The Easter message

From death...resurrection. From despair...hope, a new beginning and the promise of everlasting life. That is the message of Easter, commemorated today by Christians around the world.

Easter weekend snow buries Rockies, Plains

By ROGER PETTERSON
Associated Press Writer

An "unusually strong" spring storm plastered up to 3 feet of wet snow on the central Rockies and western Plains on Saturday and sent thunderstorms, high winds and tornadoes across the Midwest and the South, killing eight people and destroying homes and property.

The winter-like weather, which ended a week that earlier saw temperatures in the 70s at Denver, closed schools and forced cancellation of some Easter services, and threatened young livestock.

"This is when it starts catching everybody — snow tires get off, and you just kind of forget about it," said Yellow Cab driver Jim Polinski as he slid through downtown Denver in the predawn hours Saturday.

Snow fell early Saturday across eastern Colorado, western Kansas, western Nebraska and southeastern Wyoming, and a winter storm warning was posted for northeastern Colorado and the Pikes Peak-Palmer Divide area.

Tornadoes and heavy thunderstorms whipped through Mississippi, killing four people in Tallahatchie and LeFlore counties, the state Highway Patrol said. Several houses and numerous mobile homes were destroyed, said Ed Ambrose, a local civil defense official.

The National Weather Service reported tornado touchdowns in the northcentral Mississippi towns of Minter City, Philipp, Schlater and Water Valley.

The storm also dragged a 1,000-gallon septic tank out of the ground and carried it a half-mile across a field, authorities said.

Another tornado plowed through a residential area north of Memphis, Tenn., Saturday afternoon, injuring two people and damaging several houses, said sheriff's deputies.

Rain-swollen Bear Creek in Lebanon, Mo., was blamed for the death of a woman whose car was swept from a bridge Saturday morning, highway patrol troopers said. A passenger in the car managed to kick out a window and escape, the troopers said. Three other people were killed Friday near El Dorado Springs, Mo., when their car slid on rain-slick pavement into the path of a truck.

Nearly 2 feet of snow had fallen on parts of northern Colorado and southeastern Wyoming since Friday, with an even 3 feet at Buckhorn Mountain, northwest of Fort Collins, Colo., and 35 inches in the foothills northwest of Denver, the National Weather Service said. Denver got a foot of snow overnight. Up to 32 inches fell in the mountains west of Cheyenne, Wyo., and light snow continued Saturday in the southeastern and central parts of the state.

"This storm is stronger than your average April snowstorm but not unprecedented," said Steve Markkanen, a weather service forecaster in Denver. In April 1885, 23 inches fell in the Denver area, and about 17 inches fell in the late 1950s. "So this is unusually strong storm, but it's by no means a record-breaker."

He said the storm would ease off Sunday, but warned that another storm front could arrive by midweek. "A very strong storm system is rushing toward us. There will be a risk of more snow, but it's too early to tell whether it's a major storm like this one."

Ahead of the storm center, Columbia, Mo., got 2.96 inches of rain in an 18-hour period and Quinter, Kan., got 3.11 inches in 24 hours. A flash flood watch was issued for parts of Tennessee, Kentucky and Kansas and some flooding was reported in southwestern Missouri.

Bomb threat diverts plane

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo. (AP) — A United Airlines jetliner carrying 437 people on a flight from San Francisco to Honolulu landed safely here Saturday night after being diverted because of a bomb threat, authorities said.

"It was a normal landing," said Sterling Campbell, Colorado Springs public affairs spokesman, adding that passengers got off without incident and were taken by bus to the airport terminal.

The Boeing 747, United's Flight 35, landed on the airport's main runway at 8:41 p.m. EST and taxied to the far end, he said.

Bomb squads "thoroughly searched" the plane and found no explosives, said United spokesman Chuck Novak from the airline's headquarters in Chicago.

The jumbo jet left San Francisco at 2:20 p.m. PST but was diverted after an anonymous caller told KGO-TV in San Francisco there was a bomb aboard the plane, said John Ball, area manager of the Oakland Air Traffic Control Center.

A caller first phoned the station around 2:45 p.m. PST, saying he had heard there was a bomb aboard the jetliner, a station official said. He called back about half an hour later.

"I put the bomb on that plane," the caller said, according to Amy Matheson, an assignment editor at the station who talked with the man.

She said the caller asked for $50,000 in small, unmarked bills from United in exchange for telling the airline how to disengage the device. Ms. Matheson notified authorities at San Francisco International Airport who ordered the plane to turn back.

The caller phoned again around 5 p.m. PST, saying, "I want to be on the news and I want my $50,000," according to Ms. Matheson.

Ball said the plane was sent to a high elevation airport because the caller apparently had told the television station the bomb was a pressure-sensitive device.

Ms. Matheson said the caller claimed the device was designed to activate once the plane reached 4,500 feet on its ascent and to explode once the plane descended to 6,000 feet when approaching a landing in Hawaii.

The Colorado Springs airport is about 6,200 feet above sea level. Planes are usually diverted there or to Denver's airport, also more than a mile high, when threats of altitude-sensitive bombs are received.

Vagrants live for times spent 'dead drunk'

Transient lifestyle contributes to three recent fire deaths

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

They're called vagrants, tramps, bums, winos, alcoholics, misfits, leeches, transients, panhandlers, drifters, drunkards and derelicts.

Among themselves, they're friends just seeking to survive from day to day, drink to drink, drunk to drunk.

Three of their lot in Midland died last week in a night-time fire in an abandoned house just north of downtown Midland. Six of the nine men who were spending the night there escaped.

"They were very nice people," said Mozelle Kimbrough, assistant manager of a nearby Stop & Go convenience store, which the vagrants frequented. "They were alcoholics, but that's a sickness. They never got out of line; they bummed money sometimes."

Ms. Kimbrough was sympathetic with their plight — the way of life into which the men had fallen.

"It's rough being in a town where you don't have people (relatives)," she said. "They do a little panhandling, and sometimes I have to call the police on them, but they understand, and they come back."

The three men, Red, 53; Robert, 33, and Ron, 29, who died in the fire were "mighty fine boys," she said. "They drank too much."

Ms. Kimbrough said she and Bonnie Wheeler, who manages the B&B Liquor Store next door at Big Spring Street and Louisiana Avenue, said they were going to take flowers in remembrance of the three men to the funeral home.

Jail time often welcome respite

Sonny looked pretty rough for a drunk.

"I've sure got a hangover today," he said. Sonny's heavily-lined face made him appear older than his 58 years. He has kind blue eyes, peppered hair, is somewhat stooped and doesn't often smile.

The day before, he was thrown into jail for drunkenness, which has been his usual state for 22 years. And the day before that, three of his drinking buddies died in a fire in a vacant house where nine vagrants had been sleeping in their drunkenness. Six got safely out and disappeared into the night.

U.S. Army took no action against illegal alien

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — An illegal alien who joined the U.S. Army with a phony birth certificate says military officials discovered his identity three years ago but never did anything about it, the El Paso Times reported in a copyright story Saturday.

Pfc. Manuel Grajeda, an air defense gunner whose term of duty expires May 5, says he hopes to reenlist but doubts the Army will let him.

Army officials, who say an investigation into the matter was apparently never completed, said they reopened the case Friday when contacted by the Times.

Grajeda says his ruse probably would have never been discovered had he not been assigned in 1981 to Fort Bliss, the El Paso base where a man whose identity he assumed with the phony birth certificate has been stationed since 1975.

A native of Cuidad Juarez, Mexico, a border city near El Paso, Grajeda said he joined the Army because he needed a job. He said he enlisted six years ago in Los Angeles after buying in Mexico an exact duplicate of a birth certificate belonging to Juan Beltran, a civilian employee at Fort Bliss.

Beltran at the time was a member of the Texas National Guard and a civilian employee at Fort Bliss. The military computer issuing paychecks balked at paying Beltran and Grajeda on the same Social Security number, and Fort Bliss' criminal investigation division began an inquiry.

He told the Times he began having problems with the Internal Revenue Service in 1983 when his Social Security number showed up on tax returns for both himself and Grajeda.

"I don't blame him (for being upset)," Grajeda said. "I'm really sorry for what I did."

Beltran, who has never met Grajeda, said he has had trouble getting both income tax refunds and National Guard pay, and has been given a temporary income tax account number by the IRS.

The Army Criminal Investigation Department began an investigation of the matter in 1981 after receiving a complaint from Beltran, according to Army documents. But the agent conducting the probe no longer works at the base and Army officials said that the investigation may not have been completed.

Another criminal investigator signed papers which listed Grajeda's real name and recommended no prosecution, the Times said.

The report was accompanied by a letter from Capt. Anthony Giasi, Grajeda's commander, asking that Grajeda be given an honorable discharge and allowed to enlist under his real name. But the Army apparently never acted on the report, the Times said.

Khadafy foes in England live in fear of death squads

LONDON (AP) — Police guard Hashim Bengalboum's house and his children are staying away from school again. Other Libyan exiles in Britain are terrified of being identified as opponents of the regime of Col. Moammar Khadafy.

"There's every sign a new reign of terror has begun," said Bengalboum, member of one Libyan group opposed to Khadafy's radical rule. "The police do their best, but we know we're at risk."

The exiles' fears increased when a gunman inside the Libyan Embassy opened fire Tuesday on 70 masked anti-Khadafy demonstrators across the street, killing a policewoman and wounding 11 of the protesters. Since the shooting, British police have encircled the embassy, where "revolutionary student" supporters of Khadafy are holed up with diplomats.

Also, a bomb exploded in a passenger terminal at London's Heathrow Airport Friday, injuring 25 people, and Scotland Yard said there were "similarities" between that blast and bombings last month that were aimed at Libyan dissidents.

"We're on a Khadafy hit squad list — like any Libyan abroad whose loyalty to the regime is not well known," Bengalboum said in a telephone interview from his brother Mohammed's home in the northern city of Manchester. Mohammed, 40, heads a dissident group, the Libyan Constitutional Union, which claims widespread support among the 7,500 Libyans living in Britain.

world

Since fleeing Libya in 1976 after joining anti-Khadafy riots at Tripoli University in the Libyan capital, Hashim Bengalboum has completed a mechanical engineering degree at Manchester Polytechnic and now works with the Constitutional Union.

The United States and most West European countries also have Libyan exiles, and in 1981 the United States ordered Khadafy to close his Washington Embassy, citing "support for international terrorism."

Khadafy's 1980 decree that Libyan exiles return home or "be liquidated" was followed up by killers. A total of 11 Libyan exiles were slain in Britain, West Germany, Greece and Lebanon.

But there've been strong signals — culminating in Tuesday's fatal demonstration — that Khadafy has targeted Britain as a key center of action against dissidents.

Last February, a four-member "revolutionary student" committee took over the Libyan Embassy here with Khadafy's blessing.

Dr. Omar Sodani, who emerged as the group's chief spokesman, announced the takeover at a news conference with repeated warnings that Britain would pay for harboring Libyan dissidents.

"Britain's intransigence will be met with a stronger and more forceful stand and Britain alone will bear the responsibility for any consequences," said Sodani.

Hashim Bengalboum lives with his brother and sister-in-law and their four children aged 5 to 11. The family has been under police protection since a March 11 spate of bombings in London and Manchester — including one at Bengalboum's former home. The blasts injured 26 people. Four Libyans in London on student visas have been charged with planting the bombs.

"We're keeping the children away from school, Khadafy will go to any lengths and we fear for them," said Bengalboum.

Many of the 5,000 Libyan students in London are on Libyan government grants, which mean automatic membership in the Jamahiriya, or Libyan, Students' Congress.

"After the bombings, hundreds of them were ordered to join a pro-Khadafy demonstration on pain of losing their passports and grants."

Khadafy's rhetoric means action

ROME (AP) — The revolutionary rhetoric of Libyan leader Col. Moammar Khadafy has time and again been translated into action, from a dogfight with U.S. Navy jets to financial support for rebels in Chad, Northern Ireland and the Philippines.

Now the radical leader of the oil-rich North African nation is standing up to Britain, where the Libyan Embassy in London has been sealed off since Tuesday.

Traditionally, Khadafy's fiery speeches blast his opponents, calling them "stooges" of the United States, Israel and other Western or pro-Western nations he opposes.

His words are backed by millions of oil dollars along with military troops and death squads believed to have killed dissident Libyans living abroad.

Khadafy has given financial support to the Irish Republican Army, fighting to drive the British from Northern Ireland, and provided money to Moslem guerrillas in the Philippines.

His relations with the Arabs are a history of grand initiatives and dismal failures. Since he came to power, he has participated in at least five unsuccessful "unity" efforts involving at various times Egypt, Sudan, Syria, Tunisia, Algeria and Chad.

HIS TROOPS currently occupy the northern half of Chad. His 1983 invasion of that neighboring nation, ostensibly on behalf of a disenfranchized former president, was the second in three years.

Khadafy's capacity for keeping Western nations on guard is seemingly boundless.

In 1980, at least nine Libyan dissidents were killed in a series of attacks in Western Europe. In August 1981, Libyan fighter-jets challenged U.S. Navy warplanes over the Gulf of Sidra, over which Libya has made a disputed claim of sovereignty. The American planes downed two of the Libyan aircraft in a dogfight.

In December 1981, U.S. officials said they had received reports that Libyan "hit squads" had been dispatched to assassinate President Reagan.

KHADAFY routinely denies involvement in terrorist and military actions in other countries — denials that usually are accompanied by verbal attacks on his foes.

Khadafy claims he is non-aligned, but he maintains close relations with the Soviet Union, which is one of Libya's biggest arms suppliers.

The siege in London began when machine-gun fire from the embassy — formally a Libyan People's Bureau — killed a policewoman and wounded 11 anti-Khadafy demonstrators Tuesday.

Tripoli Radio since has issued what appeared to be a veiled threat to the safety of the 8,000 Britains living in Libya.

"We are trying to calm the masses and urging them to control themselves so that they do not do anything against the British citizens," it said Friday. "If this situation continues, patience has a limit and the suppressed popular anger will explode."

Abdul Hamid Bakoush, the last Libyan prime minister under the monarchy that Khadafy overthrew in 1969, predicted the embassy incident would produce a period of relative quiet on the Libyan foreign front.

"Khadafy will keep things quiet for two or three months and will then resume his terrorist activities in Europe," Bakoush told The Associated Press in Cairo, Egypt.

At the front line of Khadafy's struggle are his People's Bureaus, the one-time embassies that were taken over in a radicalization of the country's foreign service in 1980.

Western diplomats say the People's Bureaus are used by Khadafy to keep a close watch on Libyan dissidents in foreign nations.

IN ATHENS, the Libyan People's Bureau has a staff of 35, large for an embassy in the Greek capital. Foreign diplomats indicate the staff spends much of its time keeping an eye on Libyan students and nationals in Greece.

A Greek diplomatic source who requested his name not be used said contacts between the Greek Foreign Ministry and the People's Bureau are "are perfectly normal." But he indicated that affairs of substance are handled directly with Tripoli.

Abdul Kher, a correspondent in Rome for the official Libyan news agency JANA, said that all Libyan diplomatic outposts have been turned into People's Bureaus, "except for two or three African countries" which refuse to accredit People's Bureaus members.

Black migrant workers join families for Easter

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Easter is a special time for Effie and Joseph Sndolovu and their 4-year-old daughter Johanna. They get to be together.

Mrs. Sndolovu, 42, has a pass to reside in a white area of Johannesburg, where she works as a maid for white family that provides her with living quarters.

Sndolovu, 53, has a similar pass, but it applies only to a dormitory in Vereeniging, two hours south by bus, where he works as parts manager for an automobile dealership.

Johanna has no pass. She lives with relatives in the distant northern homeland of the family's Sesotho Tribe.

The family's separate existence has been determined by South Africa's "influx control" laws that regulate the number of blacks who can work — but not settle — in "white" areas.

A pillar of the apartheid system that keeps blacks and whites separate, the influx laws are among those most despised by blacks.

Blacks from impoverished rural villages can find jobs in the white cities.

But for the Sndolovus, like many others, the jobs are too far from home to allow weekend visits. They can count on seeing their daughter only twice a year, on the long Christmas and Easter holidays.

"She is so happy when she sees me," Mrs. Sndolovu says. "She asks if this time I am going to stay.

"When I have to leave, she is all the time crying."

She says she would stay at home if there were jobs. She never imagines her husband with a career close to his family.

"When we are old we will be together," she says with resignation.

Studies conducted over the years indicate that the policy of separating black migrant families tears down the family as an institution and leaves youngsters with too little parental guidance. It can create additional social ills such as alcohol abuse and crime.

But reunion, not separation, is the theme of Easter as families return to their tribals area. The holiday runs from Friday through Monday.

It is a weekend for feasting and preaching, for welcoming in neighbors and loved ones, for learning of births and deaths and staying up late before rising in the morning to sing hymns on a shaded hillside.

Workers take holiday

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — Quiet and all but deserted, Managua broiled tranquilly under a tropic sun this Easter weekend as its residents, apparently unworried by rebel forays, took to the seaside.

With Nicaragua's ports cleared of mines, the town of San Juan del Norte retaken from rebels in the south and only scattered skirmishing in the north, the Sandinista capital was relaxed to the point of lethargy.

Most workers were given Thursday and Friday off in observance of Holy Week, creating a four-day shutdown of all but the most essential services. Easter holidays of as long as 10 days are traditional throughout the region.

Thousands of residents fled the baking heat of Managua for the seashore or the mountains, leaving behind in almost eerie emptiness a city that never fully recovered from a devastating earthquake in 1972 that left its downtwon area in ruins.

So completely shut down was the capital that when two U.S. senators came to visit on a fact-finding trip on Thursday, embassy officials complained they could find few Sandinista officials left in town for them to meet.

"You don't give people a four-day holiday and close up shop like this if you're worried or feel you're under pressure, a Western observer said.

"Despite the rhetoric in the (government-controlled) press, there's no real alarm here — not on the part of the government nor on the part of the people," he added.

Early in the week, anti-Sandinista rebels based in Costa Rica captured San Juan del Norte, a small, isolated and not very strategic port on Nicaragua's southeast Caribbean coast.

By Wednesday, the government had pushed back the rebels of the Revolutionary Democratic Alliance and recaptured the town after heavy shelling and bombing.

In the north, where a much larger rebel force operates out of bases in Honduras, an anti-government offensive begun in late March appeared to have run out of steam.

WEATHER SUMMARY

AP Laserphoto Map

Easter rain for parts of Washington, Oregon, the central Plains, Great Lakes and from Ohio to Georgia and South Carolina is forecast by the National Weather Service.

Basin area should have 'heavenly' Easter weather

From Staff and Wire Reports

Easter will be blessed with heavenly weather in the Permian Basin, say forecasters at the National Weather Service, Midland Regional Airport.

Fair skies are expected through Monday with highs in the middle 70s and lows near 40. Winds today should be from the west-northwest at a gentle 10 to 20 mph.

No rain is expected in the immediate future, with total precipitation this year measuring a meager 0.59 of an inch. Normally, Midland has received 2.35 inches by the end of April.

Saturday's high reached 70 degrees — falling 18 degrees short of the record 98 set in 1965. An overnight low of 45 was nine above the 36 mark recorded in 1931.

STATE

A cold front followed Saturday on the heels of record warm temperatures in Texas, threatening to bring lows in the 30s and 40s across wide areas of the state.

The front, stretching southward from Eastern Oklahoma across East Texas to near Freeport and Brownsville, collided with warmer Gulf air, prompting widely scattered thunderstorms.

Precipitation was reported from Houston northward into Louisiana and Arkansas, while cloudy skies prevailed across the Panhandle, East and South Texas.

A thin layer of dust reduced visibilities in South Central and deep South Texas. The National Weather Service said visibility was two miles in the McAllen area.

NATION

A blast of wintry chill invaded springtime in the Rockies on Saturday, dumping as much as 3 feet of snow in the mountains of Colorado and Wyoming, with rain over the Northwest and in much of the nation's midsection.

Snow continued to fall in the Rocky Mountain foothills of Utah and Colorado and throughout the central high Plains, and hail and high winds plagued parts of Texas.

Tornado watches were posted for parts of Arkansas, Missouri, Illinois, Kentucky, Tennessee and Mississippi, while rain spattered much of the central Plains and the mid-Mississippi Valley.

Rainshowers also were scattered across the lower Ohio Valley, northern New England and the mid-Atlantic Coast, with more showers over the northern Pacific Coast.

Midland statistics

FORECAST

Today should be fair with highs in the middle 70s and west to northwest winds of 10-20 mph. Tonight and Monday should be fair with lows near 40 and highs in the middle 70s.

Two killed when bus rolls over

PAROWAN, Utah (AP) — A chartered bus carrying high school students and scouts home from a ski trip rolled over early Saturday, killing two people and injuring 43 others, authorities said.

The cause of the accident on Interstate 15 was under investigation, but "it looked like a case of a sleepy driver. That's our main line right now," said Utah Highway Patrol trooper David Excell.

The injured were taken to Valley View Medical Center in nearby Cedar City, where six people, mostly teen-agers, were admitted for treatment of broken bones, fractures and a concussion. All either were in satisfactory or fair condition, said Dahl Gardner, hospital administrator.

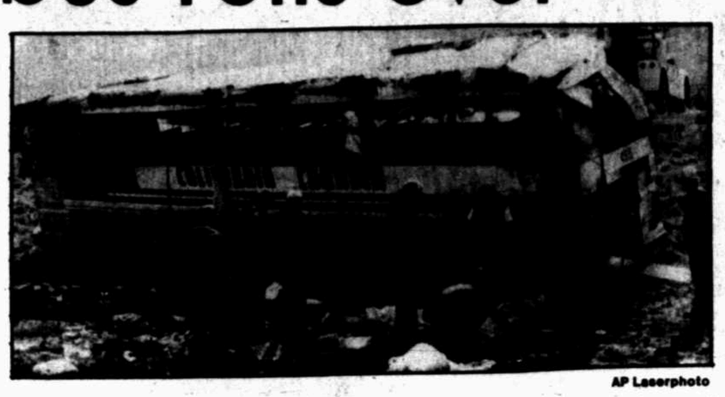

The injured included students from Laguna Hills, Dana Point and Capistrano high schools in Orange County, Calif., two advisers and a driver. Gardner said 38 others were treated for minor injuries and were released.

The dead were identified by the highway patrol as Amy George, 17, of Dana Point, and Byron Hearne, 16, of Mission Viejo.

Excell said the relatives of one victim were driving to Cedar City from Orange County to make a positive identification of the body.

"They can't believe it," Excell said.

The bus, chartered by the Boy Scouts of America from California Charters Inc., was taking its occupants home from a skiing vacation in Steamboat Springs, Colo.

Vagrants spend lives 'dead drunk'

"We loved them," said Ms. Wheeler. "When they'd get out of jail, they'd come around here. You could tell (they had just gotten out of jail) because they were cleaned up."

Their obsession is liquor.

But when they do talk about things other than liquor, they'll talk about their families and their past.

"Most of the time they talk about their families and what they used to have and what they lost," Ms. Wheeler said. "I'll tell them 'You know why you lost them, because of your drinking.' I'm plain-spoken."

The three who died were among Midland's regular winos. They had been carted off to jail numerous times for public intoxication, and while there worked as trusties assisting the City Jail cooks.

SOME OF the others were more transients than resident vagrants.

"They'd just come in for awhile, then they'd be gone," she said. "They'd catch the train...the box cars."

The men were well behaved.

"I never called the law on them unless they didn't mind me, and most of the time, they minded me," she said. "You miss them. They'd come in here, buy a half gallon of whiskey or vodka. We miss them, because we argued and fussed with them. They liked me to fuss at them," she said. "They said, 'We'd feel horrible if you didn't gripe and bitch at us.'"

Some occasionally worked; some panhandled; some did both and, to boot, got food stamps once a month.

"Some of them didn't work at all," Ms. Wheeler said. "All they lived for was to drink and go to jail, and they're good old boys. They've got problems. I called them 'my winos.'"

But since "winos" hanged around the store too much and occasionally would snatch a bottle, their presence tended to "ruin your trade." So, the store stopped handling the cheaper wines, such as Night Train, Diamond Red, Ripple and 20-20 (Mad Dog), to cut down on the wino trade. It did some. But others, as they had done before, would pool their money and buy cheap vodka, such as Kamchatka, for $9.15 a half gallon. "Vodka is cheaper than whiskey."

"Vodka is pretty cheap to buy," said B&B clerk Bill Brockmoller, "and it's got a good kick to it."

Brockmoller said the vagrants are "not troublemakers. They can't afford to be. All they want is enough money to get booze to get high."

A ploy many of them use to beg for money is not "Hey, mister," would you give a fellow a dollar for a cup of coffee, sandwich or for bus fare?

Instead, the drunkard will say, "I'm a friendly neighborhood alcoholic," and would ask for money for beer, whiskey, wine or vodka while offering to do a little work in exchange. "People like that direct appeal," Brockmoller said.

THEY RARELY EAT. They had rather drink. Food tends to make them sick since their bodies are not used to a regular diet.

But if they really get too weakened from lack of food or it's bitter cold, they'll flaunt their tipsiness before a policeman or cause just enough of a disturbance to get thrown into jail.

"Police usually know what they are up to," Brockmoller said. "It's a matter of getting something to eat."

Booze, not food, is their priority.

"They'll talk about the number of bottles (they've drunk)," said Fire Marshal Jerry Petree, who investigated the April 17 fire and sought out some of the six who fled the burning house. "But they don't say anything about having their last meal."

Petree said he has seen them digging for food in dumpsters. "I feel sorry for the damned old bums," he said.

"They'll just walk up and open the lip (of the dumpster) and go shopping."

Within a few blocks, the vagrants have their choice of chicken, Mexican food, doughnuts or work. The Texas Employment Commission, where some of the vagrants sought day labor, is near the liquor store and the house where Ron, Robert and Red died.

"They're a different breed of cat," Fire Chief James Roberts said of the vagrants. "They're hopeless. Whatever it takes to exist, they'll do it. They don't exist as we do; they don't think as we do."

THEY'LL SLEEP in abandoned houses on either side of the tracks, on parking lots, under loading docks, in warehouses, in box cars, in culverts, in abandoned cars and in dumpsters. Many have their own bedrolls.

As fire chief, Roberts' concern is cutting out fire hazards. And keeping tramps and liquor out of vacant houses is one way to prevent fires.

"I'd like to know what the solution is," he said of vagrants in the town. "I know what the problem is. Society has always had a problem with this type of person."

The city of Midland has plans to raze or have razed 150 to 170 "unsightly" and condemned houses on Midland's east and south sides, noted Warren Cloyd, city code enforcer. "Some of them are so far gone that they can do nothing with them."

Among those houses is the rock house at 703 N. Marienfeld St. where the three men died. Bobby Buys, owner of the house, had planned to have it moved to Greenwood. "I was going to take it out into the country, rebuild it and use it for a home," he said.

Roberts wasn't optimistic about preventing the vagrants from entering houses, even if they're boarded up.

"It won't do any good," he said. "If the bums want go get in, they'll pull the boards down."

Even building a chain-link fence around the city and posting guards wouldn't keep the vagrants out, Roberts said. "They'd still find some way to get in.... We've had a certain number of them forever."

And from Roberts' viewpoint, putting them in jail is a "reward to them."

"They've got good hot meals, a nice, clean place to sleep. There's no danger to them."

Back in the liquor store where Ron, Red and Robert had traded, a friend of Ms. Wheeler said she just doesn't "understand anybody that lives like that" — existing just to drink.

"We've all got faults," she said. "They could have so much ahead of them."

Many winos find jail time a welcome respite

Sonny was elsewhere; he was sleeping in his bedroll in an old tin building across the railroad tracks. That's his home when he's not in jail or on the road.

The deaths of his drinking companions saddened him. He'll miss them. "We just treated each other like brothers; it's the same as losing a brother," Sonny said. "That's the way most (drunks) treat each other. Each one will do anything for another."

They were all good people, he said. He characterized his lost companions.

—Ron, 29: "Ron was a fine boy. He told me he had a grandmother in San Diego. All Ron done when he got out of here (jail) was mooch money and drink. Everybody thought the world of Ron. He was real polite. He was real good (at panhandling). He was one of the best."

—Robert, 33: "Robert was a little overbearing at times. I thought a lot of him."

—Red, 53: "He's a nice fellow, had a red complexion, kind of stocky. He stayed here (in jail) most of the time. He did some of the cooking, too."

Ron and Red had just gotten out of jail on Monday. By early Tuesday morning, they were dead drunk. Robert had been out of jail for several days, Sonny recalled. "He was so drunk he wouldn't even talk. He was drinking vodka, I guess."

They all had been in jail many times. Sonny, a trusty, still is. He'll be in jail this time until he "lays out" his $180 fine and $19 in court costs. As a trusty, he is credited with $22.50 each day he spends in jail. Non-trusties are credited with $15 a day.

Police Special Services Capt. Roger Meurer knew the three regulars — Red, Ron and Robert — quite well.

"They had responsibilities here," Meurer said. "They knew how to make coffee," he said, and helped out with cooking in the jail kitchen.

"IN A WAY, they felt needed here. They didn't have a job, and this was their job (working in the jail)."

If it was particularly cold outside or if they were getting the "shakes" and needed to "dry out" for awhile and get some nourishment, they'd get themselves locked up.

"They had a place to stay (in the jail)," Meurer said. "It's a dormitory. It has showers, lockers, innerspring mattresses. They get all the food they want to eat, as good a food you can find anywhere."

"You ain't a'kidding," said Sonny.

"They get everything but money and," said the captain, "hopefully, booze. But every now and then, they sneak booze in here."

"Yeah," agreed Sonny.

Meurer said most the drunks "know the ropes" well enough. "They can bum $25, $30 a day easy and go get drunk..., sleep in dumpsters or on the ground if it's warm enough."

When in jail, they get cleaned up and fattened; they are well fed. When out, they hardly eat. Eating may interfere with their drinking. Many scrounge around and look in trash cans or dumpsters to find food, such as fried chicken, pizzas, doughnuts, fish and beef from fast-food restaurants, and milk, produce and damaged canned goods from grocery stores.

"THESE PEOPLE are just caught up in the situation," Meurer said, "and just can't pull out. They get in vicious cycles."

"We give them clothes, shoes, everything," he said. "You feel sorry for them, but you just can't help them."

"It's hard to explain," said Sonny.

Sonny wasn't always a vagrant. He didn't used to spend most his life in jail after jail or on the streets, although he has drunk liquor most of his life.

Sonny was born in 1925 in an oil camp at Best, near Big Lake. His father bolted oil-storage tanks for the oilfields and water tanks for ranchers. By age 10, Sonny moved to McCamey, another oil boom town. He quit school in the fifth grade and later worked on a cable-tool rig at Bakersfield and then, like his father, started bolting tanks in Odessa.

In mid-1943, just three days shy of his 18th birthday, Sonny joined the U.S. Navy "before they drafted me." He served as a deckhand aboard amphibious troop ships in the South Pacific. "We hauled 1,800 men."

After the war, he married a woman he had met in Long Beach, Calif. "I was 21, and she was 18."

During the 14 years they were married, Sonny bolted tanks but mostly drove heavy-duty tankers and freightliners out of Los Angeles. They had three children.

"I STARTED drinking when my wife divorced me," he said. "That's when I started drinking a whole lot." That was in 1962.

"I used to drink mostly beer and, once in a while, whiskey," he said. "I don't drink much beer now. I don't get much of a kick out of it. I drink whiskey, wine, vodka. It's just like sloe gin: You drink a lot, and it hits you all at once."

Unlike Ron, Sonny said he's no good at panhandling and doesn't like to do it. When he can, he works at odd jobs, such as yard work, doing pit lining and "used to take anything I could out of the employment office...I can do yard work and stuff like that, odd jobs, and get by." Many drunks, he said, get $76 a month in food stamps and spend the change they get on booze and cigarettes.

Outside of losing his family, job, home and "everything" to his alcoholic drinking, Sonny has suffered broken bones and blackouts.

"A man, a nut, threw me down and broke my left hip." For treatment of his broken bones and other ailments, such as his bleeding ulcer, he goes to the Veterans Administration Hospital.

"I've had a lot of blackouts; I'd be walking along and just fall." That's how he broke his shoulder bones.

ONCE HE GETS out of jail this time, Sonny said he plans to "straighten up a little and try to lighten up on my drinking for awhile."

Drinking booze is the symptom of his illness. Sonny said he is an alcoholic, has attended Alcoholics Anonymous meetings, but can't stay sober.

"Some of the guys was on dope along with their drinking. Some smoke pot and take pills. Drinking was my habit. That was bad enough."

"I don't know what makes me drink," Sonny said. "I just do it. I don't know why. I enjoy it. It makes me feel better."

Sonny said he tries not to drink too much.

"Some of them can't handle it; they get drunk and stagger around. I try not to get drunk myself. I get to feeling good. But sometimes I slip and get drunk."

Most guys he drinks with don't talk too much about their families or their past lives, he said.

"Seems about all they've got on their minds, usually, is getting drunk...They think about the past and that causes a lot of people to get drunk...He (the drunk) drinks 'til he gets sick (and passes out) and drinks the next morning to get well."

Drinking has been Sonny's downfall.

"Drinking costs you everything. It's the most expensive thing in the world," he said. "It costs you everything. I lost my home, my wife. It cost me everything I had, plus my health."

Recently, Sonny's close companion, a 52-year-old man named Austin, died of a heart attack in his presence. He was mixing booze with nitroglycerine medicine he was taking for his heart condition.

"Everybody liked him; he just shared and treated everybody good. All he wanted to do was drink."

For himself, Sonny has no resolve to quit drinking.

"I guess I'll always drink a little," he said. I'm going to try to slow down and take care of my health a little....

"That's the way with me. I'll just keep drinking as long as I've got it. When I'm out, I try to get more. I'll work and do most anything to get drinks, it seems."

British government seeks to expel Libyans

LONDON (AP) — The government wants everyone in the besieged Libyan Embassy to get out of Britain, even though that also means freedom for the gunman who killed a policewoman and wounded 11 Libyan dissidents, an official source said Saturday.

The source, who asked not to be identified, told The Associated Press the government is negotiating with the aim of getting all the people in the embassy out of the country, and he said the expulsions could take place in the next few days.

"The most obvious thing is that there is a distinct possibility that the killer will go free because it will be hard to prove it. The evidence has probably been destroyed. Also, the Libyans can hide behind the Vienna Convention" guaranteeing diplomatic immunity even for crimes, said the source.

Foreign Office and police estimates put the number of people in the embassy at 20 to 30.

Libyan leader Col. Moammar Khadafy told a news conference in Tripoli, Libya, that he was willing to send a team of investigators to London to find out who killed policewoman Yvonne Fletcher, the British Broadcasting Corp. reported.

Khadafy said if it was determined that the gunman was a Libyan, he would be returned to Libya, put on trial and punished, according to BBC. It quoted the colonel as saying Britain would be invited to send observers to any such trial.

BBC reporter Kate Adie, who was at the evening news conference, said that when she suggested there was a stalemate in the situation, Khadafy replied, "I think not. Things are opening up."

Khadafy also repeated his previous statements that Libyans inside the embassy were not armed and that the British were responsible for the events that occurred at the building.

Britain's ambassador in Tripoli, the Libyan capital, met with Libyan Foreign Minister Ali Abdussalam Treiki for a third straight day.

Home Secretary Leon Brittan told reporters after an all-day meeting here of the "crisis Cabinet" committee that the talks with Libya were going "painfully slowly" and feelings had been inflamed by Friday night's bombing at London's Heathrow Airport.

Witnesses describe deaths of 2,000 Nigerians

EDITOR'S NOTE: Without warning and for no apparent reason, members of a non-conformist Moslem sect, that believes not even bullets can stop them, rampaged through the streets of Yola in Nigeria with machetes, rifles and bows and arrows. For six days they slashed, burned and killed, leaving as many as 2,000 people dead and thousands homeless. An AP correspondent visited the city and describes a scene of horror.

By ROBERT WELLER

YOLA, Nigeria (AP) — Witnesses say the slaughter began as members of the fanatical Maitatsine Moslem sect returned from their 5:30 a.m. prayers. They began crying out "Barawo!" — thief, in the native Hausa language.

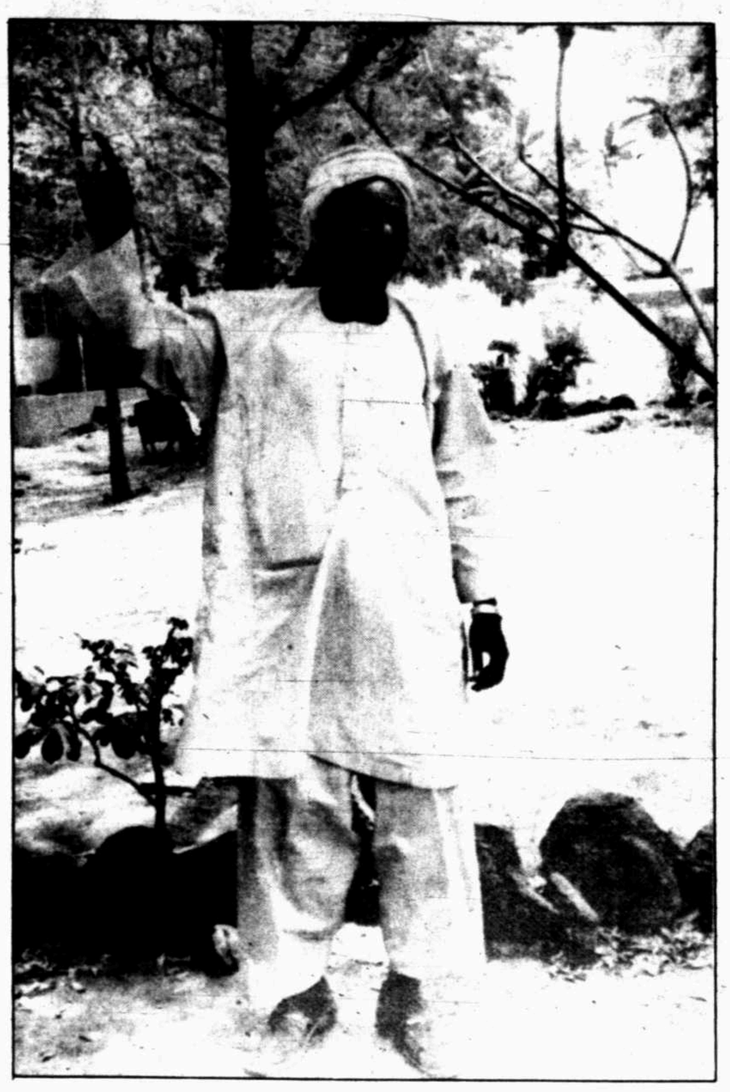

"People stepped out of their houses to see the thief, and a Maitatsine would knock them down and another would slash them to death with a machete," said Malam Mikailu, a Yola resident who claimed to see seven people killed while he ran for his own life.

Other residents, the police and government officials gave similar accounts of what happened here over six terrifying days starting Feb. 27 and ending March 3 with an army assault. None of them, in interviews with The Associated Press, could explain why it happened — what suddenly sparked the rampage that left an estimated 1,000 to 2,000 people dead — but it has happened before.

This was the third time in less than four years that this obscure Moslem sect, which rejects Mohammed as the true prophet of Islam, has gone on a killing spree. At least 5,000 people — mostly Moslem — have died in the three outbreaks, according to reports in the Nigerian press.

Many Yola residents fear some of the fanatics escaped the army's assault on their headquarters and will return. Police sources in Lagos, Nigeria's capital 750 miles southwest of here, said they had arrested some Maitatsines on April 13 during a crackdown on illegal aliens. Some of the sect members arrested were armed with axes, bows and arrows, and cutlasses — the kinds of weapons police say were used here.

J.A. Mamman, permanent secretary in the Ministry of Information and Social Affairs here in Gongola state, told the AP that at least 1,000 died in the latest carnage. Earlier, the state governor had put the toll at just over 500. Two well-informed Westerners who live in Yola said at least 2,000 bodies had been taken to the mortuary after it was over and it was likely many more were buried in the bush.

Malam Mikailu is a survivor and witness of the massacre of hundreds of Nigerians by the fanatical Matasine Moslem sect. The group does not accept Mohammed as the final prophet of Islam and considers other Moslems infidels.

Mamman said from 20,000 to 30,000 people had been uprooted temporarily by the riots, finally quelled when the army shelled the Maitatsine neighborhood. He added that 6,043 people lost all their belongings.

At the time of this reporter's recent visit, the district's homes, most with roofs blown off, remained abandoned, the walls covered with blood.

The violence that erupted Feb. 27 began for no apparent reason. Police were at the scene early, and there were conflicting reports on whether they moved in before or after the killing began. The sect, which was banned after 1982 riots, had been under surveillance but police said its members had been staying within the law. The group held no public meetings.

Mikailu, who works as a guard, said, "I saw the Maitatsines walk up to a young woman and ask if her father and brother were inside the house. When she said, 'Yes,' they ran in and killed them just like that."

Nigerian journalists who interviewed other survivors gave similar accounts. Musa Makaniki, the Maitatsine leader, whose whereabouts remain a mystery, was reported in these accounts to have sat on a pile of concrete blocks and listened to a radio while his followers slaughtered hundreds inside homes.

The Maitatsines did not attack women unless they were pregnant, still another baffling twist to this enigmatic group. Some pregnant women were killed when the fanatics slashed open their wombs looking for male fetuses, said Mamman and local journalists.

But the two Westerners, who declined to be further identified because they fear the Maitatsines have infiltrated the police and military, said the sect had recruited young boys from local markets in this town of some 80,000.

"They held chanting sessions with them at night and brainwashed them," one of the Westerners said. When the riots started, the young boys went to the main market and burned it down with kerosene. The older sect members did the killing, the Westerners said.

Mamman said police were reluctant to rush the fanatics because the Maitatsines were holding hostages in the neighborhood, and feared innocent people would be killed.

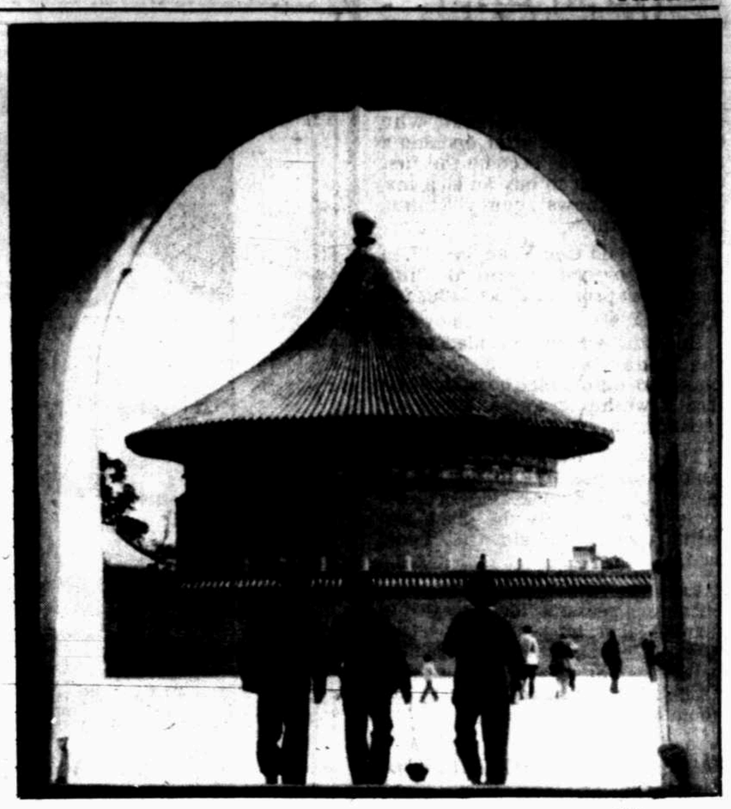

The Maitatsines believe "they are impervious to metal — that they can shake off bullets and disappear at will," one of the Westerners said. This source said the police were "shaking with fear, firing their weapons in the air. They believed the stories." There was little evidence of any rifle fire in the devastated buildings. The fanatics were armed with machetes, bows and arrows and some rifles, they said.

When the fighting began, residents of the Dubeli ward and the rest of the town packed their belongings and fled to the army barracks 3.5 miles outside Yola. For a week, the town was deserted, and even a quick visit by Nigeria's new military ruler, Maj. Gen. Muhammadu Buhari, failed to stop the violence.

Late Friday night, March 2, the army surrounded the district and began shelling in the early hours of Saturday.

By Sunday, March 4, the district was empty and in the hands of police and army units. Mamman said at least 1,000 people were arrested. But police said they could not identify Musa Makaniki, the sect leader, as being among the dead; there have been rumors that he has been seen in villages to the north.

The Maitatsines hold to their belief that they cannot be killed by bullets even though the founder of the movement, Mohammadu Marwa, was shot dead by police in riots in Kano, 520 miles northwest of Yola, in late 1980.

Army headquarters probe copter shooting

STUTTGART, West Germany (AP) — The U.S. Army's European headquarters is investigating whether a U.S. Army helicopter was in Czech air space when it was fired on by two Soviet-built warplanes, an Army spokesman said today.

The U.S. Cobra helicopter was not hit Friday by the rocket and cannon fire from the planes. It returned safely to its home station in West Germany, officials said.

Bavarian border police today said six West German civilian and police eyewitnesses reported seeing a U.S. Army helicopter in Czech air space shortly before the reported incident. The witnesses were not identified by name.

The witnesses reported seeing a Soviet-made MiG and another unspecified Soviet-made plane escort the helicopter back to the border, said Klaus Papenfuss, a spokesman for the West German border police in Bavaria. None saw shots fired.

The observers were on the West German side of the border, where visibility at the time of the incident was at least 12 miles due to clear skies, Papenfuss said. Some said they saw the copter above the Czech village of Zelezna Ruda, about 1½ miles inside the border, at 1:37 p.m. Others said they saw the aircraft about 3½ miles inside Czech air space at about 1:50 p.m.

In Washington, the Pentagon issued a brief statement about the incident, saying that it occurred at 2:40 p.m. (7:40 a.m. EST) and was under investigation.

Lt. Col. Charles White, an Army spokesman in Stuttgart, said today the helicopter was from the 2nd Armored Cavalry Regiment, based at Nuremberg. He said officials at U.S. Army Europe in Heidelberg were investigating whether the aircraft had entered Czech air space or the MiG warplanes crossed into West Germany air space.

They also were trying to determine the nationality of the MiGs, he said. White said he had no information on the identities of the helicopter pilots.

U.S. Army Europe is one of three divisions of the Stuttgart-based U.S. European Command.

Bernd Duering, a West German border policeman, said in an earlier telephone interview from Frankfurt that he believed the helicopter was in Czech territory when the shooting occurred, but not by more than six miles.

When asked if it was easy to stray off course in that region, he said, "It depends. If they hadn't been trained in the area, perhaps. But if they knew the territory they wouldn't have made that mistake. It doesn't happen often."

The Pentagon said the helicopter was "on a routine border aerial mission along the West German-Czechoslovakian border near Zwiesel, West Germany" when the shooting occurred. Zwiesel is 4.5 miles west of the Czech border.

Marcos foes end fast

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Thirty-six people ended a week-long fast today called to protest the administration of President Ferdinand E. Marcos, and Archbishop Cardinal Jaime Sin admonished them against using religion for political purposes.

The protesters, including the younger brother of assassinated opposition leader Benigno Aquino, have been campaigning for a boycott of the May 14 National Assembly elections.

They were joined in the last three days by 95 sympathizers, who followed their example and subsisted on a liquid diet of fruit juices, milk and water.

Sin, an outspoken critic of alleged human rights violations under Marcos' administration, told the group he was hesitant to address them at first because their fasting initially appeared to be only "a dramatic means to bring about the downfall of the present regime."

He said religious fasts should be held without publicity.

But he agreed to address the group after noting that as the days passed, the "focus (of the fasting) shifted from the political to the moral, from righteous indignation to self-purification," Sin said.

Because of that shift, he said the group had moved toward "planting a tiny seed that could lead to national reconciliation" in a country torn by Marcos' 18-year rule and Aquino's assassination last August.

Aquino was gunned down while in government custody as he returned from three years in the United States. A government-appointed commission currently is investigating responsibility in the slaying.

Sin spoke to the fasters behind closed doors in the auditorium of a Jesuit-run suburban Manila school. One faster gave The Associated Press a copy of his speech.

Protesters infiltrate base

MUTLANGEN, West Germany (AP) — About 35 anti-missile protesters from three countries cut a barbed wire fence and infiltrated a U.S. Army base housing nuclear missiles today. They were dragged away by dozens of West German police.

Two loud reports, which the demonstrators described as warning shots, were heard but military police did not confront the protesters. No injuries were reported.

At least four of the young protesters were seen cutting through a second barbed wire fence leading to the Pershing 2 missile storage depot and airfield at Mutlangen, headquarters for the 56th Field Artillery Brigade.

But most of the protesters sat in a grassy restricted area adjacent to what appeared to be a parking place and sang "We Shall Overcome."

The protesters hid in a forest surrounding the base before running up to the rear fence and cutting their way through. They then passed the wire cutters to some of the spectators, who cut part of the front fence.

The anti-nuclear group's press spokesman, Peter Becker, said at least 25 protesters were arrested and it was not known what happened to the four who tried to cut through the second fence.

There were about 10 paddy wagons, half a dozen police cars and at least 100 police at the scene within about 20 minutes.

Most of the protesters were believed to be from a Danish anti-nuclear group.

Peasant buys plane

PEKING (AP) — A man who became prosperous after opening a textile factory has become the first Chinese peasant to buy an airplane, the official news agency Xinhua reported Saturday.

Xinhua said Guo Yuanying, 37, of Henan province in central China made a net profit of $7,500 at his factory last year.

He and his family decided to put the money toward a $9,750 light plane to help neighbors in their local township spray pesticides and fertilizers on crops.

The local government plans to send three peasants to the Peking Aeronautical Engineering Institute to learn how to fly the plane and build a small airfield, the report said.

Reforms in the past five years encourage peasants, formerly tied to manual labor, to specialize in businesses. Although some are becoming wealthy, per capita income for China's 800 million peasants remains about $150 a year.

Vessels to be monitored

TOKYO (AP) — Japan is installing a powerful coastal surveillance system that will be able to monitor the movement of Soviet vessels through the Soya Strait under any weather conditions, a leading Japanese newspaper reported Saturday.

Yomiuri Shimbun said the $10 million device will be constructed by the end of this year and can monitor nearly all ship movement through the strait between Japan's northernmost main island of Hokkaido and the Soviet Union's Sakhalin Island.

Japanese Defense Agency officials, reached by telephone, said they could not comment on the report.

An average of 230 Soviet warships have passed through the Soya Strait each year for the past five years, according to the 1983 White Paper on Defense.

Afghans released

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan (AP) — Thirty-seven Afghans, who the Kabul government said were kidnapped by Pakistani authorities, have been freed from jail and sent back to Afghanistan, an official spokesman said Saturday.

The prisoners, 28 Afghan government soldiers and nine civilians, were handed over Friday afternoon at the Torkham border checkpoint, at the foot of the historic Khyber Pass, said government spokesman Younis M. Sethi.

He denied they were abducted and said they fled across the border when rebels overran the outpost during an attack last December.

News reports said the prisoners were received at the border by Afghan officials.

Party expels official

PEKING (AP) — China's ruling Communist Party expelled a Railway Ministry official for flirting with women, spending state money to send his children abroad and squandering funds on banquets and appliances, the Workers' Daily reported Saturday.

The newspaper said Wang Dequan, a vice director of the ministry's Foreign Affairs Office, abused his authority and misappropriated more than 12,000 yuan — about $6,000 — since 1982 for his family's use. The paper did not describe any punishment other than expulsion from the party.

In October the Communists began removing members who give the 40-million-member party a bad reputation.The state-run press has said the "rectification campaign" will take about three years.

Pope meets first lady

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Pope John Paul II met Saturday with Philippines First Lady Imelda Marcos and expressed admiration for the "vitality of the Catholic faith in your country."

Mrs. Marcos flew to Rome for ceremonies closing the Roman Catholic Church's Holy Year and the pope told her, "In keeping with the theme of the Jubilee Year, you come in a spirit of peace and reconciliation, in fraternity and friendship."

The pope recalled his visit to the Philippines in 1981 and said he was struck by the warmth of the people and diversity of cultural values and traditions.

"As you return to the Philippines, I ask you to assure the beloved people of your land of my pastoral love and constant prayers," he said in brief remarks in English.

Climber missing

KATMANDU, Nepal (AP) — A Bulgarian mountain climber is missing and may be in "very critical health" at an elevation of more than 27,000 feet on the slopes of Mount Everest, a Tourism Ministry official spokesman said today.

The spokesman told reporters that crew members at the base camp for Hristo Ivanov Prodanov, who had reached the 29,028-foot summit on Friday, said they had heard weak radio signals from the climber early this morning.

He said the signal "clearly indicated that somebody was pushing the radio button to call the base camp," but because no human voice was heard, the base camp member speculated that "Prodanov might be in very critical health."

The spokesman, who talked on condition he not be named, said Prodanov, 40, had no oxygen with him.

A two-person rescue party left the camp, at 24,665 feet, to climb to a higher camp at 26,568 feet and to search for their colleague, the spokesman said.

nation in brief

Peru's plan rejected

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — State officials have rejected Peru's plan to bring in 60 colorful but carnivorous piranhas as part of its exhibit at the World's Fair, for fear they might escape.

Jorge Borza Jr., commissioner general for Peru, says security would keep the sharp-toothed fish from escaping and that if they did reach the Mississippi they'd die because "the water's so contaminated."

The state has reason to worry about fair exhibits. The water hyacinth, which grows so dense it can choke streams, was introduced to the United States at the World's Industrial and Cotton Centennial Exhibition in New Orleans in 1884. Another Southern scourge, the fast-growing kudzu vine, made its debut during the 1876 Centennial Exposition.

The 1984 fair opens May 12.

Rooms available

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Thousands of rooms are still available in Southern California for the Olympics, despite predictions of traffic congestion and competition for overnight lodging.

Hotel executives told reporters Friday that many rooms could go empty during the summer Games and the Democratic National Convention in San Francisco because of public fear of overbookings.

A survey of 85 hotels and motels around Los Angeles — with more than 25,000 rooms — showed 27 percent of their rooms are still available during the Olympic Games, from July 27 to Aug. 13. However, hotels downtown and near Olympic events or the Democratic convention site reported they are heavily booked.

Whites to be pursued

BOSTON (AP) — District Attorney Newman Flanagan says he plans to prosecute five young white men in the beating of a black city bus driver under the state's racial and religious harassment law.

Mayor Raymond Flynn asked for action after the family of driver Milton DeVaughn, 32, complained that the Massachusetts Bay Transportation Authority tried to cover up the attack.

DeVaughn was attacked last Monday by eight to 10 white youths in the predominantly white West Roxbury section. Police said the gang threw him through the front door of his bus and smashed the windshield.

Judge rejects suit

NEW YORK (AP) — A judge has rejected the lawsuit of a Unification Church member who claimed her civil rights were violated by three "deprogrammers" who held her after an abduction by her parents.

U.S. District Judge Mary Johnson Lowe said Friday the evidence showed Wendy Joy Helander, 27, was not held against her will during three months of "deprogramming," as she claimed in a $9 million suit.

She testified she was frightened of well-known deprogrammer Theodore Roosevelt Patrick, but that he told her "You're free to leave." She had dropped charges against her parents.

Crewman innocent

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A crewman from a Colombian freighter has been found innocent of charges that he helped smuggle 71 pounds of cocaine into the country by dropping it to a diver in Los Angeles Harbor.

U.S. District Judge A. Wallace Tashima ruled Friday that the government could not prove that Julio E. Bohorquez, 27, of Bogota, Colombia, participated in the smuggling scheme in January.

Earlier in the week, three California men pleaded guilty to drug trafficking in the same case.

Military exercise staged

KEY WEST, Fla. (AP) — More than 30,000 military personnel are staging a joint training exercise designed to show the United States can protect sea lines of communication in the Caribbean basin.

Ocean Venture '84, is the largest joint military exercise conducted in the Caribbean, officials said Friday.

The 17-day exercises began Friday with the deployment of Florida National Guard troops to Key West and the testing of various command control equipment.

The main event will be an April 30 "D-Day assault" on Vieques Island, Puerto Rico, when the 26th Marine Amphibious Unit will launch the "attack" from the helicopter carrier Iow Jima and other ships.

FBI awaits results

WASHINGTON (AP) — The FBI is pressing ahead with its investigation of Friday's bomb blast at the Washington Navy Yard while awaiting the results of crime lab tests to determine the type of explosive used in the bombing, an FBI spokesman said today.

"The crime scene has been processed and all the evidence sent to the lab," said spokesman Ron Dervish.

He added that "the investigation is continuing, and we don't expect any of the lab results until the beginning of next week."

The explosion early Friday heavily damaged the Navy Yard officers club. There were no injuries because the club was empty at the time of the 1:50 EST blast, which shattered the first-floor interior of the three-story building and started a small fire.

Everyone turning up loser in a Las Vegas strike

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — In a city where winning is everything, a bitter high-stakes showdown between four powerful unions and 32 hotels is leaving a legacy of losers as an ugly strike enters its fourth week.

Some 17,000 workers remain without paychecks, occupancy levels are dropping at the city's posh resorts and confrontations between police and pickets have left wounds that will be long in healing.

And the city that survives on glitter is growing increasingly alarmed about a tarnished image.

When unions representing culinary workers, bartenders, stagehands and musicians went on strike April 2, some predicted it would be long and bitter.

"Long and bitter? Come on, now," Vince Helm, executive director of the Nevada Resort Association, which represents 20 hotels, said at the strike's beginning as pickets fanned out from downtown's Glitter Gulch to the neon ribbon known as the Strip.

nation

But the forecast has proven true.

Arrests are nearing 400, nearly eight times the number when the Culinary Union struck for 15 days in 1976. That strike closed 11 major resorts and cost the city $131 million. Hotels vowed they would remain open this time, and have done so despite some drastic changes.

Tourists accustomed to the green felt tables, clanking slots, splashy shows and gourmet dining must now jockey with pickets for a spot on the sidewalks and dine on paper plates in some showrooms where buffet lines have replaced chorus lines.

The towering pleasure palaces reflected the flashing red and blue lights of patrol cars last weekend as 104 pickets were arrested in three nights of confrontations at the city's busiest intersection.

The 100,000 who flock to this gambling mecca each weekend found the show was in the streets, not on the stage.

The walkout remains what it has been since negotiations began in January — a war of wills. The hotels want contract concessions in return for a better wage package. The unions say they won't give up benefits they've gained over the past 25 years.

Democratic presidential candidates rushing for biggest bonanza

Copley News Service

WASHINGTON — With a brief Easter break behind them, the Democratic presidential candidates go racing off Monday on a three-cornered chase after the biggest delegate bonanza of the campaign.

Scorecard

Here is a breakdown of the preference of delegates selected or allocated thus far to the Democratic Convention.

| | |
|---|---|
| Mondale | 1,128.8 |
| Hart | 626 |
| Jackson | 167.2 |
| Other | 55 |
| Uncommitted | 263 |
| To Nominate | 1,967 |
| Total Delegates | 3,933 |

Walter F. Mondale, Sen. Gary Hart and the Rev. Jesse Jackson will spread their energies over eight states and the District of Columbia which, in the first eight days of May, will award 840 delegates – 42 percent of those needed for the nomination.

The campaign jets will be tracking between Texas, where 200 delegates are at stake in May 5 caucuses; Ohio, with 175 delegates allocated in a May 8 primary, and the Mid-Atlantic Piedmont region, where four contests will be held.

Although Texas and Ohio are the big prizes, there also are sizable blocs of delegates to be allocated in May 7 caucuses in Hart's home state of Colorado and in primaries May 1 in Tennessee; May 5 in Louisiana, and May 8 in Indiana, Maryland and North Carolina. The May 8 contests, including Ohio, will provide 425 delegates, 50 more than were awarded on "Super Tuesday," March 13.

These contests could either rocket Mondale into an insurmountable lead or re-ignite Hart's faltering candidacy, setting the stage for a potentially decisive showdown in the final primaries, June 5, when California and New Jersey will highlight a 558-delegate jackpot.

Mondale's aides, attempting to suppress what appears to be mounting optimism, said the former vice president will "contest each state as it comes up." They said Mondale will stick with a strategy of contrasting his "steady and surefooted" record of leadership with Hart's "shaky" record of changes in positions on key issues.

"ONE OF THE things we've learned from the campaign so far is that in each state you have to go and make your case," said Dayton Duncan, Mondale's deputy press secretary.

"The way we have to do that is the way we've done it in the past, to emphasize the importance of the decision, make them realize what is at stake."

When people stop to realize that they are deciding who should be president, he said, the Mondale campaign will then "draw the comparison between Walter Mondale and Gary Hart."

Hart's aides spoke confidently of moving onto "turf that is much more to our liking" and of "agressively exploiting" Mondale's weaknesses. But late last week, they still were struggling to put together a schedule and a strategy that will be more successful than the one that took them to major defeats in Illinois, New York and Pennsylvania over the last month.

"Gary's going to try to put forward his message," said Hart's deputy campaign manager David Landau. "We are attempting to devise a strategy for doing that."

One theme that Hart will stress, Landau said, is that "there is almost a moral imperative on the Democrats to get rid of Ronald Reagan."

"GARY HART IS the best candidate to do that," Landau said.

The third candidate, Jackson, will have to bring his long-sought "rainbow coalition" into multi-hued reality if he is to have any major successes during this period. With the exception of the overwhelmingly black District of Columbia, where he is expected to win handily on May 1, few of the upcoming contests seems to provide the opportunity for the solid showings Jackson made with almost exclusively black support in earlier contest.

Blacks make up about 20 percent of the Democratic vote in Maryland and North Carolina. But Mondale has strong support in Maryland and Jackson has had little time to mobilize the blacks in North Carolina. Hispanics are the biggest racial minority in Texas and Jackson has yet to show much drawing power among Hispanic voters.

The upcoming May campaign period follows a relatively calm two weeks in which Hart won narrowly in Arizona and is expected to win this week in delegate-poor caucuses in Vermont and Utah. Mondale last week won by a landslide in Missouri.

Mondale's month-long string of big-state victories has re-established his front-runner status and given him claim to more than 1,100 of the 1,967 delegates needed for nomination.

Hart's losses and his meager cache of 590 delegates are putting increasing pressure on him to win something to back up his claim that he is the one who can beat Mr. Reagan in the fall.

Hart campaign manager Oliver Henkel optimisticly projects that this next round will be waged in areas more favorable to Hart than to Mondale. But, with the exception of Colorado, with 51 delegates, none of the early May contests appear sure victories for Hart.

MEMBERS OF THE Mondale campaign say a win in Texas is essential for Hart because of his claim that only he can carry the Sunbelt for the Democrats in the fall.

Billy Rogers, a Mondale campaign director in Texas, says the state is critical to Hart candidacy, but predicts Mondale will do well there.

In the other large state, Ohio, Mondale aides predict he will benefit from the same coalition and same issues that carried him to victory in nearby Illinois and neighboring Pennsylvania. The same problems of a fading "smoke stack" industry prevail and a strong organized labor force is running telephone banks among its members, said Mondale coordinator Charles Campion.

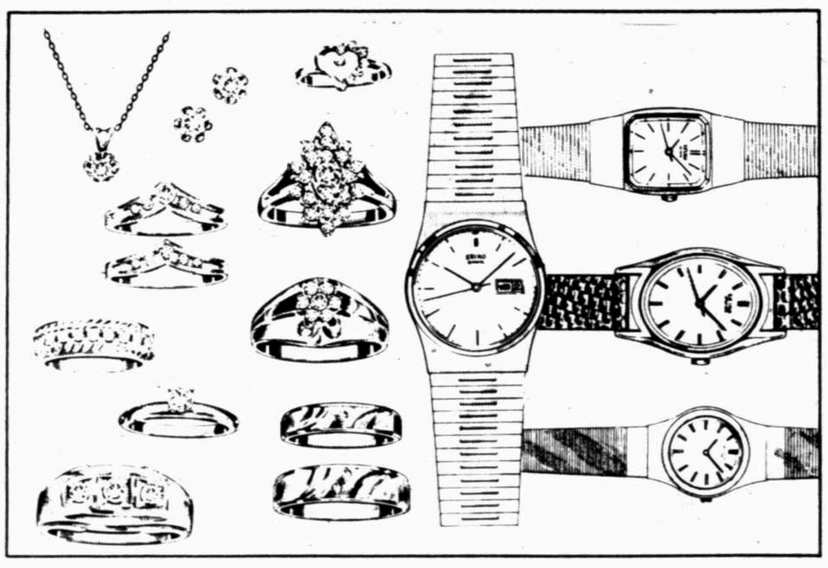

Although most of Ohio's Democratic leaders have stayed neutral since the collapse of Sen. John Glenn's campaign, Mondale already has the backing of several key officeholders and is expected to be endorsed by Gov. Richard Celeste.

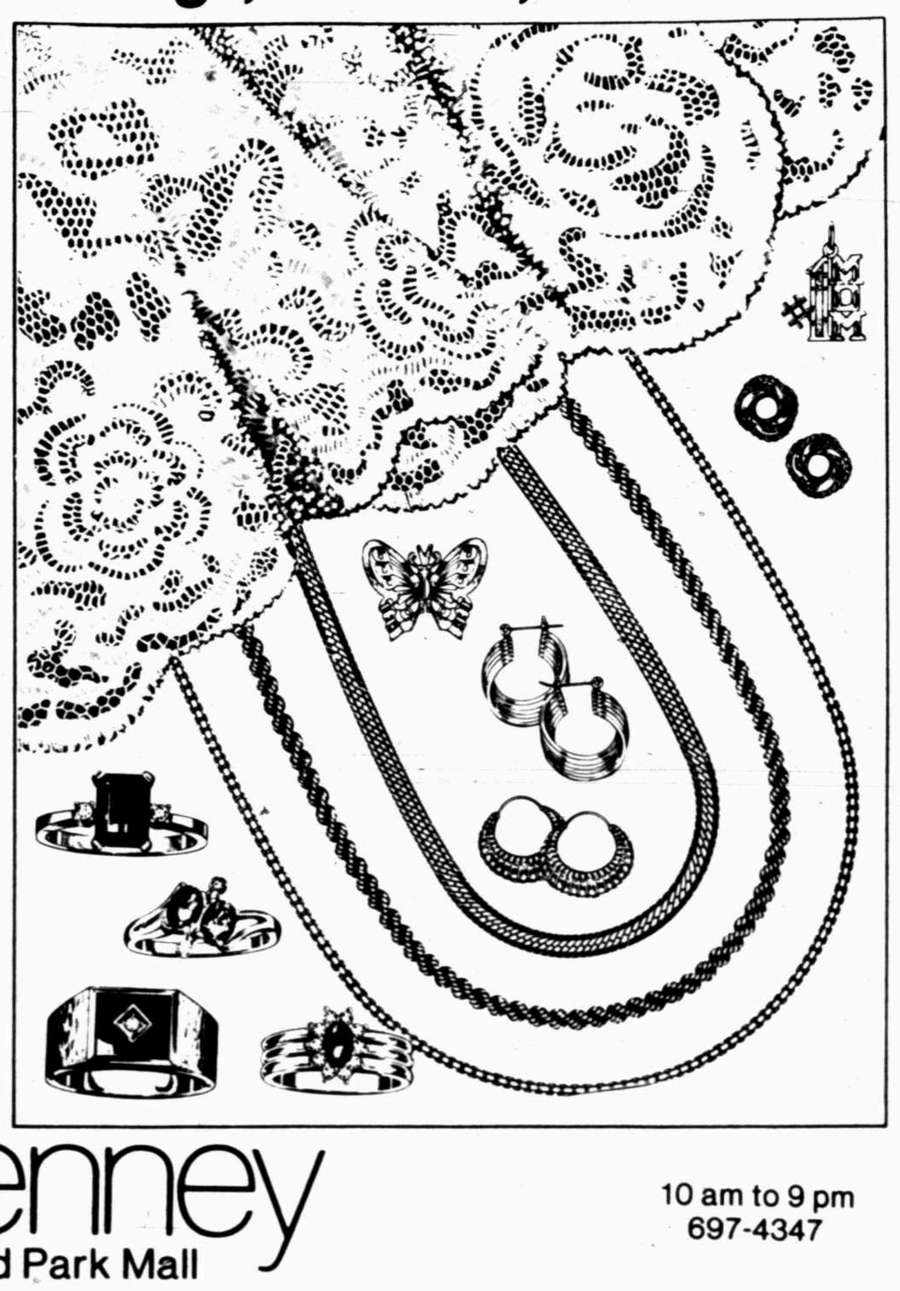

John Cashman, Hart's Ohio campaign spokesman boasted that unlike Hart efforts in other major industrial states "our organization has been good from the start." He predicts Hart will show strength among rural and suburban voters.

Hart is expected to show strength in the Washington, D.C., suburbs.

Mourners look on as cemetery attendants prepare the caskets for the victims of the "Palm Sunday Massacre" for burial at Brooklyn's Cypress Hills Cemetery Firday. Two women and eight children were slain last weekend in the East New York neighborhood of Brooklyn. Police has speculated that the slayings were the work of drug dealers seeking revenge.

Hundreds at funeral services of slain victims

NEW YORK (AP) — A police helicopter circled overhead as hearses carried victims of the "Palm Sunday Massacre" to a cemetery, where seven of the 10 women and children were buried in adjoining mass graves.

An eighth victim of the April 15 attack was interred a short distance away Friday in the Cypress Hills Cemetery, and the last two — children of the man who discovered the bodies in his Brooklyn home — were to be buried today in Connecticut.

The Rev. Philip Fabiano, who conducted funeral services Friday for all 10 victims, blamed the slayings on drugs, echoing speculation by police that the killings were committed by dealers bent on vengeance.

But Enrique Bermudez, 34, broke his public silence to tell a Spanish-language newspaper he had "no idea" why the slayings occurred in the house he bought Feb. 29.

The victims — two women and eight children ranging in age from 3 to 14 — had also included Bermudez' pregnant girlfriend, her two children and five of her relatives.

"Everything that has been written and said by the English-language media is just lies," Bermudez told El Diario-La Prensa.

He branded as "totally irresponsible" published reports that he had become a police informant after serving five years in prison on a 1976 conviction for distributing cocaine.

He also denied reports that he recently tried to arrange a trip to Colombia, source of most cocaine sold in this country.

About 400 spectators lined sidewalks and rooftops outside St. Michael's Roman Catholic Church on Friday, with 125 uniformed and police officers helping control the crowd. There were 300 people in the funeral party.

"I have no answer for anyone why this crucifixion took place," Fabiano said, gesturing at the caskets and noting that the funeral took place on Good Friday, the day marking the death of Jesus Christ on the cross.

But after the service, Fabiano read a statement to reporters calling the murders "part of an epidemic of drug-related crime."

"On a national level, where the resources are massive, the response is minimal," he said. "We have an administration that flexes its muscles against the poor, the hungry, the powerless. It is either silent or ineffective when confronted by local 'death squads' that roam our streets."

While others around him wept, Bermudez remained quiet and dry-eyed at the church and the cemetery. Four women became hysterical at the graveside and were helped into police ambulances.

Bermudez was flanked by plainclothes officers as he left the church.

Ban of alcohol has students protesting

SOUTH BEND, Ind. (AP) — Trouble is brewing in the shadow of Notre Dame's Golden Dome. A new, restrictive alcohol policy at the Catholic university has students crying in their beer and has sparked demonstrations reminiscent of the anti-war protests of 15 years ago.

Three rowdy protests by thousands of students last week disturbed the peace — if not the dignity — of the pastoral Indiana campus.

Scores of bedsheet banners, normally proclaiming the abilities of the Fighting Irish football team, now festoon dormitory windows with such slogans as, "The Drinking Irish: Help Save This Endangered Species," and "You Expect Us To Date These Girls Sober?"

What has the students' Irish up is a report by a campus committe on "the responsible use of alcohol." Word of the new policy was announced Tuesday in the student newspaper under the headline "The Party's Over."

"It's too bad this couldn't have been over a more important issue," said Dean of Students James Roemer. "The university feels it has taken a very reasonable position on a serious problem."

The committee's recommendations, announced Monday night, would end under-age drinking and limit drinking in campus housing to private rooms. The legal drinking age in Indiana is 21.

The new rules would outlaw public drunkenness, forbid public drinking with a few exceptions, and limit the number of students at dorm parties serving alcoholic beverages.

Roemer said the new policy will be instituted to combat the "moral problem" of alcohol abuse.

"We're going to make a statement with this new policy that public intoxication will not be accepted," he said Friday. "This is not a local phenomenom, but a national problem. Too many people are ruining their lives."

The new policy has distilled a brew of student outrage.

Last Wednesday afternoon, 1,500 chanting, hooting students — many holding open beer cans — rallied outside the administration building to protest the new rules, which go into effect next fall. Some students stormed through the building, shouting beer slogans and obscenties and throwing paper and confetti.

The rally followed a midnight campus protest outside the residence of the Rev. Theodore M. Hesburgh, the university's president, who is out of the country. Another midnight protest was held Wednesday night.

The demonstration was highly unusual at a school where a decade ago, Hesburgh warned potential anti-war protesters they would get 15 minutes to go back to class or be expelled.

Robert M. Bertino Jr., student body president, admitted Wednesday's protest got a little out of hand.

"It's really unfortunate. It's making us look like cry-babies," said the 21-year-old junior from Joliet, Ill.

He promised another rally scheduled for Friday will be "a more organized thing. We've even invited the administration to speak."

Roemer said he hopes the whole issue blows over.

"The university took a very moderate position. We haven't said we're going to enforce the Indiana law where it violates individual privacy. But Father Hesburgh has said if this doesn't work, the campus will go completely dry."

Student leaders stressed the issue is not just drinking rights but student rights.

"The alcohol policy is representative of the administration's policy over us," said Cathy David, student body vice president.

"It's more like the spark that set everything off. It's not like the only thing we're fighting for. We're fighting for a much bigger set of values than just the alcohol policy," said Ms. David, a junior from Plainview, N.Y.

Those values, she said, include "freedom, the right to act responsibly and the right to learn what's going on in the real world, like learning to drink responsibly."

Four blocks south of campus is an intersection known as Five Points where there are as many taverns as there are street corners.

Family members killed

ANDERSON, Ind. (AP) — Fire swept through a home in this central Indiana city early Saturday, killing five family members, as locked security doors and barred windows hampered firefighters' efforts, authorities said.

The house was engulfed in flame shortly after 2 a.m. when firefighters arrived, said Assistant Fire Chief Dick Bevelheimer. The cause of the blaze was unknown and the home was destroyed, he said.

Investigators believe the fire started in a family room addition at the rear of the house, Bevelheimer said, adding that firefighters had difficulty entering the home because of two locked steel security doors and iron-barred windows.

The victims were identified as Clifton Gully Jr., 60; his wife, Alweenie, 50; and their three sons, Adrian, 18; and twin brothers Alwen and Alvin, 12.

Virginia McMartin, founder of the Virginia McMartin Preschool in Manhattan Beach, California defiantly sticks out her tongue at photographers Friday during her arraignment on child-molestation charges in Los Angeles Superior Court.

SMOOTHER HOUSE SHOWINGS

In order to sell you home, the buyer has to LIKE WHAT HE SEES during the showing. Here are some tips to make that showing more productive:

Minor signs of wear should be corrected. A few dollars spent touching up the front door or replacing worn trim or removing rust stains can add hundreds of dollars in sales appeal. However, don't go overboard in painting and wallpapering. You may not get your money back.

Storage space should look, spacious. It's not enough to toss out all the junk you've been hoarding in closets and the attic, basement or garage. You'll still be left with plenty. Be sure to stack or hang them in a manner that looks like you have room to spare. Don't give prospect the idea that space is at a premium in your home.

Needed repairs should be admitted. If there's an obvious flaw that is beyond your means to fix, have your Realtor point it out and then concentrate on your home's assets.

Primary featuring tough races

state

By The Associated Press

Longtime Congressman Abraham "Chick" Kazen of Laredo faces possibly his strongest re-election challenge in the May 5 Democratic primary in Texas.

Former Bexar County Judge Albert Bustamante is seeking to unseat Kazen, who has held the office since 1967.

As a member of the Armed Services Committee, Kazen has protected the interests of several large military installations in and around San Antonio, but Bustamante has the endorsement of San Antonio Mayor Henry Cisneros, as well as both local newspapers.

Bustamante also has been endorsed by former Gov. Dolph Briscoe of Uvalde.

"I agree that it's one of the toughest races I've been in, but I think it's going to be all right," Kazen said. "I've lived here all my life and I speak better Spanish than I do English."

Kazen's South Texas district was redrawn after the 1980 census, trading Republican areas of Bexar County for Val Verde County on the Texas-Mexico border, where Bustamante has been campaigning.

The new district is about 55 percent Hispanic, but Bustamante downplayed that statistic, saying he also has support from blacks and Anglos.

"This is the first real Hispanic challenge he has had," Bustamante said, adding that he would try to attract more industry to the area. "I think I'm better suited to do it. I was a migrant worker for 23 years and that is the migrant belt of Texas."

STANLEY C. GREEN of Laredo also is running against Kazen and Bustamante.

Texas' May 5 primary includes races in 15 congressional districts, including three in which candidates are seeking to replace congressmen who now are running for the U.S. Senate seat being vacated by Republican John Tower, who is retiring.

Former State Rep. Dan Kubiak of Bryan, State Sen. Hugh Parmer of Fort Worth and J.M. Van Winkle of Duncanville are seeking the Democratic nomination for the seat that Democrat-turned-Republican Phil Gramm is leaving behind.

Kubiak unsuccessfully sought to rain on Gramm's party-switching parade in 1982 when he ran in the special election Gramm engineered by resigning so voters could voice their opinions of his change of allegiance.

Gramm won easily but decided to seek Tower's seat this year.

Republicans Joe Barton of Ennis, Patsy Hale Friedrichs of Navasota, Bob Harris of Bryan and Max Hoyt of Conroe will seek the GOP nod to go after Gramm's seat in November.

Six Republicans are seeking to fill the seat being vacated by Republican Ron Paul of Lake Jackson, who is challenging Gramm for the GOP Senate nomination. They are Joe Agris, Ellen Heath and Don Richardson of Houston, Tom DeLay and Gary Engebretson of Sugar Land, and J.C. Helms of Bellaire.

PAUL AND DEMOCRAT Bob Gammage had traded the district back and forth before Gammage dropped out of the battle, but the district was redrawn after the 1980 census and now is more heavily Republican. Nevertheless, Jim Mooney of Pearland and Doug Williams of Missouri City will seek the Democratic nomination.

Seeking the seat being vacated by Kent Hance of Lubbock, who is running for the Democratic nomination for U.S. Senate, are Democrats Gary D. Condra, Delwin Jones, Don Richards and Thomas Richards, all of Lubbock, and Republicans Larry Combest, Ron Fleming, Tom Schaefer and Richard Wiler, also all of Lubbock.

Democrat Charles Wilson of Lufkin, who previously has had no trouble winning re-election, faces four primary challengers.

Wilson was the subject of a federal investigation last year into allegations that he used cocaine at several parties.

The Congressman said he was innocent, and after six months, the Justice Department dropped the probe.

Nacogdoches businessman Jerry K. Johnson, Lloyd T. Dickens of Livingston, William Baxter Duncan of Lufkin and Mitch Hickman of Silsbee are running against Wilson in the primary.

Democratic Majority Leader James Wright of Fort Worth is being challenged in the primary by Janet Gale Leach of Arlington.

Democrat Mickey Leland of Houston faces primary opposition from Frank DeLano Saulsberry, also of Houston.

Democrat Charles Stenholm of Stamford is opposed in the primary by Noel S. Cowlins of Dublin.

Democrat Martin Frost of Dallas, who is heading Colorado Sen. Gary Hart's presidential campaign in Texas, faces a primary challenge from Dan Leach of Arlington. Republicans John D. Bower and Robert Burk of Irving are seeking the GOP nomination.

Democrat Michael Andrews of Houston faces primary opposition from Bruce Director of Houston. Andrews won the newly created seat in 1982.

REPUBLICAN Steve Bartlett of Dallas is unchallenged in the primary, but two Democrats, Jim McNees and James Westbrook, are seeking the seat the former Dallas city councilman won in 1982 when Republican Jim Collins resigned to run for the U.S. Senate. Bartlett defeated McNees with 77 percent of the vote in 1982.

Republican Jack Fields of Humble faces no primary opposition, but Democrats Don Buford of Galena Park and Marc Hill of Houston want the chance to go up against him in November.

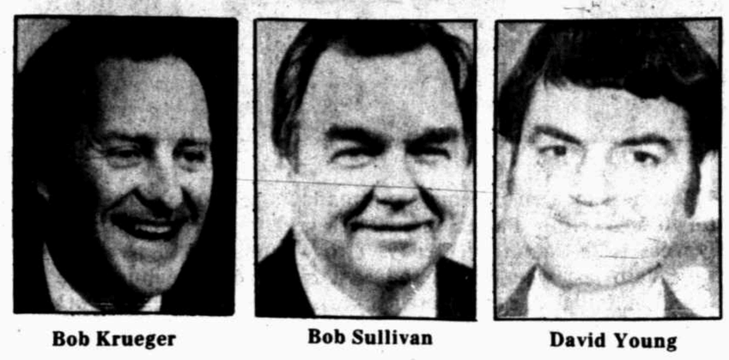

Democrat Jack Brooks of Beaumont, seeking his 16th term, has no primary opposition. Republicans Lisa Duperior of Beaumont and Jim Mahan of Galveston meet in the primary to decide who gets to run against Brooks in the general election.

Democrat Bill Patman of Ganado, son of the late U.S. Rep. Wright Patman, is unchallenged in the primary, but will face one of three Republicans — Chris Mealy of Georgetown, Wayne Pryor of West Columbia, or Mac Sweeney of Victoria — in November.

Republican Tom Loeffler of Hunt, who succeeded Democrat Bob Krueger of New Braunfels when Krueger ran for the Senate in 1978, has no primary opposition. Democrats Bobby Locke and Joe Sullivan of San Antonio will seek the nomination to challenge Loeffler in November.

AUSTIN NOTEBOOK

Comptroller changing his style

By BILL KIDD
Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Over the years, Comptroller Bob Bullock has gained a reputation as a tough, savvy and successful political battler, who gives no quarter, and asks for one.

But lately, it seems Bullock has mellowed, or has changed his style a bit. Which isn't to say that anyone is likely to be able to tangle with Bullock with impugnity.

Bullock's biting remarks have been pretty much a trademark of the comptroller's career and have provided reporters (who enjoy a well-turned phrase) with plenty of what's called "good copy."

Reporters have been the target of Bullock's irritation, verbally and otherwise.

In one remarkable incident, in 1981, Bullock sent two newspapers boxes of cow manure to indicate his opinion of what had been carried in some of their editorial columns.

An aide, questioned at the time, called the gifts a "practical joke," and added, "That's kind of Bullock's style." Later that year, Bullock signed himself into a California hospital for treatment of a drinking problem.

Bullock returned to conduct a successful re-election campaign, which provided sufficient verbal fireworks, including one of Bullock's better tongue-in-cheek efforts after GOP challenger Mike Richards hinted that he thought his life might be in danger because he was opposing Bullock.

The comptroller urged the Department of Public Safety to protect Richards, whom Bullock labeled "a publicity stunt looking for a place to happen."

"Please," Bullock pleaded, "keep this man from throwing himself in front of a speeding printing press."

Lately, however, Bullock has taken a lower key approach to matters, a move some have seen as reflecting the comptroller's interest in a gubernatorial race.

Bullock's interest in occupying the Governor's Mansion hasn't been any secret for a long time. In fact, even before Mark White was sworn in as governor, Bullock was indicating he wanted the job White would hold.

But Bullock said at the time that he wouldn't attempt to use his office to hamper White in dealing with budgetary matters, saying that whether people wanted to believe it or not, he's really more concerned with the welfare of the State of Texas than his own political career.

Bullock and White have been working together through the Select Committee on Public Education, and Bullock says education is another area where personal ambititions should not count.

"I feel sorry for White right now," Bullock says. "He's got a tremendous problem facing him. I've got as much at stake in education as anyone else in Texas. The worst thing we can do is to have everybody shooting at each other."

Bullock has had his staff prepare material showing the effect of various changes proposed by the Select Committee, has come up with a suggested plan for overhauling school aid, and has come up with various financing options for the Legislature to consider.

Bullock isn't advocating any particular tax plan, however, to provide new funds for public education, saying that isn't his role.

"Once we've equipped them with the knowledge and the factual data," Bullock says, "...I've gone about as far as I need to go."

The governor, lieutenant governor and speaker of the House of Representatives are then the ones who need to take the lead, Bullock argues.

"It' not up to me to go over there and shove it down their throats."

Bullock says he doesn't have any "personal feelings" about what should be done if new taxes are needed, except to say that "the only one I see danger in is on the oil and gas industry. I hope they wouldn't do anything that would prove oppressive to exploration."

Bullock also says he's not going to be able to bail legislators out of their budget crunch by suddenly finding more funds through a new revenue estimate.

A new estimate will be prepared for any special session, he says, but "I don't look for any significant change," noting the most recent estimate has been off only 0.4 percent.

Bullock's sympathetic words for White may seem strange to some folks, but Bullock's position — that dealing with education should transcend personal ambitions — is one that's right morally and politically.

"This isn't the time," Bullock concludes, "for any elected official to be taking issue with others."

World's largest walled-in pool in Texas

BALMORHEA, Texas (AP) — If swimming is your idea of the way to beat the heat on a warm West Texas day, Tony Carrillo has just the pool for you — as long as you don't mind treading water with more than a thousand other people.

Carrillo is park ranger at the Balmorhea State Recreation Area, which proudly boasts the world's largest walled-in swimming pool — a 68,000-square-foot hole in the ground that can hold more than 3.5 million gallons of water.

"It's massive, all right," Carrillo said. "People come here and sometimes just stare at it. They can't believe it's a pool. It's the same size as a lot of lakes they've seen."

The pool, which on some sizzling summer days has more than 1,000 swimmers diving into it, is fed by the San Solomon Springs. Carrillo said between 16 million and 24 million gallons of water flow into it daily.

It is the focal point of the recreation area that offers weary travelers a resting spot in the middle of far West Texas. The park is 120 miles southwest of Odessa and about 180 miles east of El Paso.

"The pool is itself a spring," Carrillo said. "The water flow is carried out of the pool by a canal system and from there it goes to Balmorhea Lake."

San Solomon Springs has provided water to this West Texas area for centuries, Carrillo said. Artifacts found in the area indicate the springs were used before Indians and U.S. soldiers came in the 1800s, he said.

The pool was built during the late 1930s by the Civilian Conservation Corps, which also constructed the canals.

With a depth that ranges from three feet to 31½ feet, the pool also is used for scuba and skin diving, Carrillo said.

Small fish, including two rare species, are found in the pool's 72-degree waters.

"That, of course, turns some people off," Carrillo said. "You'd be surprised at how some people won't swim with a lot of fish around them. I hear it all — 'I'm not about to get in there with a bunch of dirty fish.'

"But it beats the heck out of all those chlorinated pools."

Search for Bayou bodies continues

FREEPORT (AP) — Brazoria County authorities searched a bayou Saturday where where a day earlier divers found the bodies of two men and two women believed to have driven off a dangerous highway curve over a four-year period.

Divers pulled the bodies from their four cars in the murky East Union Bayou late Friday after a crab fisherman saw a man's body surface in the bayou, near the Farm-to-Market Road 523 bridge just inside the Freeport city limits.

Authorities identified the victims as Sam G. Hall, 33, and Cathy Jaye Stewart, 36, both of Brazoria; Roma Alexia Gibson, 25, of Freeport; and James Clay, 30, of Lake Jackson.

Divers stopped searching the bayou after finding the bodies, but resumed their search Saturday, said Deputy Marcia Thacker of Brazoria County Sheriff's office. Ms. Thacker said she did not know how long the search would continue.

"We think they were intoxicated, missed the curve and drove into the water," said Stiles. "We suspect that they were all traffic accidents."

The cars, stacked up on top of each other, were still in gear, he said.

He said three fire department divers began looking for a vehicle missing from Freeport and a woman after Hall's body was sighted. But they also found three other automobiles, two of which also contained bodies.

The victims were pronounced dead by Peace Justice Roy Knopp of Klute, who ordered autopsies on the victims.

All the vehicles apparently missed a slight curve on the northbound approach to the bayou bridge and went over a three-foot embankment into 12 to 16 feet of water, said Freeport Police Capt. Charles Wagner.

Lake Jackson Police Lt. Robert Turner said divers first found the car containing the body of Clay, who authorities said had been reported missing on Oct. 30, 1980. Police said Clay was last seen at a Freeport tavern and was headed toward Surfside on FM 523.

Stiles said divers recovered an empty Cadillac that had been in the water for about three years, and then found a sedan containing Ms. Gibson's body. She had been missing since Nov. 27, Stiles said, when she was last seen in a Freeport bar.

Police discover Micky Finn scam

HOUSTON (AP) — Police investigators say they have learned of at least 30 "verifiable" cases in which Houston prostitutes drugged and then robbed their clients.

Prostitutes used "Mickey Finns" — powerful sedatives — to steal as much as $350,000 from their hotel customers, police said.

"It basically boils down to the prostitute rolling her 'John,'" said Houston police Sgt. Sandy Bielstein. "It's nothing new."

Two prostitutes charged and jailed Friday with aggravated robbery are accused of drugging a customer, then robbing him. The customer was actually an undercover vice officer, police said.

Charged were Sharon Lee Kelly, 31, and Rachel Curry, 31, both of Houston. Their bond was set at $2,000 each.

Police said five women have been arrested recently for drugging and robbing clients here.

"This hasn't been a problem for years, but now it has become one, and it is dangerous," said Capt. J.W. Fulbright.

Fulbright said the prostitute usually searches a fashionable club or hotel for a man with expensive jewelry.

"They target their mark and then go up and start getting friendly and then entice him up to his room or they will rent a room," Fulbright said. "Once they get up there, they'll slip a chemical into his drink. He'll pass out and then they will steal everything.

"The main motive is definitely theft," Fulbright said.

The most commonly used drug is chloral-hydrate, a prescription sedative, investigators say. When taken with alcohol it can be dangerous, even fatal.

Fulbright said that in at least three cases the victims were hospitalized.

Although no deaths from the Mickey Finn scams have been reported here, Houston vice Officer R.E. Magee said four deaths in New York have been attributed to the drugs.

Network director resigns job

HOUSTON (AP) — The head of Harris County's emergency telphone network resigned Friday after admitting he made a phony emergency call as a practical joke when he directed an emergency service in El Paso.

John T. Riley Jr. stepped down as operations manager for the Houston network just one day after he was appointed to the post.

Riley confirmed Friday that he had called in a phony report of a shooting at an ambulance dispatcher's residence, intending the call to be a joke. Police were sent to the dispatcher's home before they could be told the call was a fake.

Laverne Hogan, executive director of the new Harris County network, summoned Riley to her office Friday after a published report said he had resigned his El Paso job last year, shortly after he made the prank call.

"The system is more important than she is or I am," said Riley after he emerged from the one-hour meeting with Mrs. Hogan. "Nine-One-One is the most important thing. I've decided to withdraw my application."

The network, not yet operating, will allow emergency calls in participating cities and unincorporated areas to be made by dialing 9-1-1. The board of the new network approved Riley's appointment Thursday.

Mrs. Hogan said she accepted Riley's resignation because the practical joke was related to the 911 network and also because Riley had not told her about the incident.

"We all make mistakes, and I have a great deal of compassion for Mr. Riley," Mrs. Hogan said. "I wish this hadn't happened."

Riley said he did not inform Mrs. Hogan of the incident because he did not think it reflected on his ability.

"It's never been anything to me other than a dumb practical joke," he said.

Disabled to serve on panel

PECOS (AP) — Wendell Faulkner will make history when he wheels into his first Texas Rehabilitation Commission meeting as the first severely disabled person to serve on the six-member panel.

"A handicapped person can relate to what needs to be done," said Faulkner, a victim of multiple sclerosis. "There's a lot of things I want to do."

The 61-year-old man who has been wheelchair-bound for the past five years said he always has believed a person has to get inside the board room to get things done.

"Long before I was handicapped, I've been concerned about handicapped people," Faulkner said.

Faulkner left the University of Texas at Austin in 1948, a few credits shy of graduating with an engineering degree and settled in Pecos.

Faulkner told his four sons that if any of them ever studied civil engineering, he'd finish his degree and graduate with him.

About a year before Carroll Faulkner was to graduate, he reminded his father of the promise and the elder Faulkner completed his degree.

During the past 36 years in Reeves County, Faulkner has worked as a contractor and oil investor and a rancher. He served on the commissioner's court from 1962-82.

He said he suffered from fatigue in his legs for almost 20 years, but physicians didn't diagnose MS until 1979.

Shortly after the diagnosis, he started using a wheelchair. The Faulkners installed ramps so the entire house and yard would be accessible with a wheelchair.

Faulkner's showpiece, however, is an 8 feet by 6 feet shower — easily large enough for a wheelchair.

"That's worth a million dollars to a handicapped person," he said.

Faulkner said he looks forward to working on the board, where both his personal experiences and political convictions will be put to work.

He said the state can help people by showing them how to help themselves.

"I don't think the government needs to be their keeper necessarily, but it can aid them to get on their feet," he said. "The only cure for anything is attitude. Just because you have a wheelchair, that's no reason to stop."

Bullets alive with OT victory over Celtics

By The Associated Press

LANDOVER, Md. — Jeff Ruland and Frank Johnson sank two free throws each in the final nine seconds as the Washington Bullets defeated the Boston Celtics 111-108 in overtime Saturday after blowing a 15-point fourth quarter lead to stay alive in the National Basketball Association playoffs.

Boston still leads two games to one in the best-of-five first-round series which resumes Tuesday night on Washington's home court.

Rick Mahorn put the Bullets ahead 107-105 on a field goal with 37 seconds remaining, but Robert Parish of the Celtics missed the chance to forge another tie when he missed two foul shots with 22 seconds left.

Ruland, who tied his career playoff high of 33 points, converted his two free throws with nine seconds to play and after a Boston turnover Johnson made his two foul shots before Dennis Johnson sank a three-pointer for Boston as time expired.

A 17-5 spurt at the start of the third quarter gave the Bullets a 65-54 lead and they led 81-66 early in the final period before the Celtics rallied behind Larry Bird and Parish.

A jumper by Parish with 21 seconds remaining in regulation time tied the score 98-98, as Ruland was unable to get off a shot in the final five seconds, sending the game into overtime

Bird scored 27 points for the Celtics, Johnson had 18 and Kevin McHale 15. Greg Ballard scored 18 for Washington, Johnson 16 and Mahorn 14 along with 15 rebounds.

NBA Playoffs

Sonics lead Mavs, 2-1

SEATTLE — Jack Sikma scored 23 points and Gus Williams added 19 Saturday to lead the Seattle SuperSonics to a 104-94 NBA playoff victory for a 2-1 lead in their best-of-five series with the Dallas Mavericks.

Game No. 4 will be played in Seattle's Kingdome Tuesday night with a fifth game, if necessary, set for Dallas Thursday.

The Sonics, who gained a split of the first two games of the series in Dallas, trailed 57-52 at halftime. But Seattle came out fast in the second half, outscoring the Mavericks 11-2 in the first 2:50 of the third quarter for a 63-59 advantage.

A key in Seattle's victory was its defensive job on Mark Aguirre, Dallas' high-scoring forward, who had only five pooints in the second half before fouling out with 2:28 left in the game. Aguirre had 15 of his points in the first quarter.

Aguirre was shut out in a pivotal third quarter when Seattle went from a five-point intermission deficit to an 83-73 lead after three quarters.

The Sonics, who posted a glossy 32-9 home record during the regular season, got 17 rebounds from the 6-foot-11 Sikma and also got 18 points from Al Wood.

Rolando Blackman paced the Mavericks with 27.

Seattle went ahead to stay on Wood's 3-point play — on a jump shot and a free throw — after a foul by Pat Cummings.

The Sonics stretched their lead to 77-65 with 3:10 remaining in the third quarter on a 10-foot shot by Sikma.

The Mavericks, who were 1-4 in regular season play against Seattle, made only nine field goal attempts in 40 tries in the second half after hitting 21 of 42 tries in the first half.

Tom Chambers added 16 points for the Sonics. Jay Vincent scored 16 and Cummings tallied 11 for Dallas.

The Sonics outrebounded Dallas 42-39. Vincent was the Mavericks' top rebounder with 10.

Hawks survive, 103-94

ATLANTA (AP) — Dominique Wilkins scored 11 points during a third-quarter surge that gave Atlanta the lead for good as the Hawks downed the Milwaukee Bucks 103-94 in a NBA first-round playoff game.

The victory cut Milwaukee's lead to 2-1 in the best-of-five series that resumes in Atlanta Tuesday night. A fifth game, if necessary, will be played in Milwaukee next Thursday.

Wilkins erased a 50-47 deficit 14 seconds into the second half when he completed a three-point play to tie the score at 50-50.

Midway through the third quarter, the Hawks used a 9-0 scoring burst to build a 67-61 lead they never relinquished.

Wilkins started that run with two free throws and hit rookie Randy Wittman for two consecutive layups moments later.

The Hawks led 78-69 after three quarters. Eddie Johnson took over in the final period to score 10 of his 13 points, keeping the Bucks at bay.

The Hawks took their largest lead at 92-78 on a driving layup by Johnson with 7:39 remaining, and then withstood a late Milwaukee charge that trimmed the lead to six points with just over 30 seconds remaining.

The game attracted a crowd of 5,395, one of the lowest in NBA playoff history.

Dan Roundfield led Atlanta with 25 points, including 12 in the first seven minutes of play. Wilkins added 22 for the Hawks.

Marques Johnson had 28 and Sidney Moncrief 21 for the Bucks.

Beaumont posts 3-2 TL victory over Cubs

BEAUMONT — Mark Parent's two-out single in the bottom of the ninth inning lifted the Texas League's West Division leading Beaumont Gators to a 3-2 victory over the Midland Cubs here Saturday night.

Midland had scored two runs in the top of the ninth to break open a scoreless duel through eight innings, but the Gators scored three times in the bottom of the frame to pull out the victory.

Midland catcher Don Hyman singled in Joe Henderson and Gary Varsho with what looked like the winning runs in the top half of the ninth, but the Cubs couldn't hold the lead as Beaumont touched Midland reliever Doug Potestio for his first loss of the season.

The Cubs now are 0-2 on the road trip after winning their last two games of the homestand against El Paso. The Cubs are now 3-9 on the season and five games behind the division leading Gators.

Palmer perfect through five

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Montreal right-hander David Palmer, who sat out the entire 1983 season following his second elbow operation, pitched a five-inning perfect game Saturday night as the Expos beat the St. Louis Cardinals 4-0 in the rain-shortened second half of a twi-night doubleheader.

The 26-year-old Palmer, who has spent only two full seasons in the majors because of elbow surgery in 1980 and 1982, retired all 15 St. Louis batters — 11 grounders, one fly ball, two strikeouts and one line drive to the second baseman — in just his second appearance of the season. The game was halted with Montreal batting in the top of the sixth and called after a wait of an hour and 17 minutes.

Palmer's effort was the 16th perfect game in major-league history and the fourth to go less than nine innings. Two of them were in 1907 and Minnesota's Dean Chance pitched five perfect innings against Boston in 1967.

Cruz' homer lifts Astros to 4-3 victory over Braves

By The Associated Press

ATLANTA (AP) — Jose Cruz belted a bases-empty home run in the eighth inning Saturday night, only Houston's third homer of the season, to give the Astros a 4-3 victory over the Atlanta Braves.

Cruz hit his first home run of the year and Houston's second in two games here with one out in the eighth off reliever Steve Bedrosian, 1-1. Houston's Bill Dawley, 1-1, who entered the game in the seventh, was the winner although he needed help from Frank DiPino after allowing two hits in the eighth and two more with one out in the ninth. DiPino retired Rafael Ramirez on a fly ball and Claudell Washington on a grounder after one-out singles by pinch hitters Mike Jorgensen and Bob Watson.

National League

Reds nip Giants, 5-4

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Pinch hitter Tony Perez broke a 3-3 tie with a two-out, two-run triple in the eighth inning and the Cincinnati Reds held on to defeat the San Francisco Giants 5-4 and snap a seven-game losing streak.

The 41 year-old Perez increased his career RBI total to 1,579 and tied Hall of Famer Rogers Hornsby for 17th place on baseball's all-time list.

Dan Driessen walked to open the eighth against Giants reliever Greg Minton, 1-1, and was sacrificed to second by Dave Concepcion. Ron Oester grounded out, with Driessen moving to third, and pinch hitter Duane Walker was walked intentionally before Perez batted for Dann Bilardello and lined an 0-2 pitch off the right-field fence.

Padres roll Dodgers

LOS ANGELES — Steve Garvey and Tony Gwynn had three hits each to lead a 16-hit attack as the San Diego Padres romped to a 9-6 victory over the Los Angeles Dodgers.

Gwynn scored three times and Garvey drove in three runs as the Padres snapped a two-game losing streak and restored its 2½-game lead over Los Angeles in the National League West.

Phillies destroy Mets

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — John Denny scattered six hits for Philadelphia's first complete game of the season as the Philadelphia Phillies crushed the New York Mets 12-2.

Denny, 2-1, the 1983 National League Cy Young Award winner, struck out seven and walked two. He retired 16 batters in a row until Darryl Strawberry, Mookie Wilson and Hubie Brooks singled with two out in the ninth, but left fielder Glenn Wilson nailed Strawberry at the plate to end the game.

Mets starter Mike Torrez, 0-2, pulled a groin muscle in the second inning and had to leave the game. He was charged with three runs.

Expos defeat Cards

ST. LOUIS — Bryan Little rapped two doubles and a single and Gary Carter belted a two-run double to help Steve Rogers win his first appearance of the year as the Montreal Expos beat the St. Louis Cardinals 6-3 in the rain-delayed first game of Saturday's twi-night doubleheader.

Little's hits boosted his average to .403 and Carter's RBI increased his National League-leading total to 20.

Rogers, who had tendinitis in his right shoulder during spring training, pitched 6⅔ innings and gave up three runs and six hits. Jeff Reardon, the third Montreal pitcher, picked up his third save.

Bucs snap Cub streak

CHICAGO (AP) — Tony Pena's run-scoring double keyed a four-run seventh inning and Marvell Wynne and Johnny Ray had three hits each to lead the Pittsburgh Pirates to an 8-5 victory, snapping Chicago's three-game winning streak.

Successive singles by Ray, Bill Madlock and Jason Thompson to open the seventh broke a 4-4 tie and Pena followed with his double for another run. A single by Amos Otis drove in another run and the fourth run scored on an errant pickoff throw by pitcher Rich Bordi.

TED BATTLES

Rain cools Boston temperatures

Before leaving for the Boston Marathon, the primary concern seemed to be over a possible unseasonable hot spell and the resultant strength-stamina draining demands. Tales of the woeful toll extracted by heat and humidity in the past are those most commonly recited.

"Unlike most marathons that are run between 7 and 9 a.m. to avoid the full heat of the day, Boston starts at noon," worried Ralph Arrell.

Arrell and John Harris, the two Midlanders entered in last week's Boston, one of the genuine "originals" of distance running, realized it wasn't going to be like that at all when it rained hard the night before and the morning of the race.

It stopped for about an hour and a half at the start of the race, "but it was basically a heavy blow-in type drizzle all the way," advises Arrell. "And it was 46 degrees."

IT TOOK Harris two hours, 48 minutes and 44 seconds to cover the 26 miles, 385 yards, about 12 to 14 minutes slower than he is capable of running. That was good for 1,275th place, according to Tuesday's Boston Herald.

Arrell, competing in the over-40 division, did it in 3:12.25, four minutes slower than his qualifying time. He still doesn't know where he finished in the field of some 6,750 legitimate entries.

Harris was tormented by muscle cramps and foot blisters along the way. Arrell felt weighted down by soaked shoes, which got heavier with every mile.

STILL, ARRELL, who once gave up track at Abilene High because the 880, two times around the track was just too far to run, did not feel the wet, chill weather was that much of a factor.

"Everybody prepared for the weather. I wore two t-shirts and a jacket and white cotton gloves. I got rid of the jacket once I got warm. I kept the gloves until the 20-mile mark. By that time they were wet from cups slopping over from water given to me by spectators along the way."

Arrell says the Boston Marathon is an experience, "even if the crowd was less than half of normal because of the weather. They still lined the entire course and running by the ladies of Wellsley College was a thrill."

HEARTBREAK HILL, where runners hit that mental wall, wasn't quite as bad as Arrell expected, "Actually it's the last of a series of Newton hills and what makes it so tough is that it comes in the 20th mile. It really isn't that steep. And for that matter, by West Texas standards, although the wind blew in our face all day, it was no more than 15 to 20 mph at any time."

As far back in the field as he was, Arrell figured it would take eight minutes to reach the starting line after the start of the race. "It took only about 2½ minutes for me to reach the starting line," says Arrell, "And John made it in 30 seconds. I did a 7½ minute first mile and through the first half of the race was at my qualifying pace.

"I think the first half, which is downhill, may be harder on you than the hills, because of the muscles you use."

ALTHOUGH the field was announced as 6,750, Arrell estimates another 2,000 just jump into the field before the start of the race. "Waiting for the start, I was standing next to a guy who had just come in from California for the race. I asked him what his qualifying time was and he said the best he'd ever done was a 3:30, which wouldn't qualify him for Boston unless he were over 60."

After it was over, Arrell went to his hotel room, overlooking the finish line, showered and then watched below as runners still continued to trudge across the finish line.

Now that it's over, Arrell has no desire to go back. At least, not right now. "I'll go back to the 10-kilometer races. I guess the only thing I felt was muscle fatigue and it was worse Wednesday than Tuesday, the day I was traveling back to Texas.

"In winding down after the long build up for a marathon you listen to your body. Wednesday I ran four miles. The others went the full six, but four was plenty for me."

1959 — The Chicago White Sox scored 11 runs in the seventh inning of a 20-6 rout of the Kansas City Athletics while collecting just one base hit — a single by Johnny Callison. In the inning, they were the recipients of 10 walks, three Kansas City errors and one hit batsman.

1970 — Tom Seaver of the New York Mets tied a major-league record set in 1969 by Steve Carlton when he struck out 19 San Diego Padres in a two-hit, 2-1 victory at Shea Stadium. He achieved the mark by striking out the last 10 batters for his own major-league record. Al Ferrara was the first and 10th victim of the streak.

Rangers blank Yankees, 1-0

By The Associated Press

American League

NEW YORK — Frank Tanana allowed two hits in eight innings Saturday and Ned Yost singled home an unearned run in the sixth as the Texas Rangers blanked New York 1-0, stopping the Yankees' three-game winning streak.

Tanana, 2-1, yielded singles to Lou Piniella in the fourth inning and Rick Cerone in the eighth. The 30-year-old left-hander struck out four and walked the same number before Dave Tobik pitched the ninth for his second save. He allowed a two-out single to Don Mattingly before retiring pinch hitter Oscar Gamble on a grounder.

With one out in the Texas sixth, Buddy Bell was safe at first when shortstop Andre Robertson booted his grounder for an error. After Larry Parrish forced Bell at second, Parrish took second on a wild pitch and Pete O'Brien walked. Yost then drilled a single to left off Ray Fontenot, scoring Parrish.

Fontenot, 0-3, who was the victim of a 3-0 shutout against Minnesota in his previous start, allowed six hits in seven innings.

Angels beat Blue Jays

TORONTO — Bobby Grich drove in three runs with a homer and two-run double and Reggie Jackson stroked a two-run triple to lead the California Angels to an 8-4 victory over the Toronto Blue Jays.

Jackson got the Angels off to a 2-0 lead with his triple in the first inning, while Grich hit his solo shot in the seond and keyed California's three-run third with his double. Rookie Ron Romanic, 2-1, scattered nine hits for his first major league complete game, and extended California's winning streak to four.

Indians nip Royals

CLEVELAND — Andre Thornton, who had earlier homered, snapped an eighth-inning tie with a sacrifice fly to score Brett Bulter and give the Cleveland Indians a 3-2 victory over the Kansas City Royals.

Bert Blyleven, 3-1, yielded both Kansas City runs over the first eight innings to pick up the victory. Ernie Camacho pitched the ninth for his second save.

Kansas City starter Danny Jackson, 0-1, walked Butler leading off the eighth. Tony Bernazard sacrificed Butler to second and Julio Franco's infield hit moved Butler to third. Joe Beckwith then relieved Jackson and Thornton greeted him with a sacrifice fly to deep center.

Orioles defeat Twins

BALTIMORE — Mike Flanagan earned his first victory of the season, holding Minnesota to five hits through seven innings, and Eddie Murray drove in two runs to lead the Baltimore Orioles to a 5-3 victory over the Twins. Flanagan, 1-2, struck out five and walked three before being replaced by Tippy Martinez after seven innings.

1in18. Tigers maul Chisox, 4-1

DETROIT — Lou Whitaker homered to back the combined five-hit pitching of Dave Rozema and Doug Bair as the Detroit Tigers beat the Chicago White Sox 4-1.

Rozema, 1-0, making his second start of the season, allowed two hits, striking out seven and walking two over the six innings he worked. Bair came on to start the seventh and notched his first save after giving up an RBI double to Greg Walker in the ninth.

Chicago's LaMarr Hoyt, 2-1, who was thwarted in his effort to win his 16th consecutive game over two seasons, gave up 10 hits. Hoyt, the 1983 American League Cy Young Award winner, struck out five and walked four. Hoyt's last defeat occurred July 23, 1983 when he lost 10-7 at Milwaukee.

Homers carry A's, 5-2

BOSTON — Dave Kingman belted his fifth homer of the year, a two-run shot, and Dwayne Murphy drove in a pair of runs with a homer and single, powering the Oakland A's to a 5-2 victory over the Boston Red Sox.

Kingman lined a shot through a stiff crosswind into the screen in left-center after Bruce Bochte walked on a 3-2 pitch with one out in the second inning. Murphy, who had an RBI single in the third inning after Donnie Hill singled and took second on a balk by Boston starter Mike Brown, compited Oakland's scoring by drilling his first homer into the bleachers beyond the A's bullpen in right field in the seventh. The A's also scored an unearned run in the fourth on an error by Boston shortstop Glenn Hoffman, a single by Hill and a wild pitch by Brown, 0-2.

Brewers beat Seattle

MILWAUKEE — Left-hander Mike Caldwell, staked to an early four-run lead, pitched a seven-hitter to lead the Milwaukee Brewers to a 6-2 victory over the Seattle Mariners.

The Brewers scored four times in the second inning to chase Matt Young, 2-2, and give Caldwell all the runs he needed. Caldwell struck out three and walked two in gaining his third victory in four outings.

Milwaukee's Cecil Cooper extended his hitting streak to 12 games with a single in the seventh.

Houston stretches lead

SWC Golf

ABILENE (AP) — John Slaughter shot a 72 to stay in first place, ahead of three other University of Houston golfers, as Houston added 17 more strokes to its team lead Saturday in the Southwest Conference Golf Championship.

The Cougars had a 33-stroke lead, with a four-under par 572 after 36 holes, over second-place Arkansas with 606, 10 strokes ahead of Texas.

All six Houston golfers were in the top eight.

"This is almost like a dream," said Houston Coach Dave Williams. "It's unbelievable that we would have such a big lead in a tournament like this."

Slaughter, playing on his home course at the Fairway Oaks Golf & Racquet Club which was raked by 40 mph winds Saturday, had a 140 total after his even-par 72. He was two shots ahead of Steve Elkington, who posted 71 both days.

Tray Tiner was in third at 144 while Billy Ray Brown, who had a 69 on Friday but a 77 on Saturday, was in fourth at 146. Brown took a quadruple-bogey eight on the 10th hole on Saturday.

The wind gave was a problem for many of the golfers, including defending champion Brandel Chamblee of Texas, who had posted a 72 Friday but turned in an 84 Saturday.

Slaughter continued his steady play, missing just one green, but he was unable to convert birdie putts.

On the Road Again

with Allen and Jackie Cason

Traveling is even more fun because of the good friends we can travel with...and because of the new friends we meet along the journey. If you really enjoy traveling with others, perhaps a travel club would suit your lifestyle. There are many in the Permian Basin area...at the rallies (campouts) the groups enjoy games such as dominoes, 42, forkle, chicken foot, bridge, etc. At least one meal is enjoyed together...and most clubs hold a devotional service together each Sunday morning with either a volunteer from within the club or the clubs elected chaplain bringing the short message.

If you and your family are on the road this holiday we do wish you a very safe and happy Easter...and we hope you are including Christ in all your travels. God bless, from your friends at Billy Sims Trailer Town, 520 E. 2nd, Odessa.

Motocross: Two-wheel fun

Scott Foster puts on goggles before the start of race.

Cary Pendley (54) of Lubbock leads Wolforth's Mike Gillit (68) over a jump in a 250cc race in the April 1 NMA qualifier.

Some Motocross riders looking for racing career

On any given day, motocross riders can probably be found practicing their sport at the local track west of Midland on Highway 80. On at least one Sunday every month, they're out their racing for keeps.

Sometimes, like the race held on April 1, the stakes can be high as motocross riders were competing in the first of a four-race series of National Motocross Association qualifiers. The winners of these NMA races earn a berth in the national finals held in Ponca City, Okla., in August.

Normally, it's just a regular race day, a chance to get out and compete. These races are run on the first Sunday of every month and trophies, for the amateurs, and a money pay back for the pros in expert classes is the prize.

A rider has two levels of competition to pass through in his class (determined by size of back, 80cc, 125 cc, etc.) before reaching expert status: novice and intermediate. For some, competing at those levels is a hobby, something to do on Sunday's. For others, their goal is to become an expert and, hopefully, receive a factor ride where they are paid and equipment is supplied by dealers.

FOR THE riders who make it to Ponca City, there will be about 27 seperate classes of events based on rider's ability and size of bike. A national champion in each category will be named and for some classes, major prizes awarded by the factories.

"I want to become a pro, a factory rider," said Brian McGary, a sophomore at Midland Lee who competes in the 80 and 125 cc classes. He picked up a victory in the Midland stop on April 1 and is well on his way to a return trip to the national finals.

A pair of muddy motocross racing boots stand in wait of a rider and the next event.

"We ran Ponca City last year when I was a 125 novice and I almost won it. Mike Healey (California) and I crashed and I broke my thumb in the 105 race before the 125 final. I ran all the laps but didn't run hard. I did it one-handed. Hopefully I'll turn pro in about two years."

Scott Foster, a sophomore at Greenwood won the 250 intermediate race, his best division, and is also looking for a factor ride in the future.

"If I'm good enough, I'd like to ride factory," said Foster, who likes motocross because, "It's a lot of fun. I'd been trail riding for a long time and racing seemed like a lot of fun. Actually, my little brother (Kevin, age 10) has been racing longer than I have. He started a few weeks before I did."

Like any sport, motocross riders need conditioning and a lot of practice to improve. Foster, 16, who has been racing for four years, uses both running and weights to keep in shape.

"Usually I'll go out and run about four miles a day on an average and then I lift weights at school."

THE COST of motocross is a limiting factor to some. Not only do riders have to buy and maintain their bikes, but they also need a host of protective equipment to keep injuries to a minimum.

First, and foremost, is a rider's head gear, usually a full face helmet with a visor and goggles to protect the eyes. The goggles are equipped with tear away shields that a rider can remove as they become covered with dirt and mud.

To protect the upper body, a rider wears what looks like a flak jacket with shoulder pads and a padded vest to protect the chest, mainly from rocks kicked up by other bikes. Padded gloves are worn to protect the hands.

Pants are made of a thick nylon cordura to give the legs protection against spills and the boots are made of stiff leather and metal to keep the foot and ankle from giving under the stress of sliding around corners.

With all this equipment, it's easy to see why serious riders need help from factories to stay on the track. It isn't one of the cheapest sports around.

Horns take two from Rice

HOUSTON (AP) — Darrin Loy's two-run double in the fifth gave Texas a 3-2 win over Rice in the opener of a Southwest Conference doubleheader the Longhorns swept on Saturday.

Loy scored Rusty Richards and David Denny to give Texas a 3-0 lead. Mike Fox answered with a two-run home run in the sixth, but reliever Steve Labay squelched a Rice threat in the seventh to save the win for starter Eric Boudreaux, 5-1.

Labay started for Texas in the second game, but left after four innings with Rice leading 3-2. Richards tied it with a solo homer in the fifth. Texas scored four more runs in the inning and added three in the eighth.

Mike Poehl, 3-1, earned the win in relief. Rice starter Tim Englund, 7-3, took the loss for the Owls.

No. 1-ranked Texas upped its record to 45-10 on the season and 12-3 in the SWC. Rice fell to 33-11 and 11-7.

Grimes paces Tech

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark. (AP) — John Grimes set a new Southwest Conference single-season home-run record and drove in six runs as he led Texas Tech to a 9-8 extra-inning victory over Arkansas in the first game of a Saturday double-headerr.

Arkansas came back to take the nightcap, 9-7.

Tech took the lead in the top of the eighth when Grimes hit his second homer of the game, a two-run shot off Tim Deitz fastball.

In the second game, Arkansas took a 3-1 lead in the third when Harrison drilled a two-run home run off Tech starter James Durham. The Hogs built and 8-1 lead, held by three RBIs by King. Freshman Dera Clark, pitching his first conference start, lasted six innings but left leading 9-5 when Mark Michna led off the seventh with a double.

Baylor, A&M split

WACO (AP) — Alan Koonce's shutout helped Baylor take the opener of a Southwest Conference doubleheader against Texas A&M 3-0 on Saturday, while the Aggies won the nightcap 8-1 on Sherman Corbett's two-hitter.

Koonce, 5-5, scattered seven hits in the opener, leaving six Aggies stranded. Shawn Choruby and Buddy Haney had doubles for Texas A&M, but two double plays by Baylor helped Koonce gain his first shutout of the year.

Brad Meyer had a game-winning hit for the Bears, driving in Brad Lamberth. Kyle Todd had a triple for the Bears, now 25-21 and 8-10, while Keith Shepherd added the double.

Kelly Keahey, 6-2, was the losing pitcher. Texas A&M, 36-11 and 11-4, claimed 12 hits off five Baylor pitchers in the nightcap to support Corbett, now 5-2.

Mark Gold, 4-3, lasted only one inning and was saddled with the loss.

Don Robison's four hits led the Aggies and Haney and Tony Metoyer added doubles. Ronnie King's triple and a single by Blair Hibbert were the only hits off Corbett.

Cougs split with Frogs

FORT WORTH (AP) — Stuart Stauffacher held Texas Christian to three hits through 4⅓ innings while Houston batters hammered in the runs to trounce the Frogs 16-3 in the opener of a SWC doubleheader the teams split on Saturday.

Darrin Roberts' RBI single was the difference in TCU's 6-5 win in the nightcap. A two-run homer by Donnie Millender in the bottom of the second put TCU ahead 4-3.

In the opener, Houston scored 16 runs on 18 hits, including a home run by Riley Epps. The score was tied 1-1 going into the third inning, but Houston scored 10 runs on 12 hits over the next two innings to take an 11-1 lead.

Stauffacher, 4-2, took the win. Mickey Kazmierski took the loss for TCU to even his record at 4-4.

Reliever Wayne Stephens picked up the win for the Frogs in the nightcap. Greg Brinkman took the loss for Houston.

TCU is now 23-18 overall and 6-12 in the SWC. Houston is 29-22 and 4-14.

Three gain tie for S&H Classic lead

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. (AP) — Two-time defending champion Hollis Stacy and Japan's Ayako Okamoto both birdied the 18th hole Saturday to pull into a tie with Betsy King after three rounds of the $150,000 LPGA S&H Classic.

Stacy, hoping to become the second woman to win three straight in the longest continuous running event on the tour, sank a 10-foot putt on the par 5, 443-yard 18th, while Okamoto completed her day-long climb with a one-footer.

Both golfers started the day three shots behind second-round leader Vicki Fergon and carded 66s for 54-hole totals of 12-under-par 204.

King, winner of the Women's Kemper Open last month, shot a 68 and settled for the tie after leading over most of the back nine on the 6,023-yard Pasadena Yacht & Golf Club course.

Barb Bunkowsky and Fergon both were two shots off the pace of the leaders after rounds of 66 and 71, respectively. Donna Caponi and Joan Joyce were another two strokes back at 208.

King, one shot behind Fergon when the round started, birdied two of her first three holes to take the lead as the second-round leader struggled.

She bogeyed No. 6, however, and, after Bunkowsky, Okamoto and Amy Benz all birdied the seventh, eighth and ninth holes, found herself tied with that trio at 9-under par.

King regained the lead on No. 10 and played steady golf the rest of the way. Still, she couldn't hold off the fast-charging Stacy and Okamoto, who won last week's J&B Scotch Pro-Am in Las Vegas.

Stacy, who would equal Kathy Whitworth's accomplishment of three consecutive S&H titles from 1968-70 with a victory Sunday, birdied six of the last 10 holes, including the 16th, 17th and 18th.

The putts for birdie on 17 and 18 both dropped from 12 feet and she moved into position for her 10-footer on No. 18 with a sand wedge.

King, playing in a threesome just behind Stacy and Okamoto, said she could hear the roar of the crowd when the players birdied the last hole to pull even.

Motocross: Two-wheel fun

Scott Foster puts on goggles before the start of race.

Cary Pendley (54) of Lubbock leads Wolforth's Mike Gillit (68) over a jump in a 250cc race in the April 1 NMA qualifier.

Some Motocross riders looking for racing career

On any given day, motocross riders can probably be found practicing their sport at the local track west of Midland on Highway 80. On at least one Sunday every month, they're out their racing for keeps.

Sometimes, like the race held on April 1, the stakes can be high as motocross riders were competing in the first of a four-race series of National Motocross Association qualifiers. The winners of these NMA races earn a berth in the national finals held in Ponca City, Okla., in August.

Normally, it's just a regular race day, a chance to get out and compete. These races are run on the first Sunday of every month and trophies, for the amateurs, and a money pay back for the pros in expert classes is the prize.

A rider has two levels of competition to pass through in his class (determined by size of back, 80cc, 125 cc, etc.) before reaching expert status: novice and intermediate. For some, competing at those levels is a hobby, something to do on Sunday's. For others, their goal is to become an expert and, hopefully, receive a factor ride where they are paid and equipment is supplied by dealers.

FOR THE riders who make it to Ponca City, there will be about 27 seperate classes of events based on rider's ability and size of bike. A national champion in each category will be named and for some classes, major prizes awarded by the factories.

"I want to become a pro, a factory rider," said Brian McGary, a sophomore at Midland Lee who competes in the 80 and 125 cc classes. He picked up a victory in the Midland stop on April 1 and is well on his way to a return trip to the national finals.

A pair of muddy motocross racing boots stand in wait of a rider and the next event.

"We ran Ponca City last year when I was a 125 novice and I almost won it. Mike Healey (California) and I crashed and I broke my thumb in the 105 race before the 125 final. I ran all the laps but didn't run hard. I did it one-handed. Hopefully I'll turn pro in about two years."

Scott Foster, a sophomore at Greenwood won the 250 intermediate race, his best division, and is also looking for a factor ride in the future.

"If I'm good enough, I'd like to ride factory," said Foster, who likes motocross because, "It's a lot of fun. I'd been trail riding for a long time and racing seemed like a lot of fun. Actually, my little brother (Kevin, age 10) has been racing longer than I have. He started a few weeks before I did."

Like any sport, motocross riders need conditioning and a lot of practice to improve. Foster, 16, who has been racing for four years, uses both running and weights to keep in shape.

"Usually I'll go out and run about four miles a day on an average and then I lift weights at school."

THE COST of motocross is a limiting factor to some. Not only do riders have to buy and maintain their bikes, but they also need a host of protective equipment to keep injuries to a minimum.

First, and foremost, is a rider's head gear, usually a full face helmet with a visor and goggles to protect the eyes. The goggles are equipped with tear away shields that a rider can remove as they become covered with dirt and mud.

To protect the upper body, a rider wears what looks like a flak jacket with shoulder pads and a padded vest to protect the chest, mainly from rocks kicked up by other bikes. Padded gloves are worn to protect the hands.

Pants are made of a thick nylon cordura to give the legs protection against spills and the boots are made of stiff leather and metal to keep the foot and ankle from giving under the stress of sliding around corners.

With all this equipment, it's easy to see why serious riders need help from factories to stay on the track. It isn't one of the cheapest sports around.

Horns take two from Rice

HOUSTON (AP) — Darrin Loy's two-run double in the fifth gave Texas a 3-2 win over Rice in the opener of a Southwest Conference doubleheader the Longhorns swept on Saturday.

Loy scored Rusty Richards and David Denny to give Texas a 3-0 lead. Mike Fox answered with a two-run home run in the sixth, but reliever Steve Labay squelched a Rice threat in the seventh to save the win for starter Eric Boudreaux, 5-1.

Labay started for Texas in the second game, but left after four innings with Rice leading 3-2. Richards tied it with a solo homer in the fifth. Texas scored four more runs in the inning and added three in the eighth.

Mike Poehl, 3-1, earned the win in relief. Rice starter Tim Englund, 7-3, took the loss for the Owls.

No. 1-ranked Texas upped its record to 45-10 on the season and 12-3 in the SWC. Rice fell to 33-11 and 11-7.

Grimes paces Tech

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark. (AP) — John Grimes set a new Southwest Conference single-season home-run record and drove in six runs as he led Texas Tech to a 9-8 extra-inning victory over Arkansas in the first game of a Saturday double-headerr.

Arkansas came back to take the nightcap, 9-7.

Tech took the lead in the top of the eighth when Grimes hit his second homer of the game, a two-run shot off Tim Deitz fastball.

In the second game, Arkansas took a 3-1 lead in the third when Harrison drilled a two-run home run off Tech starter James Durham. The Hogs built and 8-1 lead, held by three RBIs by King. Freshman Dera Clark, pitching his first conference start, lasted six innings but left leading 9-5 when Mark Michna led off the seventh with a double.

Baylor, A&M split

WACO (AP) — Alan Koonce's shutout helped Baylor take the opener of a Southwest Conference doubleheader against Texas A&M 3-0 on Saturday, while the Aggies won the nightcap 8-1 on Sherman Corbett's two-hitter.

Koonce, 5-5, scattered seven hits in the opener, leaving six Aggies stranded. Shawn Choruby and Buddy Haney had doubles for Texas A&M, but two double plays by Baylor helped Koonce gain his first shutout of the year.

Brad Meyer had a game-winning hit for the Bears, driving in Brad Lamberth. Kyle Todd had a triple for the Bears, now 25-21 and 8-10, while Keith Shepherd added the double.

Kelly Keahey, 6-2, was the losing pitcher. Texas A&M, 36-11 and 11-4, claimed 12 hits off five Baylor pitchers in the nightcap to support Corbett, now 5-2.

Mark Gold, 4-3, lasted only one inning and was saddled with the loss.

Cougs split with Frogs

FORT WORTH (AP) — Stuart Stauffacher held Texas Christian to three hits through 4⅓ innings while Houston batters hammered in the runs to trounce the Frogs 16-3 in the opener of a SWC doubleheader the teams split on Saturday.

Darrin Roberts' RBI single was the difference in TCU's 6-5 win in the nightcap. A two-run homer by Donnie Millender in the bottom of the second put TCU ahead 4-3.

In the opener, Houston scored 16 runs on 18 hits, including a home run by Riley Epps. The score was tied 1-1 going into the third inning, but Houston scored 10 runs on 12 hits over the next two innings to take an 11-1 lead.

Stauffacher, 4-2, took the win. Mickey Kazmierski took the loss for TCU to even his record at 4-4.

Reliever Wayne Stephens picked up the win for the Frogs in the nightcap. Greg Brinkman took the loss for Houston.

TCU is now 23-18 overall and 6-12 in the SWC. Houston is 29-22 and 4-14.

Wilander, Sundstrom gain finals

MONTE CARLO, Monaco (AP) — Defending champion Mats Wilander and Henrik Sundstrom defeated their semifinal opponents Saturday to set up an all-Swedish final in the $405,000 Monte Carlo Jacomo Open tennis tournament.

Wilander stormed past France's Yannick Noah 6-2, 6-3, while Sundstrom bested third-seeded Jimmy Arias of the United States 6-3, 4-6, 6-1.

Today's championship match with Sundstrom "will be my toughest match of the tournament," said Wilander, who noted that his opponent is a good clay court player. Wilander has never lost to Sundstrom.

The semifinal between Wilander and Noah was nothing like their last meeting in the French Open finals last June, which Noah won in three sets.

"I think Mats hit the ball harder and played faster than he did last year," said the 23-year-old French star after the match, which took just 80 minutes.

"But that may just be an impression since I was a lot slower today than I was last year," Noah added.

Despite a few brilliant moments, there was little of the spectacular shot-making that boosted Noah to a No.6 world ranking and made him a national hero in France.

"It's just the beginning of the clay court season, and I don't think Yannick played his best," Wilander said. "But he has the type of game that gets better the more tournaments he plays."

The 23-year-old Noah, spurred on by a cheering crowd that chanted his name between games, did not win a single service game in the first set.

Though Noah managed to climb back into the second set to reach 3-5, saving one match point, Wilander's consistency and hard hitting were too much for the erratic Frenchman.

Sundstrom, meanwhile, beat Arias at his own game.

The two baseliners traded blistering forehands that skidded off the sidelines. The rallies were long until the second set when Arias suddenly began to limp and grimace with pain.

Arias had been bothered all week by tendinitis in his knee, which he said he aggravated Friday by playing nine holes of golf.

"I was lucky to pull out the second set," Arias said. "I started going for all the points on the first ball because I knew I couldn't stay back and rally."

Arias said he was not sure he would play a WCT tournament in Dallas starting Monday.

The unheralded Sundstrom gained a berth in the finals at the expense of Jose Luis Clerc of Argentina, American Jimmy Brown and Czechoslovakia's Ivan Lendl, who withdrew Friday with a leg bruise.

A recent addition to Sweden's Davis Cup team, Sundstrom has proven his clay court talent this season, winning tournaments in Tunis, Tunisia and Bari, Italy.

He was the losing finalist against Ecuador's Andres Gomez at the Nice Open last week.

Faldo's 68 good for four-shot advantage

HILTON HEAD ISLAND, S.C. (AP) — Nick Faldo of Britain shot a 3-under-par 68 and stretched his lead to a commanding four strokes Saturday in the third round of the $400,000 Sea Pines Heritage Classic.

Faldo, seeking his first victory on the American PGA Tour, put together a 54-hole total of 201, a distant 12 strokes under par on the difficult Harbour Town Golf Links.

Tom Kite, despite a pair of 6s, salvaged a 70 that included a birdie on the 18th hole and was tied for second at 205 with Dan Pohl and Larry Rinker.

Pohl and Rinker, neither of whom has yet won on the PGA Tour, each had a third-round 69.

Tom Watson, a five-time British Open champion and twice the winner of this title, closed up with a 66 that left him at 207, six strokes off the pace.

He was tied with Hubert Green, another two-time winner on this picturesque links, and Ronnie Black. Green, mired in a long, discouraging slump, had a 68 and Black matched par 71.

Defending champion Fuzzy Zoeller and PGA titleholder Hal Sutton each had 69 and were in a large group at 208.

Denis Watson, a South African and one of the first men off the tee, tied the course record of 63 set by Jack Nicklaus in 1975. He used only 22 strokes on the tiny greens that serve as a Harbour Town trademark and completed 54 holes at 210.

Faldo, a two-stroke leader when the day's play started, opened up birdie-birdie and really wasn't threatened.

"That got me off to a very good start and I just tried to keep it going," said Faldo, a three-time British PGA champion and winner of five European titles last season.

He hit a 6-iron some 6 feet from the flag on the first hole, got his second just short of the green, chipped to 5 feet and made birdie-4 on the second.

Faldo, now in his second full season as a member of the American Tour, bogeyed the third after missing the green, but got the shot back on the next hole, getting up and down from a greenside bunker for birdie-4.

He made another good save, this time from a pot bunker at the back of the ninth green, then rapped in a pair of 15-foot birdie putts on the 10th and 16th.

Faldo was five shots in front of the pack at that time, but pulled a 7-iron shot into a bunker on the 17th and made bogey.

Kite, who finished sixth in last week's Masters and was in title contention until he hit into the water on the 12th hole of the final round, got the ball close to the hole for a couple of birdies on the front side, but hurt his score with bogeys on two of the par-5s.

He missed the green with his third shot on the fifth and pull-hooked his second into the water on the 15th.

He had to make a good save from the sand on the 17th and then birdied the 18th from about 12 feet to retain a share of second.

Curry defends WBA welterweight crown

FORT WORTH (AP) — Champion Donald "The Cobra" Curry floored Elio Diaz of Venezuela three times and the challenger couldn't answer the bell for the eighth round Saturday, giving the hometown hero a technical knockout in his third World Boxing Association welterweight title defense.

Diaz took a standing nine-count before the bell rang to end the round.

The dazed Diaz staggered to his corner and his handlers argued whether he should continue until the bell rang for the eight round. The Diaz corner then waved to referee Stanley Christodoulou of South Africa that they wanted the fight stopped.

For the record, it will go down as an eighth-round TKO for Curry, who is 19-0 with 14 KOs.

It was the first defeat in 35 fights for Diaz, who had 32 KOs coming into the bout, which attracted an estimated 5,000 fans in Will Rogers Coliseum.

The 22-year-old Curry, who is also the International Boxing Federation welterweight champion, is now scheduled to fight Nino Larocca of Italy on June 23 in Italy.

Diaz was knocked to his knees with the first punch of the fight, a straight right from Curry. He weathered the rest of the first round, but was floored again in the fifth round on a straight right. Diaz again took a standing nine-count.

By the sixth round, Diaz's right eye was closed and he was on the defensive throughout as Curry stalked him around the ring.

Diaz was a pound over the 147-pound limit Saturday morning. After an hour of shadow boxing he lost a whopping 2½ pounds and weighed 145½.

Diaz said he had weighed 145 to 146 pounds during the week using another scale which apparently was not properly calibrated.

Curry only had to sweat off an eighth of a pound to hit the 147 requirement on the nose.

Curry received $300,000 and a percentage of the gate, while Diaz got $100,000 plus the Venezuelan television rights.

Curry won the title from South Korean Jun Sok Hwang Feb. 13, 1983.

Lloyd, Navratilova to meet for WTAC tennis crown

AMELIA ISLAND, Fla. (AP) — Chris Evert Lloyd breezed into the final of the $250,000 Women's Tennis Association Championships Saturday, while top-seeded Martina Navratilova struggled to win in semifinal play.

Second-seeded Evert Lloyd beat 12th-seeded Manuela Maleeva of Bulgaria, 6-1, 6-1 while Navratilova outlasted No. 3 seed Hana Mandlikova, 6-3, 4-6, 6-4.

Evert Lloyd and Navratilova will meet Sunday on clay for the first time since 1981. Evert Lloyd ran her winning streak on Florida clay to 84 with Saturday's victory. She holds a 7-0 edge over Navratilova on clay courts, but Navratilova has not lost to Evert Lloyd in their last nine matches.

"It could be a great match, but you never know," said Evert Lloyd. "I'm sure I'll be a little nervous."

Navratilova said she was anticipating a tough battle.

"It's going to a different than today (Saturday). I won't have to race her to the net," Navratilova said. "In a way, it will be an easier match to play. But Chris is the best on clay, I'm the underdog."

Edmonton asking how much farther will Flames go?

By The Associated Press

NHL Playoffs

The Calgary Flames were never supposed to get this far — which is why it's the Edmonton Oilers who must be wondering just how much farther they can go in the National Hockey League playoffs.

The Flames couldn't beat Edmonton once in eight games during the regular season, yet they've beaten them three times — including the past two — in their Smythe Division final. Calgary sent the series back to Edmonton with a 5-4 overtime victory Friday night.

"They're the ones with their backs against the wall now," Flames forward Carey Wilson said, looking forward to Sunday night's deciding game. "I don't know what's going through their heads but they must be questioning themselves."

The big question is whether Wayne Gretzky, Edmonton's super scorer, will get untracked. The Flames have totally neutralized him.

The league's premier offensive player has been physically beaten throughout the six games.

Playing now with a painful left arm and facing the tightest and hardest checking he's ever seen, Gretzky has been held to just four assists in the last four games.

The Norris Division championship also will be decided Sunday night when the St. Louis Blues, 4-0 winner at home Friday night to deadlock that series at three games apiece, visit the Minnesota North Stars.

In a meeting of present and former "dynasties," the New York Islanders visit the Montreal Canadiens Tuesday night in the opening game of the Wales Conference final. The Islanders have won the Stanley Cup the past four years. Only the Canadiens did it better, winning five in a row during 1956-60.

"The biggest thing now," Edmonton defenseman Paul Coffey said of the pivotal seventh game against Calgary, "is how will we be mentally? We've never really faced a similar do-or-die situation. What will our reaction be? If you're not up for this game you'll never get up in your career."

Actually, the Oilers have faced this situation once before. Two years ago, with their best-of-five, first-round series against Los Angeles tied at two games apiece, Edmonton took on the visiting Kings and lost to them 7-4. Last year the Oilers got to the finals against the Islanders and, with Gretzky similarly neutralized, New York swept them four straight.

Relying on Gretzky and a few other particular players has led to Edmonton's skid, said Wilson, whereas the Flames have been sharing the heroics. "They have players, when the going gets tough they turn to certain individuals and that's been hurting them," Wilson said.

The North Stars rely heavily on Keith Acton, their high-scoring center, but he may be slowed in their seventh game against the Blues. Acton suffered a severely bruised wrist injury during the second period Friday night in St. Louis when he was struck by Rob Ramage's stick.

"There's no doubt about it," said Minnesota's Steve Payne. "Keith's been a catalyst for us."But North Stars Coach Bill Mahoney feels his club will respond."The history of this team over the last little while after having an injury is to recover and respond with all kinds of effort," he said.

Long shots among final 32 for Olympic basketball team

BLOOMINGTON, Ind. (AP) — Terry Porter and John Stockton, two of the longest shots to make the U.S. Olympic basketball team when tryouts began, were among the 32 survivors Saturday when cuts were announced.

Porter, a guard from Wisconsin-Stevens Point, an NAIA school, made it despite coming down with the chicken pox during the trials. Stockton, a guard from Gonzaga, also made the first cut.

But six members of the 1983 gold medal Pam American Games team were dropped from the original 72 invitees.

"Before we started playing here the coaches told us to not be surprised if some All-Americans and first-round draft choices don't make it," said guard Leon Wood of Fullerton State, who survived.

Pan Am players who didn't stick were Michael Cage of San Diego State, Ed Pinckney of Villanova, Charlie Sitton of Oregon State, Greg Stokes of Iowa, Mark Price of Georgia Tech and Fred Reynolds of Texas-El Paso.

"I was happy to hear my name called," said Michael Jordan of North Carolina, the Player of the Year in college basketball this year.

Jordan was one of four first-team All-Americans to survive, joining Tar Heel teammate Sam Perkins, Patrick Ewing of Georgetown and Wayman Tisdale of Oklahoma.

The survivors played exhibition games Saturday night and play again Sunday night in the windup of the trials, which began Tuesday at Indiana University.

The next cuts will be made Monday, reducing the squad to from 16 to 18.

Since Porter is ill and unable to play in the weekend games, he will be invited back for the May 10 Olympic camp along with rest of Monday's survivors.

"We'll give him his two days then," said Coach Bobby Knight.

Porter, 6-foot-3, was an NAIA All-America and the most valuable player in the NAIA tournament, where he was the leading scorer with a 25.6-point average.

Stockton said, "I was a little stunned. They read the list in alphabetical order, so I had to wait a bit. My hard was pounding by the time they reached the R's.

"I regard myself as a longshot because of Gonzaga's lack of exposure," he said."These are the greatest players in the country and I saw a lot of them on TV. But they never heard of me."

They have heard of Stockton in Spokane, Wash., where the 6-1 guard became the first Gonzaga player in history to score 1,000 points and collect 500 assists.

He averaged 20.6 points as a senior and was chosen the West Coast Athletic Conference's most valuable player.

"I don't think I'll be at a disadvantage because Bobby Knight coaches him," said Stockton. "He (Knight) already knows his strong points as well as his bad points. Maybe he won't get to know my bad points."

Alford, who led the Hoosiers in scoring and is a 91 percent free-throw shooter, said he didn't think Knight would show favoritism in choosing the final squad.

"He's a fair person and a fair coach," said Alford, "but I might have the advantage in knowing the type of offense he wants to run and being on my home grounds."

St. John's swingman Chris Mullin, sporting a black eye as a result of the physically aggressive week of workouts, was another survivor.

"The coaches put things in perspective," said Mullin, a second-team All-America. "There were hundreds of players who wanted to be invited but only 72 of us came here. They said it had nothing to do with our future if you got cut; you deterime your own future."

In making the choices, Knight and his staff and the selection committee gave strong consideration to players who can play two positions, guard and forward or forward and center.

Along with the 7-0 Ewing, other center candidates remaining are Tim McCormick, 6-11, of Michigan, Joe Kleine, 6-11, of Arkansas, and 7-0 Jon Koncak of Southern Methodist.

The forwards are Mark Alarie of Duke, Charles Barkley of Auburn, Michael Brown of George Washington, Antoine Carr, formerly of Wichita State, Tyrone Corbin of DePaul, Kenny Fields of UCLA, Bobby Lee Hurt of Alabama, Larry Krystkowiak of Montana, Karl Malone of Louisiana Tech, Chuck Person of Auburn, Anthony Teachey of Wake Forest, Jeff Turner of Vanderbilt, Perkins and Tisdale.

Gamblers beat Wranglers

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston quarterback Jim Kelly hit Richard Johnson with an 11-yard touchdown pass, and defensive end Pete Catan followed it with a 58-yard TD return of a blocked field goal as the Gamblers downed the Arizona Wranglers 37-24 in a United States Football League game Saturday night.

The Gamblers had built a 24-3 lead early in the second quarter, but the 4-5 Wranglers cut that to 24-10 on Tim Spencer's 25-yard run before halftime.

After Greg Landry connected with Truemane Johnson on a 13-yard TD pass, Spencer's 2-yard scoring run with 30 seconds left in the third period tied the game 24-24.

Kelly completed three passes for 57 yards on the 80-yard scoring drive that put Houston on its way to its sixth win in nine games.

Arizona drove to the Gamblers 20 before a holding penalty and a sack stalled the threat, and Andy Hawkins blocked Frank Corral's 50-yard field goal attempt to set up Catan's return.

Richard Johnson's pass reception came with 13:07 remaining in the game.

The two teams traded field goals in the first quarter, Toni Fritch booting a 39-yarder and Corral one from 23 yards.

Kelly, who completed 17 of 23 passes for 363 yards to remain the top passer in the USFL, passed 53 yards to Johnson and 77 yards to Ricky Sanders for touchdowns after scoring on a 2-yard run, as Houston opened a 24-3 bulge with 5:09 remaining in the first half.

Arizona came into the game with the best pass defense in the USFL.

Stoudt ties record

BIRMINGHAM — Cliff Stoudt tied a United States Football League record with five touchdown passes as the Birmingham Stallions defeated the Oklahoma Outlaws 41-17 Saturday night for their eighth victory in a row.

Stoudt connected twice each with Jim Smith and Joey Jones and once with Darryl Mason as the Stallions, atop the Southern Division, raised their record to 8-1 at the halfway mark of the season.

The Outlaws, 6-3, fell out of a first place tie with Michigan in the Central Division.

Stoudt's five scoring tosses tied the mark set by Michigan's Bobby Hebert last season.

Oklahoma's Doug Williams threw for two touchdowns and Efren Herrera kicked a field goal to give the Outlaws a 17-14 halftime lead, but the Stallions roped in the game with a pair of one-two punches in the second half.

Stoudt threw 3 yards to Mason early in the third quarter for Birmingham's first lead and, 47 seconds later, Jones ran 15 yards untouched on an end around. Joe Cugliari set up that score by recovering a Williams fumble.

With 34 seconds left in the third period, Stoudt passed 41 yards to Smith in the end zone. One minute later, after a Chuck Clanton interception, he combined with Jones on a 37-yard scoring play.

Stoudt completed 13 of 23 for 234 yards with no interceptions.

Holtz doesn't want to play UT

AUSTIN (AP) — Minnesota football coach Lou Holtz is trying to cancel a home-and-home football series with the University of Texas, the UT Men's Athletics Council has been told.

Holtz wrote Texas football coach Fred Akers this week announcing he wanted to get out of the series. UT athletic director DeLoss Dodds revealed the cancellation plans to the council Friday.

Minnesota and Texas are scheduled to play in Minneapolis on Sept. 12, 1987, and in Austin on Sept. 24, 1988.

I'm disappointed. I thought it would be a good series. It will be tough to fill in," said Dodds.

Arkansas White defeats Red in final scrimmage

LITTLE ROCK (AP) — Quarterback Brad Taylor threw for 146 yards and ran for another 33 yards as the Whites defeated the Reds 24-12 in the final University of Arkansas spring football scrimmage.

Behind Taylor's seasoned peformance, the Whites scored on each of their first three possessions in Friday night's game.

Coach Ken Hatfield, directing the Razorbacks through spring drills for the first time, said following the game that he was pleased with the workouts.

"It's been a good spring," he said.

"We know something about everybody, even the people who are hurt, like John Ed Goodman, Greg Berry, Rodney Beachum and Bobby King. We know where to put them when we resume in the fall."

The staff at Cook's Pantry is eagerly waiting to serve you a delicious, wholesome, home-cooked meal at a price you can afford. Why bother to cook your meals when Cook's Pantry can do it for you? Cook's Pantry No.1 is located at 2001 N.Big Spring and the new Cook's Pantry No. 2 is located in the Blanks Building at 310 W. Wall.

Cook's Pantry No.2 opens this Tuesday

For all of you Midlanders who have come to know and love Cook's Pantry Buffet you are in luck! The Stone family will be openning Cook's Pantry No.2. It will be openning on Tuesday, April 24 in the Blank's Building located at 310 W. Wall in downtown Midland. The same great service and selection will be available at the buffet style restaurant as you can find at No.1. Now even though the old Cook's Pantry wasn't far from downtown this will be even more convenient. They will also be serving filtered water at both No.1 and No.2 so if you just can't stand city water you will glad to know that you can get a good cup of coffee or tea without the after taste.

Cook's Pantry Buffet also comes in handy on those days when you just can't seem to bring yourself to eat at another "fast food" place. No.1 is located only a short drive from downtown Midland and No. 2 is right downtown at 310 W. Wall (The Blanks Building). The quick buffet service makes it perfect for the business person who has to eat and be back in the office in an hour.

Cook's Pantry is now open under the original owners, Chester and Ysleta Stone. Richard Stone is the manager of No.1 and Craig Getzloff will be managing No. 2.offer you good home cooked meals at a reasonable price. Meals are served buffet style and you are always welcome to come back for seconds. Most foods are made from scratch right in their kitchen, and the foods are so delicious, you would not expect to find them anywhere but your own kitchen.

For example, most of the soups are made fresh from scratch. There are always at least three meat items on the lunch menu, one is always pressure-fried chicken. The mashed potatoes are not instant, they are made from real potatoes. You will always find an excellent country style gravy every day at Cook's. The lunch menu change daily, so you can eat at Cook's every day without having to worry about eating the same food day after day. For those of you with a lighter appetite, there is always a salad plate . You can have it alone or with a bowl of homemade soup.Lunch at Cook's Pantry is served from 11:00 to 2:00, Monday through Friday.

Breakfast at Cook's Pantry is something you definately do not want to miss. Brakfast includes fresh buttermilk biscuits, hash browns, grits, bacon and both link and patty sausage. Country gravy is also available at breakfast, along with scrambled eggs, eggs fried to order, and even pancakes are included with breakfast. Once again, as always, seconds are welcome. And next time you come in, try our new cinnamon rolls. Breakfast is served from 6:00 to 10:00 Monday through Friday, and 6:00 to 11:00 on Saturday. Cook's Pantry is closed Sundays.

It is almost time for the horse races to begin at Ruidoso and many of you will be going to watch.It is good to know that even when you are far away from home, you can get a home-cooked meal. The Whispering Pines Restaurant in Ruidoso is owned by the Stone family whotake the same care in preparing your meals there as they do in Midland. The quality and taste is superb, just as it is here. If you like the Cook's Pantry you will love the Whispering Pines. Being able to enjoy a delicious home-cooked meal when you are that far away from home makes it all that much nicer. Relax and enjoy your vacation. Let Whispering Pines do your cooking for you. Tell all your friends about Whispering Pines and remember them when you go to Ruidoso.

Save yourself the time and trouble of cooking. Let Cook's Pantry do your cooking for you. Their breakfast hours are 6 a.m. to 10 a.m., Monday through Friday and 6 a.m. to 11a.m., Saturday. Lunch is served from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m., Monday through Friday. Cook's Pantry is closed on Sunday. Call-in orders can be placed by calling 683-1463 for No. 1 and 683-3004 for No.2. Horse racing enthusiasts remember also the Whispering Pines in Ruidoso. By eating at any of the places, you will get a home-cooked meal at a reasonable price.

Kelly Services has the KEE word processor simulator

The professionals at Kelly Services would like to announce a major breakthrough in their evaluation process. They can now evaluate word processors accurately with hands on testing.

Until now no temporary service could send out word processor operators with a great amount of confidence. They all had to rely on a written test to determine a person's skills. If was found that while 90% of all companies use temporaries, 80% of the companies that had word processing systems did not use temporary help in that area. This was due, in part, to the lack of accurate testing.

Kelly Services is ready to change those statistics. Together with KEE, Inc., a developer of specialized training systems, Kelly developed a program to both test and train personnel in word processing.

With these standards Kelly is now able to test and catagorize word processing skills as accurately as they can typing skills.

The new system can do three very necessary things:
1) It evaluates not only overall word processing capability, but also can differentiate among seperate functions such as inputting, formatting, editing and so forth.
2) It is able to test advanced functions in the future.
3) A critical point - it is "hands on", that is it lets a person perform on equipment that works just like the models the customers have in their offices.

Although the Kelly system resembles a word processor because it has a keyboard and screen, it is not word processing equipment. it is word processing simulation equipment.

This special word processing simulator is much like the simulators used by astronauts and pilots. It is a hands on simulator that at the present time, exactly duplicates the Lanier, Wang and IBM word processors. Actually it is a computer that electronically checks, times and scores every operator move through the basic word processing skills.

With the KEE simulator, Kelly requires a person to score 85% or better in each area tested before they will certify them amd a person must be certified for Kelly to place them.

Besides testing, KEE can also offer employee computer assisted experience on the Lanier, Wang or IBM systems. To qualify for this training a Kelly employee must be able to type atleast 55 words per minute, have worked a minimum of 100 hours for Kelly and must agree to work exclusively for Kelly for a certain period of time.

The KEE system allows a chance for Kelly employees to grow and enhance their skills and to better meets the customers needs.

Kelly Services is constantly striving to improve their services and help the community. To benefit the Muscular Dystrophy Association, Kelly is co-sponsoring a Flashtype typing contest. In this contest 10¢ or more is pledged for each of your accurately typed words per minute. If you can't type they have a second catagory for the amount of money raised. The Grand Prize in both catagories in a new home computer and software. If you would like more information call the Kelly office in Midland or Odessa.

Kelly Services would also like to congratulate all of the secretaries in the Permian Basin on a job well done during National Secretary Week. As a special bonus Kelly will be giving out a limited number of registered key chains. The key chain has a registration number on it so if you lose your keys you will get them back if someone just drops them in the mail to Kelly Services. The address is on the key chain.

If you would like more information on the KEE word processor simulator or on the Flashtype contest call Kelly Services at 689-9801 or stop by Suite 2050 in the ClayDesta National Bank Building. If you are in Odessa, you can call Kelly at 332-0191.

The professionals at Kelly Services are ready to show the Permian Basin their new Kee word processor simulator. For more information on the KEE call Pam, Debbie or Wilma at 689-9801 or stop by Suite 2050 in the ClayDesta National Bank Building.

J. E. "Slim" Mason(L), Peggy Mason and David Strickney(R) are ready to help the contractor or the "do-it-yourself"er by carrying the largest supply inventory in the Permian Basin. They offer very competitive prices and truckload prices are available on request. If you would like to know more about Harris Acoustics and Supply call Slim, Peggy or David at 683-1874 or stop by No. 22 Industrial Loop.

Harris Acoustics - largest supply inventory in the Permian Basin

CONTRACTORS–

"DO-IT-YOURSELF"ers–

Are you looking for a supplier who carries a large inventory of ceiling tile, ceiling grid, drywall materials, metal studs, vinyl base and accessories. Look no more! Harris Acoustics and Supply is the place you have been searching for.

Harris Acoustics has been in business for 18 years in Midland.

J. E. "Slim" Mason, President and Owner, feels the reason they have been around so long is because Harris is a company that wants to serve people.

At one time Harris Acoustics was strictly a subcontractor for commercial acoustical ceiling and floor work. They have since added a new dimension to their company. They now carry a complete line of supplies for contractors and do-it-yourselfers alike. They still do subcontracting work as well.

Harris Acoustics is proud of the fact thet they have the largest inventory in the Permian Basin. This is a major benefit to commercial contractors because it eliminates the time lost waiting for a shipment to come in.

Whether you purchase supplies for commercial or residential use, quality products are essential. Harris Acoustics carries a wide selection of quality name brand products. In ceiling tile, they carry in stock Gold Bond, Conwed, Armstrong and Owens Corning. The tile panel sizes available are 2'x2', 2'x4' and 12"x12".

They also carry a complete line of Roblin Flangeklamp Grid Systems. The grid colors they have in stock are white, black, bronze, lo-gloss, woodgrain and aluminum. Plus they carry a complete line of ceiling accessories such as wire, nails and hanging components.

Fiberglass insulation for both walls and ceilings can be found at Harris.

If you need a wall to connect your new ceiling and floor, Harris also carries metal studs and track. All sizes of sheetrock are always in stock. They carry drywall screws and adhesives as well.

Just as you would expect, Harris Acoustics' prices are very competitive. Truckload prices are also available upon request.

If you would like more information call Slim; his wife Peggy, Secretary of the company; or David Strickney, Manager and Chief Estimator, at 683-1874 or stop by No. 22 Industrial Loop.

Quality comes in all shapes.

There's more to a diamond than meets the eye. And whether the diamond is in good shape or not has little to do with the shape of the diamond. It has to do with quality. Quality as determined by the 4Cs: Cut, Color, Clarity and Carat Weight.
Cut: Some diamonds make the cut. Every cut of a diamond is defined by a precise mathematical formula to allow the maximum amount of light in. Quality comes in all cuts or shapes. But the quality of the cut, or make of the diamond directly affects its light handling capabilities.
Color: Lighten your world. The gradations from totally colorless (pure white) to yellowish. The less color the diamond itself has, the more colors it can reflect out.
Clarity: You're clearly there. The degree to which a diamond is free of exterior and interior inclusions. The clearer the diamond, the clearer your choice.
Carat Weight: Size it up. The size of the diamond measured in carats. First decide on the size that's right for you. Then choose the highest quality diamond in that size range.
4C Four characteristics that determine the quality of a diamond. Consult me.

A world reborn

The Christian churches have always taught their flocks that while Christmas is an occasion for joy, the festival of Easter, coming at the close of Holy Week's commemoration of Christ's sufferings, is one of glory and triumph.

Today's Easter celebration is particularly significant because by one of those periodic calendar coincidences, members of the Jewish faith began their observance of the Passover, celebrating their deliverance from Egyptian bondage, just as the Christians were ushering in their Holy Week. And by an even rarer coincidence, the Greek Orthodox Church, separated from western Christianity by the 1,000-year-old Eastern Schism, finds its Holy Week and Easter falling on the same dates as the Roman and Protestant.

The confluence of these observances serves to reaffirm the common ethical ground shared by all in the Judeo-Christian community. The Mass of the ritualistic Christians had its origin in the Last Supper, or Seder, in which Christ and his followers participated. In fact, Benjamin Disraeli regarded Christianity as the "completion" of Judaism and, in a speech to the British Parliament, inquired: "Has not the Church of Christ made the history of the Jews the most celebrated history in the world?"

In this season, both Jews and Christians honor the fulfillment of a promise. For the Jews, it is the Exodus. For the Christians it is the event described in the stirring Roman Catholic Easter hymn, "Resurrexit sicut dixit" — He rose just as He said. Nor is it an accident that Nature chooses this time to fulfill her promise by re-greening the land and foliage after the rigors of winter. The world is literally born again.

Cynics among us see little to celebrate these days, beset as we are by the carnage in Beirut, the horrors in Central America and the starvation in impoverished nations. But the world has seen worse. And the message of Easter and Passover is that temporal evil must yield to the triumph of the human spirit.

Christ is risen. Rejoice!

Christmas time again

It's late April and, regular as clockwork, it's once again time for Midland's special celebration — Christmas in April. Like the Christmas that is celebrated four months earlier, Christmas in April may lose some of its luster because of its regularity. It shouldn't; because like the Christmas the comes each Dec. 25 the need for the celebration still exists.

Now in it's 12th year, the volunteer housing repair project has achieved astounding success. It has grown from a one-day-a-year project to a year-round organization meeting many of the housing needs of the Tall City's elderly and handicapped residents.

The success has brought state and national attention and acclaim. That's appropriate because the program mirrors the best of mankind — individuals donating their time, talent and money to help their fellow residents who cannot help themselves.

Last year, for example, volunteers repaired 126 homes at a cost of $70,000. Over the past 11 years there have been plenty of "big" workdays, but this year's promises to be the largest in terms of the number of homes repaired, says Christmas in April president Bobby Trimble. In all, he says, 169 homes should be repaired this year — 129 of them just on the workday next Saturday.

Many of the homes scheduled for repair this year already have been selected by companies or organizations. But 18 have not. Trimble hopes they will be before this year's work day is completed.

"A lot of civic groups and a lot of churches are not involved," he says. "We've come a long way."

The work never ends, though. Like Dec. 25, April continually rolls around and work remains to be done. Trimble notes that most of the old homes in the program need to be worked on each year.

Getting involved in Christmas in April isn't difficult. Midlanders can call 694-4907 to offer their time and talents. They won't be turned down. If a person wants to work in Christmas in April, they'll be accepted — regardless of their construction skills.

And if Midlanders prefer to make a monetary contribution, that kind of help is needed too, notes Trimble.

The money and the work does make a difference — for Midlanders!

Medal of horror

Recently, the Soviets have been boasting about their destruction last September of the Korean Airlines jetliner and the loss of all 269 persons aboard.

Soviet deputy defense minister Aleksandr I. Koldunov has called it a feat of arms comparable to the 1960 downings of the U-2 spy plane and an American RB-47 reconnaissance plane. The Soviets have also announced that a pilot named I. Zhukov has been awarded a heroism medal.

Western journalists speculate that he may have been the pilot who shot down the unarmed, off-course airplane.

Funny how pilot Zhukov's medal hasn't aroused as much criticism among U.S. liberals as the ire which greeted President Reagan when he rewarded participants of the liberation of Grenada.

Volcker thwarts move on Fed

WASHINGTON — Paul Volcker, the tall, acerbic chairman of the Federal Reserve Board, is a brilliant Ivy Leaguer who does not patiently tolerate lesser mortals. In the ceaseless Washington competition for power, he plays hardball — and seldom loses. This is the story of perhaps his most impressive victory to date.

Jack Anderson

Through 14 months of painstaking staff work, high-level deliberation and political infighting, a task force headed by Vice President George Bush struggled to find a way to streamline government regulation of the nation's 15,000 commercial banks, 3,500 savings and loan institutions and 16,000 credit unions.

The group's goal was to consolidate the operations of the five federal agencies that have authority over the financial institutions. The hope was to transform this regulatory crazy quilt into a single, nonpartisan blanket called the Federal Banking Agency.

The fireworks started last fall, when the task group's staff proposed stripping the Federal Reserve Board of most of its bank-regulating functions. The staff said this would let the Fed concentrate on its main job: managing the nation's money supply. The recommendations seemed reasonable to the vice president and 11 other members of the task force, but not to the 13th: Volcker.

Unfazed by odds greater than Gary Cooper's in "High Noon," the Fed chairman set out to guard his agency's threatened authority. And like Cooper at his best, Volcker knew his own strengths and wasn't afraid to use them.

His battle plan was a simple but effective flanking maneuver: He threatened to mobilize the nation's bankers to put pressure on Congress, whose approval would be needed to institute the plan.

Bankers are influential people in any congressional district. When they get on the phone, the congressman or senator generally listens. So Volcker's threat to recruit bankers in defense of the Fed was no idle boast.

Why would the bankers march to Volcker's drumbeat? Because bankers need the Fed's blessing for everything from mergers and acquisitions to plans for new services, such as insurance and stock brokerage.

"All it takes is a phone call from a (Federal Reserve) governor, and they are shaking in their boots," said one administration economist familiar with the Fed's lobbying tactics.

In fact, many bankers would be delighted to see the Fed lose some of its regulatory power. As the same official explained, the Fed insists that it needs such regulatory authority as "leverage" in its efforts to control the money supply.

"They mean coercion," another official said.

As an illustration of the Fed's intimidating power, one official recalled having lunch with a Midwestern banker who said he'd like to see the Fed cut down to size. But when asked for his help, the banker replied, "I can't pick a fight with the policeman."

To make sure he doesn't lose his clout, Volcker used the very power the group wanted to take away from him. He bluntly warned the bankers that if they failed to support the Fed's defense of its regulatory powers, he would block them from expanding into new financial services. He was forcing the bankers to fight for their chains.

Volcker used a different tack on Treasury Secretary Donald Regan. Like the other task group dozen, Regan endorsed the proposal for a stripped-down Fed. But Volcker knew that Regan wanted deregulation of the banking industry to be the crowning achievement of his tenure at the Treasury.

And so, reliable sources told my associate Michael Binstein, Volcker informed Regan that he would torpedo any deregulation recommendations the task group sent to Congress — unless Regan supported him in the Fed's power struggle.

Meanwhile, Bush's scouts were reconnoitering Capitol Hill, trying to determine if the task group's proposals could win congressional approval over Volcker's opposition. The Senate Banking Committee staff thought they could, and urged the task group to stand up to Volcker.

Volcker, however, was not idle. He issued a "white paper" giving the arguments for the Fed's continued regulatory authority. The document was roundly criticized as without merit, and it infuriated task force members because Volcker went public with an internal dispute. But the move did generate additional public-relations support for Volcker.

And the Fed chairman still had his heavy artillery in reserve: big business. Volcker has enormous influence with corporate America, and everyone knows it. This contributed to the White House's reluctance to antagonize Volcker in an election year.

So in January, Bush, Regan and the rest of the task group caved in to Volcker. They worked out a compromise that everyone could live with — or so they thought.

Jesse's rainbow can't hide past

WASHINGTON — Jesse Jackson is not the first to use a rainbow metaphor to sell something controversial to this pluralist nation. When America went to war in 1917, someone suggested forming a division from many states' National Guard units. A young Army major said, "Fine, that will stretch over the whole country like a rainbow." Thus was the Rainbow Division — the 42nd, officially — named by Douglas MacArthur.

George F. Will

That division was a unifying force. Jackson's monochromatic "rainbow coalition" is an instrument of division.

Clearly Jackson's candidacy is partially responsible for increased black registration. However, that may not mean a proportional increase of black votes in November. And given Reagan's unpopularity with blacks, the idea that but for Jackson blacks would be apathetic is like the idea that but for Edison we would be watching television by candlelight.

Indeed, Jackson may yet be another example of Reagan luck. More importantly, his candidacy has, as the New Republic says, aspects of an American tragedy.

The New Republic is currently the nation's most interesting and important political journal because it is engaged in a lonely battle for the soul of the Democratic Party, the world's oldest party and, because it is this nation's majority party, the world's most important. The New Republic seems equally dismayed by what it considers the unfairness of Reagan's domestic policies and the unrealism of Hart's and Mondale's foreign policies. Regarding Jackson, the New Republic is the voice of traditional liberalism, speaking against the intellectual hijacking of that tradition.

The magazine says Jackson's candidacy is another badge of black isolation, and is threatening the dream that made it possible: the dream of a nation no longer obsessed with race. It says Jackson has no experience building interracial coalitions and practices a politics that depends on keeping blacks separate as a bargaining unit. He offers "a vision of democracy as a spoils system, of rhetoric as arousal without persuasion, of politics as an exercise in the cultivation of false hopes, and of policy as sterile, marginal posturing beyond the fringes of the national consensus."

Strong words, but not too strong for a candidacy that began squalidly, in collaboration with Syria's bloodthirsty regime, and has gone downhill. Jackson, who brims over with righteousness and wallows in the overflow, tolerates a supporter who threatens murder, who dilates on Hitler's greatness and who, surpassing himself, criticizes Michael Jackson.

Jesse Jackson complains that his thoughts are not getting the attention they deserve. He is right. But the New Republic's Morton Kondracke has cast a cold eye on Jackson's pronouncements and has found "persistent toleration of terrorist groups around the world."

Invited to condemn the Irish Republican Army, Jackson refuses: "I feel an identity with the mission." Nicaragua's Sandinistas? They "are on the right side of history" and "moving toward" democracy and the elections they keep promising will be more free than some of the Democratic Party's caucuses. Khmer Rouge genocide in Cambodaa? "Unfortunate .... Sometimes the best of people lose their way."

What will Jackson condemn? The United States. He has grown rich and powerful but, he insists, he has had "a Third World experience" living here. Kondracke asked: Wouldn't you be in a psychiatric prison or internal exile if you tried to organize a civil-rights protest in the Soviet Union? Jackson answered: "This superpower isn't so good either." (He currently is feeling persecuted because the federal government wants his organization, PUSH, to repay $708,431 — $708,081 more than the value of Ed Meese's cuff links — that was spent without proper accounting.

Many of the New Republic's liberal readers are incensed because it is not participating in the general silence about Jackson's extremism. The silence trumpets the cowardice of other Democrats, black and white. And the silence is another form of condescension toward blacks. It says that blacks are not expected not to talk rot.

Philadelphia's black mayor, Wilson Goode, is reportedly on Mondale's list of possible running mates. That choice would reassert the primacy of professionalism and centrism in black politics. Such reassertion would be unnecessary if in California's 1982 gubernatorial contest the Democrat, who won the Election Day voting by 19,886 (3,598,557 to 3,578,671), had not lost the absentee balloting by 113,231.

Suppose Tom Bradley had become governor of the state which has produced two of the last three elected Presidents. Bradley — a former policeman, a taciturn and moderate professional, a law-and-order and balanced-budget liberal — might be a presidential candidate. He certainly would be on any vice presidential list. And there would be no doubt about the identity of America's foremost black political leader.

Nixon's back — and Henry, too!

A wonderful thing happened to me last week. I turned on the set and got to see Richard Nixon on television again. After it was over I said to my wife, "He looks great. Doesn't he look great?"

Art Buchwald

"He looked just like the old Nixon," she agreed. "He hasn't changed one bit, except possibly he's mellower."

"He seems to have mellowed," I said. "But every once in awhile when he was talking about the people who gave him the shaft, you got the feeling the old Nixon spark was still there."

My wife took my hand in hers. "You miss him, don't you?"

"Of course I miss him. Who wouldn't miss Nixon? He was the greatest president we ever had. If it wasn't for him you wouldn't be sitting here tonight in your ermine-lined bathrobe, and I wouldn't be wearing Sulka silk pajamas and Gucci slippers."

"Watergate was good to us," my wife sighed.

"It was the best," I said. "Just seeing Nixon on the air brings back so many nostalgic memories."

"Do you think he's sorry?" she asked.

"Sure he's sorry. Didn't you hear him say he was sorry he didn't burn the tapes?"

"I mean sorry about Watergate."

"I'm sure he's sorry. He said it was a dumb thing to do in the first place and then he said it was a dumb thing to try to cover up, and then he said he was sorry the CIA didn't keep the FBI out of the inquiry, and you got the feeling he's very sorry about the people who talked when they should have kept their mouths shut. But he doesn't seem to hold any malice toward those who drove a stake in his heart. Then again Nixon never was a hater."

"I had the feeling he stills holds a grudge against the media for driving him from office."

"I didn't get that," I said. "Nixon has been a pragmatic man all his life. If there is one thing he believes, it is that your enemies are always out to get you, so you have to get them first. But as far as carrying grudges, it's just not in the man's nature."

"Will you ever forget the night he told us on television 'I am not a crook'?"

"He was the first president in our history who said it. He reassured the country in its darkest hour."

"I wonder why he'd go on television at this time?"

"I suppose he wanted to set the record straight. There were so many illegal things they discussed during the coverup that Nixon wanted the public to know how much of it he personally rejected. What I liked about him tonight is that he said he didn't reject them because they were wrong, but because they wouldn't work."

"You can't be more candid than that," my wife said.

"No one ever accused Nixon of lacking candor. But he has nothing to lose now by personally taking the blame and saying the advice he got from his lawyers was what really did him in."

"I believe him," my wife said. "Why didn't he have better lawyers?"

"They were all on the other side trying to get the goods on him."

"I think it was very moving when he told about his last night in the White House and how he and Henry Kissinger got down on their knees and prayed together."

"It would have been much more fascinating if we knew what Henry was praying for."

Christmas in April offers glimpse of Midland's heart

Bill Modisett

How do you find the heart of a city?

More specifically, how do you find the heart of Midland? Is it hidden inside the towering office structures downtown that greet approaching motorists miles in the distance — the buildings that have given Midland its nickname "The Tall City?"

Is it buried inside the sandy soil along with the oil that gives the area its reason for existence?

Is it found in the school playgrounds, corporate boardrooms or the nightclubs that together blend the life substance of the community we call Midland?

Yes, one can find an indication of the city's heart in all the above. And, no, those examples do not reveal the depth or breadth of the pounding, resilient heart of Midland, Texas.

Where, then?

Well, you'll be able to find it in more than 100 homes next Saturday in the hammering and sawing and painting volunteers who each year reach into their hearts and come up with enough love and compassion for their fellow man to extend a helping hand.

Christmas in April is part of the city's heart; not all, certainly not all. But a good portion of it. That's because it represents what is good and humanitarian about the city's residents. For one Saturday a year — in April — thousands of volunteers bring their skills, their caring, their imagination and, yes, their dollars, together to make the unimaginable dream come true for more than a hundred of their fellow residents.

One name is synonomous with Christmas in April — Bobby Trimble. He has been supervising the skills of volunteers for a decade and it's understandable why to many Midlanders he is Christmas in April.

He'll tell you he's not; that Christmas in April could not survive if it was just one man. But his enthusiasm for the project, his love for the recipients of the volunteers' work, his knowledge of the problems of the city's elderly and handicapped residents deny his role as merely a concerned citizen.

He is the foundation on which Christmas in April rests.

Christmas in April is a beautiful happening. The object isn't to give an elderly or handicapped Midlander a dream house. The object is merely to make the homes safe and secure. Workers are unskilled, but quality of repairs isn't expected to meet the standards of tradesmen. In many cases the work does, because of the skills of the Midlanders who volunteer.

They come from all walks of life. Truck drivers, mechanics, plumbers, teachers, journalists, policemen, ministers, bankers, housewives, students. They are a representative cross-section of the city. Together they embody a force that shouts "Midland must not forget those who can't help themselves!" And, together, they don't forget.

Christmas in April is not big, unfeeling government. It's not motivated by profit. It is the essence of the Golden Rule: "Do unto others as you would have them do unto you."

It is the heart of Midland. Not singularly because there are countless good deeds here that can be cited.

But it is one of those shining examples of what makes Midland more than merely glass and steel.

SPEAKING OUT

Proper land use can yield rewards

By DICK HAGELSTEIN

Dick Hagelstein is district conservationist of the Soil Conservation Service in Midland.

No one likes to be regulated, or told what to do and how to do it. Regulations usually come about when a serious problem exists, and cannot be solved any other way. In other words, we generally bring it on ourselves. So it is with regulating how land can be used or must be treated.

It is no secret that man has been known to exploit natural resources. He has taken from the land and in too many cases, left it bare and subject to erosion and useless to continue producing food and fiber for an ever-increasing population. Even in the old days when land was plentiful, it was depleted and used up, but there was always new land over the horizon. No one thought much about it. Food was plentiful, land was plentiful — the depletion didn't hurt anyone.

All of a sudden there was no new land and there were over 200 million people. We found ourselves trying to feed a hungry world. Prices for agriculture products did not keep up with the cost of production, so our farms got bigger. As the margin of profit shrinks, we disregard farming and ranching practices that tend to keep the land in good condition. We plant only crops that make a profit this year, begin to operate on short-term planning and disregard long-term effects. We overgraze rangeland for the same reasons. Drought or other adverse weather conditions compound the problems. Who does this effect now? Everyone. This is about where we stand today.

It is realized that there are problems that are difficult to overcome. The difference in the way it it now, and the way it was in the past is the fact that land abuse does affect the well being of the total population of this nation. They (the urban population) also realize that how our soil and water resources are managed, does affect them personally, their children and all future generations.

Does an urban population, a commissioners' court, or other units of government have the right to invoke a regulation on a private landowner who is letting a piece of land blow away because of neglect? The attitude is changing rapidly. Although it goes against the grain to even think about it, the number of people who feel that they should have the right, is increasing. National attention is being given to the problem, and attempts are being made to pass laws that will regulate land use. There are already laws on the books in some states.

The most recent legislation was passed in South Dakota. The Blowing Dust and Fragile Lands Bill of 1984 calls for active erosion-control measures by owners and operators of real property in the state.

According to the wording of the bill, Conservation District Boards who are advised that soil is blowing from any land shall inspect the land and determine what can be done. If the board finds that blowing can be prevented or lessened by treatment of the soil, a recommendation is forwarded to the county commissioners who issue an order to the owner or operator.

If an emergency is determined to exist, and if the landowner or operator does not perform the treatment, the conservation district may do so with a tax assessment against the land used to pay for the cost of the treatment.

The solutions to these and other problems are certainly not easy. Present-day economics have dictated the decrease in the expenditure of funds for soil and water conservation practices. The simple fact is, however, that those who want to regulate the use of land are not concerned with the economics involved.

The way to eliminate the possibility of this happening is to take care of the land on an individual, voluntary basis. If we fail to do this, the end result will likely be very unfavorable. Landowners, bankers and others that make land use and management decisions must begin to realize the negative implications of short-term planning. The return on the invested dollar may be less, but long-term planning and operations that include sound land treatment, are still the best route.

This is especially true when the alternative may be land use legislation.

Punish Russia for Flight 007

All three aspirants for the Democratic presidential nomination have recently agreed that the United States should impose economic sanctions against the Republic of South Africa in order to exert pressure on its government to change its wholly domestic policy of apartheid. Yet not one has suggested that we impose economic sanctions against the Soviet Union for the assassination of an American Congressman aboard KAL Flight 007.

The United States continues to extend very favorable terms of trade, including low-interest government guaranteed loans for food and high technology, to the USSR despite the fact that it is the greatest threat to our national security and to international peace in the world today and is one of the most ruthlessly oppressive, brutal, authoritarian regimes in history. Why do the sycophants in the press and in the political arena not demand economic sanctions against Russia rather than South Africa?

Even though you are a small newspaper, you, too, have a responsibility which you have abdicated. The American people should demand economic sanctions against the USSR before they will tolerate sanctions against South Africa. Let's not get the cart before the horse.

Homemakers salute band

The Tall City Chapter of the Young Homemakers of Texas wishes to express its appreciation to the Midland Senior High School Bulldog Band for all of the wonderful work it has done in entertaining and representing Midland.

We would really like to compliment the MSHS band students on the time and work that went into the Up With People concert, a really outstanding performance for the whole community.

We know they have a lot of work ahead of them in preparing for all of their upcoming events including the 1985 Rose Bowl Parade. We are very proud that the Midland Senior High School Bulldog Band will represent Midland again in this parade. Go Bulldogs!

Judge candidates on credibility

In the upcoming May 5 primary voters will be faced with the question of which candidates to vote for in each race.

The most important questions to ask yourself are, "Who is telling the truth? Which candidates are the most credible?" The decisions we make will affect the lives of many people.

I am a Christian. It is my opinion that Christians should look for the Christian candidates running for public office and seriously give them your consideration.

Don't get me wrong. I am not saying to vote for a Christian just because he is a Christian. What I am saying is this: If a Christian runs for public office and has the necessary qualifications, we should judge his or her "credibility" and how he or she will treat his employees and the people they serve.

We Christians need to take this civil duty as a high priority. Our decision will affect many lives. We should want the most qualified person in public office — a person who will be respected and truly want to serve the people.

I encourage all voters, regardless of their religious beliefs, to actively investigate each candidate before casting your important vote.

Readers' Views on: Phil Gramm

Phil Gramm's judgments off

Phil Gramm's political judgments make interesting reading. His first choice for president in 1976 was Jerry Brown of California. Ron Paul supported Reagan. Gramm was a Jimmy Carter advocate in 1980. Paul supported Reagan.

Mr. Gramm once said, "I am a Democrat and will stay one." (Star-Telegram 11-16-76). He also said, "Jim Mattox would be a good president and I could support Jim Wright for president." (Dallas 10-17-78). Mr. Gramm frequently voted with his two heroes and still likes to vote with Jim Wright.

Mr. Gramm noisily changed political parties recently to give himself maximum exposure and statewide attention. But he has not changed his Democrat, Keynesian-statist philosophy, just as he said. If you have doubts, please investigate his voting record for yourself.

Let's elect Ron Paul, a man of principle, to the U.S. Senate.

Keith Wharton
Waco

Gramm follows Jim Wright

As the Republican primary nears, the misconceptions regarding Phil Gramm's campaign are becoming more apparent. An obvious local media favorite for the Senate, Mr. Gramm's PR and rhetoric do nothing to allay his image as an advocate for the free market.

The fact is that Phil Gramm voted the same as liberal Jim Wright when they voted together for major tax increases, deficit budgets, increased national debt, federal taxes on churches and a 15% increase in their Congressional pay. However, Congressman Ron Paul, also in contention for the Senate but with far less local media exposure, voted against all of these measures.

Phil Gramm also voted alongside of Jim Wright when they voted against placing a ceiling on or reducing the costs of the food stamp program, less involvement of the federal government in setting local school policy and cutting foreign aid giveaways and controlling these program costs. Ron Paul, however, voted for each of these measures.

As the above references indicate, Mr. Gramm is not what he claims to be. However, this is just the tip of the misrepresentative iceberg.

Ron Paul is not only the most consistent advocate of the free market in the Senate race, he is also the only capitalist in the running.

Answers to defense goals won't be easy, analyst says

By The Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

WASHINGTON — In this week's news you probably read of a defense analyst's new report on how to trim the Pentagon budget by $45 billion this year without cutting into muscle. You also may have read that when Gary Hart, campaigning in St. Louis, said two McDonnell Douglas planes were "too expensive and not maneuverable enough," the machinists' union leader retorted that the planes were "an integral part of the protection of the free world."

Perhaps that is all you need to know about this year's defense debate: much groaning about the president's $305 billion request; a certain earnest endeavor to make "responsible" cuts that will not leave the country militarily vulnerable or the cutters politically vulnerable, and in the end a harsh bump against familiar realities and a military budget not far below what the president seeks, notwithstanding the huge impact on the deficit.

Still, though it may not make much of a mark this year, there is something immensely tonic to the prescription offered by William W. Kaufmann in his new Brookings Institution defense paper outlining a path to a leaner and, he contends, tougher American military force. An old Pentagon hand and still a defense conservative — definitely not of the breed reborn as a dove — Kaufmann is an analyst to give courage to the considerable number of us who think something is wrong but aren't sure we know exactly what.

The technocrat in Kaufmann is appalled at what he takes to be the carelessness and duplication in the Pentagon's current planning process: that's where he'd find the money.

The hawk in him is alarmed by what he finds to be the Reagan administration's sanguine expectations, despite everything, of international stability: hence his prescription of a "high-threat alternative...designed to cope with a more dangerous environment in which multiple crises, two of them consisting of large-scale threats, could arise" — the savings would still be $143.6 billion in outlays over five years. A "low-threat alternative" would save $266.7 billion over the same period.

Kaufmann is, in policy terms, firmly in the mainstream: he believes in the global commitments the United States has accumulated since World War II and in the strong and far-flung defense establishment required to keep up those commitments and to defend the homeland proper, too. He just happens to think there is a way to do it without suffering the crushing budgetary impact of the Reagan policies.

But is there? That is the uncomfortable question forced by Earl C. Ravenal, another former Pentagon analyst out with a new paper — under Cato Institute sponsorship — spawned by the ever more painful defense budget squeeze.

The trouble with the familiar critiques, including "military reform," Ravenal argues, is that they would retain the same old foreign policies and merely trim the means provided to carry them out. That won't do, he says: "defense budgets are not for nothing; they are for something.

Easter: Time of triumph, tragedy

By WILLIAM RANDOLPH HEARST, JR.
Editor-in-Chief, The Hearst Newspapers

Hearst

NEW YORK — Each spring at this time of year, Easter represents a special occasion of tragedy and triumph for the human spirit. Christians and Jews pray to the Almighty and observe their own rituals in free societies. That is as it should be.

This Sunday, Christians and Jews participate in the renewal of faith in ourselves and our futures. The celebrants of Easter and Passover, falling within the same week, commemorate the greatest triumphs in the annals of mankind.

Jews marking the rites of Passover are inspired by their ancestors' exodus from Egypt. It was indeed a victory of freedom over bondage. Christians bow in Resurrection prayers that celebrate the triumph of life over death.

Those of different faiths are united today in devotion to freedom of worship and loyalty to popular government. In that phase, I do trust that our Congress will match the popular consensus and President Reagan's leadership by showing soon real concern for the Soviet-inspired insurrections in Central America.

The Congress has taken an Easter break, hopefully to get an on-the-spot reading from constituents on the Central American issues. President Reagan, as commander-in-chief, contends that our legislators have "strayed too far from reality." They see the CIA and not the KGB, for instance, as a major culprit. And the Congress also closes its eyes to the ever-encroaching communist takeovers in Central America. The president wants to give aid and it's modest — for now.

There is no better time to nourish the spirit of faith, unity and patriotism than now. We can renew it on a day like this when we salute the values and qualities we hold so dear for America.

Faith in ourselves and our religions is what we built this nation of ours on and will strengthen its character in the years to come, if we keep the faith.

P.S. — I wish the president well on his trip to the People's Republic of China this week and a speedy, safe return.

Lewis marrying for sixth time

Jerry Lee Lewis

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Rock 'n' roller Jerry Lee Lewis will marry a 22-year-old aspiring singer Tuesday, his road manager says.

It will be the sixth marriage for the 48-year-old singer, whose fifth wife died of a drug overdose last August.

Road manager J.W. Whitten said Lewis' fiancee is Kerrie McCarver of Memphis. Miss McCarver was with Lewis last month when he was admitted to a Memphis hospital for a reported drug reaction and she accompanied him to court earlier this year when he was charged with income tax violations.

Whitten said the wedding would be private.

"It's going to be restricted to family and friends," he said.

A young woman who identified herself as Miss McCarver's sister answered the telephone at the McCarver family residence and said the wedding would be held there.

Lewis, on tour in Canada, was unavailable for comment.

Three of Lewis' marriages ended in divorce, and his fourth wife, Jaren, drowned in a friend's swimming pool in 1982.

Rose Kennedy

PALM BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Rose Kennedy, the 93-year-old matriarch of the Kennedy clan, had recovered enough Saturday from a fainting spell that she might attend Easter Mass, an aide said.

"They'll certainly observe Easter and I think that she would attend Mass," said Bob Schrum, a spokesman for Mrs. Kennedy's son, Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass.

Mrs. Kennedy remained at her Palm Beach home Saturday, Schrum said.

She had fainted Friday night during dinner with her son.

"I think she'll be fine. She was having dinner with the family and she got a little bit faint, a little weak," her personal physician, Dr. Robert Gerard, said Friday night.

"Her nurse took her upstairs and gave a little oxygen. She responded fairly well. I came by yesterday (Thursday) and she was actually more lethargic then. Tonight, she squeezed my hand and seemed to recognize who I was and who other members of the family were," Gerard said.

"She's talking about going to Mass Easter Sunday and she's ready to roll," Gerard said of his famous patient, a devout Roman Catholic.

Mrs. Kennedy's sons also include President John F. Kennedy and Sen. Robert Kennedy, both assassinated in office.

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) — Jazz saxophonist Jackie McLean owns a dog, so when he came upon a mutilated Doberman pinscher in a Hartford park, he took immediate action.

He fed the starving animal, then summoned police and the city dog warden, who brought it to a veterinarian for treatment. McLean says he'll adopt the dog himself if its owner doesn't claim it.

It was McLean's own dog who brought him to the wounded Doberman while he was taking her for a walk Friday in Keney Park.

"She led me right up a trail and into a thicket where I found the dog. He was just skin and bones. His eyes were half closed — like he was dying," McLean said.

When he fed the dog, he noticed its tail had been cut off and it had a 9-inch-long stab wound that was festering.

McLean, who lives in Hartford, has played alto saxophone for Charlie Mingus, Miles Davis and other jazz figures.

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — Singer and voice teacher Larry Gerber is a man for all seasons — Passover or Easter, Christmas or Hanukkah, he can perform the liturgies for them all.

Gerber, a 35-year-old Catholic, manages to combine duties as choir director at the Co-Cathedral of St. Thomas More with the position of lay cantor at Temple Israel, as well as teaching voice at Florida State University.

His ecumenical singing doesn't cause him any qualms, and learning about Judaism has been a novel experience for Gerber, raised in the strongly Catholic town of Fowler, Kan.

"I believe heavily in learning from the past and hanging on to traditional values," Gerber said. "There are things I find appealing about the traditions in both and it would be very sad if either were to lose them."

Gerber began singing at the synagogue five years ago during the High Holy Days of Rosh Hashana and Yom Kippur. He does not understand Hebrew, the language of the Jewish liturgy, but he is able to pronounce that and the folk language of Yiddish with coaching from congregation members.

Gerber said he has never heard criticism of his dual role from members of either congregation. But just to be on the safe side, he prefers to avoid potentially controversial subjects.

"I never, ever discuss religion," he said. "I feel like I'm on Earth here to learn more about humanity and mankind and you can't do that by being on the outskirts. We're all friends, why not do it?"

CORPUS CHRISTI (AP) — A spokesman for Jane Fonda says the American GI Forum's call for a boycott of the actress' movies and the products she endorses will have little effect.

Texas directors of the largely Hispanic veteran's group voted last weekend to boycott Miss Fonda's products because of her anti-Vietnam War activism, especially a trip she made to Hanoi in 1972.

"If people want to get attention for Vietnam veterans, the focus ought to be on Washington and the Reagan administration which is cutting back benefits for veterans," said Stephen Rivers, Ms. Fonda's press secretary.

In addition to her films, Ms. Fonda is the author of a best-selling physical fitness book, backs a line of sportswear, has produced a video and operates two health salons in California.

Thousands pay tribute to rich man

HOERSHOLM, Denmark (AP) — Travel tycoon Simon Spies, Denmark's richest man, was buried Saturday after his 21-year-old widow and more than 400 employees of his business empire led a funeral procession to the grave.

Spies, 62, died Monday from a liver ailment, anemia and diabetes.

His wife Janni, a ninth grade dropout whom Spies married 11 months ago and promised to make her "a very merry widow," was composed throughout the hour-long funeral service in a small church in the Copenhagen suburb of Hoersholm.

But the widow, dressed in a dark suit and veiled hat, wiped away tears as she and Spies' employees watched the oak coffin lowered into the grave.

Two dozen police and about 50 uniformed Spies Travel guides kept some 4,000 people at a distance from the grave.

Spies was a pioneer in airborne package tours costing much less than full-fare airline tickets.

He used his wealth to indulge in eccentric whims, but was popular for his humor and business drive.

Mrs. Spies, the childless tycoon's fourth wife and daughter of a telephone company foreman, inherited his entire fortune.

She said after her husband's death that she would honor a pledge to complete the 10th grade by next June. She also said she would decide later if she needed further education to run the $112 million Spies conglomerate of travel companies, hotels, a movie theater and seven jetliners.

Mrs. Spies, who was a $950-per-month cashier at Spies Travels when the tycoon married her in 1983, will be aided by a triumvirate of top Spies executives. They said board meetings would be scheduled to make it possible for Mrs. Spies to attend without neglecting her schooling.

Mrs. Spies' inheritance includes two large suburban villas, a spacious hotel suite with Copenhagen's only rooftop tennis court and a luxurious house on an island off Stockholm, Sweden.

Medicare 'prescription' has side effects

By HALLYE JORDAN
Staff Writer

Since hospitals were forced to comply with changes in Medicare guidelines at the beginning of the fiscal year, some doors have slammed shut at Midland Memorial Hospital while others have been pushed wide open.

The Tax Equity and Fiscal Responsibility Act of 1982 is blamed for the decrease in the number of chemotherapy patients receiving treatment on an out-patient basis at the Allison Cancer Center. TEFRA also is responsible for the vast changes in Medicare reimbursements, which, when first proposed, had hospital administrators and physicians in a state of bewildered pessimism.

With some hurdles behind them but facing more on the track to full implementation, MMH Vice President of Finance Ron Peterson said he's pleased with the cooperation of the medical staff and physicians in coping with the new guidelines.

Terms such as DRG, PPS and PIP are popping into the medicalese heard in doctor's offices and hospital admission and billing departments. But the acronyms haven't eliminated the human element.

"Physicians still are playing a role in this," Peterson said. "It's not like you just push a button and it's A, B, C or D."

The new method of reimbursing hospitals for Medicare patients changed from retrospective payments to a prospective payment system (PPS). The amount of Medicare reimbursement depends on which DRG, or diagnostic-related group, pertains to the patient.

"In terms of DRG assignments, we couldn't come out any better," Peterson said. "Last month, (Medicare's intermediary) Blue Cross Blue Shield came in and did a total random sample review. It increased the reimbursements in a couple of cases.

"The DRGs aren't assigned until the patient is discharged and all of the reasons that caused admission are known," he said. "We take everything that happened to you and code it to find out what DRG you are in. And if there is an error, it could throw you into a different DRG."

If Mr. Smith, who is over 70 years old, is admitted into the hospital with a common bile duct problem and has no other complications, for example, he may receive a $2,500 reimbursement for treatment of the bile duct problem. If Mr. Brown, also over 70, is admitted with the same condition but suffers a heart attack while in the hospital, that throws in another DRG, roughly adding up to a $2,735 reimbursement.

Mr. Green, however, is admitted with chest pains. The examination shows he has suffered a heart attack. It also indicates he, too, suffers from the same bile duct problem as Smith and Brown. "But Mr. Green's primary diagnosis was a heart attack, so he's reimbursed for that," Peterson said. The DRG rate would probably be about $3,332.

Those West Texas winds carry powerful potential

By LAWRENCE BUDD
Staff Writer

ODESSA — West Texas winds can take the air out of springtime activities faster than you can say, "Pass me the jalapenos."

The destruction and dust storms those dastardly gales of spring bring to the Permian Basin have given this fact of nature a bad name.

Grit in your teeth aside, the energy source behind those crazy currents has gone largely untapped in an area where oil and gas are the bases for business.

Technologies have been developed offering energy users an alternative to paying ever increasing electric bills. Wind turbines are on the market which can — given the right conditions — provide most or all the electricity needed to energize a household.

One expert on wind power and proponent of conversion to wind turbines is Dr. David Eggleston, chairman of engineering at the University of Texas of the Permian Basin.

"There is a tremendous amount of energy in the wind," said Eggleston.

The maximum wind power available from 10 mph winds (this area's winds average about 11 mph over a year), would be 55 watts per square meter of wind caught.

The additional power behind a stronger wind is equal to the cube of that speed. More simply, doubling the wind speed means eight times more energy potential.

Contrary to what residents caught in the face by the force of a spring gust might think, there are windier parts of the country, and even the state.

Amarillo, which annually averages about three times as much wind as the Permian Basin, is the windiest part of Texas. The Panhandle area offers great potential for people interested in harnessing this natural resource.

Off the coast of New England, where many a frigate has run aground after getting crosswise with a wind current, the power potential is roughly eight times that available to area collectors.

There is more to wind power than the current available.

Depending on the surroundings, a higher tower may be necessary to elevate the turbine to where it can catch the steadier, more productive winds.

Flat, undeveloped areas, without buildings, hills or valleys to stifle the current's power potential provide the best locales for a wind turbine. With nothing around to get in the way, the tower on which the turbine is mounted need not be as tall, saving on installation costs.

Costs vary with the model and capacity at which the turbine can gather the wind power. The buyer can expect to pay at least $1,000 for each kilowatt of capacity.

For example, one unit rated to provide 25 kilowatts of power in a 30 mph wind would cost about $25,000 installed. The average home uses 7-8 kilowatts.

The cost, combined with the erratic winds, makes use of a wind turbine less attactive in this area. Unlike states such as California, Minnesota and Colorado, no tax credit is available to go with the federal investment credit (25 percent for businesses with no limit and 40 percent for individuals up to $4,000 through 1985).

"In Texas, with no state tax subsidies, it's cheaper to buy your power from TESCO than to invest in a wind turbine," said Eggleston, calling for the state to start subsidizing.

From a business standpoint, investors seek to make up these costs over a reasonable time period by selling the energy stored, while the individual owner hopes to cut his or electric bill to offset the cost.

"From the country's point of view, it's actually more important than that," said Eggleston of the economics, citing the other uses of oil and gas, the wind's lasting quality over other energy sources and the ecological benefits of shifting more emphasis to wind power.

Wind power

This wind turbine in Crane, 30 miles south of Odessa, converts wind power to electricity. Operating at its peak, this $20,000 set-up can provide 12 watts of electrical power, more than enough energy for the average household.

Crane man makes use of of resource

J.D. Richardson estimates he has saved $300 per month on electric bills since purchasing this wind turbine in November 1981. The conversion box pictured changes the current passed through it from DC to AC.

By LAWRENCE BUDD
Staff Writer

CRANE — J.D. Richardson is more than satisfied with the wind turbine that has powered his home for almost three years.

Tired of being at the mercy of Texas Electric Service Co. for electric power and with no way around paying the monthly bills, Richardson bought what apparently was the first and still may be the only wind turbine turning in the entire Permian Basin.

His Jacobs Wind Systems turbine, perched atop a 60-foot tower, sits behind his Crane residence. He paid $20,000 for the unit, taking advantage of the 40-percent federal income tax credit in November 1981.

"It sounds like a lot to start off with, but I think it's a pretty good deal myself," said Richardson.

The sales representative, a professor from Texas Tech, assured him the machine would pay for itself within four years.

Although he has not kept track of the exact dollar savings, Richardson said his monthly bill from TESCO has dropped from $400 to $100.

City charting course for Hidalgo Park development

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Assistant City Editor

Sprucing up Hidalgo Park was targeted four years ago by the Objectives for Midland program as a focal point for developing southeast Midland.

The Parks and Recreation Department, with the help of the community around the park, is putting plans on the drawing board for developing Hidalgo into a community park.

In early April at a meeting with city officials more than 50 residents showed up to state what they wanted to see put in the park. On Tuesday, another meeting is scheduled to tell the citizens how much those projects will cost and to see what they want accomplished first. That meeting will begin at 7:30 p.m. in De Zavala Elementary School.

With $100,000 in Community Development Block Grant money to spend on Hidalgo, Parks and Recreation Director George Logan has listed the requests according to priority and has obtained cost estimates.

At the top of the list is an underground irrigation system for $50,000, which would work to solve other problems at the park, he said. "You've gotta have green turf and something to keep the trees alive. Irrigation in West Texas is the key. We'd have a much prettier park immediately."

Renovations to the softball field was placed on the list, and that also would be helped with an irrigation system, he noted.

Hidalgo is one of six developed city parks without an irrigation system. "We have to send someone out to irrigate them. This would free up one person to do irrigation repair."

Second on the list is a picnic pavilion with a restroom and night lights. Estimated cost is $24,890. Next is playground/tot lot equipment with a price tag of $15,000.

Renovations to the softball field are pegged at $17,900. The work would include a backstop, $3,000; outfield fence, $10,000; drinking fountain, $1,000; concession stand, $3,000; and additional costs, $900.

Parking lots to hold 40 cars would cost $12,000.

Improving the tennis court to standards would take $20,200 with $19,700 of it going to resurface the court.

A jogging track requested by the residents would cost $16,250 and improvements to the basketball court, $1,750.

Logan said the $100,000 should be enough to do only the first three priorities: irrigation, picnic pavilion and playground equipment. But if irrigation bids on Hidalgo are lower than estimated that would give some money for smaller projects.

Midland City Council on Tuesday will decide whether or not to approve plans and specifications for Hidalgo's irrigation system, and Logan hopes to tell the residents they were approved.

Edia Hernandez, who helped to organize the first meeting, said she was pleased with the response and noted that people ranging in age from youngsters to senior citizens had attended and voiced their requests. She wants to get a similar response from the community at Tuesday's meeting.

Logan said the city hasn't been neglecting Hidalgo Park; there were no funds. But with CD funds coming into the city for the past three years, the council has started renovating parks in south and east Midland. Logan noted that work is continuing on Washington Park.

"I think we're using the CD funds in a wise way. We're developing a park to serve the whole community. Hidalgo Park was one of the Objectives for the '80s."

To accomplish all the priorities for Hidalgo would take three to five years, said Logan.

The director feels that the professionals can decide where the money should go. "But I feel the community should be able to have input."

Effective educators teach their students to think

There has been a lot in the news lately about the quality of education in Texas and, quite frankly, I think this renewed interest is a good thing.

I find it particularly refreshing that special emphasis is being focused on teachers. This is as it should be. After all, the educator (and I hope I'm not using that term loosely) is a key person in the formulative years of any child.

If teachers are effective, they will have a lasting impact on their students.

If they are duds, they will find themselves being the butt of many a crude joke.

I suppose I should consider myself lucky. Most of my teachers were at least adequate, though I did have a third grade instructor, an elderly woman, who was very nearly blind. As a result, when she deemed it necessary to physically punish a student it usually took her three swings before finally locating the child's backside. The first two swats generally landed somewhere in the vicinity of the kneecap which, had she not been so feeble, could have been considered cruel and unusual punishment.

As it was, however, the paddlings were nothing more than a minor nuisance that were laughed off by the offending party, usually the class bully who already had tattoos, a 5 o'clock shadow and drove a motorcycle to school.

Still, the teachers I remember most were those with political leanings. They told us what they believed in and we, as students, were free to agree or disagree. Of course, it would help your grade point average considerably if you happened to agree with them. But that, I'm sure, was nothing more than a bizarre coincidence.

For example, there was my eighth-grade civics instructor who made us read editorial pages from local newspapers and then give a report on what we had discovered. If we determined that Barry Goldwater was God's gift to politics, we made an A. If not, good luck on the mid-term exam.

Once again, a mere coincidence, I'm sure.

But by no means were all teachers members of the John Birch Society. Indeed, there was my high school instructor who simply refused to accept the fact that Franklin Delano Roosevelt was no longer president. He would spend hours defending the New Deal, explaining in great detail the good points while conveniently overlooking any suggestion that perhaps times had changed and new concepts were needed.

But despite these obvious flaws, both were really quite good. They made us think. They didn't read from a textbook and call it teaching. Instead, they showed enthusiasm for their particular subject and it carried over to the students. They were what teaching is supposed to be all about.

So if teachers need a raise, fine. I'll even pay a few extra cents for my cigarettes to help fund it.

All I ask for in return is that they teach. And that doesn't mean throwing out a bunch of facts and figures to be memorized and then forgotten once the test is completed. Make students use their minds. They'll respect you in the end.

Medicare changes affect MMH

MMH is paid by Medicare through a program called Periodic Interim Payments (PIP). The amount is allocated by taking last year's Medicare reimbursements, adding some inflationary factors and dividing the figure by 26, which gives the rate for the biweekly payment, Peterson said. The rate is reviewed quarterly by Medicare and, under PPS, adjustments are made on the amount of reimbursements given and the amount they should have been.

If Medicare owes money, it is paid to the hospital immediately. However, if MMH owes money, it does not have to be collected until the end of the fiscal year.

Last month, MMH received a $450,000 settlement for claims submitted from Oct. 1-Dec. 31, 1983, that were based on an estimated target rather than the final rate.

As of Oct. 1, 1984, PIP will expire, Peterson said. Instead of every two weeks, payments will be made after each claim is submitted.

When a Medicare patient is submitted, a request of entitlement for benefits (ROE) is made. Information on the patient's Medicare card is sent through an electronic claim system.

"We get a verified request back if the patient is covered," Peterson said. "Medicare can request to see the chart before they pay. And even if they give us an ROE, they may disagree on the amount."

A utilization review committee, established at MMH in 1966, was incorporated in the DRG steering committee this year.

Appointed by the general medical staff through the staff president, those appointed to the steering committee serve as physician advisers on a rotating basis. A medical care analyst, who studies Medicare patient charts daily, and a physician adviser decide if a plan of care established at admissions is being carried out properly. If the two feel it is not, but the attending physician disagrees, the chart information is sent immediately to Medicare, which makes the final determination.

If all agree, the patient can be decertified, which means the patient has 48 hours of Medicare coverage in the hospital before becoming responsible for the bill.

"De-certification means the stay in the hospital is no longer medically justified," Peterson said. "The system was set up so there would be peer review."

By Oct. 1, 1984, the PPS will have developed a professional review organization in each state to study doctors' treatment plans in more depth.

"Then we'll have two levels of review," Peterson said. "The first will be internal...and the second will be through a Medicare-controlled mechanism."

If a Medicare patient requires surgery, but is in poor health and can't withstand an operation, he or she won't be thrown out into the streets, Peterson said. However, if Medicare or other insurance won't cover the hospital stay while the patient is being built up, and the patient isn't in danger, he or she will be released.

It takes a joint effort through the judgment of the physician and the guidelines for reimbursement to make the PPS work, Peterson said.

"Our doctors have given fantastic support and interest in the PPS program in being knowledgeable and cooperative with the hospital," he said. "They really need to be commended for that."

Winds have powerful potential

For persons interested in more information on wind turbines, Carter Wind Systems manufactures two models at a Burkburnett facility and a regional representative for Jacobs Wind Systems — one of the pioneers — can be reached in Edgewood, N.M.

California, which offers residents a 50-percent tax break and businesses 25 percent to add to the federal tax credit, is leading the way. Wind farms — turbines setting side by side in a concentrated area — provide a large portion of the state's electrical resource. Estimates had 4,000 turbines in operation in the state by the end of 1983.

Wind power is becoming more popular as a way to produce electricity, but there is nothing new about the basic technology.

"People have been using wind power for just a good while," said the professor.

As much as 5,000 years ago, wind propelled Egyptian ships along the Nile River, using the same concepts of aerodynamics on which the wind turbines of today are based.

Windmills appear in etchings remaining from ancient Chinese civilizations, and the first record of wind turbines comes from Persia where a simplified version ground grain in 200 B.C.

Much of what is now Holland was recovered from the sea in the 14th century using a windmill to pump water from the submerged areas.

Colonial Americans used windmills to grind their grain in the late 1700's. In 1945, a wind turbine in Grandpa's Knob, Vt., was the first to produce large amounts of electricity in this country.

Wind-energy technology has come a long way since the Grandpa's Knob experiment, but has yet to take hold in the Permian Basin.

Crane man takes advantage of resource

His unit, rated at 10.5 kilowatts (and which he says can handle up to 12 kilowatts), is tied into a 220-volt conversion box which converts the DC current to AC and ties this power source into the conventional electric equipment which formerly powered the Richardson residence.

The amount of electricity the turbine set-up produces varies with the wind.

When the unit fails to produce the amount his home requires, TESCO makes up the difference. And when the turbine makes more than the residence can use, the electric company is obligated by law to pay Richardson for the electricity his unit has produced.

TESCO pays the producer what it would have cost in fuel to make the electricity, which Richardson said was a relatively small amount. "If you use every bit of it, you're doing real good.

"It's making right smart electricity right now," he said, admiring the apparatus he said has attracted visitors from all over the area. "I don't know of any others around.

"Electricity just keeps going up and everything," he said, "I just decided to do something about it."

While there is some question about the area's wind supply being sufficient year-round to justify the turbine, Richardson insists his turns most all the time.

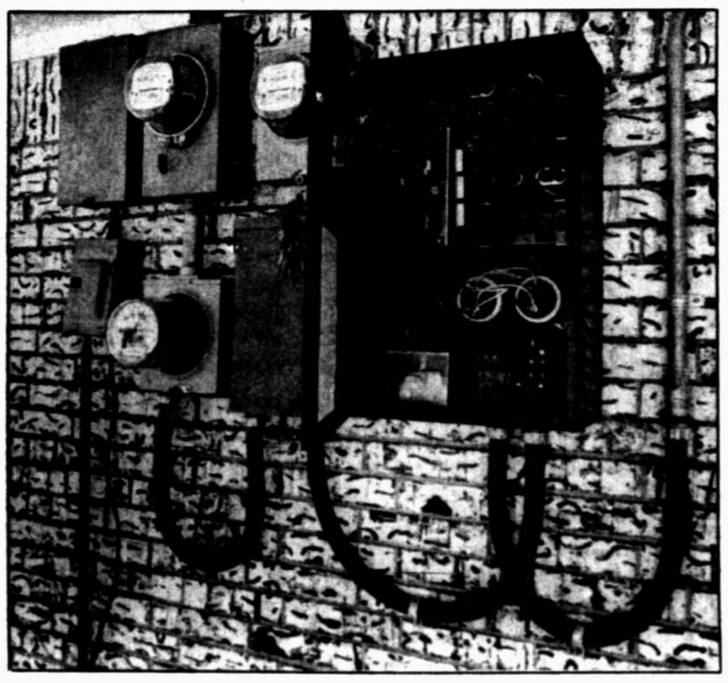

"You hardly ever see that thing not turning some," he said, adding that the blades needs to be turning at 7 miles per hour to make electricity.

The Richardson residence is not a small user of electricity. Included in the totally electric home's equipment are two 65-gallon hot water heaters, a 55-ton central air conditioner and a built-in swimming pool, measuring 60 feet long, 22 feet wide and 11 feet deep.

The tower is rated to withstand winds of up to 200 mph. Depending on where the wind is coming from, the blades can rotate full circle. In 20 mph currents, the props adjust automatically; and at 50 mph the machine is designed to shut itself off.

Richardson is sure his wind turbine will repay the $12,000 net investment before the 12-year guarantee expires (A Jacobs model reportedly stopped working 22 years after Admiral Byrd left it on his expedition to the North Pole when ice build-up stopped movement of the blades). He encourages others to follow his lead.

"It would save fuel," he said. "The more of them they put up, the more fuel you save."

The conversion box is the brain that passes the electricity produced by the wind turbine into usable power. When the turbine is not turning enough to produce the electricity needed, the box supplements this energy source with TESCO electricity. And when more than enough electricity is available, the excess is sold to the electric company.

Easter will find Texas family reunited

BROWNWOOD, Texas (AP) — This Easter is a special day for Judy Frantz Monette, a 40-year-old woman reunited with the woman who gave her up for adoption during World War II.

The Salem, Ore., woman labored 20 years looking through phone books, school records and other documents in hopes of finding her mother, Thelma Darnell, and her brothers and sister.

But it was during a cross-country hitchhike from Bakersfield, Calif., to Oklahoma City that she learned about her family.

The couple who gave her a ride were from Brownwood and the conversation turned to the Darnell name.

Ms. Monette knew she had a brother named David and the couple knew a David Darnell, whose parents were Bert and Thelma Darnell.

"I grew up as an only child and the idea of having brothers and sisters is still hard to comprehend," Ms. Monette said Saturday as some of the family prepared for Easter. "But we tease each other just like we grew up together."

The women's story began in 1943 during World War II.

Thelma Darnell, who today is Thelma Landrum, lived in Salem with her three children and her husband who she said refused to support his family.

Times were tough. The couple already had three children and she was pregnant. She decided to give up the child and a physician adopted her.

When she was five years old the girl was told she was adopted, but wasn't bitter, because she also had another adoptive sister.

"The only mother I knew told me in such a way that I felt proud because I had been selected," she said.

Mrs. Darnell had moved to California and finally to Brownwood and eventually had three more children.

She made no contact with the couple and even denied she had given up a child for adoption when asked by her son, David.

"I guess it was because I didn't know where my daughter was and it always hurt me to realize I had given her away," she said about the denials. "I had three children after Judy, and I knew then that no matter what the circumstances would be, I would never again give one of my children up for adoption.

"I thought it best not to tell the others about a sister they would never see," she said.

During her teen-age years, Judy Frantz discovered she had asthma and wanted to find out if the disease was inherited. Her adoptive mother gave her a copy of her adoption decree and she tried to follow it up.

"I collected phone books in cities across the West Coast wherever I went, looking for Darnells. I continued doing this all those years and never gave up."

She married Richard Monette and eventually had six children, but continued to search for her family.

She recently separated from her husband and was living in Bakersfield, Calif., with her adoptive sister when she set out to find a job in Oklahoma City.

When she got there she called David Darnell in Brownwood to confirm his parents' names.

"It took me about 30 seconds to say another word, but then I blurted out that I was born Judith Flora Darnell and that my parents are Bert and Thelma. His comments were, 'Oh my God, it's true. I have found you!' "

Ms. Monette has been staying with her family since early March and said she knew she would find them.

"If it's fate then God will help you find your natural mother," she said. "I have no bad feelings at all (about the adoption). I am just pleased."

Woman wins custody of handicapped child

HOUSTON (AP) — A mother who gave up her handicapped baby daughter 2½ years ago because she couldn't afford the infant's hospital bills has been reunited with the child after winning a custody battle with the child's foster parents.

Patty Cochrane, 26, was awarded custody of her daughter Eileen by family district court jurors Wednesday after an eight-day trial.

The child's foster parents, Jim and Peggy Fore, sent her clothes and toys to Ms. Cochrane after the court ordered them to surrender the child to her mother.

Eileen smiled at her mother and seemed surprised by the press, family and attorneys invited to gather at the Cochrane residence to witness the reunion Friday.

Ms. Cochrane said the reason for the publicity was to keep other mothers and babies from going through the same ordeal.

She was unmarried and had no job or support from her parents when she gave birth to Eileen, who was born with one lung and a severe hearing loss.

Ms. Cochrane said she gave up the baby because she could not afford private hospital bills and did not want the infant transferred to a charity hospital.

She says she will work to change the Texas law that allows mothers no grace period to "get a grip on motherhood emotions and find out if it's possible to keep the baby after all." She said she wants to see the state institute a 30-day waiting period for mothers.

Alan Nielsen, Eileen's father, helped Ms. Cochrane financially in the custody fight for the child.

Paul Asher, Nielson's attorney, said the father's support was a key factor in the jury's decision to return custody to the mother.

Ms. Cochrane said she wants to be friends with the Fores "if it's comfortable for them."

Two persons die in plane crash

HOUSTON (AP) — Two people were killed Saturday when their light plane crashed and burst into flames near a private airstrip in Northwest Harris County, authorities said.

Witnesses said the plane crashed and burst into flames about 4:30 p.m. near the Cypress Air Strip, outside the community of Cypress.

The victims, who have not yet been identified, were pronounced dead at the scene after Harris County emergency medical technicians arrived, said Harris County sheriff's Cpl. Tom Twardowsky.

Mrs. Brasher died Friday afternoon in a San Angelo hospital. She was a homemaker and former Ackerly resident.

Knud Nielsen

BIG SPRING — Services for Knud Nielsen, 80, of Big Spring, were Saturday in the Nalley, Pickle and Welch Rosewood Chapel. Burial was in Trinity Memorial Park.

Nielsen, a mechanic and longtime Big Spring resident, died Thursday night in a Big Spring hospital.

Fires create 'hard times' for East Texas community

NACOGDOCHES, Texas (AP) — Two fires in three days that gutted an historic downtown shopping mall and destroyed one of the community's largest employers have put this East Texas city at "a crossroads," officials say.

"This is by far the largest economic catastrophe our city has ever faced," City Manager Jarvis Ammons told the Dallas Morning News. "We've had several floods, and they neer reached this magnitude as far as dollars lost."

The two fires struck within 48 hours last week, destroying the mall, damaging several downtown office buildings and leveling International Paper Co., a plywood manufacturing plant.

"Normally in a town like this you average a big fire once in 10 years," said Nacogdoches Fire Chief Charles Duffin. "So it looks like we're good for another 20 years."

The first fire on April 14 started in the mall and damaged several office buildings. A suspect was taken into custody, but released later.

On April 16, one of the largest industrial plants in the city was destroyed by a fire that started from a welder's torch spark.

Duffin said the damage could reach $2 million in the dowtown fire and $20 million at the mill.

"We're standing at a crossroads in both cases. And I hope we take the uproad in both cases," said Sidney Abegg, executive vice president of the Nacogdoches Chamber of Commerce.

Sammie Russell, whose downtown gift shop was destroyed, said she hopes a rejuvenation program is started.

"I hope the construction of this block can be the beginning of a rejuvenation for dowtown," she said. "I hope something good can come of this tragedy."

International Paper spokesman Errol Savoie said it could take two weeks before a decision is made on the future of the mill.

Another spokesman Rex Spencer said earlier this week that the company could transfer employees to other company-owned operations.

Officials, however, are unsure if the plant will be rebuilt.

Jerry Baker, executive vice president of Commercial National Bank, said it would take about $25 million and two years to rebuild the plant.

"If that plant is not rebuilt, this will be a real disaster," he said.

At the International Plant Friday, employees gathered outside the main gate to reminisce about the plant and inspect the still-smoldering ruins.

Billy Christopher gazed at a company sign — about the only thing left standing upright.

"That IP sign is like Confederate money now," he said.

Hospital burglarized

Burglars made off with more than $15,500 in cash from Parkview Hospital, 3201 Sage, according to police reports.

The burglary occurred sometime Friday, with entry gained by removing a screw from the door to the admissions office. Two Western State Bank carrier bags containing the cash were taken.

HIGH TURNOVER

Any professional businessman can recognize when the turnover rate of employees is excessive. Knowing how to correct it can be difficult if not embarrassing, if it involves personality or leadership.

The Midland County Sheriff's Department has had an excessive turnover in personnel during the past seven years. This turnover is wasting taxpayers money, due to the necessity of training new personnel and the time it takes before the new employee is able to become a productive employee. An excessive turnover rate is usually indicative of poor management. When elected, I will reduce the turnover rate by improving relations within the department.

But funding summer trip first concern

By MARK LEWIS
Staff Writer

Shelly Bassinger was interested in the kind of work the Peace Corps does, but she wasn't sure about the two-year committment required.

Instead, she applied to Operations Crossroads Africa, a privately-financed organization based in New York which sends American and Canadian college students to Africa to spend their summers helping rural communities.

She was accepted, but there was a catch.

"I've got to raise $2,750 by May 1," said Ms. Bassinger, a 22-year-old junior at the University of Texas of the Permian Basin.

Operation Crossroads requires each student to be financially supported by his or her community, so Ms. Bassinger is asking Midlanders for contributions.

"I applied very late and I just received my acceptance, so I'm just starting my fundraising," she said. "I'll be sending letters and then calling in person on businesses and individuals."

Operation Crossroads, which President John F. Kennedy called "the progenitor of the Peace Corps," has sent more than 6,000 students to Africa since 1958. The program requires the students to abandon many of the comforts they take for granted at home and live the life of the people they will be helping.

"Doing without comfortable things makes you appreciate them, but it also makes you realize that they're not necessary," said Ann Merrick, a former Operations Crossroads Africa volunteer. "I saw people who had nothing materialistically, but who had joy. It changed my life."

Ms. Bassinger learned about the program from Ms. Merrick, who spent the summer of 1969 in Ghana.

"Living in Midland is very pleasant, but I felt I needed perspective," said Ms. Bassinger.

The volunteers help build roads, schools and hospitals, "But the help we give is really a by-product," said Ms. Bassinger. "It's not a relief program so much as a program to strengthen relations."

The real intention is to get people together, said Ms. Merrick. "Not just Africans and Americans, but Americans and Americans. For example, I had never lived with a black person from New York before."

Ms. Bassinger has requested an assignment in Tanzania or Kenya, but doesn't know yet where she will be assigned. Right now she's more concerned with raising money.

Persons interested in making a contribution may call her at 682-6426 or 683-1581.

Patience 'best medicine'

The big question facing homeowners with lawns injured by the winter of 1983-84, is what can be done to get their lawn back into shape.

First, the extent of the injury will determine what should be done. On lawns with a limited amount of injury, patience is the name of the game. Wait until the lawn is actively growing so that the extent of the injury can be truly evaluated. Ideal growing temperatures for warm season turfgrasses is 85-90 degrees F. daytime temperatures and 70-75 degrees F. nighttime temperatures. Until these temperatures occur, the grass will not begin to actively grow and fill in.

The extended cool weather in the spring of 1984 has delayed the recovery of lawns, thus adding to the problem. Excess application of fertilizers will not force the grass to grow faster and can actually cause more injury by burning the turf. Avoid application of herbicides to the damaged areas.

Weeds are a common problem in thinned turf and the temptation is to use herbicides to clean up the lawn. Regular mowing to keep the weeds cut down until the grass is actively growing is the safest weed control practice. Unfortunately, most homeowners who have contracted a lawn service company to care for their lawn do not want to wait until it is safe to use herbicides.

Lawns with extensively damaged areas will have to be replanted. If this is the case, the first step is to determine what factors led to the extensive loss of grass. Where possible, correct the problem and then replant the damaged areas. While some injury can always be expected during winters with temperatures 15 degrees F. or lower, there are some things that can be done to lessen the damage. Factors such as using the best adapted varieties, proper cultural practices, disease and insect control, and elimination of shade problems can all help to produce turfgrass that is healthier and better able to withstand extemes in climatic condition.

Helpful hint: Grasses that are most cold tolerant to the least: Buffalo - hybrid bermudagrass - common bermudagrass - centipedegrass - St. Augustine.

Strip-mining permit favored

AUSTIN (AP) — A state Railroad Commission hearing examiner has recommended approval of a revised permit allowing the Lower Colorado River Authority to strip-mine lignite in Bastrop County.

Examiner Stephen Webb's recommendation Friday will go to the three-member commission for a vote.

The revised permit would let the LCRA name the Bastrop Mining Co., a subsidiary of Morrison-Knudsen Co. of Idaho, as mine operator and would allow the use of a dragline.

A dragline is a huge bucket, operated by cables, that removes dirt and rock to get to the lignite.

First woman chosen to head Trinity School

RHONDA RIGENHAGEN
Staff Writer

"My basic philosophy is the wise educator...builds on that child's great joy in learning new things. Education is a magical thing, and if you can maintain that magic you have done it. That's what education is based on."
— Margaret Bowers, to head Trinity School

"The joy of learning is innate when a child is born," said Margaret ("Everybody calls me Peggy") Bowers, who — come July — will be the first woman to head Trinity School.

"My basic philosophy is the wise educator, instead of killing that joy, builds on that child's great joy in learning new things. Education is a magical thing, and if you can maintain that magic you have done it. That's what education is based on."

Currently executive vice president of Lake Erie College in Painesville, Ohio, Ms. Bowers said she accepted the position because "I realized I'm much, much happier with young children."

Ms. Bowers is a graduate of Sweet Briar College and Ohio State University. She has 18 years experience in education.

She was instrumental in starting Phillips School in Ohio and served as head of school for nine years. She became Associate to the President of Lake Erie College in 1979 and two years later resigned from Phillips School to become director of development at the college.

She will replace the Rev. P.D. Peterson July 1. He has accepted a position as head of Webb School in Knoxville, Tenn.

"Of the offers I received, it was the people down here that made the difference for me," she said. "I love the attitude of, 'Of course we can do things,' rather than the one of 'Well, I'm not so sure we can do that.'

"They care so much for their children and that's the important thing to me. In education today people forget about the children."

Ms. Bowers said her immediate goal is to learn more about Trinity. "I certainly don't have any plans for drastic changes.

"I'm quite traditional in that I think everyone needs respect, and children need to respect their teachers," she continued. "And I think they copy what they see. If you respect young people they'll return that respect."

She prefers private schools, she said, because of the opportunity to give more individual attention to students.

Private schools have fewer limitations, she added. Absence of tenure for teachers gives schools more freedom to continually improve staff. Because they aren't limited by state law, private schools can, if necessary, ask that a student not return, she said.

Ms. Bowers said she is eager to begin her new job and invited all parents of Trinity students to visit her this summer.

Special education department, disability groups plan seminar

The Special Education Department of Midland Independent School District and several disability groups are sponsoring an IEP Parent Training Workshop from 7-9:30 p.m. Thursday at Bowie Elementary, 805 W. Elk.

Dayle Bebee, executive director of Advocacy Inc., will present the workshop, which will focus on preparing parents for participation in writing the Individual Education Plan for children in special education. The workshop is intended to reach all parents in special education.

Michener to address group

Author James A. Michener will be guest speaker at the 25th anniversary spring meeting of the Permian Historical Society Saturday. He will hold a noon-time question and answer session in the University of Texas of the Permian Basin's Devonian Room.

Michener authored "Tales of the South Pacific," "Hawaii," "The Covenant" and "Centennial," among other books. Registration for the meeting will begin at 9:30 a.m. in the Devonian Room. Persons wishing to attend the luncheon and talk are asked to make reservations by calling 367-2343.

Goddard brings back prize

Goddard Junior High won the Spanish runner-up sweepstakes award at a recent Foreign Language Festival in San Angelo. Five junior highs and 15 high schools competed in poetry recitation, prose reading, skits, puppet shows, dictation, written tests and sight-reading.

Choirs earn high ratings at UIL

Midland choirs earned high marks in the UIL Junior High Choral Concert and Sightreading Contest in Odessa recently.

Alamo rated superior in sightreading and excellent in concert. Goddard and San Jacinto received excellent ratings in concert, and Goddard also rated excellent in sightreading.

Fourth graders learn citizenship

Fourth-grade students at Bonham Elementary will learn about the roles and responsibilities of local law enforcement officials, tour official buildings and vote in a mock election May 1 and 2. The activities, along with a demonstration by a police dog and a reception for city officials, comprise Law Days at Bonham.

Tuesday students will hear from a policeman, judge, attorney, social worker, Chamber of Commerce representative, Department of Public Safety sergeant, Justice of the Peace, Rape Crisis Center spokeswoman, sheriff, assistant city manager and probation officer.

Wednesday they will tour city hall, the Federal Building, county courthouse and the DPS.

LETTER FROM COLLEGE

Faculty to present concert

By H.A. TUCK

A concert of 20th Century compositions will be presented by five faculty members at 8 p.m. Thursday in the Allison Fine Arts Building recital hall.

They will perform compositions by Debussy, Bartok, Berkeley, Villa-Lobos, Sutermeister, Ravel and Raphael. The public is invited to attend without charge.

Participating will be Ron Franklin, guitar; Dr. Donald Grant, clarinet; Dr. Michael Jordan, baritone; Dr. Betty Walker Morris, piano, and Walter Osadchuk, cello. All are full-time faculty instructors, except for Osadchuk, who is an adjunct instructor.

• • •

The college will remain closed Monday as the last day of the short Easter weekend vacation. Students and faculty will start counting down the final days of the semester when they return Tuesday. They'll have two weeks of classes, then it's time for finals.

• • •

For an entertaining afternoon, mark your calendar now for 3 p.m. Sunday, April 29, when several of the college's Commercial Music Department groups perform their spring concerts. You can hear the popular "Roadrunner Band," "Rumors" and other groups playing popular tunes, country and western, and bluegrass music.

The concert is free and open to the public. Just show up at the Allison Fine Arts Building recital hall, sit back and enjoy!

• • •

Friday is the final day to make your deposit to attend either of the travelling study courses planned for the Summer Interim.

In one of these, you can study Desert Ecology in Arizona with Dr. Lynn Lalko. The other combines courses in archaeology and backpacking for classroom and practical learning in West Texas and New Mexico. Dr. Carl Frailey and Jenny Allison will be teaching those programs.

The courses run May 13-26, with students camping out for much of the time.

If you are interested in enrolling for either course, contact the instructors at 684-7851 for details.

• • •

The Chaparral golf team plays its final conference tournament, plus the Region V tourney, this next weekend at Roswell, N.M. New Mexico Military Institute is the host school for both events. The Chaps are capable of shooting scores that would qualify them for the national junior college golf tournament. They should feel pretty confident, since they set a college record 282 score on the NMMI course earlier this month.

• • •

And the Chaparral tennis teams should be in Waco this weekend for their Region V tournaments. The Chap women ran away with the conference title, while the men held a slight lead going into the conference tourney this past weekend in Odessa. First and second place teams in the regional tournaments qualify for the national junior college tournaments, which are held in Ocala, Fla., during two consecutive weeks during May.

• • •

Final exhibit of the semester in the McCormick Gallery, Allison Fine Arts Building, is the student show that goes up Wednesday. There will be a reception from 7-9 p.m. on Thursday and the public is invited to attend. There are some talented artists again this year, plus photography and architecture to be shown.

The student show will remain on display through May 11. Gallery hours are 8 a.m.-10 p.m. Monday through Thursday, 8 a.m.-5 p.m. on Friday, 10 a.m.-5 p.m. on Saturday, and 1-5 p.m. on Sunday.

• • •

Chaparral Athletic Banquet is slated for 7 p.m. Tuesday, May 1, at Chaparral Center and tickets may be obtained from the Athletic Department office in the Physical Education Building.

• • •

Tickets ae going well for the Barbara Mandrell Concert, set for Chap Center on Sunday, May 13, so don't wait too long to get yours. They are priced at $12.50 and $10.50, with all seats reserved. You may obtain your tickets from the Chap Center box office, Endless Horizons in either Midland or Odessa, Record Bar in Odessa, or Radio Station KBYG in Big Spring. Appearing with Barbara Mandrell will be special guest Lee Greenwood.

H.A. Tuck is public relations director for Midland College.

making the grade

National Merit finalists Deirdre Bell, 2506 Storey, and Karen Eggleston, 1605 W. Tennessee, are recipients of $1,000 National Merit scholarships.

Miss Eggleston's scholarship is sponsored by Metropolitan Life Foundation. She is a member of National Honor Society, has been named to All-State and All-Region Orchestra and is vice president of the orchestra. She received the Rensselaer Award in math and science, was on the tennis team two years and has won two national awards in horse vaulting.

Miss Bell's grant is sponsored by the Blue Bell Foundation. She has been a member of JETS, Latin Club, cross-country and track teams and is National Honor Society president. She has received three academic letters.

Miss Bell is also the recipient of a McFadden Scholarship at Texas A&M University. It provides an annual stipend of $750 to $2,000 for four years. It is available to incoming freshmen who have a combined Scholastic Aptitude Test score of at least 1250 or are National Merit semi-finalists.

STUDENT CONGRESS officers for the upcoming year have been elected at Hardin-Simmons University in Abilene. Elected senior class congressman was Lonna Bartley, 1602 W. Pecan. Wade Vinson, 1505 Douglas, was elected congressman-at-large for the junior class.

Kim Field

KIM FIELD, a senior at Lee High School, was honored at a luncheon of the Midland West Rotary Club. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. L.E. Bivins, 4612 Mercedes.

She is a member of Young Life and president of the Cosmetology Vocational Industrial Clubs of America. She was Cosmetology Homecoming Sweetheart and a junior varsity cheerleader.

AMY MILLER of Midland was recently recognized at an Honors Assembly at Southwestern University in Georgetown. The daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Miller, she was presented as a new member of Alpha Chi national undergraduate scholarship society and Pi Delta Phi French honor society.

JAKE YOUNG III has been named a National Award Winner in science by the U.S. Achievement Academy. A student at Lee High School, he is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Jake Young Jr. of Midland.

CYNTHIA SMITH of Greenwood recently participated in a North Texas Leadership Seminar in Dallas held in conjunction with the Hugh O'Brian Youth Foundation. She was sponsored by the Westside Midland Optimist Club and Greenwood Student Council.

Billy Gibbs

BILLY GIBBS, son of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Gibbs of 1416 Chestnut, has been selected Student of the Month by the Negro Business and Professional Women's Club. The Lee High student is a member of the varsity football team and the 1983 track team.

TODD WEILER of Midland is one of four freshmen at Texas Christian University who has won a 3½-year Army ROTC scholarship. It pays full tuition, fees and books and a monthly stipend of $100. The political science major is the son of Mamie Mitchell, 1406 Sparks.

STEVEN MILLER, son of Joel and Shirley Miller of 1606 Seaboard, was recognized at The University of Texas at Austin's Honors Day Program for students who have excelled academically. The junior geology major was designated a College Scholar in the college of natural sciences. Students selected must have a grade point average of at least 3.5.

TWO LEE High School students have been selected for Navy Reserve Officer Training scholarships. They are Jimmy Lee and Robert Lowe.

Alternates selected to accept scholarships include Paul Boswell of Midland High and David Kirkpatrick of Lee. MHS student Adrian Martinez has been accepted to the Navy's BOOST Program. He will attend a year of prep school before competing for either an NROTC scholarship or appointment to the Naval Academy.

THREE MIDLAND students have been named to the winter quarter honor rolls at Texas State Technical Institute in Sweetwater. John Zengler, in the building construction craftsman program, was named to the President's Honor Roll for maintaining a grade point average of 4.0.

Weldon Carter and Clarence Smith, both in air conditioning and refrigeration technology, were listed on the Vice President's honor roll for having GPAs of at least 3.5.

"Making the Grade" features students who have received degrees, awards, scholarships or other honors. Items should be submitted to Rhonda Rigenhagen at the Reporter-Telegram. Pictures can be picked up or returned with a self-addressed, stamped envelope.

Trustees to discuss Perot education plan

Midland school trustees will meet Tuesday to discuss final recommendations made by H. Ross Perot's Select Committee on Public Education. The board will also consider a proposal to reactivate the youth centers.

Other items on the agenda include reorganization of the board, recognition of valedictorians and salutatorians and an overview of the district's vocational education program.

OC offers workshop

ODESSA — A skill-building workshop on chemical dependency, youth and behavioral problems will be held at Odessa College Friday and Saturday.

Sponsored by the Odessa Council on Alcoholism and Laurelwood Hospital, fee is $15 for one day and $25 for both days.

Registration will begin at 8 a.m. Friday for "Breaking the Barriers in Adolescent Counseling." Session will be from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. On Saturday registration for "Adolescent Substance Abuse in the 80s" begins at 8 a.m. Session is from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. It will be in Room 119, Electronic Technology.

"I'VE SEEN EVERY APARTMENT COMMUNITY IN MIDLAND."

"My feet hurt and my patience was wearing thin. I'd seen every apartment community in Midland, and none met my standards... until I discovered Oakridge Apartments. Just a little off the beaten trail, Oakridge has the quiet, private location I'd been looking for. Plus all the other extras I'd just about given up on. Like new construction, nice, friendly neighborhood appeal and superior amenities—indoor spa and sauna, clubhouse and pool, to name just a few—Oakridge is the greatest. I should know, I've seen them all."

1- and 2-bedroom and 2-bedroom studio apartment homes are available now. Take Loop 250 to N. Holiday Hill Road and look for the giant American flag.

Easter ...a time of renewal

The story of Easter tells of the dawning of a new season of hope, a renewal of faith, a promise of peace, Transforming joy from gloom, hope from disillusionment, this season of Christ's rebirth is a rebirth of the soul, a lifting of man's heart to glory and hope. May the peace of Easter come to all.

Parade of Homes

A master bath, in the home of Don and Gwyn Sparks, features a garden and a sunken drying area.

The exterior of Fred and Pam Walsh's Victorian-Country Colonial home features gingerbread trim.

A master bedroom in the home of Marylyn and Dave Leonard will be featured on the tour.

Midland Junior Womens' Club, a non-profit social and service organization, presents its 15th Annual Parade of Homes on April 29, from 2 to 6 p.m.

Of the four houses featured this year, two are newly constructed and two are newly remodeled.

BUNNELL

Charlene and Douglas C. Bunnell II's home, 905 Country Club Drive, is a late 1950s modern style, but updated by a remodeling project in 1981. Mrs. Bunnell, former professional contract designer and space planner, decorated the house.

The home features six bedrooms and three baths. The "casual" house has easy-to-care-for finishes such as white ceramic tile floors in the living and dining rooms and the sun porch adjoining the pool.

The open-floor plan visually makes the swimming pool an intergral part of the living and entertaining areas.

The traffic flow was improved by moving walls in the house's living areas, which created more space in the kitchen, living room and the dining room.

Vaulted ceilings, clerestory windows in six rooms and expanses of glass allow the house an open and light atmosphere.

The home's energy efficiency is attributed to the replacement of the original heating and air conditioning equipment. The original design and placement orientation on its lot allows sunshine to warm the house during winter and block the sun from entering the house during the summer when the sun has moved north.

The narrow centered backyard is and compactly designed with a large wooden deck with wooden arbor and ceiling fans adjoining the terrace around the pool. At the opposite end is a wooden play yard with swings, sandbox and a playhouse on stilts. Brick planting beds, potted flowers and plants are arranged throughout the backyard, watered by an automatic drip system which is part of the main sprinkler system.

The home's kitchen design is influenced by Mrs. Bunnell's hobby — cooking and entertaining. The kitchen has been modernized and enlarged with over-sized sinks, a six-burner stove, a 3-foot-wide refrigerator unit separate from a 3-foot wide freezer, an abundance of counter, cabinet and storage space and a 6-foot by 5-foot island in the center of the work area.

One bedroom in the home is a craft and hobby workroom with extra storage space and a 6-foot by 10-foot worktable in the center.

WALSH

Fred and Pam Walsh's Victorian/ Country Colonial home, 9 Hialeah, was built by Joe Johnson of Reese Construction of Odessa under the direction of architects Walter Pate and James Riggin. Mrs. Walsh also assisted in the architecture and decoration of the home.

Exterior gingerbread trim, fretwork in thekitchen, living and dining rooms, all-Oak trim, cabinets and paneling, an Oak staircase, wide baseboards, door trim and 9-foot ceilings, the dining room's painted metal ceiling, wainscoating and chair rails throughout home and pierced copper kitchen cabinet panels are special features of the home.

LEONARD

Marylyn and Dave Leonard's ranch-style home, built by HBF Costruction, was designed by architect Bill Bell and decorated by James Van Stavern of Santa Fe Contract and Design.

The home, 3402 Choate Place, features a bath for each of the bedrooms and a "Marylyn Room," which serves as the children's playroom and the homemaker's office. A cabana provides a place to entertain around the pool.

The home was built for the family, with special planning to accomodate different needs at different stages, such as entertainment room for the children. A backyard and pool provides facilities for family recreation.

SPARKS

Don and Gwyn Sparks, 2407 Dartmouth, have a traditional-stlye home built by Ed Brannon and architect David Vincent of Odessa.

The 14-year-old home, decorated by the Sparks, features a master bedroom suite with a sitting room which overlooks a courtyard, a masterbath with a sunken drying area and private garden, a hot tub with a trellised deck and several large windows and skylights which give the home an open feel. The family's special hobby — interior decorating — has had an influence on the home.

Proceeds from last year's Parade of Homes, in excess of $9,000, were donated to the Palmer Drug Abuse Program. This year's proceeds will benefit the Palmer Drug Abuse Program and the Permian Basin Battered Women's and Children's Home in Midland.

Tickets, sold exclusively by the club's members, are $7.50. For information, contact 694-3366, 694-2791 or 694-0186. Tickets will not be sold at the door and children younger than 12 will be admitted.

Charlene and Douglas C. Bunnell II's dining room is highlighted by vaulted ceilings and clerestory windows.

Pierced copper panels are featured on the kitchen cabinets in the home of Fred and Pam Walsh.

Home buying in year 2000 may be by video

Copley News Service

Ever wonder what buying a home in the 21st century might be like? Consider this possible scenario:

You're being transferred from St. Louis to San Diego. You make an appointment with a "video broker-relocation" firm in St. Louis.

In the luxurious video viewing conference room of this firm, you see and learn all needed information about residential communities within Greater San Diego. After selecting the most desirable neighborhoods, you start viewing videotapes of listed homes that meet your precise requirements — selected in seconds by a computerized information system.

You eliminate all but two or three homes. For those still being considered, a much more detailed video inspection tour is flashed on the screen.

You soon have all the input needed to make a final selection. An "offer to buy" contract form structured specifically for you and the subject property, is quickly generated on the computer terminal printer.

You sign the contract and hand it to the broker — along with a credit card to be used to process the "earnest money" deposit. The documents are then electronically communicated to a cooperating broker in San Diego.

At this point, you go out for a relaxing lunch.

Ninety minutes later, you return to the broker-relocation office, where your signed and accepted offer awaits you. The terms and occupancy date are all satisfactory. You've purchased a new home 2,000 miles away, without leaving your home town.

In the same office, you line up the best possible mortgage loan to finance your new home, selected from loan availabilities throughout the country. This, too, is totally accomplished through the computer information system.

After firming-up the purchase of this home, you start shopping for about $12,000 in furniture and appliances — electronically, of course. After inputting requirements and desires, color photos of furniture-appliance items emerge on the large screen before you — all meeting the precise parameters you set.

You make final selections and purchases, again using your credit card. Arrangements are made, electronically, to have the items delivered to your newly purchased home on the first day of occupancy.

Part of your home purchase deal is that you receive 25 percent discount on furniture, appliances, decorating, landscaping, moving costs — a great variety of expenses related to your relocation.

Your discounted savings on these initial purchases add up to $3,600. That's a significant chunk of the down payment on the home.

That's the way it could happen in the 21st century. It may surprise you to learn that most of these communication technologies and marketing methods are available and used today.

Heat pumps save energy

NEW YORK (AP) — Heat pumps are energy-savings devices which provide heat and air conditioning in one unit.

To make them even more energy-efficient, Honeywell says it is offering a microelectronic thermostat to automatically control home temperatures year-round.

The company claims its thermostat can decrease users' annual heating and cooling costs by up to 41 percent and 27 percent respectively.

Have you heard...?

By MARILYN McKNIGHT HARRISON

One of the social highlights of the spring season was the lovely tea given Saturday, the fourteenth of April, at the Midland Woman's Club.

The hostesses were Evelyn (Mrs. F.D.) Breedlove, Ellen (Mrs. H.W.) Diggs, Mrs. Carol Fitting, Clara (Mrs. John) Hostetler, Lucille (Mrs. Marvin) McCree, Miss Dorothy Perkins, Geneva (Mrs. Ken) Richards, Dorothy (Mrs. W.C.) Rountree, Madge (Mrs. P.B.) Wallis, Mrs. LaVerne West and Lydia (Mrs. J.P.) Wilkinson.

An eye-catching Oriental theme was used throughout the party rooms. The 400 guests were talking about the beauty of the decor and the delicious refreshments, which included Oriental fruit, almond cookies, tea-time sandwiches, tuna puffs, brownies, pastel mints, cranapple punch, coffee and tea.

The stage in the Great Hall featured a charming display of Oriental dress, ranging from the traditional to modern day, and a majestic parasol flanked by silk screens of the four seasons. Lining the stage were Oriental arrangements of silk flowers combined with driftwood and stone. A striking centerpiece on the main serving table depicted a pleasing Oriental scene with the use of ceramics, natural rock and cymbidium orchids, flanked by votive candles in sake cups. The adjoining Tea Room featured a punch fountain. Mrs. Breedlove's artist daughter Virginia Breedlove of Seminole assisted in the decorating.

Among the party-goers were Jeanie (Mrs. Tom) Johnson, Marg. (Mrs. Jack) Samples, Ruth (Mrs. Stanley) Erskine, Minnie (Mrs. R.T.) German, Allis (Mrs. W.E.) Chapman, Mary (Mrs. Harry) Hinkle and Cecelia (Mrs. Robert E.) Davis.

GIRLHOOD CHUMS, Midlander Mavis (Mrs. Mike) Murphy and Katherine Tikhomiroff of Paris, France, were reunited on West Texas soil recently. They had not seen one another in over 12 years.

The two grew up in the city of Bradford in Yorkshire, England, and moved to Paris together. Later Mavis came to the States, but Katherine remained behind and married a Frenchman. Now a French teacher at the International School in Paris, Katherine traveled to Midland over her spring break and returned home most imprressed by the West Texans' friendliness and kindness.

The Murphys made sure that their charming house guest had a wide variety of typically Texan experiences during her week's stay here. These included a cattle roundup, a barbecue, a two-day trip to Fort Davis where Katherine met "real cowboys and Indians," and even though it was not on the agenda, a spring sandstorm.

The visitor also was feted with a dinner party in the home of Margot and John Vance and enjoyed an evening absorbing the ambience of Robert's Copper Pot. She was treated to such Texas fare as chicken fried steak, chili, nachos and stuffed jalapenos. She also got her first glimpse of tumbleweeds, wild turkeys and pronghorns, but was disappointed not to see any rattlesnakes. Among her most prized possessions are the pair of cowboy boots she received from her hosts.

JEAN AND L.V. HOLLEY announce the arrival of a new grandson, Steven Read Hicks, who was born March 20. The parents are Suzanne and John K. Hicks Jr. of Mesquite.

Suzanne, better known as "Sam," is a 1969 graduate of Lee High School and is supervisor of DOE & Revenue at Sun Exploration and Production Company in Dallas. John is head baseball coach at North Mesquite High School. Steven, who was born on his mother's 33rd birthday, has an older brother Robert John, who turned four on March 19.

Besides all of this March happiness, the grandmother, nee Jean Read, is especially delighted and impressed with the choice of Steven's middle name.

TWO MIDLAND COUPLES, Sally and Martin Mogford and Martha and Ross Moore, recently enjoyed a relaxing week of sun, sea and sand while vacationing in the Grand Cayman Islands. Staying at the Villa Pappagallo on the extreme northwest tip of Grand Cayman, the foursome met Mohammed Ali who had a neighboring condo and who was there to sponsor a benefit amateur boxing match.

The week's activities included snorkeling, shelling, terrapin fishing, shopping and partaking of the marvelous sea food. Renting an underwater camera, they were delighted with the pictures of sea life they got while snorkeling. They had the added pleasure of lunching with Midlanders Mary and David Dennis, who were on a cruise ship which docked at Georgetown.

DOROTHY AND JACK CAMPBELL enjoyed a three-week trip through the South this spring. Their leisurely travels, which included visits with 12 different sets of friends and relatives en route, was highlighted by their participation in the West Texas-New Mexico Seniors Golf Tornament held at Epcot Center in Orlando, Fla.

Following the tourney the Campbells toured Epcot Center and Disney World. Among those they visited along the way were three of Dorothy's Phi Mu sorority friends whom she met while serving in national office and a 90-year-old Louisiana woman who was like a second mother to the Campbells in their Seminole, Okla. days when their children were small. Their last stop before returning to Midland was Pecan Plantation, southwest of Fort Worth, were they plan to make their retirement home in the near future.

THREE MISD administrators, Patty Smith, Maridell Fryar and Patricia Alexander, attended the national convention of the Association of Supervision and Curriculum Development in New York City earlier this spring.

Their days were devoted to workshops and sessions on effective supervision where they were privileged to hear an outstanding line-up of speakers — some of the most gifted educators from across the country.

The Midlanders also enjoyed the Broadway musical "42nd Street," a Manhattan sightseeing tour and a visit to the Metropolitan Museum of Art.

Lifestyle policies

The following are policies for publication of stories and announcements in the Lifestyle Department of The Midland Reporter-Telegram:

Information for our Sunday pages must be in our office by 5 p.m. the preceding Tuesday. For publication in a weekday paper, we must receive the information by noon two days before the story is to run. For example, an item to appear in Wednesday's paper must be received by noon Monday.

Engagement announcements must appear at least four weeks before the wedding date. Wedding stories must be submitted within five days of the event.

Engagements, weddings, anniversaries and club notices must be submitted in writing. All materials should include the name and telephone number of the person submitting them. These items appear in the Sunday paper only.

The Reporter-Telegram has forms for announcements of engagements, weddings and anniversaries.

We cannot mail pictures or forms to persons living within Midland. Pictures must be picked up in the Lifestyle office within one month after publication.

Portraits of the future bride and bridegroom in one photograph may be submitted with engagement announcements. Wedding photographs should be of the bride only.

Pictures should be black and white, preferably glossy finish, studio portraits. Studio color pictures may be submitted, but they may reproduce poorly. Good reproduction cannot be assured when color prints are used. In general, snapshots are not acceptable.

There is no charge for publication of pictures and stories.

Essay on freedom wins youth book contest award

MIDDLETOWN, Conn. (AP) — In complete freedom, no one is free. This is the lesson of Nobel Prize winner William Golding's "Lord of the Flies," says Graham Burnett, eighth-grade student at Waldrom Academy in Merion, Pa.

He is winner of the 1984 "Books Make a Difference" contest sponsored by Read magazine in cooperation with the Library of Congress.

In his winning essay, Burnett said Golding's story of English schoolboys stranded on a tropical island illustrated that only in an orderly system where freedom was joined to responsibility could society survive.

It is when the boys throw off all responsibility, says Burnett, that they are reduced to savages and their society is doomed.

The "Books Make a Difference" contest is sponsored annually by Read, a classroom language arts magazine published by Xerox Education Publications.

This year, in honor of the Statue of Liberty's 100th birthday, the magazine's half million junior and senior high school subscribers were encouraged to write a 200-word essay on "The Book That Has Taught Me the Most About Freedom."

The students were asked to cite a particular book, describe the aspect of the book that most impressed them, and tell the specific lesson they learned from it.

Burnett, whose essay was chosen over thousands of others, won a trip to Washington, D.C., with special recognition by the Library of Congress.

Student wants back in law school

By ADELE SCHEELE, Ph.D

Q — My son attended the local university law school, but got involved with a girl and flunked out. He went to the readmissions board twice, but to no avail. (He also split up with his girlfriend.)

The law firm that he worked for during the first year's summer praised him highly and let him do investigation work on a more advanced level than any other first-year law students. They said he'd make an excellent attorney.

Being rejected from law school has absolutely devastated my son. He works now in a collection agency and sees no hope for his future. Can you suggest a way he can attend some law school? He wants it so much and has learned his lesson the hard way. I would appreciate any help you might give.

A — I must say I wish your son had written instead of you; therefore let me suggest that you both go to a career counselor to determine if he wants to be a lawyer as much as you do. If he does, then there are some tactics for him to follow. To be sure, I asked Dr. Patsy Oppenheim at the University of San Francisco Law School.

First, know that anyone who flunks out of an American Bar Association accredited law school, such as the one your son went to, must wait two years before reapplying. But then, unfortunately, there is virtually no chance of being accepted. His rejection is not unusual.

But if he still wants to go to law school, he can. He must choose any state accredited law school, attend, pass, and then take the bar examination like any other law graduate. The only loss is that most major law firms prefer university law schools over the proprietary ones. However, he can still practice law in other firms or in public agencies and has equal chances for success.

Second, to get admitted to those state accredited law schools, he still must write a convincing personal statement explaining what happened. He must say himself that he made a wrong choice but learned his lesson and now, more than ever, wants to practice law.

He should cite his willingness to study and start over (even if no class credit is transferable). He should also get at least four letters of recommendation — from those university law professors who remember him, and from those attorneys in the law firm he worked for. They might also have graduated from a state accredited school themselves and therefore be glad to write directly for him.

Know that anyone who wants something bad enough can find ways to get it. Your son needs to learn more lessons in going after what he wants. If he won't take your advice or mine you may have to let him fail until he wants to succeed.

Q — I am a 25-year-old dental hygienist. I hold a B.S. degree in dental hygiene with a minor in biology. I'd like to pursue another career. How do I know what my options are and where do I begin?

A — There's no known "option" in life as there is in leasing a car or choosing a health plan.

One's options are often your own interests, recognized or not. To help you discover them, think of (1) what else you'd rather be doing; (2) another aspect of the dental profession that you are particularly interested in, i.e., new dental instruments or inventions that intrigue you enough to switch to sales; (3) what dentists need and don't have, or where they may improve; (4) further work in the health field, which could take you back to school for graduate work in, say, biology; (5) any unrelated hobby or passion that you could start to pursue full time.

There's no magic in finding something.

Make an exploration period from now until summer. Talk to lots of people in any one of the areas that interest you. Leads may grow from seeds planted this spring!

Q — I have a 9 to 5 retail clerk job. It is low-paying, low recognition, with no future.

I have recently obtained my real estate license and work at that on my two days off (one weekday and Sunday). My fiance wants me to give up my "going-nowhere" job and work at real estate full time. My observation is that new real estate reps aren't making a dependable living at it. I'd like to hold on to the regular paycheck, medical plan, etc. with my low-paying job and give real estate time to develop (maybe a year or more) on a part-time basis.

What has been your experience with women in similar situations? Am I being too cautious?

A — Although there's something to be said in favor of your approach, I'd agree with your fiance. To increase your real estate knowledge, it would be better to work full time in a real estate-related job. Because your secure job doesn't offer any learning in your new field, and uses up your time, it is better to work for a large contractor, developer, real estate board, or even in the office of a large real estate or property management group.

During your part-time sales, follow the success patterns of the super sales people and see what skills you can adopt. If you are really ambitious, being afraid of being hungry is a keen motivator to provoke sales.

If bobbins for the sewing machine keep getting tangled up, Family Circle advises to store the bobbins in empty prescription bottles. Use a container a bit larger than the bobbin width so five or six bobbins can be stacked.

Tortoise once sacred

NEW YORK (AP) — The Chinese believed the tortoise was a sacred creature that brought luck and long life, according Corning Sunglass Products. When someone had an eye ailment, the shell from the tortoise was used as eyeglass frames. This was believed to dispel evil forces.

Although people no longer believe in evil forces or the magic powers of the tortoise, tortoiseshell is still one of the favorite choices for frame color, says the company.

Woman considers eggs 'canvas'

SAG HARBOR, N.Y. (AP) — Eggs may not have artistic potential for most people, but to Alexandra Eames they are a blank canvas for her creative efforts.

She colors them in vivid hues and transforms them into such objects as birds, flowers, spaceships and vases, or makes them "grow" on trees by hanging decorated eggshells from small branches.

Before she starts work on an egg, she has a preconceived notion about how she wants it to look.

"I get my inspiration from almost anything around me," says Ms. Eames, who creates the eggs for display purposes for PAAS, a major manufacturer of Easter egg color kits."One year, for instance, a seed catalog came with a lot of pictures of flowers. So, I said, I've really got to use them somehow, and I ended up doing decoupaged eggs."

These, she explained, are cut-out flowers, animals or geometric designs from scraps of fabric or magazine illustrations, which are attached to colored eggs with glue or double-faced sticky tape.

Ms. Eames, who studied art at Parsons School of Design, spends an average of a half hour decorating an egg. Does she mind that her art work may be destroyed so quickly after Easter is over?

"If the egg turns out to be really nice, it's worth saving," she says. "I have seen eggs, even those that were hard-cooked, that people carefully set aside for years. Slowly the insides dry up and harden and the egg begins to rattle. If you have an egg you really like, you should save it."

One of her favorite decorations involves the use of real leaves. This is the type of design she calls "resist-leaf decorated eggs."

"This means coating the egg with something that will resist the coloring bath," she explains. "Dip tiny leaves in vegetable oil and lay on the egg surface. To keep leaves from slipping, wrap the egg in a square of discarded nylon stocking and tie tightly with thread. Dip the egg into the coloring. When the color is dark enough, remove the piece of nylon and leaves and blot the egg dry." The imprint of the leaves will remain.

Another popular creation is a decorative egg vase. Ms. Eames empties an egg, which she colors to a bright hue as a background for her design. Then, using a sharp pair of cuticle scissors, she carefully cuts off the narrow top of the egg. After using a wax crayon to decorate — with a name, flowers, or simply a design — she glues the base of the egg to a a curtain ring that has been colored to match the egg.

For Easter, the egg vase can be used to hold water and live flowers. Later, silk or dried flowers can be put in the vases, to be used in place settings or for favors.

Treatment substantially reduces migraine problems

Hearst Feature Service

SAN FRANCISCO — Every day for 34 years, Edith Race awoke to a throbbing headache, the kind that causes jabbing pain with the slightest movement. Painkillers worked for a while, "but it finally got to the point where it seemed nothing was helping me," she said.

In the last few months, however, her condition has improved substantially under a new treatment devised by Dr. Neil Raskin, a neurologist at the University of California at San Francisco. Race, 56, can go 10 days without having that telltale throb develop into a painful migraine. "Although I have to take the medication now, I can go the whole day and am almost headache-free until I go to bed," she said.

For other migraine sufferers, the effects have been even more dramatic.

"I'm not one give to hyperbole, but this is the most exciting therapy for headaches I've seen since my involvement in the field — and that's 16 years," Raskin said.

Migraines are estimated to affect more than one person in five. Raskin sees the toughest cases, people in such pain that they may spend time in the hospital. These patients typically have been given pain-pills, Valium, steroids and other drugs, but the results have brought only temporary relief.

Three years ago, Raskin decided to try giving a familiar headache drug, called dihydroergotamine (DHE), intravenously. He found the results astonishing. Of 55 patients treated with DHE, he said, 49 became headache-free within 48 hours. Thirty-six of them, followed for an average of nine months, maintained a "good to excellent response" when they adhered to follow-up regimens ranging from pills and suppositories to injections.

Raskin isn't certain how the treatment works, but has developed a theory.

Anti-smoking movement grows in Japan

TOKYO (AP) — While smokers in many countries are being driven into corners by anti-smoking adversaries, in Japan the new Health and Welfare Minister took office recently saying that "smoking is the basis of my good health."

Kozo Watanabe, who hails from a tobacco-growing electoral district, added that he went through 80 cigarettes a day during a recent election campaign.

That the minister, official overseer of the nation's physical well-being, could make such a statement illustrates how Japan is still an unrepentant heavy-smoking society.

And that Watanabe retracted the comment the next day after protests from anti-smoking groups shows how the abstainers, while still outgunned, are beginning to appear from the haze.

"Little by little, we're making progress in homes, offices and public buildings," Midori Nakada, one of the founders in 1978 of Japan's "right to dislike smoking" movement, said in a telephone interview.

Since her campaign gained national attention, non-smoking cars have been added to trains and planes, and the sick can now usually find a breath of fresh air in sections of public hospital waiting rooms.

Ms. Nakada, however, accused the government — which is politically beholden to 100,000 tobacco farmers and reaps sizable revenues from its monopoly hold on cigarette sales — of "dragging its feet" in supporting non-smokers. She also says it is lax in informing people of the dangers of smoking to health.

The Japan Tobacco and Salt Public Corporation in 1982 sold a record 310.3 billion cigarettes, 2.7 billion more than the previous year.

The corporation said 66.1 percent of Japanese adult men were smokers, down from a record 83.6 percent in 1966 and the lowest rate since the corporation began keeping records 40 years ago. Among women, 13.5 percent smoked every day or occasionally. Smoking is on the rise among young women in particular, although it is still considered bad form for women to smoke at work or on the street.

By comparison, 38 percent of American men and 33 percent of women were smokers in 1980. In France, statistics compiled in 1979 showed 55.9 percent of men and 29.8 percent of women were smokers.

Ms. Nakada's group stresses that it is only trying to clear the air for non-smokers, not intimidate those with the habit.

The Health and Welfare Ministry said in 1980 it had issued a report concurring with the World Health Organization that smoking had a clear linkage with heart disease, cancer and respiratory ailments. But the report's main message was that long-range health education was needed and heavy smokers should be advised to cut back.

A similar menthol-mild message appears on cigarette packs — "For health purposes, let's be careful not to smoke too much."

High altitudes not without risks

NEW YORK (AP) — High altitudes can carry risk for some people, according to Rand McNally's "Places Rated Retirement Guide." It says several mountain resort areas got their start as health retreats for people suffering from tuberculosis. The clear mountain air was thought beneficial for the lungs.

While most mountain air is clear and relatively free from pollutants, it is also less dense and contains less oxygen, says the guide.

Readers suffering from asthma, emphysema or anemia are advised to consult a doctor before moving to any place more than 2,000 feet above sea level.

DR. KURIANSKY

Marital relationship leaves something to be desired

By DR. JUDITH KURIANSKY

Q. I am a 37-year-old woman with a terrible problem. I've been married three years and my husband never makes love to me. He says I'm the first woman he does not enjoy it with.

First he told me he felt left in an open space. Then he said I wasn't too wide; I just didn't feel normal. I cry a lot and wonder what's wrong with me.

I take a shower and undress in front of him but he doesn't seem to enjoy looking at me. When I lie in bed I can see he gets excited but he hardly touches me. He keeps going out with other women, and I'm sure if I did not have a problem he wouldn't do that. Is there any remedy for my marriage? Mississauga, Canada

A. Reading about how you are suffering made me feel sad — and a little hostile toward your husband. That's my clue as a therapist that you, too, must be feeling hostile. However, you cover your anger with self-pity and self-blame. Take a realistic look at how you are being treated by both your husband and yourself.

Some women all too quickly feel inadequate sexually when a man withdraws or is critical. They feel responsible and undesirable rather than questioning whether he's the one with a problem. Some men are masters at making those vulnerable women feel inadequate, to deflect attention or deny their own problems.

When a couple has an unconsummated marriage, it may be because both the man and the woman may fear sex once they've become husband and wife. They suffer deep psychological conflicts.

For example, he may associate "wife" with "mother," and thus avoid marital sex as a way to avoid incest fantasies. A man who is overly attached — and possibly symbolically "married" — to his mother may avoid sex with his wife so he won't "betray" mother.

Such a man may have affairs to re-create adolescence: "Mother" is there to care for him while he goes out on "dates." Your husband has to work out his part of this problem himself.

You, meanwhile, have to take more control of your life. Stop being a doormat. The more you allow your husband to ignore or insult you, the more contemptuous of you he can become.

Break the vicious cycle. Respect yourself. You deserve a loving relationship.

Start by respecting your body. The more you do, the more likely he will too. Research has shown that when women appreciate their bodies, they appreciate their entire selves. They then expect — and get — more appreciation from others.

Risk telling your husband that you no longer blame yourself for the sexual inactivity in your marriage and that you want your intimacy to improve.

Say that you are no longer going to put up with excuses for his affairs. You are willing to face the problems in your marriage and want to see a sex therapist or marriage counselor together.

Q. I have a 4-year-old daughter and the other day she saw my husband and me hugging in the bedroom. Later she asked me, "Why can't you go away, Mommy, and I can sleep in your room with Daddy."

I was very surprised. It seemed like such a strange thing to say. I told her, "No, that's ridiculous. Daddy is married to Mommy. Don't ask such things." Did I do the right thing?

A. Your little girl's question is perfectly normal for her age. I remember an even more dramatic example of the same phenomenon. A 5-year-old boy was playing ball with his father in the park. All of a sudden he started hitting his father with the bat and said, "Daddy, if you die I can marry Mommy."

The boy clearly hadn't read Freud, but his words were the classic Oedipus complex come to life. Around age 4 and 5 a child begins to identify with the parent of the same sex and compete for the parent of the opposite sex. It's a natural process in developing sexual identity.

Some parents get angry. They don't realize where the question comes from. Don't react as you would to an adult, as if you were being rejected in a love triangle. See your child's question as an opportunity to discuss what growing up is about, what it means to be a man or a woman, and what it means to be in love, get married and have children.

I feel strongly that answers to questions about growing up and love should never begin with "No." Set a positive tone.

DR. NEIL SOLOMON

Depression, pregnancy linked

Dear Dr. Solomon: I have heard stories from friends of mine about how depressed they were after they gave birth, and some even needed psychiatric care. But I've never heard anyone say anything about being depressed during the time that they were pregnant. Yet when I was pregnant I know that I was upset lots of times, and I would like to know how common this is. — Bette, N.Y.

Dear Bette: According to Dr. Steven R. Lee, of Emory University School of Medicine in Atlanta, about 16 percent of pregnant women experience some type of emotional disturbance. This compares with a figure as high as 50 percent during the period shortly after they give birth.

The disturbance during pregnancy may consist of noncompliance with their physicians' instructions, inappropriate anger, or feelings of discomfort that apparently have no physical basis. Some symptoms such as vomiting, which has a physiologic basis, may be aggravated psychological factors.

Dear Dr. Solomon: My sister tells me that she heard that women who have IUD's should have them removed. I have one and it has never caused me any trouble. Why should I have it removed? — Mrs. A.E., Seattle, Wash.

Dear Mrs. E.: Your sister is probably referring to a recommendation that women who are using a Dalkon Shield intrauterine device have it removed. Studies have shown that women using the Dalkon IUD have a significantly increased risk of pelvic inflammatory disease. However, this has not been found to be true of other IUD's.

The Dalkon Shield has been off the market for about 10 years. Women who had an IUD inserted several years ago and do not know its specific type should get in touch with their physicians. IUD's that were inserted more recently are not likely to be Dalkon Shield.

Dear Dr. Solomon: If a person has hay fever, does that mean that he has a better chance of being allergic to some foods as well? —Gig, Greensboro, N.C.

Dear Gig: A person who is allergic to pollen is more likely to be allergic to some foods than is someone who is not allergic to pollen or to animal dander.

Dear Dr. Solomon: Suppose a woman who has had a mastectomy becomes pregnant. Is there a greater risk to such a woman than if she did not become pregnant? —Josie, Philadelphia

Dear Josie: Most of the research conducted on the subject suggests that pregnancy in a woman who has had a mastectomy does not increase the risk of the woman's survival.

AFTER EASTER, IT'S EGG SALAD WEEK!

Get double the enjoyment out of your decorated Easter eggs by turning them into after-Easter feasts. Clockwise from upper left: Huevos Mexicana, Sunlit Cheese Spread, Eggs Diavolétto, Honey of an Egg Salad and Peanutty Egg Pockets.

Whether you're observing Easter's religious significance, or you're simply delighted that it's spring, you needn't end the fun of the season's festivities on Easter Sunday. Celebrate Egg Salad Week! In addition to the classic egg salad, there are dozens of delicious ways to turn the eggs you've hard-cooked, colored, hidden and found into flavorful feasts.

If you tend to be a traditionalist and prefer to celebrate the week with an actual egg salad, don't limit your thinking to chopped hard-cooked eggs and "mayo". Use yogurt, sour cream, diluted cottage or cream cheese or your favorite dip or salad dressing to moisten the eggs. Add flavor, color and more nutrients with chopped cucumber, green onion or pepper; shredded carrots or zucchini...even raisins. For crunch, consider sliced water chestnuts; crumbled, crisp-cooked bacon; bean sprouts; or chopped celery, radishes or nuts. And, a pinch of dill weed, crumbled tarragon leaves or another herb can turn a bland salad into a grand one. For a more hearty dish, stir in cooked pasta or rice or diced cooked potatoes.

Suit dieters by serving the salad on spinach or lettuce leaves, tomato slices or asparagus spears. Mound the egg salad in mushroom caps and whisk briefly under the broiler for savory hors d'oeuvres. Mini cream puffs filled with egg salad make pretty appetizers, too. Add shredded cheese to the salad, spread on English muffin halves and heat until the cheese melts and you'll have a hot and hearty snack. Or, eat on the run by tucking your salad into pocket bread. Don't forget that by adding 2 hard-cooked eggs—wedged, sliced or chopped—you can turn a tossed salad from a side dish into a main dish.

If you prefer to fly in the face of tradition, there are a host of other options. Fill crepes or tortillas with egg salad, top with a cheese sauce and bake until bubbly. Serve creamed eggs sparked with vegetables and herbs in patty shells, on toast points, or over split biscuits or cornbread. Cut your food costs and provide your family with a nutritious meal at the same time by using hard-cooked eggs along with or in place of more expensive protein foods in your favorite casserole recipe. The definitely not run-of-the-mill recipes here might help inspire other ideas.

Plain or fancy, hot or cold, classic or creatively new, egg salad after Easter is a natural. It's a great way to gain the bonus of delicious, nutritious dishes from your holiday decorations.

A FEW HINTS FOR HARD-COOKED EGGS AT EASTERTIME

- "Older" eggs are easier to peel than very fresh ones, so buy the eggs you plan to hard cook about a week or so ahead of time.
- Since raw eggs in the shell remain of high quality longer under refrigeration than hard-cooked ones, cook the eggs just before you plan to decorate them.
- When not decorating, displaying and/or hiding hard-cooked eggs, keep them in their shells in the egg carton under refrigeration to preserve their quality.
- If you refrigerate eggs in their shells immediately after hard-cooking them and leave them out for display or hiding for only a few hours, they'll keep for about a week. If they've been at room temperature for as much as 24 hours, though, try to use them within a few days.

HUEVOS MEXICANA

6 servings

Some like it hot! And, this easy-to-layer casserole is just that. If your family or friends would prefer a more mild flavor, leave out the can of chilies. For convenience, you can prepare the casserole the night before you plan to serve it. Cover and refrigerate it. Then, add an extra 5 to 10 minutes baking time.

- 12 tortillas, halved
- 2 cans (11 oz. each) mild enchilada sauce, divided
- 12 hard-cooked eggs*, sliced
- 1 cup dairy sour cream
- 1/2 teaspoon salt
- 1/2 teaspoon ground cumin
- 1/2 teaspoon chili powder
- 1-1/2 cups chopped onion
- 1/2 cup drained coarsely chopped pitted ripe olives (about 2 oz.)
- 1 can (4 oz.) chopped green chilies
- 1 cup (4 oz.) shredded Monterey Jack cheese
- Dairy sour cream, optional
- Drained pitted ripe olives, sliced, optional

Stand 8 of the tortilla halves upright along sides of lightly greased 13x9x2-inch baking dish. Cover center of dish with an additional 4 tortilla halves. Spread with 1 can of the sauce. Top with the egg slices. In small bowl, beat together 1 cup sour cream and seasonings until blended. Stir in onion, 1/2 cup olives and chilies. Spread over egg slices. Top with remaining 12 tortilla halves, remaining enchilada sauce and the cheese. Bake in preheated 350°F. oven until bubbly, about 30 to 35 minutes. Garnish with additional sour cream and olive slices, if desired.

SUNLIT CHEESE SPREAD

8 appetizer servings

Whether your family prefers indoor fun or outdoor sports, make leisure time more enjoyable with this appetizing spread. Savor it on bread and crackers or on fresh vegetables depending on your family's nutrient needs.

- 1 package (3 oz.) cream cheese, softened
- 2 teaspoons prepared mustard
- 1 teaspoon lemon juice
- 1/8 teaspoon garlic powder
- 4 hard-cooked eggs*, chopped
- 1/2 cup (2 oz.) shredded Cheddar cheese
- 1/4 cup minced green onions with tops
- 2 to 3 tablespoons toasted sesame seeds

In small bowl, beat together cream cheese, mustard, lemon juice and garlic powder until blended. Stir in eggs, cheese and onions. Cover and chill at least 1 hour to blend flavors. Form into a log or ball. Roll in sesame seeds.

To toast, spread sesame seeds in ungreased baking pan. Bake in preheated 350°F. oven, shaking pan or stirring occasionally, until lightly browned, about 10 minutes.

EGGS DIAVOLÉTTO

4 servings

To Italians, "Diavolétto" means little devil. To you, Egg Diavolétto can mean an easy-to-make, eye-appealing dish that's fancy enough for company, but economical enough for an anyday family dinner.

- 8 hard-cooked eggs*
- 1/3 cup mayonnaise
- 3-1/2 teaspoons instant minced onion, divided
- 1 teaspoon parsley flakes
- 1/4 teaspoon celery salt
- 2 tablespoons butter
- 2 tablespoons flour
- 1/2 teaspoon salt
- 2-1/2 cups milk
- 1-1/2 cups (6 oz.) shredded Cheddar cheese
- 1 package (8 oz.) spinach noodles, cooked and drained
- Paprika, optional

Cut eggs in half crosswise. Remove yolks and set whites aside. Mash yolks with fork. Blend in mayonnaise, 1 teaspoon of the onion, the parsley flakes and celery salt. Refill whites using about 1 tablespoon yolk mixture for each egg half. Set aside.

In medium saucepan over medium heat, melt butter. Blend in flour, remaining 2-1/2 teaspoons onion and salt. Cook, stirring constantly, until mixture is smooth and bubbly. Stir in milk, all at once. Cook, stirring constantly, until mixture boils and is smooth and thickened. Remove from heat. Stir in cheese until melted.

Place noodles in 11x7x1-1/2-inch baking dish. Stir in 1-1/2 cups of the cheese sauce. Spread evenly in dish. Gently press reserved egg halves into noodle mixture. Pour remaining cheese sauce over eggs. Cover with aluminum foil. Bake in preheated 350°F. oven until bubbly, 15 to 20 minutes. Remove foil and lightly sprinkle with paprika, if desired.

HONEY OF AN EGG SALAD

3 servings

This isn't a classic egg salad. And, it isn't a Waldorf, either. It's a delightfully different combination of softness and crunch, sweetness and tang that makes a great entree for lunch. Pack it in an insulated thermal jar for toting.

- 3/4 cup Honey Lime Dressing (recipe follows)
- 2-1/4 cups chopped apple (about 3 small)
- 6 hard-cooked eggs*, chopped
- 1 can (8 oz.) pineapple chunks in juice, drained and halved
- 3/4 cup chopped celery
- 1/3 cup chopped pecans or walnuts
- Lettuce leaves, optional

Prepare Honey Lime Dressing and chill. In medium bowl, lightly toss together all ingredients except lettuce leaves. Chill to blend flavors. Serve on lettuce leaves, if desired.

HONEY LIME DRESSING

about 1-1/4 cups

- 1 egg
- 1/3 cup honey
- 3 tablespoons lime juice
- 1/8 teaspoon salt
- 1/8 teaspoon curry powder
- Dash ground mace or nutmeg
- 3/4 cup plain yogurt

In small saucepan, stir together all ingredients except yogurt. Cook over medium heat, stirring constantly, just until sauce comes to a simmer. Remove from heat. Cool slightly. Blend in yogurt. Cover and chill before tossing salad.

PEANUTTY EGG POCKETS

4 servings

Serve these mom-approved treats warm as a nutritious after-school snack. Or, chill them and pack in an insulated bag for a take-along lunch the kids will request again and again.

- 1/3 cup undrained canned crushed pineapple in juice (about 3 oz.)
- 1/4 cup peanut butter
- 1/8 teaspoon salt
- 4 hard-cooked eggs*, chopped
- 1/2 cup finely chopped celery
- 1 can (8 oz.) refrigerated crescent dinner rolls
- Parsley sprigs, optional

In small bowl, beat together pineapple, peanut butter and salt until blended. Stir in eggs and celery. Separate roll dough into 4 rectangles. Press to seal diagonal perforations. Place about 1/2 cup of the egg mixture on short-sided half of each rectangle. Fold remaining half of dough over egg mixture. Moisten edges of dough with water and press to seal. Bake on ungreased baking sheet in preheated 375°F. oven until golden brown, about 10 to 12 minutes. Cool on wire rack and serve warm or wrap in aluminum foil or plastic wrap and chill. Garnish with parsley, if desired.

*To hard-cook, put eggs in single layer in saucepan. Add enough tap water to come at least 1 inch above eggs. Cover and quickly bring just to boiling. Turn off heat. If necessary, remove pan from burner to prevent further boiling. Let eggs stand covered in the hot water 15 to 17 minutes for Large eggs. (Adjust time up or down by about 3 minutes for each size larger or smaller.) Immediately run cold water over eggs or put them in ice water until completely cooled. To remove shell, crackle it by tapping gently all over. Roll egg between hands to loosen shell, then peel, starting at large end. Hold egg under running cold water or dip in bowl of water to help ease off shell.

Egg's package design unequaled

From Staff Reports

There's never been a package design to equal an egg. Out of this mysterious object which looks like a rock come feathered creatures that fly and sing.

To those who buy them by the dozen in cardboard boxes, they represent omelettes, souffles and deviled eggs.

But to the ancients who believed the world itself was hatched from an enormous egg, they were associated with a miracle — the miracle of new life.

To kings and farmers, peasants and nobles, eggs have represented the joyous renewal of mother Earth, a cornucopia of bounty after the long desolate winter. During the reign of King Edward I of England in the latter part of the 13th century, it was customary to distribute hundreds of eggs, some colored, some covered with gold leaf, to members of the royal household.

Middle European farmers smeared a mixture of egg, bread and flour on their plows in early spring to guarantee a rich havest. Ukrainians buried eggs in the fields for the same purpose.

In the 17th century in France, a bride broke an egg on entering her new home to make sure she would be blessed with children. In China, parents of a new baby announced the happy event by sending an egg colored red to friends and relatives.

According to researchers at PAAS Easter Products, coloring and decorating eggs for Easter developed into an art form in eastern Europe about 400 years ago. Country people made their own colors. For yellow they boiled onion skins or hickory bark. For light red they used madder root, and for brown, walnut shells or coffee. To create patterns they wrapped leaves and ferns around the egg before boiling it. Americans can thank the Pennsylvania Dutch for bringing this custom to this country. Natives of Germany, these people began arriving in the United States in the 1720s and settling farms in Pennsylvania.

Researchers have discovered tints most often used to color Easter eggs are red, yellow and shades of green and purple. Green symbolized springtime because it is the color of new leaves, grass, leafing shrubs and trees. Yellow symbolized sunshine and radiance and purple symbolized royalty.

The association of purple with royalty came from the ancient world. Purple dyes were obtained from a shellfish in the Mediterranean. Because only a minute speck of color could be obtained from a single shellfish, making purple dye was a long and painstaking process. Only the rich could afford it and purple garments became the insignia of royalty.

Decorating eggs has been part of the springtime ritual for more than 5,000 years. In parts of Germany, Easter eggs substituted birth certificates — in the early 1800s when scratch carving was the fashionable way to decorate eggs. First the egg was colored solid, then a design, the recipient's name and birth date was scratched on the shell with a sharp tool. This type of egg was accepted by the courts as legal evidence.

In addition to springtime, green symbolizes hope and eternal life. In some parts of the world the Thursday before Easter is known as Green Thursday. On that day priests of the Middle Ages wore green robes and people ate green foods, such as spinach and herb soups.

The celebration of the arrival of spring is as old as mankind. The first blade of grass, the first leaf, the first crocus, all portents of new life which have inspired many colorful rites of spring.

Reseachers at PAAS claim the early Persians gave each other gifts of brightly colored eggs more that 5,000 years ago but they may not have been the first. The Egyptians, Assyrians, Phonecians, Greeks, Romans, Gauls, Goths and Norsemen did it too. Almost from the beginning of time there has hardly been a place on the map in which eggs did not play a stellar role in welcoming spring.

In parts of Germany, Easter eggs even substituted for birth certificates — in the early 1800s when scratch carving was the fashionable way to decorate eggs. First the egg was colored solid, then a design which included the recipient's name and birth date was scratched on the shell with a needle or sharp tool. An egg such as this stood up in court as legal evidence.

The Swiss and Germans brought their egg coloring techniques with them to the New World where scratch carving developed into a flourishing art in many parts of Pennsylvania. There the quaint tulips, hearts and birds associated with the Amish were lovingly drawn and colored on Easter eggs. Today these are highly prized as collector's pieces.

Indigenous to Americas are "calico" eggs, another Pennsylvania-Dutch method which involved wrapping the eggs in new flowered calico and boiling them. The patterns (early fabric dyes were not color fast or non-poisonous) would be transferred to the eggs.

Still another German/Swiss import is egg trees which almost rivaled Christmas trees in popularity in some parts of the country. Around 1900 a woman in Reading, Pa., reportedly decorated a tree in her backyard with 1,000 eggs.

Eating eggs as well as coloring them was also an Easter feature of Pennsylvania rural life. On April 16, 1874 the Carlisle (Pa.) Herald reported a Lancaster County man consumed 56 eggs in an egg-eating contest on Easter Monday.

In Russia for many centuries it was traditional to celebrate Easter and the beginning of spring with the exchange of three kisses and the gift of an egg, symbolizing renewed friendship and enduring love. In 1884 Czar Alexander III commissioned the jeweler Carl Faberge to create an egg as a gift for the Czarina.

Secretaries luncheon announced

Jack Swallow, Midland independent landman, is the guest speaker for Secretaries' Week luncheon Tuesday at Midland Civic Center. "1984: Year of the Secretary," is the theme for the week April 22-28 dedicated to professional secretaries.

Secretary of the Year Irmalee Ingrham will be recognized by the Permian Chapter of Professional Secretaries International at the luncheon and scholarship winners from Midland and Lee High Schools will be announced.

Swallow, a native of Midland, graduated from Midland High School and received a BBA from Texas Tech University. He is a member and past director of the Permian Basin Landmen Association and The American Association of Petroleum Landmen, serving on the National Industry Affairs and Public Information Committees. Swallow is an elder at First Presbyterian Church and has served as chairman of the church's board of directors. As vice-president of administration and personnel for the United Way, he is also past board member of Big Brothers/Big Sisters.

Fall holiday floral arrangements planned now

By ED HUTCHISON
Hearst Feature Service

Thanksgiving 1984 may be the last thing on your mind, but with a little planning and planting you can celebrate the fall and the holiday with armloads of dried flowers.

Dried flowers, or everlastings, are a real gardening joy. They pay back the little extra care they require with blossoms that command a steep price if purchased from a florist or craft shop.

Statice, strawflowers and Bells of Ireland are among the popular everlastings readily available by seed or as bedding plants. Plant some of each for a full range of unique shapes and vivid colors.

Statice bears masses of tiny crepelike flowers on stiff, winged stems. It may be used as a filler to visually lighten dried arrangements or by itself, with a dozen stems held upright in a tall vase for a cloud of tiny flowers. The range of colors is spectacular: sky blue, deep rose, white, dark blue and yellow.

Strawflowers are hard to beat for brilliant colors. The variety "Bright Bikini" is laden with shades of orange, red, tangerine, white and pink. There's also "Hot Bikini," a true bright red, and "Golden Bikini," a bright yellow. The "Bikini" series is compact; plants grow about 12 inches high and bear flowers two inches across.

Bells of Ireland, an old-fashioned plant, is also known as shellflower. Its long stem (12 inches or more) bears bell-shaped flowers about the size of a nickel. The flowers are pea-green when fresh, changing to a lighter green when dried.

These and other everlastings are best started indoors in time for setting out when danger of frost has passed. Many gardeners opt to buy the plants already started, which isn't a bad idea since some of the everlastings require cooling of the seeds before sowing. While that is not difficult, it's a task easiest left to the commercial growers.

Everlastings require at least a half-day of sun, and will do best in full-day sun. Ordinary garden soil will do fine, providing it is well-drained. Insects are seldom a problem. Pinching everlastings to make them grow bushy, especially strawflowers, is not necessary and may decrease flower production.

The flowers may be cut and kept in water as fresh flowers for the home. But since most gardeners grow everlastings to keep as dried flowers, it's good sense to bypass the home arrangements until the flowers have dried.

Supplement linked to infant deaths

Hearst Feature Service

SEATTLE — Six premature infants died earlier this year at Children's Orthopedic Hospital here after they were fed a vitamin E supplement that already has been linked to 12 deaths nationwide. However, Dr. Bill Robertson, head of Children's Orthopedic's quality assurance department and director of the poison center, has stressed that it is not yet clear that the deaths were connected to the supplement.

Robertson said 12 "very small, very sick" infants were fed intravenously at the Seattle hospital. Part of the formula contained the vitamin E supplement called E-Ferol.

"Six of the infants, not at all unexpectedly, died," he said. "We don't make any linkages with the drug, although we are looking to see if that's possible."

Children's Orthopedic began using E-Ferol on March 1, said Robertson, and stopped its use last week when the federal Food and Drug Administration recalled it. Last week, the hospital began checking its records after 12 deaths were reported across the country. E-Ferol had not been approved by the FDA for any type of use, according to the FDA's Seattle office.

The supplement, manufactured by Carter Glogau of Glendale, Ariz.; was intended to prevent eye disorders and lung ailments that are prevalent in premature infants. It has been distributed by O'Neal, Jones and Feldman Pharmaceuticals of St. Louis since December.

In Spokane, Wash., four infants treated with the supplement died at Sacred Heart Hospital between December and early February. The hospital stopped using E-Ferol in mid-January after doctors began to suspect a link between the drug and the deaths. A total of 25 infants were given the drug at Sacred Heart. The drug also was given to an undetermined number of infants at Deaconess Hospital in Spokane, but the hospital has not reported any related deaths. Nationally, eight other infant deaths have been reported by hospitals in Cincinnati and Knoxville, Tenn.

Robertson said Children's Orthopedic will continue to look into the drug's possible relationship to the infant deaths.

DEAR ABBY

Mom looks for way to explain abuse

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I am the mother of a boy 5 and a girl 2½. Can you recommend any books that will help me explain sexual abuse to my children? I want them to be aware that they have the right to say no to anybody who does something they feel uncomfortable with. But I want to tell them in a way that won't frighten them.

The older they get, the more I realize that I won't be able to watch over them 24 hours a day. I want them to be prepared to deal with that situation if, God forbid, they should ever have to. — HOUSTON MOTHER

DEAR MOTHER: Ask the librarian at your public library if there are such books. (There should be.) Also, your local bookstores will surely have some. In the meantime, tell your children that their bodies are private, and they have the right to say no to anyone who attempts to violate that privacy.

And be sure to tell them that if anybody — and I mean ANYBODY: relatives, close friends, neighbors or sitters — tries to entice them into secret "games" and makes them promise they won't tell, they should immediately tell you. Statistics show that most children are sexually abused by relatives, neighbors or friends of the family.

DEAR ABBY: I'm an intelligent, successful woman with a silly problem I'm embarrassed to ask my friends about.

In my last semester of college I married a wonderful man. My career was beginning to bloom, my wedding festivities were tri-state and I was much less sensitive to the feelings of other people than I am now.

In short, I sent written thanks to about half the friends and family who gave me wedding gifts, and I don't know quite what to do about the others. You see, it's been five years. I still have the list of names and addresses, but I don't know what to say — if anything.

My marriage is strong, my son is adorable, but my conscience is anything but clear. What should I do? I know I wouldn't excuse this kind of negligence in anyone else, and I don't know whether I should excuse it in what was a younger, flightier me. — GUILTY CONSCIENCE

DEAR GUILTY: Ignoring your problem will not make it disappear. Don't look for a "clever" way to say, "Better late than never." Admit your embarrassment, apologize for your tardiness and simply say, "Better late than never."

DEAR ABBY: I am going with a very fine young woman. She has been married before. (So have I.) I would like to ask her to marry me, but she has made it plain that she does not want a ring of any kind. She is very low-key and doesn't care for diamonds or anything flashy. Any suggestions? — A MAN OF MEANS

DEAR MAN: Give her a pearl necklace — with no strings attached.

DEAR ABBY: What is the official position of the Roman Catholic Church regarding human artificial insemination? Some say the church condemns it, and others say it depends upon which diocese you live in. — NEEDS TO KNOW

DEAR NEEDS: Artificial insemination was rejected as not morally acceptable by Pope Pius XII as early as Oct. 22, 1951, in an address to Italian midwives. He stated that parents should be completely dedicated to their children, and that this involvement carries over into the marriage act itself, so much so that artificial insemination cannot be approved because it is such a depersonalized procedure, and that which is sacred is reduced to the level of the biological.

Meatloaf: 'Where's the beef?'

By ERMA BOMBECK

I think I always knew in my heart that World War III would have something to do with food — or the lack of it. I've seen it in dieters . . . the unrest, the greed, the violence over a leftover chop in the refrigerator that turned brother against brother.

Already the rumblings of war have started. They were mild skirmishes at first between the fast food forces: fried chicken turned against roast beef, tacos fought the secret sauces, and the McMuffin clan brutally attacked the French croissant. Since the hamburger entered the arena, however, the war has escalated. "Where's the beef?" has not only haunted us every day on TV, it has been elevated to a political sacrament by Democrats and Republicans alike.

Meat loaf is the secret agent of kitchens everywhere. No one ever really knows what's in it. It could be anything. When I was a child I used to stand at my mother's elbow and watch her cook. In most things, she was quite open and sharing. The meat loaf was always concealed by a large bowl in which she threw things she kneaded with her hands. When I asked what was in it, she said, "Lord, child, you don't want to know."

All I know is it once scratched the diamond on her wedding ring.

Purses from the past made easy

By BETTY W. KINSER
Copley News Service

There are things from the past that we would like to enjoy again. Such as the sound of a streetcar in Kansas City at night ... oh, how I would like to hear that again. Or the sight of rich, pure chocolate in a glass bottle ... ummm. Ah, well, let's be practical. There are just some things you cannot repeat.

However, once in a while there is something we can re-create if not as well, at least close. Among my treasured pieces is a very old evening bag with drawstring that was sent to me many years ago by a reader in Illinois. It is made from an antique pink satin and is decorated with silver thread and pumpkin seeds. I kid you not — dried, polished pumpkin seeds.

Well, I'm not going to make one just like it (I'm not that fond of cutting into a pumpkin), but I have come up with one that is close by using some of the same elegant trims that are now available. Here's how I did it.

The basic purse is really up to you as far as size goes. It can be tiny or a bit larger, but do not make it humongous. Cut the purse pieces from a satin, velvet or other "evening-ish" fabric. Arrange either horizontally, vertically or diagonally lengths of glittery trim on the fabric. Then construct purse for a simple drawstring style.

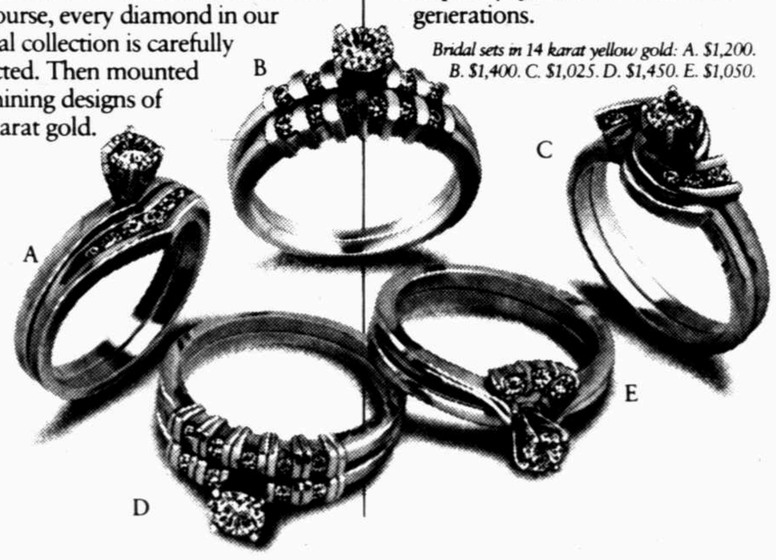

Line in a shiny; smooth fabric and use a sparkling cording for the drawstring.

Fuchsias being made more heat-resistant

By ELVIN McDONALD

Hardly any flower is as admired as the fuchsia, and if you live in any but the most benign climate, it can also be frustratingly elusive. Gardeners are by nature optimistic and persistent, however, and one result is that we have ever-increasing numbers of heat-tolerant, or at least resistant, cultivars of what the Victorians called lady's-eardrops.

At the center of this activity is Hidden Springs Nursery (Route 14 Box 159, Cookeville, Tenn. 38501; telephone 615-268-9354; mail-order price list 40 cents), where Hector Black has consistently set aside and encouraged the fuchsias that managed to go on flowering in hottest weather, or at least remained vital vegetatively so that flowering could resume with enthusiasm at the onset of cooler autumn weather. Hector's booklet, "Fuchsias in the South" ($2.50 postpaid), is worth reading.

Besides selecting the right fuchsia for your climate, any plant that has to suffer some basic stress — too little or too much light, too much or not enough water, temperatures too hot or too cold — has the best chance of overcoming the negative aspect if you boost everything positive you can. Prepare the best soil mix possible, ditto every other detail within your command: light, temperature, humidity, fresh air, water, fertilizer, protection from insects and disease, staking, grooming.

Fuchsia

Another development in fuchsias is the miniature — tiny flowers a half-inch long on 5-inch bushes or tree-form standards less than a foot tall. The name, incidentially, is from the German "Fuchs," and is spoken FOOKS-ee-uh by purists; the rest of us say FEW-shuh.

Fuchsia resources, pruning and training diagrams are in my notebook sheets. For yours send 50 cents coin and a stamped, self-addressed, long envelope with "Fuchsia" written on the back flap to Elvin McDonald Reader Service, Box R, Niagara Falls, N.Y. 14305.

Q. For years I have fooled around with ficus, indoors and out, the trees as well as the creepers. Isn't it strange I've never observed a bloom?

A. Think about the fig you eat, which is perhaps the most remarkable fruit of any ficus. All those seeds inside were once little flowers, almost entirely enclosed and thus hidden by the capsule. I have on my desk right now a bonsai Ficus benjamina that has been confined to a 3-inch pot for several years. The branches are thickly set with mini figs, inside of which are even tinier flowers. To observe you'll have to dissect one and have a look through your strongest magnifying glass.

Also get yourself a Dorstenia plant to grow indoors in a pot. Its blooms are like an inside-out fig. Both genera belong to the Mulberry Family.

Q. Who has blue ginger, Dichorisandra thyrsiflora?

A. It's in the catalog ($2.50 a copy) of Country Hills Greenhouse, Route 2, Corning, Ohio 43730. They describe it thus, "Erect stem clusters clasped by swirls of pale red-backed leaves, tipped by large heads of bright blue flower clusters."

The reader who asked lives in Clearwater, Fla., and likely plans growing the blue ginger (it is actually a member of the Spiderwort Family, along with wandering Jew) outdoors. In colder regions it can be grown in containers, kept outside in half-shade in warm weather, indoors when frost threatens.

Country Hills also has a long listing of Kaempferia, true gingers, that offer several spectacular flowering and foliage house plants for both window and light gardens. (Note to Mrs. McCuller in Louisiana: They have the heliconias you want as well.)

Q.T.: Rock gardening and the cultivation of alpines, often in specially constructed shelters in pots or other troughs, is ever on the grow. Now there's a publication to feed this interest: "Alpinia Research" ($10 a year), at 18544 26th Ave. N.E., Seattle, Wash. 98155, publishes articles and a seed list.

Technology to help farmers

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — New technology advances in agriculture will help American farmers keep their leadership position in the world market.

According to Norman M. Goldfarb, president of Calgene Inc., a plant biotechnology firm, the increasingly competitive agriculture market will force American farmers to adapt to a new high-tech farming environment.

Palm Springs: Plush desert oasis

Copley News Service

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. — A Russian woman with asthma found relief from coastal fog in this arid community more than 40 years ago. She liked luxury and friends around her, so she built a small hotel with a dozen spacious suites around a patio with a pool.

Friends came, liked it, and spread the word about its comfort and privacy. Great names in the Hollywood scene slipped incognito to the hotel she called Mira Loma, and it became a hideaway for such stars as Gloria Swanson.

Later, Marilyn Monroe spent many a tryst time in its comfortable surroundings. Both ladies left large photographs of themselves as mementos.

Recently, an Englishman seeking refuge from the damp London clime came to the same conclusion as the Russian woman.

Stewart Rennie, a jeweler with no previous hotel experience, bought the Mira Loma and, with his assistant, Alice Bledsoe, has returned it to its original 1930s atmosphere.

The Monroe suite has a brightly lit dressing room with many mirrors, plus a large photograph of her in the sitting room. The suite has a kitchen, but no word if Marilyn ever cooked.

Rennie's clientele in the winter is largely Canadian. Families come for a month at a time. The hotel is booked by Canadians for December, January and February, and the Canadian flag flies when they are in town.

"They make this headquarters, then drive to Disneyland, to the San Diego Zoo, Sea World and the Wild Animal Park," Rennie said. If guests stay more than a week, a complimentary bottle of wine is sent to the room.

A sheltered library is beside the pool, near a stack of pool towels. In Rennie's office are menus of 30 restaurants, each of which he has tried and can recommend. At his suggestion, we tried a Japanese one, Kiyosaka, on North Palm Canyon Drive. It has a sushi bar and excellent service at tables. Its "Boat" contains a sample of 20 kinds of Japanese cuisine, all delectable.

Rennie's Mira Loma Hotel at 1420 North Indian Drive is one of eight or 10 small hotels with the fun of a 1930s kind of glamorous air about them. Most of them are one-story hotels with interesting histories, and all were among the first hotels built in the desert, about the time Palm Springs was emerging as a posh resort.

Ingleside Inn is classified as one of Palm Spring's best. It, too, has catered to the rich and famous who sought privacy under the palms. It was a favorite hideaway for actress Greta Garbo, she of the classic profile and quiet manner.

Still another approach is offered in LaMancha Resort, which has only suites and bungalows. No simple bedroom-with-bath. It is guarded by an iron gate that opens only when the guest phones the office.

For the price, it is a good buy, for each suite includes an equipped kitchen, comfortable living room and a choice of one or two bedrooms and baths. There's a pool, of course.

The Palm Springs Convention and Visitors Bureau, The Municipal Airport, Palm Springs, Calif. 92262, has a list of about 20 such older charmers. Rates are reasonable.

Palm Springs has one quick retreat from the desert. Take the tram to the top of San Jacinto Mountain. In 15 minutes or less, you are in the cool of deep pines, maybe a few traces of snow and with a view that sometimes goes past the Salton Sea to Mexico.

From Palm Springs, it's an easy drive north on a winding, climbing road to Joshua Tree National Monument, an area of high desert sprinkled with rocky outcroppings fit for mountain-climbing buffs. The area covers about 870 square miles of rugged country ranging from about 1,000 to 5,800 feet elevation.

Here grow those strange, gnarled spectacular members of the yucca family, the Joshua tree. They range as high as 40 feet and bloom with greenish-white waxy clusters in March and April. Even with the desert area splashed with fresh flowers that thrive in the high country, you never see a little Joshua tree. Maybe as small as 10 feet high, but never any really tiny seedlings. Very strange.

CNS Photo

The desert resort community of Palm Springs gained fame as a vacation spot for the rich and famous. Now everyone knows it as an ideal location for visitors year round.

Zoo visit recaptures childhood memories

By MICHAEL CARLTON
The Los Angeles Times — Washington Post News Service

I remember it as though it were yesterday although, in fact, it was nearly 35 years ago. My parents took me to the zoo — a shabby little affair in Pittsburgh where the animals were kept in mean little cages and you were encouraged to feed the black bears that had learned to stand on their back feet and beg. But at age 4 you don't notice things like dirty cages and unkempt walkways. You only have eyes for the animals.

Today I'm as much a sucker for zoos as ever. A lot of traveling businessmen — finding themselves with an open day on their agenda — go to a bar or a movie. I rush to the nearest zoo.

I've had breakfast with an orangutan at the Singapore Zoo, lunched with the koalas in San Diego, and had a late afternoon snack with the pandas in Hong Kong. I've found little gems of zoos in such unlikely towns as Brownsville, Texas, (Gladys Porter Zoo) and Tucson, Ariz., (Sonora Desert Museum).

Zoos have come a long way since my visit to Pittsburgh. Cages have given way to broad holding areas where the animals live in as natural a setting as possible, and are separated from visitors by moats, not bars. Zoos are healthier, cleaner and, in many cases, the last chance for endangered species that won't survive in their homelands.

I would be hard pressed to name a favorite zoo, or even a favorite 10. I like all zoos — and all animals, too. But I would have to rate my latest zoo experience, a day spent at Sydney's Taronga Zoo, as one of my favorites.

The first stop for any North American should be the Australia section. Here you'll see the unique platypus, which has a bill like a duck, swims like a fish, eats worms like a bird, lays eggs and then raises its young on mother's milk. The platypus sleeps most of the day but between 11 a.m. and noon and 2 and 3 p.m. you have a good chance to see this constructed-by-committee animal.

And everywhere you'll see other Australian animals — kangaroos (big reds, greys, even a tree kangaroo) and their smaller cousins, wallabies; loud-mouthed kookaburras; shy echhidnas (an anteater with spines); agressive Tasmanian devils. You'll also see the usual assortment of animals from other countries — lions and tigers and black panthers; giraffes whose home offers a magnificent view of Sydney; rhinos and elephants; crocodiles and alligators.

But the highlight of a trip to the Taronza Zoo is a visit to the koala house. Anyone who has ever loved a teddy bear will love a koala. The unlikely looking animals have tufted ears, huge eyes, a nose the size of an apple, a fat, squat body, and no tail. This combination forms an animal that is universally adored.

As I walked past the shell of the new aquarium on my way back to the ferry and the ride back to Sydney, I thought of my first visit to that zoo in Pittsburgh and smiled.

European study-tour provided

A travel-study tour of Western Europe will be offered this summer, according to Mrs. Marybeth Hughes, Spanish and government teacher at Lee High School.

Mrs. Hughes said the three-week tour will include visits to Rome, Florence, Venice, Heidelberg, the Swiss Alps, Paris and London. A highlight of the tour will be a side trip to Pompeii.

Dates for the tour are June 13-July 4. The travel-study tour can be applied to undergraduate college credit by high school juniors and seniors, Mrs. Hughes said.

Regular orientation meetings for the students are scheduled prior to departure to familiarize students with historical and cultural backgrounds of people and places to be visited.

The tour is limited to 36 students, with a teacher/advisor to student ratio of one to six. Program price for all transportation, meals, tours, gratuities and field trips is $2,510. For more information and tour applications call 685-1756.

Tour rates decrease

By The Los Angeles Times — Washington Post News Service

May ushers in the "Season of Sweet Savings" in the Caribbean. The end of the winter "high" season traditionally signals a drop in rates for accommodations in the West Indies.

This year, beginning May 1 and continuing through mid-December, reductions will average 30 to 50 percent — and sometimes even more — below winter rates, according to the Caribbean Tourism Association Inc. Some examples:

— Le Galion in French St. Martin offers a standard single at $50, a 50 percent reduction.

— La Creole Beach, Guadeloupe, charges $61 for a double with breakfast, 30 percent off.

— Royal St. Kitts on St. Kitts has cut the price of its superior double 59 percent, from $135 to $56.

— Bonaire Beach, Bonaire, quotes a standard single at $38, 42 percent less than the winter rate.

— Peter Island Resort in the British Virgins reduces its single rate 46 percent, from $285 to $155, with breakfast and dinner.

Turkey reverses on topless issue

From wire reports

ANKARA, Turkey — Women tourists planning to go topless on Turkey's beaches this summer will not have to worry about police intervention, newspapers have reported here, quoting Minister for Tourism Mukerrem Tascioglu.

Fiji Islands: Between two cultures

By JOHN SINOR
Copley News Service

A papaya slice of moon hung in the evening sky over the Fiji Islands. The night frogs were croaking and drums were getting louder.

And near the edge of the sea in Nadi on the island of Viti Levu, men with glazed eyes began to walk on fire.

It's a ritual performed probably nightly somewhere in the 300 islands of Fiji. Sometimes before tourists, sometimes just privately. The tall Fijians believe fire walking to be a cleansing ceremony which rids them of evil spirits.

"Every time they step on a hot rock, they crush the back of another bad spirit," said Taito (Ty for short) Rarasea, our concierge at the Regent of Fiji.

TY SAID HE TRIED fire waking one time. He was laid up for months with serious burns.

"I quit the concentration," he said. "I started thinking about the people watching. Then I started to feel the heat."

Fire walking takes a little more preparation than just learning how to concentrate.

"For one thing," said Ty, "you have to give up sex and coconuts for two weeks before you walk the hot stones."

There is an old story of a Fiji warrior who clubbed his wife to death because she wanted him to walk the fire twice a month.

PRIMITIVE WAYS overlap modern ways in these lush islands that are set like gems in the South Seas. Old creeds and rituals hang on, even among the Fijians who work at the luxury hotels or rent you a car at the Nadi International Airport.

It's still one of the few uncrowded paradises left in the world. I rented a car and took it out into the country to practice driving on the left-hand side of the road. A little dirt road took me through miles of sugarcane fields, past several out-of-the-way elementary schools with playgrounds full of children in bright uniforms.

CNS Photo

Drums and swaying bodies help these Fijian dancers tell a traditional island story.

At the end of the road I found the most beautiful beach I have ever seen. A gentle curve of about a mile of white sand, with soft pincurls of surf unfolding on it.

The water was as clear as Queen Elizabeth's crystal.

And there wasn't another soul on it.

Natandola Beach. It means "The Opening." If you get over there, ask for instructions in any store in Nadi.

On another day a couple of female travel writers and I drove inland to a little settlement called Sigatoka. I didn't even know it was called that until I got a letter from the people we visited there.

IT WAS AN INDIAN family (there's a large Indian population in the islands) named Kamlesh and they lived in a large bure house with a thick thatched roof and several smaller bures on a pretty little farm with a stream running through it.

We stopped to take some pictures of the place and the family invited us in. The women served tea and the father showed us some old Fiji coins and a photo album of his relatives' visit to the United States.

He said he was born in that house 60 years before and had never been away from the island. I got the impression he didn't care. Fiji was enough for him.

Indians and Fijians just about split the population statistics down the middle, with a few Britains left in Suva from the old colonial days.

The Indians are ancestors of indentured laborers brought to Fiji by England between 1879 and 1916. Two different populations in the islands and two different lifestyles.

Fijians walk through life gently (like over the fire rocks). They share with each other. They concern themselves only with what they need for today. Tomorrow is nothing to think about until it gets here. You couldn't sell the richest chief a T-bill or an individual retirement account.

THE INDIANS, on the other hand, are the merchants of the island. They own almost none of the land, but they rent or lease it from the tribes and produce crops. They also run the stores in the towns.

There is no intermarriage and little intermingling between Fijians and Indians. It is accepted that their philosophies are moons apart.

There are few arguments between them.

Personally, you couldn't force me into an argument with a Fijian. They are built like mountains. And while they are as friendly as puppies, they still carry the blood of their grandfathers who were cannibals and would have eaten you for lunch.

Each new day of the year begins in Fiji. The international date line goes through the islands.

On the island of Taveuni there is a sign. On one side it says, "Today" and on the other it says, "Tomorrow." It's the only place I know where you can travel through time merely by taking a step.

When you get off the plane or ship in Fiji, say "Bula!" to the first Fijian you see.

It works the same as "Aloha" does in Hawaii.

Western United States offer many vacation ideas

By JERRY HULSE
The Los Angeles Times — Washington Post News Service

Today we are featuring the American scene, vacation ideas across the nation. California to the East Coast. Camping, dude ranch holidays, horse trekking, trips by covered wagon.

In Wyoming, riders will cover 100 miles of the original Oregon trail, June 24-30. This is for the true dyed-in-the-wool outdoors types. Ride by day, camp by night. Trips begin at Independence Rock and end at South Pass City. Riders will be picked up at the nearest airport (Riverton, Wyo.). Take your own horse or rent one. Cost of the ride is $300. (Figure on an extra $150 if you rent a horse.) Riders supply their own bedroll, sleeping bag. Contact Vista Travel, 707 1st Ave., Monte Vista, Colo. 81144.

In Wyoming the veteran outfitter, L.D. Frome, will be leading wagon trains with vacationers into wilderness country this summer. Anyone can take part, says Frome. Kids, seniors. You have a choice: Ride a horse or hop aboard the wagon train. Vacationers will sleep under the stars or in a foam-padded bunk aboard the wagons.

Meanwhile, Frome is scheduling horse trekking tours in Wyoming. He'll meet your flight at Jackson, deliver you to the base camp at Turpin Meadows. Saddlebags will be provided for your lunch, camera, etc. Nights will be spent at dude ranches, lodges. Rooms with private baths. Luggage will be moved from ranch to ranch by Frome's staff. Details from L.D. Frome, in care of Wagons West, Afton, Wyo. 83110.

If you're willing to share your home with others, they'll welcome you when you're away on vacation. It's a club called INNter LODGING. More than 300 members in 45 states and six provinces of Canada. This isn't a bed-and-breakfast arrangment. Lodging only. The host family provides clean bedding for $4 or $5 a night. Members agree to make their homes available to others for at least three months a year. One hitch: Costs $45 to join. For details, write to: INNter LODGING Co-op, P.O. Box 7044, Tacoma, Wash. 98407.

A note from Wright M. Catlow of the Colorado Dude and Guest Ranch Association. Says he has free folders describing the various ranches. Everything from big spreads with modern plumbing to rustic ranches. Write to Catlow, P.O. Box 300, Tabernash, Colo. 80478.

Dana and John Burden have been leading rides for more than 25 years in Arizona. This spring-summer they'll be offering trips to the Grand Canyon, Canyon de Chelly, Prescott National Forest, Sycamore Wilderness Canyon, Monument Valley. Other rides in Colorado. Rates: $50 to $80 a day. Riders provide their own sleeping gear. Rental horses available. For a brochure write to Adventure Trails Inc., P.O. Box 1494, Wickenburg, Ariz. 85358.

California has produced a listing of guest ranches. Sites include the mountains, coastal valleys, deserts of California. Big ranches, small ranches. Everything from 40 to 31,000 acres. Rustic cabins, deluxe suites. Depending on the ranch, activities include riding, hiking, canoeing, rafting, tennis, golf, square dancing, etc. Rates from $36 to about $200 a day. Both American, European plans available. Some of these are guest ranches exclusively, others are working ranches. For a list send a self-addressed stamped No. 10 envelope to the California Office of Tourism, Department GR1, 1030 13th St., Suite 200, Sacramento 95814.

Vacationers may make reservations for Yosemite Valley campgrounds up to eight weeks in advance starting May 14. Contact your local Ticketron office or write for reservation information to the National Park Service, 22900 Ventura Blvd., Woodland Hills, 91364 or telephone (213) 888-3770. To hold a belt in place belt carriers are sewn to tailored pants. For inconspicuous carriers, use buttonhole twist in a color that matches the belt. It can be sewn into the side seams of the dress at the waistline. Fabric carriers are usually part of the design of the garment. Cut the fabric loops long enough for the belt to go through plus ½ inch. Cut the fabric along the selvage. It should be three times the width of the finished loop. Fold the loop lengthwise twice, with the selvage edge on top. Slip stitch the selvage edge to the loop, then topstitch along the edges of the loop. Sew the ends of the loop together by hand, and slipstitch the loops to the garment where marked.

Our friendly and helpful staff of experienced sewers look forward to meeting and working with you. You will be amazed at our extensive inventory of fabrics, patterns and notions at LEGGETT'S FABRICS. You'll find us at 1541 Parkway, Odessa, 362-8255 and No. 9 Plaza Shopping Center, Garfield at Wadley in Midland, 683-3101. Make us your first stop and chances are you will never need to go elsewhere. # After its worse year well servicing is back

Monthly rig utilization climbing

JULIE FAUBEL
Business-Oil Writer

Coming off its "worst year in history," the well servicing industry is positive about its future.

According to the Association of Oilwell Servicing Contractors, a national organization for well servicing contractors in Dallas, the national rig utilization rate dropped to 47 percent in '83 compared to 63 percent in '82 and 86 percent in '81. Locally contractors did not fare much better.

During 1983, said Steve Muncy, AOSC public affairs director, the utilization rate for the West Texas Region, which includes southeastern New Mexico, averaged about 46 percent compared to 67 percent in the previous year and 91 percent in 1981.

Simply put, "Companies expanded to meet the demand and then the demand was not there any more," he said.

It appears, now, the decline has bottomed out and the industry has begun a slow, steady, controled climb back up. Muncy said the association projects a average increase of between 2-3 percent per month, adding that while the trend is moving up, it won't be up every month.

"It's going to take at least two and maybe even three years for West Texas and the nation to get back to a utilization rate of 85-95 percent, if we ever do."

Muncy said most industry observers monitor the activity in this area, because West Texas usually sets the pace for the rest of the country.

At the end of the first quarter rig utilization, nationally, average 53 percent and 54 percent in West Texas. That's good news to Jim Cardinal, president of Cardinal Oilwell Servicing Co. Inc. in Andrews. "1983 was the roughest year in my life," he said.

Cardinal, who is president of the AOSC's Permian Basin chapter, has been working in the industry for 25 years. In August 1980, he opened his own business with one pulling unit and a crew of four. Today, he has seven pulling units and a trucking fleet of eight. "Our biggest problem now is pricing. We've had to cut our prices to meet the competition. That makes it that much tougher to just break even."

As a result, he said, many companies have frozen or even even cut wages which, he predicted, will affect the quality of work performed in the long run.

Fred George, CEO for Charles J. George Well Servicing, Odessa, agrees that the pressure from oil producers to lower prices has hurt the industy's profitability. "The industry needs some substantial relief from this pressure," he emphasized. "I hope 1984 sees a turnaround in this business philosophy."

The 33-year-old father-son company has been through booms and busts before. But George, who is a past national president for AOSC, agrees '83 was a most difficult year.

"Many contractors had to cut 30 percent or more off their published rate schedules in order to maintain rig activity, some profit and working capital."

Another problem facing well servicing contractors is hiring and retaining qualified personnel. According to Beach Snyder, president DA&S Oilwell Servicing Inc., Hobbs, the slow down has prompted many experienced hands to leave the area. "During the boom we lost a lot of people, because the well servicing industry was more or less a training ground for a lot of other companies. Now, with the slow down, it been hard to find qualified people," he added.

Although times are difficult, Snyderdid see a bright side. He said, DA&S rig utilization rate has average 85-90 percent in the past seven months. In addition to it Hobbs operation, the 32-year-old company, with 51 pulling units, has operations in Eunice and Andrews.

While everyone agreed the past year wasn't good, George beleives many companies benefited from the difficult times.

"We've all learned that each company needed to be run by its internal management not by outside forces. You don't generate business by cutting rates."

In the future, he said, companies must set a course of action and not let other factors influence their decisions. He discourages companies from rapidly expanding when a flurry of activity occurs.

With current economic conditions in the oilfield, Cardinal said there is no room for errors. "Our rigs can't be down; they've just got to be working — if one is down, we've got to go find work for it. That's why you've got to stay on top of things continuously. We have to get the job done as quickly and as efficiently as possible," he emphasized.

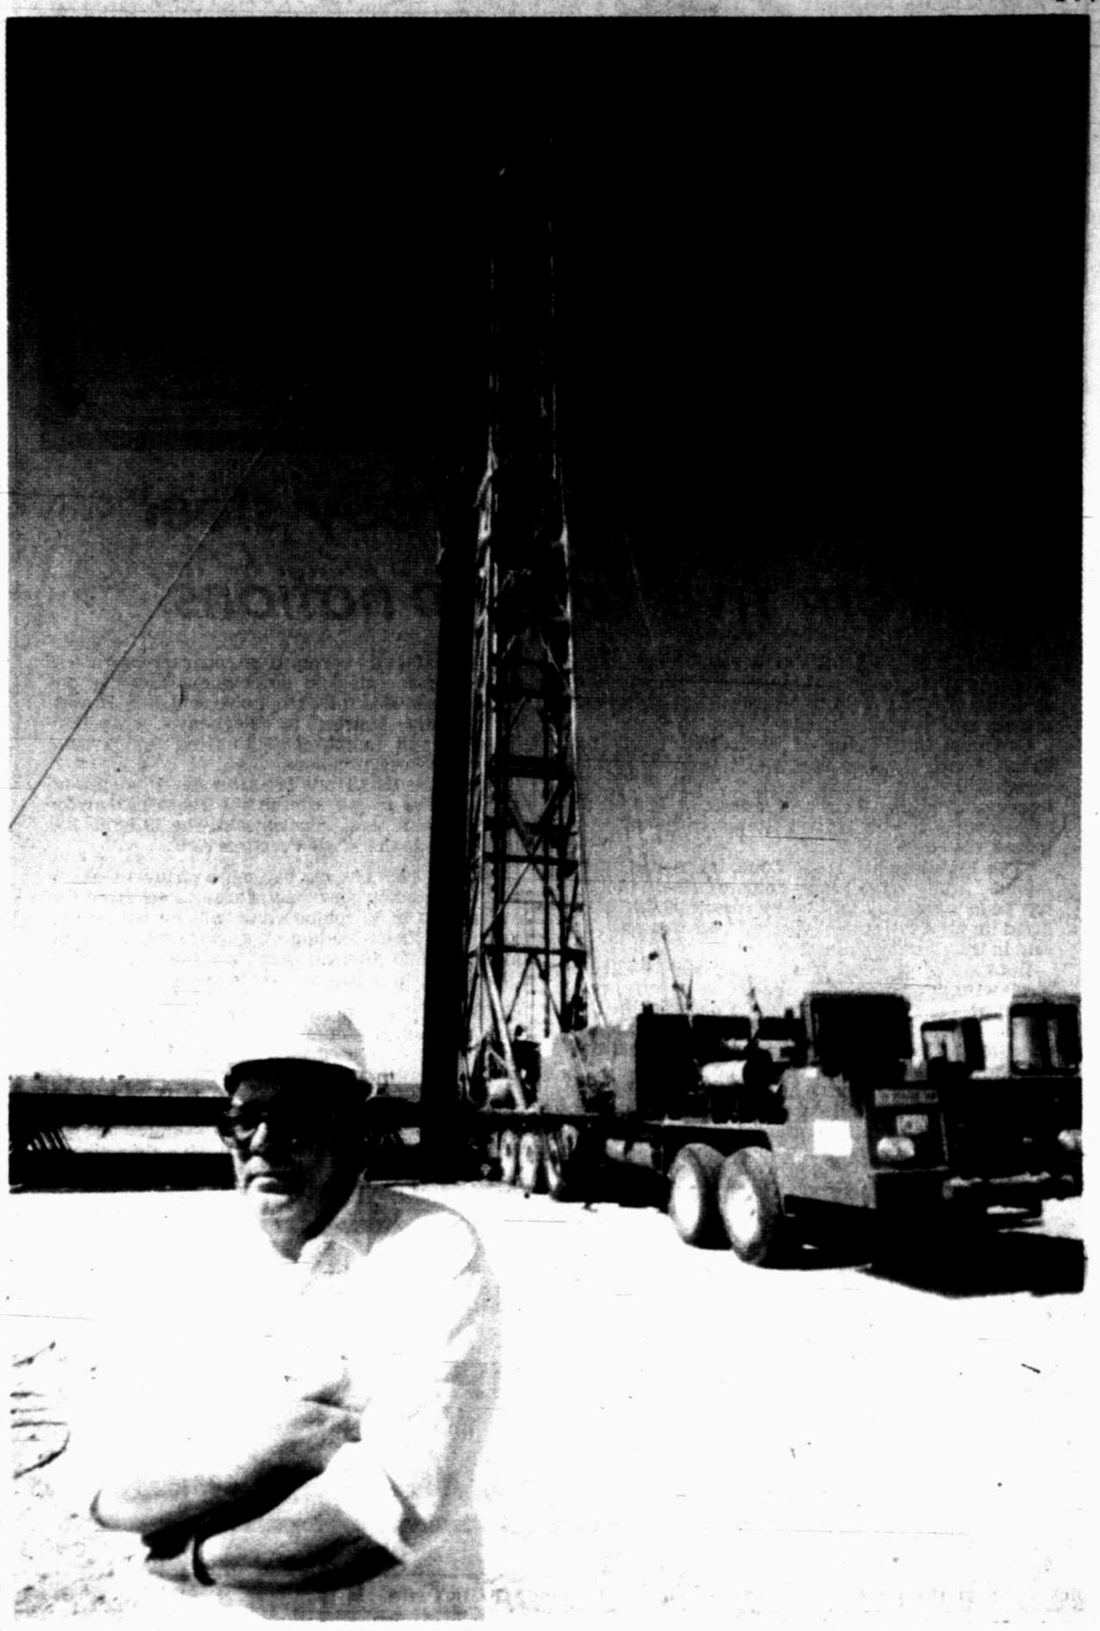

According to Cardinal, a new well servicing rig costs about $470,000. He charges, depending on the job, from $103-118 per hour. To operate the rig each month requires about $28,000, with more than half going for wages, insurance and payroll taxes.

Association executive Mucny is optimistic about the future. By year end he expects the well servicing rig count to average between 65-70 percent.

"I think we're going to see a very competitive climate as things start to get back to normal. I believe business will loosen up a bit and contractors will feel less pressure in 1984. Prices can't be much lower."

While Cardinal is also optimistic, he does not see pressure easing much. "Those who are going to make it in this business will need to have one-half to three-fourths of their equipment paid off — you won't be able to be fully financed any more.

"Contractors will have to run a tighter business if they plan on being competitive. There's an oversupply of equipment right now and as long as that's the case there will be pricing problems and an excess of competition. Those who will survive will be the ones who run a better business, are competitive, employ top hands, maintain equipment and do quality work," Cardinal said.

Well service contractor says 1983 was worse year, but things are looking up.

Rancher, oilman battles for justice, the Manges way

By PAUL RECER
Associated Press Writer

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — A hundred years ago, men like Clinton Manges wore guns and defended their interests with lead. That was how 19th century empires often were protected on the South Texas frontier.

Manges is an empire builder of the 20th century and his range wars are fought at the courthouse with a posse of sharp-shooting lawyers toting high-velocity briefs. The 60-year-old rancher-oilman revels in the combat and probably could prosper in either century.

"Hell yes, I like the fight," says Manges. "I haven't seen anything worthwhile yet that you didn't have to fight for."

Clinton Manges has been slugging it out for his piece of Texas for most of his life. He prepared for a bare-fisted lifestyle with a basic training of boyhood poverty and, later, by enduring what he considers to be injustice from an unbending establishment.

Now he is an embattled multi-millionaire, owning banks, refineries, oil-rich land and a pro football team. He is able to afford the expensive armament of modern legal wars and fearless enough to take on giants like Exxon or Mobil. He views himself as a militant "from the wrong side of the road" who outplays better-connected contestants in a game of making and protecting wealth.

And, above all, Manges is a man with the awesome, untiring conviction that he is right and with a drop-of-the-hat willingness to go to court to prove it.

"Manges is the most litigious man I have ever known," says Pat Maloney Sr., a San Antonio lawyer who represented Manges for years and is now suing him. "He always thinks he's right and he is not the soul of compromise."

Manges admits he can be irascible and stubborn, but believes that is the role cast for him by life.

When great family fortunes are made, he says, "the first generation is always a hard SOB. He has to be. It's the next generation that has the nice guys."

Little is known publicly about Manges, the man. He avoids the press and is shielded behind platoons of lawyers, secretaries and employees who claim to know his whereabouts rarely. When he does talk to reporters, he dodges personal questions. Most of what is known about the reclusive Manges comes, ironically, from lawyers or from court hearings.

Some believe Manges earned the right to be a hard case.

He spent his early boyhood in Cement, Okla., the son of a cotton farmer who was chased out of the Sooner State, as were thousands of others, by Dust Bowl seasons in the '20s and '30s. The Manges moved to the semi-tropical cotton fields of South Texas.

Along the way, Manges dropped out of school to serve a tour in the Coast Guard.

Maloney said Manges later worked for Lloyd Bentsen Sr., the father of the U.S. senator from Texas. Bentsen was then building his family fortune. Manges watched and learned and soon was trading for himself.

According to Maloney, Manges started dealing in land, oil and cattle — the classic formula for Texas wealth — and proved to be very good at it.

"He has a degree of raw courage," Maloney said of his former client. "He's quick. He's tough. He's the best trader I've ever seen."

Another San Antonio attorney, James Ingram, says Manges has a artful skill and an unflinching nerve in making money.

"He has a real ability to smell out deals," says Ingram, who represents a Seattle bank that is suing Manges. "He's very tough and very shrewd. I doubt that you could ever apply enough heat to force him to his knees. He'll fight you 'til his last breath."

To build his wealth, Manges believes he overcame a major disadvantage — he is an "outsider." He was not born and raised within the charmed circle of power and money in South Texas, yet has become a multi-millionaire.

Manges claims that much of his litigation springs from his insistance on fair play from an establishment that he says resists newcomers.

"You put a new bull in the pasture and the others don't want him in there," explains Manges. "They're gonna fight. That's just the way it is."

Manges moved into prominence in South Texas in 1971 when he and a group of smaller investors bought controlling stock in Groos National Bank, an old-line, establishment bank in San Antonio.

In the tradition-bound Alamo City, the news struck like a Texas twister, raising screams of alarm.

Officers of the bank investigated Manges and found that in 1965 he pleaded guilty to making a false statement on a Small Business Administration loan application. It was a technical charge, based on an error by an accountant, but Manges paid a $2,500 fine in federal court.

U.S. Comptroller of the Currency W.B. Camp, informed of the record, probibited Manges from participating in the business affairs of the Groos National Bank, even though he owned the controlling stock.

Weekly rig count makes healthy jump

Both the national and Permian Basin rig counts took a substantial jump this week, as the national rig count jumped ahead 45 and the Basin gained 14.

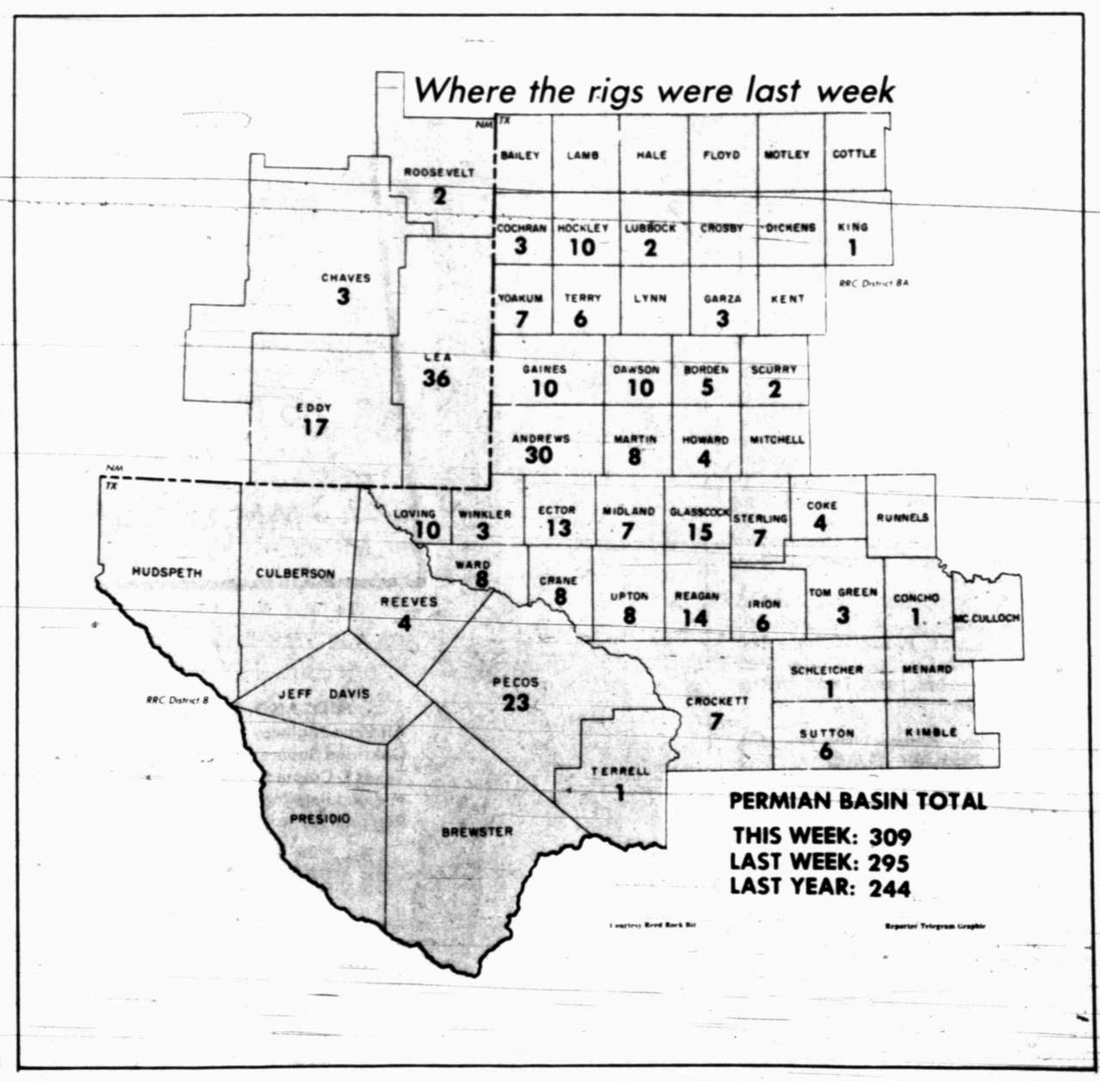

The Permian Basin count jumped from 295 to 309, accounting for one-third of the national gain, which went from 2062 to 2107. The upward change has some industry observers thinking that the count may be heading for 2600 or 2800, the number that those in the drilling industry were hoping to achieve this year.

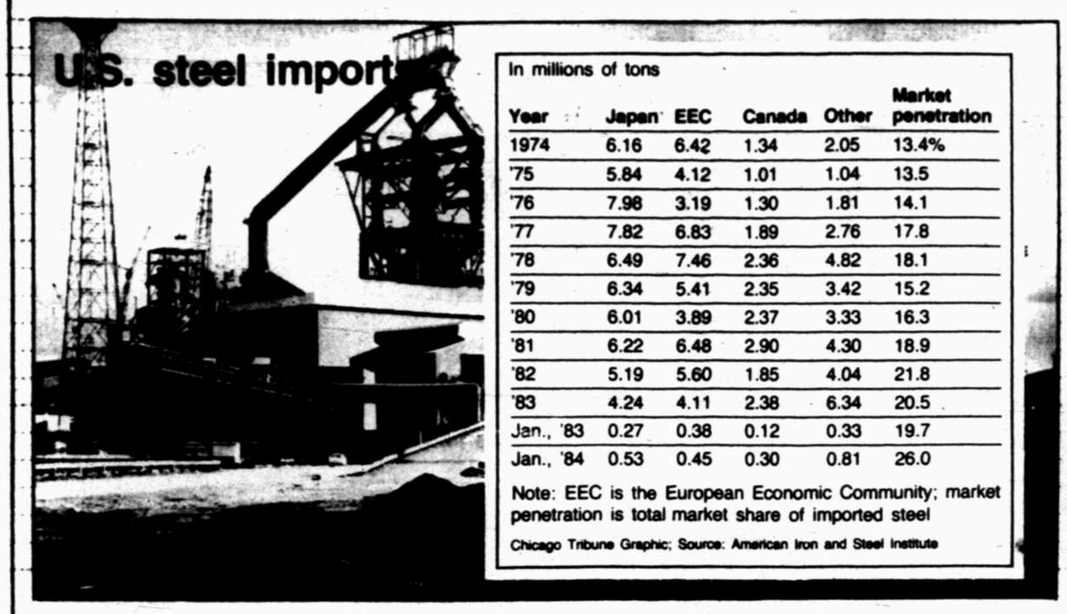

Louisiana was a loser this week, while Oklahoma and Texas showed substantial increases. Ohio and Kansas were also winners, gaining 10 rigs each to their count.

Change among the counties in the Permian Basin was relatively flat, with no county showing large increases or decreases. Andrews and Lea counties showed rigs in the thirties. Pecos again was in the twenties bracket, with Loving, Reagan, Glasscock, Gaines, Dawson and Hockley showing 10 or more.

Compared to last year's count, the Permian Basin is showing 55 more rigs than it was showing in the same period in 1983, while the national count is up an even 200 rigs.

Contractors can't buy steel from five foreign nations

HARRISBURG, Pa. (AP) — A state court ruling prohibits contractors working on government construction projects from using certain steel and aluminum products made in five foreign nations.

Commonwealth Court on Wednesday ruled that Brazil, South Korea, Spain, Mexico and Argentina violated the state's 1968 Trading Practices Act by heavily subsidizing their steel industries. The resulting exports to the United States were unfairly priced, the court said.

"The International Trade Commission has determined .... the United States domestic steel industry has been materially injured by reason of the subsidized imports," President Judge James Crumlish Jr. said in the court's opinion.

Because of the violation, Crumlish said, it is "unlawful for any public agency to specify, purchase or permit to be furnished or used, in any public works, steel, iron and aluminum products" specified by the court as discriminating against similar American-made products.

Crumlish named about a dozen such products that the five countries had subsidized by giving their steel mills tax incentives, grants, low-interest loans and accelerated depreciation allowances.

A 1978 state law requires contractors to use American-made steel in government projects, but that law provides for exceptions, said Ron Brown, administrative assistant to Allegheny County Controller Frank Lucchino, who filed the lawsuit against the foreign nations.

"Under the 1968 Trade Practices Act, there are no opportunities to get around the requirement for using domestic steel," Brown said. The 1978 law did not supersede the Trade Practices Act.

Also, the 1968 law has far more stringent penalties. A contractor convicted of using steel from the five nations in Lucchino's suit will be barred for three years from bidding on government projects. Under the 1978 "Buy America" law, the only penalty is loss of payment for the steel in question.

Lucchino filed the suit against the five countries because "they are ones that we have found have dramatically increased their exports to the United States over the past 12 months," Brown said.

Allegheny County is the hub of Pennsylvania's steel industry, which has been ravaged by the recession and competition from foreign steel mills.

American steel mill shipments show recovery

WASHINGTON — Shipments of steel mill products by American mills showed a small recovery during February from the January dip. However, the February figure was still close to the depression level of the last 1983 quarter.

Shipments in February were 6,150,000 tons, compared with 5,980,000 tons in January and 4,588,000 tons (close to the recession low point) in February 1983, the American Iron and Steel Institute reported.

Imports continued to rise and to cut sharply into the domestic mills' market, taking a near-record 26.2 percent in February.

Among the major-tonnage consumer categories, the automotive industry contineud to show the largest gain, accounting for all of the increase in February shipments over January.

Steel distributors and service centers took 24.9 prcent of the steel shipped in the first two months of this year, and the automotive industry, the largest direct customer group took 16.4 percent. The distributor category was 42 pwecent ahead of the first two months of 1983, while the automotive category was up 38.9 percent.

Most other comsuming categories showed gains for the two-month camparison, because of the extremely low figures in the beginning of 1983.

State awarded weatherization grant

DALLAS — The State of Texas has been awarded a grant of $2,576,061 to continue implementation of the Weatherization Assistance Program for low-income persons in Texas, it was announced by Curtis E. Carlson Jr., director, Dallas Support Office of the U.S. Department of Energy (DOE).

The grant provides funds to weatherize homes of low-income residents in Texas under the fiscal year 1984 plan developed by the Texas Department of Community Affairs. An estimated 2,123 homes will be weatherized using these funds.

This is the eighth year that weatherization assistance has been provided to low-income Texans under the DOE Weatherization Assistance Program which has resulted in the weatherization of more than 28,250 homes.

The Weatherization Program in Texas is part of a nationwide effort to install energy conserving measures such as caulking.

TEXAS AMERICAN BANCSHARES INC.

Texas American Bancshares Inc., Fort Worth based bank holding company, has reported net income of $.88 per share for the first quarter of 1984, a decrease of five percent from the same quarter of 1983, but an increase of 29 percent from the preceding quarter.

For the 1984 first quarter, TAB reported net income of $8,871,000, compared to $8,870,000, or $.93 per share, for the comparable period in 1983, and $6,543,000, or $.68 per share, for the final quarter of last year.

Texas American reported a 22 percent growth in average loans for the first quarter compared to last year, and a seven percent growth compared to the fourth quarter of 1983.

ALLIED BANCSHARES

HOUSTON — Allied Bancshares Inc., a Houston based multibank holding company, reported an 11.48 percent increase in net earnings per share for the first quarter of 1984 over the same period of 1983, according to Gerald H. Smith, president and chief executive officer.

Unaudited net earnings for the first quarter of 1984 were $26,431,778 or $.68 per share compared to $23,794,771 or $.61 per share for the same period of 1983. Securities transactions had no effect on net earnings per share in the firstquarter of 1984. Losses on securities transactions reduced first quarter 1983 net earnings per share by $.03.

Total assets of Allied Bancshares Inc. exceeded $8.1 billion at March 31, 1984. The company has 47 member banks located in the eastern, central and upper gulf coast regions of Texas. Allied is also currently in the process of completing mergers with five banks in the Dallas-Fort Worth Metroplex and two banks in Austin.

BOISE CASCADE CORP.

Boise Cascade Corp. has declared a regular quarterly dividend of $.475 per common share, payable on July 15, 1984, to shareholders of record on June 1, 1984.

Also declared were dividends of $.75 per share on the company's $3 cumulative convertible preferred stock, Series A, and $1.25 on its $5 convertible exchangeable preferred stock, Series B. The dividends for both preferred issues are payable Aug. 1, 1984, to shareholders of record on June 15, 1984.

DIAMOND SHAMROCK

DALLAS — First quarter performance clearly shows the results of the last two years' strategic efforts to strengthen Diamond Shamrock's core business, chairman W.H. Bricker has announced.

"First quarter earnings will be approximately 30 percent greater than the 32 cents per share earned prior to write-offs in the fourth quarter of 1983, and will be far above the seven cents per share earned on half as many shares in the first quarter of 1983," he said.

NOBLE AFFILIATES

ARDMORE, Okla. — The board of directors of Noble Affiliates Inc. has announced the declaration of a quarterly cash dividend of three cents per common share, payable May 7, 1984 to shareholders of record April 23, 1984.

REPUBLICBANK CORP.

DALLAS — RepulicBank Corp. has reported first quarter 1984 net income of $29.7 million or $1.03 per fully diluted share, 23 percent below the first quarter of 1983 but $14.5 million greater and nearly double the amount earned in the fourth quarter of 1983.

The gain over the fourth quarter of 1983 was primarily the result of a $35.4 million reduction in the provision for loan losses as net loans charged off declined to $16.3 million, less than one-third of the fourth quarter level. Net interest income was about the same as in the fourth quarter as strong growth in the loan volume offset the impact of more narrow relationships among market rates. RPT's net interest rate margin was 3.71 percent in the first quarter of 1984 as compared to 3.82 percent in the fourth quarter of 1983.

AMERICAN GREETINGS CORP.

CLEVELAND — Fiscal 1984 was another record year for Cleveland based American Greetings Corp., the world's largest publicly owned manufacturer of greeting cards and related products.

Chairman Irving I. Stone said the compay generated revenue of $839.9 million in fiscal 1984 (ended Feb. 29, 1984), a 13 percent increase from revenue of $742.7 million last year.

Net income increased to $59.7 million, a 34 percent jump from the $44.6 million recorded last year. Earnings per share increased to $1.91 from $1.54 last year, a 24 percent increase.

ENERGETICS INC.

DENVER — Energetics has previously announced that it might not pay dividends on its Series One and Series Two preferred stock. The board of directors has determined not to pay the dividends normally payable April 1 on the company's Series One and Series Two preferred stock.

ITT CORP.

NEW YORK — ITT Corp. has announced that 1983 net income increased slightly over 1982.

Income, earnings per share and sales and revenue figures for the first three quarters of 1983, 1982 and prior periods have been restated primarily to conform with recently issued standards of the Financial Accounting Standards Board.

Inclusive of these restatements, net income for the 1983 fourth quarter rose 13.5 percent over the comparable 1982 period.

Net income for 1983 totaled $675 million, or $4.50 per common share, a 1.8 percent incrase over the $663 million, or $4.47 per share, as restated for 1982. Earnings reported for 1982 prior to restatement were $703 million or $4.75 per share. ITT anounced last November that 1983 earnings were expected to be down about five percent from the $4.75 reported for 1982.

INTERFIRST CORP.

DALLAS — InterFirst Corp. has reported conslidated net income of $9.6 million (14 cents per fully diluted share) for the first quarter of 1984. This compares to $37.4 million (65 cents per fully diluted share) earned in the first quarter of 1983 and to $7.7 million (12 cents per fully diluted share) in the fourth quarter of last year.

Robert H. Stewart III, chairman of the board and chief executive officer, said InterFirst's first-quarter earnings continued to reflect the effect of non-perfoming assets and other pressures on the compay's net interest margin.

PARKER DRILLING CO.

TULSA — Parker Drilling Co. has reported lower unaudited revenue for its second quarter of fiscal 1983 (ended Feb. 29, 1984) as compared to the same quarter one year ago. Total revenue declined 27 percent to $64,310,000. The company's second quarter of fiscal 1984 showed a net loss of $10,503,000 compared to a net loss of $2.782,000 for the second quarter of fiscal 1983, and per share results were a loss of $.36 compared to a per share loss of $.10 reported for the prior year's quarter.

The company's resits for the first half of its fiscal year also show a decrease when compared to the same six months of fiscal 1983. Revenue totaled $131,333,000, down 31 percent from the same period in 1983. A loss of $18,228,000 is reported for the first six months of fiscal 1984 compared with net income of $1,407,000 for the six months ended Feb. 28, 1983. Per share results for the first six months of fiscal 1984 were a loss of $.63 compared to share earnings of $.05 in 1983. Total assets decreased from $877,242,000 at Feb. 2, 1983, to $765,931,00 at Feb. 29, 1984.

WESTERN BANK

Western Bank reported net income of $370,271 or $.57 per share for the first qurter ended March 31. The earnings represented return on assets and return on equity of 1.85 percent and 27.27 percent respectively.

Western's deposits grew nine percent from year end to $77.9 million while loans grew 12 percent to $64 million over the previous quarter. Total capital at March 31, was $5.4 million or 6.2 percent of assets.

In announcing the results, Bill Parker, president and chief executive officer, attributed the earnings and continued growth to the bank's community-oriented strategy.

Western Bank, a locally-owned, independent bank was chartered in 1972. It specializes in personal banking and small to medium-sized business financing, including Small Business Administration lending.

These oil exploration and production maintenance foremen are examples of a new trend toward giving employees more decision-making authority. They recently assumed duties formerly held by a higher level of supervision. Left to right are Russell Warrior, Ray Long and john Crawford, of Phillips Petroleum Company's Shidler, Okla., area office.

Phillips takes different approach

From Staff Reports

BARTLESVILLE, OK — Last fall, Dick Hollis of Phillips Petroleum Co. faced a difficult decision: How to best fill an oil production position on his staff.

Hollis, area manager for Phillips at the Shidler, Okla., office, took a different approach. Instead of promoting one of the foreman, he gave three foreman more responsibility. All three now report directly to Hollis.

His solution was in keeping with Phillips efforts to improve employee efficiency and productivity.

The company is asking its managers to reduce supervision, delegate authority to lower levels, and provide more access to key information so more decisions can be made at those levels.

"In the past, managers and supervisors have received inordinate credit for the success of te company. We want to re-emphasize the importance of the individual contributor to the success of this company," says Bill Thomas, vice president of human resources.

Dick Hollis' action is called broadening span of control — increasing the number of employees a supervisor manages.

Justification for broadening the span comes from the movement of the "baby boom" generation toward middle age. Bill Durham, Phillips manager of corporate management services, finds today's workers are usually better educated and more motivated than their predecessors. "Our employees today don't need to be persuaded to tackle a job. They're eager for authority," he says.

Another force behind broadening span of control is cost containment. Phillips, for example, estimates it could save more than $25 million if its average span ratio could be increased from the current average of one supervisor for every 5.8 individual workers to 1:7.

One of Phillips strongest productivity efforts is toward developing different ways of making decisions that offer even new workers more responsibility. More tha 100 Particiapative Action Teams (PATs) established at Phillips, operate in practicaly every part of the company. New teams are starting at a rate of almost one week.

David Barger, PAT coordinator, reports cost savings have been substantial. In 1983 the teams save the company $1.7 million, while costing $578,000 (the teams meet on compay time) for a 3-to-1 benefit-to-cost ratio.

One key to the program's success, Barger says, is "everything is done on a volunteer basis." Employees volunteer to be on a team, choose their own team name and select the problems they want to tackle. Another key, he adds, is "the employees are recognized as experts at their jobs."

Employees involved in the PATs are enthusiastic. Mark Burchett, a senior warehousema at Phillips subsidiary Applied Automation, Inc., in Bartlesville, says, "It makes me feel like my ideas really count."

Other decision-sharing patterns are also emerging. Some PAT teams are starting to have joint meetings to slve problems between different organizations. At Phillips Driscopipe, Inc., employees transfer between plants to cross-fertilize ideas.

In keeping with the decision-sharing concept, Phillips is channeling more information to rank and file employees, not just managers. New tools are emerging in all areas of the company's business.

For years, Phillips has been a leader in using some of the most powerful computers in the world. But now high-tech tools are being put into the hands of non-technical workers. More and more workers are getting desk-top computers or terminals connected to huge "mainframe" computers.

Phillips is plugged in to more than 100 information services in the U.S. and Europe, giving access to more than a thousand data banks.

About one in eight Phillips workers now use word or data processing equipment. But by 1990 that figure could increase to one out of every two workers if some frecasts are correct.

FDIC works to resolve FNB pension plan

By JULIE FAUBEL
Business-Oil Writer

Representatives of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp.'s administrative committee to liquidate the savings and retirement plan of failed First National Bank of Midland met with plan participants Thursday at Midland High School to discuss the status of the plan.

More than 130 employees of the former bank at the meeting were informed of the status of the plan; how it would be liquidated, and who would be eligible to participate. There are more than 800 plan participants.

On Oct. 14 FNB, the sponsor of the pension plan, was declared insolvent and closed by the Comptroller of the Currency and the FDIC was appointed receiver. When Republic-Bank First National Midland declined to assume sponsorship of the plan, FDIC assumed responsibility for administering the plan.

On Dec. 19, 1983, the FDIC passed a resolution authorizing its division of liquidation to liquidate the plan's assets and distribute them to eligible participants. To do this the plan administrative committee was created to supervise liquidation of the assets in accordance with all governing laws and regulations.

Currently the committee has been filing necessary notices and reports. In addition, it is preparing an annual report and individual account statements for participants.

When the bank failed, employees participating in the plan became 100 percent fully-vested. Because the plan was unable to complete a full year's operation (Dec. 31, 1984), according to federal law, all participants in the plan, even if terminated before the bank failed, with 500 hours of service or more in 1982 also became fully vested in the plan.

According to the committee, the estimated market value of the plan's assets is about $6.2 million. It consists of time deposits, corporate bonds and debentures, stocks which have been converted to cash, full and partial interst in notes and mortgages, a limited partnership interest in a Galveston office building and interest as managing partner in a royalty partnership and FNB common stock.

Although most of the plan's assets either have or can be readily converted to cash, there are several assets such as mortgages, the royalty trust and Galveston partnership interest which may be difficult to sell. However, the committee hopes all the assets can be liquidated during 1984.

Because of the bank failure and economic conditions which prevailed in 1983 — declining oil and real estate prices, the committee said it expects a loss of between 4-5 percent but hopes some of the loss can be recovered through interest earned before the plan is distributed.

According to Roger Aksamit, an El Paso attorney working with the committee, when a pension plan is terminated, the Internal Revenue Service must first determine if the plan is qualified and then approve a plan of action to liquidate the assets. During the time allocated for the IRS ruling, Aksamit said, employees with concerns about the way the committee proposes to handle the plan will have a chance to comment to the IRS about the proposal. Aksamit said participants can comment directly to the IRS or if there is a group (10 participants or 10 percent of the total group, which ever is larger), they may request the Department of Labor comment for them.

According to Joe Huffman, an actuary working with the committee, account balance statements are being prepared and will be mailed out in May.

Because much of the plan consists of cash, he announced, the committee has decided to make a partial distribution of employee contribution accounts only with a target date of May 1. Up to 85 percent of employees contributions will be distributed. For the remaining 15 percent participants will have to wait for the plan to be completely liquidated.

In his opening remarks to the group Thomas R. Procopio, FDIC liquidator-in-charge of FNB and a member of the commitee, emphasized a committment to liquidating the plan to the benefit of the participants. Procopio said the committee has hired specialists to help them untangle the situation and resolve it fairly and equitably. Procopio also said it is the committee's desire to keep participants informed and welcomed questions at any time.

Business grads find job hunting easier

BETHLEHEM, Pa. (AP) — College seniors this spring are getting 30 percent more job offers from business recruiters than their counterparts did last year, as the economy continues improving, a national survey shows.

The College Placement Council Inc. which represents career placement offices across the nation, revealed its findings after surveying 162 colleges nationwide.

"That doesn't necessarily mean the number of jobs is up 30 percent," CPC spokeswoman Linda Pengilly said. "But it does indicate the economy's recovery is finally affecting recruiting."

The survey, conducted by the Bethlehem-based firm from September 1983 to March 1984, showed that recruiters' interview schedules were full and starting salary offers were generally stable, Ms. Pengilly said.

The starting salary offers for petroleum engineers averaged $30,336, a drop of 1.6 percent from 1983, she said. But chemical engineers could expect about $27,276, a 2 percent increase, and accounting majors averaged $19,464, a 3.67 percent gain.

"With inflation under control, not all employers are feeling pressure to increase starting salaries," Ms. Pengilly said. "And some companies have just pulled out of lean times and can't afford to. Employers seem to be back in control of salaries.

"After scraping to find jobs last year, many students have come into this year's market with more modest expectations," she said.

At Lehigh University in Bethlehem, placement officials concurred with the survey's findings.

RepublicBank offers shares to public

DALLAS — RepublicBank Corp. announced the public offering of 750,000 shares of RepublicBank Corp. preferred stock with cumulative and adjustble dividends at a price of $100 per share.

Dividends are cumulative from the date of issue and are payable quarterly on Jan. 1, April 1, July 1 and Oct. 1 of each year, beginning July 1, 1984.

The dividend rate for the initial dividend period ending July 1, 1984, will be 10.40 percent per annum. For each quarterly period thereafter, dividends on the preferred stock will be at a rate of 2.15 percent below the applicable rate. The applicable rate for each dividend period will be the highest of: the three month U.S. Treasury bill rate, the U.S. Treasury ten year constant maturity rate and the U.S. Treasury twenty year constant maturity rate, determined in advance of such dividend period. However, the dividend rate for any dividend period will not be less than 6 percent per annum or greater than 13 percent per annum.

Texas American Bancshares gets approval

FORT WORTH — Texas American Bancshares Inc. has received Federal Reserve Board approval for the acquisition of American Bancorporation Inc. of Longview, Texas, a three-bank holding company with consolidated deposits of $106 million.

American Bancorporation Inc. owns substantially all of American Bank, Longview, and all of Town North National Bank, Longview, and Texas Bank & Trust in Wichita Falls.

Under terms of the agreement, shareholders of American Bancorporation will receive .6253 shares of TAB common stock for each of the 539,788 shares of American Bancorporation stock outstanding.

Conventional fixed mortgages 13.5

WASHINGTON — Today, the minimum yield required by Fannie Mae (the Federal National Mortgage Association) for conventional fixed rate mortgages is 13.500 percent, up from last week's rate of 13.250.

Fannie Mae is a large investor in mortgages and its rates are reflective of new mortgages being originated by mortgage lenders throughout the nation.

The rate for five-year adjustable rate mortgages (ARMs) is 13.400, up from last week's rate of 13.250.

The rates on one- and three-year ARMs are 11.600 percent and 12.750 percent, compared to last week's 11.300 and 12.550, respectively.

Muse Air to inaugurate Las Vegas service

DALLAS — Muse Air will inaugurate daily service to Las Vegas from Houston Hobby airport, New Orleans and Ontario, Calif., on April 29.

John Mumaugh, vice president-sales and advertising said, "Las Vegas fits well into the eastbound and westbound travel patterns we've established between cities in Texas, Oklahoma and Louisiana and those on the West Coast, and we've had a lot of demand for a Las Vegas link."

The airline will offer a daily non-stop round-trip flight between Las Vegas and Houston; a daily non-stop flight to Ontario, Calif.; and a daily one-stop flight from New Orleans. Connecting service will be offered daily between Las Vegas and Austin, Midland/Odessa and Tulsa.

Executive seeks access to nuke suit papers

HOUSTON (AP) — A news executive of a newspaper denied access to pretrial documents in a suit over the building of the South Texas Nuclear Project says he's disappointed by court refusals to unseal the papers.

But Tony Pederson, managing editor of the Houston Chronicle, said this week the newspaper will continue efforts to open the files.

The state's 13th Court of Appeals in Corpus Christi last week upheld a lower court's decision to deny the public access to the documents filed in a suit against construction company Brown & Root Inc. and its parent firm, The Halliburton Co.

Justice Quentin Keith, one of three judges to hear the case, wrote that attorneys had failed to show any cases which held that newspapers or others had a right to inspect pre-trial depositions in a civil case which never have been offered as evidence.

The Chronicle, the Austin American-Statesman and the cities of Austin and San Antonio had sought to overturn a lower court's decision through an application for a writ of mandamus.

"We're disappointed with the result and we believe the court was incorrect in its judgment," Pederson said. "The Chronicle strongly believes that the public has a right to the documents and information in this case and we intend to pursue the matter through appeal."

State District Judge G.P. Hardy sealed the documents in the breach of contract suit.

Houston Lighting & Power, Central Power & Light and the cities of Austin and San Antonio are suing the former builder of the nuclear plant, contending it was at fault for cost overruns, engineering problems and lengthy delays.

State questions plane trips made by utility executives

AUSTIN (AP) — A state lawyer says Gulf States Utilities' 27 percent rate hike package might include an effort to charge customers for corporate lobbying trips and a plane flight to a boat-christening celebration.

Company officials on Thursday defended the trips noted on GSU airplane flight logs, but Walter Washington of the Public Utility Counsel staff said the system might allow GSU's top executive to "fly around the country every month at ratepayer expense."

GSU, which serves 266,000 Southeast Texas customers, is seeking a $161 million rate hike. The Public Utility Commission staff says GSU is entitled to only a $2.3 million hike.

A PUC hearing on the request began Monday.

At Thursday's session, Washington quizzed Joseph Bondurant, GSU executive vice president, about the company's three-plane fleet.

Bondurant acknowledged that Paul Murrill, GSU's chairman, used a company plant to fly to Mississippi last July to attend a boat christening. The boat, owned by an offshore drilling firm on whose board Murrill serves, was named for Murrill.

David White, GSU director of Texas communications, said he did not know which specific airplane trips were being billed to Texas customers. He said the annual operating cost of the planes is about $1 million. The GSU rate case in Texas includes $315,000 in airplane expenses.

Bondurant defended the airplanes, including the company's Lear Jet.

"We consider the Lear Jet as being a tool that our senior management uses, a tool to improve the productivity of that particular group of our management," Bondurant said.

Washington later told reporters that GSU might be trying to force improper expenses on ratepayers.

"We think the expenses should be incurred to benefit ratepayers. We don't see how the boat christening actually benefits ratepayers," he said.

Bondurant said GSU benefits from having Murrill serve on other companies' boards, including the Mississippi firm that named a boat for him

"It's in the best interest of our company if our chief executive officer (Murrill) serves on the board of other companies," Bodurant testified, adding that Murrill can "reap the benefit" of other companies' expertise.

Washington said, "It seems to be a way for Mr. Murrill to fly around the country every month at ratepayer expense."

He also questioned Bondurant about flights that could have been part of lobbying efforts. Utility companies are not allowed to pass lobbying costs on to customers.

H. HOWARD LUND, P.E., has been appointed vice president of research and development at W.S. Dickey Clay Pipe Mfg. Co. headquarted in Pittsburg, Kan.

Lund, who will be responsible to the board of directors and president, was named to the newly-upgraded position to accelerate Dickey's research and development program, which will place more emphasis on cost effective measures for current and future market requirements.

A graduate of the University of Illinois with a bachelor of science in ceramic engineering, Lund has been associated with the clay pipe industry. He joined Dickey Clay Pipe in 1982, as marketing services manager. Prior to that, he was with the National Clay Pipe Institute and Pomona Pipe Products Co. of Greensboro, N.C.

Roy E. Campbell, president of Elcor Corp., has anounced that H. RAY NEWSOM has been elected vice president — operations services in this manufacturer of roofing and industrial products and engineer and constructor of processing facilities for the energy and chemical industries.

He was president of Elcor's Sulfur and Industrial Chemical Division from 1967 to 1970. Since 1970, Newsom has been employed by Panhandle Eastern Corp., most recently as vice president responsible for subsidiaries involved in coal mine development, coal gasification, petroleum products marketing, specialty metals production and bentonite mining. He is a member of the American Institute of Chemical Engineering, Houston Engineering & Scientific Society and is a Registered Professional Engineer in the state of Texas. He graduated from Texas A&M University in 1948 with a bachelor of science Electrical Engineering degree.

SAM F. SEGNAR, president and chief executive officer of InterNorth, Inc., has been elected chairman of the board of InterNorth by the corporation's board of directors.

The action was taken at the annual meeting of directors in Houston. InterNorth, a $5 billion energy corp., is headquartered in Omaha, Neb.

Segnar, 56, also will retain the titles of president and chief executive officer when he assumes the chairman position. He replaces Willis A. Strauss, who is retiring May 1 as chairman of the board and chief policy officer of the firm. Strauss will remain a board member, has been chairman of the board since Aug. 1966, and has been with InterNorth since 1948.

A native of Hope, Ark., Segnar attended Texas A&M University and the University of Oklahoma, where he received a degree in mechanical engineering in 1950. In 1967, he completed the Harvard Graduate School of Business Administration's Advanced Management Program.

MICHAEL J. LAWCH has been elected vice president and treasurer at Aminoil Inc. He previously served as assistant controller — financial planning and reporting.

J.B. Coffman, Aminoil's president and chief executive officer, said Lawch's new position includes overall responsibility for all corporate credit issues, cash management and banking relations.

Lawch joined Aminoil in 1977 as budgeting supervisor. He subsequently held increasing supervisory and management responsibilities, and was named as assistant controller in Feb. 1981.

Before joining Aninoil, Lawch was an auditor analyst in the controller's department of Esso Eastern, Inc. He had been with Esso since May 1974.

The board of directors of Texas American Bank, Midland recently approved appoinment of GARY WALKER to assistant vice president, consumer lending department and BOBBIE K. SALGADO to credit officer, commercial credit department.

Prior to joining Texas American Bank, Midland, Walker was affiliated with Republic First National Midland as a consumer loan officer. Walker was graduated from Angelo State University in 1977 with a B.B.A. degree. He is currently a member of the American Institute of Banking.

Bobbie K. Salgado is a native Midlander and was employed by TAB, Midland in 1982 as a management candidate. She recently completed the Robert Morris & Associates Uniform Credit Analysis Training program conducted at Texas American Bank, Fort Worth.

Salgado is a Lee High graduate and received an Associates Degree in applied sciences from Midland College. She also received a B.B.A. degree from Pan American University in Edinburg, Texas.

She currently serves on the board of directors of the American Diabetes Assn., and is an active member with the Uptown Chapter of Business & Professional Women's Club, the Mexican American Advisory Council, Kappa Delta Alumnae and the American Institute of Banking.

EVA COMBS, a long-time employee and teller of RepublicBank First National Midland, has retired with 29 years of service. Her banking career included all aspects of teller services with significant contributions to the bank's teller training programs. The bank honored Combs with a retirement tea on Wed., April 12.

Combs is an active member of several local organizations including the Antique Auto Club and the Midland Quilters Guild. Upon her retirement, Combs commented, "I intend to enjoy my retirement just as much as I enjoyed my working career."

Wise Airlines wants suspended service for Midland-Odessa

SAN ANGELO — Wise Airlines recently announced that they have filed with the Texs Aeronautics Commission for a six-month suspension of service to Midland/Odessa. Malone Mitchell III, president of Wise Airlines stated, "Service to Midland/Odessa is not economically feasible under current conditions. Current facility arrangements and airport cost distribution in Midland/Odessa are designed with the larger air carriers such as Southwest or American in mind. At the current time the available facilities are not well-suited to commuter operations from a logistical or economical standpoint. Because of the current facility fees in Midland/Odessa, we pay six times as much per passenger in Midland as we pay the other airports we serve. We have discussed the situation with Midland assistant airport directors, Tommy Jones and Jon Mathiasen, and they have assured us that proper commuter facilities and lower fees will be available in six months."

Local mover advises to avoid summer rush

From Staff Reports

People planning to move this year should schedule early and avoid the busy summer season, if at all possible, a local moving company executive advises.

"We are expecting a banner year in 1984," said Gene Shelburne Jr., president of City Transfer & Storage Inc., agent for northAmerican Van Lines.

"People who are moving this year should schedule a moving date and contract with their professional mover as early as possible, and if they have the flexibility, should try to avoid the heavy summer season," he advised.

Shelburne pointed out that "in a busy year, people who schedule late and move during mid-summer often have difficulty obtaining the dates they want because equipment and prsonnel are tied up."

"More than 40 percent of our moves are traditionally made from June 1 through Sept. 30," he explained.

Shelburne said that movers believe 1984 will be a big year for several reasons. "Our business reacts positively to an active housing market, and housing starts have been up 41.3 percent since Nov. 1982. January's new homes were started at a seasonally adjusted annual rate of 2.2 million, the highest monthly rate since the boom years of the late 1970's.

He explained that "when a family buys a new home and moves out of the old one, it creates a chain reaction of buying houses and changing residences that dramatically increases the demand for professional movers."

Shelburne pointed out that most economists believe housing starts will be between 1.7 million and 1.85 million this year because of low inflation, a rise in productivity, lower energy prices and stronger consumer confidence.

Other reasons for the moving industry's optimism Shelburne noted, are an increase in employment and a forecast for a busy military moving season. The military accounts for 14 — 16 percent of the industry's business. Also, he said, "the rise in businss activity generally leads to a substantial increase in corporate relocations."

Shelburne said that in 1983 the moving industry had its busiest fourth quarter since the pre-inflation days of late 1980. "The first quarter of 1984 indicated a continuation of the current upturn," he said.

Mesa consents to judgment

AMARILLO — Mesa Petroleum Co. has announced that it has consented to the entry of a judgment in the United States District Court for the Southern District of Texas, Houston Division, pursuant to which Mesa is obligated to comply with the requirements of Section 13 (d) of te Securitis Exchange Act of 1934 and rules thereunder.

Mesa stated that the consent judgment arises out of allegations by the Securities and Exchange Commission that Mesa should have amended its Schedule 13D filings with the commission relating to its investment in Gulf Corp. to describe its consideration of a possible tender offer for majority control of Gulf and certain activities related to exploring the availability of financing for such a possible offer.

The Phaco-Emulsifier is a device used in most of the 525,000 cataract surgeries performed in the United States last year. The hollow tip of the Phaco-Emulsifier vibrates at 40,000 cycles per second, creating sound waves that dissolve the cataracts, which are then removed by suction. The device minimizes damage to the eye and helps speed patient recovery.

March heating bills above normal

WASHINGTON (AP) — The coldest March in years cost Americans nearly $1 billion in extra heating bills, the government said recently.

Temperatures 2 degrees to 9 degrees below normal over heavily populated Eastern cities produced the highest March heating demand in 15 years and the fifth highest on record, the Climate Assessment and Information Services Center said.

A sharply colder-than-normal December had been balanced by warm February weather to bring winter heating costs close to normal, on average, before the chilly March weather arrived.

Total national residential heating costs for March were estimated at $8.9 billion, or $900 million above normal.

Per-customer heating costs were $20 to $52 above normal in the New England, Mid-Atlantic and East North Central states, the report said. Mild weather in the West did result in some savings for customers in the Pacific and Mountain states.

Kusan Inc. to acquire major firm

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Kusan Inc. announced its intention to acquire Fiber Glass Systems Inc., a major manufacturer of casing, tubing and pipe for oilfield applications.

The board of directors of Fiber Glass Systems approved the transaction in principle in a meeting at its San Antonio headquarters, subject to later approval of a definitive acquisition agreement by the company's directors and shareholders. Terms of the proposed acquisition were not disclosed.

Kusan Inc., a subsidiary of Bethlehem Steel Corp., is a leading plastics processor and manufacturer of industrial and consumer products components, toys and building products. Its injection molding operations, for example, are suppliers to the appliance, automotive and computer industries.

"We are delighted at the prospect of this key acquisition," said Raynold Nebel, Kusan president and chief executive officer. "It offers a new dimension for our company — a new technology and a new market. Fiber Glass Systems is the market leader in high-pressure, filament wound fiber glass pipe, serving both domestic and export markets."

Fiber Glass Systems, with manufacturing operations in San Antonio and Big Spring, also has sales offices there and in nine other cities in Texas, Oklahoma, Kansas, Wyoming, Illinois and Colorado.

Its products are used principally in enhanced recovery wells, and it was first to develop the technology which allowed the use of fiber glass tubing and casing in high-pressure downhole applications.

Nebel said V.F. Michael, founder and chief executive officer of Fiber Glass Systems, would remain with the company as CEO and operate the company as an independent subsidiary, mush the same as other Kusan affiliates.

Pizza Hut execs visit young cancer patients

From Staff Reports

HOUSTON — Thanks to the help of Pizza Hut restaurants, a record 1,750,000 Christmas cards designed by children with cancer at The University of Texas M.D. Anderson Hospital and Tumor Institute were sold throughout Texas during the 1983 holiday season. Last year, one million cards were sold.

Contributing significantly to the large increase in cards sold in 1983 were sales in more than 100 participating Pizza Hut restaurants in Houston, Beaumont, Corpus Christi and several west Texas cities ranging from Midland-Odessa to Kermit.

"Pizza Hut's involvement this year was a great boost to our project, increasing our sales enormously," says Page Lawson, director of volunteer services at M.D. Anderson, which has sponsored the project since 1974. "We are very grateful for their support."

This year, the 10th anniversary of the project, card sales in Houston, Beaumont, Austin, Tyler, Midland-Odessa, Corpus Christi and Dallas-Fort Worth, as well as many smaller communities, netted approximately $303,000 for a special pediatric fund that supports activities for the young patients at M.D. Anderson throughout the year.

To promote sales of the Christmas cards, Pizza Hut launched an extensive advertising campaign through W.B. Doner and Co., Houston, ad agency for more than 600 Pizza Hut restaurants in the Southwest.

Young cancer patients at UT M.D. Anderson Hospital invited Pizza Hut executives Tom McNulty and R.E. Smith and (standing) W.B. Doner and Co. account supervisor, Chuck Herrera, to join them in the pediatric playroom as a gesture of "thanks" to the people who helped boost sales of the kids' Christmas cards. Many of the playroom games and toys, including a computer, are paid for by the card sales.

U.S. may depend more on OPEC

NEW YORK (AP) — Conoco Inc. warned against "complacency" about the U.S. energy situation in the future, predicting that the non-communist world would become more dependent upon oil produced by the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries in the years ahead.

And another oil company, Shell Oil Co., said oil prices, which for the past year have been unusually stable after a decade of relentless increases, could nearly double in the next 10 years and surge more than six fold in 20 years.

"Complacency about the U.S. energy situation is unwarranted," Conoco said in its annual forecast covering the period through the year 2000. It predicted oil prices would rise "moderately" faster than inflation in the 1990s.

Firms merge to acquire agricultural properties

From Staff Reports

DENVER — Van Schaack Land Co. of Denver, and Dallas-based Trammell Crow Co. have entered into a joint venture designed to acquire agricultural properties throughout the Western United States, Van Schaack vice president R. Kent Dawkins announced this week.

To be called VSL Argricultural Investments, the joint venture will be searching for choice location preperties with appreciation potential and with the possibility for future development, Dawkins said.

The joint venture brings together the oldest land firm in the Rocky Mountain West (Van Schaack Land Company).

"What we are setting out to do," Dawkins explained, "is to develop a portfolio of agricultural investments with immediate to mid-term appreciation potential. Trammell Crow Co. will provide the investment capital through its various prtnerships and Van Schaack Land Co. will provide the product."

Associated with Van Schaack Land Co. for the past 13 years, Dawkins will be VSL Agricultural Investments' operating partner.

Van Schaack Land Co., a lincensed broker in 13 Western states, is headed by Paul (Bud) Dawkins who has been with the firm since 1948. As Van Schaack Land Co. president, Bud Dawkins was one of the first to predict the land boom which swept the Rocky Mountain region in the early and middle 1970s. He has been involved in handling such major land transactions as the sale of the famed Mashed O, part of the historical XIT spread, the N.B. Hunt Willow Creek Ranch in Colorado, the 60,000 acre Two Dot Ranch in Wyoming and the 63,000 acre Parks Springs Ranch in New Mexico among many others.

"Since 1943," Kent Dawkins noted, "Van Schaack Land Co. has specialized in farm, ranch, resort and recreational properties and during the company's 41 year history, we have handled land sales totalling almost a half billion dollars."

According to Dawkins, his company's broad knowledge of land availability and desirability in the Western U.S. was an important factor bringing about the joint venture with Trammell Crow Co.

The Dallas headquartered giant, developer of Tamarac Square and other major projects in the metropolitan Denver area, has developed, leased and manages commercial projects in 65 U.S. markets, Europe and South America. More than 3,000 projects, representing 125 million square feet, are owned and managed by the company's partners through 40 offices nationwide. Since its formation 30 years ago, Trammell Crow Co. has developed property in excess of $5 billion.

"The merger of interests between the oldest land company in the Rocky Mountain West, and one of the largest real estate development firms in the country, presents some interesting possibilities in regard to development of agricultural properties in the Western United States," Dawkins concluded. "We will be actively seeking desirable properties, particularly in those regions in which Van Schaack Land Co. has been most visible over four decades."

Two-day Mexico-U.S. workshop sponsored by UT

From Staff Reports

AUSTIN — Government officials and scholars from Mexico and the U.S. will gather at The University of Texas April 27-28 to participate in a workshop on "Industrial Strategy and Policy: Mexico and the U.S."

The two-day workshop is sponsored by UT's Office for Mexican Studies in the Institute of Latin American Studies with the assistance of the Organization of American States and the C.B. Smith Sr. Centennial Chair in U.S.-Mexico Relations at the university.

The conference will begin April 27 at 9 a.m. in the East Campus Library Lecture Hall, Sid Richardson Hall, and continue April 28 at 9 a.m. in room 3.412 of the Drama Workshops Building, part of the Performing Art Center.

Sessions on industrial strategy and policy, protection, promotion and regulation, petrochemical and steel are included Friday, as well as a luncheon address by Ambassador Paul Boeker, U.S. Department of State policy planning council.

Diputado Alberto Santos de Hoyos, congressman from the state of Nuevo Leon, will be the guest speaker at a Friday egvening dinner in the Cypress Room of the Faculty Center.

English and Spanish summaries will be available at all workshop sessions.

For more information, contact the Office for Mexican Studies at (512) 461-1191.

Printers report big increase in sales

From Staff Reports

ARLINGTON, VA. — A record number of printers reported increased sales in 1983, announced the Printing Industries of America, Inc. (PIA), the largest association of printers in the world. Over 65 prcent of American printers said that the dollar volume of their sales grew during the year's last quarter.

This is the highest percentage of printers experiencing a sales increase since 1980 and represents a considerable growth over the same periodin the previous year.

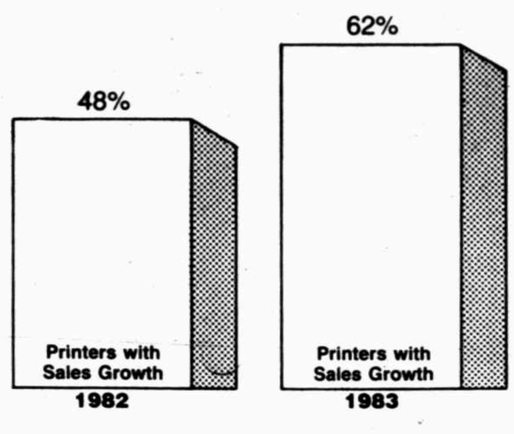

Sixty-two percent of printers loc ated in the South reported sales increases. Only 12 percent of them had lower sales, the smallest percentage ever reported for that region. As for future sales growth, 94 percent said that they expect to do better during the year. Not a single firm in the South predicted a drop in sals.

"The trend towards growth in sals is especially important for the printing industry, the largest small business group in the country and is a good indicator for the nation's economy. Many analysts consider printing to be a b'bellwether' industry and watch it to help predict fluctuations in the economy. As this is the fifth quarter that printers have reported increased sales, we feel that the outlook for the industry is excellent," noted Terry A Nagi, senior vice president at PIA.

Significantly, the number of printers throughout the country reporting a decrease in sales is falling: only 14 percent said that their sales went down in 1983 versus 29 percent in 1982. Sales remained at the same level since last year for 20 percent of those surveyed.

"An overwhelming 90 percent of printers surveyed feel that sals wll go even higher in 1984," commented Nagi. "There's no sign of this growth abating. Advertising and promotional printining continue to be strong, so does informational printing. Between the Olympics, the World's Fair and the elections, there's a lot of printing to be done in 1984."

Southern Printers Report Sales Growth

During 1983, the number of Southern printers reporting an increase in sales grew by 30 percent. Optimism for better business in 1984 runs very high — 94 percent of the region's printers said they expected their sales to go up during the year.

Connally to speak at bankers convention

From Staff Reports

FORT WORTH — Former Texas governor John Connally will be among keynote speakers at the 68th annual convention of Texas Mortgage Bankers Association April 25-28 at the Americana Hotel in Fort Worth.

More than 700 delegates and guests are expected to convene as the first general session gets under way April 26 in the Trinity Ballroom of the hotel, with Wade T. Nowlin of Fort Worth, TMBA president, presiding. After a welcome by Mayor Bob Bolen of Fort Worth, there will be addresses by Warren Woodward, vice president of City Center Development Corp. of Fort Worth; Kenneth Thygerson of Washington D.C., president and chief executive officer of Federal Home Loan Mortgage Corp., and two representatives of Mortgage Bankers Association of America, the executive vice president, Dr. Mark J. Riedy, Washington D.C., and the president, Felix M. Beck, Perth Amboy, N.J.

Connally will speak at a luncheon Friday, April 27 in the Americana ballroom. During the morning session, speakers will be David O. Maxwell, Washington D.C., chairman and chief executive officer of Federal National Mortgage Assn.; Michael Blum, Stamford, Conn., vice president and general manager of General Electric Credit Corp., and Rebecca Walker, Minneapolis, president of Residential Funding Corp.

A roundtable discussion on "The Industry Outlook for Building and Real Estate Financing in Texas" will feature six of Fort Worth's leaders in their field: Nowlin; Jimmy Rogers, president of Texas Association of Builders; William C. Jennings, president of Texas Association of Realtors; Phillip J. Meek, president and publisher of the Fort Worth Star Telegram and presidet of Texas Daly Newspaper Assn.; Jack Rattikin, Jr., president elect of American Land Title Assn., and Stanley R. Reber, economist for Texas American Bancshares, Inc.

New officers to be installed during the convention are Joe F. Lynch, Houston, president; Fulton Murray, Dallas, vice presient, and Frank Gentry, Houston, treasurer. J. Ray Driver Jr. of Houston will assume of the position of executive vice president, replacing Robert W. Drye, who is retiring after seven years of service.

BUSINESS NOTEBOOK

Air Control Board to get overhaul

By BILL KIDD

AUSTIN — Air Control Board officials are preparing to overhaul the ACB's procedures for exempting new sources of potential air pollution from permit requirements, and are looking over possible research areas and projects for the agency.

ACB now has a list of standard exemptions, and provides for "special exemptions."

The proposal being examined by the Regulation Development Committee would make a rule of the exemption list, with no further special exemptions — which would instead be treated as permits.

Also being reviewed is a change in the hearing procedure, to make hearings mandatory when requested in instances when a permit is challenged, and regarding which issues withinthe jurisdiction of the ACB are raised.

The Monitoring and Research Committee is considering possible research areas and subjects, including studies of health effects of air contaminants (including the impact of air pollution on cancer rates in Texas), urban and rural visibility problems, agricultural damage from air pollution, and predicting future air quality based on current emissions and economic forecasts.

Emissions from incineration — particularly from incineration of hazardous wastes — and additional acid rain studies are being considered.

• • •

Texas Department of Health and Department of Water Resources have announced they are seeking final delegation from the Environmental Protection Agency to operate a hazardous waste management program under the Resource Conservation and Recovery Act.

Texas currently has athorization for interim administration of the program through Jan. 26, 1985.

Final delegation would allow the State agencies to administer the Federal program, and prevent duplication of regulation.

A public hearing on the proposed program is set for 7 p.m. May 17 in Austin.

• • •

State Board of Insurance has issued a call for credit life and credit accident and health insurance experience for calendar 1983.

The experience will reflect changes in rates for the latter part of the years, SBI reports, noting that the agency had ordered a reduction in rates for single-premium level-term insurance (the most common coverage) from 58 to 50 cents.

SBI hasn't held a hearing to review credit life and disability rates since March 1980, the agency reports.

In 1983 experience is to be reported by May 31.

• • •

SBI member William Daves is warning employer and employee groups that better health care, with lower health care costs, will require a national, and individual commitment to disease and accident prevention.

Daves notes that estimates are that health care costs will reach the $1 trillion a year level by the end of the decade if the current rate of increase continues.

Both private and public employers, he notes, are becoming involved in "wellness" programs due to the increasing need to contain high rising health care costs.

However, Daves says, while such programs are increasing, it's too soon to tell if they are having an impact.

Daves heads a committee of the national Association of Insurance Commissioners which is concerned with health issues — and says he and other NAIC members feel it's time for health insurers and employers to move to the concept of preventing illness.

Property and casualty companies, he notes, have extensive program aimed at preventing accidents and losses, and Daves belives the same approach sould be applied to health insurance.

• • •

Department of Water Resources is completing review of comments on propoal amendments to industrial solid waste rules, following hearings in Austin and Houston.

The Lone Star Chapter, Sierra Club, called the rules "an evolutionary step toward better waste management in Texas," but said the Sierra Club feels DWR should take a "much stronger stance on the protection of sole-source aquifers" from pollution. (Such aquifers include the Edwards and Ogallala, DWR says.)

The Water Development Board is expected to act on the rules before Sept. 1.

AT&T financial life rough without Bell

MILWAUKEE (AP) — The American Telephone & Telegraph Co. is finding its new life without the Bell companies a bit rough, first-quarter earnings indicate.

Meeting its stockholders Wednesday for the first annual meeting since the Jan. 1 breakup of the Bell System, AT&T reported after-tax income for the three months ending March 31 of $226.9 million, or 20 cents per share, with 983 million average shares outstanding. First-quarter revenues totaled roughly $13 billion, but operating expenses totaled $12.6 billion.

The results were disappointing to Wall Street, falling significantly below the roughly $300 million level needed to support a promised dividend payment of 30 cents a share. AT&T's stock closed Wednesday at $15.25 a share, down 25 cents from Tuesday, on the New York Stock Exchange.

AT&T Chairman Charles L. Brown acknowledged the results "are not as good as we would like them to be," but promised the company's performance would improve over the year. He also noted the company's board of directors had already approved payment of the 30-cent dividend for the first quarter despite the lower earnings.

Despite the prediction of better quarters to come, Brown told reporters he no longer expected the company to earn the total $2.02 per share in 1984 it had forecast in November. He blamed the Federal Communications Commission for its failure to equalize the fees by AT&T and its competitors pay to local phone companies for handling long-distance traffic.

Competitors like MCI Communications Corp. and GTE Corp.'s GTE-Sprint division have paid much less than AT&T for local connections, in part because the connections they have are not as good as those provided to AT&T. The Bell companies are now upgrading those connections, however, prompting AT&T to argue that the competitors' discounts should be sharply reduced now. The FCC is still studying the matter.

"I don't think we'll reach the $2.02 based on what has happened in the first quarter and based on the things that are happening in Washington," Brown said. "But as we look at our internal operations and look at the market, we see that sales are moving up and we are undergoing expense levels now that we don't expect to continue because of start-up costs. Those two combined give us the expectation that the first quarter multiplied by four is not the right answer for the year."

Asked about the performance of AT&T's various components, Brown would say only that long-distance traffic on its network had risen slightly during the first quarter. He refused to discuss how well AT&T Technologies was doing in selling phone equipment, a key question on the minds of many analysts since AT&T no longer has the Bell companies as captive customers.

Wednesday's financial report puts AT&T in the position of failing to match the success of some of the new companies it spawned in the breakup. Under the terms of a government antitrust settlement, AT&T divided its 22 Bell System operating companies among seven new regional firms on Jan. 1.

Three of those seven new firms have reported stronger first-quarter earnings than their former parent. BellSouth enjoyed first-quarter earnings of $270.4 million.

Charles L. Brown, chairman of AT&T announces preliminary earnings for the three months ending March 31 of $226.9 million, or 20 cents per share during a news conference in Milwaukee prior to the company's annual meeting recently. As a result of the divestiture of its former operating companies from AT&T, the results are not comparable to any earlier period.

Scientific knowledge will cost $100 billion

By the Los Angeles Times Washington Post News Service

WASHINGTON — America's quest for new scientific knowledge will cost more than $100 billion in 1985, or about $450 for every man, woman and child.

The federal government plans to spend $52.8 billion on research and development next year, a 10 percent increase over the $44.5 billion being spent in 1984.

The Department of Defense, as is the case this year, will account for two-thirds of those federal research funds, and almost one-third of all research and development money to be spent in the United States.

Industry and business, which has earmarked $48.8 billion on research and development (R&D) this year, will spend more than the federal government on gathering new technical information in 1985.

However, private sectors totals will not be available until at least this week, when the Conference Board meets in New York City to discuss "Research and Development, Key issues for Management."

Academic and nonprofit institutions are spending $2.7 billion this year and hope to do better in 1985.

With the huge boosts in the R&D spending, there has been an increase in the level of concern among government and industry officials about government's role in transferring technology from the laboratory to commercial products.

Democrats on a House Banking subcommittee, for example, have argued that a Senate Finance Committee's Republican plan to make permanent the existing 25 percent R&D credit and offering more generous tax treatment to R&D contributions to universities fall short of the nation's needs.

Rep. John J. LaFalce, D-N.Y., has proposed that the government take a direct hand in sponsoring industrial research aimed at meeting the most important competitive challenge from foreign prodcuts.

"The United States exhibits an anti-industrial bias in the way our government spends its R&D dollar," LaFalce said in proposing an Advanced Technology Foundation that would have $500 million to invest in research grants to help support commercial development of new manufacturing processes.

"While the government funds about 50 percent of the research and development in this country, it spends less than 1 percent of this on civilian applied research for industrial growth," he added.

As a result of these complaints, the Congress has in the past couple of years reduced defense R&D requests and slowed down the decline in civilian applied research and development.

But the Reagan administration has maintained its strong emphasis on defense R&D, which has risen from 47 percent of total federal R&D funding in 1980 to 66 percent in 1984 and 70 percent in 1985.

Defense-related R&D is $37 billion in the 1985 budget, up from $14.9 billion in 1980, an increase of 148 percent.

In contrast, according to statistics provided by the Congressional Budget Office, funding for nondefense R&D has decreased significantly since the early 1980s.

In 1985, the administration wants to continue the reorientation of civilian R&D funding toward basic research, which now represents 44 percent of total civilian R&D funding, up from 25 percent in 1980.

Basic research is directed toward increases of knowledge in science rather than its practical application.

Graduate courses offered

The Permian Basin Graduate Center will offer three courses in the PBGC Building, 105 W. Illinois, Midland.

"Basics of Petroleum Land Titles," Tuesdays, May 1, 8 and 15, from 7-10 p.m. This introductory level program examines the basic concepts and procedures involving Texas petroleum land titles. It is designed for land secretaries, lease analysts, beginning landmen, or anyone desiring a basic understanding of land titles. Eligible for CPE credits. Harris E. Kerr, Attorney, Midland, will instruct the course. Fee is $85.

"How to Select and Use a Microcomputer — An Introduction to Computer Literacy," Wednesdays, May 2, 9 and 16, from 7-9 p.m. T.R. Windecker, President, T.R. Windecker, Inc., will instruct. Fee is $40; family members $20.

"Basic Fundamentals of the Petroleum Industry," Thursday and Friday, May 3-4, from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Although this course was designed for non-technical support personnel, content is also of value to those in related technical fields. The seminar will give the participants a comprehensive overview of the many facets of the modern petroleum industry. Eligible for CPE credits. Dr. Raymond Bass, Jr., Lafayette, La., will instruct the course. Fee is $225.

Testing under way at Diablo Canyon

SAN LUIS OBISPO, Calif. (AP) — Initial testing is under way at the Diablo Canyon atomic power plant, nine years after the nuclear industry's "Rip Van Winkle" was put to sleep by engineering errors, lawsuits and anti-nuclear protests.

A low-power license for start-up operations became effective at 9 a.m. today, but Pacific Gas & Electric Co., owner of the $5 billion plant, said actual nuclear fission probably would not occur before Monday.

Even then the controversial, twin-reactor plant, the last to be built and licensed in California, will be limited to running at no more than 5 percent of capacity.

Twelve years in building and billions over-budget, the plant was given a lower-power license for testing purposes by the Nuclear Regulatory Commission last week amid continuing protests by opponents who have questioned the plant's safety.

"We certainly expect the normal amount of debugging to occur," said NRC spokesman Jim Hanchett from his office in Walnut Creek. "No matter how carefully things have been done, there will be problems like leaking values or pump motors that will require repair during the low-level operating program.

"We have a team of seven inspectors who are down at Diablo now monitoring the start-up on an around-the-clock basis," Hanchett said.

Meanwhile, about 50 anti-nuclear demonstrators marched Thursday at the plant's gates and 11 were arrested for investigation of trespassing, a sheriff's spokesman said.

The final barrier for testing of the plant was cleared Wednesday when a three-member panel of the U.S. Court of Appeals in Washington rejected a plea by opponents of the plant, Mothers for Peace, for another delay.

The group had charged that the NRC violated its own regulations in voting 4-1 to rescind a 2½-year suspension of a low-power license.

Hanchett said a special team had been called in to assist operators at the plant.

"Each of the operating crew is being augmented by a licensed, experienced operator from another utility plant," at the request of the commission, Hanchett said.

"We're running the associated pumps and motors that will be functioning in the plant and basically making sure all the equipment is running smoothly," said Greg Pruett, a PG&E spokesman.

"It's sort of like letting your car idle before you back it out of the driveway," he said. "Low-power testing would be like backing it out of the driveway and putting it in operation is like when you get the car on the street and drive it."

Slowdown in consumer spending 'good news'

By The Associated Press

The increase in personal income of Americans slowed in March — edging up just 0.5 percent for the smallest gain in seven months — but one analyst said that isn't necessarily bad.

Wednesday's income report from the Commerce Department "should show the financial markets we are not in an overheated, boom situation," said Roger Brinner of Data Resources Inc., a private forecasting firm.

Robert Ortner, chief economist for the Commerce Department, blamed part of the weaker March activity on late winter storms, which he said held down both consumer spending and employment activity. He said a more realistic picture was obtained by looking at the quarter as a whole. It showed personal income up at an annual rate of 13 percent, compared to 11 percent in the final three months of 1983.

"Putting it all together, the outlook is still excellent," he said. "Incomes are growing and people are confident about the future so the consumer sector of the economy should continue to do very well."

But, Michael Evans, head of his own private forecasting firm, noted, "The slowdown has definitely started" and that the Commerce Department's report is just the latest to show economic activity down in March.

The personal income increase was the smallest since a 0.3percent rise last August, the report said. The March rate was below the 0.7 percent February increase and less than one-third of the 1.6 percent January surge in income.

The slight 0.4 percent increase in personal consumption spending, which includes essentially everything except interest payments on debt, was even more significant, many analysts said.

Purchases of consumer products were actually down during the month, but the overall category showed a small increase because spending for services, which include such things as monthly housing costs, was up.

The March increase followed a sharp 1 percent drop in consumer spending in February, the first spending decline in seven months.

Many analysts said the February and March performance showed that the surge in consumer spending, which has fueled the recovery from the 1981-82 recession, is tapering off substantially.

The government reported Tuesday that construction of new homes and apartments fell 27 percent in March, the biggest dropoff on record, while other reports have showed retail sales down a sharp 2.2 percent and unemployment unchanged last month.

In other economic developments Wednesday:

—Chrysler Corp. said it earned $705.8 million in the first quarter of 1984 — a bigger profit than for any full year in history — and Chairman Lee Iaccoca said it was "the payoff" for the company's sacrifices and improvements. The No. 3 domestic automaker earned $701 million in all of 1983, only its second profitable year since teetering near bankruptcy in 1979.

—The American Telephone & Telegraph Co. confronted its stockholders for the first time since breaking up the Bell System and said its after-tax net income for the three months ended March 31 totaled $226.9 million, or 20 cents per share, with 983 million average shares outstanding.

Chris Evert Lloyd, who at age 16 was the youngest to ever reach the semi-finals of the U.S. Open, has gone from being number one to number two.

Darling of tennis

By LINDA-MARIE SINGER
King Features Syndicate

Bob Dylan's "The Times They Are A-Changing" mirrors the upside-down life of tennis millionairess Chris Evert Lloyd. Like the Nielsen ratings, Ms. Evert Lloyd's game has dropped in points — from number one to number two. And like a noonday soap, the famous Floridian now finds herself pointed in the direction of the divorce courts.

In 1979 when Chrissie Evert wed John Lloyd, the teeny-boppers' tennis idol from Great Britain, most insiders pegged them as the "Fairytale Couple."

"In one hour of our first date we just clicked — bingo!" remembers Lloyd. "I had always fancied her and thought, 'What a cute pair of legs. And, oh, that sense of humor. Especially those one-liners she'd crack off-court.' "

Ms. Evert Lloyd appraises it differently: "I guess we were looking for a relationship when we met. John and I were both lonely, and it was just the right timing."

Meanwhile, hopelessly in love, Lloyd's matches came to resemble a loosely shuffled deck of cards. After being dealt out in the early rounds, the handsome blond flew to his wife's side where, inevitably, she nabbed the first prize.

THIS PROMPTED A slew of comments from the media: Was Lloyd's career washed up? If so, would he then become Mr. Chris Evert Lloyd? How long could this union last?

"And I had thoughts of becoming the cute, little housewife," says Ms. Evert Lloyd with an easy smile. "But John knew better and helped me accept myself for what I am — a very competitive person."

Crediting her husband with aiding her in becoming more natural and spontaneous, she admitted shortly after her marriage: "I'm no longer working constantly on my image — what others will think about what I say or how I look. And I'm finding out it's a lot nicer that way."

Trying to hitch onto the marriage-go-round, the Lloyds established permanent residences in Amelia Island, Fla. (where they became touring pros), Palm Springs and Wimbledon. Yet the superstar kept reminding everyone: "Since I've been 15 I've traveled (she started playing tennis at age 5) and have been in the limelight. Fame restricts your privacy. But someday I look forward to a real home life."

But the problem was that Ms. Evert Lloyd, as a budding teen-age star, did not acquire her independence from her mother and father soon enough. She cites going from her parents' house into her first home with her husband as a painful period of adjustment.

Yet some would say that Ms. Evert Lloyd courted independence as soon as her love affair with Jimmy Connors went on the fritz. "That was five years out of my life," she says. "And Jimmy was my first love — the first one."

SHE SCREECHES, "Oh, God, I hope he was the first one! I mean, I was only 17...and so very vulnerable. You know how it is with your first experience. It's like the first of anything — a car, a title, a boy. It leaves a mark on your soul."

And now?

"Our relationship is reversed." She laughs, "It's so funny because our problem was that we were in love without being close friends. Today Jimmy and I talk more. Today we're best friends, but the pitter-patter is gone."

Still, people love to speculate. At last year's U.S. Open, Ms. Evert Lloyd was seen scrambling into the arms of friend Jimmy Connors.

While the two exchanged hellos, the other tennis pros pretended not to notice. But they did.

Could anyone forget this once-romantic twosome, who, for five long years, floated in and out of engagements? And even though Connors is married to a former "Playboy" pinup, and Ms. Evert Lloyd to an attractive British Davis Cupper, whenever they meet in public, the fascination is still there.

So are the good, wholesome looks that add to their marketable charisma, especially with this 29-year-old honey blonde who invites envy wherever she goes.

"YOU MIGHT SAY Martina Navratilova gives back humor," tennis dress designer Ted Tinling once quipped about the world's current number-one tennis star, "but Chris gives back charm."

Such charm has followed Christine Marie Evert Lloyd from her adolescence in Ft. Lauderdale to the big time.

From ribbons and ruffles, ponytail and bows, the winsome American initiated the craze toward femininity among women tennis players. "Billie Jean King proved that athletes could be women," declares Ms. Evert Lloyd, "but I think I helped prove that women could be athletes."

Shunning any sex-symbol talk, Ms. Evert Lloyd would rather be labeled "a feminine image type." These days the tennis woman, who seems always to be caught up in a swirl of publicity, appears as though she's stepped off a "Dynasty" set.

Q. Mac Davis is one of my favorite singers. What's he doing now? Any new records or TV specials coming up?

Missy Day
Baton Rouge, La.

A. He'll be on TV on an upcoming episode of "Solid Gold" and on May 14, he will co-host the Academy of Country Music Awards. That's about it for the moment for TV. He has just finished two stints, however, at the MGM Grand in Las Vegas. And he has a new record, "Soft Talk," just out.

Listen to it and you'll find out what he's been most preoccupied with the last year: his new wife. "Mac is so in love," says a friend. "In fact, he wrote one of the songs while watching her walk around the house in a bikini. He's been married before, but this marriage is it."

Among the reasons, it seems, are her intelligence, involvement with her own career (she's a nurse) and interest in other things besides her husband. "Mac has a pretty big ego," admits the friend, "but even he gets tired of talking about himself."

Q. I just love Howard Keel on "Dallas." Please tell me if he's married and has children.

Katherine Burton
Visalia, Calif.

A. "He's married to a wonderful woman named Judy and they have a 10-year-old daughter, Leslie," according to an associate. He also has three grown children from a previous marriage. He'll be married as well on "Dallas," although "he's engaged to Miss Ellie, but who knows if it will get to an actual wedding?" according to the associate. "Howard doesn't even know. Those plots are kept so secret and on those shows anything can happen."

"Dallas" has, undeniably, revitalized his career and he's taking advantage of it.

Q. Could you please tell me how old Mary Hart of "Entertainment Tonight" is and give me other information about her?

Tim Plantikow
Austin, Minn.

A. She is 33, from Sioux Falls, South Dakota, but from the ages of 8 to 18, she lived in Denmark, Sweden and France with her parents and two brothers because her father worked for International Harvester.

She returned to South Dakota for college and during her sophomore year at Augustana College won the Miss South Dakota beauty pageant, resulting in her appearance (as one of the 10 finalists) in the 1970 Miss America Pageant.

She became interested in journalism because of all the interviews she had to give as Miss South Dakota. So after graduating from college and teaching high-school English for a while, she drifted into TV journalism as a talk-show host in Sioux Falls, then in Cedar Rapids, Iowa, and Oklahoma City.

In 1979, while covering a story in Los Angeles for her Oklahoma City station, she decided to go for it and move there. During the next year, she appeared on the soap "Days of Our Lives" playing a TV interviewer and then performed it for real on the L.A. version of "PM Magazine."

In 1981, she co-hosted Regis Philbin's daytime NBC show, then was recruited as co-anchor for "Entertainment This Week." A few weeks later, she was moved to the nightly co-anchor spot, where she's been ever since.

She expects to remain with the show for the time being, but there may be musicals as well in her future — she's always loved musical theater. She performed in college and in amateur productions in Sioux Falls and is currently taking voice and dance lessons. There is also, most likely, marriage in her future. She's engaged to Dean Butler, late of "Little House on the Prairie."

Q. I want to know everything about Boy George of Culture Club.

Lisette Valentine
Waterbury, Conn.

A. George O'Dowd is the third son of six children of a working-class Irish Catholic family in South London and, as he explains it, he had a stormy relationship with his parents while he was growing up.

"Having six kids, my father and mother didn't show any emotion at all toward me," he says. "And all the time that's what I wanted."

After battles with his father, the 16-year-old George left home six years ago and started working — as a salesman in clothing stores and, appropriately, in the makeup department of the Royal Shakespeare Company.

At night, he did the clubs dressed in progressively more outrageous costumes — a nun's habit, gladiator togs — and was photographed for London magazines and newspapers.

He didn't sing, though, until Sex Pistols manager Malcolm McLaren invited him to audition for the group Bow Wow Wow. It didn't work out, but it gave him ideas and he and bassist Mikey Craig put together Culture Club.

Being the prime focus of the group has put some pressure on George. Some say he's taking his character too seriously and changing, but the members of the group say that he works to spread the attention to them and really is a sweet sensitive guy, as well as a smart one.

Watch next for the Grammy-winning group on an HBO special to air soon, and a tour this spring. But, contrary to rumors that he and Grammy telecast cohort Joan Rivers have a project in the works, they are, at least at his this point, merely "good friends."

Chris Evert still the darling of the tennis courts

Dressed in hot turquoise shorts and matching T-shirt, plus a flashy headband to hold down her tawny shorter hairdo, you'll quickly see a difference in her class and style which separated her long ago from the others.

"You can say that my daughter was naturally feminine and not contrived," insists Colette Evert. "The others on the circuit looked like typical jocks. Then Chrissie came along with her ribbons and ruffles. She's always been a classy lady."

SHE'S ALSO BEEN a gracious adversary who bears a sphinx-like trademark. "But that isn't really how I am off the court," she counters. "I'm warm, sensitive and have a good sense of humor. Naturally you can't show emotions when you play. My dad taught me that along with a built-in concentration."

That asset helped land her on top of the tennis heap for five years running, a $1 million salary (the first female tennis player to earn what was considered then a staggering amount) and global coverage.

"I guess the hoopla over Chrissie started in the 1970s," says Neil Amdur, sportswriter for the New York Times and author of "Chrissie." "When Dorothy Hamill, Olga Korbut and Nadia Comaneci were beginning to flutter and sprout, Chrissie became a role model."

Yet years before at age 16, when the adolescent burst on the U.S. Open scene, she became the youngest competitor ever to reach the semi-finals. That same season she racked up 94 percent of her matches, and jumped into the number-three rating in America.

She remembers,"When I was 17, I traveled with my mom, and at that time there weren't any younger girls. Those on the tour — Billie Jean, Rosie Casals and Margaret Court — didn't exactly reach out to me with open arms."

Even with the companionship of her mother and the constant wins, the teen-ager discovered how life on the tour could be lonely. "When I look at these younger players today, I think it has to be tougher on them emotionally. It's so lonely to deal with the ups and downs of the game, to be single and then go back to an empty hotel room and have nobody to share it with."

BUT HER SOCIAL whirl grew as constant as her triumphs. In fact, she spent her 19th year capturing not only Jimmy Connors, but also Wimbledon, the French and Italian opens. She achieved a 56-match winning streak, a record that still hasn't been equaled.

She also became the darling of the sport. Ellen Merlo, director of marketing communications of Philip Morris and the founder of the successful Virginia Slims events, deems Ms. Evert Lloyd the consummate professional. Ms. Merlo, along with others at the Slims, chartered the American's progress that went on and on from 1971 to 1978, when Ms. Evert Lloyd snagged a total of 23 Virginia Slims titles.

"From the first minute Chris came to play, she had poise and conducted herself well," Ms. Merlo claims. "It became obvious to us that she definitely was a champion-to-be. I love that twinkle in her eye, and the positive image she has brought to women's tennis."

Ask insiders like "World Tennis" editor Susie Adams about Chris Evert Lloyd, the magazine's most featured cover girl, and you'll hear Ms. Adams tell: "To all of us at 'World Tennis,' Chrissie remains the player of 1973 to 1983.

"Billie Jean influenced the early 1970s, but then handed the baton to Chris. To the tennis world at large, she has understood what a champion should be."

Even at a personal cost. Back in 1978, the life of this much-idolized tennis phenomenon began to show signs of discontent. When the athlete turned 23, most fans would have imagined this dishy blonde had everything.

STATISTICALLY, SHE WON 95 percent of all her matches, garnered the U.S. Open crown four consecutive times, captured Wimbledon, the French and Italian opens twice, and reached the number-one plateau five years running.

When the real and make-believe worlds hit a collision course, the fun stopped. "At times I got mixed up with the image and the real thing," she says. "A lot of people live through their image, but I was trying to find the real, natural me.

"And I wanted to say, 'Let me be a normal girl. Let me go back to Ft. Lauderdale and to my roots. Let me see if there's anything else to Chris Evert than hitting a tennis ball.' "

After taking an unprecedented four-month sabbatical, and seeing her ranking teeter from number one to number three (other competitors would be thrilled with life at the top), Ms. Evert Lloyd began noticing that she wasn't that hungry to win.

"And that's when people's attitudes toward me changed. Before (the drop in ranking) they always patted me on the back. Then it hit me when they all patted the new girl (Martina Navratilova) on the back: 'You're only as good as your last match.' "

Ms. Evert Lloyd's last good match — in fact, her only Grand Slam title in 1983 — took place at the French Open. From that time on, tennis writers shifted their loyalty to Martina Navratilova. And although number two does try harder, it hasn't been good enough. In all their recent encounters, Ms. Navratilova emerged victorious.

Chris Evert Lloyd

"EVERYTHING WAS TIED in," Ms. Evert Lloyd told the press. "How you are emotionally affects your health, and how you are physically affects your emotions. I don't think I was 100 percent into my tennis last year. That just wasn't my priority.

"I don't remember a single tournament where I was really fired up. My spirits weren't high because I was sorting things out in my personal life. I've been strong my whole career because of my concentration, and I lost it."

Will she retire?

"Physically, you know, I can hit the shots I want. Mentally I can still concentrate, but when those faculties get dimmer, I'll be the best judge to know when to stop."

Before the official split with her husband, there was talk of a family. One reporter asked if having children would afford her the same high as playing tennis, to which she responded: "My friends with children tell me you're more mellow and more content with kids."

According to Amdur, before Lloyd entered her life the young woman was constantly striving to please others. "Specifically, her dad and Connors," Amdur says.

"IN 1974 IT was no coincidence that both she and Jimmy were ranked number one in the world. Chrissie is typical of someone who can do one thing well at a time. Marriage, then, is the same. Although she wants to give it her all, she's come to grips with things and scaled down her expectations to where nobody's everything."

So the times have indeed changed for the 5-foot-6 former "Snow Queen" of tennis. Her life is in flux and, due to her "trial separation," she must now contend with the badgering English press.

She says,"I feel like reminding them (British press) that half the couples in America get separated. By no means does it mean our marriage is over. We just need time apart."

"I've tried to have it all, reach for the stars," says the world-famous tennis player. "And I'd still like to think I can be happy in both. I think that's possible, but it takes a lot of searching inside yourself."

Volunteers needed for arts celebration

From Staff Reports

Volunteers are needed for Midland's first Celebration of the Arts, set for May 11-19.

The week of events culminates in a full day of visual and performing arts at Midland Center and the adjacent part on May 19. Although many area residents have volunteered their services, more are needed to ensure the smooth flow of activities throughout the celebration.

"Now we are needing other people to become involved for the week before and Saturday in particular," says Carol Steele, communication chairman for the Celebration of the Arts. "We also can use a lot of muscle and brawn because we have a lot to move around."

To date, 66 area residents have committed their time as volunteers. "We need that many more," says Lorene Teed, volunteers chairman.

Art forms on display May 19 will include ceramics, drawing, fiber glass, graphics, jewelry, painting, photography, textile, sculpture, mixed media, floral arranging and calligraphy. In addition, food and drink booths will be set up and performances will be conducted throughout the day, inside and outside.

"The openings right now for volunteers are basically in the food booth areas and in the service areas. For instance, we need help pulling decorations up, setting up chairs and booths and moving equipment such as grand pianos and small buildings," Mrs. Teed says.

Volunteers can sign up for any amount of time they are able to make, whether it be two hours or all week.

"Nobody has to do it forever," Mrs. Steele says, laughing. "I just think it's something everybody's going to wish they'd been involved in because it's a community endeavor."

Additional information and application forms may be obtained from Norma Webb, executive director of Midland Arts Assembly, the umbrella arts organization for the cultural arts in Midland. Her office is located at the Midland Chamber of Commerce, 109 N. Main St. She is available from 1 to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday and may be reached at 687-1149.

A breakdown of each day's events thus far include:

—May 11 the opening ceremonies for the celebration of the arts will be held at RepublicBank First National Plaza from 11:45 a.m. to 1:15 p.m. The Thouvenel String Quartet and The Lone Star Brass Quintet will perform. At 8 p.m., Midland Community Concerts Association will feature the Texas Opera Theatre in "Champagne and Gershwin."

—May 12 a "Mini-Celebration of the Arts" will be held at Midland Park Mall where individual artists and some of the art forms offered in Midland will be recognized. That evening the Midland-Odessa Sumphony & Chorale will perform with bass-baritone A. Voketaitis as guest artist.

—May 13 each Midland church is being asked to give special recognition to "Sacred Music in the City's Churches." That afternoon the Museum of the Southwest will have a special showing of nationally known Midland artists and the Permian Basin Petroleum Museum and Library Hall of Fame will give special recognition to "Midland's Annual Celebration of the Arts." A reception will be held at 6:30 p.m. for the artists at Theatre Midland, 2000 W. Wadley Ave. At 7 p.m. Barbara Mandrell and Lee Greenwood perform at Chaparral Center. At 8 p.m., the Midland-based Thouvenel String Quartet will perform.

—May 14 will be a day of recognition for the historical and architectural achievements in Midland. Photography from Midland Camera Club will be highlighted. "Midland Artists in Review" will be presented at the Downtown Park Plaza from 11:45 a.m. to 1:15 p.m. "Encore '84," a Midland Talent Showcase produced by J.J. Baskin, will be presented at the Yucca Theatre at 7:30 p.m.

—May 15 a "Celebration of the Arts in the Schools" is planned with each school promoting its arts. From 11:45 a.m. to 1:15 p.m., the Lee High Honor Band and the Midland High Drum Corps will perform at the Downtown Park Plaza. Midland High and Midland Freshman High will perform a combined Spring Choral Concert at Midland High at 7 p.m. Lee High and Lee Freshman High will do the same at Lee High at 7:30 p.m.

—May 17 dance will be the theme when the Permian Civic Ballet Association and the Theatre Midland Dancers co-sponsor an evening production of "A History of Dance." The production will be produced by Tom Pazik, director of the Maryland Ballet, and Cherry Jones, choreographer and dance instructor at Midland Community Theatre.

—May 18 is National Museum Recognition Day and all Midland museums will have open houses that day. From 11:45 a.m. to 1:15 p.m., "Midland artists in Review" will perform at the Downtown Park Plaza. That evening ACT IX will present "Bells Are Ringing" at Theatre Midland. ACT IX is Midland Community Theatre's auxiliary organization.

—May 19 has been designated as a "Day of Celebration for the Individual Midland Artist." In addition to the art exhibition and sale, performances will be staged by Midland's performing artists. Support auxiliaries of Midland's cultural organizations will be invited to participate by manning information booths in order to provide the public with information on their organizations. Also, a "Run for the Arts" race will be held.

Each noon hour the week of May 14 MAA, in conjunction with the Midland Parks and Recreation Department, will co-sponsor "Celebration in the Park." Performing art groups and individual artists will perform in the Showmobile at the Downtown Plaza Park. Residents will be encouraged to bring lunch and enjoy the entertainment.

Organist Gerre Hancock will perform

One of the most distinguished and respected organists in the United States, Gerre Hancock, will appear in recital at First United Methodist Church, Illinois Avenue at Main Street, at 8 p.m. Thursday.

Organist and master of the choristers at the famed St. Thomas Church in New York City, Hancock is founder and past president of the Association of Anglican Musicians. He serves on the faculties of the Juilliard School in New York City and the Institute of Sacred Music, Yale University. In 1981, he was appointed a Fellow of the Royal School of Church Music.

His recitals have taken him all over the United States, Canada and Western Europe. During January of 1982, he spent three weeks in South Africa where he played recitals and conducted workshops. In addition to his performing and teaching careers, he is also a well-known composer of works for organ and choirs.

Hancock and the choir of St. Thomas have made a number of recordings. The choir has performed with the New York Philharmonic, American, Cleveland and Pittsburgh symphony orchestras and was the featured choir at the National Convention of the American Guild of Organists, held in Washington, D.C., in June 1982. Hancock's Midland performance is sponsored by the West Texas Chapter of the American Guild of Organists.

The program will include works by J.S. Bach and Maz Reger and an improvisation on themes submitted by Midland guild members. Hancock is the leading exponent of organ improvisation in the United States and studied the art in France with Nadia Boulanger and Jean Langlais.

Hancock received his bachelor of music from The University of Texas at Austin and his master of sacred music from Union Theological Seminary, New York. He was a finalist at the Munich International Music Competitions. His organ study has been with E. William Doty, Robert Baker and Marie-Claire Alain.

A reception for Hancock in the church parlor will follow the free performance. The public is invited to attend.

Although the royal boys aren't enthusiatic about aging in the castle's cellar with the royal port, the situation gets to be a little too much for, from left, youngest son John (Darren Harris) when Henry II (Mike Stannard) and his oldest son Richard (Greg Elsner) exchange physical blows in this scene from James Goldman's award winning comedy-drama, "The Lion in Winter." Henry's queen, Eleanor (Dianne Lewallen) looks on. The production, which is being staged in Theatre One at Theatre Midland, 2000 W. Wadley Ave., closes Saturday. For reservations call the theater's box office, 682-4111.

MHS senior to perform piano recital

Julie Griffith

Julie Elizabeth Griffith, an honors graduating senior at Midland High, will be presented in her senior piano recital April 29 at 2:30 p.m. in the parlor of St. Luke's United Methodist Church, 3011 W. Kansas Ave.

The daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Verne E. Griffith Jr., Miss Griffith is a student of Pamela Bristol. Her program will feature works by J.S. Bach, Mozart, Grieg, Chopin and Tcherepnin.

Miss Griffith has achieved many musical and scholastic honors throughout her school years, including first place winner in the 1980 Sonatina-Concerto Contest sponsored by the Midland Music Teachers' Association. She tied for first place in the 1982 Midland College Piano Solo Competition in her division, and was the first place winner in the 1983 competition. She has received Superior Rating for six years as a national winner in the National Piano Guild Auditions.

A member of the National Honor Society during her junior and senior yers, Miss Griffith has also been a three-year academic award winner. She is active in many phases of the life of St. Luke's United Methodist Church, including the choir and handbell choir.

Miss Griffith plans to attend Dartmouth College, Hanover, N.H., in the fall.

The public is invited to attend her recital.

MHS student to attend acting school

Barb'B Lively

Barb'B Lively has been accepted as a student at The American Academy of Dramatic Arts in Los Angeles this summer.

Founded in 1884, The American Academy of Dramatic Arts is the oldest school of professional actor training in the English-speaking world.

For her auditions Miss Lively performed excerpts from the roles of Jill in "Butterflies Are Free," Emily in "Our Town" and Cherie in "Bus Stop." For her dance routine, she performed a disco-jazz to "Billie Jean."

A junior at Midland High, Miss Lively is a member of the Back Packers Squad and Young Life there. She does volunteer work for various organizations, is a member of the Symphony Debs in Odessa and a former Miss Texas Teen. She served on former governor Bill Clements Drug Abuse Program for Teenagers.

Miss Lively plans to attend UCLA where she wants to major in drama-television productions-communications.

Professor to discuss Egyptian life

Contemporary issues in an historical context will be discussed at the Museum of the Southwest Thursday at 7:30 p.m. during Dr. Frank Samponaro's slide lecture, "Reflections on an Egyptian Experience."

Samponaro recently led a 10-day University of Texas of the Permian Basin sponsored trip to Egypt. The group toured major archaeological sites such as the Giza Pyramids, Memphis, Abu Simbel, Edfu, Esna, Valley of the Kings, Karnak and Luxor. He will share travel experiences during his richly illustrated slide program while offering an historical perspective on cultural and political life in Egypt. He will also discuss Egyptian social conditions and the perceived role of the U.S. in this Third World country.

Samponaro, associate professor of history at UTPB since 1974, has a bachelor of arts in history from Yale and a master of arts from The University of Texas at Austin. He received his doctorate from the State University of New York at Stony Brook.

"Reflections on an Egyptian Experience" will be held at the Marian Blakemore Planetarium.

MC faculty members to give recital

Five Midland College faculty members are presenting a recital of 20th century music at 8 p.m. Thursday in the Allison Fine Arts Auditorium at MC.

The program includes Claude Debussy's Sonate pour Violincello et Piano and "Les fees son d'exquises danseuses," Bela Bartok's "Romanian Dance," Opus 8, No.2, Lennox Berkeley's Sonatina for Guitar, Heitor Villa-Lobos' Etude No. 1, H. Sutermeister's Capriccio for Unaccompanied Clarinet, M. Ravel's "Don Quichotte a Dulcinee" and Gunter Raphael's Trio for Clarinet, Vionlincello and Piano.

Performers are Ron W. Franklin, guitar; Dr. Donald R. Grant, clarinet; Dr. Michael Jordan, baritone; Dr. Betty Walker Morris, piano; and Walter B. Osadchuk, cello. Osadchuk is an adjunct faculty member. The others are fulltime instructors at MC.

The public is invited to attend this free performance.

Theater to host Renaissance Fair

ODESSA — The courtyard of Odessa's Globe Theatre is being transformed into a bit of merry old England for the 4th annual Shakespearean Renaissance Fair of the Southwest Saturday and April 29.

The fair features authentic arts, crafts, foods, dances and entertainments from the time of Shakespeare in late 16th century England. Participants will be dressed in costumes from the period. Fairgoers may watch craftsmen, such as potters and weavers, at work, or join in Elizabethan games as in King of the Log or Jacob's Ladder.

Actress Linda Purl busy since leaving 'Happy Days'

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — Within less than a year, Linda Purl has been a neurosurgeon, a magazine reporter and a blind slave girl in ancient Pompeii.

It's been a busy time for the young actress who used to play Fonzie's girlfriend on TV's "Happy Days."

For a period in early March, she sometimes arose at 3:45 a.m. to drive to the filming location for a two-hour ABC pilot, "Midas Valley." She played a neurosurgeon in the "night-time soap opera" centering on the electronics industry.

Then, each evening, Miss Purl reported to the Coronet Theater in Los Angeles for her role as a magazine reporter in the Christopher Durang comedy, "Beyond Therapy." The critically praised production, staged by the L.A. Public Theatre, has had sold-out houses during much of its open-ended run.

"I figured at nights I was just taking naps," said the fragile-looking yet energetic blonde actress, who was curled up on a couch in her airy Beverly Hills home. Its Oriental decor recalled her childhood in Japan, where her father was an executive for Union Carbide.

"The (television) productin company was very supportive to the play and bent over backwards to get me there on time," she said, but noted that she was so exhausted "there are nights when I do not remember doing the play."

By contrast, she had a leisurely four months to perform in the ABC miniseries, "The Last Days of Pompeii," which will air in early May. Laurence Olivier, Olivia Hussey and Ned Beatty co-star in the remake about the Roman city destroyed by a volcanic eruption in 79 A.D.

In preparing for the part of a blind slave girl, Miss Purl — who also once played Helen Keller in "The Miracle Worker" in Tokyo — conferred with the Braille Institute in Los Angeles. She spent some time walking around blindfolded, and during the filming kept her gaze unfocused.

"I felt in many ways as if I were acting in a vacuum because I couldn't see anybody else's peRformance," she said. "I had to listen much more carefully. It was a good exercise for me."

Common to see families on the road

Wives, children join truckers to foster unity

Marty Holdren family on the road

By MARY OWEN
King Features' Syndicate

The image of the burly, rough-cut truck driver is fading into the sunset, and rolling over the horizon is a new breed of truckers — families. Moms, dads, kids and even dogs are getting into the act in an effort to enhance family unity.

"I call my youngest daughter when I'm not at home and she pleads, 'Daddy, come home,'" says Marty Holdren of Las Vegas, who long-hauls with his wife, Lynne, and daughters Keri, 8, and Kimberly, 3, and dog, Pia. "It tears me up!

"They're a pain in the rear when they're with me," he adds, referring to the extra stops and responsibilities of traveling en masse, "but it's worth it. We're together."

"The main reason I go with him is to see him," admits Mrs. Holdren. "The biggest drawback to trucking is it keeps families apart. Years and years ago you never would see women or kids. Now it's really common."

Sherry Wise of Woodland, Calif., who drives trucks with her husband, Marion, agrees with Mrs. Holdren about the advent of more trucking families, but attributes this to long-hauling more than short-hauling.

"YOU SEE MORE families on long-haul than local, but they are getting more involved," she says. "You get used to the adjustments you have to make just like anything else, but it helps if you like it. If you like something, taking a baby along and changing diapers is no big deal. You adjust."

Although there are drawbacks such as more frequent stops, expensive motel rooms and doing laundry at truck stops, most trucking families believe the benefits of staying together outweigh the disadvantages. And it affords them the opportunity to travel to places they might otherwise not visit.

"I can spend time with my family and take them places where we can see things like Disneyland," comments Mel Ulrey of Denver. "I may take one or two hours more but I don't stop at truck stops to shoot the breeze, so I still come out ahead. You miss them when they're not with you."

Thus, home usually becomes a bed in the back of a two-seater cab. For the youngsters, books, games, toys, sometimes a television and on-the-road activities help to pass the time.

Amanda Ulrey, 2, likes to "see some cows and go to Mickey Mouse's house." Keri Holdren says she likes getting out of school even though she still has to do plenty of homework while traveling and adds, "The kids at school hug me every time I come back."

Do these children and their families miss a regular home life?

Yes, is the answer from most families, who still emphasize the need to stay together. Even the extra expenses incurred make it worthwhile, although many aspects of normal home life such as friendships and social life take a beating.

"IT'S HARD TO make close friends that can accept fast changes in plans," explains Mrs. Holdren. "You just can't make plans!"

Mrs. Wise stresses the effect trucking has on social lives because of the inability to plan ahead, and admits her family has learned to "take it whenever we've time to take it.

"There are no weekends with a lot of jobs in this business, especially with seasonal work which often runs seven days a week," she adds.

With all this stress, why do families choose to stay in trucking? Partially because truck stops are now geared toward family needs. They are cleaner and have private locked showers, laundry facilities, merchandise catering to family needs, and better food.

Rex Dietz of Aim Transportation Inc. in Woodland attributes the facility changes and the acceptance of trucking families to today's attitudes in society.

"It's the trend now to keep the family together," he explains.

ACCORDING TO DIETZ, another factor in the changing image of today's truckers is that in order to be a successful driver, good business skills are needed to keep up with the paperwork and red tape. He believes this need is responsible for the attraction of more highly educated drivers to the field.

"The truckers' image has really changed. They're not just ignorant farm boys," he says. "A lot of drivers have college educations."

A college education in today's economy doesn't always ensure a substantial position which can support a family. This, in turn, leads to many more families lured to the financially attractive trucking industry.

John and Suzanne Caldwell are one such couple. They are striving for financial security before opting to have children.

They do not fit the typical image of truck drivers. John is tall and athletic with clean-cut, all-American good looks while Suzanne is petite, blond and pretty. Both appear to have stepped right off the ski slopes.

"Most people think women drivers are big, mean and rough-looking," says Caldwell, smiling. "People see Suzanne driving and tap their buddy on the shoulder.

"THERE'S NOTHING glamorous about truck driving, but it's nice to see women getting into the field."

Caldwell attributes this occurrence to the hiring of independent owner/operators by big companies who take care of all the paperwork for the drivers. He says it makes it easier for a lot more women and families to truck up and down the West Coast.

"And a lot of trucks are now more comfortable, easier to handle," he adds.

Teamwork is the key to family trucking, and according to Caldwell, good teams can earn from $30,000 to $60,000 yearly, after expenses.

"However, the guy having newer equipment will make less because he has higher overhead," he says. "Loads still pay the same and the time spent is the same. We only take loads which make us a profit."

He attributes the failure of some independent owner/operators to high maintenance costs and mismanagement. He says a trucker often spends up to 65 percent of his earnings on expenses such as maintenance, fuel, licensing, insurance, permits, motels and meals.

LIKE DIETZ, HE says there are lot of ways to go broke and feels a trucker has to know what he is doing in order to succeed.

The Caldwells have been successful in their efforts. They long-haul 24 hours daily between Eugene, Oregon, and Fort Worth, from April to September, taking one-and-a-half months off to relax in the winter, and short-hauling such items as rice, lumber and Christmas trees the remainder of the year.

According to the Caldwells, the stress they encounter is alleviated somewhat by the knowledge that they don't have to continue year-round. And although this routine is temporary, they still have to adjust to its demands. Often, extra time is needed at truck stops to ease the tension.

Because of the various pressures of long-hauling across the Western states, short-hauling seemed like a vacation to the Caldwells.

"It's so nice to come home and rake leaves on the front lawn," comments Mrs. Caldwell. "You don't stop to think about the little things about home life that you miss."

Both say they are often too tired to do little more than eat, shower and sleep while on the road. Video games provide the break in the routine they need, and are a favorite activity at each truck stop.

"THE DRAWBACKS TO this are you get tired, you get cranky, your eyes ache, your back aches..." says Caldwell.

Back troubles, kidney problems and eye strain are just a few of the hazards of long driving hours, but to the Caldwells and other trucking families, the striving for a common goal and the opportunity to be together make it right for them.

Trucking becomes a means to an end — a way to become financially stable in an unstable economy and to perhaps lead to the acquisition of their own trucking company or some other small business venture; a means of keeping food on the table; and sometimes simply to experience a different way of life.

"My truck's home. It's not all neat and clean — it's just home," says Norman Jackson from Daleville, Ala., who hauls medical exhibits coast-to-coast with his wife and son.

"Trucking will be my life until I can't turn the steering wheel any more. I just love it!"

'Shirley Temple' drives rig to have chance to travel

King Features Syndicate

Phyllis Bradbury

"Breaker one-nine for Shirley Temple," squawks the voice on the CB radio. The bright red 18-wheeler rolls down the Interstate, its 50,000 pounds of steel reinforcing bar stretched the length of a flat-bed trailer balanced behind the cabover tractor.

At the wheel, guiding the red monster, is a 5-foot-2, 110-pound lady with a halo of blond curls, the curls bouncing to the rhythm of the tractor's vibrations.

Two years ago, Phyllis Bradbury (Shirley Temple) was guiding a class full of ninth-graders down the road to mathematics skills at Turkey Creek Junior High School in Plant City, Fla.

"Which job is easier?" she is asked repeatedly.

"No comparison," she readily answers. "After teaching, this doesn't seem like work. Managing this rig is far easier than managing a class of less-than-math-inclined teen-agers!"

Why the drastic change in careers, from a profession to a blue-collar career?

"I had never been out of Plant City," says the graduate of the University of South Florida in Tampa, "except to go over to Tampa for classes. I wanted to travel. The financial rewards were a strong incentive as well."

When Ms. Bradbury was divorced at 25, she decided that the classroom was too confining, and the pay minimal. She looked around for other career possibilities and soon learned that many companies were actively recruiting well-trained, capable females to drive the big rigs.

She enrolled in the Washington-Holmes County Technical School's truck-driving program in Chipley, Fla., and graduated two months later.

Hired by Florida Steel Corporation of Tampa, she then began her in-house training before being assigned to a rig carrying typical loads, 100-foot bridge girders or steel drainage pipe 10 feet in diameter.

At the traffic department of the steel-manufacturing company, Ms. Bradbury joined 15 other female tractor drivers who handle the same loads and operate under the same rules as their male colleagues. For her first assignment, she drew a stretch-out trailer loaded with reinforcing bar going to Houston.

Since that time, she has hauled every type of load assigned to the transportation division, including the unwieldy loads of junked automobiles that make up the raw materials for steel products manufactured and fabricated by the company.

Whatever the load, Ms. Bradbury looks every inch the pride of the fleet in her immaculate white shirt with a triangle logo, steel-toed safety boots and designer jeans.

Ms. Bradbury says of her new career, "I will make twice as much money this year as I did teaching. But best of all is the feeling of control I have when I am in charge of that big red monster."

Ms. Bradbury's sentiments are echoed by other female drivers who left more traditional fields to enter this formerly all-male domain. The women like the pay, the sense of freedom and the challenges of the open road.

On the road, female drivers are still rare enough to cause comment, especially one as tiny and pretty as Phyllis Bradbury. Does all this attention cause difficulty?

"No, it's kinda neat," she says. "And that certainly is a switch from teaching.

CHECKING OUT THE LIBRARY

Smithsonian articles written for nonspecialist

By BARBARA TILLMAN

Magazines which cover a broad spectrum of subjects and formats, and which appeal to widely varying audiences, usually come under the heading of general editorial publicatiCre musts for public libraries and the Midland County Library does its best to have as many as possible. All of the magazines to be reviewed here have been recommended for school and public libraries. Students use these periodicals quite frequently in their research, but they are titles which are also of interest to the general reader.

THE SMITHSONIAN covers everything which would be included in the Smithsonian Institution itself. Articles on conservation, auction houses, infant bonding, and deep-sea mining have appeared in issues of this publication. These articles are written for the nonspecialist and contain a great deal of information in easy to read form. The excellent photography and other illustrations add to the appeal of this magazine. We have THE SMITHSONIAN dating back to 1971.

A magazine which has very high literary standards is THE NEW YORKER. Only the best American writers are published in the magazine, among all who strive for the honor. Each issue includes fiction, poetry, commentaries on current political events and reports on significant social concerns. Of course, as one may suppose, the events taking place in New York City are also included in every issue. Art events and exhibitions are reviewed in "Goings On About Town." There are also lengthier theater, music, film, dance, and record reviews. THE NEW YORKER'S prose and poetry has gained quite a reputation over the years and regular readers can always expect quality. The library has this publication from 1977 to the present.

Another magazine regarded as an outstanding literary publication is THE ATLANTIC. It also contains fiction and poetry submitted by the best and most popular of contemporary writers. The general format includes monthly reports on life and politics in foreign countries, as well as essays on economics, education and other aspects of American life and culture. The intellectual standards are high and feature articles present a logical balance of facts, opinion, and theories. No library can afford to be without this periodical and we have acquired many years of back issues. We have it on microfilm from 1875 to 1872. From 1913 to 1929, our back files are irregular, but from 1929 to date, we have the complete set.

LIFE is a general interest magazine which ceased publication in 1972 but started up again in 1978. Its emphasis is on photography accompanied by brief texts. The new LIFE has an abundance of color photographs which the former publication did not have. In other ways, though, the newer version is quite similar to the previous one. Some feature articles are designed to amuse and others to educate or instruct. Most of the articles are socially relevant and LIFE's editorial approach is serious. With the exception of the few years the magazine was out of publication, we have it from 1936 to date.

WORLD PRESS REVIEW is a periodical which reprints or excerpts from foreign newspapers and magazines. Five feature articles appear each month and may cover Latin America, the Middle East, or Moscow. Selection of the items to be included is oriented toward a U.S. audience. High schools and public libraries find it useful since it reports on current events in foreign countries, and it presents different perspectives on U.S. events. This publication was formerly called ATLAS WORLD PRESS REVIEW and we have it under that title from 1974 to 1980. We have it under its new title of WORLD PRESS REVIEW from 1980 to date.

Novel takes place on neutron star

"The Integral Trees," by Larry Niven; Del Rey-Ballantine, $14.95; 256 pp.

A Review

Around an aged neutron star, far from Earth, circles a huge torus of gas. The neutron star is inactive and itself orbits a bright, sunlike star that illuminates the torus with a shimmering glow. The gas pressure inside the torus is high, and all manner of debris orbits about, providing a chemical soup reminiscent of Earth itself.

Life abounds. The entire torus, called Smoke Ring, is orbiting, and thus in free fall. What does nature evolve in such a weightless zone? Nearly every animal can fly, and the dominant plant form is immense trees, all kept pointing inward at the neutron star by tidal forces. Winds whip in opposite directions, making the trees look like the tall-S integral sign of mathematics.

A strange vision, but not wholly fanciful. Such tori are commonplace in recent astronomy, and probably form naturally around compact, massive stars.

Astrophysics is interesting, but to tell a story in such a strange setting one must add people, conflict, character. "The Integral Trees" opens long after humans have come upon the Smoke Ring and colonized it. The weird paradise has its beauties, and when things go right the livin' is easy — but now a chance encounter with a vagrant orbiting mass has cast one integral tree down, closer to the neutron star, upsetting its ecology. A small exploratory band must set out from the foot of the tree and scale its 100-kilometer length, searching for food. Along the way they learn more about their half-forgotten heritage, and encounter the progressively stranger physics of their environment.

Larry Niven is best known for his construction of enormous environments, especially the giant wedding-band orbiting a star in "Ringworld." There, people live on the inside curve of the band, pinned to it by centrifugal force, with air, trees and elbow room for 1,000 continents. The plot strategy of "Ringworld" was also the trekquest, meeting the wonders and horrors implicit in the underlying physics, but coming as a surprise to all but the most shrewd.

Here, Niven's masterly use of science-fiction strategies once more hits every note, springing surprises and plot turns with dizzying pace. The bizarre but plausible setting is meticulously worked out and at times lyrically evoked. His semi-barbaric natives have ample savvy but don't know the underlying science; there are countless amusing bits of garbled physics and wry commentary on human self-delusion.

Niven, one of the princes of "hard" s-f, appeals to the aficionado's delight in working out a basic premise with rigor, yet with unforeseen angles. As Robert Frost once said of free verse, much s-f is like playing tennis with the net down. It ignores scientific facts, or merely tips its hat in that direction while pursuing plots that could have happened just as easily in the humdrum present.

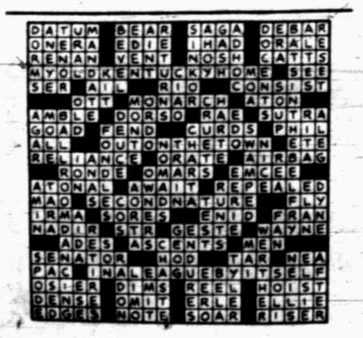

Hard s-f stresses fidelity to an external standard of truth, often with the same motivations that leads detective novelists to put police procedure right. But hard s-f uses a realism of possibilities, guided by currently acceptable science. This element of well-grounded imagination is perhaps the central delight in Niven's work, particularly his cleanly efficient short stories.

The difficulty lies in carrying a reader through a strange world and also making the people and emotions carry full dramatic force. It's hard to keep so many balls in the air. In the quest plot, the precise nature of the explorers doesn't matter much, and Niven doesn't expend much effort in having us know them. His novel rushes along, deftly satisfying curiosity, without making us care much about what finally happens to the people.

Readers new to s-f should approach a purebred sample like "The Integral Trees" remembering that, from the perspective of conventional fiction, it is strong in some unique suits, while weak in more well-worn ones. It celebrates the joys of puzzle-solving, of science stretched to the limits of what it can do, of characters living in "outre" places with aplomb. Niven again lifts the reader far from the conventional world — and does it with dash.

Opening lead: Jack of ♣.

1975 was the 25th anniversay of the Bermuda Bowl matches — the world team championship of bridge. To commemorate the occasion, the event was staged on the tranquil island of Bermuda, where the late Norman Bach organized the first championship.

The tournament was anything but tranquil. The calm of international bridge was shattered by cheating accusations against one of Italy's pairs. Then a shaken U.S. team frittered away considerable lead and lost the final to Italy on the famous king of clubs" hand featured in this space some time ago.

This hand cropped up early in the final and helped the U.S. to its lead. The Italian South opened a weak one no trump and there could be considerable discussion as to what West should bid with his solid eight-card suit. You would find supporters for any number of clubs from two to five.

In the room where the Italians held the East-West cards, West introduced his clubs at his first opportunity and bought the hand at four clubs, which went down one trick. Sitting West for the U.S. team was Billy Eisenberg. He decided that there was no need for him to enter the auction immediate, so he passed!

The auction took a most pleasant turn for him. When North showed a hand with a long diamond suit and a smattering of strength, South elected to try three no trump on the basis that the diamond suit would introduce a least six tricks for his side. Eisenberg passed again (he was happy with the contract — if he doubled North-South would almost surely run to four diamonds) and three no trump became the final contract.

In the best textbook style, Eisenberg lead his fourth-best club — the jack. By the time he had cashed all eight of his clubs, his partner had signaled for a spade lead. So the defenders took the first nine tricks for a gain of 350 points, or 8 international Match Points.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

Jeane Dixon
Monday, April 23, 1984

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Actresses Valerie Bertinelli and Joyce DeWitt, fashion designer Roy Halston, "Fall Guy" star Lee Majors, Shirley Temple Black, actor David Birney, Buffalo quarterback Joe Ferguson, Chicago Blackhawks goalie Tony Esposito and Hall of Fame pitcher Warren Spahn celebrate birthdays today. Also born on this date: music's Serge Rachmaninoff, Canadian P. M. Lester Pearson and American Gen. Lucius Clay. Friends play a larger and larger role in your career. Following a set schedule will make you more efficient. Money becomes available for new investments. Consult experts. Romance turns an important corner. Your relationship with mate is on a smoother course. Spend more time with offspring.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Do not let anger prevent you from thinking about a business or financial matter objectively. Steady effort will boost your earnings. Someone could be paying games in romance.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Trips help you drum up new business. Profits soar! A conservative approach serves you well in both finance and romance. A long-pending transaction is brought to a conclusion.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): An old problem can be solved with the help of a new friend. You obtain useful information from friend or relatives. Watch out for deception, however. Bring differences with mate into the open.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Steer clear of argumentative and emotional business associates. Make a greater effort to please higher-ups. Your abiltiy to handle extra work impresses someone influential. Do not try to rush romance.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): A difference of opinion could lead to a power play at work; avoid this. A phone call or confidential memo gives you new insights regarding a problem. Be patient.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Hints regarding a business or financial deal could make you anxious. Wait until you can get the facts from reliable sources. Invite an out-of-towner to a home-cooked meal.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): A project may have to be put on the back burner for a while. Do not get discouraged! Raises and promotions may be delayed, but they are definitely on the way.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): You need to concentrate on grabbing the brass ring this week. Forget petty differences with your associates and get on with your career. A long-distance call lifts your spirits. Romance prevails.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22—Dec. 21): Those in construction and engineering will have a banner day if they get an early start. Let romance simmer for a while. Avoid saying too much. An important letter finally arrives.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): A last-minute decision will disrupt some plans, but could also save a lot of money. Face an accuser directly. Sharing your problems with others may not be a good idea. Call home.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Confusion over times and dates could cost you money. Check your schedule carefully. Not a good day to sign agreements. Yield to a child's wishes; you will be glad later on!

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): The help you give a Taurus will be repaid many times over. Business trends shift in your favor. Romantic choices are easier to make now. A great evening for entertaining at home.

Unusual, hearty salads can be served as main course

Tired of preparing the same old heavy meals. Why not try these unusual and hearty salads as a main dish?

COD STEAKS BOUQUETIER

2 small yellow straightneck squash (about 6 ounces each), sliced
2 small zucchini (about 6 ounces each), sliced
Salt
⅓ cup white vinegar
3 tablespoons sugar
¼ teaspoon white pepper
1 small onion, very thinly sliced
4 cups water
1 tablespoon cooking or dry sherry
4 small cod steaks, each cut about ½ inch thick
Green Mayonnaise Dressing (below)
About ½ cup freshly grated horseradish
Parsley leaves for garnish

Prepare marinated squash: In medium bowl with rubber spatula, toss yellow squash and zucchini with 2 teaspoons salt until well mixed; cover and let stand at room temperature 30 minutes. Add vinegar, sugar, pepper and onion; toss thoroughly. Cover and refrigerate.

Meanwhile, in 10-inch skillet over high heat, heat water, sherry and 1 tablespoon salt to boiling; add cod steaks; heat to boiling.

Reduce heat to low; cover and simmer 5 to 8 minutes until cod flakes easily when tested with a fork. Remove steaks from water; drain and place on large plate.

Cover plate with plastic wrap and refrigerate until cod is well chilled, about 1½ hours.

Prepare Green Mayonnaise Dressing. Cover and refrigerate.

Drain marinated squash. Arrange squash, cod steaks and grated horseradish on platter. Spoon some dressing on top of each steak and garnish each with a parsley leaf. Serves four.

Green Mayonnaise Dressing: In blender at medium speed or in food processor with knife blade attached, blend ⅓ cup olive oil, ¼ cup loosely packed watercress leaves, ¼ cup loosely packed parsley leaves, 2 tablespoons cider vinegar, 1 teaspoon tarragon leaves, 1 teaspoon sugar, 1 teaspoon dry mustard, ¾ teaspoon salt, and 1 egg a few seconds until thoroughly mixed.

Remove center of cover (or cover) and, very slowly, pour ¾ cup salad oil in steady stream into mixture. Continue blending until well mixed and thickened.

SORRENTO, CHEESE AND PEPPER SALAD

1 7-ounce jar roasted sweet red peppers
3 cup olive or salad oil
3 tablespoons red wine vinegar
1 tablespoon chopped parsley
½ teaspoon oregano leaves
½ teaspoon sugar
¼ teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoon crushed red pepper
1 small head iceberg lettuce, sliced
2 medium celery stalks, thinly sliced
½ pound Fontina or Port du Salut cheese, cubed
1 16-ounce can pitted ripe olives, drained and sliced

Drain red peppers and mince enough to make 1 tablespoon; cut remaining peppers into ¼-inch-wide strips.

In large bowl, mix minced peppers, olive oil, red wine vinegar, chopped parsley, oregano, sugar, salt and crushed red pepper. Add lettuce, celery, cheese, olives and red-pepper strips; toss to mix well. Makes 6 first-course servings. 280 calories per serving.

MOLDED CHICKEN AND POTATO SALAD

1 3-pound broiler-fryer
1 medium onion
Water
4 medium potatoes (1½ pounds)
1 10-ounce package frozen peas and carrots
3 tablespoons milk
2 tablespoons lemon juice
1½ teaspoons salt
¼ teaspoon pepper
Mayonnaise
2 medium celery stalks, sliced
1 large carrot for garnish
1 green onion for garnish

Rinse chicken, giblets and neck with running cold water. Place chicken, breast-side down, in saucepan or saucepot just large enough to hold the chicken (4- to 5-quart size). Add giblets, neck, onion and 2 inches water and over high heat, heat to boiling.

Reduce heat to low; cover and simmer 35 minutes or until chicken is fork-tender. Remove chicken, giblets and neck to large bowl; refrigerate 30 minutes or until easy to handle.

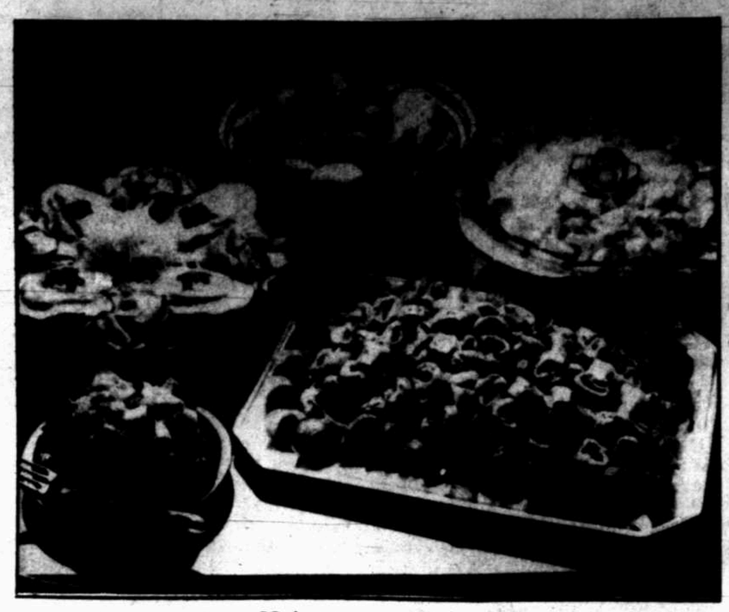

Meanwhile, in 3-quart saucepan over high heat, heat potatoes and enough water to cover to boiling. Reduce heat to medium-low; cover and cook 25 to 30 minutes until potatoes are fork-tender. Drain potatoes. Cool potatoes until easy to handle; peel and dice.

In same saucepan, prepare frozen peas and carrots as label directs; drain.

When chicken is cool, discard skin and bones; cut meat and giblets into small pieces. In large bowl, mix milk, lemon juice, salt, pepper and ¾ cup mayonnaise until blended. Add chicken, potatoes, peas and carrots, and celery; toss to coat well with dressing.

Line 2- or 2½-quart bowl with plastic wrap; spoon chicken-salad mixture into lined bowl, packing it well. Cover and refrigerate until well chilled, about 3 hours.

To serve: Invert salad onto platter. Spread ½ cup mayonnaise over outside of salad. For garnish, cut carrot into thin slices.

Women can cope with fear caused by children's stepmother

By KAY MARIE PORTERFIELD
King Features Syndicate

"We had potato salad, Mom. It was the best I ever ate." My 9-year-old son chattered away as he unpacked his suitcase from his weekend visit with his father — my ex-husband. "You ought to call Karen and find out how she makes it!"

Maybe it would have been different if the child's life-long aversion to potato salad had been cured at a neighbor's house, but Karen, his new stepmother, had been the one to win him over.

I felt an immediate stab of jealousy in the pit of my stomach, and then fear took over. In one rush, all the nasty feelings I'd dealt with after my divorce suddenly surfaced. What if Karen were a better cook than I? What if she were a better mother? What if my son came to love her more than he did me?

Keeping my cool, I finished helping with the unpacking and retreated to the living room where I could hide behind a book for a few minutes and collect my thoughts. As if feeling scared and angry weren't bad enough, I felt guilty, too, for letting those emotions nag at me.

Instead of feeling pleased that my son was broadening his taste in food, I saw the whole potato-salad incident as a put-down, a criticism of my skills as a mother. Although my temporary mood wasn't pleasant, I wasn't the only one to suffer from a bad case of the stepmother jitters.

Three out of every five divorced people remarry within five years of their final separations, and it has been estimated by the Stepfamily Association of America that one in every seven kids in this country is involved in a stepfamily.

Feeling shaky when a former spouse remarries, when your kids add a new stepmom to their family circle, is one of the most intense and least-talked-about events a single mother can go through.

Anger and jealousy are normal things to feel when your ex remarries. After all, now you're being called to share your children with a new person.

Because so much of your time and energy is tied up in trying to cope with being a single parent, overreacting to the fact that there is now another woman in your children's lives is an easy trap to fall into.

Getting used to a stepmother is a transition period for both your children and for you. If it makes you feel less threatened, learning how to be a stepmother is a difficult job, too.

Until enough time has passed for everybody to adjust to their new roles, there are some positive ways to handle your fear that a wicked stepmother might be set on wooing your kids' affection away from you.

— Know that most stepmothers have no desire to take over your job as biological mother. In the first place, it just can't be done.

In the second place, studies of stepfamilies show that most stepmoms opt for an "adult friend" role rather than trying to replace a child's real mother.

— Don't believe everything your kids tell you. This goes for both the positive and the negative comments they make about life with a part-time stepmother.

— Try not to compare yourself to the new stepmother. The two of you are different people with different mothering skills and different styles.

— In the meantime, don't make negative comments about her to the children. If she's rotten, they'll find out on their own. If she isn't, they'll question your bitterness and probably hold your remarks against you in the future.

— Don't pump the children for information about their new stepparent. It isn't fair to place them in the position of being double agents.

Granted, you're bound to feel some curiosity about the way things are "over there," but too much interest in the ex's new spouse may mean you haven't accepted the divorce and that you're still hanging on to your former marriage partner.

— Avoid being too helpful. A new stepmother should know about children's allergies and other important information, but some mothers intrude too far into alien stepfamily territory.

— Don't enter mothering contests. Just because she makes cheesecake doesn't mean your kids will hate you if you don't sign up for cooking school. Of course, the children will enjoy it for a while if you try to outdo stepmom at every turn with affection, attention and presents.

— Try not to assume your relationship with stepmom will fit a certain pattern. Families handle this relationship in different ways. Some mothers and stepmothers communicate frequently about the kids, others rarely have contact.

— Focus on your own relationship with your children. If you're feeling terribly threatened, maybe it's because you feel you don't spend enough time with the kids.
