Despite plan, budget battle continues

Democrats want SS left alone

WASHINGTON (AP) — No sooner did President Reagan endorse a budget plan put forth by his allies in the Senate than congressional Democrats jumped all over it as contemplating deep cuts in Social Security.

Accusing President Reagan of breaking his promise not to touch Social Security, Senate Minority Leader Robert Byrd introduced an amendment Thursday rejecting the Republican-led Senate Budget Committee's call for a $40 billion reduction in the cost of the retirement program through a combination of benefit reductions and withholding increases.

The budget plan "is unfair, hasty and went against the president's promise that Social Security would be included in the safety net," Byrd said.

"This body has solemnly undertaken not to touch Social Security until the president's commission makes its recommendations," said Sen. Daniel Patrick Moynihan, D-N.Y.

He said a $40 billion cut would amount to an average benefit reduction of $1,111 over three years for each of the 35 million Americans now receiving Social Security payments.

But Richard Darman, White House deputy chief of staff, said the Social Security recommendations should not be characterized as cuts.

"It is simply a recognition of the fact that something must be done to solve the Social Security problem and we are assuming that, following the recommendations of the commission, something will be done," Darman said in a telephone interview.

He said the $40 billion might not come from cuts. "It is possible that amount of money could be raised either by changes in benefits for future recipients or some form of revenue changes or a program restructuring or management changes," he said.

The Senate Budget Committee completed action on the compromise plan Thursday night, sending it to the Senate floor for action. The 12-8 vote broke down along party lines. The committee outline calls for $667 billion in revenues and $779 billion in expenditures.

Reagan told reporters Thursday that the new budget proposal would continue to protect the basic Social Security benefits.

The president said the savings "could come from a restructuring of the program" but did not explain how the reductions could be obtained without lowering benefits. Of the $40 billion "solvency recommendations" contained in the budget plan, Reagan said "that figure is a plug that is simply put in there."

The budget outline, approved Wednesday night by the budget committee following negotiations between White House officials and Republican leaders, will "put our country firmly on the road to economic prosperity" if congressional Democrats cooperate, the president said.

But Democrats showed no early signs of cooperation and it was around Social Security that they drew their wagons.

Voting on Byrd's amendment was postponed until next week following a bitter Senate debate in which each side accused the other of playing politics with the huge retirement system.

The great debate

Senate Budget Committee Chairman Pete Domenici, R-N.M., left, and Sen. Dan Quayle, R-Ind., hold an animated conference prior to Thursday's committee hearings in an effort to reach a budget compromise.

'Weevils' ready for compromise

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan has taken a big step toward ending the budget logjam by accepting the proposal of the Senate Budget Committee, says Rep. Marvin Leath of Texas.

"It was a good, positive step," said Leath, a Democrat from Marlin.

His views coincided with other conservative Texas Democrats, members of the "Boll Weevil" faction whose support is considered pivotal for a budget bill to win House approval.

"Where you had both the president and the Democratic leadership refusing to face the truth, you've got at least one facing the truth now, with the president accepting the idea there's no way to control this budget without addressing both revenues and entitlements," Leath said Thursday.

The budget proposed by Sen. Pete Domenici, R-N.M., head of the Senate committee, is "not a great deal different" from the concepts the Boll Weevils have been pursuing, said Rep. Charles Stenholm, D-Texas.

"We were encouraged by the action of the Senate Budget Committee and the president's response. It was an important step in the right direction," said Stenholm, of Stamford, chairman of the conservative Democratic coalition.

"We strongly encourage the House leadership of both parties to make a similar effort," Stenholm added.

He said his group is continuing to work with Rep. Jim Jones, D-Okla., chairman of the House Budget Committee, toward a bipartisan approach that will meet the nation's needs.

However, Democratic leaders strongly criticized Domenici's budget proposal, which was approved Wednesday night in his Senate committee by a 10-9 vote that strictly followed party lines.

"Those who have been wanting the president to move first, well, he has now," Stenholm added.

"My prediction is, absent our leadership taking some initiative of coming up with a responsible budget, I am going to come down on the side of whoever does. Right now, that's the president," Leath said.

Criticism by Speaker of the House Tip O'Neill and House Majority Leader Tip O'Neill of Domenici's proposal came while Jones sought to work into his committee bill a "shopping list" the Boll Weevils gave Democratic leaders two weeks ago.

"My understanding is that the Jones and Domenici budgets, and the figures we're using, are not really that far apart," Leath said.

"It does seem incompatible, considering the criticism from the leadership, but I think you've got two extreme situations — what the speaker is saying and, I guess, what (Sen. Jack) Kemp is saying," Leath added.

"They're both wrong. There's a middle ground that both sides of Congress will come down on, and we hope Jim Jones is in the middle ground."

Rep. Phil Gramm, D-Texas, of College Station called Domenici's budget proposal "an important first step in the right direction" and expressed sorrow that Democrats on the Senate Budget Committee all opposed it.

Britain warns of more bombings

By The Associated Press

A top Argentine official headed to the United Nations today to pursue a diplomatic solution to the Falkland Islands crisis, but Britain was skeptical of the effort, warned it might bomb the islands' main airfield again, and refused to rule out strikes against mainland Argentine bases.

The Argentine official, Deputy Foreign Minister Enrique Ros, left Buenos Aires Thursday night for U.N. headquarters in New York to discuss possible ways to end the conflict that erupted April 2 when Argentine forces seized the Falklands from Britain.

British Foreign Secretary Francis Pym accused the Argentines of scuttling peace efforts and told reporters in London today that British warplanes will bomb the airstrip on the Falkland Islands capital of Stanley if Argentine troops repair the damage of two raids in the past seven days.

"If necessary we will bomb the airfield again," Pym said. He also refused to rule out bombing Argentine mainland airfields, although he said Britain did not want to do this. "But I would not want to exclude any possibility," he said.

Britain lost two more of its Sea Harrier jet fighters in bad weather off the Falklands Thursday, the British Defense Ministry said, and British newspapers speculated today they collided in the air after taking off on a combat patrol. This left 17 of the original 20 Harriers with the armada still operational.

Amid growing expectations the British will soon assault the South Atlantic islands, Pym told the House of Commons in London:

"If all endeavors to meet a sensible, reasonable and fair settlement fail, then regrettably nobody is in any doubt what we are going to do — we cannot allow the occupation of our islands to continue.... Our resolve is undiminished."

Pym blamed Argentine insistence on sovereignty over the Falklands for the collapse of a U.S.-Peruvian peace plan that he claimed could have brought a cease-fire today.

He said Britain was pursuing the only surviving diplomatic option, a U.N. plan having a "similar basis" to Peruvian proposals

Airport board, council approve changes

By LANA CUNNINGHAM

A plan for enlarging the parking lot at Midland Regional Airport and revising the road system was approved Thursday morning by the Airport Advisory Board during a special joint meeting with the board and Midland City Council. But the thumbs-up didn't come until after some verbal disagreement between some of the airport board members and the engineers.

Squeezing into the Conference Room in the basement at City Hall, the two boards heard a presentation by representatives of the engineering and design firms, TRA, Inc., of Seattle, Wash., and Parkhill, Smith & Cooper, Inc. of Lubbock.

After the vote of the airport board, Mayor G. Thane Akins said the item would be placed on Tuesday's agenda for the full council to consider. However, he implied that approval to proceed with plans and specifications would come without a problem.

THE PLAN IS DESIGNED in phases with the first one to cost about $16 million and to handle the parking needs up to the year 1995, according to Don Gerard with TRA and Bill Waeur with Parkhill, Smith & Cooper.

A service road would loop the main road and this would be used for delivery trucks and airport employees. Plans show that three general aviation hangars would have to be removed to accommodate the proposed road system.

When completed, the new parking area should accommodate 2,710 vehicles, said Waeur. "Our projection for 1990 is 2,154 spaces and for 1995, 2,709 spaces. This should get you to where it's projected up to 1995," he added.

Col. Wilson Banks, director of aviation, reported that with the overflow lot to the west, the airport can handle up to 1,400 vehicles and "some weekends it's filling up. Almost every day the close-in parking is filling up."

Waeur noted that with boardings up 6 percent over what had been projected for 1981, the current parking area is "close to capacity."

Even with the board's approval and the expected council OK, Waeur said the project involves much more than just paving. "The utilities and storm sewer have to be done before you can put paving on top. Old hangars have to be demolished and the old air traffic control tower will have to be torn down when the new one is completed. It will be almost three years from now before construction will be finished."

"IF WE ONLY rely on people around here, it will take five years," quipped Councilman Gordon Marcum II.

Drawing plans and specifications will take the engineers up to the end of October before the council can advertise for bids, Waeur said.

In explaining the plan to the query-

Judge decides against TDC inmate's complaint

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

A Texas Department of Corrections inmate who claimed he suffered a stroke and the deliberate indifference of Midland County Sheriff Dallas Smith while he was in the Midland County Jail last year got no relief in a ruling on Thursday by U.S. District Court Judge Lucius D. Bunton.

The inmate, 42-year-old Wayne Graham Patton of Riverside, Calif., had lodged in federal court a $100,000 suit in which he claimed the sheriff and jail physician Dr. Patrick Leung had denied him his constitutional rights and adequate medical care.

Patton, who was jailed for 59 days and then was transferred to state prison to serve a four-year term for unauthorized use of a motor vehicle in 1980, had maintained that the physician misdiagnosed his alleged stroke as angina pectoris — a minor heart ailment often aggravated by emotional strain. The doctor had prescribed nitroglycerine tablets to alleviate Patton's discomfort.

The judge, who considered Patton's complaints and the sheriff's and the physician's contentions in a non-jury trial April 14, on Thursday signed an order holding judgment against Patton and effectively dismissing the case. However, since Patton had been recog-

New director seeing to CDs

Although plans to spend more than $1 million in federal funds are barely off the ground, the new community development director for the city of Midland is in the middle of preparing next year's application for more money.

Midland received its final approval on last year's money in late January after spending seven months amending its three-year Housing Assistance Plan. With the money, the city hired Susan Howell, who holds a master's degree in public administration, to oversee the program.

"We've already started the notice process on a new application. We're working on soliciting citizens' input," she said, noting that a public hearing will be held at the end of June and another about the end of August.

She expects the completed application to go before the council in late August for its comments and then will be sent on to the Department of Housing and Urban Development.

Ms. Howell's job consists of coordinating "all the activities involved with various departments and outside agencies."

The first of these has come from the Parks and Recreation Department and its director, Wayne Kohout. Ms. Howell noted the plans are prepared for $150,000 of parks improvements and are being advertised for bids. Broken down, it involves putting in sprinkler systems in Halff, Sparks and Washington parks in addition to new play and recreational equipment, tot lots, spray pools and covered benches.

Scheduled first is installation of sprinkler systems, she added. "Work should start within the next 30 days," while funds left over from the $150,000 allotment in this field will go for additional equipment, such as tot lots and park benches.

Street improvements had been designated for $374,000 of the money and the work will begin "when we can find a contractor," remarked Fred Baker, director of public works. "We've got part of the plans drawn."

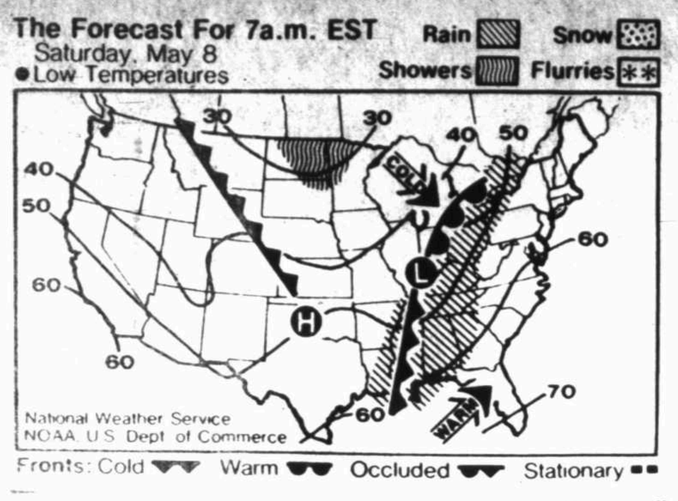

Sections of streets in south and east Midland have been targeted for the penetration paving projects, according to Baker.

The list of streets include Tilden Avenue from Orchard Lane to Golf Course Road, Dormard Avenue on half a width from Lamesa to Parkway, Indiana Avenue from Dallas to Marshall street, Dallas Street from Louisiana to Mississippi, Fort Worth and Weatherford streets from Kansas to Mississippi, Kansas from Weatherford to Dallas.

Also, Texas Avenue from Carver to Madison, Adams Street from Illinois to Extended forecast

Sunday through Tuesday

West Texas Partly cloudy, with no important temperature changes. A chance of thunderstorms extreme south west Monday. Highs in the 70s Panhandle to mid 90s extreme south through the period. Lows in the upper 40s Panhandle to the low 60s extreme south.

Warm weather forecast for weekend

Those residents of the Permian Basin who have been wishing for sunshine after a week of cloudy skies and rain should get their request this weekend.

The National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport expects fair skies and warm temperatures to prevail as the moist earth may finally get a chance to dry after an official 1.59 inch was received during the week, though unofficial reports in Midland proper ranged considerably higher.

The high temperature Thursday reached only 64, far below the record 103 set on that date in 1947, while the low of 43 came close to establishing a new record, falling only one degree short of the 1933 low.

The low tonight is expected to be near 50 and the high Saturday in the upper 80s.

The extended forecast indicates a chance of thunderstorms may exist for most sections of West Texas early next week.

Clements: Consideration changed hands

By KATHY BAKER

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — A Democratic candidate's announcement that he is withdrawing from a runoff was a "secret deal," but a Republican plan to replace nominees with stronger candidates won't be seen as a similar back-room maneuver, Gov. Bill Clements says.

Gov. Bill Clements

At his news conference Thursday, Clements suggested that some kind of "consideration" changed hands between Attorney General Mark White and Railroad Commissioner Buddy Temple before Temple dropped out of the Democratic runoff.

Temple announced Thursday that he would bow to party unity and give the nomination to White without a June 5 runoff. Temple had finished a poor second to White in Saturday's primary.

But Clements told a Capitol news conference the party unity explanation was "nonsense."

"I think they have done it on the basis of some special consideration and what I'm interested in is what was paid and to whom," Clements said. "There was a secret meeting and I want to know what went on in the secret meeting and I want to know what consideration was between these two individuals."

Both Temple and White had said there was no meeting.

Nevertheless, Clements said he thought voters would view Temple's move as a "secret deal," and would feel "cheated" to his and the Republican party's benefit in November.

"Collectively, (White and Temple) have four feet between them, and I think they just shot themselves in all four feet."

But Clements insisted that Republican plans to replace two nominees with stronger candidates had "been discussed openly" and would not be viewed as a similar "back-room deal."

"The situation is entirely different," he said. "These were not serious candidates."

Donald Hebert, the Republican candidate for agriculture commissioner, has said he would step aside for a stronger nominee to run against Democrat Jim Hightower. Hightower defeated incumbent Reagan Brown in the primary.

But Millard Neptune, listed as the Republican nominee for state treasurer, has put a crimp in Republican plans by continuing to insist he is staying in the race. The 71-year-old Austinite would face the Democratic nominee, former Travis County Commissioner Ann Richards.

Mrs. Richards had expected to wage a runoff campaign against incumbent Warren G. Harding, who has been indicted on a charge alleging he had state employees do campaign work. But Harding withdrew from the runoff Tuesday, saying he wanted to spare his family "hurt and grief" that a continued campaign would bring.

Temple's withdrawal removes the governor's race from the June 5 ballot and gives the nomination to White, who finished Saturday with 44.7 percent of the vote to Temple's 30.4. Land Commissioner Bob Armstrong finished third.

Clements said he was "delighted" to be facing White in the general election and said he considers White easier to defeat than either Temple or Armstrong.

"He's exactly the candidate I wanted from the very beginning," said Clements, who said Saturday that he did not care which candidate won the Democratic nomination.

The two have been adversaries in the past over politically hot issues such as redistricting and a federal prison suit against the Texas Department of Corrections.

Clements said he would be willing to debate White "several times" during the general election campaign, once "times, places and circumstances" were agreed upon.

"I have a history of debating attorney generals," he said.

Airport parking, road changes approved by panel

ing airport board members, Gerard said, "It organizes the peripheral system to serve the whole system. The roads are organized to provide clear orientation to the infrequent user."

Added airport board Chairman Ed Vogler, "What is critical now is the phasing of the project. The airport has to still be used while the project is being built."

What concerned the airport board members was the phasing and the possibility that the city might not be doing enough to meet future demands.

Said one board member, "We're wasting more money if we don't go ahead and build to accommodate up to 1995 and 2000."

Further interrogation by board member Rusty Buckingham prompted Gerard to answer, "If you're hung up on the last phase, there will be considerable overbuild. You have to be way off on your growth figures to move 10 years down to five years."

HE POINTED OUT that the final phase involves a three-decker parking garage on the west adjacent to the terminal building. Even if the council decided to go with all three phases at once, Gerard said work on this last part wouldn't start until the rest of the parking area was completed.

"Well, I'm still concerned that it can't handle the parking by the time it's finished," Buckingham interjected. "When the current parking lot was completed it was almost full."

In answer to that charge, Banks explained that plans for the parking lot had been drawn and work implemented before Southwest Airlines and Braniff had announced service to Midland. "How the hell could you look into a crystal ball and tell that all this was going to happen?" he remarked.

Added the mayor, "I hate to bring up such a mundane thing as money, but we don't have federal ADAP (Airport Development Assistance Program) money now. It wasn't that way five years ago."

The engineers had estimated the multi-level parking garage would boost the $16 million up by another $6-8 million.

Banks later told the airport board that "we're asking you guys here to give the green light. We need to get something going. Every time we've discussed it we've had changes and changes. We don't have an unlimited source of money."

"I'm not trying to pick the plan to pieces," said Buckingham, one of the board members who had been shooting questions all morning to the two engineers. "I certainly don't have any expertise in that area. But I would hate to see us go in and do this and finish it and then go back to the public and say we have to do something else."

ANOTHER BOARD MEMBER, Bill Mewhorter, pointed out to Buckingham that, "We have to go on the projections these people made and so far it's only off 6 percent." Commenting that predicting is hard to do in light of the current economy he added, "There could be a 6 percent reduction in the next few years."

Banks noted that Continental Airlines is pulling out of Midland June 1, Braniff is teetering and Muse Air, which was to start this month, hasn't been allotted slots by the Federal Aviation Administration.

Afterward, the mayor said the plan is phased "in such a way that we could go ahead with the multi-story parking if we need to. You have to go ahead on the basis of what you know right now."

Akins said Midland is trying to get part of the cost of the airport expansion included as a line item in the Department of Transportation but there "is a low chance of success."

And Congress still is considering the ADAP fund, he said.

Banks added that the administration has been using money out of the ADAP fund for purposes other than its original intent.

The mayor agreed, saying, "The trust fund had been applicable for this kind of project, it has several billion dollars in it. But now they're doing everything with it but this."

Court rules

nized as a pauper, defendants Smith, Leung and Midland County had to bear court expenses incurred in the case.

"There is no evidence that Sheriff Smith was personally involved with plaintiff's medical care or that Sheriff Smith was aware of plaintiff's medical complaints," Bunton wrote in his judgment. "A supervisory official such as Sheriff Smith may not be held liable for the acts of his subordinates in the absence of proof that Sheriff Smith had a policy of refusing to provide reasonable medical care or exhibited a conscious disregard for the serious medical needs of his prisoners."

Patton, the judge wrote, "consistently received adequate medical attention as determined by contemporary medical standards" and "failed to show that the diagnosis and treatment rendered by Dr. Leung was erroneous or otherwise improper."

Furthermore, defendants Smith, Leung and Midland County did not act "to deprive the plaintiff of his constitutional rights.

"There is no proof that the defendants acted in deliberate disregard of the serious medical needs" of Patton.

Patton was returned to his cell at the TDC unit at Huntsville following the trial in the George Mahon Federal Building here.

His four-year sentence came after he had pleaded guilty in Midland's 142nd State District Court to unauthorized use of a motor vehicle — a 1979 Ford Thunderbird — on Nov. 26, 1980. Judge Pat Baskin had meted out the sentence after considering Patton's prior convictions for assault and interstate tranportation of a motor vehicle.

Four members of The Midland Reporter-Telegram editorial staff received recognition as winners in the annual Hearst Community Newspapers Writing Contests for 1981.

The awards were announced this week.

Lana Cunningham, assistant city editor, received the annual Community Service Award given "for outstanding service and accomplishment." She received a plaque and cash award for what the judges described as "a superb series spotlighting the housing shortage created by Midland's business boom and pointing the way to a solution."

She also received a second-place award in the Enterprise category for the same series. Enterprise awards are given for features and series that are the result, to a great extent, of the individual's own investigation and dedication.

Staff writer Patrick Dearen received first-place awards in both the Features category for his story entitled "Hoboes: Traveling America's forgotten highways" and in the Enterprise Category for a series about a crackdown being resumed on illegal aliens in the Permian Basin.

News Editor Janine Green received a first-place award in the Headlines and Captions category for the headline "Brooke's mom can't shield her now" and Staff Writer Ed Todd received an honorable mention rating for his story about a Midland girl who was flown to Pittsburgh for a liver transplant.

Certificates and the cash awards are presented annually in five categories to Hearst editorial staff members following judging of entries submitted each quarter.

Police identify elderlyman's body

ODESSA — The body of an elderly man found in Big Spring Thursday has been tentatively identified as that of an Odessa shoe salesman missing since late April.

"There are no suspects or motive at this time," Odessa police Lt. Rusty Baker said this morning. Happy Howry, 66, a shoe salesman for the J.C. Penny Co. in Permian Mall, disappeared after attending church and having lunch with his mother April 25.

Police said he left his mother's Odessa residence for Big Spring that day and his car was found abandoned near the Big Spring police station three days later. A partially decomposed body matching Howry's description was found in a remote, westside field inside the city limits about 5:30 p.m. Thursday.

An autopsy has been ordered to determine the cause of death and tests are being conducted to establish positive identification.

Community development director now 'on the job'

Texas, Texas Avenue from Adams to Jesse, Jesse from Texas to Wall, Jackson from Washington to Pennsylvania, Fort Worth Street from Florida to Dakota, Loraine Street starting 300 feet north of Collins and extending to Griffin, Rhode Island from Big Spring to Loraine.

In addition, Loraine and Colorado streets from New Jersey to Rhode Island Street, Belmont from Rhode Island to Hicks, McKenzie from Carter to New Jersey, Montgomery from Big Spring to Camp and Washington from Weatherford to Dallas.

Penetration paving involves no curb and gutter with the exception of Indiana Avenue, which will receive those additions, said Baker.

The lion's share of the money, or $500,000, has been designated for housing rehabilitation, said Ms. Howell. But this may be the last area of the funding that the city will tackle since its plans for using the Human Relations Council as an assistant have disintegrated. She explained that the director of that agency quit and the city will have to go to the Housing Authority to administer the program.

As of yet, no plans have been finalized with the Housing Authority, she added.

And the city still has $37,000 to dispose of that was left over from the last grant, which came for the 1976-77 fiscal year. Ms. Howell said this money is earmarked for housing demolition.

Most of the houses that will be demolished with this money have concrete floors "where you need heavy equipment to remove them," said Baker.

For all these projects, the city must do an environmental impact statement before the money will be released, said Ms. Howell.

Plans for using the money don't include construction of housing for low-income families and that had been the bone of contention between the federal and local governments on the city's HAP plan. That money, said Ms. Howell, would have to be applied for under another area of HUD "and there is no new construction money left."

In reviewing the list of items designated for the money, Ms. Howell commented that she is double-checking to see that they meet HUD's criteria.

"We need to be careful and make sure everything is eligible. Some cities are having to pay back the federal government up to $100,000 for using the money illegally."

von Bulow sentenced today

NEWPORT, R.I. (AP) — Claus von Bulow, convicted of trying to kill his heiress wife and facing 40 years in prison, is concerned about the impact his sentence might have on his teen-age daughter, his lawyer says.

The 55-year-old socialite was to be sentenced today before Newport Superior Court Judge Thomas H. Needham on two counts of assault with intent to commit murder. Each count carries a penalty of between two and 20 years in prison.

A jury found the Danish-born financial consultant guilty March 16 of injecting his millionaire wife, Martha "Sunny" von Bulow, with insulin during Christmas visits in 1979 and 1980 to their Newport mansion. Mrs. von Bulow was left in an irreversible coma the second time.

"He's apprehensive, like anyone else would be," defense lawyer John F. Sheehan said Thursday. "He's concerned about his daughter and the impact on his daughter," 14-year-old Cosima von Bulow.

"I think he also feels he has some viable appealable issues and that he's hopeful that in the end he will be exonerated," Sheehan added.

Prosecutor Stephen R. Famiglietti refused to say what sentence he would seek for von Bulow.

"I'll make my recommendation in court," he said.

Sheehan and defense lawyer Herald P. Fahringer said they hoped Needham would allow von Bulow to remain free on $500,000 bail pending an appeal to the Rhode Island Supreme Court. They said a notice of appeal would be filed today.

"In my experience I have never had a first offender without a criminal record held without bail pending appeal," Sheehan said. "We are going to ask that if the judge does not continue bail, he would at least countenance a stay."

"During the course of the trial I catalogued in the neighborhood of two dozen errors we feel are grounds for an appeal," Fahringer said.

He said the appeal would argue that a black bag seized from von Bulow's locked closet at the Newport mansion shouldn't have been admitted as evidence. The bag, containing an insulin-tainted hypodermic needle and drugs, was found in the closet by von Bulow's stepson and a private detective.

Treasure hunter cruises seeking sunken galleons

EDITOR'S NOTE: While vacationing in the Florida Keys recently, Harvey Hagman talked with Bob Holloway of Treasure Salvors Inc., who was instrumental in pinpointing the location of two Spanish treasure ships, ending a 351-year search for the galleons.

By HARVEY HAGMAN
Hearst Feature Service

KEY WEST, Fla. — Saturday, June 1, 1971.

Holly's Folly, a speck in the seas south of the Florida Keys, leaves a thin white wake as it plows endless furrows through rolling turquoise waters. The Chris Craft is towing a $30,000 magnetometer, trolling for treasure. Eight miles to the north, the uninhabited isles of the Marquesas shimmer in the sun.

Treasure hunter Bob Holloway, vice president and search master for Treasure Salvors Inc., will not soon forget this breezy morning. Just before the Folly turns back on a north-east leg, Holloway's sister, Marjory Hargreaves, watches the magnetometer needle dip, then yells, "Anomaly!"

Hargreaves and Kay Finley — Holloway's all-woman crew — toss out another bright orange buoy. The Folly anchors off the buoy over the Quicksands, a 20-mile shoal.

Holloway slips over the side in his scuba gear, swims to the bottom 20 feet below and searches until he spots a partially buried circular object. While he's fanning the sand, an anchor ring, then an anchor, appear.

AFTER SURFACING, Holloway radios search leader Melvin A. Fisher aboard the 56-foot workboat Virgalona, which motors over to the buoy, drops its anchors and starts its engines. With a roar, the prop wash is deflected downward by a bizarre contraption called a "mailbox." A four-foot crater opens in the sea floor. Divers descend.

Diver Don Kincaid spots links of chain. When he pulls, a ball of chain comes from the sand. Later, Kincaid recalls, "The closer I got to the surface the less it looked like brass and the more it looked like gold." Gold it was, an 8 1/2-foot chain of forged gold.

Fisher radios the Folly to stop over "for lunch," the code words signifying a find. "By the time we got to Mel's workboat, champagne corks were popping," Holloway said.

The tanned 49-year-old Holloway didn't know it, but after four years of searching, after two burned-out marine engines and logging hundreds of anomalies, the wreck of treasure-laden Spanish galleon Nuestra Senora de Atocha had been found.

Soon, gold bars chain and plates, silver ingots, cannons, musket balls, jewelry and 17th century artifacts lost for centuries were returned to the world again.

So far, Treasure Salvors Inc. has salvaged an estimated $9 million from the Atocha and $25 million from its sister ship, the Santa Margarita, which has yielded more treasure than any other galleon in modern times. Other estimates put the ships' combined treasure as high as $60 million.

UNDER TREASURE Salvors' contract, the state of Florida retained 25 percent of the treasure, but that levy has been declared unconstitutional. The Supreme Court is expected to rule whether the state can retain its share or return it to Treasure Salvors.

Holloway sits in his home on secluded Upper Sugar Loaf Key. The single gold earring under a shock of gray hair gives him the look of a seafaring man. A jumble of sea objects surrounds him. It's a serene spot for a treasure hunter to spin his tales.

"I first wintered here in 1938, when I was 18," Holloway said. He came back for good 15 years ago after buying a 34-foot cruiser, dubbing it Holly's Folly and sailing it down the Mississippi and on to the Keys.

Holloway then met treasure hunter Fisher, famed for his successful search and salvage of the 1715 Spanish galleons in Florida's Indian River area. Fisher had just moved his search for the 600-ton Spanish galleon Atocha and its smaller sister ship, the Santa Margarita, south from the northern and middle keys after obtaining a Florida search contract. The two men joined forces.

Professor Eugene Lyons, a Ph.D. from the University of Florida and a research historian for Treasure Salvors, was the man who zeroed in on the wreck sites. According to Holloway, "Eugene followed up on reports from the king, the crew and the captain, which were recorded in the archives at Seville.

"My goal became to find the Atocha," Holloway said. "I like the word co-venture, because that is what it truly was, not an employer-employee relationship.

"SHORTLY AFTER that I started working with Fay Fields, the developer of the proton magnetometer, and we started running grids with a theodolite — a 28-power tracking and surveying instrument."

"I didn't accept any pay, but took stock, which now makes me a major stockholder in Treasure Salvors. The company is bringing up quite a bit of gold and silver. Unquestionably, there is a lot down there because we have the research on it."

In search of the Atocha, Holloway cruised 200,000 frustrating, grueling miles in four years. The Folly often bobbed in 10-foot seas before retreating to anchor off the Marquesas during storms. It was burning 200 gallons of fuel a day, running a thousand miles a week.

The search posed formidable problems, according to Holloway. "There were two hurricanes back to back a month apart in 1622. The first hurricane, which sank the Atocha, occurred in October. A month later, a second hurricane broke the ship into two sections and scattered it."

During World War II, the area was a training ground for the Navy and Air Force, which bombed steel-hulled wrecks. "There were bombs all over the place and unexploded torpedoes, baby buggies, steel drums, monkey wrenches," Holloway said. "I found everything you can imagine out there except a locomotive."

Holloway discovered hundreds of wrecks before his search ended in 1974 when bullion in the Atocha's manifest, procured by Lyons from the archives of Seville, matched up with that from the wreck.

HE RECALLED, "When the workboat Virgalona came in with the 60-pound silver bars that the divers brought up, we compared the original ship's manifest with the weight and numbers stamped on the bars.

"Once we had positive identification, I quit. I don't get gold fever. I've even seen divers pull a knife to keep a gold coin that they found. Gold fever is a bad thing.

Much later, Holloway discovered his magnetometer readings had pinpointed the wreck of the Santa Margarita, too. "I would not have known that I found the readings on the Santa Margarita except that Kincaid, our photographer who also works for National Geographic, told me that the readings where they found the Margarita were recorded in my log.

The search for the mother lode of the Atocha continues.

According to Holloway, "They are tracking the Atocha with very sophisticated electronic equipment. The treasure should be in the millions. It was rumored in the 1600s that if a sailor could make one trip to the Americas, he could retire on the contraband he could bring back."

Money, however, was only one motive for Holloway's search. "When you love to dive and love the sea, treasure hunting comes naturally," he said. "We knew it was out there. You might say it was a matter of faith."

THE FOLLY is putting to sea again, this time with Holloway's son, Bill, as captain. "We'll be searching for the other half of the Atocha," Holloway said. "So I'm keeping my hand in the final search for the last treasure of the Atocha, which is really big."

Treasure locked in lost Spanish galleon

Hearst Feature Service

In 1622, Spain was plagued by war, her treasury depleted and the annual armadas from the New World dangerously behind schedule. The annual Tierra Firme fleet — the lifeline that bound Spain to the riches of her colonies — sailed late to the Indies.

After taking on tons of gold, silver, precious jewels, copper, tobacco and indigo in Colombia and Panama, the 28-ship fleet — eight of them treasure galleons — set sail from Havana harbor on the afternoon of Sept. 5.

The following morning, a storm scattered the fleet in the Florida Straits, but some galleons found shelter in the lee of the Marquesas. On the second day, the storm intensified, sending eight ships to their doom.

The Atocha went down with 265 people and 40 tons of treasure. Within sight, its sister ship the Santa Margarita disappeared beneath the waves with 127 people and a treasure today worth an estimated $200 million.

Poetry written by John Hinckley

WASHINGTON (AP) — "Welcome to the truth. Welcome to reality. Welcome to my world."

A short poem written by John W. Hinckley Jr. ended on that note and few people, if any, know when he issued that invitation. It was found, undated, among the papers he left behind in his Washington hotel room on the day he set out to shoot President Reagan.

"Pretend you are...Satan's long lost illegitimate son, a solitary weed among carnations," the poem said, "a child without a home, the loser of a one-man race."

Hinckley's world, described in numerous, tortured writings, was exposed Wednesday to the jury trying him on 13 felony counts that includes the attempted assassination of Reagan. Hinckley's lawyers say insanity drove him to the act.

Some of the verses, but not all, obviously concerned Jodie Foster, the actress with whom Hinckley conducted a one-way romance.

"Are we supposed to be happy or what?" he began one verse. "We're on the verge of nuclear holocaust and millions are starving, and the American dream is a joke, and America is fast becoming a joke.

"Are we supposed to be happy or what?"

Another poem may have been crafted as prophesy.

"Criticize you may, this act of mine; I trust you'll appreciate the romantic reasons. One final stand, and the poet shall die... A moment to pour out my feeling. We all abhor the end result."

Hinckley wrote about "a girl beyond words...to know her is to love her; to love her is easy."

Comb 'em up!

LANSING, Mich. (AP) — Visitors to the Michigan House might be wise to leave their combs at the door to calm the fears of vigilant sergeants-at-arms.

Two state troopers were summoned to the House gallery during a session earlier this week after sergeants spotted something protruding from a man's pocket. The object looked like a gun, but it was a comb.

Rumor spread throughout the Capitol that an armed man had attended the session and slipped through officials' fingers.

"That rumor was extremely unsupported by facts," said Sgt. Roger Beach. "Someone had a comb sticking out of their back pocket. It was what you call a story that absconded with itself before it even existed," he said.

Notice to Telephone Customers

WE ARE PROPOSING CHANGES IN THE RATES FOR CALLING CANADA.

The American Telephone and Telegraph Company has filed with the Federal Communications Commission a plan, to be effective July 29, 1982, to restructure rates for long distance calls between the United States and Canada. The restructure will result in rate increases and decreases but is designed to have no overall effect on interstate earnings.

Here are the proposed changes

- Establish uniform 1-minute initial period charges for all classes of calls. The initial 1-minute rate will vary by mileage and will range from 27¢ (0-8 miles) to 93¢ (2221-4000 miles). Additional minute rates will range from 12¢ to 78¢, depending upon distance.
- Revise rates for most calls with changes ranging from a 2¢ reduction (calls over 2220 miles) to a 15¢ increase (calls 31-50 miles) for the initial minute charges. Changes in additional minute rates will vary from a 6¢ reduction to a 10¢ increase, depending upon distance.
- Separate operator charges from basic usage rates and introduce uniform service charges for Operator Station calls ($1.25) and Person-to-Person calls ($3.00). The appropriate operator service charge will be added to the usage rate and is the same regardless of the length of call or time of day.

One of greatest: Juggling withering on entertainment vine

By BOB MIMS

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — There was a time when juggler Bill Gnadt wowed them in Las Vegas with his airborne whirlwind of foil-covered knives, clubs, rings, plates, hammers and axes.

Under the stage name of Billy Grace, he was a regular attraction during the 1950s, once doing 84 shows in 28 days. He was in his prime, praised as "one of the greatest technical jugglers" by the late Bobby May, who was perhaps the greatest in the United States.

But today, Gnadt laments, the crowds aren't what they once were. "Juggling really is getting to be a lost art," he said.

"Most people don't know today what odd-object juggling means, but they used to," he said. "I remember when people used to come to see the acts. They had them with movies. The top price was 60 cents, and we'd do two, three acts a day."

When it comes to "odd-object juggling" — using props of different sizes, shapes and weights — Gnadt said he's still the best in the world.

"There's no juggler in the world who can juggle the kind of weights I do," the 54-year-old says, tossing a hammer, knife, meat cleaver and ball from hand to hand.

His eyes snap from object to object as he crouches, moving with the whispering circle of steel while perspiration gathers on his brow and his breath quickens.

His living room is crowded with tables loaded with props and magic acts. On his wall is a faded photo gallery of jugglers including Ray, and the legendary Enrico Rastelli — Gnadt's idol and "the greatest juggler ever."

"I guess I started in 1938. My mother bought me a Gilbert Mysto Magic Set," he said, pausing to count as the props suddenly speed to a silvery blur, and then land one by one in his hands.

"In the early 1940s, they still had vaudeville in Salt Lake City," he said. "I started as a magician. I learned card tricks from Carl Balletine. Carl told me, 'If you think card tricks are hard, you should try juggling.'

"I saw the Ringling Brothers Circus later, and went to see Masimilliano Truzzi, a great Italian juggler," he said. "I was amazed, and I gradually learned juggling.

"I had a magic act incorporating juggling when I was 22 years old. Then I had a juggling act," he said.

At one time, magicians and jugglers performed together. Today, while magic flourishes, juggling is withering on the entertainment vine, Gnadt says.

"We hear Houdini, Houdini, Houdini," he said. "He was the worst liar in the world. But a guy like Rastelli? He didn't get the press.

"It took me about six months to learn my first trick," Gnadt said. "In those days I practiced twice a day, five to six hours every day. Rastelli? He practiced 10 hours a day."

Now "semi-retired," Gnadt practices two hours every other day and maintains a consistent weight-lifting program. He also pays attention to good nutrition, he says. And before a performance, he "warms up" for 1½ hours.

Still, he says, "There's no opportunity anymore. The business has changed.

"I really had to decide if I wanted to take a chance on starving," he said. "There's a certain amount of television, but that's highly competitive. It's too insecure."

Gnadt worries about the future of his art, as he sends a club, an axe, a grass scythe and a ball whirring through the air in his living room.

"It makes me feel very sad," he says. "You know, Ringling Brothers has a clown college. Well, there's nothing like that in the United States for jugglers. These things are not passed on.

"Where are people going to learn this now? They're just not going to learn this," Gnadt says.

The objects slap into his hands on cue.

Museum raises money to keep 'circus'

NEW YORK (AP) — With the help of pennies gathered by clowns in Central Park and $625,000 from the Robert Wood Johnson Jr. Charitable Trust, the Whitney Museum of American Art has raised enough money to keep Alexander Calder's "Circus" from going on the road.

The three-week fund drive ended Wednesday after reaching its $1.25 million goal. Its quick success will allow the Whitney to buy Calder's "Circus," a sculpture that brightens the museum lobby with small figures of high-wire performers and animals.

The museum began a fund drive April 15 after learning the artist's estate was forced to sell the "Circus" because of tax debts.

The estate had considered selling the sculpture to European museums but offered to wait until May 31 while the Whitney tried to raise money, according to Tom Armstrong, director of the Whitney.

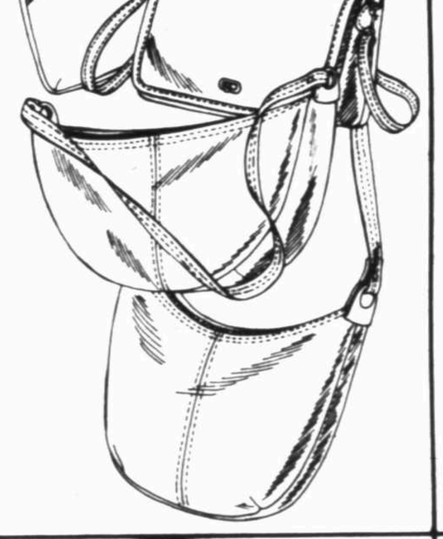

Whitney spokeswoman Linda Gordon said more than 400 contributions were mailed to the institution and many more cash donations were dropped anonymously into a box at the museum.

Phone company gears up for Mother's Day

Next to flowers, the most popular gift for Mother's Day seems to be a telephone call and Southwestern Bell officials are gearing up for the onslaught of calls Sunday.

"This year is no exception," said Sam Ogletree of Southwestern Bell. "We're expecting Texas customers to place about three million of the estimated 42 million calls to be made nationwide on Mother's Day," he said.

Nationally, call volumes will average about 29,200 per minute on the traditionally heavy calling day.

While direct-dialed calls are the least expensive way to place a call, some customers may need operator assistance to complete a call. To handle the extra volume, 2,479 operators will be on duty in Texas on Mother's Day.

Bell officials anticipate the heaviest calling between 9 a.m. and 2:30 p.m. and from 7 to 11:30 p.m.

"To avoid overloaded circuits and busy signals, customers may prefer to place calls during the early morning or mid- to late-afternoon," Ogletree said.

Regular weekend discount rates apply on direct-dialed calls placed on Mother's Day and the day before. On Saturday, calls within Texas receive a 40 percent discount all day, continuing through 5 p.m. Sunday. After 5 p.m. Sunday, a 25 percent discount applies until 11 p.m. Between 11 p.m. Sunday and 8 a.m. Monday, a 40 percent discount applies to all in-state calls.

Calls placed out-of-state also receive the regular weekend discount of 60 percent all day Saturday and up to 5 p.m. Sunday. At 5 p.m. Sunday, the discount rate changes to 40 percent until 11 p.m., when it increases to 60 percent until 8 a.m. Monday.

A surcharge applies to calls placed with operator assistance, such as collect or person-to-person calls and calls billed to a third number or credit card.

Complete information about long distance calls and discount periods, as well as information on international direct distance dialing is listed in the Customer Guide section of the white pages directory.

MMH sponsors third annual health fair

Midland Memorial Hospital will sponsor its third annual health fair from 10 a.m. to 9 p.m. Saturday at Midland Park Mall in conjunction with National Hospital Week.

Gov. Bill Clements has designated Saturday through May 15 as National Hospital Week in recognition of the efforts of hospitals in promoting the health and welfare of Texas citizens.

MMH will offer free blood pressure screenings and pulmonary function studies. In addition displays will focus on special preventive measures that will provide the community with information on how to actively pursue and maintain good health.

MMH dietary department will provide information on the four main food groups and offer advice on planning and preparing balanced meals. The Allison Permian Basin Cancer Therapy Center, with the support of Hospice and the American Cancer Society, will provide literature on cancer risk factors and self-breast examinations.

MMH nursing service will put together a package of information including booklets and handouts on exercise to help reduce stress, poison control, immunization, allergies, chicken pox, heat stroke, alcohol abuse, caffeine abuse, smoking and venereal disease. Ruby Wright of Andrews, left photo, played her Minnie Pearl role to the hilt, right down to the $1.88 hat; while Lillian Farmer, above photo left, and Minnie Lewis, both of Odessa's Ector County Senior Center, form part of the percussion section for the Rhythmettes. The Rhythmettes were one of the groups that performed at Senior Citizens Day.

Senior citizen celebration

An unidentified man pats his hand in time to the beat of the music during the performance of the Rhythmettes.

Greeting each other with hugs and wide grins, over 250 area senior citizens gathered in the Student Center on the Midland College campus Wednesday for music, dancing, demonstrations and lunch.

The Sixth Annual Senior Citizens Appreciation Day, sponsored by the Midland College Student Government Association and the Permian Basin Area Agency on Aging (AAA) and coordinated by Dr. David Norton, MC assistant to the president, proved to be fun for everyone.

Although only 200 senior citizens originally were expected, Norton and Bill Smith, regional director of the Permian Basin AAA, said they expected around 275 participants before the day ended.

"It just keeps getting bigger and better," Norton said, smiling.

Students relaxed between classes, drinking soft drinks with books piled on tables or milling around the room, pulling up chairs and bringing cups of coffee and punch to the smiling senior citizens.

Cries of recognition, waves, hugs and kisses greeted each of the almost 20 senior citizen groups from the area and New Mexico as they walked through the registering line into the crowded student center.

An exhibit of quilts, pillows, hot pads, cloth dolls and ceramic mugs, pitchers, ashtrays and statues made by members of the Andrews Senior Center lined one wall.

Tables for lunch and refreshments, provided by Midland College, were set up in the back of the room while a stage area was placed in front of the large window looking out on the campus courtyard and the rainy day.

Exercise fun was provided by the Midland Senior Citizens Center and music was played by costumed members of the Fun Bunch Rhythmaires from Andrews, the Rhythmettes from Ector County, Katies' Kitchen Band from Lovington, N.M, the Outlaw Country Band from Big Spring and the Golden Rhythmeers from Kermit.

As many elderly people sang along with the groups performing, clapped their hands or tapped their feet to the rhythm, many simply got up and waltzed in the area provided for dancing.

The sound of a couple of students involved in a ping-pong match in the next room could be heard over the music.

It was a nice contrast and an even nicer similarity. The smiles of happiness on both the young and the old were sincere.

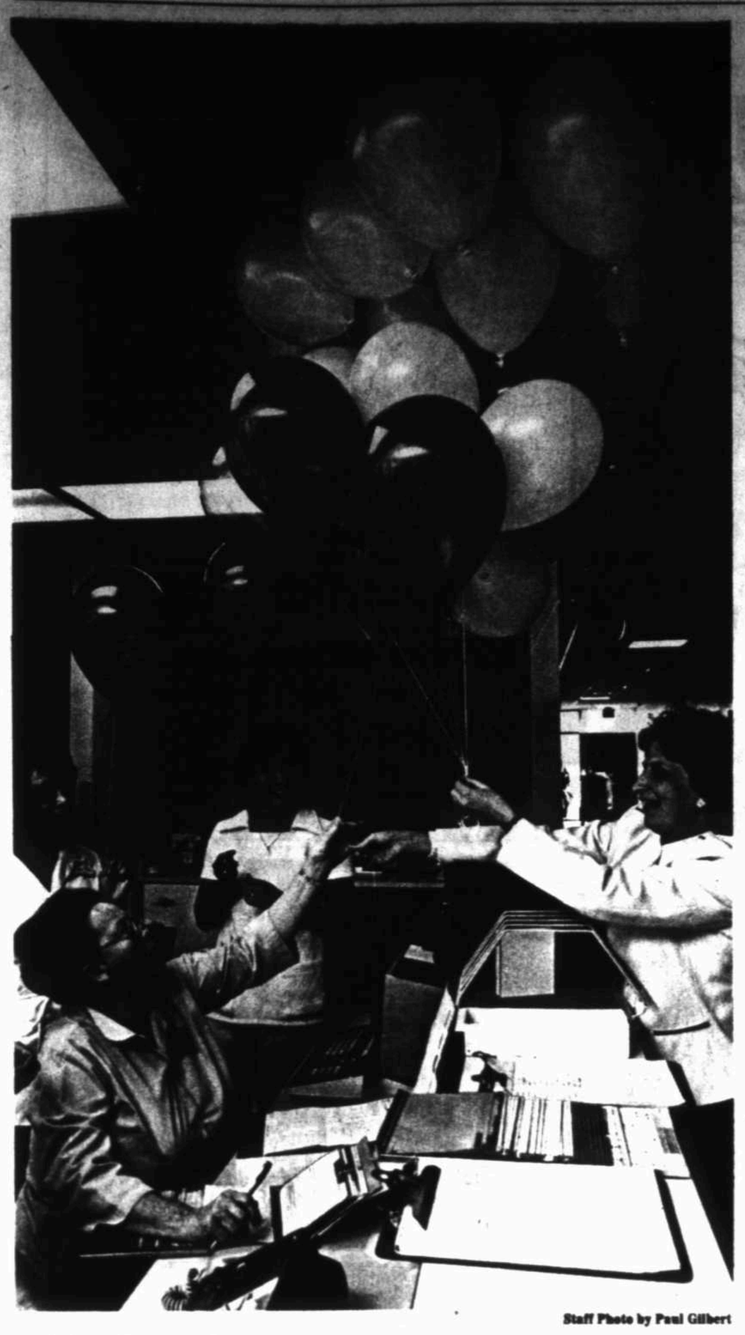

Signs and ribbons decorating the Student Center of Midland College helped welcome the senior citizens to their special celebration.

Some of the more than 250 senior citizens who showed up for Senior Citizens Day at Midland College do the cotton-eyed joe to the strains of "The Outlaws" band.

Former House Speaker Albert undergoing radiation therapy

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — Former House Speaker Carl Albert says he has one more week left of radiation treatment for cancer that was discovered when he underwent prostate surgery in February.

"It's nothing very serious, let me assure you," Albert said from his Oklahoma City hotel room. "I've never heard of anyone dying of this, so don't worry about it."

Albert, 73, said he has been going to a hospital in Oklahoma City from McAlester in eastern Oklahoma on Mondays and returning on Fridays for the past "four or five weeks" for the treatments.

Doctors discovered "a malignancy" through tests performed in connection with prostate gland surgery Feb. 5.

"People at the hospital stop and tell me I look better than I feel. If they don't quit telling me that, I'm going to think I'm well," he said.

Albert also was hospitalized in December after he suffered a mild heart attack.

Albert, a Democrat, retired from Congress in 1977 after serving as speaker during the turbulent years of the Nixon administration.

A 40-foot-long get-well card prepared by the handicapped children at Austin State School in Texas was reported ready for mailing to Albert this week.

The red, white and blue banner reads, "The big and little people of Texas say next to power, next to riches, next to Blue Bell ice cream and candy kisses, we love Carl Albert best," and also was signed by Lady Bird Johnson, Texas Gov. Bill Clements and former White House press secretary George Christian.

Bureau leaders say U.S. farmers frustrated by Japanese barriers

AGRICULTURE

WASHINGTON (AP) — The leader of a national farm organization says American producers are becoming impatient over Japan's refusal to lift barriers which restrict imports of U.S. commodities.

Robert Delano, president of the American Farm Bureau Federation, said Thursday that his organization might support trade protectionist legislation as a way of retaliation.

"Conceivably, there could be support," Delano told reporters during a briefing on his recent trip to Japan. "I can't answer the question as to when this will occur or if it will occur."

Meanwhile, the Agriculture Department issued a new report saying that trade access is a difficult issue for the Japanese government and it probably will continue its hard line on imports.

Delano said the Farm Bureau remains committed to the principle of free trade and is optimistic that Japanese trade restrictions will be eased.

He acknowledged, however, that members are beginning to question the organization's continued commitment to free access to the U.S. market by Japanese companies when Japan has such stringent restrictions on U.S. access to its markets.

Delano said the recent, week-long tour of Japan by 26 of the organization's state presidents left him optimistic there can be improved trading relations.

He pointed to the decision by Japan's major industrial trade association to push for liberalized U.S. farm import policies at a time when there is mounting support in Congress for retaliatory trade restrictions.

"The industrial sector understands this," Delano said. "But I'm not sure the agricultural sector does. They are becoming more conscious of it."

He said the Farm Bureau officials warned the Japanese that unless trade restrictions are substantially eased, "they do face the very real danger of protectionist legislation from this country."

Delano said Japanese farmers, who hold substantial political power, remain concerned that increased U.S. imports will adversely affect their ability to compete as well as hinder Japan's drive for an assured food supply.

He said a number of Japanese officials suggested that the United States may not be a reliable food supplier, not only because of past trade embargoes that have been imposed for foreign policy reasons, but also because of American soil erosion problems.

The Agriculture Department's report noted that Japan continued as the top foreign customer of U.S. farm products last year, taking $6.7 billion worth or 15 percent of the total U.S. farm shipments.

Foreign investors still buying farm land

WASHINGTON (AP) — Foreign investors continue to buy U.S. agricultural land, but Agriculture Department experts say the impact is too small to measure.

The latest annual figures were reported Thursday in a report required by Congress in the 1978 Agricultural Foreign Investment Disclosure Act. The report covers information received through Dec. 31, 1981.

Foreign land holdings were reported at 12.7 million acres, slightly less than 1 percent of all U.S. agricultural land. That was up sharply from 7.8 million acres reported a year earlier.

"This year's figure is larger because it includes reports for 2.3 million acres that were acquired prior to 1981 but which were filed after last year's cutoff date," the report said.

"Additionally, 2.1 million acres were classified foreign-owned when a major U.S. corporation became 20 percent foreign owned in 1981."

The report said that, in general, the quantity of foreign-owned land is too small to measure the impact on agriculture at the national level.

"In areas of heaviest concentration, some communities could be affected," it said.

The largest concentration of the land — 21 percent of the total reported by foreigners — is in Maine, with most of it held by three large timber companies, the report said.

"Except for Maine, foreign holdings aree concentrated in the South and West," it said. "Alabama, Florida, Georgia, South Carolina and Texas contain 25 percent of the holdings, while California, Colorado, New Mexico, Oregon and Washington contain 22 percent of the holdings."

Rhode Island is the only state without foreign-owned agricultural land.

Costa Rican meat OK'd

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agriculture Department says that meat from Costa Rica now is eligible to enter the United States, ending a six-week ban imposed to prevent entry of dirty meat from the Central American country.

Donald L. Houston, administrator of the department's Food Safety and Inspection Service, said Thursday a team of agency experts looked into Costa Rica's meat inspection system and were satisfied that "changes proposed by the Costa Rican government are adequate to correct problems" in its inspection system.

Outcast Ecuadorean fights to remain in U.S.

BISMARCK, N.D. (AP) — When missionaries found Juan Ramirez in the Ecuadorean jungle, he was wracked by convulsions, near death, his paralyzed body wasted by parasites. He was unwanted, scorned by his family, an outcast because of his deformities.

Today, eight years later, Ramirez is educated, articulate, healthy and still fighting. He wants to remain in the United States, but the U.S. Immigration Service says only a special bill in Congress will allow him to stay.

The bill was approved by the Senate Oct. 27, but a House subcommittee on immigration said in February that Ramirez must first exhaust "administrative remedies" that might grant permanent residence.

When Ramirez was found by missionaries in Ecuador in 1974, they said his left foot was twisted nearly upside down, caused by polio when he was 3. His right foot protruded at a 90-degree angle.

"He was suffering from malnutrition, four or five kinds of worms and amobeas, and a low hemoglobin count which brought on the convulsions," said Dr. Devota Nowland, an Armada, Mich., osteopath who helped bring Ramirez to America.

"HE WAS TREATED as an outcast by people outside of his family and would have suffered a great deal or died had he not been brought to the United States," she said.

Ramirez is now 22 or 23 — he doesn't know when he was born. He was one of seven illegitimate children, Miss Nowland said in an interview. One of his mother's suitors "killed Juan's sister in a drunken fit," she added.

Ramirez now denies this, or that his mother sold him, "but he doesn't want to remember," Miss Nowland said. Missionaries and others told her Ramirez was sold to a woman who ran a small cafe in Chaco, she said.

Ramirez said he peeled vegetables for "one or two meals a day" and slept on a straw pallet. At age 15, he weighed 60 pounds.

If he returns to Ecuador, Ramirez believes he would still be an outcast.

"I used to have problems...they would push me down," Ramirez said softly. "They thought of me as a dog."

HIS BROTHERS and sisters were "undecided if they accepted my handicap. They didn't know if they liked me or not."

Voice shaking, he said of his mother: "I was her son, and even though I couldn't help her, I think she still loved me."

He doesn't know where his family is. "They're sort of moving around. They go where my mother can find work, field work, milking cows," for perhaps 50 cents a day.

Juan had corrective surgery at 15 in a missionary hospital in Quito.

His hips and legs remain shriveled, but he gets around slowly with leg braces and crutch.

Miss Nowland, on vacation in Quito, brought Ramirez to Michigan. She tried to adopt him, but Ecuadorean law prohibits a single female from adopting a male. She sought help.

Through a Fargo, N.D., adoption agency, Ramirez found his way to a farm owned by Vic and Olga Karges near Hazen, N.D. They too tried to adopt Ramirez but he was then past 16 and too old, the Immigration Service said.

MISS NOWLAND had started the process of trying to extend his temporary visitor visa. The Kargeses now lead that effort.

Ramirez started school in Hazen. Three years later he went to the Anne Carlsen School for the Physically Handicapped in Jamestown, N.D.

He graduates June 6 and wants to study electronics in a vocational school.

But he can't apply for citizenship because he has no blood relatives here, no job skill, isn't a refugee and isn't "a professional of distinguished merit or ability," said Gerald Coyle, the Immigration Service's district director in St. Paul, Minn.

"The only relief is what they are doing — trying to get a private bill through Congress," Coyle said. "There will be no (deportation) action in this case until the matter is resolved by Congress."

A staff counsel for the House Subcommittee on Immigration, Refugees and International Law, who asked his name not be used, said the subcommittee rejected Ramirez's special bill because he hasn't tried other administrative avenues to stay in the U.S.

REP. BYRON Dorgan, D-N.D., said he's asked the subcommittee to reconsider its action and plans to tell each member "the adversity this boy has overcome, and why he deserves a chance to stay here permanently."

The alternative is to reopen the deportation hearings, said Betty Hum, the Kargeses' lawyer.

"I don't know what 'administrative remedy' they're talking about," said Sen. Quentin Burdick, D-N.D. "I think it's a real strong humanitarian case. He's a crippled fellow who has no home."

"He was suffering from malnutrition, four or five kinds of worms and amobeas, and a low hemoglobin count which brought on the convulsions...He was treated as an outcast by people outside of his family and would have suffered a great deal had he not been brought to the United States."

Hoffman intends to keep talking common sense

By JIM WOOD
Hearst Feature Service

SAN FRANCISCO — Abbie Hoffman, activist, philosopher, Boston Celtics fan and paroled coke fondler, is doing a little psychological health work over sushi at the Sanppo on Post Street here.

The old jokes are there — "Say something good about America. Pizza!" — and he's wearing a basketball jacket that says on the back "Reality Club" and on the front, over the heart, "Lefty."

He confides that the FBI is taping him again; he spotted the agents at a lecture at California Polytechnic State College, where he attracted "3,000 people — that's the largest crowd they've had in six or seven years," and brags just a little that his FBI record is 26,000 pages, "an East Coast white record."

But Hoffman is no burned-out refugee from the '60s; he's a leading draw on the college lecture circuit, and while he pauses flicking down sushi, a waitress politely asks if he'd mind signing an autograph.

Hoffman agrees, pleased, and when she goes to bring a blank menu page for the signing, he says quickly, "never scribble."

"What?"

"Never scribble. That what's John Lennon did. They asked the guy why he killed him and he said, 'He scribbled the autograph.' "

Although Hoffman is staying in a $160-a-day hotel room, he's no 1960s radical turned Wall Street star, mounting the barricades from the inside. For one thing, his dues were too high: He was convicted of cocaine trafficking and sentenced to three years in prison, though it would be hard to find a consenting adult in Berkeley who doesn't believe his real crime was political.

Hoffman did 10 months of his sentence, then won parole. Now he jokes about it, saying he warned the warden as he left that if the state didn't clean up its act, he would be back with 12 more prisoners just like himself.

The joke is multi-layered, like Hoffman. It's in keeping with his belief that funny is not the opposite of serious and that entertainment is a basic American need like love and creativity.

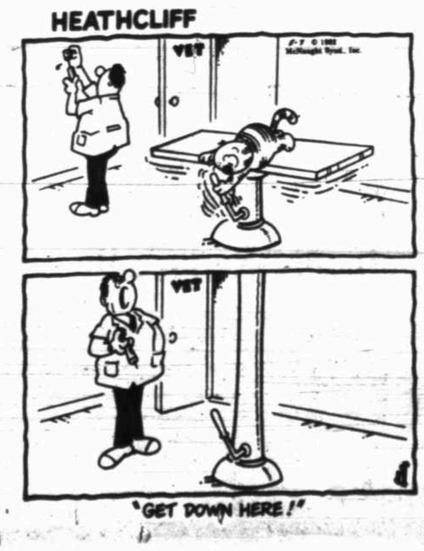

Hoffman vows he intends to continue talking "common sense" and is urging nuclear controls and medical aid to El Salvador. If he lacks the flamboyance of his dada period, he's still drawing large crowds for his lectures.

"It's not because I'm so good looking or so modest," he says with a surgically revived straight face, "it's because even people under 30, who I tend not to trust these days and who are a little wet behind the ears, are starting to see that their futures are connected to issues like foreign policy, nuclear arms control and Reaganomics, and they listen. They laugh and they listen."

Hoffman says he expects a large turnout for a demonstration June 12 outside the United Nations for a debate on nuclear controls. This is expert opinion: Hoffman claims 41 arrests and a record two indictments under the Interstate Riot Act.

What keeps Hoffman going? Although he looks a little disappointed when a listener accepts his assertion that he's 58, he is over 44, an age when he might be expected to write that big book appropriate to a Brandeis-Berkeley psychology background. Something significant. For now though, Hoffman is content with the college lecture ciruit and the continuing "drive toward psychological health."

Vice Pres. George Bush pauses with Chinese Vice Foreign Minister Han Xu, right, and Shejiang Province Vice Governor Chen Zuolin at the famed Hangzhou scenic spot called Three Pools Reflecting the Moon. Bush was given a tourist's view of Hanghzou's West Lake Thursday afternoon.

Bush starts talks with Chinese foreign minister

By PHIL BROWN

PEKING (AP) — Vice President George Bush sat down today for the first of three major meetings in Peking to discuss what Foreign Minister Huang Hua described as "serious obstacles" in U.S.-China relations.

Bush, meeting first with Huang, said he is confident the bond between the two nations is "fundamentally sound" and said President Reagan "wants to see that relationship prosper, grow, strengthen."

The thorny Taiwan issue is expected to dominate the two-day series of talks, which Huang suggested should concentrate first on bilateral issues, "in which there are serious obstacles."

Replied Bush: "We know the problems and let's discuss them, and then we can talk about a wide array of other matters."

Huang brought laughter when he quickly rejoined: "We've reached agreement on this point."

China has demanded the United States set a date to halt arms sales to Taiwan, seat of the rival Nationalist Chinese government, or face a downgrading of Sino-U.S. relations.

Bush arrived in Peking today from the scenic south China city of Hangzhou, where he took a day's rest from his 17-day, six-nation tour of Asia and the Pacific.

Vice Premier Wan Li presided over a colorful welcome in a plaza just off the square facing the Great Hall of the People. Nearly 300 pom-pom waving schoolgirls danced as Bush and Wan walked past. A few thousand people watched from across the square.

Bush and Wan held a brief meeting inside the hall, where Wan welcomed the vice president as "an old friend of many Chinese leaders."

Bush headed the U.S. liaison office in Peking in 1974-75, before the establishment of full diplomatic relations in 1979.

"It is highly essential for us to exchange views and enhance understanding," Wan told Bush, who handed him a letter from Reagan to Chinese Communist Party Chairman Hu Yaobang.

On Saturday, Bush confers with China's top leader, party Vice Chairman Deng Xiaoping, and Premier Zhao Ziyang, who was to host a banquet for Bush tonight in the Great Hall of the People.

While China has talked of a crisis in relations over the Taiwan arms sales issue, Bush has described the relationship as strong and sound.

The two countries have "discovered that areas of mutual agreement and cooperation by far outweigh the few differences between us," he said. "And that is the way it is and the way it must be among friends."

Senators urge negotiations to end Salvadoran war

By ROBERT PARRY

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate Foreign Relations Committee is putting new pressure on the Salvadoran government to accept a negotiated end to its civil war with leftist guerrillas.

The Republican-controlled panel on Thursday urged "all parties to the Salvadoran conflict to begin good-faith negotiations for the purpose of bringing an end to the hostilities and achieving a peaceful and democratic solution to the conflict."

The new Salvadoran government has rejected negotiations with the guerrillas, and the Reagan administration has said it favors talks only if they are limited to the issue of leftist participation in the electoral process.

The guerrillas, while refusing to take part in elections run by the current government, have called for a negotiated political settlement that would include a cease-fire and eventual elections.

In the same resolution, the committee voted to reaffirm U.S. determination "to resist efforts by Cuba to extend its Marxist-Leninist ideology or political system in the hemisphere by force or the threat of force."

The combined statements were clearly designed as a compromise between conservatives who favored harsher language against Cuba and liberals who want a negotiated settlement to the war in El Salvador.

The resolution was tentatively approved on a 5-0 vote, with the record left open for the other 12 committee members to cast their ballots. It will then go to the full Senate.

Sen. Christopher Dodd, D-Conn., a leading advocate of a negotiated settlement, said the panel's vote reflected "a clear-cut, bipartisan approach" toward El Salvador's 2½-year civil war that has claimed about 33,000 lives.

"Our policy toward El Salvador should be dedicated to one purpose and one purpose only — a political, not a military settlement," Dodd said.

Ernesto Rivas-Gallont, Salvadoran ambassador to the United States, said his government has "problems with the word negotiation because of the perception given the word. The meaning of power-sharing, we cannot live with that."

Although the State Department had no immediate comment, Sen. Nancy Kassebaum, R-Kan., said the administration does not oppose negotiations as long as they are within the "democratic framework" begun by the March 28 election in El Salvador.

On Cuba, the committee reaffirmed U.S. determination to prevent Fidel Castro's government from expanding its power by force and "to prevent in Cuba the stationing of nuclear weapons by the Soviet Union."

The committee language was milder than wording proposed by Sen. Steven Symms, R-Idaho, who wanted Congress to reaffirm a 1962 declaration approved during the Cuban missile crisis.

Symms' resolution stated that the president should use whatever means necessary, including force, to block Cuban aggression.

Critics said Symms' proposal could be interpreted as approval for U.S. military action in Central America, and likened it to the 1964 Gulf of Tonkin resolution used by President Johnson to commit combat troops to South Vietnam.

In supporting the milder language, Sen. Charles Percy, R-Ill., committee chairman, said "it would be ill-advised to pass the Symms' resolution. Times have changed since then (1962). It could really be misinterpreted."

Ken Thompson, Symms' press secretary, said the senator had not yet decided whether to try to reinstate his tougher language when the resolution reaches the Senate floor. Last month, the Senate tabled the Symms' resolution 41-39 when it was offered as an amendment to another bill. But since then, the administration has endorsed its wording.

Iran breaks through Iraqi defense lines

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Iranian troops plowed through three Iraqi defense lines today to reach the Iraqi border for the first time since the two nations went to war 19 months ago, Iran announced today.

Iran claimed the breakthrough came in its southwestern oil province of Khuzistan, scene of some of the heaviest fighting of the Persian Gulf war.

The Iraqi military command admitted Iranian forces mounted "a fresh offensive on all areas of operation at the southern sector of the warfront."

But an Iraqi communique claimed the new Iranian attack was "contained" and "fierce fighting is raging with all kinds of weapons and planes."

The latest Iraqi bulletin dropped earlier claims that Iraqi tanks and infantry were mopping up diehard Iranian troops trapped in a "pocket of death" west of the Karun River.

The rival claims, reported by the state-run media of the two warring nations, could not be independently verified. Both Arab Moslem Iraq and Persian Moslem ran ban regular reporting by foreigners from the 300-mile battlefront.

Iran's official Islamic Republic News Agency (IRNA) said Iranian forces captured 116 square miles of Iraqi-occupied Iranian territory and gained control of a 22-mile strip of the international border between the two nations for the first time since the conflict broke out Sept. 22, 1980.

IRNA quoted unidentified Iranian field commanders as saying the flags of Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini's Islamic Republic were hoisted over the "liberated" sector of the border west of the Khuzistan Railway.

The railroad and a parallel highway link Khuzistan's provincial capital of Ahvaz with the port of Khorramshahr. IRNA said the captured stretch of the border runs from west of the Hosseinieh railway station south to the Iraqi-held northern and western outskirts of Khorramshahr.

The battlefield, near the northern tip of the Persian Gulf, reportedly is 397 miles southwest of Tehran, the Iranian capital, and 372 miles southwest of the Iraqi capital, Baghdad.

If the Iranian claim is accurate, it means Iranian forces are closing in on Khorramshahr, half of which has been occupied by the Iraqis since the early days of the war.

Maverick Republican battles 'pres'

By JUDD EVERHART

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) — The incumbent is often described as a "maverick Republican" who periodically offends some faction of the state GOP, a group he calls "amateur-nighters."

His challenger is everything a Republican traditionalist could hope for: a conservative, wealthy Fairfield County businessman. Referred to as "Pres," he is the son of a former Connecticut senator and the brother of the vice president.

The battle for the Republican U.S. Senate nomination between incumbent Lowell P. Weicker Jr. and Prescott Bush presents a contrast in style as well as philosophy.

Weicker

Weicker, 50, has enraged many Republicans with his open opposition to the fiscal policies of Ronald Reagan. He earned more resentment when he voted against the confirmation of Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr., who had been president of United Technologies Corp. The company is based in Connecticut.

The 59-year-old Bush has stumped throughout the state on his long-standing support of the party. Nearly every public pronouncement from the older brother of Vice President George Bush makes some reference to the Republican Party and party unity.

"I even supported Fred Zeller, probably one of the worst candidates there ever was," Bush once said. Zeller, soundly defeated in te 1958 governor's race by Democrat Abraham Ribicoff, was later convicted of embezzling church funds.

Weicker has won nine consecutive elections — from Greenwich first selectman, to state representative, to U.S. representative, to U.S. senator.

Bush, a Greenwich insurance executive, has not held public office since he was a member of the community's representative town meeting in the 1940s.

Weicker trumpets that he is the only Connecticut Republican who's been re-elected to statewide office in a quarter century, and chastises his fellow Republicans for being more concerned about personalities than winning elections.

"In the Republican Party, it's amateur night every night of the week," Weicker has said more than once.

Bush would never dream of saying anything against the Grand Old Party. He expresses indignation at every Weicker barb.

The party's candidate will be chosen by delegates to the Republican nominating convention in Hartford on July 23-24. Those delegates are chosen by town committees.

The committees' choices in four communities were challenged Tuesday in primaries for convention delegates. The candidates split the primaries, each winning two of the contested slates.

Under Connecticut party rules, a candidate who fails to get the nomination must garner 20 percent of the delegates' votes in order to qualify for a primary, which would be held Sept. 7.

The animosity between the two men is rooted in past campaigns.

Weicker claims that his stand against President Nixon in the Watergate hearings so annoyed the Bush family that they didn't support him in his 1976 re-election bid. Bush rebutted that claim, producing a canceled check payable to the Weicker campaign committee.

And there is little love lost between the vice president and Connecticut's senior senator, dating back to the time when George Bush was Republican national chairman.

In 1978, when Weicker launched an abortive bid for the GOP presidential nomination, Malcolm Baldrige — an industrialist and Bush ally, and now commerce secretary — endorsed George Bush. In turn, Weicker endorsed Reagan for president in the 1980 campaign, but refused to back Reagan's running mate.

More recently, Weicker has flirted with running as an independent if the party denies him the nomination.

Bush

That worries Connecticut Republicans because an independent race by Weicker could take enough support away from Bush to elect Toby Moffett, the leading Democratic candidate.

Meanwhile, the National Conservative Political Action Committee has placed full-page ads in many state newspapers, blasting Weicker as "the most anti-Republican Republican in the Senate."

Weicker scoffs at the NCPAC campaign: "Those little wimps better be prepared to finish what they start. The chain is about to be pulled on the toilet tactics of NCPAC."

In March, Lyn Nofziger, a former top Reagan adviser, announeed that Bush has the "silent support" of the White House.

Bush — whose father, Prescott Sr., was senator from 1952 to 1963 — says he does not expect any action from the White House on his behalf until he is the party nominee.

Bush challenged Weicker to pledge his support for the nominee. When Weicker refused, Bush called the response "a slap in the face of every Republican in this state."

Even state GOP Chairman Ralph E. Capecelatro, who has pledged to stay neutral in the contest, felt compelled to comment.

"If you're a Republican and you enter into the party process, ultimately you support the choice of the process," the chairman said. "People are very disappointed that Weicker isn't willing to."

Bald eagle making a comeback

EDITOR'S NOTE: If you like eagles, you'll love this news: The national symbol, the bald eagle, though endangered, is increasing in numbers. An appropriate time, then, to observe the Year of the American Eagle.

By JOE WING

This is the year of the American eagle.

Two centuries ago, on June 20, 1782, America's Continental Congress adopted the great white-headed bird as a national symbol. President Reagan has signed a joint congressional resolution to make official the eagle year designation by the National Wildlife Federation and thus help along the celebration.

The peak of the celebration will be June 20, designated as American Eagle Day.

There is something to celebrate — if you like eagles. Although the big, "bald" bird is still listed by the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service as endangered in 43 of the lower 48 states and threatened in the other five, indications are that it is coming back, slowly.

Another check on its progress has been made by some 4,000 observers during the Wildlife Federation's third annual census, the most complete mid-winter count available. In 1981 there was a 5 percent increase to 13,709, including an estimated 9,500 migrants which had flown in to avoid the worst weather in Canada and Alaska. This is two or three times the number tallied in other more limited censuses by the Wildlife Service and others.

The National Audubon Society's scientific director, Dick Plunkett, believes the breeding population is holding its own in Florida and increasing somewhat in the Great Lakes region and other northern states. For instance, two dozen nests were spotted last season in Maine, where only three or four were found a decade ago.

It was partly a matter of luck that the eagle's image now appears on the Great Seal of the United States, on dollar bills, uniform buttons, flag staffs, stamps, door knockers and what-have-you. Congress okayed an eagle design dictated by its secretary, Charles Thomson, after rejecting the recommendations of three committees and several artists during a period of six years. The eagle won out over mythological and other contenders including the wild turkey, favored by Ben Franklin.

Like him or not — and many ranchers say he preys habitually on lambs despite other opinion to the contrary — there is something about an eagle that has fascinated mankind since earliest times.

Images of various kinds of eagles were carried to war by Persian and Roman troops. Eagles figured in Greek mythology, appeared in heraldry and on the arms of Napoleonic France and imperial Russia. The use of eagles in hunting was reserved for kings.

Back when the American bird was still common from coast to coast, although it was already on the decline, the poet-naturalist John Burroughs wrote:

"HE DRAWS GREAT lines across the sky. Dignity, elevation, repose are his. I would have my thoughts take as wide a sweep."

A Greek proverb had it that "the old age of an eagle is better than the youth of a sparrow."

William Blake wrote: "When thou see'st an eagle, thou see'st a portion of genius; lift up thy head."

John James Audubon noted that "the great strength, daring and cool courage of this eagle, plus his unequaled power of flight, render him highly conspicuous among his brethren."

He is, indeed, conspicuous with his gleaming head and tail feathers, his seven-foot wingspread and his fierce yellow eyes, even in the company of his leaner, more aggressive cousin, the golden eagle. The American dwells only on this continent, whereas the golden ranges world wide.

Franklin thought the bird had a "bad moral character" because it often bullies fish hawks into giving up their prey. Aside from the question whether human morality standards should be applied to birds and beasts, this bullying habit along with other well known feeding habits can be cited in the American's defense. Called "a typical sea eagle," he stays close usually to shorelines and river valleys, often eating dead or dying fish, but also savoring traffic-killed animals, and snatching up rodents and wounded ducks. Some scientists question his ability to carry off a lamb or the likelihood that he will attack one.

Ranchers have been so incensed nevertheless against the American as well as the golden eagle that at one time they hired fliers to shoot them out of the air by the hundreds. Well publicized prosecutions seem to have put a stop to this but random shooting is still considered the foremost cause of eagle deaths, even though both species have been protected by federal law for more than 40 years. Brown-headed, immature Americans are sometimes confused with golden eagles. Kill either species and you risk a $500 fine and six months in jail.

The two other chief hazards for eagles, besides shooting, are destruction of habitat and persistence in the environment of the pesticide DDT, even though it was outlawed a decade ago.

Habitat destruction affecting most wildlife marches on inexorably but much has been done in recent years to provide eagle refuges and protect individual nests. During the course of many seasons, a single pair of eagles may build a nest to a depth of 20 feet and a weight of two tons.

DDT gets into the natural food chain, starting with microscopic animals and concentrated increasingly as one form of life preys on another. As a result, at the peak of the chain, eagles and other raptors often lay thin-shelled eggs which cannot be hatched. Barren nests, scant numbers of immature birds and, in the case of the eastern peregrine falcon, utter extinction, have been the result.

ONE ENCOURAGING THING about the Wildlife Federation's last census was that nearly half the American species seen were immature ones. This contrasts with a 1954 report from Hawk Mountain, Pa., a renowned observation point, that practically no young ones had been seen there for about 10 years.

There has been speculation that the eagle might never have made it as a national symbol had it not been adopted while the new nation was still at war with England. The spread eagle design shows the bird with 13 war arrows, symbolizing the 13 original states, in one talon, and an olive branch in the other.

Three wars later, such a bird became the most famous one in American history.

He was Old Abe, a Yankee who screamed defiance to the Confederates in battle time and again.

Today the screaming eagle shoulder patch of the 101st Airborne Division harks back to Old Abe, whose heroics made the Eighth Wisconsin Infantry regiment widely known in the Civil War and afterwards.

Horror in Iran

Despite the Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini's professions of the need for a public relations effort to improve Iran's public image, that country's public face just keeps getting uglier and uglier.

We've all witnessed the bloodbath that has swept Iran since the shah fled, subsequently died and the revolutionary forces led by spiritual leader Khomeini took over. In recent days, though former Iran Foreign Minister Sadegh Ghotbzadeh went on Iranian national television to confess that he had conspired in a plot to assassinate Khomeini and others.

That plot, which Ghotbzadeh said in Newsweek was to bomb the ayatollah at a meeting of Iran's ruling Supreme Defense Council, had the aim of destroying "all the head people of the government as well as the imam himself. Ghotbzadeh went along with the conspirators, he noted, because "I didn't say no."

Viewing from afar the plot to kill Khomeini, the thousands of others who have been killed or tortured in the past few years, one wonders just what Iran's future can be. The answer to any question about whether Iran is moving away from the violence that has so dominated the Iranian lifestyle has to be an undisputable no.

Now that information about the plot on Khomeini's life has become public, Ghotbzadeh himself is in danger of losing his life. Said Iran's military court prosecutor Hojatoislam Mohammed Reyshahri, "If these things I've told you are proven, the punishment is nothing but death."

But this plot will not be the end of Iran's violence. The violence will continue to rack that nation until a new regime comes to power, and not by violence. Violence only leads to more violence and establishes a bloody cycle that can only be broken through a reasonable, non-fanatical power structure.

The plot participated in by Ghotbzadeh, once Khomeini's trusted and loyal point man, is only additional evidence to the world that revolution rules in Iran and the struggle for power will continue until reasonable men can gain authority and, thus, regain control of that nation's future.

Until that time, no public relations effort can change the truth or the world's opinion of what is happening in Iran. It is just bloody violence that we turn away from in horror.

Mubarak's diplomacy

While accolades are being passed around for everyone who has helped to speed the peace process in the Middle East, highly honorable mention should be made of the conduct of Egypt's President Mubarak. Throughout Israel's evacuation of the Sinai Peninsula he has handled himself with dignity and restraint.

When the last Israelis left, Mubarak refrained from crowing. Naturally he was pleased that the area captured in 1967 was returned to Egypt, but he set up no elaborate ceremonies to celebrate the event. Instead he sought to give credit where it was due, and at the top of that list was his assassinated predecessor, Anwar Sadat.

He visited the Egyptian Parliament in Cairo, having thoughtfully invited Sadat's son Gamal to accompany him. In a moving tribute to Gamal's father, Mubarak said: "It is with great regret that we celebrate this day without his presence. He was a man waiting for this particular moment."

In a shrewd diplomatic gesture, he paid tribute to the three Arab nations — Oman, Somalia and the Sudan — that did not break relations with Egypt after Sadat initiated the peace movement. Thus did Mubarak, who wants to strengthen ties with all of Araby, remember to give a special salute to the three nations that stood by Sadat in his greatest hour of need.

As he looked to the future, he also paid a genuine tribute to the spirit of Israel. "The people of Israel," he said, "have shown an enthusiasm for peace and a readiness to accept ... moderation and co-existence. The future depends on the increase of those who believe in peace to remove the acrimony of the past."

President Mubarak's honorable and statesmanlike response to the return of the Sinai will help to insure that future. President Sadat would have been proud of him.

Another View:

A rocky road ahead

There are so many mixed signals by the U.S. concerning its relations with communist dominated Cuba, that people in both countries must be a bit confused.

Carrying the stick is the State Department, which is halting all business and tourist travel in a few weeks. But dangling a carrot, of all people, is Secretary of State Al Haig, who told a group of businessmen in Massachusetts Congressman Silvio Conte's office recently that Cuban strongman Fidel Castro is "anguishing" over a U.S. offer to jilt the Soviets in return for normal relations with the United States.

The State Department has since tried to downplay Haig's startling disclosure (which is on tape) by contending that it is the secretary's own "viewpoint." Meanwhile, the U.S. Senate and State Department are agonizing over whether to support a reaffirmation of a 1962 joint Congressional resolution authorizing armed intervention to prevent Cuban-Soviet subversion in the Western Hemisphere.

If there is any sense to be made of these conflicting signals, it may involve those pictures from Moscow recently of a pale, drawn and shaky President Leonid Brezhnev at the celebration of Lenin's birthday in the Kremlin Palace of Congresses. That appearance was designed to dispel rumors that Brezhnev is either dead or incapacitated, but it did little to dampen speculation that the Kremlin soon will undergo a change in leadership.

It might be appropriate to hoist trial balloons at Havana while the Kremlin is in the throes of change. If Castro is indeed "anguishing" over a return to normal relations with the United States, he might be more easily coaxed if Kremlin leaders are preoccupied with the seamy business of succeeding Brezhnev. But that also could be an extremely dangerous action, goading threatened Soviet leaders into a belligerent response. In any event, it appears that neither Castro nor much of the Reagan administration so far has jumped at the Haig overtures.

More likely, there will continue to be strained relations between the United States and Cuba so long as the Castro government continues to fuel insurrection and political instability in the Caribbean. It should be remembered that President Nixon accomplished a turnabout in U.S.-China relations at a time when the Chinese leadership was in a period of transition. A return to normal relations with Cuba also may only be possible with either a change in regimes or a change in Cuba's status as a client state of Moscow.

We would like to see either of those scenarios result — as would, no doubt, millions of Americans and Cubans. There have been so many false turns in the road to normalcy in recent years, however. Castro has responded to U.S. trade missions by sending Cuban troops to Africa, swamping U.S. relief services with refugees and supporting Marxist movements in Latin America. The road still looks rocky ahead.

CHARLEY REESE

Intellectuals leading rush to socialism

Listen to Ludwig Von Mises, the late Austrian economist.

"It is not true that the masses are vehemently asking for socialism and that there is no means to resist them. The masses favor socialism because they trust the socialist propaganda of the intellectuals. The intellectuals, not the populace, are molding public opinion....The intellectual leaders of the peoples have produced and propagated the fallacies which are on the point of destroying liberty and Western Civilization. The intellectuals alone are responsible for the mass slaughters which are the characteristic mark of our century. They alone can reverse the trend and pave the way for a resurrection of freedom.

Charley Reese

"Not mythical 'material productive forces,' but reason and ideas determine the course of human affairs. What is needed to stop the trend towards socialism and despotism is common sense and moral courage."

Those are the final words of an epilogue Von Mises wrote to his definitive and devastating critique of collectivism, "Socialism," which was originally published in 1922.

Unfortunately, many intellectuals are still at work like termites, destroying capitalism and with it peace and freedom. They do it in books, in editorials, in magazines, in movies, and on television — relentlessly propagandizing the ideas of socialism. Private property is evil; business is bad; government is good; government planning and control are the solutions to everything. It is all a load of fallacies peddled by dimwits and villians.

Private ownership of property, without which private enterprise is impossible, has proven to be not just the best but the only way to raise people from poverty. Socialism everywhere has been a failure as indeed it must be because its theory is quite wrong.

More importantly, private enterprise based on private ownership of property is the only economic system compatible with human liberty and human rights. Socialism, even when it pretends to respect democratic methods, inevitably leads to tyranny.

Thus, many Americans who don't know quite why but do know they feel somewhat hostile toward intellectuals have instinctively grasped the truth. The most dangerous enemies of their freedom and their prosperity are not Russians or Cubans in military uniforms, but American educators, writers, editors, preachers, priests and corporate socialists who are continuously propagandizing the defective ideas of a defective and pernicious system.

You see the socialist bias in the double-standard that is applied to communist and anti-communist nations; you see socialist propaganda in every one of Jane Fonda's movies; you see socialist bias in television fiction which invariably depicts the businessman and property owner as a buffoon or villian; you see the socialist bias in editorials which unconsciously accept Marxist premises as, for example, that all revolutions are caused by the rich exploiting the poor.

You see corporate socialism in action when Chrysler and Lockheed claim the right to bailouts by the government, when huge banks finagle government guarantees and lobby for foreign aid which they often finance and support in order to stifle their competition.

The spirit of free enterprise can be found among some intellectuals, among most middle class people, and among entrepreneurs and small to medium size businesses and most often in the smaller colleges and universities. You find it in public men like Reps. Phil Crane, John Ashbrook, Jack Kemp, Ron Paul and Larry McDonald and in Senators like Orrin Hatch, Paula Hawkins, Paul Laxalt and S.I. Hayakawa. There are others, far more than you would think because you almost never seen them interviewed on television or quoted in the major newspapers. In their cases, the socialist bias is reflected by relegating them to the status of being virtually non-persons.

When you challenge the socialists, they will call you anti-intellectual, but actually, they are the non-intellectuals for they are advocating economic astrology and don't have sense enough to know it.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

'Big Brother' sticks nose into nonsense

WASHINGTON — I have criticized the Reagan administration when it cuts needed federal programs under the guise of "getting the government off our backs." But sometimes the regulatory bureaucrats are their own worst enemies; their zealous behavior tends to justify the Reagan concept of a Big Brother who is sticking his nose into every citizen's life.

Jack Anderson

Consider the embattled Consumer Product Safety Commission. It is a prime target of the administration's anti-regulatory fanatics. Yet the commission's National Electronic Injury Surveillance System (NEISS) has played right into the hands of those who would like to cut off federal policing of potentially dangerous products.

NEISS plugs into 74 hospitals across the country, meticulously listing every injury that is associated with more than 1,000 product categories fed into the system's data bank. The system accounts for about 250,000 injuries reported to the safety commission each year, and many of them are grist for the mill of those who ridicule the federal agency's generally worthwhile safety efforts.

Here are some examples of the often frivolous data collected by NEISS:

— Injuries related to drinking fountains include such gems as "Ran into water fountain," "Dropped water cooler on finger while loading it into truck" and "Struck nose against water fountain."

— Under candlesticks: "Wood candlestick fell off wall and hit patient in head" and "Jumped down on metal candleholder, lacerated middle toe." Jack be nimble, Jack be quick to notify Uncle Sam.

— Under tombstones: "Lost balance riding bike, hit corner of tombstone" and "Gravestone fell on lower leg."

— Telephones: "Swallowed a key while talking on phone" and "Ran into door running to answer phone."

— Pillows: "Jumping on pillow, fell, hit head on stereo," "Put piece of sponge from pillow in nostril" and "Jammed finger and suffered blow to head while in pillow fight."

— Blackboards: "Teacher hit by blackboard that fell off wall," "Put fist through chalkboard" and "Ran into blackboard."

— Bags, as in brown paper bags: "Hit eye with paper bag," "Slipped on paper bag" and "Hurt back lifting 100-pound bag of flour."

— Seeds: "Sniffed a seed up nostril, couldn't remove," and "Patient put a seed in ear."

Incredible as it may seem, these incidents, which would usually qualify as "freak accidents" in most newspapers — if they were even reported at all — are dutifully fed into the NEISS data bank each year.

What's obvious, of course, is that this kind of information-gathering overkill provides ammunition to critics of the safety commission. Ridicule is one of the most effective weapons that can be used against a federal program, and the idea of Big Brother conscientiously collecting information on pillow fights and treacherous shopping bags is enough to jeopardize the entire product safety program.

Product Safety Commission Chairman Nancy Steorts and Commissioner Stuart Statler are leading an effort to cut down on the number of potentially dangerous products being reported on to the government.

Even Dr. Robert Verhelen, creator of the injury-reporting system, acknowledged that it may have gone a bit overboard. But, he told my associate Tony Capaccio, "It's better sometimes to pay for some information you don't need to get information you do need." He said he thinks basically it's "a very cost-effective system."

But Verhelen said they are weeding out some products. Tombstones, he said, will go.

RUBBED OUT: In true Orwellian style, an influential Washington lobbyist became an "unperson" when an Environmental Protection Agency official decided to alter his personal calendar before submitting it to a congressional subcommittee.

From its own sources, the subcommittee staff had obtained the contents of Dr. John Todhunter's appointments calendar. It showed that Todhunter, EPA's chief of toxics and pesticides, had met with John Byington, the formaldehyde industry's lobbyist, a number of times prior to a favorable EPA decision on formaldehyde. One entry, for example, showed Todhunter breakfasting with Byington at a nearby Virginia hotel on Feb. 26.

Yet when Todhunter submitted his calendar to the subcommittee on request, the entry read simply "Breakfast." Byington's name had been clumsily erased. Under questioning, Todhunter admitted that he "might have" met Byington that day.

LET DOWN BY A BUDDY: Gen. Miguel Mallea Gil, the Argentine military attache in Washington, is an old pal of Gen. Edward Meyer, U.S. Army chief of staff. Their friendship dates back to their days at West Point together more than 30 years ago.

The Argentine ruling junta evidently hoped that Mallea Gil could worm some inkling of U.S. intentions on the Falkland Islands crisis out of his buddy in the Pentagon. So in the course of two contacts, the Argentine attache gave Meyer inside information on the junta's views on the Falklands. He also assured Meyer that Argentina would not accept Soviet intelligence at face value.

It turned out to be a one-way street. Meyer remained discreet about U.S. intentions. The junta, our sources say, was disappointed when the back-channel connection failed to yield substantive information. As a result, Mallea Gil is reportedly in dutch with his fellow generals back home.

INSIDE REPORT:

Argentina's revenge may be humiliation

WASHINGTON — Collapse of the U.S. Falklands strategy, built on the foundation of Argentina's presumed early retreat under British punishment, raises the specter of major U.S. reverses against communist expansion throughout Latin America.

Rowland Evans

Robert Novak

Instead of Argentina crying "uncle" under British military pounding, as Reagan administration officials hoped, the junta in Buenos Aires is growing more nationalistic, not less. So are large portions of the Americas south of the border, from Mexico to Tierra del Fuego.

That threatens long-term erosion of U.S. influence in Latin America. Once war broke out between Washington's closest ally, Britain, and a country for which President Reagan has shown special favor, Argentina, the U.S. counted on quick capitulation by the Argentines to limit damage throughout the hemisphere.

Argument within the administration went on for weeks before Reagan came down on the British side April 30. One school insisted that as soon as an Argentinian ship or two was sunk by the British, the junta would either collapse or change course. If it collapsed, the successor regime would see the light and settle the dispute.

The counter-argument, which lost the day, warned that air and naval blows to Argentina, far from softening the mood of nationalism, would intensify it. That would put a solution even further out of reach.

The losing argument, if successful, would have required much tougher U.S. treatment of the British and Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher, who is Ronald Reagan's favorite. With overwhelming majorities in Congress pushing Reagan to back the British and the glaring illegality of the Argentine occupation, the counter-argument never had a chance. Now, however, some policy-makers wish they could turn back the clock.

Argentina's demonstrated intent to ride out the British assault makes it more unlikely than ever that there will be a quick, negotiated settlement. On a broader level, U.S. officials were taken aback at the furious Latin American reaction to Reagan's statement of support for Britain. Although not yet fully advertised, the U.S. has been accused by hemispheric neighbors of crimes against the Rio Treaty and of imperilling joint hemispheric defense to the benefit of Cuba's Fidel Castro.

A telephone call from a leading Argentine official to a high former U.S. official early in the morning of April 30 showed the depth of anti-U.S. sentiment. With "terror in his voice," the Argentine official said he had just been advised that Reagan "is going to hit us on the head" even though Argentina had not yet closed the door to Secretary of State Alexander Haig's mediation efforts. He begged the former official to intervene.

But there was no turning back at that stage. The policy decision to give Britain U.S. economic and military support was backed within the administration by a strong majority in the belief that it would work.

Now that Argentina is making it clearer every day there will be no retreat under Britain's superior military strength, condemnation of the U.S. by previously friendly Latin American leaders — which so far has been private — is likely to get noisy. The heart of current unpublicized criticism is that support of British military action will make much tougher U.S. attempts to mobilize Latin America against Castro-directed aggression.

That implies Soviet gains in the U.S. backyard, not by overt intervention but by exploiting desires throughout the hemisphere to take revenge on Washington for the Falklands humiliation. Down that road lie more instability and U.S. influence over future events, a condition afflicting this country all around the world but more dangerously so close to home.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Friday, May 7, the 127th day of 1982. There are 238 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On May 7, 1915, the Germans sank the British liner Lusitania off the Irish coast during World War I, and more than 1,100 people were killed.

On this date:

In 1777, the U.S. cruiser Surprise captured the British ship Prince of Orange in English channel.

In 1939, a military and political alliance known as the Rome-Berlin axis was announced by Germany and Italy.

In 1945, Germany made the final capitulation to U.S. Gen. Dwight Eisenhower at Rheims, France.

Benefits of pertussis vaccine outweigh risks

By SANDY ROVNER
The Los Angeles Times
Washington Post
News Service

WASHINGTON — It's a matter of the risks versus the benefits.

A lot of things in life are a gamble. Only nobody wants to gamble with a baby's life.

Recent media attention, including a report on NBC's "Today" show, to the pertussis vaccine has dealt at length with the risks of the anti-whooping cough shot. Pertussis is the "P" in the DPT shot, the three-pronged protection against diphtheria, whooping cough and tetanus.

Criticism of the pertussis shot, especially as documented on an investigative television report on WRC, the NBC affiliate in Washington, has brought virtually unanimous condemnation from the nation's prestigious American Academy of Pediatrics, the National Centers for Disease Control, the Bureau of Biologics of the Food and Drug Administration and the director of the Children's Hospital National Medical Center, among others.

Mainly, the critics say, the TV special did not weigh risk against benefit. And it exaggerated the risks.

They point to the smallpox experience. When side effects associated with smallpox vaccine were occurring with greater frequency than the incidence of smallpox itself, pediatricians stopped giving children smallpox vaccinations. If smallpox, now considered to be effectively wiped from the face of the earth, should recur in force, you can bet that parents will be rushing their children into doctors' offices for the vaccinations.

The Washington report on pertussis suggested that "serious" complications of the vaccine could occur once in every 700 children, outweighing the benefits. The medical community is suggesting now that it may be as rare as once in every 100,000.

Pediatricians, microbiologists and neurologists are aware that the pertussis vaccine is what they call "reactive." They would prefer a purified vaccine where there are no risks, but although one may be close, no such vaccine so far has been proven successful in preventing the illness. And the illness needs to be prevented.

Pertussis is caused by a bacillus — a rod-shaped bacterium — that does its dirty work in two ways:

— It sticks to the sensitive cilia in the respiratory tract, causing the persistent, sometimes months-long cough characterized by the whoop, the gaspy intake of breath during which breathing can stop for seconds at a time.

It produces toxins which themselves can cause permanent neurological damage in pertussis patients at a much greater rate — probably more than 10 times — than is caused by the vaccine. Moreover, in infants under five months, there is a high fatality rate, perhaps one third.

It is true that to a point, whooping cough can be better and more successfully treated today than in the pre-vaccine era, at least in very early stages when antibiotics may be effective.

Opponents of the vaccine also maintain that the decline of pertussis incidence was not due completely to the vaccine, but to better hygiene and nutrition. However, in countries where vaccine usage has dropped off — either because of concern for the reactions or because for some reason it was not effective — there has been a resurgence of whooping cough, contrary to assertions in the program.

— For example, according to information from the FDA's Bureau of Biologics (B.O.B) Sweden had 8,000 pertussis cases in 1980 after a vaccine found to be ineffective was discontinued. Dr. John Robbins, director of the Division of Bacterial Products at B.O.B. notes that if these figures were projected for the U.S. it would mean 250,000 cases which, he says, "The Bureau of Biologics considers an epidemic."

— In Great Britain, where the vaccine was made voluntary because of an outcry against side effects, cases soared from about 25,000 in 1974-75 to almost 100,000 in 1977-78. British authorities, says Robbins, now have written every pediatrician in the U.K. urging them to convince their patients to have the shot.

Cut, bag or mulch with a John Deere 21-inch mower

John Deere 21-inch Deluxe Mowers are now available in three models — push type, self-propelled, and electric-start self-propelled. Side discharge is standard on all three. An optional 2½-bushel rear bagger can be added to make clipping pickup neat and easy.

The push-type mower has a 3½-hp engine. The self-propelleds have 4-hp engines and rear-wheel gear drive for excellent traction in all mowing conditions. All feature steel wheels with ball bearings. Aluminum die cast deck. And two cutting height adjustment levers that let you set the mower in any of six positions — ⅞ to 2¾ inches above ground. See us for a demonstration today.

DR. NEIL SOLOMON

Dentist best for sore mouth

Dear Dr. Solomon: My grandmother often complains that her mouth is sore. I'd like to help her but I don't know where to start. What would you suggest? — Rose, N.Y.

Dear Rose: The logical starting point would be a complete dental and physical examination. Dr. Roy Rogers III, of the Mayo Clinic, says that sore mouth is almost always caused by dentures that do not fit properly, reactions to drugs, or reactions to irritants or allergens (a sbustance that causes an allergy). Sometimes advanced age alone can alter the fit of dentures and require some adjustment. Vitamin and mineral deficiencies may also play a part.

But these are only guesses. A dentist and physical examination should be able to pinpoint the cause or causes and prescribe treatment to remedy the condition.

Dear Dr. Solomon: My son is going away to college. It is the first time he will be away from home. I never finished high school and all I know about college is what I read in the papers. I hear a lot about drugs being used. He has never been a problem, but I wonder whether there is any way to tell if a person will use drugs. — Mrs. S.Y., Des Moines, Iowa

Dear Mrs. Y.: There is no personality profile that can be used to predict drug abuse. According to Dr. Robert B. Millman, a professor of psychiatry at Cornell University Medical College in New York, drug abusers are found among all psychological types. Some young people may take drugs to counter unpleasant feelings such as loneliness, while others may use drugs in a more indiscriminate fashion.

The fact that you son has never been a problem is your best reassurance that he has incorporated the kinds of values that make the use of drugs unnecessary.

Dear Dr. Solomon: My parents are planning to move to the Southwest after my father retires in a few months. I'm concerned about them because they have lived in a colder climate all their lives, and I don't know how they will adjust to the heat. Am I making a mountain out of a molehill? — Mrs. D.L., Syracuse, N.Y.

Dear Mrs. L.: From a medical standpoint, there is no reason for older people to avoid the dry, hot climate of our Southwest, provided they take a few precautions. These include keeping their cardiovascular system (heart and blood vessels) in good shape, not overexerting themselves, and making certain that the water and electrolytes lost through sweat are replaced. Researchers from the University of Nevada say that there might even be an advantage in the dry desert climate, since the high rate of evaporation makes sweating more effective.

One possible danger that people who migrate to a warm climate must guard against is a tendency to overexert themselves. Sometimes the enthusiasm felt over leaving the snow and cold behind prompts a person to attempt to do more than he or she should. But for those who practice moderation, there is no medical reason to avoid a hot, dry climate.

(If you have a medical question, write to Neil Solomon, M.D., 1726 Reisterstown Road, Baltimore, Md. 21208. Dr. Solomon cannot give personal replies but will answer as many questions as possible in his column.)

Iran claims capture of oil land from Iraq

The Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

AHVAZ, Iran — Iranian forces have broken Iraqi lines along 16 miles of the southern front in oil-rich Khuzestan Province and set up advance positions along vacated Iraqi barricades on the Ahvaz-Khuninshahr road, an Iranian officer said.

Tuesday, the fifth day of Iran's most recent offensive on the southern front in the Persian Gulf war, Iranian troops crossed the Karun River to the road — the only north-south route through marshy ground — virtually splitting the Iraqi front.

A senior Iranian officer told foreign correspondents touring the battle front that the Iraqis counterattacked Tuesday but failed to retake the area.

The barricades captured from the Iraqis are about halfway between Ahvaz and Khuninshahr (formerly Khorramshahr).

A general-staff major said at a briefing that the Iranian offensive had freed some 300 square miles between the Karun — formerly the front line — and the Ahvaz-Khuninshahr road.

The major said that Tuesday's advance cut right through Iraqi forces, some 60,000 men in seven divisions.

This correspondent saw two Iranian bridges across the Karun, but an officer said that "five or six" had been slung across the river, allowing supplies and reinforcements to reach the new Iranian front line.

Fighting was intense late Tuesday morning, but hundreds of Iranian soldiers were visible on the abandoned Iraqi ramparts, seemingly unconcerned by heavy Iraqi fire.

In the regained stretch, for some six miles west of the river, Iranian forces have set up ammunition and fuel dumps. Armored and mechanized infantry units are sheltered in the rare clumps of vegetation, while the tips of heavy artillery pieces showed over earthern ramparts.

College-age Greeks enjoy American life

ATHENS, Greece (AP) — The American College of Greece has carved out a unique place in Greek education by providing courses that are not always available at local universities.

Both Greek and foreign students here apply to the college in increasing numbers, seeking marketable business skills or a degree that can help them move on to graduate school abroad.

Several of Greece's seven universities are strong in mathematics, architecture and medicine, but there is only one psychology department in the country. Courses in business, social sciences and fine arts are hard to find.

An Education Ministry official says limited government funds for higher education are channeled to developing the new universities in Thrace, Crete and Epirus and providing improved science facilities.

"These priorities come first," said the official, who asked not to be identified. "In addition, entrenched conservatism among university teachers has meant the inexact sciences are left out in the cold."

Many of the American College's 1,400 students, up from 850 five years ago, say they prefer the institution's close faculty supervision to a Greek university, where several hundred students may try to attend a single lecture.

"At a Greek university, I would hardly ever get a chance of contact with a professor," said Lucia Papadakis, a junior. "Here I can discuss my academic ideas or my personal problems with several faculty members."

The president of American College, John S. Bailey, says, "We're trying here to complement what the Greek universities offer and add another dimension to the academic process in Greece."

Even dancing has ups and downs

WASHINGTON (AP) — Dancing in the dark may sound romantic, but it also can be dangerous. So, apparently, can cheerleading, owning an aquarium, walking up or down stairs or getting into bed.

In fact, a new government survey on injuries shows Americans manage to hurt themselves on virtually every type of object, right down to "pencils, pens and other desk supplies" and "musical instruments (nonelectric)."

The survey, reported Wednesday in the Consumer Product Safety Commission's 1982 annual report, records injuries treated at emergency rooms of 73 hospitals during a one-year period ending last June 30. Auto accidents are not included, and the CPSC extrapolated from the results to come up with nationwide estimates.

The figures don't add up to a total of all product-related injuries, but the survey notes recent estimates put the number at 33 million each year.

The most injuries on the list — an estimated 763,000 — occurred on steps, ramps or landings, probably no surprise to anyone who's stepped out onto the porch stairs on an icy morning.

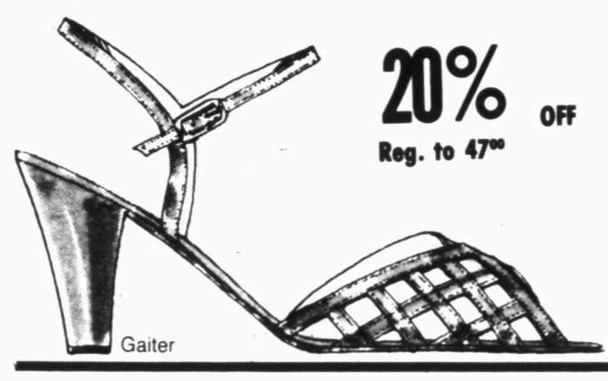

Nor is there much surprise in the next most common activities or products involved in accidents. No. 2 is bicycles and bicycle accessories, with 518,000 injuries. Then come the activities, apparel or equipment associated with baseball, 478,000 injuries; football, 470,000; and basketball, 434,000.

Then nails, carpet tacks, screws and thumbtacks — 244,000 injuries.

NEW YORK (AP) — After five years in a bulky back brace and oversized clothes, Katherine Hammond didn't think she was glamorous. She still doesn't. But Bill Blass, Anne Klein and Geoffrey Beene do.

They pay $200 an hour for her poses, struts, twists, turns and drop-dead looks that are the tools of a high fashion runway model. The 23-year-old geology professor's daughter who once thought of herself as ugly, is a queen on Seventh Avenue.

"I love it," she laughs, shaking her dark, curly hair in some bewilderment at her rise from a costume jewelry sales clerk in Portland, Ore., to New York City's top fashion salons.

She has it all: a six-figure annual income, a country house in Connecticut, summers on Fire Island and a Greenwich Village apartment that she shares with a 39-year-old hairdresser-boyfriend who she says "looks like Paul Newman."

Doctors put Miss Hammond in a back brace when she was 11 to treat her curvature of the spine. She wore it for five years, and every day she wore the same oversized shirts.

There were no boyfriends, and no admiring looks.

"I felt ugly. People always stared at me," she said last week during a break in a Bill Blass show where a Louis Armstrong recording of "La Vie en Rose" serenaded her in a pink-sequined cocktail dress.

At 17, her mother got the store where Miss Hammond sold jewelry to put her in newspaper ads. That first modeling job paid $35 — a few minutes of her time by today's standards.

Now, her day often begins at 8 a.m. and ends at midnight as she dashes between fashion shows and assignments in her "funny clothes" — a pair of suspender leather pants, a floppy knapsack and "stupid" scarves. For her own wardrobe, she likes designer Julio's outlandish print combinations.

On the runway in a Klein cashmere or a Blass tweed, Miss Hammond is a 5-foot-8, 115-pound star. Her runway work, catalogues for stores like Macy's and shows in Italy and France have made her the second-highest earner at the Zoli modeling agency.

There's something about her that stands out. Her blue-green eyes pick out a face in the audience and a broad smile dazzles as she strolls before tough buyers who will decide whether a designer's creations will sell.

"It's like theater," she says.

Nights may find her at a trendy disco with fellow model Esme.

Life wasn't always so glamorous. It took years to break into the cutthroat New York City fashion world. And it will not always be so glamorous. The Zoli agency estimates she has "seven or eight years" left in modeling. Then she hopes to try television or acting.

But for now, her problems are minor.

Her angular face doesn't always photograph right. Blass took one of her outfits out of the show. A gown at the Klein show exposed a bit too much when she moved her shoulder provocatively. And there is relentless competition.

"If you have one job canceled, another model takes it up," she said. "I try not to tell anybody what my jobs are."

WARDROBES THAT WORK

Pack carefully for traveling

By MARY T. MILLICAN
Fashion Consultant

It's vacation time — and also time to decide what to pack. It seems whether going away for a week or a weekend we tend to pack the same amount of clothes!

There are several rules to follow when choosing your wardrobe for a trip and today we'll go over two of them. We'll talk about a two-week vacation in this column.

One thing to start with is color — Pick two main colors and one color that will be bright, or compliment the other two. For example, navy and white with red as the alternate color. White and yellow with turquoise, off-white and blue with dusty rose, khaki and navy with red. There are lots of alternatives and lots of colors, so pick the colors you like the best and then narrow them down to three basics. You can always pack a few accessories or a blouse in a totally different color for variety.

Some of the articles you'll want to take along are a skirt and lightweight jacket that match and can be worn for evening wear as well as day-time dress-up, and an additional skirt, perhaps a split skirt to wear instead of shorts or slacks for more casual wear. This skirt should coordinate with the jacket in one of your three colors. One pair of slacks, two pairs of shorts and perhaps one dress that can be worn with, or without the jacket you already have. Then pack between four and seven blouses with at least two that can be worn for evening with your skirt and jacket or just the skirt. You'll also need about four to six cotton tops or T-shirts to be worn with your slacks, shorts and skirts. All your colors should blend whether they are prints or solids. Some of your blouses should be prints or designs of some sort, and your bottoms solid for the most part.

This will make up the bulk of your suitcase, then pack lots of small accessories like belts and pins and a few scarves, maybe one that may be worn as a shawl. These don't take up much room, but can make your traveling wardrobe look extra special.

While you're on vacation you can purchase a blouse or skirt or even a pretty cotton dress in a totally different color to "spice up your life." Don't forget to go easy on your shoes as well. All the "wardrobing" won't mean a thing if you have a suitcase full of shoes. After you've packed the bulk of your clothes, you'll have plenty of room for the really important things like a swimsuit and a couple of pretty cover-ups! Have fun and PACK LIGHTLY!

Send your questions, as well as requests for further information on wardrobe consultations to Mary T. Millican, P.O. Box 8878, Midland 79703.

Sessions planned on relocation and change

Family Services of Midland is presenting a series of four sessions addressing the adjustments of relocation and change. The meetings will have a discussion group format and are designed primarily for new residents who are still adjusting to a recent move.

The meetings will be held from 10 to 11:30 a.m. Wednesday mornings, beginning May 12. The series will be held in the agency offices at 2101 W. Wall St., Suite 9.

The series will focus on the effects of move and change with opportunity for personal reactions to the experience. Often individuals or whole families feel uprooted and temporarily without the security and feeling of well-being that they had known prior to a move.

The leaders for the series will be Garry Lichty, director of Family Services, and Lacy Clary, a past president of the Newcomers Club of Midland. There is a $30 fee for the series.

For more information call Lichty at 683-4241.

Women increasingly want the same things as men

By MARIAN J. MEYERS
Hearst Feature Service

Sigmund Freud, the father of psychoanalysis, spent more than 30 years pondering, "What does a woman want?"

If statistics are any indication, women increasingly want the same things as men — careers in engineering, accounting, business management, law and other fields traditionally barred to them.

But other questions remain. Do women entering male-dominated fields represent the wave of the future? Or are they the peak of a swell that has already begun to fall? And what effect has their increasing enrollment in non-traditional courses had on colleges and universities across the country?

Schools have experienced changes, perhaps most notably in the areas of engineering and science. Nationwide, women received 38 percent of the bachelor's degrees and 23 percent of the doctoral degrees in science and engineering in 1980, the most recent year for which statistics are available. In 1965, 22 percent of the bachelor degrees and 7 percent of the doctorates in those areas went to women.

Figures from the National Center for Education Statistics in Washington indicate that women received 0.8 percent of the bachelor degrees in engineering in 1971 and 10.1 percent of those degrees in 1980.

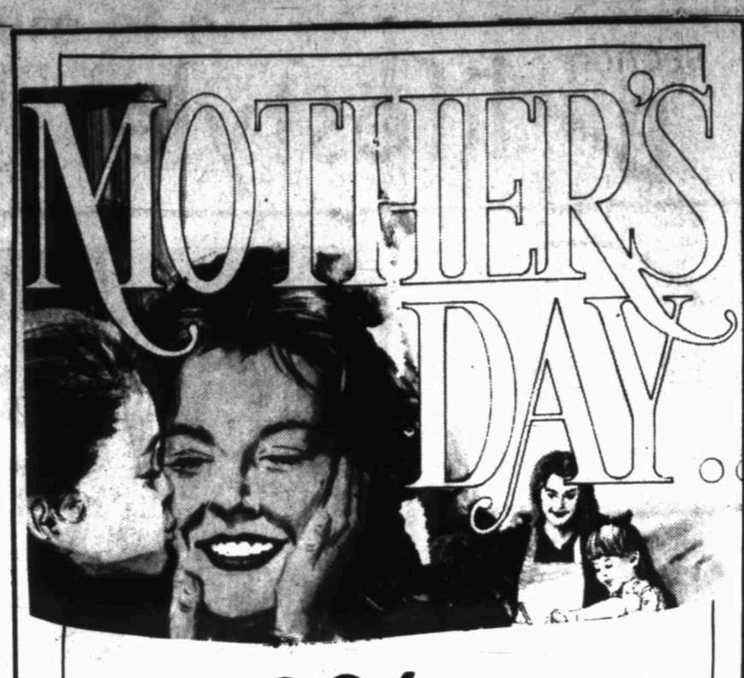

"Ten percent is still a very small pecentage," says Leo J. Eiden, assistant director of the center's statistical information office. "But from 0.8 percent, it's a leviathan step."

Eiden's 1971-1980 statistics also show an increase in the number of women obtaining degrees in agricultural production and agribusiness, business and management, computer and information science, law, psychology and protective service. Between 1971 and 1979, he notes, the percentage of degrees awarded to women decreased in foreign languages, letters (English and literature) and social sciences. In business and management, however, the percentage of degrees awarded to women increased from 2.9 to 12 during that time.

In many ways, the reaction of colleges and universities to these changes is similar to their response to the social sciences trend during the 1960s and the swing toward vocational and professional education during the next decade. Some classes have been added, others dropped.

Whether women continue to enter the traditionally male-dominated fields until they attain equal representation remains to be seen. Much depends on how these women are treated once they enter the job market. If they are successful in terms of job satisfaction, equal pay and blending family with their careers, other women will follow.

In the meantime, schools will continue to review and modify their course offerings to reflect student interests. That much, the experts agree, is certain.

Crystal Ball sparkles

Visions of lovely crystal were evidently a drawing card for some 400 guests who turned out for Thursday's Crystal Ball at Midland Country Club.

The ball, an annual black-tie benefit of High Sky Girls Ranch, featured dancing to the music of Mal Fitch and His Orchestra from Dallas; an auction and drawing of fine crystal, including Waterford, Lalique and Orrefors; and a late night buffet.

Larry Wooten of Clovis, N.M., successfully auctioned thousands of dollars worth of the lovely crystal. George W. Bush and Holt Cowden handled the drawings for the giveaway crystal.

The event is hosted by the High Sky Girls Ranch board of directors. Chairman of the ball was Mrs. Durward Goolsby and assistant chairman is Mrs. Ross Brunner.

Others on the Crystal Ball committee include Jack Hauke and Mrs. Wilburn Yeager Jr., sponsors; Mrs. Brunner, decorations; Mrs. L. Jack Nichols, treasurer; Mrs. Tom Stovall, and Mrs. John Hackney, invitations; Mrs. E. C. Philpy and Mrs. Jack Swallow, crystal display; Mrs. Charles Eiland and Mrs. Glenn Pierce, tickets for drawing; Jon Short, Mid-West Elctric Co., lighting; Gerald Nobles Jr. and Holt Cowden, auction; James G. Alsup, parking attendants; David Hurta and "Preacher" Roberts, drawing.

A wide selection of Waterford, Lalique and Orrefors crystal was auctioned.

HINTS FROM HELOISE

Check your vacuum bags

HELLO!

Have you priced vacuum cleaners lately? Not too cheap, huh? Well, in that case, we'd better all start treating that old suction-bag with a little more tender loving care.

Check the dust bag before vacuuming each week. Don't let it get over ¾ full before discarding it. And do discard it, don't just empty it. Reusing those bags allows minute particles of dust to filter through the restapled or taped ends.

This, in turn, clogs up the filters and can eventually ruin the motor. Those bags aren't all that expensive — not near as much as a repair bill or cost of a new vacuum cleaner.

If you find your vacuum cleaner not sucking up that dirt as efficiently as it should, it's a good sign there's some trouble brewing.

The dust bag should be the first pit stop. If too full, it can't circulate air to pull in more dirt.

So, to save wear and tear on that vacuum cleaner, as well as you, change those bags frequently. — Heloise

OUTTA SIGHT

Dear Heloise: My son's sandbox is just out of sight of my kitchen window.

Since I like to keep a close eye on him, and yet need to do household chores from time to time, my husband installed a large sideview car mirror on the outside kitchen window sill, and adjusted it to reflect the sandbox and general area.

Now my son can play outside in his sandbox when inside necessities prevent me from going outside to watch him. — Janie Sprint

REJUVENATE CEDAR

Dear Heloise: Awhile back you gave a hint on how to put the cedar smell back in a cedar chest.

Mine has a very faint smell. Would you please tell me again what to do? — Jewel Smally

+ + +

Just give it a light sanding on the inside of the chest, sanding with the grain. Use the vacuum to remove the dust, or wipe it out with a damp cloth and let it dry well before storing anything. — Heloise

TRAVEL TIPS

Dear Heloise: I enjoy your column and have an idea to share concerning travel.

When I'm packing clothes that include evening wear, I slip my jewelry, any special hosiery, bra, etc., in my evening bag, along with a few dimes and quarters for tips or phone.

Often,the dressing time is short and there is no time to look through my things hunting for these items.

When things are all together, it makes it a lot easier if you're rushed to get dressed. — Allison Carsrud

A PLANTED POT

Dear Heloise: To keep the potted plants on my deck from getting knocked or blown over, I hammered long nails into the wooden porch, then placed the hole of the planter over the nail.

Secure at last! — Eleanor Anderson

WATER BUCKET

Dear Heloise: While traveling out West, our car became thirsty at the most inopportune time.

With no bucket to haul water, and no forethought to bring a container of water (we've since learned), my husband popped off one of the hubcaps and used it to transport the much-needed water.

I did remember to carry a pair of old panty hose — in case the fan belt broke... — Sally

+ + +

Travel tips come in right handy this time of year. Send yours to Heloise, P.O. Box 32000, San Antonio, TX 78216, and she'll pass the best ones along to other readers through her column. She can't thank you individually but she does enjoy hearing from you.

DEAR ABBY

Rescued mongrel is rare breed

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: "Be Kind to Animals Week" is in May, so I hope you'll publish this.

My husband and I went to the local shelter to get a pet. When we got there, we were shown 12 dogs. We were told they were all to be destroyed the next day. We chose a little Benji-type dog who seemed quite bright, expecting to train him. It wasn't necessary. He was completely housebroken, and trained to stay off the furniture and not to beg at the table. Another thing, he never seemed to bark. We didn't know if he had been trained not to bark, or if he lacked the ability to bark.

About a month after we got our little Skipper, he did something very special: It was about 3 a.m. Skipper jumped up on the bed, barked a little "woof" and began to scratch my arm. He had never done this before and it startled me.

It's a good thing it did because I was awakened out of a very groggy sleep to discover the house was full of gas! My husband and I were able to get out of the house. He went back long enough to shut off the gas. We held the doors open for several hours until it was safe to go back in.

Well, Skipper is still housebroken. He still seldom barks. But now I invite him to get up on the furniture and sit as close to me as possible. Does he beg at the table? He doesn't have to. He gets steak if he wants! — PAT STREETER IN SANDUSKY, OHIO

DEAR PAT: What a beautiful story. Let's hope it inspires others to go to their local animal shelters and rescue a dog that could one day rescue them.

DEAR ABBY: Please tell "Nighttime Boxer," who awakened in the morning bruised and badly beaten for no apparent reason, to talk to his clergyman.

Both Jews and Christians recognize the authenticity of diabolic attacks, and there is responsible documentation on this subject. Please don't be biased. Any competent religious leader can recognize whether one needs to see a psychologist or an exorcist.

My best friend spent many years in a mental hospital with no lasting cure. (Everyone thought she was hallucinating.) After her release she joined a small church, and a year later she wrote to me, "At last the 'wolf' is gone. I am at peace with Jesus." She died peacefully in her sleep.

I know what I am talking about because she was my sister, and our whole family went through hell for over 10 years because we were told there was no such thing as diabolic attacks. Now we know there are. — BEEN THERE

DEAR BEEN THERE: Your sister may very well have had a "devil" of a problem, but I would advise anyone exhibiting nocturnal violence to be examined by a physician to rule out the possibility of a medical problem.

DEAR ABBY: Maybe I'm wrong, but I always thought that Mother's Day was a day to remember one's OWN mother. I am my husband's sweetheart, companion, partner and lover; I am NOT his mother!

I hope that Bill and I never start calling each other "Mother" and "Dad" like some couples we know. And we certainly don't intend to give each other gifts on "Mother's Day" and "Father's Day." — MY MOTHER'S DAUGHTER

Woman's view of women's health guides

By JOANN RODGERS
Hearst Feature Service

The covers promise "authoritative," "comprehensive," "practical," "understanding," "comforting," information on every female condition, ailment and complaint. The choices cover several feet of shelf space at the bookstores. But do women's health and medical guides deliver? Well, sometimes.

A check through a recent half-dozen revealed disappointing omissions, loose ends and misinformation, along with some well-crafted, helpful references. Women in the market for one of these books, moreover, will find that neither price nor big-name prominence guarantees a worthwhile purchase.

The American Medical Association's "Book of WomanCare" (Random House, $12.95), has the imprimatur of organized medicine and a well-known freelance writer's byline. But it almost ignores breast feeding, which in recent years has undergone a renaissance among American women.

Study after study suggests that mother's milk is first choice for human infants. The American Academy of Pediatrics recommends six months of nursing if possible. Yet the AMA book devotes just one clause (not even a complete sentence) to the subject. And it's wrong.

It suggests that nursing women may need to postpone weight reduction and are more likely to keep unwanted weight gained during pregnancy. Yet many nursing women on a healthy, balanced diet regain their pre-pregnancy figures more rapidly than bottle-feeding mothers, because of the high energy requirements of breast feeding and the uterus-shrinking effect of nursing hormones.

The AMA book also patronizes with gluey oversimplifications. In a mental health section it notes, quite seriously, that "...it is no fun to feel depressed..." This startling revelation is followed by a disclaimer, that sometimes depression can be educational, helping a woman to rethink her priorities and goals.

It may be that the AMA's goal here was reassurance. But in its avoidance of detail and controversy, it also ignores evidence that American women are abusing tranquilizers and alcohol in record numbers to overcome depression.

Avon Book's "Womancare" (that title is popular), at $9.95 is straightforward and well-organized, but it, too, takes some questionable turns. Its section on breast cancer lists factors that may put a woman at higher than normal risk for the disease. But it mixes major factors, such as fibrocystic breast disease with minor ones, and such as her age at the birth of a first child, without explaining the difference.

The Better Homes and Gardens "Women's Health and Medical Guide," at $27.95, offers superb sections on childbirth and labor, well illustrated and written in a detailed and easy-to-read style. But it offers no advice for coping with sleep problems, which afflict at least a third of all adult women seriously enough to require professional help.

Vitamin zealots wreck the scientific validity of the "Woman's Encyclopedia of Health and Natural Healing" (Rodale, $19.95). They ignore medical fact when they insist that dietary excess is the villain in adult acne and a slew of other conditions, and draw deserved smirks at the hyperbole they reserve for dermatologists. It is certainly true that some skin specialists are unqualified. But it's hard to swallow the writer's suggestion that all or most have sold out to chocolate manufacturers in order to encourage pimple gardens and line their purses.

The Federation of Feminist Women's Health Centers volume, "A New View of Woman's Body" (Touchstone), has first-rate, graphic drawings. The tone of the book is adult, insisting that women can and should understand how their bodies work and how to care for them. But "New View" also questionably renames female sexual anatomy, which may confuse readers.

An overall good buy is the paperback version of the Ms. "Guide to a Woman's Health" (Berkley), at $3.95. Its sections are punchy and to the point, comprehensively indexed and up-to-date. But it deserves a few raps, too. For instance it gives a positive, if weak, nod to an unproven method of baby sex selection.

When buying a health care guide, women would do well to shop at least as carefully as they do for lipstick: make sure the overall effect fits the buyer's needs. It's a good idea to make a list of health issues that concern you and to check the table of contents, index listings, amount of detail and writing style of each book under consideration.

Not a few reviewers have noticed that a corresponding shelf of male health guides is absent. Publishers claim there is no market, that men are less interested in analyzing their bodily ailments and are less hypochondriacal. The logical corollary to that view is that female health books serve more of a psychological, than a medical need. But it is also true, studies confirm, that women live longer, take better care of themselves and stay healthier longer than men.

Women's home health guides may be of great value, if their value is kept in perspective. No book is a substitute for professional diagnosis and preventive medicine. A good book may lead a woman to further inquiry and help, but never to health itself.

Chicago show

CHICAGO (AP) — The exhibition "The Treasures of Tiffany" will be shown at the Museum of Science and Industry here June 10 through Nov. 14.

The show, presented by the Chicago Tribune in cooperation with the museum, will include some 400 objects, ranging in size from paperweights to a 2-ton altar of mosaic and marble.

The art works come from the Louis C. Tiffany collection of the Charles Hosmer Morse Foundation Inc. of Winter Park, Fla.

Compromises like horse story to House head

Hearst Feature Service

WASHINGTON — House Majority Leader Jim Wright likens President Reagan's willingness to split the difference with Democrats on some key economic issues to a tasty horse and rabbit stew concocted by a Texas farmer.

That stew, as Wright tells the story, was offered one day to a visitor who happened to stop off at the farmer's house.

After taking a bit of the stew, the visitor asked the farmer what was in it. "Why, it's horse and rabbit," replied the farmer.

"In what portions?"asked the vistor.

"Half a horse and half a rabbit," replied the farmer.

Wright was reminded of the story when Reagan, meeting with bi-partisan congressional leaders on Capitol Hill last week, offered to accept a 90-day delay in his 1983 tax cut if the Democrats agreed to a 90-day delay in cost-of-living increases for Social Security recipients.

The implication of Wright's story, which convulsed even Reagan, was that the president was tossing in half a rabbit while he expected the Democrats to contribute half a horse.

Wright's humorous tale did little, however, to prevent the conference from breaking up in stalemate.

The Fort Worth congressman repeated his horse-and-rabbit stew story in his usual fast Texas clip at a meeting with reporters Wednesday.

During the same session, Wright suggested it might be wise for Congress to develop and pass its own budget with a sharply reduced deficit and then present it to the president.

"Would he veto it?" Wright asked rhetorically.

He did not wait for an answer, but instead moved on to outline his own solution to the president's budget, with its deficit of well over $100 billion.

Wright said he favored putting a $700-per-person cap on the 1982 tax cut, slated to become effective July 1, and abolishment of the 1983 tax cut and tax indexing plan which is scheduled for 1985.

If those actions were taken, said Wright, the federal treasury would save $30.4 billion in fiscal 1983, $63.6 billion in a 1984 and $81.4 billion in 1985. If Congress also repealed the special leasing provisions it enacted for business last year, it could save an additional $2.9 billion in 1983, $4.6 billion in 1984 and $6.5 billion in 1985, he added.

Wright sought to support his argument for a cap on the tax cut by distributing a chart showing that under Reagan's tax cut a family of four with an annual income of $20,000 would save only $275 in 1982 while a family of four with an income of $100,000 would save $5,748.

Government behind drinking more milk because it's good for more than health

By The Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

WASHINGTON — Too many cows and not enough milk drinkers. That is why, in a nutshell, milk, butter and cheese prices will probably be stable for a long time to come.

Good news for the consumer? Not necessarily. Agriculture officials figure that, because of an unexpected gusher of government aid to the dairy industry, a gallon of milk now costs about 17 cents more than it should.

The White House is publicly embarrassed, and trying hard to stem the flow.

Agriculture Secretary John R. Block, not usually an administrator given to hyperbole, summed up milk's problem last month:

"Production is up, demand is flat," he said. "The taxpayer is forced to buy the difference. This is embarrassing, unacceptable and intolerable. It cannot continue."

PRESIDENT REAGAN, REALIZING that the milk glut is going to help send his already ballooning budget deficit up even further, last month asked Block to find some way out. Block, in turn, is feverishly working on legislation, and was expected to announce his proposal Wednesday.

There are five basic reasons for the milk mess, reasons involving an intricate network of consumers, cows, farmers and bureaucrats.

The milk train starts, as milk always does, with the cow, which cannot seem to stop reproducing itself.

"The increase is the real key," said Clifford M. Carman, USDA dairy analyst. The number of milk cows on farms, now 11 million, was up 99,000 from six months earlier and 138,000 over a year ago.

Farmers know the government will back up any dairy supply by paying them 70 percent to 75 percent of "parity," or the amount needed to keep them at the same standard of living their ancestors enjoyed in 1910 to 1914.

A second factor is that the cows, because of improved genetics, produce more milk than ever. There were 132.6 billion pounds of milk produced in 1981, or about 12.7 billion pounds more than could be used.

But while the cows grow fatter, more productive and more plentiful, people have turned away from their product. The average American drank just 1.4 glasses of milk a day in 1981, instead of the three glasses the American Dairy Association says he should have. The association represents about 250,000 of the nation's 300,000 dairy farmers.

Another reason is that society has become more calorie-conscious, and a cup, or eight ounces, of whole milk is 150 calories. Even a cup of skim is about 90 calories.

To keep dairy farmers afloat, the government helps them financially, creating a fourth and some say crucial factor in the milk mess.

Because people are not drinking as much milk or eating as much cheese, and because production is booming, there is more butter and cheese to spread around than anyone wants.

The government "support" program pays milk processors for all the butter, cheese and powdered milk products they cannot sell to the commercial market. The government's price has not changed since October 1980, and is now scheduled to increase slightly this year.

PARTLY AS A RESULT, USDA figures whole milk prices should be about the same all year, with other dairy products up only 2 percent to 3 percent.

But Thomas B. Smith, research director for the consumer-oriented Community Nutrition Institute, argued that prices should actually be going down, and even some government officials privately agree, saying that, if unregulated marketplace forces worked their will, consumers would see a drop as steep as 17 cents a gallon for whole milk.

"The surplus is prevented from spilling into the marketplace," he said.

Dairy officials disagreed. "If we let prices follow the supply (with no government help) they would be up and down," said Doni Dondero, communications director for the National Milk Producers Federation, which speaks for most of the nation's dairy cooperatives.

"Prices would fall at first," she said, but then would rise again. If there were no stability, Dondero said, "We would lose farmers," because they could not count on prices being stable.

But the federation is clearly worried about the future of its government price. It has proposed, and consumer groups have criticized, a plan that would require the government to buy only a certain amount of milk each year. Surpluses could then be sold anywhere, including abroad at world prices.

"We're the only industry I know that's saying please, come take our money," said Dondero.

Midlander again on anti-drug group

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Gov. Bill Clements Wednesday reappointed William B. Blakemore II of Midland to the Texas War Against Drugs Committee.

Blakemore was one of 16 persons renamed to that panel, which again will be chaired by Dallas multi-millionaire H. Ross Perot.

The committee was instrumental in getting several bills passed by the 1981 Legislature, including the legislation allowing law enforcement officers to use wiretaps in drug investigations.

Durer paintings' New York life short-lived

NEW YORK (AP) — A New Yorker who says he bought two 15th-century paintings by Albrecht Durer for $450 has lost his bid to retain ownership of the artworks, now valued at up to $10 million.

The 2nd U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals ruled Wednesday that the paintings should go to an East German museum.

Edward Elicofon, a 77-year-old New York lawyer who said he bought the paintings from an American serviceman in 1946, had claimed ownership.

Additionally, the Grand Duchess of Saxony-Weimar and the West German government claimed in a 1969 suit that the paintings were the private property of the Grand Dukes of Saxony-Weimar. The duchess, they claimed, was given title to the paintings by her husband, Grand Duke Carl August.

But the appeals court upheld a ruling by U.S. District Judge Jacob Mishler that the paintings must be returned to the Kunstsammlungen Zu Weimar, a museum in East Germany.

Elicofon didn't find out the paintings were Durers until 20 years after he purchased them.

The oil-on-wood paintings, 11-by-9½ inches each, are portraits of Hans Tucher and his wife, Felicitas, of Nuremberg, and were painted in 1499.

Dr. Walter Liedtke, associate curator of European paintings at the Metropolitan Museum of Art, estimated their value at $3 million to $5 million each.

Evidence showed the paintings had been owned by successive Grand Dukes of Saxony-Weimar since at least 1824. They were displayed in the Grand Ducal Museum in Weimar in 1913.

However, the East German museum cited 19th century dynastic law, a 1921 settlement between Grand Duke Wilhelm Ernst and the newly established territory of Weimar which succeeded the Grand Duchy, and a 1927 settlement with Thuringia which succeeded the territory of Weimar to back up its claim that the paintings were public property.

It contended that when Grand Duke Wilhelm Ernst abdicated his duchy upon Germany's defeat in World War I, any rights he held as sovereign over the grand ducal art collection automatically passed to the Territory of Weimar.

Until 1943, the paintings were on exhibit in a museum in Weimar, Thuringia, known as Staatliche Kunstsammlungen zu Weimar, the predecessor to the present museum.

During World War II the paintings were stored in a nearby castle for protection. They were stolen sometime in July 1945, as American troops which occupied the area were being withdrawn to be replaced by Soviet forces.

Times says it published old puzzle

NEW YORK (AP) — The New York Times unwittingly ran a 20-year-old crossword puzzle after it was submitted as a new work by a contributor, Assistant Managing Editor James L. Greenfield says.

Greenfield, who declined to identify the contributor, said Wednesday that the man had reversed the old puzzle and slightly altered a few clues. The puzzle was published April 16.

The man had contributed other puzzles in the past and they have been checked now and found to be original, Greenfield said. He added that the Times intended to take legal action aginst the man.

The Times puzzles come from several sources, Greenfield explained.

Government policy branch falling victim to administration's budget-cutting statistics

By The Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

WASHINGTON — A decision by the Office of Management and Budget to restructure its Statistical Policy Branch has raised new complaints that the Reagan administration is cutting federal statistical programs too deeply.

News of a reorganization of the policy unit, which oversees and coordinates government statistical studies, recently leaked out of OMB after the unit's employees reportedly were told they would be reassigned.

A few hours after that meeting, Rep. Henry S. Reuss, D-Wis., chairman of the Joint Economic Committee, sent OMB Director David A. Stockman a telegram asking why the office was being "abolished."

"OMB'S ACTION IS a further step backward for intelligent and informed policy-making and will only confirm those who have dark fears of a massive statistical cover-up in the making," Reuss wrote.

Rep. Paul Simon, D-Ill., chairman of a House Budget Committee task force studying indexing and entitlements, has also written Stockman and is circulating a "Dear Colleague" letter, protesting the "dissolution" of the office.

OMB spokesman Edwin L. Dale Jr. acknowledged that the statistical unit will be restructured as part of a larger reorganization of the Office of Information and Regulatory Affairs. Dale said no final decision has been made, but he said the unit will continue performing its statistical duties. "We expect to issue a full explanation in the near future about the changes," said Dale.

The size and power of the statistical unit, which has been around since the days of Franklin D. Roosevelt, has been steadily downgraded in recent years. The office, which had as many as 70 staff members some 30 years ago, now has the equivalent of 9½ full-time positions.

Privately, OMB officials said one reason the unit is being restructured is because it has been ineffective, a charge with which many statisticians agree. Even so, many statisticians say the government needs a central statistics office.

The federal government has more than 70 statistical programs run by many different departments, explained Courtenay Slater, former chief economist at the Commerce Department. Without one coordinating unit, she said, the quality and timeliness of major economic data would be threatened.

Nobel prize winner Wassily Leontief also has called for one statistical office. He told a congressional committee that "the United States is the only advanced industrialized country that still does not possess a real, central statistical office... "

THE REORGANIZATION ALSO comes at a time when many statisticians say the quality of government statistics is in jeopardy.

The government's two biggest statistics collectors, the Census Bureau and the Bureau of Labor Statistics, have been forced to slice programs because of budget cuts. BLS has ended 19 studies, stopped all travel, and failed to replace 100 employees who quit or retired this year. The agency has asked for an emergency $5.6 million appropriation that, it says, it needs "to maintain the accuracy" of such key economic indicators as the Consumer Price Index.

The Census Bureau has dropped a host of studies and decided not to fund a new five-year census in 1985. It has also canceled a special sample in its 1983 census of agriculture, and stopped collecting farm data from Guam, the Virgin Islands and Puerto Rico.

Many of the programs being trimmed helped the government monitor how its programs were being used. Others helped policymakers predict economic trends.

"A million dollars saved today through short-sighted reductions in the budgets for statistical programs could lead to erroneous decisions that would cost the private and public sectors billions of dollars over the long run," John J. Casson, chief economist for American Express, warned at a congressional subcommittee hearing in March. Witnesses for the U.S. Commission on Civil Rights and the Children's Defense Fund told the subcommittee that cuts had deprived them of vital data about minorities and the handicapped. A spokesman for the AFL-CIO accused the BLS of making "anti-labor cuts," because, he said, the agency canceled several programs that provide information for unions to use in negotiations.

OMB said the cuts were not political. The programs with the fewest users were cut, Dale said, as part of the government's belt-tightening.

Recently, the Congressional Research Service released a 53-page study that provoked even more concern among statistics watchers. The report said that budgets for statistical programs would decrease by another 5.1 percent under the proposed fiscal 1983 budget.

OMB INSISTS THE budgets for statistical programs either will hold steady or increase in fiscal 1983 and claims the flow of crucial economic data will not be impaired.

Daniel B. Levine, a former deputy director of the Census Bureau who left in January to join private industry, agreed that, despite the cuts, the government's most important data is as good or better than information collected in the past.

But, Levine said, the real impact of the cuts could be felt "later down the road."

Small business leaders worried over tax issue

Hearst Feature Service

WASHINGTON — Many grass roots leaders of national small business organizations take for granted that President Reagan will change his adamant stand and cut back the third year of his $750 billion tax cut.

"If Reagan released everyone today to do what they think best, there would be almost unanimous agreement to lop off the third year of the tax cut," said Ed Pendergast, a financial management consultant from Boston.

"The question now really is whether to cut back on the 1982 cut as well," he said.

Peter T. Webster, of Black and Webster in Waltham, Mass., said the current anguishing over soaring budget deficits has more to do with the psychology of Wall Street's expectations of a balanced budget from Reagan than with the deficits' economic impact.

But until that psychological climate improves by cuts in the Reagan deficits, which Webster agreed inevitably meant scrapping Reagan's third year of the tax cut, he predicted the economy will remain shaky. And Webster doubted that interest rates would drop even if $80 billion is cut from the deficit as long as the Federal Reserve keeps the money supply tight.

In a departure from the stand taken by their Democratic party leaders, such as House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill, Pendergast and Webster also want curbs on the automatic cost-of-living raises in Social Security and other federal programs to keep pace with inflation.

"Somebody has to face up to that even though it's politically unpalatable," said Pendergast.

"It's got to be done by somebody with only a year or two left in their term who doesn't plan to seek reelection," Webster said.

Austrian police looking into attack theatrics

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — It was two nights before opening, and Isabel Weicken was going home from a successful preview performance in the title role of "Evita," the musical based on the life of the tempestuous Argentine leader. She never made the premiere.

As she approached her apartment building late March 12, two men smashed her nose and eyes. The beating left her face covered with bruises, almost ended her career and caused an uproar that is still shaking Vienna's staid cultural circles.

Several days later police arrested the suspected organizer of the assault, who said he was paid 25,000 schillings — about $1,500 — to arrange the attack.

The man told police that he was paid by Werner Ploner, the former boyfriend, agent and housemate of Vera Gutman, who alternated in the role of Eva Peron with Miss Weicken.

"The whole thing is hard to believe, it's so crazy," said the 42-year-old Ploner, one of Austria's leading theatrical agents.

"Evita" chronicles the rise and deification of Mrs. Peron, who came from obscure poverty to become the popular and influential wife of military dictator Juan Peron, ruler of Argentina from 1946 to 1955. She died of cancer in 1952.

Ploner was held by police for two days and released without being charged, although newspapers reported investigators were divided over the case.

Austrian newspapers gave the story extensive space, especially when Ploner was taken into custody and then released. They reported that Ploner had allegedly arranged the attack in a complicated scheme to boost Miss Gutman's career and win back her favor.

The tabloid Kronenzeitung, the country's largest selling newspaper, headlined, "Ex-boyfriend Wants To Win Back Lost Love."

"The Austrian press has ruined me," said Ploner.

Under Austrian law, an accused man has to prove his innocence. Expecting charges to be filed at a hearing scheduled for later this month, Ploner says he has hired a private investigator to clear him.

"If he doesn't, I could end up in jail," Ploner said.

"After I've proved my innocence, I am leaving this country forever," he said in an interview. "I don't want to live in a land where you are judged guilty without having done anything."

Miss Weicken and Miss Gutman shared the "Evita" title role last year, and, because of the show's popularity, were slated to do so again this season. But opening night and top billing had been given to Miss Weicken.

On opening night — March 14 — at Vienna's "Theater an der Wien," the 28-year-old Miss Gutman played Evita.

Most critics were impressed with her performance. One described it as "cold and calculated," but another said "She made it," implying it was the assault that had given her the title role.

Audience response wasn't as favorable. Her performances were greeted by only polite applause, and ticket sales dropped at the 1,000-seat theater where the best seats sell for 280 schillings — about $17.

Miss Gutman gave 10 performances before withdrawing last month from the musical. "My career is ruined," she told reporters before leaving. Friends say the young actress is bitter and depressed, and has vowed to start over in the United States.

No unions allowed for some professors

WASHINGTON (AP) — College professors may not form unions if they play a role in the management of educational institutions, the National Labor Relations Board has ruled in a series of decisions.

In unanimously denying requests for union representation elections at Ithaca College in Ithaca, N.Y., Thiel College in Greenville, Pa., and Duquesne University law school in Pittsburgh, the five-member board relied heavily on a February 1980 Supreme Court ruling.

In all three cases, following the high court's decision in a case involving Yeshiva University in New York City, the labor panel held that faculty members were part of management and thus were ineligible for union representation under the National Labor Relations Act.

The board decisions — the first addressing organizing efforts in college since that Supreme Court decision — were released Wednesday. They come at a time when unions are moving increasingly to organize college professors.

The agency drew a fine distinction in denying union affiliation to college faculties, however.

In a fourth case involving Bradford College in Massachusetts, a three-member panel of the NLRB held that the school's trustees failed to show that faculty members played a key role in decision-making. It ordered a union representation election within 30 days for the faculty members, who are being wooed by an affiliate of the Teamsters union.

The panel said the Supreme Court had signaled in the Yeshiva case that collective bargaining coverage was permissible "for professional employees whose decision-making is limited to routine discharge of professional duties."

In a split 5-4 ruling more than two years ago, the high court held that all faculty members at Yeshiva were — in practice — supervisors or managerial employees. The decision was limited to private colleges and universities because federal labor law does not cover public employers such as state-run schools.

In the Ithaca College case, the NRLB said, "We find that the faculty here possesses and exercises authority similar to that possessed and exercised by the faculty in Yeshiva."

The decisions involving Thiel College and Duquesne were similar.

J. Brian Martin

Martin named lawyer of year

J. Brian Martin, an associate attorney with the Midland law firm of Freeman & Hyde, has been named 1982 Outstanding Young Lawyer for Midland County.

Martin earned a bachelor of arts degree in political science from St. John's University and a doctor of jurispredence from St. Mary's University in San Antonio. He was admitted to practice before the Texas Bar in 1972. He also is licensed to practice in U.S. District Courts for the Western and Southern Districts, the U.S. Court of Appeals, U.S. Court of Military Appeals and U.S. Supreme Court.

Martin also is a member of the American Bar Association, Midland County Bar Association and Midland County Young Lawyers Association. He is president of the Midland County Young Lawyers Association.

Farm bill more than Reagan wants

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress is moving toward approval of farm lending legislation generally calling for higher credit ceilings and easier terms than President Reagan wants.

"We're spending money we don't have," says Sen. Bob Dole, R-Kan., who unsuccessfully opposed increases the Senate Agriculture Committee made Wednesday in the administration's legislation for the Farmers Home Administration, the Agriculture Department's credit arm.

That bill, which will added hundreds of millions of dollars to farm credit costs between 1983 and 1986, is similar to one passed earlier in the week by the House Agriculture Committee.

It calls for $1.6 billion in FmHA farm operating credit or $90 milliion more than Reagan wanted, retention of some lending programs and subsidized interest rates he wanted eliminated and an opened authorization for credit assistance in the wake of disasters.

"The worst thing we can do for the American farmer is increase the deficit," Dole said. "If we're going to add to the deficit, we'll keep interest rates up and interest rates are what's hurting the farmer."

The major difference between the House and Senate committee versions, both of which must still go to the full House and Senate, is what many farm-state lawmakers are calling a moratorium on repayment of FmHA loans while farmers are still caught in the bind of high interest rates, low market prices and rising production costs.

The House committee, over staunch administration objections, has endorsed a provision giving financially-strapped farmers the right to demand deferral of their loan repayments until October 1983.

While the Senate panel was able to sidestep the issue Wednesday when Sen. David Boren, D-Okla., withdrew a proposal similar to the one adopted by the House committee, Boren said he will put the question before the full Senate later.

"We've had two years back-to-back where cost of production has exceeded price," Boren said, citing intensifying financial problems for farmers and the increasing number of farm liquidations amid high interest rates and depressed prices.

The House plan requires repayment deferral if a borrower can show he is a good manager, can't make payments because of circumstances beyond his control and ultimately has the capability to repay once times improve.

Print-cable ventures in video advocated

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Representatives from cable television and newspapers disagree over the future of print publishing, but nonetheless maintain the two industries should cooperate on electronic publishing.

Mel Tinney, manager of cable publishing ventures for the American Television and Communications Corp., said cable operators should pursue joint ventures with newspapers that would prove beneficial to both industries.

Tinney and three other cable and newspaper executives discussed electronic publishing Wednesday, the final day of the annual convention of the National Cable Television Association.

Discussing the future of print publishing, Tinney said that if a newspaper like the New York Daily News could be in trouble with a circulation of 1.5 million "something is wrong."

"I don't think anyone should expect that newspapers are just going to fade away," responded Robert Hartman, a vice president of the E.W. Scripps Co., who noted that twice as many newspapers opened in the past two years as failed.

Newspapers are interested in exploring electronic publishing as another distribution alternative, and there are many reasons why cable operators would also benefit from joint ventures, the speakers said.

"By working with newspapers, we can strengthen our own First Amendment case (for press freedom)," said Graham Moore, director of corporate marketing services for Tele-Communications Inc., the nation's largest cable company.

Newspapers have been the driving catalyst in launching most of the roughly 100 joint ventures in cable publishing now underway, added Frank Washington, vice president of the videotext services division of the Times Mirror Co., publishers of the Los Angeles Times.

But cable operators should not underestimate the value of working as a partner "with the most powerful editorial voice in the community," Washington added.

"Generally, few cable companies establish a separate identity in their community," agreed Hartman. "An affiliation with newspapers can change that."

Cable operators also cannot match the local news gathering ability or advertising sales capability of newspapers, Hartman said.

As a result of these factors, the relationship between newspapers and cable operators right now "is like newlyweds," said Washington. "Neither has had enough experience with the process to know exactly how it should go but both are driven by a strong sense of expectancy."

In launching joint ventures, however, Tinney said the two industries should be focusing on one-way cable publishing and not just so-called videotext information systems that allow the users to call up specific stories on a TV screen.

"This is one of the big problems I see with videotexts," Tinney said. "You have to know what you're going after before you start."

What will be needed if ink-on-paper publishing declines, he continued, will be "an alternative-edited delivery system that allows people to serendipitously come across information they did not know previously existed."

Trees' 'early warning system' discovered in infestation study

SEATTLE (AP) — Certain trees may give off a chemical that acts as an early warning system to fellow members of their species in case of an insect attack, a scientist believes.

David Rhoades, a University of Washington zoology research associate, said in an interview Tuesday that he reached that conclusion after three years of studies on willows and alders.

The results of the studies were presented recently to the annual meeting of the American Chemical Society as part of a symposium on plants' natural protective mechanisms.

Rhoades said his theory could explain periodic surges and crashes in populations of insects that prey on trees.

He said discovery of the chemicals and their workings could bring benefits to forest management and pest control.

"...if plants do generally communicate, or are sensitive to neighboring plants being attacked, and if you could see an attack on Douglas fir by tussock moths, you could turn the plants 'on' prematurely" to deter the moths, Rhoades said.

Rhoades developed his theory after he and researchers from Finland and Switzerland set out to find the answer to the boom-and-bust populations of insects such as tent caterpillars. The search led to the insects' food supply — trees.

Rhoades and Lynn Erckmann, a research technician at the University of Washington, took leaves from willows and alders that were infested with tent caterpillars and fed them to tent caterpillars in a lab.

The scientists found that when trees were exposed to tent caterpillars their leaves produced chemicals that make greenery harder to digest.

The growth rate of the lab caterpillars slowed, but caterpillars fed leaves from trees not yet hit with the pests didn't show slower growth.

The researchers made an additional discovery: Lab insects had a slower growth rate if they were fed leaves from willows that were not infested but lived near infested willows.

Leaves taken off trees about a mile away from infested trees didn't have the same slowing effect as did leaves from trees closer to the infested ones, the researchers said.

"If both infested and nearby uninfested trees are changing, that means the infested trees, or the insects themselves, are sending a message to the uninfested trees, which is triggering some defense mechanism," Rhoades concluded.

Rhoades said he thinks an airborne substance, probably emitted by the trees, carries a warning chemical and "the signal can be transmitted over as much as 60 meters, with other trees in the path."

Rhoades said that when a student plucked leaves from a willow, a chemical change occurred in surrounding trees, which amounted to a signal that one of their colleagues was under attack.

He said the next step is to try to trap and identify tree substances that are "communications substances."

He said such chemicals — which would have a role similar to pheromones in animals — could be effective at low concentrations and turn out to be "quite a cheap way to control insects." Pheromones are chemicals that are secreted by animals and convey information to other members of the species.

Mississippi roads find going rough

JACKSON, Miss. (AP) — Truckers curse them, homefolks joke about them and the Highway Department worries about them — the rough spots on Mississippi's aging interstate highways.

Mississippi receives about $3 million a year from the Federal Highway Administration to maintain and repair the multi-lane interstates that cross the state from east to west and north to south.

"Even with a little state money to supplement the federal funds, it's definitely not enough to get the job done," said John Tabb, director of the state Highway Department.

Tabb said there were trouble spots on all the interstates, including I-20 in the Forest area, around Jackson and near Vicksburg, I-55 in the Batesville area and I-59 near Laurel.

In some areas, Tabb said, it was the ever-shifting Yazoo clay beneath the roadbed that causes the interstates to buckle and crack. Elsewhere, it is simply the years of wear and tear.

"A large part of our interstate system is approaching 20 years of age and that's the average life of a road," he said.

The official said that, with the limited funding available, only the simplest of repairs could be made, such as spreading new asphalt to level up damaged sections.

Tabb said inflation had pushed construction costs to the point where repaving a damaged section of four-lane would cost about $200,000 a mile. He estimated it would take $15 million to $20 million in repair and reconstruction funds annually to do the job right.

He said the Highway Department already faced money problems in maintaining state roads and trying to carry out a small maintenance program and "we simply cannot afford" to add more money to interstate repairs.

"But this is not a problem that is unique to Mississippi," he said. "The American Association of State Highway and Transportation officials is very much concerned about that situation."

He said association members in Mississippi and other states had requested that Congress provide additional funding in the trust fund for highway construction to help alleviate the problem.

Polaroid unveils 35mm camera system

WELLESLEY, Mass. (AP) — Polaroid Corp., stung by a steep drop in earnings from its instant camera empire, is moving into the 35 millimeter camera market, stockholders were told at their annual meeting at Wellesley College.

The Cambridge-based firm demonstrated several prototype color and black-and-white 35mm "transparency films," commonly referred to as slides, during the Tuesday meeting.

The "35 Autopress System" film is being designed to be used in any existing 35mm camera or instrument, company officials said.

The product will include "a specially designed lightweight low cost processor, and a simple, low cost slide mounter," said William J. McCune Jr., president and chief executive officer.

The film and accessories will be ready for marketing by the 1983 stockholders meeting, McCune said.

The film is not instant-developing, but "will not require a darkroom, washing or precise temperature control," McCune said.

"The processed film will be dry and can be handled and projected immediately," he said.

The mood of the meeting, where the festive unveiling of new products is almost a tradition, was less upbeat this year because of gloomy earnings figures stretching back through 1981.

Polaroid founder Edwin H. Land, now chairman of the board, gave an emotional speech to the hundreds of stockholders and analysts, asking stockholders to support "creative" ventures in the face of depressed profits.

Landing contest Saturday

Confederate Air Force colonels, who revel in flying older and better airplanes of war note, will be trying to land them on the spot Saturday in Fort Stockton.

The spot-landing contest will be the CAF's second annual go-round at attempting to touch down on a marked spot. The first spot-landing feat by the West Texas colonels was last year in Big Spring.

Warbirds of the World War II era and antique and modern "puddle jumpers" will be in the contest, which is being sponsored by the Desert and the Rattlesnake squadrons of the CAF's West Texas Wing, according to Paul Erdmann, executive officer of the Midland-Odessa Desert Squadron.

The guest star in the 1 p.m. contest at the Pecos County Airport will be Gene Beggs, national aerobatic champion of the unlimited class.

"He's going to be there to put on a show in his (biwing) Pitts Special," Erdmann said of Beggs, who runs a flight school at Midland Regional Airport.

Entry fee in the contest is $2.30 per engine, said Erdmann.

Among the judges of the spot-landing contest will be Col. Wilson Banks, director of aviation for the city of Midland.

The contest's safety officer will be the sheriff, and Col. George Steding of Odessa will be the operations officer.

"All FAA (Federal Aviation Administration) regulations for safe flying will be maintained" throughout the event, Erdmann said.

ABC to introduce three new comedies

NEW YORK (AP) — ABC, runnerup to CBS in the recently completed prime-time TV season, says it will introduce seven new series in the fall, three of them half-hour comedies.

The fall shows announced Wednesday by ABC include an updated version of an old series, starring two familiar TV faces. "The New Odd Couple" will feature Ron Glass from "Barney Miller" as Felix Unger, and Demond Wilson, star of "Sanford and Son," as Oscar Madison.

"Barney Miller," a staple in the ABC lineup since 1975, along with "Taxi" and "Mork and Mindy," are among the casualties of ABC's redesigned fall schedule, the network said.

Producers of "Barney Miller" had announced several months ago that the 1981-82 season would be the series' last. Both "Taxi" and "Mork and Mindy" had declining ratings.

Other series that will not return in the fall, ABC said, are "Today's FBI," "Code Red" and "Strike Force."

Despite the introduction of seven new series, ABC said it sought to maintain a certain level of stability. Programming on three nights — Monday, Tuesday and Saturday — will be left intact, the network said.

In addition, the lineup for a fourth evening, Wednesday, will include only one new show, an adventure series called "Brass Monkey."

ABC's schedule will include 10 comedies — NBC's lineup announced last week listed eight — the three new shows, plus seven continuing series, "Happy Days," "Laverne & Shirley," "Three's Company," "9 to 5," "Joanie Loves Chachi," "Benson" and "Too Close for Comfort."

Only "Too Close for Comfort," of the seven, will take a new timeslot in the fall — Thursdays at 9. ABC's comedy-adventure, "The Greatest American Hero," also will get a new day and time, Fridays at 9.

ABC's overhauled Sunday night schedule will begin with "Ripley's Believe It Or Not!" at 7, a series based on the long-running newspaper strip featuring unusual but true stories, followed an hour later by "Matt Houston," starring Lee Horsley as a millionaire part-time detective.

"Brass Monkey," Wednesday nights, 8-9, is a comedy-adventure set in the South Pacific. The new show will join two holdovers, "The Fall Guy" and "Dynasty."

Two of ABC's new comedies will be introduced Thursday nights: "Star of the Family," with Kathy Maisnik as an ambitious young pop singer, 8:30-9, and "For Better or Worse," 9:30-10. Two well-known TV personalities, Richard Crenna and Patty Duke Astin, play husband and wife in "For Better or Worse."

"The New Odd Couple" will be broadcast Fridays, 8:30-9, with "The Quest," a new adventure with Perry King, Noah Beery Jr., Ray Vitte and Karen Austin as heirs apparent to the throne of a Mediterranean kingdom, on the same evening, 10-11.

Two best-selling novels adapted for TV will be broadcast in the coming season, ABC said: "The Winds of War" and "The Thorn Birds," as well as several made-for-TV movies, notably "An American Princess," about the life of Grace Kelley, and "Jack London," with Peter Strauss as the famous writer.

Your horoscope

By JEANE DIXON

Saturday, May 8, 1982

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Actress Candice Bergen, who recently starred in the hit movie "Rich & Famous," celebrates this birthday with you, and so does Melissa Gilbert (Laura on "Little House on the Prairie"). Hard work, patience and creativity are among your many assets. Although your strong personality will occasionally put off a business associate, it attracts a very special romantic partner. Your financial fortunes show decided improvement. Be careful about lending money to friends and relatives. You will want to have extra money on hand if an unusual real estate opportunity comes along. Your generosity makes you a target for those who lack your industry but desire your lifestyle.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Do not allow someone to bait you into losing your temper. Be a little more outgoing with member of opposite sex and you will find a new supporter.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Do not make any unusual plans today. Instead, run errands and visit a relative confined to hospital or home. Make your decisions based on what has worked for you in the past.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): An excellent day for purchasing a household appliance. A romantic goal moves closer to becoming reality. Do not indulge in gossip.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Romance smiles on you now. Avoid becoming the subject of gossip. A budget revision helps relieve domestic tension. A small child does you proud.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): A financial matter may cause friction between you and mate. Midday is the best time to ask for favors. Entertaining at home lets you mix and match your friends.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Lend a helping hand to a friend who has a family emergency. Offer to baby-sit or do some of the cooking. Strike a bargain with mate and keep tabs on spending.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): A Saturday job is the best solution to a temporary money shortage, but mate may object. Romance is brighter than in the recent past. Cut expenses.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Influential people show greater interest in your ideas. Act confident. Agreements are easier to reach and your relatives share some good news.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Family members are cooking up a surprise for you. If you find out in advance, do not let on! Neighbors offer to help, but there could be too many strings attached.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Working at home proves more satisfying than you imagined. Greater rapport results from a candid conversation with mate.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Romance takes a happy turn this weekend. Share your good news with loved ones. A damaged parent-child relationship can now be repaired.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): An excellent day for romance if you keep your priorities straight. Take care of household chores first. A child more than lives up to a promise.

Opening lead: Ten of ♠.

Have you ever noticed how often it seems that good players are lucky? Perhaps you have not considered the possibility that they often make their own luck. Study this board from a recent team game.

Both sides reached six no trump in quick time. After South's textbook two no trump opening, North simply added his 12 points to his partner's maximum possible of 24, saw that there was not enough for a grand slam and settled in the small slam.

Both Wests led the ten of clubs. There were eleven fast tricks and two possible sources of a twelfth — a 3-3 diamond break or an extra trick in spades. One declarer won the club on the table and immediately went after the diamonds. When that suit followed the percentages and split 4-2, declarer fell back on the spade finesse. West won and cashed his diamond for down one. "A good slam," said South. "Just unlucky."

The other declarer managed the hand a little differently. He too won the first trick in dummy, but before tackling the diamonds, he ran clubs, discarding a spade from the table. Next came three rounds of diamonds, to find that West had four cards in the suit. But declarer was in no hurry to try the spade finesse. First he cashed the king and queen of hearts, and then crossed to the ace.

When West discarded a spade on the third heart, the contract became a certainty. West's remaining cards were known to be two spades and a diamond, and declarer didn't care which spades West held. Declarer simply led dummy's diamond, discarding a spade from his hand. West won, but was forced to lead a spade into declarer's ace-queen tenace, and the contract was home.

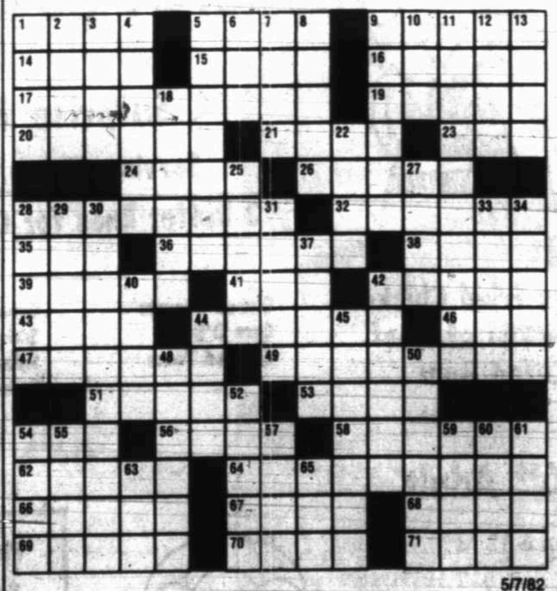

Would you say that declarer was lucky?

Rubber bridge clubs throughout the country use the four-deal bridge format. Do they know something you don't? Producer believes radio more dramatic than television

By TOM JORY

NEW YORK (AP) — Hi Brown flips a switch and interrupts the actors taping "The Great Catherine" for CBS Radio's "Mystery Theater." The three performers gathered beneath the microphone pause mid-sentence, and look toward the control room a few feet away.

"More feeling!" Brown barks into the studio mike. "You're shocked by what you've just seen!"

Tammy Grimes, the Broadway star and frequent "Mystery Theater" headliner, repeats the dialogue, with all of the emotion and gesture of an actress performing to a packed theater:

"We saw the babies today, running about, naked in the snow and ice in their cotton shifts. Nineteen out of 20 dying. Are there no doctors here?"

Brown leans back in his chair and smiles, satisfied. "Aren't they beautiful?" he asks, rhetorically, of the cast he has assembled for a new production based on the life of Catherine the Great, the legendary empress of Russia.

"THE ACTORS don't read," he says. "They act. They're holding scripts, but when the script calls for them to touch, they touch. They're working without an audience, but they really are acting."

What goes on in the small studio just off Madison Avenue is reminiscent of the Golden Age of Radio, that period in the 1930s and '40s when drama dominated the medium. Indeed, "Mystery Theater" is a vestige of that era.

"I've done 1,700 original broadcasts to date in the eight years of 'Mystery Theater,' and I think we've touched all of the classics — deMaupassant, Poe, Henry James, Conan Doyle, H.G. Wells," Brown says, adding what might be considered a philosophy for the show:

"They're eternal."

"Mystery Theater" began its ninth season on the CBS Radio Network in January with a remarkable five-part production of "Les Miserables." It was, like all of Hi Brown's productions, an entirely new adaptation of Victor Hugo's classic novel, with Alexander Scourby in the lead.

Himan Brown has been producing drama for radio since 1929, when he packaged "The Rise of the Goldbergs," with Gertrude Berg, for sale to NBC.

Most of his career, but for a brief foray into television starting in the late 1940s, has been spent in radio.

HE PRODUCED "NBC Radio Theater," one of the last regularly scheduled dramatic series, until the end of 1959. And, he maintains, "I have never stopped believing that the spoken word and the imagination of the listener are infinitely stronger and more dramatic than anything television can offer.

"My 'Inner Sanctum,'" he says, recalling the landmark show from the Golden Age. "That creaking door was a classic."

He created programs like "Grand Central Station" and Rex Stout's "Nero Wolfe," starring Santos Ortega. "It was a great series," he says of the latter.

Brown says he produces programs for radio fully aware that the listener must be encouraged to participate.

"With radio drama," he says, "you're listening, you're creating your own show, your own world and characters.

"My leading man will look different to you than to the guy two blocks away. You've got to project those kinds of things for yourself, or I've got nothing.

"BUT IF you do participate, I can take you anywhere," he says. "In 'Les Miserables,' we went into the sewers of Paris like no one had done before. In 'Alexander the Great,' we conquered the world. Nothing can stop us."

The "mystery" in "Mystery Theater" may be rather loosely applied these days, but Brown says the quality is present in everything he does.

ENTERTAINMENT

"We can take characters out of history — we just did Madame Curie — and there is always suspense in a story like that. You've got to do the cops and robbers, the ghost stories, too.

"But there are other kinds of mystery stories, too. We recently did one by Pushkin called 'The Brooch' about a guy who steals his wife's necklace. There's a mystery there, but there's something else, too. Who ever does Pushkin?"

Hi Brown is proud of "Mystery Theater," and justifiably so. The program is broadcast each evening by nearly 250 stations, and reaches an audience estimated at more than a million.

"I THINK the writing is better today," he says, "certainly the production is better, and, I feel, more mature."

Brown says there is no place like New York for producing a program like "Mystery Theater." "That's where the actors are," he says, and he's never reluctant to approach a star like Miss Grimes, or Scourby, for his program. Miss Grimes, in fact, recently succeeded E.G. Marshall as the host of "Mystery Theater."

> "The actors don't read. They act. They're holding scripts, but when the script calls for them to touch, they touch. They're working without an audience, but they really are acting."

Film focuses on Hitler's inner circle

NEW YORK (AP) — ABC's "Inside the Third Reich," based on the memoirs of Nazi war criminal Albert Speer, goes deeper than the documentaries on Germany and World War II to provide a personal perspeetive on the power of power and the people who used it to maim the world.

Speer's best-selling autobiography, written during his 20 years in prison and published in 1970, comes to television Sunday and Monday nights in a production that resembles a classy chassis slowed by clackety wheels. This five-hour movie will keep viewers in their seats, not on the edge of them.

Filmed in West Germany, "Inside the Third Reich" examines the men behind the monster — Hitler's inner circle. They are portrayed as a band of crude, humorless maniacs, except for the sophisticated Speer, the only important Nazi to plead guilty at the Nuremberg war crime trials.

Speer was born into Germany's social registry. His father, played with aplomb by Sir John Gielgud, is an architect. The young Speer, well educated and highly cultured, becomes an architect, but with grander designs.

With his superior breeding, Speer's sins may be viewed as even greater than the rest of Hitler's henchmen. Speer should have known better.

Dutch actor Rutger Hauer ("Soldier of Orange," "Night Hawks") gives a clinical performance, which is in keeping with Speer's practice of conscience-control. Speer's guilt develops only after the war.

"You must learn to turn your eyes away," he tells his wife (Blythe Danner) after witnessing brutality against Jews.

In 1931, at the age of 25, Speer doesn't seem to have any politics, nor does he take much of an ideological stance, even after hearing Hitler speak for the first time. But he's mesmerized, and, perceiving Hitler as his ticket to the top, Speer immediately joins the Nazi party.

A Gypsy (Viveca Lindfors) tells him: "Your career will match your ambition...you will rise rapidly...you will win early fame... and you will retire early."

Ambition seems to motivate Speer more than anything else, and it allows him to take a see-no-evil stance, even though he's constantly warned of the Nazi dangers by his father, university professor and wife, Margarete.

Although Margarete isn't a major character in Speer's book, writer-producer E. Jack Neuman utilizes her as the movie's social conscience. Neuman conducted over 50 hours of interviews with Speer before his death as a free man in 1981.

"Inside the Third Reich" traces Speer's rise: From his first architectural assignment for the Nazis, to Hitler's chief monument builder and confidante, to the top man in Hitler's cabinet as minister of armaments and war production.

"I need someone who will be able to continue after my death with the authority I conferred on him," Hitler told Speer. "I see you as that man."

Speer's architectural plan was to leave a German structural legacy, like the Greeks and Romans. He volunteered the use of his workers for the war effort, but an enraged Hitler turned him down. "You're at peace. I'm at war."

Hitler is played passionately by British actor Derek Jacobi. Known to TV audiences as Julius Caesar from "I, Claudius," Jacobi was reluctant to take the role because of the physical dissimilarities. But superb makeup and Jacobi's fervent acting produce a chilling, crazed presence, full of fire and brimstone.

In one scene, Hitler gives a scathing imitation of European leaders Chamberlain and Mussolini. On the stump or in the backrooms, Hitler was the consummate actor. Anyone who could seduce a nation and an intelligent man like Albert Speer had to be.

Report links TV violence, aggressive behavior

By CHRISTOPHER CONNELL

WASHINGTON (AP) — Major television networks are challenging the conclusions of a government report that says televised violence is clearly linked to aggressive behavior in children.

But Peggy Charren, the president of Action for Children's Television, said the National Institute of Mental Health report is on target and should make broadcasters "feel ashamed of their neglect of children."

The report, based on an extensive review of scientific studies, concluded, "The evidence accumulated in the 1970s seems overwhelming that televised violence and aggression are positively related in children."

The two-year review was set in motion by the Carter administration's surgeon general, Dr. Julius B. Richmond. It was a follow-up to a well-known 1972 surgeon general's report that said violence on television can "immediately or shortly thereafter induce mimicking or copying by children."

The report, "Television and Behavior: Ten Years of Scientific Progress and Implications for the Eighties," said an unpublished study by NBC researchers drew a different conclusion than most of the research. The NBC study found no lasting effect from viewing violence on television.

NBC criticized the institute's report, saying its researchers "find a number of inaccurate statements" in it and believe many of its conclusions "will be challenged by social scientists conducting independent review."

The network said its study, which will be made public in September, "certainly does not support their overall conclusions about the effects of viewing violence."

George Schweitzer, vice president for communications of the CBS Broadcast Group, called the institute report "an almost wholly uncritical selection and acceptance of certain studies" about violence and aggression. He said many of the 24 outside consultants it used to review the scientific literature came to the task with "public positions on the role of television and society."

Schweitzer noted that the report also said television teaches some viewers to feel like "victims," and called it "a very uneasy attempt to put together conflicting approaches and arrive at one grand conclusion."

ABC had no immediate comment.

Ms. Charren, the head of ACT, said the report should "help parents understand that that box in the living room is not necessarily a friend of the family."

She complained that CBS recently cut back "Captain Kangaroo" from 60 minutes to a half-hour and cancelled its Emmy Award-winning "Thirty Minutes" news show.

Joel Heller, director of children's programs for CBS News and producer of "Thirty Minutes," said in an interview that the networks are under pressure on making every broadcasting minute "as profitable as possible. ...'Thirty Minutes' was an expensive program."

Heller also noted that, "Japan has some of the most violent television in the world, and they have a very low level of violence in their society."

Heller said the networks "have cleaned up their act" and have cut down the violence on their Saturday morning children shows, although stations continue to show old, popular "bop-sock-'em" cartoons.

"I hate to say it, but I think kids have the same bad taste as a mass audience as adults. They love it. There's no way to keep kids away from violence," said Heller.

'Fiddler on the Roof' universal theme

By JACKIE HYMAN

LOS ANGELES (AP) — "Fiddler on the Roof" is a 1960s musical about Jews in turn-of-the-century Russia that, in its 1980s reincarnation, has tremendous appeal to the Japanese.

"I was in Japan and I saw the play in Japanese," said the show's recurrent star, Herschel Bernardi. "The audience started laughing on cue and crying...After the show, the Japanese producer said, 'I don't see why the show should be so popular in America. It's so Japanese.'"

The reason, Bernardi said, is "the content of this play is about the breakdown of tradition and the family. He (the Japanese producer) said, 'What's happening in this play is happening today in Japan.'"

The show also has attracted new audiences from New York to the Pantages Theater in Los Angeles, where Bernardi bows out June 20 to undergo rest and therapy for a back problem. Afterward, he said, he may develop a one-man show under the auspices of the Smithsonian Institution.

He said he was persuaded to do the revival because the original director, Jerome Robbins, was going to stage it. Bernardi, who took over the role on Broadway from Zero Mostel, had never worked with Robbins.

"This is not a re-creation, it's a restitution," he said. "We have new insights, we're older."

One significant difference that's developed in the past 15 years is that the show is now advertised on television and radio as well as newspapers.

"We have opened up a new audience to live theater," said Bernardi, wearing a burnoose as he relaxed in the poolhouse of his Hollywood apartment building. "You have people that are unsure whether to applaud or not, but they know to laugh."

Some rather naive comments have been overheard at intermission, he said, including one man who told his wife, "Honey, they stole the song they played at our wedding."

"It's as if they're entering into a new world and you can feel it in the beginning," he said. "The most transcendental feeling is at the end — they're standing up and cheering."

Although the play, based on the Tevye stories of Sholom Aleichem, is about Jews, it draws a varied audience, Bernardi said.

"Jews are not part of the audience for 'Fiddler,'" he said. "Do you know how sick and tired the Jews are of 'Fiddler on the Roof'?

"The breakdown of the family is universal. That's why this play is popular everywhere."

But Bernardi said he doubts the play's warm reception will have much impact on what he sees as a rise in anti-Semitism accompanying a widespread conservative trend.

"If an anti-Semite comes to see the show, let's say he's so affected by the show he forgets for three hours these are people he's not too fond of," the 58-year-old actor said. "But two hours later he'll go back to his old ways. Theater or any cultural medium cannot really change early conditioning. It's not life experience."

Bernardi said he is able to keep his role fresh after more than 1,200 repetitions because of a shocking image he had one night while looking at the show's fiddler, who balances on a roof wearing a clown-like costume with red polka dots.

"I know what the fiddler means to me — he's a symbol of my people," Bernardi said. "At one point I realized that those red dots could also be bulletholes. Once there's that revelation, it could never become stale for me. I don't need any more technique."

Soviets say trade lack fault of U.S. politics

MOSCOW (AP) — Pepsi-Cola stands are reopening in Moscow after the long Russian winter, a sure sign of spring and the Soviet thirst for Western products.

The Pepsi stands are the most visible reminder of detente-era hopes for U.S.-Soviet trade, hopes that the Soviets claim have been dashed by American insistance on linking politics and trade.

"In overall terms, I would say that the picture is bleak and getting bleaker," said a U.S. diplomat in Moscow. American businessmen and government officials interviewed here agreed that, while continuing to buy corn and wheat from the United States, the Soviet Union is looking to other trading partners for most everything else — especially technology.

"Western Europe and Japan are more natural trading partners for the Soviet Union," the diplomat said, noting that West European nations are negotiating a 20-year deal to buy Siberian natural gas in return for credit and technical know-how.

U.S. GRAIN SALES to the Soviet Union have accounted for more than half of bilateral trade over the past five years, even when taking into account the grain embargo imposed in 1980 by former President Carter after the Soviet army moved into Afghanistan.

But even before Afghanistan became an issue, superpower rivalry soured bilateral prospects early in the detente era when the U.S. Congress voted to link commerce to Soviet emigration policies.

U.S. sanctions over Afghanistan and more recently over the martial law crackdown in Poland further cut trade, and angered Soviet leaders, who charge that a signed contract with a U.S. company can be sacrificed to politics on short notice.

"As for U.S.S.R.-U.S.A. trade and economic relations, the decline in mutual trade volumes can only be attributed to the American side," Foreign Trade Minister Nikolai Patolichev wrote in the March issue of his ministry's magazine, Foreign Trade.

"The present policy of the American administration has caused some uncertainty among American firms and Soviet foreign trade organizations about the possibility of conducting normal business relations under such conditions," Patolichev said.

U.S. statistics show that bilateral trade hit a peak of $4.8 billion in 1979, with a $2.73 billion surplus for the United States. Trade sank back dramatically to $1.9 billion in 1980, but bounced back to $2.68 billion in 1981, after President Reagan lifted the grain embargo as he had promised during the election campaign.

Other indicators of a cooling business climate are the lull at the once-bustling U.S. Embassy-affiliated American commercial office here, and a drop in the membership of the U.S.-Soviet Trade Council from about 280 American companies when it was founded at the height of detente to about 220 today. Both offices are trimming their staffs.

MORE THAN POLITICS is involved. The Kremlin is balking at deals with the West for a variety of reasons — primarily economic:

—The Soviet economy has been dragged into the recessionary slowdown that has cramped Western countries.

—Three consecutive bad grain harvests have drained Soviet foreign currency reserves by forcing Moscow to cough up hard-earned convertible currencies for livestock feed.

—The imposition of martial law in Poland after months of labor unrest has further taxed Moscow — taking already shrinking resources to help prop up the Polish martial law government with credits and outright aid.

"Last October and November, they were very eager to do business, but there have been very few new deals signed since the beginning of the year," said one U.S. businessman.

"They are asking for financing on downpayments, which they formerly paid cash for," he said.

West German, French and Japanese businessmen have reported recent Soviet requests for additional financing for on-going deals.

Despite the continuing chill in U.S.-Soviet trade, American businessmen with long experience in Moscow remain hopeful.

"The situation is not all that gloomy," said John Marschalko, regional vice president for American Express, the U.S. travel and financial firm that started doing business here in 1934 and opened its first Moscow office in 1958.

Marschalko gestures around the American Express office. Outside hang the firm's bright red, white and blue signs, the most overt advertising Soviet authorities have allowed any Western firm.

Marschalko said his firm handled about 3,546 foreign visitors to the Soviet Union last year, down from the peak year of 1978 when 100,000 Americans visited the country. Virtually no Soviets wander into the downtown offices, decorated with posters of the warm-weather vacations spots preferred by Moscow's foreign residents but beyond the reach of most Soviet citizens.

'Buy American' act would make doing so beneficial

Copley News Service

WASHINGTON — A California freshman Congressman Wednesday introduced a bill that would put a "buy American" requirement on one of President Reagan's major business tax breaks in an effort to slow the export of money and jobs overseas.

The bill, introduced by Rep. Duncan Hunter, R-Calif., would deny the accelerated tax write-off for businesses' investments in equipment, granted under the administration's sweeping tax cut package last year, if the money was spent outside the United States.

The measure also would repeal a tax provision that allows foreign-based subsidiaries of American corporations to shelter their earnings from U.S. taxes.

And the bill would give the same business investment credit the president's program provides for improving existing buildings to money spent to build new facilities.

Hunter said his bill "definitely is going to save American jobs" and will bring in additional revenues to the government to reduce the soaring federal budget deficit. And, he said, it would help reduce the United States' trade deficit by removing some of the incentives businesses now have to invest overseas.

The congressman had only one cosponsor, Rep. David Dreier, R-Calif., but said he has found a lot of interest from other members of Congress with whom he has discussed the bill.

"I think it's definitely going to fly," he said.

To prove his point, Hunter stopped Rep. Norman Dicks, D-Wash., on his way into the House chamber and described the portion of the bill that would prevent a U.S. airline from using the accelerated depreciation tax break if it bought a foreign-made jetliner instead of an American-built aircraft such as those built by Seattle-based Boeing Corp.

"Great ideas," Dicks said, promising to consider becoming a cosponsor.

Under the "Economic Recovery Tax Act of 1981," backed by the Reagan administration and pushed through Congress by a GOP-led coalition, businesses can depreciate, or write off, the cost of certain kinds of investments in as little as three or five years.

Hunter's bill would retain that rapid tax write-off if the investments were made in the United States but stretch the depreciation schedule out to four times as long if the equipment were purchased in a foreign country.

Hunter called his measure the "Buy American Depreciation Act."

Last year's business tax cut package also provided a special tax credit for money spent on renovating existing commercial buildings. Hunter's bill would extend that credit to new construction as a way of stimulating the depressed construction industry and providing more incentive for business to modernize.

Patient Rebels beat Permian 3-2 in 13 innings

By ROBERT BRUNDAGE
Sports Writer

It was a long time in coming.

Not only did the Midland Lee Rebels have to wait five days because of rain to play Odessa Permian in their District 5-5A encounter, they also had to wait an extra six innings to determine the winner. That's right, the game lasted 13 innings.

After holding the Panthers scoreless in the final seven innings of play, Lee was able to punch the winning run across home plate in the 13th for a 3-2 victory. And, it was only fitting that the Rebel who scored the winner was left fielder Lane Marks.

In the 13th, Marks reached first on a single and headed for second base to collect his fourth steal of the game. One out later, Barry Blackwell reached first on a single. Marks was unable to advance on the hit so both he and Blackwell broke on a pitch to Chris Parker and both slid in safely. Parker then drilled a sacrifice fly to Permian right fielder Eddy Bizzell that scored Marks and ended the game, four hours after it started.

THROUGHOUT THE game, Marks proved to be a menace to Permian starting pitcher Kevin Timmons (went the distance). Marks ended Timmons' no-hitter in the fourth inning, ended Timmons' shutout in the sixth, took a potential hit away from Timmons' team in the 10th and ended Timmons' hopes of a victory in the 13th.

"He was tremendous," said Lee coach Ernie Johnson about Marks after the game. "He had a great day. You don't get the opportunity in high school for a lot of playing like that. I was proud of him and he was certainly a key factor in our win."

After mowing down the first nine batters he faced, Timmons gave up his first of 10 hits in the game in the fourth inning when Marks beat out a bunt. He then went on to steal second where he was stranded as the Panthers' southpaw hurler knocked off the next three batters plus five more in the next two innings for eight straight.

When Marks came to the plate in the sixth with Lee trailing 2-0, he hit a dribbler to shortstop Bruce Hollander and was fast enough to beat the throw to first. Bart Ryan collected a single to right field that moved Marks to third. With runners on the corners, Johnson called for a double steal. Ryan was safe at second so Permian second baseman Coy Stribling threw to Mike King at the plate. The throw was in time but King missed the tag. Ryan went on to tie the game on a double by Blackwell.

It was Marks' slide at home that really stuck out in Coach Johnson's mind. "When he scored that first run, talk about a great slide," said Johnson. "The throw from second had him beat but he slid to the right and stretched his hand across the bag to get under the tag."

"It was a double steal play that coach called," said Marks. "The pitcher turned his back on me and I went. We've been working on that play since day one and that's what it came down to, playing fundamental baseball.

"It was by far my best game," continued Marks. "I went 3-for-3 in Pecos but that was pre-season and a long time ago. I thought we had a good team effort. Baseball is like football and basketball, it's a team game. Chris knocked me in (in the 13th) and without that fly ball..."

MARKS ENDED up with a 4-for-6 performance at the plate and collected five steals. Blackwell was the only other consistant hitter as he went 3-for-6 including a double and stretched both singles an extra base with steals.

It wasn't just Marks' and Blackwell's efforts at the plate and on the base paths that led the Rebels to their victory. Nor was it just Parker's sacrifice fly in the 13th. It was also strong pitching and solid defense.

John Denton started for the Rebels and went three innings, giving up three hits and one run before Coach Johnson decided to make a switch by sending in Kerry Robertson to start the fourth.

Robertson went 4⅓ innings, striking out seven batters and gave up only one hit and one run on an error which put Hollander on third base followed by a one-out sacrifice fly to right by Stace Gaddy in the sixth inning.

Johnson decided to go with Bryan Willis in the eighth after Robertson walked Marty Martinez and Hollander back-to-back with one away. With the help of a key defensive play at home, Willis went the rest of the way to claim the victory.

THE PLAY that bailed the Rebels out of the eighth started when Coy Stribling hit a grounder to Blackwell at shortstop. Blackwell fielded the ball and threw it to Darrell Holmes at second who in turn fired to first in an attempt to end the inning with a double play. However, Holmes' throw went over first baseman Scott Carrell's head and the runner was safe.

Martinez, who was on second when the play started, went to third on the hit and headed home on the high throw. Carrell got to the ball quickly and fired a perfect throw to Monty Chastain who made the tag at the plate.

Martinez was the second Permian base runner to round third and fail to make it home. The first came in the second inning when Eddy Bizzell was caught between third and home. Chastain ran Bizzell back to third and threw to Blackwell who made the tag.

Willis, using several throws to Carrell to keep base runners close, caught two Panthers leaning the wrong way on throws to first and the Rebels picked them off too.

"I thought we made some very fine defensive plays," said Johnson. "The plays by Lane (a diving catch in the 10th) and Bart (similar play in the 13th) kept runners off the bases. Darrell made a bad throw from second to first that went to the fence on a double play but Scott Carrell picked it up and threw a perfect strike at home. Our pitching was good. They all did pretty good. Kerry just got a little wild for awhile but I thought they all pitched well."

The win gives Lee a 4-2 record in the second half of 5-5A play and a 15-13 mark overall. Permian fell to 1-5 and 13-17.

Using three pitchers in the game leaves Coach Johnson with only one starter available for Saturday's game against Midland High, Craig Ray.

Ray will probably face MHS' Billy Miles as the two teams finish up the 1982 season at Memorial Stadium Field starting at 2 p.m.

Welenc, Diaz chase San Antonio hex

Mike Diaz
...hits Grand Slam

BY TED BATTLES
Sports Editor

Doug Welenc was trailing 1-0 going into the fifth and it looked like another one of those frustrating nights the Midland Cubs had experienced in losing five straight at San Antonio in the season's opening Texas League series.

That was the series in which Midland stranded so many runners "Standing On a Street Corner" was adopted as the team song.

As the fifth inning dawned Thursday, the Cubs had already stranded seven and you could hear them humming "Just Like Old Times" in the background. That's when Midland broke loose for seven runs, capped by Mike Diaz' grand slam homer, on the way to a 9-1 romp.

Welenc, with a ninth inning assist from Jim Gerlach, had his third win and Diaz described his third homer "and first slam since A ball a couple of years ago", as "a wedding present" to Doug.

WELENC flew back to Greenfield, Mass., today to marry his hometown sweetheart and will rejoin the club in time for his next turn on the hill.

Meanwhile, the Cubs and Dodgers square off in 6 p.m. doubleheaders today and Saturday.

The only run the Dodgers got off Welenc came in the third when Greg "Smooch" Smith opened with a double and Lemmie Miller followed with a run-scoring single up the middle. After that, Welenc was in command, although he encountered trouble in the seventh when three straight one-out singles loaded the bases. But the University of Massachusetts product bore down to whiff Miller and Mark Sheehy.

"He was getting his breaking ball high, and they were jumping on it," Diaz said of the base hit flurry in the eighth. "That's one of the things we are working on, his control in the late innings. He went back to his fast ball and got out of it."

After throwing 125 pitches, Welenc gave way in the ninth to Gerlach, and by the time the righthanded reliever got through hypnotizing the Dodgers by kicking himself in the back of the head with his left foot on each delivery, the Cubs had their first win of the season over the Dodgers.

JOE CARTER, whose specialty is leaving dents in fences, not only started the Cubs winning rally off Paul Voigt in the fifth with a surprise base hit bunt down the third base line, but took full credit for Diaz' homer. "I told him to keep his eye on the ball," Joe boasted. And Diaz nodded in agreement.

Carter's hit was followed by a walk to Carmelo Martinez and then a game-tying single by Fritz Connally. A single by Carlos Lezcano loaded the bases and then Martinez hit the jackpot with a low liner down the left field line.

"Voigt is a good pitcher. He mixes the ball up well and keeps you off balance. But I was looking for a fast ball and that's what I got," said Diaz.

MIKE IS in his second season with Midland and ordinarily that might give a player ants in his pants. "It was a case of numbers. Bill Hayes is at Iowa (AAA) and rather than have either of us sit on the bench, they sent me back here and I'm happy to be here."

Diaz admits he has to work on his defense, "that's why Larry (Cox) is here. It's great to have a big league catcher working with you and it also shows me they are interested in Chicago."

Mostly, Diaz feels he needs experience and the only way he can get that is by playing every day. "It's just as easy to go up from AA ball as it is from AAA. I feel if I can have a good year defensively, the rest will take care of itself, the hits will will come."

Jackson takes stride to state

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

AUSTIN — Midland High's Lydia Jackson, the District 5-5A and Region I 100 meter champion, will try to add one more elite title to her track career here Saturday at Memorial Stadium.

The only other crown to be obtained in 1982 is that of state champion, and she will get her chance at 1:55 p.m. Saturday when the state's best 100 meter runners gather for the 5A state run.

Jackson has had two weeks to train for the her final event of the season, working mostly on her starts out of the blocks and sprints of less than 200 yards.

Two weeks ago she won the Region I title with a fast finish, coming from behind to defeat Amarillo Palo Duro's Ollie Shead. She clocked a 12.07, but she has an 11.8 this year.

"I HAVEN'T had but one race all year when I didn't come from behind and that was at Seminole," Jackson said. "I always have to come from behind."

That could be a dangerous prospect when running against a field of the state's best, but it has worked for Jackson this year so far.

"Lydia's legs are shorter than most runners in the 100 meters," says MHS girls coach Brenda Mitchell. "She is always behind for the first two or three strides, but she is really a beautiful runner when she hits her own stride. I really don't know how well she can do in Austin because we don't know who the competition will be other than Shead of Palo Duro."

"It was a tough race to beat Shead," Jackson noted. "I had to come from behind to beat her. She's a good runner also."

LYDIA WON the District 5-5A championship last month in Midland with a 12.39. She ran away with that title, but still had to come from behind to defeat Cooper's Sandra Greene, who ended with a 13.33. Jackson's slow start in that race did little to keep her from winning by five yards.

Jackson doesn't know what it will take to win, but she has an idea of how fast she would like to go Saturday. "I want to try for an 11.6. I would be happy with that."

This season has been a new experience for Jackson and she knows it. "I've never in my life done anything like this before. I'm excited to be running in Austin."

Lydia and Coach Mitchell left this morning for Austin and will get a brief workout today prior to Saturday's finals.

Jackson is the first Midland girl to earn a state berth since 1976 when Celeste Washington and Gloria Caldwell won state berths in the 440 and 800 yard races respectively.

Girls in all divisions will be competing in the state finals today and Saturday and the boys will follow next week.

Grandslam leads Mets over Tulsa

By The Associated Press

Jackson's Jim Woodward clouted a grand-slam home run and Darryl Strawberry slapped a two-run homer in an explosive third inning as the Mets downed Tulsa 12-4 in a Texas League baseball game.

Jackson was trailing 4-1 after Tulsa's Dan Murphy doubled in the second inning to score three runs. But the Mets came alive on Strawberry's homer over left field wall, followed by Woodward's grand slam.

Jeff Bittiger, 3-1, took the pitching win for Jackson, and Daryl Smith, 1-3, took the loss.

In other Texas League play Thursday, El Paso smashed Amarillo 11-5. Arkansas at Shreveport was rained out.

El Paso's Eric Peyton rapped a solo homer in the first inning — his fourth of the season — and eight El Paso players slugged doubles. Dan Davidsmeier, Dion James and Randy Ready had two doubles apiece.

Jeff Ronk had three RBI for Amarillo, which scored all of its five runs in the first three innings.

Rangers' slump seen in statistics

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) Ted Williams was the manager. The year was 1972 and the Texas Rangers almost went 0-for-September.

They lost 15 games in a row with a team that had a batting average of .217.

It was the first year of the franchise shift from Washington.

Just how far have the Rangers come?

Well, they've still never won a pennant, just finished their worst April in history, and going into Thursday night's game against Boston had lost 11 in a row and were 0-for-May.

However, the current team of such stars as Larry Parrish, Buddy Bell and Jim Sundberg are more talent-blessed than the 1972 outfit which had such journeymen as Larry Biittner, Elliott Maddox and Dave Nelson.

So what has happened in the early part of the season to the Rangers, who currently reside in the cellar of the American League West?

A combination of poor starting pitching (the worst ERA in the league), critical defensive lapses, a "Who's-in-Left?" outfield, and poor clutch hitting has the Rangers searching for answers.

For example, here are the ERA's of the starters: Rick Honeycutt (4.45), Charlie Hough (5.79), Doc Medich (12.46), And Frank Tanana (5.16).

Each pitcher has given up as many hits as inning pitched.

The defense has averaged an error a game, including two that lost games on relay throws that went into the dugout in the late innings.

The Rangers traded hot young pitching prospects Ronnie Darling and Walt Terrell to the New York Mets for Lee Mazzilli then discovered he can't play left field.

Mazzilli is a center fielder but can't play there because of the fast-improving rookie George Wright. And injured Mickey Rivers will be available soon.

The high-priced Mazzilli has been turned into a designated hitter but his replacement in left field, Billy Sample, has a less-than-average glove.

Parrish, obtained from Montreal in the Al Oliver deal, has been a big bust so far against AL curveballs.

Starting out as the cleanup hitter, Parrish has been dropped in the lineup because of his lack of production. He was hitting .149 with only four RBIs.

The word is out: Make Parrish hit curves. He has yet to adjust although he is taking extra batting practice each day.

The Rangers have had little RBI production out of their platoon first basemen, Lamar Johnson and Pat Putnam, who had knocked in four and three runs, respectively.

Besides the above mentioned debits, the lack of team speed has begun to show. Texas has stolen only 10 bases and been gunned down nine other times.

Gaylord Perry beats the N.Y. Yankees for 300th victory

While Gaylord Perry was making it a night to remember with his 300th victory, it was one that four other American League pitchers would like to forget.

Jim Palmer of the Baltimore Orioles, seeking his 250th triumph, faced only three batters before leaving with a stiff neck Thursday night as the Orioles pounded the California Angels 9-2.

Doyle Alexander of the New York Yankees, a 7-3 loser to Perry and the Seattle Mariners, suffered a broken knuckle on the little finger of his pitching hand when he punched the dugout wall after surrendering five runs in the third inning, four of them unearned.

Cleveland's John Denny yielded only three hits, but two were RBI singles by Dan Meyer and Rickey Henderson and one was a homer by Dwayne Murphy as the Oakland A's won their seventh game in a row, downing the Indians 4-2. Denny allowed only one hit after the second inning and retired 20 of the last 21 batters he faced.

And Boston starter Bob Ojeda, three outs away from the five innings necessary to be the winning pitcher, was yanked by Manager Ralph Houk with a 4-2 lead and the Red Sox went on to defeat Texas 5-2, the Rangers' 12th consecutive setback.

In the only other American League game, the Milwaukee Brewers beat the Minnesota Twins 6-3.

But the night belonged to Perry, in his 21st big league campaign and at 43 the oldest player in the majors. He scattered nine hits, several of the infield variety, in becoming only the 15th pitcher to win 300 games.

Perry, who was released by the Atlanta Braves last year and pitched his way onto the Mariners in spring training, doffed his cap, exposing his bald head, and threw kisses to the crowd of 27,369 in the Seattle Kingdome as he left the field.

Perry blanked the Yankees until Ken Griffey homered in the sixth inning. By that time, the Mariners had a 5-0 lead, scoring five times in the third inning with the help of an error by catcher Rick Cerone.

Jim Maler opened the Mariners' big inning with a triple and scored on Bud Bulling's single off Alexander's glove. Julio Cruz sacrificed and Cerone threw the ball away as Bulling took third and Cruz went to second.

Manny Castillo's bloop single scored Bulling and the runners advanced to second and third when no one cut off the throw from the outfield. Alexander retired Bruce Bochte on a pop fly and fanned Richie Zisk, but Todd Cruz rapped a two-run single and scored on a triple by Al Cowens.

Perry said he wasn't thinking past this season, but also said he wasn't thinking about retirement.

Orioles 9, Angels 2

Dan Ford's tie-breaking two-out, two-run single in the ninth inning triggered a seven-run outburst as the Orioles handed the Angels their first loss in 10 home games this season. Ross Grimsley, who took over for Palmer in the first inning, recieved credit for his first major league victory since 1980. He blanked the Angels on six hits for 7-2-3 innings.

Baltimore loaded the bases in the ninth against California relief ace Don Aase on a one-out walk to Rick Dempsey, Terry Crowley's pinch single and a walk to Rich Dauer. After Ford's third hit of the game made it 4-2, Ken Singleton followed with a three-run homer, John Lowenstein doubled and Gary Roenicke homered.

A's 4, Indians 2

Rickey Henderson led off the Oakland first and reached base on an error by Cleveland shortstop Jerry Dybzinski, then stole his 27th and 28th bases of the season. After Murphy walked, Dan Meyer singled, scoring Henderson and sending Murphy to third. Tony Armas grounded to third, and when Toby Harrah threw to second for a forceout, Murphy broke for the plate and scored easily.

Red Sox 5, Rangers 2

Jim Rice and Tony Perez homered while Dave Stapleton lashed a pair of doubles as the Red Sox pounded out six extra-base hits among their 13 safeties. Perez drove in a run with a first-inning grounder and the Red Sox made it 3-0 in the fourth when Stapleton and Glenn Hoffman doubled and Jerry Remy had an RBI single. Perez homered in the fifth, Rice in the seventh. Ojeda yielded a two-run homer to Lamar Johnson in the fourth and Bob Stanley replaced him with two runners on base and no one out in the fifth.

Brewers 6, Twins 3

Cecil Cooper singled home the tie-breaking run in the sixth inning and Ben Oglivie added a decisive three-run double in the eighth. Loser Brad Havens had a one-hitter and had retired 11 successive batters until Robin Yount tripled with two out in the sixth and scored on Cooper's single to break a 2-2 tie.

No free agents needed

By JOHN NADEL
AP Sports Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Free-agent acquisitions have helped many teams in the six years since they become as much a part of major league baseball as home runs and stolen bases. One club that has not reaped many benefits is the Los Angeles Dodgers.

The Dodgers haven't needed to [illegible] since free agency came [illegible] to the 1976 season, and [illegible] they went that route, following a dreadful 1979 campaign, they got burned.

Says Al Campanis, the club's vice president in charge of player personnel, bluntly pointed out recently, that [illegible] Dodgers from winning the World Series last year.

Los Angeles had its way in 1977 and 1978, advancing to the World Series both years. But in 1979, the Dodgers were 79-83 and finished third in the National League's Western Division.

The team earned run average went from 3.12 in 1978 to 3.83 the next year, so it was obvious where the Dodgers needed help. Through free agency, they went out and got it, or so they thought.

First, Goltz, considered the best starting pitcher available, was signed to a re-entry contract. Don Stanhouse, the best reliever on the market, agreed to a lucrative five-year deal. Both players have since been released, meaning that the Dodgers will be paying out millions of dollars over the next few years in exchange for absolutely nothing.

"You look back at the fall of 1979, Stanhouse and Goltz were the most sought after players in the draft," said Peter O'Malley, president of the Dodgers. "Goltz was selected by all the clubs and Stanhouse was selected by most. We felt that to make our team competitive, we needed the best starting pitcher and the best relief pitcher available, and that was Goltz and Stanhouse.

"It turned out to be an obvious disappointment for us. But anytime you sign a player to a long-term, guaranteed contract, it's a calculated risk."

Stanhouse was released prior to the 1981 season. He was 2-2 with seven saves and a 5.04 earned run average with the Dodgers in 1980.

Stanhouse sat out all of 1981 but is now playing for the Baltimore Orioles, for whom he was 7-3 with 21 saves and a 2.84 ERA in 1979. Despite the fact that he's with another team, the Dodgers still are paying him the amount of money they signed him for on Nov. 19, 1979.

Goltz was released last week. He had a 96-79 record and a 3.49 ERA in a little over seven years with Minnesota, including 49-34 in his last three years with the Twins.

With the Dodgers, Goltz was was 9-19 with a 4.26 ERA in a little more than two years.

"We have not entered into free agency too much," said Campanis. "Our farm system has been successful and we have been pretty successful in trades. We wanted to try another avenue (the signing of Goltz and Stanhouse) and we did. We haven't done too well in this kind of endeavor."

That last statement doesn't come close to truly assessing the situation, but as Campanis put it: "Winning the pennant and the World Series last year makes the situation a lot easier to swallow."

The Dodgers opted not to participate in the ranking free-agent portion of the re-entry draft last year and for the next two years. They are one of five clubs that made that decision, which also assures them of not losing a player to the pool from which teams losing a ranking free agent draw compensation.

"Staying out wasn't because of our fear of making the same mistake again," said Campanis, referring to Goltz and Stanhouse. "We were fearful of losing an outstanding player. After that, we don't know what we'll do.

Lawyers to decide baseball champs

WACO, Texas (AP) — Lawyers may replace outfielders in deciding who has the best high school baseball team in District 15-5A.

State District Judge Walter S. Smith Jr. has set a hearing for next week in the case of all-state shortstop-pitcher Don Neumann, who was banned from competition because he lived with his grandfather outside the Waco-Richfield High School's attendance boundaries.

The school forfeited its victories Tuesday as a result of the ban, enabling Waco University High to claim the championship without the expected four-team playoffs for the title.

Neumann's grandfather, the youth's legal guardian, then filed suit, and Smith issued a temporary restraining order against implementation of the district decision declaring Neumann ineligible and University the winner.

The hearing is set for 9 a.m. May 13. District 15 must declare a champion by May 15.

Charles Wallace, a lawyer representing the Neumann family, said the primary issue is the league's guardianship rules.

"The UIL (University Interscholastic League) does not recognize this even though the courts do," Wallace said. "Within the meaning of the rule, a guardian's not a parent but a spouse is a parent."

The court action muddled an already muddled playoff situation.

Richfield forfeited two regular season wins over University, giving University the second-half title outright and a tie for the first-half title.

Before the forfeit, University and Temple High had tied for the second-half title and would have played Tuesday night. Killeen Ellison and Richfield would have tied for the first-half title and were to have played Wednesday.

Clemson investigating NCAA investigation

CLEMSON, S.C. (AP) — Clemson University President Bill Atchley announced plans Thursday to form a special committee to review NCAA allegations of athletic recruiting violations at last season's national football champion school.

"We're going to be fair about this and I assure you that I expect the NCAA to play fair about this, too," Atchley told an assembly of Clemson faculty.

"If we find we've violated the rules, we'll admit it candidly, outline what we plan to do about it and take our medicine. But if we find we've been falsely accused, we'll be just as outspoken about that," he said.

Atchley promised that, when the three-to five-member panel's work is completed and the National Collegiate Athletics Association case is closed, "a full and complete airing of the situation will be made."

He said the committee would be named soon and would be chaired by Victor Hurst, retired vice president for academic affairs.

"I hope everyone will respect the committee's charge to make no public comments on this matter until the NCAA has completed its investigation," Atchley told the professors. "That's in keeping with my policy all along."

On March 29, Atchley announced that Clemson had received official notification from the NCAA spelling out a number of alleged violations.

Word that an NCAA investigation of Clemson recruiting practices was under way surfaced last year after two former standout Tennessee high-school football players charged that Tom Breaseale, a Knoxville businessman and Clemson alumnus, had offered them money to play for the Tigers with the knowledge of Coach Danny Ford.

The players, Terry Minor and James Cofer, filed a $12 million lawsuit against Ford, former Clemson recruiter Billy Ware, Breaseale and the Atlantic Coast Conference and its commissioner, Bob James.

Atchley said the committee will also help develop guidelines "to provide future checks and balances" to ensure compliance with NCAA regulations.

Lanier, Dawkins matchup key to Bucks-76ers series

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Can aching, aging Bob Lanier play two more magnificent games for the Milwaukee Bucks?

The Bucks think so — especially if Darryl Dawkins of the Philadelphia 76ers remains the non-factor he has been so far in the teams' National Basketball Association playoff series.

The matchup at center between Lanier and Dawkins could be decisive when the 76ers and Bucks play Game 6 of the Eastern Conference semifinal series tonight (9 p.m. CDT).

The 76ers lead the best-of-seven series 3-2, but blew a chance to eliminate Milwaukee Wednesday night when Lanier, who had been averaging only 12.5 points per game earlier in the playoffs, scored 27 points and grabbed eight rebounds to lead the Bucks to a 110-98 victory in Philadelphia.

A Bucks' victory tonight would send the series back to Philadelphia for a seventh game Sunday. The winner will advance to the conference finals against the defending NBA champion Boston Celtics.

While the 33-year-old Lanier sank 12 of 17 shots after having missed his first three Wednesday night, Dawkins spent much of the game on the bench because of foul trouble. Dawkins has been charged with 27 fouls in five games.

"We're going to need more out of Darryl — more quality minutes," 76ers' Coach Billy Cunningham said.

Lanier scored many of his points on outside jump shots. The 76ers had to contest his shot, which opened the baseline area for Bucks' forwards Marques Johnson, Mickey Johnson and rookie Alton Lister.

"I know I have to play offense for us to have a shot," Lanier said. "They can't double up on you when you're getting the ball up high, especially when the outside shot is falling."

"We tried to double on him, but they were moving people out of spots, which gave Lanier some room to operate," 76ers' forward Julius Erving said.

"When we get a game like that from Bob, we'll win," Mickey Johnson said.

Lister was another major factor in the Bucks' revival in Game 5. Lister played 33 minutes, his single game high as a pro, and came through with 11 rebounds, 10 points and seven blocked shots.

Bucks' Coach Don Nelson had been benching Lister whenever Bobby Jones entered the game for Philadelphia earlier in the series. But Lister proved he could handle Jones, who scored only 12 points Wednesday.

National League Roundup

Rick Monday haunts Montreal again

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

Montreal Expos' fans still remember Rick Monday with a vehemence. He was the one who cost their team the pennant last year with a ninth-inning home run in the National League playoffs.

On Thursday, he gave them more to remember.

The Los Angeles Dodger outfielder jogged their memories with a triple in a three-run first inning that helped the defending World Champions beat the Expos 3-2.

Ironically, Monday's blow hit a spot on the centerfield wall at Olympic Stadium in Montreal that wasn't far from his homer last October against Steve Rogers.

"That's just one of those things that happens," said Monday, shrugging off the coincidence.

Another thing that happened Thursday was a bitter backlash against Monday from the Montreal fans. Throughout most of the game, the Dodger right fielder was taunted and booed by fans in the right-field bleachers.

"There was one girl out there who must know every vulgar word in the English language," he said. "Not to mention some of the French ones that I couldn't understand.

"Then, when I came into the clubhouse for a drink in the fourth or fifth inning, I passed a couple of stadium workmen, and they pointed to me and said 'That's the guy'. Hey, I'm just here to play ball.

"But I don't mind if I get booed on the road. It's when it happens at home that you start to worry."

Monday's triple drove in one of the Dodger runs. The others came on doubles by Steve Garvey and Pedro Guerrero off Scott Sanderson, 3-2.

Staked to the 3-0 lead, Dodger starter Jerry Reuss hung on to post the victory with last-inning relief help from Tom Neidenfur.

Gary Carter hit a pair of solo home runs for the Expos' scoring.

"Good hitters are going to hit good pitches," said Reuss. "The pitches I threw weren't great, but sometimes you can get away with it."

Elsewhere in the National League, the Philadelphia Phillies outslugged the San Diego Padres 12-7 and the San Francisco Giants defeated the New York Mets 5-3.

Phillies 12, Padres 7

George Vukovich stroked four hits and drove in five runs, the best offensive production of his brief major league career, as Philadelphia whipped San Diego.

Vukovich led an offensive parade that produced 25 hits and 19 runs between the teams, coming against eight pitchers.

Philadelphia starter Larry Christenson was credited with his second victory in five decisions, while Juan Eichelberger, 2-4, took the loss.

"I'm a marked fastball hitter, although I know I can hit the breaking ball," said Vukovich, who saw a lot of fastballs Thursday night. "I guess they thought I still was in a slump."

Giants 5, Mets 3

Chili Davis broke a 3-3 tie in the ninth inning with a two-run double, lifting San Francisco over New York.

Jose Arrios started the San Francisco rally with a leadoff walk. One out later, Johnnie LeMaster lined his third single of the game, putting runners on first and second. Both runners moved up on a passed ball by Mets catcher John Stearns.

Davis then smacked reliever Jesse Orosco's 3-2 pitch into right-center field, clearing the bases. Orosco, 0-4, had not allowed a run in his last 11 innings of relief before Davis' double. The winner was reliever Greg Minton, 2-1.

The Mets jumped out to a 3-0 lead in the first inning on Dave Kingman's three-run homer. The Giants tied it in the fourth, as Jack Clark doubled home two runs and Johnnie LeMaster singled in another.

Kingman's homer, by the way, was his 301st lifetime, tying him with Rogers Hornsby for 43rd place on the all-time list.

SA Spurs welcomed home for short stay

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — A boisterous crowd of 300 fans applauded and cheered the San Antonio Spurs Wednesday as the team arrived from their triumphant 4-1 defeat of the Seattle SuperSonics in the National Basketball Association playoffs.

However, Coach Stan Albeck said the players were coming home barely long enough to pick up fresh changes of clothing, because the Spurs would be heading for Los Angeles today to get in some practice session before their seven-game series with the Lakers begins.

Al Sergio, leader of the team's stage band, played his horn as the team members debarked from a plane amid screams and cheers. Fans crowded around the Spurs to pat their backs and ask for autographs.

Greenwood's Burleson flying high

By CHAD PUERLING
Sports Writer

He flies through the air with the greatest of ease, but he does it without a trapeze.

He is Stuart Burleson of Greenwood High School.

This unassuming 17-year-old high school junior recently jumped seven feet in the District 7-A high school track meet in Rankin. That same day he leaped 21-6 to win the long jump and hopped over 10 hurdles while running 110 meters in 15.4 seconds. He qualified for this weekends' Region 1 track meet in Levelland in all three events.

Tuesday a reporter called track coach and athletic director Joe Longley to make an appointment to interview this physical phenomenon. Since Burleson would be going to the regional track meet to be held Friday and Saturday the reporter tried to set-up an appointment to interview the lad on Wednesday.

"I'm sorry but Stuart will be leaving for Levelland today," Longley said.

"But why leave so soon?" the reporter queried.

"Stuart won the district tennis singles title and will be competing in the regional tennis tournamnent on Wednesday," Longley explained.

Well of course, what else could it have been?

BURLESON WON the regional tennis meet Thursday and will represent Greenwood in the state meet next week. On his way to the title the unseeded Burleson defeated last years' state champion, and won the finals in straight sets over Monty Johnson of Happy 6-3, 7-6.

Last year while at Nueces Canyon, Burleson teamed with Albert Valenzuela to capture the state Class 2-A tennis doubles title. Despite his success on the court Burleson says tennis is his least favorite sport, except for golf. "I don't play golf," he said.

One sport he does like is basketball. The 6-1, 165-pounder played post position for the Greenwood Rangers this year and helped lead the team to the state finals before losing to Snook. He averaged 25 points and 11 rebounds per game and in the process was named to the All-District, All-Region, and All-State teams.

But in the Lone Star State, the King of Sports is football. With all his tennis, and track exploits this spring, Burleson has ignored football, so far.

"As soon as state (tennis and track finals) is over with I hope to pick up on Spring football," Burleson said.

That's right, he plays football too. Last year he was the starting quarterback at Nueces Canyon and made the All-District team.

SPORTS HAS allowed Burleson to travel extensively and often takes him out of the classroom. But the absence apparantly hasn't hurt his school work. The self-described B-plus student was a member of the National Honor Society at Nueces Canyon.

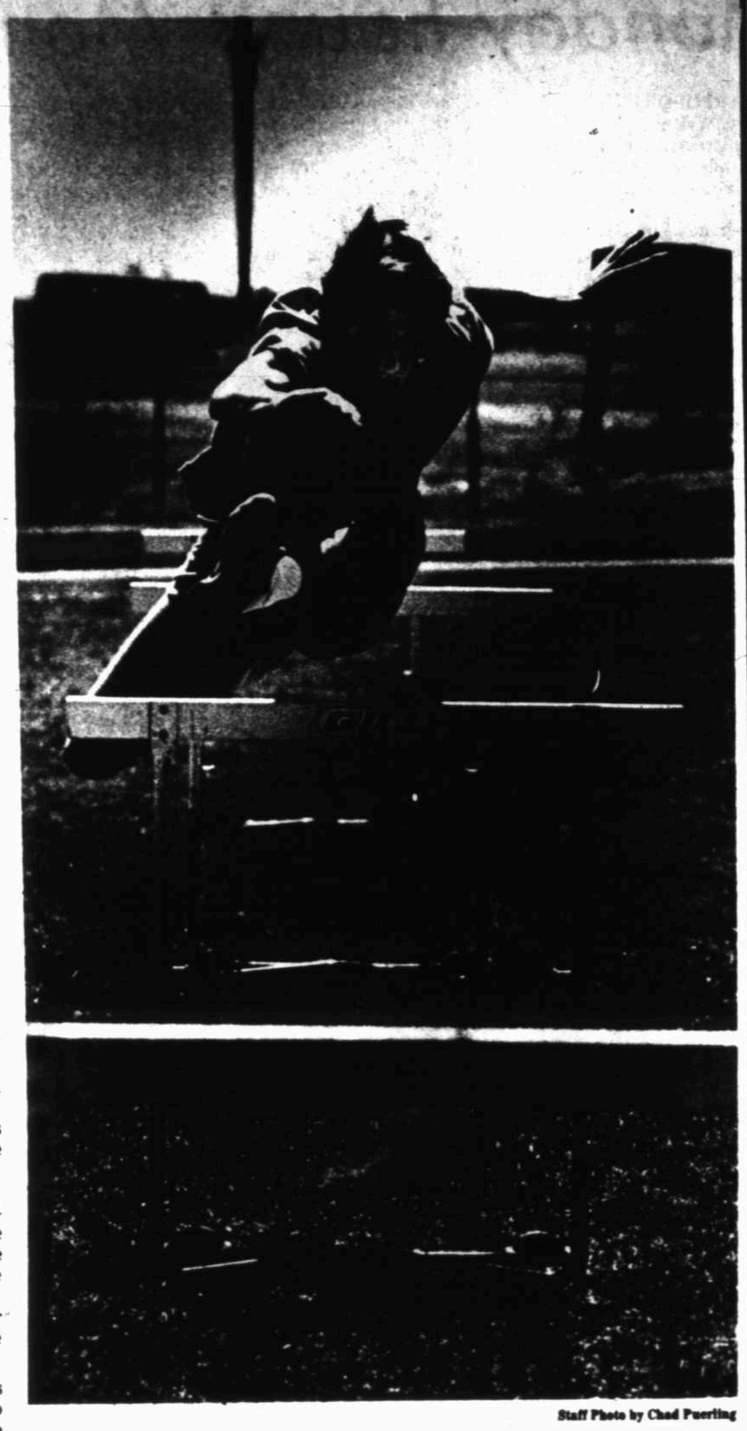

Burleson hopes to attend college on a basketball or track scholarship and says one of his goals is to make the Olympics.

In order to achieve such lofty heights he realizes there is a lot of room for improvement. Referring to the high jump he said "I'll have to improve about five inches. But in college I'll be able to specialize more and that will help."

During the summer Burleson will be competing in Junior Olympic track meets around the country, trying to hone his talents and establish his credentials amoung the sporting elite.

There may be a more immediate problem for Burleson as the state tennis tournament and state track meet fall on the same day. Herschel Burleson, Stuart's father, said the University Interscholastic League is cooperative in these matters.

"The UIL is usually very understanding. We'll just have to do some shuffling around in Austin," he said.

Greenwood's Stuart Burleson practices the hurdles in preperation for the Region I 1A track meet in Levelland this weekend.

Some of the shuffling will probably include a request to delay his tennis match since the tennis preliminaries are scheduled to begin at the same time as the track field events.

THE FUTURE, both immediate and distant, looks bright for this Greenwood boy who flies without a pilot's license. One can only hope the thin air doesn't give him nose bleeds.

Cubs end Dodger streak

After suffering a sore arm in Puerto Rico last winter, things didn't look too good. "I stayed down there a couple of months and worked out anyway and the arm rehabilitated pretty good."

Proof of the rehabilitation came Wednesday when, in addition to a homer and single, he nailed two would-be base thieves.

BRUIN BREWIN'S—Jon Perlman will work one of tonight's games for the Cubs while Tom Klawitter (2-0) and Chris Malden (2-1) will pitch for the Dodgers. Klawitter was 11-7 with Lodi of the A California League last year while Malden was 7-7 with San Antonio...Infielder Jim Payne and pitcher Tim Milner came off the disabled list Thursday and pitcher Tom Spino and infielder David Pagel went on the DL...Voigt was 16-7 with Visalia last season and beat Midland 3-1 in the season's opener. Welenc was his hill opponent...Defensive play of the night came when Sheehy, who replaces Steve Sax at second, sprawled full length with a dive behind the bag and threw out the speedy Cotto in the fourth...Tonight is 2-for-1 beer night...Connally stretched his hitting streak to six games before being forced to leave the game in the sixth after being hit by a pitch...

JIM MURRAY

And God created oldest kid ever

Washington Post News Service

One day, God got bored and decided he would make a ballplayer. "I'm fed up with politicians and prime ministers and generals and rock stars," he said, and he summoned his angels to devise the perfect antidote. "I got it," said one. "We build this big guy with a pot belly and pipe stem legs and a big, wide nose and he hits these tremnendous homeruns and loves kids." "We got him," said the Lord. "Babe Ruth."

"How about if we take this little black kid from the red hills of Alabama and he can run like the wind and his hat always falls off and they fall in love with him on Broadway." "Willie Mays," sniffed the Lord. "We did him."

"I got it!" said the newest angel on the planning committee. "How about this guy, he's always nine years old, see? He has these little-boy black eyes and these gap teeth and he always goes around like it's Christmas morning or the circus just came to town. He always looks as if he's going fishing, as if he has this frog in one pocket and a cork for a sinker in another, and he's barefoot and he runs everywhere. Listen! He even runs out bases on balls! I'm just noodling now, but how about if we have him break every hitting record, even Ty Cobb's and Stan Musial's?"

"I like it, I like it!" cries the Lord. "A walking bubble gum card!"

"YES!" said the angel. "And, when someone comes up to him and says how many hits are you ahead of Stan the Man, he doesn't paw the ground and pretend not to know. 'Eleven,' he says. 'Twelve, if the official scorer doesn't see that ball hit the bag.' This guy KNOWS, see? He doesn't read the Sporting News, he eats it! His secret is, he's the oldest little boy in the big leagues. He's the only 40-year-old in the country who still sends letters to Santa Claus. He wants a first-baseman's mitt for Christmas."

"It's perfect!" agreed the Lord. "And, when he quits, we'll make him a manager. Like that one we had with legs like a bag of plums and a putty face – what was his name again?"

"Stengel," said the angel. "Casey Stengel."

"Right!" cried the Lord. "Take it over to planning and management and get started on it right away. Check with Mark Twain for design details. Tell him we want somewhere between Huckleberry Finn and a guy who jumps frogs. Tell me again. This guy runs everywhere?! Oh, I love it! This is just what that country needs! Get 'em back to apple pie and home made fudge! Boy, do I love home made fudge! Listen! I want you to get started on this right now. Tell 'em to hold back on the poets and painters for awhile. This is top priority. Mark it 'Rush!' By the way, what are you gonna call this creation!"

"I thought 'Pete Rose' would be nice," said the angel. "Has a nice ring to it, don't you think?"

"Fantastic!" said the Lord.

AND, THAT'S how Peter Edward Rose came into being and why he's the way he is.

Pete Rose goes with baseball the way cheese goes with apple pie, catchup with hamburger, chocolate syrup with ice cream. He goes through life like a kid on his first merry-go-around. You look at Pete and it's 1900 again with open trolleys and the riverboats are running and you can hear the banjos playing and there is joy in Mudville. Life is a three-bagger down the line.

Baseball without Pete Rose is Disneyland in the rain, the zoo in winter, a ballroom the morning after the dance. Mickey Mouse with the flu. Someday, you'll close your eyes and you'll remember the head-first slides, the dirty uniform, the Prince Valiant haircut making the 40-year-old face look like something you should buy a lollipop for.

One of these years, though, the Lord is going to call in his markers. Pete Rose can't stay in life's kindergarten forever.

I went out to Dodger Stadium the other night to check for these telltale signs of mortality. Maybe Pete would show up late. Maybe he'd be grumpy. "I-don't-feel-like-talking-tonight-bo s" sort of thing. Maybe his feet would hurt. Maybe he'd be sneaking a pair of glasses on to read his mail. Maybe he'd be in the whirlpool bath with the other old gaffers. Maybe he'd look 41-years-old. Everyone else his age does.

PETE GOT to the ballpark at 3:30 for a 7:30 game. Pete would rather be in a ballpark then anywhere else in the world. Still. It was Pete, alright. Bubbling over. Donning his rubber suit to shape up that hard body which has never betrayed him.

Pete had an opinion on everything as usual. Oh, not the Falkland Islands. They're not in the league, not even in baseball. But Pete could do you five minutes on the likelihood of homer-hitting in the new indoor park in Minneapolis breaking Ruth's record. (Good, says Pete, who reminds you that a guy named Pete Rose got the first official hit in that edifice in an exhibition game this spring.)

Which of Pete's records did he prize the most, someone wanted to know. Pete grew thoughtful. "I would say it was games-played," he said quickly. "You never read about that. I set the record for consecutive years -- six in a row -- for 600 or more at-bats. Did you know only Henry Aaron had more at-bats then me? You gotta be durable in this game.

"I average 198 hits a year and in my first two years I only got 309 hits."

Did Pete dream of breaking Ty Cobb's record when he was a rookie? "Heck, no!" snorted Pete. "I just dreamed of making the big leagues. That's all in the world I ever wanted to be -- a big league ballplayer. That's all I want to be now."

THAT NIGHT, Pete Rose went out and had the ninth five-hit game of his career. That tied him with Max Carey for the National League record, Pete was quick to remind you, and it put him only five behind Ty Cobb in that category.

Canucks eliminate Hawks

By JOE MOOSHIL
AP Sports Writer

CHICAGO (AP) — Stan Smyl said the first 10 minutes made the big difference Thursday night when the Vancouver Canucks eliminated the Chicago Black Hawks from the Stanley Cup semifinals with a 6-2 triumph.

"We knew they were going to throw everything they had at us in the first 10 minutes and it was important that we broke ahead," said Smyl.

Jim Nill and Smyl scored within the first four minutes and the Canucks were rolling after that.

"The first goal was important and the second goal really put them down," said Smyl, who scored the second goal and then led a third-period, three-goal charge with a 60-foot slapshot for his second goal of the game.

The first period was marred by fights as referee Ron Wicks whistled 164 minutes in penalties but Smyl felt the fights might have been a turning point in favor of the Canucks.

"The fighting put some of their key guys in the penalty box and that might have worked to our advantage," said Smyl. "There was no scoring in the second period and that also was important.

"We've worked so hard to prove ourselves and now we have a chance of a lifetime to win the Stanley Cup. We'll give it everything we have."

Coach Roger Nielson said he was surprised the Canucks disposed of the Black Hawks in five games.

"We were expecting this series to go seven games," said Nielson. "The difference in the series was our goaltending. He (Richard Brodeur) has been great in the whole series and he was great again tonight.

"You never know which save was the key save but when he stopped Dennis Savard point blank might have been a turning point," said Nielson, who added he hasn't been surprised at the showing of the Canucks in the playoffs.

"Every team we've beaten finished below us," said Nielson. "Now we re going up against the New York Islanders. But it doesn't make any difference who we play or where we play. The Islanders do not scare us."

Lars Lindgren had three assists for the Canucks, who meet the two-time defending champion Islanders in the best-of-seven finals beginning Saturday night at New York's Nassau Coliseum.

Nill scored his third goal of the playoffs at 2:40 of the first period, 16 seconds after Chicago's Dave Hutchison was penalized for slashing.

Smyl scored at 3:48 on a 45-foot wrist shot during a delayed penalty call against Al Secord. The Canucks, who beat Calgary in a three-game sweep and Los Angeles in five games after never having won a playoff series, were winging.

Tom Lysiak cut the Vancouver lead in half with a goal at 5:09, but Lars Molin regained the Canucks' two-goal lead at 15:35.

The first outbreak of the opening period came at 7:43, with Chicago's Dave Feamster, Peter Marsh and Greg Fox drawing majors against Vancouver's Nill, Darcy Rota and Colin Campbell.

A bigger eruption came with 1:34 left in the period. This time Wicks called 100 minutes in penalties against the two teams and order was restored only after Wicks sent both teams to the dressing room with the 1:34 to play, which was completed before the start of the second period.

Murray Bannerman started in goal for Chicago but, when play was resumed prior to the second period, he was relieved by Tony Esposito.

It didn't make much difference as the tight-checking Canucks wrapped it up with three more goals in the final period.

Grant Mulvey scored at 2:38 for Chicago to pull the Hawks within one but Rota came back with a goal at 5:14 from in front of Esposito and Smyl scored on a slapshot from the blue line for his second goal at 11:20.

MHS girls in fifth place at state golf meet

Austin — The Midland High girls golf team is in fifth place after the first round of play at the girls state golf tournament being contested on the Jimmy Clay Municiple Golf Course here.

Westwood High, which beat MHS for the Region 1 title, leads the eight team field with a 326 total. Stafford-Dulles is three strokes off the pace and Houston Eisenhower finished with a 352 for third place. In fourth position is Kingwood High with a 365 team total followed by MHS's 378.

The Lady Bulldogs' fifth place is tentative as Fort Worth Paschal is one stroke behind at 379. Highland Park has a 382 and Edinburg finished with a 383 team total.

Janis Littlefield led the Lady Bulldogs scoring with a 75, good enough for a second place tie with Kim Dirks of Arlington Heights for medalist honors. Angela Adkins of Stafford-Dulles leads the individual competition with a 74.

Kelle Mobley carted an 88 for MHS and is currently eighth in the medalist race. Competing in their first state tournament, juniors Shelle Parker and Karen Wagner shot a 106 and 109 respectively.

Coach Mary Baird was pleased with her teams play but expects a better showing from Mobley. The junior was runner-up in the District 5-5A medalist race which she lost to Littlefield on the second hole of a sudden death playoff.

The final round will be played today on the 6,183 yard, par 72 course.

Perry reaches mildstone, joins elite group at 300

By JIM COUR
AP Sports Writer

SEATTLE (AP) — A champagne-drenched Gaylord Perry of the Seattle Mariners had just joined major league baseball's elite 300-victory circle and somebody asked him if his goal now was 400 wins.

Perry didn't let the implications of the question steal his moment of glory, though.

"At this point," the 43-year-old righthander said with a smile, "I'm just taking them one game at a time."

Perry became the big leagues' 15th 300-game winner Thursday night with a route-going 7-3 victory over the defending American League champion New York Yankees.

It was his third win of the season and second triumph in five days over the Yankees.

Baseball's oldest major league player may still have some surprises up his sleeve, though. And not just of the spitball variety, either.

"I don't think he'll stop at 300," said Mariners' President Dan O'Brien. "I won't be surprised to see him in spring training next year."

"I don't know," Perry replied when asked about his future. "I still feel I can win many games and help this club. I'll just finish this year out and go from there."

Of baseball's 26 big league clubs, the Mariners were the only team to give Perry a chance at 300 victories this season.

They got their reward Wednesday night. Perry drew 27,369 fans to the Kingdome, where the Mariners have drawn only one million fans in just one of their previous five seasons.

"It was the greatest win in Mariner history," said a jubilant Rene Lachemann, who celebrated his first anniversary as Seattle's manager. "This kind of media attention can mature a club. It was similar to a World Series out there."

Gaylord Perry

O'Brien, 52, is the man responsible for bringing Perry here. Perry and O'Brien formerly were together with the Texas Rangers, where O'Brien served as president for five seasons before resigning in 1979.

"Gaylord," said O'Brien, "is one of the best competitors in major league sports or any sport for that matter."

"He's a dream for a club," Seattle veteran Richie Zisk said. "He makes every pitch like it's his last pitch."

"How do you fool batters with an 82 mile per hour fastball?" asked Perry's Thursday night batterymate, Terry Bulling. "But he seems to do it, doesn't he?"

Where Quarter Horses are big business

Ruidoso season opens

By The Associated Press

Quarter horse racing has always been big business at New Mexico's Ruidoso Downs race track. This summer, it becomes a multi-million dollar adventure.

The track that gave the horse racing world its first million dollar horse race, this summer reaches another milestone in the industry when it hosts the $2.5 million All-American Futurity on Labor Day.

The All-American, created in 1959 with what was then an exorbitant purse of $129,000, reached the $1 million mark in 1972 and has steadily grown since. So intense has been interest among quarter horse owners throughout the country to win the prestigious race that the number of nominations, and in turn the purse money, have continued to soar.

THIS YEAR the winner of the 440-yard race will earn an even $1 million from the total $2.5 million purse. Ruidoso Downs opens its 76-day summer season Saturday. The state's two other summer tracks, the Downs at Santa Fe and La Mesa Park at Raton, are also beginning the summer season. The Downs at Santa Fe opened today while La Mesa Park began its season a week ago.

In addition to the All-American Futurity, at Ruidoso Downs there will also be the inaugural running of the Gold Cup, a race for 4-year-old quarter horses that will begin with a purse of $1 million.

The Gold Cup will be run on Aug. 22 and will be followed on Aug. 29 by the All-American Derby, with 3-year-old quarter horses vying in that race for another million-dollar purse.

THE ADDITION in recent years of races such as the All American Derby and Gold Cup are intended to keep quarter horses active at the track. Special Effort, the brilliant speedster who went unbeaten a year ago as a 2-year-old and won the 1981 All-American Futurity, is back this season in quest of the All-American Derby and accompanying big money races for 3-year-olds.

Special Effort was purchased early last summer by Texas oilman Dan Urschel for $1 million, then later was syndicated for $37.5 million. With his victories in the big three 2-year-old series — Kansas, Rainbow and All American Futurities — he became the first triple crown winner and in one year earned more than $1 million.

Both Ruidoso Downs and the Downs at Santa Fe launched extensive expansion and construction projects during the off season to accomodate growing attention from racing fans.

Ruidoso Downs has completed a $2.5 million renovation project while Downs at Santa Fe officials spent nearly half a million dollars at that plant.

La Mesa Park, located in the northeast corner of the state and popular to horsemen in Oklahoma, Texas and Colorado, is coming off its most successful season in 1981 and will feature a 61-day season in this its 37th year.

Armstrong KO's Avila for 19th victory

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Davey Lee Armstrong of Detroit won a technical knockout in the sixth round over Roland Avila of San Antonio, Texas, in a 10-round main event Thursday at Olympic Auditorium.

Referee Vince Delgado stopped the fight at 44 seconds into the sixth round after Avila, dazed and battered with two swollen eyes, had absorbed as much punishment as he could.

Armstrong, 26, didn't lose a round against the 18-year-old Avila, 14-4.

Armstrong, 19-1, with 10 knockouts is rated No.17 in WBC lightweights. Armstrong weighed 137 and Avila 135.

In another 10-round bout, Richie Sandoval of Pomona, Calif. weighing 117, won a second-round knockout over Miguel Flores of San Antonio, who weighed 120.

Tony Cerda Jr., of Pomona, weighing 162, got a technical draw with James Waire, 162, who was cut from unintentional butt in sixth round. Waire was behind in the bout and California law provides that a fight is called a draw if the loser is cut when boxers accidentally butt heads.

McEnroe, Lendl headed for showdown in T of C

By BOB GREENE
AP Sports Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Tempestuous John McEnroe, the hometown crowd rooting against him, came back from a first-set loss to oust Shlomo Glickstein of Israel 2-6, 6-3, 6-2 Thursday and move into the quarterfinals of the $500,000 WCT Tournament of Champions at the West Side Tennis Club.

Also advancing with third-round victories Thursday were second-seeded Ivan Lendl of Czechoslovakia, No.11 John Sadri and No.12 Mel Purcell, who upset fifth-seeded Vitas Gerulaitis 7-5, 6-2.

Eddie Dibbs, the defending champion who is seeded 10th, outlasted South Africa's Eddie Edwards 6-4, 7-5. In the night's final match, third-seeded Jose-Luis Clerc of Argentina met No.9 Andres Gomez of Ecuador.

Lendl needed only 40 minutes to crush Hans Gildemeister of Chile 6-2, 6-0 and Sadri eliminated Tim Wilkison 7-6, 6-3. In another early match, Pablo Arraya of Peru ousted Chris Lewis of New Zealand 6-2, 6-4.

Playing lethargic tennis and disputing several calls, McEnroe fell easily in the opening set, losing his serve in the fourth, sixth and eighth games. In the fourth game, he squandered two game points before double-faulting to give Glickstein the advantage and then netted a backhand to give the Israeli the game.

McEnroe, disgusted with himself, slammed the ball into the crowd and was given a conduct warning by umpire Charles Beck.

The crowd booed the reigning Wimbledon and U.S. Open champion in the first game of the second set when he asked for and got a linesman to change his call and rule a fault on a point that Glickstein won.

When Glickstein served again, McEnroe won the point and the game. As he returned to the court following the changeover, McEnroe was greeted with a crescendo of boos.

He proceeded to hold his serve after going to deuce, but Glickstein tomk the next three games to take the lead 3-2.

The left-hander, who lives only eight miles from the West Side Tennis Club, site of the U.S. Open until 1978, began putting more pressure on his opponent, coming to the net and taking charge. Glickstein responded by repeatedly hitting long.

McEnroe ripped off the next four games to level the match at one set each, finding the lines with both his backhand and forehand, and getting more first serves in. He started the third set with a classic serve-and-volley game, serving to Glickstein's backhand and going straight to the net to put away the volley.

McEnroe broke Glickstein in the second game and controlled the match the rest of the way, even though he traded service breaks with Glickstein in the fifth and sixth games. Glickstein double-faulted at match point.

Gildemeister, who moved into the round of 16 by ousting Carlos Kirmayr of Brazil, the Cinderella finalist last year, was nothing but cannon fodder for Lendl, who is seeking his 15th title in his last 18 tournaments.

Gildemeister held service in the first and fifth games of the opening set. Everything else belonged to Lendl.

With Lendl leading 5-0 in the second set, Gildemeister, who plays with a regular-sized racket, sent a ballgirl into the crowd to get the over-sized racket belonging to Arraya. He walked onto the court, brandishing the large racket, then switched back as the crowd roared with laughter and applause.

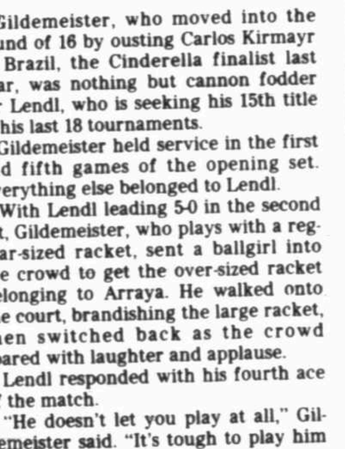

Lendl responded with his fourth ace of the match.

"He doesn't let you play at all," Gildemeister said. "It's tough to play him the way he's playing right now."

Purcell, who had reservations to return to his home in Murray, Ky., immediately after his match if he had lost, captured the first nine points of the match, breaking Gerulaitis in the second game.

Atari is on sale.
Make your TV
a whole new ball game.
Or car race. Or shootout.
Or space war.

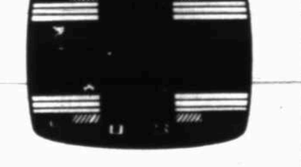

Sale 149.95
Reg. 174.95. Fire away! Liven up your living room with the zany madness of Atari. Plugs right into your TV. Just drop in a game cartridge and watch all the excitement of a futuristic video arcade jump out of the screen. Invite a friend over or take on the family champ for hours of beeps, blinks, bops and blasts. No one gets away without having fun with Atari. Comes with Combat™, but we've got other games, too. Sports car races, space wars, chess, backgammon and more. Plus, you can flip a switch to make Atari play tougher as you get better. Entire system comes ready to play with console, joystick and paddle controls. UL listed.

Sale prices effective through Saturday. TV not included.

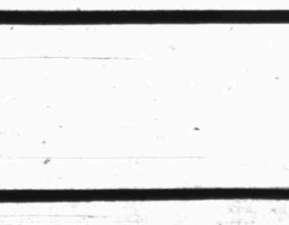

Sale 27.95
Reg. 31.95. Missile Command™. Big time push button war! And you're in command of an ABM missile silo with 6 cities to protect from attacking ICBMs.

Sale 27.95
Reg. 31.95. Space Invaders™ Strange creatures from outer space are threatening our planet. Your mission is to destroy the aliens before they reach earth.

Sale 17.95
Reg. 22.95. Breakout®. Now you don't have to beat your head against the wall to get through it. You've got 48 other escape choices that could get you out of the jam!

Sale 32.95
Reg. 37.95. Asteroids™ Trapped in a swirling asteroid belt with nowhere to go but out. Prime your missiles for firing, enemy ships are closing in, too! Lotsa' luck.

RRC proposes new program

AUSTIN — A new program proposed by the Railroad Commission to deal with the underground injection of fluids in the state's oil and gas fields has been approved by the federal Environmental Protection Agency. The new progaram is effective today with publication in the Federal Register.

Texas and Louisiana, which had a similar program approved today, are the first states to win federal certification for all types of injection wells.

The new program establishes permit requirements and standards for enhanced recovery and disposal wells and hydrocarbon storage facilities. It also provides for increased notice of injection well permit applications to local governments and other interested persons.

The technical standards include requirements for casing and cementing, tubing and valves, as well as for testing, reporting, monitoring and plugging. Review provisions for unpluged wells were also established.

Without federal approval of the RRC program, federal regulations as well as state regulations would apply to underground injection operations in Texas.

In recommending adoption of the program to the Commission last December, Examiner Glenn Jordan said that the RRC's program accomplishes "the main purposes of federal and state law--protection of fresh water and prevention of waste--without adopting the unwieldly and lengthy federal UIC (underground injection control) rules."

PROSPECT — An area recommended by the geologist where the possibilities of finding petroleum are believed to be favorable.

PUMPING — Lifting oil from a reservoir to the surface by an artificial means.

REEF — A build-up of limestone formed by skeletal remains of marine organisms which often make excellent reservoirs for the accumulation of petroleum.

You'll call it the best grass-roots training available in oil and gas risk management.

CBS reveals fall lineup

NEW YORK (AP) — Comedy will be the dominant article in prime time next season, with some familiar faces in new roles, and some strange characters in old situations.

CBS became the last of the three networks Thursday to unveil its fall lineup, and the 1982-83 schedule includes Bob Newhart and Sally Struthers in new half-hour sitcoms.

CBS, the No. 1 network in prime time for the last three seasons, said 18 current programs will return, joining seven new series — four of them comedies.

NBC's fall lineup, announced last week, will include eight comedies, four of them new programs, while ABC said Wednesday its schedule will feature 11 sitcoms, three of them new.

NBC said last week it would introduce 11 new series for '82-83, and ABC announced a fall schedule Wednesday that includes seven new shows.

Newhart, whose "Bob Newhart Show" was a staple on CBS for several seasons, will return in "Newhart," Mondays 9:30-10 p.m. EDT, as Dick Loudon, owner of a refurbished colonial inn. Miss Struthers will revive a role she created for "All in the Family" in "Gloria," Sundays 8:30-9.

Among the more-or-less familiar offerings announced previously by the competing networks are "The New Odd Couple" on ABC, with Ron Glass and Demond Wilson, and "Mama's Family" starring Vicki Lawrence, on NBC, reviving sketches created for "The Carol Burnett Show," a long-time hit on CBS.

There will be casualties, too. CBS said "Lou Grant" and "WKRP in Cincinnati," along with three other series, "House Calls," "Mr. Merlin" and "Nurse," will leave the air the fall.

They join several hits from the past that will not return — notably "Taxi," "Mork and Mindy" and "Barney Miller," which ABC said it will drop.

The cast of "Lou Grant"

Ed Asner, who plays Lou Grant, said in Denver that he felt CBS had taken "a very important and essentially unbiased show off the air — a show that tried to deal impartially with the problems of our world."

Asner said he didn't know if his political activism in favor of El Salvadoran leftists prompted the cancellation.

CBS network executives denied Asner was the cause of the cancellation. Barrie Richardson, vice president for press information of CBS Entertainment, said the show's ratings dropped from 21st nationally earlier in the season to 58th, 53rd, 41st, 37th and 41st in the four weeks following February 15.

CBS' new comedy programs, in addition to "Newhart" and "Gloria," are "Square Pegs," Mondays 8-8:30, with Sarah Jessica Parker and Amy Linker as high school freshmen, and "Mama Malone," Wednesdays 9:30-10, starring Lila Kaye as a widow who broadcasts an offbeat cooking show from her Brooklyn apartment.

The network also will introduce three new dramatic offerings, "Seven Brides for Seven Brothers," Wednesdays 8-9, "Bring 'Em Back Alive," Tuesdays 8-9, with Bruce Boxleitner as legendary big-game collector Frank Buck, and "The Good Witch of Laurel Canyon," Wednesdays 10-11, with Art Hindle and Kim Cattrall as married private detectives.

Five current programs will get new timeslots — "Private Benjamin," Mondays 8:30-9, "Cagney and Lacey," Mondays, 10-11, "Alice," Wednesdays, 9-9:30, "The Jeffersons," Sundays 9-9:30, and "One Day at a Time," Sundays, 9:30-10.

CBS said the upcoming season will feature a number of major long-form programs, including "Bruce Catton's The Blue and the Gray," an eight-hour miniseries, and a six-hour production called "Robert Kennedy and His Times."

CBS said the 1982-83 season also will include several made-for-TV movies, notably "Svengali" with Peter O'Toole, Carol Burnett in "Beatrice," and Maximillian Schell in "Phantom of the Opera."

Recalling childhood abuse, McKuen says involvement only known solution

WASHINGTON (AP) — Poet Rod McKuen, recalling his own experiences as an abused child, says sexual exploitation of children can end only when Americans realize the problem can be happening "next door and in the next room."

Speaking Thursday at the second National Conference on Sexual Victimization of Children, McKuen declared that most national statistics on the magnitude of the problem are too low. He suggested that as many as 1 million American children may be sexually abused this year.

Sexually abused children are "a defenseless, afraid, misunderstood segment of society that has no voice of its own," he said. "The only means of prevention I can think of is everybody who cares about anyone must get involved."

McKuen said he was sexually abused by an aunt and an uncle when he was 7 years old. Speaking calmly and with intermittent humor, McKuen said he also was beaten repeatedly by a stepfather who had a drinking problem.

"I could always tell whether I was going to be beat up by the heavy footfall on the stairs. If my stepfather had been drinking, I would be beat up. If not, he would go to bed," McKuen told an audience of several hundred specialists who work against child abuse.

"I had had both arms broken and my ribs were caved in several times," the 49-year-old writer said.

The abuse prompted him to run away from home periodically, beginning at age 9, he said. But McKuen said he never told his mother or stepfather about the sexual abuse from his relatives.

"Something told me, 'This was a time for blackmail.' I said (to my aunt and uncle) 'Listen. If you ever bother me again, I'm going to tell my mother. I'll tell everyone on the block, everyone in the neighborhood and everyone in this town.' I never had any problem with those people again."

McKuen, who said he had never publicly recounted his experiences before, said the public should not be reluctant to believe that incest and sexual abuse of children are widespread.

"It's happening next door, in the next room," he said. "It's just that nobody talks about it."

McKuen said his travels and experiences have led him to believe that a commonly used estimate that there are as many as 400,000 sexually abused children, ranging from infants to adolescents, is far too low.

"There is every reason to believe that more than 1 million children will be sexually abused at home or driven from the security which we call family life," he said.

Another Willie Nelson enters plea on impersonation, forgery charges

LANCASTER, Calif. (AP) — A 53-year-old man who looks like country and western star Willie Nelson and even bears the name, has pleaded innocent to charges of impersonating the singer, forgery and writing bad checks, authorities said.

A girlfriend brought William David Nelson of Westminster, Colo., to the Antelope Valley sheriff's station Wednesday where he was arrested, Los Angeles County sheriff's Sgt. Chuck Laine said Thursday.

The man entered a plea that day in Antelope Municipal Court to two counts of forgery, one count of false impersonation for financial gain and writing checks against insufficient funds.

"He had everyone convinced in Lancaster that he was Willie Nelson, and according to the detective that arrested him, he looks like Willie Nelson," said sheriff's Sgt. Arthur Robinson, who said the bad checks totaled $22,000.

Detective Jerry Wolf said the man bought a $17,900 car for the woman at a Ford dealership Monday but the check didn't clear.

So the woman brought Nelson to the station, said Laine, and "an investigator went down to the parking lot and arrested him."

LONDON (AP) — It has been 31 years since Vladimir Horowitz performed in Europe, but he wasted no time when he decided to go, hopping a supersonic Concorde to London with his wife Wanda.

The Russian-born pianist arrived from the United States on Thursday, bringing with him an entourage that included his physician, cook and piano tuner.

Horowitz, 77, has a redecorated suite at the Connaught Hotel, complete with its own grand piano.

He is to perform May 22 at London's Royal Festival Hall at the invitation of Prince Charles, patron of the Royal Opera. It's a benefit, expected to raise an estimated $180,000 for new backstage facilities.

On May 29, he will give a second London recital. Plans for two concerts in Paris have been canceled, Gelb said.

• • •

OTTAWA (AP) — Britain's Princess Anne is coming to Canada July 5 and will stay for two weeks, visiting this capital city and heading west to Saskatchewan, Manitoba and the Yukon.

It will be the second royal visit this year for Canada. Queen Elizabeth II and her husband, Prince Philip, were in Ottawa in April for ceremonies to proclaim the country's own constitution.

Princess Anne last was in Canada in November 1979 to gather support for the Save The Children Fund, of which she is president.

• • •

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Conductors Leonard Bernstein and Herbert von Karajan and pianist Claudio Arrau have been chosen to receive the Mexican government's highest honor, the Order of the Aztec Eagle.

President Jose Lopez Portillo's office announced he would present the award today to Bernstein and the Chilean-born Arrau, who are in Mexico to perform in the International Cervantes Festival.

Von Karajan, who conducts the Berlin Philharmonic Orchestra, will receive his decoration in October, the announcement said.

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — The National Enquirer is again the target of a celebrity suit, this one an exploitation charge from Clint Eastwood.

Eastwood is suing for $10 million, claiming the weekly tabloid "used his name and likeness to exploit sales without his consent," his lawyer, Howard King, said Thursday.

WHAT IS A COMPLETE PHYSICAL?
Too often people will go to a physician and call this visit a complete physical check-up. They are only fooling themselves. To do any good you must schedule a thorough examination.

WHAT SHOULD IT INCLUDE?
X-rays, blood tests, urine analysis, cardiagram, etc., as well as a physical examination of the body are all necessary. For a woman, it should include a Pap test and for middle-aged and older it should include some of the more extensive diagnostic tests.

WHAT WILL IT DO?
When you take this type of exam the chances are the physician will be able to spot a potential disease in its early stages when it is easier to treat and cure. Most likely, he will find you in good health and give you great peace of mind.

HOW OFTEN SHOULD YOU TAKE A PHYSICAL?
You should take a complete physical such as described above at least every two years. After 40 it should be once every year. If you have a chronic illness your doctor might want to look you over more often. Let him be the judge.

WHEN YOU ARE ILL.
Should your physician find something wrong, he now has many modern medicines available to treat you. We carry a complete stock for your regular or emergency needs.

Hinckley's mother testifies about 'plan' to help son

WASHINGTON (AP) — By March 1, 1981, John W. Hinckley Jr. was to have a job. By March 30, the day he shot President Reagan, he was to be financially independent.

JoAnn Hinckley refers to those deadlines as "the plan," a last desperate attempt by a mother to help a despondent, suicidal son.

Mrs. Hinckley, the first defense witness in her son's trial, spoke Thursday of her own torment when a psychiatrist told her, as part of the plan: "Give John $100 and tell him goodbye."

Mrs. Hinckley's testimony from the witness stand was continuing today as prosecutors cross-examined her in the trial of her son, who faces possible life imprisonment if convicted of the attempted assassination of President Reagan and the wounding of three other men.

Several times Thursday, she cried in front of the jurors. When she did, her son shielded his face with his hand, appearing to cry along with her.

Her testimony started with a description of a shy boy in grade school, with few friends, who spent most of his time in his room. It ended with the sobbing account of a telephone call on March 30, 1981. It was from a Washington Post reporter, who asked:

"Did you know your son, John Hinckley, is the man they identified as shooting the president?"

Mrs. Hinckley testified about her son's decisions to enter and drop out of Texas Tech University over a seven-year period, his constant moving from one apartment to another, his inability to find a job.

As her son got increasingly despondent, he agreed to see Dr. John Hopper, a psychiatrist near his parents' Evergreen, Colo., home. One day, Hopper gave Mrs. Hinckley a prescription for getting her son back on his feet.

"You need a plan to set restrictions and deadlines. You should put this in writing and make John follow it," Mrs. Hinckley recalled being told.

She said that as part of the plan, John was to earn enough money to support himself.

"By March 1 (1981) John was to have a job," she said. "By March 30, he was to be out of the house living in an apartment on his own."

In fact, John W. Hinckley Jr. never spent March 1981 at the home of his mother and father, John Sr., a wealthy oil company executive.

On March 1, just after he started a job at a suburban Denver newspaper, Hinckley left his parents home.

Search continues for girl

GALLATIN, Mo. (AP) — Volunteers and law enforcement officials continued searching for 9-year-old Jennifer Rebecca Barden, with fading hopes and a feeling that the killing of her suspected kidnapper was justified.

Authorities used bloodhounds to help search Daviess and Caldwell counties Thursday, but the dogs failed to turn up any new clues.

About 15 state and federal law enforcement agents are working on the case full time, but the number of volunteers combing the northwest Missouri countryside had fallen to about 25 by Thursday morning.

Two Louisiana fugitives were charged this week with Saturday's kidnapping of the third grader. One of the men, 27-year-old convicted child rapist Billy D. Wilson, was shot and killed Wednesday by a woman who found him burglarizing her Mira, La. home.

The other suspected kidnapper, 36-year-old convicted burglar Roy James Hill, was arrested Tuesday in Texas. Authorities have dropped federal kidnapping charges against him, but they say that he has not admitted knowing the girl's whereabouts.

Hill is being held in the Fannin County Jail in Bonham, Texas.

Police believe Jennifer got into a stolen pickup truck with Wilson after she went into the street in front of her house to retrieve a toy.

Authorities said Thursday that no charges would be filed against Kay Clayton, who killed Wilson in her Mira, La., home. Wilson, who was carrying a hunting knife and a .32-caliber revolver at the time, was killed instantly by one shot from the woman's .357 magnum revolver.

"I just wish I could have been the one to pull the trigger," said Rosalyn Nelson, Jennifer's mother. "I know how to handle a gun. I do. I wish he wouldn't have died. He might not have told us where (Jennifer) is, but we could have tried."

Davies County Sheriff Kenneth Calvin called the killing "justice in a roundabout way," and admitted that Wilson's death made the search more difficult.

Sgt. Shay East of the Missouri Highway Patrol said many people have asked authorities to search their property or other areas similar to those where psychics say the girl may be found.

"We're not discounting any leads. I'm sure hope has faded in the minds of many, but we're certainly not ready to give up, that's for sure," East said.

More than 250 people gathered at the Gallatin High School gymnasium Wednesday night to listen as Sheriff Calvin reported on the investigation and took names of volunteers to continue the search.

"I think it's more a feeling of injustice that he (Wilson) could die so quickly after doing something so horrible," said Deloris Read, a bookkeeper for the Gallatin School District. "It might be good that it happened this way, so that whatever horrible feelings people have might kind of die with him."

Here are his findings after considerable research:

WHO IS THE READER OF NEWSPAPER ADVERTISING?

• He is likely to be more intelligent and more literate than people who respond to other advertising.
• He is likely to have more money to spend than other people.
• She is over 80% of the women about to go grocery shopping.
• He is nearly every man considering the purchase of any major appliance.
• If she is older she looks for advice on foods, sewing and parties.
• If she is a teenager, she sets the pace in clothing attire.
• The newspaper reader is someone looking for a house to rent, or someone trying to find renters for his house.
• He or she is the whole community with unsatisfied wants and needs.

CITATION BY PUBLICATION
THE STATE OF TEXAS
TO: L.H. ADAMS, DEFENDANT IN THE CAUSE NUMBERED AND STYLED HEREUNDER
YOU ARE HEREBY COMMANDED to appear before the Honorable District Court, 238th Judicial District of Midland County, Texas at the courthouse in Midland, Texas at or before 10:00 a.m. of the first Monday next after the expiration of 42 days from April 15, 1982, the day of issuance of this citation, by filing a written answer to plaintiff's petition that was filed in said court on February 9, 1982, numbered 30,729 on the docket of said Court and styled Martha Madsen, plaintiff v. L.H. Adams, defendant.
A brief statement of the nature of this suit is as follows:
Trespass to try title and for quieting title in Martha Madsen on real property described as Lots 15 & 16, Block 2, Greenhill Terrace Addition, an Addition to the City of Midland, Texas. L.H. Adams claims some right or title to said property by virtue of being a stockholder in Green Hill Terrace Company, a Texas Corporation, which owned the property in question at one time.
As is more fully shown by Plaintiff's Petition on file in this suit.
If this citation is not served within ninety (90) days after the date of its issuance, it shall be returned unserved.
The officer executing this writ shall promptly serve it and make due return thereof according to the requirements of law, and the mandates hereof.
ISSUED under my hand and seal of said Court at Midland, Texas, on the 15 day of APRIL, 1982.

NOTICE BY PUBLICATION
TO: JERRY SMITH, Respondent
GREETINGS
YOU ARE HEREBY COMMANDED to appear and answer before the Honorable 318TH JUDICIAL DISTRICT, Midland County, Texas, at the courthouse at said county in Midland, Texas, at or before 10 o'clock a.m. of the Monday next after the expiration of 20 days from the date of service of this citation, then and there to answer the petition of WYNN AND NANCY JOHNSON, Petitioners, filed in said Court on the 5th day of May, 1982, against JERRY SMITH, Respondent, and said suit being numbered DR-123,451 on the docket of said Court, and entitled "In the Interest of SHAWN LAFAYETTE SMITH, a child," the nature of which suit is a request to terminate the parent-child relationship and adopt the child. Said child was born the 1st day of June, 1973, in Houston, Harris County, Texas.
The Court has authority in this suit to enter any judgment or decree in the child's interest which will be binding upon you, including, but not necessarily limited to, the termination of the parent-child relationship, the determination of paternity, and the appointment of a conservator with authority to consent to the child's adoption.
Issued and given under my hand and seal of said Court at Midland, Texas, this 5th day of May, 1982.

Frugal fun.

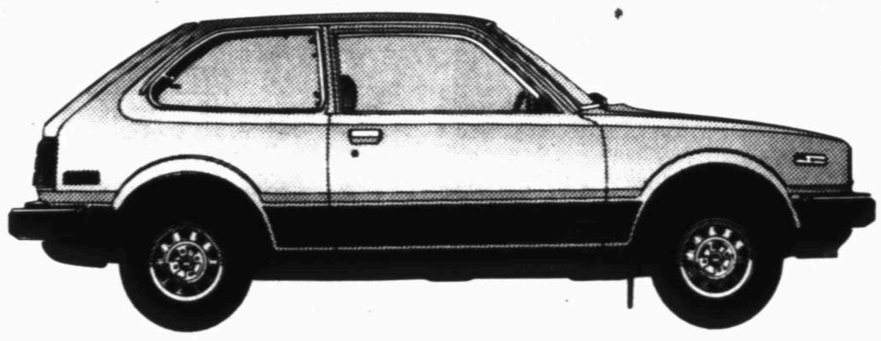

The 1982 Honda Civic Hatchbacks are designed for great handling and economical fun.

With surprisingly generous standard features and engineering advancements.

Like front-wheel drive, 4-wheel independent MacPherson strut suspension and rack and pinion steering. Along with handsome interiors, tinted glass and a remote-controlled outside mirror.

Being frugal was never so much fun.
