Large Force at Work on Hankins Building

The past week has witnessed quite a change in the corner occupied by the Hankins Drug Co., as a large force of men are now hard at work tearing away and reconstructing the framework to accommodate the Lockley Picture Show on the west, with Kindrick Grocery adjoining to the east, and the Hankins Drug Co. in the north-east corner.

The work on the Lockley place was started first, and is now about ready for the stucco and plaster workers. Mr. Lockley states that he hopes to have his part of the building completed within the next two or three weeks, at which time he will again begin the showing of high class pictures. He has built a reputation for himself in respect to booking nothing but the very best of pictures, and when asked if he would continue this policy, stated that he had no reason to change, as the best was none too good for his patrons.

Mr. Kindrick's part of the building is progressing as rapidly as is possible under the conditions, and will probably be ready for the stucco work by the time the workmen have finished the Lockley place.

The upper part of the entire building has been torn away and Mr. Hankins expects to have his corner of the building in readiness by the time the workmen get to it.

When completed, this building will add considerably to the appearance of that corner in particular, and to Junction generally.

INDIAN WAR PENSION BILL PASSES SENATE

The Indian War Pension bill which has been before the House and Senate for some days, and which was referred to last week by telegram from Congressman Hudspeth, has finally passed the Senate.

Congressman Hudspeth wired The Eagle as follows:

"Aided materially in having Leatherwood Indian War Pension bill also passed in Senate last night, whereby all Indian War Veterans with 30 days service in companies called out by the state or the United States, and bringing dates down to 1898. Would appreciate your conveying this information to your community."

(Signed) C. B. Hudspeth.

REV. W. L. DOWNING GETS M. A. DEGREE AT 77

In a news item under an Austin date line we note the following: "Among the candidates for the Master of Arts degree in June at the University of Texas is Rev. W. L. Downing, 77 years old, retired U. S. A. Presbyterian minister of Kerrville. His major work is in education and philosophy." The foregoing will be of much interest to the many friends of Rev. Downing in Junction, as he has been here many times to hold services for the Presbyterians of this section, and was instrumental in the organization of the membership of that denomination.

H. Pippin, local manager for the West Texas Utilities Co., moved last week into the new concrete residence which the company has just completed for his use. Mr. Pippin states that when the work of moving the sub-station to this location is completed, he will begin beautifying the grounds surrounding the premises.

Mr. and Mrs. George Caveness and little daughter, Mildred, accompanied Mrs. Bill Caveness to San Antonio where the latter received medical treatment.

"Two of a Kind" at School Auditorium

The Parent-Teachers' Association of Manard have arranged with the Junction P. T. A. to put on an entertainment here Friday night, the 4th, and have announced their program for that night, which will be opened with the play entitled "Two of a Kind," by the faculty of the Menard school, followed by a short sketch, "Fun in a Country Store," by the Senior class of the Menard High School.

There will be other features to entertain, such as music and readings. This entertainment has been given by the Menard P. T. A. at a number of the neighboring towns and is spoken of very highly as an entertainment, and the members of the local P. T. A. are to be commended for their success in securing this feature.

The entire personnel of the entertaining group from Menard is composed of the High School faculty and the high school pupils, and both plays promise to be an evening brim full of enjoyment.

The admission is 20 cents and 35 cents, and the local P. T. A. is to get a percentage of the receipts; therefore it is presumed that all who are at all interested in the Junction school will attend. High School Auditorium 7:30.

POWELL MOTOR COMPANY INSTALL LABOR SAVERS

The first of this week, Leon Powell returned from San Antonio with a truck load of new machinery to further equip his garage. He is always on the alert for anything that will add to the efficiency of the shop and lessen the labor of his employees.

Mr. Powell has just completed the installation of a Black & Decker valve grinding machine which will also clean the carbon from the valves in about one-half the time required with other methods. Another machine by the Black & Decker people is the Brake Lining machine for the purpose of replacing brake linings and bands.

Aside from these two very necessary machines, Mr. Powell has installed a Tridex Washing System for washing and thoroughly cleaning engines and chassis, handling this work with unusual speed and care.

Powell Motor Company has always kept abreast of the times in the installation of any new equipment for his garage that would facilitate the handling of the public's business.

PIGGLY-WIGGLY OPERATORS FORM ASSOCIATION

On February 22nd, a meeting of the Piggy Wiggly operators was held at Ballinger, Texas, there being sixteen operators present, representing thirty stores. An organization will be formed known as The West Texas Wiggly Operators' Association.

This association was formed for the purpose of mutual protection in conducting the Piggy Wiggly stores of West Texas and to further the interests and enlarge the scope of operation of these stores.

It is well to state that these are independent operators of the Piggy Wiggly Chain of stores.

This organization elected officers as follows: Sam Behringer, of Ballinger, president, and F. E. Garrett, of Junction, secretary and treasurer.

Jack Hoggett left last Tuesday for New Mexico, moving his household goods and some cattle on truck. Charlie St. Clair did the trucking for him and expects to make the round trip in about ten days.

KIMBLE COUNTY SHOWS ENTHUSIASM FOR 1927 MAGAZINE

We are pleased to report a very enthusiastic response to our endeavors for a high-class descriptive publication of the Kimble County Magazine for 1927. The general public spirit-ness in the matter is very commendable for the capitol of the hill country. The harmony of business men and citizens and unanimous confidence in our natural resources and attractions are added assurances that we will be enabled to produce an artistic picturization of Kimble County far surpassing anything of its nature gotten out heretofore.

As a natural recreation center and outing country, Kimble County has never been given the justice in publication it deserves. With our five hundred miles of crystal, pure, rippling mountain streams and their great variety of fish, the hundreds of cool springs, the scenic hills and table lands, our glorious river bottoms with their great volume of inviting shades, our rugged cliffs and canyons with the many caves and their interesting legends—and the hundreds of unmentioned spots of beautiful and natural scenery—hold out an invitation to the prospective tourist vacationist much greater attractions than many of the highly frequented resorts which spend thousands upon thousands of dollars in advertising annually.

Nor do we forget that the business equipment of Kimble County is amply sufficient to serve the tourist vacationist in an ever satisfactory and pleasing manner. And the response of our many progressive and public spirited business men shows their whole hearted desire to send out the pleasant invitation of their services to the thousands outside the borders of our county who will want to come here when they know what we have to offer.

As a center of fine stock raising, this country deserves much credit which has never been given it. Few persons outside its own boundaries know of the great extent to which ranching sections of Kimble County are devoted to the breeding and advancing of fine stock. We have many ranchmen who have spent untold sums of money and the major portion of their lives in this industry. And it is very pleasing to note the general response we are receiving in giving our live stock industry the "front-page" publicity it deserves.

There have been many valuable suggestions made concerning this magazine. All tend to show the unanimous desire for a book which does Kimble County justice in every respect. Those suggestions are appreciated, and we want to again assure those interested that the magazine shall be given our best efforts.

Dr. J. Holt Smith, formerly of Lamesa, has permanently located in Junction to practice dentistry. Dr. Smith is married and has his family with him. He comes here well recommended both as a refined gentleman and a good dentist. He will be located temporarily in the Frank Wilson building, has modern, up-to-date equipment for dental work, and will be ready for practice any time after Friday. His equipment is as good as any to be found in the large offices of the city.

Rev. J. A. Dekle is in Eden this week holding a revival meeting, and Rev. Jas. E. Charles, pastor of the Eden Baptist Church, filled the pulpit here last Sunday for Rev. Dekle.

Harper Delegation Enjoyed Visit Here

The Harper delegation that attended the Chamber of Commerce re-organization meeting here on the 17th, seem to have enjoyed themselves and feel that their time was well spent.

The Harper Herald, in commenting upon the attendance of the delegation at the Junction meeting, has the following to say:

"In company with Judge Weaver H. Baker last Thursday evening we were shown over the charming little city of Junction. It was our second visit there, the first being two years ago, and we can truthfully say that we have never witnessed greater advancement and growth of a city of Junction's size in so short a time. Its growth is steady and of the substantial type that speaks well for its surrounding territory and the good judgment of its business men. In the two years since we were there Junction has blossomed forth, as if by magic, into a city with a future that is very promising indeed. In addition to this we met a great many of the citizens of Junction, lots of them pioneers of that section and as good as gold. They are people such as it takes to build a republic like the one in which we live. Verily, the salt of the earth."

"The Harper delegation was royally entertained while there and it is with pleasure that we look forward to entertaining them in like manner at some near future date."

NEW HOTEL TO OPEN ABOUT MARCH 15th

In a statement by Mr. Fritz, the manager of the new hotel, it is learned that the hostelry will be ready to receive the public about March 15th.

The furniture and draperies for the hotel have begun to arrive and are being placed, and advice from the W. A. Fawcett Co., of Kerrville, who secured the contract for furnishings, state that these furnishings will come forward as rapidly as they are received from the factory.

The new hostelry has not yet been "christened," owing to some indecision as to a suitable name. This will be taken up at the next regular meeting of the directors.

KNOW TEXAS

Texas led all the states in 1926 with 71½ per cent of all the crop values in the nation. Texas crop values in 1926 were 47 per cent more than those of Iowa, the next state in rank.

In 1926 Texas crops were valued at 22.3 per cent more than the ten-year average.

Texas was one of the five states that produced more farm crop values in 1926 than in 1925.

In 1926 Texas stood first in total crop values. It was first in cotton, and grain sorghums and second in sweet potatoes.

It was 399 years ago that the first white man entered what is now Texas. Cabeza de Baca and other Spaniards were shipwrecked on the coast between Galveston and Matagorda Bays.

In 1541 Coronado came into the great plains of Texas from Mexico looking for the Seven Cities of Gold.

Luis de Morosco and a remnant of De Soto's band came into Texas about where Texarkana now is seeking a way to Mexico.

The valley of the Pecos was explored by Antonio de Espejo in 1582.

Mr. and Mrs. B. L. Smith and family have returned from Brownwood where they visited last week.

Civic Pride Comes to Fore in Junction

The matter of civic pride is beginning to make itself noticeable in Junction as is clearly evidenced by the number of improvements that are being made at various places in Junction at present.

The New Junction Hotel has a force of men at work clearing the ground in front of the building preparatory to landscaping the front with shrubs of different kinds. The front of the building will have an auto driveway leading to door of the lobby, in a semi-circle, or in other words, the drive will lead in from the east side and circle to the west, for exit; or vice versa. On either side and in the center of the driveway will be planted to shrubs and grass.

The West Texas Utilities Co., are constructing a concrete block wall extending from the rear of the building west to the property line, with an ornamental gate in the center. When completed, this will add considerable to the appearance of that street.

Many of the yards in the resident section are being sodded to Bermuda, and arrangements made for the setting of flowers and shrubbery and otherwise beautified.

In this connection, The Eagle wishes to commend the business men for the neat and clean appearance of the Main street.

ANOTHER TRIBUTE TO CAPT. CHAS. SCHREINER

Another romance of the immigrant boy in America was the life of Captain Charles Schreiner, venerable pioneer of the hill country of Kerrville. The tale of his life varies in detail, but follows in general that of others who have risen to fame and fortune and public appreciation in this land of opportunity. Left an orphan by immigrant parents when he was a mere youth, walking home from the mustering place of his Confederate regiment, because he desired to save the one five-dollar gold piece that he possessed, death found him one of the wealthiest citizens of Texas, and a citizen deeply loved by the people of his own section and respected and honored by the people of the entire State. Captain Schreiner may rightly be called the father of the Kerrville-Junction Hill country. He found it a wilderness and he did more than any other individual to bring civilization to it and to promote its development as one of the most charming sections of the State. His fame as a developer will grow in the future as that fine section continues to come forward and justify the faith he had in it. He was one of the State's wisest and most generous philanthropists. He will be remembered longer for what he gave than for what he made.—Houston Chronicle.

Sallie Visits Lemoyne Unexpectedly

From the day that Ellie told me that Curtiss no longer loved me or wanted me for his wife I moved about as a person in a dream and, in a dazed sort of fashion, I felt that I had lost my hold on the reality of life.

A great many conditions, persons, and things shadowed my thoughts putting themselves up as barriers against my promise—vague though as it was—to marry Barrington Pierce. Not the least of these persistent and disturbing influences was the thought of Lemoyne Danielle. In the still hours of the night I would awake with a start and find myself murmuring some word or phrase spoken by the young singer herself which had disclosed her great love for the man who had asked me to be his wife.

I had not seen Lemoyne since her arrival in New York. Each time I had phoned she had said that she was busy with her managers, contracts, rehearsals and innumerable events which crowd, to the utmost, a singer's hours. Even following her first concert I was unable to see her because she had sent word that she was hurrying away to a party with some other friends. Although I had tried many times to make an engagement with her she always managed an excuse which kept me away. Then suddenly it occurred to me that she did not want to see me. Not being sensitive I had accepted her various excuses with an unsuspicious mind though I might have remembered that in Paris she had seemed unusually fond of me and had treated me as if I were her dearest friend.

Could she have known about Barry's attention to me for the past few weeks? Had she found out how many times he and I had been alone? Perhaps she was eating her heart out in silent grief, or, on the other hand, with her temperamental nature, there was the bare possibility of her sulking in a jealous rage. Regardless of how she felt I realized that I could not gain any serenity of spirit until I could have a chat with her and find out for myself her attitude of mind.

If I telephoned to her hotel it would be the same old story, so impulsively I decided to go to her unannounced.

The next morning I took a bus which traversed the distance between Ellie's apartment and Lemoyne's luxurious hotel. It was a sparkling day, sunny and cold. I sat, as I had never grown tired of doing, on top of the bus and gave myself up to the thrill of being in the brisk, invigorating out-of-doors.

When I reached the hotel I closely followed my plan. From the desk I found out Lemoyne's room number and hurried away to a waiting elevator and soared up to one of the top-most floors. That it was an unconventional thing I was doing I realized as I approached the formidable looking door, but I knew that if I hesitated I would lose my nerve and go on, so I rapped, cautiously at first and then decisively, determined to be heard.

I glanced at my wristwatch. Ten o'clock. Perhaps Lemoyne was not up. It was certainly early for a call in New York. Then came a faint voice that I scarcely recognized as that of Lemoyne.

"Come."

I opened the door and walked into the room. Lemoyne, in negligee, reclined on a chaise-louche facing a row of windows through which the brilliant sunshine poured, and in her hand was a large photograph of Barrington Pierce!

"Oh! It's YOU!" she cried in sudden surprise, and I detected embarrassment and a certain trace of anger in her tone.

I felt my face grow hot and reflection in the cheval mirror on the opposite door showed me that my cheeks were flaming red.

Following a stony silence in which the young singer arose from her position, replaced the picture on the dressing table with its face to the wall, and then her innate culture overcoming her resentment at my intrusion, she stretched forth her hand. Then she asked me to sit down and I hoped that the most uncomfortable part of the interview had come to a close.

We discussed impersonal, frivolous affairs and I studied Lemoyne. I was amazed at the change which had taken place in her features since I had last seen her, the night of her concert, at which time she had been radiantly stunning in spite of the fact that she did not sing like she was especially happy or well. Now her eyes were swollen and her voice husky with recent tears. I took in the situation at a glance. She had been sorrowing over Barry and his picture which she had held in her hand! In spite of what he had said about her having ceased to care I knew that he was wrong.

Suddenly a line from a popular novel flashed through my mind. "You can never gain happiness for yourself by stepping on another woman's heart," and that is exactly what I had unwittingly attempted to do. I was genuinely fond of Lemoyne. She had been so unaffectedly sweet and lovely to Curtiss and me when we were in France. We had been unable to find accommodations in Paris and she had graciously insisted that we remain as her guests and had done everything possible to make our stay a delightful one. She had been unfailingly kind and as naturally frank as a child.

How I wished that she would unburden her heart to me as she had done once before and that we could talk this question over as calmly and unemotionally as we had at that other time.

By some trick of telepathy my affection for her must have made itself known for she paused in the middle of a remark about the new plays and, flashing me a smile—which tried hard to be brave, she said:

"I hear you're engaged to marry Barry. Please accept my congratulations and good wishes. May you too have all the happiness on earth!" she spoke automatically and, as the words fell from her lips in unnatural, stilted phrases, I thought they sounded more like a telegram from a distant relative than a spontaneous and personal wish from a friend.

"I would hardly say engaged," I replied, "you see I'm still married to Curtiss Wright."

"But divorce is such a simple matter these days that it will only be a question of a few months before you can be free to marry again." There was calm and deathly resignation in her voice, such indeed that I hastened to reassure her at the cost of not adhering to the absolute truth.

"I have not made any definite plans. Barry thought perhaps I could—" I hesitated to choose the right words for I did not want her to think that I had Barry's love, "that I could help him in his work." I hurried on, "Why I do not understand. But so far, all I have actually decided to do is to obtain a divorce. Curtiss and I have been separated, without one, long enough."

"Yes, I know," she nodded her shapely head, and you will marry Barry as soon as this is secured?" It was easy to see that she breathlessly awaited my reply.

"Quien sabe," I smiled, "what I shall do," I attempted to alleviate the strain which was momentarily becoming intense, "that is such a long time off and—"

"But you promised Barry. He told me so," her eyes narrowed and there was no trace of laughter in her voice though I had tried to put flippancy in my own, "it would go hard with him if you failed him NOW."

What a strange situation! For love of him she was urging me to do the thing that would bring desolation in her own life forever more. What bravery! What sportsmanship! What gallant pride!

"If you were not serious in your promise to him why did you make it and, if you do not love him why, I ask you, did you lead him on? To amuse you I suppose or to keep you from being bored!" There was no sympathy in her voice, only contempt and sarcasm which were glaringly unmasked.

Continue the thrilling interview between Sallie and the woman who is really in love with Barrington Pierce—Next week in The Eagle.

100 Per Cent Optimist

Here is a story about the most optimistic man: Totally bald, he went to a drug store and asked for a bottle of hair-restorer.

"Yes, sir," the clerk said, "here is a preparation that is sure to make your hair grow."

"All right," replied the optimist, "I'll take a bottle. And please wrap up a comb and brush with it."

Egypt will have chain drug stores.

The Texas Wheat Crop

It is estimated by those in position to know that the Texas wheat crop this year will exceed 2,000,000 acres, or an excess of about 20 per cent over that of last year. Crop conditions taken altogether have never been better. The chances are said to be excellent for the growers to get from $1.15 to $1.20 a bushel. Railroads are building new trackage into the Panhandle section to assist in handling the huge crop. The average production last year in Texas was 20 bushels compared with a national average of 13.6 bushels. If the crop yield equals that of last year and the price is as much as $1.15, Texas will sell 40,000,000 bushels of wheat in 1927, for which it will receive $46,000,000. This potential wheat acreage in the Panhandle section alone is said to be 15,000,000 acres or seven and a half times the total Texas acreage to be harvested this year. Texas is destined to become the most noted wheat country in the world.

Selling Shelled Pecans

Lockhart has this season shipped out 1,800 pounds of shelled pecans. This is the beginning of what will likely become a large industry for that thriving little city. San Antonio, Tyler, Brownwood, El Paso and a few other places have large pecan shelling establishments doing prosperous business. Why ship pecans north to be shelled? Why not save the freight on the hulls and pay the wages for shelling to Texas people? Because of their bulk, the cold storage and steady marketing of whole pecans is largely impractical, but when shelled they can be economically held in storage and marketed along during the year as the demand arises. Pecan shelling is light indoor employment for the aged and for women and children and at wages about like other factory wages. In a few years the Texas pecan crop will all be shelled in Texas, and there will be hundreds of pecan shelling factories throughout the States to give employment to labor. Why not?

Get Some Parks Now

There is not a town or village in Texas that has enough attractive parks. The time to secure parks is before the land gets too high. The price of land now is lower than it will ever be again in the towns. There are in many places park lands or lots to be had merely for the asking, and others at a nominal cost. Get your civic clubs, women's clubs interested in beautifying your town by starting them to improving the parks. There is no other community work that will appeal to them more strongly. Even though your city parks may be neglected for a time, it is better to acquire them when the lands can be had, for sooner or later the people will become interested in beautifying all such places.

Littlefield Rotary Organizes

At first one would think there is little news in the fact that a town like Littlefield has organized a Rotary Club. Really it is a big item for that town, for it means that some 30 or 40 men of the town have caught a new and better vision of service, and with a vision of that kind organized into a working body something has to happen. Critics of such organizations as Rotary, Kiwanis, Lions and Altrusa have to admit that they put better life and better working spirit into their membership and that their influence permeates beyond the members and throughout the entire community. Therefore, Littlefield and other towns organizing their business contingencies into civic clubs are doing things that can count for good of the whole people.

Lobbying at Austin

After viewing the work of lobbyists at Austin for many years, I am of the opinion that their real influence upon legislation is practically nothing and that most of them are merely parasites feeding upon the fears of corporations and individuals that they are likely to suffer at the hands of the legislature. Very few measures indeed owe their passage or defeat to the influence of the lobby. Very little outright purchasing of votes is ever done. The legislature who would sell his influence has little or none to sell. Beyond being "worked" for a few dinners and even at times for a rather pretentious banquet, all paid for at the expense of his clients, the lobbyist is given little earnest attention at Austin. Usually he is a hireling with nothing much to do, and oftener than not he does even less than he is paid for doing. The loneliest people around Austin are the professional lobbyists during a legislative session, and many of them look like they even hold themselves in contempt as professional parasites.

Cabbage Shipments Moving

Carload shipments of cabbage are now going out from the Rio Grande Valley to help feed the world. The crop is fine and prices are satisfactory. The good prices obtained are due largely to good sales organization and consequent proper movement to the right markets. The late cold snaps have done no damage to the growing vegetables in the Valley. A prosperous season is ahead of South Texas.

Alvin Berries and Flowers

Strawberries are being gathered around Alvin and Hitchcock and Alta Loma and the berry pickers are busy as bees. Roses and other flowers are in profuse bloom, and figs and other fruit have escaped injurious frosts. When the Alvin crops are gathered the berry pickers will be migrating North through East Texas literally picking fortunes from the vines and bushes as they go. Texas just now is fairly abloom with wealth to be had by all who are willing to work for it.

What Texas Needs on Farms

Addressing a farmers' banquet given by the Chamber of Commerce at Weatherford, R. Q. Lee, former president of the West Texas Chamber of Commerce, gave the figures to show that throughout the South there is now a shortage of grain, forage crops, potatoes, vegetables and other things necessary to a well-balanced living, while too much cotton is being grown. Farmers need to learn that the first thing to do on a farm is to grow everything needed for the family and farm stock, after which attention may be given to the products to be sold.

Getting Dakota Prizes

The Cherokee county farmer who took eight turkeys to a North Dakota poultry show and won eleven prizes is making a name for Texas that is worth more to the State than all the athletic prizes won by our athletes. His prize winnings lead to the remark that Texas is now growing 65 per cent of all the turkeys raised in the United States, and Texas is just fairly getting started as a turkey raising State.

FASHIONS AND CONDUCT

There is a great deal of exploring of the wrong or undesirable things done by the younger generation, but the older folks do not seem to have any clear idea of how to produce higher standards.

The problem is to so change sentiment that such tendencies are regarded as "yellow." The way to turn a boy away from a life of crime, is to show him that the crooked little things he is doing are regarded with contempt. If he steals a little money out of his employer's cash drawer, and feels that his associates regard him as a smart fellow for such acts, he will keep on perpetrating such things. But if he is made to feel that he is regarded as "yellow" as a cur, who is too weak to play the game fair, then he will likely change his ways.

It is much the same in regard to the conduct of girls, and of the girls and boys together. Just at present many of them seem to think that it is smart to engage in practices that are more or less loose or vicious. The most effective way to change that sentiment would be to make them realize that they are regarded rather contemptuously for so doing.

It does not get at them to be told that their elders look down on them. But if they could find that the social leaders in their own set regard them as rather "cheap" specimens, they would change their conduct. The students in the colleges shape the opinions of their generation to a large extent. If they could be convinced that loose practices are to be regarded as mean and despicable most of the young people would get over these ways quickly enough.

It would seem that the colleges should place quite as much stress on instruction in conduct as they do on high scholarship, and try to induce their students to make fine conduct fashionable.

IMPROVEMENTS PAY

Some owners of property will allow the same to gradually become more shabby and inadequate year after year, on the idea that the rentals they obtain for such property do not warrant improvements.

The landlord who will improve his rental house often finds that with these renovations, it often rents better at a higher price than it did before. The person who owns a business property often finds that it is so much more attractive and desirable after improvements are made that the tenants are glad to pay enough more to cover the investment.

THOUGHTS VS. ACTIONS

Thoughts of Junction are very good things, but too frequently while there are plenty of "thoughts" about things that should be done, these "thoughts" are not backed up by "action."

Your home merchant is a kind of purchasing agent, who is working every day to provide you with commodities at a minimum of cost. When you refuse him your patronage, you limit his ability to serve you.

The merchant who handles the quality of goods you desire and at the price you would pay elsewhere should be given your patronage. Junction merchants carry the best to be had and at prices that will compare favorably with those in other towns of like size.

Give the Junction merchant your business and note the results.

He is ready for all surprise attacks and changes of weather. When he stands guard in the refrigerator, no germs can escape his chill breath. If the weather gets warmer, the ice-box remains cold; if it gets colder, the food does not freeze. It is always safe. And you can depend upon the purity of it and the flavor. BETTER STREET LIGHTING WOULD SAVE MANY LIVES

Adequate street lighting would save the lives and limbs of more than 17 per cent of the people killed and injured in street accidents at night. That was the gist of a report by the street and highway committee of the National Electric Light Association, presented at the annual convention of that organization.

"It must be evident to any one who has driven a car that adequate street and highway lighting would be a large factor in reducing the number of such accidents," the committee reported.

In many places an awakened public conscience is at work, the committee adds, and in the last few years many municipalities have begun to take a deal more interest in street illumination. That has been evident in the floating bond issues or the levying of special assessments, as well as general appropriation for better lighting.

THE GOSPEL OF GOOD ROADS

It is not so long ago that the Caterpillar Tractor Company published a most interesting volume, entitled "Out of the Rut." This book's story began almost at the beginning of time and showed the history of road building up to the present.

It brought forcibly the fact that in many sections of the country the gospel of good roads is still in that stage characteristic of the middle 19th Century, covering only the ver-iest beginnings of modern roadway systems.

It is almost inconceivable that any American community could contenance indefinitely the handicap of poor roads. The whole history of the world's advance is inseparable from its transportation facilities. The world has prospered with the development of transportation rather than transportation with the development of the world.

Those who live on the great highways suffer because there are places in this nation where good roads do not abound. It is for the general welfare that we should spread the gospel of good roads until it taps and develops the hindmost regions, adding wealth and greater prosperity to our unified nation.

Men have worked for years on inventions that look very simple when they are completed. One of the most useful tools of today is the telephone. It is made up of 19 different products; aluminum, iron, tin, lead, zinc, silver, gold, platinum, coal, mica and nickel, for the production of which explosives of some shape are used. The other materials are silk, rubber, wool, asphalt, cotton, shellac and flax.

The largest gold mines in the United States are in Colorado, South Dakota and California. Gold in these states is found in very hard and tough rock and is broken up by the use of dynamite.

The Government has developed what is known as soil surveys and agricultural experts call certain soils names like Tama soil, Caddo, Conway, Genesee, Carrington, Gundy, etc. These names are just as plain to them as the words "shiners," "shubs," and "bull heads," are to youthful fishermen no matter whether they throw their lines in the creeks and ponds of Maine, Florida or Nebraska.

By wrapping smelly fish like kippers in cellophane they may be "noiselessly" boiled and then prepared for serving. It is not necessary to break the wrappers until the fish are ready to be eaten. Consequently there are no odors.

Instead of painting all of their locomotives black the Baltimore and Ohio and the Southern Railway are using bright colors, such as green and yellow, and they are doing wonders with their cars also. With the new Duco paint it is possible to entirely change the appearance of railroad equipment over night.

TEXAS BERRY ADOPTED BY CALIFORNIA

The Nessberry is a perfect success in Southern California, according to a report to Mr. E. Teas, a Houston Nurseryman, from Mr. H. M. Ramsay, formerly of Houston, now living at National City near San Diego, California. Mr. Ramsay states that the berries are as large as English walnuts and grow in clusters. They have the delightful flavor of raspberries and are almost black when fully ripe, at which time they are of the best flavor. Mr. Ramsay also reports that the Hauptberry is a failure with him and that the Loganberry has no raspberry flavor and does not compare in quality with the Nessberry. He says the vines are very vigorous in California, growing 6 or 8 feet in a season.

Prof. H. Ness of the Texas Experiment Station who originated the Nessberry in his breeding experiments some years ago, has expressed much gratification that this berry is a success in California. In Texas, Professor Ness states that the berry seems to be at its highest flavor when it is at its most brilliant red color, rather than when dead ripe as mentioned by the California grower.

Distribution of this new berry was made from the Station to numerous growers in Texas, including several nurseries, and the public now has access to supplies of this splendid fruit through the nurseries.

NEWSPAPERS BEST FOR UTILITY ADVERTISING

Public Utilities are using more than half of their yearly advertising appropriations, estimated at twenty-five million dollars, to tell their messages to the public through newspapers, according to a recent report of the Public Utilities Advertising Association.

Gas and electric utilities, says the report, of the Public Utilities Advertising Association show a proportion of expenditures for newspaper space greater than 65 per cent. In 1925, the last year for which figures are available, electric light and power companies spent 71 per cent of all advertising outlay in newspapers, and gas companies spent 65 per cent.

"The highest per cent of advertising expenditure which is devoted to newspapers is again testimony of the appreciation of utility men of the value of newspaper advertising," says the report.

"There is every indication that the public utilities, in their endeavor to sell their services scientifically, are using newspapers for the direct and indirect results accomplished, thus rapidly overcoming the attitude that a utility must advertise in a newspaper in return for its goodwill."

MERRY WIVES CLUB

One of the most delightful affairs of the month was the bridge party given by Mrs. J. M. Livingsstone, honoring the Merry Wives Club and a number of friends.

The tallies and table appointments cleverly suggested the George Washington birthday theme.

Quaint antique vases were presented to Mrs. Pierce Hoggott and Miss Fae Taylor, who made high club score and guest score respectively. Mrs. Bill Hamer received the consolation.

Chicken salad, saltines, potato chips, olives, hot tea and nut cake were served after the game.

Miniature hatchets and nut cups with cherries were the attractive favors.

You furnish the stock, we will do the rest. We get results. Llano Valley Realty Co.

LADIES AFTERNOON CARD CLUB

Mrs. C. T. Holekamp complimented the Ladies Afternoon Card Club with a George Washington bridge party at her home on the afternoon of the twenty-second.

After several games of bridge the scores were added and Mrs. Felix Watson was found to have high score, for which she received an attractive corsage. The guest prize, a hand made linen vanity set, went to Mrs. Van Martin while the consolation, a small bottle of cherries, was given Mrs. S. S. Bundy.

The tables and favors were well decorated with hatchets and cherries and were reminiscent of Washington's birthday. Cherry pie, salad, wafers and hot tea were served at the close of a pleasant afternoon.

BIRTHDAY PARTY

Little Miss Felagene Riley and her small brother, Billy, celebrated their birthday with a joint party Saturday afternoon, when they bid their young friends come and make merry with them.

The spirit of mirth and fun reigned supreme during the games and contests. The gifts were unwrapped and duly admired, after which two birthday cakes were brought out, gaily decorated in pink and blue respectively, cut and served with fruit punch and cookies.

Gave crepe paper caps were distributed to the small guests and they added much to the hilarity of the occasion. The napkins decorated with cherries further carried out the motif of George Washington's birthday.

NOTICE

Notice is hereby given that the first Saturday in April is Election day for the election of County and District School Trustees. The law provides that the District School Trustees shall order the election, post the notices and appoint the election officers to hold said elections. This probably will not be done. However, it becomes my duty under the law to advise the people of this election and to suggest that they have a constitutional right to have said election regardless of whether the above law has been complied with or not.

In each Common School District there are to be two elected or appointed as the case may be. And three members of the County Board are to be elected or appointed. If the people of any of the Common School Districts in this County desire to hold these elections, you may call at my office, get the election supplies and hold your election on said above named date.

Save the Surface and You Save All

Paint and Varnish increase the value of your property—many times their cost.

If done in time, painting keeps down the annual maintenance expense by saving money that otherwise would be spent for repairs or lost through depreciation.

The paint dollar adds more value than any other dollar spent on your property.

Then, too, think of the beauty in a can of paint. Think of the change it will bring in the appearance of your home, and to everything your brush touches.
