WTC Rodeo rides out of chute at 7:30 tonight

Young men and women from 13 Southwest Region universities, four-year colleges and community colleges throughout West Texas will be kicking up the dust in Scurry County Coliseum for the next three nights.

The annual Western Texas College NIRA Rodeo gets underway at 7:30.

Tickets are $4 for adults and $2 for children at the door. All seating is general admission.

Shows tonight and Friday, plus slack, comprise the long-go, with the top 10 cowboys and cowgirls in each event advancing to Saturday's short-go, or finals. Individual competitors earn points in both "goes" as well as the average, or total. Top individual winners will receive $300 Red Bluff buckles, donated by area businesses.

In addition, designated students will be competing for team points for their school. Vernon Regional Junior College currently leads both the men's and women's team standings, with Western Texas in second place. The top two teams at the end of the 10-rodeo season advance to the College National Finals Rodeo in Bozeman, Mont., along with the top individuals.

The WTC NIRA Rodeo is the eighth Southwest Region rodeo of the season.

Schools which regularly participate in the NIRA's Southwest Region include Vernon RJC and Western Texas, Tarleton State University, Texas Tech University, Sul Ross, Cisco JC, Howard College, West Texas A&M University, Odessa College, Frank Phillips College, Eastern New Mexico State University, New Mexico Junior College and Weatherford College.

Events include bull riding, calf roping, saddle bronc riding, bareback riding, team roping, barrel racing, goat tying, breakaway roping and steer wrestling.

Stock contractor is Harry Vold of Fowler, Colo., named top PRCA stock contractor of the year numerous times. Jerry Baird, cook-off champion and former local Senior Center director and WTC employee, returns as announcer for the rodeo.

Judges will be Mike Todd of Rocksprings and Danny Williams of Denver City. Bullfighters will be Jerry Byrn and Rodney Seavers of Stephenville.

Tonight's show will feature the crowning of the WTC Rodeo Queen. Candidates are Dayna Doyle, a sophomore from Azle; Jessica Jeffrey, a freshman from Hamlin; and Vanessa Williams, a freshman from Snyder.

In addition to the three evening shows, there are several other events associated with the WTC Rodeo. They include the Exceptional Rodeo at 9 a.m. Friday in the coliseum and a 1 p.m. team roping Saturday at the WTC Arena. Both are free to the public.

On Saturday, the public is welcome to participate in a Cowboy Church Service at 6 p.m. in the coliseum. Willard Moody and Jackie Hackfeld will be conducting the service.

A dance is scheduled Friday and Saturday nights at 9 o'clock in the Scurry County Rodeo Association pavilion on Gary Brewer Road. The rodeo association is co-sponsoring the event. Blackwater, a band from San Angelo, will perform.

The annual WTC Alumni Rodeo will be held at 1:30 p.m. Sunday in the coliseum. Tickets are $4 and $2. Competition is open to all WTC alumni, their spouses and current students.

WTC offers free course to qualifying 11th graders

High school juniors who will be seniors in the 1996-97 school year can earn college credit through a free course this summer at Western Texas College.

The course is being offered through the college's Early Admissions Program.

High school students who are completing their junior year and have taken driver's education through WTC may qualify to take a course. John Gibson, director of workforce education at WTC, estimated that some 150 students are eligible. Funds are available for some 65 to 70 students.

Qualifying students may take any one of the basic courses offered during the summer at no charge. Normally, a student living in-district would pay about $87, said Gibson.

Students may call the WTC Financial Aid Office at 573-8511, ext. 309, to see if they qualify. Students can also call the counseling office at ext. 313 to get information on which course might be best for their needs.

Students who want to participate will need to submit a high school transcript; ACT or SAT scores, if available; an early admissions form from the high school; and an application for admission from WTC. These must be submitted by April 30. On that day, assessment testing will be administered at 3:30 p.m. at Snyder High School.

Registration will be held at SHS on May 7 from 3:30 until 5 p.m.

Bike-a-thon volunteers are needed for Saturday

One-mile and half-mile courses will be set up in Towle Park for the annual "Wheels For Life" bike-a-thon here Saturday.

Proceeds from the event help St. Jude Children's Research Hospital.

Registration will begin at 8:30 a.m. with the ride to start at 9.

The chamber of commerce is making packets with valuable coupons to present to the first 100 riders. Wal-Mart will donate a bicycle to be awarded to the rider who turns in the largest amount of money by April 27.

Volunteers are needed. For entry information contact coordinator Sheryl McClendon at 573-5008.

THE SDN COLUMN

By Roy McQueen

The feller on Deep Creek says, "A pessimist is one who complains about the noise when opportunity knocks."

Unlike the last couple of years, experts are predicting that the job market will be bright for new college graduates.

The same experts say a resume may still be the most important part of becoming gainfully employed.

We ran across some new blunders contained in resumes of job seekers. Some try to be humorous and fail, while others are merely flops in spelling and grammar. Some of the latest gaffes include:

--I operate computers like my father drove tractors, by the seat of his pants.

--I saw your ad on the information highway, and I came to a screeching halt.

--It's best for employers that I not work with people.

--Trustworthy references available upon request — if I give them a few bucks.

--Let's meet, so you can 'ooh' and 'ahh' over my experience.

--Size of employer. Very tall, probably over 6-5.

--P.S. Left job to ruin the family business.

--Accounting cleric.

--As indicted, I have over five years of analyzing investments.

--Am a perfectionist and rarely if if ever forget details.

--1881-1994 became top sales producer.

--Highly motivated. Hire me and I will be taking over your company in short order.

--Yes, I believe there are bigger things in life than money — bills for example.

--Reason for leaving last employment? Boss put up "Do It Now" signs and I punched out my supervisor.

--Describe last place of employment: A lot of crumbs held together by dough.

--Personal strengths and weaknesses: If I had kept my mouth shut I wouldn't be sending this.

We like the story of the young job applicant who was asked his name.

"Ford," replied the lad.

"And your first name?"

"Henry Ford."

Henry Ford, eh?" replied the manager with a smile. "That's a pretty well-known name."

The applicant looked pleased. "Yes sir, it should be," he replied. "I've been delivering papers around town for a couple of years now."

Concert Cougher's Ill Wind Blows No One Any Good

DEAR ABBY: For our 33rd wedding anniversary, my husband took me to see "Miss Saigon" at Cincinnati's new Aronoff Center. We had wonderful seats for this spectacular play; however, it was totally ruined by a very inconsiderate 60ish man who was seated directly behind me. He coughed incessantly during the entire performance.

There were times when I felt my hair blowing from the force of his cough! He seemed oblivious to the fact that he was annoying anyone, never bothering to cover his mouth, or take a cough drop, or perhaps get up and leave.

Abby, he was not alone; he had a nicely groomed woman with him who could have at least nudged him or told him to cover his mouth.

When telling my daughter about this, she suggested that from now on I carry cough drops to offer people who do this, thus conveying the message that their coughing is very annoying.

Abby, what's your opinion on handling such a situation? I came very close to saying something, but I didn't want to stoop to his level of rudeness.

SALLY IN CINCINNATI

DEAR SALLY: No one would deliberately cough under these circumstances, but since this gentleman (?) seated behind you made no effort to cover his mouth and had coughed so violently you felt your hair blowing, you would have been justified in turning around and asking him politely to please cover his mouth when he coughed.

* * *

DEAR ABBY: I'm a 42-year-old man who has been divorced for four years. I have a 13-year-old daughter I'll call "Suzie." Since my divorce, it's been Suzie and me and no one else.

About eight months ago I met "Jill" — a terrific lady with whom I'm very much in love. I never thought two people could have so much in common.

My problem: Whenever Jill and I make plans to go to dinner at a friend's house, Suzie expects to be right there between us. This was fine the first few times, but now it has become a problem. Suzie was supposed to stay with her mother during Easter vacation, but within 36 hours she was standing at my doorstep ready to come home. (She used to love going to her mother's.)

I have sat down with my daughter and told her I love her very much, and she'll always be important to me — but Jill and I need and want some time to ourselves. It hasn't worked. If I exclude Suzie she cries, calls us names and throws a fit. It has reached the point where we have to sneak around and lie in order to be alone.

How long must we endure this? I plan on spending my life with Jill. So far, she's been very understanding. What should I do?

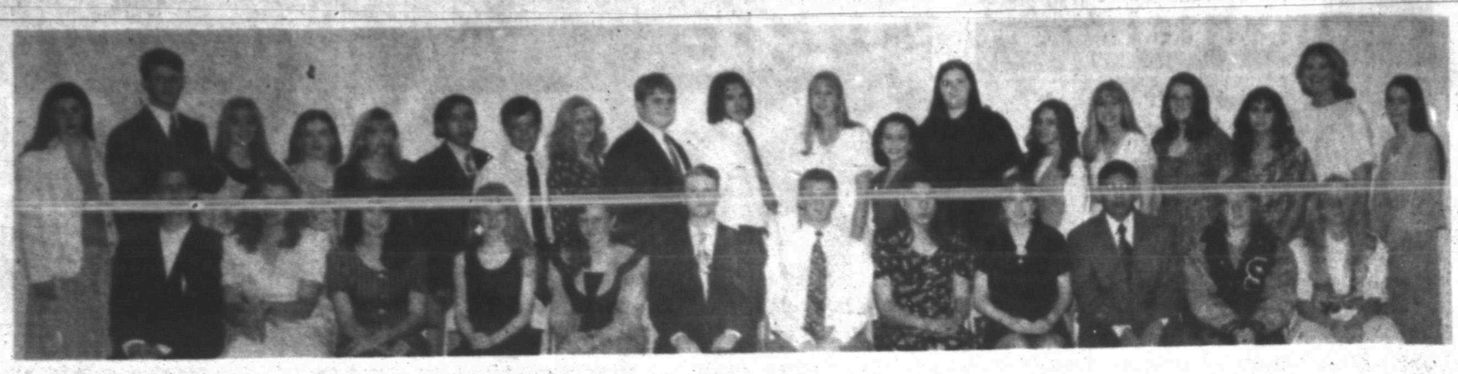

SUZIE'S DAD

DEAR DAD: Your problem stems from the extended period when it was you and Suzie and no one else. And you are expecting your child to reason like an adult, while she is fighting for her most precious possession — her daddy.

You have two choices: Be firm with your daughter and assert yourselves as adults who need time and space for yourselves and refuse to be swayed by the tantrums. Or be prepared to wait until your daughter is ready for college or a life of her own before taking your relationship with Jill to another level.

From school district...

Federal agents take records

DALLAS (AP) — Federal agents have custody today of boxes and cabinets full of records seized from the troubled Wilmer-Hutchins Independent School District, already the target of a state takeover.

Agents from the Internal Revenue Service and the FBI entered the building with a search warrant Wednesday morning and began the all-day process of hauling cabinets and boxes filled with school records from the administration building in South Dallas.

Among the records and computer files removed were purchasing receipts, payroll records and vendor contracts. District employees were told to go home.

The federal agents acted after receiving results of a state audit that criticized former Superintendent Delores Roberts-Quintyn.

The state audit said Ms. Roberts-Quintyn contributed to the district's out-of-control administration and refused to cooperate with auditors.

The audit found $141,372 in questionable costs and the general fund about $41,000 out of balance.

Ms. Roberts-Quintyn was in office for about a year when she was suspended in February because of persistent financial questions. Trustees decided last month not to renew her contract, which expires June 30.

Also, federal officials received reports from a former district employee about problems with Ms. Roberts-Quintyn.

"I expressed my concerns to the superintendent, and I was told to overlook it on more than one occasion. And I could not for the life of me figure why I was told to overlook some things that did not make sense," said former district bookkeeper Evelyn Smith.

FBI spokeswoman Marjorie Poche said she had no comment on the seizures Wednesday. Affidavits in support of the search warrant were not immediately made public.

Ms. Roberts-Quintyn, who did not return calls to The Associated Press, told The Dallas Morning News that she never told Ms. Smith to overlook irregularities.

"That is absolutely not true," she said. "We had reported irregularities to federal investigators three years ago and as recently as the summer of 1995.

"There are irregularities that warranted their investigation. That's all I can say."

Ms. Roberts-Quintyn also denied being uncooperative with auditors, but said she did question their need to download the district's computer database.

Trouble has long dogged the school system, which the Texas Education Agency took over this week.

Many say the problem with the district is due to a power struggle between its superintendents and the board. From 1974 to 1984, no superintendent lasted more than two years.

Official's account is linked to bribes

LAREDO (AP) — More than $61,000 in discrepancies in suspended Hidalgo County Judge J. Edgar Ruiz's bank accounts are traceable to bribes, a federal tax agent testified in a federal corruption trial.

William Mitchell, a special agent with the Internal Revenue Service, testified Wednesday as a rebuttal witness for federal prosecutors.

He said he believes more than $61,000 in cash was deposited in five bank accounts belonging to Ruiz.

Ruiz is one of five past and present Hidalgo County officials on trial for alleged public corruption. Also on trial are county commissioners Samuel Sanchez and Aberlardo Arcaute, former County Commissioner Leonardo Camarillo and suspended Head Start director Luciano Ozuna.

All are accused of more than 100 counts ranging from mail fraud to bribery to extortion.

A federal trial in McAllen last year ended in a mistrial when a jury deadlocked on a verdict. The trial was moved to Laredo because of intense exposure in McAllen.

Prosecutors have presented bank records showing $61,000 in mysterious deposits to Ruiz's accounts between 1990 and 1994.

Under cross-examination, Ruiz could not account for the money.

"It's surprising to me," Ruiz testified.

In response to Mitchell's testimony and federal records, Ruiz's attorney Joe Cisneros asked U.S. District Judge George Kazen for more time to review the new evidence and respond to the allegations raised by the bank records. Ruiz is now expected to testify again next Monday.

VIOLENCE PRESENTATION — Dee Wilson, director of Noah Project West, was in home economics classes of Carolyn Derouen and Carolyn Limmer all week to speak on dating violence, family violence and trauma. Pictured looking over information pamphlets are Autumn Pollard, Edwina Brooks, Wilson, Salvador Aguirre and David Beard. (SDN Staff Photo)

Wilson presents violence program

Dee Wilson, director of Noah Project West, has been presenting programs to Snyder High School home economics classes this week on dating violence, family violence and trauma.

In her talks, Wilson explained that teen dating violence is what happens in a teen dating relationship when one person uses physical, emotional or sexual abuse to gain power and keep control over the other person.

She said studies show at least one in 10 teens will be in an abusive relationship, and in those abusive relationships between boyfriends and girlfriends, 95 percent of the time it is a boyfriend abusing a girlfriend.

It has also been shown that abuse happens in all different kinds of relationships, including same-sex relationships, and teen dating violence can happen to anyone no matter what their race or where they live.

Wilson noted the warning signs that a person find in an abusive relationship:

•Are you afraid of the person you're going out with?

•Do they call you names, make you feel stupid, or tell you that you can't do anything right?

•Do they say that no one else would ever go out with you?

•Does this person you're involved with tell you where you can and can't go or who you can and can't talk to?

•Do you feel cut off from your friends and family?

•Do you feel if you say no to sexual activities that you will get into trouble? Do you feel pushed or forced into being sexual?

•Does this person say it's your fault when they hurt you?

•Does this person shove, grab, hit, pinch, hold you down or kick you?

•Is this person you're seeing really nice sometimes and really mean at other times (almost like they have two different personalities)?

•Does this person make frequent promises to change? Do they pretend that they never hurt you? Or do they tell you that you are "making too big a deal" out of it?

If the answer to any of these questions is "yes," your partner is being abusive toward you, Wilson said, and you may want to look at your relationship more closely and find out more about teen dating violence.

During her presentation, Wilson also gave the students advice on what to do if a friend is in an abusive relationship.

She said to first tell them it's not their fault and that they don't deserve the abuse. She also said to encourage them to seek help and don't blame them for the abuse or their decisions, as leaving an abusive relationship is hard and usually takes a long time.

Wilson also informed the students of choices they have if they are being abused, including calling a crisis line to get help and information; attending domestic violence support groups; telling a teacher, counselor or some other adult who can help; or taking a self-defense course.

Another option is taking legal action. Wilson said there are restraining orders you can get to keep the abuser away from you.

The students are taught by Carolyn Derouen and Carolyn Limmer.

The Noah Project West serves residents in Scurry, Nolan, Mitchell, Fisher and Kent counties. It is a center for victims of family violence and trauma.

35 piano pupils advance to state

Some 35 pupils from Bethel Studio of Music brought back 70 superior ratings and seven excellent ratings in the Pastorale Festival last Saturday at Texas Tech.

Pupils entered in piano solos, piano duets, piano trios and quartets and in hymns. Superior ratings qualify the students for all-state competition to be held May 18 at Southwest Texas State University in San Marcos.

Study claims inducing labor not necessary

BOSTON (AP) — Challenging a long-held view, a new study concludes doctors don't always need to induce labor when a woman's water breaks after a full-term pregnancy, but before labor has started.

Instead, it appears that letting nature takes its course is safe for both mother and baby.

For years, many doctors have assumed that waiting for labor to start naturally after the fetal membranes break could be hazardous to the baby. The fear is that germs may get into the uterus and infect the child.

On the other hand, some worry that when doctors use drugs to start labor, they are more likely to have to deliver the baby by Caesarean section.

About 8 percent of women at full term have their "water" break early — before the start of labor.

To help resolve whether inducing labor is necessary, Canadian doctors studied 5,041 women in this situation. They were randomly assigned either to have induced labor or to wait for labor to start on its own for up to four days.

"There was very little difference," said Dr. Mary E. Hannah of the University of Toronto, who described the results in Thursday's issue of the New England Journal of Medicine.

What do you think about hypnosis? I have always been somewhat skeptical, but I suspect there are people who are susceptible to this form of control.

In bridge, "control" usually means keeping trumps in check. Many players would lose trump control in this deal. But, as often happens, the key play occurs outside the trump suit.

What do you think about the bidding? How would you try to make four hearts after a spade lead?

Four hearts isn't a bad spot, but three no-trump will often be easier. North was correct to raise to two hearts with his minimum hand. South should rebid two spades or three no-trump. In the latter case, if North has four trumps, he will go back to four hearts.

South appears to have 10 tricks via one spade, three hearts, five diamonds and one club. However, if the trumps are breaking 4-2, as South has to expect, the timing needs to be perfect.

Suppose South wins the first trick, ruffs a spade in the dummy, plays a club to his ace and ruffs another spade. Whatever South does now, the defenders have an answer. Let's assume South plays a club to his queen. West wins with the king, plays a heart to his partner's ace, regains the lead with the spade queen and forces declarer with the club 10. East must make a long trump for one down.

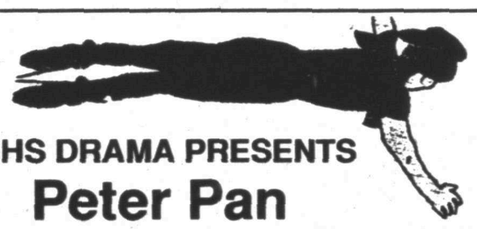

The best play is to duck the first trick. If the defenders continue with a second spade, declarer ruffs in the dummy and drives out the heart ace. When back on play, perhaps with the spade ace, declarer draws trumps and runs dummy's diamonds.

Lady Tigers ready for playoff action with Joshua Friday

By Brent Taylor
Sports Editor

In only two years of existence, the Snyder High School Lady Tigers' softball team will be in the state playoffs for the second time.

The Lady Tigers will begin their quest for the state title Friday in Brownwood in a first-round, bi-district game with Joshua. The Owls were the District 6-4A runner-up with a season record of 21-9, 7-3 in league play.

The Tigers finished the season 19-11, 5-1 in district play.

The game is set for 6 p.m. at Brownwood High School. In a game to follow at 8 p.m., it will be District 5-4A runner-up Sweetwater taking on the champions from 6-4A, Brownwood.

"We don't know much about Joshua," said coach Billy Hicks. "What we have to do are the same things that got us this far."

The Lady Tigers will enter the bi-district game with a team batting average of .388. Jodi White continues to lead the team hitting at a .523 pace. White has 56 hits, including 35 singles, 19 doubles and two home runs.

Four other Lady Tigers are hitting over .400. They include Joanie Wemken at .495, Brittany Drummond .429, Mendy Winter .404 and Raechele Wemken .402.

Drummond will get the start on the mound against Joshua. The freshman has pitched 63⅓ innings, allowing 50 runs on 68 hits, 20 strike outs and 12 walks. Drummond's pitching record is 8-2.

In the playoffs last year, Snyder took care of Wichita Falls, 16-6, in bi-district, but lost to Denton Ryan in the Region II semi-finals, 11-5.

All-sports banquet might be the last one

In what could be the last time, the Snyder High School all-sports banquet will be at 6:30 tonight in the First Baptist Church activities center.

According to All-Sports Booster Club president Tim Griffin, "We only have four to six active members. At our last meeting to reorganize for the 1996-97 school year, we did not have enough to vote on new officers."

Individual sports having their own booster groups was also cited as a reason for the lack of participation in the club. "Without one booster club for all sports, local merchants will be hit up several times during the year for money instead of once," Griffin added.

In the past fiscal year, the all-sports booster club has spent:

$700 for yard signs.

$400 for grass seed for Snyder Teenage League.

$1,415.80 for three chartered buses for volleyball team.

$600.40 for one chartered bus for football team.

$400 for powerlifting

$1,050.00 for boy's basketball.

The All-Sports Booster Club will also be paying for a chartered bus for the Lady Tigers softball team for their playoff trip to Brownwood Friday.

There will be one more meeting at 7 p.m. May 6 in the high school student center. If the club cannot reorganize, it will be disbanded at that time.

Steelers running back Morris pleads innocent

ROCKWALL (AP) — Bam Morris of the Pittsburgh Steelers pleaded innocent today to two drug possession charges stemming from his arrest last month during a traffic stop.

Morris entered a written plea during a brief hearing before state District Judge Bill Lofland.

"I can't talk about it now," the 24-year-old running back told reporters. "There will be a time."

"We're not going to win this in the press," said defense attorney Doug Mulder, who declined further comment.

Asked about the case's affect on his career, Morris replied, "It'll handle itself."

Morris is one of two players from this year's Super Bowl to be charged in a drug case. Michael Irvin of the Dallas Cowboys was indicted April 1 on felony cocaine and misdemeanor marijuana possession charges.

Morris, the leading rusher in Pittsburgh's Super Bowl loss to Dallas, has been free on $50,000 bond following his March 22 arrest. He was stopped outside the Rockwall city limits for swerving and not wearing a seat belt, officials said.

An officer became suspicious after Morris and his passenger, Rodney Dwayne Reynolds, gave conflicting statements of where they'd been and what they'd been doing, authorities said.

After obtaining Morris' permission to search the car, the officer found marijuana in the trunk in a sports bag, authorities said. A later search of the impounded luxury car turned up 1½ grams of cocaine, authorities said.

Restrictions are lifted on use of federal highway funds

WASHINGTON (AP) — Despite concerns over the budget deficit, the House approved a bill that would free highways, airports and other transportation projects from general spending restrictions.

While proponents said the bill's 284-143 passage Wednesday could pave the way for more than $1 billion in additional highway spending, critics said the funding would come at the expense of health, education and other programs competing for a shrinking amount of remaining dollars.

"We'll help all those wonderful contractors who want to build roads but we'll make everyone else compete for their hard-earned dollars or the dollars that the American taxpayers throw at them," said Rep. Bob Livingston, R-La., chairman of the House Appropriations Committee.

The House vote cut across party lines, reflecting more a turf battle between committee heads than one involving partisan politics.

The bill would remove four transportation trust funds from the federal budget, preventing the use of their $31 billion surplus as an accounting mechanism to reduce, on paper, the size of the federal deficit.

Americans pay into the trust funds at a rate of $70 million a day, mostly through taxes at gasoline pumps and airline ticket counters.

Although revenues must be used to finance transportation programs, they have been considered as part of the general budget since President Johnson included the fund to reduce the deficit resulting from the Vietnam War.

Rep. Bud Shuster, R-Pa., chairman of the House Transportation Committee, has been pushing to remove the trust funds. Most of the resistance has come from House Budget and Appropriations committee members, who say Congress could forget about a balanced budget should the measure become law.

There has been less public support for the bill in the Senate, where just six senators have sponsored a similar measure, compared with 224 in the House. The Clinton administration also strongly opposes it.

Nevertheless, supporters were hoping the margin of passage in the House would spur momentum in the Senate.

"There is a lot of grassroots support for this measure, and the vote ... is a manifestation of that," said Bill Toohey of the Alliance for Truth in Transportation Budgeting, which has spent some $100,000 on advertisements and other lobbying. "The Senate will be getting the same response from their constituents."

Shuster made the case for tax fairness, saying motorists and airline passengers now pay user fees that are diverted to other uses. He also said better infrastructure would boost productivity and save lives.

"Every dollar spent in highway, transit and aviation construction improves a nationwide system upon which the people and commerce of America depend."

Over building program...

Ex-prison chief said Texans "hookwinked"

AUSTIN (AP) — Former Texas prison chief Andy Collins says a Houston company and a New Jersey company got extraordinary contracts under his watch and admits he had hoped to work for either of them after his retirement.

Collins, who has spoken little since allegations arose that he improperly awarded a contract to a third company for which he eventually did work, told Texas Monthly for its May issue that there were more problems at the Texas Department of Criminal Justice than the contracts with which he dealt.

The magazine's May issue hits newsstands April 25.

Questions over a $33.7 million contract with Canadian firm VitaPro Foods surfaced just after Collins retired from TDCJ last year.

After he left the department, Collins joined VitaPro in a $1,000-a-day consulting job. He resigned when the contract questions later arose.

Criminal investigators are looking into whether Collins properly negotiated the five-year contract, and Gov. George W. Bush has ordered independent investigations of all contracts awarded under Collins' tenure.

Collins called the VitaPro investigation ridiculous and said the real scandal at the department was the explosion of prison construction and the incredible number of unneeded prison beds going unused.

Andy Collins

"It was the stupidest thing the State of Texas has ever done," Collins said of a massive prison expansion program. "The public was absolutely hoodwinked into thinking that the only way the crime problem could ever be solved was prosecution and incarceration."

Collins, who could not be reached Wednesday by The Associated Press, told Texas Monthly that more state money should be going to early intervention to keep young people from entering the criminal justice system.

"Instead, we're just taking juveniles and feeding them directly into the system," he said.

Over five years, the Texas prison system tripled in size from 48,000 to 145,000 beds during a $1.5 billion expansion program financed by bonds approved by voters in 1991 and 1993, according to Larry Todd, spokesman for the Texas Criminal Justice Department.

During that same time, prison operational spending went from $770 million a year to $2.2 billion.

There are about 129,000 Texas prisoners today.

Allan Polunsky, chairman of the board that governs the Texas prison system, said new prison construction will prove its worth.

"Time will prove that (construction) to be a wise decision," he told the AP, adding that crime will continue to fall as more inmates are kept in Texas prisons.

Polunsky would not comment on Collins' remarks regarding Houston company 3D-International or New Jersey-based Safeguard Technology. He said investigations are continuing into contracts under Collins.

Baruch Koren, a marketing official with Safeguard of Hackinsack, N.J., said he does not believe the company got any special treatment.

"I'm aware we had a contract, but Mr. Collins never worked for Safeguard and was never offered employment," he said.

Safeguard was paid millions to construct security fences for several state prisons. Before awarding the contract in late 1995, Collins had rejected similar proposals brought up by another state official.

Charles Thomsen, chairman of 3D-International, said he was shocked by Collins' accusation.

Thomsen said Collins once took a trip with an official from the construction company to Oregon to testify before a state panel there about Texas' prison construction. Thomsen said Collins' travel expenses were paid, but he was never paid nor promised a fee.

"It's amazing to me that he would make such a statement," Thomsen said.

Share your concerns with gynecologist

DEAR DR. GOTT: My husband and I have been together for 11 years, and during that time I've suffered recurring yeast infections and vaginitis, despite fastidious personal hygiene practices. I never had these problems prior to relations with him, and he's been my only partner. He likes to engage in oral stimulation before intercourse, and I can trace the infections to these occasions. When I attempt to discuss this problem, he becomes incensed and will not talk about it, indicating the problem is mine. Can engaging in this practice cause the afflictions mentioned? I have found this an impossible topic to discuss with my gynecologist, especially when perched at the end of an examining table wearing a sheet of tissue paper.

DEAR READER: Although I have never heard of yeast infection being transmitted in the manner you describe, I suppose that it's theoretically possible.

It's more likely that the acidity of your vaginal secretions is being altered by your sexual arousal and love-making techniques, thereby providing for uncontrolled growth of yeasts that are already present in your reproductive tract.

In any case, I really encourage you to discuss this with your gynecologist, preferably before your examination, when he sits down to talk with you (as he should) about any problems you might be having.

This is information he needs to have. For example, vaginal yeast infections are more common in diabetic women, so he will probably want to obtain a blood sugar test. Don't be intimidated by your doctor. Talk to him when you are secure and clothed, not when you're feeling vulnerable wrapped in a paper gown.

As another possibility, you might consider using a course of anti-yeast vaginal cream. Most of these products are now available without a prescription.

Finally, your husband's reaction to your concerns is certainly not that of a sensitive and caring partner. He should be ashamed of himself. And, in fact, your yeast problem may be his, too. If he is uncircumcised, he could unknowingly be harboring yeasts that he transmits to you, not through oral sex but by standard intercourse.

Show him my answer to your question. I believe that you both need to address the issue, together as a team.

To give you general information, I am sending you a copy of my Health Report "Vaginal Infections and Disorders." Other readers who would like a copy should send $2 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to P.O. Box 2017, Murray Hill Station, New York, NY 10156. Be sure to mention the title.

Menendez brothers get life sentences without parole

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Jurors who chose life imprisonment over a death sentence for Erik and Lyle Menendez agonized during deliberations that one said were eerily similar to the defendants weighing whether to kill their parents.

The panel, which took 13 hours over three days to recommend life without parole, said Wednesday they spared the brothers because of their youth, lack of criminal history and the impression that they seemed like souls worth saving.

"There was no way we could put them to death," said juror Bruce Seitz. "There were other good things about them that warranted their life, that warranted their living."

Juror Andrew Wolfberg, who spoke emotionally about the agony of such a decision, said he felt as if he was in the brothers' position when they opened the door to the family room of their parents' Beverly Hills mansion and began firing shotguns.

"It's eerie to be in the position of deciding someone's life or death," Wolfberg said. "It's cold. It was almost like the defendants when they made their decision to kill. It was very difficult to deal with."

The penalty verdict, which drew gasps from relatives, ended a long effort to place blame in the Aug. 20, 1989, murders of millionaire entertainment executive Jose Menendez and his socialite wife, Kitty.

Prosecutors portrayed the brothers as greedy brats out to get their parents' fortune. But the brothers claimed they killed after years of incestuous abuse in a dysfunctional family, a defense powerful enough in the first trial in 1994 to deadlock two juries — one for each brother.

In the wake of acquittals in the murder trials of O.J. Simpson and rapper Snoop Doggy Dogg, prosecutors got a much-needed victory despite the jury's rejection of their call for the death penalty.

Erik, 25, and Lyle, 28, took the verdicts like pale statues, showing no emotion. Lyle's lawyer, Charles Gessler, wept.

"Lyle is relieved because he wants to live," Gessler said. "You know life without parole is not something to be looking forward to. So you can't say he is happy, but he is relieved."

Clinton urges Japan alliance

TOKYO (AP) — President Clinton appealed to the Japanese today to "forge a partnership for leadership" with America to battle against terrorism, nuclear proliferation and other post-Cold War dangers.

Clinton, the first U.S. president in 13 years to address Japan's parliament, urged America's World War II foe to "join forces" for a larger role in global affairs.

"No nation can solve these problems alone," he told the Diet in a speech that climaxed the last day of Clinton's three-day visit. He later left for St. Petersburg, Russia, the next leg of his trip.

With a mixture of security and economic themes, Clinton's speech was a call for Japan to resist isolationism and accept its responsibilities abroad.

The question of how far Tokyo should go in relaxing military restraints imposed by American conquerors five decades ago is sensitive in Japan and other Asian nations. China in particular is concerned about a more active U.S.-Japan security alliance.

Clinton referred to a broad 21st century partnership, not only in defense but also in trade and economics, the environment and space, science and technology.

He made no proposals for specific new forms of security cooperation with Japan but cited several key threats the two nations can work together to combat: organized crime, the spread of weapons of mass destruction, drug trafficking, terrorism and environmental decay. These are examples, he said, of how "problems that start beyond our borders can quickly penetrate our borders."

"Working together and leading together," the United States and Japan as Pacific powers can "bring the blessings of peace and progress to other people all around the world," Clinton said to occasional bursts of polite applause.

In 1983, Ronald Reagan became the first U.S. president to address the Diet.

Clinton fleshed out the alliance theme at a luncheon with Prime Minister Ryutaro Hashimoto. "The United States and Japan must forge a partnership for leadership in the 21st century," he said.

Later, the president visited a Chrysler dealership in Tokyo to underscore his administration's efforts to help American carmakers gain a stronger foothold in the tough Japanese market. Ducking his head beneath the hood of a Neon, the president exclaimed, "This is a wonderful car."

But trade issues took a back seat to security matters during Clinton's visit.

He and Hashimoto signed a joint security declaration Wednesday saying the United States would keep about 100,000 troops in the Asia-Pacific — including the current 47,000 in Japan — and Tokyo would for the first time consider ways its limited defense forces might operate outside national borders.

In Russia, Clinton planned a day of sightseeing in St. Petersburg before attending an eight-nation conference on nuclear security. He was meeting with President Boris Yeltsin on Sunday, then heading home to Washington. Mrs. Clinton, who kept a low profile in Tokyo, was headed home today.

In his speech today, Clinton apologized on behalf of America for the rape last September of a 12-year-old Okinawan girl by three U.S. servicemen, who were convicted and sentenced to prison last month.

News briefs

Immigration work crackdown

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Clinton administration is stressing its credentials in fighting illegal immigration, pointing to a new emphasis in ferreting out undocumented aliens on the job and the employers who knowingly hire them.

With polls showing the public overwhelmingly concerned about illegal immigration and Congress grappling with legislation to deal with the problem, administration officials have been eagerly touting their accomplishments.

Wednesday, they rolled out the results of a monthlong worksite enforcement operation in 19 Eastern states, Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands.

The sweep netted 1,176 undocumented workers, most of whom have been removed from the United States, Justice Department officials announced.

"We are bringing much more order to our borders," Deputy Attorney General Jamie Gorelick said at an INS news conference.

Houston art museum expansion

HOUSTON (AP) — The Museum of Fine Arts in Houston boasts one of the nation's best collections. Trouble is, there's not enough space for it all.

All that should change by the turn of the century.

Museum officials on Wednesday unveiled plans for a $100 million expansion that will boost exhibition space from 72,750 square feet to 158,150 square feet.

Minority enrollment may drop

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas Higher Education Commissioner Kenneth Ashworth says minority enrollment in some colleges or universities could drop significantly this fall unless a federal court halts the effect of an anti-affirmative action decision.

"There are projections that (there) may be as much as a 30 percent reduction in minority enrollments in some institutions just as a result of this," Ashworth said Wednesday.

"That's why we're hoping there'll be a pretty quick decision, because the admissions process is going to go on. The schools are going to fill their fall enrollment," he said.

According to the Texas Higher Education Coordinating Board, there were 406,466 students enrolled in Texas four-year public universities in fall 1994. Of them, 261,119 were white, 71,401 were Hispanic and 36,012 were black. The rest were members of other minority groups.

Of 400,323 students enrolled in community colleges that year, the last for which an ethnic breakdown is available, 244,750 were white, 41,767 were black and 80,130 Hispanic.

May ease tuition rules

AUSTIN (AP) — For the past 15 years, prospective students at Texas colleges have been considered non-residents for tuition purposes if they were claimed as a dependent on the tax return of a parent who lives out of state.

For Konne Bawden of Houston, that means her son, Jeff Meininger, must pay out-of-state tuition if he attends the University of Texas this fall, because her husband lives in another state and has the tax exemption because of child support.

A proposed change in the regulation was before the Coordinating Board of Texas Higher Education today.

On the agenda for today's meeting in Austin was an amendment that would also take into consideration the residence of the parent with whom the student has resided for the 12 months prior to enrollment.

Tuition for Texas residents is $30 a semester hour, or $360 for a 12-hour class load. For nonresidents, tuition is $222 an hour, or $2,664 for 12 hours.

Moses limits teacher groups

AUSTIN (AP) — Education Commissioner Mike Moses told teacher groups they can be seen but largely not heard at meetings of a panel advising him on developing a new teacher appraisal system.

Moses said Wednesday the teacher group representatives were welcome to attend meetings of the panel and to comment on the appraisal proposal to him.

But he said he didn't want a repeat of a fall meeting where "representatives of teacher organizations were more engaged in the dialogue than were the members of the committee."
