ARMISTICE TO BE OBSERVED QUIETLY HERE

Legion Banquet Is Only Feature Arranged For Day

BURK TO CELEBRATE

Extensive Program In Nearby Town To Attract Wichitans

For the first time in the seven years since the armistice ending hostilities between the United Stats and the allied nations was signed on November 11, 1918, Wichita Falls is to have no formal celebration of that event, and save for a banquet by the American Legion Wednesday night, will allow the anniversary to go almost unnoticed. So far as is known now all stores in the city will be open all day. Churches generally have arranged no special services for the occasion, and the city's schools will probably remain in session all day with special chapel exercises at the high school and Junior College the only order of the day.

No Parade.

A large number of reservations have been secured for the American Legion's banquet at the Kemp hotel, Wednesday evening at 7:30 and it is expected that about 200 will be there. This probably will be followed by a dance. This banquet is being substituted for the parade and hour's service downtown that has in the past been the program of the legionnaires.

Armistice day services were held yesterday morning at the church of the Good Shepherd by the pastor, Rev. Fred T. Datson. Mention of the ocasion was made at some other churches.

Burk to Celebrate.

Burkburnett has planned an extensive program for the occasion, it is understood, and a large number of the American legion members here and others interested are expected to visit that city Wednesday.

The day, Nov. 11, is the seventh anniversary of the ending of the world war, that day in 1918 marking the cessation of fighting that had lasted for more than four years for most of fthe nations in Europe and one year and eight months for the United States.

Freezing Weather Here Early Sunday

Wichita Falls took a bare freeze early Sunday morning and its prospective blizzard turned out a "fizzle." A minimum temperature of 29 degrees was recorded Saturday night and it was not expected late Sunday that last night would reach much below to the freezing point. Yesterday was clear and pleasant and a maximum temperature of 52 degrees was registered. The wind which Saturday night reached stiffy proportions was hardly noticed yesterday, an average of seven miles an hour showing in the day's report. Direction had changed from north to south.

The railroads reported a general freeze over the whole territory around Wichita Falls with no rain and the prospect for a clear warm Monday exceedingly good.

OIL MEN WATCH DEVELOPMENT IN 2 SECTIONS

Wichtex-Dixie and Megargel Areas Hold Center of Stage

Two areas loom as principals in north Texas oil field development for the coming week. North of Archer City the Wichtex-Dixie area will be a factor to be considered for the next month or so before the coming week has drawn to a close, and south of Megargle interest will be centered on the completion of the Simms Oil company's No. 1. Richardson, south of production and testing a sand some 20 feet higher than that from which other wells in the new pool are producing.

East Archer county has a new chance to develop production where Superior Oil Producing company and T. J. Pyle are testing a sand at 1,291 feet in their No. 1, Rinder, in lot 58, Clark and Plumb, block 5.

Market Is Steady.

The market looks as if it will remain fairly steady. It is characterized by local refiners as in a "healthy equilibrium" with gasoline stocks at about the right figure and crude quotations high enough and gasoline quotations low enough to prevent any big increase in already minimized runs to stills in the plants.

In Wichtex-Dixie Area.

In the Wichtex-Dixie area, Wichtex Oil company and Dixie Oil company were reported Saturday drilling below 1,455 feet and expected to be looking for the sand sometime late during the day in their No. 2, southwest of the well, a 20-barrel oiler with an equal amount of water. Gulf is also

Answer Youth's Plea To Keep Mouths Clean

Three hundred and forty-eight men, members of Sunday's Kay Bible class, raised their hands as a pledge Sunday morning that they would "keep their mouths clean" when at the conclusion of a short talk on "Profanity," delivered by Jack Martin, son of Mr. and Mrs. N. H. Martin, Oral Jones, class secretary, asked for promises to follow in the wake of the young man's address.

In his talk, young Martin who is but 18 years old and a prominent member of the Junior college student body, said:

A Guarded Tongue.

A guarded tongue is not only an asset, but it is a blessing, says a well-known writer, and the man who can go among his brethren and meet and greet them with a clean mouth generally has to his credit a clean mind and a clean heart. Profanity has no place among just and upright men, and it is an unfortunate condition when any man arrives at a point in his life when he feels justified in indulging in profanity.

No matter how good a man may be, he has lost one of the priceless possessions of life if he can not refrain from the use of profanity. Such a man is not a credit to his country, and, in the end he does not enjoy the confidence or the friendship of sincere citizens. He may count himself among the brethren, but such a man does not and can not hold a place in the hearts and affections of good men who are conscientiously practicing the principles of righteousness.

"Cussin'" Gains Nothing.

It is possible to draw a distinction between profanity and good-natured banter, that is often interspersed with a "bit o' cussin'," but, after all, men can gain little by mingling with the man who bases his popularity upon his ability to deviate frfom what is considered clean English. It is far better that a man be a nonentity than to feel that his success as a "good fellow" is based on his power to swear.

How often has a strong, big-hearted, honest and sincere man found himself helpless and blushing when asked the question, "Do you swear?" Such a man, imbued with all the faculties of his sex and in the blood of his manhood, is a standing apology before his fellows when forced to admit that he indulges in profanity.

U. S. Needs Clean Men.

The average man should be tolerant of the shortcomings of his fellows, for he must realize that he himself is not without his faults, but the brother who can admonish another for his profanity is to be commended. Men can swerve in many ways, and he who can show his brother the error of his way in his choice of language not only serves the erring brother, but he serves all mankind.

Every man has a right to desire that his brethren refrain from the use of profanity, and in taking this position he is entitled to the support of all clean minded brethern. The strength of our country lies in the men under its banner and if they be clean in mind and heart, profanity will soon become obsolete.

THE WEATHER

"I thought it was a good idea to let Skinny cut my hair an' spend the money for bananas, but I'm scared Papa won't think much of it."

LYRICS OF LIFE.
By Douglas Malloch.
The Night Is Coming.

A softer light the twilight throws
On house and street and grass and tree
A softer light because it knows
The night is coming presently;
The world would go to its repose
From all the day's disorder free.

The pavement stones are cool again,
That at the noontide were so hot;
Or winds that were so hurried when
They climbed the hill, have haste forgot.
The things of day, important then,
The world at night remembers not.

And how shall mortal lay him down!—
Still clutching to his weary breast
The heat and hurry of the town,
By angor and by hurt possessed!—
Or shall he put away his frown,
As does the world, and sleep, and rest!

He wisest to his slumber goes
Unburdened by some legacy
Of little worries, little woes,
From all the day's resentment free—
Forgets, forgives, because he knows
The night is coming presently.

But Drunken Man Struck Snag When He Offered it to Cop.

"Sure," Carmichael told him, "but you'll have to come out to the car. I don't want to take one in here."

Darrow Says Lincoln At First Did Not Include Emancipation In His Program; Takes Crack At Dry Law

Says Volstead Act "Hasn't Seemed to Have the Slightest Effect On My Appetite;" Still Drinks, He Admits

DETROIT, Nov. 8.—(AP)—With a fling at prohibition and genially pessimistic comments on life in general, Clarence Darrow, Chicago attorney, addressed 1,500 negroes at a negro branch Y. M. C. A today. Darrow is in the city as counsel for Ossian H. Sweet, his wife and nine other negroes charged with murder in connection with the shooting to death of Leon Breiner, when, police say, volleys were fired from the Sweet residence located in a white neighborhood.

Regarding the eighteenth amendment, Darrow said:

"I used to drink before prohibition—moderately. I still drink. The Volstead act hasn't seemed to have the slightest effect on my appetite."

After commenting on the race problem Darrow took up the question of slavery.

Refering to the emancipation proclamation of Abraham Lincoln, he declared it was "a devil of an emancipation proclamation."

"Did yuo ever read it?" he asked. "Well it told the south if it quit fighting it could re-enter the union and keep the negroes as slaves. Lincoln was not an abolitionist of the stripe of Sumner and Garrison. He only resorted to emancipation later. It was not a part of his program from the first."

Indian Buries Babe Alive As a Sacrifice to Bring Back Dead Mother; Faces Murder Charge

PUEBLO, Colo., Nov. 8—(AP)—The love of a Ute Indain for his bride, which caused him to bury his 17-day-old baby alive in the grave of its mother, beleving it would bring her back to life, will bring Platt Nae face to face with the white man's law here tomorrow in a federal court trial for murder.

Defeat Expected To Spur Aggies, But Steers Prove Power

Ed Hughes' Column

Dreary detractors as well as the ecstatically enthusiastic ever follow eed is well represented in the amor arising over the startling idiron deeds of Red Grange. As ual, the latter predominate, but ere are plenty of sceptics of a sort d few who are willing or perhaps le, to see the man as he really is.

* * *

Going out of Franklin Field after e Penn game, one Jeremiah moaned: "Oh, he's great, all right. But n't forget he learned a lot from uppke. What did Grange know bout football until he came under upp's wing Nothing. That's roved by the fact no one had ever eard of him before that. The coach ever gets a quarter of the credit due im when a new star is acclaimed.

* * *

There is some logic in the claim, f course. The coach's business is to each, to explain the art of football o his charges. There are certain lements of offence and defence which ave become standardised, the necesary equipment of every man who ould play high grade football. There re right and wrong ways of doing his and that. This knowledge is the roperty of every man on the eleven efore long. A keen coach may add few shrewd theories of his own nd thus claim a share of a hero's enown. All backs are advised to roll heir hips away from a would-be ackler in the manner in the manner f Grange.

Consider, however, how many gird spirants are taught the same things n the same way in a season. And hen reflect how many are able to ccomplish with this knowledge anything approaching the exploits of Grange. The question promptly answers itself. Grange's Zuppke-taught lements are in the power of genuis. The man strikes out far beyond his eachings and his fellow pupils because e is Red Grange.

* * *

The coach in this instance may be likened to the manufacturer of artists' utensils and the artist. The one supplies the canvas, the palette, the paint and the brushes. There he stops.

The artist with his own heaven-born gifts, produces the master-peice for all to admire.

Very few athletes who achieve great fame owe much to anyone else for their successes—that is, in a purely artistic sense. Had they not the original ability to absorb knowledge and the powers to execute it, they could never become known. You frequently hear that had it not been for So-and-So this fellow What's-His-Name, would never have amounted to anything. But generally, in the sum and total of things, the hero deserves most of the credit.

Many of the most consummate masters of sport never had any lessons worth the recounting, though some outsider is forever claiming credit for this and that.

Bill Tilden, for instance, developed his court wizardry by practising with a tennis ball against a barn door. Bill often hammered the ball back and forth for hours at a clip, using forehands, backhands, and various "cuts" on the sphere. Of course he picked up a little from some of the star players of his day, but the quantity of information gathered, this was almost negligible. Tilden is a self-made tennis champion, and the greatest the courts have ever known.

* * *

Mlle. Lenglen's rise to fame was quite similar to that of Tilden's. The French girl owes her astonishing sense of distance, accurate placing, to long hours of practice. Her father used a novel scheme to develop an intuitive sense of distance in his talented daughter.

* * *

M. Lenglen used to place a handkerchief on the base-line at which Suzane would slam balls for sometimes a whole afternoon. The handkerchief was used as a target, the idea being to see how many times she could hit it. After a while Suzanne seldom was farther away than a fraction of an inch with her shots.

* * *

The former sounds like a bunk story to me. And the second one as bad. Probably Dempsey did learn something from someone in regard to sound principles of hitting. Beginners usually get sweeping "round-house" swings. They are soon taught, by anyone who knows anything at all about hitting, to shorten their punches. The rest of it—the power, the timing, cannot be taught. The knockout knack must come from within Dempsey soon asserted his genius for stretching out the other fellow with a couple of well directed smashes. From the purely artistic angle Dempsey owe little to anyone for the glory he has achieved with his iron fists. Kearns, of course was an excellent business manager and publicity—greater. None can take that away from him, no matter what else they say. Still, with a man of Dempsey's outstanding ability, there were probably dozens of managers who wouldn't have made such a bad shake of it managing Dempsey's affairs.

* * *

Other champions who were practically all self-made were Stanley Ketchel, Willie Hoppe in billiards, Cobb in baseball, and Nurmi on the track.

Willie Hoppe was playing billiards at the age of five. His father provided a soap-box on which the embryo wirod's champion was enabled to reach the table's playing surface.

Ty Cobb practised batting for hours every day when he was a beginning. Nurmi's methods of running are entirely original, he once told the writer. "I never learned anything from anybody. I figured out my style all by myself" was the way he put it.

OWLS LIABLE TO SLIP UP ON PACE-SETTERS

Frogs Still Boast Chance To Finish In Tie For Crown

DALLAS, Nov. 8.—(AP).—"Doleful Doc" Stewart's Texas university Longhorns last week took the inside track in the Southwest conference football title chase by virtue of their smashing 13 to 3 victory over the Baylor Bruins, and T. C. U.'s surprising win over the Texas Aggies. The Longhorns are the only team undefeated by a conference rival.

The Steers must surmount one more barrier—a very high barrier—in order to reach their cherished goal, an undisputed championship. Should the Orange and White wave triumphant over the Red and White Thanksgiving Day at College Station, the Steers would be acclaimed champions, despite their tie game with the S. M. U. Mustangs.

Aggies Must Win Two.

Indications are the victors of the Longhorn-Aggie clash, a game certain to be made memorable in conference grid annals, will win the title. Coach Dana Bible's Farmers can atone for their defeat at the hands of Matty Bell's Horned Toads by winning over the Rice Owls Saturday and the Longhorns Turkey Day. Victories over the Owls and Steers would crown the Aggies champions with four conference victories and one defeat.

Many close followers of the cleated shoe pastime believe the defeat given the Bible men by the Horned Toads will be just the spur needed to send the great Aggie machine speeding to a championship. Certain it is that the Farmers are far from being out of the running for the conference laurels, though they must smash the jinx "Doc" Stewart has exercised over them for two years, as well as whip or tie Heisman's fighting Owls in order to finish in front of the pack.

Owls a Menace.

Despite the fact that the Rice Owls have been beaten by the Longhorns and the T. C. U. Toads beaten by the Oklahoma Aggies and tied by Baylor, both schools must be given consideration by the dopesters and prognosticators. Should Rice defeat the Aggies and the Bears and the Aggies down the Longhorns, then the Owls would be declared champions, although the Longhorns whipped Heisman's crew, 26-7.

If the Texas Aggies should lose to Rice, but whip the Longhorns and the Bears should win over the Owls, and T. C. U. defeat Arkansas, then the Horned Toads and the Longhorns would be tied for the championship with two victories, a tie and a defeat.

Because of T. C. U.'s victory over the Texas Aggies, the best eleven that has represented Texas A. and M. for several years, the wisecraes now would not "be surprised at anything." However if the teams run true to form during the coming three weeks, either the Texas Longhorns or Texas Aggies would be crowned champions of the conference for '25.

Mustangs and Bears Out.

The Mustangs and Bears are definitely eliminated from championship consideration, regardless of the outcome of the rest of their games. The Mustangs have lost one game and tied two, while the Bears have lost two and tied one. Under conference regulations, a tie game counts a half a game for each team; hence the Mustangs, under the conference interpretation of a tie game, have lost two and won one game, and the Bears have lost two and a half games and won one-half a game. Such an interpretation of the rule is upheld by Dr. D. A. Penick of Austin, president of the Southwestern conference.

An unbiased analysis of the Longhorn-Bear and Horned Toad-Texas Aggie battles of last week convinces one that both the Longhorns and Toads well deserved to win. The Longhorns registered 16 first downs to one made by the Bruins, while the Frogs made 10 first downs to four by the Farmers.

The second half come back of the Longhorns was nothing short of inspiring. In the first half, fumbles at critical moments had thrice stopped Longhorn advances that seemed certain to score a touchdown. Men of less stout hearts would have been discouraged and disgusted by the fumbles, but the Steers did not. They came back in the second half, and making most of Fall's fumble jumped into a winning stride that the Bruins could not stop.

Doc Springs New One.

Coach Stewart used an unusual formation that unquestionably contributed to the Texas victory. The Longhorns sent seven men down under Wright's long, high kicks. Three backs lined up abreast in front of Wright and protected him well from the blocking efforts of the Bear linemen. Wright kicked over the heads of his guarding halfbacks.

The punishment to which he was subjected by the fleet Newell, Higgins and other Steers probably had something to do with Fall's fumble, which was turned into a touchdown by Saxon.

Higgins, hard charging tackle; Newell, big end; Saxon, tricky runner and wonderful defensive back; Wright, great leader and splendid punter; Rufus King, a mighty line plunger, and Stallter, whose handling of the mud slippery ball in receiving punts was remarkable, were the outstanding stars of the Longhorn victory.

Johnnie Washmon, T. C. U. center, booted the prescious three points that brought victory against the Aggies, but the work of every T. C. U. forward stood out, Brewster, Wolfe and Ward showing to particular advantage.

Dartmouth Looms As Eastern Champ

NEW YORK, Nov. 8.—(AP).—The Dartmouth football juggernaut tonight had swept over a hitherto unbeaten Cornell as its seventh victim of the season and was pointing its nose for the mythical eastern championship with an impressive scoring total of 307 points—an average of almost 44 points a game. The score was 62 to 13.

Clara Cagers Doped to Win County Honors

Basketball Followers Say Veteran Club Should Cop Title

Clara high school has for the last few years turned out some of the best basket ball teams in this district, and this year has a veteran club.

It is possible for Coach G. L. Belcher to place the same first string five on the court as Coach Ross Turner used last year. Six men have been showing up well in practice. Coach Belcher will depend largely on: J. O. Seehon, this season's captain, Brien Walkup, Leroy Nichols, Loy Nichols, Leonard Schreandur, and Clyde Garret.

Clara has played five games already this season and won four of the five. The first four of these were only with local lads and oil field workers, while in the last game they defeated Harrold high school by a socre of 13 to 12.

Several close basket ball followers have already picked Clara as the next county champion due to the fact that this quintet has played together for several years.

BIG TEN GRID CAMPAIGN IN REAL TANGLE

Iowa and Michigan Fade Out; Minnesota Only Unbeaten Team

CHICAGO, Nov. 8.—(AP)—The Western conference football championship campaign tonight is tangled in the most extraordinary situation since the Big Ten was organized.

Fate and nature combined to present an intricate puzzle that only the final games of the season, two weeks hence, may decide. They sent Minnesota, without winning a game and tying its only conference [illegible] top ahead of Michigan, against which no touchdown has been scored this season.

Iowa, with Michigan, faded out by losing to Wisconsin six to nothing, while the Wolverines bowed to Northwestern, three to two, in one of the most startling upsets in years. Previous to yesterday's games, played under the worst weather conditions imaginable, Michigan and Iowa generally were regarded as the strongest teams of the Big Ten. All other teams, except Minnesota and Chicago had been defeated.

Now, every team in the conference, except Minnesota, has lost. The Gophers, meeting Iowa next Saturday and Wolverines a week hence, will have a fair chance to the 1925 title, provided they are victorious over both. The tie to blot their record was a 12 to 12 affair against Wisconsin a week ago.

Mud, rain and slush in the three major contests yesterday, made it impossible to do anything but punt and wait for the proverbial breaks. This is exactly what happened. Fumbling was a dominant factor in the Michigan -Northwestern game, played in a quagmire, ankle deep, and also in the walkwing contest between Chicago and Illinois. Snow and cold ruined what might have been an interesting contest between Iowa and Wisconsin.

Clara Volley Ball Team a Winner

The Clara volley ball girls apparently have another winning team at their school this year from the prospects on hand. The team has played once against the Fairview girls, and after losing the first game battled back and took the final pair to win juniors also won from the Fairview juniors.

These girls will play the Iowa Park girls Friday night for their second game of the season.

Millers Lead Big Ten Race

CHICAGO, Nov. 8.—(AP)—Nature has damaged the championship hopes of three of the teams which heretofore have led the western conference title race. Michigan, Iowa, and Chicago were beaten under almost unprecedented weathr conditions, a blizzard at Iowa and heavy rainstorms at the Chicago and Michigan games.

Minnesota, the only undefeated tea mof the conference and with only one conference tie on its record, is technically the Big Ten leader tonight. It has yet to play Iowa and Michican.

The first score against the Michigan team this season came in its sixth game—a field goal by Lewis of Northwestern from the 18-yard line. There were only five touchdowns scored in the Big Ten games Saturday, a field goal and a safety.

"RED-GRANGE OF SOUTH" MAY BE SEEN IN BEAUMONT TILT.

BEAUMONT, Nov. 8.—Tentative plans announced today for a post season football game here Dec. 5 between South Park college and Southwestern Louisiana institute of Lafayette, La., will give Beaumont a glimpse of Keener Cagle, called "Red Grange of the South." Cagle is declared by many critics to be the outstanding backfield player of 20 years in the South.

The PASSING HOUR ~ by Wm. B. Ruggles ~

A. E. F.

It is for that we have wandered from the cobble-stones and high-ways—
A thousand leagues to seaward are the crosses and the rain,
The battered streets and houses that were once our marching by-ways
But when November swings around, they live for us again.

We thought we had forgotten when Retreat the bugles sounded
And the caissons' farewell rumbled to the roads along the Rhine
But the hail of unseen legions holds the heart-beats still impounded.
As November brings the memory of the mates of yours and mine.

Where the groups of rain-washed crosses mark the places where they're sleeping—
To hold our final outpuost. November calls us yet:
Till we hear the final muster and the silent years come creeping,
The tie is there to hold us and we never shall forget.

Ideas Veer

Reviewing the gridiron events of the week closing with Oct. 31, Jinx Tucker, in the News-Tribune, said: "The defeat of the Bears by the Aggies was not particularly pleasing to the Longhorns, who wanted to be the first conference team to defeat Baylor."

Yet as a matter of fact, that particular idea has not apparently occurred to the Texas team. Saturday night, at Dallas, after learning of the Aggie victory, Coach Stewart said: "From the way things look now, a Baylor victory would have helped us. But, I am glad to see A. & M. win." Oddly enough, the chief ambition of the orange squad was to come up to Thanksgiving day with both themselves and the Aggies undefeated. Then let the best team win.

This is part and parcel of the changing fashions in football, which can no longer be concerned with long time feuds and which only carry over from year to year now some intense jealousy of a previous season.

Five years from now it may again be Aggie and Longhorn tearing at each other's throats.

President Coolidge will not see the Army-Navy game. president at a football game is an attraction, but a president at a social function is completely smothered.

Down at the bottom of the social register printed in the dailies after the Saturday after Thanksgiving, you usually read the score.

The Army-Navy game is one place the buck private of the old AEF can feel at home—it is so full of bars and black braid.

You Can't Do It

Just a line tucked down at the foot of the column in most of the papers that ran it, for these be the stirring gridiron days when the punt and the tackle have displaced the hit and the score. It was Bill McKechnie, flushed with the triumph of a world's championship speaking: He will make no radical changes in his championship lineup.

Largely a young team, you must admit—but the bulwark of the Buccaneer club was its veteran strength. And in baseball two players are likely to crack—the veteran and the youngster. The old fellow goes back suddenly; the kid shows that his great year was over his head.

Here's the point: No manager in history has ever been able to stand pat and win. Here and there must come changes in the personenl of every pennant club. Not one survives from season to season.

Every winner fancies in October he can go through another year. But April is a different story—and June is often a tragedy.

"Babe Ruth to try another comeback."—News item. The winter seems a permanent assignment for the Babe for this purpose.

Would You?

Grantland Rice takes a slap at the black and white races, there is yet this to be said for Mistah Harry Wills:

Two years ago he was conceded to be the logical opponent for Dempsey. He was then at the peak of the heavyweight game; only the champion was before.

Now, since the New York commission, lording it over the important money of the ring, has stipulated that Dempsey must fight him if he fights anybody; since the lure of a hundred thousand or better is there if he loses, and a million if he wins—what sane battler in Wills' position would meet anything but a set-up until he meets Dempsey?

HORSEMAN IS HURT

HARTFORD, Conn., Nov. 8.—(AP).—Harry Stuhldrehr, all-American quarterback with Notre Dame last year, was injured here today when playing quarterback for the Hartford Blues, formerly the Waterbury Blues, state professional football champions. He was carried from the field in the first half suffering from a slight brain concussion received from a hard tackle. He was taken to a hospital, but was later released and left for Villa Nova college, where he is head coach.

Drake Bulldogs Threaten to Nip Missouri's Drive

Sooners Hook Tigers In This Week-End's Play

KANSAS CITY, Nov. 8.—(AP)—Engineering the biggest upset of the season by defeating Nebraska, the Drake Bulldogs have established themselves as the most dangerous of Missouri valley conference elevens and threaten Missouri's leadership of the valley.

The victory was Drake's fifth and only one more conference game remains on its schedule, that with Iowa State two weeks hence. A defeat for Missouri now would place Drake at the head of the valley standings. Missouri next Saturday faces Oklahoma, the team that gave Drake its only defeat this season.

The games next Saturday are:

Oklahoma vs. Missouri at Columbia.

Nebraska vs. Kansas Aggies at Manhattan.

Kansas vs. Grinnell at Grinnel.

Washington vs. Rolla at St. Louis.

Drake, Iowa State and the Oklahoma Aggies will be idle.

Racing Safe 2 More Years in Kentucky, Election Reveals

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Nov. 8.—Safety for two years more at least for the thoroughbred horse industry was one of the features of the recent election in Kentucky. Frdom from worry of the race interests came through the election of a General Assembly which will not consider the repeal of the law now in force which legalizes pari-mutuel betting, it is said. A considerable strength through the state has been organized in favor of a movement for repeal of the measure, but when today's figures were digested it was seen that no further danger to the industry and sport wil larise for two more years, when another General Assembly is to be chosen.

Mud-Covered Grid Player Tackled By His Own Captain

CHICAGO, Nov. 8.—(AP).—Mud nearly made an unwilling "traitor" of Tim Lowry, Northwestern football captain, here in the game with Michigan Saturday.

Lowry in the first few minutes of play tackled and downed one of his muddy teammates who had grabbed a Michigan fumble and was racing for a touchdown.

Later, Lowry had a chance to redeem himself by the strategy of ordering the safety that probably prevented a Michigan victory, after Northwestern had drop kicked a field goal.

'BAMA MENACE TO LEADERS IN SOUTHERN RACE

Quarter of Elevens Remain Undefeated As End of Drive Nears

NEW ORLEANS, Nov. 8.—(AP)—Saturday's football games in the Southern conference reduced the number of teams undefeated in the organization to four through a defeat of Virginia by Washington and Lee. Alabama maintained its place by defeating Kentucky, North Carolina improved its standing by stopping V. M. I. and Tulane, playing a team outside the conference, stood still.

The Crimsn of Alabama to passed the centpry mark in scoring iwth a 31 to 0 victory over Kentucjky. Alabama has scored 113 points inside the conference. The doubtful honor of being the only team in the conference to have more than 100 points scored against it fell to Clemson, when Florida ran up a score of 42, making the liabilities o fthe Tigers 107.

Georgia uncovered a great drive in stopping the Auburn plainsmen 34 to 0, while only a great sprint by Dick Wright gave Georgia Tech a seven to nothing margin of victory over Vanbedilt.

Sewanee emerged from its game with "Ole Miss" with an edge of only one point. The Mississippi Aggies piled up a count of 46 to 0, against Mississipp college and became state champions. North Carolina State and Virginia Polytech institute were unable to score.

Rickard's Dream Of $5,000,000 Coliseum In N. Y. Comes True

NEW YORK, Nov. 8.—(AP)—A modern coliseum, the $5,000,000 realization of a world famous boxing promoter's dream, is soon to open its doors to a sport-hungry metrpolis and its fistic arena to a temperamental army of professional ring gladiators whose wealth and independence have placed them almost beyond the pale of availability.

It is perhaps a tribute to the perspicacity of Tex Rickard that the new Madison Square Garden will be even more liberal than the old in the variety of its sport programs.

GRID STAR KILLED

HIGH POINT, N. B., Nov. 8.—(AP)—Baxter M. Gillion, Jr., of Salisbury, captain and fullback of the Lenoir-Rhyne college football team, died in a hospital here today of injuries sustained in the game yesterday with High Point college. Physicians said death resulted from a broken neck and a fracture at the base of the brain.

Candles Carried By 150 Maids Light Auditorium

One hundred and fifty girls from the Junior college, high school and Junior high school took part in the Girl Reserve program last night at the First Christian church when they were in full charge of the evening service. They were greeted by a capacity house with extra chairs placed in the downstairs auditorium.

At the sound of the Girl Reserve song, "Follow the Gleam," played by Miss Lorene Tucker, the girls in their white uniforms with blue ties and blue triangle on the sleeve, appeared, led by the association spirit, Miss Ivo Lorene Wilson, girls' work secretary of the Y. W. C. A.

To the left came the flag bearers leading the group of the other aisle, Bessie Lee, Linda Lea and Jane Adams; they were followed by Mrs. Iva E. Austin, Y. W. C. A. secretary; the Girl Reserve sponsors, Misses Johnnie Morgan and Juanita Kinsey; and the club presidents, Misses Wilton Wade and Elizabeth Langford.

The girls entered slowly in the long processional, each carrying a candle to light the way in the darkened auditorium. Simultaneously, the seats in the choir loft were filled with the Girl Reserve choir which was directed by Vivian Ross.

The service opened with the flag ceremonies when "America" was sung following the salute of the American flag; "Blessed Be the Tie That Binds," after the Christian flag salute, and "The Lord in His Holy Temple."

Congregation Singing.

Wilton Wade, president of the college-high school organization gave the scripture reading which was followed by congregational singing of "Sweet Hour of Prayer," and a prayer by Elizabeth Langford, president of the Junior high school club.

The three sides of the triangle were discussed as follows: "Health," Joline Woods of the Junior high club; "Knowledge," by Marjorie Bright of Junior college, and "Spirit," by Evelyn Hardeman, high school student.

Following a prayer by Evelyn Hardeman, the recessional was played and the girls slowly filed out singing "Follow the Gleam."

PEACE IS TOPIC OF MARTIN AT BIBLE CLASS

World Is Not Growing Worse, He Says In Lecture

Judge B. Sartin delivered the address yesterday morning to Judge Kays' Bible class at the Strand theatre in the absence of Judge Kay, who was kept away by illness. Attendance at the class showed a marked increase over the figure of the week before, 348 being present yesterday. Judge Sartin took for his address the subject, "Paul's Farewell at Miletus." His address follows in part:

"The lesson this morning is known as "Paul's Farewell at Milteus." It is a subject on righteousness. There isn't a greater theme that man could discuss than righteousness and peace. I think those words are two of the greatest and most beautiful words in the English language, —righteousness and peace. And, yet, today, friends, there is the same hungering in the heart of man as there was two thousand years ago for rightcousness and peace. I know, especially, a few years ago, when it seemed the entire world was at war, how the heart of every man and woman, yearned for peace, whether they were at home by the fireside, or off in the army camp, or on some battlefield. There is no word that could have been hailed out across the sky in flaming letters of gold, that would have been more welcome, than the word "Peace." And, when word came that peace had been brought on earth, how we were all happy and how, through the years, the world has been striving to get back on a peace basis. And yet, today, friends, when we begin to think and discuss the condition of this old world, how we all yearn for righteousness and, sometimes, when we get back in a morose condition of the mind, we think that the whole world is getting worse—every day in every way we are getting worse and worse—but, that isn't true. The world is not growing worse. It is growing better, and, when Christ made the statement two thousand years ago that "on this rock I shall build my church and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it." He spoke a truth that no one can challenge today.

Quotes Dr. Crane.

I just finished reading a little essay by Dr. Frank Crane, one of the greatest writers of America today. I think on righteousness, and he put it so aptly that I am going to read a portion of it to you. It is on the subject of "Spiritual Steam Roller."

Now, we have heard of every kind of a steam roller, but this is a new one that he calls the Spiritual Steam Roller. This is his language in discussing this, which brings out the thought that righteousness will triumph and wickedness will be put down. That men may make serious attacks at times and make the whole world thing things are mad, but righteousness is going to triumph and the Church of Christ is going to be triumphant. It couldn't be any other way. The secret is to find out what is right and prophesy that. You have heard of the old woman who is always saying: "I told you so." When one of the boys came running in the house and said: "The cow just ate up the grindstone," she said: "I told you so." We have heard of that kind of folks.

Now, if you want to find out the secrecy of prephecy, just find out what is right and prophesy that the right thing is going to happen, and then you will be a phophet, because that is going to come. Or, find out what is wrong and prophesy its destination that, for it is very simple that what is wrong will go down. That is all there is to it. If you find a thing is wrong, it is going down and is going to triumph. Like the poet said, that "Truth crushed to earth shall rise again," but never shall die amid her worshippers."

Spiritual Laws.

The cosmic spiritual laws are just as accurate as the laws of gravitation and chemical reaction: when you make the prediction that a man jumping off of a building is going down, you know that the law of gravity is going to play its part, and he is going to fall. So, when things are foreboding of evil, you can say that they are going to fall, because the spiritual law is going to play its part and pull it down. . . .

In the little affairs of the day, it seems sometimes that the wicked prosper. Yes, that is true. How many people, when you take them and size them up, their lives are not what they ought to be. They are wicked, and yet they prosper. It says: "God sends the rain on the just and unjust," and sometimes you think that man prospers. . . . "The mills of the gods grind slowly, but exceedingly fine. It does not pay. The spiritual steam roller that he refers to comes right along over the whole thing and flattens it out and justice is meted out, sure and fast. . . . Isn't that a wonderful thought and isn't that the truth about it!

And yet, sometimes, we think we are fooling God or fooling ourselves. It can't be done. There is a law just as certain along the lines of morality and religion and righteousness, as there is for water running down a hill.

Columbia's Gift.

It is said by another writer that when civilization on earth has run its course, and when the final time has been consummated, and that a grateful world has met to raise some fine monuments to the races that have existed in this world, that in one shall be the figure of a Jew, the child of faith he gave to the world religion. In another corner, will be a Roman, who gave law and government, and in another corner will be the Greek, who gave to the world deathless art, and in another corner will be the figure of Columbia, at her feet will be broken chains, and on her brow the diadem of peace. The mission of America is to make the world free, and I wonder today if we are doing it.

Now we come to this other thought, which is on the subject of peace. A moment ago, I referred to the peace of the world, so far as harmonious relations might be concerned, free intercourse among the nations of the world. That is sometimes the thing we think of as peace, but that isn't peace at all. Christ had no reference to that when He said: "Blest is the peacemaker, for they shall be called the children of God. Pedcemaker of what! Just simply a man that will conclive everything to be narmonious, is he a peacemaker. One who goes about and smiles and will not resent and stand up for principal, and make all concessions even unto unrighteousness! Certainly not. Christ says He came not to bring peace, but He came to bring a sword and that sword was a challenge to men to do the right thing, to be a fighter for righteousness, to really be a servant of the rest. He came to bring a sword! Then, certainly, He was not referring to peaceful harmonious relation, and sometimes I think that the church and church members think that they are peacemakers whenever they are working in harmony and getting along with the other fellow, and they wouldn't say anything for fear of hurting someone's feelings, and wouldn't do anything for fear that might not be conventional. That isn't business. The peace that is referred to here in this scripture is the peace, the quietness, the soul satisfaction, the harmonious relationship with God. That is the kind of peace that Christ came to establish. That is the kind of peace that He wants to reign throughout the world. That men might be at peace with God, that our lives might be in tune and in harmony with the great spiritual law. That is the kind of peace He came to bring. And, when He came to establish a church, that would be a monument to His life and to be an advocate of his principles. He brought with which Christians fight, and it is the Him a sword. . . . the sword with means today of Christianizing the world.

Form Subdivisions.

There are four subdivisions in this lesson, upon which I would like to speak, though the time is short, so I will just call attention to them. First, exhortation of church men to feed the church. He says, "feed the church." You men that are overseers of the lock. He said, "take care of your sheep." Then, He refers again to the church men, the people of the church. Aid, He tells the overseers as the flock to feed them. Then, He goes ahead again and says, "I warn you this. The time is coming when grievous wolves are going to enter the flock and some will arise from your number that will seek to draw people after them," and that is true today. You don't have to have any far-sighted vision to see that grievous wolves have entered the flock. Some will come like wolves in sheep's clothing. And, that is one thing that I think is wrong with the church today, that so many of the sheep are really wolves in the church, and so much of the world has gotten into the church that you can't tell the difference from church on the inside and world on the outside. If the church would stand united, under the former Prince Emanuel, the force of the church to the world would soon be felt, but as long as grievous wolves enter the flock, destroying and contaminating, the church loses its power.

How can you feed the church! By your example, church men, by your conduct, by your life, which stands out and is exemplified even as a candle on a candlestick. What shall you feed the church with! The Bible says, "sincere milk of the word." You are babies in Christ. You have got to be fed. And again it says: "Now, brothern, I commend you to God, and to the word of His Grace which is able to build you up and to give you an inheritance among all of them which are santicified. The word of God is power to salvation. It is the means, today, of saving the world: this old Bible that has been attacked, apparently, from many sources, and, today, many great literary men are trying to shoot it to pieces, but it stands today as the greatest and the best revelation along spiritual laws that the world has even seen, or ever will see, because heaven and earth may pass away, but this old Book is going to be here when they have all passed away, and it is going to be the means, and the law upon which you and I will be judged, and don't you forget it.

Another point I shall mention, after feeding the church, He warns them as to what is going to happen, and it has. Next He speaks of His own self, and says: "I have coveted no man's gold, or silver, or apparel. How many here this morning could say that with a clear conscience! And then He says, with this word of encouragement, that ye ought to support the weak, and remember the words of Jesus when He said: "It is more blessed to give than to receive." What a great thought, and what an oppertune time for us to think of that, as we are entering the month of Thanksgiving, and also, as we are called upon to do our duty as citizents in the coming welfare drive. But, in giving, we should not always think of just money. It means time, it means influence, it means self, it means all, and that's what it takes to give, for "the gift without the giver is bare."

Making Excuses for Him.

It sounds rather nice to hear a girl making excuses for her sweetheart: "Poor Tom, he's only late because he's so busy at the office. I know he'd get here on time, if he could possibly manage it."

Or "Roger forgot to call me last night because his mother was ill, probably. She is very delicate, and when anything happens to her Roger forgets everything else."

Girls should stick up for their men, and make excuses for them as much as possible.

But there's always one grave danger—that a girl will continue to make excuses for the man he loves, long after there's any excuse or apology to be made for him—long after he wants excuses or apologies.

You see, a boy's favorite method of ridding himself of the sweetheart he's grown tired of is to let her down gently—to ease the blow by neglecting her more and more till finally the truth should dawn on her.

Oftentimes the neglected girl fails to take the hint, refuses to believe the awful truth and desperately makes excuses: "Well, really there was no reason why he should have rung up last night. We never had a definite date."

Or: "He did dance with everyone else last night more than with me—but perhaps he's hurt at something and wants to show me he doesn't care."

And "Poor dear, he hasnt been well, lately and isn't able to get out in the evenings as much as he used to—so he can't come to see me so often."

Oh those pitiful desperate bluffs, striving to conceal so much fear and misery and pain.

Often a girl will go on pulling the wool over her own eyes and trying to persuade her friends that all is well, until the fickle male is forced to break things off with a snau.

The minute you find that you are making excuses overtime for your man is the exact moment to pull yourself up and ask: "Am I getting the gate?"

And from then on, you want to be careful to let your Mr. Man do all his own excusing.

If he fails in the courtesy and attention he's always shown you, dont hasten to think up reasons for it—just wait and let him tell you the cause.

After a sufficient number of incidents have occurred which mark a departure from his usual style of treating you, have it out with him.

Don't let him tell you it's only your imagination. Insist that if he's going to neglect and ignore you, you will expect excuses, apologies and everything.

And if he's still deficient in what you have a right to expect after a few weeks' trial, you'll know where you stand.

Anyhow, It Was A Wild Night For The Lady Diana

BOSTON, Nov. 8.—(AP).—Five minutes after the Duchess of Rutland, mother of Lady Diana Manners, who plays the leading role in "The Miracle," arrived in Boston last night her hand luggage was stolen and two of her daughter's friends were robbed of several hundred dollars by pickpockets.

The duchess was unable to get a seat and had to kneel in an aisle all during her daughter's performance.

Lady Diana was compelled to go on the stage before she could make arrangements to seat her mother. While hastening from the stage, after the first scene, she slipped and sprained her ankle.

SAVING COLD CASH IN WICHITA FALLS

Wichita Falls has always prided itself on the fact that it is a leader and not a follower. A task to be accomplished, be it public or private, is planned and executed in a manner conceived by Wichita Falls men and women to be the most effective and practical. What other communities may have done in similar instances is not a primary factor in determining what steps shall be taken locally, although Wichita Falls always recognizes the advantages accruing from a study of the experiences of others.

Those directing the fifth annual community chest campaign here appreciate and approve this policy of independent thought and action so it is in no spirit of criticism and no attitude of suggestiveness that they present to the public some of the things other cities are doing in regard to relief work. Rather, they believe that Wichita Falls will have a deeper appreciation of the lightness of its welfare load if it sees the proportions of the burdens a few other towns assume.

For instance—

Wichita Falls, population 58,560, is asked to give to the community chest this year the sum of $55,000. In the fiscal year just closing it gave $46,811.57. Below are the names, population and chest contributions of some other cities this year.

	Pop.	Chest
Lansing, Mich.	59,362	$133,000
Chattanooga, Tenn.	58,057	195,000
Lincoln, Neb.	55,208	100,000
Portsmouth, Va.	54,809	60,000
Bethlehem, Pa.	54,691	122,821
Macon, Ga.	53,472	80,119
Niagra Falls, N. Y.	51,808	170,334
Roanoke, Va.	51,444	115,456
Winston Salem, N. C.	40,923	102,105
Galveston, Texas	44,755	100,000
Shreveport, La.	44,691	175,725

Such figures could be quoted indefinitely. The little town of Santa Barbara, Cal., with a population of 19,441 last year gave $145,250; Montclair, N. J. with 28,810 gave $150,471; Easton, Pa., with 34,089 gave $101,938; Kenosha, Wis., with 41,768 gave $121,000; Plainfield, N. J., with 40,000 gave $137,379; San Jose, Cal., with 39,901 gave $127,611.

Thus it goes. Cities with far less population than this—and with a population, probably, whose per capita wealth is not as great as Wichita Falls' contribute over $100,000 to the relief of their unfortunate or to the safeguarding of community welfare. True, these cities may have less favorable civic conditions; geographic and economic factors less inviting than here; but it all goes to show that a community chest fund of $55,000 is not unreasonable. On the contrary, thinking men will consider it ridiculously small.

Be that as it may, a $55,000 goal has been set as the minimum figure needed for welfare work in this city the coming year. Double that amount could be used to advantage but on November 23, 24 and 25 the city will be asked to fill the community chest with at least $55,000—more if it will.

WHY A PUBLICITY ACT

A noted Washington correspondent says chances in the house for repeal of the publicity section of the revenue law revealing the amount of money an individual turns over to the government for his income tax seem increasingly bright in the opinion of representatives now in Washington who favor abolishment of this clause of the act. However, he remarks that the outlook is not the same in the senate where the administration control is less certain, and where there remains members who are demanding even more drastic publicity provisions than those now in the law. He predicts the real fight will come in the senate.

There is a reason why. Senator William A. Borah of Idaho has declared against repeal. Borah is a powerful debator and tenacious fighter. Senator George W. Norris of Nebraska is another last ditch fighter. He says he is going to the last ditch. Senator James Couzens of Michigan, said to be worth $40,000,000, has little love for the president or the secretary of the treasury, and he is for the publicity act as it stands.

Then there is another last ditcher, Senator J. H. King of Utah, a democrat and a high church Morman. He is for publicity and as the supreme court of the United States found the law valid, King is going to stick to the supreme court decision regardless of others or what the consequences may be. Senator Carter Glass of irginia, who is an independent fighter, never did take kindly to the publicity act, and the Mellon bill, which was at one time a Glass bill, has his fullest approval.

There are other democratic senators who are neither hide bound nor "set in their ways." President Coolidge is for repeal. Secretary Mellon is for repeal. These democratic senators who think as well as talk, may go to the assistance of the administration when voting time comes.

EVER AN ONWARD MOVEMENT

Proposals for bond issues totaling $500,000,000 were submitted to the voters in various parts of the United States at the election on Tuesday, November 2. New York voted two bond amendments totaling $400,000,000, and provided for the spending of the money over a stretch of years.

Toledo had a bond program calling for an issue of $32,500,000. Kansas City had a program which called for an issue of $26,000,000. Scores of smaller cities, villages and counties throughout the country asked the approval of voters for bond issues, and in most instances, the proposals carried.

According to a financial newspaper in the city of New York, investment houses expect a sharp increase in the volumn of offerings of new state and municipal bonds in the next few months.

These bonds will be snapped up by ready purchasers. For the most part, they are tax exempt and gilt edged. There is no risk in the taking.

Uncommon Sense

THE BEGINNING OF WISDOM

Young Jones had worked a year.

During that year he had been industrious, ambitious and cocky.

He developed rapidly. He was more efficient than many of the men around him, chiefly because he was more industrious.

Every month he asked for an advance of salary.

When he did not get it, he went back to work, a little disappointed, but determined. "I am one of the best men in this place, he said to the boss one day, "I work faster and better. Pretty soon you will have to give me that raise."

"I hope so," said the boss. And he went back to his work.

One day a particularly difficult piece of work came in. The older men were slow in offering to try it.

"I'll do it," said Jones. And he was allowed to tackle it, simply because his confidence impressed his superiors.

He did tackle it, and made a miserable failure of it. He expected to be dismissed.

But the boss called him in and talked to him, instead.

"Jones," he said, "we lost a lot of money by the mess you made of that job. But maybe you can get it back for us. Is there anything you do not know about the business?"

"Yes," said Jones, "there is a lot I don't know. But I didn't find it out lately."

"All right," the boss replied. "Next time don't tackle anything unless you are perfectly sure you can get away with it. You are efficient and industrious and honest and sober. But you think young Jones is about the smartest thing on earth. When you find there is something you don't know you may take the trouble to learn it, instead of slapping thorugh any way just so as to get through. Now go back to work."

Jones went back to work. From that time forward he did not think that knowledge of intricate matters was born in him, like the love of dogs, or his fondness for outdoor sports.

He studied the business, and when he ran across things he didn't understand he asked about them.

In a year another big job was given him, and he put it through. The same thing happened repeatedly thereafter. Once he refused a task which he did not understand, and asked that some other man be put on it.

When he hires men he calls them into his office and tells them of his own experience.

"Confidence is a fine thing," he says, "a necessary thing in business. But it has got to be based on knowledge. All the knowledge in the world won't do you any good without confidence, and neither will all the confidence in the world help you without knowledge.

"Learn the business first. Then trot out your confidence, and you will get along.

"Now get to work. You start at the bottom, because you'll need to know the whole game.

"Wait till you know it before you apply for my job. Then if you know it better than I do you will get it. It will be vacant by and by. I'll know enough in four or five years more to be president, and my job will be vacant.

But learn first. And learn slow. And be sure you learn right while you are learning."

CANNOT USE THE FUNDS

It has been held by an assistant attorney general that the appropriation for the state department of agriculture does not contain any item or provision from which the state commissioner could use the funds for the purchase of motor vehicles for use of the department unless it be the item of traveling expenses, amounting to $20,000.

And again it has been held by an assistant attorney general that the commissioner cannot take money for the purchase of motor vehicles from contingent appropriation. Commissioner George B. Terrell desired to purchase two small cars for the use of employes of his department. He also asked if he had authority to purchase gasoline for the use of state cars from the Gulf Refining company under its contract with the state and have it charged to the department of agriculture and paid monthly from the traveling expense account.

In answer to the latter inquiry, the assistant attorney general said, that in absence of information as to the terms and provisions of the contract referred to, he was not prepared to give an opinion.

This is the motor vehice age. This is the age of rapid transit. This is the gas age. Gone are the days of the pony express, th mule and the buckboard and the ox cart period of existence.

ANOTHER POLITICAL STRAW

General Smedley M. Butler, the idol of the United States marines, and the dictator of the antivice forces in the city of Philadelphia, has been ordered to return to naval duty the first of the year. He was loaned to the reform mayor in the dim and dismal past. Mayor Kendrick requested the president to grant General Butler an extension of leave. His request has been denied.

In the rectn elections in Pennsylvania the republican regulars in the great cities rolled up huge majorities and captured all the offices. Anti-organization republicans were overwhelmed. Mayor Kendrick saw the point. No doubt the Coolidge administration saw the point. Andrew W. Mellon remains the master of the republican party of Pennsylvania.

Gifford Pinchot is governor, but he is not the master. Politics is a practical game, and the practical politicians are in the saddle in the land of William Penn.

CONCRETE AGE HERE

A famous British engineer is authority for the statement that the world is now entering the concrete age that will last forever, after having seen the stone age, the iron age and the steam age.

Already, he said, people are walking on concrete pavement, riding on concrete roads, traveling over concrete houses, working in concrete offices as well as housing their cattle in concrete farm buildings, storing grain in concrete silos, and using concrete for stores of other things, and finally they are sleeping peacefully beneath concrete tombstones.

This is the super-power age as well as the concrete age. It is the electric age as well as the concrete age. Going, and going rapidly, is the civilization that was with us when the World war was ushered in.

A STATESMAN HUMORIST

Prime Minister Tsankoff must be a humorist as well as a statesman. He says his country will make amends to the Greeks "if found guilty by the conscience of the world." Now just where would an explorer or an investigator definitely locate the conscience of the world.

DEAD LANGUAGE IS COMING BACK

Never sneer at dead languages. They are coming back. There are 1,000,000 young men and women in this country now studying Latin, and 1,000,000 more studying other foreign languages.

WHAT TODAY MEANS TO YOU

By MARY BLAKE

November 9—Scorpio

Today's planetary aspects are until noon quite adverse. Thereafter they undergo a very sudden change and become favorable, replete with stimulating vibrations. During the forenoon there will be sensed a feeling of disappointment and pessimism will dominate your thoughts. Under such circumstances it would be impolitic to work on any change or to do anything out of the ordinary and every effort must be made to counteract the depressing influences. Later on in the day your best emotions will be aroused and you will feel an ambition to work and to achieve. It would be expedient to yield to these impulses, so that there may be at the close of the day something attempted, something done.

A child born today will cause much worry and anxiety during the infantile period as a result of its frequent ailments. If it receives correct alimentation there will be very little ground for alarm. Once this stage is passed, the signs denote that it will develop along normal lines. Its character will be frank and above board. It will at no time in its career stoop to deceive or prevaricate nor will it ever make an effort to be anything but natural. It will possess intelligence and have reliable judgment and provided it be allowed to pursue that line of conduct it most desires there is nothing to prevent it attaining success.

If today is your birthday you rather look upon life as a gamble and are reckless at times to the point of foolishness. You never weigh conditions in your mind and are always ready to take a chance. Owing to your forcefulness you may succeed where others might fail but the odds are against you as the prizes of life are generally awarded to those that think, work consistently and deliberately.

You are very positive in your manner and poinions and attach little or no importance to the ideas of others. Many have tried, but all have failed to budge you from a conviction, once it has been formed by you. This, of course, invites the criticism of stubbornness from your friends and associates.

No one can impugn your trustworthiness or integrity. You are, however, very exacting. Your love is rugged and vigorous, rather on a sense of possession than on the solid foundation of affectionate consideration.

Successful people born on thsi date are:

Standford White, architect, New York.

Maude (Howe) Elliott, author.

John M. Carrere, architect, New York.

Frederick Funston, soldier.

Jules Bache, banker.

King Edward VII, former king of England.

HOW IT STARTED

"Paying the Piper."

This is a phrase which is constantly used in every day speech with reference to life must be paid for, that there is "nothing for nothing," that if we would dance we must pay the fiddler. The implication is usually that we cannot escape the consequences of our acts.

The phrase takes its origin in an old legend immortalized in the poem "The Pied Piper of Hamelin," written in 1842 by Robert Browning. In his poem, which is said to have been written for a child of Macready, the actor, Browning tells the tale of the piper who agreed, in 1284, to rid the town of Hamelin of its plague of rats, and when he was not paid his promised reward lured—with the same notes that had conquered the rats—all the precious children of the village into the mountains where they disappeared. So the villagers who would have evaded "paying the piper" paid nevertheless—and a much higher price!

Through a Woman's Eyes

"Good Riddance to Bad Rubbish."

Some time ago a woman in Jersey was commended for making a tremendous sacrifice. She "gave" her husband to another woman! That is, to save her husband and the other woman from prosecution, she agreed to divorce him and legalize the other relationship.

The facts in the case are that the gentleman, a minister, by the way, deserted his young wife and two children and ran away with a girl who was engaged to marry another man.

And we read in sentimentally inclined newspapers that the young wife, nobly agreeing to "give" him to the other woman, had made her "sacrifice," her great "renunciation" gracefully.

While the warmest sympathy goes to the wronged and disillusioned young wife, while we fully recognize the nobility of ignoring the opportunity for revenge which could be indulged in by refusing to release the man, one is still impelled to question the element of "sacrifice" and "renunciation" in letting him go.

If it is a sacrifice to tear a dagger from ones bosom, to oust a viper fromm one's breast, then it is a sacrifice to release a man who would forget loyalty, decency, responsibility and obligation for his fancy for another woman.

If there is loss in discarding trouble and disappointment and disillusionment, the dregs of the cup and the refuse of life, then to rid oneself of a husband who will desert his wife and children to run away with another man's affianced wife is renunciation indeed!

But as long as good health is better than sickness, God's sunlight better than polluted air, as long as we are better off alone than with the company of enemies, as long as there is more happiness in peace and self-respect than in shame and degradation, so long there will be nothing sacrificed in releasing a faithless husband and a disloyal father. On the contrary, it will always be a sensible act, best described perhaps by the well known cry of the boy on the street, "Good riddance for bad rubbish!"

SYNOPSIS

Connemara Moore was to announce her engagement before midnight or be disinherited. Instead, she dressed herself as a nun, stole out of Aunt Celimena's Connecticut home, hailed David Lacy, who was passing, and drove with him to Long Island Sound. Now she is aboard a yacht with Lacy, Pooch, McTish, Doc and Sweetie, all strangers to her until a few hours before. There has been fighting and much talk of bootlegging and pursuits by revenue officers.

CHAPTER X—Continued

"Just tell the flip gentleman what you'll do to him, when you get loose—pretty now, an' polite, ol' dear. Aw! that ain't pretty, Poochie! Say, Sister, yu'd better stick your fingers in your ears. When Pooch is sore, what he says ain't fit for publication in the 'Police Gazette.'"

It was all very incomprehensible. Lacy reflected uncomfortably. Sweetie's charge of intimacy on the part of the girl at his side with a grotesque figure like Pooch was impossible, and made purely through malevolence, of course. But with him she must be connected in some way.

He decided he must talk with Sweetie. She was shrewd but voluble, and if voluble might say too much. However, he did not feel so much like pumping her when he had left the other girl and had joined the slim figure now at the rail. Pert as were her sharp little features, hard the snappy black eyes, her face was attractive, pathetic as well—almost that of a child, he thought, yet as old as the ages with a wisdom it should not have had. And feeling the pity of it, he made a bad beginning.

"You've got too good a mind, little one," he said, "to waste in a game like this."

"For Gawd's sake, haven't you any other line?" she retorted tartly. "You was handing that to Sister a minute ago. But I notice, like most sky pilots, you pass the hat first, and fifty grand's some c'llection, I'll tell the world."

"That's so. Well, I'll can the sermon. It's your lead—or, is this any better?" And, muttering to himself, "Rotten taste with the other looking on, but I must find out about that ship," he placed his arm around the tight little waist, and not at all tentatively. At which Sweetie softly yielded to his embrace and her arm stole round him in turn.

A moment or so they sat, conversing in slangy and inconsequential nothings, she snuggling closer, when suddenly his hand closed on hers, like a vise.

"No you don't!" he exclaimed.

She giggled. "As a dip, I'm a dumb-bell," she said, not at all embarrassed, "but never mind; go on don't let a little thing like that break up a petting party."

"You're right. Such a contretemps but adds to the needed spice to love."

"'Country town' adds spice!' Say, are you thinking of going ashore to Bayville? You are the limit," she added, "and no three miles to you peither; you stretch clear to Bermuda."

"Speaking to that motion," he replied, "I wonder if that ship'll be where the Swede promised."

"Wise, aren't you?" she asked sweetly. "You think just because you've loved me up a little I'll give you that info'. Well, you can leave your fin there awri', but that's all the good it'll do you."

Now, during this conversation Connemara had first looked volumes, then tossed her head, again returned to study the darkness over the lee rail. Several times she repeated this maneuver, though discreetly, as she pondered over his status with the gang and, what seemed more important, with the girl. He was undeniably charming; but, then, charming men were sometimes strangely interested in girls far beneath them. And too, charming men made, so those experienced said, the most expert of criminals. He was brave, handsome—of course that was not to the point—but he seemed so eminently well bred and—well, anyway, Connemara also was finding things a bit incomprehensible.

But what was that staccato putput off their quarter! That good-looking Harvard boy back again? She made out the lines of the oncoming hulk. It was longer and beamier than Bob's little craft; larger even than the Bloody Nuisance. And that gruff hail was not at all like the gallant Bob's.

"Stand by, or we'll fire!"

"Golly!" said Connie. "They're looking for my salary again. I knew it was too good to last." And reaching for support, instead of the rail she clutched the hand of Lacy, who, at the sound, had sprung to her side.

The bald pate of the Scot, like a moonlit desert with an auburn morage, appeared once more over the cockpit. He chuckled audibly.

"Ye've lost, Davie; there's the Swede."

"Yes, confound your Scotch dourness, or whatever you call it! I believe you monkeyed with that engine on purpose."

He shrugged his shoulders hopelessly, adding, "All right, I've picked my man; you pick your 'sax,' old Scot. And I hope you get killed."

But immediately the demand was repeated from the leader of the crew whom they could dimly discern through the murk, and Lacy turned to the girl.

"Can you swim as far as that shore—if we get in trouble?"

With her nod of assent, he picked her up bodily and almost threw her in the cockpit, growling out, "Lie low; they may fire"; then, tossing a life belt after her, temporized with Fate as personified in that insolent voice, by running to the wheel and ordering McTish to address the newcomers as they circled round them.

"Who is it speakin' us?" roared the latter through cupped hands. "Are ye some o' them damned revenooers?"

"You bloody Scotch stool pigeon, bring that sea-goin' hack of yours alongside or we'll blow you to—" The wind muffled this last, but the speaker's geography, Connie was sure, was impressively accurate.

A moment Lacy reflected, as he caught the gleam of a six-pounder. There were seven against the two, nine if you counted Doc and Pooch, who would be freed the moment the others came aboard. His brain, working with lightning rapidity, showed him only one possible way out—a chance in a hundred, at that. The Swede's craft was an old tub, the nose of their own of steel. It was a desperate expedient he had in mind, but it might succeed.

"All right," he called, "we'll go about. You heave to and wait for us." And whirling the wheel, he swung the nose of the Bloody Nuisance round the five boat's lengths of clear water that now lay between them, and before the bewildered crew on the other boat had time to diagnose the maneuver, were upon them.

Amidships the Bloody Nuisance struck, stoving in her enemy's side, and blunting as she did so her own gallant nose. There was a crash, the shearing of shorn timbers and plates, a wild medley of oaths, and the smaller boat backed out, as the other craft listed, the water pouring through the gaping wound in her side.

But at this point their own engine balked; and time had been lost in the extrication. There was not enough clear water now between the two crafts to repel the boarders.

Up chain and rope, and over the rail they swarmed, six of them, the seventh falling backward with the bark from McTish's revolver, which, however, was instantly knocked from his hand.

FOUR WED AT IOWA PARK

IOWA PARK, Nov. 8.—Two weddings of interest took place here during the last week. Miss Daisy Williams and A. M. Spruell of this community were married here last weekend. They will make their home here.

Mrs. Hattie Long, formerly of Cook county, was married to R. N. Watson here Sunday afternoon with Rev. C. H. Hand, pastor of the Methodist church, officiating.

IOWA PARK IS PAVING.

Cash Street Re-Opened After Completion of Work; Busy on Broad St.

IOWA PARK, Oct. 8.—This city is going through an era of paving. Cash Street which has been closed for the past month while being concreted, is open for traffic. Broad Street is closed while a strip of concrete 40 feet wide is being poured on each side of the street, leaving a space 40 feet wide in the middle of the street for grass and trees.

More Truth Than Poetry

SIMPLE AND DIRECT

The caveman, as every one knows,
When a maid he was eager to wed—
Would biff her a half dozen blows
With a club on the back of the head;
And when she recovered, as sometimes she did,
With a sigh at his feet she would falter
And whisper: "I think the whole world of you kid,
Please drag me away to the altar."

The caveman, we lately have learned,
(For science has just made it known)
When at night to his den he returned
Wrote letters on fragments of stone;
And when every stone was inscribed with a scrawl—
Outside of his cavern he set them,
And hurled them at editors, landlords and all
The people he wanted to get them.

The cave man in some ways was dense,
Which is what one of course would expect.
He was lacking in ethical sense,
But his methods at least were direct.
By the wives that he went with a club to secure
He must have been always respected,
Moreover we'll say it is perfectly sure
That his letters were never neglected.

Our culture is broader than his—
For we are not so dull and obtuse,
But theres' reason to doubt if it is
Of half as much practical use;
We might look on him as a man to avoid,
As lacking allure and attraction,
But when such poor brains as he had, he employed
He never would fail to get action!

ONCE UPON A TIME — THE THREE LITTLE ELVES—VII.

by W. J. ENRIGHT.

THE STORY UP TO NOW

THERE WAS ONCE A WICKED WOMAN WHO WAS UNKIND TO HER STEP-DAUGHTER. THE THREE LITTLE ELVES, FOR THE GIRL'S KINDNESS, REWARDED HER WITH GOOD WISHES. ONE OF THEIR WISHES WAS THAT A KING SHOULD MARRY HER. ONE WINTER DAY WHILE SHE WAS WASHING WOOL THROUGH A HOLE IN THE ICE, AT HER STEP-MOTHER'S BIDDING, THE KING CAME ALONG. "WHAT ARE YOU DOING?" HE ASKED. "I AM BUT A POOR MAIDEN TRYING TO WASH SOME WOOL," SHE ANSWERED.

THE KING FELT A GREAT PITY FOR THE POOR GIRL AND, SEEING HOW BEAUTIFUL SHE WAS, SAID: "WILL YOU COME WITH ME?"

"GLADLY WILL I COME," SHE ANSWERED, FOR SHE WAS GLAD TO GET AWAY FROM HER WICKED STEP-MOTHER AND SISTER. THE KING PUT HIS GREAT CAPE AROUND HER AND HELPED HER INTO HIS CARRIAGE.

SO THEY DROVE AWAY AND WHEN THEY CAME TO THE CASTLE THE MARRIAGE WAS CELEBRATED WITH GREAT SPLENDOR.

THE STATE OF TEXAS

To the Sheriff or any Constable of Wichita County, Greeting:

You are hereby commanded to summon R. T. Couch and R. T. Couch Oil Corporation by making publication of this citation once each week for four successive weeks previous to the return day hereof, in some newspaper published in your county, if there be a newspaper published therein, but if not, then in any newspaper published in the seventy-eighth judicial district; to appear at the next regular term of the seventy-eighth district court of Wichita county, to be holden at the court house thereof in Wichita Falls, on the first Monday in December, A. D., 1925, the same being the seventh day of December, A. D., 1925. Then and there to answer a petition filed in said court on the thirty-first day of July, A. D., 1925, in a suit, numbered on the docket of said court No. 17273B wherein, the Continental Supply company is plaintiff and R. T. Couch, R. T. Couch Oil corporation of Texas, a corporation, P. S. Shackelford, F. J. Holmes, South Texas Commercial National Bank of Houston, Texas, and C. E. McCutcheon are defendants. Said petition alleging that on and about May 17, 1924, defendant R. T. Couch was the owner of the oil and gas leasehold estate, and all rights thereunder covering the west 50 acres of east 90 acres of north 120 acres of J. W. Robertson's 320 acre survey, Ctf. 1575, Abst. 252, Pat. No. 610, Vol. 14, Wichita county, Texas; that by agreement between plaintiff and defendant R. T. Couch, plaintiff was to furnish defendant certain machinery, tools and supplies for the development of said tract of land for the discovery of oil or gas thereon, the quantity of machinery tools and supplies necessary for said development not being known to said defendant, but said defendant agreed that he would pay the plaintiff the amount charged therefor at the end of each month, but that the debt for said machinery, tools and supplies would not be due and enforcible until the defendant had fully developed said lease, or purchased machinery tools and supplies from the plaintiff to the value of $10,000 that the defendant would make such payments upon account as he could from the proceeds of said leasehold estate; plaintiff says that from May 17, 1924, to June 16, 1925, it regularly and continuously furnished said defendant for the development of said leasehold estate, machinery, tools and supplies to the value of $10,200.99, which sum defendant agreed to pay the plaintiff, but said defendant, R. T. Couch is entitled to a credit for merchandise returned and cash payments made in the sum of $5,515.68, leaving a balance due and unpaid for said machinery, tools and supplies on June 16, 1925, of $4,684.61, which sum is long past due; that defendant has often been requested and demanded to pay said sum, but has failed and refused to pay the same or any part thereof, to plaintiff's damage in said sum of $4,684.61 with legal interest thereon.

Plaintiff further says that on about Feb. 18, 1925, defendant, R. T. Couch transferred and assigned all his assets, consisting of oil and gas leases, including the leasehold estate and described, and all personal property used in connection therewith to R. T. Couch Oil corporation of Texas; that defendant R. T. Couch Oil corporation of Texas, agreed to assume and pay off all the existing indebtedness of defendant R. T. Couch incurred in development and operation of said property as consideration for said assignment and conveyance. That said indebtedness owing this plaintiff by R. T. Couch was at the time of said conveyance one of the debts assumed by said R. T. Couch Oil corporation of Texas, as consideration for said property; that said machinery, tools and supplies above mentioned, were used in the development and operation of said lease above mentioned and described, that said R. T. Couch Oil corporation has been benefitted by said machinery, tools and supplies, and at the time of filing this petition was using said machinery in the operation and development of said lease, and by reason thereof said R. T. Couch Oil corporation of Texas is bound and obligated to pay the plaintiff said sum of $4,684.61, with legal interest. Plaintiff further says that on June 25, 1925, after giving notice in accordance with law filed with the county clerk of Wichita county, Texas, its itemized statement of said machinery, tools and supplies so sold and delivered to said defendants showing the date of delivery, amounts, and the sums charged therefor, and claiming a lien upon said oil and gas leasehold estate covering the above described tract of land, the oil wells thereon, and all the buildings, equipment and improvements situated thereon, and used in connection therewith, and further claiming a lien upon the machinery, tools and supplies so furnished by it to said defendant Couch, as provided by the constitution and the statutes of the State of Texas. Said materialman's lien is recorded in Vol. 21, page 149, lien records of Wichita county, Texas, to which reference is here made.

Plaintiff alleges that it is informed and believes that defendant C. E. McCutcheon, F. J. Holmes, South Texas Commercial National Bank of Houston, Texas, and P. S. Shackelford are claiming some right, title or interest or lien in and to said oil and gas leasehold estate hereinabove described, but that whatever right, title or interest said defendants or either of them may have on, or assert in and to, said oil and gas leasehold estate, the same is subordinate, inferior and subject to plaintiff's right, title and claim by reason of its materialman's lien thereon.

Plaintiff prays for citation against each and all of said defendants and that it have judgment against defendants R. T. Couch and R. T. Couch Oil corporation of Texas, jointly and severally, for the sum of $4,684.61, with legal interest; that its materialman's lien above mentioned be declared by the court a first and prior lien upon said oil and gas leasehold estate, and that the same be ordered foreclosed as against all the defendants herein, and that said property be sold in accordance with law in satisfaction of the plaintiff's judgment rendered herein, that it recover its costs, and have all other relief, either at law or in equity, special and general.

Herein fail not, but have before said court, at its aforesaid next regular term, this writ with your return thereon showing how you have executed the same.

Given under my hand and seal of said court, at office in Wichita Falls, Texas, this the sixth day of November, A. D., 1925.
(SEAL) A. F. KERR, Clerk.
District Court Wichita County, Texas.

NOTICE OF ELECTION.
Ordinance No. 629.

An ordinance providing for the holding of an election in the city of Wichita Falls, Texas, for the purpose of submitting to the qualified voters of said city who are property tax payers therein a proposition for the issuance of bonds of said city in the amount of seventy-five thousands ($75,000) dollars for the purpose of raising funds to pay the cost of construction of public buildings for housing fire apparatus in said city, and levying a tax on all taxable property in said city to pay the principal and interest of said bonds.

Whereas the board of aldermen of the city of Wichita Falls deems it necessary and expedient to borrow money on the credit of the city in the sum of seventy-five thousand ($75,000) dollars and to secure the payment thereof by the issuance of bonds of said city in that amount for the purpose of raising funds to pay the cost of constructing public buildings for housing fire apparatus in and for said city.

Boyd Dooley, clerk, city hall box.
Mrs. Kathleen Gorsline, clerk, city hall box.
Dan White, presiding judge, court house box.
F. B. Mashburn, clerk, court house box.
Robert McCulloch, clerk, court house box.
Walter Robbins, clerk, court house box.

Voters living east of Lamar street and northeast of the Wichita river and southeast of the Wichita Valley railway track in said city shall vote at the city hall box; all voters living west of Lamar street in said city shall vote at the court house box.

5—Notice of said election shall be given by the mayor by publishing a copy of this ordinance with the words "Notice of Election" prefixed thereto ten days next preceding the date of said election in the Wichita Falls Record News, a newspaper published in said city.

6—That because of inadequate fire protection now existing in the city of Wichita Falls, due to not having sufficient number of buildings for housing fire apparatus endangering the property of the citizens of said city, creates an urgent necessity demanding and requiring that the provisions of the city charter providing for the reading of the ordinances three separate days, and providing that ordinances shall not go into effect until thirty days after passage be suspended, and the same are suspended, and this ordinance is passed as an emergency measure and shall take effect and be enforced from and after its passage. TEXAS ROOT ROT OF COTTON.

Many farmers have had trouble this ar as in previous years with their tton dying out in spots. Often mes they attribute this to alkali in e soil, to lightening striking in the ld, or to other causes.

As a matter of fact it is not ollali, lightning but the work of a fun- s commonly called the Texas root t.

This disease affect the cotton over e greater portion of the producing ea of this state. It is especially evalent in the black land belt and estimated to reduce the cotton crop the state on an average of about per cent a year.

For years but little was known of e cause of cotton plants dying out spots in a field and in fact the whole matter remained more or less of a mystery to farmers and scientists alike until the problem was taken up by Dr. J. J. Taubenhaus, plant pathologist at A. & M. college.

Dr. Taubenhaus has during the past five or six years performed an immense amount of research work both in the field and laboratory in seeking out the cause and cure for this pest. Only recently has he solved the problem to the extent at least of being able to tell our farmers how they can absolutely eliminate root rot from their fields.

It is a simple enough procedure but requires hard work on the part of the farmer for a few months and then rather vigilant attention for a year or more.

We will in future articles try and outline fog the benefit of our farmers some of the things which Dr. Taubenhaus has discovered in his work.

STOCK MARKET REFLECTS BIG BUSINESS GAIN

Increased Industrial Activity and Greater Earnings Reported

NEW YORK, Nov. 8.—With the stock market last week breaking records for breadth and volume of trading it was fairly evident that a year of unusual business prosperity was being celebrated.

Extra dividends together with reports of larger industrial and railroad earnings continued to make their appearance, all attesting to the improved financial condition of the large corporations. The prospect of even larger distributions was seen in reports that federal investigations of large surpluses might influence their fortunate possessors to pass them on to stockholders, particularly in view of the proposed surtax reductions promised at the next session of congress.

Steel Is Higher.

The actual progress of trade during the week was obscured to some extent by the spectacular activities important gains were recorded. The in the stock market, although several most significant development in the steel industry was the stabilization of prices at a higher level, which, with steadily expanding orders, gave promise of larger earnings for the final quarter of the year. With shipments and incoming orders in October exceeding all previous months this year, operations in some districts were advanced to 84 per cent of capacity, with one company announcing plans to expand to 90 per cent this week. The advantage of these developments was recognized in the enromous demands for the steel shares, nearly all of which followed the rise in U. S. steel to the highest price on record. Seldom have the motors companies enjoyed such a satisfactorily autumn, while the peak of automobile buying is supposed to come in the spring months, the situation this year has been altered by the restored participating power of the financial districts which have celebrated another harvest in good crops by the purchase of new cars and trucks.

Production Greater.

Production schedules of several companies have been advanced to the highest rates in their history. The public's reaction to the improvement in this industry has been expressed in a rise of a billion dollars in the market value of 11 leading motor companies whose securities are listed on the New York stock exchange.

Prospective tax legislation in the forthcoming session of congress, particularly the scheduled reduction in the maximum surtax, was expected to stimulate the flow of capital into industry. Because of the more moderate levies, funds which have hitherto been tied up in tax exempt securities are almost certain to find their way back to corporation stocks and bonds and so return once more to productive purposes.

Big Forward Movement.

An examination of the week's progress was decidedly encouraging. After the favorable dividends in October, said Dun's Review, a new month has opened with a further acceleration of busines activity. The forward movement has been steadily gaining momentum, as reports and statistics have demonstrated and the sustained and orderly advance has strengthened sentiment throughout the country. Expectations of a record holiday trade for which preparations are now being made, are practically general, while the fourth quarters, results in various lines of manufacture, promise to be unusually satisfactory.

Railroad car loadings have continued to measure out a vast flow of commodities from producing to consuming channels. Freight traffic for the week ended October 24, amounted to 1,121,459, within 3,000 cars of the record number loaded the last week in August.

Cotton Market, in Most Active Week of Season, Recovers 226 Points From Low for December

NEW ORLEANS, Nov. 8.—(AP)—The past week was probably the most active of the season in the contract cotton market and witnessed a recovery in prices of 226 points from the low point for December contracts at 17.90 for Saturday a week ago, that option having risen to 20.16 Friday.

The main cause of the advance was the strengthened technical position of the market brought about by drastic liquidation of the long interest during the week following publicatoin of the government crop estimate of 15,226,000 bales, and building of a large short interest.

The covering of this, owing to heavy rains in the central and western belts, which, according to accounts have destroyed a considerable amount of unpicked cotton, was the principal cause of the advance.

Another incentive to higher prices was an increase in discounts on low grades and a corresponding premium on higher grades. The lowering of the grade of so much cotton damaged by the rains and wind diminished the supply of tenderable grades and increased the value of contracts.

Still another incentive was the heavy exports from southern ports during the past week, totalling 483,701 bales. This brings the excess in exports for the season to date over last season to 453,010 bales. These, in connection witn the big mill takings of the past weeg og 15,000 bales makes it clear that from now on the matter of consumption will be as important as the matter of production.

As the week closed the market was under the shadow of the impending government report due tomorrow. The average of the private estimates of the crop issued during the week was 15,111,000 bales.

DOROTHY DIX ADVICE

"We Shoold Live So That We Will Not Be Afraid of What Others May Say About Us, And Having Done That, Not to Care a Hang What They Do Say" Advises Dorothy Dix

There is no more difficult question to decide than how far we should be ruled by our neighbors, and where we should draw the line between snapping our fingers in Mrs. Grundy's face and groveling in the dust before her.

A millionaire's insolent dictum, "The public be damned," very nearly wrecked a railroad and certainly it will wreck any man or woman to flout the opinion of the community in which she or he lives. For our reputations are in the mouths of our acquaintances and we stand or fall by what they say about us.

It isn't enough for us to be good, we must look good to those about us, and act in accord with their conventions. There is an unwritten law that we may not do certain things without subjecting ourselves to gossip and we defy this at our peril.

The married woman who goes joyriding with slick-haired youth may be a devoted wife and mother and faithful to her husband; the girl who indulges in petting parties in automobiles in front of her home at 3 in a morning may be merely indiscreet. The married man who takes his stenographer to lunch may be actuated by only the most altruistic motives, but their clear consciences avail them nothing.

Their neighbors cannot see into their souls. They can only judge by the outside and make such deductions as appearances seem to warrant. Therefore, we are foolish if we think we can defy our neighbors and do as we please and live our own lives regardless of them.

Every now and then you find some intreped individual who tries this experiment: A young girl who thinks she has the right to comfort and console some married man and receive his attentions. A couple who decide to live together without the benefit of clergy. A man who scorns to follow the dictates of fashion and who comes to your parties unshaven and unshorn and wearing a flannel shirt and baggy trousers. But sooner or later, the juggernaut of public opinion rolls over all these people and leaves them crushed and maimed. They find themselves ostracized, balked of their ambitions dropped out of everything and left to go their self-selected way alone.

Now this fear of what "they will say" is the beginning of righteousness. It is the hangman's whip that keeps many a weak and tempted brother and sister in the straight and narrow path. And it is a good and wholesome thing for us to entertain a proper respect for our neighbors' tongues and to so conduct ourselves that we are not afraid of being the subject of conversation when two or three of them are gathered together.

But while we are wise to accord proper deference to our neighbors's opinions, we are foolish to be slaves to them and to be so afraid of what they will say about us that we sacrifice all our independence to them.

For we may be sure that no matter what we do, we will be discussed and criticized and that we will not be able to please everybody.

The Joneses will think we stay at home too much; the Robinsons that we gad too much. The Smiths will opine that we are extravagant; the Thompsons that we are tightwads. The Johnsons will hold that we spoil our children; the Grahams that we are too hard upon them. If we have an automobile the O'Reillys will wonder how we can afford it. If we don't have one, the O'Tooles will wonder why we don't. If our household is a devoted one, some of the neighbors will hold us up as an example of a happy marriage, and others will suspect it of being a bluff.

And so it will go. Others will discuss us as we, in our turn, discuss them, and in the end we have to fall back upon the philosophy of the old Dutch merchant who suddenly acquired a fortune and who, knowing that its origin would be a matter of speculation among his friends, carved over the doorway of the fine new mansion that he built: "They say. They will say. Let them be saying."

Unfortunately this fear of "what they say" makes such cowards of many people that they will ruin their lives rather than do something that they think the neighbors might criticize. It is at the bottom of what makes men starve along at what they call "white collar jobs" when they might be making fortunes in some trades. It is what crowds the professions with the unfit who would make successes as carpenters or bricklayers or plumbers.

For years the fear of what the neghbors would say kept women threadbare in genteel poverty and eating the bitter bread of dependence, who were just aching to get out and work and make money for themselves.

This dread of what the neighbors will say is still keeping thousands of women who have a genius for cookery that they would love to express, and who thrill at the sight of a pan and pot out of the kitchens that they long to be in.

They would a million times rather go out to do domestic service than work in factories or as clerks in stores if they weren't terrorized by the thought of what their neighbors would say.

Worst of all, this fear of what "they say" makes men and women ruin themselves by extravagances. They feel that they have to keep up with the Joneses. They haven't the courage to live according to their means. They think they will be criticized if they don't give the sort of parties their friends give and wear the same sort of clothes and have as good a car. So they run into debt and come to disaster in the end.

And the queer part of it all is that when we are brave enough to be independent and choose the sort of work we are fitted for by nature, when we roll our own baby carriages and make our own frocks and ride in a flivver and live within our means, our neighbors all praise us for it and say kindly things instead of ridiculing us as they do when we pretend and pose.

The moral of all of which is that we should live so that we will not be afraid of what "they say" about us, and having done that, not care a hang what they do say.

BOND MARKET SLOW AS TRADE SCANS TAX BILL

Financiers Shun Activity to Keep An Eye On Washington

NEW YORK, Nov. 8.—(AP)—International financial developments and the progress made at Washington in drafting a new tax bill interested investment circles last week to the exclusion o factual bond trading, which continued in rather colorless fashion. A firmer tone was in evidence throughout the week, but price advances were moderate.

Removal of Great Britain's unofficial embargo on new financing, which has applied mainly to foreign loans during the re-establishment of the gold standard in England, revived possibilities of lively competition between New York and London for international business. Opinions were widely divergent as to what extent this would develop. Great Britain, it was held, would be handicapped by the concentration of gold in the United States, and the continuing need of protecting its monetary situation. Several bankers asserted that the friendly financial relations now existing between the two countries would be operated against attempts at rivalry in this filed.

See Lower Money Rate.

It was generally agreed, however, that the reopening of the London market would tend to produce better terms for foreign borrowes and probably ease money rates here while strengthening them in London. One of the first tangible results was the announcement that British banks would float an international loan of $50,000,000 for the German potash industry, in which American investment houses would participate. On the other hand, the Cunard line, one of Great Britain's foremost shipping companies, has turned for the first time from London to New York for new financing.

With France still struggling to unravel its knotty financial problems great significance was attached to an announcement from Washington late in the week that the administration would place no obstacles in the way of further borrowing here for exchange stabilization purposes. This development, coming after an alarming break in the French franc to below four cents, reflected a modification of Washington's earlier declaration that private loans would be restricted to countries which funded their war debts to the United States and was believed to foreshadow the extension of another credit to support France's currency.

Watch Tax Bill.

Promises of tax reduction at the next session of congress have within recent weeks played an increasingly important part in directing the currents of the bond market. With a lower surtax in sight, a considerable portion of investment funds has been shifted from liberty bonds and other tax free securities to higher yielding corporation stocks and bonds. The process of diverting this capital back into productive channels continued throughout the week and was reflected in the establishment of further new low levels for some of the government's obligations.

Aside from convertible bonds which naturally followed the trend of stocks, price fluctuations during the week were devoid of interesting features.
