Berlin Airlift — recalled 40 years later

By GEORGE BOEHMER
Associated Press Writer

BERLIN — A 44-year-old airplane carrying Allied ambassadors flew from Frankfurt to Berlin to highlight celebrations marking the airlift that fed 2 million city residents during a Soviet blockade 40 years ago.

Among the passengers Thursday was one of the Berlin Airlift's original pilots, dubbed "Raisin Bombers," who said that out of fairness he droppped candy and raisins to children in both the Communist and Western halves of the city.

"The Berlin Airlift changed this city, and it changed the world," U.S. Ambassador Richard Burt said of the June 1948-September 1949 operation which delivered more than 1.8 million tons of food and vital supplies to Berlin's Allied-controlled western sectors.

Accompanying Burt on Thursday on the DC-3, a civilian version of the military C-47 transports used during the airlift, were British Ambassador Sir Christopher Mallaby, French Ambassador Serge Boidevaix and West German Defense Minister Rupert Scholz.

Long-time Berlin resident Helga Galler, 60, was among the 400 people waiting for the landing at Berlin's Templehof airport. She said she recalled well the shortages and feelings of hopelessness created by the Soviet blockade.

"Everything was in short supply — food, clothing, everything," Mrs. Galler said. "So when we saw these planes coming, we knew we didn't have to worry any longer."

"I don't what we would have done without them," Mrs. Galler said.

At the end of World War II, Berlin was divided into Soviet, U.S., British and French sectors. The city was surrounded by Soviet-controlled territory that later became East Germany.

Bitter disputes between the Kremlin and the United States, Britain and France led to the Soviet move to cut all Berlin off from the West.

Specifically, Soviet leader Josef Stalin was staunchly against the creation of a unified German state in the three Western occupation zones, and when the Western allies backed a currency reform to speed up Germany's economic recovery, Moscow imposed the blockade.

Retired Air Force Col. Gail Halvorsen, who accompanied the ambassadors on the plane, was the first to begin dropping raisins and candy to Berlin's children to sweeten the supplies they were already receiving.

Halvorsen, 67, said that once during the airlift days he received a letter asking why no candy was dropped over Berlin's eastern sector.

"So I flew over East Berlin after that and started dropping candy there too," he said.

But after one such run, Halvorsen said, "an officer came up to me and asked what I was doing. He told me the Russians had complained that we were trying to influence the

Gray's death investigation is continuing

By MICHAEL DUFFY

COLORADO CITY — Mitchell County authorities are still investigating the circumstances surrounding the apparent drowning death of a Big Spring woman early Thursday at Lake Colorado City.

Tammy Lynn Gray, 27, 701 Lorilla Blvd., was pronounced dead about 4:30 a.m. by doctors at Mitchell County Hospital after attempts to revive her were unsuccesful, Mitchell County Sheriff Wendell Bryant said.

Mitchell County Game Warden Ronnie Aston said today he and the sheriff's department continue to investigate Gray's death.

"I'm not saying foul play is suspected, but there are a lot of unanswered questions we have to get to the bottom of. I'm not at liberty to say much (about the investigation) at this point until we look a little bit closer," Aston said.

One of the questions that will be investigated is why the couple was swimming duing the early morning hours, Aston said.

Mitchell County Sheriff Wendell Bryant said a dispatcher received a call at 3:39 a.m. about a man and woman swimming at at Cooper's Cove at Lake Colorado City.

The woman was apparently having difficulty swimming. However, when a deputy arrived at the scene he was informed the couple had gone to the Mitchell County Hospital, Bryant said. Travis Gray, Tammy's husband, was hospitalized suffering from shock, but was released Thursday night, a nursing supervisor said today.

"That's really all we know. Mr. Gray is still heavily sedated and we haven't had a chance to talk to him," Bryant said.

Mitchell County Justice of the Peace Joan Merkett said she ordered an autopsy because of Travis Ray's emotional condition following his wife's death.

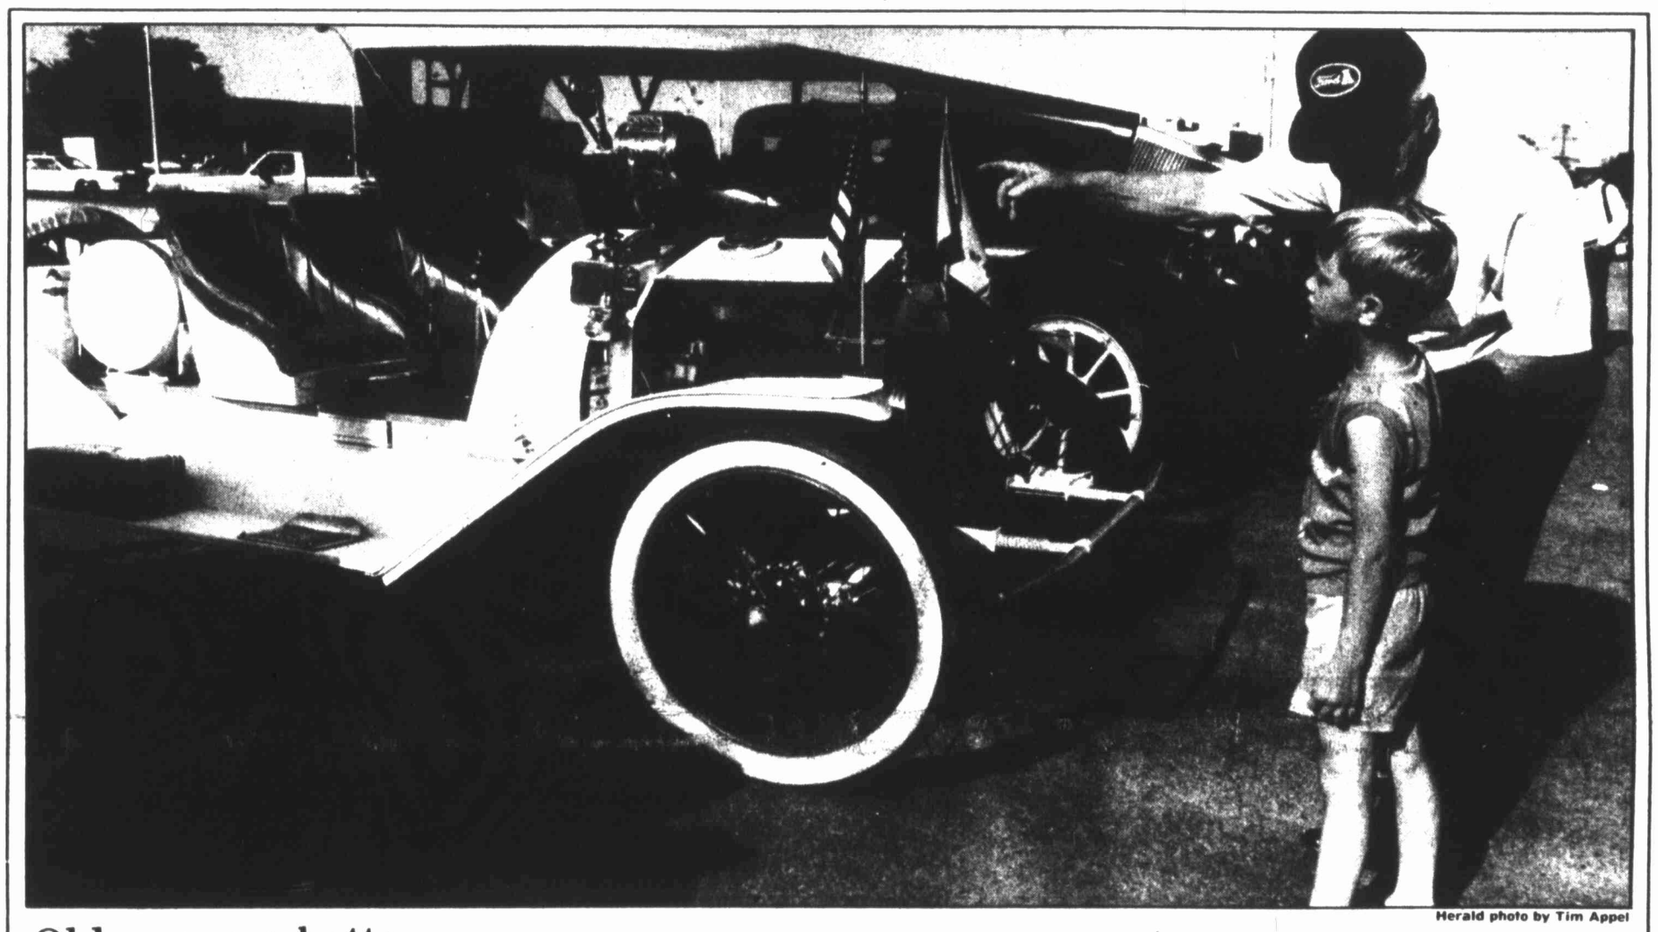

"I ordered an autopsy because the husband just couldn't tell us what happened — he was so upset," Merkett said.

A spokeswoman for the Dallas County Medical Examiner's office refused to comment today on whether an autopsy had been completed or if the cause of death had been determined.

Merkett said she will "possibly" receive a preliminary autopsy report next week, but at this point she does not suspect foul play.

Cooper's Cove is located about one-quarter mile from the site at Lake Colorado City where three people — including a Big Spring man — have drowned since May 11, officials said.

Services are tentatively scheduled for 2 p.m. Monday at the Nalley-Pickle & Welch Chapel.

Occupational courses credited for growth

By STEVE GEISSEN
Staff Writer

The steady rise in the Howard County Junior College District enrollment over the last two years is primarily due to the interest generated by occupational courses offered by the district, the college's vice president for instruction says.

The college recently announced that its Summer I enrollment of 520 is the highest ever, and marks an increase in enrollment every semester for the last two years.

"We are offering occupational majors that are attracting many students who realize that they can get two years of training and then go out and immediately make a decent wage," Vice President Bob Mehan said this morning.

"There has been a tremendous interest in the LVN (Licensed Vocational Nursing) and ADN (Associate Degree in Nursing) programs we offer. And we are one of the few colleges that offers an accelerated program for existing nurses."

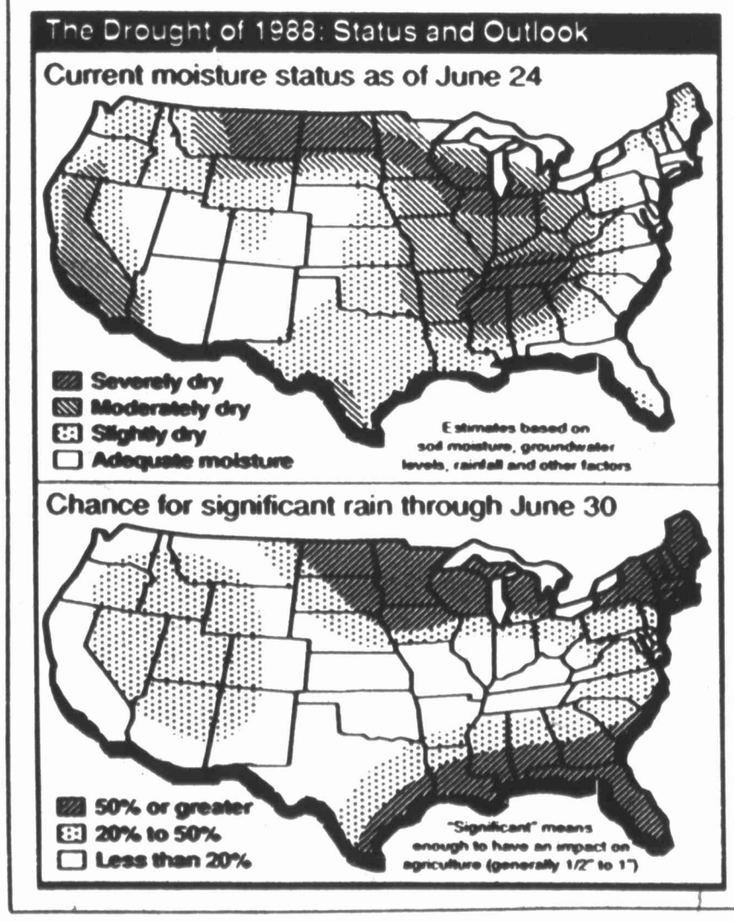

Enrollment in the college's nursing program has increased because of the demand for nurses nationwide, Mehan said. "People have suddenly realized that our nursing program is something that can get them a good job in the location they want," he said.

About 150 students are currently enrolled in the Howard College nursing program. Occupational courses, including nursing, are offered at all the college's campuses — the Big Spring campus as well as the campuses in Del Rio, San Angelo and Lamesa.

The college's growth is especially evident at the San Angelo campus, Mehan said. Six years ago, the San Angelo campus offered nursing classes to 45 students, Mehan said. This year, 275 students are at the San Angelo campus, which now offers courses in fields such as legal assisting, medical transcription and computer application as well as nursing.

Mehan said the increased interest in the occupational courses offered by the college can be linked to the trying

Showers follow Ohio rain dance

CLYDE, Ohio (AP) — A local florist who paid $2,000 to bring a Sioux Indian medicine man to dance and pray for rain in the drought-stricken Midwest says the showers were brief, but the money was well spent.

Cliff Doebel said Thursday he was pleased with the attention Leonard Crow Dog's ceremony drew to the drought and its effect on the state's agriculture economy.

"People around the world need to know that this year we may not be able to supply the grain we usually supply," he said.

Crow Dog used an eagle bone whistle and a peace pipe at the 30-minute ceremony Sunday, when he guaranteed that the drought-stricken northwest Ohio town would receive rain by Thursday.

The medicine man, who said the ritual always brings rain, blew the whistle toward the north, south, east and west, and then toward the sky and ground.

The showers arrived ahead of schedule Wednesday night as a cold front moved through the state. The National Weather Service does not have an official rainfall monitor in Clyde, but precipitation in nearby communities ranged from .22 inches in Fremont to .08 inches in Milan, forecaster Matthew Peroutka said.

"It's not enough, and the situation is still here and still severe, but I think it was enough to help some of the corn out," Doebel said.

Doebel said he wasn't sure whether to credit Crow Dog or just luck.

"I'm not one to know those answers," he said.

Bond reductions sought

By SARAH LUMAN
Staff Writer

Two Howard County residents charged with capital murder have requested bond reductions, according to officials and court records.

118th Judicial District Judge James Gregg said Thursday that a bond reduction hearing for Pete Salazar Jr. had been conducted in district court Thursday. Bond reduction hearings for two other men charged in the same slaying were conducted Wednesday, he said.

He has made no decision regarding any of the bond reductions, he said, and does not expect to do so "until the latter part of next week."

Salazar is charged with capital murder in connection with the 1987 death of a Grand Prairie man, Noe Perez. Perez's body was recovered from a shallow grave in a remote Martin County location in October.

Authorities believe he was slain in a Big Spring motel room and his body moved to the Martin County gravesite, where it was burned and buried.

Also seeking bond reductions in the case are Frankie Salazar Hernandez, 27, and Joe Hernandez, 20, both of 606 11th Place.

Attorneys for the Hernandez brothers separately filed for bond reduction hearings, which were conducted Wednesday afternoon, according to 118th District Court records.

Salazar, 23, 411 N.W. 10th St., was indicted Jan. 7 by a Howard County Grand Jury. The indictment states that Salazar intentionally caused the death of Perez by pulling on his neck with a rope and by beating and kicking Perez with (Salazar's) hands and feet.

Perez was believed to be a drug dealer and Big Spring police reportedly had set up a "buy-bust" with the Grand Prairie man in April. Police officials have said the deal was scheduled for approximately the same time Perez disappeared.

According to District Attorney Rick Hamby, identification of Perez's remains was made by Dr. Robert Rember, a Howard County pathologist, and another pathologist working with x-rays and other identification techniques.

Hamby confirmed today that Perez's body was burned and headless when found, and said that to his knowledge the head had not been recovered.

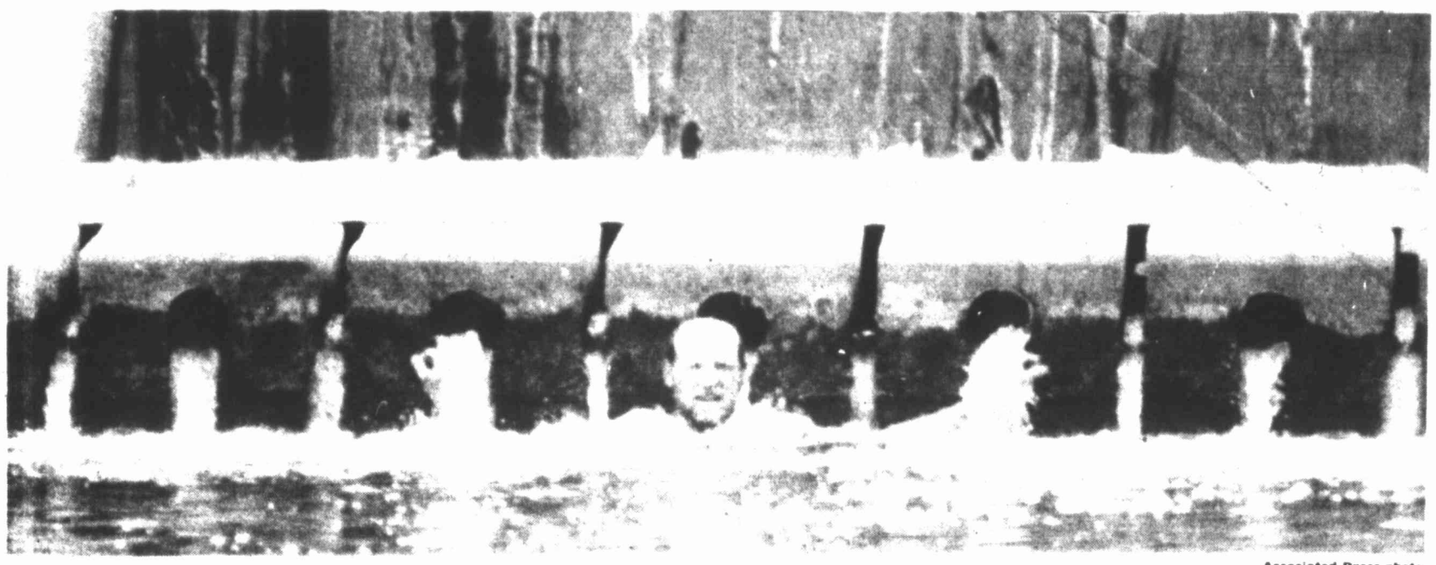

"Everybody was going around saying it was decapitated," he said. "That's not necessarily the case. We have no reason to believe it was decapitated."

He said the head could have been taken by an animal, but because he was not present at the exhumation he said he could not comment definitely on whether that was the case in Perez's death.

Hamby also said he had received no official word on further bond reduction hearings for the defendants charged with capital murder in connection with Perez's death, or with the deaths of two Mexican nationals whose bodies were found in a burned-out farmhouse near Luther in October.

The two men were identified as Miguel

Angry mob chases, beats man sought in teen death

HOUSTON (AP) — Police had to rescue a man after an angry mob of about 100 people chased down and beat the man who was wanted for questioning in the drug-related slaying of a neighborhood teenager, authorities say.

Officers said many of the people said they took the action Thursday because they are tired of the crack cocaine traffic in their neighborhood.

The 33-year-old man had to be rescued by investigators who had gone to the area to arrest another man in a separate drug-related killing.

Officers said that a crowd that had gathered to watch that arrest and spotted the man wanted for questioning in the beating death of James Kenneth Moore, 17.

Moore's nude body was discovered by a security guard in a vacant unit at an apartment complex on June 12. He had been beaten with a brick, and his face was so disfigured that his mother didn't recognize him, authorities said.

Moore was described by acquaintenances as "a likable youngster who survived in the streets as a cocaine runner," but that he was "too young to die a lowdown and cold-blooded death" because he infringed on the wrong territory.

A mob of angry youths jumped on the suspect Thursday, beating him with fists, kicks and even an aluminum crutch until police came to the rescue.

Some of the crowd then led police, including a SWAT team, to a nearby location where they found the bloodied and crying 33-year-old man pleading for his life, Homicide Sgt. Danny Moorman said.

Study: Tracing AIDS contacts worthwhile

CHICAGO (AP) — Tracing the sexual contacts of people infected with the AIDS virus can be a tricky but cost-effective way to slow the spread of the disease as long as health workers don't disclose names, say authors of a new study.

"We tried very hard to develop a positive, empathetic and compassionate relationship with the people we worked with," said Dr. Randolph E. Wykoff, co-author of a study that found contact-tracing to be worthwhile, contrary to the predictions of many health officials.

"I could see very clearly where this would have been a miserable failure if they hadn't trusted us," Wykoff said of the study published in today's Journal of the American Medical Association.

The study conducted in a rural South Carolina county in 1986 revealed 82 men and one woman who possibly had been exposed to the virus, researchers said.

The cost of the tracing worked out to about $105 per person tested for AIDS or $810 for each infected person located. That's a small price compared with the cost of treating a single case of AIDS, which is estimated at between $40,000 and $100,000, Wykoff said Wednesday.

"If we prevented one case at $40,000, that's 400 people we can educate," said Wykoff, a district director for the South Carolina Department of Health and Environmental Control.

Educating and counseling both infected and uninfected people led them to greatly reduce the number of their sexual partners, as shown by a check six months later, the researchers said.

After counseling, most of the individuals started using condoms at least some of the time, although none had used them before, the researchers said.

The virus that causes acquired immune deficiency syndrome is believed to be passed mainly through sexual intercourse, shared hypodermic needles and from infected mothers to their infants before or during birth.

"The study suggests that at least in rural areas, there is a sizable population that has not been reached by other education efforts," Wykoff said. "Our study gives a preliminary suggestion that we can produce a positive behavior change in this population.

"I don't think the study says contact-tracing will work everywhere or that it will always be effective. But it does suggest it will work in some communities," he said.

But an editorial accompanying the study said contact-tracing should not become the main weapon against AIDS, although the strategy would be appropriate in areas where the disease is less common.

If "one were to attempt contact tracing for all sexual and needle-sharing contacts of all persons with HIV (AIDS) infection in cities like New York or San Francisco, the costs would be enormous," Drs. George W. Rutherford and Jean M. Woo wrote.

AIDS carrier: Questioning not enough

EL PASO (AP) — Trying to prevent a man from spreading AIDS by asking him about his sexual activities is ineffective, an AIDS activist says.

Jaime Perez, director of the Rio Bravo Association, an AIDS counseling center and hospice, said Thursday he favors publicizing the name of an AIDS carrier who allegedly continued to have unprotected sex with uninformed partners.

One June 4, the El Paso City-County Health District ordered the unidentified man to stop having unprotected sex, said Dr. Laurance Nickey, district director.

Nickey said Thursday that since the order was issued, someone from his office has visited the man at least once a week to ask about his activities.

Perez said simply asking the man whether he has had unprotected sex is not enough.

"If I go out and murder people, and you ask me if I'm murdering people, what do you expect me to say?" he said.

Perez has said the man is known to have had sex with high school students. Nickey said the identities of the students are not known.

Nickey said the man is taking the warning seriously. The AIDS carrier and his attorney visited Nickey at the health district offices recently.

"We had a very formal discussion," Nickey said.

Shift leads to testing

DALLAS (AP) — A strong shift in policy by a Dallas gay rights group has prompted the organization's AIDS Resource Center to sponsor on-site testing for the deadly disease for the first time.

The Dallas Gay Alliance had previously voiced strong opposition to AIDS testing, but changed its position because of improvements in the procedure.

"Originally, we said, 'Don't take the test,' because there were no guarantees of confidentiality and the test was highly inaccurate," alliance president William Waybourn said Wednesday.

"The test has been improved somewhat, and there are some treatments that will help you from getting sick," he said, adding that anyone who tests positive can receive treatment.

The alliance's board of directors recently approved the policy, which encourages people in high-risk groups to be tested for the presence of the AIDS antibody. High-risk groups include homosexuals and intravenous drug users.

The alliance still recommends that AIDS testing and counseling be conducted anonymously because of fears that disclosure of test results — or knowledge that a person has taken the test — could result in discrimination.

Supreme court: Schools need not provide free buses

By JAMES H. RUBIN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — In a case of particular importance to rural areas, the Supreme Court ruled today that states are not required to provide free bus transportation for poor school children.

By a 5-4 vote, the justices said North Dakota officials did not violate the rights of families that have trouble affording the busing charges.

"A state's decision to allow local school boards the option of charging patrons a user fee for bus service is constitutionally permissible," Justice Sandra Day O'Connor said for the court. "The Constitution does not require that such service be provided at all and it is difficult to imagine why choosing to offer the service should entail a constitutional obligation to offer it for free."

The ruling is in line with earlier court decisions upholding laws that treat the wealthy and poor differently. The court has said such laws are permissible if they serve a rational purpose.

North Dakota law provides free bus transporation to those living in districts that have reorganized to broaden their tax base and improve education. Only those districts that have not reorganized are allowed to charge parents for busing costs.

The law was intended to spur reorganization while assuring people in those districts they would not have to pay for transporation.

The court said the law is a rational approach to encouraging local school officials to reorganize.

The law was challenged by Paula Kadrmas from rural Dickinson, N.D. She said the statute denied equal rights to her daughter, Sarita, because the family could not afford a $97 annual bus fee.

Ms. Kadrmas has driven Sarita the 16 miles to school rather than pay the fee.

Bus service in Dickinson is offered for a fee to elementary school students who live more than three miles from school and to high school students who live more than four miles away.

Justice Thurgood Marshall, in a dissenting opinion, said, "Today, the court continues the retreat from the promise of equal educational opportunity by holding that a school district's refusal to allow an indigent child who lives 16 miles from the nearest school to use a schoolbus service without paying fees does not violate" the Constitution.

He was joined by Justice William J. Brennan. Justices John Paul Stevens and Harry A. Blackmun dissented in a separate opinion.

In other action, the court:

● Limited severely states' authority to lower the electric rates public utilities charge as a result of agreements with federal regulators.

Family is unhappy gun owner won't be charged

WASHINGTON (AP) — The parents of a teen-ager who was shot by syndicated columnist Carl T. Rowan after taking an unauthorized dip in the journalist's pool say their son may have shown immaturity, but Rowan displayed even worse judgment by responding with a deadly weapon.

The U.S. attorney's office said Thursday that Rowan would not face assault charges stemming from the June 14 incident, but it deferred a decision on whether to bring weapons charges against the columnist to District of Columbia authorities.

U.S. Attorney Jay B. Stephens said in a prepared statement that there was a "substantial basis" for charging Rowan, an avowed gun-control advocate, with possession of an unregistered handgun.

The court developments angered the parents of 18-year-old Benjamin N. Smith of suburban Chevy Chase, Md., who has been charged with unlawfully entering Rowan's northwest Washington property.

Neil Smith acknowledged that his son had committed an "unlawful act" by entering Rowan's yard. But, he added: "Was that act cause for Mr. Rowan to shoot Ben and possibly kill him?"

Dinah Smith said her son "certainly showed immaturity, but Mr. Rowan's judgment is appalling."

The younger Smith, who was wounded in the right wrist by a bullet from Rowan's unregistered .22-caliber revolver, may not recover full use of his hand.

The columnist has made no attempt to contact her family or apologize for the incident, Mrs. Smith added.

economic times.

"We are definitely getting a lot of folks coming back to learn new skills," he said. "We are getting a lot of the so-called non-traditional students because people are coming to understand that in this complex world you have to have some sort of marketable skill."

Oil field workers and small business owners are some of the non-traditional students who have enrolled in the college's occupational degree programs, Mehan said.

And more males have been enrolling in fields such as nursing and legal assisting, which have traditionally attracted females, he said.

The consistent increase in enrollment over the last two years benefits the college in many ways, Mehan said. The college receives more money not only in the form of tutition payments, but in state funds as well, he said. Thus, the college is able to offer a greater variety of courses, library materials, support services and educational equipment.

"This summer is also the first time we've been able to hire new personnel," Mehan said. "We would not have been able to do that without increased enrollment. The higher the enrollment, the more we can offer our students."

If the increase in enrollment continues, the college could have more than 2,000 students enrolled in the fall. "That's a goal we'd really like to achieve," Mehan said.

Jailed, not bailed

County jail passes state inspection

HERALD STAFF REPORT

A Monday inspection has resulted in the Howard County jail receiving certification from the state again, according to authorities.

Howard County Sheriff A.N. Standard said today that state jail inspector Joe Slater, Austin, spent perhaps half a day going over the paperwork and mechanical parts of the Howard County jail before declaring the facility in compliance with state regulations.

"This is the eighth consecutive time we've been inspected and certified," Standard said. He described the standards with which the jail must be in compliance as numerous.

"Some are trifling, of the 600 items with which we have to be in compliance, but some have teeth and are very rigid," Standard said.

"We have worked with the jail commission since it became a commission, and they with us, so that we have stayed in compliance."

He said some improvements to the jail have been made over the years to maintain compliance with the state's standards, including ongoing improvements now.

"We have just completed a program of improvements in our lighting, for example, and we are looking into possibly adding some more floorspace in the jail, and a projected recreation area. Right now we're going outside for recreation," he said.

He said he considered maintaining the jail a major community service. "What we're doing is keeping what I feel like is a good jail, keeping if functioning to jail standards."

A main objective, he said, is to avoid building a new jail facility at this time, for economic reasons. The jail also passed inspections by the county health department and the local fire department recently, Standard said.

He said a new jail might be considered as part of a long-term plan, but current economic constraints made extending the operational life of the present jail a necessity.

"With the economy like it is, I feel this facility serves a definite purpose for the community," he said.

Villareal Calixto and Norberto Gurrola Hernandez. Autopsy reports indicated that both had been shot in the head. Authorities believe the men were robbed and shot and the house intentionally set afire.

Charged with capital murder in those two slayings are Jeannie Hernandez Fonseca, 29, also charged with capital murder in the Perez death; Enrique Sabedra Jr., and Orlando Aguirre, both of Knott; and Antonio Aguilar of Big Spring.

Aguirre and Aguilar are in custody in lieu of $125,000 bond each; Fonseca is being held in lieu of bonds totaling $425,000. She is also charged with aggravated robbery in an unrelated incident.

District Court records indicate that an ex parte suit has been filed on behalf of 21-year-old Pamela Newton, a Big Spring woman charged with capital murder in connection with the April 1 shooting death of longtime radio personality C. Vance Kimble.

Kimble, 61, was found in a hallway of his residence, dead of a gunshot wound to the upper chest. Sheriff's officers have said his pockets had been pilfered. Items including vehicles were missing from his home on U.S. Highway 87 South.

The ex parte suit alleges that Pamela Newton is being held illegally in Howard County jail in lieu of bond that is excessive, oppressive and beyond her financial ability.

Newton and her brother, Patrick Newton, 17, both of Big Spring, were arrested in New Orleans after she attempted to use one of Kimble's credit cards.

Also arrested in New Orleans was 23-year-old Michael Lee Hodnett, also of Big Spring. A fourth suspect, 17-year-old Dennis Wayne Noggler, was returned to Howard County jail from Stuart, Fla. April 18.

All four were initially held in lieu of $100,000 bond each on charges of capital murder, but Noggler successfully requested a bond reduction and was freed on $50,000 bond. Thereafter Patrick Newton and Hodnett also were freed on bonds reduced to $50,000.

No hearing date had been set on the bond reduction late Thursday afternoon.

HERALD STAFF REPORT

Howard County Sheriff's Department officers reported investigating the following complaints as of 8:45 a.m. today:

● Larry Dale Payne, 25, 809 E. 15th St., was released on $500 bond after being arrested by Big Spring police on a charge of criminal trespass.

● Ronald Sigur reported the possible theft of two items of equipment from the cogeneration plant located behind the Fina Oil Co. refinery. Sigur, manager for Century Contractors West Inc. of Kingswood, described the missing equipment as one Transmation (brand name) 10-40 and one Transmation 10-45 unit.

The property was last seen approximately one week ago and had been stored in the timekeepers trailer at the construction site. Used for checking instruments, the missing items were valued at $3,000.

● Ra Netta Smith, Desert Hills Trailer Park, reported Thursday that someone she knows assaulted her.

● Darryl Wayne Washington, 21, Sweetwater, was released on $3,000 bond after being arrested by Big Spring police on charges of forgery.

● Rosendo Cruz Rodriquez, 18, 815 Creighton St., was released on $500 bond after being arrested by Big Spring police on a warrant for criminal trespass.

thinking of the kids over there, so I had to stop it."

Halvorsen, who was a 27-year-old U.S. Army Air Force lieutenant when he started flying Berlin Airlift missions in July 1948, said he flew a total of 126 roundtrip missons from July 1948 to February 1949, taking off from the U.S. Rhine Main base near Frankfurt.

He later became commander of the U.S. Air Force at Tempelhof Air Base from 1970 to 1974. He has since retired from the military and makes his home in Provo, Utah.

Halvorsen said he first had his crew throw out candy to children waiting at Templehof Airport.

"There were only about 30 kids gathered at the airport" on that run, he said. But the idea spread like wildfire, and soon there were thousands of children throughout the city waiting for sweets to be tossed out of airlift planes, which were quickly dubbed "Raisin Bombers."

When the Soviets blocked off Allied access to the western sectors of Berlin in 1948, they also cut delivery of electricity.

Opinion

Soviet pitfalls, promise shown

Now that the Soviet Union has set sail on the good ship glasnost, communist officials had better get a firm grip on the railing because they seem to be in for a rough passage. That was obvious in the wake of Boris Yeltsin's unprecedented public airing of high-level Kremlin disagreement.

Such public disarray prompted some rhetorical backpedaling by a red-faced Mikhail Gorbachev at his first televised new conference.

Mr. Gorbachev chastened Mr. Yeltsin for telling the British Broadcasting Corp. and CBS that Yegor Ligachev, number two in the Kremlin and the party's chief ideologue, is an obstructionist and should resign.

Many Soviets are said to have expressed private doubts that Mr. Yeltsin would have given such extraordinary interviews without the tacit approval of the Soviet leader. The Soviet rumor mills are grinding, and Kremlin watchers wonder whether another Gorbachev-Ligachev showdown is at hand.

Mr. Yeltsin, a close Gorbachev friend and former point man for reform in the ruling Politburo, was stripped of his party posts last year after he made a fiery speech to the Central Committee assailing conservative opponents of the Gorbachev policies.

Even though he didn't mention Mr. Ligachev by name, it was generally assumed that this hard-liner who opposes the Gorbachev reforms was the intended target. Soon thereafter, Mr. Ligachev endorsed a pro-Stalinist article in the newspaper Sovietskaya Rossiya.

Whereupon Mr. Gorbachev struck back by commissioning a pro-reform manifesto that was published in Pravda. There were rumors last month of an impending power struggle between the two men, but Mr. Gorbachev took pains to downplay their respective differences and to appear at public functions with his powerful party adversary.

Still, their uneasy truce has not slowed speculation that the party conference scheduled June 28 in Moscow will be a test of strength between supporters of the Soviet leader and those who want to limit the sweeping political and economic changes he favors.

The Yeltsin broadside, therefore, is being viewed as yet another shot across Mr. Ligachev's bow.

In Moscow and in capitals around the globe, there is surprise at the unusual spectacle of communist leaders openly engaging in the kind of infighting one normally associates with American politicians.

If nothing else, this give-and-take underscores the promise and pitfalls of glasnost. More significantly, it prompts the big question being raised elsewhere about Chairman Gorbachev's chances of survival.

Farewell, printer's ink; hello, new life

By ALISHA GOLDMAN
Copy Editor

This is my final column for the Big Spring Herald; today is my last official day as a staff member.

I am not leaving Big Spring, however. I have accepted an offer from Howard College to serve as a liasion at the Big Spring State Hospital. It is a new position so I will be breaking ground and learning about a whole different segment of our society.

Of cabbages and kings

Many local residents (and even some of my friends outside of Big Spring) can't comprehend why anyone would want to work at the hospital. But I believe in what they are trying to do.

I will learn a lot.

I have enjoyed my year and 10 months at the Herald and I've learned a great deal here, as well.

I'll be keeping more of a watch on our lawmakers at state and national levels. I've seen that an international incident usually has repercussions in our country, and may even have been generated by our country.

I know now that I need to be involved in local government to keep an eye on how officials spend tax dollars and understand their motives. I believe we have a fine city council but "power corrupts" can be an apt adage.

As copy editor, I had the power of deciding every day what local people would probably know about their city, county, state and national governments and what was occurring in the world at-large.

I had to maintain objectivity and not include only news I found interesting, but the news I thought the readers in this area needed to be informed and make intelligent decisions.

And of course I've learned about the press corps. I know now why the press prints what it does, the way it does. There is a method to the madness, you could say.

I had a part in forming some editorial policies and improving some others.

I've listened to the daily criticisms and small praise for our reporters' hard efforts to present the news factually, accurately and fairly.

And we've made mistakes. Ones we regretted deeply and attempted to rectify, realizing all the while that once something's been printed wrong, it is difficult to undo the damage. It's been a heavy responsibility.

At times, we printed what people would rather not hear — but needed to know for their own good.

I've wondered why people are so apathetic to what members of the city council and other government bodies do. All of their decisions affect our daily lives; often, we don't get involved until we have a complaint.

The paper has improved since I came. I've seen it being molded and altered toward being among the best papers in West Texas — and it is getting close. Our colleagues at larger newspapers are seeing the Big Spring Herald by-line more often on features, column and news stories.

I've never had a better relationship with a boss than I have had with Robert Wernsman, managing editor. He criticizes the writing with a heavy hand, but does so without hurting the ego. His is a rare talent. Most of all, he cares about Big Spring.

If I never return to the newspaper business, I will at least appreciate the fact that every word in the paper was chosen with attention; every headline written with thought and creativity; every story written with the most objectivity possible.

And I'll remember that the people who work here are human beings who believe in my right to know the facts about government and science and education and health and the world.

If they can be accused of going overboard or making a mistake, at least they are willing to do it out front where the entire world can read it and criticize. And they're willing to live in a glass house and have rocks thrown pretty often.

If I want to know something, it is probably there for me to read it. I can no longer say "I didn't know the city council was changing that law," because odds are 10 to one it appeared in the newspaper beforehand.

And don't think I'll be able to call and get anything out of them just because I once worked there. I know for a fact that they are most proud of their impartiality. If they don't put in my news item or photograph, it is because they don't put in anybody's. I'm no better than anyone else and I won't be treated as better.

But I'm also no worse. I have equal rights to get my news in. And it will be in, according to published policies that are adhered to strictly.

I've learned — about the pressures, the deadlines, the editing of copy, dealing with criticism daily from strangers who have never even tried to write a story, seeing people from every walk of life visit the newsroom, watching reporters unfold a story of tornado victims to writing the truth about racism.

From the copy editor's desk, I have seen Big Spring. And Big Spring is reflected in the Herald — the good and the bad.

That's why I'll read it religiously every day when it's delivered — on my doorstep instead of directly off the press.

Disagrees with doctor's proposal

To the editor:

Re: "Doctor: Bypass legal system on claims," by Steve Geissen (Big Spring Herald, June 16).

Question: Is Dr. Ralph Clayton an M.D.? It did not clarify just what kind of a doctor he was supposed to be.

Question: Was his quoted statement meant to be an "icebreaker," or a comment to prove a point in which he holds the same opinion? The article leads one to believe that it was the latter.

The doctor(?) definitely didn't win many friends, or influence any enemies with his derogatory quote.

An arbitration committee of doctors only is not the answer either; people have become too quick to sue a doctor when their expectations are not met.

I do agree that many suits are filed against doctors with good cause; however, people need to remember that the doctors cannot "walk on the water," and medical science is not an exact science — what might be the best operative procedure today may not be so a month from now because of medical research.

If the Lions Club paid this man to speak, they need a refund.

LILLIE HENDRICKS

Editor's note: Dr. Clayton is a retired radiologist. His quoted statement was used to give the reader an example of material in the story. It in no way reflects a prejudice on the part of the person selecting the quotation.

Ex-evil empire not all the way out of woods

By WILLIAM F. BUCKLEY JR.

At 27, he was an agricultural economist with Moscow's Institute of Economics and a university lecturer.

But Josef Stalin looked kindly on him during the Great Purge, and instead of shooting or exiling him, sent him as chief of the U.S. division of the People's Commissariat of Foreign Affairs. From there he went as counselor at the Soviet Embassy in Washington, becoming ambassador in 1943.

On the right

He went to the United Nations Security Council in 1946 and established the Soviet tradition of vetoing any moves designed to promote peace with freedom. In 1946 he became deputy foreign minister.

He became first deputy foreign minister in 1949 and foreign minister in 1957. Under Leonid Brezhnev, he presided over the great purge of the Prague Spring in Czechoslovakia in 1968.

Andrei Andreyevich Gromyko is now the president of the Soviet Union, and the first person to greet President Ronald Reagan as he descended from Air Force One at Moscow last month.

The itinerary of Mr. Reagan might have been conceived by the Brothers Grimm. No fairy tale could have made the trip more regally satisfying. The rich decor was courtesy of dead czars, the last one executed by someone in honor of whom a Russian city is named.

And beginning with Gorbachev himself, the Russian court was choreographed to sing, if every now and then with a touch of diffidence, the praises of peace and co-existence.

Ronald Reagan lectured to the intellectuals about an obscure episode in an obscure Russian novel and received a standing ovation. It was a dream, it was nirvana, it was — mind-blowing.

There was that one terribly sour note, sounded day after day. Every time Mr. Reagan looked especially pleased, especially satisfied, especially carried away by the gemutlichkeit of it all, you would hear a voice. Not a Russian's voice, but a good, twangy American voice, and always that voice would ask the same question:

"Is this what you called the evil empire, Mr. President?"

Finally, worn down by this hectoring over his melodramatic excess of years gone by, Mr. Reagan said: "I was talking about another empire."

We sinners believe because we were taught to believe and do give internal assent to the mandate, to forgive, 70 times seven times.

But Mr. Reagan is engaged now not in forgiveness, but in what George Orwell called vaporization. Big Brother decides to change a historical or a present fact, and evidence inconveniencing to the new thesis is simply made to — disappear.

Run the fingers lightly over the globe, pausing to stop at outposts of the Soviet empire. In Nicaragua, using Soviet arms, they are promoting war and aggression and drafting 17-year-olds while suffering a 60 percent cut in their standard of living.

In Cuba, where people continue to die in the effort to flee from it, there is dire poverty and the most aggressive conventional armed force in the Western Hemisphere, paid for by the Soviet Union.

In Poland, Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski, proconsul for Gorbachev, hacks down those who fight for a free labor union movement.

Mr. Reagan does well to encourage changes in the Soviet system. Something wildly exciting is indeed going on in the Soviet system.

But to greet it as if it were no longer evil is on the order of changing our entire position toward Adolf Hitler on receiving the news that he has abolished one extermination camp.

We sow only confusion when we retract the statement that it is evil to support the systematic suppression of human rights everywhere your empire reaches. Gorbachev may be the spokesman for what is being attempted within the Soviet empire, but Gromyko continues as president of what continues to be an evil empire.

Navy to drop charges

PENSACOLA, Fla. (AP) — The Navy will drop manslaughter charges against at least two of the six sailors charged in a recruit's death, and has offered non-judicial punishment rather than a court martial to three of them, defense attorneys say.

Attorneys for Petty Officers 1st Class Richard E. Blevins and David J. Smith, instructors at the Naval Rescue Swimmer School, said they were informed Thursday of the decision by Rear Adm. David R. Morris, chief of naval air training, in Corpus Christi, Texas.

Blevins, Smith and three other instructors were charged with involuntary manslaughter and conspiracy to commit battery in the March 2 death of Airman Recruit Lee Mirecki, 19, of Appleton, Wis.

Mirecki was literally scared to death when he was forced into a swimming pool after trying to quit a rescue course at the Pensacola Naval Air Station, according to testimony at an investigative hearing two weeks ago.

Morris also gave Blevins and Smith the option of non-judicial punishment, which could mean a pay cut, restriction to the base or extra duty on the conspiracy charge, the lawyers said.

Thomas A. Torchia, the officer in charge of the school, was charged only with dereliction of duty and also is being offered non-judicial punishment instead of a court-martial, said his lawyer, Lt. Thomas C. Leighton.

Godwin may testify

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan and former Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger failed to support efforts to reform the multibillion-dollar Pentagon weapons-buying system, and the result is a "national crisis," says the Pentagon's former acquisitions czar.

Richard P. Godwin says he quit his job last September because Reagan and Weinberger showed an "unwillingness to make some hard decisions."

Godwin is likely to be among the witnesses when Congress begins hearings next week into Pentagon purchasing, the subject of a mushrooming criminal investigation.

Inmate says he died

AUBURN, N.Y. (AP) — A jailhouse lawyer tried to prove that he "died" on the operating table during open-heart surgery and therefore completed his life sentence for murder, but a disbelieving judge ordered him back to prison.

"Law is interesting," Cayuga County Judge Peter Corning said, trying to suppress a smile after hearing convict Jerry Rosenberg's argument Thursday.

Corning ruled that Rosenberg, 49, did not meet the Court of Appeals' 1984 definition of death: a lack of brain activity or an irreversible halt in heart and lung activity.

"As his presence in this courtroom indicates ... he did not die," Corning said.

VIENNA, Austria — Pope John Paul II shakes hands with children inside St. Stephen's Cathedral before giving Mass thursday in Vienna.

Pope John Paul II

Meets with Jewish leaders

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — Pope John Paul II today told Austria's Jewish leaders Palestinians have a right to a homeland. At the same time, he recalled the "incomprehensible pain, suffering and tears" of the Nazi Holocaust.

Meeting with Jewish leaders on the second day of his five-day Austrian trip, the pontiff did not respond to their call for the Vatican to give full diplomatic recognition to the state of Israel.

A half-dozen Austrian Jewish leaders, led by Jewish Community President Paul Grosz, sat in an ornate room of the Vienna archbishop's residence to hear the pontiff today. There, the pope urged understanding for the Vatican's longstanding call for a Palestinian homeland.

"The Jewish people have the right to a homeland, as any other nation has according to international law," the pontiff said. "The same goes for the Palestinian people, many of whom have become homeless and refugees."

John Paul reminded his audience he had made a similar call last September in Miami during his U.S. tour.

"By means of a common readiness for understanding and compromise, solutions should finally be found which lead to a just, comprehensive and lasting peace in this area," the pope said, delivering his remarks in German.

Speaking of the World War II-era Nazi murder of an estimated six million Jews, the pope said: "The incomprehensible pain, suffering and tears still are before my eyes and etched deep in my soul."

But he added: "It would be clearly unjust and untrue to charge Christianity with these unspeakable crimes."

The Roman Catholic leader said the Holocaust instead arose from a world "without and even aimed against God" and called for an end to anti-Semitism.

Some Jewish leaders have accused Christians, and the Vatican in particular, of failing to do enough to prevent the Holocaust.

Grosz, in his remarks, said the pontiff's decision to receive controversial President Kurt Waldheim at the Vatican last year shows that "many Austrians still have not come to terms with their past."

Waldheim has faced allegations of complicity in Nazi war crimes during his service in the German army. He has strongly denied any wrongdoing during his military service during World War II.

The Jewish community leader added: "We sincerely regret that full diplomatic relations between Israel and the Holy See have not yet been established." The pontiff did not respond to that point.

Landslide deaths rise

ANKARA, Turkey (AP) — Tons of rocks and earth tumbling down on a mountain village have forced the suspension of rescue work at the site of a major landslide that buried at least 100 people alive, officials said.

Radio reports late Thursday said villagers heard people crying for help from underneath the debris.

The victims, including 30 travelers stranded in a coffeehouse by an earlier landslide early Thursday, were buried by the major landslide which swept down on Catak village Thursday afternoon, according to reports from the northeastern area.

Catak is located in Trabzon province about 500 miles northeast of Ankara and not far from the Black Sea. The earth was loosened by heavy rains in the region, where frequent landslides are sometimes blamed on extensive cutting of forests.

Soviets to retaliate

OTTAWA (AP) — In a second round of expulsions for alleged spying, Canada has kicked out a senior Soviet diplomat, bringing to 11 the number of Soviet officials banned from Canada this week.

The Soviet Union promised to retaliate in a move indicating little hope for an end to the tit-for-tat expulsions.

Foreign Minister Joe Clark on Thursday ordered Col. Grigori Stepanovich Roublev, the senior military attache in the Soviet Embassy, out of the country by Monday.

Clark also said Sergei Mikhailovich Kashtanov, a former second secretary at the embassy who served in Canada from 1981-1985, was no longer welcome in Canada because of "espionage activities."

Gasoline tanks burn

GUADALUPE, Mexico (AP) — A raging fire with temperatures up to 5,400 degrees burned out of control today after three gas tanks exploded, killing two people in this northeastern industrial city, officials said.

Officials said the heat of the blaze melted several cars and the fire's glow could be seen up to 10 miles away.

The blasts and the fire also injured 20 people. Authorities said six of them were in very serious condition early today.

The blaze started after three tanks exploded one after another at the San Rafael tank farm, belonging to Pemex, the state petroleum monopoly.

The flames, shooting more than 100 feet in the air, forced the evacuation of more than 10,000 people from nearby homes.

Nuevo Leon state judiciary police director Hernan Guajardo Garza, who visited the site, said at times the fire reached 5,400 degrees Fahrenheit, or 3,000 degrees Celsius, and turned several nearby vehicles into molten metal.

Firemen, rushed in from all around the area, were finally able to douse the flames in two tanks late Thursday using special equipment with 50-foot pipes.

Chaplain Emerson graduates

LeNIER EMERSON

Chaplain LeNier R. Emerson, chief of Chaplain Service, at the Veterans Administration Medical Center, was a recent graduate of the third class for chiefs of Chaplain Service at the National VA Chaplain Training Center, Hampton, Va. April 11-15, according to Conrad Alexander, director of the Big Spring VA.

The one-week course was designed to enhance management and supervisory skills, impart administrative information for service chiefs and develop program material that can be used locally in the medical center, Alexander said.

Emerson has served as the chief of Chaplain Service at Big Spring since July 1987. His duties include designing and supervising pastoral care programs to meet the spiritual needs and religious concerns of patients, their families, and staff at the VA.

Prior to coming to Big Spring, Emerson was a staff chaplain at the VA Medical Center in North Chicago, Ill.

He is an ordained minister of the United Methodist Church and holds membership in the West Ohio Conference. He is a native of Iowa, and received his undergraduate degree from the University of Iowa, and his graduate degree from Garrett-Evangelical Theological Seminary.

He and his wife, Frances, reside in Big Spring.

FAITH AND GOOD MANNERS CAN SAVE AN AILING MARRIAGE

A common sight in any newspaper is a picture of a beautiful bride or a starry-eyed engaged couple. Yet in view of the mounting divorce statistics, we wonder how many of these marriages will last even a year, let alone a lifetime. The romantic euphoria can quickly melt in the heat of arguments about money, working wives, children and all the little everyday faults that went unnoticed during the courtship. If the couple would resume the good manners and good nature that united them in the first place, work out some areas of compromise and ignore minor irritations, they might have a chance. Above all, they should attend their House of Worship and be reminded of what love means. It is quite likely that their marital problems could be solved at the very altar where they exchanged their vows. It is certainly worth a try.

Staying married for a lifetime should rank among the fine arts.

Christian inspiration

Artist makes return on spiritual investment

ORANGE, Texas (AP) — Nancy Denmark has learned how to draw on inspiration from God for her spiritual life, and designs simple, elegant jewelry with Christian symbolism from that inspiration.

Ms. Denmark, an Orange native now living in Houston, says her spiritual growth fired her creativity and helped her overcome the apparent contradiction of expressing a faith that began in poverty through jewels and precious metals.

"I made a vow to give God a return on his investment in me," she says. "The spiritual growth led to the artistic growth."

Ms. Denmark recently returned to her home church of St. Paul's Episcopal Church in Orange to speak about her spiritual and artistic growth.

Her interest in sculpting began when she attended Lutcher Stark High School and developed at the University of Houston, where she was graduated in 1976 with a bachelor of fine arts degree.

Ms. Denmark got a job in a jewelry store after graduation, took a leave of absence "and played for a year in Europe," returned to her job, but quit the store in 1980 to develop her craft.

She did a lot of work on commission, but turned away from that so she could grow artistically, she says.

While she always believed her creativity was a gift from God, her current calling is still young.

Ms.Denmark compares her recent life to the Christian church calendar, starting with an Advent of three months of what she calls turmoil before Christmas, 1986.

At that time, she says, "I made the commitment to create a body of work to spr ead the word."

The next time of anticipation — her Lent, as she calls it — happened in early 1987 when she had a "flood of ideas" for jewelry designs, Ms. Denmark says, but "I couldn't get anything produced."

But by May 1987 she could present her designs as a body of work, she says. "Now, I'm in the Easter season," she adds.

ORANGE — Nancy Denmark designs and manufactures simple, elegant jewelry with Christian symbolism. Denmark, an Orange native now living in Houston, says her spiritual growth fires her creativity.

Ms. Denmark had several personal obstacles to overcome.

"I felt like I was commercializing my faith," she says.

That changed when she heard a stewardship sermon on the parable of the talents at her church, Episcopal Church of the Epiphany in Houston. In the parable, the head of the household commends two servants who double the amount of money entrusted to them, but severely punishes the third who buried it in a field and earned nothing.

"That's when I realized it was my responsibility to use my talent to glorify God," Ms. Denmark says. "It brought my religion and faith into my daily life and got away from when you think about it only on Sundays."

Another difficulty Ms. Denmark had was reconciling the creation of expensive jewelry with the Bible's frequent condemnations of the abuse of wealth.

Ms. Denmark's jewelry ranges in price from $18 to $4,000.

"I don't think wealth in itself is obscene," Ms. Denmark says, but adds that she doesn't want to strictly appeal to a rich clientele.

Instead of concentrating on exclusive one-of-a-kind creations, she began designing jewelry that could be mass-produced without compromising the design, she says.

"That's when I geared my work toward more production, because the average person couldn't afford custom jewelry," she says.

McBride set to minister Sunday

Dan McBride, known as the "Will Rogers of the religous world," will minister College Baptist Church, 11th and Birdwell Lane, Sunday at 10 a.m. with an "Outreach Rally," and will also share in the 11 a.m. worship service.

A men's breakfast will be served at 8 a.m.

McBride is a musician/humorist specializing in church-related entertainment and musical satire, yet always with a spiritual implication, according to a news release.

He is a native of Dallas, and began singing professionally during his teen years. He is a graduate of Howard Payne Univeristy and Southwestern Baptist Theological Seminary.

McBride is an ordained Baptist minister. He provides mirth with a message, entertainment with inspiration, laughter with learning, and for weary Christians, the medicinal benefit for weary hearts, the release stated.

DAN McBRIDE

The public is invited.

For more information, call 267-7429.

Celebrant Singers to perform

Immaculate Heart of Mary Church, 1009 Hearn St., will present the "Celebrant Singers" in concert Sunday at at 10:30 a.m. and at 7:30 p.m.

The Celebrant Singers, an international Christian music group, travels across the United States and abroad, according to a news release.

Host families are needed to house the singers, if anyone is interested, contact Barry McLean at 267-4124.

The public is invited to attend.

SHARP scheduled to perform

First Church of the Nazarene, 1400 Lancaster St., will present "SHARP," Sunday at the 6 p.m. service.

"SHARP" — Sharing Him And Reaching People, is a group of teen-agers from the Midland First Church of the Nazarene.

The members will present messages in the form of skits that speak to the heart, said Pastor Gary Smith.

The public is invited to attend.

Sunday morning, spiritual growth hour and Sunday school begins at 9:45 a.m. Morning worship begins at 10:45 a.m.

Commit your life to Christ and trust his promise

Billy Graham

DEAR DR. GRAHAM: I'm tired of covering up and lying for my husband. You see, he has a real drinking problem from time to time and some days he isn't even able to get up and go to work. So he leaves it to me to call in and say he is sick with the flu or something. I don't know what to do because he needs to keep his job, but I'm about at the end of my rope. — Mrs. T.L.

DEAR MRS. T.L.: So far you've been taking the easy way out — but it has not been the right way or the way that really helps your husband deal with his problem. Let me encourage you not to continue on this path, for in the long run it cannot help either of you.

Your husband needs help; without it he probably will become more and more enslaved by his alcoholism and will eventually destroy not only his career, but himself. Talk frankly with your pastor or doctor, or someone else who is familiar with the resources and groups available in your community to help those who are fighting alcoholism.

Then determine in your own mind that (with God's help) you will do whatever is necessary to get help for your husband — and stop covering up for him. He probably will never seek it on his own; he needs your help and support. You may be surprised to find that many employers — including your husband's, perhaps — want to help an employee who has an alcohol or drug problem.

Realize also that God wants to help your husband — and you as well. Christ loves you and he can give you the couerage and strength you need. In addition, he can help your husband begin to deal with the pressure that have caused him to turn to alcohol. Commit your life to Christ and trust the promise that God "gives us the victory through our Lord Jesus Christ." (1 Corinthians 15:57).

DEAR DR. GRAHAM: Please pray for my family. I am in prison and I think about my wife and two children all the time, and all the loneliness and heartache they're having to endure because of me. I hate myself sometimes. I don't have anybody to blame but myself, but I wish for their sakes I could live life over again. — P.P.

DEAR P.P.: I am encouraged you are concerned about your family and the hurts you have caused them, and also that you are not trying to blame anyone else for your wrong decisions and actions. There would be little hope for you if you were hardened and cared little about others.

But more than anything else, I want you to discover that God does not hate you, in spite of what you have done. In fact, God loves you — even while you are sitting in a prison cell — and he wants you (and your family) to become part of his family forever. Every week I receive letters from prisoners who have turned to Christ and have experienced the joy of God's forgiveness.

Often they write that although they are still in prison, they have become free men and women in their hearts because they have been released from the bondage of sin. This is what Jesus meant when he said God "has sent me to proclaim freedom for the prisoners ... to release the oppressed." (Luke 4:18).

Right where you are you can turn to Christ. Currently you are paying a penalty for the crime you have committed. But Jesus Christ paid the penalty for all your sins, by willingly dying on the cross for you. You deserve to die for your sins, but Christ died in your place! He offers you forgiveness and he also wants to come into your life and be your constant companion. Give your life to Jesus Christ without delay and discover the joy of his forgiveness and presence.

Your help is needed!

Archbishop condemns attack

NEW YORK (AP) — The primate of the Greek Orthodox Church in the Americas says attacks on Michael Dukakis' religious situation are "extremely unjustified" and that he is a steadfast son of the church.

"He is a member of the church, was baptized in it and he has never left it," Archbishop Iakovos says of the front-running Democratic presidential contender, who has been assailed as "an apostate."

"The attack is wrong in itself," Iakovos added in an interview. His eyes flashed. "It came from small people."

In widely distributed letters, James G. Jatras, a staff member of the Senate Republican Policy Committee and a church layman, called Dukakis a "renegade, an outcast" for his positions and his marriage to a Jew.

Jatras, writing under his Greek name, Dimitrios Iatreidis, said Dukakis' church membership was "severed by your marriage outside the church." Iakovos termed that untrue.

The white-haired archbishop, 76, who has maintained relationships with Dukakis and his parents since his boyhood, noted that Dukakis considers him "his spiritual father," and added:

"We are proud that one of our young men has had the courage and determination to run for the highest office in the nation."

While making no formal endorsement, avoided under church policy, he said, "I would put it that 99 percent of us are very proud Dukakis is a front runner and almost certain nominee."

Iakovos, recalling the years 1942 to 1954 when he was dean of Boston's Annunciation Cathedral to which the Dukakis family belonged and where he still is a regularly contributing member, said:

"I remember him in his Sunday school pupil days. He was a frequent participant as a teenager. The Dukakis family was one of the best families in the church, his father a physician, his mother a teacher of English."

Names in the news

NEW YORK (AP) — Flamboyant pop singer will Cyndi Lauper will sing the praise of education next week when she receives a belated high school diploma.

Lauper will get her sheepskin along with the 400 graduates of Richmond Hill High School in Queens at Monday's ceremonies, school officials said Wednesday.

Lauper, whose hits include "Girls Just Wanna Have Fun" and "True Colors," dropped out of the high school several years ago, said her publicist, Robin Riggs.

After getting her diploma, Lauper will address the class on the importance of education, Riggs said. Lauper already has a high-school equivalency diploma.

LENOX, Mass. (AP) — Friends of conductor Leonard Bernstein have orchestrated a birthday bash to include appearances by Beverly Sills, Lauren Bacall, Betty Comden and Phyllis Newman.

Miss Sills will be host of the event that will include performances by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, the Boston Pops Orchestra and the Tanglewood Festival Chorus.

The concert plans to celebrate Bernstein's accomplishments in popular music with excerpts from his "West Side Story," "On the Town" and others.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Sylvester Stallone has filed a $3 million lawsuit against Colt Industries, alleging a photograph and caption in Guns Magazine falsely implied he endorsed a Colt handgun.

In the Superior Court lawsuit filed here, Stallone claims a Connecticut advertising agency hired by Colt contacted his agent asking to use his name and photograph to promote a 45.-caliber, $1,500 pistol called the Heirloom gun.

The lawsuit, filed Friday, said Stallone refused, and after that, Colt requested a bogus article to be placed in the magazine with an accompanying photograph of Colt's fake Heirloom gun firearm with Stallone's name inscribed on the barrel.

The picture printed in the July 1987 issue shows the actor, the gun and a caption saying "Sylvester Stallone's personal Colt Heirloom gun."

"We have no comment on the lawsuit or firearm in question," Peter Williamson, spokesman for New York-based Colt Industries, said Wednesday. Guns Magazine is not a defendant.

The star of such action-packed films as "Rocky" and "Rambo" said his reputation and the market value of his name were damaged and he should receive profits Colt unfairly gained from them.

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Tom Berenger and Charlie Sheen will hit the diamond at the Milwaukee County Stadium to slug it out in motion picture called "Major League," according to the movie's producer.

The movie will chronicle the exploits of the Cleveland Indians, with Milwaukee doubling as Cleveland, said producer Irby Smith on Wednesday.

McNew descendants gather for 61st reunion

The descendants of the late William and Mary McNew gathered recently for the 61st annual McNew reunion at the Community Center in Forest Park, Lamesa, with 227 attending, and 12 registering guests.

A number of families were represented with four to six generations.

Registration began at 9:30 a.m. Saturday. Other activities included visiting, games, music and singing.

Pete Merritt, Colorado City, gave the invocation; Gertrude McCann, Big Spring, served as master of ceremonies and modeled the original Scotch-plaid tie (McNew banner and crest color), which was brought from Ireland by Jim McNew, Amber, Pa., who noted its history, and by Oliver McNew, Darndanville, Ark., who also noted some of the history of when the family arrived in the United States by boat in 1779, landing in Virginia, Pennsylvania and North Carolina.

The oldest man present was Jess Skeen, 80, Big Spring; the oldest woman was Anna Lea Steger, 85, Colorado City. The youngest individual was Sterlen Trey Wood, 6 weeks, son of Blane and Sandy Wood, Lubbock.

Jim McNew, Amber, Pa., traveled the longest distance, 1800 miles; runner-up was Hazel Reeves, Paul, Idaho, 1200 miles.

Other attended from California, Arkansas, New Mexico, Oklahoma, Colorado, Arizona, Idaho, Pennsylvania, Tennessee and Texas.

Those attending from Big Spring were: Mr. and Mrs. Richard Posey, Mr. and Mrs. Jerald Burgess, Mr. and Mrs. J.W. Skeen, Mr. and Mrs. Coy Joe MCann and Cody and Emily, Mrs. Callie Bennett and Jerry, Mrs. Gertrude McCann, Bobby McCracken, Bryan Sledge, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Howland and Michelle, Mr. and Mrs. R.X. McNew, Mrs. Donna Ashley, C.J. Starlite and Charlotte Ashley.

Sgt. 1st Class Carol L. Quenga, sister of David E. Jones of Big Spring and daughter of Edward A. Jones of Geneva, Ohio, has been decorated with the Army Achievement Medal in West Germany.

The Achievement Medal is awarded to soldiers for meritorious service, acts of courage, or other accomplishments .

Quenga is a medical supply supervisor with the 708th Support Battallion.

She is a 1971 graduate of St. John High School.

Garage-door openers can be hazardous

DEAR ABBY: On Feb. 15, 1988, my 8-year-old son, Jimmy, was tragically killed by an electric garage-door opener. I was the last person on earth to believe that these marvelous modern conveniences could be lethal weapons.

This letter is a warning to all parents to test their garage door openers on a monthly basis. The procedure for testing is simple and requires only a moment of your time.

Raise your garage door to the open position and place a piece of wood (a piece of 2-by-4 stud would work) or other sturdy object under the path of the door. Lower the garage door to the closed position. On contact of the door with the object in its path, the safety mechanism on the garage door opener should automatically reverse the door to the open position.

If your door does not reverse, your safety mechanism is faulty, and needs to be checked by a qualified repair technician.

Another safety precaution is to have all operating switches or buttons out of the children's reach. Locating these switches at an adult's eye level is best, according to professional installers.

One last word of caution: Talk to your children. Warn them that a garage-door opener is not a toy and can be dangerous.

If this letter encourages every parent to regularly test the garage door openers, we would be making this world a little safer for your and your neighbors' children.

Don't be like me. Don't assume that such a tragic accident could never happen to you, your family and your friends. It can, because it happened to me.

LINDA ROBIN,
WORCESTER, MASS.

DEAR LINDA: My condolences on the loss of your beloved child. And thank you for writing to warn others so they can be spared the heartache that you and your family experienced.

Lifestyle policies

We will be pleased to announce the news of your engagement, wedding, silver or golden anniversary in the Lifestyle section of the Big Spring Herald. We try to use the story on the date you request, but sometimes space does not permit this.

The information must be submitted to us on a form available at the Herald no later than Wednesday noon before the Sunday it is to be published. The form must include a name and telephone number of a person whom we can reach during the day for more information.

We will use a picture of the couple in the announcement. Or in the case of engagement announcements where a picture of the couple is not available, we will use one of the bride-elect. The picture must be a professional quality studio photograph. We prefer a 5 x 7 glossy black and white print. We ask for this kind of photograph so that it will reproduce well in the newspaper. Following the picture's publication, it may be picked up at the Lifestyle department.

The information for the story may be brought to the Lifestyle department of the Herald, which is located at 710 Scurry. Or it may be mailed to Lifestyle Department, Big Spring Herald, P.O. Box 1431, Big Spring, Texas 79720. Call us at (915) 263-7331 if we can help with more information or clarification of our policies.

ENGAGEMENTS

Information of engagement announcements must be submitted to the Lifestyle department of the Herald anytime after the engagement is a reality until at least three weeks prior to the wedding. Anything closer than three weeks will not be published. The engagement form must be submitted no later than Wednesday noon prior to the Sunday it is to be published.

Records found; VA will review disability claims

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Veterans Administration is launching a massive review of rejected disability claims following the discovery of 10 million military medical records that duplicate some lost in a 1973 fire.

Veterans groups say thousands of veterans from World War II and the Korean War could be affected by the discovery. They say the newfound records would provide verification for claims denied because there were no records to substantiate them.

Thomas K. Turnage, the VA administrator, announced the discovery on Thursday and called it a "very important" development.

"It opens up new vistas for us. It means that these people who before had difficulty establishing a basis for their disability compensation, or the degree of it . . . it means we can have another chance to look at it and, in effect, may come up with a different result," Turnage said.

The VA said that it would immediately begin going through the new data and reviewing claims rejected because of lost records. The agency urged veterans seeking information about their claims to contact their VA regional offices.

Turnage said the VA had become aware of the information last week, and it was too early to say how many people would be affected. He also did not have figures on how many claims were denied because of lost records.

Officials cautioned against overestimating the impact of the discovery. R.J. Vogel, the VA's benefits director, said that most veterans who made disability claims did so during their initial years after service and would likely have filed claims before 1973.

But John Sommer, director of the American Legion Veterans Affairs and Rehabilitation Commission, whose office helps veterans with their disability claims, said there was no doubt the development could affect thousands.

"You'd be amazed at the number of people, World War II veterans in particular, who waited until they retired to file a claim with the VA, and then found the records had been destroyed," he said. "Many of them felt they just didn't want to take anything from the government. . . . Then, as they aged, they decided to file a claim and discovered their records had been burned."

Others likely to be affected include people with an injury or disease suffered during active duty that became more pronounced over the years, such as back or heart ailments, officials said.

Eighteen million military personnel records were destroyed or seriously damaged in the July 12, 1973, fire at the National Personnel Record Center in St. Louis. The lost records were from the years 1912 through 1959 for Army personnel, and 1947 through 1963 for Air Force personnel with the surnames of Hubbard and through the letter Z.

The duplicate records cover the years 1942 to 1945 and 1950 to 1954, and so will primarily affect veterans of World War II and the Korean War.

The records were collected by the National Research Council, a private research organization, during the 1950s as part of its analysis of Army hospital records. A researcher at the council came across the records and notified the National Archives, said Jill Brett, an archives spokeswoman.

She said they were not listed by the military officer's name, but included the officer's serial number, grade and rank, age, date and place of admission.

Scriptwriters reject latest offer

WEST HOLLYWOOD, Calif. (AP) — Scriptwriters voted overwhelmingly to continue their 4-month-old strike, threatening the fall TV schedule and prompting layoffs and angry promises from both sides not to compromise.

Members of the Writers Guild of America voted 2,789-to-933, or 75 percent to 25 percent, to reject the latest contract offer by the Alliance of Motion Picture and Television Producers, the union announced Thursday.

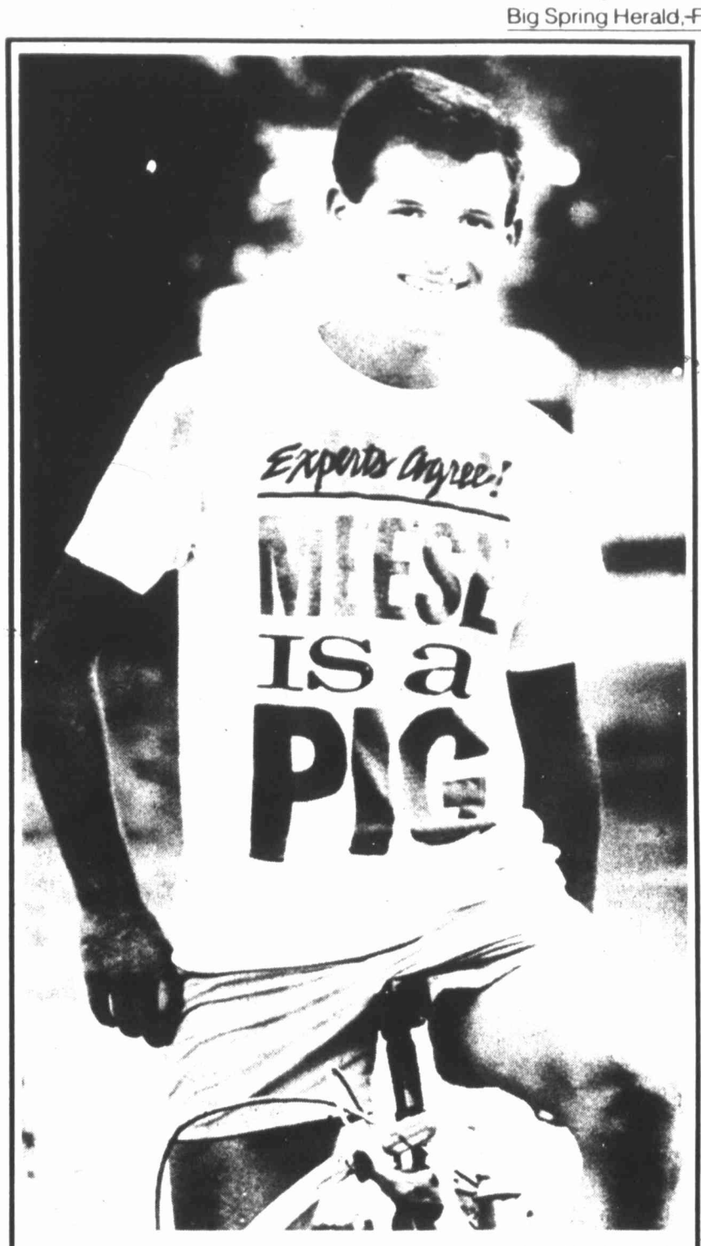

With the exception of the few shows whose producers signed contracts independent of the alliance, virtually all fall TV entertainment programming is threatened by the strike. The exceptions include "The Cosby Show" and "The Tonight Show With Johnny Carson."

The alliance reacted to the results of Wednesday night's vote by saying it had nothing further to negotiate with the guild. Leaders promised to push forward with television programming where possible, and to begin layoffs where necessary.

"It's disastrous for the entire business," said Paul Junger Witt, a guild member and co-executive producer of "The Golden Girls" and "Beauty and the Beast."

Layoff notices were issued almost simultaneously with the announcement of the voting results. At Universal Studios, a memo went out to employees Thursday announcing that the commissary would close today. And more layoffs are planned.

"It's devastating," said Dan Slusser, senior vice president and general manager of Universal City Studios Inc.

49 receive GED diplomas

Theresa Harrell played the piano for the ceremony and the invocation was given by Lydia Perez. Benediction was given by Phyllis Fuller.

Dr. Bob Mehan, vice president for instruction, served as master of ceremonies, introducing special guests in attendance. Esther Lopez was the guest speaker.

Mehan and Janie Rodriquez, Learning Center instructor, presented the graduates their diplomas.

Dr. Cheri Sparks, vice president for student services, presented the Maria Moreno scholarships to Patsy Rose, valedictorian, and J. Sean Maxwell, salutatorian. Joe Maholly, outstanding student, was also presented a scholarship. Phyllis Fuller received the honorable mention award.

Dropout problem addressed by new city organization

By STEVE GEISSEN
Staff Writer

The Hispanic Women for Progress heard a Big Spring Independent School District official Wednesday speak on the school dropout problem.

The group, during a public forum, also outlined its program to tutor potential dropouts next fall and enrolled students in the program after the meeting.

About 35 people — parents, students, teachers, and concerned citizens — attended the the 7 p.m. meeting in the Westside Community Center.

The Hispanic Women for Progress was formed this spring with the intent of focusing on the problem of school dropouts, chairperson Lupe Dominguez said.

Murray Murphy — BSISD assistant superintendent for personnel and instruction and the forum's featured speaker — told those in attendance of the district's support for the newly formed organization's plans.

BSISD has recently organized a dropout task force that is composed of five committees consisting of parents, teachers, administrators, students and civic leaders.

"The dropout problem is a major problem," Murphy told the group. "It's a major problem not only for the Hispanic population but for the the black and Anglo population as well."

"Sometimes, as educators and as parents we blame ourselves," Murphy said, "but we've got to stop blaming and move on. If all segments of our population can come together and show a common bond and caring, (the students) will respond. They may not all respond, but they will respond. You'll be surprised at the types of kids we will save."

Although the dropout rate in Big Spring is not as high as the state or national average, it is still unacceptable, Murphy said.

"Our dropout rate is very low," he said. "In Big Spring, Texas the rate is not 25 to 30 percent. We're really closer to a 10 to 15 percent true dropout rate, but we're not satisfied with this. We've got to get this down to a manageable level, and I think this is very attainable."

Murphy praised the Hispanic Women for Progress's plans to begin tutorials for students in grades five through eight.

"To sum it up, (grades five through eight) are the most difficult grades a student goes through," he said. "This is a great program to identify the students who are having problems.

"This is the type of action you've got to do. You are reinforcing (the school district), and it is our job to reinforce you."

Murphy said the district's administration will be prepared to back up the efforts of the community with appropriate funding to fight the dropout problem.

"We've got a $15 million budget and are constantly looking to channel it in the right direction," he said. "Education is very expensive, but ignorance costs more. We are committed in this particular school district."

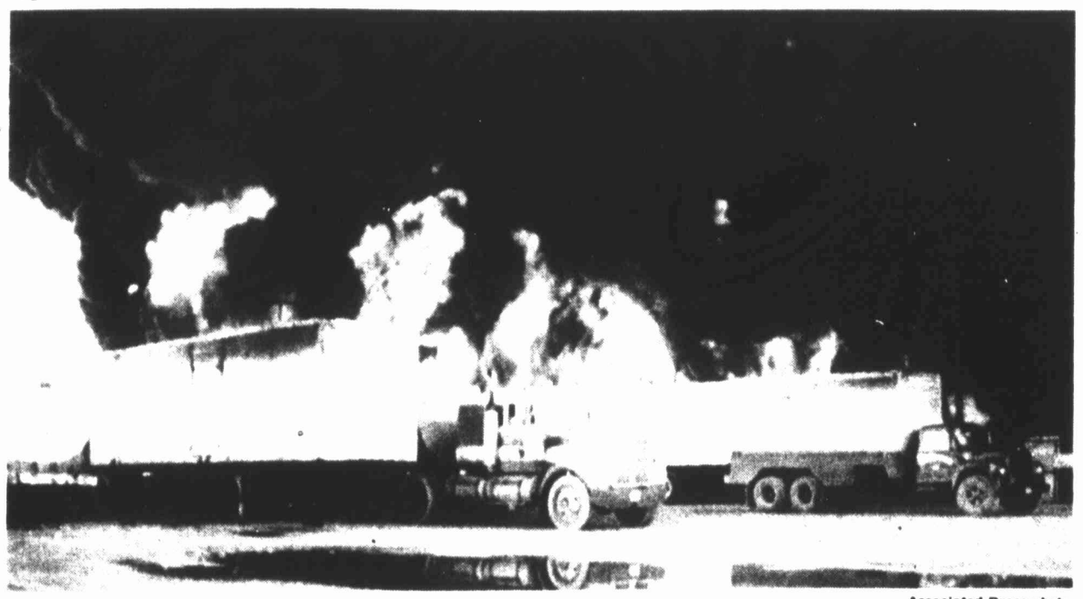

Martha Martinez, secretary, told those in attendance that the group will not only provide tutoring services for students, but will also work with the parents of students who are at risk of dropping out.

"We want to serve as a liaison between the schools and parents," Martinez said. "We are prepared to help and assist in many ways."

Dominguez said Thursday morning that, to date, 15 students have been enrolled in the group's tutorial program for grades five through eight.

Parents of students in other grades have also expressed interest in the tutorial program, she said. "If there's a need for tutoring in lower and higher grades, we will take those students too," she said.

Dominguez said the group targeted grades five through eight in order to identify and aid students early in their school career. "We feel that if we can reach students in junior high now, before they get in a rut, then the potential for their dropping out in high school will be decreased," she said.

QUADALUPE, Mexico — Smoke and flames billow out of a huge fire at a gasoline tank farm Thursday in this industrial suburb of Monterrey, in northeastern Mexico. Two people were killed and 20 injured in the disaster. Related story appears on page 5-A.

Two injured in car crash

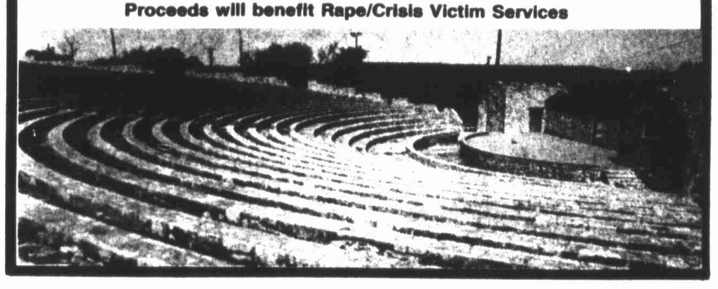

Two people were slightly injured early Thursday when the brakes on a car being driven by a Big Spring man malfunctioned, causing it to crash into a parked car, according to police reports.

Robert Laton Friend, 18, HC 61, Box 25, was driving his car westbound in the 200 block of East 14th Street about 12:20 a.m. when the brakes locked, causing the car to run a stop sign, veer left and strike a late-model station wagon owned by Charles Vievegge, police reports stated.

Vievegge's car was unoccupied at the time. Lisa Horn and John Flores — who were passengers in Friend's car — suffered minor injuries, according to police reports.

Friend was cited by police for failure to maintain proof of financial responsibility and defective equipment-brakes, reports stated.

Ewing in stable condition

ABILENE — A Big Spring woman injured in a one-car traffic accident June 14 remains in stable condition at Hendrick Medical Center in Abilene, a nursing supervisor said.

Kriste Ann Ewing, 32, 1905 Wasson Road, underwent surgery Monday for a broken neck, the supervisor said.

Ewing's son, Jonathan, 5, remains hospitalized in stable condition for a broken arm he suffered in the accident, according to the supervisor.

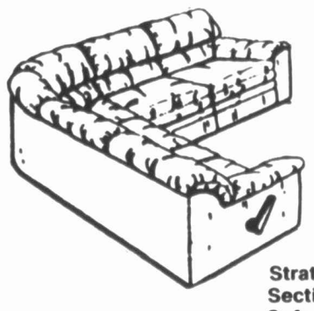

Kelly Patton Patton, 6, who suffered a broken leg in the mishap, was released from the hospital last week. Another passenger, Robin Patton, was not injured.

Eight-time world champ wows crowd

By SARAH LUMAN
Staff Writer

A past master of the art showed Big Spring rodeo fans how bull riding ought to be done Thursday night, but a top contender and local favorite didn't fare as well.

Eight-time world champion bull rider Don Gay took Bad Company's "Cadillac" for an 82-point spin, putting him in a tie for first place with Chuck Ingraffia, who had ridden "Touch of Bad Company" earlier in the program.

Big Spring cowboy Wacey Cathey couldn't hold on to "Big Ben Coors," though, as the National Finals-qualified bull denied the nation-leading cowboy a chance to increase his razor-thin margin in the standings.

Gay returned to the arena in the team roping, but came away with a no-time for his efforts there. Vance Walters and Brad Raney's 6.0 score took the day money, followed closely by Stormy Pruitt and Joe Martinez, who scored a 6.2.

New leaders were poseted in the steer wrestling Thursday as well, with C.J. Urbanek downing his beast in four seconds flat. Ken Ripp posted a 6.5 score.

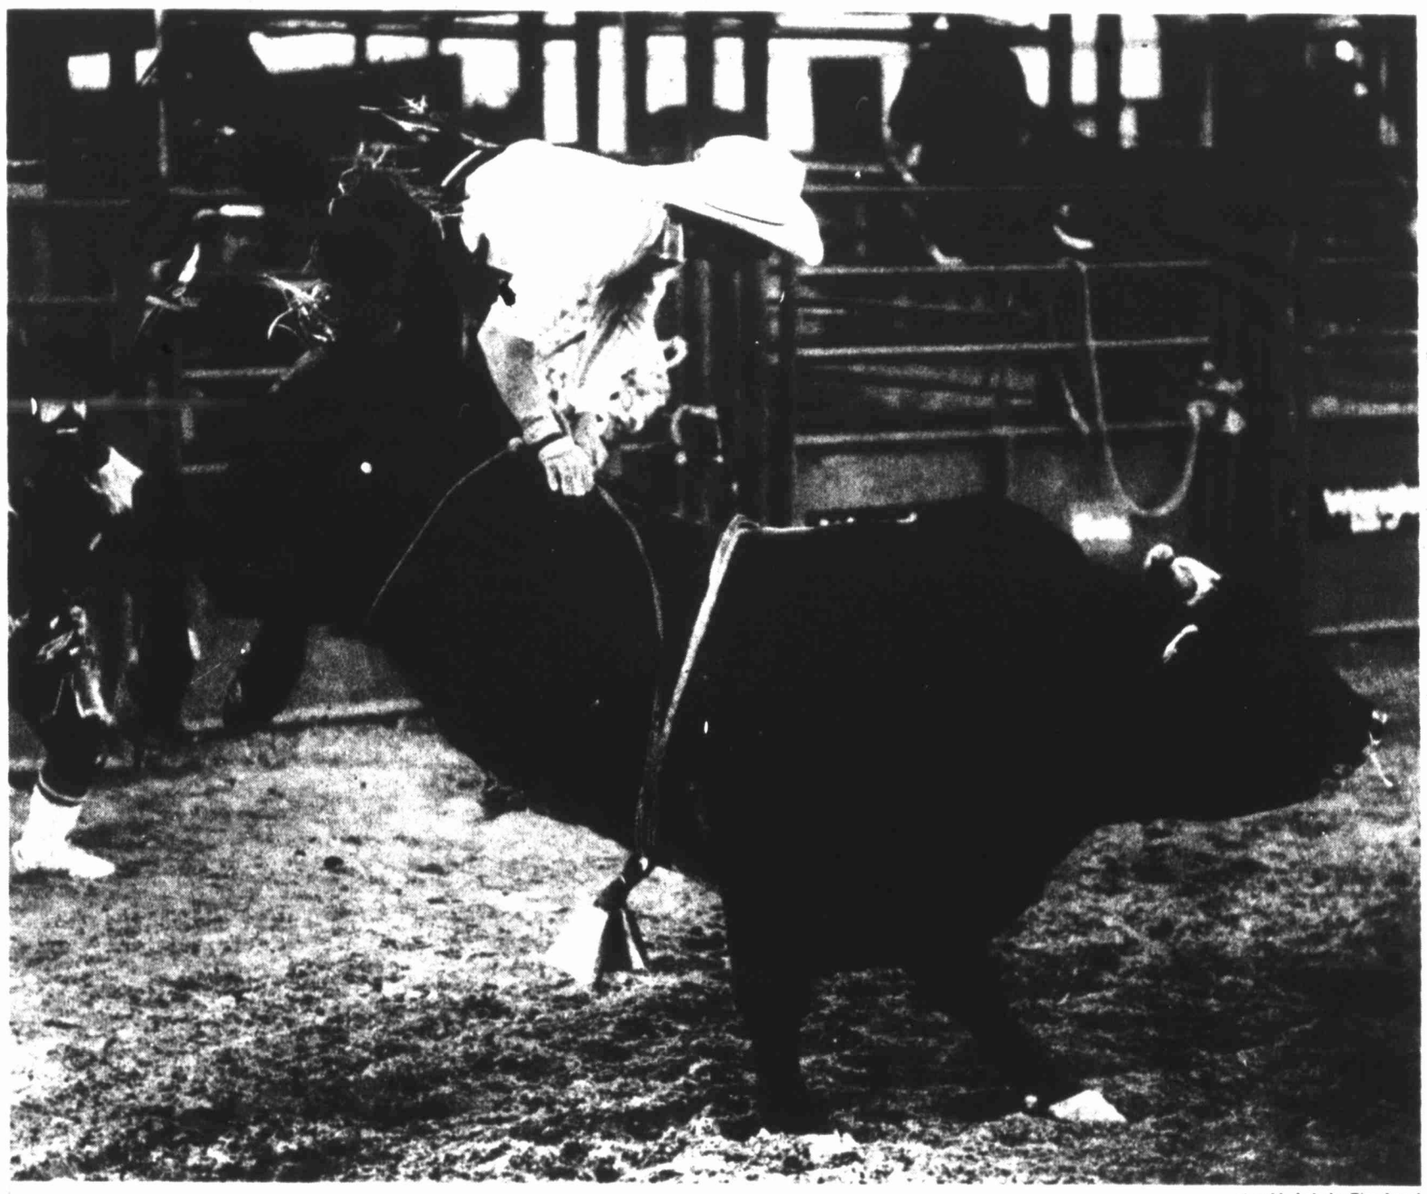

Bareback rider Wes Ward's 76 points tied him for the lead with Shawn Frey; Jeff Hart and Spot Stoebner scored 72 points each Thursday night.

Tomball cowboy Fred Whitfield turned in a breathtaking run Thursday night. His 9.5-second time shaved .4 seconds off world champion Roy Cooper's slack-night 9.9 to put him in the overall lead.

Saddle bronc competition honors went to Van Hale, whose ride aboard "Nice and Easy" was good for 64 points, and Shane Guldbransen with a 62 aboard "Wild and Western".

Barrel racers had a rough night with two of the six performers picking up 10-second penalties by knocking over not one, but two barrels each.

Graf rolls to victory; McEnroe upset

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — Top-seeded Steffi Graf used her booming forehand to power into the fourth round of Wimbledon today, while ninth-seeded Hana Mandlikova made an early exit from her second consecutive Grand Slam tournament.

Also winning in early matches on a muggy, overcast day were women's sixth-seed Helena Sukova of Czechoslovakia, and 12th-seeded Zina Garrison and 16th-seeded Mary Joe Fernanderz of the United States.

Graf, aiming to maintain her hopes of a Grand Slam sweep with her first Wimbledon title, beat American Terry Phelps 6-3, 6-1 in a Centre Court display of strength.

The 19-year-old West German needed only 50 minutes to oust Phelps. She won six games in a row in the second set, sending one forehand service return back so hard and fast that Phelps looked like a public-court hacker as she swung at the ball at her feet and missed. It was so embarrassing that Phelps had to laugh.

"Maybe today was a better match, more rallies, but I have not had any tough competition," said Graf, who lost twice as many games to Phelps as she had in her first two matches combined.

Mandlikova, runner-up at Wimbledon in 1981 and 1986, lost to Anne Minter of Australia 6-4, 6-3. Last month at Paris, Mandlikova was eliminated in the second round of the French Open by Bettina Fulco.

"It is very difficult to play my best. I've had so many injuries this year," said Mandlikova, who was sidelined for nearly two months with a leg muscle injury before the French Open. "Anne is a very difficult player and her best surface is grass."

Minter, moving through the third round at the world's top grass-court tournament for the first time, said she was happy to get the match over in two sets.

"I glad I didn't let it slip away," she said. "Today, she got very few forehands. We didn't have very many real rallies."

Garrison, a Wimbledon semifinalist in 1985, breezed through the third round with a 7-6, 6-0 victory over Elizabeth Minter, the younger sister of Mandlikova's conqueror. Garrison has not lost a set in the tournament.

Neither has Fernandez, a 16-year-old from Miami, Fla., who beat Iwona Kuczynska of Poland 6-4, 6-1.

Sukova lost her second set of the tournament before rallying to beat Etsuko Inoue of Japan 6-7, 6-3, 6-2.

Mandlikova, a former champion of the Australian, French and U.S. Opens, was cruising in the first set, building a 4-2 lead, when she suddenly crashed.

The Czechoslovakia-born Australian lost four games in a row to drop the first set, then lost her serve in the eighth game of the second set, letting Minter serve for the match.

With Martina Navratilova, an old friend and rival, watching from the stands, Mandlikova saved four match points before hitting a forehand long to give the Minter the victory.

On a muggy, overcast day, Wimbledon still reeled from the Centre Court shock of Thursday, when John McEnroe's latest comeback came to an abrupt end against Australian Wally Masur.

"This is the difficult part," McEnroe said after he being upset 7-5, 7-6, 6-3 by Masur on Centre Court.

"The first nine years were like, coast," he said. "One of two things are going to happen: I'll come out of it ... or, hopefully not, just continue to stay in this mold and play inferior tennis."

Masur, a strong grass-coyrt player, said McEnroe never seemed to be in the match.

"His concentration was sporadic throughout, especially in the first set. ... He definitely wasn't vintage John McEnroe out there," Masur said.

Back at the Grand Slam tournament he won three times during the early 1980s and where he gained a reputation as a foul-mouthed tantrum thrower, McEnroe wanted badly to do well — on two fronts.

One battle he won, that of a

Queens sign Oregon star

Linda Catherine Waters is the lastest basketball player to sign an agreement with the Howard College Hawk-Queens, announced Howard College Queens coach Don Stevens.

Waters, a 5-10 wing-guard, was first seen by Stevens at a AAU Tournament in April in Las Vegas, Nev. She hails from Portland, Ore.

Waters was a four-year varsity starter at Portland and held a 3.1 grade point average. She plans to major in business management.

She was All Mount Hood Conference for four years, incluing being named MVP of her league her senior year. She also captured All-Metro and All-State honors.

LINDA WATERS

During her senior year she averaged 26 points, eight rebounds, seven steals and three assists per game. She was also a four-year varsity starter in soccer and softball.

"Linda is an excellent recruit for the Hawk-Queens," said coach Stevens after he signed the Oregon star. "A shooter with good range, Linda will play the wing position for us. She goes strong to the board from that position. She runs the floor well, is aggressive and is a natural athlete with all the tools for success on the college level.

"Playing in a strong league such as ours, Linda will accept the challenges and progress, and mature quickly into one of the league's quality players."

Executive director says NCAA needs strict control

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Strict control by top-level administrators at individual schools is the only way to achieve infraction-free collegiate sports programs, the executive director of the NCAA says.

"The real secret to achieving high levels of integrity in college athletics lies at the top level of the institutions themselves," said Dick Schultz, executive director of the National Collegiate Athletic Association. He was the guest speaker Thursday at The Associated Press Sports Editors national convention.

"The NCAA can't legislate integrity in sports any more than Congress can legislate morality for society in general," Schultz said. "They call me the most powerful person in college sports. But all my power lies in persuasion."

Schultz said most problems occurred when winning coaches became so popular and powerful that they felt they no longer needed to conform to the standards of the athletic director or the university's governing board. Or, conversely, a high administrator may become so interested in fielding a winning team that he influences those below him.

"Integrity must stem from commitment on all levels from each individual institution," Schultz said.

Schultz said the NCAA's problems were mostly those of image and perception.

"With the news coverage we have today, everyone suffers from the broad brush principle," he said. "An isolated incident gets highly publicized and people begin to believe it's a widespread problem."

"Many people believe all schools exploit their athletes for profit, all coaches cheat and all athletes are drug addicts," Schultz said.

"We must have strict, firm rules in enforcement," Schultz said. "We can tolerate honest mistakes."

Midland whips El Paso again

By The Associated Press

Pitcher Ken Hill allowed only two hits in pitching the Arkansas Travelers to a 4-2 Texas League baseball victory over the Jackson Mets.

In other Texas League action Thursday night, Shreveport edged Tulsa, 3-1, Midland whipped El Paso, 8-2, and San Antonio defeated Wichita, 4-1.

Texas League

Hill struck out five and didn't allow a walk in the Arkansas victory over Jackson.

Jesus Mendez and Roy Silver each drove in runs in the third inning.

Rodeon Gideon had a solo homer for Jackson in the fifth inning and Jeff Gardner scored a run for the Mets on a wild pitch in the ninth inning.

Deron McCue hit a solo home run in the eighth and Mike Benjamin tripled in a run in the sixth to lead the Shreveport Captains to a 3-1 victory over the Tulsa Drillers.

The winning pitcher was Joe Olker, 9-1. The loser was Kenny Rogers, 0-1.

Chris Collins retired 20 batters in a row in pitching the Midland Angels to an 8-2 victory over the El Paso Diablos.

Collins allowed only six hits and struck out nine Diablos. He lost his shutout bid on a two-out, two-run homer by George Canale in the ninth inning.

Jim McCollom had a solo homer for the Midland in the third inning.

Erik Pappas drove in three runs with three hits and stole two bases for the Angels.

The losing pitcher was Kent Hetrick, 0-2.

Pitcher Mike Schweighoffer slammed a three-run double to power the San Antonio Missions to a 4-1 victory over the Wichita Pilots.

Schweighoffer pitched seven inning for the victory to boost his record to 5-2 and help the Missions break a four-game losing streak.

San Antonio jumped out to a 1-0 lead in the first inning when Mike Huff singled and came home from first on a double by Walt McConnell.

Mike DeButch singled home Pat Jelks from the third to tie the game at 1-2 in the second for Wichita's only run.

Schweighoffer is now 5-2. The losing pitcher was Bryan Wood, 0-1.

Soviet soccer team has open camp

STUTTGART, West Germany (AP) — Glasnost has hit the Soviet national soccer team.

For the first time since the European Championships began two weeks ago, the Soviets opened their camp Thursday and allowed reporters to mingle freely with players.

There was little sign of glasnost, the policy of openness that is one of Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev's main themes, from the Soviets prior to Thursday, as the players lived and trained behind closed doors at a sports school in a wooded suburb of Stuttgart.

But after the Soviets gained a berth in Saturday's European Championships final with a 2-0 victory over Italy, coach Valery Lobanovski invited reporters to come and talk to the players as long as they wished.

For several hours, dozens of Western reporters interviewed Soviet players at will in a relaxed, friendly atmosphere — without official interpreters and no time limit.

The Soviet, who will play the Netherlands in Saturday's title match after a series of impressive performances in Europe's top soccer competition, talked at length about wanting to play for Western clubs, their earnings and what "perestroika" — Gorbachev's policy of restructuring — will mean for Soviet soccer.

Many Soviet players said they would like to play in the West, and though they stressed that money was not their primary motivation.

But in bottling his emotions, McEnroe said he may also have put the lid on his craving to get back to the top of tennis.

"I'm trying to fire up but it's hard. It's a situation where everything I do is so carefully looked at here that everything becomes a big deal," McEnroe said.

The American skipped the event in 1986 as part of a six-month sabbatical from tennis. Last year, illness and injury kept him away.

But ever since McEnroe announced he would return this year to the scene of some of his greatest triumphs and most controversial outbursts, the anticipation could be felt throughout the All England Club's dignified corridors.

The American, who had been seeded eighth despite being ranked No. 19 in the world, said he let everybody down.

"It was a disgusting effort," McEnroe said after his loss to Masur, ranked No. 64. "I wouldn't have won the women's tournament the way I played today."

McEnroe, who wasted set points in both of the first two sets, had little luck, either.

Twice when he was on the verge of getting back into the match, crucial line calls went against him.

On the second occasion, he was warned for equipment abuse as he slammed his racket down in frustration.

McEnroe said his old bad-boy image had not been forgotten by some people.

"It just shows me how much more I have to overcome," McEnroe said. "It's not just the guy on the other side of the net."

Against Masur, he was applauded for restraining himself over a number of other dubious calls. That crowd reaction, McEnroe said, was absurd.

"It's kind of unfortunate when it comes to that," he said. "It's a very strange feeling. I don't get a whole lot of satisfaction out of it, although I think they were trying to be nice. The whole thing is so out of whack right now, it's ridiculous."

He said, however, that he expected some kind of backlash after advancing to the fourth round of the French Open.

"I expected some ups and downs and it's not really surprising something like this happened," he said. "It's going to take more than one match to suddenly feel comfortable again in a place where I really didn't feel comfortable. Hopefully, next year, I'll be more prepared."

CLGA has close competition

In Comanche Trail Ladies Golf Association couples play last Thursday, there was only a three shot span between the scores of eight teams.

Joe and Patsy Sharpnack and Travis and Millie Hunter, however, took first place in a scorecard playoff over Paul and Patti Woodall and Bobby Maxwell. Both teams shot four-under-par 31.

Monday in scramble play, two teams tied for first with 39's.

Ruby Honea and Mary Malone won the scorecard playoff over Annie Ward and Patti Woodall. Julie Hall and Betty Ray Coffee finished third.

Sharpnacks win tourney in Iraan

IRAAN — At a two-day couples scramble golf tournament in Iraan last weekend, several couples from the Comanche Trail Golf Course couples competed.

Patsy and Joe Sharpnack won the first flight competition. They shot a four-under-par 68 on the second day.

Rangers nip Astros, 8-7

In American Senior League play the Rangers raised their record to 7-6 by defeating the Astros 8-7.

Gerald Cobos got the win for the Rangers and Neal Mayfield earned the save, combining for a four-hitter.

Shane Myrick took the loss for the Astros, allowing eight hits.

Mayfield led the Ranger bats with a two-run homer. Kevin Rodgers hit a three-run scoring triple in the win. Johnathan Downey led the Astros with a single and double.

Nelson to defend WBC crown

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — Lupe Suarez is said to be a fighter hungry for the benefits of a championship. Azumah Nelson knows all about hungry fighters.

Tudor closing in on league ERA record

By The Associated Press

Twenty years ago, Bob Gibson of the St. Louis Cardinals set the modern National League ERA record of 1.12 for pitchers with more than 200 innings.

Will history repeat? John Tudor, a current Cardinal, has pitched 83 1-3 innings this season with an ERA of 1.08.

Tudor continued his sensational pitching Thursday night with a two-hitter — no walks, four strikeouts — as St. Louis snapped a four-game losing streak by defeating the Philadelphia Phillies 2-0.

NL

Tudor threw 91 pitches Thursday night, 68 for strikes.

"That's what he does when he's pitching good," Manager Whitey Herzog said. "There were only two three-ball counts. He's an amazing guy."

Tudor wasn't the only NL pitcher to make headlines. Chicago's Greg Maddux fired a seven-hitter and became baseball's first 13-game winner as the Cubs cooled off the New York Mets 4-1.

In the only other game, Sid Bream led Pittsburgh to a 6-4 victory over Montreal by driving in four runs with a two-run homer in the third inning and a tie-breaking two-run double in the eighth.

Tudor has allowed only 10 earned runs and 67 hits in 83 1-3 innings but the Cardinals have given him little offensive support, the reason he's only 4-2.

Philadelphia's hits were singles by Steve Jeltz with one out in the third and pinch hitter Bob Dernier leading off the ninth. It was the second complete game in 12 starts for Tudor, who started the season on the disabled list with knee and shoulder problems.

"You've got to give Tudor credit; he's always tough," Phillies manager Lee Elia said. "It's tough to get decisions when you get only two hits."

Vince Coleman provided all the offense Tudor needed with a single, a walk and three stolen bases. He scored both runs. In the fifth, he singled, stole second and scored on Willie McGee's single. In the seventh, Coleman walked, stole second and third and scored on Ozzie Smith's suicide squeeze bunt.

Cubs 4, Mets 1

Maddux, 13-3, earned his seventh straight victory and ninth in 10 starts and lowered his ERA to 2.14. The Cubs scored all their runs off Sid Fernandez in the first two innings. Andre Dawson had a solo homer in the first and Dave Martinez added a two-run shot in the second.

"It seems like this whole year where there's a game that can turn it around for us, we've won," Manager Don Zimmer said. "Of course, when you have a guy who has won 13 games it's pretty hard to lose too many in a row."

The Mets didn't get a hit after Wally Backman singled to start the fifth. Madduix retired the next 12 batters until an error to start the ninth.

"It's nice to beat a team you haven't beaten before," said Maddux, who was 0-3 against the Mets and 6-14 overall last year as a rookie.

Pirates 6, Expos 4

Montreal reliever Jeff Parrett struck out Andy Van Slyke to start the eighth but Bobby Bonilla singled, Darnell Coles walked and Bream doubled them home to breal a 3-3 tie. The Pirates added an unearned run in the ninth, offsetting a Montreal run in the bottom of the ninth.

Jeff Robinson pitched 2 1-3 innings in relief of starter Brian Fisher to earn the victory. Jim Gott got the last two outs for his eighth save.

Pittsburgh took a 2-0 against John Dopson in the second inning on a walk and Bream's seventh home run. Two-out singles by Lind, Van Slyke and Bonilla made it 3-0 in the third.

Tim Wallach homered in the fourth for the Expos' first run and they tied it with two runs in the fifth on Tom Foley's triple, Luis Rivera's single, Tim Raines' two-out single and an error.

Yanks' Martin fired (yawn) again

NEW YORK (AP) — The speculation that started the day Billy Martin was hired to manage the New York Yankees for the fifth time is over.

No, he didn't make it to the All-Star break.

Owner George Steinbrenner fired Martin on Thursday, ending a short but stormy term punctuated by another bar fight, a feud with umpires, a suspension, rumors about his health, a recent disagreement with the front office and odd handling of his pitching staff.

Lou Piniella, who had been kicked upstairs to general manager last October to make room for Martin, returned to take Martin's place. Piniella had resigned as GM earlier this month and now joins Gene Michael and Bob Lemon as two-time managers for the Yankees.

In all, Steinbrenner has made 15 managerial moves since buying the team in 1973.

Also, coaches Art Fowler, Clete Boyer and George Mitterwald were reassigned and Michael and Stan Williams were hired as coaches. Williams marks the 22nd pitching coach shift under Steinbrenner.

"Things change quickly around here," Piniella said in a major understatement. "Here I am, back in the frying pan."

When he left last time as manager, Piniella said he would not return to the Yankees' dugout. But, Piniella said, he intends to stay this time.

"I'm not an interim manager. I can tell you that," he said. "I expect to be here a good while."

"I did a lot of soul-searching. I gave it a lot of thought," Piniella said.

Piniella said Steinbrenner gave him a contract extension, but did not reveal the terms.

The Yankees got off to a good start under Piniella, ending a four-game losing streak Thursday night by beating Cleveland 4-3.

Under Martin this year, the Yankees also started well. They led the American League East for most of the season until going 2-7 on a recent road trip. They fell out of first place by losing the last three games to Detroit in the Tigers' final at-bat — making it five times New York has lost when it was one out from victory — and that was the final straw.

"I feel terrible for Billy, but what could I do?" Piniella said. "In fairness to him, there were a lot of injuries."

Martin, an excellent offensive manager, was able to work around injuries to stars Don Mattingly and Rickey Henderson, along with Willie Randolph, Don Slaught and others.

But Martin, who has always been criticized for his handling of pitchers, raised more questions this year. He stopped using reliever Dave Righetti, overused Cecilio Guante in the stopper role and erratically employed Tommy John.

Martin wound up with a seven-man rotation at times. He once used Rick Rhoden as a designated hitter, the only pitcher ever used that way, and that move worked.

Still, Steinbrenner's hope for a quick-fix instead quickly backfired. Martin had trouble controlling the team and could not control himself.

Forever, however, may have come too soon and he may have finally worn out his welcome at the ballpark where his inspired play spurred the Yankees in the 1950s.

When he was hired last October, Martin predicted, "I'll have the last laugh." That's not how it ended.

"I'm still the best manager in baseball," Martin told the New York Daily News from the Manhattan hotel where he lived during the season.

"I'm a proud Yankee. I'm a Yankee and I'll leave like a Yankee," he said. "I'll try to handle it as best I can, but how many times can a man have his heart broken? I'm not a good loser. I never have been."

Martin also said the Yankees' injury problems contributed to his departure.

"We had a lot of injuries. If we win those three games in Detroit — and we could have won all three — we'd be in front by seven games."

The Yankees entered the series a half-game ahead of the Tigers.

Martin, who reportedly has a contract as manager through next year and as a consultant through 1991, was offered reassignment to another job, but neither that job nor Martin's inclination to take it were immediately known. The paper said he will meet with Steinbrenner next week.

First-base coach Mike Ferraro, bullpen coach Jeff Torborg and batting coach Chris Chambliss will remain with the club in their current capacities.

"I'll have full control of the team," Piniella said. "I'll make out the lineup card."

But Piniella should know by now: Steinbrenner is the boss. At least Piniella will not have to worry, for now, about Martin peering over his shoulder.

Piniella said he was in Albany, N.Y., this week with the Yankees' Class AA club. He said he spoke to Steinbrenner on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday.

"I haven't been really attuned to what's been going on here," Piniella said.

Piniella led the Yankees to a 179-145 record in the 1986 and 1987 seasons, but Steinbrenner became angry with him and did not speak with him for weeks at a time.

The Yankees said in a press release that the change was mutually agreed to by Steinbrenner and Bob Quinn, who replaced Piniella as general manager.

Eddie Sapir, Martin's lawyer, said from New Orleans that he had been told by Quinn that "on authorization from Steinbrenner, all the terms and conditions in Billy's contract will be honored in their entirety."

Sapir said he and Martin would meet with Steinbrenner next week.

"When I walked into the clubhouse today, everything was real quiet, and I said 'Whoops!' and then I saw our clubhouse guy emptying out lockers."

Piniella's second reign begins with win

NEW YORK (AP) — Lou Piniella started his second stint as New York Yankees manager with a closed-door, pre-game pep talk that took no longer than a couple of minutes.

It worked.

"I just told the players, 'Look, I'm going to be here for awhile. All I ask is for you to play hard for me. You do that and you'll be in there. So relax, have fun, and play good baseball,'" said Piniella, who Thursday afternoon replaced the man who replaced him, Billy Martin.

AL

The Yankees responded to Piniella's arrival with a quick win, breaking a season-long four-game losing streak with a 4-3 come-from-behind victory over the Cleveland Indians and moving within two games of first place in the American League East.

In the only other American League game, Toronto downed Baltimore 5-2.

Gary Ward, who entered the game hitting .194, hit a game-tying two-run homer in the seventh inning and then singled home the winning run with two outs in the ninth to make a winner of reliever Dave Righetti, 2-0.

Dave Winfield set up the winning run with some alert baserunning, moving from first to second on Jack Clark's not-so-deep one-out flyout and scoring easily on Ward's one-hop line drive to right-center.

"We really hustled out there tonight," Piniella said. "But if Billy were here tonight, they would've played just as hard. All I know is, this is a good game to build with. This is a good ballclub, and I think they now know that again."

Righetti, who pitched one scoreless inning for the victory, said, "We've seen so many changes over the year, we don't too excited anymore. We just shake our heads and then go out and play. But you still wonder sometimes how the team will react. And, tonight, well, we really need a win. The players needed it for themselves. It didn't matter who was managing us. We needed one win to get us over the hump. It was great the way we came back. This game was a character builder."

Joe Carter hit a sacrifice fly and Mel Hall lined an RBI double in the first and Hall hit a solo homer — his first since last Oct. 4 — in the third, giving the Indians a 3-0 off starter Rick Rhoden. But Rhoden settled down after that, allowing only three singles over his last 5 2-3 innings and, at one point, retiring 10 in a row.

Winfield, who collected three of his team's seven hits, doubled home Don Mattingly in the fourth and Ward tied the score and chased starter Scott Bailes three innings later with his second homer of the season.

Reliever Jon Perlman, 0-1, began the ninth by retiring Mattingly on a groundout. But Winfield legged out an infield single to short and, on Clark's flyout, raced to second when left fielder Hall lobbed a throw into the cutoff man. Ward followed with his game-winning single, as Winfield scored ahead an across-the-body throw from right fielder Cory Snyder.

"Winfield manufactured a run," Perlman said. "It was heads-up baserunning. Good, hard baseball."

Blue Jays 5, Orioles 2

Baltimore left fielder Ken Gerhart, who homered to start the game, dropped a fly ball that led to the tying and lead runs in the sixth inning. Winner Jim Clancy was tagged for home runs by Gerhart and Fred Lynn, the first two Baltimore batters, but yielded only two more hits through six innings to snap a personal three-game losing streak.

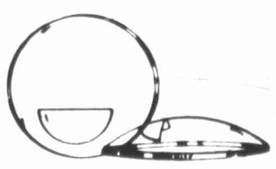

Tony Fernandez opened the Toronto sixth with a fly to deep left that hit the heel of Gerhart's glove for a two-base error. Lloyd Moseby followed with a double that tied the game 2-2. Moseby took third on Rance Mulliniks' fly ball and scored on George Bell's sacrifice fly.

Ernie Whitt started the Toronto seventh with a single and Manny Lee's one-out single chased Baltimore starter Jay Tibbs, 2-4. Fernandez.

JEANE DIXON'S Your Horoscope

SATURDAY, JUNE 25, 1988

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Your entry into different social circles will bring new personal and business opportunities. Handle finances with greater care and a nest egg will grow faster. A windfall or bonus is due in December, but a new job could be even better. Legal concerns should be settled quickly. Credit problems need long-term answers. Get expert help. Real estate prospects are good. Stick with the agent who has brought you this far. Try to reduce interest payments.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: author George Orwell, playwright George Francis Abbott, actress June Lockhart, director Sidney Lumet, composer Carly Simon.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): You will do better in the long run if you follow the rules. Cutting corners could hamper your career. Partner demands you put as much into the relationship as you take out.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Get away for the weekend. Married couples find new sources of pleasure. Commitment to family life brings you greater success and respect. If overweight, your health will improve with every pound you lose.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Learn how to handle anger and relationship problems will end. Invite mate to say more about what is happening in your life. Romance improves. Save money for a year-end vacation.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): A conflict can be cleared up if you discuss it away from public view. You are the best judge of what you need and do not need. Stand up for your rights.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Do not disappoint someone who took you at your word. If unable to make a payment deadline, call and arrange a new payment schedule. Be honest if uncertain about a relationship decision.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Follow your instincts when handling financial and career matters. Thorough approach will be well rewarded. Someone is keeping close tabs on your personal life. Protect your reputation by being discreet.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Budget your time carefully. Review travel and study plans. Expending all your energy on career matters could lead to domestic trouble. Spend more time with mate, offspring. Be a good listener.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Concentrate on financial matters and creative projects early in the day. A long-distance call brings welcome news, brightening your day. Share a secret with loved one. Your relationship deepens.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Curb your temper, especially when dealing with a younger person. Friendly persuasion proves more effective than coercion. Romance can be much sweeter the second time around. Cut spending.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): A move to another city or state could bring new financial pressures. Do not neglect your family. A personal relationship needs reevaluation. Avoid wishful thinking. See people as they really are.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Stop following the crowd. Pursuing innovative ideas will lead to financial gains. Remain calm if someone confronts you. A mature manner gives you an advantage. Group activities hold special interest. Someone's attentions flatter you.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Do not allow an indecisive attitude to hold you back. New friends give you fascinating new insights. A daily walk or workout will make you look and feel much better. Be diligent.

"Choose Your DEALER As Carefully As You Choose Your Deal!"

Competing prices for various makes and models — that's what car shopping is all about. But there's more to a great deal than just bottom line pricing. Your long term satisfaction is our very sincere concern too.

That's why we place so much emphasis on maintaining a 1st rate service department. Our service professionals are all dedicated to delivering 100% satisfaction, and we give it a real team effort.

Quality vehicles, great prices and excellent services — that's what to look for in choosing a new car dealer.
