Friends of the Knox County Historical Commission will set up at 740 North Third in Munday for another museum building fundraiser.

Not only will they be offering bargain prices for dozens of household items, but also food for the hungry shoppers going from sale to sale during Munday's annual city wide garage sale. Grilled hamburgers, hot dogs, curly fries, iced tea, water, cookies and brownies will be available to eat on the spot or as take out.

Some work has already begun on the museum foundation in Benjamin. The site has been cleared and some materials have been purchased for the first steps toward erecting a building "in the dry".

Customers at the museum garage sale will be helping the building fund with every purchase they make. Members of Friends of the Knox County Historical Commission will be working the sale and are collecting sale items this week.

Proof Sets Offered at First National

The US Mint has been issuing State Quarters commemorating the 50 States. This began in 1999 and will continue through 2008.

The First National Bank in Munday, and their branches at Rochester, Stamford and Haskell have begun selling these State Quarters in proof sets. Each proof set contains two coins (front and back) encased in plastic. One is minted in Denver, (D) mint mark and the other is minted in Philadelphia, (P) mint mark. The coins are attached to a colorful tri-fold display that gives many interesting facts about the design and about the history of the State. These coins are uncirculated and therefore, will increase in value over the years.

State coins were first minted in 1999. The banks have available these coins in proof set form for the years 1999, 2000, 2001, 2002 and 2003. There are five coins issued in each year and some have already increased in value. We also have available boxes that will hold all proof sets through the year 2008.

Prices vary for the previously issued proof sets. Please contact your local branch for more information concerning the cost. Currently issued coins for the year 2004 are priced at $3.50 per set. The collectors box is available for $8.95.

Scouting and Prevention Are Keys to Profitable Peanut Insect Control

Under the guidelines of the new peanut program, growers are rewarded for production efficiency. The greater the production of high quality peanuts, the greater the reward. In order to maximize production, growers often consider a number of options, including delaying planting to help avoid issues with Tomato Spotted Wilt Virus (TSWV).

The University of Georgia risk index generally rewards later planting. But that also creates more potential for insect problems, especially since plants will still be in the field in September and October. That's why scouting is critical in making the decisions to help a grower's bottom line.

Timing is everything when you're trying to maximize insect control. Growers should quickly and efficiently identify insect pests, then determine the best treatment option for that point in the growth cycle of the crop. For control of soil borne insects such as Southern corn rootworm, growers should work to identify fields that are at higher risk for insect problems.

Higher risk fields are those with heavier soils, where Southern corn rootworm can be a problem in wet years, as well as dry, sandy fields where lesser cornstalk borer is more likely to be found. On those fields, a preventative treatment of Lorsban* 15G insecticide would be a good investment.

The key is to know the history of the field and to start scouting at bloom for lesser cornstalk borer and early signs of foliage feeders. Signs of wireworms and Southern corn rootworm should become evident when pods appear.

For many years, Lorsban 15G has been the commercial standard for control of soil insects that cause yield and quality reductions in peanuts. It can be applied to peanuts as an at-plant or postplant preventative, band rescue or broadcast rescue treatment. And, it delivers broad-spectrum control of damaging pests three ways – through direct contact, ingestion and fuming action.

Doris Beaver is newly appointed KCHC member

Doris Beaver of Goree is a newly appointed member of the Knox County Historical Commission.

The Knox County Commissioners Court tries to see that all parts of the county are represented on the KCHC and to appoint at least one representative, or more, from each county community.

Mrs. Beaver was graduated form Goree grade school and high school. Her parents were W.L. Decker and Pamela Jones Decker. On April 13, 1952 she was married to W.G. (Gene) Beaver, son of Sam and Ila Mae Garner Beaver of Baylor County.

They have three children, David Beaver of Brownfield, Patty Finley of Brownfield and Brenda Patterson of Vera.

The Beavers moved to Levelland where he worked for B.J. Service and they later lived in Hobbs, New Mexico.

In 1964, they moved to Brownfield when Gene's father became ill. There they operated his shoe repair shop, a dry cleaner business, and a freight business for 28 years.

In 1990, they moved to Llano in the Hill Country, they moved back to Knox County in 1999 to be near family.

Mrs. Beaver welcomed the appointment as she enjoys history and plans to take an active part in serving as a contact person for Goree with the KCHC.
