PRESBYTERIANS START HUGE FUND FOR MINISTERS

Will Hayes Launches Drive For $15,000,000 As Pension For Preachers

SAYS SUM IS SMALL

Outlines Duties Of Pastors And Says Compensation Woefully Small

Associated Press Dispatch

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., May 17.—Declaring that the compensation of Presbyterian ministers is less, on the average, than that of alien ditch diggers and that this situation is a moral and economic crime, Will H. Hays, speaking as an elder of the Presbyterian church at its annual assembly here tonight, launched a drive to add $15,000,000 to the minister's pension fund.

Religion Essential.

"Religion," Mr. Hays said, "is the one essential industry of the world." Without the perpetuity of the church, he declared, the republic would die.

"Ministers," he continued, "make certain the security of property, for if men cease to believe in God, they cease to respect property."

"The $15,000,000 asked, is "a 'modest' pension fund, although it is large, and less it be judged that my connection with the fabled money of motion pictures makes me refer so slightingly to vast sums, I want to make an explanation early. For a man's fortune, for a woman's dower, for a bank's resources—the millions of dollars hoped for is truly a great sum, shadowy and inaccessible to most of us. But for a supplement to the pension fund of the great Presbyterian church of the United States of America, it is a pittance."

Describes Ministers.

He described the minister as the appointed interpreter of God, the baptizer of children, the consoler in sorrow, the "teacher of eternal values to men caught in the tangles of ephermal things, the snares of

Sheriff Freed In Murder Case After 25 Minutes

Associated Press Dispatch

FORT DAVIS, Texas, May 17.—E. E. Townsend, Brewster county sheriff, was acquitted of the charge of murder by a jury in district court after 25 minutes deliberation today. The charge was brought against Sheriff Townsend as a result of the death of Hatley Van Sickle of Alpine Oct. 29, 1920. Townsend and Van Sickle had a shooting affair at Alpine in which Van Sickle, proprietor of a picture show, was fatally wounded.

The argument, according to Clyde Butrel, a special officer assisting Townsend, occurred when the sheriff searched an automobile for liquor in front of Van Sickle's theatre. Van Sickle came out and the controversy followed. The case was transferred to Jeff Davis county for trial.

Boy Dons Sister's Dress And Eludes 35 Abductors

WHEN Bert Ripley, a leading actor in the senior class play, "A Trial of Hearts," appeared at his front door yesterday afternoon, to go to the Wichita theatre to play in the afternoon performance he found a body of juniors occupying the front yard of his home. He remembered class fights and kidnapings.

He stuck his head out of the door. In an instant 35 able-bodied juniors were on their feet yelling in anticipation. Their alleged intention was to capture the amateur actor. Bert withdrew his head from the door.

Ten minutes later a girlish figure appeared. It was clothed in the latest of spring fashions, with dress, hat and coiffure arranged perfectly. As the new entrant on the scene emerged from the house the 35 juniors rose to their feet. They watched as the object of their gaze walked slowly to a car standing at the curb. Then they sat down on the curb again as the car departed.

A few minutes before the curtain was to rise at the theatre the same girlish figure entered the stage door. Then in a masculine voice:

"Hey, somebody! Get me my costume. These clothes of my sisters are getting hot!"

And the juniors who saw Bert Ripley play his part in the show unusually well are still wondering if there is an underground tunnel under his home.

Resoluton Condemning Theory Of Evolution Causes Furore In Southern Baptist Convention At Kansas City

Delegates Raise Rumpus When Paper Is Read Approving Teachings

KANSAS CITY, May 17.—A resolution, condemning the teaching of evolution, read to the Southern Baptists convention here late tody, created much excitement among the delegates. It was finally referred to a committee on resolutions, after a motion to table the motion had failed to pass the convention. The resolution commended the trustees of William Jewell college, of Liberty, Mo., "for putting to death in that institution this order or system of teaching," condemned "such teaching and feels that its adherents, professing Christianity and at the same time denying the source thereof, are highly insane on the phantom of higher education," and asked that a commission be appointed to aid "in bringing about the death of all such teachings."

Creates Furore.

It was introduced by J. F. Brownlow, of Columbia, Tenn., a banker.

The reading of the resolution brought many delegates to their feet, some offering substitute resolutions, some requesting the striking out of the name of William Jewell college, and others raising points of order.

Much of the afternoon session was turned over to the laymen. Two resolutions were passed.

To Go to Sweden.

One declared that "members of this body who attend the Stockholm gathering are hereby requested to use all available and proper means to have the Baptist World Alliance make a clear and concise deliverance on war, which shall be in full harmony with the spirit and teaching of our Lord Jesus Christ, as set forth in the Holy Scriptures, and shall be in no wise biased by the demands of this world's governments."

The other, adopted as a part of the laymen's report, urged "our theological seminaries, training schools, and Bible institutes to provide a thorough and comprehensive course in kingdom finance in their curricula, in order that pastors and missionary workers may be better prepared to teach their people, and to organize the churches for systematic methods of finance."

Discuss Negro Theology.

Receipts from the $75,000,000 campaigns of more than $1,000,000 during the past year, were reported by Dr. B. D. Gray, of Atlanta, corresponding secretary of the home mission board.

The question of the establishment of a negro theological seminary was put in the hands of a committee, which will report later to this convention.

The convention also referred to a committee the offer of the Southwestern Baptist Theological seminary, of Fort Worth, Tex., that the Southern Baptists take over and operate the school. This committee is to work out the necessary details of the proposed transfer and report to the convention next year.

Associated Press Dispatch

TOPEKA, Kans., May 17.—Loud applause which greeted a statement by a witness that he supposed "there was a klan organization in every town in Kansas," made in the hearing of the state's ouster suit against the ku klux klan, caused the court room to be cleared of all spectators here today.

Swallow was understood to be willing to testify at the present hearing and attorneys for the klan said that H. H. Advertising Manager,
Record News,
Wichita Falls, Texas.
Dear Sir:

Just want to express my appreciation of the results obtained recently through advertising in the "Record News." Attached herewith you will find an ad run by me this morning. Several parties phoned my home before breakfast. Gave them the street number, and upon arrival at the office found a buyer with a check ready.

That's what I call results! This has happened several times the past few weeks—sold the property the first day advertised, and am now of the opinion that as good, or better results, can be obtained by advertising real estate in a morning paper. Those that reply are real buyers and "shoot from the hip."

Yours very truly,

Capital Society Knocked Out When 'She Leaves Him Waiting At the Altar'

International News Dispatch

WASHINGTON, May 17.—Capital society was provided with a nine-day sensation here today in the abrupt cancellation of the marriage plans of Miss Nancy Hoyt, wealthy Washington debutante, and Lieutenant F. Wiseman-Clarke, of the British navy.

The wedding was to have been the society event of the season, and its cancellation came in startling fashion. The guests were assembled, some from thousands of miles away, the minister was waiting—when suddenly the mother of the bride burst into the room with the announcement that the marriage was indefinitely postponed because of her daughter's illness.

All Off.

Early today parents of the British naval officer, who had come from England for the ceremony, left for New York to sail for England. They were accompanied by their son, and it was said the marriage was "off."

Friends of the popular debutante asserted that she had come to the realization that she did not care for the Britisher sufficiently to marry him and consequently refused to go through with the ceremony.

Tragic History.

Friends of the Hoyt family indignantly denied today that the tragic history of the family had anything to do with the cancellation of the nuptials.

A sister of Miss Hoyt's, Elinor, married Philip Hichborn some years ago, and startled society by eloping to Europe with Horace Wylie, 20 years her senior, whom she subsequently married. Hichborn later committed suicide. In 1920 Miss Hoyt's brother, Henry M. Hoyt, an artist, committed suicide.

Ostrich trimming seems to be coming back this season. It has been used and very effectively in the past to trim wraps, frocks and to make separate neckpieces. Summer furs have rather usurped the place of the ostrich neckpiece but this season there is a marked tendency to use ostrich in many instances where fur has formerly been used.

This cape designed by Mary Wall made of black crepe is collared in long uncurled ostrich flues. Faggoting in a long cress barred effect is an interesting feature. It is the type of wrap that will be much seen during midsummer and late August. Note the feather trim on the hat, another sign that the grace of the feather will be with us again this year.

Love Is Not Blind THIS WOMAN SAYS Love Is Friendship

Another Of Those Interesting, Really HUMAN Sketches Of Life By An Every-Day Woman Who Writes For People Like You and Me

BY ALTA HEACOCK
Waurika, Oklahoma.

It was raining the other day; the skies were bleak and gray, the air cold and raw. You had seated yourself in a big easy chair with a book you had been longing to read for months.

And you were so at peace with yourself and the entire world. The big, cheerful living room, with its flowers, pictures, and books, a bit of sewing and some children's playthings, all spoke loudly of cheerful, intimate family living and loving. Even your gay little kitchen, with its scarlet geraniums on the window sill, and its shining kettle singing over the blaze, spoke of dreams come true and of contentment and happiness.

And suddenly, there was a quick rap at the door, and in came a young friend, gray and smudgy-looking as the day outside, through and through to the very soul of her—with a hurt in her eyes that had taken all the happiness and brightness away.

And with her hand in yours, she poured out a story of an ended friendship. A friendship that had once been a living, throbbing, beautiful thing, but which was now broken and lost forever. She ended her story, with: "Is it worth while to make friends only to lose them and to face disappointment and hurt again?"

And you hardened your heart to her, very simply, with the lesson that the years had taught you about friends and their meaning in your life.

"In the first place, someone made the statement, as a joke, I feel sure, that LOVE is blind, and we have gone on through the years thinking it was true. The trouble is that people are blind until they learn to love, for there is nothing so ugly but what LOVE can discern some beauty.

"My friends, and the ones that I love best in this world have not, and could not, see things as I have seen them, and they have been bigger and better in most instances than I have been able to be. If they have disappointed me, I have disappointed them also, and perhaps far more than they have me, for I may be able to forget the things that have hurt me, and they may not."

"Our friends are just like a garden of flowers, that brighten the paths and bloom in their appointed seasons. When the flowers droop and fade we do not grieve because they are gone, but think rather of the pleasure they gave us, secure in the knowledge that if the garden has been rightly tended, other flowers will be coming to take their places. That is true of friends. When they fulfill their purpose in my life, and, walking out of the open door, cease to be my friend, they only leave me richer for having known them."

"True friends have given me many an unexpected lift when the going was rough, they have shown me how to help them, when help was needed, and have listened quietly and gravely, when I talked what must have been to them utter foolishness; gently jeered me when I boasted, praised my ventures, laughed at my jokes, and when there were times when I was anything but a friend to myself, they have taken me by the hand and led me out where it was light."

"It's all been worth while, enduring a few blows to my pride, my conceit and my inexperience. If I had shut myself up to save my priceless feelings from ever being hurt. Think of the friendships that have endured, that I would have missed, and then how very poor I should have found myself."

As you finished speaking, utter peace and contentment seemed to again fill the rooms. You glanced out, and the wind was no longer blowing the rain against your window panes. The sun had burst through the sick, gray blanket of clouds, and was shining on the wet flowers and brushed grass, and touching all the dear familiar homes of your neighborhood with tips of light, making them into strange castles.

And you wondered if the creation of the new heaven and earth would hold more of glory and peace than was yours that day.

Women are just like that.

BRIDGE PARTY

For the bridge party at the home of Mrs. Leggett, a beautiful setting was formed for the players with decorations of La France roses, palms, and ferns, a color scheme of pink and white being carried out in all the appointments, including the delicious refreshment course.

In the games, Mrs. Hugh Weaver won the high score favor, an inlaid silver tea set and Mrs. W. C. Witcher, who was fortunate in the cut, was rewarded with a lovely opalescent string of beads. The honoree, Mrs. Stewart was remembered with a bronze incense burner.

A refreshment plate, consisting of pressed chicken, sandwiches, tea, olives, angel food cake, and strawberry parfet was served. Place favors were poppies of various shades.

Those playing included, besides Mrs. Stewart, Mesdames Robert Hamilton, Gamble, Leslie Collins, R. R. Clark, J. H. McSain, W. C. Witcher, E. A. Ray, Hugh Weaver, C. C. Glover, Ralph Peterson and C. C. Eckman.

Your Heart and Home Problems Solved By Elizabeth Thompsun

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I have a young man in my twenties and know a girl by her first name only, but would like to get better acquainted with her. I can get her address and name from a friend of mine any time I care to ask him.

How should I write when I ask her for a date to a show, dance, etc. Please advise me. SLIM.

If the girl knows you and you have been introduced or become acquainted in a group of friends, it would be all right to write her a letter. Of coure it is out of the question for me to plan your letter, but I can tell you how to begin and end:

(Your own address)
236 Prospect Road,
Springfield, N. Y.
May 15, 1923.

My Dear Miss Brown:

Yours truly,
John Smith.

Make your message simple and state that you would like to take her to the theater the following week and ask her what night would be convenient for her to go.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I have been going with a boy for about a year. We were the best of pals until under his mother's influence, we began to drift apart. This was due to a difference in religion.

He was very thoughtful of me and told me to make the best of it and forget our past and go with some one else. This I cannot do. Please tell me what I ought to do. How can I convince his mother that it will do him no harm to continue his friendship with me?

PERPLEXED.

Since the boy has told you to forget him, he has made his decision and is respecting the wishes of his mother in preference to your love. The only thing for you to do is to proudly let him go. It would be quite useless to try to convince his mother. Time will soften your suffering and you will learn to forget.

Dear Mrs. Thompsun: I am a girl of 16 and I am in love with a boy who seems to think a lot of me. At times he doesn't keep company with any other girl. I have been going with him three years and lately he seems to think more of other girls than he does of me. What shall I do to win back his love? Anxious.

Let the boy go because you cannot force him to go with you after he has lost interest. Perhaps when he sees that you are indifferent to the way he is treating you, he will take more interest in you and will want to come back. Do not urge him to come to see you and do not show him in any way that his treatment makes you suffer.

Dear Mrs. Thompsun: I am a woman 21 years old. I met a young man not long ago who charmed me. We are quite good friends. Not long ago I found that he had something to do in a shady business. I have been worrying about this, as I have given him my love. What shall I do? BETTY TRUE.

Take your love back again. Can't? You'd better if you want to avoid unhappiness. Real happiness must have a foundation of integrity and blameless character on which to rest and a man engaged in a shady business lacks these. Cultivate other friends and interests which will crowd him out of your heart.

CUTTING IN ON CLOSEUPS

The Movies by Josephine Fisk

OLYMPIC—Marguerite De La Motte and Lloyd Hughes in "Scars of Jealousy."
Empress—Harold Lloyd in "Safety Last."
Strand—Madge Bellamy in "The Soul of the Beast."
Majestic—William M. McCormick, Marin Sais, and Robert Burns in "A Son of the Desert."
Gem—Bert Lytell in "The Right that Failed."

THRILLS, PLENTY OF 'EM AT STRAND—

OSCAR, elephant star in Thomas H. Ince's "Soul of the Beast" now running at the Strand proved himself a born movie actor when he insisted on "hogging" the camera during the filming of the picture, and was the cause of much hilarity among the other actors on the Ince lot when he disgustedly regarded a group of fleeing cameramen he had attempted to investigate.

Oscar's keeper was dinstinctly nervous the first day out, for he had no idea just what Oscar would think of the crowds of actors, the bright lights, the shouted directions and the general excitement. Once he had satisfied his curiosity about the magic three-legged boxes, however, nothing bothered the big beast further, and he placidly accepted the flattering attention paid him by everyone in sight, but insisted on playing right in front of the lens. The cameras were then concealed, and some of the most unusual scenes were caught while the elephant thought himself entirely unobserved.

The production is one of the most unique ever shown. It tells the story of a hapless little circus drudge and her elephant who run away from the injustice of a harsh stepfather. In the woods of Southern Canada they meet with astounding adventures and eventually find happiness.

LOVE, KIDNAPING, FIGHTING AND ALL—

"SCARS of Jealousy" wonderful story of the heredity of blue-blooded Acadian French aristocracy triumphing over the environment of the back mountain-feud country of Northern Alabama is now at the Olympic.

Lloyd Hughes and Barbara La Mott who are starring experienced some real thrills during the filming of the picture, when the timber flume on which they were escaping a real forest fire caught unexpectedly and the two were forced to make a quick jump into the river below. Lloyd Hughes a rough mountain lad wins the hearts of the girl fans, when he kidnaps the good-for-nothing son of a fine old southern family and pounds manhood into him with the aid of fists, and merciless toil, winning the love of the girl who later rescues him from lynching at the hands of mountain clansmen.

The thread of Longfellow's immortal "Evangeline" has been picked up in this gripping story of a strange hill people of Alabama—descendants of the Acadians of Nova Scotia—and their clash with a polished family of the old south.

AH, HA! THE SHEIK, HE COMES BACK—

"A SON of the Desert" greatest of the Sheik pictures which appear at the Majestic theatre Friday and Saturday, is a story of a wild desert love, in Arabia. Although the scene is in the desert and the background foreign, the United States is ably represented, with the hero a Texas cowboy and the heroine an art student from the states. Quite enough to make almost any sort of a plot interesting!

And of course there is the Shiek—in this instance Shiek Hammid Beni Zayad, with all the treachery, power and skill in love—making his race, who captivates the admiration of the beautiful Helen. He suggests a sight seeing trip into the desert. She accepts, although against the advice and pleading of her cowboy friend.

She goes and—well you will have to go to the Majestic Friday or Saturday to see for yourself what happened. The story is active and interesting throughout, and with actors such as William Merrill McCormick, Marin Said, Robert Burns, Faith Hope, and James Welsh will be well worth seeing.

LOOK AT LLOYD'S LATEST AND LAUGH—

"SAFETY Last" ought to have been "Safety Not At All" or something to that effect, for if there is any semblance of safety attached to some of the stunts Harold Lloyd uncorks in his comedy now showing at the Empress it wasn't apparent when the reviewer saw the film.

The picture is one in which the arch comedian outdoes himself, and the net result, however it may endanger his own neck, is one eminently satisfactory from the spectators point of view. His dizzy gyrations atop the elevated end of a skyscraper are calculated to cause trouble for weak hearts and his whole line of action is such as to provide one of the best movie entertainments seen here in many moons.

NOW HERE'S A SURE-ENOUGH TREAT—

THEATRE-goers who've recalled other days when they went out for an evening of entertainment with big-time vaudeville stars as the attraction should be interested in Manager Day's anniversary week attraction at his Strand theatre. This is the Harmony Four. They're really good. Just in from Salt Lake City, where they played a continuous run for weeks and weeks, this company of five artists is better than you and I would expect here in Wichita Falls. Go and see—and hear—and applaud for yourself.

SENIORS PLEASE IN CLASS PLAY

"Trial Of Hearts" Given Before Large Crowd At Wichita Theatre

The high school senior class play, "A Trial of Hearts" was presented last night at the Wichita theater before a capacity audience. Not a break was made in the entire performance which lasted for more than two hours and the cast, composed entirely of graduating seniors went through its part with composure that would have done credit to professional actors. The play was also presented Thursday afternoon and although the audience was not as large as it was last night a fairly large crowd was on hand when the curtain went up.

The play had for its setting a college atmosphere and concerned the activities and trials of college students. Several years elapsed in the course of the presentation and the final act showed the various members of the cast beginning to take up their life activities.

To attempt to select the leading characters in the cast would be a hard task. All took heavy parts, but Elizabeth Carrigan, Joe Bashara, Bert Ripley, Clyde Straus and Vaugn Buchanan did especially good work. Thelma Cain and James Fox also took heavy parts and probably fitted into their parts in the cast better than any others.

The cast was as follows:

Gretchen Van Antwerp, with a knowledge of "Frats"—Thelma Cain.
Jerry Jones, Gretchen's pal—James Fox.
Bess Davis—Mary Frances Collier.
Betty Davis—Bernice Gohlke.
Marie, a French maid—Louise Jenkins.
Elinor Dean, a Kappa Psi senior—Marjorie Woolsey.
Roger Fairfax, flirtatiously inclined—Bert Ripley.
Josephine Joyce—Frankie Addickes
Louise Safford—Helen Knotts.
Patricia Patterson, leader of the Kappa Pis—Louise Scott.
Barbara Lynn, a popular Freshman—Stella Winters.
Teddy Van Antwerp, an adherent of Kappa Psi—Mercer Parks.
Phiscilla Prescott, leader of the Delta Chis—Dorothy Nolen.
Lucile Seymour—Anabel Couper.
Jean Neal—Gene Nelson.
Irene Merril—Faye Green.
Dorothy Dillon, a Delta Chi alumna—Bernice Martin.
Jack Harding, an adherent of Delta Chi—Courtney Howell.
Mrs. Van Antwerp, of great importance—Elizabeth Carrigan.
Philip Vivian, Dudley's best friend Clyde Straus.
Dudley Van Antwerp, a college man—Joe Bashara.
Honor Van Antwerp, Dudley's wife—Vaugn Buchanan.
Virginia Randolph, Dudley's former sweetheart—Elizabeth Brown.
Mrs. Putnam, chaperone at Kappa Psi house—Janie McCalister.
Mary Day, Kappa Psi tennis fiend Louise Deaton.

William Lewis Smith, president of Washington Lee university, will be the principal speaker at the Wichita theater tonight, when 137 seniors receive their diplomas. Dr. Smith is regarded as one of the best speakers in the South and the school authorities were fortunate in securing his services.

Immediately following the exercises the seniors will go to the Kemp hotel where the annual banquet will be held. Several of the class members will make speeches and a good time is anticipated by all the seniors who expect to bid farewell to their classmates in the final class function of the year.

The Red Cross degree was put on at 4 o'clock, followed by the Knights of Malta in full form and after that the dinner. The Commandry opening in full form and the Temple degree followed.

REMEMBERED 4-CENT DEBT

Edward W. Bok in the Atlantic Monthly:

Mr. Curtis (Cyrus H. K. Curtis) forgets names, but he never forgets faces. As a little boy, he was taken by his mother into an ice cream parlor in Portland, Me., and treated to a plate of ice cream. It cost six cents but he did not know it.

The ice cream tasted good to the boy, and the next day he went in, ate a dish of the ice cream, and put two cents on top of the table—all he had. A negro had waited on him and was furious.

Forty years later, Mr. Curtis was in Portland, in the winter, and saw a negro shoveling snow. He accosted him and asked him if he once worked in Robertson's restaurant. The negro said that he had, and the year corresponded with the ice cream incident. He recalled it to the negro, who did not remember it.

"Well, here are the four cents," said Mr. Curtis, as he gave the astonished negro a dollar bill and walked away.

Human life will be at least 20 years longer within the next 50 years, says the American Public Health association.

A Pa ousands Celebrate Old Indian Fight at Newcastle

Attrac— Ano R TELLS 'RED BATTLE

Barbecue, Baseball Game And Other Features On Program

Special Dispatch to Record News
NEWCASTLE, Texas, May 17.—
A crowd estimated from 7,000 to 10,000 people gathered Wednesday to celebrate the anniversary of the battle of Little Salt Creek and other famous Indian engagements.

The Kutch-Manning Pioneer association, organized some years ago, had in mind not only to commemorate these events, but ultimately to erect a suitable monument to the memory of all who lost their lives in this vicinity during the Comanche Indian outbreaks.

Promptly at 11 o'clock, under the auspices pavilion, Rev. J. E. Chase, pastor of the First Christian church, Newcastle, on behalf of the town and the association, welcomed the throng that had gathered and in turn presented Uncle Billie Kutch, the only living survivor of the Little Salt fight, who told in a simple way the story of the fight.

Mr. Kutch is 91 years old and the entire audience gave him the chautauqua salute when he began to speak. Seated on the platform were a great number of his former pioneer friends.

Indians Present

A small band of Comanches, Chief Hoy Koy Pitty and party, dressed in full war dress, were on the platform. In the afternoon this same Indian visited old Fort Belknap and told how he had covered this section many years ago when the white man had to run before them. He was able to recall the exact location of many historic spots but would not say whether he was at the Little Salt fight or not.

Big Barbecue

A huge barbecue was served at noon on the grounds. In the afternoon speeches were made by many of the old guard who had come for the reunion. A ball game was played between Throckmorton and Newcastle in which the former won, 1 to 4. The Cotton Belt excursion furnished the amusement for the picnickers.

Thursday was old settlers' day and Congressman Guinn Williams, Hon. O. A. P. Dickson and others spoke.

The Kutch-Manning Pioneer association was first organized and held its reunion on the site of the little Salt fight, on what is now known as the Eichelberger ranch, but following the reunion last year, it was voted to move the location to Newcastle and make this a permanent event. Owing to dissatisfaction with this action on the part of the association, some of the people in the northeastern part of the county planned a picnic for the sixteenth of May on the Eichelberger ranch. This caused some confusion, but most of the people who went there in the forenoon, after discovering their mistake, came to Newcastle in the afternoon.

TWO FROM GRAHAM ATTEND CELEBRATION

GRAHAM, May 17.— Approximately 200 representatives of the Graham chamber of commerce attended the two picnics at Jean and Newcastle yesterday, commemorating the old Indian fight in which several cowmen of Young and Palo Pinto counties, though greatly outnumbered, beat off several hundred attacking Indians. The defenders sustained the loss of three men killed and two badly wounded.

Great crowds attended the one held at Jean on the scene of the old battlefield on the Eichelberger ranch. The place is a deep gully near a small knoll of ground. The crowd was so much larger than expected that coffee was rushed from Olney a second time to supply all. Congressman Guinn Williams furnished the principle speech of the day. There were several other speakers.

This year a picnic is being held at Newcastle due to dissatisfaction with the grounds near Jean. Indians have been secured from a nearby reservation and a carnival is in full blast. Free barbecue and water have been provided on the grounds made historic from the well that Robert E. Lee is said to have dug. Guinn Williams was scheduled to speak Thursday, the picnic lasting two days.

Infertile Eggs Bring Five To Twenty Cents More On Local Poultry Market

By AL OLSTON,
Record News Poultry Editor.
Poultry Extension Department, Marlois Coal and Feed Company.
Phone 4351.

George W. Ray proprietor of the Wichita Pecan and Hide company of 204 Tenth street, who is one of our leading produce men buying and selling chickens by the car loads, in answer to a request from me as to what he thought was one of the most unnecessary evils in the local poultry trade says:

"Olston, the fertile egg—If you could get the people who sell eggs to realize the loss they are enduring by selling fertile eggs, the poultry column will be doing a blessed service to mankind. The demand in Wichita Falls alone is too tremendous for the infertile eggs. Not only are the poultry folks losing money but also the produce men, and the many cafes and hotels who are forced to use the fertile eggs because the supply is many times short for our local trade much less that for outside shipments."

Dr. Lacy, city health officer, states that the infertile eggs are a necessity to good health and the fertile eggs the opposite. Dr. Lacy has also promised to let me have some cuts and written matter in regard to the health humanity from eggs, he requested me to breech more infertile eggs through these columns.

Asks Readers Help.

As I promised both the above gentlemen, I will do my best. I now in turn ask every reader, who has chickens of any kind and are selling eggs to help me in this matter. I remember the first poultry yards I worked in as a small chap in Springs Valley, New York. Here we were raising some of the finest white leghorns I believe I have ever seen but somehow my employer wasn't making good. He was one of these set kind of fellows who had very little use for the county demonstration. In fact, he had very little use for any one who would differ with his ideas on the management or raising of poultry. He often would say to me the idea of so-and-so trying to tell him that he didn't mix his feed right or that "I haven't got enough of this or that in it."

He'd scoff at the idea of keeping a proven balance of mixed mash so his hens could have access to it at all times.

Thought He Knew It All.

In fact he thought he knew it all and I used to think he did. He had a yearly contract with one of the largest hotel in New York city for eggs at that time. Just about a half mile from one place was another poultry man who also had white leghorns but he was apparently making a wonderful success of the business. One day we were short on eggs and I was sent to his place to get enough to finish our crates. While there I asked many questions and found out he fed nothing but proven mashes and scratch feeds, also he was getting twice the number of eggs we were from the same number of hens and his contract paying ten cents per dozen more for the eggs than my employer was receiving although they both was signed up with the same hotel in New York city.

Leaving for home, I said to him, "Mister, how is it you get more money for your eggs than the boss does? Ain't leghorn eggs all the same? Laughingly, he replied, "I reckon so, sonny, but you see I only sell infertile eggs, pure white shell and stamp 'em, while you fellows are just selling eggs."

The Mrs. and I worked co-operating together, calling in help from the local county agent and our neighbors. We too were soon only selling infertile eggs. Of course we had our contract to live up to at the old price, but as we started in at once buying some good balance feed our hens began laying more eggs and we were soon able to sell enough eggs locally to make a new profit clear to the end of the year. The boss came back and carried on the business for several years later. Why, then, if we can sell our extra roosters and cocks as capons, breeders, fryers or broilers, why not do so and get the money for them and invest same for the uplifting of the home?

Infertile eggs are selling from five to 20 cents per dozen more in Wichita Falls than you can get for the other. I find it also profitable and also a fine advertisement to stamp the eggs with your name and date when culling, sifting infertile eggs.

A Practical Example.

Tom Fields, owner of the lane road poultry farm who sells nothing but the infertile eggs, outside of those for hatching purposes, has given me the following records kept by him from his flock of 300 beautiful white leghorn hens since January 1, 1923.

January—eggs layed, 5,185; eggs sold, $156.85. Expenses $73.20.

February—eggs layed 4,700; eggs sold $103.60. Expenses $61.65.

March—eggs layed, 8,370; eggs sold, $184.45. Expenses $77.25.

April—eggs layed 8,272. (This month he sold some hens) eggs sold $179.30. Epenses $73.75.

He also sold $220 worth of young chicks during the month of April. Mr. Fields got from five cents to $1.50 more per dozen for his eggs than the local merchant pays for just eggs.

We have the market here for your Produce the eggs and watch the money roll to you.

MISS DODSON HONORED WITH PRETTY SHOWER

CHILLICOTHE, May 17.—Among the beautiful courtesies for Miss Beryl Dodson, whose marriage to George Self of Crowell, occurred Thursday evening, none proved more enjoyable or attractive than the shower given at the Methodist church last Friday afternoon, by Mrs. C. E. Carlock and Mrs. Irvy Tyers.

The church was a veritable spring garden with its decorations of pot plants, ferns and spring flowers, the mound being banked with spring blossoms.

The guests were greeted by the charming hostess and ushered into this fairlylike garden, where delicious punch was served.

Mrs. J. E. Barnes presided at the piano rendering many appropriate selections.

The gifts were attractively arranged on a table and as the honoree made her entrance and was ushered to the gift table, she presented a picture of loveliness in a Lavin green flat crepe with black lace and a large black picture hat. In her own sweet way Miss Dodson expressed her appreciation of the many beautiful gifts, which consisted of silver, cut glass and linens, also a recipe book in which the guests registered and left their favorite recipe.

During the registration of guests, Mrs. Ben Woford very sweetly sang, "Will You Remember?" and Miss Kilgore very beautifully gave "Goodbye."

HOW OLD DOES A HEN GET ANYWAY? VERNON HAS REAL QUEEN TUT OF BARNYARD!

Special Dispatch to Record News
VERNON, May 17.—Egypt has its King Tut-Ankh-Amen, but Vernon has its Queen Tut-Ank-A-Hen who rules over the Bantam kingdom in the banyard of F. M. Taylor on South Main street. Queen Tutess is said to be the oldest ruler of the cackle kingdom found by henologists.

When Mr. Taylor moved into the house he occupies at present 11 years ago, he found Queen Tutess setting on a dozen eggs in the stable. At that time she apparently had ruled for several years, because her crown was worn with a droop and her gills had the tinge of age. But years meaning nothing in the life of a Pharaette, Queen Tut-Cackle continued to rule and to produce her portion of fruit. Her owner declares that she lays an egg every three days now and still takes an interest in hen parties.

NO-MAN'S-HAND

By Hugh MacNair Kahler

WHO'S WHO IN THE STORY:

Alferd Bleeker, a wealthy, somewhat pompous magnate of the town of Pittland, comes to

Olaf Larsen, chief of detectives, with a story of threats he had overheard against

Phil Corcoran, a young man whom Bleeker has befriended in spite of his wild habits and who apparently is doing his best to keep on the good side of his wealthy patron. Mr. Bleeker says that one night while Corcoran was playing cards with

Carol Bleeker, his young second wife, he had inadvertently caught a telephone message for Corcoran—"You are just begging for a bullet!" and that later Corcoran had received a letter containing the words "Last warning. If you care for a whole skin."

Silvio Farone, one of Larsen' men, finds that Corcoran made a practice of beating creditors and that he was "a beautiful piece of work in a parlor."

Charlotte Gray, a young woman, is visited by Larsen. She with Larsen himself and Walter Enfield, a conscientious criminal lawyer have formed secretly what she terms "The justice syndicate." It's purpose is to carry out the principles of Scandinavian criminal practice which unites the accused's lawyer and the prosecution to ascertain jointly his guilt or his innocence. This differers from the American method of having the accused's guilt or innocence established often according to the abilities of the opposing lawyers.

Bobby Rackham, Miss Gray tells Larsen, was wrongfully sent to prison. He had confessed the embezzlement of $8 000.

Amy Weldon.

"How?" Larsen was only mildly interested.

"The youngster was engaged, you remember—a stenographer in the same office," said Charlotte. "Amy Weldon. Stood by him all the way through, and ever since, too. Spends money to go down and bribe the governor to pardon him. Always down at Stillburn on visiting days.

"Any way," she went on "we've got the wrong man in jail for that little job, and there's no way we can put the right one there. It's enough to make one swear—this blind, stupid, clumsy thing we all sit and revere".

"You interest me strangely," jestingly commented Larsen.

"I'll do more than that before I've finished," Miss Gray declared. "This girl, Amy Weldon, has just left me. She's got the truth out of young Rackham at last. He had refused to tell even her what he had done with the money, you know. Well, he's told her now!

"He took the money, just as charged. He knew it was wrong, and when they caught him he plead guilty and took his medicine without whining. That's all straight enough."

"Then I don' see the cause for all of the excitement," said Larsen. "That seems to be fairly definite, dosen't it?"

"Oh! don't joke, Olaf!" Charlotte protested. "There's such a thing as motive, isn't there? The law recognizes it, even. This boy stole this money because he believed he'd do a greater wrong by not stealing it! He was a fool, of course, but he was an honest, well-meaning, splendid sort of a fool at that. He had a friend—an older man, a much more sophisticated fellow who had a great deal o influence with him. A kind of blind hero worship apparently!

"This friend came to him in great trouble, with a story about being on the point of losing his share in a mining concern from which he received his only income, all for want of $8.000 to meet a loan he had negotiated on the stock. He made a good story of it no doubt. And he made Bobby Rackham believe that he could repay a loan in two or three days, if Rackham got one for him."

"Pretty thin stuff, Charlotte. I'm surprised that you—"

"I don't believe it. I've proved it! It's all true. He was so wrought up in his friend's behalf that he took the money, gave it—every penny of it—to his friend. And when they caught him he kept his mouth shut, because he knew if he talked he knew he'd make things worse than ever for Corcoran—"

"Corcoran. Phil Corcoran?" Larsen sat up with a jerk. "Was he—"

"Surprised? I'm not; I've heard things about that sweet young soul—"

"No. I'm convinced—now. Go on. This Rackham boy held his tongue to keep Corcoran out of it, knowing that it would look like complicity—"

"Yes. Corcoran had a good explanation for not paying up before the trial. If it hadn't been for this girl, Amy Weldon, he'd probably gotten away with it till doomsday. But she put one and one together, till she guessed the truth. Then she looked it up. And she found that Corcoran did own some mining stock—an equity in it, anyway—and that there was a loan of $8,000 against it, and that he paid off the loan. The stock book shows that he sold the shares the very day that he received them. He got a bit over $7,000 for them."

Larsen looked very sober. "If that's all straight we can make things pretty hot for our sophisticated young friend, I should say."

"How? We can't prove it. He's been canny enough not to give Rackham a line of writing. He's communicated with him very cleverly all along. We've got nothing but Rackham's bare word for it. And Phil Corcoran's a household pet of that strutting old turkey gobbler, Alfred Bleeker. He laughed at Amy when she spoke to him the last time. Told her to go as far as she liked and see what it got her!"

"He never would be missed," quoted Larsen, quite soberly this time. "If this girl and Rackham can tell a straight story, Rackham'll get a commutation or a pardon. I'll promise that."

She laughed. "Fine! He's due to be paroled a week from Thursday. We're pretty late with our pardons."

"Well, even so, we can talk to the bonding company which had to make good. I think they'll be interested. And they have a way of beating the ground under anybody they don't like, those people. I shouldn't wonder if they had our bright young friend dancing quite nicely before they finished with him."

"I've thought of that. But what good will it do Rackham—and Amy Weldon? Three good years gone out of their lives—and all the rest of their lives spoiled! What she's afraid of—and what I'm afraid of—is something else. Do you know what she wanted me to do? You'd never guess."

"I won't try. I'm not guessing just now. I'll see this thing through—"

"She wanted Walter to find some way to keep them from garoling Rackham until Corcoran can be persuaded to get out of reach. She's afraid—"

"By Jove! I hadn't thought of that! Funny, too, when I—" He caught himself in time to check the words. He had no right or need to tell Charlotte about poor old Alfred Bleeker. "She thinks—"

"She knows! That boy's been caged up until he's half a beast—and he realizes the fact that the whole thing was just a way to get a few thousand dollars extra spending money. He dosen't believe there's any chance of getting back on his feet. He dosen't care what happens to him. He's just living to get Corcoran at the wrong end of a gun. Amy Weldon knows."

"Well, one of us had better sic young Rackham when they spring him at Stillburn. He'll see reason all right, if we don't let him starve and brood. That's what does it."

"Perhaps. Well have to try it anyway—unless you can get Corcoran away or in jail before then or in in jail before then."

"Gad, I hadn't thought of it like that; but I wouldn't wonder if I could make him move. That's funny, too. It all fits in beautifully with what I've got to keep under cover for the present. Tell you some time. It's funny, and not altogether funny, either."

Usually such a speech would have filliped Charlotte's ready curousity, tut today it slipped by unremarked. She nodded inattentively as Larsen went out.

He was not surprised by Silvio Farone's supplementary report later in the day. Phil Corcoran began to look like what insurance companies would describe as an extraordinary poor risk.

There were three names mentioned in Farone's chronicle, any one of which seemed entirely eligible for the office of executioner in Mr. Corcoran's case.

"A lad in his line had ought to look 'em up first," said the oracular Silvio, "an' make sure they ain't got no able-bodied relations. This bird listens mighty like a sudden finish to me."

Larsen found himself in Alfred Bleeker's gloomily magnificent library presently, while a manservant scarcely less august than Bleeker himself departed in search of his master.

The room interested Larsen as cleverly expressive of its owner. There was in everything the same slight over-statliness which made Bleeker himself pathetically ridiculous to the penetrating eye, a note of pretense of an elaborate surface concealing a hollow-sounding sham, so assiduously that it deceived itself.

The furniture was massive and deeply carven, but Larsen's critical inspection needed only a glance to know that it was rather indifferent counterfeit of the solid, old stuff it pretended to be.

The bookcases fronted with glass held the kind of literature he had expected—long rows of uniform editions of ponderous authors.

He chuckled as he inspected them, trying to imagine Mr. Alfred Bleeker solemnly reading his way through them as a duty to himself.

His chuckle fairly shook him when looked more closely and discovered that row after row was composed of a strip of tooled leather, tacked on a hidden board—no more than a counterfeit of the backs of the volumes!

Alfred Bleeker to the life! He craved the appearance of a book lover, but he could not indure the price. This represented the comptomise between those warring desires.

Larsen glanced at the taboret which held humidor, cigarettes and ash trays. These seemed to be genuine hammered silver. But like the rest they were imitation—a thin wash of electroplating on a brass base!

He opened the humidor, half prepared to find it stocked with the cheapest cigar procurable. To his surprise it revealed a tempting row of the aureate perfectos which had attested his speculations before.

Evidently Bleeker conceded himself true luxury in this one respect!

Somehow the circumstances lifted him in Larsen's regard. At least he knew and smoked a sound cigar without counting the cost.

Bue the electrical cigar lighter which stood on the taboret brought back the smile. Bleeker might smoke a costly perfecto, but his instinct compelled him to save the waste of matches.

Larsen examined the device with casual interest, remembering suddenly that Bleeker's business concerned such articles as this—he had made his money from the manufacture of electro-thermal apparatus in the early days of the industry.

Probably this lighter had cost him nothing. That explained its presence here, then. If he had had to buy it, he might have clung to the extravagance of the matchbox after all.

Presently Bleeker strutted in.

"I thought I had better come at once," he announced. "We've made investigations to-day, and they incline me to think that your friend is in very real danger as long as he Stays in Pittland. In fact, I am here to suggest that you use your influence to persuade him to take a short trip—for his health—say, Africa, or South America, for a year or two."

Mr. Bleeker folded his hands and looked very grave.

"Do you mean to say that the police confess themselves unable to protect a law-abiding citizen in—in the home of—in my home."

"It's hardly an official admission, sir. It's my personal opinion. We do our best, of course. But you seemed to be deeply attached to young Corcoran. If I felt toward him as you do I should by all means council him to get away from Pittland and stay away—indefinitely."

As he spoke a woman passed by in the hall—Mrs. Bleeker. Larsen guessed as his eye photographed her. She was years younger than her husband, probably in the early thirties, with a cold, clear beauty the chief found repellent rather than attractive.

OIL IN BAYLOR.

The oil boom is coming nearer and you can never tell where it is going to strike next. Wells are being drilled on all sides, and wildcats seem to be in style these days.

A test on the Sorelle land over the line in Archer county, 2,000 feet is being started near Megargel.

A well will be sunk on the Portwood ranch to the southeast.

A contract has been made for drilling on the J. W. Stevens land, about two miles southwest of Westover.

There will be a well drilled on the Gatzkie land in the southeast part of Baylor county. G. B. Jordan and associates of Wichita Falls will drill this well and they are to begin by June 10.

We understand that Mr. John Dormaier has a contract on his land near Westover.

The Boone well, over the line into Archer, east of Seymour, is down 1,535 feet.—Seymour Banner.

BERNARD NO. 1 SPUDDED IN

The H. Bernard well on Joe B. Matthews ranch three and a half miles north of Albany, on Albany and Throckmorton road, Sec. 585, T. E. & L. company survey, was spudded in Monday. This is to be a thousand foot hole. They have a good rig out there, and it sure looks like business. Mr. Bernard is an experienced oil man, and says that he has not formed the habit of drilling dry holes, and right here on the tea pot dome is where the shallow oil pool is going to be uncovered. And say, that is a good looking location, yes, a natural tea pot dome, and here is hoping that they will get a good well here.—Albany News.

Ardmore is practically assured of a crack aviation unit as a part of the advancement program of the state national guard, according to the statement of Captain Frank O. ROAD TO MEGARGEL.

In company with Wayne King, yours truly made a business visit to Megargel last Saturday. We found the roads just fair until we arrived within about five miles of Megargel where we met the big road working crew and equipment of Precinct No. 3 headed direct for Archer City and unreeling behind them a stretch of good road smooth as a pike. Verily Commissioner Bishop not only knows exactly how to build roads, but also exactly where to build them. We found Megargel surrounded by good growing crops and wildcat oil test wells. We found Megargel streets teeming with farmers, and also found the roughnecks and drillers of the Swastika field working out of Megargel, or camping in the field. We didn't find the Megargel editor. We didn't hunt for him. He writes like he would like to consign us to his hell box. Most folks talk worse than they write. We didn't want some of it.—Archer County News.

Uncommon Sense

ADJUSTING THE MACHINE

The fact that it was necessary for the law to step in in order to make people save an extra hour of daylight brings home the fact to the worker how little he is master of himself.

Without the law he could have saved his own daylight. It was only necessary for him to rise an hour earlier in the morning.

But, perhaps because of his herd instinct, perhaps because he is just naturally lazy, he could not be persuaded to do so until the law set the clock ahead, which forced all his friends and neighbors to do the same thing.

When a manufacturer desires to get more work out of a particular machine, he has to readjust it.

By a change in the pulleys and belting it can be speeded up. And if it is built for that sort of adjustment it will begin to turn out more work automatically.

The human machine is built for adjustment.

Ordinarily it is run at about one-third of its capacity.

By speeding it up a little through the day, or fixing its hour of starting a little earlier, it can be made to do more work, and to do it just as well.

The daylight saving regulation is productive of more work only because it uses an hour of the day when work is easier to do when the air is cool, and the inspiration that comes with early morning gets into the blood.

But daylight saving cuts from one end of the day the hour it adds to the other.

The individual can adjust his machine to increase its summer time capacity without the loss of this extra hour.

In fact he does it if he is a golf addict, or a baseball fan.

But neither golf nor baseball, while both are wholesome amusements, are going to increase productivity, and upon a man's productivity in his working years depends his comfort and peace of mind when the muscles and the brain are weary of working, and want to enjoy a little rest.

What governments have done to adjust the human machine can be better done by the machine owners and operators. Use the extra hour the law gives you, and keep right on at work till the old hour of closing.

Through the summer you will gain many days of activity. And you will not be tired out. Nobody gets tired out short of ten or eleven hours of work. The man who does the big work of the world need far more time than that.

More Truth Than Poetry

By James J. Montague

TOO ROUGH

(Premier Mussolini has barred American actors from the Italian stage.)

An actor, I hold, has small power for harm—
Except to the ladies in a play—
I never would shudder with qualms of alarm
When one of them headed my way.
They are usually gentle, and lacking in guilt;
Off the stage they are cheerful and bland,
And why Mussolini has found it worth while
To bar them, I can't understand.

If our captains of industry started for Rome
And cabled the news in advance,
That they meant in the future to make it their home,
He well might regard them askance.
For inside of a week, when they'd set up the shops,
They would have all the trade of the town,
And would take, in spite of the king and the cops,
All the buildings that were not nailed down.

If even our lawyers some day should decide
To embark for the sunshiny clime,
Where the legal profession might freely be plied
In an alien field for a time,
The shrewd Mussolini would wisely object,
And bid them all stay where they are,
For the lawyers of Italy couldn't expect
To cope with our men of the bar.

But the men of his country are actors at heart—
Whatever they say or they do,
And wherever they are they are playing a part,
And sometimes a hundred or two.
A country like that, when from year unto year
All life is a romantic play,
May well rest assured it has nothing to fear
From the boys that would come from Broadway!

What Today Means To You

By MARY BLAKE

TAURUS

Unimportant planetary conditions prevail after the very favorable aspects culminate in the early afternoon. This makes the latter part of today likely to be inauspicious. Therefore one would be safe in attending to ordinary affairs only.

A child born today, if a girl, should be taught music. This will be her only talent and if cultivated will lead her to a brilliant career.

It is very plain to see that if today is your birthday you are entirely different from the average person. If you can't wander off into the wilderness or to uninhabited places, you are quite happy to sit for hours just thinking of strange experiences that you have had or imagining what the next one will be.

You are destinced to a very peculiar vocation merely because you are not contented with ordinary things and throw them aside when they come your way. You are very vain and like to be in the limelight and it may be this that spurs you on to accomplish the extraordinary, hoping to gain publicity through your strange achievements.

For example, you would like to go to the North Pole, cross the Atlantic Ocean in an airplane or hunt wild animals in the jungles of Africa. However you will meet with very great success in whatever you finally desire to center your attention.

Patience is a virtue and this is one that you surely have and with your inventive facilities and industriousness you will undoubtedly create valuable inventions.

You will have more money than you will really need for the gratification of your simple personal tastes, but it will come in handy when you start off on a wild adventure.

You are sympathetic, generous and thoughtful, not over any great length son, as you have small patience with conof time to be sure, nor with any one pertinued gloom. However, you are so hale and hearty to so vast a number of people that your loss in quality is more than compensated in quantity.

If you ever wonder why you lack the love and affection you most desire, think well over your own nature and temperament. You must give in order to receive, and you rarely give even time or thought to such things.

Well known people born on this date are: Wm. T. Bull, surgeon; Wm. Steinitz, chess player and analyist.

O STOCKS GO TO LOW LEVEL

Leading Oils, Chemicals And Copper Shares Affected

Associated Press Dispatch

NEW YORK, May 17.—Encouraged by their success in depressing prices in the last weeks, operators for the decline continued their search for weak spots in today's stock market. While nearly 40 stocks were forced down to new low prices for the year, including a number of leading coppers, chemicals and oils, good buying support was forthcoming for the usual leaders particularly in the steel and equipment groups, while a few stop loss orders were touched off here and there, bear traders were unable to bring out any large volume of forced liquidation, the day's sales running well under 600,000 shares.

Among the issues which dropped to new low records for the year were Standard Oil of New Jersey, Atlantic Refining, Anaconda and Cerro de Pasco Copper, Virginia-Carolina Chemical "A" and "B" and American agricultural chemical.

There were three announcements of increased dividends during the day—United States Realty, which increased its annual rate from 6 to 8 percent; Texas Gulf Sulphur, which went from 5 to 6 percent annually, and Quaker Oats, which raised it quarterly dividend from 2 1-2 to 3 per cent.

Early selling of the oil shares was based on the bearish interpretations placed upon the long explanation published by the Standard Oil company of New Jersey in its official publication of the charges of the LaFollette committee.

Dealings in foreign exchanges were dull. Sterling eased slightly to $4.62 1-8, and French francs advanced 3 points to 6.67 cents. German marks held steady around .0021 3-4.

New Manager Secured For P.-T. Beauty Parlor

Announcement was made Thursday by the Perkins-Timberlake company of the arrival here of Miss Anna Lane of Fort Worth to take charge of the store beauty parlors. Miss Lane comes highly recommended from the Sellers Marinello Shop of Fort Worth.

It was also announced by the store management that Mrs. Marguerite Eastwood of Chicago, a specialist in scalp and skin treatment, had been engaged to conduct this feature of the department work.

The Marinello and Burnham systems are to be used by Miss Lane and Mrs. Eastwood in their work. A considerable enlargement of the Perkins-Timberlake shop is also planned for the near future, it is said.

Factory To Re-Open

Announcement has been made that the window glass factory is to reopen with new equipment late this week. The plant has been closed down for several weeks while extensive repairs have been made.

New machine blowers have been installed in place of the old hand blowing system and a much larger output will then be possible.

"Lrish" Johnson Of Burk, In Maskat Race

A Burkburnett entry appeared on the scene Thursday in the race for the Maskat Temple Shrine ring, Charles J. "Irish" Johnson, announcing that he was out to perpetuate Burkburnett's success in carrying away previous diamond rings presented at the ceremonials.

In making public his announcement "Irish" requested all his friends to meet him at the Kemp hotel some time during the day and get oiled up. He said only one oiling would be allowed each Noble, however.

This announcement makes three candidates in the list, Gambling Joe Davis of Quanah and Sally Ann Riley of Wichita Falls being the others.

Marcel, the hair dresser who created the "wave" known to women, celebrated the fiftieth anniversary of his invention.

ALL READY FOR SHRINE PARADE

Procession Gets Under Way At 3 o'Clock This Afternoon

Led by officers of the temple and city police officials, the big spring ceremonial parade of Maskat Temple will get under way promptly at 3 o'clock this afternoon, thus officially opening the two-day session of the spring ceremonial and the Texas Shrine Council meeting here Saturday. The parade starts at the corner of Ohio and Tenth, runs north on Ohio to Sixth, west to Indiana, south to Tenth, west to Scott, north to Sixth and back on Scott to Eleventh where the procession will disband. Automobiles may be parked one deep at any point on the route with the exception of the two blocks on Scott between Seventh and Ninth. The city police department will keep this section clear throughout the afternoon.

General information regarding the ceremonial is as follows:

All Nobles instructed by decree of Potentate Frank Collier to wear fezzes all day.

Novices will register at Recorders office on and after 9 o'clock this morning.

Parade, in charge of I. H. Roberts and L. M. Forcier, starts promptly at 3 o'clock.

First section of novices under direction of Dan Daniels, Sid Gaines and L. M. Forcier, assistants, starts ceremonial work at 4 o'clock. Second section starts at 6:45.

Dance for ladies and nobles starts at Call Field at 8:30, continuing until midnight.

Captain John Smith mapped Chesapeake bay about 300 years ago.

Spudders Are Mauled at Houston, 13 to 1

KNIGHT ALLOWS LOCALS ONLY THREE HITS WHILE FEIGERT AND DUMOVICH ARE POUNDED

Houston Twirler Invincible While Errors Augment Poor Work Of Spudder Moundsmen—Whiteman Is Presented With Tributes.

HOUSTON, May 17.—The Houston Bears made it four straight victories here this afternoon when they defeated the Spudders in the opening game of the series by the stupendous score of 13 to 1. The brilliant pitching of Jack Knight who allowed the visitors but three hits, split honors with Monroe's steal of home for the feature stunts of the day. The theft was committed while Kitchens held the ball.

Knight was effectiveness personified. The Spudders carved him for one hit in the second, and bunched their other two in the fourth for their only run. In all other innings Knight was never in trouble and Salm's soldiers failed to connect for a hit after the fourth.

Local Pitcher Off

In contrast to Knight's work, was the exhibition of ineffectiveness put forth by the two Spudders, who attempted to deliver the ball. Feigert started and was both wild and generous with base hits. Dumovich was generous and wild, which was about the only difference between the two. Berger's error in the second helped the Buffs in their first scoring attack and three blunders committed by Firstbaseman Elliott did not aid the pitchers in their off day.

The parade opened in the second, when Mueller doubled and Bell followed with a triple, which scored the former. Bell scored and Handley took second, when Berger threw the latter's grounder past first base. Vick flied to Whiteman, Knight was walked and Baggan moved the pair along with a sacrifice, Sperber singled through the box, scoring Handley and putting Knight on third. After Sperber stole second, Monroe singled, scoring Knight and Sperber. Monroe was out trying to make second on the hit.

Whito And Tanner.

The visitors got their only run in the fourth, when White hit a single to left and scored on Tanner's double to the opposite field.

Dumovich relieved Feigert in the third, after the starter had walked a pair and the newcomer got out without trouble in that inning.

Five more Buffaloes did a war lance across the plate in the fourth and all the trouble took place after two batters were out. Sperber singled and took third on Monroe's single. A wild pitch let Sperber in and sent Monroe to third. Monroe made a clean steal of home as Schmandt was given his fourth ball. Kitchens had the sphere in his hand as Monroe slid in to safety. Mueller walked.

Bell Triples.

Bell connected with his second triple of the game, scoring Schmandt and Mueller. Handley got a hit to Dumovich, scoring Bell.

In the seventh, Handley walked and went to third on two infield outs, scoring on Baggan's infield hit to Tanner. The Buffs closed their scoring in the eighth. Monroe singled and was picked off first, but was safe at second when Elliott threw wild to the bag. Schmandt was out and Mueller fanned, but Bell walked and Handley doubled, scoring Monroe and Bell.

George Whiteman, former Buff manager, was presented with a large floral piece and a gold watch when he made his first trip to the plate in the second. He responded by flying to center. Whiteman was given a big ovation each time he came to the plate, and a large crowd was out to pay respects to the former Buff gardener. Tonight the clubs will be guests of the Red Rooster club at a supper.

Big Derby Anybody's Race

By NORMAN E. BROWN.

If you see a wild looking gentleman gurgling his last as he drops his head into a pile of racing forms, give him first aid. With proper care he may live until Derby day. After that the outcome of the race will decide his fate.

For every one of the hundreds of thousands of thoroughbred fans is trying right now to perform the hardest task in the game—that of picking the winner of the Kentucky Derby—blue ribbon event of the turf, which will be run at Churchill Downs Saturday, May 19.

The original nominations numbering over 140 have dwindled, of course, but that hasn't helped the dopesters. Not one horse is considered an odds on favorite right now for the big event. Which means that the long shot boys are having their inning. Whether they hit it lucky or strike out is up to them—and fate.

Last year Morvich was conceded to be the pick of the field—and ran true. Only the most rabid long shotters bucked the dope.

But this year there are a dozen horses which, according to early dope and form, have a chance to cop.

Probably the most talked of horse is "Sally's Alley." This pretty filly from Willis Sharpe Kolmer's stable may go to the post a favorite. Her early season work has indicated she is in trim. But the rail birds will tell you that Enchantment, Bob McMillan, Messenger, Alice Blue Gown, Actuary and Goshawk, and two or three others have a good look in. And boy if they cop!

There is only one thing to do. Pick your horse, lay your money. And then try to sleep o' nights.

Legion Puts On First Athletic Show Tonight

Wrestling, Battle Royal, Hobble Fight And Maybe Boxing

A lively program of indoor athletics has been arranged for tonight when the American Legion will give the first of a series of boxing and wrestling entertainments at the legion hall.

The feature wrestling event of the program brings together the local's champion, Red Finger and Blackie Wilson of Burkburnett. These two limb twisters will work under Police Gazette rules. If the first fall comes in less than an hour, the best two out of three will decide the match but if no fall is obtained within an hour, the first will be the deciding flop. This means a finish match any way it is taken.

Preliminary Event.

As a preliminary to the main mat event, Coates and Markey, two local legion grapplers will entertain the fans. Don Wofford, who is arranging the show, is endeavoring to find a boxer who will take on Abe Martin, local leather pusher who is being put forth by the legion. No opponent had been lined up last night but Wofford still hopes to have an enemy for the hefty Martin.

Five dusky mitt artists will make up a battle royal and will be turned into the ring with nothing to do but go to it.

Another event which promises plenty of fun will be a hobble scrap indulged in by members of the legion baseball team. Collier and Landon and Little Sporting Goods company have offered bats as prizes for the winner of this feature.

The program will open a series of similar shows which will be put on by the legion in an effort to increase interest in the organization, both locally and with the posts of the district.

Leonard Smith, George Arthur, James Daniels and Feitz Roberts are the pincipals in the battle royal and a special added attraction will bring in Bennie Hood and Willie James in a five-round boxing exhibition.

FREDERICK INTO COUNTY LEAGUE

Wichita Falls will have but one club in the Wichita county baseball league which has been reorganized, according to an announcement made last night by Don Wofford, manager of the local club.

Frederick has been taken into the league and will make up the fourth member. Wichita will play at Frederick next Sunday with Burk opening at Electra.

LITTLE LESSONS IN Big Sports

What is the first thing for a catcher to try to acquire in his throwing?

Answered by
RAY SCHALK

Catcher, Chicago White Sox, known in baseball as the catcher who "never forgets to use his head," and holder of all records for the number of games caught by one catcher in Big League baseball.

Even if a catcher has a powerful arm for long throws and good judgment, he will not succeed unless he can throw accurately. A catcher with an accurate throw puts the ball where he wishes it, with the result that every throw means something. The powerful thrower without control may get the sphere to a given spot a little quicker, but there is always the possibility of a wild throw when the possibility of a wild throw when the possibility of a wild throw when

In return Mr. Hays continued, the minister is rewarded with a hand-to-mouth living which amounts in many cases to grinding poverty. The average salary of the 10,000 Presbyterian clergymen, he said, was $34.61 a week, "scarcely more than the wage of the garbage collector, one half the wage of a carpenter, one-third the wage of a mason. For the builders of the walls of Temple, one of the third of the wage of the bricklayers on an apartment house."

He cited wages paid various classes of labor in important industries, textile work, packing house and steel plants. In 1916, out of 170,000 active clergymen in the United States, he said, only 1,971 reported incomes in excess of $3,000, including revenue from private property.

Ouimet Sees Golf World Conquered

By FRANCIS OUIMET

Youth, plus ability and confidence, are a hard combination to beat in any game. In golf at the present time the youngsters, with Gene Sarazen, Jess Sweetser and Glenna Collett wearing the most coveted golf crowns, appear to have the upper hand—decidedly so. And as I glance over the available lists for the coming championships this season it looks to me as if the well-known players or veterans, meaning those who have passed the age of 30, will have a hard time dethroning the present titleholders.

Imagine calling a player who is still in his twenties a veteran! But the stars are arriving so rapidly and at such a tender age they will be veterans in this game before they even approach the age of 30. Six years hence, both Sarazen and Sweetser, as well as Miss Collett, will be scarcely more than 25, yet everybody will be calling them veterans and golf scribes will be considering their chances in the various tournaments with the youngsters of the coming generation. I suppose we who have passed the thirtieth mark will be termed as waning veterans, although how to class such great players as Vardon, Taylor, Ray, Barnes and the others, who are still capable of holding their own is quite beyond me.

But there is no disputing the fact that the national open at Inwood this year is likely to be a thrilling, bloodand-thunder battle between the veterans represented by Hagen, Hutchison, Barnes, MacDonald, Evans, Walker and the youngsters of whom there are a score or more.

Youngsters Improving

They are a likely looking lot, these lads, ranging between 20 and 27 years of age and during this past year I have noticed a big improvement in their games. Sarazens' victory at Skokie last year seems to have given them an incentive to work on their games, to perect their stroke as nearly as they can and to study the game and its fine points carefully.

I would not be greatly surprised to hear of any of the following winning the national open next summer — Johnny Farrell, Bill Melhorn, Emil Loeffler, Leo Diegel, Eddie Loos, Bobby Jones, William Greavy and, of course, Gene Sarazen, who has improved his game, if anything, since he won his title.

There is an array of talent that is sure to do some tall stepping over Inwood's fine layout. I notice each of these players has had a tendency to shorten his swing—striving for accuracy rather than distance. That shows they are profiting by Sarazen's style which is one of the soundest and most compact of any golfer I know of. Sarazen, though, in addition to getting direction, also obtains tremendous power. But any player is wise who sacrifices distance for direction.

NEW GEMS BY O. HENRY

A Treasure Trove of Humor From His Newly Discovered Newspaper Writings

A PATHETIC INCIDENT

In a great city what sharp contrasts of wealth and poverty do we see, what a kaleidoscope of jewels and rags, glittering gold and commonest fustian. Standing muffled in his overcoat, reflecting on the unequal distribution of fortune's favors, we witnessed this scene a night or two ago on Rusk avenue.

A great house brilliantly lighted. From the drawing rooms there stole upon the frosty air the weird, fantastically sweet strains of a foreign waltz. Through the windows could be seen passing forms of beautiful white clad women attended by gallant men. All inside was warmth, luxury and happiness. Outside near the gate stood two forms. She was thinly clad and shivering with the cold. He stood with a bitter smile upon his face listening to the music within and holding her hand. Her face was fair, fairer perhaps than any within those halls of joy and plenty, but her lips were drawn with the cold and the thin dress she wore was no protection against the chill north wind that blew.

"Oh, Jack," she whispered, "let us go, I am so cold."

He placed his strong arm about her waist and pressed a kiss upon her cold lips.

"Be it so," he said, "I believe the next dance is ours."

And they went back into the house.

And freckled, and mean, and ugly, and strong,
And positively will not die.

100 Adopted Books Not In New Order

Associated Press Dispatch

AUSTIN, May 17.—Within a few days, school officials will be requested to send in requisitions for books not included in the text book controversy, which has been before the legislature recently, State Superintendent S. M. N. Marrs stated today. More than 100 adopted text books are not included in the list in controversy, Marrs said.

Superintendent Marrs also expressed the opinion that it is probable a sufficient number of books of the 20 texts involved in the recent investigation, will be on hand without ordering additional books. Marrs has notified the legislature he will not recognize the new contracts let by the book commission last December.

Girl Deportation Writ Prevented

Esther Kaplin.

Congressman Samuel Dickstein just arrived at Ellis Island in time to prevent the deportation of Esther Kaplan on the Bayern. Esther is said to eb below the standard mentality of a person her age and faced the ordeal of life in a strange country without relatives or friends, until the congressman rushed up waving the of habeas corpus issued by Federal Judge Julian Mack. Dickstein claims that her nervousness was caused by dodging pogroms before she came here in 1914, resulted in her low emtuality.

TEXAS BANKERS SELECT AUSTIN

Clarksville Man Elected As President; Brownwood Man Treasurer

Associated Press Dispatch

DALLAS, May 17.—Austin was selected as the meeting place of the 1924 convention of the Texas Bankers association today, and officers were elected before the close. Houston was a close second and El Paso extended an invitation but did not receive a great deal of support. The final vote was :Austin 111, Houston 98.

A. M. Graves, cashier of the Red River bank of Clarksville, was elected president and Chester Harrison, vice-president of the Citizens National bank of Brownwood treasurer. W. A Philpott Jr., of Dallas, continues as secretary.

Admiral Wright Talks.

Admiral A. C. Wright of the confederate navy addressed the convention on the subject of placing the record of sailors of the confederacy in the archives at Austin and the suggestion, later embodied in a resolution, was adopted.

John T. Orr, Dallas, president of the Texas Farm Bureau, described accomplishments of the bureau in marketing cotton and saying:

"We have saved this season 77,700 bales of cotton and have sold to dat 73,165, leaving approximately 4,500 bales to be disposed of," he said.

Thrift was extolled by J. L. Chapman, state commissioner of insurance and banking.

Pass Favorable Laws.

W. W. Woodson, of Waco, chairman of the banker's legislative committee, reported that the committee had succeeded in getting a number of desirable laws passed at the last session of the Texas legislature and that it had appeared in opposition to a state income tax law, which had failed to pass.

Members of the association who had died since the last convention were eulogized by J. W. Butler, vice-president of the Texas Bank and Trust company of Galveston. J. S. Brown of El Paso, one of the pioneers of the association and its eleventh president; Judge W. F. Ramsey of Dallas; and Former Governor T. M. Campbell of Palestine, enumerated among those who had died, were paid high tribute by Mr. Butler.

Sugar Speculators To Have Early Hearing

Associated Press Dispatch

WASHINGTON, May 17.—Hearing by the supreme court of the government's appeal in the sugar case is to be requested by the justice department "on the earliest day convenient to the court."

The department's motion, to be presented to the court Monday, will declare that their injunction proceeding against the New York sugar exchange presents "a question vital to the welfare of the American public." The court must decide, the motion will say, whether under existing statutes the government has the power to protect the public against sudden and artificial fluctuations in the prices of necessaries of life directly occasioned by purely speculative operations on future exchanges."

The court will be told further that "the conditions complained of still obtain."

Hawks were about the only inhabitants of the Azores when discovered in 1431, now there are nearly 275,000 people there.

FINE! FINE!

With Plenty of "Dough" Behind Me, I'm Out To Get That Ring

'SALLY ANN' (T. B.) REILLEY

The "Pote" and Patrol's Choice For The

Shrine Ring

I was born when I was quite young. All the "dough" I've got I "knead" myself. I'm the champion long distance marathon pie-eater of the world.

I want that ring and if I don't get it I'll put carbolic acid in the cream puffs of every noble who votes agin me.

I'm a great admirer of old king Tut, especially his harem.

The police force and county officers are back of me to a man. If they ever catch up with me I won't need the ring.

I'm in favor of the marathon dance, especially for long-winded nobles who don't know when to stop at ceremonials. Let 'em dance in the hot sands—but be sure to heat up the sand.

For my past records, see any cop in town.

A FREE LOAF of "SALLY ANN" BREAD to every noble who votes for me.

SINKERS for those who vote agin me.

Yours if I get the ring

IRRIGATION

By A. M. M'PHERSON
Kahn Bldg., 8th and Indiana
Consulting Engineer

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS
Will This Be a Good Hog Country When We Have Irrigation?
Whether or not this will be a good hog country when water is available for irrigation will depend largely upon the inclination of the people who come and buy farms and whether or not certain crops are raised here.
It is likely that if the project is really colonized and settlers brought in from outside points that most of them will come from such states as Iowa, Illinois, Indiana and other states in the Mississippi Valley. These settlers will be largely men who have had experience in hogs and hog raising. However, if the project is just allowed to settle up gradually over a long period of years then it may be that the majority of the farmers will be men who are not familiary with hogs.
If we get hog raisers here and they begin to grow such crops as corn, alfalfa, sweet clover, cow peas, peanuts and small grains, then we will grow hogs and lots of them.
Hog raising is a very profitable industry under proper conditions and in the hands of men who know how. When the experiment farm is established here it is probable that they will have a small herd of hogs and will conduct experiments to determine the best breeds for this climate and will also determine what feed stuffs for hog feeding can be grown most profitably here.

NEW DEMOCRACY FAILURE-SMITH

Rotarians Hear Educator Analyze Ills Of Present-Day World

Declaring that democracy in its present state is a failure, Dr. H. Lewis Smith, president of Washington and Lee University, spoke yesterday noon to the Rotary club at luncheon at the Kemp hotel, discussing world problems. He stated that only through industrial, social, governmental and educational development of the citizens can the present type of democracy hope to continue.

It was the opinion of Dr. Smith that the basis of all strife, war and world trouble is the fact that the power formerly invested in a few leaders has been turned suddenly into the hands of the ignorant masses, who are unable to deal with the questions of the day, wisely.

"The pendulum swings back and forward, "Dr. Smith stated, "and the law of the world is that every nation shall have prosperity at times, and again poverty and unrest. Every nation in the world has at some time failed.

"The world war broke up the ideals of the universe, and turned loose all the devils of destruction and lawlessness, making the world a carnival of hatred, lust and cruelty. Laws are a joke to those who want to break them."

The trouble, according to Dr. Smith, is that the masses seized the power too soon, before they were ready to govern themselves. Lacking education, the voters have done harm rather than good in their direction of the government.

"It is the duty of the United States to help Europe in her crisis," the speaker declared. "We are all one in the world's brotherhood, and it would be an act of devils to allow Europe to follow Russia over the precipice of ruin."

Jim Pryor Sentenced To 30 Years In Prison On Charges Of Robbery

Penitentiary sentences aggregating 50 years were assessed by juries in the Eighty-ninth district court Thursday when Jim Pryor, aged 24, faced trial on two counts for robbery with firearms. The total comprised one of the heaviest sentences given in local courts in months.

Pleads Not Guilty.

The defendant was sentenced to 20 years imprisonment on the first count, to which he plead not guilty, and to 10 years on the second. He originally plead not guilty to this, but after the state had rested in its presentation of evidence, Pryor arose, addressed the court, said that he "didn't have any witnesses, didn't have a chance and would plead guilty."

Judge Martin refused to accept the plea on these grounds and declared that unless Pryor admitted his guilt the trial would proceed. Pryor stated he was guilty as charged, whereupon the plea was accepted.

Attorney Appointed.

Appearing without a lawyer when his first case was called, the defendant prepared to conduct his own defense. Judge Martin, however, appointed Attorney T. J. McMahon to represent the man.

The first count of the indictment charged that on the night of December 22, 1922, Pryor had held up J. W. Deaton on a road five miles south of Electra and robbed him of $19.65. Deaton positively identified the defendant as the man who had thrust a gun in his face and relieved him of the cash. The jury was out less than half an hour before coming in with its verdict of 20 years.

O. W. Hoy, an oil refinery worker who was with Deaton on the night of December 22, was the second man robbed. A gold watch, a pistol and $7 in cash was obtained from him, he testified. The jury in this case was out about 25 minutes.

New Homes Going Up West of City

Ben S. Ash, Judge J. W. Alkes and W. J. Greene announced Thursday the purchase of a tract of land on th Seymour road west of the city, part of which is to be used for home sites and the balance for sale. The total plot comprises 272 acres and is about a mile west of the Chenault home.

This transaction increases the number of present and prospective homes for the popular residential section now springing up on the western rim of the city.

Raley Back From Austin

Guy C. Raley, county tax collector, returned Thursday from Austin where he, with 50 or more collectors from other counties, have been opposing the Bonham tax bill which would eliminate the collection of the 5 per cent delinquency tax fees now taken in by county collectors. The bill went through both the house and senate, but the collectors succeeded in forcing its recall and amendment to the effect that the fee will still be allowed.

Had the bill gone through as originally intended, collectors would have been forced to call for county appropriations to meet office expenses, it was declared.

COUNTY HOPES FOR LOWER RATE

Taxes Not Being Boosted Here, Board Of Equalization Declares

Hope was expressed Thursday by members of the county commissioners court, now sitting as a board of equalization, that they would be able to either lower the tax rate of the county or reduce the county valuation this year. This will be done, it was asserted, if at all possible.

The board declared that tax valuations of the county were not being boosted. Seventy-five per cent of the renditions made, it was pointed out, were on the same valuations as those given last year, and that the remaining 25 per cent were turned in on lower valuations.

It is the aim of the bord to hold the renditions as nearly as possible at the figures given in 1922. With this done and the amount of money needed to conduct the county affairs fixed, it may be possible to either cut the rate or reduce the valuations. Either of these would result in a tax savings for property owners here.

Last year's tax rate was 80 cents and the county valuation was placed at $74,101,712.

Invitations Sent Out For Waterworks Convention

Invitations are being mailed out to 1,000 city officials, state engineers, manufacturing executives and other members of the Southwest Waterworks Association convention to be held here June 18 to 21, inclusive. The invitations are signed by F. N. Lawton, general manager of the city water department.

Hotel rates and other data are supplied in the communication, which goes to cities in eight southwestern states.

Mr. Lawton stated Thursday that the new 10,000,000 gallon pump of the water department would probably be here and in operation by the time the convention convenes and that an inspection of this would be on the program.

New Uniforms For Cops Coming Soon

New police uniforms are expected to arrive within the next two weeks and will be passed out to officials immediately, Chief of Police Hodgins announced Thursday. The new suits were ordered several weeks ago after Police Commissioner Young and Chief Hodgins decided that the patrol forces of the department should be uniformed.

New badges for the cops were ordered Thursday and will be a decided departure from the present style.

Rural Schools Closing Today

With the exception of three schools which started late in the year, all rural schools of Wichita county will come to a close today. The Clara, Fairview and Falk schools will remain open for another two weeks. The last two of these opened late last September because of incompleted buildings and the Clara school was knocked out of several weeks of work in the middle of the term by an epidemic of contagious disease that resulted in the community being quarantined.

Picnics, programs and parties were being given in profusion Wednesday and Thursday as closing features of the school year.

Arthur's White Kitchen Opens

Spotlessly clean, brilliantly lighted and well arranged and furnished in every detail, the new Arthur's White Kitchen opened to the public Thursday at the Indiana stand just a few doors north of the old cafe room. Many customers of the place dropped in some time during the day and night to inspect the place.

The new room has a seating capacity of 150 patrons at a time and provides all the most modern and up-to-date conveniences for their patronage. A bill of fare in keeping with the appointments of the place is provided.

Thursday's opening was informal in a way, the formal bow to the public having been put off to a later date. Announcements as to this will be made when all plans are completed.

New Lines Laid

Work has been completed by the city water department on laying 1,800 feet of new six-inch main on the extreme western edge of the city. The line ties into the Floral Heights mains at Tilden street and Avenue G, runs down Tilden to Avenue K and thence out to the Seymour road.

It will serve a number of residents in that section now being rapidly built up around the Chenault home on the Seymour road.

750 NOTARIES IN COUNTY NOW

Full List Received By County Clerk From Austin

Approximately 750 residents of Wichita county were approved by the legislature as notary publics for the county, it was learned Thursday, when the complete list was received by the county clerk from the secretary of state. This is by far the largest number of notaries ever approved for this county and the long list came as a complete surprise even to county officials.

Effective In June.

The appointments do not become effective until June 1, and are then to run for a period of two years. This fact is stressed by county officials, who point out to the new notaries that their powers are not effective at present.

Notifications of the appointments are being sent out now by the county clerk's office.

Kiwanians Visit Dam

Twenty-five Kiwanians and their wives returned Thursday evening from an all day inspection tour of the irrigation workings where they were guests of Captain John "Rip-Rap" King, one of the sub-contractors on the job. The entire day was spent in viewing the dams, canal systems, headgates and other items connected with the works.

The party was a guest of Captain King at lunch at the storage dam Thursday noon.

Teachers Seeking Higher Certificates

Announcement was made Thursday by County Superintendent of Schools Burl Bryant that all rural teachers expecting to "build" on their present teaching certificates must start this work before Sept. 1 of this year. This means that those who plan studying for a certificate of higher class than that now held, must make their preparations before the above date.

It was indicated recently that a number of teachers in rural schools here expected to try for certificates of higher class.

Lancaster Visit Postponed

Word was received here Thursday that R. B. Lancaster, rural organization expert of Texas A. & M. college, who was to have been in the city today, would be unable to make the trip as scheduled.

Plans are being made for a visit here in the near future, it was said.

Hi-Students Must Have Clean Records Before Receiving Reps

Hugh Porter, high school principal, stated Thursday that report cards would be distributed to all high school pupils who have a clear book record. All of the students must possess cards showing they have checked in all state books and they must also have a clear record with the librarian.

Reports will be given out at 10 a. m. and if any one wishes to check in books before that time they may do so in room 2, according to Mr. Porter.

The junior college reports will not be sent to the pupils until a later date, as examinations in that institution have not yet been completed.
