was once a living continent. Important fossil flora indicate the presence of vegetable life, at least, before the coming of the ice; and some scientists have suggested that numerous plants and animals began their northward migration from West Antarctica, the section yielding these remains, in the forgotten time that was the heyday of south polar prosperity.

Continent "Divided"

For purposes of convenience, geographers sometimes divide the continent into two parts—East Antarctica, which is apparently a plateau of the Indo-African type, and West Antarctica, which is folded in ridges. The structure of the latter section suggests that the mountains found there may be a continuation of the Andes, for the peninsula of West Antarctica extends to within 800 miles of the tip of South America and the rock formations of that continent may extend beneath the sea to emerge again in the ranges of Antarctica.

The southern continent is an ice-ridden plateau whose average elevation has been estimated at about 7,000 feet. It is highest near the South Pole, where the mountains tower to a reported height of 15,000 feet. The pole itself is about 10,000 feet above sea level.

Exploration on Coasts

Maps of Antarctica parcel the vast continent into "lands," but the nomenclature is rather indefinite, since few of these strips of territory have been even superficially explored. Exploration has been chiefly along the coasts.

Many of these divisions are named for the explorers who first sighted them—Wilkes land, Kemp land, Enderby land, Coats land, Graham land. Others honor European monarchs, living and dead—King Edward VII land, King George V land, Queen Mary land, Kaiser Wilhelm II land. But none of the semi-mythical provinces has boundaries; Antarctica is still too much of a geographical enigma to warrant such familiarities by the map-makers.

COTTON SAGS DURING WEEK

Market Becomes Adjusted To Probable Supply

NEW YORK, Aug. 3. (AP)—Adjustment of the cotton market to increasing ideas of the season's probable supply, has been reflected by further decline in prices during the past week. Contracts for delivery next December here have declined to 19.30 or nearly 3½ cents per pound from the high price touched when the trade was talking a crop of 18,000,000 bales as possibly somewhat less toward the end of last June. At the week's lower prices crop ideas ranging up to about 15¼ million bales have been more or less in evidence, and feeling behind the decline appears to have been that with such a crop combined with a carryover of about 5,000,000 bales of American lint cotton, the supply available for this season will approximate that of last year.

Volume of business tapered off toward the week's end as if selling on these views had perhaps run its course for the time. There probably was some scale down buying or covering on idea the decline had gone far enough to discount such improvement as might have occurred in crop prospects during July. Demand lacked aggressiveness, however, and bearish opinions were expressed at the end of the week. To the close of business today, 11 of the private "end-July" crop reports had been issued.

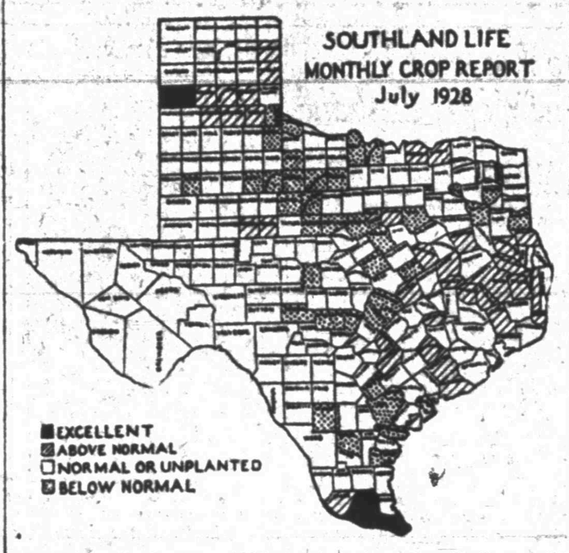

Condition figures shown ranged from 66.5 up to 70.9 while figures on the indicated yield ran from 14,221,000 bales up to 15,242,000, a spread of approximately 1,000,000 bales. This was considered a difference wide enough to promote uncertainty as to the showing of the government report which is scheduled for publication on Wednesday of next week, but sentiment regarding the size of the crop has been influenced by a fairly favorable view of weather conditions and a belief that it was continuing to make fair progress over the greater part of the belt.

No Alimony Asked As Star Quits Director

LOS ANGELES, Calif., Aug. 3. (U P) — Dorothy Mackaill, film star, was granted a divorce from Lothar Mendes, director, here today when she testified he was cold, indifferent and humiliated her in the presence of others.

Miss Mackaill made no request for alimony. The couple was married Nov. 17, 1926, and separated last June.

General Rains Over Texas Improve Crop Outlook for Entire State

DALLAS, Aug. 3.—General rains over practically all of Texas during the last week in July have been highly favorable to all growing crops—especially cotton—according to reports compiled by the department of public relations of the Southland Life Insurance company. Up to the time of these rains an entirely peculiar situation prevailed in that a great deal of the cotton producing counties which had early in the season been complaining of too much wet weather, were beginning to suffer from the drouth. This condition, however, has been corrected and unless the rain continues too long, or develops insect infestation, cotton may be said to be in excellent condition.

Conditions are especially good in the southwest, central and northern sections of the state. Crops other than cotton are doing extremely well—one of the best corn crops in years is in the making—vegetable crops are above normal—small grains made at least average crops—and the forage crops are much above the average.

By far, the most encouraging aspect of the entire situation as far as Texas farmers are concerned is the fact that although they have had little or no ready money, many of them have not gone farther into debt during the past nine months and are in a position to have more money at the end of this crop growing season than ever before in their experience.

An interesting side-light on crop conditions in Texas is the report that lower Rio Grande valley shipped 20,640 car loads of fruit and vegetables during the 1927-28 season. This far excels any of the previous seasons and clearly shows the growth of the valley section.

Business all over the state is, of course, suffering from its usual depression, but even this, according to reports, is less than it usually is at this time of the year.

All crops, of course, are from 10 to 30 days late. In general it may be said that chances are extremely favorable for the production of an unusually large cotton crop despite all the propaganda and influence which has been brought to bear on a decrease in acreage. It is true, however, that most of this increase is due to raising of larger crops on the West Plains.

SLAYER FACES HIS FATHER

Elder Physician and Accused Meet Coolly

Special to The Record News.

ELIZABETH, N. J., Aug. 3. (UP) Dr. Walter Woolsey, father of Dr. Arthur Woolsey, confessed slayer of his wife and two children, met his son late today in the office of county detectives. It was their first meeting since the crime.

Father and son greeted each other coolly and at the end of an hour's conference, Dr. Woolsey, Sr., left the room first, extending his hand to the young slayer but not facing him.

"Goodbye, son," he said.

The slayer smoked cigars continually during the conference showing no signs of remorse for his crime.

Dr. Woolsey, Sr., had refused to read papers offered him earlier in the day in which his son was quoted as saying the elder man's failure to help him in financial difficulties was directly responsible for the murders.

"No, no," the elder Woolsey said, when offered the papers. "I have nothing to say."

Plans for burial of the three victims were kept secret.

Three letters, written by Dr. Arthur Woolsey after the shooting, and before he abandoned his plans to commit suicide, were made public today. One was a complete confession, asking that the bodies of his victims be cremated; the others were personal letters.

Denver Stock Office Raided

DENVER, Colo., Aug. 3. (AP)—Offices of the Amarillo Panhandle Department corporation were raided here today by officers who charged officials of the company with perpetrating stock swindles aggregating more than $76,000 on residents of four Southern Colorado counties.

Direct informations were filed yesterday in Otero county, the officials announced, against seven persons alleged to be connected with the concern. Of these Charles B. Crane and Frank P. Bertschy, secretary, were arrested today and held for $10,000 bond.

Charges also were filed against W. A. Gamble, president of the concern, whom the officers said left for Kansas City this morning. Anna Maser, R. A. Meads, John Doe De Laney, and R. W. Cornelison, president of the Universal Drug Manufacturing company.

Virginia Fishermen Round Up Wild Horses

CHINCOTEAGUE ISLAND, Va., Aug. 3. (AP)—The fictitious horse marine becomes an actual reality here each summer when Virginia fishermen, wearing their deep-sea boots, hold their annual roundup of wild horses on Chincoteague and Assateague islands.

The wiry little ponies, said to be descendants of Spanish cavalry horses cast ashore after a wreck 200 years ago, live in the marsh lands of the coast and subsist on wild forage throughout the year. The penning and branding of the animals in the summer months is the occasion for an annual festivity attended by visitors from all sections of the east. A highway of white shell construction permits easy access by automobiles.

Arrival of Ice Cream Big Event in Hongkong

HONK KONG, Aug. 3. (AP)—Demand for American ice cream is on the increase here. Nearly every transpacific liner brings tons of the frozen delicacy from Seattle and San Francisco, and the ice cream business in the Far East has increased to such an extent that most of the steamships these days have had special refrigerator compartments set aside to handle the business.

Now and then a shipment of ice cream is made to Tokio, but the greater part of the trade is for Hong Kong, Shanghai and Manila. The demand for ice cream in Hong Kong and Manila is so brisk that certain vessels are known as the "ice cream boats" instead of the "mail boats" as formerly.

A TREMENDOUS increase in Power

Not only does the Silver Anniversary Buick eclipse all previous ideals of motor car beauty, but it provides a thrilling increase of that vibrationless power which makes Buick's Valve-in-Head engine supreme among power-plants.

Vital engineering improvements—including increased bore and stroke, greater piston displacement, improved carburetion and a general development and refinement of the entire operating assembly—produce the highest degree of efficient, economical power ever developed by any automobile engine.

Moreover, drivers of the Silver Anniversary Buick reap the full benefits of this mighty new power with any grade of fuel. And these benefits extend to all phases of car performance.

Dazzling new acceleration—unrivaled flexibility—matchless hill climbing—and new top speeds far in excess of any driving need—all await you in the Silver Anniversary Buick.

The famous Buick Valve-in-Head six-cylinder engine was already the most powerful automobile engine of its size in the world. Now that leadership is greatly increased. Now the Buick power-plant reveals even greater superiority, as you will quickly discover when you take the wheel and drive.

Dorothy Dix Advises Woman Who Works to Support Weary Husband

Ramblin'
with
Marie Theresa

MARIE THERESA is somewhat reluctant to bring up such a delicate question, but have you ever noticed the large number of girls and women on the streets of the city who wear or carry nonchalantly on the arm a coolie coat, which garment, if I get the correct interpretation, is made to be worn in the privacy of one's bedroom.

I have seen at intervals at least a dozen or so otherwise rather well dressed women clad in knee length coolie coats. This afternoon I saw a girl carrying one over her left arm as she window shopped.

This corner cannot account for the mistake, for though the gorgeously decorated black morning coats are tailored and made somewhat on the order of the lightweight summer wrap, their purpose seems to be evident enough. Probably some naughty clerk made a sale or two, committing the sin of omission when her sales talk began to take effect.

MANY Wichita Falls persons will feel a personal loss in the death of Gen. James Calvin Foster, beloved Confederate veteran who died at his home in Houston Thursday evening.

At the reunion of the United Confederate Veterans held recently in Tampa, Fla., General Foster was elevated to the rank of the commandership of the rapidly dwindling ranks of the Confederacy.

General Foster attended the state convention of the United Daughters of the Confederacy held in this city last October and was a feted guest at the various social events of that order.

Miss Mary Jane Nelson was appointed official maid-of-honor to the general while he was in attendance at the convention.

THE RECENT cool weather and frequent rains are causing a fair-sized number of Wichita Falls people to elect to spend the regulation two weeks of summer vacation at home (in the privacy of their own cellars, if a recently published brew story is to be given any credit).

I don't mean to insinuate that all those who forfeit their summer vacations are doing so on account of this particular attraction.

However, expressions of patience at enforced delays in the annual apportionment of vacations are heard on every corner, and some who are on the fence on the question to leave or not to leave are falling on the economical side of the fence, thanks to the cool breezes.

◆ ◆ ◆

BUT THIS RAIN is proving too great a boon to boll weevils.

CAN WALK FIVE MILES A DAY

After Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Providence, R. I.—"It is two years ago since I first took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for my nerves and other bad feelings and it has been helping me all this time so that I am able to do all my work now and walk about five miles a day besides. I am still taking your medicine and feel like a young woman although I am about 45 years old now. I feel well and happy and if anyone wishes to write to me about your medicine I will be glad to answer."—Mrs. J. TABLAMENTE, 11 Paquet Street, Providence, R. I.

The Woman Who Works to Support Her Weary Husband—Will Marriage to a Wife With a Past Be Successful?—How to Make a Lazy Wife Get Up in the Morning.

Dear Miss Dix—Five months ago I married the man I love. Before we were married he had a very good position, but after we married he gave that up and since then he has not worked. I know he can very easily get another good position, but he says he is waiting for something really worth while to show up. In the meantime, my parents are virtually taking care of us, as they only charge us $6 a week for board, which of course, doesn't pay for our food. I have been working ever since I was a kid and am still working, but intend to give it up within the next week. My mother insists my husband is lazy and that is why he won't get a position. What do you think? —MRS. L. H. R.

Answer:

I agree with your mother. How else can you explain your husband's conduct? It seems to me that a man who loafs for five months and lets his wife and his wife's family support him has given a star performance of laziness.

There are plenty of men who will not work so long as anybody else will feed and clothe them. They have to have the goad of necessity to make them get up and hustle. Everywhere you will see big, husky, able-bodied men who were born too tired to work letting mother or sister or wife or poor old father take care of them, while, like your husband, they are waiting for something worth while to turn up.

And nothing ever does turn up for these Amalgamated Sons of has some labor attached to it. Also because everything worth while is turned up by some energetic go-getter who rolled up his sleeves and went after it There is no use in wasting any time in watchful waiting for any snap to come along. There isn't any such a thing.

Your problem is one of the new and difficult ones that the modern woman is called upon to solve and that our mothers escaped. For in the days when women were merely homemakers every man knew when they got married that it would be up to him to support his wife or else they would starve, and so the great majority of them went ahead and did it as a matter of course. It was only occasionally that a man turned quitter and his wife had to take in boarders to feed him.

But now, when virtually every girl goes into business, there is a constantly increasing number of men who knock off work as soon as they get married and let Sally do it. They always have a good excuse. They lose their jobs. They become temperamental and can't stand the way they are treated by their bosses. Or they suddenly find their occupations uncongenial and they are always looking for another situation, which they take precious good care not to find.

And the poor wives don't know what to do. They love their husbands and are willing to share their last crust with them, but they perceive only too clearly that their husbands are grafting on them and not playing fair.

They know that their husbands would not have given up their jobs if they hadn't known that they would be sure of three square meals a day, and that they wouldn't be so choosy about their work if they had to stick to their jobs or starve. But with wife making the living and making the money to run a comfortable little flat, it is a different story. They can take it easy, and they do take it so easy that they frequently never go back to work at all.

The fact that the working wife so often ruins her husband is the great argument against women continuing on with their jobs after marriage. For a weak man will slump if he gets the chance. The man who is naturally indolent will degenerate into a loafer if there is anybody to supply his wants. And, on the contrary, if there is anything good in a man, the fact that his wife is dependent upon him and that little children cry to him for bread will bring it out.

Of course, if a man is sick, it is the duty of his wife to work and support him. It is also her duty and her pleasure to help him if he is trying to help himself, but if he is just plain no-account and makes no effort to get work, but just sits around and waits for something to turn up, then she should, for his own sake and her own, turn him out of the house. For a kept man is the most despicable object in life.

Furthermore, the man who lets a woman support him invariably hates her and mistreats her, because she is a standing reproach to his worthlessness. I have known many men who were parasites on their wives, but I have never known one who was not surly and ill-natured and abusive to his wife. Invariably they are like snarling dogs that snap at the hand that feeds them. —DOROTHY DIX.

Dear Miss Dix: I am in love with a woman who, in her early youth, took the wrong turn in the road. She has repented of her mistake and I believe will go straight in the future. I am willing to forgive and forget. Do you think we can be happy together? —ROBERT.

Answer:

If you can really forget. That's the trouble with men. Before marriage they think they can forgive and forget, but in reality they do neither, and after marriage in every time of domestic stress they make of the woman's past a whip of scorpions with which to lash her.

It seems to me that this is the cruelest, the most ungenerous and the most unjust thing that a man can do. Because, after all, the man has married the woman of his own free will and accord. She has not deceived him. He knew all about her bedraggled skirts, and if he married her he washed her slate clean so far as he was concerned and by every law of sportsmanship he has no right to reproach her with the fault he has condoned.

Yet few men are big enough to do this. Ninety-nine men out of a hundred who marry women with a past revile them with it and insult them with it every time they get angry, and this shows what a rankling sore it is in the husband's memory. For this reason it is better for the woman who has a dark spot in her past never to marry, or if she does marry, never to tell her husband about it, because, although he may forgive her, he never forgets.

The woman who has stumbled off the straight and narrow path and who has repented of her wrongdoing often makes the most circumspect, the truest and best of wives and there is no reason why a man should not be happy with her if he can overlook the false step she has made. —DOROTHY DIX.

Dear Dorothy Dix: Realizing that science has developed many startling inventions, it does look to me as if there should be some patent device by which a lazy, sleepy wife cold be made to get up and give her husband some breakfast so that he wouldn't have to start out on a 12-hour day's work without any food. I have spent four years searching in vain for such an instrument, and if it exists I would appreciate very much being told where I can procure it. I have tried kindness and crossness without any results. —W. H.

Answer:

Alas, W. H., there seem to be no mechanical aids toward making a woman into a good wife. We still have to rely on moral suasion, and that never seems to work in the cases where it is needed most.

So far our inventors have confined their efforts to improving material things. They have not even experimented with adding a few ballbearings and automatic oilers and such like gadgets to wives' dispositions so as to make them smoother and easier to live with.

They have invented a silencer that muffles the sound of a gun so that you cannot hear a shot even if you are only a few feet away, but nobody has invented a silencer for a nagging woman's tongue. They have invented self-starters for automobiles, but nobody has invented a self-starter that makes a lazy woman get up and get her husband's breakfast for him. They have invented the airplane that sails above the clouds, but nobody has invented anything to make a wife overlook her husband's faults.

And there you are. And about the only thing you can do is to quit bringing home anything to eat until your wife agrees to get up and cook it. Perhaps when she gets really hungry she will see that it is only a fair division of labor for the man to supply the raw materials for making a home and for the woman to make the home.

Cherie is simply sitting on the beach and she has been dioing it for days and days. It isn't that she can't swim. It isn't that she doesn't like to swim. What it is, she is explaining to Dina. "My sunburn bathing suit"—she is saying, "was bought for a serious purpose." It manages however, to look charming at the same time. Pale orchid jersey for the top, purple jersey for the shorts that flare from a ruffle around the waist. Dina, at the left, shows you just how low the sunburn backs of smart bathing suits are cut. Kitty's one-piece suit has a stripped skirt. The bathing suit in the background is of washable silk, the shorts of green, the top of tan and green and yellow plaid.

"Tomorrow", Cherie announces, "I shall swim." The sunburn is satisfactorily turning to tan and is quite low enough in back so that none of Cherie's evening dresses will have a rim of white above their decolletage. And that's the purpose of the sunburn styles—all the skin that shows, either daytime or evening, must be toasted to the same shade of brown. This foundation garment Cherie is wearing is an evening garment of crepe de chine with a bandeau in front, but cut down to the waistline in back. Gap in San Antonio Road To Be Paved

AUSTIN, Texas, Aug. 3. (AP)—The state highway commission awarded a contract to close the last gap in a highway from San Antonio to Corpus Christi, bringing to fruition efforts of Southwest Texas citizens begun 17 years ago to construct such a highway.

A contract, awarded to S. F. Vann of Trinity for $30,306, provided for paving a strip of road on highway 16 extending 5.7 miles from the Wilson county line into Karnes county.

The commission also awarded a contract to Vann for grading and drainage on the 10-mile un-paved road on highway 16 from Floresville to the Karnes county line at a cost of $52,653.

Cal Blames Congress For Postoffice Deficit

SUPERIOR, Wis., Aug. 3. (AP)—President Coolidge feels that congress, by having overridden his vetoes on bills increasing postal expenditures, largely is responsible not only for the estimated $100,000,000 deficit in the postoffice department for the fiscal year 1929 but also for any increase in postal rates which may have to be imposed to balance the departmental budget.

Mr. Coolidge understands that some postal rates may have to be raised, since the law makes it mandatory upon the postmaster general to alter the rates of certain services, so as to assure sufficient income to balance the expenditures they involve.

Childress Sheriff Posts Reward For Prisoner Who Escapes From Deputy

CHILDRESS, Aug. 3.—Officers today had not recaptured Georgs McCawley, charged with possession and sale of liquor, who escaped from officers in the Buck creek neighborhood late yesterday while attempting to obtain necessary signatures for his bond.

McCawley was allowed to accompany J. D. Barkley, special deputy, to the place, that he might try to get temporary freedom. Barkley reported that he fled from him, and that after a chase of about a mile, during which he fired several shots at the fugitive, McCawley disappeared.

McCawley was arrested on the night of July 28 in a raid on a local garage which netted the largest liquor haul ever made in the county, officers declare.

Sheriff Compton today posted a $50 reward for the capture of McCawley.

LOSS OF DOG AID TO DEATH

War Veteran Worries And Aggravates Injuries

HOUSTON, Aug. 3. (AP)—William Reid's worry and grief over the loss of Buddy, his faithful dog companion overseas 10 years ago, is causing physicians to doubt that the 36-year-old world war veteran will ever recover the use of his gas-ravaged lungs and his shell-torn body.

Chafing under the orders that keep him in the hospital, Reid worries because he cannot hunt for Buddy, and this worrying, doctors say, aggravates his injuries.

A free lance poet who went from hospital to hospital to keep a little ahead of death, Reid came to Houston unannounced with his dog. One morning the veteran, whose home is in Gulfport, Miss., was found huddled on a fire escape at the Jefferson Davis hospital. In his hand was a dog's collar, bearing the name Buddy.

Reid had suffered a sun stroke. When he recovered he asked attendants whether they had seen his dog.

"Buddy was the smartest of 142 that were given to us in France," he explained. That was all he would say about the pet other than to ask them to look for a wire-haired terrier.

Notes about the dog, however, were found among his belongings. These told, among other things, how the man and Buddy together had walked 6,000 miles from January 6 to April 3.

"I took a liking to Buddy," one of the notes says after relating how the pet had been "transferred" from the English army to his company. "He was under my command until the end of the war. Buddy was allowed to return to the States with me by special permission of the colonel of our regiment."

"I WAS suffering with constipation which caused dull headaches and dizziness. These dull headaches kept me awake at night, and when I would get up in the morning, the dizziness would make me stagger. I was reading an advertisement about Black-Draught, and thought I would try it. It has entirely relieved me of the headache and dizziness. I must confidently say that it is the best laxative I have ever used."

Spanish Protetsants Win More Freedom

MADRID, Aug. 3. (AP)—Protestants are "tolerated" in Spain since Jose Canalejas removed the restriction by which they were forbidden to indicate in any way on their chapels and meeting-places the fact that they were Protestants.

At the present moment there are in round figures 200 Protestant centers in this country, including churches, chapels, Sunday schools, elementary and high schools, hospitals and other like institutions. These are spread over many provinces, including Madrid, Barcelona, Malaga and the Asturias, while most of the provincial towns possess some center belonging to a Protestant sect.

Among the followers of the various sects are to be found men of substance from all stations in life. In Madrid there are five Protestant churches besides a number of meeting places. There are also several schools in the capital, the number of scholars of both sexes attaining 1,200.

Until a few years ago Protestant literature was divided up into small local pamplets representing the various sects, but now all have joined together in the publication of a weekly organ named "Evangelical Spain," or "Espana Evangelica."

Club members from every part of the state are entered in the contests being conducted at Stillwater, it is said, and many people are attending the sessions.

Mr. Lamar also started construction on a building to house the mattress factory recently located here by Mr. Carter. Two other brick business buildings will be completed in the next 15 days, with others to begin in the near future.

The building permits as issued by the city secretary for the month of July totaled $102,550.

Frederick Man Unhurt When Car Is Wrecked

FREDERICK, Okla., Aug. 3.—The Ford coupe belonging to Frances Bolin, manager of the Marland service station of this place, was practically demolished in an accident that happened on the Manitou-Frederick highway two miles east of Frederick Wednesday night. The car plunged from the end of a small culvert over a deep ravine and stood on its nose in the bottom. The machine cannot be repaired satisfactorily, it is said. Bolin was not hurt in the accident and stated that it was caused when the steering gear became defective.

Charlie Paddock Says He's Through Racing

AMSTERDAM, Aug. 3. (UP)—Charlie Paddock, sprint veteran, told the United Press today that he was through with competitive athletics, though he might run in an occasional relay or exhibition race. He would do no more hard training, he said.

Paddock's statement does not change the situation materially, as this virtually has been the case for several years. He merely returned to hard training to make the Olympic team.

American Yacht At Goal After Setbacks

SANTANDER, Spain, Aug. 3. (UP)—The American yacht Azara arrived in port at 7:10 a. m. today after her adventurous 37-day voyage from New York.

Refusing to use her sealed motor to aid her sails impotent in the dead calm, the Azara was towed past the finish line.

Male Models Fail to Appear For Style Review Showing Men's Latest

NEW YORK, Aug. 3. (UP)—The word went out today that the fashionably attired male this fall will appear in an ensemble (yes, indeed, an ahn-sahmb) outfit, and if he doesn't, he might just as well have halitosis.

Two hundred criterions of what's what in pants and neckties gathered in a grey and silver salon in Madison avenue and applauded the new dictate vigorously while they waited for the first showing of the new creations on the first male living models ever to appear in New York.

A stage, set in orchid, was prepared at one end of the salon for the parade of the models. Speeches by fashion authorities prefaced their advent. The speeches came to and end and all eyes turned to the door through which the first male in America to model in public was about to appear.

Doesn't Show Up

He did not appear. No one appeared. It was a big disappointment.

Paul Thompson, advertising director for the necktie manufacturer which sponsored the living model affair, denied reports that there had been a last minute strike among the living models.

"Wild horses couldn't drag me out there in front of all those men in these blue and white B. V. D.'s," the ring leader of the alleged strike is reported to have said flatly.

Thompson denied this report.

"I had eight young men, all ready, and the manufacturers couldn't fit them in time," Thompson said. "They weren't sissies, either. They were big, upstanding young men and they were ready to go on. They are just as disappointed as anybody."

Couldn't Get Ready

The explanation that the makers of the new male ensembles couldn't get ready in time for their own fashion show reveals what a complicated affair dressing will be this fall.

A male ensemble does not, as some may hastily suppose, consist merely of pants, coat and suspenders. Harmony will be the watchwrod. His grey-blue suit will supply the motif. His socks will be grace notes, his handkerchief and shirt glissando embellishments. Only his necktie may be fortissimo. And it must not be too fortissimo, at that.

To achieve this result, three of the nation's biggest makers of men's wear and decorations, it was announced, have got together so that the shirts and collars (made by one company), the pants, coats and vests (made by another), and the neckties (made by the third), will harmonize.

Paths of Beauty

Heretofore, there has been no coordination between these great firms. In consequence, some of their flights of fancy have not fitted with the flights of fancy of the others and the result, assembled on a single male, has been not infrequently startling.

A hat manufacturer and a glove manufacturer have been added to the scheme and a program of education launched by Schuyler White, former men's fashion editor of Vanity Fair, which it is hoped will eventually lead hundreds of thousands of American business men into into the paths of true beauty.

Proud Cowboy Vows He Could Teach "Etti-Kett" to Snobby City Guys

HOUSTON, Texas, Aug. 3. (AP)—An unnamed cowboy from Mexico claims he could give city-bred inhabitants lessons in "eti-kett" if they were to come to his ranch.

The cowpuncher, in his five-gallon hat and boots came to Houston for a little vacation. A reporter found him disgustedly blowing the suds off a glass of near beer.

"Say, partner," he began, seeking some friendly ear into which to pour his tale of woe, "I'm leaving imme-tiately for my ranch in Mexico. I don't like the city.

"Two hours ago I got here, and that's two hours too long. I walked along the street. Five times I spoke to people as I passed. Just sorter sociable like. I nooded friendly, and said:

"How-dy do, partner, howya comin'."

"And five times I was passed up. They didn't even look in my direction. Jist histed their heads like scairt colts and brushed past."

With a groan of disgust, he turned and left, but not without a parting shot at city hospitality and "scissorbills" as he called them.

"I'd like for some o' them scissorbills to come to my ranch. Me and the boy would learn 'em a few things about eit-kett. Yep. Association with cows has its advantages."

Voters' Privilege To Call Ballots Upheld

TOPEKA, Kan., Aug. 3. (UP)—Primary election officials have no right to challenge a voter's privilege to call for the ballot of any party he desires in Tuesday's voting, W. A. Smith, attorney general, ruled today.

The ruling was made after newspapers had carried stories to the effect that wholesale challenges will be resorted to, leaving the impression that if a former Democrat or Independent should call for a Republican ballot, an effort will be made to make him prove his right to switch his vote.

Work Tackles Job Of Rounding Up South

WASHINGTON, Aug. 3. (AP)—Quietly but vigorously representatives of Herbert Hoover's national political managers are building up an organization in the South with attention centered on lining up a group acceptable both to bolting Democrats and to old-line Republicans of that region.

Chairman Work of the national committee, who left today for conferences with middle-west and far west Republican leaders, has been giving the South consideration and as the first step in a possible campaign below the Mason and Dixon line he decided to build up new organizations where needed.

Parents Warned On Child Training

WASHINGTON, Aug. 3. (INS)—Parents should see that their children learn trades or professions, instead of becoming "drifters" in the highly organized modern industrial system, Francis I. Jones, director general of the U. S. employment agency, advised today.

"It appears that common laborers and clerical workers are the first to be affected by the slightest falling off of employment, and I cannot urge too strongly that parents arrange that their children be fitted for special work, for to be caught in either of these classes means to be at the mercy of the winds of economic circumstance," Jones said.

Jones pointed out that, while the unskilled worker often has plenty of work during the summer construction period, he must constantly be hunting new jobs during the winter. Clerks' positions are always uncertain during any slack season, he said.

In spite of over estimation of employment difficulties in particular localities, national employment conditions today are "better than fair," Jones declared.

Hollis Fair and Race Meet Opens Sunday

HOLLIS, Okla., Aug. 3.—This year a boosters' trip will be made to advertise the Harmon County fair and race meet, which opens August 5 and continues over three days.

Present prospects show that the 1928 fair will surpass anything yet given in Harmon county.

HOOVER'S DOOR KEPT CLOSED

Candidate Refuses to See Many Callers

PALO ALTO, Calif., Aug. 3. (UP) Herbert Hoover was not "at home" today. The Republican nominee denied himself to all callers and locked himself in his study to dot the final "I" and cross the final "T" of his 6,500 word acceptance speech which is to open the presidential campaign a week from tomorrow.

Hoover never before attacked such an important political document and he is having difficulty working it out. He started on the speech a month ago, first completed it two weeks ago, then re-wrote some of its provisions, cut it down 2,000 words and now is wrestling with the printed copy which is to be given to newspapers confidentially in advance of its delivery.

The candidate has written many highly technical reports in his career and has dashed them all off in a hurry. However, as an engineer, an efficiency organizer and secretary of commerce he has not had time to develop a fluent literary style. He has written several books and translated some others, but they have all been of a technical nature, relating to mining engineering.

Now he finds influential public officials and party leaders deluging him with demands that he touch in his speech nearly every public issue which has been discussed in the last few years. He has tried to handle many, but many others have been eliminated.

Police Captain Back On Force As Of Old

CHICAGO, Aug. 3. (AP)—Captain John Stege, discharged from the police department a year ago when he was found guilty of a 30-year-old murder charge, returned to the force tonight with the full rating of his old powers. The news of his reinstatement was a blow to the underworld generally because it has long feared Stege.

A civil service board found Stege guilty of having killed a man 30 years ago when his (Stege's) mother was about to be attacked. He served the department with distinction during the regime of Mayor William E. Dever, but with the advent of Mayor William Hale Thompson was relegated to an outlying assignment from the detective bureau. His trial and dismissal followed.

QUICK TRIAL FOR ATTACKER

Officials Prevent Mob From Taking Prisoner

DUNCAN, Okla., Aug. 3. (AP)—Promise of an immediate trial for James E. Forrest, 27, Longview, Texas, negro, in the event he survives injuries, is believed by Sheriff E. R. Young to have averted violence last night when a crowd swarmed to the courthouse after Forrest had been arrested for an alleged assault on a white woman.

Sheriff Young said today that Forrest was in a dangerous condition from gunshot wounds inflicted by a posse that captured him after a 10-hour chase. The negro confessed, according to the sheriff.

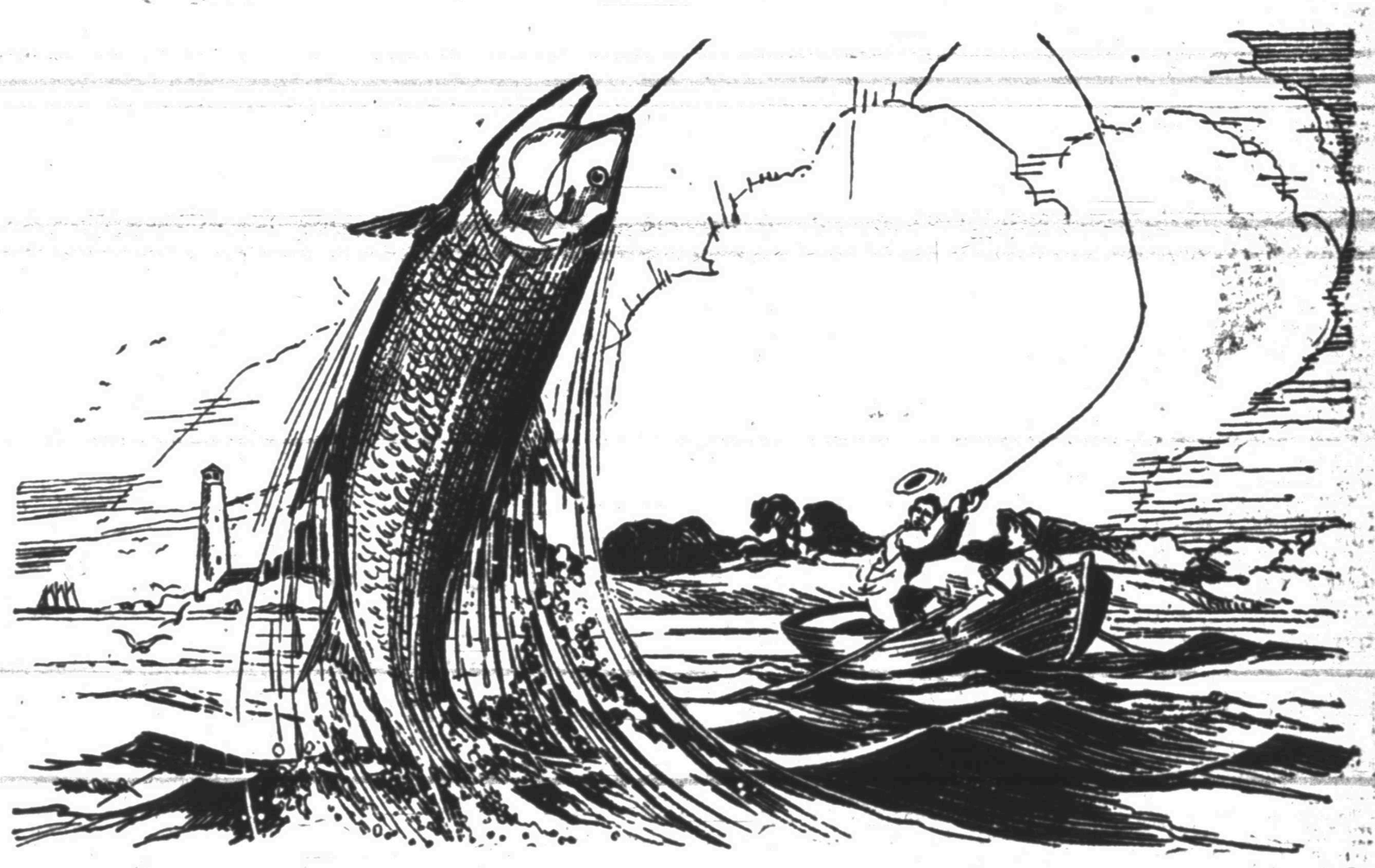

The victim of the assault was the wife of a farmer living near Comanche.

Shortly after the negro was jailed a crowd began to form. A group of men started into the building. On the first floor they were intercepted by Sheriff Young and Jesse Long, county attorney, who pleaded with them to let the law take its course.

The Day Book of a New Yorker

By GRANT DIXON

NEW YORK, Aug. 3.—The old-fashioned bouncer known to old timers who used to frequent all-night chop houses and cafes of the Roaring Forties, has dropped out of the picture. His place has been taken over by a diplomat who may have the title of head-waiter or floorman.

And the days of knock-'em-down and drag-'em-out have given way to the more placid task of quietly getting the offending party out of the place without raising a voice in doing so. Do not get the impression that there are no fights or rough stuff in the many hundred speakeasies now in operation in this great city. They are of nightly occurrence. Frequently trips to a hospital are required to patch up a cut scalp or reduce a black eye.

But diplomacy has taken over the task of keeping quiet in the more famous of the night clubs. The recent raids by the prohibition forces on some 30 of the biggest of these clubs has put a damper on the business that has been going merrily on without much hindrance. The corner saloon has given way to the more pretentious restaurant with the speakeasy attachment.

In many parts of New York the main floor is used as an eating place, with good food at moderate rates. The downstairs or basement part is fitted as a saloon. Full-length bars are in operation and in many of these places beer on draught is the chief attraction.

The Diplomatic Bounce

Each of these clubs has a handy man whose duty it is to see that no one becomes noisy and annoying to his neighbor. Drunks are common, but it is pointed out that most of the disturbance is made by the out-of-town men, and sometimes women, who let themselves loose when they reach the big city. When these rows start, the "bouncer," if you wish to call him that, appears on the job. He does not begin with rough stuff. On the contrary, he slips into the party and suggests the place is getting too noisy—"Let us go to another place around the corner where the liquor is better and the prices lower."

Frequently this has the desired effect. The bouncer will actually leave the place with the party, but once they are on the sidewalk, he manages to get away from them and return to his job. Of course the noisy ones are not allowed to re-enter. Managers of these clubs keep a mental list of the trouble makers, and they are barred at the door. They sometimes slip past and new ones are developed, but it is a business of using good judgment in handling the men and women who frequent these sort of places.

In the good old days when Jack's was one of the show places of night life in New York he had a famous staff of waiters who were expert in handling drunks and others who madethemselves obnoxious. They were frequently described as the "flying wedge." Barney Connolly, who had been a policeman, was on the job at night with Jack. A word or a nod from either and the trouble started, and was over almost in a twinkling. It is historical that every little while a man would go out with four or five waiters clinging to him. But he always went out, and he did not come back until Barney or Jack had delivered to him a lecture on how to behave in public places.

Six-toed cats have been mascots of the Hackensack Golf club for 25 years.

This oddity is causing considerable comment in Oradell, N. J., where the first six-toed cat that ever resided in that community with the memory of its oldest patriarchs.

Inquiry has revealed that 25 years ago a six-toed mother cat was a pet at the club. By some strange freak of nature she littered some six-toed kittens. Ever since then the many descendants of this six-toed mother cat have had at least one or more six-toed kittens in a litter of normal five-toed kittens.

These cats have possessed six normal well-developed toes on each forefoot, giving them the somewhat comical appearance of wearing boxing gloves.

This family of six-toed felines is not exceedingly popular among dogs.

Wellington Nazarenes Open Revival Sunday

The Job in Nicaragua

IT is reported at Washington that the marines' job of pacification in Nicaragua is nearly finished. More than 500 armed natives have surrendered in the last few weeks, and it is said now that Sandino's 150 men are the only remaining forces opposing the marine regime.

We can all hope that this is true. The whole Nicaraguan business has been rather expensive and unsatisfactory. Once in it, there wasn't much of any way out; but the sooner the whole thing can be cleared up and ended, the better.

For a National Anthem

THE lady who recently offered $6,000 for a new national anthem which would be better than the "Star-Spangled Banner" has our best wishes, but the odds are about 5,000 to 1 that, after she gets her prize song, the country won't adopt it.

National anthems aren't written in cold blood, so to speak. When they are really any good they spring up in times of trouble. They have to have a baptism in fire—such a baptism as the French hymn, "The Marseillaise," received, for instance. They have to have profoundly touching and moving associations interwoven in them—as "Dixie" had in the South. They just naturally aren't produced by prize contests.

Our present national song could be improved upon. But, after all, it has been hallowed by a good many years of use. If it is ever replaced by a new one, the new one will spring into being during some great national crisis. It won't be written by someone trying to earn an easy $6,000.

The Chemists' Dreams

THE chemist, undoubtedly, can tell gaudier stories than any other man in the country.

This is really only fair. Laboratories are usually stuffy places, sometimes actually foul with the odor of unseemly chemicals. Chemists do not get out much; it is only right that they have the gift of yarn-spinning.

When a chemist really gets warmed up he can tell tales that are fairly fantastic. Not even a realtor turning Florida swampland into homesites can see such glittering visions. But there is this to remember; the chemist has an uncanny faculty of knowing what he is talking about. Our children may eventually be dancing to the bizarre tunes he whistles now.

The chemists of the country convened in Chicago the other day. They told some tall tales—told them with straight faces, too. Indeed, their earnestness carried a ring of conviction. Listen to some of the things they said:

There will, in the future, be no such thing as a monopoly of raw materials, for the simple reason that chemists will make, in their laboratories, everything from rubber to gasoline.

Coal mines eventually will be useless because cheaper and better fuel will be made from cornstalks. So, too, will the 3000-odd products of coal tar distillation.

The great manufacturing center of the country will shift to the corn belt, and the big centers of population on the seaboard will lose their importance.

The old law of supply and demand will be completely upset because everything that men need will be produced in such abundance that there will be more than enough for everyone.

These statements represent a change in our civilization more fundamental than anything that has happened since the invention of the steam engine. If they all are fulfilled the America of 200 years from now will be no more like present-day America than New York is like ancient Athens. It is almost impossible for us to imagine the revolution they would involve.

Yet the chemists are quietly confident. Is not Edison even now making rubber in his own back yards? Did not the late Charles P. Steinmetz predict that eventually electricity would be generated so cheaply that it would be virtually devoid of price? These chemists have a way of knowing what they are talking about.

They spin great yarns, chemists do. But beware of how you laugh at them. Your children may live to see them all come true.

Texas-Oklahoma Press

CRIME DISCOURAGED

Several constables made a noble gesture the other evening. Entering a garage near the city they secured a couple thousand bottles of beer and made several arrests for gambling. The proprietor of the garage was arrested on charges of violating the state liquor laws.

A couple thousand bottles of beer represents a large stock in trade, and a large potential profit. With a volume of business like that, it is safe to say that earnings have been good, if all allegations have been true.

When a man can make money like that, it is cheap insurance for him to charge off a couple of hundred dollars every few months or so as against possible fines. He can even afford the indignity of a short jail sentence once in a while.

The significant thing is not the raid nor the arrest, but what comes after. They are meaningless gestures unless the court backs them up, and inflicts a penalty that will actually work to discourage law violation.

RICH MEN'S SONS WORK

There used to be a proverb in America to the effect that it took a family only three generations to go from shirtsleeves to shirtsleeves. That meant that when a man made a fortune his son would, in all probability, mismanage it so badly that the next generation would lose it altogether.

That proverb seems to be out of date now, when you stop to think about it. Rich men's sons, with a few exceptions, are no longer idlers. They are going to work.

It's easy to cite examples. There is Edsel Ford, for instance, making ready to fill his father's shoes; there is John D. Rockefeller Jr., there is Cornelius Vanderbilt Jr., who is as hard working as any mechanic's son; there is young Alexis DuPont, who has enlisted as a private in the aviation corps to learn flying; there are the grandsons of Jim Hill, working in railway shops to prepare for the job of running the family railroads.

The list could be extended indefinitely. It makes encouraging reading. America has no place for drones; and the rich man's son is beginning to realize it.

When A Girl Loves

© 1928 by NEA Service — by RUTH DEWEY GROVES

THIS HAS HAPPENED

Virginia Brewster is in love with an artist, Nathaniel Dann, but she is tricked into promising to marry Frederick Dean in one year if she fails to earn $100,000 that he alleges her father cheated him out of.

She pawns some of her jewelry and Oliver Cutter promises to invest the money for her. She seeks work, but without success. She discovers that she is being shadowed and suspects that Dean has bribed the agencies not to help her. Oliver gains her confidence and shows her attentions which Niel resents, but then Virginia does not like the familiarity with which his model, Chiri, treats him.

She is lucky enough to get a position which she likes. The summer passes and in early September she is amazed when charged by Cutter's wife with trying to alienate his affections.

She appeals to Oliver to explain, and demands an accounting of her investments. Then he confesses that he has not made a penny for her, but that he is madly infatuated with her and will gladly give her the hundred thousand if she will go away with him.

She denounces his knavery, and leaves, taking his secretary with her as her company needs another assistant. She is asked to go on a six-weeks' cruise as hostess, but before deciding she goes to see Niel at his studio. His model greets her.

Now Go on With the Story

CHAPTER XXXIX

Chiri came out of the kitchenette holding a pan in which she was vigorously stirring a white sauce.

"Oh, it's you," she said flatly when she saw Virginia. "I thought it was Niel. He generally comes in with so many bundles he can't open the door."

Unconsciously Virginia raised her eyebrows in surprise, but Chiri seemed not to notice it. "I suppose you are having dinner with us,' she went on and turned back to the kitchenette. "Niel will be in soon," she added over her shoulder.

Virginia was surprised at her cool assumption of authority in Niel's home. But she would not strike back and allow Chiri to see that she was annoyed. Instead she pulled off her hat and said something about being glad they were eating in.

"I'm so tired of restaurants," she volunteered through the open door. "Nice of you to get up a meal here."

Chiri, out of sight, slammed the pan back on the stove and turned on the flame.

She had come in half an hour earlier than Virginia, and finding the studio empty, had conceived the idea of preparing dinner as a surprise for Nathaniel. She knew, of course, that he always had the evening meal with Virginia, but she had hoped to coax him to stay when he found everything ready in the studio.

That Virginia would drop in or Nathaniel would telephone for her Chiri knew well enough. Her reception of Virginia was premeditated and planned in the event that she arrived before Nathaniel.

Chiri had guessed it was not he at the door and her attempt to make Virginia feel like one too many was deliberately a part of her scheme. Virginia's poise and courteous retort infuriated her.

Out in the other room Virginia herself was disturbed, though she did not display any outward signs of being so. She took a seat near the fireplace in which Chiri had set a few small pieces of wood blazing for the sake of cheerfulness. The night was mild and the windows swung open to a soft breeze. Virginia could see a patch of sapphire sky above the old brick houses on the opposite side of the narrow street.

What a lovely night it was! Strange that your heart could ache so when there was love in the world and a sky like that to walk under! Virginia leaned her head back against the old Italian chair and closed her eyes.

Why was Chiri here? Nathaniel always had seemed to treasure this hour when they could be together. Never had he been willing to share it with a third person before.

So thorough had been Chiri's domination of the situation that it did not occur to Virginia to guess that the girl was intruding. She believed, without question, that Nathaniel had asked her here.

And Chiri's drawling, "I suppose you are having dinner with us," smarted not a little. Had Nathaniel, then, not told Chiri he expected her? That other remark, about the bundles, hurt, too. She had understood that Nathaniel was not seeing much of Chiri. The girl's remark gave a distinctly different impression.

But Nathaniel did not come in laden with bundles at dinner time, Virginia knew. He was with her usually at that hour. Unless, perhaps, Chiri was in the habit of eating here when Nathaniel and Virginia met uptown. On those occasions Nathaniel might have brought the food in for her.

Virginia asked herself why he would not have mentioned it if the situation stood as she had conceived it. Yet she was compelled to admit that Nathaniel might have felt the same way about it as she did in regard to her relations with Oliver.

She flinched a little as the thought came to her that Nathaniel probably believed she would be jealous. But why should Chiri want to dine here alone? Surely she was not a person to find her own company sufficient.

Virginia concluded that Chiri must have referred to other hours of the day. Lunch time perhaps. It might even be breakfast, considering Chiri's complete lack of regard for worldly conventions. She knew enough about Chiri to invest her with daring enough to rush into Nathaniel's studio in any sort of morning garb—black silk pajamas most likely—and order him out to buy the groceries.

Virginia tried to turn her mind from the whole thing, feeling wounded and somehow cheapened by the presence of this girl who made herself so much at home in Nathaniel's studio.

The problem of her future needed immediate attention and Virginia sought to occupy her thoughts with it to the exclusion of everything else. She succeeded only in realising that the outlook was black indeed—black as the heart of the man who held her loyalty like a sword over her head.

She could hear Chiri stirring round in the tiny kitchen, a noisy cook, humming a naughty little French chanson.

"She's very much at home," she thought wistfully. "I suppose Niel likes to have someone around him who is happy. I'm not so sure that a man doesn't prefer a cheerful companion to a loving one."

It was in her mind that she would be incapable of singing in his kitchen. Was Chiri, after all, the superior person of the two? "She loves Niel," she thought as she tried to make a comparison of herself and the model. "I know she does. Yet she sings. There must be something fine and strong about her, in spite of her gamin ways."

For the first time since she had known Chiri, Virginia felt a touch of sympathy for her. Her displeasure had melted, lost in the deep worry that weighed upon her.

Her spirits sank lower and lower as the flames died in the grate and Nathaniel did not come. The false courage she had buoyed her hopes with all afternoon vanished in the growing darkness of the studio.

How long before Chiri came in and put a match to the taper on the table she had laid for dinner Virginia did not know, but when the room became shadowy with candlegiow she knew at least that one decision was definitely made.

Nathaniel should be spared as much as she could spare him. And another woman would have her chance.

"I'll take the trip on the Agena," Virginia told herself, "and give Chiri the field. She may find a way into Niel's love. Then, if I must keep my bargain with Frederick Dean, his heart will not be broken. One is enough. Better that he and Chiri should be happy than that all three of us should suffer."

There was one bright angle in regard to her decision, one that gave her a shred of comfort. If fortune should by chance favor her and she found a way to free herself from Frederick Dean she would know beyond the slightest question of doubt that Niel's love was hers . . . . that is, if Chiri, having had her chance, had failed, and Nathaniel remained true.

It was something to hug to her sorely-troubled heart and Virginia staked all that meant life to her upon it. It was the only chance she could give Nathaniel in case she lost to Dean—the chance of falling in love with a girl whose soul was not in pawn.

Nathaniel found her animated and sparkling like her old self when he came in a few minutes later. He was inclined to resent Chiri's presence, but Virginia's lively conversation and ready acceptance of the girl's intrusion at dinner prevented an open declaration of war on the model.

Virginia wondered what he thought of it . . . . did he expect her to mind? Well, she'd give him no opportunity to tell her. If he had asked Chiri to prepare the dinner, as she believed, Virginia did not care to have him explain. But if he had not she did not want him to quarrel with the girl over it.

Finally, when they were sipping Chiri's strong black coffee from thimble-size cups, Virginia told them of the Agena's southern cruise.

"It was splendid of Mr. Welkins to choose me as hostess," she added, with well simulated elation. She studiously avoided looking at Nathaniel as she spoke. But from her lowered eyes she could see his lean brown fingers suddenly crush the cigaret he had reached for.

No one spoke for a few seconds that held the count of minutes for the group. At last: "Virginia, you aren't going?" from Nathaniel, in stricken unbelief.

Virginia did not hesitate. "Why, of course, I am," she said firmly. "I wouldn't miss it for the world. Think of getting away from New York for the winter. The summer has been dreadful, but when the slush is piled up knee high I can't stand it."

She risked a glance now, fearful lest she over-act. But Nathaniel's expression satisfied her that he believed she was in earnest.

He could not argue with her in Chiri's presence, and Virginia lingered long after she knew that he wanted her to leave so that he could take her home and talk it out.

Chiri ignored several well-directed hints regarding her own departure, but she was as resolved to stay as was Virginia. When lateness at last compelled Virginia to go she put an abrupt end to Nathaniel's pleading as soon as he began.

"Don't be selfish, Niel," she said brusquely, and whatever Nathaniel had meant to say he locked in his mind instead.

There was no drawn-out good night between them at her hotel on this occasion and Nathaniel returned to his studio with all his sensibilities as full of darts as a Spanish bull after an encounter with a picador.

Chiri was waiting to apply salve to the wounds.

"Poor you," she said mockingly; "I told you she'd never stand up to this kind of life," she added, waving a carelessly manicured hand to designate the dim studio.

The Willing Collegian

By GEORGE ADE

Once there was a Young Man with a College Education, an assortment of Cravats, and about $8 in Real Money, who was anxiously looking for his Life Work.

He wanted to break into a Learned Profession so that he could wear his Good Clothes all of the Time and get the Coin without working too hard for it.

His idea of a dignified Snap was to sit in a small Office about three hours every Day and have the Public come in and pass Money to him. The Medical Game struck him as being about the softest Proposition of all.

He thought that all Doc had to do was to lead the Mark into the Chamber of Horrors, where they have Skulls and the Butcher-Knives, look him over, ask a few Questions, tell him to stop Smoking and then tap him for a V.

So the hopeful Graduate went to the old Family Physician for a few Tips.

The antique Medicine Man threw a Back-Twister when he heard of the Boy's intentions.

"Any one who tackles the Aesculapian Stunt is a vitrified Mutt," said his Whiskers. "If you must earn your living be a Porch-Climber or a Short-Change Man. We now have in this Country four Medical Degrees to every case of Tonsilitis. Most of us are kept so close to the Carpet that we have to buy last year's Magazines to put in the Waiting Room. If a patient dies all of his friends say that you help to push him off, so they undermine your Practice and begin to plug for Christian Science. If he gets well, he gives you the Laugh and you have to go after him with a Constable. If you acquire a Reputation, they work the Night Bell on you; and if you arrange a Dinner Party it's a cinch that some Old Lady, three miles away, will ring in an Epileptic Fit and crab your whole Evening. Nix on the Materia Medica! Turn back before it is too late.

Thereupon the Collegian bethought him of the law. So he went to old Judge Caveat and said he wanted to start right in Reading.

999 to One

"If you can dispense with eating for the next 15 Years, come and join our noble Profession," said the Judge. "If you have got into the Food Habit, however, and feel that you may need Clothes now and then, take my Advice and Duck. It's getting so that one can't drop a Brick out of a Window without hitting at least three Lawyers. The only ones who land are those that sell their Immortal Souls to the Corporations, and they get roasted so hard that they can't be elected to anything except the United States Senate. The Legal Profession is a Lottery in which there are 999 Blanks to every Prize, and the one who gets the Prize usually draws a case of Nervous Dyspepsia with it and has to live on Cereal Food. If you desire safe and Profitable Employment, learn to be a Bank-Robber, but don't join the Starvation Brigade. The Professions are petering out. We live in a Commercial Age. The Money-Makers of today are the Wise Boys who trade in Produce and Manufactured Staples."

Accordingly the Young Fellow put in an Application with a large Wholesale Concern. The High Guy called him in and gave him a Talk.

"If you are Strong and Willing, we can start you in at $3.50 per week juggling Boxes," said the Manager. In 10 Years or so you will be moved up into the bookkeeping Department, where you can get $60 a Month just like finding it. Before you decide upon a Mercantile Career, I may as well warn you that 95 per cent of those who go into Business eventually blow up, and the other five per cent compromise with the Trust and get what they can. The inexperienced Kid without Capital who tries to get a Hammer-Lock on the air-tight Combinations has about as much chance as a chicken at a Camp Meeting. If you wish to sit on a High Stool so long that you grow fast to it, and then, at the Wind-Up, get a Floral Pillow from your Fellow-Employes, come and join our Happy Band. But if you are Foxy, cut out the Mercantile Act and try some Enterprise in which you will have a show to pull out something for yourself."

How To Run A Newspaper

By this time the Assets had shrivelled to about $2.60 and it was up tothe ambitious Stripling to get up to the ambitious Stripling to get

Journalism looked very good to him, because it seemed to require neither Experience nor Funds, and he could mould Public Opinion without joining the Moulder's Union. An Old-Timer in the Business steered him away.

"Don't start into this Life," he said. "It's only a Tread-Mill, and after your Legs give out you are dropped down the Dark Chute. Besides, your College Training unfits you to help out on the Comic Supplement. Another thing, the longer you daily with Journalism the less you knew about it. The best way in which to direct a Newspaper is to stay away from the Office and write Letters to the Editor."

The poor Youth had just about played his whole String when he happened to think of the Stage. He was a Good Looker and knew how to wear Clothes, and had made terrific hits in Amateur Productions. The hardened Manager to whom he sent his Card handed him a Cake of Ice weighing 300 Pounds.

"The Trouble with you is that you have been attending the University instead of working on a Spring-Board so as to do Double Flip-Flops," said the Ragtime Impresario. "You are next to the Greek Verb all right, but you are shy on Step Dancing and I can't see that you have a Chance in a Million. I suppose you have studied Shakespeare. If so, you may possibly hook up with a fly-by-night Organization. The Legitimate Drama is now being played at the Whistling Posts and Water Tanks, but not in the great Thought-Centers. If your Voice had been cultivated in Europe, I think I could fix it for you to carry a Spear but as you have not sufficient Talent to get you into the Chorus, I suggest that you go down and play the Stock Market."

Here was an inspiration. He would go and find Employment in a Broker's Office and study the Quotations and gradually pike into the World of Speculation. He sought out a pious old Gambler who had made a Ton of Money by never doing what he let on he was going to do.

The veteran Financier would not be a Party to the ruination of any Good Young Man. "Keep away from the Market," he said. "All those who play the Ticker get the Solar Plexus Punch sooner or later. This Speculation is very demoralising. It has demoralized every one except me. I always warn Young Men to buy nothing on Margins, buy it outright. You can do this easily after you've earned the first billion or two as a Stenographer."

"There doesn't seem to be any safe Opening for an eager Soul with a University Training," said the Graduate.

"I might give you a Hunch on the Q. T.," said the old Gentleman. "Those who are very Bright often marry into the families of the vulgar Rich, thus acquiring the Means to go Abroad and study Art and, at the same time, Throw the Hooks into their Native Land."

"I'll tackle Matrimony," said the Collegian. "That appears to be the only Field that is not overcrowded."

$15,000 Manitou School Bond Issue Sold

Special to The Record News.

FREDERICK, Okla., Aug. 3.—The bonds recently voted by the Manitou schools, in the sum of $15,000 for the construction of an addition to their building, have been sold to the Pearsol bonding company of Oklahoma City, according to George W. Mosby, county clerk. There will be some delay in the work of putting up the building, however, because Herman S. Davis, county attorney, has refused to sign the bonds until a transcript of the votes cast in the election are presented to him, properly signed before a notary public.

The addition to the building will contain room for a gymnasium as well as adequate space for an auditorium and class rooms. It is proposed to join the annex on to the main building on the west side and to have it steam heated. A basement will be constructed and will be used as a furnace room. The new annex will be constructed of brick and will have an asphalt floor, according to those in charge of the plans for the structure.

WHERE I SHINE

A friend of mine has many things;
Has money, cars, and diamond rings;
His home's a mansion on a hill,
With garden, lawn, and man-made rill.
A single room I call my home;
No load of money frets my dome!

My friend has suits, a score or two;
He sits about with naught to do
But twirk his thumbs, and smoke, and chat,
And clip his coupons; think of that!
My wardrobe's stock is surely sick:
I have one suit—its pants are slick!

But in one way I'll best the lad:
I'll have more troubles than he had!

Even Beaches Are Hazardous

The swimming season is now in full swing. Millions of people are bathing in the oceans, lakes and rivers all over America. That hazards exist even at recreation centers of this character is pointed out by the National Safety Council, whose artist has drawn the above picture to show how people get hurt and killed while in their bathing suits.

(363) Repairing Faucets

A common compression faucet is shown above. The knowledge of its parts and how to repair it is valuable as often there are leaking faucets in the house. The parts are: (M) tee handle; (N) valve stem; (O) packing nut; (P) packing; (Q) threads on valve stem; (R) disk washer; (S) valve seat; (T) plain nozzle. Most often it is a washer needs replacing.

Shut off the water before starting to repair the faucet. In using wrench and screw-driver place cloths between the tool and the nickel parts.

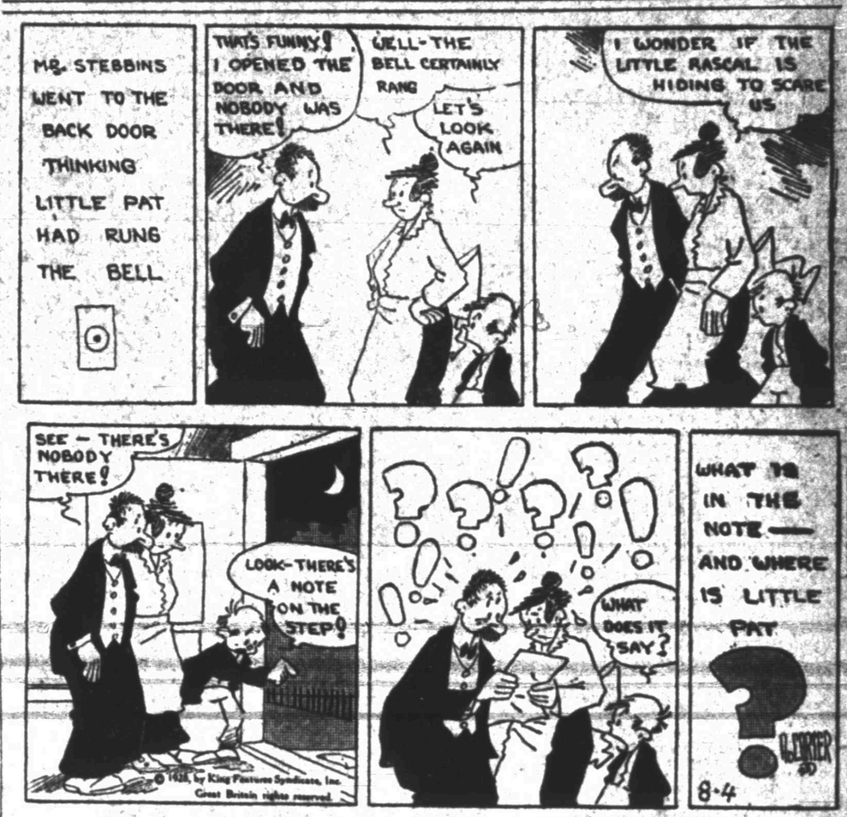

Nozzle leaks are usually the result of worn washers. Often, too, the packing around the valve stem needs replacing.

This is a Fuller faucet and is more complicated than the other. Its parts are: (A) lever handle; (B) valve stem; (C) packing nut; (D) packing; (E) eccentric; (F) rubber ball washer; (G) pipe threads; (H) plain nozzle. Care should be taken not to mar the finish of the faucet by the careless use of your tools. 8-3

FRANK ERNEST NICHOLSON

By IRENE RICH

Irene was Luther before she was Rich, having married an army officer by that name. She was the mother of two children—and divorced—before she entered motion pictures.

At that time, it was a question of no coin, no cookies. So she moved into the movies solely for mercenary reasons, was an immediate success, and owned the roof over her head before she owned the car in her garage—and bought a teapot before a tiara.

The following story, Irene thinks is rich.

"Over at the studio the other day," Miss Rich told me, "a number of the actors were discussing the character of a certain matinee idol.

"It so happened that the matinee idol was a close friend of the director, and the actors voiced some rather harsh things which were far from complimentary. The director, wishing to be generous to his absent friend, remarked:

"'Oh, I have always thought him to be the kindest sort of a fellow. In fact, since his wife has been in New York, I understand that he writes her a letter each day!'

"'Yes,' clarioned one of the party, 'he writes a lot of bunk about 'the agony of absence'—but he has never remitted her a dollar! Now do you call that kindness?'

"'Sure!' said the director. 'Unremitting kindness!'"

Dinner: Jellied tomato bouillon, served in cubes, roast veal, asparagus, baked grated carrots, celery, ripe olives, pineapple whip.

Wednesday—Breakfast: Coddled eggs, Melba toast, stewed apricots. Lunch: Dish of cooked carrots and peas; raw celery. Dinner: *Broiled steak, cooked zucchini (small Italian squash), green peas, salad of sliced tomatoes, ice cream (small portion).

Thursday — Breakfast: Waffles, small slice of broiled ham, applesauce. Lunch: Raw acid fruit as desired. Dinner: Roast pork, cooked celery, spinach, salad of quartered cucumbers, apricot whip.

Friday—Breakfast: Baked stuffed apple with milk or cream. Lunch: Corn on the cob, buttered beets, lettuce. Dinner: Broiled filet of sole, cooked cucumbers, string beans, salad of sliced tomatoes with parsley, pineapple gelatin, no cream.

Saturday — Breakfast: 4-ounce glass of orange juice 30 minutes before breakfast, poached eggs on re-toasted Shredded Wheat, stewed raisins. Lunch: Cantaloupe as desired. Dinner: Cottage cheese, cooked lettuce, steamed carrots with parsley, celery and toasted nut salad, raspberry whip.

*Broiled Steak: First, remove all fat from the steak, as the fat sputtering upon the lean part during broiling will toughen it against the digestive juices. Place under flame for about 15 seconds, then quickly turn. Continue turning every few minutes until cooked as desired. The object of this quick turning at the start is to get both sides of the steak seared as soon as possible and thus avoid losing the juice which would otherwise run away immediately if the underside of the steak became hot before being seared. Steak may be eaten rare, medium or well done, as preferred, for digestion is aided by a greater flow of gastric juice when meat is cooked to the degree most relished by the individual.

Sirloin steak, on account of its tenderness, is generally used for broiling, although round steak may be broiled under the flame if it is properly hammered beforehand so that the connective tissue is well broken down.

Questions and Answers

Question: R. M. writes: "When I was a year old I had whooping cough, and from the coughing I lost almost all hearing in one ear. A doctor told me it would be almost impossible for me to ever hear in that ear again, for he said one of the nerves had been deadened and the drum was too weak. Do you think it is possible for me to regain hearing in that ear? Or, do you think I have waited too long? I am 20 years old.

Answer: Your trouble may be caused by the closing of the eustachian tube which admits air from the throat into the inner ear. It is often possible to relieve the stoppage by curing any excessive catarrhal condition. This can be accomplished through dieting. I have seen several cases of deafness caused by whooping cough which have been cured through chiropractic treatment. It seems that the continual hard cough practically misplaces some of the vertebrae, which makes an impingement upon the nerves supplying the ear. If more pressure exists on one side than the other, it is possible that the nerve supply will be almost completely shut off. If this is the cause of your deafness, you will notice an improvement in your hearing after one or two treatments given by a chiropractor, osteopath, naturopath, or any physician who understands manipulative therapy.

Question: Reader asks: "Is it all right to use stewed prunes, figs, raisins or applesauce with a breakfast of oatmeal porridge?"

Answer: It is all right to use stewed prunes, figs, raisins or applesauce with a breakfast containing real wholewheat or real oatmeal, but a combination of these stewed fruits and plain starchy food does not seem to work so well together, causing excessive flatulence.

NEW DE SOTO CAR ON DISPLAY AT CORNELISON AGENCY TODAY

SHOWING TO LAST ALL WEEK

Former McFall Manager Has First Agency

The salesroom of the first agency for the new De Soto six in Texas will open its doors Saturday for the initial showing of the late model car, a product of the Walter P. Chrysler factories, according to an announcement by Bob Cornelison, manager of the agency.

Auto buyers have long awaited the appearance of the new car, and a special showing has been arranged for those interested at the new salesroom at 607 Scott avenue, Mr. Cornelison said. It will open Saturday morning and will continue through the week, with open engagements in the evenings for the convenience of visitors.

Mr. Cornelison was until recently manager of McFall Brothers. His company, he asserts, is the first in Texas to take over an agency for the new car, and 14 North Texas counties has been assigned as his territory. The salesroom in which the car will make its first appearance here is to be the temporary headquarters for the company only, the manager said.

Cars Low Priced

Mr. Cornelison is enthusiastic about the possibilities of the new automobiles. "I have just returned from Detroit, where I inspected the complete line, and conferred with officials of the company," he said, "and in my estimation no other car possesses so great a value for the price. Thirty-four dealers fell in line with our agency, and signed up for Texas distributorship, and they will in turn have associate dealers in their territories. It is expected that by January a complete line of dealers will have been established from coast to coast."

He further explained that while the new car is a Chrysler product, it will bear a different name, and be sold under entirely new agencies.

Mr. Cornelison has been joined in the new enterprise by S. P. Chambers, floor salesman; D. O. McFeely, salesman; and Randell Morrison, service manager. Four cars of the seven types will be shown in the opening exhibition Saturday.

Littlefield Dormitories Nearing Completion

LITTLEFIELD, Texas, Aug. 3.—The two dormitories of the Littlefield college, of 31 rooms each, are nearing completion. Temporary buildings will be used for the schools until the administration building can be completed. The authorities of the college expect to begin school September 25, and report that a good enrollment is assured.

De Soto Agent

Bob Cornelison, well known Wichita Falls auto dealer, has recently taken charge of the new De Soto sales agency here, the first in Texas, and will be open for a showing of the new product at his salesrooms, 607 Scott, Saturday evening. The showing will continue through the week.

TECH STUDENTS ON STUDY HIKE

Prof. Camps With Pupils In Glacier Park

Special to The Record News.

GLACIER PARK, Mont., Aug. 3.—Dr. Leroy T. Patton, head of the department of geology in the Texas Technological college, Lubbock, Texas, has taken a unique method of giving a six weeks' summer course in geology to a class of ten students, two of which are graduate students. Using the college 'bus,' with trailer for carrying camp materials, they left home in the Texas Panhandle, traveled through New Mexico, Colorado and Wyoming to Montana and by late July arrived at Glacier National park.

Dr. Patton and his students are making a special study of cretaceous and tertiary geological eras, and the east front of the main range of the Rocky mountains. Notwithstanding the rainy and unfavorable weather, which made travel slower than was expected, they have been in the field daily, taking the evenings for lectures and reports of work.

In addition to the wonders of Glacier National park, which has had special attractions because of its geological exposures, Dr. Patton reports his party particularly enjoyed a side trip to the Devil's tower in Wyoming, and to the Custer battlefield in eastern Montana.

Rites Held for Olney Child Killed In Mineral Wells Auto Accident

Special to The Record News.

OLNEY, Texas, Aug. 3.—Joe Franklin Weber, age 2, son of Mr. and Mrs. George E. Weber of this city, died at a sanitarium in Mineral Wells Tuesday night as the result of injuries sustained when he was run over by a truck in that place Monday morning. The body was brought here Wednesday night and burial took place here Thursday afternoon.

The little child and his mother had been in Mineral Wells for medical treatment for the past two weeks. At the time the accident occurred they were standing on a downtown corner, waiting for the signal light to change. The little fellow became interested in a tractor which he saw some distance up the street, and in his excitement, pulled away from his mother and before she could stop him had run into the street. The front wheel of a passing truck knocked the child down and the rear wheel passed over his body.

At first it was thought that the injuries would not prove fatal, but a sudden turn for the worse came late Tuesday evening.

Singers Plan to Retain Laurels

WASHINGTON, Aug. 3. (AP)—With Texas, Arkansas, Colorado, New Mexico, Kansas and Oklahoma already organized to discover new promising singers, the effort to keep the amateur singing championship of America in the southwest is on.

Government officials and music patrons of all these states are forming committees to equal their last year's feat—the discovery of Miss Agnes Davis, Denver school teacher soprano who won the highest award for girls in the national radio audition, $5,000 in cash and two years' conservatory study with Emilio De Gogorza, Caruso's co-star. Miss Davis also was the only vocalist of either sex to win the judges' unanimous vote.

One governor, a U. S. senator and leaders in art and business are among the chairmen and members of the southwest state committees who are encouraging deserving soloists to win the highest of the Atwater Kent Foundation's cash rewards of $17,500 and music conservatory scholarships.

GIANT AIRMAIL ROUTE SOUGHT

C-C Officials To Consider Plan Aug. 6

SAN ANTONIO, Texas, Aug. 3. (AP)—Chamber of commerce officials hope that they will be able to arouse sufficient sentiment for a southern coast-to-coast air mail route, in a meeting here Aug. 6, to put such a route in operation soon.

Houston and Laredo were the first towns to respond to the call for such a meeting. Invitations have been sent to all important towns on the route between New York, Atlanta and Los Angeles. A large delegation is expected to come from Laredo, which expects to become the junction point for the Mexican and United States air mail lines as soon as the Mexican government obtains delivery of planes which it has ordered for the service. Contracts have already been let for the gap between Laredo and San Antonio and an order to start that service is all that is necessary.

The meeting Aug. 6 will pay considerable attention to the possibility of persuading the post office department to bridge the gap between San Antonio and Tucson, Ariz. Once this gap is bridged, those promoting the meeting believe that the remainder of the southern route will be easy to obtain. They point out that such a route would be a great stimulus to air mailing from Mexico, since it would allow air mail from that country to turn off to the two coasts without going almost to the Canadian border.

Fast Plane Ride Feeds Hungry Baby

Hubby Locks Child's Food in Luggage

CHICAGO, Aug. 11. (UP)—The latest use for aeroplanes has been developed here—as an aid to hungry babies.

Malcolm McCartney, Hinsdale attorney, placed Mrs. McCartney, three small children, a nurse maid and an assortment of luggage on a train to New York, bound for a vacation in Cape Cod.

He watched the train start down the track and then shoved his hands in his pockets and started home. A startled look came over his face. His hand had encountered the seven keys to the luggage.

In the luggage was an especially prepared food for his baby. McCartney started one of those futile dashes down the train shed after a fast disappearing Michigan Central train.

Then he stopped and ran in the other direction. He hailed a taxi and sped to the National Air transport hangar.

The Detroit plane had just left but the air company provided another plane and McCartney flew to Kalamazoo, Mich. There he boarded a farmer's truck and arrived at the Michigan Central station before the train.

The McCartney babies dined according to doctor's orders.

"Oh, well, you know how babies are," McCartney said when he returned to the air port here.

Rabbit's Foot Aids Candidate

HOUSTON, Texas, Aug. 3. (AP)—Mrs. Minnie Fisher Cunningham, who sought a seat in the United States senate in the July primary election, insists that her famed rabbit's foot works.

She has driven more than 10,000 miles around the state in a light automobile campaigning. And not once did she lose time because of difficulties.

"We've had lots of punctures, but we've never had them except when we were stopped in a line of automobiles at a ferry or a bridge or in traffic. While the car was being fixed I would run up and down the line of cars handshaking and pasting my stickers on the automobiles, and when we would start again it would look like a Cunningham-for-Senator procession.

"It rained ahead of me and all around me, but it's never rained out one of my meetings. The only time since I started my campaign on May 1 that it rained on me has been on Sunday when I didn't have any meetings anyway."

The story is that Mrs. Cunningham's rabbit's foot came from an animal killed by a cross-eyed negro in a graveyard on the stroke of midnight of Friday the 13th in the dark of the moon. It was given to Mrs. Cunningham at Washington.

STEENGRAFE EFFECTIVE AND SPUDDERS CLOUT HARD TO WIN

TUT COPS LEAD IN HOME RUNS

Jim's Men End Cubs' Streak With 11 to 3 Victory

By LARRY DAILEY
Record News Sports Editor

The spell that the Waco Cubs had held over some other ball clubs of the Texas league does not extend to the Spudders. Jim Galloway's men returned home yesterday after an extensive road trek and lambasted the Cubs in the start of a three-day series that opened a two-weeks' stand out at the lot.

Time was when the Cubs were hardest club for the Spudders to beat. Del Pratt's nine isn't so easy now, but it doesn't exert the jinx once held over Wichita Falls. Indeed, it seems the other way, and yesterday the Spudders ended the Cubs' winning streak that had extended nine games, by winning, 11 to 3.

The contest was curtailed to six innings by a heavy rain that started in the fifth round and developed into a deluge as play was called. Mr. Pratt probably was highly pleased the proceedings were halted, as the Spudders had driven one of his good young men off the hill and were hammering another with right merry gusto.

Ace Batted Off Hill

Elliott was the luckless chunker to first face the Spudders and the ace was hammered for nine runs and as many hits in four innings. He retired in favor of Ox Darby and the appropriately nicknamed right-hander, formerly of Sam Marcos Teachers college, stopped the scoring in the fifth but yielded a brace of tallies in the sixth. Ox is a hefty fellow of around 250 pounds in weight and more than six feet in his stocking feet. Pratt has a liking for big fellows and collegians.

Tom Jenkins took his lead in the home run race with George Blackerby by whaling a circuit smash with a comrade on base. It was Dynamite Tut's 20th homer of the season and puts him one ahead of the Cub gardener who was sold last week to the Chicago White Sox.

Of the Spudders' 12 hits Rabbit Benton made three, two of them infield taps which he beat out. Jenkins and Smith clouted two smacks each and Doc. Fitzgerald, Turgeon, Pratt and Swenson smacked a double. Every Spudder had a hit except Steengrafe.

Steen Halts Cubs

Milton didn't need to hit. His sharp-breaking hooks and change of pace baffled the Cubs. Except for the sixth round in which they bunched three smacks and a base on balls the hostiles were impotent before the Californian. Milt gave up only four hits, passed two and struck out four.

Throwing a wet ball may have caused the temporary loss of effectiveness displayed by Milt in the sixth inning and of course the same would be said for Ox Darby.

Jimmy Battle got a couple of hits to lead the Cub attack. Blackerby, who hasn't hit so well here this season, retired from the game after batting in the sixth inning. He went hitless in three times up, though he walked once.

An error, one of the three made by the Spudders in the second inning, helped the Cubs score. Blackerby, first up, walked. Battle singled to left and Blackerby scored when the ball rolled ast Jenkins.

The Spudders gathered six tallies in the third. Stanton strolled, Smith singled to right, Stanton going to third. Steengrafe's lift to Blackerby scored Stanton. Benton beat out a tap to Elliott. Turgeon fouled to Pratt. Fitzgerald doubled to center, Smith and Benton scoring. Eldred singled to center, Fitzgerald scoring. Jenkins hit over the left field wall, Eldred scoring ahead of him.

Wichita Falls gathered three more in the fourth. Smith doubled to left after one was out. Steengrafe was hit by a pitched ball. Benton singled to left, Smith scoring and Setngrafe stopping at second. Turgeon hit to left for two bases, Steengrafe and Benton tallying.

Cubs Score In Sixth

The Cubs made two in the sixth. Johnson singled to left after one was out. Blackerby forced Johnson when Benton booted the ball into Turgeon's hands on George's grounder. Battle singled to center Blackerby tarrying at second. Pratt doubled to center, scoring Blackerby and Battle.

The Spudders also counted a pair of tallies in their half. Turgeon and Fitzgerald walked after one was out. Eldred lifted to Windle. Jenkins' sharp hit bounced off Darby, filling the bases. Swenson doubled to right, Turgeon and Fitzgerald scoring.

Notes of the Game

Bill Shores may oppose his former teammates today in the second game of the series.

Pratt made a one-handed snatch of Swenson's drive in the second.

Windle flashed some scintillating fielding. He went to the right side of second base for Swenson's grounder in the fifth. Wayne handled six chances flawlessly.

Turgeon went back of second base for Battle's grounder deflected by Steengrafe in the fourth and threw out Jimmy with a fast and perfect peg.

Swenson went to the stands for Windle's foul in the fourth.

While the Cubs feel the loss of Shires they present a mighty fine club, fast fielding and a dangerous-hitting. Indeed, the Waco club looks about as good as any team in the circuit now except for pitching.

Steers Sustain Ninth Defeat In Succession

DALLAS, Texas, Aug. 3. (AP)—Fighting back from behind an 8 to 2 lead at the end of their third inning, the Steers came within two scores of tying the Houston Buffaloes but were defeated Friday, 12 to 10 in the opener of the three-game series here. This, the ninth consecutive defeat for the locals and the 12th in 13 games, left the Dallas nine only half a game ahead of the fifth place Waco Cubs.

Heinie Schuble uncorked a spectacular play in the ninth to rob Si Rosenthal of a hit and end the game. Oglesby was perched on second base and O'Brien on first with two out. Heinie made a great leaping spear while going at top speed toward the left center wall.

Houston paid well for its victory, having to use up a quartet of pitchers with Jim Lindsey, the starter, being credited with the victory. Score:

DAILY DOPE

By LARRY DAILEY

ART SHIRES apparently acted with no great foresight when he jumped the Waco club to play ball with his brother's semi-pro nine. I like Art. Despite his quick temper, which led him into difficulties, he seemed to me to be an intelligent and likable young man. He had a future in baseball, still has, for that matter if he returns to the fold of organized baseball, or if he is permitted to return to the fold. But Art doesn't seem to have acted with any degree of wisdom in passing up a chance to play big league baseball.

◇ ◇ ◇

Dissatisfaction at his sale to the White Sox is said to have caused Shires' desertion of the Waco Cubs. It seems that there was a chance for him to get a piece of change had he been sold to Cleveland. Possibly Art did stand to lose part of his purchase price on his sale to Chicago. But that won't compensate him for the loss of salary as a member of a major league or fast minor league club. Here At is throwing away the chance to draw an excellent, possibly high salary, for 10 years in the big leagues or class AA or A minor, because he thinks he isn't treated right.

◇ ◇ ◇

YOU DON'T SEE George Blackerby jumping the Cubs. George is highly pleased at his promotion. And of course Wichita Falls is mighty glad to see George go up. Blackerby is a home boy and not like the reputed "prophet without honor in his home town." He stands a keen chance of sticking when he reports to Lena Blackburne next fall. A fellow that maces around 370 and leads a classy loop like the Texas league is bound to receive mighty serious consideration from a big league manager. And Blackerby is the sort of bucko who will hit any pitching in any league.

Weeks' Park Golf Meet Opens Today

The qualifying rounds of 18 holes for the Nafziger golf trophy tournament of Weeks' Park club will be held Saturday and Sunday according to an announcement made Friday by Jack Hale, president of the club. Match play will begin Monday.

The Nafziger tournament has been held annually for the last several years but the cup has never been won by the same player more than one time. It becomes the permanent property of the player who wins the tournament for three times.

Every member of the club has been requested to compete in the tournament and Hale expects three flights with at least 16 players in each. Prizes will be awarded to the winners of each flight.

National Boxing Board Approves Heavy Tourney

NEW LONDON, Conn., Aug. 3. (AP)—The campaign to select a new heavyweight champion by means of a series of international elimination tournaments was endorsed tonight by the National Boxing association, through its president, Thomas E. Donohue.

In announcing its approval of this plan, suggested by the retiring titleholder, Gene Tunney, and William Muldoon, New York state boxing commissioner, Donohue added that the N. B. A. felt that "no one survivor of a single elimination tournament will be a worthy successor to Tunney unless he has defeated the finalists of any other tournament that may be staged."

Sekyra and Braddock Signed for 10-Round Go

NEW YORK, Aug. 3. (UP)—Joe Sekyra, Dayton, Ohio, light heavyweight and James J. Braddock, Jersey City heavyweight, who was one of Tom Heeney's sparring partners before the Tunney bout, were signed for a 10-round bout at Ebbets field next Wednesday night by Promoter Humbert J. Fugazy.

Baer Facts

By ARTHUR "BUGS" BAER
(Copyr't., 1928, by Universal Service, Inc.)

NEW YORK, Aug. 3.—One of our over-married American girls is all geared up to grab another title.

Titles are much in demand among the ultra-shrinking violets just now. Millionaires are easy picking but a title is a fish on another hook.

This little lady is already an imperial countess and you can find her name just outside the almanac de Gotha. But she wants to be a duchess which is just slightly inferior to a king or a company sergeant.

Now, if one of our girls wants to be a duchess neither congress nor the American Express company can stop her. The only one who can stop it is the duke.

But it seems the duke wants to become marriaged up to her and is only waiting his present wife's consent.

He will be our pet's seventh husband.

Gosh, think of how many years he must have been standing in line.

There is a great rush to see who can marry the most titles and to see who can place the most marriage certificates among the battle flags of the republic.

Getting married a few dozen times is O. K. Think of all the gifts you get. Also the alimony rushing in from all sides.

That alimony budget ain't bad. It keeps piling up.

In fact, alimony is very nice. Alimony is the honeymoon of divorce.

More married folks would be happier if alimony were cooperative.

This little girl generally falls in love at first sight while she is endorsing cigarets blindfolded. But she is a sweet thing and if she lives long enough she will grab more men than were secured by the national draft act in 1917.

Knowing her habits, we hope she becomes the duchess, and knowing her habits, we know that she will become the duchess.

Also, knowing her habits, we know the best wishes we can give her, and wishes she will appreciate, we wish her a happy and short seventh married life.

Heeney Marries New York Girl

Tunney's Recent Foe And Bride On Honeymoon

LADENTOWN, N. Y., Aug. 3. (UP)—Tom Heeney, New Zealand heavyweight who failed to win the world title from Gene Tunney last week, started his honeymoon today after a secret marriage to Miss Marion Dunn of Spring Valley, N. Y., here late last night.

Heeney was married by Justice of the Peace P. Margulies who confirmed reports of the ceremony today. Justice Margulies also runs the general store here.

"Are you sure it was the prize fighter you married," he was asked.

"Yes, that was the man all right," he replied.

NEW YORK, Aug. 3. (UP)—John Mortimer, one of Heeney's managers, confirmed reports that the New Zealand heavyweight had married quietly last night in Ladentown, N. Y.

"Tom wanted to marry Miss Dunn before his fight with Tunney," Mortimer said, "but we dissuaded him. They met about 15 months ago at a party given by Frank Kane, brother of Eddie Kane, manager of Sammy Mandell."

Very Old-Fashioned

"See that man there? He's my grandfather."

"Is he on your mother's side or your father's."

"Oh, he sticks up for both of them."—Tit-Bits.

AMERICAN WINS OLYMPIC RACE

Barbuti Cops 5000-Meter Run; Nurmi Defeated

Olympic Standing

AMSTERDAM, Aug. 3. (UP)—The United States added 14 points to its Olympic total today with a first and a sixth in the 400 meters run and a fourth in the 5,000 meters. A first, second and sixth in the 5,000 meters event gave Finland scoring honors for the day. The standing at the close of the day's card follows:

United States 142, Finland 64, Great Britain 40, Sweden 37, Germany 34, Canada 33, Japan 15, South Africa 14, Ireland 10, France 10, Norway 7, Hungary 5, Haiti 5, Italy 4, Philippines 2, Holland 1, Switzerland 1.

OLYMPIC STADIUM, AMSTERDAM, Aug. 3.—Waning international interest in the track events of the ninth Olympiad was vastly stimulated today by two sensational happenings.

Ray Barbuti of Syracuse university, representing the New York Athletic club, sprang the first surprise by winning the 400 meters after America had been counted out.

Paavo Nurmi, the flying Finn, sprang the second by losing the 5,000-meter run to his fellow countryman and most persistent rival, Willie Ritola.

Barbuti's achievement was loaded with dramatic elements. On his shoulders rested America's last chance for taking first place in a flat race in the ninth Olympiad. If he failed, the best the United States could hope for was a victory in one or the other of the relay races yet to be run.

Wins Forlorn Hope

In the final of the 400, Barbuti faced five quarter-milers of proven class. It was a forlorn hope. The principal track coaches of the American team already had counted him out, one of them describing him as a one-in-ten shot.

To make matters worse, the Syracuse star drew the pole position, which nobody likes because it has had to bear the brunt of all distance races and because, here in Amsterdam, it is exceptionally soft and slow. Yet, with the scales weighing heavily against him, he won the race for the United States, falling over the tape eight inches ahead of Ball of Canada and collapsing on the track.

Rising almost immediately, Barbuti was photographed and rephotographed amid the greatest American ovation yet heard in the stadium. He smiled broadly, and waved an arm triumphantly to the benches in the American section of the crowd.

The general opinion is that Barbuti won not because he is a runner of exceptional ability, but because he added to great physical endurance a real fighting temperament. He said last night that he was determined to win even if he had to equal the record of Ted Meredith to do it.

But the Canadians were confident that their best quarter-miler, Ball, would take the 400 meters, just as Little Williams had carried off the 100 meters and the 200 for the Dominion. How close was the finish and how near the Canadians came to realizing their confident expectations, Barbuti well knows. He said after the race:

"I heard Ball coming up, but couldn't see him, and I knew I'd have to dive on the tape to win."

Ritola Beats Nurmi

Ritola won the 5,000 meters from Nurmi by 12 yards. The latter, when he realized that he could not match his rival's final spurt in the last 75 yards, was content to take second place from Wide of Sweden and rest on his laurels as the holder of the world record.

Leo Lermond of the Boston Athletic association ran very well, and finished in fourth place, 75 yards behind Ritola. After running with the two Finns and the Swede for 11 laps, he fell back on the last two, being unable to keep up the pace. The other American finalist, Macauley Smith, also of Boston, quit on the ninth lap after running beyond his strength with the leading bunch.

Trials in the 400-meter and 1600-meter relay races will take place tomorrow, with the finals and the marathon scheduled for Sunday, concluding the track and field events.

Although the American performance has been a disappointment to many, the Amsterdam Olympics were particularly disastrous to the Germans and the French. The Germans, who had great hopes of the sprinters, failed to get a single first or second place in the track or field events, and the best the French could do was La Soumegue's second in the 1500-meter run.

What! No Bacon!

CLEVELAND.—Never stop to put a few "shots" under your belt before breakfast—especially if your wife is waiting for you to bring home the bacon. A local husband tried it and wound up in the clutches of the police. However, instead of locking him up, they took him home. Then friend wife popped a few questions. No, he didn't remember where he got his drinks and he didn't know that he was supposed to buy any bacon for breakfast. She searched his pockets, then: "I'm glad you have a short memory, because you apparently forgot I gave you this $10 bill to buy the bacon."

His Last Bet

Helen (just engaged): Jack said if I refused him he would never propose to another girl.

Her Dearest Friend: Yes, I understand you were the last on his list.—Tit-Bits.

Dempsey Will Elevate Drammer In Opus Staged by David Belasco

Fair Estelle to Co-Star With Jack in "The Big Fight"; Corbett Best Actor of Pugilistic Champions

By DAMON RUNYON

NEW YORK, Aug. 1. (US)—The old Manassa Man Mauler, William Harrison Dempsey, is in our midst, and David Belasco, the snowy-haired dean of the drammer, is preparing to take William in hand to see if he can make an actor of him. Or at least a better actor, for William has always been something of an actor.

He was the star of "Jack Dempsey's Follies" years ago, which turned out to be follies, indeed, and he had a prominent part in the Sells-Floto circus. He rode an elephant in the parade. He was with a burlesque show at the Old Howard in Boston. He toured the Pan time with his own troupe, consisting of jazz dancers an singers, and what-not.

He has played the Hippodrome here in New York and has appeared in a lot of other vaudeville theaters, his act usually confined to a monologue made up of antique jests, with the eminent Dr. J. Leo McKernan, otherwise Kearns and to boxing. But this is the first time William Harrison Dempsey has ever turned his mighty fist to the real drammer, and I await the result with some trepidation.

Fortunately, William will have the support, moral and physical, of his wife, the fair Estelle Taylor, and she ought to be able to take him over the rough spots. They will be co-stars in a play called "The Big Fight," which will be one of a veritable rash of prize fight plays that will overtake the big town this season.

Other Ring Pieces

Jack McGowan, who wrote "Excess Baggage," has one coming on trimmed with music. Gene Buck is bringing in Hy Daab's "Ringside," which opened in Detroit and was a tremendous hit there. It is said that the "angel" for "Ringside" is none other than G. Loser Rickard, the pugilistic entrepreneur, who was found reading the notices from the Detroit papers the other day with far more interest than he bestowed upon the financial statements of the great washout, otherwise the Tunney-Heeney bust.

I observed Mr. Belasco at this affair. He was watching the goings-on with a slightly puzzled expression, as if he was looking for something he didn't exactly see. Perhaps Mr. Belasco was searching for highly dramatic points of insert in "The Big Fight," in which event he picked the wrong proceeding.

He might better have waited until Lou Bogash, or Martin Burke fought someone around here and he would have absorbed more drama than he got out of Mister Tunney and Heeney. But then Mr. Belasco goes everywhere, so perhaps he didn't mind the misspent evening.

In taking to the drammer, William Harrison Dempsey is but following what seems to be the natural bent of former heavyweight champions of the world. Mister Tunney has resisted the lure of the drammer so far, but I think when he is divested of his title that you will find him in there treading the boards. I'll lay 6 to 5 right now that Mister Tunney secretly thinks he is just the type for Romeo in Romeo and Juliet.

Gene as Hamlet

He took one whirl at the cinema, in which I thought he was middling bad, being too ramrodish, and inflexible. But he was as good as William Harrison Dempsey in the same field, at that. They used to have to putty p William's beezer for the cinema before he acquired a permanent rubber nose. Mister Tunney could appear au naturel, so to speak.

I would imagine Mister Tunney would make a first rate actor. He displayed so much dramatic ability the other night when, after deftly inserting a thumb in Heeney's orb, accidentally or otherwise, he stood off and gazed compassionately at his blinking victim, that a lot of the boys have been sniffling in admiration ever since.

Mister Tunney has a better voice than William Harrison Dempsey for stage purposes, I would say, and in one of those plays loaded with big words, Mister Tunney ought to go well in some little theater cult where they would understand him. Yes, I am convinced that he will wind up with the drammer, though I strongly advise him against Romeo. I would suggest Hamlet.

William Harrison's voice is a high voice, and not large. In fact, one is always somewhat surprised to hear such a small voice coming out of such a big man. But Mr. Belasco has overcome far greater obstacles than that. He once made Mr. Tammany Young seem almost a human being in a stage role.

Job for Ex-Champ

I hope and trust that "The Big Fight" is successful because it will serve to solve the always perplexing problem of what to do with our ex-champions besides giving them jobs on newspapers and letting them pick losers.

John Lawrence Sullivan was the first of the old Queensbury kings to take to the stage, his effort being "Honest Hearts and Willing Hands," or something to that general effect. The old timers tell me that John could rumble around quite impressively, but he wasn't as good as James J. Corbett, who came after him, and who is an actor to this very day.

Corbett is undoubtedly the best actor the sour science ever produced. He played first in "The Naval Cadet," I believe, and afterwards in other plays. He has been in vaudeville for years, and is booked not on his old reputation as a fighter, but on his ability as an actor.

Bob Fitzsimmons, who took Corbett's title, had a part in a play in which he reverted to his old occupation of blacksmith, and shod a steed on the stage. I am told that this was highly dramatic at that. It sounds as if it might have been. Come to think of it, I believe I would get a bang out of seeing a nag shod on the stage right now.

Jeffries Improves

James J. Jeffries played "Davy Crockett," and defied the wolves all through the provinces for some time. I saw Jeff on the stage, and I didn't think he was any better actor than Mr. Corse Payton. But then Mr. Payton's acting always went big with me. I saw Jeffries in a movie just the other night, and I am free to say that his acting has improved in 20 years.

John Arthur Johnson, who succeeded Jeff, was an actor at heart. He was never in a play, but he figured in numerous burlesque shows, and was a terrific draw for a long time. Johnson loved to act. The ponderous Jess Willard, who was next in the heavyweight line, never took to the stage save in vaudeville, but he was the first of the fighters to find employment with a circus. That was a brand new idea at the time.

Jess wound up owning his own circus, and he sold his horses out to the government at a profit when the war came on. Jess didn't look any too bright, perhaps, but he was a better business man than most of our champions, at that.

Five-Year Record

The Detroit United Railway company went into the hands of receivers in March, 1925, owing to a decrease in receipts due to bus competition and the assumption by the company of heavy liabilities to enable subsidiaries to engage in bus transportation.

In April, 1928, a new plan of reorganization was prepared, the previous plan not being acceptable to stockholders. The new plan provided for the organization of two new companies, one in Detroit and one in Toledo, to take over the properties of the Detroit United Railway and of the Detroit, Monroe & Toledo Short Line Railway.

Since the beginning of the receivership, operation of some car-lines has been discontinued and bus service instituted in several places. The electric railway lines owned by the company extend from Detroit to Farmington, to Pontiac, Wyandotte and to Rochester, and from Rochester to Flint and Romeo. City lines in Flint and Pontiac are also owned. The lines in the city of Detroit were formerly operated but these were sold to the city in 1922.

Since 1922 both gross and net income have tended to decline. Net losses were reported in 1925 and 1926, the latest available figures covering all the companies. The loss for 1926 was $979,000. The receivers' consolidated income account for 1927 shows an excess of operating and non-operating revenue over total operating expense of $489,000, compared with $572,000 in 1926.

If the reorganization plan is consummated, funded debt would amount to $13,326,844, with funded debt of the Detroit United Railway, other than the above referred to, amounting to $14,186,000. Capital stock outstanding consists of $15,375,000 in shares of $100 par.

As of January 1, 1928, total current assets were $1,038,348 and total liabilities $4,508,053, leaving an excess of current liabilities over assets of $3,469,705.

Autoist Leaves Curtain Cover On Engine; Car Flames

HOUSTON, Aug. 3. (AP)—J. B. Hogan has learned not to cover the engine in his automobile with a side curtain and then forget about it.

That's what Hogan did here one day when it rained. Several days later he was driving down Main street when flames burst from under the hood of his machine. Someone turned in a fire alarm. Someone else grabbed a pillow from the back seat of the car and started beating out the blaze. The pillow burst. Feathers scattered over the street. A noon-day crowd of pedestrians was entertained.

Just before the firemen arrived the blaze went out. Hogan continued on his way minus a side curtain and a pillow.

NEW YORK COTTON

NEW YORK, Aug. 3. (AP)—The cotton market was nervous and irregular again today. Early advances were followed by partial reactions. After selling up to 19.60, or 30 points net higher, December reacted to 19.35, and closed at 19.44. The general market closing very steady, at net gains of 14 to 26 points.

The opening was firm at an advance of 15 to 25 points on covering, with possibly some buying in anticipation of rallies after recent severe declines. Rather steadier Liverpool cables than due on the New York close of the previous day probably increased the disposition to cover short contracts, while later a private crop report was published indicating a condition of 67.4 and placing the indicated yield at 14,280,000 bales, or considerably below the average of previous figures.

Prices worked up to 19.74 for October and 19.53 for January, or about 30 to 38 points net higher on the general list, but demand tapered off at these figures, and the market eased again during the afternoon. Liquidation or reselling was reported on the afternoon decline which carried prices off to 19.48 for October and 19.30 for January, or about 22 to 26 points from the highest and within 5 to 14 points of yesterday's closing quotations on the more active positions.

Late months were relatively steady, but May sold off from 19.53 to 19.36, compared with 19.15 at the close of the previous day. Last prices were a few points up from the lowest on renewed covering.

Private cables said continental selling and liquidation in Liverpool had been absorbed by covering and local buying.

Exports today 9,546 bales, making 33,626 so far this season. Port receipts 2,542. U. S. port stocks 44,585.

NEW ORLEANS COTTON

NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 3. (AP)—The cotton market was steadier today despite rather heavy long liquidation in advance of next week's government crop report and closed at a net advance of 10 to 17 points.

Unfavorable weather and a bullish private crop estimate were responsible for the steadiness. October contracts traded up to 19.20, and closed at 19.00, or 10 points higher for the day.

The market opened steady despite Liverpool cables coming in 1 to 2 penny points lower than due. Initial trades showed gains and prices continued to advance after the start on a bullish weekly report of the Texas crop and private advices of rain in that state where moisture is not needed.

Prebureau liquidation attracted by the higher prices carried values off 7 to 9 points, but the market rallied again on a renewal of covering and trade buying promoted by a private crop report which made the condition of the crop 67.4 per cent of normal and indicated a yield of 14,280,000 bales, a much smaller total than has been advanced so far this season.

The advance was not maintained, however, as after midsession, liquidation became more active and prices eased off rather sharply. In the final trading belated covering carried prices 10 to 14 points up from the lows and December contracts closed at 19.40, 14 points net higher.

Receipts 2,637, for week 7,326. Exports for week 32,660, for year 32,660, last year 24,728. Stocks 516,236, last year 594,520. Stock on shipboard 31,480, last year 47,074. Spot sales 11,565, last year 5,065.

Chrysler Outstanding Stock During Continued Advance of All Offerings

By BROADAN WALL
Universal Service financial Editor

NEW YORK, Aug. 3.—Stocks continued their advance today with new and old issues participating with vigorous gains. Fears arising from the so-called bankers' measures to curtail the volume of "bootleg" loans were dissipated through recognition that such efforts are aimed primarily toward achieving more stable call money rates. To this extent the stock market approves the bankers' endeavors. In general, however, it was felt that the measures adopted will have little success in appreciably reducing the volume of corporation and individuals' lending on call, until other conditions develop.

Chrysler once more became the sensation and its opening price proved to be the lowest for the day. Closing at the top, for a net gain of 6½ points, the stock was reflecting the active endeavors of Walter Chrysler to completely reorganize the Dodge Brothers organization so as to more profitably fit in with his own enterprise. Faith in his ability to effect the consolidation and create one of the greatest money-making concerns in the auto trade is behind the persistent buying of Chrysler shares.

Motors Neglected

General Motors remained more or less neglected and sold off on renewed doubts that directors would vote any unusually favorable action at their forthcoming meeting. Atlantic Refining, one of the recent sensations, scored a sharp gain before profit-taking appeared on announcement of anticipated plan to split the shares on a four-for-one basis. Consolidated Gas also slipped a little on report that the merger with Brooklyn may be delayed.

International Nickel was brought forward by Durant as his daily performer. The stock advanced to a new high record price as the shorts attempted to extricate themselves in the face of reports that the company will shortly announce "rights" to stockholders in the form of a new stock offering. Montgomery Ward recovered part of its reaction as optimistic talk was still heard in regard to its earnings, which are declared to be record-breaking. American Can spurted on renewed reports that its profits will show substantial increase over last year and may exceed the most optimistic recent estimates.

Loan Increase

Johns-Manville continued in demand as more attention was directed to its Morgan sponsorship and revived discussion of the company's expansion program which may include absorption of other properties. Early trading in the market was influenced by the $75,000,000 increase in brokerage loans last week, but after several of the leaders registered new lows on the movement fresh buying appeared and turned the entire market. An encouraging sign was a greater shift into the oil shares under leadership of Atlantic Refining and Union Oil of California. The latter again is mentioned in merger talk. Union Carbide after being affected by some stops, scored a good gain. American Tobacco, one of the investment stocks gaining greater attention, was up fractionally. The rails as a group were not particularly active, Texas & Pacific slipping a point despite a record-breaking earnings pace and indications that this year's net may approximate $20 a share. Electric Auto-Lite was in heavy demand on Detroit advices that the company is experiencing a record-breaking business and that its profits undoubtedly will exceed all previous years.

The pound sterling featured foreign exchanges with a further drop to a new low level which revived discussion of impending gold exports to New York. Weakness in Canadian dollars also suggested a loss of gold to the United States. Wheat and corn options sold off sharply, while cotton recovered from the previous day's prices.

Grain

CHICAGO GRAIN REVIEW
By THOMAS TEMPLE HOYNE

CHICAGO, Aug. 3. (US)—Ideal corn growing weather with heavy rains reported in the central west and large arrivals in the cash market brought a sharp break in the September delivery, which since the removal of the July future has been soaring upward on short covering. Corn prices were 1⅜c to 4⅛c lower at the close.

Other grains ruled weak and lower under pressure and all the deliveries of wheat went to new low prices on the crop, closing 1⅜c to 1⅝c lower. Oats were ⅛c to ⅜c off and rye prices registered declines of 1⅛c to 1⅜c.

Corn prices were firm and even worked slightly higher in the early trading, but the overwhelmingly bearish factors in the news relating to both the old and the new crops which developed later quickly put an end to the short covering which had carried over from the previous two days.

Rains and seasonal temperatures were indicated over practically the entire belt. To this was added the weight of heavier arrivals than expected, with receipts estimated at 180 cars. Then, too, there was the report that late in the session Thursday spot sales of corn had been made at flat prices, without regard for the soaring September delivery.

From the opening gong wheat had a heavy tone and prices eased off fairly consistently throughout the session, with few important rallies. Weakness at Liverpool which closed ½c to ¾c lower and continued favorable crop news from the American and Canadian northwest were the main depressing influences.

These factors led to hedging and short selling which carried prices into stop-loss liquidation. The new lows on the crop were $1.17⅝ for the September and $1.22 for the December.

There were no actual export sales of wheat reported from the seaboard and advices said that the demand was disappointing. However, a report that Russia had purchased 5,500,000 bushels of wheat in the past fortnight was current. Italy was also credited with having taken 1,000,000 bushels of durum. Russia's purchases were said to have been mainly No. 3 northern.

The Liverpool market will be closed tomorrow and Monday.

Oats and rye were easier mainly under the influence of the other grains, with trade in both of an uneventful character.

BRADSTREET'S REVIEW

NEW YORK, Aug. 3. (AP)—Bradstreet's tomorrow will say:

Almost unanimous testimony as to improvement in crops, which seem now to promise indisputably larger returns than a year ago, a further accession of cheerfulness in trade, which enables of favorable comparisons with the reactionary trends visible in business and industry a year ago, stand out conspicuously in the reports to Bradstreet's.

In trade, an increasing number of reports of sales in fall lines exceeding a year ago are received, with special emphasis placed on active buying of agricultural implements, farm machinery, hardware and heavy fall wear, especially in northern markets.

Weekly bank clearings, $10,794,134,000, an increase of 4.9 over a year ago.

MELON RIND FOR PICKLES

New Recipe Given For Summer Delicacy

WASHINGTON, Aug. 3. (AP)—Watermelon rind makes good sweet pickles. Only the white portion of the rind is used, after the red heart has been cut out and eaten. One quart of limewater, made of a quart of water and one tablespoon of lime, is enough to soak two pounds of the rind cut into the desired shape. It should be left no longer than two and a half hours.

After the limewater has been drained off, the rind should be well covered with fresh water and cooked for one and a half hours, until it is tender. Let it stand in the fresh water over night and then drain. Make a syrup of four cups of vinegar, five cups of sugar, one cup of water, spiced with one tablespoon of all-spice, one tablespoon of cloves, and six small pieces of stick cinnamon. Allow the syrup to come to the boiling point, add the drained watermelon rind and boil gently for two hours, or until the syrup is fairly thick. Seal and store.

Some of the pieces may be placed on waxed paper and allowed to dry enough to be stored. They should be turned every day. The pickle rind can be used as citron in cakes and puddings, dipped in chocolate, or covered with fondant for a confection.

Corn pudding or corn custard, with a simple vegetable salad, makes an ideal hot weather lunch or supper. Fresh corn cut from the cob is desirable but not necessary. Two cups of either fresh or canned corn are used to two cups of milk, three eggs, two tablespoons of melted butter, and one and a quarter teaspoons of salt.

Beat the eggs and mix the ingredients, pouring the mixture into a buttered baking dish and placing it in the oven in a pan containing boiling water. The mixture should be baked slowly in a moderate oven (350 F.) until the custard is entirely set to the center.

Variations of mayonnaise make salads seem new. One of the simplest is by the addition of tomato catsup or chilli sauce and a little lemon juice to plain mayonnaise. This "Russian dressing" gives an attractive red color to plain lettuce or any crisp salad. "Thousand Island dressing" is a mayonnaise to which small pieces of highly flavored materials, such as hard-cooked eggs, pickle, Olives, celery, green peppers pimientos, capers and onion, have been added. For fruit salad the mayonnaise may be mixed with whipped cream and a little extra sugar and salt.

Tea Experts Tell How To Brew 'Perfect Cup'

BALTIMORE, Md., Aug. 3. (AP)—Brewing a perfect cup of tea is an art requiring rigid attention to every detail, declares the Tea Club of the United States.

The organization, comprising leading tea merchants of the nation, contends that not one housewife in a hundred can make a perfect cup of the beverage.

"Many make the mistake of using water from the hot water faucet," the booklet observes. "Water that has simmered or boiled for any length of time is fatal to good tea. An earthenware pot is essential. Metal pots set up a chemical change in the tea which is ruinous to its taste."

The club's recipe for the perfect cup:

Allow one teaspoonful of tea for every cup. Rinse teapot with boiling water. Place the tea leaves in an earthenware strainer in an earthenware pot. Pour freshly boiled water over the tea leaves immediately. Let the tea steep from three to five minutes according to strength desired. Remove strainer with tea grounds, and the tea is ready to serve."

Wine and Meat Daily For French Woman, 104

BORDEAUX, France, Aug. 3. (AP) Wine and meat, twice a day, is the regimen followed by Madame Madeleine Malherbe, an aunt of M. Louis Barthou, French minister of justice, who reached the age of 104 recently.

Informed that John D. Rockefeller is reported to have been dieting on milk and crackers for several years, Madame Malherbe was asked what she ate.

"In the evening a little thin soup only," she replied. "But twice a day, morning and noon, I eat heartily of meat dishes, accompanied by half a bottle of Bordeaux wine."

Strategic 'Town' Gets C-C Secretary

Bourland Pays Salary in Rabbit Meat

SNYDER, Texas, Aug. 3. (AP)—The phantom town of Fullerville, Texas, which is nothing more than a sign board and trainmen's telephone booth, has been assigned a chamber of commerce secretary by President Bourland of the West Texas Chamber of Commerce.

M. G. Evans, likewise secretary of the Scurry county Chamber of Commerce, is the new executive and his salary is to consist of all the jack rabbit meat he can kill in the environs of his new domian.

Though there is not a house within a mile of Fullerville, the "town" is widely known in circles of the Interstate Commerce Commission and the traffic world, and has been referred to thousands of times in both Washington and Austin. This point on the Santa Fe railway was the northern limit of the common points territory and by virtue of its strategic position, became well known to those taking part in the long discussed freight rate problem of the west. Due to this knowledge of it, many inquiries concerning Fullerville have come from all over the country, and Secretary Evans is now duly assigned to take charge of this correspondence.

Less than 12 per cent of the automobiles in the country are owned in cities of 500,000 population or more.

TEXAS HOUSES FIRST GORILLA

Animal Thrives in State's Climate

SAN ANTONIO, Aug. 3. (AP)—"Big Boy," a visitor from the Belgian Congo, is spending this week with friends in the Brackenridge park zoo here. "Big Boy" is a full grown gorilla belonging to W. A. King of Brownsville.

The animal has been in this country for two months, a much longer time than gorillas usually live in captivity, and has gained 40 pounds in weight since it was brought here. King has a theory that other attempts to keep gorillas in captivity have failed because the animals were kept in glass houses at artificial temperature. Aside from a shelter to keep the rain from him "Big Boy" has lived in the open and seems to thrive upon this treatment. So far as is known this is the first attempt to keep gorillas in a Texas climate.

The animal eats more in a day than a family of six people. His breakfast usually consists of 18 raw eggs, a dozen oranges and several loaves of bread. Later in the day it consumes a dozen or more bananas, more bread, oranges and eggs. It weighs 350 pounds and measures more than 13 feet from fingertip to fingertip. It is estimated to be between 25 and 30 years old.

If It's Action You Want, Here It Is

A series of fierce plungings, twistings, turnings—and this steer-rider's little ride is ended. Cowboys say a steer is one of the peskiest critters to ride you could imagine. This remarkable picture was taken during the recent rodeo at Salinas, Calif.

SWIFT...
Look for the Branding

MANY buy Swift's Premium Bacon in cartons because identification of the genuine is certain.

Now you may purchase Premium Ham or Premium Bacon with equal assurance.

In addition to the name branded on the rind, a new method of branding the name "Swift" in dots down the side of the ham or bacon makes identification of even the smallest purchase easy. This branding resembles the rich brown color of the broiled ham or bacon.

Now you know the genuine

When it is being sliced by the dealer
After it is sliced and on display
When it is delivered to your home.

CLARENCE SAUNDERS
SOLE OWNER OF MY NAME

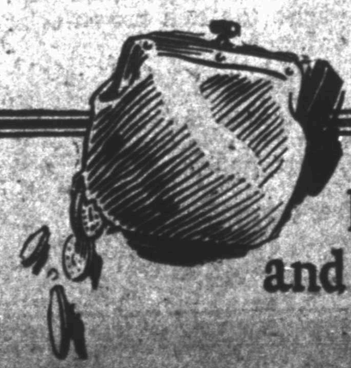

What! another new dress?

"Another new dress! Good gracious, Angie, how do you get away with it? You must have that husband of yours hypnotized!"

"Not at all. My system is really quite simple. You know I have my regular monthly household allowance. Well, instead of buying here, there and everywhere in hit or miss fashion, I watch the newspaper ads regularly.

"Then when I see an especially priced item that I need or will need soon, I buy it and set the difference aside as an allowance for extras. With this extra money I buy a picture or a bit of bric-a-brac for the house, and occasionally a new dress for myself."

It's really surprising how fast these little "extra" savings count up. Reading the ads soon becomes an interesting, instructive, profitable daily habit. By the way, there are scores of interesting ads in this very issue.

Frederick Youths Take to Road As Wanderlust Calls Them Westward

Special to The Record News.

FREDERICK, Okla., Aug. 3.—An unusual number of Frederick youths have been attacked by the "wanderlust" this summer and have started out in quest of adventure. The most usual manner is to start out "hoofing" it, for the young men know they will not have to walk far before being picked up by some auto. The west has proven the magnet this season and some who have left for California on foot arrived there sooner than most of their parents would have made the trip in their own cars.

Among those who have gone to California are Monroe Ruch, Harrison Roe, Lewis Pope and Clarence Sims. Bill Cassidy and Robert Campbell expect to leave for Yellowstone park Saturday. Fred Krause and Fred Wessel departed for Colorado by motorcycle Wednesday. Krause will proceed to the Pacific coast and will attend some college in California the coming term. Wessel will return next week.

It is expected all the other youths will soon return except Roe, who may decide to attend some college in California.

RAINS BOOST MILK SUPPLY

Kraft Plant Sees Heavy Production in Fall

The milk supply to the Kraft Cheese company is holding up unusually well, and is showing a gain over June in the face of an expected decrease which usually comes at this time of the year, according to C. L. Teissler, manager of the Wichita Falls factory of the Kraft Cheese company.

"We are running 25,000 pounds a day, and this is far better than we expected," Mr. Teissler said.

"All conditions have been increasingly better.

"The rains have been most favorable to us lately, and the milk production has increased to the point that August, normally a low production month, probably will be a strong month.

"This augurs well for the fall of the year, and we are highly optimistic. The farmers are learning now that with the proper attention they can make good steady money out of their milk.

"Our milk supply is now coming chiefly from within a 25-mile radius of the city, whereas at first we were hauling some of the milk from as far as 75 miles away. In other words we are now getting more milk from a territory closer to the city than we did at the outset."

Valley View to Vote On School District

The Valley View community is to vote Tuesday on withdrawing from the county common schools and forming the Valley View independent school district in order to increase the revenue for the district, it was announced by Burl Bryant, county superintendent of schools.

There are at present five independent school districts in the county. They are Fairview, Iowa Park, Electra, Burkburnett and Wichita Falls.

The recent reduction in the county tax rate tended to set the income of the Valley View school at a considerably lower figure than in the past, and because of this it was decided to create an independent district.

Tales of Real Dogs

By Albert Payson Terhune

QUEEN, the Great Dane That "Worked" for Charity

She rears herself on her hind legs at the wicket.

Some four years ago, Dr. Lee A. DeArment, of Dalton, Ohio, was romping in the front yard of his home with a huge and leggy Great Dane puppy, eight months old, that he had raised from babyhood. He had named her "Queen," and had amused himself by teaching her a few simple tricks which she learned with bewildering ease.

Still it had not occurred to the doctor that his gigantic puppy had more than the ordinarily clever brain of one of her splendid breed. That was to be discovered later and in a painful way.

During the front yard romp the puppy brought a ball for her master to throw for her. The ball struck against a tree as DeArment tossed it and it rolled out into the street. Queen dashed after it. A careless mbtorist was traveling too fast and with too little consideration for anything but himself. His car ran over the pup.

The doctor picked up the terribly injured dog and got her the best procurable surgical care. For months she was crippled but youth and wise treatment repaired her shattered bones and shattered health. During those long months DeArment and his dog became far better acquainted than otherwise they would have been.

Not only did the constant association with humans tend to humanize Queen, but her master discovered that she had an amazingly human brain. So, entirely by kindness and a little teaching at a time, he began a course of intensive training which the convalescent puppy enjoyed every bit as much as did he.

He was not content to teach her mere tricks, though she learned scores of those. He developed her "thought processes" as well. She responded eagerly to his system of education. When she was entirely well again, this education was kept up. As a result, Dr. DeArment's wonderful dog was soon the talk of Dalton.

The doctor declared he would show his gratitude for Queen's recovery—and make her show her own gratitude for it—by devoting her future career to charity. This he did. For the past three years Queen has been giving dozens of public exhibitions in behalf of various charities.

A charitable fund is kept, in her name in a local bank. As soon as a check is received for one of her performances, it is endorsed over to her. She carries it and her passbook in her mouth, with the utmost care, to the bank, and straight up to the receiving teller's window.

There she waits her turn in line, and rears herself on her hindlegs at the wicket, her paws on the glass counter of the window. She thrusts the check and book through the brass grill to the teller, and waits while the sum is entered.

Then, when the passbook is handed back to her, she carries it home with the same worried carefulness and puts it away in the hiding place where it is always kept.

Her checks, by the way, are endorsed by her master or by the management of entertainments to "Queen, the Educated Great Dane." Her bank hoardings are divided among genuinely worthy charitable causes. Every dollar goes to some such cause. Says an Ohio newspaper, commenting on her odd career:

Dr. DeArment, when Queen was so dangerously hurt by the automobile, sent up an earnest prayer in her behalf, and promised the Great Physician that if He would spare her life her owner would see to it that Queen should 'brighten her corner' of the world and help make folk happy as far as possible.

"Her income is $1.25 a minute at the larger entertainments, and some time ago she had already raised $2,700 for various charities. She has also given many free entertainments at orphan asylums, hospitals and schools. Her intelligence is such that her master and his wife have to spell out words in order to keep her from understanding their meaning, when they are talking of something they do not wish her to know.

"Last Christmas she received more than five hundred letters and cards. Among the sufferers who have received checks earned by Queen and signed with her name, are the Mississippi flood victims, the starving children in Ohio's mining sections, etc., as well as cheers sent to promote at least one religious revival in the state."

Her entertainments last from one hour to two hours. During that time she provides the whole program, working under Dr. DeArment's direction. She enacts pantomime plays, does simple sums in arithmetic, picks out one color from another at command, performs "rescues" and does other stunts far outside the range of the ordinary animal act.

Her master declares she has never received a blow or a kick, and that her brain has been developed as would be that of a bright child, by appeal to her intelligence and interest, and never through fear.

The Canton, Ohio, Girl Scouts have elected Queen an honorary member of their organization. She is said to be the only dog in the world on which this honor has been conferred, and she wears around her neck with great pride the coveted Girl Scout medal.

As a rule, I am not interested in the performances of trick dogs. Indeed, I make it a rule to leave a vaudeville theater whenever a so-called "animal act" begins. For I know that many of those acts have been perfected through hideous tortures to the luckless dogs taking part in them.

But Queen's training was different. Also, most of Queen's stunts are not ordinary tricks, but show a reasoning power and an unwontedly high degree of intelligence. Incidentally she is an example of what almost any wise and patient dog owner can do with his dog if he will take the trouble and time needful for its education.

A gigantic theater with a seating capacity of 20,000 persons has been uncovered at Corinth, Greece, by an exploration party which includes Dr. Leslie Shear, professor of archaeology at Princeton. The back portion was 100 feet higher than the orchestra pit.

A theater of the legitimate stage today is counted a giant if it seats 2,000 persons.

A modern movie palace can safely say there are none larger if it seats 4,500.

And those old Greeks took care of 20,000 in one house.

What a piker the 20th century turned out to be!

Dallas has a city supervisor of amusements in the person of Mrs. Ethel Boyce. She rejected "The Racket," a popular, present day movie melodrama. That got a lot of publicity for the show. The board of censors of Dallas immediately reversed her ruling. That made a lot of customers for the show. This idea of trying to regulate the other fellow's business is a failure, and when it comes to show censorship it usually has the effect of boosting the box office receipts.

'Glorious Betsy' Heads List Of 'Talies'

(By The Record News Critic)

"Glorious Betsy," the greatest picture yet produced by Vitaphone, opened at the Strand theater Friday.

Dolores Costello, Conrad Nagel, Betty Blythe and Pasquale Amato head an admirable cast which might well be called an "all-star" collection. The work of Dolores Costello is brilliant.

Many stories of Napolean Bonaparte have been put on the screen, but there has never before been anything about his brother, Jerome, whose life really made an interesting chapter of history.

"Glorious Betsy," however, depicts with beauty and understanding his romance with Betsy Patterson (Miss Costello), the belle of Baltimore. It tells how Jerome Bonaparte (Conrad Nagel) came to America, fell in love with Betsy and married her in spite of the opposition of his brother.

How the two sail for France to try to get Napoleon to relent, and how Jerome is forced to land without her make an exciting tale, efficiently directed by Alan Crosland, who also directed "Don Juan" and "When a Man Loves."

The Vitaphone presents considerable dialogue, excellent music and some negro singing which add just that touch which makes the show easily the best of all Warner Vitaphone pictures presented here to date.

Honor Scouts to Go On Gulf Coast Trip

The trip will be made through the country on two trucks under the guidance of three scout officials of the Wichita Falls area.

Wichitans Enter Farm Loan and Mortgage Business Here

C. R. DANIEL

E. C. HALL

The farm loan and mortgage business of C. R. Daniel in the Hamilton building has been expanded through the association of E. C. Hall of the Union Central Life Insurance company, and through an arrangement for the loaning of Union Central funds. The Union Central is one of the 14 old line companies with more than $1,000,000,000 insurance in force and is one of the three billion dollar companies operating in Texas.

In announcing the expansion, Mr. Daniel is prepared to offer an unlimited amount of capital at a lower interest rate and on more attractive terms. The business will remain in the Hamilton building.

The Union Central, one of the oldest and one of the most conservative life insurance companies, studied conditions in this territory for some time before deciding to enter this field, and Mr. Daniel considers their action as added evidence of the soundness of business conditions now and of the good outlook for the future.

Mr. Daniel is a native of Wichita county and is 30 years old. He has been active in church, social and civic life in the city.

Mr. Hall has been writing insurance for the Union Central since 1920 and will be associated with Mr. Daniel in the mortgage loan business. He also will retain his writing contract and continue selling policies.

THE NEWSPAPERS' PLACE IN THE SUN

An Address by William H. Rankin, President, Wm. H. Rankin Advertising Agency, Before the Newspaper Group—International Advertising Association Convention at Detroit on July 9, 1928.

Advertising and advertising men are taking their calling more seriously in this year of 1928 than ever before. Contrast this great Detroit International Advertising convention with the conventions of 20 years ago at Omaha, Louisville and Kansas City and it makes us all realize how much advertising and advertising conventions have changed—and I may say the men now at this convention are very largely responsible for the change for the better.

Advertising men now work on the basis that the consumer must have first consideration—the man or woman who buys the advertised products—then the advertiser—the man who manufactures the goods and pays the advertising bills—then the media last and sometimes a very important factor.

We advertising agency men have found we must know not only how to advertise to the consumer but actually how to sell the product advertised and know every step of the way from the raw material through the factory—to the distributers—the branch and district managers, then salesmen, in the three or possibly four great zones of these United States, East, Central West, the Far West and the South. And above all else we must not take too much credit for the success of our customers' campaigns—they come first—the product—the sales department are even more important links in the chain of success than advertising.

For 20 years we have all been building along those lines and one of the best assets an advertising agency may have for the benefit of his customers is the friendship of the newspaper business managers. I wish to pay public tribute to all advertising managers, the publishers and then special representatives, those men who have been so helpful to me during the past 20 years, since I started in the advertising agency business. You hear of many plans of trade research costing ten or hundreds of thousands of dollars—but I would rather have investigations and reports made by newspapers than all the others put together. We pioneered independent trade investigations—we have tried it both ways and those made by the newspaper men we found to be the most reliable and trustworthy!

Trade research and merchandising are two of the most important items of advertising agency service—our own motto is "advertising based on knowledge that benefits the consumer." Our own research department plus the service given by individual newspapers, the Bureau of Advertising of the A. N. P. A. and 100 city groups have helped our customers solve many hard problems.

Newspapers during the past five years have emerged triumphantly—meeting all kinds of new competition—radio and other new forms of advertising—to a surer, safer, sounder place in the sun of public appreciation.

This applies equally to the daily, weekly and Sunday newspapers in large cities as well as small towns.

More newspapers are being read in all the homes of this country than at any time in the past. Newspapers have become more interesting—they are better edited; better illustrated because of the improvements in printing processes, photographic processes, plates, mats, etc.; the syndicate service and the improvements in national and international news service, such as those of the Associated Press, The United Press and International News Service, have all made it possible to give readers and advertisers more dollar and cents value.

For nearly every newspaper that formerly sold at 2c a copy, subscribers (and more of them) are willing to pay 3c—thus eliminating the necessity of the publishers increasing the milline rate to the advertiser and the advertising agencies.

The advertising departments of newspapers—local as well as national—are giving better and more comprehensive service with less waste to themselves and to advertisers. Department store advertising is now approaching a very high standard of sales-producing copy and illustration.

Then, too, the merchandising service and cooperation given by newspapers through their very able New York, Chicago and coast representatives have helped considerably to advance the cause of newspaper advertising for national advertisers.

And advertisers and advertising agencies of Detroit and other cities have done their part. The national advertising appropriations for newspapers of Ford, General Motors, Chrysler, Dodge, Hudson, Essex, Packard, Reo, Hupmobile stand as a monument to the business building power of the daily, Sunday and weekly newspapers. Just as the newspaper advertising of the American Tobacco company, R. J. Reynolds, P. Lorillard, Union Tobacco company and Liggett & Meyers has convinced five times as many men and women to smoke cigarettes as they did three years ago, the advertising of these leading automobile manufacturers in newspapers, supplemented by all the other good forms of advertising has persuaded more men and women than ever before to own and operate an automobile—much to their own pleasure, comfort and prosperity!

In each of these two illustrations, advertising has so increased production and helped lessen manufacturing costs, that the price of automobiles and cigarettes has been lowered materially to the consumer.

Ten years ago million dollar appropriations for newspapers were as exceptional as five or ten million dollar newspaper appropriations are today.

I remember at the New Orleans convention in 1918, I addressed this same group of newspaper advertising men on the roof of the St. Charles hotel—the hottest day in all my experience.

In those days none of your competitors and very few others would agree that the newspapers were a national advertising medium—they all agreed that newspapers were the primary local and best medium but that it cost too much to advertise nationally in the newspapers.

In my address I stated that the fault was not with the newspapers, that most advertisers did not consider them a primary national advertising medium, but prophesied that as business units became larger, volume of sales grew, and the purchasing power of the country increased, national advertising in newspapers would become very profitable to the advertiser.

I was very much surprised to receive a vote of thanks and to hear your president say that I was the first advertising agency man to publicly say a good word for newspapers as a national advertising medium. Today things have changed and nearly every advertising agency man and advertiser pays tribute to the great value of the newspaper as a national advertising medium.

Recently I addressed the magazine men of New York and told them of many instances where we have started advertising and made it successful in newspapers and as a result, magazines were added. I also told them of national advertising started in magazines that became national newspaper advertisers. And I suggested that newspaper and magazine men keep in closer contact with each other for their own mutual advantage. I make the same suggestion to you newspaper men, know the magazine men and work together for the interest of the advertiser.

Of course, we must not forget that mass production has required larger sales and advertising vision and today, the question is not "how much can we manufacture?" but "how much can we sell?" Sales and advertising methods have caught up with mass production and newspaper advertising has become a large factor in producing that result.

It is in meetings like this one—the International Advertising convention of a billion dollar industry, advertising—that we can become familiar with all forms of advertising. We can all stand together and say we are proud of that great industry — advertising. We are proud of the great city of Detroit, which gave us our first really International Advertising exhibition and we are especially proud of the advertising men of Detroit and the work they have done to help us show our wares. Here you will find newspaper advertising—magazine advertising—farm paper advertising—business paper advertising—outdoor advertising—street car advertising—radio advertising and the great direct mail fraternity, all under one roof, peaceably and respectfully—and I know the outcome will make for less of knocking and petty jealousies, and more of praise and pride in our calling.

And may I say in conclusion that the newspapers place in the sun is more sure and more secure today, than at any time in the past twenty-five years. The reasons for this are:

First—Where in all the world can you buy for three cents such value as the Detroit newspapers give to the people of Detroit—in The Detroit Free Press, The News or Times?

Second—These same newspapers (as do newspapers generally) allow the local or national advertiser to buy a full page advertisement for ¼c per page per home delivered—½c for a half page and ¼c for a quarter page.

Third—The members of the American Association of Advertising agencies know how to produce copy that will make newspaper space profitable to the advertiser, singly or in conjunction with other good mediums.

Fourth—And most important of all—the daily newspaper publishers have educated their readers and the retailer to believe in and to buy advertised products. They have eliminated questionable advertising, censored their advertising columns and gained for their advertisers the complete confidence of their readers—the consumers and buyers of advertised products.—Adv.
