Fighting shatters truce

Secession crisis in Yugoslavia deepens

■ New cease-fire proposal fails; country seems in state of chaos.

Associated Press

LJUBLJANA, Yugoslavia — Slovenian militiamen armed with rockets on Tuesday ambushed a federal army tank convoy and fought for control of key border posts. The army called in air strikes and the chief of staff said "a truce is no longer possible."

The federal army said seven to 10 people were killed and 13 wounded in Tuesday's fighting, but Slovenian television later said as many as eight people died in one firefight alone. The death toll in Slovenia was expected to rise in the heaviest day of fighting since Slovenia and neighboring Croatia declared independence June 25.

After a meeting with the federal president late Tuesday, Slovenia offered new terms for a truce, saying it no longer demanded that federal troops lay down their arms before returning to their bases. But the federal president is a militant Croatian, and it wasn't clear if the Serb-dominated army, increasingly acting on its own, would accept the peace offer.

Violence involving federal troops also broke out for the first time in a week in Croatia, where soldiers opened fired on demonstrators throwing stones and Molotov cocktails at federal tanks as they left a barracks in Zagreb. Three civilians were killed, Tanjug reported.

In Belgrade, hundreds of distraught parents of soldiers serving in Slovenia stormed the Serbian parliament to demand that the troops come back home. Police used tear gas in a vain attempt to disperse the crowd, which crashed through the gates and poured into the chamber where a session was underway.

At 9 p.m. Tuesday, Slovenia proposed an immediate end to hostilities, in a statement released after a meeting between Slovenian President Milan Kucan; Vasil Tupurkovski, the Macedonian representative on the federal presidency; and Stipe Mesic, the leader of the presidency.

Kucan said Slovene territorials had been told to stop offensive maneuvers. Tupurkovski added that Slovenia had dropped its previous insistence that federal troops

1987 Thomas speech faults abortion ruling

Thomas

WASHINGTON (NYT) — In a 1987 speech, Clarence Thomas, President Bush's nominee to the Supreme Court, strongly praised an essay arguing that a fetus had an inalienable "right to life." The article also said the landmark 1973 court ruling legalizing abortion was immoral and violated natural law.

The disclosure of Thomas' remarks, which seemed to constitute an indirect endorsement of the anti-abortion position of some fellow conservatives, seems certain to intensify the questioning he will face about his views on abortion when he appears before the Senate Judiciary Committee at confirmation hearings this fall.

The high court nominee made the remarks when he was head of the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission; he now sits on the U.S. Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia.

Leaders of groups seeking to defend women's right to abortion cited the speech on Tuesday as proof Thomas has a fixed position on the issue and should therefore not be allowed to sit in judgment on legal cases involving abortion.

The White House responded Tuesday

Midland engineer says Aramco, others stole cleanup technology used in gulf

■ Designs could gather up to 100,000 barrels of oil a day, Clyde Veltmann says.

By Melia McEwen
Staff Writer

A Midland man is preparing to seek approximately $2.5 billion from seven major contractors, claiming the companies fraudulently are using his technology and designs to clean up oil spills in the Persian Gulf.

Clyde Veltmann, president of the Veltmann Corp., a Midland-based environmental company, said at a press conference Tuesday that he expects his lawyers to file the lawsuit in State District Court in Houston this afternoon. He said he has three law firms working on his case, and expects a fourth to join the effort at a later date.

Not only is Veltmann seeking $2.5 billion in damages, but he is filing an application for injunction against the seven contractors "to get them to stop saying things like I was never there." He said he had decided against seeking an injunction halting cleanup operations in the Persian Gulf.

The seven companies named in the injunction are Crowley Maritime Corp., Aramco Services Co., Bechtel Corp., O'Brien Oil Pollution Services of Houston, W.J.R. Inc., Martech U.S.A., and Adil Al-Misehal Trade Establishment (AMTE Inc.)

According to Veltmann, he was invited to Saudi Arabia in February by the Royal Family and AMTE Inc., after massive oil spills were triggered by the Iraqis during Operation Desert Storm. He said that during the two months he spent in Saudi Arabia, he was induced by the defendants into

Shevardnadze urges end to 'dictatorship' threat

Eduard A. Shevardnadze

MOSCOW (AP) — Former Foreign Minister Eduard A. Shevardnadze and other prominent reformers on Tuesday urged pro-democracy forces to unite and wipe out the "threat of dictatorship."

"The main task that we are facing is to save democracy," Shevardnadze told a news conference where reformers released a platform for a nationwide political organization they hope to form in September.

Shevardnadze's group of nine Communists and ex-Communists hopes to force the Communist Party — the dominant political force in the Soviet Union — to expel hard-liners who want to return to one-party rule, said group member Arkady Volsky.

The showdown between reformers and hard-liners will come at a Communist Party Central Committee meeting this month, said Volsky, an ally and one-time aide to President Mikhail S.

Wadley project sails past soggy problem

By Brian Pearson
Staff Writer

The biggest problem contractors have faced during their toil to reconstruct Wadley Avenue has not been high temperatures, difficult digging or heavy rains.

City officials complained Tuesday that the nightly dribble of water off the curbs of apartment complexes and other sources has created soggy working conditions.

"Every morning workers go out there and the base is saturated," said Harvey Hansen, engineering director. "The problem is nuisance water from car washes, businesses and especially sprinkler water from apartment complexes."

Nevertheless, the project, which started April 8, is 53 percent finished and is almost on schedule for its Sept. 1 completion date, Hansen said. There has not

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla. — A judge Tuesday signed interstate summonses for 12 witnesses, including Sen. Edward M. Kennedy and his son Patrick, for the rape trial of William Kennedy Smith. William Smith, 30-year-old nephew of the Massachusetts senator, has pleaded innocent to charges that he raped a 29-year-old Jupiter, Fla., woman March 30 on the grounds of the Kennedy family estate.

WEATHER SUMMARY

Expect cloudy skies, 90s

Today's forecast calls for partly cloudy skies with a high in the lower 90s, east to southeast winds 5 to 15 mph and a 20 percent chance of thunderstorms, according to the National Weather Service in Midland.

Tonight will be mostly cloudy with a low in the mid-60s and a 30 percent chance of thunderstorms.

July Fourth is expected to be mostly cloudy with a high in the lower 90s and a 30 percent chance of thunderstorms.

After an overnight low of 66, Tuesday's high was 93 compared with the record high for that date of 100 set in 1977. The record low for today's date was 47 set in 1947.

STATE

Scattered showers and thunderstorms were reported Tuesday across Texas, as warm afternoon temperatures combined with tropical moisture pumped into the state from Mexico and the Gulf of Mexico.

Afternoon temperatures were mainly in the 80s and 90s, although El Paso came in with a rain-cooled 70 degrees.

In West Texas, isolated showers formed from the southern Panhandle to the Permian Basin, and heavy rainfall was predicted Wednesday because of the slow-moving nature of the storm systems.

NATION

Thunderstorms lashed parts of the nation's interior Tuesday with rain, hail and strong winds.

Thunderstorm wind gusts caused damage at Mexico, Mo., and near Du Quoin, Ill. Winds gusted to 75 mph near Elkhart, Kan., and topped 100 mph near Lamar, Colo., the National Weather Service said.

Three-quarter-inch hail fell west of Columbia, Mo., and 1-inch hail fell near La Junta, Colo., and Lamar, Colo.

At midday, rainshowers and thunderstorms extended over much of eastern Texas and Florida, the Mid-Atlantic states, the Midwest and the Central Plains.

DPS to step up patrols during holiday period

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff Writer

July Fourth brings to mind fireworks, patriotism, barbecues, family outings — and more people on the roads.

This holiday, as many as 12 people are expected to be killed on Texas roads between 6 p.m. Wednesday and midnight July Fourth, according to the Department of Public Safety.

During the same 30-hour fatality counting period last Independence Day, 15 people died in traffic accidents across the state. And four more died as a result of injuries sustained during that period.

In Midland, as elsewhere in Texas, the DPS will be stepping up their patrols as in past years.

"Nearly all available troopers will be on duty. We'll have troopers working routine patrol that don't normally," said Jimmie Rhoads, safety education lieutenant for the Midland DPS.

"Speed and drinking drivers are the two big causes of accidents during the holiday, but we will be looking for other violators, including seat belt violators," Rhoads said.

During the 1990 July Fourth period, speeding or drinking were factors in 89 percent of fatal accidents in Texas, according to DPS statistics.

Because of the holiday, the summer temperatures and picnic outings, more people may be out drinking — and driving, Rhoads said.

"And there will probably be a few more (motorists out) than normal. But since the holiday is in the middle of the week, there might not be as many as if it were on a weekend," Rhoads said.

"That will probably help hold the number of fatalities down," he said.

For those planning to travel this holiday, Rhoads advised driving within speed limits, watching out for all other drivers and buckling up.

return to barracks without their tanks and guns.

Hours after Slovenia's proposal, however, the army chief of staff was quoted as saying it was too late for a truce.

"Under the existing circumstances, a truce is no longer possible, which forced the supreme command to start full scale combat activity," the news agency Tanjug quoted Gen. Blagoje Adzic as saying.

Adzic, a 63-year-old Serbian hard-liner, is seen by Croatian and Slovenian leaders as the main federal opponent to their independence drives.

His statements suggested that the army, which has exercised considerable autonomy from the fractious federal government, might act on its own. They also reflected the frustration of army generals at their failure in the Slovene campaign.

In another development, Croatia showed its commitment to independence by replacing its defense and interior ministers with extreme nationalists, Sime Djodan and Onesin Cvitan, respectively.

For the first time, the United States hinted it might support independence for Slovenia and Croatia if it came peacefully.

"We do not support the use of force to preserve Yugoslavia's unity," said State Department spokeswoman Margaret Tutwiler in Washington. "A cooling off period is needed to launch a dialogue that responds to national aspirations of the people, and creates a new basis for relations among the peoples and republics of Yugoslavia."

The army intervened in Slovenia last week after the republic took control of international border posts. In three days of combat that began Thursday, Slovenia said at least 63 people died and 142 were wounded.

Tuesday's hostilities began with a blazing ambush by Slovenian militiamen on a column of 12 federal armored vehicles trying to move through a forest, said AP correspondent Dusan Stojanovic.

"We were just going back to our barracks when they suddenly attacked us," said Sasa Pantic, commander of the army unit. He said that one armored vehicle received a direct hit from an antitank missile before the Slovenians fled.

Slovenian television said eight soldiers were killed and at least three wounded in the clash near Otocec.

THREAT: Group seeks removal of hard-liners

Gorbachev.

He did not indicate whether the meeting would be before or after Gorbachev meets in London on July 17 with leaders of the Group of Seven industrialized nations.

"The opposition is very strong," Volsky said. If the meeting ends with a Communist Party committed to democracy, it could then affiliate with, or merge into Shevardnadze's pro-democracy coalition, Volsky said.

Shevardnadze had said earlier that he saw a need to "create a democratic party that would act parallel with" the Communist Party.

"There can be no state of law without a solid, serious, constructive opposition," he said last month.

Another key member of the group, former Politburo member Alexander Yakovlev, on Tuesday urged the coalition to "absorb everyone — including members of the Communist Party — who takes as his goal the real renewal of society ... on the rails of democracy."

Yakovlev did not appear at the news conference, but wrote in the government newspaper Izvestia that it was time to recognize that "the revolution in society has not brought a revolution in the party."

Some Communist leaders and bureaucrats, he said, are "mobilizing members of the party against a democratic transformation, against economic and political freedom."

Yakovlev, the senior adviser to Gorbachev, is an architect of the policy of glasnost, or openness.

Shevardnadze, who quit as foreign minister in December, said he would decide "within a few days" whether he would quit the Communist Party.

"We want to unite with everyone of common sense, regardless of their party affiliation," Shevardnadze said.

The goal, he said, was "to remove the threat of dictatorship."

If the Communist Party joins, its tainted record could damage the pro-democracy coalition's credibility. But the party would give the reformers enormous financial and organizational resources.

Given the dramatic defeat of the Communists in the June 12 Russian elections, a merger could be the Communists' only hope of political survival.

Gorbachev, who within a few years is likely to face his first direct popular election, would be able to boost his popularity by disassociating himself somewhat from the Communist Party, which he currently heads.

Asked if Gorbachev himself might join the emerging coalition, Shevardnadze replied, "You should ask the president."

SPEECH: Disclosure might intensify questioning

(From 1A)

that advocates of abortion were trying to "assign" a position to Thomas on the basis of a single sentence, but its spokesman refused to say whether aides to President Bush knew about the speech before Bush chose his nominee.

Thomas, who has never ruled on the abortion issue while a judge, has been expected to decline to discuss his views on the subject with the Senate Judiciary Committee, saying it would be improper to do so.

David H. Souter was confirmed to the Supreme Court last year after successfully refusing entreaties in his confirmation hearings to discuss Roe v. Wade, the 1973 ruling that legalized abortion.

Before him, the two previous nominees to the court, Sandra Day O'Connor and Anthony M. Kennedy, also refused to discuss their views on abortion.

Already, some Democrats on the committee are saying that they are reluctant to let Thomas get by with a similar demurer, and his 1987 remarks may make it more difficult for him to resist responding.

In nominating Thomas to the court, Bush on Monday said he was unaware of Thomas' views on abortion and made a point of not asking him a "litmus test" question about that subject.

In the June 1987 speech to the Washington-based Heritage Foundation entitled, "Why Black Americans Should Look to Conservative Policies," Thomas said that it was crucial for the United States to restore a connection between ethics and politics like the one that Abraham Lincoln made when he argued against slavery on a moral basis. He said it was important to recover a sense of what philosophers call "natural law," that is, human rights that are so basic they transcend any written law.

He then went on to praise the article, by Lewis Lehrman, a New York businessman who ran for governor of New York in 1982, that said that Roe v. Wade, the 1973 Supreme Court opinion legalizing abortion, was a "coup" against the Constitution.

Thomas has said that he would not comment on any issues before the confirmation hearings and he declined to respond to a telephone call to his chambers on Tuesday.

In a statement issued Tuesday afternoon, the White House said: "Judge Thomas has not stated a public position on abortion."

disclosing the specifics of his technology while being promised contracts for his company.

"We met with government officials and representatives from the major environmental engineering firms, the Royal Family, and Saudi government officials, and we talked about processes for cleaning up the Gulf. We discussed contracts and reached an oral understanding about the role my company would play in cleaning up the oil spill in the Persian Gulf. We came home without any formal written contracts, even though the technology developed by our company is now being wrongfully used to clean up the oil spill."

He stated at the press conference that he had been told on several occasions that he had a contract to help clean up the spill. His designs, he said, could gather up to 100,000 barrels of oil a day from the gulf — where the water rarely exceeds 10 feet in depth. After he had revealed the fundamentals of his process, "I was told 'Thank you for everything. We've got all we need.'"

Veltmann's lawyer, Houston attorney Charles Musslewhite, said that, under Texas law, the verbal agreement was enough to create a binding agreement to hire Veltmann as a subcontractor in exchange for the information he'd provided about his technology.

Shortly after his return from Saudi Arabia, Veltmann said, he hired a team of investigators to uncover evidence of the "misappropriation" of his technology. He declined to reveal any of that evidence, on recommendations of his lawyer. He did say, though, that "I have my evidence and they'll have theirs, and we'll see who's credible."

Dick Simpson, a spokesman for Crowley Maritime, told the Associated Press that Veltmann "made some overtures about this a couple of months ago, but I don't really know what he's talking about."

An Aramco Services Co. spokesman in Houston referred calls to the parent company, Saudi Aramco, in Dhahran. Offices there already were closed Tuesday.

Veltmann returned Tuesday afternoon from Houston, where he said he and his wife Diantha had signed final affidavits before the lawsuit was filed. He also held a press conference before leaving Houston. Asked why he was holding these press conferences, he said "I'm a little guy being beaten up by the big guys. The two lead corporations in this suit are two of the largest corporations in the world. They count on the little guy not getting attorneys with the guts to go after them.

"Most of the little guys go away. That's not the deal this time. I don't care if we settle or not. I gave them a chance to settle this before it came to this. I called them, I sent them faxes. I did everything in the world I could. They wouldn't return my calls, they wouldn't answer my faxes. I'm going to make this right. They're going to remember my name a long time."

An address listed in Tuesday's newspaper as that of a man arrested for sexual assault was erroneous, according to an occupant at that residence.

That address was given as the residence of the man arrested, Lester Lewis Travioli, by the Midland Police Department and the Midland County Central Detention Facility.

WADLEY: 'Nuisance water' poses hindrance

(From 1A)

been any cost overruns, he added.

The $1.2 million project from Whitney Drive to Godfrey Street, he said, is seven days behind schedule because of rainy weather and an unexpected stubborn rock layer.

But it's the daily dousing of wayward water that has posed the biggest hindrance, he said. A broken water line Tuesday at Hyde Park apartments, 3329 Wadley Ave., further complicated the situation, he said.

"The nuisance water is keeping the project from going even faster," Hansen said. "We need cooperation from all the adjacent property owners to control their nuisance water."

The city has had a nuisance water ordinance since 1987. After investigators issue two warnings, violators can be slapped with a $500 fine.

During a 1988 construction project farther east on Wadley, the city paid an off-duty Midland police officer to patrol for nuisance water ordinance violators.

The city has not taken such drastic steps for this year's project, but code enforcement officers have been keeping an eye on nuisance water along Wadley.

"We check that area as much as we can," said Roberta Allison, property code office. "If there is a problem we get out there and notify the person who has contributed."

Code enforcement officers have made 113 nuisance water inspections citywide since January, compared with 89 for the same period in 1990, city records show.

Because the violators corrected the problems, none of the inspections resulted in citations, Ms. Allison said.

Meanwhile, Hansen said the complicated phase of the Wadley project — installing drainage pipes down the thoroughfare's center and covering it with concrete — is finished.

Most of the remainder of the construction, he said, will take place west of Midkiff Road. The entire stretch from Whitney to Godfrey will then be paved, he said.

The project is expected to compliment $1.2 million in similar improvements completed about three years ago on Wadley from I Street to Whitney.

Bart Hotchkiss, owner of Murray's Delicatessen, 3211 Wadley Ave., has been through Wadley construction before and said he is eager to see this year's project end.

"I'm anxious and ready for it to be finished," Hotchkiss said. "But having been through it three or four times before, I'm getting callous to it."

Although business at his restaurant has dropped between 15 percent and 20 percent, Hotchkiss said the current construction is better than a Band-Aid approach.

"It needed to be ripped out all the way down and a new bed put in," he said.

James Welty, assistant manager of Ski Skeller Sports in La Villita Plaza near the Wadley-Midkiff intersection, also has seen a decline in business.

"It has affected our business quite a bit," Welty said. "They keep changing the way the traffic flows so that our customers don't know which way to go. It's a pain in the rear."

S. Korean hopes for unification by 2000

WASHINGTON (NYT) — South Korean President Roh Tae Woo told President Bush on Tuesday that he hopes his country will be reunified with North Korea by the end of the century.

The two Koreas were partitioned at the end of World War II and technically have remained at war ever since.

Roh's visit was billed as an historic "summit" by South Korean officials. It was largely ceremonial and included only a 40-minute one-on-one Oval Office meeting with Bush. Later, the two leaders played tennis before Bush hosted a State Dinner at the White House.

Assistant Secretary of State Richard Solomon told reporters that Bush and Roh expressed concern during their working session that North Korea is attempting to manufacture its own nuclear weapons.

However, the two leaders made no public pledge to remove U.S. nuclear weapons from South Korea.

Solomon refused even to say officially what other U.S. officials have privately conceded for years — that Americans keep ground-based nuclear weapons in South Korea.

"As you know, our policy is to neither confirm nor deny" that, Solomon explained.

Anti-nuclear groups in South Korea have argued that by pledging to remove its nuclear weapons from the South, the United States would bring pressure on the North Korean government of Kim Il Sung to open its suspected nuclear plant in Yongbyon, north of Pyonyang, to international inspectors.

But in recent weeks Roh has argued the opposite. His position is that, although South Korea has no nuclear weapons of its own, the continued presence of U.S. nuclear weapons in his country — combined with increased pressure from China and the Soviet Union — will force North Korea to open its nuclear facilities to inspections.

U.S. intelligence information, disclosed this spring, indicated that North Korea might be able to build an atomic weapon by the mid-1990s.

North Korea recently told the International Atomic Energy Agency that it would sign an agreement this fall allowing inspectors into the country.

Minority Democrats want House power

WASHINGTON (AP) — Democratic women, blacks and conservatives, troubled by the prospect of an all-white liberal male House hierarchy, are demanding new positions of influence from House Speaker Thomas S. Foley.

Next week's election of a new House majority whip has become "an opportunity to vent the frustration and concern that has been built up," said Rep. Dave McCurdy, D-Okla., from the conservative wing.

"Whoever wins, we're going to see an expansion" of the party structure to allow more viewpoints, predicted Rep. Bob Wise, D-W.Va., head of the liberal Democratic Study Group.

Foley, D-Wash., has scheduled a vote July 11 for Democrats to choose a new whip between Reps. David Bonior of Michigan, currently chief deputy whip, and Steny Hoyer of Maryland, chairman of the House Democratic Caucus. The current whip, William H. Gray, D-Pa., is resigning from Congress to head the United Negro College Fund.

With the departure of Gray, who is black, and the election of either Bonior or Hoyer to his No. 3 spot, the top House Democratic leadership will be made up entirely of northern liberal white men. Rep. Richard Gephardt of Missouri holds the No. 2 majority leader post.

The Congressional Black Caucus, the women, and the conservatives all declined to enter a candidate in the race for whip.

Instead, the factions are focusing on potential opportunities created by the election. Depending on who wins — Bonior claims he's well ahead but Hoyer says it's neck-and-neck — openings could occur in different spots.

In either case, Foley will be pressed hard to make good on past pledges to add more positions to his team. The speaker can't satisfy all the demands with just the one opening created by Gray's departure.

"I'm going to let the elective process conclude, and then we'll look at ... some enlargement of the leadership," Foley said, either with more appointed positions or additional elective spots.

Both Bonior and Hoyer are promising to address the factions' concerns if elected, promises that can't be met without creating new positions.

"I think it's time," said Rep. Nita Lowey, D-N.Y. "Women have a particular point of view and that should be represented in the leadership," she said.

Lowey is among a group of Democratic women pushing Rep. Barbara Kennelly, D-Conn., for vice chairman of the Democratic Caucus. That assumes Hoyer wins and his current vice chairman, Vic Fazio, moves up to take his place.

Meanwhile, Reps. Patricia Schroeder, D-Colo., and Mary Rose Oakar, D-Ohio, wrote Foley of their concern that there are no women in the leadership and asked him to appoint one as chief deputy whip — assuming Bonior wins and his job opens up. They suggested Rep. Patsy Mink of Hawaii.

Rep. Edolphus Towns, chairman of the black caucus, said that with Gray's departure "it's very important to get somebody else back into the leadership."

One of the House's black lawmakers "should be at the table," said Towns, D-N.Y.

As Japan's holdings soar, U.S. remains top debtor nation

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States retained its unenvied position as the world's largest international investment debtor in 1990 as direct Japanese holdings in America soared 24 percent, the government reported Tuesday.

The Commerce Department said that the increase in Japanese investments helped Japan solidify its hold as the foreign nation with the second largest total of direct investment in the United States with $83.5 billion.

Britain retained its position as the largest holder of direct assets in the United States, defined as at least 10 percent ownership of a business, with holdings of $108.06 billion. However, the 2.4 percent increase in British investment was just one-tenth the pace of Japan.

For the first time, the Commerce Department gave a choice on how to measure the country's "net debtor" position — the difference between what Americans own overseas and what foreigners own in this country.

By two of the measurements, the overall net-debtor figure showed a slight improvement as the gap between U.S. holdings and foreign holdings narrowed a bit. However, by a third accounting method, the deficit surged by 34.7 percent.

The department said that by the old method, which valued the holdings by their purchase price, the nation's net debtor position shrank by 3.4 percent to $617.9 billion, compared to a revised figure of $639.7 billion in 1989.

By a new method that values the asset holdings by their replacement costs, the country's net debtor position narrowed by 6.3 percent to $439.66 billion.

However, a third measurement that values the holdings by their stock-market prices showed a deterioration of 34.7 percent to $360.60 billion.

Japan has the second largest total of direct investment in the United States with $83.5 billion.

The historical cost method, using the original purchase price, has come under attack for overstating America's indebtedness because many U.S. overseas holdings were bought long ago while the bulk of foreign assets in this country were purchased in more recent years.

Analysts, however, were unimpressed with the slight improvement in 1990, contending that it occurred primarily because a weak dollar made U.S. holdings in foreign currencies rise in value.

They said that the new figures did nothing to change the underlying shift of the United States from the world's largest creditor country as recently as 1983 to the world's biggest debtor nation.

The total net debtor figure is not in the classic sense a debt, since it includes not only bank loans — which do have to be repaid — but investments in corporate stock and real estate. However, it does represent the amount that would have to be produced if for some reason foreigners suddenly decided to liquidate all of their U.S. holdings.

The U.S. shift from creditor to debtor occurred as the country transferred billions of dollars into the hands of foreigners to pay for imported cars and television sets. Those dollars are now coming back to America in the form of investments in everything from Treasury securities to Iowa farmland.

Japan now stands as the world's largest creditor.

Labor Dept. outlines necessary job skills

WASHINGTON (NYT) — As part of the Bush administration's effort to promote education as a Republican initiative, Labor Secretary Lynn Martin on Tuesday made public a report outlining what American students must learn in school to compete in the workplace of the future.

The report, "What Work Requires of Schools: A SCANS Report for America 2000," defines the skills young people must have "to hold a decent job and earn a decent living."

In an interview Tuesday, Ms. Martin said, "More than half of young people leaving high school won't have the knowledge or foundation required" to achieve either goal. Some 70 percent of students do not go on to college, she added, but enter the workforce.

The report also says that only with a skilled labor force can the United States be economically competitive in the global marketplace.

"Employers and educators must come together in a marriage of necessity if our youngsters are to be prepared for meeting the challenges of securing rewarding and well-paid work," Ms. Martin said.

The report stresses resources, information, interpersonal abilities, social and organizational systems and technology.

"The fact is the world's technological explosion has caught many of our students by surprise."

The report, the result of a year's work by the 31-member Secretary's Commission on Achieving Necessary Skills, is similar to one issued by the National Assessment of Education Progress, a federally supported testing group, and carries no legal obligation to be acted on.

But the commission's document is based on interviews with employers, managers and workers, who described in detail the skills needed to perform their jobs.

Besides reading, writing and mathematics, the report outlines five areas of competency for students: resources, information, interpersonal abilities, social and organizational systems, and technology.

Resource competency, for example, involves knowing how to allocate time, money, materials and staff. Interpersonal abilities involves learning how to work on teams, teach others and negotiate.

The report encourages parents, businesses and schools to give as much importance to the learning of these skills as is currently given to the acquisition of basic reading, writing and mathematics.

But schools would not be required to change their curriculums.

Rather, Ms. Martin said, such decisions should be left to the local level. The commission did not recommend any new expenditures for the program.

William E. Brock, chairman of the commission and a former labor secretary, said the report outlines the "practical steps we need to take to achieve the National Education Goals," a reference to the goals for the year 2000 that President Bush and the nation's governors agreed on in 1989.

Discovery may purify blood supply

SAN FRANCISCO (NYT) — Researchers exploiting a discovery that Egyptian physicians first made nearly 5,000 years ago have developed a new way to kill viruses and bacteria that can infect human blood collected for transfusions.

Ultimately, they say, the nation's blood supply could be made even safer than it is now — and thoroughly protected even against HIV, the AIDS virus.

The doctors of ancient Egypt saw that people who ate a common weed growing on the banks of the Nile quickly developed severe sunburns marked by intensely darkened skin when they were exposed to bright sunlight.

Those physicians did not realize that they had discovered a class of natural chemicals that remain inert until the sun's ultraviolet radiation brings them into activity.

The Egyptians used the plants to treat patients for the disfiguring disorder called vitiligo, in which dark-skinned people develop blotchy pale patches because some skin cells lose their pigmentation.

Activated by sunlight, the plant compounds darkened the white patches.

The chemicals in the Egyptian weeds are called psoralens, and they are also found in a wide range of other plants, including buttercups, figs, limes and parsnips.

Modern researchers have developed a process known as photoactivation using ultraviolet lamps to turn the chemical activity of psoralen compounds into a weapon for treating a fatal form of skin cancer called cutaneous t-cell lymphoma, and psoriasis.

Now a team of scientists at the University of California in San Francisco and the California Department of Health Services has learned to turn on the activity of synthetic psoralens to decontaminate whole blood. Scientists believe this development can assure the safety of the nation's blood supply for transfusions.

Batteries of screening tests now used by every blood bank in the nation can detect with near-certainty the presence of seven disease-causing viruses, including HIV. But safe though the blood is, there is always a remote chance that a virus might escape detection, and the ability to purify all donated blood with certainty would be a major contribution to transfusion safety.

Dr. Laurence Corash, UCSF professor of laboratory medicine, and Dr. Carl V. Hanson, chief of the state's virus laboratory in Berkeley, led groups that have tested simple systems for killing both viruses and bacteria in blood plasma and platelets by using psoralens activated under ultraviolet light.

The federal Food and Drug Administration has just authorized the first human trials in which blood treated with a psoralen compound and then irradiated with ultraviolet light will actually be transfused into volunteer patients.

Ranch heritage worth honoring

Before there was a Midland, or an Odessa, or Big Spring, or Andrews, or any of a hundred other cities in this vast region known as West Texas, there was a homogeneity created by "the range" — the spreading grassland that made this area attractive to the cowboy.

It wasn't always that way. Until the mid-19th century the area known as the "Staked Plains" was officially considered the Great American Desert and commonly deemed unsuitable for human habitation. Fortunately that assessment changed, thanks primarily to the work of frontiersmen, who blazed trails across the Texas plains, and cattlemen who ventured out to the unsettled reaches.

The first settlers came to graze their cattle and sheep on the verdant grasses of this plain and to establish ranches where only the buffalo and antelope had grazed before. The Cowdens, Scharbauers, Holts, Powells, the Welches and Mabees, and others whose names have since been forgotten became the pioneers who fought the elements, burned their brands into taut hide and dug waterings to cool the burning heat of plains summers. In the process they left a ranching heritage as big as the West Texas sky and as pervasive as the ceaseless wind.

Today that heritage is recalled through the skills of modern-day cowboys and cowgirls who compete annually in the contests of the Midland Ranch Rodeo. The events are ones that test their courage as well as their skill — calf-roping, steer-roping and team roping, as well as ranch cutting, team penning and wild-cow milking. Those events were chosen because they do test actual work skills still in use on the range instead of mere spectator performances.

The timing of the Midland Ranch Rodeo is no matter of coincidence, either. The rodeo will be held on Thursday, Independence Day, which was a day of major celebrating in frontier times when cowboys took time from their duties with the herds to "let their hair down" and have fun.

City-slickers shouldn't feel left out, however. Our ranching heritage is also recalled daily through the clothes we wear, the way we talk, even through our music and dances. Polo ponies and pickups may be more common means of transportation today than the cowponies of yesteryear, but our past reverberates through our activities and institutions daily.

That past is reflected in the exhibits and materials contained in the Museum of the Southwest, Nita Stewart Haley Memorial Library and J. Evetts Haley History Center, and Permian Basin Petroleum Museum. Our past is never far away from us at any time.

And as the popularity of the Midland Ranch Rodeo testifies, our cowboy way of life continues today with fun and excitement for all who want to share in our heritage. Join in the recognition of our heritage this week.

Reinvestment Act is an essential tool

Bob Hope said a bank is a place that will lend you money if you prove that you don't need it.

Congressmen behind the effort to gut the Community Reinvestment Act while overhauling the banking system are saying the same thing.

Hope's line is a joke; the anti-Reinvestment Act campaign isn't one for low-income neighborhoods.

The act is the law that requires banks to make credit — mainly in the form of home and small-business loans — available to low-income neighborhoods. It helps to revitalize inner-city neighborhoods because it spurs banks to lend to the working poor who want to own their own homes. Home ownership gives people a stake in the future of their neighborhoods.

Changes in the act were proposed by Rep. Paul E. Kanjorski, D-Pa., as amendments to the bank-reform legislation under discussion by the House Banking Committee. Those amendments exempted smaller banks from the act and loosened requirements on larger banks. The avenues open to community groups to challenge banks based on their records of community reinvestment were narrowed.

These proposals attempt to reduce banks' accountability under the guise of increasing their competitiveness.

As bank-reform legislation makes its way through Congress, senators and representatives should protect the Community Reinvestment Act's role as a potent tool for maintaining the health of low-income neighborhoods.

Keeping the act won't kill a bank; removing it could kill a neighborhood.

Congress' revolving door still turns

WASHINGTON — Former Congressman Ronnie Flippo is enjoying the fortunes of failure.

Anderson

When the five-term Democrat from Alabama ran for governor last year and lost, he was out of a job. Now he is making more than he would have as either a member of Congress or a governor, and he's working for himself. Flippo started his own consulting business in Washington, selling his experience on Capitol Hill to interest groups and businesses that will pay top dollar for a former mover and shaker.

Flippo is one of a few members of Congress who quit or lost re-election bids last November but never left town. After they toiled for years in government service, the most important thing on their resumes is the message between the lines — that they know their way around the good-old-boy network.

Under a new "revolving door" ethics law, members of the House who leave office must wait a year before lobbying on Capitol Hill. But there is a big loophole in the law. It only applies to members who took office after Jan. 1 of this year. That means most of the current House and those who quit after the 1990 election are exempt.

Apparently, interest groups and businesses are willing to pay big money for someone who is fresh out of the seat of power. Flippo, for example, is earning more than $150,000 a year from clients including Aetna Life and Casualty, RJR Nabisco and Norfolk and Southern Corp.

According to lobbying records reviewed by our associates Scott Sleek and Jan Moller, Flippo's company, R.G. Flippo and Associates, helps clients with tax-related matters. It is no coincidence that Flippo focused on tax issues as a member of the House Ways and Means Committee.

Republican Arlan Stangeland lost his re-election bid in Minnesota last year. But Stangeland isn't standing in the unemployment lines today. He is a lobbyist working on an issue that was one of his pet projects during his last year in Congress. Stangeland the congressman got his fellow members of Congress to approve a federal turkey research lab in his district. Now Stangeland the lobbyist is trying to get federal funds to cover ongoing funding for the facility. His client is a local development authority.

Republican Tom Tauke tried to move up from the House to the Senate last year, but Iowa voters said no. Now Tauke has teamed up with another member of Congress who lost his seat last year, Democrat Doug Walgren of Pennsylvania. The two of them own Tauke, Walgren and Associates, specializing in medical research, recycling and telecommunications clients. They both have experience in those issues from their committee assignments in Congress.

Jim Courter, a Republican, resigned his New Jersey congressional seat last year and, until May, was a $3,000-a-month lobbyist for Grumman Corp., a major defense contractor. Courter wisely dropped Grumman as a client when he agreed to chair the Pentagon's base-closings commission, which will be another nice line on his resume. Courter used to sit on the House Armed Services Committee.

Democrat Marvin Leath, a former member of that committee when he represented Texas in Congress, now represents Martin Marietta, Textron and General Dynamics in Congress. Leath defended lobbying as a worthwhile profession, and told us that concerns about former lawmakers using their influence are overblown. "It's really not the good-old-boy network that it's made out to be," he said. If those defense contractors didn't hire Leath for the connections he made while in Congress, perhaps they hired him for his prior credentials. He was a salesman, a high school coach and a banker.

Lobbyists argue that it's more than just connections. Becoming a hot commodity on the Washington schmooze network is hard work.

Jack Anderson's and Dale Van Atta's column is distributed by United Feature Syndicate.

WILLIAM SAFIRE

Raid on Radio Free Europe was preordained

WASHINGTON — "If it ain't broke," Bert Lance used to say, "don't fix it." America's most effective broadcasting tools for promoting freedom and democracy abroad — Radio Free Europe and its adjunct, Radio Liberty — have never been more needed to set the pace of a free press in self-liberating nations. But a bureaucratic cabal wants to fix all that by placing the quasi-independent stations under the dead hand of the State Department and the U.S. Information Agency.

Safire

Why? One excuse is that the Cold War is over, and we can dismantle the least expensive and most puissant means of encouraging free speech abroad. Another is that we may save money by folding the hard-edged, local-news Radio Free Europe into the officially bland, international-news Voice of America.

The real reason for the coming "consolidation" is a warping of purpose caused by Gramm-Rudman. The bloating of State and USIA must come at the expense of an activity in the same budgetary pot; RFE is the designated victim.

The decision to cannibalize RFE was made on the seventh floor at State; now panels of distinguished citizens are assigned to legitimatize the raid.

The USIA's Advisory Board on Public Diplomacy, under the Heritage Foundation's ever-accommodating Ed Fuelner, dutifully rubber-stamped "consolidation." Now a presidential task force under the estimable John Hughes, the Pulitzer Prize-winning Christian Science Monitor columnist and former USIA and VOA chief, is holding hearings before coming to a directed verdict.

Its preordained conclusion is spelled out in what are euphemistically called "terms of reference," but which are strict instructions: "The Task Force will make recommendations ... under which all U.S. government broadcasting ... would be consolidated under a single U.S. government broadcasting entity" and to advise "when and how such consolidation should take place."

Not if RFE should be gobbled up; just when and how. I can see how Rozanne Ridgway, after a long career at State, would go along with this exercise in window dressing, but why such stalwarts as Ben Wattenberg, Peggy Noonan and Richard Allen lend their reputations to such a rigged verdict is beyond me.

The takeover of RFE by USIA, which in turn takes its cues from Foggy Bottom, is an affront to diversity, a misconception of roles and a surrender to complacency.

The USIA's Voice of America broadcasts our version of what's happening in the world and our idea of our own culture. Its editorials reflecting official policy are often vetted at State. Recently, when VOA dared use the word "independent" in connection with the Baltic states (which has been U.S. policy for 50 years), State's censors struck it out lest that incendiary word give the Balts ideas.

Radio Free Europe, on the other hand, acts as a surrogate free press within a nation whose people hunger for factual reporting about what is happening to them. It hits home, often distressing local powers that be.

For example, after "Bloody Sunday" in Lithuania, Boris Yeltsin flew to the Baltics to condemn the violence; Soviet radio suppressed his angry statement, but a Helsinki-based RFE correspondent — holding his phone to a local TV set — sent Yeltsin's protest to RFE in Munich, which broadcast it throughout the Soviet Union, forcing Gorbachev to disavow the crackdown in Vilnius.

VOA is the nice cop, speaking in our behalf, and RFE the tough cop, speaking on the local people's behalf; they work well together provided they are kept apart, like Treasury and Federal Reserve.

As freedom streaks ahead, embryonic local media will suffer setbacks and require the stimulus of professional example. A most unconsolidated American-supported broadcaster, once-removed from officialdom, is more necessary than ever — beaming into the cacophonous dawn as it once transmitted into the silent night.

Decision doesn't ban dancing in the shower

Long before Thurgood Marshall announced his retirement last week, the Supreme Court caused tremendous confusion when it announced its recent decision to ban nude dancing in public places.

Buchwald

I asked Dartmouth of the law firm Wash, Dry & Rub what it was all about.

He told me, "The Supreme Court is telling us that certain parts of the human body are no longer protected by the First Amendment."

"Does this mean that I can't dance nude in the shower anymore?"

"You are permitted to shimmy and shake as long as no one is watching. You just can't go out into the living room while your wife is playing bridge with her friends, and let the bath towel drop on the party. The justices were not too concerned with what kind of nude dancing takes place in your house, although their decision is a warning to the Avon Lady.

"They're trying to ban the goings-on in sleazy, run-down, germ-infested bars that charge money for people to look at women displaying what is disgusting to citizens who have never seen it before."

"I haven't been in any of those places," I admitted. "But now that I know it's against the law I wish I had, just to say that I had seen one. How does the court know the shows are erotic?"

"That's a good question. Since the Supremes don't discuss their cases, we have to assume that they drew straws to see who would attend a nude dance session and report back to the others. They may have let Sandra Day O'Connor off the hook because she is a woman."

I said, "Then the justices reported back to the others that nudity was unconstitutional?"

"Something like that. Actually, the court stated that each community could set its own standards about the correct costume to wear in a sleaze joint. If you had a job in one of the nude bars today you would have to wear a G-string and pasties."

"That's not too much," I told Dartmouth. "I always have nightmares that I am completely naked with everyone looking at me, and I would give anything to have the Supreme Court there for protection."

"In his opinion, Chief Justice Rehnquist wrote that he wasn't ruling on nude dancing but public nudity. He said that a state had a right to ban people with no clothes on if other citizens were offended. Of course he didn't address the problem of those who are offended by what other people are wearing these days. Many of the clothes you see are just as indecent as the nudity that's been banned."

"Do you think many people will suffer because of the court decision?"

"Millions, maybe more. Forget the dancers who will have to adjust to the pasties. What about the law-abiding citizens who save up all week to go to see authentic erotic nude dancing as it is practiced only in the U.S.A.? They will suffer the most because they are being culturally deprived. What are they going to do after the 5-to-4 decision?"

"Maybe they could take up golf?" I suggested.

"This is not the worst decision nor is it the best the Supreme Court has made, but it will be the end of erotic bar dancing as we know it. The court is going to have to live with that for the rest of their lives. The times call for an Oliver Wendell Holmes, who once said, 'I would not ban any form of nude dancing, frontal or rear, unless someone yelled "FIRE" in a crowded theater. And then I would allow it again as soon as they put the fire out.' "

Lebanon army claims rout of PLO guerrillas

BEIRUT, Lebanon (NYT) — The Lebanese government said Tuesday that its army had routed Palestinian guerrillas at their major strongholds in southern Lebanon after a fierce daylong battle.

The Defense Ministry said troops backed by tanks, artillery and rocket-launchers had seized the main bases and arms depots of Palestine Liberation Organization fighters in the area of Sidon and had forced thousands of guerrillas to retreat to two Palestinian refugee districts on the outskirts of the port city.

The army reported that two of its officers were killed, 12 other soldiers were wounded and 200 Palestinian guerrillas were captured. The PLO said 15 of its fighters were killed.

For the PLO, the Lebanese army offensive is the latest in a series of political and military setbacks and a strong signal that Lebanon no longer supports the organization's use of the south as a base for attacks on Israel.

Soviets approve sale, privatization of industry

MOSCOW (AP) — The Supreme Soviet legislature scrapped a basic Communist creed Monday and gave the government permission to sell most industry to private companies and individuals, including foreigners.

The step is considered critical to the salvation of the Soviet Union's anemic economy, run largely by bureaucrats who fail to respond to the shifts of supply and demand. The goal is to put control into the hands of individuals motivated by profit and ambition, a tenet of the capitalist system.

The Soviet government, which owns virtually all industry, is planning to transfer two-thirds to private hands in less than five years.

Small-scale private enterprise has long been practiced in the nation, reflecting a grudging acceptance that personal profit motivates people to work hard. Privately farmed plots in the countryside, for example, are vastly more productive than state-run farms.

Nonetheless, a need for large-scale privatization has been difficult for Soviet society to accept after decades of Communism, which holds that private ownership of production exploits working people.

Even reform-minded President Mikhail S. Gorbachev himself long resisted the step, preferring halfway measures such as leasing factories to employees.

Lawmaker Fyodor Burlatsky said the law would strengthen Gorbachev's hand when he meets with leaders of the Group of Seven industrialized nations in London in two weeks to discuss Western aid for Soviet reforms.

Privatization "is one of the main preconditions of Western countries," Burlatsky said.

Iraq fails to deliver on promised U.N. nuclear inspections

BAGHDAD, Iraq (AP) — Despite repeated promises, the Iraqi government denied a U.N. delegation access Tuesday to a secret convoy of equipment and material allegedly used for making nuclear bombs, U.N. officials said.

The officials had emphasized earlier that such a refusal could have "serious consequences." President Bush warned Monday that he might order a military strike against Iraq if it refused to comply.

Hans Blix, head of the International Atomic Energy Agency, said the Iraqis showed him only destroyed nuclear research equipment for civilian use, not what U.N. officials earlier said was specialized equipment used only for making weapons-grade enriched uranium.

Regarding a mysterious armed convoy of trucks that U.N. inspectors have been seeking for a week, the Swedish nuclear expert said, "We have not had a satisfactory explanation of what they were and where they went."

"The Iraqis have shown in this a way of behavior that definitely does not give confidence," Blix said after meeting with Iraq's foreign minister.

"This is sad, very sad."

In another part of the country Tuesday, Iraqi soldiers supervised by U.N. officials destroyed ballistic missiles of the sort that showered on Israel and Saudi Arabia during the Gulf War.

Rolf Ekeus, chairman of a special U.N. commission overseeing the elimination of Iraq's weapons of mass destruction, said his delegation, in Iraq for three days, would report in Geneva on Wednesday to U.N. Secretary General Javier Perez de Cuellar.

Blix and Ekeus reserved final judgment on the seriousness of Iraq's alleged violation of the Gulf War cease-fire agreement. Under the April 3 U.N. resolution, Iraq agreed to the inspection and destruction of its chemical, biological and nuclear weapons.

President Bush warned Monday that he might order a military strike against Iraq if it refused to comply.

"I can only say that in view of the complexity of the situation it merits very careful consideration when we make our report," said Ekeus.

Iraqi leaders had pledged their cooperation with the inspectors.

The government-run Iraqi News Agency said Tuesday that "Iraq has made categorical pledges from the highest levels to enable the international parties to inspect all the Iraqi agencies, equipment and sites."

But when it came to the elusive convoy, scene of an armed confrontation Friday between Iraqi soldiers and U.N. inspectors, the U.N. delegation encountered mostly stonewalling and repeated denials that Iraq had any nuclear-weapons program, U.N. officials said.

During a meeting Tuesday, Iraqi officials were mostly "talking in circles," said one delegation member who spoke on condition of anonymity.

At the same meeting, the U.N. delegation showed the Iraqis what it said was clear photographic evidence that at least some of the equipment in the convy was intended for making weapons-grade enriched uranium.

A U.N. inspection team on a surprise visit to an army base west of Baghdad took the photographs on Friday. When the team attempted to follow the convoy, Iraqi soldiers fired in the air and demanded a camera at gunpoint.

Complying with the other element of the cease-fire resolution, Iraqi soldiers bulldozed 12 ballistics missiles at the Al Taji launch base, 18 miles north of Baghdad. The chief supervisor, U.S. Army Col. Douglas Englund, said all 61 missiles Iraq says survived the war would be demolished by week's end.

He said 51 of the missiles targeted for destruction are Al-Hussein, longer-range versions of the notorious Soviet-designed Scuds that Iraq launched at Saudi Arabia and Israel during the war. One is a Scud. The remaining nine are Al Fahd surface-to-air missiles.

Iran Air flies Iraqi aircraft from Gulf War

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — Airliners that Iraq sent to Iran for safekeeping during the Gulf War, including some plundered from Kuwait, have been repainted and put into service by Iran Air, sources in Tehran said Monday.

Iran Air began using the planes last month to help fly 117,000 Iranians to and from the holy cities of Saudi Arabia for the annual Muslim pilgrimage, said the sources. They spoke from the Iranian capital on condition of anonymity.

An Iranian newspaper opposed to President Hashemi Rafsanjani reported Sunday that eight Iran Air airliners of Kuwaiti origin were used on flights to Jiddah, Saudi Arabia.

The report in the radical Muslim daily Jahane Islam, or the World of Islam, also said the Saudis had confiscated the planes on behalf of Kuwait, but that claim was dismissed by the sources in Tehran.

Iraq has said it sent 33 civilian and 115 military aircraft to Iran for safekeeping from allied air raids during the Gulf War. Iran maintains it received only 22.

The U.S. military said 137 Iraqi civilian and military aircraft were flown to Iran.

Iran said at the time that it would return the Iraqi planes at war's end. But more recently, Tehran has said it wants Iraq to pay war reparations from the 1980-88 Iran-Iraq conflict. There has been speculation that if Baghdad did not pay, Iran would keep the aircraft, which are worth an estimated $3 billion.

OC trustees OK increase in tuition rate

■ Board approves rate increase of $13.50; recommends dropping rates to $12 pending state mandates.

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff Writer

ODESSA — Odessa College students will pay a higher tuition this fall, but their peers in community colleges across the state may face the same hikes.

The OC Board of Trustees unanimously decided Tuesday evening to increase tuition from $9.50 per semester hour to $13.50 per hour. The increase included a recommendation that the $13.50 rate drop back to $12 in the fall semester, pending state mandates.

OC trustees met in the Tuesday emergency session to vote on the increase in order to put it into effect before the college's July 22 registration.

Although the board's finance committee had initially decided to recommend a $12 per semester hour tuition rate, a recent bill proposed by state comptroller John Sharp convinced trustees to go higher.

"Sharp's recommendation is to go up to $20 in the next three years — $13.50, then $17.50 and $20," said Philip Speegle, OC president.

"It's a hard recommendation to make," Speegle said. "But we need to be as close as possible to the state's (projected) figures."

"We are in the same situation," said H.A. Tuck, Midland College spokesperson. "Our tuition rate is about $10 per hour, but that is an estimate since student fees are usually added in," he said.

Both Midland and Odessa colleges face the dilemma of starting the fall semester with more students and less money.

Speegle said OC enrollment increased about 9 percent last year.

U.S. Supreme Court rules in favor of local lawyer

■ Justices agree with attorney Tom Morgan that his client was unfairly sentenced.

By David Morris
Staff Writer

The U.S. Supreme Court has ruled in favor of a Midland attorney who claimed that one of his clients was unfairly sentenced, 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals officials in New Orleans confirmed Tuesday.

Midland attorney Tom Morgan appealed the sentence of convicted drug offender Oscar Prince Garcia of Big Spring to the high court in April. The appeal followed a ruling by the 5th Circuit Court that the sentence, handed down in Midland's federal court, was lawful.

The Supreme Court vacated that decision and remanded the case to the 5th Circuit Court last Friday, court officials said.

"I'm thrilled," Morgan said. "Very few attorneys have this opportunity. I'm looking forward to telling Oscar the good news."

Morgan said the appeals court likely will order Midland U.S. District Judge Lucius D. Bunton III to re-sentence Garcia in light of the Supreme Court's decision.

Garcia pleaded guilty on July 10, 1990, to using a telephone to facilitate a cocaine transaction.

Applying 1987 federal sentencing guidelines, Bunton sentenced Garcia to 27 months in prison, one year of supervised release and a $500 fine.

Morgan said the Supreme Court's decision will mean that Garcia will only have to face 10 to 16 months in prison.

He had argued that the original 27-month sentence, although allowable under the guidelines, was unfair because it was for an offense greater than the one to which his client pleaded guilty.

Law enforcement officers arrested Garcia, 28, in April 1990 after he arranged to sell 126 grams of cocaine to undercover agents, court records show.

Assistant U.S. Attorney William W. Torrey said a plea agreement was reached in the case. In return for Garcia's guilty plea to a charge of using a telephone to set up the sale, the government agreed to drop more-serious cocaine distribution charges, Torrey said.

However, court records show that Bunton sentenced Garcia according to guidelines established for cocaine distribution, not illegal telephone usage.

Morgan said his client should have been sentenced for the telephone charge, not for offenses to which he hadn't pleaded guilty.

He appealed Bunton's decision to the 5th Circuit Court, but that court upheld the sentence in a ruling dated March 18.

The 5th Circuit Court judges concurred with Bunton that sentencing guidelines allow for greater sentences when defendants "stipulate to a more serious offense" — even though they may not plead guilty to that offense.

Quadraplegic proficient ham radio operator

AP Laserphoto

Terry Cox, a childhood victim of polio, has achieved the second highest radio rating despite not being able to use his hands. The Anson man uses his ham radio with a mouth-operated device to talk to people all across Texas. When he is not talking on the radio, Cox works as a substitute teacher.

ANSON (AP) — When Terry Cox was 8 years old, polio ravaged his body leaving him in a wheelchair and using an iron lung.

Then in 1964, another bug bit Cox — ham radios. Since then, he has become so proficient that he has reached the second-highest level ham radio operators can attain.

Cox has spent countless hours on his ham radio since getting his license in 1965 and managed to stay on the air while attending Abilene Christian University, where he graduated in 1975.

Although he is unable to use his hands to operate his equipment, he has a device that can be operated by mouth.

When Cox first got his license, his main pleasure was to just sit at the radio and "ragchew." Since then he has enjoyed "traffic handling," or sending messages back and forth. However, unlike some operators, he has never felt the urge to communicate with people across the world.

"I've never gone in for talking real far off," he said. Part of the reason is that Cox does not have an antenna to reach vast distances.

So he has developed a group of friends from all over Texas, ranging from Lubbock to Houston to East Texas.

"On a regular basis I talk to maybe a dozen people," Cox said. "Over the years, I've talked to thousands of people. We used to be required to keep a log book and I was up to 40,000 contacts when I quit."

Over the years, Cox has cut down on the time he spends talking on his radio. During the summer he spends his mornings talking on the radio. The time for his hobby during the winter depends on the amount of time he is employed as a substitute teacher.

"If I'm around I usually have my radio on," he said. "I teach maybe one day a week, or five days. For that reason, it has cut into my regular time."

The radio is not the only way for Cox to communicate. He has a computer that can send and receive messages. He types his messages on the screen by holding two drumstick-like instruments in his mouth.

Cox is not that fond of the computer way of talking, nor is he much of a fan of Morse code.

"I never have liked Morse," he said. "It's a whole lot of work; I'd rather just say hello. I have friends who do it every day and can peck out 50-60 words a minute. But it's just not my cup of tea."

Ham radio operators are grouped in five classifications; Cox is in the advanced class. To be in the highest class, an operator must be able to do at least 20 words a minute in Morse code.

With each license, a person gains more frequency and can also change call letters. But for 26 years, Cox has stuck with his call letters of WA5INJ.

Although Cox has developed a love for ham radios, no one else in his family has gotten the bug.

"This hobby is real strange," he said. "You can't get people interested, because you either like it or you don't. What's strange is that for ham radio being a communication thing, it's one of the most cliquish groups."

But Cox is so hooked, that his ham radio just could be the most important thing in his life.

"I've spent many, many hours on the radio," he said. "Since I've got my wheelchair, it's hard to tell what I'd give up first. The chair gives me mobility, but in the long run I think I'd go with my radio."

Man sentenced in LSD case

By David Morris
Staff Writer

U.S. District Judge Lucius D. Bunton III sentenced Christopher Davidson, who pleaded guilty in May to concealing an LSD smuggling scheme from authorities, to two years in prison Tuesday.

Investigators said Davidson, 19, was involved with three other men in an attempt to smuggle "acid" into Midland from Albuquerque, N.M., last September.

The other men, 20-year-old Robert Shane Jenkins, 21-year-old Kyle Lee Harris and 19-year-old Kirk Thomas Morrow, already have been sent to prison in connection with the scheme.

Bunton sentenced Jenkins on June 13 to four years in prison for using a telephone to facilitate a drug transaction.

Harris, meanwhile, was sentenced to five years in prison March 13 for possession of LSD with intent to distribute. Morrow received a four-year sentence on May 10 for using a telephone to facilitate a drug transaction.

Midland police officers arrested Harris on Sept. 22, 1990, at Midland International Airport as he attempted to smuggle 389 hits of LSD that he'd purchased in Albuquerque.

Investigators said Davidson knew about the smuggling operation but did not tell authorities about it.

The men's arrest was the result of an ongoing state and federal investigation of LSD trafficking in Midland.

The first person nabbed in the probe was Clayton Wade Williams, son of former Republican gubernatorial candidate Clayton Williams Jr. He pleaded guilty to LSD possession last December; Bunton sentenced him Feb. 25 to 12 months in federal custody, six of which was to be spent in a boot camp style prison in Pennsylvania. Williams has appealed the sentence.

The probe also has led to several convictions in Midland's state district courts, the Midland County District Attorney's Office reported.

Other people sentenced in Midland's U.S. District Court on Tuesday:

■ Theodore Solis Gonzalez, 44, to 21 months for possession of marijuana with intent to distribute.

■ Eloy Granado Ortiz, 37, to one year for possession of marijuana with intent to distribute.

■ Celedonio Mendoza-Solis, 34, to four years for using a telephone to facilitate a drug transaction.

■ Marcos Fierro, age unavailable, to one year for distribution of heroin.

■ Magdaleno Porras, 27, to 10 months for distribution of heroin.

OC: Trustees approve tuition increase to $13.50

(From 1B)

MC's enrollment increased 3.31 percent and MC typically experiences a 3-4 percent enrollment increase each year, according to figures from the Higher Education Coordinating Board.

But despite increasing enrollments, state funds are expected to be cut.

The state expects to take in $52.3 billion for 1992-93, but legislative analysts have projected a $4.6 billion deficit over the next two years if all state services are funded at their current levels.

A recent report from the Texas Public Community Junior College Association (TPCJCA) said that post-secondary education at public community or junior colleges "is a bargain in Texas."

The report noted that Texas charged the 46th lowest tuition and fees out of 48 reporting states in the fiscal year 1990.

Texas community colleges are setting preliminary budgets without any information from the state on how they will be funded, according to Tuck.

Speegle agreed. "You have to put out a budget whether you know anything from the state or not. It's very much a waiting game," he said.

Are tuition increases in store for Midland College?

"Midland College has the same problem as Odessa College," Tuck said. "We will have to look at tuition rates, too. How can you set a tuition rate and then go back two to six weeks later and say: 'Sorry folks, the legislation says it has got to be more.' What if we charge $10 and the legislation says tuition has to be $20?"

Texas currently has a mandated minimum tuition rate of $4 per credit hour, which is charged by only two colleges in the state. The average Texas college semester hour tuition is $11.56, according to information from the TPCJCA.

Speegle said OC trustees decided "it's easier to refund money than to tell students: You owe us money."

About 1,100 returning OC students have already registered for the fall semester at the $9.50 semester hour rate. "We warned them that this might happen on their statements," Speegle said. "But still, it's not pleasant to ask them for more money."

Speegle said that Sharp's bill indicated that the tuition increases would be deducted from the respective colleges' state appropriations.

"I am hoping that the state will increase our appropriations and this will be one of the ways of funding the increase. Changing sources for funds may help them with their deficit," he said.

The OC president said that he was disappointed that a recent Ector County property evaluation did not go up. He also said that Sharp's bill recommended cutting $1.6 billion by reorganizing such items as cutting off health insurance for school custodians and funding for optional retirement for college faculty.

"These are deficits that we will pick up," Speegle said, "and we would rather dip into our reserves than raise taxes."

Tuck said that MC may also be forced to dip into reserves.

MC was the only taxing entity in Midland which did not raise taxes last year.

"We also held the line on raising taxes," Speegle said. "But I think everybody in the state agrees that higher taxes will be part of funding education. It's only a question of how much."

Speegle said Sharp's bill will be considered in the special session which begins July 15. "The proposal (if it passes) is expected to take effect this fall," he said.

Two Midlanders plead guilty to crack charges

Staff Report

Two Midland men pleaded guilty Tuesday in U.S. District Court in connection with their May arrest on crack cocaine charges.

Terrence Steward, 22, and Walter Lee Jones, 25, were arrested May 2 following a Drug Enforcement Administration and Midland Police Department investigation.

They entered their pleas before U.S. District Judge Lucius D. Bunton III.

Jones pleaded guilty to conspiring with Steward to possess a little more than three grams of crack with intent to distribute. He faces a minimum of five years and a maximum of 20 years in prison and up to a $1 million fine.

Investigators said Jones sold a "rock" of crack to an undercover DEA agent on May 2.

A convicted burglar on probation in Midland County, Jones is reportedly a Lee High School graduate who played football at Texas Tech University in Lubbock and Texas A&I University in Kingsville.

Investigators said he sold the crack from his business, a car wash on South Lee Street called J&J Details.

Agents and police officers returned to the business after the sale and found Steward there with a medicine bottle containing more crack, investigators said.

Steward pleaded guilty to using a telephone to facilitate a drug transaction, an offense which carries a maximum sentence of four years in prison.

In return for Steward's guilty plea to the telephone charge, federal prosecutors agreed to drop the more serious crack possession charges against him.

Steward and Jones are scheduled to be sentenced in August.

Also pleading guilty Tuesday were Odessans John W. George and Belinda Dutchover.

George, 34, admitted that he lied about his criminal record on an application to purchase a handgun in Odessa in August, 1990.

He did not disclose on the application that he had been convicted of sexual assault in 70th District Court in Odessa in 1974, investigators said.

Ms. Dutchover, age unavailable, pleaded guilty to three counts of falsifying immigration documents. A U.S. Border Patrol undercover investigation revealed that Ms. Dutchover was providing false immigration papers to illegal aliens, Assistant U.S. Attorney Jan Hartung said.

George and Ms. Dutchover are scheduled to be sentenced Aug. 6.

Local/Area Reports

Drug possession

Staff Reports

An 18-year-old man remained in jail Tuesday after being arrested for possession of a small amount of crack cocaine early that morning, police said.

Bond for Napolean Johnson, 111 S. Madison St., was set at $15,000 by Justice of the Peace Keith Jobe.

Johnson was arrested shortly after midnight when officers responded to a call of someone selling drugs in the 200 block of Lee Street.

The exact amount of cocaine confiscated was not available, police said.

Parole violation

A Midland man was arrested on a charge of parole violation after a suspicious vehicle was stopped by police on Tuesday, officers said.

Pete Dominguez Acosta Jr., 31, was held without bond awaiting appearance before the parole board, jail officials said.

He was arrested in the 4800 block of Big Spring Street about 12:47 p.m. Tuesday, police said.

Patent rights may be lost

POST (AP) — A skirmish between two state agencies could cost a Post textile company millions of dollars and allow foreign competition to steal the ideas behind the company's unique cotton-based insulation.

Paul Muncrief's Cotton Unlimited was awarded $2 million in low-interest loans to help market the company's cotton-based insulation and oil-absorbing cotton pads. The loan came from a $25 million agricultural loan guarantee program.

But the Texas Agriculture Finance Authority Board and Agriculture Commissioner Rick Perry have been at odds over who has the power to approve the loans.

Mary Webb, chairwoman of the finance authority, says the board should decide which companies receive the loans, while Perry contends the decision is his alone.

Webb has sought an opinion on the legality of such a move from the state attorney general's office.

The legal tug-of-war has delayed the sale of state agricultural bonds needed to finance Cotton Unlimited's $2 million loan.

Muncrief said Monday the company needs the money by July 11 to file for international patent rights.

Without the international patent, Cotton Unlimited products are open for copying by foreign companies, Muncrief said.

"You've got Canada on one side and Mexico on the other," he said. "Once we begin marketing in the United States, it wouldn't take long for foreign companies to begin making our own product and shipping it in. We could lose millions of dollars."

Muncrief said he was upset that politics have muddied a worthy program.

"There shouldn't be any partisan participation anywhere in the program," Muncrief said. "The only one to suffer is the state of Texas."

Ms. Webb is one of four board members named to the finance authority earlier this year by Gov. Ann Richards, a Democrat.

One month after Perry, a Republican, was elected, the board, appointed by former Gov. Bill Clements who is also a Republican, approved rules giving the agriculture commissioner sole authority to review and approve the loans.

That action has been sharply criticized by Ms. Webb.

"This action was a direct attack on a new finance authority board and in my own personal opinion highly unethical — if not illegal," Ms. Webb said in a letter to Perry in June.

MC summer registration scheduled

Staff Report

Official enrollment day for Midland College's second summer term is next Wednesday, July 11, in the Student Center. Summer II classes begin July 12 and end Aug. 15.

Persons who received time permits have been assigned specific periods to report for registration. Those who did not pre-register should go to the Student Center between 5:30-6:30 p.m. Wednesday to register, pay fees, and purchase books.

"There was a record enrollment for this year's Summer I session and we expect a large enrollment for Summer II," said Dr. Don Cates, associate dean of students and registrar. "Although there will be a limited late registration period, we encourage everyone to register and begin classes on time, especially during the summer terms when classes are meeting daily and covering large amounts of material."

Late registration, which requires an additional fee, begins Thursday and continues through Wednesday, July 17. Midland College summer classes meet Monday through Thursday.

Although there will be no pre-registration conducted Monday or Tuesday, prospective students may visit the Student Services area in the Student Center to check on courses being offered during Summer II.

Various sections of classes in the following areas are being offered during Summer II: Accounting, Art, Biology, Business Administration, Chemistry, Computer Information System, Economics, English, Geology, Government, History, Legal Assistance, Mathematics, Music, Physical Education, Physics, Psychology, Reading, Real Estate, Sociology, Spanish, and Speech Communication.

P&S: Hospital expands surgical services

(From 1B)

ized X-ray (fluoroscopy) unit "that greatly enhances the ability of the surgeon" to visualize the kidney, bladder and ureters.

Disorders affecting the kidneys, bladder, and prostates are being treated in the new facility.

The medical expansion is evidence of the commitment of P&S Hospital and Midland's Memorial Hospital and Medical Center to health care in West Texas, Reid added.

"Both hospitals have been building resources to begin to make Midland more relevant to the immediate surrounding communities," he said.

"When you get out into the rural communities," he said, "you don't find, very often, urology operating rooms especially equipped and able to provide these kinds of services. And you don't typically find these kinds of facilities outside of population centers like Midland or Odessa."

In their expansion, Midland's two hospitals not only serve this community but can now "bring more people into Midland for medical care, which helps diversify our economy and gives us a much more adequate medical infrastructure," Reid said.

Cooperation between the two hospitals is "real important," he said.

"If we are ever going to realize our relative position in the regional medical market," Reid said, "it will have to be done in a cooperative fashion" by the Midland medical resources.

And it has been P&S Hospital's philosophy "that we would like to see more of the regional medical demand come to Midland," he said. "Along with Midland Memorial (Hospital)," Reid said, P&S Hospital has been "building resources."

Eventually, he suggested, that cooperation within the Midland medical community will spread into neighboring Odessa.

A Midland-Odessa cooperative spirit, Reid said, would be "not unlike what MOHRE (Midland-Odessa Health & Retirement Endeavor) has done for the retirement community."

Procedures to be performed in P&S Hospital's Urology Operating Room include prostate removal, bladder suspensions for urinary incontinence, and kidney-stone removal.

"That's a big problem," Reid said of prostate ailments. "It's amazing how many males age 40 and above have prostate problems."

Four urologists practice medicine in Midland.

"We have some very excellent urologists" who are "very capable and have very high levels of skills," Reid said. "What we (at P&S) want to do is ensure that this hospital affords them the best available equipment in order to do the good work they are capable of doing."

Republicans say Legislature can avoid tax increase

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas Republicans said Tuesday that lawmakers now are armed with enough money-saving ideas to head off any tax increase when the Legislature convenes to write a budget July 15.

If taxes are raised, they said, voters should sweep the Capitol clean.

"If it doesn't (avoid a tax hike), I think the people of Texas need to really scream," said Rep. Tom Craddick of Midland, who heads the House Republican Caucus.

"If they have to pay a tax increase in this session of the Legislature — after all the budget cuts and proposals that have been laid out — we need a total wipeout of everybody in Austin and need to start over. I guarantee you that," Craddick said.

Craddick and state GOP Chairman Fred Meyer praised Comptroller John Sharp's recent audit, which proposed $4 billion in savings and $1.2 billion in new revenue, mostly federal funds. Sharp called for mergers

'If it doesn't (avoid a tax hike), I think the people of Texas need to really scream. of agencies, about 1,000 layoffs and higher fees for some services.

Republican lawmakers also suggested a list of cuts that they estimated would save $4.9 billion.

With such proposals pending, Craddick said, "I don't think there's anyone in the state of Texas that would not agree with us today that anyone ... ought to be able to write a budget with no new taxes."

Meyer called on Democratic Gov. Ann Richards to pledge to veto any income tax bill. The governor said last week that she didn't believe an income tax was necessary or that one would be approved.

Her press secretary, Bill Cryer, Tuesday said it was good to see the GOP officials backing Sharp's money-saving ideas, but criticized Republican appointees to state agency boards for requesting spending increases earlier in the year.

"I wonder where these same Republicans were in January, when their own appointees to state agencies asked for budget increases that would have amounted to a $13 billion deficit," Cryer said.

"They had the power and the responsibility to hold the line on spending and they failed to do so. We are now going to do what they should have done four years ago: scrub the budget, streamline state government and roll up our sleeves to make sure a personal income tax is not necessary," Cryer said.

The state expects to take in $52.3 billion for 1992-93, but legislative analysts have projected a $4.6 billion deficit over the next two years if all state services were funded at their current levels.

Meyer said the state will take in about $5 billion more than in 1990-91, and that combined with the cut proposals erase any notion of a deficit.

"For the past six months, we have heard about this Democrat deficit almost every day. In a massive con job, the Democrats tried to convince the people of Texas that this deficit was alive and well, that we were simply short of money to operate state government," Meyer said.

In other budget developments:

■ The comptroller's office is putting its 1,200-page audit and 975 recommended changes into bill form for consideration by lawmakers.

■ A group called Texans for Responsible Government said lawmakers should focus solely on trimming state spending to fit within available state revenues.

STATE IN BRIEF

■ City seeks Bergstrom

AUSTIN — City officials have begun working to gain outright ownership of Bergstrom Air Force Base, which a presidential commission has recommended for closure.

Austin Mayor Bruce Todd met with U.S. Rep. J.J. "Jake" Pickle, D-Texas, on Monday to discuss ways of speeding the government's transfer of the base to the city when it closes.

The city contends it can establish ownership if challenged legally because it purchased the land for the base in 1942 for $600,000.

Todd said the city would apply immediately for up to $100,000 available from the Defense Department's Office of Economic Adjustment to study converting Bergstrom to other uses.

He also said there is $150 million in federal Job Training Partnership Act funds available to help retrain civilians nationwide who lose jobs at military bases.

One possible use for the soon-to-be-abandoned airbase is as a new city airport.

■ Sharp addresses cuts

SAN ANTONIO — Texas Comptroller John Sharp told government and business leaders here his state budget cut recommendations will not spell the end of biotechnology in San Antonio.

"I can tell you unequivocally there are no staff reductions, no reductions in indigent health care and no mandated reductions to the IBT (UT Institute of Biotechnology) or other research centers in San Antonio," Sharp said Monday.

He was responding to statements last week by Dr. John P. Howe III, president of the University of Texas Health Science Center at San Antonio. Howe claimed the biotechnology institutions would be phased out by 1994 and budget cuts would reduce the number of physicians who could provide free health care for the poor.

"The indigent will be helped, not hurt," Sharp said in a brief news conference before meeting with community leaders to tout his plan to restructure state government.

Budget cuts in the plan total about $4 billion.

■ Bat building torn down

RUSK — The bat building is coming down.

Work continues to demolish what's left of the three-story building on the town square, which houses a dwindling colony of Mexican free-tail bats. Thousands of bats were reported in the crumbling structure last month.

Rusk city officials have been concerned about the recent unsteadiness of the building, which fronts on U.S. 84, and reports of so many of the flying creatures.

Workers spent Sunday afternoon pulling off plywood that covered some windows, to let in more light and make it less of a bat habitat, according to City Manager Bill Collum.

The building, which once was a hotel, was deeded to the city by its owner, who said she did not have the money to repair or demolish the building, Collum said.

■ Motorists get the boot

DALLAS — Motorists with delinquent parking tickets are getting the boot in Dallas.

City Transportation Department officials this week began placing a lock on the wheel of cars whose owners have three or more overdue parking tickets.

Officials hope that by hobbling cars, they can claim most of the $6 million in overdue parking fines owed by the owners of 28,000 cars.

The $350 device, called the "Denver boot," locks onto a car's wheel, rendering the vehicle undrivable. The device is named for the city where it was invented in the 1950s.

City officials say the boot is cheaper and safer than towing, and they hope its visibility on streets will persuade people with overdue tickets to come forward voluntarily to pay what they owe.

Stickers on the car windows direct drivers to the Parking Violations Office at Dallas City Hall.

■ Lawyer named to TABC

AUSTIN — Gov. Ann Richards appointed Fort Worth lawyer Renee Higginbotham-Brooks to the Texas Alcoholic Beverage Commission to fill the unexpired term of James Huffines of Austin, who was not confirmed by the Senate.

Ms. Higginbotham-Brooks, 39, is now in private practice but worked for eight years as a civil rights attorney with the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services.

She is a Phi Beta Kappa graduate of Howard University and received her law degree from Georgetown University.

Her term will expire Nov. 15, 1995.

Kidnap, murder suspect still being hunted

WINTERS (AP) — Runnels County authorities scaled back a search today for a murder suspect and a woman who has not been reported seen since her common-law husband was slain in her home Sunday night.

Local authorities cut a search crew of about 50 officers in half, using horseback and an airplane to continue tracking Gilberto Jimenez, 20, of Winters, said Runnels County Sheriff Bill Baird.

Jimenez was charged Monday with capital murder in the death of Jerry Munoz, 29, of San Angelo and with aggravated kidnapping in the disappearance of Mary Santoya, 27, of Winters.

"It's disappointing that we have searched this long and hard and have come up completely empty-handed," Baird said Tuesday afternoon, more than 36 hours into the search.

"As more and more time goes by there is a feeling that something bad has happened. You start to look at the possibility that he may have killed her, then killed himself.

"It seems like at this point we would have some kind of sighting, some kind of lead. Everyone in this area is on the lookout."

Jimenez remained at large despite a manhunt Monday that included roadblocks, helicopters and scent-tracking dogs in the rugged terrain around Winters, population 2,718, about 40 miles southwest of Abilene.

Bond for Jimenez was set at $500,000 on the capital murder charge and $100,000 on the aggravated kidnapping charge, said Justice of the Peace Joyce Weems of Winters.

Munoz was found stabbed to death at the home of Ms. Santoya, who was described as Munoz' common-law wife and Jimenez' former girlfriend. Police said they believe Munoz was stabbed when he tried to prevent Ms. Santoya's abduction about 7:30 p.m. Sunday.

Munoz died Sunday night in the North Runnels County Hospital in Winters.

Jimenez and Ms. Santoya "had a relationship at one time," said Runnels County District Attorney Steve Smith. "We do not know the extent of it."

Roadblocks were set up Monday at every major intersection in the area, Smith said.

Late Monday afternoon, the search was halted for the day. Officials said they thought it likely that Jimenez remained in Winters.

Smith said officials believed Jimenez kidnapped Ms. Santoya on foot.

Smith said Jimenez had no previous criminal record.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Hard work and persistent idealism will accomplish much more than get-rich-quick schemes advanced by strangers. An older person proves to be an important new ally. Be willing to take advice.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Consistency is the key to success, especially if starting or expanding a business. You and your loved ones understand each other better following a candid conversation. Take charge of your life again.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Your mate or partner is very supportive now. A short business trip will yield fine profits. Do not get upset by something an uninhibited person says. Chalk it up to cattiness.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): A well-connected person requires sound information. Do your own research as subordinates could make small but costly mistakes. Romance could take a nose dive if you are neglectful.

TODAY'S CHILDREN are encouraged by kind words. Criticism can cause these sensitive Cancerians to crawl into their shell. Wise parents will phrase their suggestions in a way that will build these youngsters' confidence. Home-loving and affectionate, they thrive on family life. They feel unthreatened by change and like to try new things. Their love for the secret and the mysterious is reflected in the books they read. Science and philosophy are apt to be their favorite subjects in school.

For duplicate players, overtricks are the pot of gold at the end of the rainbow. Making one overtrick more than the rest of the field, even if it's only a mere 20 points, can earn an absolute top on a given board. So some declarers will go to great lengths to secure an overtrick, and that can lead to some peculiar results.

This hand was dealt in a duplicate pair competition, and at every table North-South reached three no trump, mostly via the auction shown. North checked for a possible 4-4 heart fit, then jumped to the no-trump game when none was found.

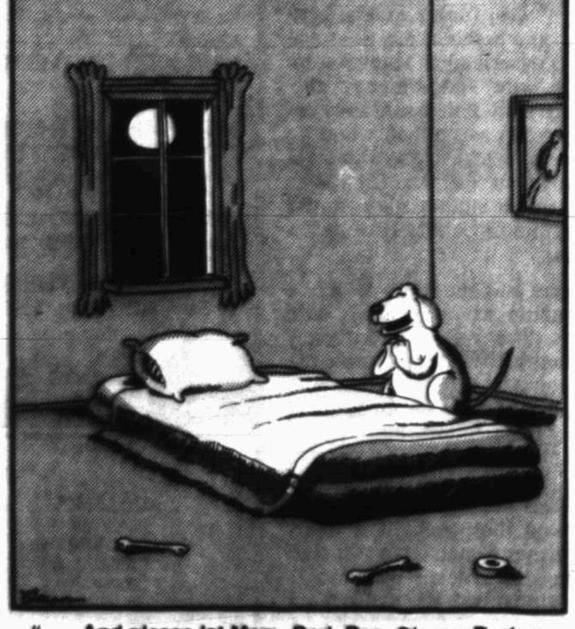

At one table West chose the deceptive lead of the two of clubs, with dramatic results. Declarer captured West's jack of clubs with the queen and decided, based on the opening lead, that the club suit was likely to be distributed 4-4. Since that would have meant that the defenders could take no more than three club tricks, declarer decided the time had come to search for overtricks via finesses in the red suits.

All would have been well had declarer opted to play East for the queen of diamonds and West for the queen of hearts — indeed, under those circumstances declarer would have made all the tricks for a fantastic result. Unfortunately, declarer tackled the hand by cashing the king of diamonds and then running the ten, losing to East's queen. On the club return, a delighted West cashed five winners for a two-trick set.

This could never have happened at rubber bridge. Declarer would have paid no heed to the spotcard led by West and would simply have cashed out nine tricks after winning the club lead. And if either red queen had dropped in the process, some safe overtricks would have been a just bonus.

Donahue, Geraldo to appear together on TV AIDS show

Phil Donahue and Geraldo Rivera often appear on television at the same time, albeit on different stations. But today they will appear together on a "Geraldo" show dealing with AIDS.

Donahue will be a guest, along with Larry Kramer, playwright and founder of Act-Up; Jeanne White, mother of Ryan White, a teen-ager who died of AIDS; and David Lemos, executive director of the Names Project, which sponsors the AIDS memorial quilt.

Donahue broadcast his first show about AIDS on Nov. 17, 1982, about a year after news articles about the disease began appearing. Rivera reported on it in 1983 while he was with "20/20."

"Since Donahue did the first talk show on AIDS, it seemed appropriate to invite him," said a "Geraldo" spokesman.

Donahue said he accepted because the epidemic has become more personal, and he wants to speak out emphatically.

"We've got an establishment that hasn't taken it as seriously as they would if it were striking white male heterosexuals in Connecticut," he said.

NEW YORK — Sports commentator Howard Cosell underwent further chest surgery as part of his treatment for cancer, a statement from his family confirmed Tuesday.

Cosell

Cosell, 73, who gained fame and notoriety on ABC's Monday Night Football and as a boxing announcer for many Muhammad Ali fights, had a malignant tumor removed from his chest on June 10. He returned to the air for ABC Radio a week later.

The statement from Cosell's family on Monday's surgery said, "The surgery was successful and his prognosis is excellent."

No further details were given.

Last month's surgery was at Mount Sinai Hospital, where he was registered under another name. Cosell was not registered there under his own name Tuesday.

LAS VEGAS — The McGuire Sisters, who made music history in the 1950s and 1960s, then resumed their careers in the 1980s, return to the Las Vegas stage Thursday.

The sisters — Phyllis, Dorothy and Christine — last appeared here in 1985, with George Burns at Caesars Palace. Since then, they have continued to perform at venues from New York to San Francisco.

The McGuires are just one more name from the past returning to marquees along the Las Vegas Strip.

"We think there's a very strong market here for a wide range of talent," said Phyllis McGuire, who has lived in Las Vegas since 1964.

The McGuires burst upon the American music scene in 1962 and earned a string of gold records for hits such as "Sincerely," "Just for Old Time's Sake," "Something's Gotta Give," "He," "Picnic" and "Sugartime."

The sisters will perform at The Desert Inn resort through Sunday.

THE HAGUE, Netherlands — The husband of Queen Beatrix has been hospitalized for depression, the government announced Tuesday.

The German-born Prince Claus has a history of depression-linked disorders, which were acknowledged publicly in 1982.

The Government Information Service said the 64-year-old prince was admitted to the psychiatric department of Bronovo Hospital on Monday. He was described as suffering from a "recurrence of complaints of a depressive nature."

The prince, a former West German diplomat, is highly regarded in the Netherlands for his unassuming manner and sense of humor.

It has been widely reported in the Dutch press that the prince, an expert on Third World development problems, has long bridled at the official constraints imposed on him as the consort of a constitutional monarch.

NEW YORK — Mark Gastineau's decision not to play football with the New York Jets in 1988 proved costly in his divorce dispute with his ex-wife, Lisa.

Gastineau

A judge ruled Gastineau "wasted" a marital asset when he abruptly left the team, and therefore owes his ex-wife a chunk of those never-seen earnings.

What that amounts to is one-third of the forfeited salary — or more than $100,000, Mrs. Gastineau's attorney, Larry Schatz, said Tuesday.

"Lisa is a bit disappointed with the settlement, but we got all we could," Schatz said.

Acting Supreme Court Justice H. Patrick Leis III issued the decision June 21, capping a four-year divorce battle.

Gastineau quit football six games into the 1988 season so he could spend more time with his then-fiancee, actress Brigitte Nielsen. At the time, he was earning $825,000 a year, or $46,000 a game.

Lewis' hearing postponed because of special session

AUSTIN (AP) — A state judge again postponed a hearing in House Speaker Gib Lewis' criminal ethics case Tuesday, rescheduling it for Sept. 24 because the Legislature will meet in special session this summer.

Lewis

District Judge Bob Perkins had set Tuesday's pretrial hearing in January. He delayed legal proceedings for months after Lewis' December 28 indictment on two misdemeanor ethics charges because the Legislature met in its regular session from January 8 through May 27.

Now, Gov. Ann Richards is calling lawmakers back into session beginning July 15 to write a state budget. A special session lasts a maximum of 30 days, and the governor may call more than one.

"We'll have our pre-trial hearing at that time (Sept. 24) ... unless there's another glitch, and there's more legislative sessions. But hopefully, the state can take care of its business in one session," said Bill Willms, Lewis' attorney.

State law provides for legislators who are involved in court proceedings to receive a delay due to legislative sessions.

'The way I read the statute, it's absolute. There's no exceptions to the rule.'

Assistant DA Mike Lynch

Lewis, D-Fort Worth, was indicted by a Travis County grand jury on two misdemeanor counts of alleged ethics violations.

He has said he is innocent of the charges of failing to report a gift from Heard, Goggan, Blair and Williams, and of failing to disclose his interest in a business for which the San Antonio-based law firm allegedly paid some property taxes.

Heard, Goggan has built a thriving business on a law allowing private law firms to get 15 percent penalties for collecting delinquent taxes for cities, counties and school districts. Attempts to allow public attorneys to collect the same tax penalty have died in the House.

"We filed another legislative continuance because the speaker is going to be busy in the Legislature, and as soon as the special sessions are over, we'll get to it, because he's anxious to have his day in court," Willms said.

Assistant District Attorney Mike Lynch, chief of the Public Integrity Unit of the Travis County district attorney's office, said Lewis apparently can continue to delay legal proceedings as long as the Legislature meets.

"The way I read the statute, it's absolute. There's no exceptions to the rule," Lynch said.

He said it would be inappropriate to comment on whether he likes that law, but added, "I would like to go ahead and try this case as soon as possible."

Asked about chances for a trial before year's end, Lynch said, "I would hope there would be. With the business it looks like the Legislature's got in front of them, I guess that's problematic at this point ..."

Willms left open the possibility that Lewis may ask to move the trial from Austin.

"We'll have to wait and see what we'd want to do on that. We love Austin but ...," he said.

Meanwhile, Lynch said, his office is continuing with its legislative probe into ties between lawmakers and lobbyists.

Pair accused of neglecting grandmother

HOUSTON (AP) — A grandmother is recovering from malnutrition, bedsores and neglect so severe that a prosecutor said she has seen animal mistreatment that was not as bad.

The woman's granddaughter, Michelle Ruiz, 19, and her husband, Adalberto, 23, were in jail Tuesday under $10,000 bond on charges of abusing by neglect Margaret Embrey, 70.

Bedsores on Ms. Embrey were so bad they had penetrated through tissue and muscle to the bone, Ms. Embrey's doctor said.

The Ruizes were indicted Friday. If convicted, they each could face up to 99 years in prison.

Ms. Embrey was taken by ambulance to a hospital on June 4 after Mrs. Ruiz called 911 when she saw her grandmother's sores had been infested with maggots.

Doctors said the 70-year-old woman also was suffering from malnutrition and necrosis, patches of black, dead skin that had to be removed by a plastic surgeon. Once the surgery was complete, doctors said she did not have enough skin left to cover her scars.

"We're not planning on her dying, but it will take many months of recovery," Dr. Joanne Mata said.

Attorney Linda Mazzagatti, a former assistant district attorney, has been appointed guardian for the woman.

"I used to prosecute people for mistreatment of animals that wasn't as bad as this," she said Monday.

Mrs. Ruiz had been caring for her grandmother since December when the invalid woman left a nursing home.

Officials don't know what to do about grave

FORT WORTH (AP) — When war hero Maj. Horace S. Carswell Jr. was buried five years ago at the military base that bears his name, his family could not have predicted the possibility of the base closing.

Now a task force has recommended to President Bush that Carswell Air Force base be eliminated, and it is not known what will be done with the body buried outside the 7th Bombardment Wing headquarters at the center of the 2,756-acre base.

The base was renamed from Fort Worth Army Air Field in January 1948 to honor Carswell, a 1939 graduate of Fort Worth's Texas Christian University and a B-24 pilot during World War II.

Carswell, awarded the Medal of Honor for his action during a bombing raid in World War II, was buried at the base in 1986 at the request of his family. His son, Robert, was upset over the condition of his father's plot at a Tarrant County cemetery, so the body was exhumed and moved to the base.

Carswell is the only person buried at the base, officials said.

"I don't know what will happen" to the grave site if the base is closed, said Air Force spokesman Capt. Jack Geiese in Washington. "The base review team will have to look at that along with everything else."

Carswell received the Medal of Honor, the nation's highest military honor, for his heroism during a Oct. 26, 1944, bombing mission.

Carswell's mission was a one-plane strike against a Japanese navy convoy in the South China Sea. Fire from enemy ships knocked out two of his plane's engines, damaged a third and wounded his co-pilot.

Carswell flew toward China and ordered his crew to bail out, only to discover that one crew member's parachute had been damaged by enemy fire. Carswell and his wounded co-pilot stayed with the other crew member. All three died when their B-24 crashed into a mountainside and burned.

Ryan's record

ARLINGTON (AP) — Nolan Ryan on Tuesday night became the first pitcher to strike out 100 or more batters in 22 consecutive seasons.

Ryan struck out Oakland's Willie Wilson on a 1-2 pitch in the fourth inning for his 100th of 1991 and third of the night, surpassing Don Sutton's mark of 21 straight seasons with 100 or more strikeouts.

The Texas right-hander struck out Jose Canseco in the first and Mike Gallego in the third.

Ryan, in his 25th season, has struck out at least 100 batters 23 times. Besides his first year, when he pitched just three innings, the only season Ryan failed to strike out 100 was in 1969, when he threw just 89 innings, recording 92 strikeouts.

At 44 years and 5 months, he became the second oldest pitcher ever to fan as many as 100 in a season. Phil Niekro had 149 strikeouts at age 46 in 1985 with the New York Yankees.

Ryan pitched Tuesday night for the first time since June 21, when he left a game at Chicago with stiffness in his throwing shoulder.

Ryan holds outright or shares 50 National League, American League and major league records.

Angels move training site

TEMPE, Ariz. (AP) — The California Angels confirmed Tuesday they plan to make the city of Tempe their spring-training headquarters for at least 15 years starting in 1993.

At a news conference near city-owned Diablo Stadium, officials of the team and the city credited a new state ballpark-renovation law with the Angels' decision to leave Palm Springs, Calif.

The legislation was passed June 19 and signed into law last week. It gives Maricopa County, the center of the so-called Cactus League with six teams, and Yuma and Pima counties, which have one each, taxing authority to raise money dedicated to improving baseball training complexes.

Rain interrupts play again

■ John McEnroe falls from the field before Mother Nature intervenes in Tuesday's competition at Wimbledon.

Associated Press

WIMBLEDON, England — The cursed rain intruded again on this wettest of Wimbledons, too late to save John McEnroe from a stormy exit and too soon to suit Martina Navratilova.

The rain pelted Centre Court on Tuesday just as Navratilova was scratching back against a fusillade of forehands by Jennifer Capriati, the girl with a look of a future champion.

Capriati calls the nine-time Wimbledon winner a "lege" but certainly didn't play in awe of her in taking the first set 6-4 before falling behind a break at 3-2 when the rain came.

Stefan Edberg had long since endured McEnroe's foul-mouthed tantrums and rare moments of artistry to beat the three-time champion 7-6, 6-1, 6-4.

A brouhaha developed over whether McEnroe would be fined for abusive language toward a linesman that was broadcast, albeit with bleeps, on British television. The only punishment McEnroe received during the match was from Edberg's serves and volleys.

Jim Courier and David Wheaton, the vanguard of a new generation of Americans making their mark in men's tennis, joined Edberg in the quarterfinals along with Michael Stich. Guy Forget led Tim Mayotte 4-3 in the fourth set, and Thierry Champion led Derrick Rostagno 4-1 in the fifth set when the rain hit.

Steffi Graf, the women's top seed, had already taken off after reaching the semifinals for the fifth straight year with a 6-1, 6-3 victory over No. 7 Zina Garrison. The American beat Graf in the semifinals here last year before losing to Navratilova.

Mary Joe Fernandez, the women's fifth seed, reached the semis here for the first time, beating fourth-seeded Arantxa Sanchez Vicario, 7-5, 3-6, 6-1.

Capriati, 15, displayed as much power and poise as the 34-year-old Navratilova, but offered a contrasting style.

Whereas Navratilova charged the net at every opportunity, Capriati slugged from the baseline and came in only when she had Navratilova very deep and off balance.

Capriati's most effective weapons proved to be her return of service and forehand passing shots. After an exchange of breaks in the eighth and ninth games of the first set, Capriati broke Navratilova again with two forehand returns on the final two points.

Navratilova complained about the last point, a crisp pass down the line, because she thought the serve had been long. The brief argument got her nowhere, and she had to regroup quickly to stay in the match.

Capriati started out the second set with a service winner and an ace. Navratilova pounced back with four straight points to break her and nearly got another break in the fifth game. But Capriati survived four break points to hold to 3-2.

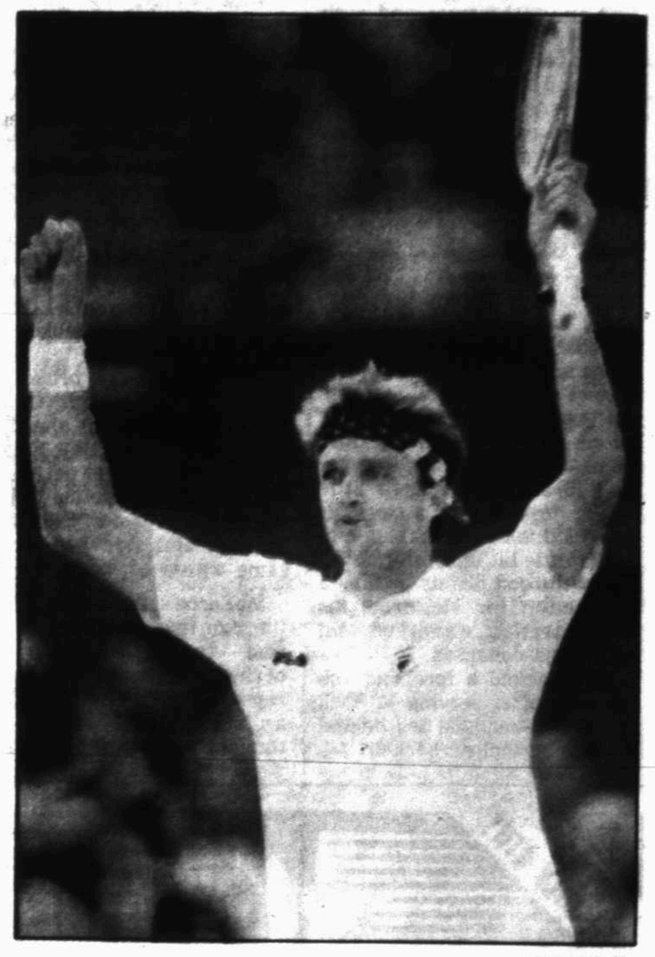

Edberg said he could see "the greatness out there" in McEnroe's wrist-flick volleys and sweeping serves, yet knew the 32-year-old American couldn't keep it up.

McEnroe's histrionics and complaints started early, a sure sign he was headed for trouble.

Angry with himself for hitting a backhand wide with Edberg serving in the sixth game of the match, he dropped his racket and pouted, then went on to lose the game on the next point.

When Edberg served an ace to start the eighth game, McEnroe screamed to a linesman that the ball was wide by a foot, marked the spot with his racket, argued with the umpire and finally returned with his head still shaking. Three points later, Edberg won the game at love.

Wichita batters Midland, 11-8

By Jimmy Patterson
Assistant Sports Editor

'Twas another typical night at Angels Stadium.

The Wichita Wranglers had more offensive fireworks than John Sununu had June vacations to defeat the Midland Angels, 11-8.

A crowd of 4,036 waited three hours, 56 minutes to witness post-game fireworks, but for awhile it seemed the preholiday pyrotechnics were in danger of being cancelled because of dawn.

The Wranglers crunched out 20 hits, one more than the Angels Stadium scoreboard permits. Five of those hits were for doubles; another seven Wrangler runners chalked up stolen bases.

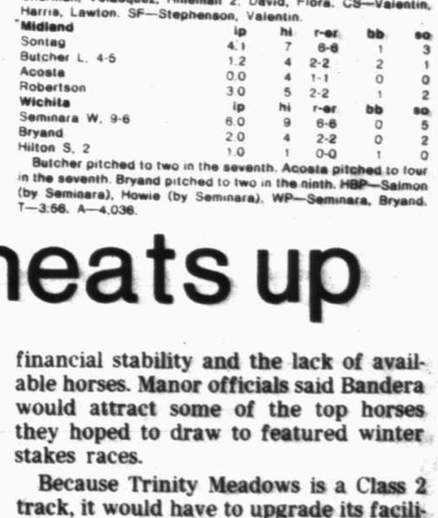

It was the singles that hurt the Angels the most: With the score tied 6-6, Wichita recorded six straight singles to open the seventh inning. Three runs scored as it took three Angel pitchers to rid the basepaths of Wranglers before all was said and done. Meantime, the Wranglers had gone ahead 9-6, a lead that would stand the test of time when the marathon contest had ended.

Midland relief pitcher Mike Butcher suffered the loss, his fifth in nine decisions. Wichita starter Frank Seminara, who entered the contest with the second-lowest ERA in the Texas League (2.52), earned the win, his ninth against six losses. Howard Hilton picked up his second save in relief.

The Angels, as has been their trademark, fought to come from behind with a four-run fourth. Down 6-2 entering the bottom half of that inning, Midland had back-to-back home runs — a two-run shot from Tim Salmon (his 13th), and a solo shot by Damion Easley (his second) — and a run scoring triple by Walt McConnell to tie the game at six.

As much damage as the Wranglers' six single seventh was, a pair of double-oriented innings also took their toll on the Angels.

Phil Stephenson and Tom Reddington had back-to-back doubles and both scored in the fourth. One inning and one out later, Darrell Sherman and Charlie Hilleman had consecutive doubles. They, too, both scored to go ahead 6-2 before the Angels' four run outburst in the fifth.

Sherman finished with five hits in six trips, driving in three runs and scoring a fourth.

Wichita has won three of the five games in the series.

Race to open horse tracks heats up

■ No less than three investor groups hope to open a Class 1 track in the Dallas-Fort Worth area.

Associated Press

AUSTIN — At least three investor groups are neck and neck in their plans to submit applications to the Texas Racing Commission to operate Kentucky Derby-style tracks in the Dallas-Fort Worth area by 1994, developers told the commission earlier this week.

Among the applicants will be the recently opened Trinity Meadows Raceway, a highly successful, medium-sized track at Willow Park, the Fort Worth Star-Telegram reported.

Also declaring their intentions to join the competition were two developers seeking Dallas County sites. Two other investor groups are considering entering the race.

"It's finally economically feasible," Dallas developer Preston Carter said.

The commission will accept applications for the Dallas-Fort Worth area's first Class 1 track — or tracks — in November and December only. The regulatory board can award a maximum of two licenses for tracks in Fort Worth-Dallas by mid-1992.

The commission is reviewing applications for two other large-track licenses. Pending are two proposals in Houston and one in San Antonio. State law allows those metropolitan areas to have one Class 1 track each.

The Texas Legislature enacted legislation recently that increases the tracks' and owners' take of betting revenue.

Track developers in those two cities have urged the commission to allow lengthy racing seasons, especially now that the Legislature has authorized betting on live races broadcast among tracks on closed-circuit TV. Carter said his group joins the others in urging longer, overlapping seasons.

Fearing a dearth of top-class horses, the commission is considering staggering the authorized racing dates in the three urban centers to reduce direct competition.

However, the racing commission voted Monday to allow additional racing dates to Bandera Downs, a Class 2 track, despite opposition from rival Manor Downs, which contended it would be hurt by the head-to-head competition that would result.

Manor Downs, located about 90 miles from Bandera Downs, opposed the additional dates, citing concerns over its own financial stability and the lack of available horses. Manor officials said Bandera would attract some of the top horses they hoped to draw to featured winter stakes races.

Because Trinity Meadows is a Class 2 track, it would have to upgrade its facilities to satisfy state requirements for Class 1 status.

Trinity Meadows has something of an inside track going into the competition. Not only has it shown there is a strong patron base around Tarrant County, but it could benefit from new legislation instructing the commission to give "greater weight" to Class 1 applications from existing Class 2 tracks.

Trinity Meadows' success at the attendance gate and betting windows has increased the possibility that two Class 1 tracks could be licensed, if Trinity Meadows is one of them.

TENNIS: Outbursts distract McEnroe

(From 1C)

McEnroe argued mightily about a call on a service winner by Edberg in the 10th game, but lost both the beef and the game — again at love.

Yet, through it all, McEnroe managed to hold his serve, fending off break points in the first and 11th games, and push the set to a tiebreaker.

The purpose of all his protests and dramatics, McEnroe said, was to find a way to break Edberg's serve. Edberg didn't let it bother him as he dropped only one point in his last four service games of the first set.

"You want every call to be right, because he's tough to break," McEnroe said. "He volleys real well behind his serve, and I had some opportunities.

"That's why, when people make mistakes by that much, it throws you a little bit, because you hope they're as into the match as you are. Every little point counts on grass. You get up 0-15, and it just puts a little bit of thinking in a person's mind. I think I was making him feel a little bit uncomfortable."

But the complaints became a distraction for McEnroe, his concentration wandered and his tennis collapsed.

He smacked a forehand volley long after serving to open the tiebreaker, and fell behind 5-1. He scratched back to 5-4, including on a feathery light vintage volley, but wound up losing 7-4 when he netted an easy backhand volley at set point. McEnroe's groan resounded in the upper reaches of the stadium.

That was the end of the match right there — even with at least two sets to go. McEnroe slumped in his chair, burying his face in a towel, while his wife, Tatum O'Neal, and friend, guitarist Eric Clapton, fidgeted in their seats.

Edberg turned up his game a notch, playing flawlessly all over the court, as he won 15 straight points in one stretch and 20 of 22 to take the second set in 23 minutes.

While McEnroe moaned or stared at linesmen, Edberg jauntily flipped his racket and played on.

McEnroe finally broke Edberg's serve for the only time in the match and went ahead 3-0 in the third set. But Edberg went on another sweet surge, winning 20 of 25 points to take the next five games, and closed out the match at love in the last game with a service winner.

McEnroe's final outburst — the one that could result in a fine — came in the eighth game of the third set, when he cursed repeatedly at a linesman about an ace by Edberg that he thought was out by a foot.

Burrell says he can improve time

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) — Leroy Burrell, now regarded as the world's fastest man, has improved the his times in winning each of his last four 100-meter races.

That streak is likely to end today although the American, who broke the world mark with a 9.90 almost three weeks ago, will compete in Stockholm's Olympic Stadium, where 78 world records have been set since the 1912 Olympics.

"I can run faster," Burrell said Tuesday. "To be honest, I don't think that time is going to last through the summer.

"But it's hard to predict a time for tomorrow's race. There are so many factors which count towards making a very good time — the weather, the wind, the track, the warmup and the travel."

But Burrell, last year's Grand Prix champion, looks very sharp. He won a 200 in 20.31 in another Grand Prix meet Monday at Villeneuve D'Ascq, France, despite "a few technical errors" and rainy, cold conditions.

"I'm only three weeks away from the world record and I haven't stopped training," he said. "I'm in very good shape."

Burrell, winner here last year in a wind-aided 9.95, will face fellow Americans Mike Marsh and Floyd Heard. Both were in the U.S. Championships final June 14 in New York when Burrell broke Carl Lewis' 3-year-old world record by two hundredths of a second.

Raymond Stewart of Jamaica, with a personal best of 9.97, and Olapade Adeniken of Nigeria are also entered. Adeniken was the first to beat Burrell at 100 meters in 1990, beating the world's top-ranked sprinter at Malmo, Sweden, in August.

While Burrell is switching to his best distance, Lewis is scheduled to run the 200 after beating Ben Johnson in their re-match Monday in France.

"I wanted to run the 200 here because I couldn't do it in the Nationals," said Lewis, who finished second to Dennis Mitchell in the 100 in France while Johnson was seventh. "It gives me a chance to break up the season a bit."

Also in the 200 are Stewart, who is doubling in the sprints, Frank Fredericks of Namibia and Americans Kevin Little, Kevin Braunskill and Jeff Williams.

"I expect a good time. Last month I had the best workouts in my life. That's why I ran so fast in the Nationals," said Lewis, who placed second in New York in 9.93.

Johnson, suspended for two years after testing positive for steroids in the 1988 Olympics, was not invited by the organizers because he demanded too much appearance money.

"It's a moral standpoint," meet director Rajne Soderberg said earlier. "We have a tough attitude against doping."

Ryan sets another strikeout landmark

Associated Press

ARLINGTON — Rafael Palmeiro hit two homers for the second time in four games, and the Texas Rangers beat the Oakland Athletics 9-6 Tuesday night as Nolan Ryan set another record.

Ryan — who had a no-decision — struck out Willie Wilson to end the fourth inning, setting a major league record with his 22nd straight season with 100 or more strikeouts. That broke a tie with Phil Niekro.

Ryan, pitching for the first time in 11 days because of a sore right shoulder, allowed a three-run homer to Jose Canseco — who had four RBIs — and a solo shot to Harold Baines. They were the only hits off Ryan allowed in five innings.

Canseco's homer, his 19th, tied him with Detroit's Cecil Fielder and Minnesota's Chili Davis for the American League lead.

Steve Buechele's two-run eighth-inning single off Gene Nelson broke a 6-6 tie to give Texas its fourth straight victory over the Athletics. Rick Honeycutt (0-2) was the loser.

American

Kenny Rogers (5-7) pitched 1 1-3 innings of scoreless relief for the victory. Jeff Russell worked the ninth for his 16th save as the Rangers out-hit the Athletics 19-4. Texas' 19-year-old rookie catcher Ivan Rodriguez had four singles.

Blue Jays 4, Twins 3

TORONTO — A bases-loaded single by Rance Mulliniks in the ninth inning gave surging Toronto — which overcame four errors — a victory over the sliding Minnesota Twins in a battle of division leaders.

The winning hit was the 16th for Toronto, which won for the 11th time in 13 games. The Twins have lost six of seven games. Reliever Duane Ward (2-3) pitched a perfect ninth.

The Blue Jays had tied it in the eighth when Manuel Lee hit a two-out double off Leach. It scored pinch-runner Derek Bell, who entered the game after John Olerud reached on a one-out infield single to Leach. Bell stole his first major league base prior to Lee's double.

Tigers 4, Orioles 3

BALTIMORE — Cecil Fielder hit a long homer to tie Minnesota's Chili Davis for the American League lead and added an RBI single, helping Bill Gullickson win his 10th game for Detroit.

Fielder's 19th homer, measured at 440 feet, gave the Tigers a 4-0 lead against Jeff Ballard in the fifth inning. Ballard (4-9) has lost his last 11 decisions at home.

Yankees 8, Indians 5

NEW YORK — Matt Nokes drove in three runs and Jesse Barfield hit his 17th homer as surging New York handed hapless Cleveland its sixth straight loss and 50th of the season.

While the Indians continued to crumble, the Yankees won their fourth straight game and seventh in the last eight.

Red Sox 14, Brewers 4

MILWAUKEE — Ellis Burks, Mike Greenwell and Luis Rivera led Boston to season highs in hits — with 22 — and runs as the Red Sox whipped Milwaukee.

Burks hit a three-run homer — his seventh in the last 20 games and 10th this season — and had four RBIs.

McMullen tries to restart negotiations

Associated Press

HOUSTON — Houston Astros owner John McMullen met with a local group of investors Tuesday to restart stalled negotiations over the sale of the baseball team.

Negotiations had been at a stalemate for several weeks, but a spokesman would not comment on whether the outlook for a sale was any brighter after Tuesday's three-hour meeting.

Ethan Cartwright, spokesman for the Houston Sports Association, which owns the Astros, only said that another meeting will be held between the two groups.

"There was no indication when it (the meeting) would occur, or where it would occur, other than it would occur," Cartwright said.

The investors group is headed by Ben Love, former chairman of Texas Commerce Bancshares, and his son, Jeff, a Houston lawyer. Other HSA officials attended the meeting with McMullen.

The Love group has indicated it was not interested in purchasing the three Astrodome-area hotels that McMullen wants to include as part of the HSA package.

But if a deal is to be struck, the hotels are going to be a part of any transaction with investors.

Bucs bash Cubs, Sandberg may miss All-Star game

Associated Press

CHICAGO — Ex-Cub Gary Varsho hit two homers — the first of his major-league career — and also had a triple, a sacrifice fly and six RBIs Tuesday, leading a 22-hit attack that carried Pittsburgh to a 13-4 victory over the Chicago Cubs.

Andy Van Slyke also homered and Orlando Merced, Bobby Bonilla and Barry Bonds tripled in the Pirates' extra-base onslaught that included a double and three singles by Mike LaValliere.

Bonilla also had four hits in the Pirates' biggest hit total since Aug. 11, 1979, when they had 23 against Philadelphia. The club record is 27 hits on Aug. 8, 1922, also against Philadelphia.

Not only did the Cubs see their three-game winning streak come to an end, but they also lost All-Star second baseman Ryne Sandberg, whose right hand was hit by the ball as he was stealing second in the first inning. X-rays were negative but Sandberg could miss the All-Star game in Toronto next Tuesday.

Benefitting from the Pirates' biggest hit total of the season was winner Doug Drabek (7-8), who allowed nine hits in gaining his fifth victory in six decisions.

Reds 6, Braves 3

ATLANTA — Chris Sabo hit a three-run homer and Mariano Duncan added a solo shot, leading surging Cincinnati to a victory over Atlanta.

Jack Armstrong (6-6) retired the first 13 batters before Ron Gant hit his 14th homer of the season, and Mike Bell hit his first of the year in the seventh for the other Atlanta run off the Reds starter. Armstrong gave up four hits in seven innings as the Reds won their second consecutive game and seventh in eight starts.

National

Cardinals 6, Phillies 1

PHILADELPHIA — Ray Lankford and Pedro Guerrero homered on consecutive pitches in the fourth inning and Ken Hill allowed three hits to fan seven innings as St. Louis beat Philadelphia.

Hill (8-5), who beat the Phillies last week at St. Louis, struck out three and walked four in achieving his career high for victories in a season.

Lee Smith pitched out of a two-out, two-on jam in the eighth by getting Ricky Jordan on a foul pop to first, then pitched the ninth for his 22nd save in 25 opportunities. He has saved seven of the Cardinals' last 10 victories.

The victory was the sixth straight for the Cardinals over the Phillies, who were swept in three games at St. Louis last weekend and have dropped the first two of this four-game set. The Cardinals led the season series 9-3.

Tommy Greene (5-2) lost his second straight decision, both to Hill. Greene allowed eight hits, struck out four and walked two in eight innings.

The homers were the 24th and 25th of the season for the Cardinals, who have the fewest homers of any team in the NL. It was only the sixth multi-homer game of the season for the Cards, but the second for St. Louis in a week against Greene.

Mets 2, Expos 1

MONTREAL — Dave Magadan singled home Kevin Elster with two out in the ninth inning and the New York Mets beat Montreal, sending the Expos to their ninth consecutive defeat.

The Expos last lost as many as nine in a row in August 1988.

Alejandro Pena (5-0) pitched the eighth and Franco worked the ninth for his 17th save, striking out pinch-hitter Junior Noboa for the third out with runners at first and third.

Shell plans to reduce workforce

■ As many as 4,650 employees may be cut over 12- to 18-month period.

Associated Press

HOUSTON — Shell Oil Co., responding to disappointing financial results this year, announced Monday it plans to reduce its U.S. workforce by up to 15 percent.

Shell employs about 31,000 people in the United States, meaning as many as 4,650 people could be affected by the reductions.

"Shell's business reviews indicate the need for workforce reductions," Shell spokesman H.R. Hutchins said. "Our best estimate today is that reductions could reach 10 to 15 percent overall nationwide. They will be done over a 12- to 18-month period beginning immediately.

"It's a response to disappointing financial results," Hutchins said.

The Houston-based petrochemical company, a wholly-owned subsidiary of Royal Dutch Shell Group, said it first will seek to reduce the workforce through voluntary retirements, attrition and cutting down on the use of contract workers.

"The first thing is to offer voluntary severance plans to certain employees. Once those all are identified, then there still may be some involuntary layoffs," Hutchins said. "We also will reduce the use of outside contractors where practical and hope that natural attrition will also play a factor here."

Hutchins said involuntary layoffs are likely. He declined to say what Shell divisions would be most severely affected by the layoffs.

"What we're saying at his point is that the extent of the reductions is expected to vary," he said.

During the next several weeks, certain employees will be offered a voluntary severance plan that includes three weeks' pay for every year of service, with 15 weeks' pay as a minimum and 1½ years' pay as the maximum.

Shell also is offering professional assistance, counseling, extended health insurance coverage, liberalized pension eligibility and enhanced severance benefits to workers who lose their jobs either through voluntary retirements or involuntary layoffs.

Earlier this month, Shell announced plans to sell its Wilmington refinery in Carson, Calif., as part of the company's other cost-cutting measures.

Shell posted first quarter earnings in April of $125 million, a decline of $78 million from the same 1990 period. The company blamed lower crude oil and natural gas prices for the drop in earnings.

Prices post gain

NEW YORK (AP) — Oil prices posted modest gains Tuesday, amid brisk buying of wholesale gasoline contracts two days before the Fourth of July.

West Texas Intermediate for delivery in August settled at $20.82 per barrel, up 6 cents, at the New York Mercantile Exchange.

Despite the strong gasoline purchases, the market seemed to be calming a bit following price runups that began last week with a refinery fire in the Virgin Islands and speculation that hostilities could resume in the Persian Gulf.

Tuesday's trading came in advance of the weekly American Petroleum Institute oil supply report, which showed the U.S. stockpile of crude oil fell sharply, while supplies of gasoline and heating oil rose.

The supply of crude oil totaled 349.1 million barrels for the week ending Friday, compared with 354.0 million a week earlier and 384.3 million a year earlier.

The supply of gasoline totaled 219.2 million barrels, compared with 218.0 million a week earlier and 215.3 million a year earlier.

The nation's refineries were running at 89.6 percent of capacity, down from 90.8 percent a week earlier.

In other futures trading, natural gas for delivery in August settled at $1.171 per 1,000 cubic feet, down 1.9 cents, at the Nymex.

Market rises

NEW YORK (AP) — Further evidence of the recession's demise combined with a steady bond market Tuesday to help boost stock prices in light trading.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials gained to 14.31 to 2,972.72. In the broader market, advancing issues narrowly led declines on the New York Stock Exchange.

Dollar advances

NEW YORK (AP) — The dollar continued its ascent Tuesday amid more signs that the U.S. economy is emerging from recession.

The British pound fell against the dollar, closing at $1.6025 in New York, down from $1.6095 late Monday.

Other late dollar rates in New York, compared with late Monday's prices, included: 1.8345 German marks, up from 1.8280; 1.5815 Swiss francs, up from 1.5652; 6.2125 French francs, up from 6.1920; 1,362.75 Italian lire, up from 1,358.00; and 1.14255 Canadian dollars, down from 1.14285.

The dollar also rose against the Japanese yen.

HomeFed Bank taps Wageman as president

■ Former Midland banker moves on to yet another troubled bank.

Staff Report

A day after resigning as president and chief executive officer of Sunbelt Savings in Dallas, Thomas J. Wageman, a former Midland banker, has been named president of a HomeFed Bank of San Diego the bank announced Tuesday.

Wageman

Wageman, 57, formerly president of First RepublicBank of Midland, replaces Robert F. Adelizzi, who resigned shortly after HomeFed reported a first-quarter net loss of $173.9 million. The company blamed the results on real estate losses in California and in the East.

"Tom Wageman is one of the most respected bankers in the country today," said Kim Fletcher, HomeFed's chairman. "He brings a strong understanding of real estate and mortgage markets and he has earned the confidence of regulators. We welcome his insights and initiatives for HomeFed."

HomeFed said Wageman was selected after a 6-week-long nationwide search in which 35 candidates were identified and seven people were interviewed.

When Wageman resigned from Sunbelt Sunday, a spokesman for Resolution Trust Corp., which disposed of failed institutions, said the resignation had been expected.

"There was no forced resignation," said Teresa McUsic, RTC spokesman. "It was purely his call." The Dallas Moning News reported that Wageman was earning approximately $300,000 per year and that might have entered into his decision to resign. The salary is significantly more than RTC allows for top executives.

Wageman resigned as president of RepublicBank First National in October 1986 to assume the position at Sunbelt. Wageman first came to Midland in July 1983 and in August 1983 became president of now defunct First National Bank. When the bank failed in October of 1983, its assets were purchased by RepublicBank of Dallas and became RepublicBank First National Midland. Wageman was named president of the bank.

Wageman began his career at the First National Bank of Chicago in 1963 and joined LaSalle National Bank in 1974 as executive vice president in charge of loan assets.

While in Midland, Wageman was active in numerous organizations including United Way, Midland Chamber of Commerce, High Sky Children's Ranch and Buffalo Trails Boy Scout Council.

Orders for factory goods increase in May

WASHINGTON (AP) — Orders for manufactured goods grew 2.9 percent in May, the second consecutive advance and the largest in more than a year, the government said Tuesday.

Analysts said the report further confirmed their belief the manufacturing economy was emerging from its recession.

Economist Marilyn Schaja of Donaldson, Lufkin & Jenrette Securities in New York, said it "fits with other recently reported statistics supporting the impression that the manufacturing sector is improving."

But Thomas Runiewicz, an economist with the WEFA Group of Bala Cynwyd, Pa., said the economic forecasting service "is expecting things to be fairly slow during the summer before accelerating a little bit in the fall."

The Commerce Department said orders for both durable and non-durable goods totaled a seasonally adjusted $238.0 billion in May, up from $231.2 billion a month earlier and the largest increase since a 4.4 percent gain in March 1990.

Analysts had expected an advance of only about 2 percent in May.

Even the April increase was larger than first thought. The department revised that gain to 2.1 percent from the 1.8 percent in its initial estimate.

But after declining steadily from November through March, factory orders remained 6.7 percent below their October peak of $255.0 billion.

It was the second report in two days suggesting the industrial sector was emerging from the recession. The National Association of Purchasing Management said Tuesday its widely followed index of business activity rose to 50.9 percent in June from 45.4 percent in May. An index above 50 percent means the manufacturing economy is expanding.

And since factory orders are a key barometer of manufacturing industry plans, the increase could mean more production and employment in the months ahead.

Inventories also declined, down 0.8 percent for the fifth drop in six months. Analysts said the decline was another signal of increased manufacturing activity and more jobs once demand begins to grow.

And non-defense capital goods orders excluding aircraft — a barometer of industry plans to expand and modernize — increased 2.7 percent after rising 3.9 percent a month earlier.

Orders for durable goods — items ranging from appliances to aircraft expected to last more than three years — posted their second straight advance. They were up a revised 3.4 percent, slightly less than the 3.8 percent initial estimate reported last week, and down from April's 3.6 percent gain.

New orders for non-durable goods also rose, up 2.5 percent to $117.9 billion, for the second consecutive gain.

Research firm gives local bank high ratings

By Mella McEwen

COMMUNITY NATIONAL BANK has been given a four-star rating by Bauer Financial Reports Inc., a Coral Gables, Fla. research firm.

McEwen

"This prestigious award identifies Community National as one of the strongest, most credit-worthy banks in the United States," Paul A Bauer said.

The award is based on a zero- to five-star raing assigned by the research firm, based on its analysis of the September 30, 1990, financial data as filed with federal regulators.

A four-star rating indicates that the bank's adjusted tangible capital is between 6 percent and 9 percent of tangible assets, that there are no excessive delinquencies or repossessed assets, and that the bank is profitable.

Community National President Robert Southerland said the bank's 1990 year-end capital-to-assets ratio was 7.15 percent. "We paid our first cash dividend to shareholders last year, and fully expect to again this year. We are on-target for all our projections with respect to profitability, asset quality, and size," he said.

"We're pleased that Bauer Financial Reports recognized the quality of our institution," he added.

NEW YORK STOCK EXCHANGE

ANALYSIS

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices moved slightly higher today based a report showing growth in factory orders and momentum from a rally in the previous session.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials was up 5.81 to 2,964.22. Volume on the Big Board was moderate at 110.41 million shares as of 2 p.m. on Wall Street.

Investors welcomed a report from the Commerce Department which showed U.S. factory orders gained 2.9 percent in May, further evidence of the recession's demise.

The report came a day after the National Association of Purchasing Management said its index climbed above recession levels for the first time in more than a year. That report, coupled with a cut in Japanese interest rates, sent the Dow up 51.66 points on Monday.

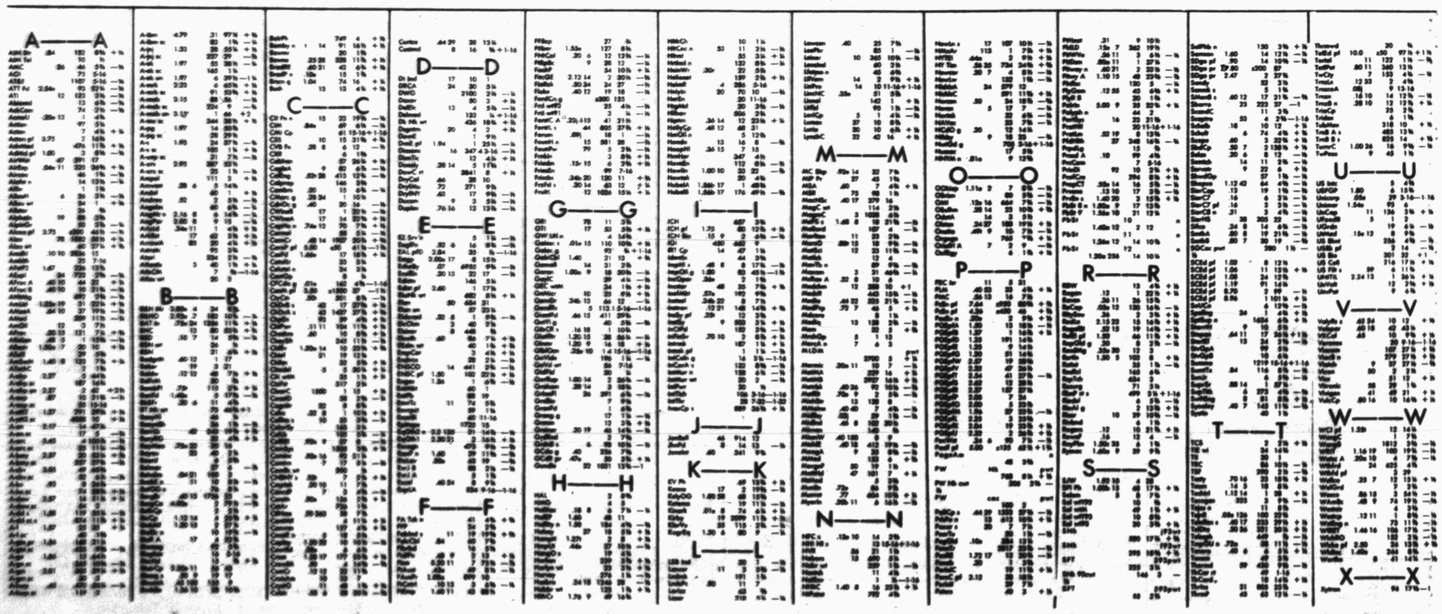

Stock analysts say the market's gain today was due to strength in so-called cyclical stocks, or companies whose fortunes rise and fall with the economy.

Stocks also enjoyed support from the bond market, which is not falling as sharply as some would expect in face of positive economic news, said Lawrence Helfand, manager for retail sales at Rodman Renshaw Inc. in Chicago.The Treasury's 30-year bond was down ⅛ point at noon, with its yield at 8.44 percent.

Helfand said the Dow Jones average was higher than other market averages based on the strength of Disney, up 3% at 117%. The stock was higher following a "buy" recomendation from a Dean Witter Reynolds & Co. analyst.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks was down 0.36 at 206.31. On the American Stock Exchange, the market value index declined 0.51 at 360.15.

Market's recovery hopes turn hazy

By Chet Currier
AP Business writer

NEW YORK — As it climbed to record highs in the first half of 1991, the stock market registered a lot of confidence that better times lay ahead for the economy.

But investors seemed to have trouble visualizing what a recovery from the recession would look like, or where it might eventually lead.

The result was an advance in stock prices that was given to big mood swings and frequent changes in its leading cast of characters.

"Talk about confusing — economists can't decide whether the glass is half full or half empty, or even if they're looking at the right glass," said James Stack in his InvesTech advisory letter.

The stock market didn't appear to have much better luck in sorting the whole thing out.

As the market racked up especially strong gains early in the year, growth stocks in glamor businesses like health care and biotechnology led the parade.

By May, when analysts began to proclaim that an upturn in business activity was at hand, the spotlight shifted to cyclical issues in industries such as auto manufacturing, paper and forest products, and chemicals.

Then, as midyear approached, the whole market retreated from its spring peaks in an atmosphere of caution and uneasiness.

So the investment and economic themes that emerge from a survey of the market's first-half performance present a diverse picture.

Apparel retailers, with a rise of nearly 60 percent, scored the best gain in the rankings of 80-plus stock groups followed by Dow Jones & Co. for the year through June 21.

Securities brokers, up 58 percent, were a close second, showing the benefits of signs that Wall Street firms might at last be pulling out of the slump that had plagued them ever since the market crash of 1987.

Medical and biotechnology stocks ranked third, up nearly 50 percent.

At the same time, bulls on energy experienced big disappointments in both the oil and utility industries.

Oil stocks lagged behind the market rally after it became clear that the Gulf War wasn't going to touch off the surge in oil prices so many analysts had predicted.

Utilities were hurt in the spring by an upswing in long-term interest rates, which increased the returns available on bonds in the competition for yield-conscious investors' favor.

Another jolt came in the waning days of June, when Columbia Gas System suspended its dividend, citing losses it was facing on commitments to buy natural gas. In a single week the company's shares lost more than half their value.

About that time, investors began to grow increasingly jittery about corporate earnings prospects in general, even as signs of economic recovery increased.

In the last week of the first half, through Friday, June 28, the Dow Jones average of 30 industrials fell 58.81 points to 2,906.75. That left the average's gain since New Year's at 273.09 points, or 10.37 percent.

Other readings for the week showed the New York Stock Exchange composite index down 3.40 at 203.47; the NASDAQ composite index for the over-the-counter market off 9.91 at 475.91, and the American Stock Exchange market value index down 7.24 at 358.12.

That kind of action was enough to put many analysts on their guard as they looked ahead to the second half of the year.

"The market is richly valued, and forthcoming second-quarter earnings reports will contain more disappointments than pleasant surprises," said Norman Fosback, editor of the advisory letter Market Logic.

Crunchy snacks are favorites

By Natalie Haughton
N.Y. Times News Service

LOS ANGELES — One bite and you're hooked. That's the way it is with chips. Self-control goes out the window with that first salty bite. It's not surprising that in 1989, each American consumed more than 18 pounds of crunchy snack foods.

It's no secret that consumers seek variety when they snack, and manufacturers are eager to satisfy their desires and demands via new flavors or varieties. Besides the wealth of potato and corn-chip flavors (barbecue, Cajun-seasoned, Parmesan and garlic, ranch, cheese, nacho cheese, jalapeno, sour cream and onion, chili cheese, taco, bacon and sour cream, mesquite, salt and vinegar, and more), you'll find black-bean tortilla chips, bean chips, blue corn tortilla chips, Maui onion chips, vegetable chips and no-oil tortilla chips.

If you're going to a picnic or party and want to take along some of the latest chips, here's a rundown of some of the newer selections you'll find on store shelves.

The most unusual designer-style entry in the chip market are Terra Chips - exotic root vegetable chips made from taro, sweet potato, yuca, batata, lotus, yam, parsnip, celeriac and taro (colored with beet juice) - which were introduced in Los Angeles in February. Although they are pricey ($5.49 for a 5-ounce bag), the chips are unique, unusual-looking, thin, colorful and delicious, and they would make a terrific party conversation piece.

Terra Chips were developed by two New York caterers, Dana Sinkler and Alexander Dzieduszycki, to serve as an alternative to appetizers at their catered parties. Much to their amazement, no matter what else was served at the meal, people always ended up talking about the chips. So they switched to the chip business and gave up frying the chips in canola oil in a wok.

According to Jack Acree, sales and distribution manager for Terra Chips, New York, the chips contain 70 milligrams of sodium per ounce, compared with 150 to 220 milligrams per ounce in other commercial chips. These are the chips to buy next time you entertain or want to take something special to a party. Forget the dip; they don't need any.

The newest chip entry from Keebler Co. is Pizzerias Pizza Chips, the company's answer to consumer demand for pizza flavor in chips. According to Colleen Baran, corporate communications specialist for Keebler in Elmhurst, Ill., the chips are the first ones made with real pizza dough that is baked and fried. The chips are available in three flavors: cheese pizza, zesty pepperoni and pizza supreme.

Newcomers in the chip lineup at Frito-Lay Inc. are Sunchips, which were introduced in April. A multigrain snack (a cross between a cracker and a chip), Sunchips are available in two flavors, original and french onion. Although it's not being marketed as a health food, noted Stacy Wehr, a spokeswoman for Frito-Lay in Plano, consumers might feel better about eating this type of chip because it is cooked in canola oil (which is higher in mono-unsaturated fats than some other oils), is cholesterol-free and has less salt than some other chips.

Because of the interest in lighter products by nutrition-conscious consumers, Frito-Lay introduced light chips last year in the Doritos, Ruffles and Cheetohs lines with one-third less oil. Even though the chips have a lower oil and fat content, the all-important flavor was not sacrificed, noted Wehr.

According to Al Rickard, director of communication for the Snack Food Association in Alexandria, Va., while there is more variety available today in the snack-food category than ever before, potato chips continue to dominate this category, with the regular flavor ranking most popular, followed by barbecue-flavor chips.

Barbecue flavor accounted for 11.7 percent of the chip volume (pounds sold) in 1990, a 10.6 percent increase over 1989, while regular flavor accounted for 66.7 percent in 1990, a drop of 1.4 percent from the previous year.

Cheese flavor accounted for 3.6 percent in 1990, up 12.5 percent over 1989.

Big favorites now in small versions

By Linda Anderson

Have you noticed how many supermarket staples are turning up in smaller and smaller versions? Many "old favorite" cookies and crackers are now available in two sizes: regular and itty-bitty.

Anderson

I guess the philosophy behind the bite-sized snacks is that eating a handful of tiny cookies or crackers makes you feel less guilty than eating one bigger ditto. For whatever reason, supermarket shelves are bursting with shrinking snacks. From club crackers to chocolate chip cookies: Everything old is small again.

Since munchies are a major food group in my daily dietary requirements, and since there's too many of them for individual columns, I decided to do a general overview on several of these products.

Most of them are well-known and well-loved favorites — here are some examples: teeny-tiny Club crackers, Ritz crackers (regular or sandwiches), Chips Ahoy! chocolate chip cookies, Magic Middles cookies, Pecan Sandies, Elf sandwich cookies and even saltines. In fact, I heard on the news the other day that diminutive Oreos are being marketed in certain areas of the country and should be in national distribution within several months.

Often the boxes of small snacks cost about the same price as their larger counter parts. For this taste-test, the crackers cost in the neighborhood of $2.70 (depending on type and brand of cracker), and the cookies cost about $2.10.

Most of them have such label advertising as "No Cholesterol" and "Bite Size!" (like we couldn't figure that one out ourselves). Other common advertising terms include: fun, sensational, flavor and other buzzwords we all know and love — and take with several grains of salt.

In taste, the tiny snacks — for the most part — tasted just like their big versions. Little Chips Ahoy! taste like big Chips Ahoy!, Ritz Bits taste like big Ritz crackers, etc. The only disappointment we found was in little Pecan Sandies, which is one of my favorite big cookies. The little version just didn't taste enough like the big version to suit any of the taste testers. (However, little Pecan Sandies would probably make a dynamite pie crust since they don't taste as sweet as the big ones.)

In general I have to admit that the manufacturers are right. The little versions of the snack crackers and cookies are a lot less guilt-inducing. All the taste-testers came back for seconds — and thirds and fourths ...

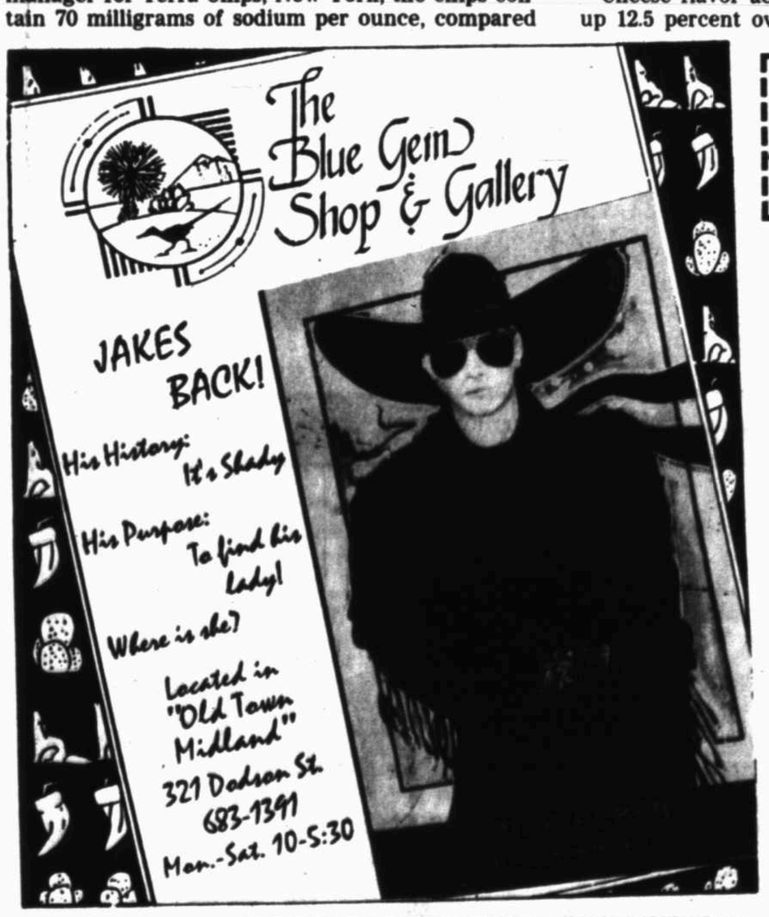

Prices listed are from a local supermarket. Prices at other locations may vary.

DEAR ABBY

Family reunion revelry robs motel guests of restful night's sleep

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Now that vacation season has begun, will you please answer a question many people must have wondered about?

Every room in a hotel or motel has the management's "rights" posted. But what about the rights of the people renting that room?

Van Buren

Recently, my husband and I stopped in a small motel in Dade City, Fla. After we checked in, we learned that 10 of the 20 rooms were occupied by members of a family having a reunion! They pulled their cars into a circle in the parking lot, turned up their radios, got out their coolers and had a party. The noise and the laughter could have awakened the dead. And it went on until 2 a.m. Several of the other guests complained, but the owner sort of shrugged and indicated, "Too bad."

One man with a New York tag said he will never come to Florida again, which seemed a bit extreme — but we were all furious. Abby, are there "rights" for travelers in a motel unaffiliated with a chain? — UNHAPPY TRAVELER

DEAR UNHAPPY: Whether a motel is affiliated with a chain or not, it owes its occupants an atmosphere suitable for sleeping. Occasionally, even the best motels will have a noisy occupant, but the management usually makes an honest effort to quiet the disturbance. Sorry you picked a lemon.

Next time, before you register, ask whether there are any "conventions" booked during your stay. (I once stayed at a hotel on prom night — and the revelry rivaled New Year's Eve's.)

DEAR ABBY: I am writing on behalf of my granddaughter who has a set of triplets, now 7 months old.

Abby, please ask your readers to kindly refrain from stopping the parents of multiple-birth children to ask a lot of personal questions such as, "Did you take fertility drugs?"

Whenever my granddaughter takes her triplets out — even for a breath of fresh air or grocery shopping — she is stopped by people who want to take a look at the triplets and ask a lot of questions. It's so difficult for her to get her shopping done, or even take a leisurely walk.

Since you are a twin, you can probably feel for my granddaughter. — CALIFORNIA GRANNY

DEAR GRANNY: Twins or triplets are sure to attract attention, so the person accompanying them had better be prepared to answer a lot of questions. (A double or triple buggy alone is an attention-getter.) Should a stranger ask a question that you feel is too personal to answer, let your response be, "Forgive me if I choose not to answer so personal a question."

DEAR ABBY: "Wrong Guy in Cleveland," who gets numerous messages on his answering machine from people who have dialed his number by mistake, should record a new message. A suggestion: "You have reached Pennsylvania 65000. Please leave your name and telephone number, and your call will be returned as soon as possible. Wait for the beep." — RIGHT GUY IN ELIZABETH, N.J.

DEAR ABBY: Would you please do all the parents of small children (babies especially) a big favor and tell the manufacturers of infant and toddler clothing to stop labeling the clothes by age (3 to 6 months, 18 months, etc.)? Nothing could be more irrelevant.

Our 4-month-old son is in the 95th percentile for length and weight for his age group. His clothes labels read 12 and 18 months. His pediatrician says he is in all respects normal — just big (every bit of 21 pounds).

If clothes were labeled by weight and/or length, making an appropriate purchase without trying to wriggle an overtired infant into the outfit first might be possible. As it is, I have drawers full of sweatsuits given to my baby by well-meaning friends who thought they'd be just right for next winter since the label reads "12 months." Most of these clothes fit him now.

We live in Florida and the thermometer hit 90 degrees yesterday. What a shame. Had the clothes been labeled according to weight, since he was 9½ pounds at birth, most people could have guessed he'd be at least three or four times that size a year later. I imagine parents of "preemies" have similar problems — PAT IN ST. PETE

DEAR PAT: Your suggestion makes sense. Let's hope the folks who manufacture infant and toddler clothing take note.

Everything you'll need to know about planning a wedding can be found in Abby's booklet, "How to Have a Lovely Wedding." To order, send a long, business-size, self-addressed envelope, plus check or money order for $3.95 ($4.50 in Canada) to: Dear Abby, Wedding Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054. (Postage is included.)

The sun: attractive skin menace

Malignant melanomas are rising at a fast rate

By Jane E. Brody
N.Y. Times News Service

Sunshine is two-faced: beautifying but blemishing, soul-restoring but health-robbing, life-giving but potentially deadly. Americans addicted to it have been slow to show more respect for its power.

As a result, the addition of "too tan" to the Duchess of Windsor's byword "You can't be too rich or too thin" is exacting an ever-worsening toll. About 600,000 cases of skin cancer, 90 percent of them caused by sun exposure, will be diagnosed this year in the United States alone.

Malignant melanoma, the deadliest form of skin cancer, is rising faster than any other cancer. It is now the leading cancer afflicting women in their late 20s, and the second-leading cancer (after breast cancer) among women in their early 30s.

Rates of the less lethal forms of skin cancer — basal cell and squamous cell carcinoma — are also rising.

It is time for parents to warn the entire family, themselves included, "Don't go out without your sun screen."

While many people buy sun screens and two-thirds of Americans believe they prevent cancer, only 8 percent routinely use them whenever they expect to "catch some rays." Many myths and misconceptions stand in the way of more effective use of these potentially life-saving products.

Sun can damage skin any time of the year and at most hours of the day, but it is especially dangerous between 10 a.m. and 2 p.m. in summer, when the intensity of ultraviolet (UV) radiation peaks in the Northern Hemisphere.

Two UV components cause trouble: UVB, the so-called burning rays, which damage the surface layer of the skin and raise the risk of skin cancer, and UVA, the so-called slow-tanning rays, which penetrate deeper layers of skin, make it leathery and wrinkled and may interfere with the ability of skin cells to repair UVB damage.

As pollution attacks the protective layer of ozone that surrounds the earth, more and more UV radiation reaches the Earth's surface. At current rates of ozone destruction, the incidence of skin cancer is expected to increase by 50 percent by the year 2040.

UV exposure is greater at higher altitudes, increasing by 4 percent for every 1,000 feet above sea level. The rays penetrate a light cloud cover, loosely woven clothing and wet T-shirts.

About 600,000 cases of skin cancer, 90 percent of them caused by sun exposure, will be diagnosed this year in the United States alone.

Malignant melanoma is now the leading cancer afflicting women in their late 20s, and the second-leading cancer (after breast cancer) among women in their early 30s.

UVB is blocked by window glass, and not enough UVA gets through glass to produce a tan. However, skin can be damaged by UV radiation reflected by sand, water and snow. It is also vulnerable to the radiation used in tanning salons, where the amount of UVA is up to 200 times as high as in natural sunlight.

Anyone, no matter how dark, can get skin cancer. But the brown pigment melanin in the skin surface absorbs some of the damaging rays, protecting underlying cells. Thus, black Americans have only one-twentieth as many skin cancers as whites, and Hispanic Americans get one-sixth as many skin cancers as non-Hispanic whites.

People who tan readily (without freckling) are less susceptible than people who always burn, but having a dark tan does not prevent sun damage. Freckling represents the skin's futile effort to protect against sun damage, and, after a family history of melanoma, it is the leading risk factor.

Dermatologists have rated skin types as to their degree of susceptibility to cancer. Those with "white" skin, blue eyes, red hair and/or freckles are most vulnerable and should never to go in the sun unprotected. But even blacks should wear protective clothing or use sun screen for an hour or more of intense sun.

The areas of the body most likely to be struck by skin cancer are, not surprisingly, those most likely to get maximum sun: on women, the face, ears and legs, and on men, the back, shoulders and back of the neck in addition to the face and ears.

Those who suffered one or more blistering sunburns during childhood or adolescence have twice the average risk of developing melanoma, according to a study at Harvard Medical School.

See a dermatologist without delay if you notice any of these lesions, which could be skin cancer: a raised smooth lesion with a central indentation that is pinkish and bleeds easily; a sore that won't heal or looks crusted; a new pigmented growth, or an old mole that becomes assymetrical, develops irregular borders and is a mix of colors.

Sun screen products are rated by an SPF (for Sun Protection Factor) number.

Loosely speaking, it represents the degree to which the product blocks UVB radiation. Multiply by the SPF number to estimate how long you can be in the sun without burning.

If you would ordinarily get "pink" in 20 minutes and you use a product with SPF 10, you could, theoretically, be out for 200 minutes before you turn pink.

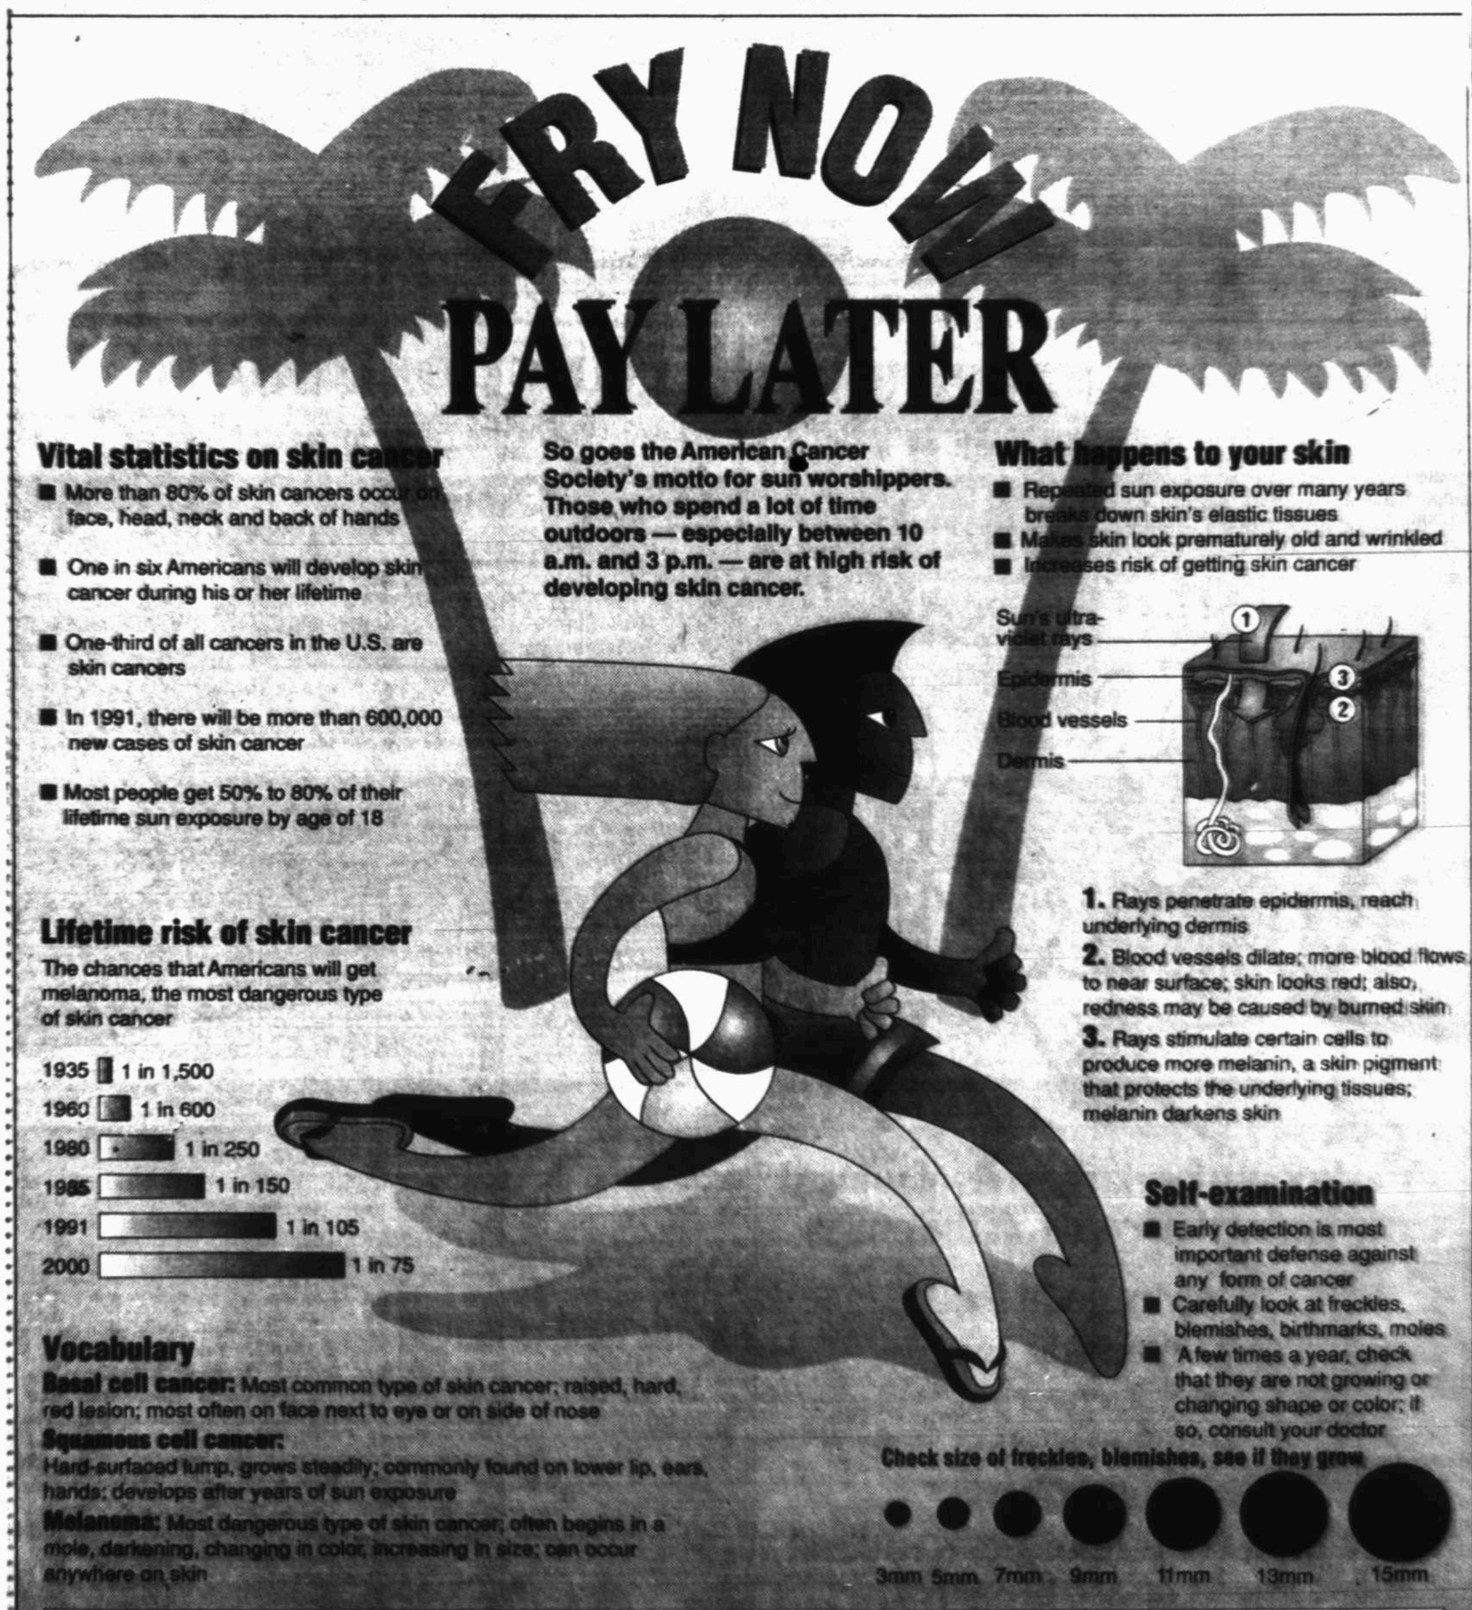

Why theoretically? Because many unpredictable factors influence the protection you get from sun screen: when and how thickly you apply it, how much you perspire, whether and how long you swim, whether the product is "water-resistant" or "waterproof," how old it is and whether it has been stored in a hot or sunny place.

You should apply sun screen at least 30 minutes in advance of sun exposure to assure its effectiveness. It is a chemical, not a mechanical, barrier that must react with the skin before it can protect it.

Use about one ounce of product to cover a scantily attired body. Regardless of the SPF rating, reapply the product every two or three hours and more often if you sweat heavily or swim and towel dry, even if you use a "waterproof" product.

A reapplication does not extend the time you can safely stay in the sun. Between exposures (say, overnight) your skin repairs the sun damage, so the next sun-screened outing gives you a fresh start.

Products with an SPF of 15 are adequate for all but the most ultrasensitive skin. There is a protective difference of only 3 percent between SPF 15 and SPF 30, said Dr. Darrel S. Rigel, a dermatologist and melanoma specialist at New York University Medical Center.

DEBTORS CHAPTER 11

ORDER AND NOTICE OF AUGUST 20, 1991 CLAIMS BAR DATE (LAST DAY TO FILE CLAIMS) AND OF CLAIMS PROCEDURE

TO ALL PERSONS AND ENTITIES WITH CLAIMS AGAINST AND INTERESTS IN ANY OF THE ABOVE-NAMED DEBTORS:

TAKE NOTICE THAT the United States Bankruptcy Court for the Western District of Texas (the "Bankruptcy Court") has entered an Order pursuant to Bankruptcy Rule 3003(c)(3), requiring all persons and entities including individuals, partnerships, corporations, estates, trusts and governmental units, EXCEPT THOSE PERSONS AND ENTITIES DESCRIBED IN PARAGRAPHS "A" THROUGH "E" BELOW, that assert a Claim (as defined below) against or an Interest (as defined below) in any of the above-captioned debtors (collectively, the "Debtors") which existed, arose, accrued or otherwise was or became due and owing at or prior to January 13, 1991, the date on which the Debtors commenced their cases under chapter 11 of title 11 of the United States Code (the "Bankruptcy Code"), to file a written proof of such Claim or Interest with the Clerk of the Bankruptcy Court (the "Clerk") by mailing the original and one copy of the proof of such Claim or Interest to the Clerk at:

P. O. Box 2903
San Antonio, Texas 78299-2903

or delivery to the Clerk at:

615 E. Houston Street
San Antonio, Texas 78205

with a copy to the Debtors in care of:

Baker & Botts
P. O. Box 1848
Dallas, Texas 75221-1848

so that it is actually received on or before 5:00 p.m., Central Daylight Time, on August 20, 1991 (the "Bar Date"). Proofs of Claim or Interest are deemed filed only when they are actually received.

As used herein, the term "Claim" means (a) a right to payment, whether or not such right is reduced to judgment, liquidated, unliquidated, fixed, contingent, matured, unmatured, disputed, undisputed, legal, equitable, secured or unsecured; or (b) a right to an equitable remedy for breach of performance if such breach gives rise to a right of payment, whether or not such right to an equitable remedy is reduced to judgment, fixed, contingent, matured, unmatured, disputed, undisputed, secured or unsecured.

As used herein, the term "Interest" means (a) a share in the Debtor whether or not denominated "stock" or similar security; or (b) a warrant or right (other than a right to convert) to purchase, sell or subscribe to a share of security a kind specified in clause (a) of this sentence.

TAKE FURTHER NOTICE THAT if you are required to file a proof of Claim or Interest and fail to do so on or before August 20, 1991 at 5:00 p.m., Central Daylight Time, in the manner prescribed in this notice, you shall be forever barred from voting upon, or receiving distribution under, any plan or plans of reorganization of the Debtors, you will be forever barred from asserting any such Claim against or Interest in any of the Debtors or their successors or assigns, and you will receive no further mailings or notices in these chapter 11 cases.

THE FOLLOWING PERSONS AND ENTITIES NEED NOT FILE PROOFS OF CLAIM OR INTEREST AT THIS TIME:

A. Any person who, or entity which, has already filed a proof of Claim against or Interest in the Debtors with the Clerk and provided a copy of such Claim to the Debtors need not file a duplicate proof of Claim or Interest. Such a Claim or Interest shall be deemed to be and shall be treated as a properly filed Claim, subject to the objection of the Debtors or any party in interest to allowance thereof; provided that any person who, or entity which, has already filed a proof of Claim or Interest but did not serve the Debtors must serve a copy of such proof of Claim or Interest on the Debtors in the manner described above.

B. Any person or entity (i) whose Claim is listed in the schedules of liabilities as filed by the Debtors (the "Schedules") with the Clerk and is not listed as "disputed," "contingent," or "unliquidated" and (ii) who agrees with the classification and amount set forth therein.

C. Proofs of Claims or Interest are NOT required for claims solely for the interests represented by shares of the Debtors' stock. However, proofs of Claims must be filed for any and all Claims and Interests based on transactions in the Debtors' securities, including but not limited to claims for damages or rescission based on the purchases or sale of any such securities.

D. Any of the Debtors or any affiliate of the Debtors holding a Claim against one or more of the other Debtors need not file a proof of Claim in respect of such Claim.

E. Holders of Claims whose Claims have heretofore been allowed by Order of the Bankruptcy Court need not file proofs of such Claims.

Acts or omissions of the Debtors prior to January 13, 1991 including, but not limited to the Debtors' indemnifications, guarantees and alleged environmental liabilities arising from the Debtors' operations or from their real or personal property presently or previously owned by them give rise to Claims notwithstanding the fact that actual injury has not yet been manifested or such Claims may not have matured or become fixed or liquidated prior to such date. Therefore, any person or entity having a Claim or potential Claim against the Debtors, no matter how remote or contingent, must file a timely proof of such Claim in order for such Claim to be recognized. Any such Claim not timely asserted shall be discharged and pursuit thereof forever barred.

ALL PERSONS AND ENTITIES OTHER THAN THOSE DESCRIBED IN PARAGRAPHS "A", "B", "C", "D" AND "E" ABOVE MUST FILE A PROOF OF CLAIM OR INTEREST IN THE MANNER DESCRIBED IN THIS NOTICE ON OR BEFORE AUGUST 20, 1991 AT 5:00 P.M., CENTRAL DAYLIGHT TIME, OR THEY SHALL BE FOREVER BARRED FROM VOTING UPON OR RECEIVING DISTRIBUTIONS UNDER ANY PLAN OR PLANS OF REORGANIZATION IN THESE CASES AND WILL RECEIVE NO FURTHER MAILINGS OR NOTICES IN THESE CASES.

Claims of co-debtors, sureties, or guarantors that may be filed under Section 501(b) of the Bankruptcy Code and Bankruptcy Rule 3005 and Claims to be filed by the Debtors on behalf of a creditor under Section 501(c) of the Bankruptcy Code and Bankruptcy Rule 3004 may be filed with the Clerk on or before 5:00 p.m., Central Daylight Time, on September 16, 1991.

Proofs of Claim or Interest must be prepared and filed in the manner required by Bankruptcy Rule 3001 and shall specifically set forth the name or names of the holder of the Claim or Interest, the name or names of the Debtor or Debtors against which such Claim or Interest is asserted, and if a Claim or Interest is asserted against more than one of the Debtors, a separate proof of such Claim or Interest must be filed in each such Debtor's bankruptcy case. The Joint Administration Case Number shall not be used for this purpose, and Claims filed under the Joint Administration Case Number shall be deemed filed only against Insilco Corporation. Proofs of Claim or Interest may be filed by an actual agent or representative of the holder of such Claim or Interest in accordance with Bankruptcy Rule 2019; no so-called "class proofs of Claims" shall be recognized herein as satisfying Section 501(a) of the Bankruptcy Code or Bankruptcy Rules 2019, 3001, 3002, or 3003.

Proof of Claim or Interest forms may be obtained by contacting the Clerk at:
