Two Air Crashes Kill 88 People

Brazilian, U.S. Planes Collide Over Rio; At Least 61 Dead

RIO DE JANEIRO (UPI) — The Air Ministry said today a U. S. Navy plane probably was to blame for the collision over Sugarloaf Mountain which killed at least 61 — and possibly — persons here Thursday.

About 40 of the dead were Americans. The three survivors, Lt. (j.g.) George P. Fitzgibbons, of Worcester, Mass., Sonarman 2-C Frederick E. Wilson, of Dallas, and Ordnance Man 1-C Hal R. Valenza, of Norfolk, Va., were hospitalized with minor injuries.

President Eisenhower and Brazilian President Juscelino Kubitschek went to the hospital on their return here from Sao Paulo Thursday night to express their sympathy to the survivors.

A ministry spokesman said the Navy DC-6 which collided with a Brazilian DC-3 over the cloud-shrouded peak apparently had strayed from its assigned course. The U.S. Embassy declined comment.

The crash here was one of two air tragedies reported in the past 24 hours. In Ireland, an Italian airliner taking off from Shannon Airport ran into a cemetery wall, killing at least 25 of the 52 persons aboard.

The DC-6 was bringing Navy bandsmen and other Americans here from Buenos Aires when it collided with the Brazilian airliner, inbound from Vitoria. The survivors were believed to be members of the U.S naval party sent to Argentina as a result of the recent submarine scare there.

A Brazilian woman who saw the crash said the undercarriage of the Brazilian plane hit the top of the Navy plane. The DC-3 plummeted into the Atlantic Ocean, east of Sugarloaf, and the DC-6 spun in to a beach on the Guanabara Bay side of the mountain.

All of the 26 persons aboard the Brazilian airliner died. The number of dead aboard the Navy plane was a matter of dispute, the U.S. Embassy saying there were 44 persons in the plane and Navy officials here and in Washington saying it carried only 38.

(In Washington, relatives of the Navy bandsmen killed in the crash said several of them had had premonitions of disaster ahead before they left for Latin America.)

(Heartbroken wives and saddened friends said they had a "funny feeling" there would be a "bad accident" on the trip.)

Five victims of the crash were still alive when rescue craft plucked them from the waters of the bay, but two died later in Miguel Couto Hospital. The three who survived received emergency treatment at Couto, but were moved later to the Navy's Cobra Island hospital. Sergio de Sousa, a boatman who rescued four of BRAZIL WELCOME — President Eisenhower received a tumultuous welcome in Brazil earlier in the week (above) but his reception today in Argentina was mixed. There were some demonstrations by supporters of former Argentine Dictator Juan Peron.

Italian Airliner Explosion Fatal To 27 Of 52 Aboard

SHANNON, Ireland (UPI) — A New York-bound Italian airliner which had just taken on 7,000 gallons of gasoline "blew into 10 million pieces" on departure early today and rained survivors, bodies and wreckage to a nearby cemetery.

Shannon airport officials said 27 persons were killed, two of them dying in hospitals today, and and that there were 23 survivors. Two other of the 52 passengers and crew aboard the Alitalia DC7 were still "unaccounted for."

At least two of the 10 Americans reported aboard the plane survived. Authorities listed them as Joseph Maiorano of Mount Vernon, N. Y., and "one of" the three members of the Collogis family of North Carolina. They did not know which one.

Another survivor was the Rev. Giuseppi Cacioli, a Roman Catholic Capucin priest, who was en route to New York to give a series of sermons in Italian.

It was the second major air disaster in two days. Sixty-one persons were killed Thursday in Rio de Janeiro in a collision involving a U.S. Navy plane and a Brazilian airliner.

A Shannon airport spokesman said the cause of the Alitalia crash appeared to be "engine failure" on takeoff. He said he believed the plane did not explode in flight but upon impact with the ground, sending flames up so high people thought it was an explosion in air.

The flames were seen 30 miles away.

Father Charles Comerford, a Roman Catholic priest who lives near a cemetery where the crash occurred, said the palne appeared to blow up into "10 million pieces while in flight," raining bodies and wreckage across a 300-yard area of the coastal marshland.

Wheels of the giant plane smashed into the wall of New Market cemetery and bounded about among the tombstones. And although the wreckage was widely strewn somehow half of those aboard survived the initial impact.

The flight originated Thursday in Naples and then stopped in Rome to pick up 33 more passengers. It took off on what was to have been a non-stop flight to New York but it encountered strong head winds and the pilot decided to refuel at Shannon—a customary procedure under such conditions.

The plane was on the ground for about an hour while the 40 passengers and some of the 12 crew members aboard strolled through Shannon Airport buying souvenirs including candy and dolls for several children aboard. The souvenirs and toys were scattered among the wreckage.

Irish aviation authorities began an immediate investigation of the crash, the third involving planes departng from Shannon. In 1954 a KLM Super Constellation crashed after takeoff with the loss of 27 lives. In 1958 a KLM Super Constellation crashed into the Atlantic after takeoff killing all 99 aboard.

Air Crash Poses Problem For U.S. Navy

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The U.S. Navy Band is the elite corps of military music. Most of its members are enlisted men, who fought their way to the top in the toughes of competition.

Now, with 19 members lost in the Brazilian crash, the band is faced with the task of replacing practically its entire orchestral contingent.

The Navy Band came into being in 1925 under an act of Congress signed by President Calvin Coolidge.

Winning a chair in this group is extremely difficult for an enlisted man, because musicians at Navy centers all over the United States and the world have the same goal in mind.

The struggle is worth it, though, once a musician makes the grade. He has a chance to live in Washington and stay with the group for as long as his music measures up.

This is unique in the military. The usual tour of duty on a single assignment is about two years.

A recruit musician in the Navy draws base pay of $206 a month. But because most of them have been around a long time, enlisted members of the band draw an average of $300 to $400 a month.

New Cold Front To Cover State

By United Press International

Light snow fell at Amarillo and Dalhart today and may reach the Fort Worth-Dallas area by tonight as a fresh surge of cold air swept to the state.

Forecasters said, however, that the new cold wave will not be as severe as the one that dumped snow and ice on the state Wednesday and Thursday. Freezing weather heavily damaged crops in the lower Rio Grande Valley. Precipitation in some form was the forecast for the whole state, with snow expected to push into South Central and Southwest Texas by early Saturday.

The lowest temperature in the state early today was 11 degrees at Lubbock, but this was a far cry from Thursday's low reading here of eight degrees below zero. Seven inches of snow fell at Lubbock but a warm sun melted off five inches of it Thursday.

Only three places reported above-freezing temperatures early today—El Paso with 38 degrees Laredo with 33, and Brownsville with 34. The whole state had subfreezing weather early Thursday.

Ice was blamed for an explosion and fire at the one-million dollar Lone Star Gas Co., plant near Springtown, Tex., Thursday night. A cooling tower weighted with ice collapsed and ruptured high pressure pipes and the plant was rocked by a series of explosions.

Three workmen on duty at the plant escaped injury, but a company spokesman said damage would be "tremendous." A mushroom of black smoke coming from the flaming debris could be seen in Fort Worth, 27 miles away.

In the Rio Grande Valley, freezing weather destroyed a 30,000 acre potato crop, and stands of young cotton, corn, watermelons and tomatoes.

Citrus trees apparently escaped serious damage. Kenneth Jackson, manager of the Texas Citrus Mutual, said isolated leaf burn was reported throughout the valley, mostly on young trees not yet bearing fruit. He said fruit ready for harvest was not affected by the freezing weather.

Snow fell over the Panhandle early today. An inch of dry snow covered the ground at Amarillo and the temperature dropped to to 15 degrees there. The mercury was expected to rise to only 21 degrees during the day.

Thursday's freeze wiped out the lower Rio Grande Vallen tomato crop. Hidalgo County agent A. H. Karcher said some watermelons, corn and cotton were a total loss, but citrus damage was believed to be light.

But the sun quickly warmed the state and by mid-day Thursday the ice and snow began to melt. Schoolchildren, who got a holiday in most of the snow-ice belt, returned to their classrooms today.

Supplies of natural gas were still limited and distributors were curtailing allotments to industrial users so homes could be heated.

Low temperatures early today ranged from Lubbock's 11 degrees to a 39 at Laredo.

Dalhart had 14, Amarillo 15, Childress 16, Abilene and Wichita Falls 20, Mineral Wells 21, Dallas, San Angelo and Lufkin 22, Tyler 23, Midland, Fort Worth and Waco 24, San Antonio and Austin 26, Houston and Beaumont 30, Galveston 33, Laredo 34, Brownsville 36 and Corpus Christi 37.

Five - day forecasts called for temperatures five to 10 degrees below normal throughout the state.

Area Roads Slick From Snow Fall

Between one and one-half and two inches of snow has left Pampa streets and area highways slick and hazardous today.

Sergeant E. G. Albers, of the Texas Highway Patrol, said all area roads are open, but advised only emergency travel, and then with extreme caution.

Albers said the Pampa, Borger, Gruver, Clarendon and Wheeler areas all had some snow, but Shamrock, Canadian and Perryton reported only a light fall. Wellington had no snow at 9 a.m. today.

At McLean snow one inch deep was measured overnight, and the sun was shining there this morning, although some snow was still falling. McLean recorded a temperature reading of 20 degrees at 11 a.m. today, with streets and highways snow-covered but passable.

Only one accident was reported to the Police Department as the result of the snow, which began falling about 3 a.m. today. However, Chief Jim Conner advised motorists to use extreme care while driving today.

All schools in the area are open, except St. Vincent's and a check with superintendents revealed no plans for closing them.

Utility companies have had no interruption of service due to the snow.

The forecast calls for partly cloudy to cloudy weather with occasional snow tonight and early tomorrow mainly in the upper Panhandle. A little colder today and tonight, with an expected low of 10 degrees.

The low reading in Pampa last night was nine degrees, and the high today is expected to be about 20.

UAR Building Troop Strength Says Israel

JERUSALEM (UPI) — Three Israeli cabinet ministers have been instructed to report to the Western Big Three that the United Arab Republic is massively building up its troop strength on the Sinai Peninsula, highly-placed sources said today.

Egyptian concentrations in northern Sinai were believed to total three divisions, including large armored artillery and infantry units. The actual number of troops in the Sinai Desert in fact was said to include almost the entire Egyptian army.

The Israeli charges of a military build-up in the Sinai area followed a charge Thursday that U.A.R. troops had been moved into the Gaza Strip, an area 30 miles long and seven miles wide along the Mediterranean that was occupied by Israeli troops during the 1956 Suez campaign.

Israeli forces left the strip in March, 1957, when it was agreed United Nations troops would move in. Gaza is part of Palestine but is under Egyptian administration.

Egypt has refrained from stationing any sizable number of troops there since 1956, but there is no prohibition against this.

A U.N. spokesman in New York denied U.A.R. troops had moved into Gaza, but he said it was understood there had been Eyptian troop movements in the Sinai area that borders Israel.

The Western Big Three agreed in 1950 that they would make every effort to see that the status quo in the Mideast be maintained.

Van Rie, DA Swap Verbal Blasts Today

BOSTON (UPI) — A testy exchange between the prosecutor and Willem Van Rie erupted today at the Dutch wireless operator's murder trial.

The 31-year-old Van Rie, normally cool-mannered, showed the first outward sign of strain under a punishing cross-examination that began Thursday.

Van Rie is accused of killing Chicago divorcee Lynn Kauffman after a sizzling love affair on the Singapore-to-New York tramp steamer Utrecht.

The verbal outburst came while Asst. Dist. Atty. John F. McAuliffe was questioning Van Rie about Van Rie's radio message to the Coast Guard concerning Miss Kauffman's disappearance.

Van Rie icily accused McAuliffe of "talking nonsense." McAuliffe heatedly replied, "I'm talking nonsense and you, sir, are the one who says the New York police forced you to make a false statement."

The exchange came while McAuliffe and Van Rie were going over the radio message logged in Van Rie's book.

Peronistas Demonstrate Against President's Visit

BUENOS AIRES (UPI)—President Eisenhower made a dramatic arrival in the heart of Buenos Aires by helicopter today, soaring over the heads of angry demonstrators who were demanding the return of ousted Dictator Juan D. Peron. They shook their fists at the chopper as it passed high above them.

Five bombs exploded in the city during the night, injuring three persons in what may have been anti - American demonstrations. Two of the blasts damaged American-owned companies.

Security arrangements were the tightest of Eisenhower's Latin American trip.

The President arrived by plane at Ezeiza Airport, saddened by the loss of 61 persons in Thursday's air collision over Rio de Janeiro between a U.S. Navy plane and a Brazilian airliner.

President Arturo Frondizi and other high Argentine dignitaries welcomed Eisenhower warmly at the airport, and the two presidents boarded a U. S. Marine Corps helicopter and flew 27 miles into the city to the U. S. embassy gardens.

Members of Eisenhower's party who made the trip into town by auto saw Peron's name whitewashed on the highway hundreds of times and signs saying "People are with Peron" and "Peron come back."

A UPI correspondent in a radio-telephone car tracking the helicopter reported that Peronists along the way shouted "Viva Peron" as the craft passed overhead.

The extremely severe security measures and the heat kept the crowd down to about 1,000 and these were kept a safe distance away.

In accepting a key to the city, Eisenhower said he was "one hundred per cent" for Frondizi.

The praise for the Argentine president, who stood silently at Eisenhower's side, came when Eisenhower recalled that Frondizi had said, "Argentina is going to be one of the great leading democracies, not only of the Western world, but all the world."

Eisenhower then added with feeling: "I am for him 100 per cent, and I feel that it is a great privilege for me to come back to return his friendly call (to Washington)."

Eisenhower told Frondizi that the United States and Argentina's common hopes "provide one stone in the structure of peace."

"The people of Argentina and

On Civil Rights

Southerners See Long Filibuster

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Southern senators said today they could keep their civil rights talkathon going "for a lot of weeks" despite threatened around-the-clock Senate sessions.

Sen. Sam J. Ervin Jr. (D-N.C.) told United Press International the Dixie bloc expected some indirect help from civil rights backers in staving off a showdown because "you can't silence a senator."

"They might not debate this issue, but they will want to talk on other subjects," Ervin said.

He noted that some of the longest speeches during a 12 hour and 18 minute session ending at 10:18 p.m. Thursday were made by civil rights supporters on other subjects.

"As many people as are opposed to this legislation, we can keep going for a lot of weeks," Ervin declared.

Senate Democratic Leader Lyndon B. Johnson has scheduled 24-hour sessions starting Monday unless there is civil rights action before then. GOP Leader Everett M. Dirksen endorsed the move. Southerners objected bitterly and threatened to retaliate by blocking normal Senate short-cut procedures.

Sen. Richard B. Russell (D-Ga.), leader of the southern bloc, said he did not believe you can ever wear down a determined group of men," he said.

Sen. Strom Thurmond (D-S.C.), the Senate's all-time filibuster champion with a 24-hour, 18-minute performance, vowed the southerners would "fight to the finish."

Johnson and Dirksen were accused of "tyranny" and "legislative mockery" Thursday by southerners protesting the 24-hour sessions.

The first long civil rights speech of the day, by Sen. Lister Hill (D-Ala.), was not made until late although brief rights arguments flared periodically throughout the session. Hill finished talking at 9:10 p.m.

Sen. John Stennis (D-Miss.) then began a speech praising a Senate investigation launched this week of national policy-making machinery. He read from the testimony of various witnesses.

Caryl's Judge Disqualified

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Attorneys for Caryl Chessman have won a minor victory by getting a judge to disqualify himself from presiding at a hearing for setting the convict-author's ninth execution date.

Superior Judge Herbert V. Walker ordered both attorneys A. L. Wirin and George T. Davis to appear in his courtroom today when he will officially transfer the case to presiding Judge John G. Barnes.

Walker's decision came as a surprise. He told both of Chessman's lawyer's Thursday he was not prejudiced and planned to sit at the hearing. Then Thursday night he called them and notified them of his new decision.

Barnes now can hear the case or refer it to another judge.

The action was taken by courtroom observers as another delay in the state's 12-year attempt to execute the Los Angeles kidnaper-rapist. His latest escape from execution came last Friday when Gov. Edmund G. Brown gave him a 60-day reprieve just 10 hours before his scheduled execution in San Quentin's gas chamber.

Halker explained his action by saying he wanted to remove himself from the case in order to eliminate any possible legal questions that Chessman's attorney's might raise about his presence.

Fire Destroys House In Pampa

One house was destroyed and three others damaged in fires yesterday.

A gas explosion at 7:25 p.m. destroyed a vacant, 5-room house at 224 N. Wells. No one was in the house at the time of the explosion. The house was owned by G. E. Tinnin.

Light damage was done to a trailer house at the Davis Trailor Court at 12:25 p.m. The fire was believed to have started from some pipes under the trailer.

The home of Bob Burns, Kingsmill, received heavy fire damage yesterday afternoon. The cause was undetermined.

At 10:45 p.m. a hot motor in a heating unit started a fire at the home of Don Beaman, 1908 Evergreen. Little damage was done.

Navy Bandsmen Feared That They Would Never Return

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Several of the Navy bandsmen missing in the Brazilian plane crash had one thing in common—a fear they wouldn't come back.

They didn't want to go to South America. They had a "funny feeling" there would be a "bad accident," according to their heartbroken wives and saddened friends.

Mrs. Richard D. Hart, whose husband was lost in the crash, told United Press International Thursday night the bandsmen had "only one week's notice" that they were to go on the tour.

Hart, 33, played the trumpet. He was the father of a 4-year-old daughter, Catherine Marie.

Before the trip, Chief Musician Walter M. Penland kept assuring his wife, who is expecting her fourth child, that there was nothing to worry about.

"The only thing that can happen," he told her, "is a collision in the air. And you know there's no chance of that."

Mrs. Penland, a young housewife whose three children were romping in the house, learned of the crash over television. She told her 6-year-old daughter, Deborah, that her "daddy was missing."

The wife of Chief Musician Earl W. Richey of Hyattsville, Md. said she "had a funny feeling" about the trip. The Richeys have three children, Don, 10; Allen, 8, and Loretta, 5.

The wife of Chief Musician Elmer L. Armiger said her 47-year-old husband had been "deathly afraid of planes."

Trouble already had hit the home of Musician 1-C Vincent P. Tramontana, another of the missing.

His wife, Beatrice, was in New York caring for her mother who suffered a stroke. Her 4-year-old son, Carl, is in the hospital.

Neighbors said Tramontana was "so worked up before the trip, he couldn't sleep or eat."

"He didn't want to go," they said. "He was afraid."

In Compton, Calif., Musician 1-C Reyes S. Gaglio, one of the missing, had wanted to stay behind for the birth of his fourth child.

But Gaglio, a bass player with the band, knew his duty came first.

"He called me from Washington just before his plane took off," said his mother, Mrs. Reyes E. Gaglio. "He said he didn't want to leave because Isabel (his wife) was expecting her baby at any time."

Gaglio, a native of the Los Angeles area, lived in Washington, D.C., with his wife and their three children, Juanita, 5, Yolanda, 1, and Reyes Jr., 2.

Toothache Stops Trial

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — The hoped-for conclusion next week of the long Finch - Tregoff murder trial hinged today on an aching tooth.

Eddie Lindsey, 28, one of the jurors hearing the trial which began Dec. 8, has an impacted wisdom tooth.

The trial was recessed Thursday because of the tooth, but a session was set for today in hopes that Lindsey would be able to listen to final defense arguments without too much pain before a possible extraction of the tooth over the weekend.

Thursday's postponement set back the expected date for turning the murder case of Dr. R. Bernard Finch, 42, and his mistress, Carole Tregoff, 23, over to the jury to next Friday. Any further delays almost certainly would extend the trial into the week after next.

Finch and his red-haired former receptionist are accused of the July 18 gunshot slaying of Finch's socialite wife Barbara Jean, 33.

McLean School Election Slated

Half Million Dollar Fire Still Smoldering In Waco

WACO (UPI)— The dying embers of a $500,000 fire that destroyed or damaged one side of an entire business block in downtown Waco still smoldered today and firemen kept equipment at the scene to prevent it from flaring up again.

Three firemen were overcome by smoke fighting the flames late Thursday. Several others were thrown from their ladders when a roof collapsed, but they escaped injury.

Lewis Miller and V. F. Jenkins were hospitalized overnight for observation after inhaling too much smoke. A third smoke victim, James D. Spurgeon, was released after treatment at Hillcrest Hospital Thursday night.

Fire Chief Les Summey said the raging inferno started in the kitchen of the Elite Cafe on Austin Ave., Waco's main street, and spread slowly to a J. C. Penney furniture store and the Lee Optical Co. All three establishments were destroyed.

Seven other businesses on the same side of the street were heavily damaged by smoke and water.

They were the Cannon and the Hardy shoe stores; the Fox Co., a photography shop; Stein's Stores, Inc., a men's clothing store; McCrory's five and 10 cent store; the Eagle Hotel and Dr. Jerome Broughton's optometry office.

The cafe shared a common wall with the Lee Optical Co. and the Penney furniture store was above the cafe. Summey said two 13-inch fire walls, on either side of the optical company-cafe building, saved the rest of the block.

"If it hadn't been for those two fire walls the entire block might have gone," he said.

George Colias, who with his brothers Mike and Vic owns the cafe, said they had had a plumber working on a stove in the kitchen when the fire broke out. The first flames flared up a vent pipe into a metal hood over the stove, then burned into a 40-inch dead air space between the cafe ceiling and the floor of the furniture store above.

Firemen were on the scene within two minutes, but stood powerless to get to the dead air space where the flames were confined. After about 45 minutes, they flared up into the furniture store and turned it into a tinder box.

By 4 p.m. flames were racing across the rooftops and a pall of acrid smoke that one witness described as "just like an atomic mushroom cloud" hung over the city.

Summey turned in a general alarm and rushed every available piece of fire equipment but one pumper truck to the scene. The ruins were still smoldering some 13 hours after the first alarm was turned in.

Three Workmen Barely Escape After Explosion

SPRINGTOWN, Tex. (UPI) — Three workmen barely escaped with their lives Thursday night when an ice-covered wooden cooling tower collapsed at the Lone Star Gas Co.'s gasoline plant and triggered an explosion and flash fire.

The flames and smoke rising into the air could be seen from Fort Worth, 26 miles to the southeast.

Lincoln Caruthers, 37, the operator in charge of the plant when the blast occurred, said he and two other men "ran out of there with the flames licking at our heels."

"It (the fire) just gushed toward me," Caruthers said. "I could feel the heat as I ran."

The fire broke out about 6 p.m. and there was nothing plant officials could do but let it burn. By 11 p.m. it had burned down to the point where no new explosions were feared.

Bill Gorman, plant superintendent, said he could give no immediate estimate of damage, but he said the damage figure would be "tremendous."

A spokesman for Lone Star said all the equipment around the collapsed cooling tower was destroyed. It included two of the 60-foot towers and a de-ethanizer, which is used to remove liquid hydrocarbon from natural gas.

Mamie Holds Fort While Ike's Gone

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Mrs. Mamie Eisenhower is holding the fort in Washington while the President is away.

But she probably won't be around by the time President Eisenhower returns from his Latin American tour.

The First Lady plans to be at Elizabeth Arden's Maine Chance health and beauty resort at Phoenix, Ariz., on March 6, the day the President is due back in Washington.

Aides said she still hasn't set a departure date. Mrs. Eisenhower has kept close to the White House this week because of a "slight" cold. The sniffles kept her from attending a fashion show with Mrs. Pat Nixon, wife of Vice President Richard M. Nixon, earlier this week.

Mrs. Eisenhower's sister, Mrs. Gordon Moore plans to accompany the First Lady to Maine Chance.

Admits He Shot Grocer

WAXAHACHIE, Tex. (UPI)— Bobby Ray Brown, an 18-year-old Negro, has admitted he shot Ennis grocer T. J. Sanders during a $150 robbery Tuesday night.

Sheriff Wayne McCollum said Brown was arrested two hours after the robbery and confessed after taking a lie detector test in Waco Thursday.

Sanders underwent surgery Wednesday for removal of a .25-caliber bullet from his back. He is expected to recover.

Lent Is Season Of 'Spring Training' For Christians

By LOUIS CASSELS
United Press International

For millions of Christians, next Wednesday marks the start of the spring training season.

From then until Easter (April 17), they will apply to their spiritual lives the same basic principle that athletes follow in getting into condition.

The principle is that unused muscles grow flabby, and can be toned up only through exercise.

During Lent—which is the official name of the spiritual spring training season — a Christian is supposed to give his will power a workout. He practices acts of self-discipline and self-denial, not as ends in themselves, but in order to toughen up some of the moral fibers that have gone soft from easy living.

Lent is one of the oldest seasons of the church calendar. Its present duration—the 40 weekdays and 6 Sundays preceding Easter—was fixed by Pope Felix II in 487 a.d. But his decree merely formalized a custom which had been widespread in the early Christian church since the second century.

Catholics, Episcopalians, Lutherans and Eastern Orthodox Christians always have placed great emphasis on Lent. In recent years, Lenten observance has Presbyterians, Methodists and been growing rapidly among Presbyterians, Methodists and other Protestants.

Each person decides for himself how he will keep Lent.

The Catholic Church prescribes certain minimum rules of fasting (adults must forego meat at two of their three meals on weekdays), but leaves the individual free to choose what further sacrifices he will make. Millions of Catholics voluntarily give up drinking, smoking, movies or other worldly pleasures.

Many Protestants also fast during Lent. But fasting in Protestant usage is not necessarily related to food. It simply means making yourself do without something which you particularly enjoy—perhaps something as worthwhile as listening to symphonic records, or as harmless as reading detective stories.

Both Protestants and Catholics believe that Lent should be a time for adding as well as subtracting. The "positive" aspects of Lenten observance include more frequent attendance at worship services, extra periods of private devotions, reading religious books, participating in discussion groups, and undertaking special acts of voluntary service, such as visiting hospitals.

These things, however, also have a sacrificial aspect since they involve giving up time which might, in other seasons, be spent in rest or recreation.

Watutsis May Kill Giant Gorilla Herd

LONDON (UPI) — There is a silent war amid the volcanoes of the Belgian Congo between the giant Watutsi tribe and the last remaining mountain gorillas on earth.

Unless something is done very soon this conflict of interests can end only one way—with the death of the gorillas who cannot exist if their immemorial feeding grounds are invaded by the Watutsi cattle.

Zoologists here and elsewhere are consulting privately on how best to awaken the world to the tragedy building up in the Virunga district north of Lake Kivu. There are some 350 gorillas there with perhaps another 50 or 60 across the Uganda border.

These are the biggest gorillas on earth — nearly 500 pounds in weight in the wild and nearly 700 pounds in captivity. They are vegetarians who live in the bamboo forests above 9,000 feet and feed on bamboo shoots and wild mountain parsley.

The Watutsi are not using any weapons — they are simply driving their herds of cattle into the gorila areas and since the great anthropoids need large feeding grounds it is only a matter of time, zoologists fear, before the species begins the fatal decline.

Bamboo belongs to the grass family.

Chile Unions Say They Won't Welcome Ike

SANTIAGO, Chile (UPI) — The Communist-controlled Cut Union Federation says Chilean workers will not welcome President Eisenhower to this country, but it has not called specifically for hostile demonstrations.

"There are contradictions between Eisenhower's formal statements about good neighborliness and his administration's imperialist economic policy toward Chile," the Cut said in a statement issued late Thursday.

The federation assailed U.S. policy in Cuba and demanded independence for Puerto Rico.

Directors of the Cut meet later today to decide whether an anti-government strike planned for some time by the federation should be called Monday to coincide with Eisenhower's arrival here.

BEHIND PRISON WALLS—At the close of 1958 there were 185,425 persons in state institutions for adult offenders, reports the Justice Department. Supervising them were 32,912 prison employes. Newsmap above shows the approximate number of prisoners in each state, together with the ratio between prisoners and supervisory personnel. This ratio ranged from 1.7 in New Hampshire and Rhode Island to 66.0 in Arkansas (where prisoners are used as guards). For the nation as a whole it was 5.6. This was down from 6.4 in 1950, although prison population had increased by some 40,000 during the eight-year period.

Racket Probers Close Shop With Blast At James Hoffa

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The Senate Rackets Committee, closing its books on three years of investigation, accused Teamster President James R. Hoffa today of "complete dishonesty" and contempt for law and order.

The committee also charged that "lack of moral courage and sense of public responsibility on the part of employers" was one of the biggest contributing factors in labor-management corruption.

The committee made its charges in the first part of a four-volume final report on its 1957-59 hearings. Hoffa, who became the committee's prime target and will have an entire volume devoted to him, was only touched upon in the initial report filed today in the Senate.

Today's volume encompassed charges of:

The underworld infiltration of wholesale newspaper and magazine distribution in New York which the committee described as a "shocking . . . potential threat to freedom of the press."

"Labor peace" payments to teamster and longshoremen officials by the New York Times, New York Mirror, American Weekly and the Neo-Gravure Printing Co. of Weehawken, N. J., which printed their Sunday supplements.

Secondary boycotts in which unions, particularly the teamsters, made "capricious use" of power were not directly involved in disputes with them.

"Tribute" payments to sheet metal workers union officials in Chicago by contractors and participation by union leaders in "rigging of bids on city contracting projects."

The eight-member special committee said political spending by both unions and management "should be thoroughly investigated."

VISIT

the United States share an unshakeable resolve to work tirelessly together, and with our neighbors, for peace characterized by freedom and justice," Eisenhower said.

A group of the airport terrace, composed mostly of North Americans, applauded and chanted "Ike, Ike."

Then, Eisenhower and Frondizi entered a helicopter for a 27-mile hop to the official residence of U.S. Ambassador Willard Beaulac and the start of a motorcade through the city.

The helicopter trip permitted the party to by-pass the industrial suburbs in the southwest where followers of Juan D. Peron threw stones recently at Frondizi.

Three persons were injured in today's bombings which damaged an American - owned chemical company, the Buenos Aires stock exchange three blocks away from the Argentine "White House," the Shell Argentine, Ltd., Petroleum Co., the American-owned 7-UP bottling works and a men's store.

Police thought the bombings were the work of Peronistas anxious to discredit the Frondizi regime, but they also began an immediate investigation to see if Communist elements were involved.

Cub Pack Has Banquet

Cub Pack 110 held its blue and gold banquet Thursday night in the Stephen F. Austin School cafeteria. Scouts from the six dens and their parents enjoyed a potluck supper. Tables were decorated with blue and gold birthday hats and centerpieces carrying out the theme of the 50th anniversary of scouting. Mobiles hung from the rafters demonstrating the ranks in Cub Scouting.

Den three led the call to colors and followed by the Pledge of Allegiance. Den five members were the song leaders, and members from den four gave a demonstration of semaphore signaling. Berton Doucette welcomed the guests in a brief message, which included smatterings of the origin and history of scouting. He introduced special guests for the evening, Dr. and Mr. Foster Elder.

In recognition of Scoutmaster Wendell Watson's work with the Pack, Dr. Elder presented him with an inscribed pen desk set from the PTA.

the survivors said the only one able to speak kept saying, "I'm going to die, and I want to live."

Rescue workers said the crash scene was a gruesome sight.

"There were shouts for help and pieces of bodies and wreckage all over the bay," one Brazilian said. "We pulled every thing we could out of the bay. . . everything was covered with blood."

Eisenhower canceled two parties scheduled late Thursday—including the embassy reception at which the slain bandsmen were to have played — but dined privately with U.S. Ambassador John M. Cabot, Kubitschek and other Brazilian leaders as planned.

The survivors were still in Couto hospital when the presidents visited them.

The three Americans, all under sedation, smiled at sight of the U.S. President.

"We want to express our sorrow at this tragic thing, and to express gratitude that you men survived," Eisenhower said. Similar remarks by Kubitschek were translated by Lt. Col. Vernon Walters, Eisenhower's interpreter. two presidents waved at five other patients unconnected with the crash.

"Good-bye and thank you, sir," Halenza called out as Eisenhower left. He was the only one of the three who spoke during the presidents' visit.

Eisenhower and Kubitschek also issued a joint statement on the collision.

"Both presidents express their deepest distress at this unfortunate accident," it said. "They extend their official and personal sympathy to the families of passengers and crewmen lost in the accident."

The four seasons were used as playing-card suits by the Chinese and Persians.

AF Secretary Says Manual Charge True

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Air Force Secretary Dudley C. Sharp was caught today in the middle of a congressional furor over what he really thinks about military manuals linking U.S. churchmen with Communism.

Sharp told the House Committee on UnAmerican Activities Thursday he had no doubt Communists had infiltrated U.S. churches and he considered it proper for the basic Air Force security manual to say so.

A transcript of his testimony at a two-hour closed-door hearing showed he also said he did not consider it proper to level the same charges in an Air Force Reserve training manual which has been revoked.

Before the transcript was made public, the Air Force issued a statement insisting Sharp's testimony did not change his original position.

Sharp withdrew the manual following a protest by the National Council of the Churches of Christ in the U.S.A. The council also said it had received an apology from him. Sharp denied to the committee he had apologized.

After the transcript was released, Sharp issued another statemeno denying he had told the committee the Reds - in - religion charges were true. Chairman Francis E. Walter (D-Pa.) had quoted him to this effect.

Sharp said after the hearing the reserve manual was being studied for possible revision.

In Oklahoma City, an official of the National Council of Churches threatened Thursday to carry to the White House objections to the Communist infiltration charges.

The general board of the council, which includes 33 Protestant and Orthodox denominations with 39 million members, Thursday ended a two-day session here which was centered on the controversial manuals which link some churches with Communism.

Ike's Pollution Bill Veto Stands Up

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Republicans counted on the administration today for quick action to get their party off the hook on an issue with wide voter appeal—cleaning up the nation's polluted streams.

The House Thursday upheld President Eisenhower's veto of a Democratic bill to combat water pollution by increasing federal grants to help cities and towns build sewage treatment plants.

The attempt to override the veto fell 22 votes shy of the required two-thirds margin. The vote was 249-157. Republicans overwhelmingly supported the President's position that bigger federal spending was not the answer to pollution.

Some Republicans privately conceded that the Democratic bill had put the GOP temporarily on the defensive. But they said the jockeying for election-year advantage wasn't over yet.

They said the administration soon would put the Democrats on the spot by asking for far-reaching legislation to permit a federal crackdown on industries and cities which are polluting rivers, streams and lakes with refuse or industrial waste.

Small-Fry City Slicker To Copy Her Country-Cousin This Spring

By GAY PAULEY
UPI Women's Editor

NEW YORK (UPI)—The small fry city slicker copies her country cousin this spring.

Frankly hayseed in origin is the way one fashion authority summed up the old - fashioned and countrified look in fabrics and styling in dresses for girls.

It is expressed in denims, homespuns, cotton tickings, and a whole deluge of calico prints and gingham checks like grandma wore when she was a girl. Adding to the quaint look are pinafores and aprons, oversize puff sleeves, wide bands of embroidery and lace, rickrack trim, and fichu and Bertha collars.

Designers Kate Greenaway and Joseph Love do some of the largest collars in the spring collections—some almost capes in scope with dainty lace and embroidery trim.

In suits, the influence predominantly is that of the French designer Chanel. Her clothes are for adults, but this hasn't stopped children's wear manufacturers from copying her cardigan jackets and pleated skirts. Chanel so dominates the suit collections that Women's Wear Daily, the trade publication, remarked that if the designer were "collecting royalties, she would have more gold than Louis 14th."

The Chanel influence shows also in braid trim in both suits and coats. Braid is used to outline collars and pockets, is stitched vertically on the front, or used to edge the whole face of a jacke.

Except for braid, most coats are uncluttered. Fitted coats have the princess line, sometimes with a detachable cape or with a cape effect to give width at the top. Another favorite throughout the collections is the "boy coat"—with its straight, unfitted lines copied from brother's.

Other highlights in children's wear for spring:

—Checks everywhere, in coats, dresses and sportswear.

—Embroidery in profusion, on sportswear, sleepwear, daytime dresses.

"Nothing" colors, the manufacturers' term for colors muted and indecisive and wearing such names as clay, mist green, sand, oyster white, and cream.

DEAR ABBY....

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I have been married to Sam for nine years. We have four children, which is the reason why I am still married to him. He started to chase the first year we were married. I told my mother and she said, "Pay no attention to it. Let him get it out of his system."

After nine years, he still has as much in his system as ever. Does a man ever get it all out of his system?

TIRED OF WAITING

DEAR TIRED: Tell him in no uncertain terms that you love him, don't want to share him, will not put up with it—THEN see what else he has in his system.

DEAR ABBY: I am so mad the tears are blinding me as I write this. My brother Ed is marrying a girl he's gone with for a long time. They asked our older brother Paul to be best man. Paul was injured in the war and is in a wheel chair.

The wedding is a week away. All the tuxedos are rented. Yesterday the bride told Ed that she changed her mind about having Paul for best man and she wants him to ask somebody else. She says she doesn't want Paul coming down the aisle in a wheel chair beause she's afraid everybody will be looking at Paul and not at her.

Ed hasn't the heart to tell Paul he can't be best man. The bride won't give in and her parents are backing her up. What should we do about this mess?

SISTER OF ED AND PAUL

DEAR SISTER: This is strictly Ed's business. He alone will have to decide whether he cares enough for this girl to select another best man and break the news to his disabled brother. Perhaps the incident of the best man was the best thing that could have happened to the groom.

DEAR ABBY: My problem is my married daughter. She has a nice husband. We also have a 15-year-old daughter who is in the 10th grade. She is a cheer leader and is very popular at school.

Whenever I buy my 15-year-old girl something and the married daughter sees it, she makes some remark like, "You never bought ME clothes like that!" She doesn't realize that times were not so good then. It has gotten so that whenever we know the married daughter is coming over, we hide anything we bought for the 15-year-old. It doesn't do any good though, because she snoops through all the closets and drawers and finds it anyway.

I heard that other mothers have had this trouble. Maybe you can help them and me, too, with a suitable solution.

NAMELESS

DEAR NAMELESS: Stop hiding things! You owe your married daughter no explanations or apologies. Simply tell her that you can afford more now than you could when she was fifteen.

CONFIDENTIAL TO JOHN DOE: A person with an emotional problem has no way of knowing how serious it is until he goes to a psychiatrist. The fact that he has the intelligence to seek help is a credit to him. Too bad so many people prefer to go through life mixed up.

Missionaries Needed In India

New missionaries from America and Europe are needed in India, especially for work in Christian schools, says Dr. Lucile Colony, an executive secretary of the Board of Missions of the Methodist Church.

Despite the recent opening of sixteen new government universities, colleges were unable in 1959 to cope with the number of students seeking admission. In ten years university students have quadrupled in number. Christian colleges are under the same pressure as public colleges, Dr. Colony says, and report a dearth of Christian teachers.

The number of women missionaries of the Methodist Church in India is about the same as the number of Indian women who carry full responsibility for Christian work. There are 84 women missionaries and 85 nationals; they work together with no thought of differences. Ten missionaries are ready to retire; only six are available for replacements. From India have come repeated requests for 68 new missionaries to be sent by the Women's division.

Pyke, who became Texas Divisional Secretary and second in command of all activities of The Salvation Army in Texas in February, 1955, was promoted to Southern territorial public relations secretary. Major John Needham was promoted to divisional commander of the Georgia Division.

Brigadier Carl Cone was named to the position of staff secretary of the Southern territory. Brigadier Paul Thronburg was transferred to Baltimore to become divisional commander.

Prayer Services Slated Friday

The United Church Women of Pampa will hold two prayer services Friday, in St. Matthew's Episcopal Church.

Both services will be held to pray for peace through international understanding and co-operation, according to Mrs. Kit Autry and Mrs. William West, co-chairmen of arrangements.

The first will be a half - hour service at 7:30 a.m. for the benefit of employed people, while the second service will be held at 9:30 a.m. A nursery will be provided for this service.

The United Church Women form an important part of the World Council of Churches. They are active in over 20,000 communities in the United States and are spread throughout 145 countries around the globe. Through fellowship and working together across denominational lines they are able to do many things in many lands as witness to the love and power of Jesus Christ.

The specific title of the program of prayer and worship for this year's World Day of Prayer is "Labourers Together with God." The offerings this year will be used around the globe. Typical of the use is the World Literacy and Christian Literature work.

Throughout the world illiteracy is rampant. It is officially estimated that 80 percent of the people of India are illiterate. Work with adult education and with providing meaningful Christian literature is an important functon of United Church Women.

Special Mission Services Set On Wednesdays

A teaching and preaching mission will be held at St. Matthew's Episcopal Church each Wednesday at 7:45 p.m., beginning March 2, and will continue during Lenten season.

The Rev. Alan Whittemore, OHC is the preacher for the services.

"Great preaching is rare. 8d are great directors of the spiritual life. Only a few men in any generation are so gifted as to combine them. Father Whittenmore is one of these men," said the Rev. William E. West.

Each service is designed to last one hour, and topics for the six weeks are "The Bible," "The Incarnation," "The Cross," "The Sacraments," "The Church," and "The Last Things."

A nursery will be provided.

Father Whittemore in his teaching and mission sermons has devised what is called "The First Recorded Mission," (he is the preacher), and the Rev. West will conduct the other parts of the services. The sermons are designed for everyone who wants to know more about the Christian religion and all are welcome.

Father Whittemore is a member of the Monastic Community of the Holy Cross. He served as Father Superior of the order for 12 years, spent 12 years at the Holy Cross Mission in Liberia and has taught at Kent School, St. Andrew, Tenn. He is a graduate of General Theological Seminary in New York and Oxford University, England. He said his chief recreation as a boy was stealing cherries, as an adult that of following professional baseball.

The members of the Episcopal Church cordially invite the people of Pampa to attend. The Rev. West stated that "no offerings will be taken."

The forces of Gen. Frederick Funston captured Emilio Aguinaldo, leader of the Philippine insurrection in 1901.

"OUR UNDISPUTED PRIVILEGE"

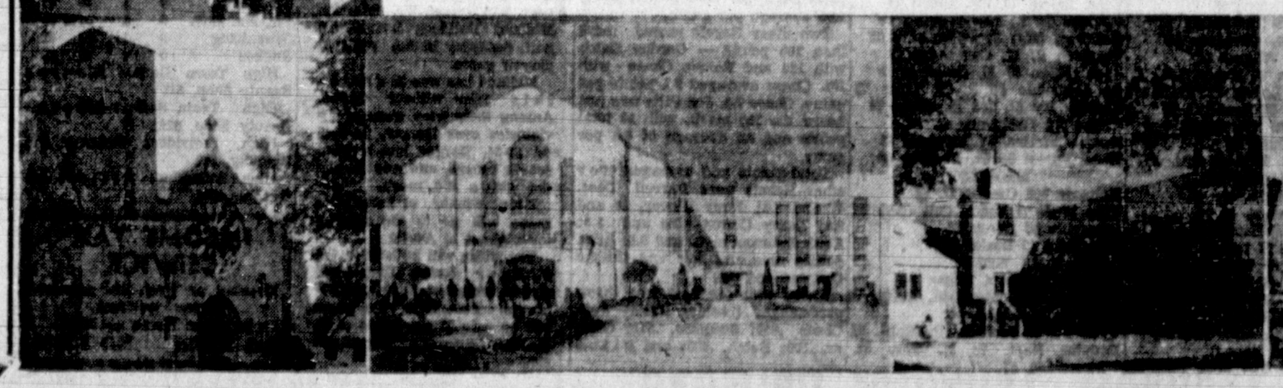

In Memory of Washington and Lincoln

"FREEDOM OF WORSHIP IS NOT FREEDOM FROM WORSHIP"

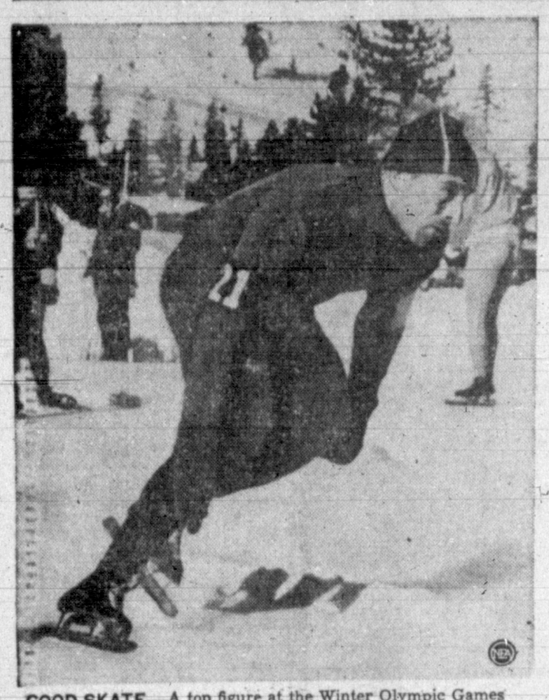

In the preamble of the Declaration of Independence we read, "We hold these truths to be self evident: that all men are created equal; that they are endowed by their Creator with certain inalienable rights; that among these are life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness." The first amendment to the Constitution which we call the "Bill of Rights" has to do with personal freedom, "Congress shall make no law respecting the establishment of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof, or abridging the freedom of speech, or of the press, or the right of the people peaceably to assemble, and to petition the Government for a redress of grievances." Jesus said in John 8:36, "If the Son therefore shall make you free, ye shall be free indeed." The Declaration of Independence and the First Amendment to the Constitution are both based on the teaching of the New Testament. I am afraid we have in our city and in our nation abused this privilege. Too many people think it means Freedom From Worship instead of Freedom Of Worship.

In Hebrews 10:25 we read, "Not forsaking the assembling of ourselves together, as the manner of some is; but exhorting one another; and so much the more, as ye see the day approaching."

Craig Winborn Named To All-State Team

GOOD SKATE—A top figure at the Winter Olympic Games is Eugeni Grishin of Russia, a world leader in speed skating.

This Could Be Banner Day For U. S. Olympians

By LEO H. PETERSEN
UPI Sports Editor

SQUAW VALLEY (UPI)—Hockey's Yankee doodle dandies led the United States into what could be a banner day for Uncle Sam in the Winter Olympic Games today.

There were four gold medals up for grabs—and the U.S. had a good chance at two of them, the men's figure skating championship and the women's slalom

But even if they win — David Jenkins, the slim figure skater from Colorado Springs, or one of the girls on the slalom team—their triumphs couldn't possibly dim the lustre of two team triumphs Thursday:

—Those eager, spirited Yankees who beat the favored Canadians in hockey, 2-1, Thursday night to remain the only undefeated team in the hockey competition.

—The Finland 40 kilometers (25 mile) cross country relay team which nosed out Norway in one of the closest races in Winter Olympic history, thanks to a 35-year-old lumberjack.

There was individual glory—and gold, too, for another Russian speed skater.

Viktor Kosichkin captured the 5,000-meter speed skating event to give Russia its fifth speed skating medal of the games.

But the Yanks — the develish puckmen — were the heroes of a screaming mob of 8,000 which jammed Blyth Arena to cheer them on.

Uncle Sam's boys methodically took the Canadians apart in the first two periods, building up a 2-0 lead, and then sat back and played the finest defensive game of their lives in the last period.

When it was all over they mobbed their goalie, John McCartan of St. Paul, Minn. They picked him up, they jumped on him and then built a "log pile" in the middle of the ice with McCartan on the bottom as they "congratulated" him. He had made 39 saves during the game —and was under continual bombardment during the last period But he survived—and is ready to take on all comers.

"We feel we have proved ourselves—to ourselves," he said after the game. "Now we feel that we can beat the hell out of anybody."

They'll get that chance Saturday: They tangle with the Russian bear — defending champions and games favorites despite the fact they have been held to a draw by Sweden.

But the heroes all weren't U. S. representatives Thursday. Finland had a stand-out, in Veikko Hakulinen, the aging lumber jack who anchored the relay team to victory. The Finns were trailing Norway by 200 yards going into the six-mile final lap and the Norwegian skier was Hakon Brusveen, gold medal winner in the 15-kilometer race.

Hakulinen took out after him, collared him with a mile to go —and then hung on to win by half a ski length, a little more than two feet, in one of the closest ski race finishes in the history of the games.

The U.S. team finished 11th—and last — in this event. On it Bdtte, Colo.; Karl Bohlin, Min were Andrew Miller, Crested Butte, Colo.; Karl Bohlin, Minneapolis, Minn.; John Dendahl, Boulder, Colo., and Peter Lahdenpera, Fort Leavenworth, Kan.

But the gold medal prospects for Uncle Sam were bright today.

Penny Pitou, Laconia, N. H., with second place finishes in both the downhill and giant slalom is a good bet to win the world's ladies' Alpine championship. All she has to do is finish 10th. And many believe that, barring tough luck, she will win the Olympic gold medal in the event. Betsy Snite of Norwich, Vt., also gives the U.S. team a good shot for a medal.

CRAIG WINBORN
. . . member of 1st team

Six-Footers Dominate Cage Squad

AMARILLO, Tex. (UPI)— Six-footers won every position on the Class 'AAAA all-state schoolboy basketball team announced Thursday by the Texas Sports Writers Assn.

Midland placed two players 6-8 Mike Marsh and 6-7 Mike Humphries. The other members of the first team were Dave Somerville of Dallas Jefferson, Craig Winborn of Pampa and Dan Smith of Denton.

Marsh, who was voted first on every ballot but one, was named the state's top Class AAAA player and Somerville was runner-up.

Winborn is a brother of Coyle Winborn, one of two players who made the first team from Coach Clifton McNeely's Pampa Harvesters last year. The other Pampa player chosen last season was Charlie Minor.

Although Winborn was the only District 3-4A player to make either team, five received honorable mention. They are Mike Farley, Lubbock; John Kent Borger; Steve Carter, Palo Duro; Gary Pattinson, Amarillo; and Tracy Cox, Borger.

This year's choices:

FIRST TEAM

Mike Marsh, height 6-8, school Midland, average 16.5.

Dave Somerville, 6-2, Dallas Jefferson, 21.0.

Craig Winborn, 6-3, Pampa, 20.0

Dan Smith, 6-6, Denton, 23.6.

SECOND TEAM

HUGE FIELD FOR ICA4-A

NEW YORK (UPI) — A total of 689 athletes from 48 colleges and universities have entered the ICA4-A indoor track and field championships at Madison Square Garden, Saturday, March 5.

Longhorns Make Strong Title Bid

AUSTIN (UPI)— The fired-up Texas Longhorns, riding the crest of a seven-game winning streak, face three more tests in their bid to move from last to first place in the Southwest Conference basketball campaign in one year.

Coach Harold Bradley's sharpshooters currently share the Southwest Conference lead with Southern Methodist with identical 9-2 league marks. Texas A&M's slipping Cadets are a step away with an 8-3 conference record.

A sweep of its last three games —opening with a visit to Arkansas' home court at Fayetteville, Ark., tonight—would give Texas a spot in the NCAA playoffs.

Bradley, who took over this season as coach of a Longhorn team which dipped to a dismal 4-20 record last year, declines to predict Texas will win the conference crown.

"Every game is a big one—and they seem to be getting bigger all the time," said the quiet-spoken former Duke University coach.

Bradley said Texas may have suffered a letdown mentally" Tuesday night, when the Longhorns were forced into an overtime period to edge Baylor, 68-62.

However, the hottest member of the team, 6-foot, 8-inch Albert Almanza, a native of Chihuahua, Mexico, hasn't shown any signs of a letdown.

Almanza fired 25 points against Baylor Tuesday night—his season high, and continued the type of play that has set aside February as a red letter month for him.

In seven games this month, Almanza has amassed 132 points for an 18-point-plus average. His total for 14 games prior to February was only 90 points, for a less than seven-point-per-game average.

Texas' attack also is built around senior Jay Arnette, the Southwest Conference's leading scorer with 399 points this season; Brenton Hughes, with 278 points, and 5-foot, 11-inch Donnie Lasiter, with 226 points.

Besides Arkansas, the Longhorns meet Rice next Monday night and Texas Christian next Thursday. If Texas can sweep its last three games—and if Southern Methodist loses at least one—Texas will win its first outright Southwest Conference title since 1947.

If Bradley's comeback kids can manage a championship tie with Southern Methodist, they'll be assured of going to the NCAA playoffs because they have whipped SMU twice this season, representing SMU's only conference losses thus far.

W. Virginia Cage Coach's Optimism Almost Backfires

By TIM MORIARTY
United Press International

Fred Schaus, unlike most college basketball coaches, is a confirmed optimist.

Before the start of the Southern Conference tournament, the West Virginia coach confidently predicted "it will take an awfully good team to keep us from the title."

Schaus, though, almost wound up eating those words in the tournament's opening round at Richmond, Va., Thursday night when the sixth-ranked Mountaineers scrambled to a 90-83 victory over Virginia Military.

VMI hardly qualifies as "an awfully good team" on the basis of its regular season record, having won only four of 19 games. But the Keydets almost wiped out a 17-point deficit in the second half, pulling to within 77-73 of heavily-favored West Virginia with less than six minutes remaining.

However, All-America Jerry West dropped in two free throws and Jim Ritchie added two more to give the Mountaineers an eight-point lead, which they managed to protect to the finish.

West wound up with 29 points and teammate Willie Akers contributed 21.

Oddly, West Virginia scored the narrowest victory among the four favored teams which survived the tournament's opening rounds. Virginia Tech, led byChris Smith's 34 points, breezed to a 78-58 triumph over Richmond; George Washington beat The Citadel, 74-60, and William and Mary turned back Furman, 82-74.

The Mountaineers, who have won this tournament and its accompanying bid to the NCAA championship five straight years, face another "awfully good team" in tonight's semifinals. They square off against William and Mary, which handed West Virginia one of its four regular-season defeats, while top-seeded Virginia Tech, led by Chirs Smith's ington.

In the Skyline Conference race, Utah and Utah State scored easy victories Thursday night to set the stage for their showdown meeting Saturday, which will decide the league championship and an NCAA tournament berth.

The fifth-ranked Utes hustled to a 10-0 lead in the opening minutes against Brigham Young and went on to defeat their arch rivals, 87-75, while Cornell Green scored 24 points in leading seventh-ranked Utah State to an 89-63 victory over Montana State University.

Embattled North Carolina, fighting for a share of the Atlantic Coast Conference lead, handed Virginia its 13th straight defeat, 97-58, as York Larese scored 22 points. The Tarheels can finish their regular season in a first place tie with Wake Forest if they defeat Duke Saturday.

Tom (Satch) Sanders became the fourth highest scorer in New York University history with a 22-point barrage that helped the Violets down Temple, 79-60, and gave him a career total of 1,012 points. In the second game of a New York doubleheader, St. Joh's rippe Manhattan, 80-63, for its 11th consecutive triumph.

Celts Clinch NBA Eastern Crown

By United Press International

The Boston Celtics have clinched a record fourth straight Eastern Division title in the National Basketball Association—and they iced the cake with four other team and individual marks.

The free-wheeling Celtics locked up the Eastern title with a 121-107 victory over the Detroit Pistions in which:

—They set a new NBA season mark of 54 victories.

—Went over the 100-point mark for a record 68th time in one season.

—Bob Cousy eclipsed his previous season mark of 642 assists.

—Tom Heinsohn set a club mark of 1,505 points in one season.

Bill Russell had 29 points, Cousy 22 and Heinsohn 18 as the Celtics beat the Pistons for the 16th straight time over a two-year period. Ed Conlin and Gene Shue combined for 51 points for the Pistons, who trailed by only two points at the half but fell steadily back in the second half.

The Minneapolis Lakers defeated the Cincinnati Royals, 105-95, in the first game of the doubleheader played at Providence, R.I. Elgin Baylor scored 31 points and Rudy Larusso had 24 to offset a 37-point outburst by Jack Tyman.

The Syracuse Nationals set a new club mark of 8,157 points in one season by beating the St. Louis Hawks, 110-105, and the Philadelphia Warriors downed the New York Knickerbockers, 131-121, in other games.

Dolph Schayes led the Nationals with 27 points and Cliff Hagan had 33 for the Hawks. The Nationals played without injured Al Bianchi and Larry Costello and lost George Yardley with 2:36 to play when he was struck over the right eye by one of Bob Pettit's elbows.

Wilt Chamberlain scored 39 points and Tom Gola sank 13 of 18 field goal tries for a 27-point performance to lead the Warriors. Jim Palmer led New York with 27 points.

Stranahan Leads In Texas Open

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (UPI)—Frank Stranahan, who admits he's one of the world's worst on short putts, didn't leave himself many chances to prove that theory in building up the three-stroke lead he carried into today's second round of the Texas Open.

"I'm a good approach putter but I think I miss more two and three-footers than anyone else on the tour," the rich spark plug fortune heir said in describing his usual game since turning pro in 1954.

But that problem wasn't bothering him Thursday as he sank eight birdie putts ranging from six to 40 feet in fashioning a splendid 32-32—64 over the treacherous par 36-36—72 Fort Sam Houston layout. That was good enough for a fat lead over his competitors, the closest of whom was 24-year-old fledgling pro Davis Love Jr. of El Dorado, Ark., who had a deft putting touch working for him, too, as he posted a 33-34—67.

Behind Love, the field began to bunch up with veterans Lionel Hebert of Lafayette, La., and Doug Ford of Crystal River, Fla., at four-under-par 68's.

Four other players, including defending champion Wes Ellis Jr., of West Caldwell, N.J., and top tour winner Arnold Palmer of Ligonier, Pa., were grouped at 69. The others were Lionel Hebert's brother, Jay, and veteran Ransom of St. Andrews, Ill.

Pee Wee Basketball

Austin and Houston won both fifth and sixth grade games Thursday in the Kiwanis-Optimist pee wee basketball league.

Austin sixth defeated Wilson, 33-12, as Swanson scored 12 points; Houston sixth downed Baker in overtime, 37-35, as McWilliams hit 15 for Houston and Bennett tallied 12 for Baker; and Travis sixth romped over Mann, 46-20, with Crossland scoring 20 for the winners.

In fifth grade action, Porter scored 15 points to lead Austin over Wilson, 30-8; Thompson tallied 18 for Houston to pace his team to a 34-11 win over Lamar; and Mann topped Travis 15-4, as Feece scored nine points.

Saturday, Austin sixth is at Lamar, Houston sixth at Wilson, Baker sixth at Travis, Lamar fifth at Austin, Wilson fifth at Houston and Travis fifth at Baker.

The Short Line

By RED GRIGGS

The Southwest Conference leadership may be decided Friday night in Lubbock, when the Texas Tech Red Raiders meet the Texas Aggies.

Del Ray Mounts of the Raiders, a sophomore from Perryton, is the Conference's leading scorer with 195 points. He trails Clyde Rhoden of Arkansas, who has 203 points. Carroll Broussard of the Aggies is a close third, with 191 points.

Although Friday's game will be a scoring duel, between the two men, they certainly won't be guarding each other. Mounts is 5-10, Broussard 6-5. Both are only sophomores, by the way.

Neither team can afford to gang up on Broussard or Mounts. Both squads have several other shooters capable of hitting in double figures.

Jere Don Mohon of Panhandle will be a starting guard for the Whites in a Texas Tech intra-squad football game Saturday. Mohon will be playing beside a famous team-mate, All-American center E. J. Holub.

Coach Dean Evans of the Robert E. Lee basketball team has released some statistics on his championship team. The Rebels, as you probably know, won the Panhandle Junior High Conference crown this year.

As a team, the Rebels scored 667 points to 518 for their opponents, an average of 45.1 to 34.5 per game. The Rebs made 248 field goals, and 181 of 361 free throws, for a 501 percentage from the line.

Wayne Kreis led the team in every department, with 82 field goals, 66 of 100 free throws for a .667 percentage, 231 total points, and a 16.5 average per game.

Two other Rebels scored more than 100 points — Gordon Balch, with 136 and Ronnie Chase with 101. Chase averaged 9.1 points per game. Chase 7.8. Jon Pitts was just below the 100 mark, with 99 total points and an average of 6.6 per game.

Total points and averages for other Rebels were Darrell Doss, 47 and 3.6; Jerry Glover, 36 and 2.8; Larry Clifton nine and 1.3; Keith Swanson eight and 0.9; Mike Schale nine and 0.6; and Gene Cox one and 0.1.

Those with the best free throw percentages (besides Kreis) were Chase, .600; Swanson, .571; Glover, .500; Balch, .500; and Pitts, .407.

Snider Predicts Stellar Season

United Press International

Duke Snider, still eager to make it big before his hometown Los Angeles fans, predicted today that he'll have his best season since the Dodgers went West.

"I believe I can hit 30 home runs and drive in 100 runs," said the 33-year-old centerfielder after Thursday's workout at Vero Beach, Fla. "The way I feel now, I have nothing but confidence."

Snider, one of the greatest of the Dodgers in the old days in Brooklyn, has had two so-so years in Los Angeles. He hit only 15 homers and drove in only 58 runs in 1958 and he lifted those figures to 23 and 88 last season.

Snider, who was forced to rest his ailing knees frequently last season, took knee bending exercises for the first time in three years Thursday and was jubilant over the results.

"They felt just fine," he said. "It looks now like I'll be ready to play as soon as the exhibition season starts."

Wilmer (Vinegar Bend) Mizell signed his 1960 contract with the St. Louis Cardinals but both the Cleveland Indians and New York Yankees were having difficulty with star players.

General Manager Frank Lane, who early in the day signed a new three-year contract, advised holdouts Rocky Colavito and Gary Bell that they can't work out with the Indians until they come to terms. Lane said he offered Colavito a 25 per cent increase despite the fact the outfielder's average dropped 46 points and said he tendered a 75 per cent increase to Bell, who had a 16-11 record and is viewed as a potential 20-game winner.

Pampa Teams Withdraw From Meets

Two Pampa teams have withdrawn from events scheduled Saturday, because of the cold weather. The track team has withdrawn from the Comanche Relays at Fort Stockton, and the golf team has withdrawn from the Andrews Invitational Meet at Andrews.

Those two meets were to have opened the seasons for the two Pampa High School teams.

"We haven't had a real workout this year," track coach Dwaine Lyon said in explaining his withdrawal from the Fort Stockton meet. "It would be useless for us to try to run in a meet against teams which have had good workout weather. We've been inside most of this week, and haven't been able to hold a time trial at any time this season."

"It's about 21 degress at Andrews" golf coach Weldon Trice said. "They may still have the meet, if it doesn't snow any more, but I see no point in traveling that far to play golf in that kind of weather."

The track team will open its season in the Possum Kingdom Relays at Graham March 5. The first scheduled golf match is in the Southwestern Recreation Meet at Fort Worth Feb. 11-12, but Trice said that he will try to make a match before that.

Exciting Breakthroughs Seen For 60's

DITOR'S NOTE: This is the of three reports on where nce stands in the battle again- the nation's No. 1 killer. The ter is Chairman, Division of dicine, Cleveland Clinic Foun- ion.

A. CARLTON ERNSTENE, M.D.
President, American Heart Association
Written for Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

LEVELAND (NEA) — Re- rch in diseases of the heart circulation has acquired great nentum during the past 10 rs, and it will be most dis- ointing if this does not lead to next decade.

f the nearly 900,000 deaths each r from disorders of the heart blood vessels, more than 90 per t are due to arteriosclerosis rdening of the arteries) and hy- tension (high blood pressure). rteriosclerosis of arteries which ply the heart muscle itself with od is responsible for the largest gle form of heart disease and n all other forms of heart dis- e combined.

here is convincing evidence that edity, obesity, high blood pres- e, and increased amounts of the ty substance cholesterol in the od favor the development of the erosclerotic changes in the af- ted vessels. Other evidence sug- sts that emotional stress, inade- te exercise and excessive cig- tte smoking may be significant ntributory or aggravating fac- s.

Much research has been car- d out in recent years on the ationship between all of these tors and the development of erosclerosis. Special attention s been given to the role of chole- rol.

Further research undoubtedly will make it clear within a few years whether a high blood cholesterol by itself causes arteriosclerosis in man or whether there must be in addition some abnormality in the growth and repair processes of the blood vessel tissues themselves. This will be a most important addition to our knowledge.

Well-controlled research has demonstrated that abnormal amounts of cholesterol in the blood can be reduced, often to a completely normal level, by limiting the amount of solid fats in the diet and replacing them with certain liquid fats.

Whether control of the blood cholesterol in this manner will actually precent the development of arteriosclerosis or lead to improvement if arteriosclerosis already is present, should become known within the next 10 years. This would supply the first positive means of preventing or alleviating coronary heart disease and hardening of the arteries in other parts of the body.

The commonest form of heart attack is due to blockage of an arteriosclerotic coronary artery or one of its branches by a locally formed blood clot. The commonest type of stroke is the result of a similar process in small arteries of the brain.

Clot-dissolving substances have been developed during the past few years. Improved preparations undoubtedly will become available soon, and when employed promptly these may greatly alter the outlook or heart attack and stroke victims.

In the past 10 years, many new drugs for the treatment of high blood pressure have been discovered, and the list is being added to constantly. As a result, it is now possible to control high blood pressure partially or completely in most common type of high blood pressure is still unknown. Until it is discovered we can expect little further improvement in the present situation. Research may bring the answer to this problem within the next 10 years.

Rheumatic heart disease, the most common form of heart disease in children and young adults, develops as the only important permanent complication of rheumatic fever. Attacks of rheumatic fever are preceded by a streptococcus infection, most commonly a streptococcal sore throat. But rheumatic fever occurs in only three per cent of all persons who have such streptococcal infections, and we do not know what it is that is responsible for the development of the disease in this three per cent.

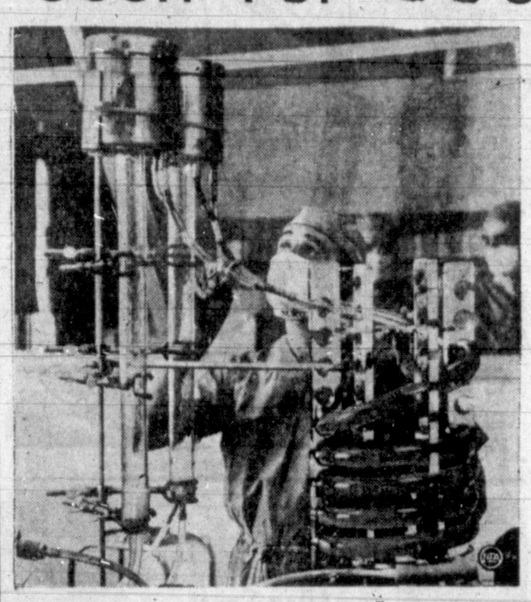

Prompt treatment of streptococcal sore throat by appropriate antiboitic drugs and protection of patients who have had rheumatic fever against further streptococcus infections will prevent most initial attacks and recurrences of rheumatic fever. However, this will not stamp out all rheumatic heart disease, since some streptococcal sore throats are so mild that they remain untreated. Medical care is not sought until the development of rheumatic fever.

If the exact mechanism by which streptococcal sore throat results in the occurrence of rheumatic fever were known, this might well make it possible to prevent heart disease. It is highly probable that this mechanism will be discovered within the next decade.

The great forward step in heart valve surgery undoubtedly will consist of the development of techniques for the replacement of damaged valves with artificial valves. Animal experiments along this line are being carried out and the progress is encouraging.

With the aid of the heart-lung machine, amazing progress has been made in the surgical correction of congenital (in-born) heart defects. These were regarded as unpreventable disorders until the early 1940's, when their association with German measles in the mother's early pregnancy was discovered. This discovery stimulated a search for other external causes of congenital heart defects. Within the next few years this search may well lead to dramatic new victories in the area of congenial heart disease.

The light produced by fireflies is without any heat or loss of energy, an accomplishment man has not been able to achieve.

The man-of-the-week: President Juscelino Kubitschek of Brazil.

The place: Brazil's future capital, Brasilia.

The quote: "We simply wish that the United States believes that the resolution of the Brazilian people to indusrialize this country, to utilize its natural resources, to prepare better conditions of life required by our population growth, to reject a lowly and vague destiny, is decisive, definite and irreversible."

It was his welcoming address to President Eisenhower and it was delivered in surroundings of raw earth, digging machines and the heavy equipment of a city still being built, a city which will become Brazil's new capital and Kubitschek's own personal monument.

His closing paragraph quoted above was a thumbnail summation of the program this physician-turned-politician first instituted four years ago at the beginning of his five-year term.

He had campaigned on a platform of "food, transportation, power."

He sought to stabilize prices, to increase food production, to institute a massive industrialization program, to increase electricity output, to build roads and to overhaul Brazil's neglected railroads.

Three years ago, over strong opposition, he began carving out of the jungle 600 miles from Rio a new capital city to be known as Brasilia and to be ready for occupancy in April, 1960.

It was a bootstrap operation designed to pull Brazil from a history of haphazard growth into orderly modern development.

Kubitschek's headlong rush toward industrialization despite all laws of economics has aroused criticism in the United States which has a multi-billion dollar stake in Brazil, and some grumbling at home where prices have been doubling or tripling in a matter of months.

But, generally, Brazilians are happy with him and unworried about the future.

"God must be a Brazilian," they say, becaisé he watches out for Brazil.

The Deeper Paths

The latter half of the 19th century and the first half of the 20th have provided a hundred years of the most intense and radical advancements ever made by the human race.

The period has been notable for a major shift in opinion away from a theological base for explanations of the natural order of things toward an orientation in the scientific arena.

And while we would be among those who would rejoice over this re-emphasis, we cannot help but conjecture that in the rapidity of our development in what is, fundamentally, a new direction of thought, many of our bright young men have been unable to accomplish the demi-volte without a loss of adhesion to reality.

Prior to the mid-nineteenth century, it was generally conceded in virtually all intellectual circles that God's rules ran the universe; that God's rules were all known; that major discoveries had been made; that all principles were fixed, understood and in keeping with the arguments of the leading theologians.

Then came the hundred years of doubt, discovery, and dynamism, during which time, what was presumed to be fixed became un-fixed; that which was deemed to be God's rules turned out to be merely opinion; discoveries never thought of came surging out of the unknown, and the pragmatic concepts of the end justifies the means, came to be widely believed.

Might we timidly suggest that the skepticism in the minds of the best of our younger generation becomes them? Having only a short while ago, as historians measure time, concluded that all principles were known and fixed; to discover that some of these "rules" were not even principles to which such loyal adhesion had been given, quite drove some of our impressionable minds clear off the track. When one has his faith in absolutes shattered, it becomes difficult to regain that faith, at least in an absolute manner. "Once burned, twice shy."

Nonetheless, as we observe the progress of that hundred years, what we truly see is not the abolition of principles, but the discovery of greater and deeper principles than were at first suspected. We have moved and are moving from the shallow into the deep. And the rules of the surface areas give way to the far more important concepts below.

Nor are we finished. We have abandoned the two dimensional or surface type of reasoning. Our better minds today are capable of deeper probing. But principles there are and principles will always remain. Not because the theologians tell us so, but because this is an ordered universe containing predictable physical fact.

We should never confuse our own puny and halting mental powers for ultimate truths. We should recall that our ignorance as to what is a principle is no evidence that there are no principles. Rather, we should see that as ignorance is swept aside in some small degree, that which was unknown becomes known. As it does, the new knowledge affixes itself to all other knowledge, having had a bearing and an influence on what has gone before.

It is impossible for us to foresee what the latter half of the 20th century will bring. It might be more becoming to admit that it is beyond our ability to foresee what the next year or month or even hour holds in store for us.

But if we can learn a lesson with the passing of the years, we should learn the lesson that mankind has not yet run its course. The fact that we do not know all principles does not mean that we do not know some of them. The fact that what we thought to be a principle is shown ultimately to be only a partial understanding of a greater truth, should spur us on to greater and greater searchings for deeper and deeper principles.

At least we of 1960 should know that which our ancestors of 1860 failed to realize. The human race is on a threshold leading into newer and more wonderful things.

We should realize that that which is new is not always reprehensible. Likewise, we should learn that that which is old is not always outworn and fit to be discarded. We should seek for truth both in the old and in the new. And we should do so gladly, for the world is ours when we have learned to practice self-discipline and self-control.

Early Competition

Most of us consider competition to be the very life blood of progress. And, as is proper, most of us view the idea of monopoly with disdain and disapproval.

We are indebted to Jay Morrison, a remarkable scholar of Seattle, Washington, for the research material he has dug up respecting the origin of legalized competition.

It is Mr. Morrison's contribution to our thinking that the ideas respecting monopoly are very ancient and hoary, but that competition and its necessarily more liberal climate is something that has come upon us at a more recent date.

To be specific, Mr. Morrison has dug into the archives of ancient rule in Britain and produces evidence that "so far as I have been able to ascertain, the (case we are about to mention) is the first decision of a court upholding the legality of (fair) competition."

Prior to this time it was customary in every country of which we have record for business establishments to be granted permission to conduct their affairs by some kind of governmental franchise. And, so far as the legal records go, it appears that wherever competition entered into the affair, it would be legally ruled out of order except in certain special cases.

Thus, kings and princes commissioned persons to conduct business and industry and in so doing granted what amounted to a royal charter or franchise. Competition would have been unheard of for it would have been presumed (at least where majesty held sway) that competition with the holder of a royal charter would be equivalent to competition with the king.

So, here is the record whereby Mr. Morrison brings us up to date.

"IN THE COMMON PLEAS, HILARY TERM, 1410 REPORTED IN THE YEAR BOOK, 11 HENRY IV, FOLIO 47 PLATIBEM 21."

"Two masters of a grammar school at Gloucester brought a writ of trespass against another master, and counted the defendant had started a school in the same town, so that whereas the plantiffs had formerly received 40d. or two shillings a quarter from each child, now they got only 12d., to their damage, etc."

From this point the record in Henry IV's year book of 1410 is somewhat sketchy. It appears that the judge or judges first found that the plaintiffs' action was admissible in court since the plantiffs had demonstrated that they had been injured.

But then the argument proceeded to show that whereas damage may have ensued and was admitted, still there was nothing recoverable to ease the matter. The statement appears: "As I have a mill, and my neighbor builds another mill, whereby the profit of mine is diminished, I shall have no action against him; still I am damaged."

A footnote at this point directs us to another year book in the same reign where it appears that the idea of free competition was beginning to be more broadly upheld during the period of Henry IV's reign.

At this juncture the plaintiffs reminded the court that in London, the master of Paul's (presumably St. Paul's) "claim that there shall be no other masters in all London except themselves." By inference, if this is upheld in London, why is not the same policy upheld at a grammar school in Gloucester?

At this point the court opened another line of objection. It was pointed out that the masters at Paul's had an estate in the market. Conceivably this meant an investment in buildings, equipment and so on. But the plaintiffs, it was alleged, had no estate, but only a ministry.

The wording here is instructive: "And tho another equally competent with the plaintiffs comes to teach the children, this is a virtuous and charitable thing, and an ease to the people, for which he cannot be punished by our law."

Personally, we cannot help but demure at the thought processes of the judges at this juncture who could not seem to discover the principle of competition, but instead took refuge behind the excuse that an investment (estate) in the market place creates an exclusive or monopolistic justification, whereas a "ministry" is competitive.

Nonetheless, this early dispute and its final settlement against the plaintiffs became precedent for many decisions since.

And we were particularly pleased to note that as early as 1410 the idea of competition in education, instead of a state-supported monopoly, had already gained footing in Britain.

An Interview With Students Studying To Become Teachers

No. 3

In the last issue I was reporting an interview I had with three students at Orange County State College who were preparing to become teachers. When I asked the question, "What is your standard of right and wrong"? Mr. Mike Lyons of 12612 Barbara, Garden Grove said, "The Ten Commandments".

Now I want a little explanation from Mr. Lyons, or anybody else, who believes that tax-supported schools are in agreement with the Coveting and Stealing Commandments, as to his definition of stealing.

Certainly there could be no stealing Commandment if there was no private or group owned property. Then no one could steal. And even if it was owned by a group or an individual, getting it on an involuntary basis without satisfying the person or persons from whom it was obtained certainly would be stealing.

Will Mr. Lyons, or anybody, define stealing so that taking by force or threats of force, property from some to pay for schooling of others who do not want to use the schooling is not breaking the stealing commandment.

The commandments existed long before there was any legislation. They are eternal laws that man discovered.

Of course, it is hard to see how schools that violate the Stealing and Coveting Commandments can teach the youth of the land, by example at least, to believe in private property and the inalienable rights of the individual to own private property.

Means Predetermine Results

One of the students studying to become a teacher, Mr. Lloyd, asked:

"I may be wrong. Correct me if I am wrong. You are against the means of public education, the means to an end, nothing against an educated person, but against the means used"?

My answer: "Yes, I want the right means used so we'll get the right kind of education. I do not see how we can get the right kind of education when we use the wrong means. One "Cannot pick figs from thistles", and your "sins will find you out." Aggressive force is an example that might-is-right. I am more scared about the counterfeit education the children are getting than about Russia."

Then Mr. Lyons asked: "How would you change the system we have today"?

My answer: "I believe we'd get much more out of life with a free enterprise educational system. Remember, Henry D. Thoreau contended that the only thing the government could do to help business (and education is a most important business) was the rapidity with which it got out of the road. We would have much better education if the government was out of the road and it was on a voluntary free enterprise basis, as was the ideal of the American way of life as set forth in the Declaration of Independence, which was an attempt to put the Ten Commandments into operation in a big way.

Mr. Lyons asked: "How far did you go in college"?

I answered: "I was handicapped by a college diploma. Colleges are tax-exempt, both as to donations and as to property tax. They are also granted a right by the government to issue monopolies, by way of certificates, to lawyers and doctors and accountants, and even now you have to get a certificate from the state to manage your own farm if you want to plant more wheat or corn than the bureaucrats say you should plant.

Mr. Lyons asked: "Should we have any laws for the good of the people"?

My answer was: "Laws against murder and stealing".

Lyons: "They are covered in the Ten Commandments. Why have other laws"?

My answer: "Because some men do not obey the Coveting and Stealing and Murdering Commandments. Thus we need the legal law to help retard those who steal and murder and practice fraud.

Then Lyons said: "Man-made laws say you go to jail for life, etc. Schools are trying to do the same thing. They are trying to set up protection for our children".

My contention is that instead of setting up protection for children, they are subjecting them to a counterfeit education. That instead of protecting them, they get them in trouble. If we were really educated we wouldn't be drafting soldiers, having the dollar getting worth less and less, having striking labor unions, permitting the state to do things that they know would be violating the Commandments if done by an individual.

In other words, the government counterfeit education is establishing a double standard of right, which means there is no standard. They contend that the state has a right to do things that they know would violate the Commandments if done by an individual. And that is a counterfeit education.

Then Mr. Lyons said: "There can be a law against murder but no law to protect our children."

Hoiles: "Of course the law against murder protects children just as much as it does adults. It is my contention that there can be no law against ignorance. No one can give a child an education. The child has to earn it. Tax-supported schools are based on 'from each according to his ability, to each according to his need'."

Of course, the columns are open not only to the three prospective teachers, but to anyone who is interested in education to point out how schools that are violating the Coveting and Stealing Commandments can successfully teach the youth of the land to believe in the inalienable rights of the individual and private property.

The Money-Tossing Game

The Allen-Scott Report

ROBERT S. ALLEN — PAUL SCOTT

S.A. COUNTRIES EISENHOWER IS VISITING HAVE ASKED $200 MILLION IN AID—ALREADY

WASHINGTON — President Eisenhower is starting his South American trip with one thorny problem already squarely before him—official requests for greatly increased military and economic aid.

Even before the President departed, the four countries he is visiting had formally applied for upwards of $200 million in U.S. aid —a total that is considerably more than the amount the U.S. is spending for this purpose in all of Latin America this fiscal year.

That will be $166 million; of which $96 million is for military aid, and $70 million for economic aid.

As of January 1, 1960, U.S. aid to the Southern hemisphere in the previous 10 years came to $776,760,000. Of this huge total, $431,009,000 was for military aid, and $345,751,000 for economic assistance. The latter amount does not include many millions in loans by the Export-Import Bank and other U.S. agencies.

Since the world-wide aid programs were started under President Truman, they have cost more than $47.5 billion; $25.5 billion in economic aid, and $22 billion for military aid.

Following are the official requests for increased aid the President had received from the four countries on his South American itinerary:

BRAZIL — $50 million in economic aid, and $25 million in military aid. In the past 10 years, Brazil has received $172 million in military aid and approximately $30 million in economic aid. Of the unusually large amount of military aid, $100 million was in payment for rights to establish a key U.S. missile tracking station on an island off the Brazilian coast.

ARGENTINA — $50 million in military aid, and a similiar amount in economic assistance. In addition, Argentina wants 27 Sabrejets (F-86) fighters, and 2 submarines, one a killer sub. These are Argentina's first requests for U.S. aid. In recent years, Argentina has purchased $19 million in U.S. weapons.

CHILE — $15 million in military aid, and a similar amount in economic assistance. To date, Chile has received a total of $49 million in military aid and $16,633,000 in economic aid.

URUGUAY — $10 million in military aid, and $5 million in economic aid. U.S. assistance to this small country now totals $24,500,000 in military aid, and $1,747,000 in economic aid.

MORE TO COME — These greatly increased aid requests from the four countries that will be host to the President are just the beginning.

Secretary Herter already knows other South American countries are preparing to follow suit. They are making that bluntly clear to the Inter-American Economic & Social Council that is making a detailed survey of this.

The Council is an agency of the Organization of American States, and this aid study is being made at the request of the U.S., which is paying for it.

From the reports so far received by the Council, most Latin American countries want larger amounts of U.S. military and economic aid. On the basis of these preliminary compliations, it is apparent the total that will be sought will far exceed the $166 million given them this fiscal year.

Following is a country-by-country report on U.S. aid to South America since 1949 — the first time these detailed totals have been made public:

	Military	Economic
Brazil	$172,000,000	$29,786,000

ON THE MOVE — President Gamal Nasser is claiming he has been invited to visit Mexico "at Nasser, this invitation was extended his convenience." According to Nasser, this invitation was extended by Mexico's new Ambassador Alejandro Carillo. Nasser is saying that when Carrillo presented his credentials, he informed the UAR ruler that President Lopez Mateos hoped he would come to Mexico . . . Latest financial scheme of Premier Fidel Castro is a bond issue to "stabilize the economy of the labor movement" — whatever that means. However, one thing is clear about this affair: Cuban workers are going to be strongly pressured to buy these bonds. That the official pronouncements on this is being pointedly stressed in the official pronouncements on this fiscal deal.

Looking Sideways

by WHITNEY BOLTON

NEW YORK — The Men's Bar at the Waldorf was crowded, as it always is between noon and 3 p.m. Tables were hard to come by, but we had no trouble. We were led immediately to one, from which the captain removed the reservation sign with a flourish. I was with big pumpkins. With big pumpkins you always get that kind of flourish. And you can go back in there the next day all by yourself and they don't even know you. Life, or something. A philosophical concept. Take it or leave it. They don't care.

We had a light lunch and he set fire to a cigar that must have cost two dollars on the hoof and he blew a large, aromatic cloud and said now he'd tell me.

"I want you to be rich," he said. "I want you to have, to be holding. No fun in being nonholding. You got a wife and a nice pair of kids just in the high-heels and 'Gosh-how-much-it-costs' stage. For this you got to have loot, boy. I am offering loot."

I waited. What do you say to a speech like that? You can't say, "Oh, please, do that for me" or even, "I don't believe a word you are saying." You just wait and look interested. Not too much, but interested. Not avid.

"We control 60,000 movie seats across the country: anywhere. Like Richmond, Buffalo, Kansas City, Cleveland, Detroit, Chicago, San Francisco, like that. Control. Here's the idea: the night before a big play we have selected in advance opens on Broadway for critics and all that jazz, we put it on Closed Circuit TV with the original and genuine cast of the stars right from the stage of the Broadway theater it will open in in 24 hours. We charge $3 per ticket in those towns. The producer gets a dollar and has $60,000 paid up in advance on his production costs. The theaters get a dollar and pay a little for cable and technical costs. We get the third dollar having promoted, got the play, set up the deal. We do this once a month for six months of the season — October through March. We hand-pick in advance, make the deals. The actors get one week's salary each for extra performance. Everybody is happy as rabbits in alfalfa. You with us?"

"No," I said.

"You crazy or something?" he braked. "You get half of our dollar. That's $30,000 a month for six months a year, in case you forgot your pencil. You can capital gains the take by putting in a little at first. We don't need your money but you need a piece of bait in the pot to be on capital gains soundly. You are sitting here in the Waldrof and telling me no to $180,000 effortless a year?"

"I would say it, Joey, if we were sitting in the Lincoln Memorial. No, I am not being cavalier about $180,000 a year. Only an idolt would be. But you haven't put it all on the line — and I haven't either. So here we go. You are not on fire with altruism and bonhomie in my regard. You are not out of good heart putting me in the way of $180,000 a year. You are setting me up, dear child and engaging fellow, because I have spent 30 years on Broadway, know producers and actors and playwrights by their first names and I can throw this pitch at them and you can't. I am the front man, to be blunt. It's worth $180,000 a year to be that kind of front man. Conceded. But you forgot something in your headlong race to the gold bucket: you forget that 24 hours after I consented, my name would be mud. I wouldn't be worth 6 cents to you much less 180 Big Ones."

"Yeh? Why?"

"Because Colonel, you come from the wrong side of the street. I'm being careful of my words. Just one day after I lined up with you, on what is an honest, legitimate and actually very intelligent idea, I'd be marked the same way. I'm sorry, Joey. I appreciate your thought, would love to pick up an extra little penny like $180,000 a year but I couldn't even pick up cat's meat in less than a week. You have it plain?"

"You got to be a straight gee, huh?"

"Hopefully. Only hopefully. Poor but proud is closer to it. No hard feelings?"

"I think you got chump blood," he said, "but I got to go with your thinking."

The Doctor Says:

by EDWIN P. JORDAN, M.D.

In addition to enrichment of the years of retirement through reading, as detailed in a previous column, the senior citizen has free access to other mediums for pleasurable and profitable occupation of earned leisure.

Throughout the ages and in every culture known to man, listening to music has been recognized as an effective means for giving enjoyment, soothing the troubled mind and uplifting the spirit capable of soaring.

Through the magic of records and radio, and especially stations that beam FM programs, the world of music is available to our citizenry at the flip of a switch.

But, you may say, "I'm tone-deaf. I don't know one note from another. I can't stand jazz, rock and roll, and I'm bored by classical music."

I'll grant all that, if you'll agree to a trial of attentive listening to music, in the manner I describe. First of all, see if the FM station is listed in the radio program of your local newspaper. If not, ask your local dealer if it is possible to receive a more distant station in your neighborhood. If you are lucky enough to be within the radius of FM, get an inexpensive receiver, even if you have to buy it on the installment plan. It'll cost you less than a course of vitamin or hormone "shots".

Whether you have FM or have to rely solely on AM, study the radio programs that are usually listed in your newspaper. Supplement this information with such additional information about programming that most stations are delighted to mail, on request or for a slight mailing charge.

With the programs at hand, select a few hours for attentive listening. Forget all about such nonsense as 'good" and "light" music, "classical" and "popular" music, etc.

Define "good music" as music YOU like to hear and "popular music" as music that's popular with YOU.

Maybe it's church music. Maybe it is old-time songs you used to sing. Maybe it's music from current shows you've heard the youngsters play, sing or dance to. Maybe it is opera.

Whatever it is, LISTEN to it with everything you've got. Don't just vaguely HEAR it while you're doing something else. And, when you find the programs YOU like, give them TIME each day the way you put aside time for church-going and other scheduled activities.

When you think you have had just about enough of one type of music, promote yourself to another. Quite likely, you'll soon find that the so-called "classics" are classics merely because you can listen to them over and over again, each time with increasing enjoyment.

Many psychiatrists and all modern hospitals have come to rely on music therapy in the care of convalescents, chronic invalidism from whatever cause, and nervous and emotional disorders of all varieties.

And, if you can't get FM during waking hours, you can get wonderful AM programs in most localities from midnight until dawn.

Thinkless Months Can Be Caught Up On

by HENRY McLEMORE

For the past ten years I have made it a practice to think fifteen minutes a month.

On the average, that is. Some months I don't think at all — I just don't have the time — but I always keep track of the thinkless months and make up for them later.

Thinking's fun if you don't do too much of it. I find fifteen minutes a month just about right. Not enough to tire one out, but ample to get things thought through.

What do I think about when I think?

Almost everything. The new French bomb. Why it takes coffee so long to percolate in the morning. Why, if Ike is as bad as the Democratic hopefuls paint him, they didn't launch impeachment proceedings long ago.

Why is Jack Paar so angry because he isn't allowed to be shown in living off-color? What makes Megan grind her teeth and then? Where has the hair gone? Does Castro really think he looks dashing with that beard? Is parking lot owners the wealthiest men in the country?

When I finish a think session I usually have thought at least a subject through, and have it straight in my mind. In January — no, in December, because I didn't think a lick last month — I concentrated on why modern living is so complex.

It is, you know. Pressures on every side, and more coming all the time. Compare your life to that, say, of a man in the Bronze Age, and see how the complexities have mounted up.

He had time to putter at making objects of bronze, while many Americans of today don't find the time to beat bronze into household necessities? A hammer? Why, no more.

Modern living is complex because so much has been done to make it simpler. So many gadgets, contraptions, and plain marvels.

Consider the housewife. I don't agree with those who think that the vacuum cleaner and electric washer have lightened her problems and given her more time.

Before she had them, the housewife would quit sweeping and washing when her back got sore. The vacuum cleaner and electric washer have no back to break. They'll go on and on. As a result the housewife spends more time keeping things clean than she used to.

Hate is a boomerang that hits you harder than the one you threw it at.

Sun Used As Crystal Ball In Forecasting The Weather

By JERRY BENNETT
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

WASHINGTON (NEA) — A seven year, month-by-month forecast of the rainfall in 31 cities will soon be published by Dr. Charles G. Abbot, world famed solar physicist of the Smithsonian Institution.

The 87-year-old scientist says he won't be surprised if space-age meteorologists scoff at his forecast. "I have been writing papers about my system for 20 years, and they aren't convinced yet," he says. "Reason is that they haven't got any theory for it."

Dr. Abbot, however, has no doubts about its reliability. Several years ago he forecast the weather for St. Louis during 1952-57. His predictions turned out to be 70 per cent accurate. An earlier forecast he made for 10 Tennessee Valley Authority weather stations was off by only 14 per cent.

Key to Dr. Abbot's crystal ball is the sun. A recognized expert on the celestial hot spot, he found that amounts of solar energy vary each day. These changes occur for 273 months and then repeat themselves.

He also found that changes in the weather accompany each energy variation and follow the same 23-year cycle. Thus, theoretically, all you would have to do to predict the weather for Easter would be to find out what it was like 273 months ago.

DR. CHARLES ABBOTT: "I have been writing papers about my system for 20 years and they aren't convinced yet."

But Dr. Abbot discovered a troublesome drawback to relying on this guide alone. Manmade variables such as industrial smoke influence the weather, too. So development of a reliable forecasting system required him to determine how much these variables change the weather cycle.

Determining this for the 31 cities in his upcoming forecast turned out to be a mammoth job of tabulating. The drawing up of more than 200 weather charts per city was required for each prediction. The entire project took him a year and a half to complete.

Dr. Abbot hopes that his method will now be seriously studied and accepted by other scientists. But if they continue to pooh-pooh his ideas, he at least has the satisfaction of knowing that "the ordinary people" are with him.

The white haired physicist has received letters from farmers, oil men and bathing suit manufacturers requesting his predictions. Latest letter came from a fur coat retailer who is interested in a 10-city temperature forecast that Dr. Abbot will publish this summer.

"When that report is out," he says, "I'll probably take a little rest." He explains that he has been working on his forecasting system for more than 30 years.

Dr. Abbot taught physics for several years at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. In 1895, he joined th staff of the Smithsonian and became its chief in 1928. In 1944, he retired and became a research associate.

New Stamps Issue Features Palace

An angle view of the front of the Palace of the Governors in Santa Fe, N.M., will be used for the one and one-quarter cent regular postage stamp.

This new denomination will be used for bulk mailings of non-profit organizations, in acordance with the new postage rates which become effective July 1, acording to Postmaster Q. K. Gaylor.

The building, now a museum, was constructed in 1610 and was the seat of government in New Mexico until 1901. During that time the flags of Spain, Mexico, the Confederacy and the United States have flown over the historic structure.

The stamp will first be placed on sale June 17, in sheet form and coils in Sante Fe. Printing will be in sheets of 100 for the regular stamp, electric-eye perforated, in turquoise.

ADMITS SETTING FIRES

ELLENVILLE, N.Y. (UPI) — A volunteer fireman who, police said, "loves to fight fires" was charged with arson Thursday night in the setting of 12 fires, the worst of which caused $75,000 damage.

Police Chief Frank Groppe said Herman Krom, 29, a member of the Ellenville Volunteer Fire Department, admitted setting the fires because "he just loves to fight fires" and then "help put them out."

MOTOR VEHICLE PREDICTION

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The Bureau of Roads predicted Thursday there would be 114 million motor vehicles on the nations roads in 1976, compared to 70 million last year.

West had four-leaf clovers growing out of his ears. To start with he chose to bid his bad six card heart suit instead of his good five card spade suit. That left the spade suit open for South and he put his neck right in the noose.

West decided to double. He did not want to hear any more diamonds from his partner and hoped that the double would be left in all around. It was!

To add to the fun South managed to get set four tricks. He won East's king of hearts with the ace and led the king of diamonds. West trumped and played queen and another heart. South might have ruffed with dummy's five but chose instead to discard a club and East made his duence of trumps. He led back his lowest diamond and West ruffed again.

Now West led the king and another club. East was in with the ace and led a third diamond which West ruffed with the ten.

A fourth heart was led and South completed his own debacle by trumping with dummy's ace. This made both the king and queen good in the West hand.

All things considered North and South paid a rather severe penalty. North's talkeout double was reasonable and certainly South had his bid. Besides, South might well have saved a trick or two in the play of the hand.
