Alamo's 'touchy'

SAN ANTONIO — Touchy tourists at the Alamo are keeping their hands to themselves since a chain barrier has gone up. Officials at the state's most popular attraction said the rope-like barrier built Monday is meant to protect the walls of the historic mission, where legends such as Davy Crockett and Jim Bowie died fighting for Texas independence in 1836. "People are not consciously vicious. They just normally want to go up and touch the front, so they leave body oils," said Alamo curator Wallace Saage.

Storms cut grapes

BORDEAUX, France — Violent weekend storms destroyed about 2,500 acres of ripening grapes in the famed Bordeaux wine-making region, officials said Tuesday. The unseasonal rain and hail came in a growing season with the worst weather since 1977, the Interprofessional Center of Bordeaux Wines said. The Medoc area was the hardest hit, especially the communities of Margaux, Valeyrac, Queyrac, Begadan and Gaillan, it reported. There are 215,000 acres of grape vines under cultivation in Bordeaux. The damage comes a year after a spring frost destroyed much of the 1991 vintage.

Stolen car returns

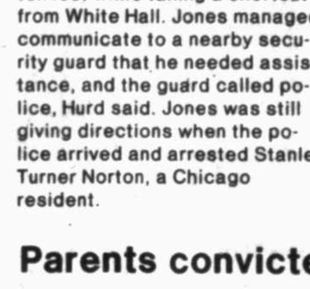

WHITE HALL, Ark. — No wonder Samuel Jones took his time giving directions — the man who asked was driving Jones' stolen car. Somebody took Jones' car about 6 a.m. Monday. About two hours later, he was standing in the parking lot where he worked when a man pulled up beside him driving the car, said Pine Bluff police Capt. Lee Hurd. The driver said he had gotten lost while taking a shortcut from White Hall. Jones managed to communicate to a nearby security guard that he needed assistance, and the guard called police, Hurd said. Jones was still giving directions when the police arrived and arrested Stanley Turner Norton, a Chicago resident.

Parents convicted

GALVESTON — A White Settlement couple accused in the starvation death of their teenage son, Stephen, were convicted Tuesday of injury to a child. The jury deliberated about 45 minutes before issuing the verdict shortly after noon in the trial of Jay Hill, 42, and his wife, Linda, 38./3B

Perot charges cover-up on Vietnam POWs/MIAs

Ross Perot

WASHINGTON (NYT) — Ross Perot, his presidential campaign now history, resumed his crusade on behalf of American prisoners allegedly left behind after the Vietnam War, charging Tuesday that government officials have concealed their existence for two decades.

In long-awaited testimony to the Senate's Select Committee on POW/MIA Affairs, Perot alleged that government officials "have covered up, dissembled and finessed this issue for 20-some-odd years."

The Texas computer services tycoon recommended that Congress grant immunity to those with evidence of a cover-up in order to obtain information necessary to locate surviving MIAs.

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina (AP) — Seeking to head off international military intervention in Bosnia, Serb fighters on Tuesday promised to allow mothers and children to leave Sarajevo and a self-proclaimed Serb parliament pledged cooperation with the United Nations.

But pressure continued to build in advance of the U.N. Security Council's vote, expected today, on a measure that would authorize use of force to safeguard humanitarian aid to war-battered Bosnia-Herzegovina.

The United Nations said Tuesday that Serb forces were carrying out one of the war's biggest "ethnic cleansings," driving some 28,000 Muslims from their homes in northwest Bosnia.

Neighbors, U.S. ready trade pact

■ White House schedules a Rose Garden ceremony early today for Bush to announce a three-way accord linking 360 million North American consumers.

By Keith Bradsher
N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — The United States, Canada and Mexico tentatively agreed Tuesday to create a free-trade area covering all of North America, eliminating customs duties and other restrictions.

The agreement will allow companies to do business the length of the continent with few barriers. People involved in the negotiations and administration officials said that President Bush was virtually certain to announce the accord this morning.

But the three trade ministers issued a statement Tuesday night saying that they had not concluded a deal.

"Contrary to press reports, negotiations on a North American Free Trade Agreement continue this evening with all three ministers meeting," the two-sentence statement said. "An announcement will be made when the negotiations are complete and a deal has been reached."

When a deal is concluded is not a cut-and-dried issue, however, because lawyers will be sorting out final details for weeks to come, as they do on all international agreements. What matters is whether enough of the issues have been resolved to announce an agreement.

The White House notified key congressional committees Tuesday evening that it believed a formal and final deal would be struck Tuesday night, while warning them that some details of the pact were still being worked out.

The agreement is subject to congressional approval, which is expected, but not until next year and not until after a bitter battle.

The November presidential elections add further uncertainty to the situation. If Gov. Bill Clinton of Arkansas, the Democratic nominee, is elected, he could call for substantial changes in the pact.

The key elements of the free-trade agreement are these:

■ Eliminating customs duties over time on tens of thousands of products traded among the three countries, from car windshields to tomatoes.

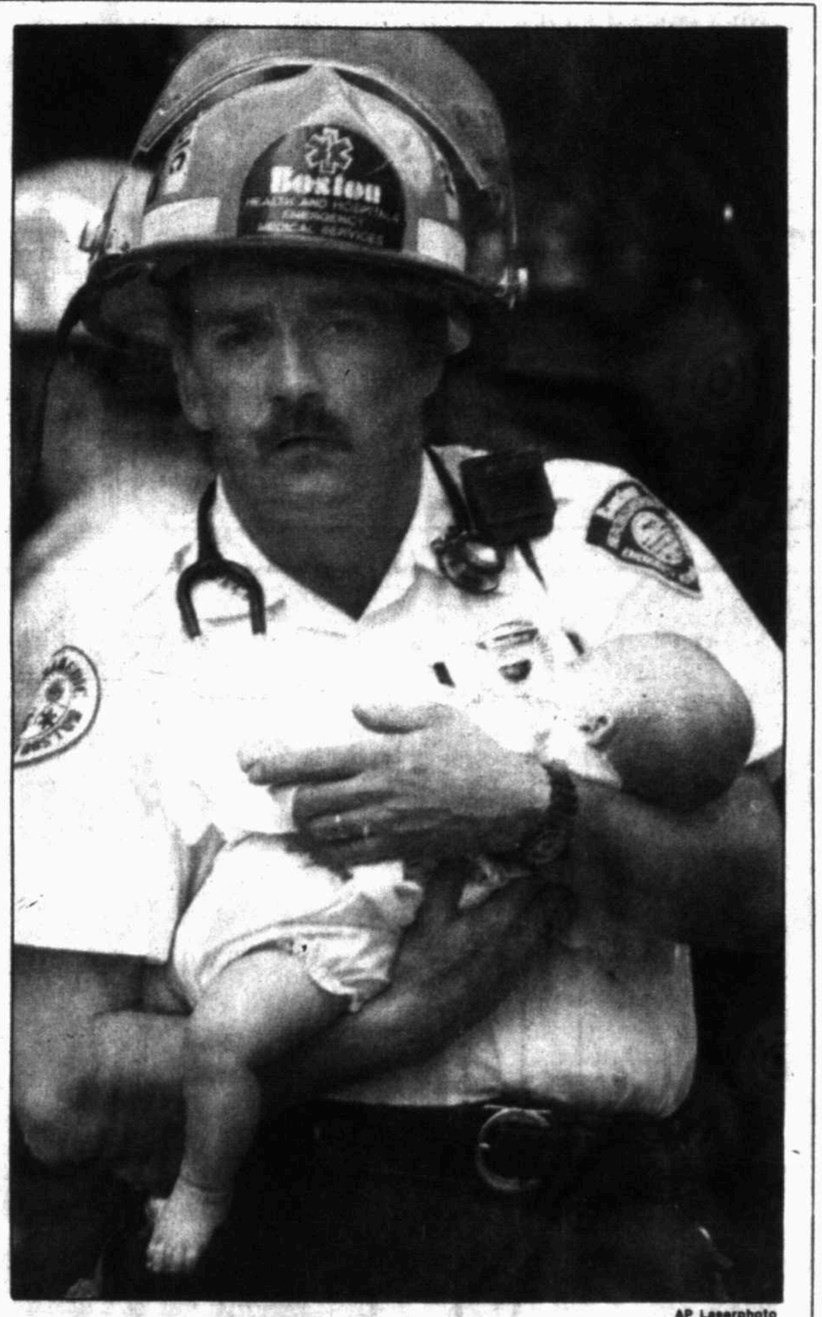

■ Setting up obstacles to prevent Asian and European companies from bypassing American tariffs by shipping goods through Mexico.

■ Opening Mexico's closed banking, insurance and securities industries to American and Canadian competition and investments.

■ Creating trilateral panels to resolve commercial disputes involving environmental standards.

Most economists say the pact will bring greater prosperity to all three

Bob Cast has a one in seven chance of becoming Midland's first Lone Star Millionaire next week — despite never having spent a penny on the lottery.

"This ticket was a gift from my son. He put it in as part of my birthday presents," Cast said. "Personally, I haven't bought a ticket yet. I'd be more inclined to play the lottery now."

City Council extinguishes airport-terminal smoking

Smokers at Midland International Airport were officially banned from all city-operated areas of the terminal Tuesday as City Council members amended a 3-year-old city ordinance in favor of a smoke-free environment.

"The ordinance says not to inconvenience non-smokers. And the present locations for smoking are not acceptable with the spirit of the ordinance," Mayor J.D. Faircloth said. "We can't satisfy both groups."

Designated smoking areas now are located adjacent to the restrooms at the north and south ends of the concourse and at a small area by baggage claim.

Mexico welcomes, worries about effect of agreement

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Reports of a free-trade agreement with the United States and Canada were welcomed Tuesday night by some economists in Mexico, while others expressed doubts.

Republican sources in Washington said President Bush planned to announce the three-way pact at the White House this morning following more than a year of negotiations.

"Finally," said Mexico City economist Jonathan Heath Constable.

Negotiators had hoped the agreement could be finished in time for it to be passed by the U.S. Congress before the presidential election, something considered impossible now.

The delay hurt the Mexican economy and worried investors. The Mexican stock market, which had been one of the fastest growing in the world, plunged by almost 20 percent in June, partly due to uncertainty about the delay.

"With what the Mexican economy has gone through in last few months, it could have used the positive news on NAFTA a couple of months ago," Heath said, referring to the North American Free Trade Agreement.

Alejandro Quiroz, a board member of the Mexican Free Trade Action Network, said his group's studies indicate the treaty will mean only a minor increase in Mexican wages while harming those in the United States.

While studies indicate it will create new jobs, he said, it is also expected to bankrupt thousands of small businesses here, throwing their employees out of work. He said there should be ways to cope with that dislocation.

He said environmental protections in the agreement appear to have "a propaganda character" and were only optional, rather than mandatory on the three governments.

PACT: Lawyers to sort final details for weeks countries, with each specializing in the industries in which it is relatively efficient. But American and Canadian labor unions contend that companies will move factories and jobs to Mexico, where wages are lower.

White House and Republican campaign officials, many from Western states expected to gain from the accord, see the agreement as a vote-winner for Bush and plan to emphasize it at the Republican National Convention in Houston next week.

These officials expect the pact to win support from Mexican-Americans and voters in border states, which stand to benefit the most from increased sales of goods and services to Mexico. They also see the agreement as a chance for Bush to stress that his foreign policy experience produces jobs and prosperity in the United States.

But the agreement has badly split the Republican Party, with lawmakers and activists from Northeastern states deeply worried that it will antagonize voters worried about the possible loss of jobs.

Sen. Alfonse M. D'Amato, R-N.Y., who faces a tough re-election fight in a region that stands to benefit less than the border states from the pact, has been leery. And even some polls in the Southwest have shown strong public doubts about the agreement.

Democrats also are becoming more critical of the agreement. Clinton supported the opening of negotiations with Mexico last year. But he applauded recently when the House majority leader, Richard A. Gephardt of Missouri, criticized the administration for not doing a good enough job negotiating. Gephardt said more should be done to protect American workers from losing jobs and to protect the environment along the nation's southern border and in Mexico.

The White House, however, views the agreement as a political plus, and has tentatively scheduled a news conference for Bush to announce the deal today.

People involved in the negotiations said that the trade ministers from all three countries struck the deal at 1 a.m. Tuesday after 14 months of negotiations.

Although technical details and the legal language of the deal are still being reviewed, these people said the details were not large enough to postpone the final announcement. Lawyers and translators for all three countries will work on the text of the agreement for the next several weeks.

Mexican and Canadian officials also will describe the agreement to reporters here this morning before flying home to their capitals for more news conferences. American officials said that any of the countries could, in theory, still back down but that not one had given any indication that it would do so.

The last issue resolved early this morning concerned the extent to which Mexico would open to American and Canadian competition its contracts from government agencies and state-owned enterprises.

Some issues, like apparel imports from Canada and local-content rules for automobiles, were resolved in substance late Monday night but were the subject of detailed discussions Tuesday.

In the United States, the biggest winners will be American industries that need low-wage labor. Many are high-technology businesses, like computer manufacturers, which employ white-collar workers in design and development work in the United States and blue-collar workers abroad to assemble the products.

Until now, much of the assembly work had been done in East Asia, in part because of the risks of dealing with Mexico's legal system. Under the agreement, factories in Mexico, closer to home and more reliant on United States technical expertise than those in East Asia, will be protected from legal caprice.

The losers, of course, include American blue-collar workers, who will face more competition from Mexicans. The agreement will make it possible for a Mexican trucker earning $7 a day to climb into an 18-wheeler in Monterrey and drive a load of auto parts all the way to Detroit.

Today, that driver would have to climb out of his truck at the Rio Grande and the goods would be loaded onto an American truck.

For just such reasons, labor unions have campaigned hard against the pact, saying that hundreds of thousands of American jobs could be lost because the accord would certify Mexico as a safe place to do business with easy access to the American and Canadian markets.

But proponents of the pact counter that jobs are moving anyway, citing examples like Smith Corona Corp., which announced last month that it would move its typewriter manufacturing operations to Mexico from Cortland, N.Y.

Saddam gets warning that aid will be given

UNITED NATIONS (NYT) — The United States, Britain and France warned President Saddam Hussein Tuesday that they might come to the aid of the Shiite Muslims of Iraq's vast southern marshlands if he continued to oppress them, just as they aided Kurdish refugees fleeing his armies in the north last year.

The warnings came at a special Security Council meeting called to hear a report on human rights violations in Iraq by the former Dutch foreign minister, Max van der Stoel, who is investigating Iraq's human rights record on behalf of the U.N. Human Rights Commission in Geneva.

The three countries that sent their armed forces to carve out safe havens for Kurdish refugees last year accused Saddam of continuing to oppress both the northern Kurds and the southern Shiites in violation of Security Council Resolution 688, which demands an end to all internal repression in the country.

America's U.N. representative, Edward J. Perkins, recalled that after the Council decided Baghdad's attacks on the Kurds were a threat to international peace last year, the United States agreed to "additional measures" to help prevent further Iraqi repression.

"Now not only in the north but also in the south that situation still exists," he said.

Britain's representative, Sir David Hannay, also recalled that his government had felt that "last year's massive exodus of Kurds into Turkey and Iran" was so serious that "measures had to be taken" to prevent the population being further repressed.

"That situation now appears to exist in the south of Iraq as well as it did last year in the north," he added.

France's deputy representative, Jean-Marc Rochereau de La Sabliere, gave a similar veiled warning, recalling that his government had helped set up the Kurdish safe havens last year and now feels that "today a situation just as serious exists in the south."

All three countries accused Saddam of conducting a systematic military campaign against Shiite Muslims living in the southern marshlands around the confluence of the Tigris and Euphrates rivers.

They said they were being subjected to regular artillery barrages, armed attacks and bombing.

The warnings come at a time when Saddam has been boldly defying the Security Council's gulf war cease-fire terms.

'Cool' front heads for basin

Staff report

A southbound cold front moving into the Permian Basin is expected to usher in mostly cloudy skies and a 40 percent chance of thunderstorms today, according to forecasters with the National Weather Service at Midland International Airport.

The unstable cooler air from the north — combined with the supply of gulf moisture and daytime heating — is likely to create some thunderstorm activity today, NWS said.

Today's high is expected to reach only into the mid-80s under mostly cloudy skies.

Tonight, skies should remain mostly cloudy, while the low reaches the mid-60s. The chance of thunderstorms falls to 20 percent.

Thursday should see partly cloudy skies, a continued 20 percent chance of thundeshowers and a high again in the mid-80s.

After an overnight low of 69, Tuesday's high reached 92, compared to the record high for the date of 106, set in 1964. The record low for Tuesday was set in 1936, when the mercury dipped to 60.

STATE

Thunderstorms developed in Texas on Tuesday along a low-pressure system that extended from Eastland to Hillsboro to Tyler.

Winds north of the line were generally out of the north and northeast at 10 to 15 mph. South of the line, winds were out of the south at less than 10 mph.

Gusty winds and heavy rains accompanied thunderstorms that continued throughout the day in Southeast Texas.

North of the boundary, temperatures were unseasonably mild at midafternoon, with temperatures ranging from 83 to 94. In South Texas, however, south and southwest winds helped the mercury climb into the upper 90s and 100s.

Brownsville tied its record high for the date of 99 degrees early in the afternoon. At 3 p.m., temperatures in South Texas ranged from 80 during a thunderstorm at Palacios to 100 at McAllen and the Naval Air Station at Kingsville.

The National Weather Service said highs in the 80s and 90s can be expected in North Texas today and Thursday, with lows in the 60s and 70s.

In South Texas, skies will be partly cloudy through Thursday with showers and thunderstorms forecast for much of the region. Highs will be in the 90s, with lows in the 70s.

A few light showers were reported in southeastern portions of the Panhandle, and thunderstorms were scattered across southern portions of West Texas.

But mostly, skies were partly to mostly sunny across West Texas. Abundant clouds in combination with an outflow boundary left over from thunderstorms Tuesday kept temperatures lower over northern sections while southern sections remained in the heat.

Mid-afternoon temperatures across West Texas were mostly in the 70s and 80s, with a few readings in the 90s in far western and southern portions. Readings ranged from 76 at Dalhart and Childress to 95 at Sanderson and El Paso.

NATION

Stormy weather extended across the Southwest and South and into New England on Tuesday.

At midday, showers and thunderstorms extended over parts of the Plains, lower Mississippi Valley, eastern Gulf of Mexico coast and to the southern Atlantic Coast.

Showers and thunderstorms also extended through the lower Ohio Valley and central Appalachians to the middle Atlantic Coast, and into northern New England.

Elsewhere, showers and thunderstorms also were scattered across northeastern Arizona, southeastern New Mexico and northern Colorado.

During the six hours up to 1 p.m. CDT, there were no reports of 1 inch or more of rainfall.

Hot weather spread into the Northwest with a record high of 87 at Astoria, Ore.

The Associated Press contributed to this report.

PEROT: Texas billionaire charges cover-up on MIAs

(From 1A)

"It is the fear of disclosure on the part of all those people who are part of this web that keeps this thing in limbo," he said in explaining the need for immunity.

He also called on the United States to begin negotiations with Vietnam and Laos for the liberation of — or accounting for — any remaining MIAs.

"Let's get focused; let's negotiate," he said.

There was no indication, however, that either the committee or the Bush administration would follow Perot's recommendations.

Both are following their own courses to account for the 2,266 servicemen the Pentagon still lists as missing in the Vietnam War.

With dozens of POW/MIA families looking on with approval from the audience in the historic Senate Caucus Room, Perot declared, "There is no question in my mind we left men behind and I think I can prove it."

However, his testimony, which lasted throughout the day, included little new evidence to substantiate his claim that American servicemen might still be alive in Indochina.

But Sen. Robert M. Smith, the committee vice chairman, disclosed that the Vietnamese government, despite public denials that they hold no American POWs, may have offered to trade prisoners for $4 billion in reconstruction aid in 1981.

"Already our committee is aware of three separate U.S. government officials who are stating that such an offer was indeed made," Smith announced without elaborating.

Perot declined to appear before the committee earlier this summer when he was contemplating an independent campaign for the presidency. He apparently feared being portrayed as a paranoid conspiracy theorist.

When Sen. John McCain, R-Ariz., himself a former POW, pressed him Tuesday about a possible conspiracy within the U.S. government to conceal the existence of MIAs, Perot bristled.

"I have never said that," he said. "I don't even want to discuss it . . . because I think it hurts getting anybody back home."

To back his claim that servicemen were left behind, Perot cited a March 1973 memo from Lawrence Eagleburger, then the Pentagon's point man on the issue of prisoners of war and soldiers missing in action.

In the memo to then-Defense Secretary Elliot Richardson, Eagleburger said that after the return of the last batch of prisoners from North Vietnam that month, "Hanoi should be advised unequivocally that we still hold them responsible for the return of all POWS being held in Indochina."

Perot said he believed the reason all POWs didn't return home from Laos was that the U.S. officially was not at war with Laos even though it was running covert bombing missions.

"That's how covered up the whole thing has been," he said.

Perot has been closely involved with the POW issue since 1969, when he made the first of several trips to Southeast Asia on behalf of U.S. prisoners.

He made his last trip to Hanoi in 1987, after which he wrote to then-President Ronald Reagan that "the evidence that men were held in Laos is substantial."

REPORT: President rebuffs question on adultery

(From 1A)

ing a news conference at his oceanside home in Kennebunkport, Maine.

A Bush campaign official later accused Democrat Bill Clinton's campaign of planting the story. A Clinton aide denied it.

Later, in an NBC interview in the Oval Office, Bush was asked directly by correspondent Stone Phillips: "Have you ever had an affair?"

"I'm not going to take any sleaze questions," Bush said in an interview taped for the show "Dateline NBC."

"You're perpetuating the sleaze by even asking the question, to say nothing of asking it in the Oval Office. And I don't think you ought to do that and I'm not going to answer the question."

The questions were prompted by an account in the book "The Power House" by Susan B. Trento that alleges a liaison between Bush and longtime aide Jennifer Fitzgerald, now a State Department official. The account was prominently featured in the New York Post.

Bush campaign spokeswoman Torie Clarke said, "It came from the Clinton campaign. The New York Post has succumbed to what has been an all-out effort to get someone to print this trash. For several weeks they have been faxing portions of that piece of trash book to news organizations all over the country."

George Stephanopoulos, communications director for the Clinton campaign, disputed Clarke's statement as "simply not true."

Bush was asked about the alleged Swiss episode during a news conference in Maine with Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin.

Rumors involving Bush and Fitzgerald surfaced during the 1988 presidential campaign. They were denied at the time by Bush's eldest son, George W. Bush. The president's comments on Tuesday were the first time he has addressed the matter directly.

His comments were in response to a question from Cable News Network reporter Mary Tillotson, who asked about the Post report and noted that Bush has "said that family values, character are likely to be important in the presidential campaign."

Bush shot back: "I'm not going to take any sleazy questions like that from CNN."

"I don't like it and I'm not going to respond other than to say it's a lie," he added.

Barbara Bush, who stood by grim-faced as her husband answered the question, later told a reporter: "Fortunately, I did not see the New York Post story."

The tabloid featured a front-page headline: "THE BUSH AFFAIR" bracketed by pictures of the president and Fitzgerald.

LOANS: Congress must 1st approve guarantees

tary edge over the Arabs.

"They have been loyal and staunch friends," Bush said. "Nobody knows where the next crisis could come and you rely on friends in a crisis."

Rabin, elected in June to succeed the more hawkish Yitzhak Shamir, almost immediately called a halt to new Jewish settlements on the West Bank and in Gaza.

But the ex-general is also committed to building a stronger Jewish presence in Jerusalem and maintaining "security" settlements on the Golan Heights and in the Jordan Valley.

The Israeli leader thanked Bush for the guarantees and said "your readiness to extend them following our discussions means a lot to me and to Israel."

Congress must first approve the guarantees, and early indications were positive.

"My guess is he's going to get a pretty strong feeling of endorsement" from lawmakers, Sen. Richard Lugar, R-Ind., said of Bush.

Bush gave Rabin red-carpet treatment. He was flown to the president's summer home Monday from New York on a U.S. Air Force jet with Secretary of State James A. Baker III aboard. On Tuesday, Rabin flew to Washington with Bush and Baker on Air Force One.

The guarantees will permit Israel to get easier terms over the five borrowing years from commercial banks. Israel also will pay the administrative costs to the U.S. government of setting aside funds in the event of a default.

Bush has had a rocky relationship with Israel. On the one hand, his administration arranged long-sought peace talks with the Arabs, spearheaded the nullification of a 1975 U.N. resolution equating Zionism with racism and helped in the emigration of nearly 400,000 Jews from the former Soviet Union and 20,000 from Ethiopia.

But he branded Jerusalem as occupied territory, rejected the loan guarantees while Israel staggered under the burden of taking in the refugees and appeared to lack an emotional commitment to the Jewish state.

COUNCIL: Cuevas, in 1st major vote, dissents

(From 1A)

ed Sept. 1, will move smokers into the airport restaurant, bar and snack bar — the three areas controlled by independent leaseholders.

Midlander Dewey Lee spoke before the council in opposition to the smoking ban.

"When we proposed this originally three years back, there were two Hispanic City Council members who felt like the tax-paying smokers had rights. And now you want to tear that page out," he said.

"I don't want to boycott the airport. . . . They can't afford the loss of an airline. But I will if I have to," he said.

Newly appointed council member Jose Cuevas also opposed the plan.

Cuevas, a member of the council when the original smoking ordinance passed three years ago, said he believes the council should stick with the original settlement.

"Basically, back then we had two groups of smokers and nonsmokers, led by John Castro and J.D. Faircloth," Cuevas said. "There was a lot of time spent looking to see where smoking was best suited. We made a lot of concessions at the time and for us to come back and change that doesn't seem right."

"We denied those original two areas (on the terminal). I don't agree with that," he said.

Airport advisory board members have argued that the ventilation systems around those areas are inadequate because of low ceilings.

Airport Director Ken Day acknowledged that the smoking areas have resulted in increased maintenance costs.

"When you have a small group in a small area like that, it's inevitable — carpet burns, cleaning problems, etc," Day said.

Local geologist Jerry Calhoun vehemently opposed the smoking ban.

"I now know how it feels to be a second-class citizen," he said following the council's approval of the amended ordinance. "Big brother may one day come and say (there will be) no smoking anywhere, and that's what scares me. You've (City Council) made the first step. I am not happy."

TICKET: Midlander is assured of $10,000 win

from lottery officials Tuesday morning at work.

"She said I was one of the seven finalists for the drawing and that I was already guaranteed $10,000," Cast said. "Naturally I didn't believe her. I doubted it all the way until they put the news personnel on and put me on a speaker phone."

So far, besides sharing a portion with his son, Cast has entertained few thoughts of how he'll spend the remainder of the money.

"At the time, I told my son if I won I would give him his dollar back," Cast said. Cast's son, Michael, had still not heard about the winnings by late in the day.

"Actually the ticket stayed on the table a few days. I asked my wife to fill it out and mail it in," Cast said. "Now she says it's hers. I'm afraid she might have a valid point."

Cast, who seemed oddly calm at the prospect of becoming an instant millionaire, said he had indeed had an exciting day Tuesday.

"I called my wife and she was elated. She really got up in the air about it," Cast said. "We've also had a good day around here at work. They've all been real happy for me."

Some even dropped hints regarding their pressing needs — and wants.

"I've heard several suggestions of where to spend it," Cast said. "From having a barbecue brought in to new cars. It's been a fun day all around."

Cast, a 45-year Midland resident and 37-year employee of the map company, says he's never won anything before.

"This is the biggest for this humdrum life — so far," he said.

Lottery officials will send Cast, all-expenses paid, to the Aug. 20 drawing in Victoria.

The winner of the drawing will receive $1 million, while the runner-up receives $50,000. Third place pays $25,000, with two other finalists receiving $15,000 each and two $10,000 each.

This week's drawing — the ninth of the series — is scheduled for Thursday at the Austin Convention Center.

VOTE: International pressure continues to build

(From 1A)

Also, reports of horrific conditions in Serb-run detention camps in Bosnia have aroused widespread revulsion in the world community.

In Sarajevo, the besieged Bosnian capital, new fighting left 18 people dead and 172 wounded, the Bosnian government said Tuesday.

As international tensions rose over the war in what was Yugoslavia, NATO officials speaking on condition of anonymity said the allies would hold a special meeting Friday to consider contingency plans for possible use of force in connection with aid deliveries.

The agreement to allow women and children under 18 out of Sarajevo was signed by a Serbian officer and a representative of the Children's Embassy, a private aid organization. The charity said the first bus convoy would leave today.

However, previous convoys organized by the group have run into trouble. A week ago, two of 50 children being evacuated by the group were shot and killed, and nine other children were removed from a bus by Serb forces.

In the Bosnian war, vehicles clearly marked as belonging to humanitarian and international agencies have often come under fire.

The pledge to cooperate with the Security Council came from the self-styled parliament of the republic Serbs have proclaimed in Bosnia.

The document, approved in the western Bosnian town of Banja Luka, asked for U.N. guidance on what steps were needed to "avoid military intervention and the bloodshed that would accompany it."

The statement promised that Serbs, who have captured two-thirds of Bosnia, will not impede humanitarian convoys and will open detention camps for inspection. It reiterated previous Serb statements that they support an immediate end to fighting and a consensus solution.

Calls against military intervention also came from the government of Yugoslavia, now made up only of Serbia and Montenegro, which said in a statement that "there are no reasons whatsoever" for outside powers to step in.

Serbia and Serbs in Bosnia have been accused by the West of fomenting the violence in Bosnia. Serbia is already under U.N. sanctions to punish it for its role.

The United States, France, Britain and Belgium agreed Monday on the text of the Security Council resolution on using force to safeguard aid, and consultations continued Tuesday.

The measure does not specify what countries might provide the forces to safeguard aid deliveries. Nor have its authors suggested how such a task might be accomplished without risking open conflict with Serb fighters.

Bosnia's president on Tuesday estimated it would take 10,000 troops to police corridors that would be used to move aid into Bosnia-Herzegovina. Some Western military experts have put the number at about 100,000.

The threat of force alone could be discouraging combatants from blocking aid to Bosnia. In Geneva, Sylvana Foa, spokeswoman for the U.N. High Commissioner for Refugees, said overland deliveries by U.N. convoys were suddenly becoming easier.

■ Foreign minister promises to lobby for aid

DUBLIN, Ireland — Foreign Minister David Andrews on Tuesday promised to lobby for more U.N. and European Community aid to Somalia, "a land that God has forgotten."

Andrews, on a three-day visit to the Horn of Africa nation, said it was "very traumatic to see people dying before your eyes and more particularly young children."

"It is something that the world community will have to address and address with some immediacy," he said in an interview from the capital, Mogadishu, with Irish state-run RTE radio.

"Whilst the war in Bosnia-Herzegovina is an obscenity, what's happening out here — if you can have degrees of obscenity — must be a worse obscenity."

Andrews, whose fact-finding mission was organized by Irish aid organizations, said he will report to the British government, current holder of the rotating EC presidency, and to the U.N. Secretary-General.

■ Russia shows 'deep concern' over fighting

MOSCOW — Russia expressed its "deep concern" Tuesday over the Armenian-Azerbaijani fighting and urged the warring sides to cease bloodshed before the situation gets out of hand.

But clashes continued Tuesday along the Armenian-Azerbaijani border, with at least three people reported killed and dozens wounded.

The recent round of fighting began last week with both sides launching offensives and counter-offensives in the disputed enclave of Nagorno-Karabakh, a predominantly Armenian area controlled by Azerbaijan since 1923.

It later spread to the area of Artsvashen, an enclave Armenian village northeast of Nagorno-Karabakh. Armenians have succeeded in establishing a land corridor linking Armenia with Artsvashen but the village was recaptured by the Azerbaijanis on Saturday.

Armenia, which considers Artsvashen and its surroundings to be its own territory, called the Azerbaijani attack aggression and appealed to other members of the Commonwealth of Independent States for help.

A Russian Foreign Ministry spokesman, Alexander Rozanov, said Russia was deeply concerned over the escalation of fighting.

"The confrontation has reached an extremely dangerous line, and if the sides cross it, they risk losing control over the situation," he said in a statement.

■ Masked Palestinians shoot, kill fellow Arab

JERUSALEM — Masked Palestinians in the occupied Gaza Strip shot to death a fellow Arab Tuesday who was suspected of collaboration with the Israeli authorities.

Abdel Wahab Ghattas, 49, of Deir El-Balah was shot in his car while driving to work in the morning, the army reported. Another man riding with him was shot in the legs, Arab sources said.

An enforcement squad affiliated with the PLO's mainstream Fatah wing claimed responsibility for the killing, Arab reports said.

Ghattas used his connections with Israeli authorities to run a business in which he helped Palestinians obtain permits to visit Jordan and Egypt, the reports said.

Ghattas' death brings to 613 the number of Palestinians killed by fellow Arabs during the 4½-year uprising against Israeli rule in the occupied territories. Most of the victims have been accused of collaboration with Israel.

Another 946 Palestinians have been killed by Israeli soldiers or civilians since the uprising began and 98 Israelis have died in the violence.

■ Searchers find body of German mountaineer

ANNECY, France — Searchers found the body of a German mountaineer Tuesday as officials, prompted by a surge in deaths, warned climbers in the French Alps to take extra care this year.

Helicopters flying over the Alps near Chamonix found the body of Adelheid Hillmaier, 25, of Garmish-Parten-Kirchen, Germany, two days after she was swept away by a storm-triggered avalanche.

Hers was the latest in a series of deaths blamed on unstable weather this summer, aggravated by inexperienced climbers. At least 19 alpinists died in July, compared to six in the same month last year.

Upper Savoy Prefect Jean-Paul Frouin issued a communique warning climbers to contact professional guides and police before attempting an assault of the region's peaks.

They were advised be aware of the latest weather reports in the region, not to climb alone, to wear a helmet and to leave a planned route of their climb with authorities.

■ Fighting erupts between troops, Unita rebels

LUANDA, Angola — Authorities here said Tuesday that fierce fighting had broken out between Angolan government troops and supporters of the rebel movement Unita. Skirmishes in the northern province of Malanje were said to be the most violent incidents to occur here since the two sides signed a cease-fire accord 20 months ago.

Tension climbed across the country as officials of the government and UNITA considered ways to deal with what appears to be a politically explosive situation since it comes less than six weeks before Angola's first multi-party elections.

"This is a very serious situation and we're concerned about it because it could spread to other parts of the country," Venacio De Moura, the ruling party's vice minister for foreign affairs, said in an interview Tuesday.

Russia shows off its hottest planes

ZHUKOVSKY, Russia (AP) — Russia displayed its most advanced jet fighters, bombers and anti-aircraft missiles at a formerly secret base outside Moscow on Tuesday in a bid to attract foreign buyers.

The commercial air show, running Tuesday through Sunday, marked the first time Westerners could visit Zhukovsky flight center, where top Soviet pilots tested their planes.

It also was the first time Western diplomats and businessmen could get an up-close view of Russia's newest and deadliest aircraft, including the sleek, snow-white Tu-160 Blackjack intercontinental bomber, the Soviet answer to America's B-1.

Russia is pushing arms sales abroad to bring in foreign currency and keep its key defense plants operating, even as it tries to convert some military factories to civilian production.

Organizers of next month's Farnborough International '92 show southwest of London, a major showcase for the aviation industry, said in London on Tuesday that the Russians are quadrupling the former Soviet presence there. It will be Russia's biggest display of military and civilian aircraft at a Western air show.

Russia reportedly agreed this year to sell 20 Sukhoi-27 fighters to China for an undisclosed price. Other possible buyers include India, Iran, North Korea and Arab states.

Hundreds of foreigners roamed the Zhukovsky center, questioning factory representatives and pilots. No one would talk about buying.

"Buying? Who says I'm buying?" said a middle-age North Korean wearing a lapel pin of his country's leader, Kim Il Sung.

Russian salespeople were also tight-lipped.

Boris Levonovich, the barrel-chested deputy chief of the Tupolev aircraft factory, showed off the Tu-22M bomber, known in the West as the Backfire.

"We'd like to sell it. ... But that's all I'll say," he said.

Mikhail Shimonayev, an engineer from the Ilyushin aircraft factory, said China and India expressed interest in the Il-102, an experimental attack jet never shown publicly before. The asking price is $20 million, he said.

Also shown was the latest version of the SAM-300 ground-to-air missile battery, billed as Russia's equivalent of the Patriot missile used in the Gulf War. Engineer Alexander Ryazanov said its price would be "no more than the $60-100 million that the Patriot costs, even though ours is better."

Vice President Alexander Rutskoi lifted his aviator sunglasses to peer at the new MiG-31 fighter and the Buran space shuttle.

He climbed into the cockpit of a camouflage-painted Sukhoi-25, the anti-tank plane he flew as a combat pilot in Afghanistan. Then he told reporters Russia must find money to keep improving its military technology.

The show did not impress everyone. Aircraft engineer Gennady, who refused to give his last name because regulations bar him from talking to foreigners, said he was appalled by the money spent on defense.

Mystery of POWs deserves an answer

Eugene B. "Red" McDaniel may get his wish after all. And if he does, the final chapter on the Vietnam War may be written.

McDaniel, a retired U.S. Navy captain and former prisoner-of-war in Vietnam's infamous prison camp called "The Hanoi Hilton," was in Midland in late July encouraging support for Americans he says are still held in Southeast Asia.

At that time, McDaniel addressed the POW issue and what he claims is a government coverup of the prisoners left behind at the end of the Vietnam War and said, "I think we have an opportunity to get it resolved now if the American people stand up.

"The White House is stone-walling. They are unwilling to declassify that information and bring those men home. Until the American people demand that, it won't happen," McDaniel added.

On Tuesday, former independent presidential candidate Ross Perot testified before the Senate Select Committee on POW-MIA Affairs that, "There is no question in my mind we left men behind and I think I can prove it."

Perot, who abruptly dropped out of the presidential race last month, has long been an activist for the alleged POWs.

Sen. John F. Kerry's committee is trying to unravel the POW-MIA mystery. Persistent reports of American prisoners have kept interest in the issue alive and even Kerry says, "This is a fascinating untold story. This thing has consumed American politics for 20 years."

The senator also says that the sheer number of live sightings — more than 1,500 since the war's end in 1973 — indicates that hundreds of Americans may have been left behind.

Adding fuel to the POW fire is a report of an offer by the Vietnamese to exchange 57 prisoners for $4 billion in aid. The offer reportedly was made to the Reagan administration.

But Kerry isn't going to draw conclusions until his committee's process is complete.

That's wise. There are too many unanswered questions at this point to do that.

If there is information anywhere in the government about American prisoners of war now being held or who were held following the Vietnam War, that information should be ferreted out and given in full to the American people. The POW ball is in Sen. Kerry's court. We trust his committee will fully investigate this matter and reveal its findings.

Truman had insight on limits

A professor of history at Ohio University and a fellow at the Woodrow Wilson International Center for Scholars in Washington, Alonzo L. Hamby has been poking around Harry Truman's papers during the course of writing a biography of the 33rd president. They show Truman to be candid, shrewd and, in the case of a 1947 memo, prescient.

Forty-five years ago, Congress was engaged in debate over a proposed amendment to the U.S. Constitution that would limit presidents to two four-year terms. The proposal was approved and sent to the states, where it was ratified in 1951 as the 22nd Amendment.

During the 1947 debate on Capitol Hill, Truman jotted down some thoughts on the amendment, which Professor Hamby related in a recent article in The Wall Street Journal. The president's thoughts are particularly appropriate since, as columnist David S. Broder points out . . ., voters in 15 states will decide on term-limit initiatives this fall.

Noting that the Congress had passed the presidential-term limitation amendment, Truman wrote that it also should have covered both the Senate and House. He believed a two-term limit for Congress would "prevent the fossilization of the key committees" and allow the country "to vote into or out of power a president, a legislative majority and one-third of the Senate at every general election."

There, in a nutshell, is one of the reasons why the idea of term limits has caught fire across the country. Harry Truman saw the problem clearly more than 40 years ago. Not everyone is blessed with his insight.

Mideast politics hold attention

The cries of Iraqi President Saddam Hussein's government claiming victory in the Persian Gulf War two years ago are a nagging reminder that the business of ousting him was left undone.

It is a sore point, but one that must be endured during this anniversary of Iraq's invasion of Kuwait.

But isn't there a sense of deja vu here? President Carter had to undergo the humiliation of taunts by Iran as American hostages were held during his re-election bid.

Now, President Bush is put in the position of having to undergo the taunts of Saddam as elections loom.

Could it be that Saddam noted the plight of Carter and is trying a repeat? Trying to play a little American politics in this presidential election year?

More ominous is the Iraqi government continuing to call Kuwait its "19th province," claiming that the goal of capturing Kuwait remains alive.

Meanwhile, reports are that Iran is quietly amassing ballistic missiles that can hit targets as far away as Israel.

Mideast politics is something that will dominate world concerns whoever is elected president of the United States — that is the overarching reality to the Saddam mess.

WASHINGTON — A surprise visit by two FBI agents flicked the scab off an old wound for Yvonne Bushyhead — and in the process raised fresh questions about the bureau's own behavior.

Anderson

Bushyhead was actively involved in the defense of Leonard Peltier, a former Native American leader who is serving two consecutive life sentences at the federal penitentiary in Leavenworth, Kan., for the murder of two FBI agents. On June 10, Bushyhead revisited the case in a far more personal manner.

She had been staying with friends at their home in Tahlequah, Okla., when she received a surprise visit from two FBI agents. When Bushyhead arrived home early in the evening, she was told by her hosts that FBI agents were waiting to speak to her. Bushyhead was convinced it was a joke until she saw the agents seated on the living room couches. When she further realized that one of the agents was William Wood, the mood in the home turned grim.

Wood was one of two agents who participated in a controversial interrogation of an Indian woman, Myrtle Poor Bear, which led to Peltier's extradition to the United States from Canada in 1976. Those affidavits used to extradite Peltier have since been discredited. Moreover, Poor Bear claimed during Peltier's trial that Wood and his partner threatened her during the interrogation. Peltier's trial judge wouldn't permit her allegations to be heard by the jury.

Peltier was convicted of killing FBI agents Ronald Williams and Jack Coler in June 1975 on the Pine Ridge Indian Reservation in South Dakota. But since his sentencing, Peltier's case has sparked international attention as evidence mounts that there are gaping holes, at least suggesting government mishandling of the case.

Amnesty International lists Peltier as a political prisoner, and in Europe, at least 20 million people have signed petitions asking for his freedom. Robert Redford recently produced a documentary, "Incident at Oglala," and it is garnering even more publicity for Peltier.

Peltier does not deny being present at a shootout that preceded the officers' death. He does deny, however, being the man who shot them at close range, and his supporters believe they can prove it. Before Peltier was brought to trial, two other suspects — whom Peltier would have been tried with had he not fled the country — were acquitted on grounds of self-defense. Even the judge who dismissed one of Peltier's appeals believes the government shares culpability for the incident.

"The United States government must share responsibility with the Native Americans for the (Pine Ridge) firefight," wrote U.S. Appeals Court Judge Gerald Heaney in 1986.

Flooded with these memories, Yvonne Bushyhead found herself sitting face to face with Wood, whom many accuse of engineering Peltier's extradition to the United States. Now he was in her living room seeking information.

Agent Wood told her he had come all the way from his home office in South Dakota to Talequah, Okla., just to warn her of threats against her life. But while the agents declined to reveal to Bushyhead just who was leveling such threats or why, their next round of questions seemed to Bushyhead to betray the true agenda.

The agents told her they thought Peltier was carrying on illegal activities from prison. Did she know anything about them? She answered no. Then they asked if Peltier ever incriminated himself during any of the numerous conversations they had in prison. Again she answered no.

Military intervention is Bosnia's only hope

There is no sure solution to the Bosnian horror, short of massive Western military intervention.

Even that might not work, or work soon enough. So my quarrel with President Bush — and especially with European leaders and U.N. officials — is not their failure to find a magic formula. It is their unwillingness to do what they can that might lessen, or perhaps even end the bloodshed.

Gelb

Within a week or two, they could and should take all or most of the following steps:

■ Insist on immediate inspection of all detention camps (Serbian, Croatian and Muslim). Red Cross officials are going about this more slowly than reporters and have nothing to back them up. If the parties deny or delay access or the camps turn out to be torture pits, the U.N. should authorize NATO to dispatch commando teams to rescue the prisoners and ferry them to safety.

■ Provide arms to Bosnian Muslims. This would give them a better chance to defend themselves.

■ Station troops outside Serbia's borders to enforce U.N. economic sanctions against Serbia. This embattled country still carries on at least 50 percent of its prewar trade.

■ Threaten air strikes against military targets in Serbia itself. This will put at immediate risk Serbia's one remaining national asset — its military superiority in heavy arms, aircraft and arms factories. If the Serbs show no compromise, start by hitting bridges and roads from Serbia to Bosnia, thereby interrupting vital supplies to Bosnian Serbs.

■ Call upon the U.N. to establish a special commission right away to investigate war crimes under World War II Nuremberg rules. The evolving U.N. Security Council resolution on this seems to lack specificity and urgency. The commission should be empowered to hear evidence and issue arrest warrants. War criminals should know that from that day on, they will never be able to step foot outside their countries without fear of trial.

■ Move up the starting date for the European Community-U.N. peace conference in London set for late August — and keep the negotiators at the table. As of now, they will meet for just three days, and surely accomplish nothing. The conferees should focus not on a cease-fire, which would only perpetuate Serb conquests, but on establishing the territorial boundaries of Bosnia, Serbia and Croatia, the creation of semi-autonomous "ethnic" regions within Bosnia and the full return of refugees to Bosnia.

Instead of showing imagination and political courage along these lines, the leaders of the Western world have been staging a Kabuki play of illusions.

They endlessly rehearse the history and intractability of Balkan bloodlettings, as if this justified virtual inaction today.

They continually stress their humanitarian relief efforts both to quiet public outrage and to hide the fact that they are simply feeding the victims and doing little to prevent their being driven from their homes or killed.

They publicly warn the Serbs, but in fact maneuver for surrender by Bosnian Muslims, hoping the whole problem then will fade away.

U.N. relief forces in Sarajevo now admit they knew of the detention centers a month ago, but did not think it was their job to report the matter to higher-ups. U.N. refugee officials in New York say they did nothing with their knowledge of the camps because that was the Red Cross's job.

President Bush speaks of the "horror" of the camps, but makes no commitment to eliminate them. He is willing now to use force to protect the U.N. relief effort in Bosnia, but West European leaders reject even that.

None of them yet will consider actually protecting the Bosnian Muslims. Doing so, they insist, will lead only to a quagmire — as if they would lose all control over their actions once they dropped bombs on a Serbian airfield or sent commandos to rescue death camp victims.

These are dodges and excuses, not deeds and arguments worthy of leaders struggling with human catastrophe. These world leaders are telling us they might send an armored car to guard a loaf of bread, but will take no risks to stop a slaughter right outside their bedroom windows. Have they no humanity, no sense of all they might do short of massive military intervention, no vision of the international consequences?

Swing vote could splash on those at beach

MARTHA'S VINEYARD — They never get their names in the newspapers. They never appear on television. They don't even get polled.

And yet in the summertime they are the swing voters who could affect a presidential election.

Buchwald

Who are these people? They are the ones you find stretched out on American beaches, bathed in suntan oil, lying on their stomachs or on their backs, saying little, but constantly thinking about the mess in Washington. One day last week I joined them at the Black Doberman Beach.

"A penny for your thoughts?" I asked a gentleman lying on his side reading Computer Digest.

He looked up and said, "I'm mad as hell and I'm not going to take it any more."

"Are you mad at the economy?"

"No, I'm mad at what they did to the ozone. Years ago Americans were protected from the sun. Now sunbathing has been deregulated and it's everyone for himself — and sunscreen manufacturers are laughing all the way to the bank."

"Which of the two presidential candidates do you think would do more to save the ozone?"

"Neither. They'll tell you that the ozone is their first priority, but they have already taken money from the refrigerator lobbyists to do nothing."

I found an extremely attractive woman lying face down with her bathing suit straps untied.

"What do you want from your government?" I asked her.

"A man," she said. "Someone I can call my own."

"I take it then that you are not married."

"If I was married, I wouldn't have put all my money into this bathing suit."

"Why should the government pay for your bathing suit?"

"Because there don't seem to be many good men around, and if they don't find guys for the women in this country we'll wind up having babies without getting married, and that would make Dan Quayle sick to his stomach."

The next person I talked to was sitting in a beach chair. She was staring out to sea.

I said, "I'm a pundit trying to grasp the mood of this country, and I would like to ask you what you consider the biggest problem the country faces today."

"Sexual harassment."

"What kind?"

"People coming up to you on the beach and asking you a bunch of dumb questions about politics."

It was time to move on. I wandered over to two bathers who were jumping up and down as the waves roared in.

A young man of college age was splashing his girl with water. "Are you two going to vote?" I asked.

"I am," the boy replied, diving under the water.

"Me, too," the girl squealed.

"Do you mind telling me for whom?"

"Ross Perot," the boy said.

"He's out of the race. He quit in disgrace a month ago," I told them.

"Oh, no," the girl cried. "If I didn't need a ride back to town, I think I'd walk straight into the ocean and never return."

Chinese issue major report on its prisons

BEIJING (NYT) — The Chinese government sought Tuesday to rebut Western criticisms by issuing a major report on conditions in Chinese prisons. But it painted such a glowing portrait of prison life that skeptics are unlikely to be convinced.

The white paper, "Criminal Reform in China," is part of a broad effort by the authorities to counter allegations of torture, hunger and slave labor in what critics call China's "gulag." The report includes numerous statistics, but its tone is so far removed from what former prisoners have said that it is unclear how reliable the figures are.

"After the founding of the People's Republic, the people's government established a new kind of socialist prison, where the prisoners are regarded as human beings, where their dignity is respected, their personal safety is insured and they receive fully humane treatment," the report declared.

It contrasted these conditions with prisons before the 1949 revolution. In those days, it said, Americans and Chinese agents together "savagely tortured and secretly murdered revolutionaries."

China's huge prison network is one of the country's great mysteries. There is little comprehensive information and foreigners are allowed to visit only model institutions, like Beijing No. 1 Prison.

In such visits, some prisoners try so hard to please the authorities that they insist to reporters that they do not want to leave when their sentences expire.

In fact, former prisoners interviewed privately have almost unanimously reported that conditions are brutal, with beatings and other torture a way of life.

Almost all have said that food is awful and insufficient, and that some favorite felons known as "cell bosses" are allowed to abuse others in any way they want.

Prison conditions have become an issue in U.S.-Chinese relations, both because of U.S. concerns about human rights violations of political prisoners and because of evidence that products made by Chinese prisoners are being illegally exported to the United States.

The report issued Tuesday said that 90 percent of the prison population participates in labor.

But it said the total value of prison goods in 1990 was about $500 million, less than one-tenth of 1 percent of the nation's total economic output.

"Some news reports are very distorted and turn black into white," said Zhao Shaohua, an official of the State Council Information Office, which edited the 26-page white paper. "We want to use this report so that the world can understand our legal work."

The State Council issued a similar white paper, on human rights, a year ago. Most diplomats regard such materials as important less in the arguments they make than in the implication that such issues are now open for discussion and that China will debate and defend its human rights record.

The human rights report at least acknowledged lapses in some areas, while the report on prisons Tuesday moved from one glowing high note to the next.

One of the few indications that anything goes wrong is the statement that in 1990 and 1991 a total of 24 wardens and guards were themselves imprisoned for beating up detainees.

In another public relations gesture, a Chinese-backed magazine in Hong Kong recently published photos of prominent dissidents smiling in their prison cells.

Government stops trading in city after riots

BEIJING (AP) — Thousands of people lined up for a chance to buy coveted stocks in the southern boom town of Shenzhen on Tuesday, a day after frustrated would-be investors rioted and burned vehicles.

The city government suspended afternoon trading on the Shenzhen stock exchange because brokerages were so busy selling application forms to buy shares.

Hundreds of riot police stood by as thousands of people waited outside more than 300 offices issuing the applications. Only minor scuffles broke out.

On Monday rioting began when stock offices ran out of the forms, and some frustrated investors claimed that corrupt officials were hoarding them.

Police used truncheons, tear gas, rubber bullets and water cannon to break up demonstrations. At least 10 people, some of them policemen, were injured, several police vehicles were burned and three people were arrested, according to Hong Kong news reports.

The government-run Beijing Evening News confirmed Tuesday that vehicles were burned and overturned, but said there were no deaths or serious injuries. Shenzhen television also showed scenes of cars with smashed windows and a hole in a window of the McDonald's restaurant.

Some protesters reportedly chanted "down with corruption" and waved large banners. The mob finally disbursed late Monday after officials promised to distribute more share applications Tuesday.

The violence capped three days of chaos as hundreds of thousands of people —1 million according to one official account — arrived in hopes of a chance at buying shares in 14 newly listed companies

They include firms involved in electronics, property, transport and trading. But many people waiting for applications knew little about the companies, or even their names. Some said they planned to resell the application forms, which were fetching up to $75 Tuesday — four times the original price and twice the average monthly salary.

Monday's rioting could undermine the position of reformers in China's Communist government, who have pushed for rapid economic liberalization — including the establishment of stock markets, which were banned for decades. Shenzhen, a "special economic zone" bordering Hong Kong, has been a leading laboratory for the country's experiments with capitalism.

The rioting also comes as Chinese leaders are preparing for a crucial party meeting this fall that will map out economic policy for the 1990s.

Stocks are in high demand because of their novelty, and because there are also few other investment options. Economists estimate that Chinese save as much as 43 percent of their salaries, and as much as $183 billion in savings are languishing in low-interest bank accounts.

The few dozen issues traded on embryonic stock markets in Shenzhen and Shanghai have increased sharply in value, giving the impression that stock prices only go up and that the shares are quick tickets to wealth.

One young woman waiting in line Tuesday confessed that she knew nothing about stocks.

But the government has moved slowly in allowing companies to list, resulting in a frenzy each time a new issue becomes available.

Chinese police use belts and batons to control a crowd waiting to obtain applications to purchase stocks at the Shezhen Stock Exchange Tuesday. Mobs rioted late Monday, following claims that corrupt officials were hoarding applications.

Wiesel considers request to probe camps

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — Nobel laureate Elie Wiesel said Tuesday he would consider a Yugoslav offer to investigate Serbian-run prison camps, but demanded complete freedom for his team.

Yugoslavia's president, Dobrica Cosic, asked the United Nations to send a commission of prominent figures led by Wiesel to investigate the camps. Muslim and Croats claim Serb guards have tortured and killed prisoners, but Cosic denied abuses have occurred and called the reports a pretext for military intervention.

"What is happening there now is blasphemy, unforgiveable," Wiesel told The Associated Press in a telephone interview in New York.

"If asked to go and if I feel I can contribute, at least to save one human life, I would go anywhere," said Wiesel, a Holocaust survivor and author. "We have to be able to bear witness to what is happening in the camps."

The U.N. Security Council is expected to vote Thursday to authorize the use of military force to protect deliveries of humanitarian assistance within Bosnia-Herzegovina, where Serbian nationalists have seized territory and driven non-Serbs from their homes.

Another resolution demands access to detention camps and calls for a probe of war crimes, said council President Li Daoyu, the Chinese ambassador.

Amendments were added Tuesday to specifically condemn "ethnic cleansing" and stress the inviolability of the borders of Bosnia-Herzegovina. A proposal by Islamic countries to lift the arms embargo against Bosnia was defeated.

Some diplomats said the vote would be unanimous, but others suggested China and Zimbabwe could abstain. Diplomats from the two countries had no comment.

Quayle criticizes bar association for honoring Anita Hill

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — Vice President Dan Quayle on Tuesday denounced an American Bar Association award to law professor Anita Hill, saying the group saw her as "a heroine because she led the attack against a man who happens to be conservative and black."

ABA officials, reacting to Quayle's comments, said the award was not political but honored Hill's courage in bringing sexual harassment allegations against Clarence Thomas at his Supreme Court confirmation hearings last year.

The vice president has kept up a running battle with the ABA since he went before its convention a year ago in Atlanta and charged that too many lawyers and too many law students were burdening the American economy.

Quayle, in California on a three-day campaign swing, sought a return engagement at this week's ABA convention in San Francisco but was unable to agree with the lawyers on a time slot or ground rules for his speech.

So instead, Quayle fired his shot at the ABA from Sacramento.

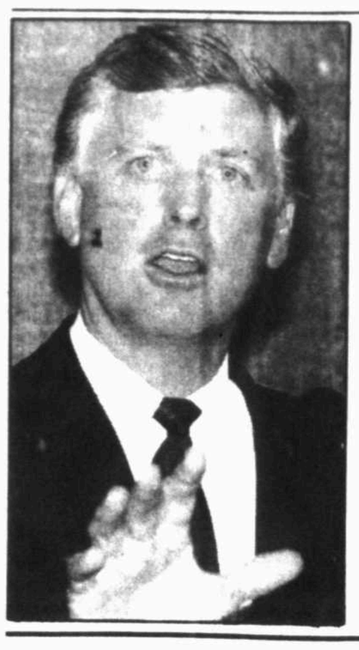

■ More national news/5B

The award was presented to Hill by the ABA's Commission on Women in the Profession. Quayle aimed his criticism more broadly at the association and its leadership, taking a slap at outgoing ABA President Talbot D'Alemberte for his blunt criticism of the Bush administration's crime-fighting record.

"Most Americans ... believed Clarence Thomas and not Anita Hill," Quayle said. "That doesn't matter to the ABA."

"To them, she is a heroine because she led the attack against a man who happened to be conservative and black — a combination that makes liberals fly into a rage," Quayle told the Christian Coalition of California, a group founded by Pat Robertson.

"And who did they choose to present this award to the liberals heroine for the 1990s? None other than her fellow lawyer, Mrs. Hillary Clinton," Quayle said to hisses from his 250 listeners. He said the ABA leaders were "just one more special interest group of the Democratic Party. We now know why Bill Clinton can never support legal reform."

'Most Americans ... believed Clarence Thomas and not Anita Hill. That doesn't matter to the ABA. To them, she is a heroine because she led the attack against a man who happened to be conservative and black — a combination that makes liberals fly into a rage.'

—Dan Quayle

D'Alemberte last week sharply criticized a Bush administration crime proposal, charging that it was using misguided "get tough edicts" to try to solve the drug problem and ignoring poverty and other social problems that drive poor people to break the law.

D'Alemberte, in a statement, said, "The vice president believes that the business of our justice system is business. We believe ... (it) is justice and we believe that justice should be available not just to the rich but to all Americans."

Reacting to Quayle's allegations, Jamienne Studley, a San Francisco lawyer and member of the Commission on Women in the Profession, said the "award to Anita Hill was a recognition of courage not politics."

"The commission believes the 85 percent of women lawyers who reported that they have personally experienced some form of unwanted sexual advances," she said. "We applaud and recognize Anita Hill's courage, dignity and continuing forcefulness in bringing the issue to the nation's attention."

ABA president-elect Michael McWilliams of Baltimore said: "It's a shame that the vice president can't be more concerned with improving the judicial system like we had urged him to do and tried to work with him. Those kinds of statements simply accomplish nothing."

Quayle, at campaign stops here and in Bakersfield, also ridiculed the Democrats fiscal proposals. "If they're moderates, I'm a world champion speller," said Quayle, tweaking his own recent trouble with the word potato.

George Stephanopoulos, the Clinton communications director, fired back that "the president has no economic plan, all he can do is send Dan Quayle out to be his attack puppy."

Quayle campaigned with GOP Senate candidate Bruce Herschensohn, who is trailing Rep. Barbara Boxer, D-Calif., by 18 points in a race for one of the state's Senate races.

Grand jury indicts police sergeant on charge of misdemeanor assault

N.Y. Times News Service

NEW YORK — A Brooklyn police sergeant was charged Tuesday with beating a community leader who is a member of the sergeant's precinct community council. He was also charged with assaulting one of the woman's sons.

A Brooklyn grand jury indicted the sergeant, Peter Viola, of the 81st Precinct in Bedford-Stuyvesant, on a charge of misdemeanor assault, accusing him of punching the council member, Ann B. Dodds, in the forehead.

It also charged him with assault in the second degree, a felony, accusing him of hitting her son repeatedly with his nightstick as the son lay on the ground face down in handcuffs. The felony charge carries a maximum prison term of two-and-a-third to seven years.

The case struck a nerve in the neighborhood, which has hailed Mrs. Dodds, the chairwoman of Community School Board 16, as a model citizen and a driving force behind dozens of neighborhood improvements.

The day after the incident, City Councilwoman Annette Robinson and about two dozen other community leaders pressed police officials for action in the case, and Rep. Edolphus Towns, D-N.Y.,, said the events described by Mrs. Dodds were disturbing.

But it also galvanized support behind Viola from scores of police officers who depicted him as a victim in his own right, someone who had tried to break up a dispute at Mrs. Dodds' home between two of her sons and found himself in the center of an unruly domestic dispute.

His indictment represents one of the few times that an officer charged before the Civilian Complaint Review Board has been indicted and arrested. Typically, even in the most extreme cases, the Civilian Complaint Review Board, which received complaints against Viola from the Dodds family as well as from several witnesses, recommends discipline or placing an officer on modified duty.

However, in this incident, Brooklyn District Attorney Charles J. Hynes immediately sent investigators to the neighborhood, which led to a joint investigation with the complaint review board.

Thus, many officers and police union officials immediately characterized the arrest as a "political" gesture by Hynes that was intended to assuage a outraged community. Saying that Hynes had investigators interviewing witnesses the morning after the incident, which occurred on July 23, one official commented that Hynes had reacted with "unprecedented, blazing speed."

"The arrest is just going to send the cops in Brooklyn a wrong message," said Joseph V. Toal, president of the Sergeants' Benevolent Association. "The message that the cops are getting is that the safest thing to do is to do nothing. If I was out there, I'd think twice of taking any police action."

Kathleen Healy, a spokeswoman for Hynes said: "It is not unusual for the Brooklyn District Attorney to move quickly. The case was presented professionally and methodically by a team of assistant district attorneys."

Wanda Lucibella, who is in charge of the corruption unit in Hynes's office, said the day after the incident that "we start our investigations as soon as we find out about the incident and that's what we did here."

Tuesday, Mrs. Dodds said, "This was what the community had hoped for. This is a community issue. It just so happened that it happened to Annie Dodds." She added: "The sergeant was the one that did the assaulting. How they deal with the other officers, that would be up to the D.A."

Tyrese Daniels, 29, one of Mrs. Dodd's sons, said: "If he wasn't indicted, anything could have happened. Young people out here, they're thinking, 'If they're beating her up like that, imagine what happens when they get to whooping on me.'"

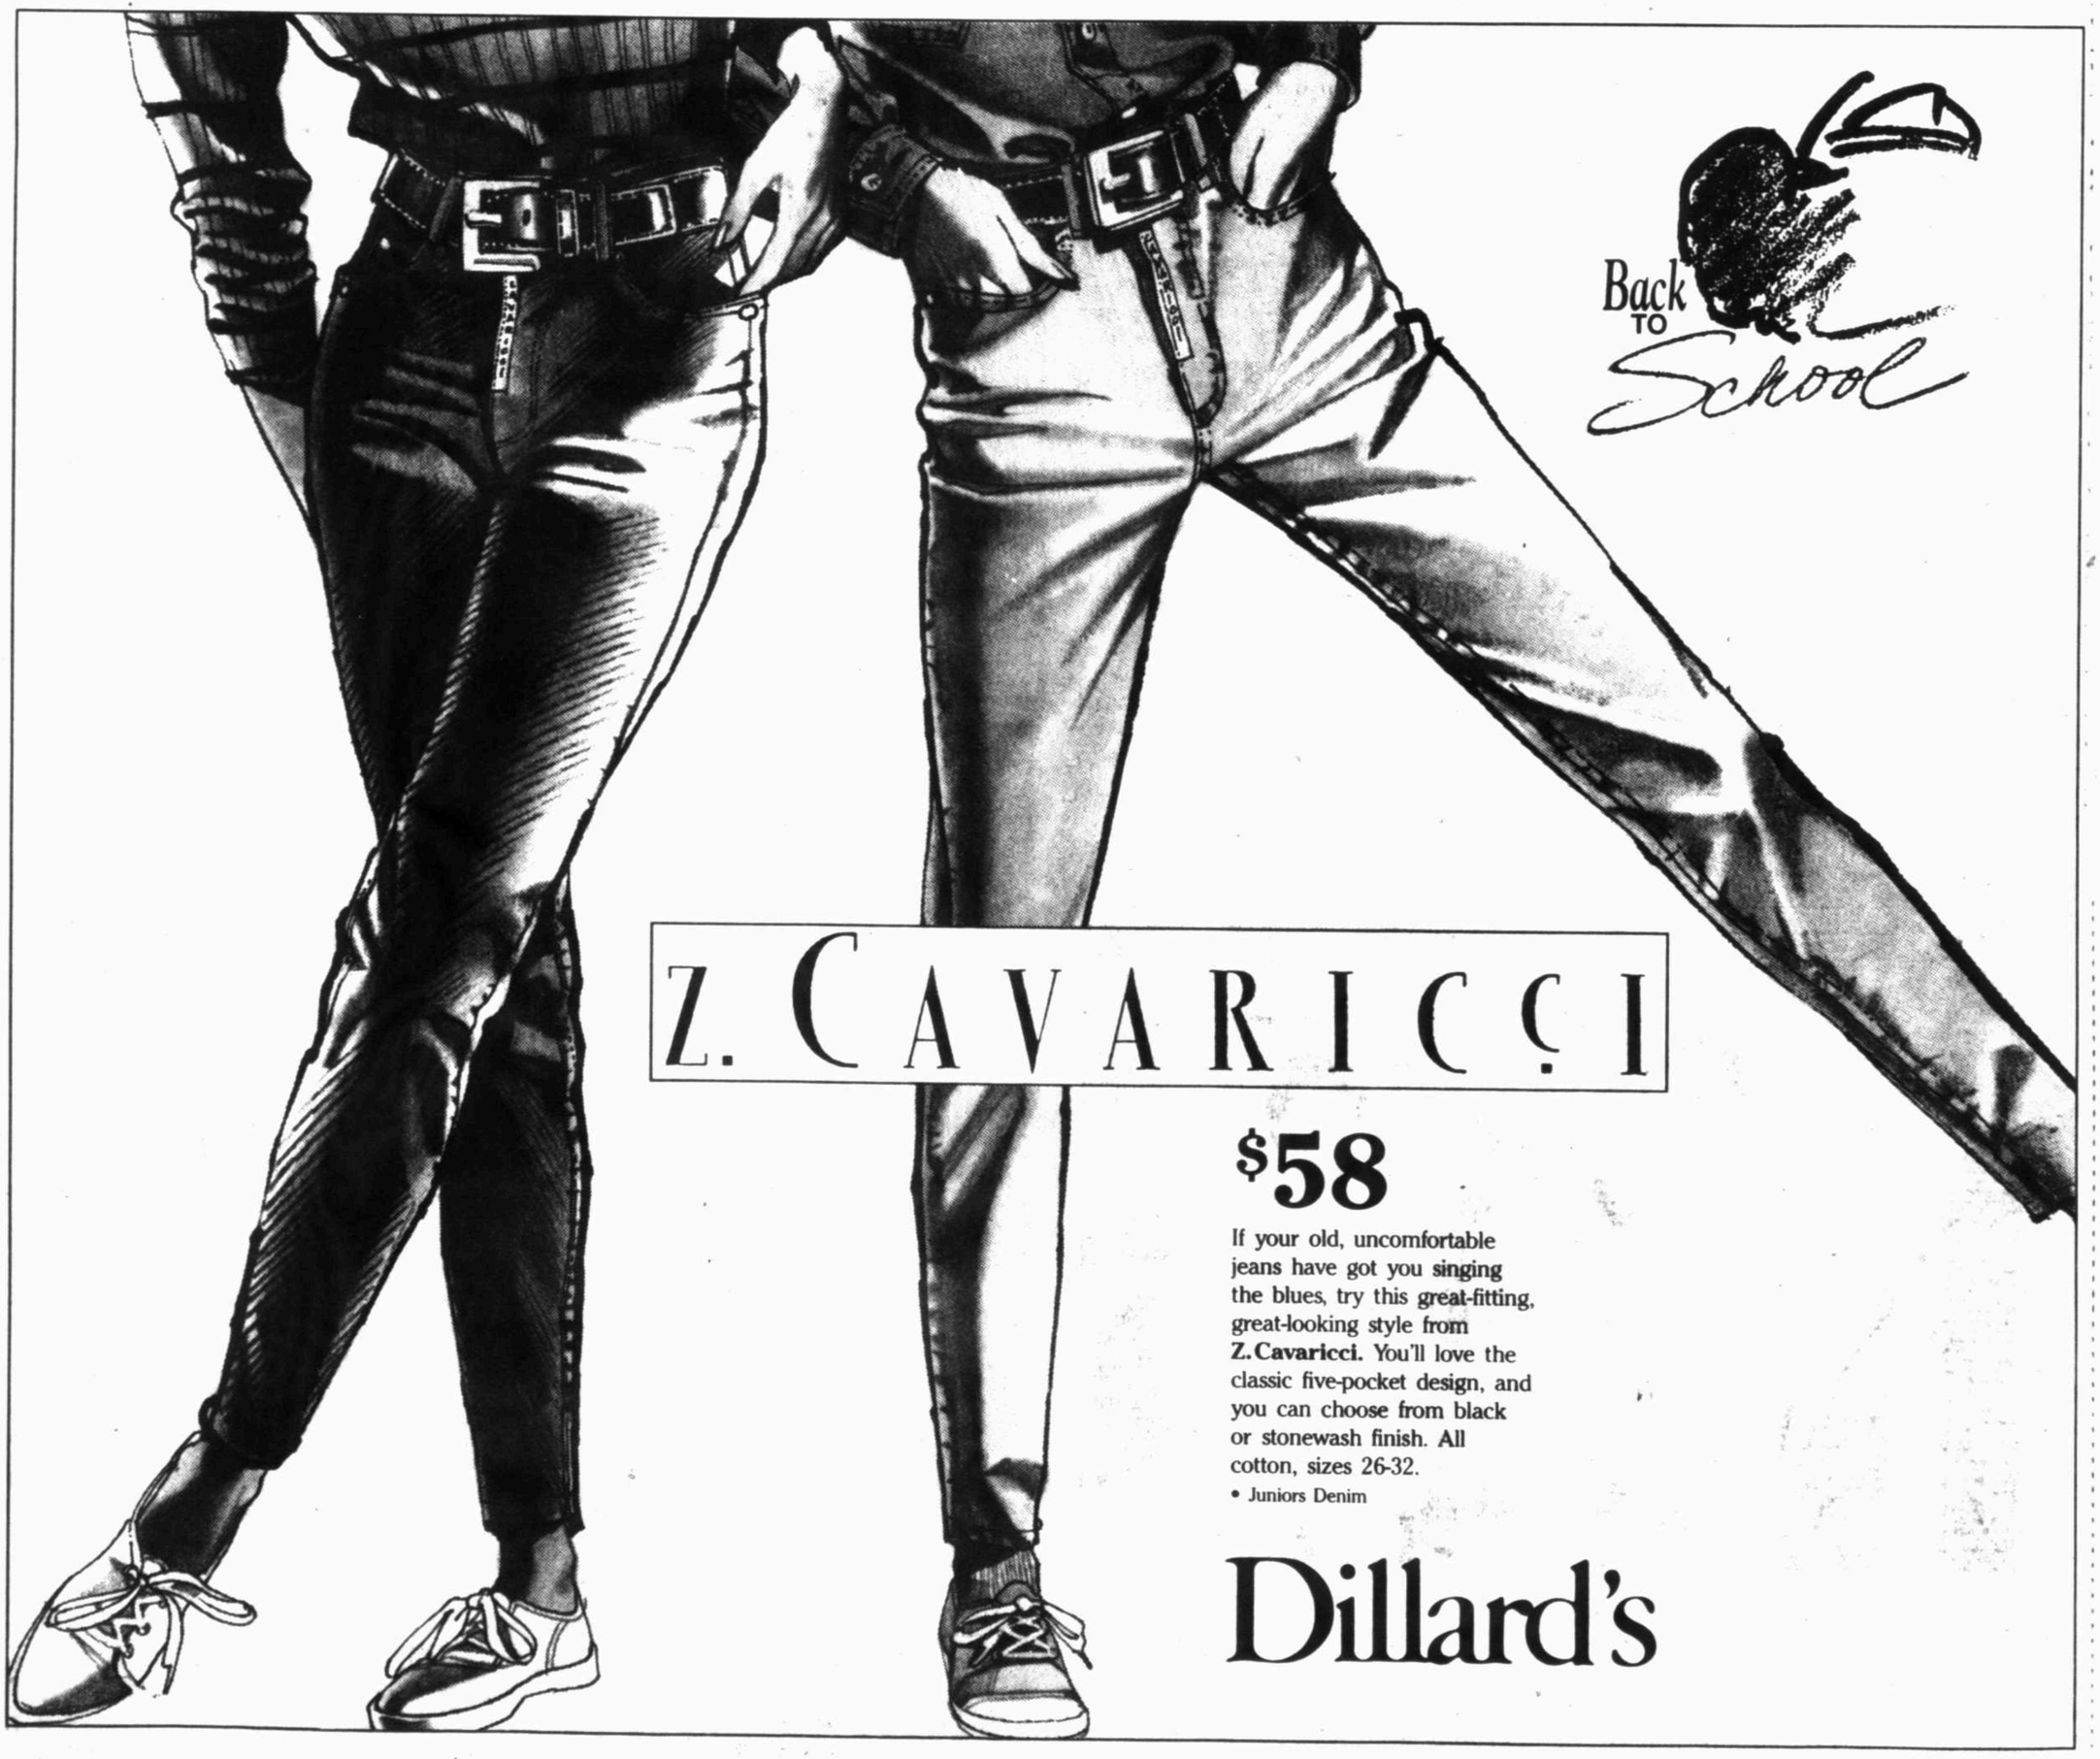

But Phil Caruso, president of the Patrolmen's Benevolent Association, called the indictment "outrageous" and Viola a "sacrificial pawn."

"Family disputes are the toughest situations to deal with," he said. "The people who call you turn on you because they now feel you're invading their privacy and they want you to come in and without using force, get rid of culprits and do it in immaculate fashion. Nightsticks are not Tootsie Rolls. Officers do have the right to use force to restrain someone who is violent."

The incident began after Mrs. Dodds called the police for help when one of her sons, Harold Dodds, 34, began fighting with another son, Daniels, 29. Viola, an 11-year veteran, was one of several officers to respond.

Mrs. Dodds said Viola and four officers from the 81st Precinct flipped Dodds over the top of a small iron fence in front of her house during a scuffle and that when she tried to read the sergeant's badge number, he punched her in the forehead. When Daniels tried to take a picture, Mrs. Dodds said that the sergeant also struck him.

But Assistant Chief John J. Hill, commanding officer of Brooklyn Borough North, said after the incident that when Viola and the other officers arrived at the scene, they found Daniels holding a metal pipe.

Painter's budget proposal exceeds limit

■ If sheriff's proposed budget for 1993 is approved, it would result in tax increase, Seltzer says.

By Ed Todd
Staff writer

Midland County Sheriff Gary Painter Tuesday proposed a $6.23 million budget for 1993, exceeding by 6 percent the $5.88 million limit set Monday by the Commissioners' Court.

Painter was admonished by County Judge Charles W. "Bro" Seltzer, who pleaded for fiscal responsibility.

"Be a manager. 'Manage those assets; manage those people ... based on the money that you are given," Seltzer said.

The sheriff, who was encouraged by the five commissioners to keep non-salary expenses for fiscal 1993 at $925,045, presented an operating budget of $1.27 million for the two county jails and his Operations Division and administration.

Salaries and fringe benefits account for about $4.95 million of the sheriff's force of more than 150 deputies and other staffers, including clerks and cooks.

Painter, who complained that the court's budgetary restraints were denying him "adequate funding," said that those limits were "preventing me from doing the job I was elected to do" by cutting into his peace-keeping duties.

"You cannot properly operate the Sheriff's Department and the jails" on $925,045, Painter told Seltzer and commissioners Durward Wright, Guy McCrary, Louisa Valencia and Win Brown.

"We are the experts (on sheriff's office management), based on past knowledge, past experiences," Painter said after the 1¼-hour session, which Seltzer characterized as "gentlemanly."

Based on the court's proposed $5.88 million budget, Painter would have control of 30.3 percent of the county's proposed $19.2 million budget for the 1993 fiscal year, which begins Oct. 1.

As viewed by Seltzer, the sheriff's budget — if adopted by the court — would result in a 1 cent, or 4.5 percent, tax increase beyond the 22.65-cent effective tax rate. That penny would bring in an additional $352,000-plus figured on a $3.678 billion tax base.

The 22.65-cent effective tax rate is the rate needed to bring in the same revenue which the current 22.75-cent tax rate generated in the 1992 fiscal year.

"We don't want to do that (increase taxes)," McCrary said. "The economy is not strong enough to support that."

Last year, however, the commissioners raised the tax rate by 26.4 percent — from 18 cents per $100 valuation to 22.75 cents — to generate $21.7 million, including $3.2 million in reserve funds.

Seltzer, who is opposed to a tax increase, noted that the "private sector is suffering a great deal" in the economic downturn. Oil and petroleum-related companies are laying off workers. He cited decreases in federal military spending and noted U.S. Postal Service cutbacks.

"The people out there in the community are hurting," Seltzer told the sheriff. "And everyone has to share that burden, some more than others."

Members of the Commissioners' Court "have the constitutional responsibility ... to set the budgets," Seltzer said. "There is only so much pie, and it can only be stretched so far."

McCrary had requested that the sheriff submit a "realistic" breakdown of his $925,045 operating budget for 1993, but instead Painter submitted the $1.27-million operating budget.

Further, the $925,045 represents $87,145 more than the sheriff's 1992 operating budget of $837,900, which includes $95,000 in amendments, mostly for feeding prisoners.

"Gary, we did not reduce your budget (from the current fiscal year)," Mrs. Valencia said. But Painter noted that the 1992 fiscal year is not yet over and won't be

MISD trustees OK 5 percent raise for all teachers

Board reschedules tax-rate public hearing

Staff report

Following instructions from the Texas Education Agency, the Midland Independent School District rescheduled its public hearing and approval of its proposed 1992-'93 tax rate.

The original hearing went on as scheduled at Tuesday's regular board meeting. However, no one addressed the board.

The TEA announced to school boards last week that school districts could not adopt their tax rates until after the county education districts (CEDs) have adopted their 1992-'93 CED tax rates.

The new public hearing has been scheduled for Aug. 25 at 7 p.m. The adoption of the tax rate has been set for Sept. 8.

The proposed tax rate for MISD is 48 cents per $100 valuation, compared to the 1991-'92 rate of 44.5 cents. The proposed rate represents 33.8 cents for maintenance and operating costs and 14.2 cents ito cover debt service costs.

The Andrews-Midland County Education District will conduct a public hearing on its 90.73-cent tax rate on Aug. 17 and will meet to adopt the rate on Aug. 27.

Midland Independent School District teachers will get an across-the-board 5 percent salary increase in the upcoming school year after the proposal was approved by a 4-3 vote at Tuesday's board meeting.

Board members George Staley, James Fuller and Adela Marmolejo opposed the item, which was already figured into the 1992-'93 school budget.

Staley said he would rather see a 4 percent increase and use the extra money to give teachers an extra in-service day at the beginning of the year.

Both Fuller and Ms. Marmolejo cited tough economic times and uncertainty in future state financing for school districts as reasons for not supporting the increase.

The increase differs from the past five years' increases, which have been based on experience level and base salary, as opposed to the across-the-board increase.

The board also discussed a preliminary budget of $92.9 million for the 1992-'93 school year.

The proposed budget includes $81,564,532 in total general fund expenses, $4,607,568 in debt services expenses, $4,705,727 in food services expenses and $2,057,905 in

Former Ector jail nurses settle lawsuit

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff writer

A sexual harassment and civil rights violation lawsuit filed by two former nurses with the Ector County Sheriff's Department against five jailers, Ector County and Sheriff Robert Brookshire, was settled out of court Tuesday.

"They're going to pay my clients money. That's all I can tell you at this time," said Odessa attorney Melissa Hirsch.

Ms. Hirsch said late Tuesday she did not know if the court would allow the amount and conditions of the settlement be made public.

The case had been set to be heard today before a jury in Judge Lucius Bunton's U.S. District Court.

The lawsuit, filed in October by former jail nurses Connie Davis and Peggy Meyers, alleged the women were propositioned and fondled by co-workers and their subsequent complaints ignored.

Defendants denied the allegations according to a response filed to the lawsuit.

Jailers named in the suit were: Master Sgt. Mino Uranga, Sgt. David Weaver, Sgt. Alan Gray, Sgt. Gary Fields and Lt. Eldon Blount.

Fourteen incidents of sexual harassment that allegedly occurred between January and September of last year were listed in the lawsuit.

Specific acts and who were reportedly involved were spelled out

County's sales tax rebate drops; city's payment increases

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff writer

Sales tax payments to Midland County continue to drop while the city's income maintained a slight increase, according to recently released figures from State Comptroller John Sharp.

This month's sales tax payments include those collected by monthly filers for June sales and by quarterly filers for April, May and June. Taxes collected for those time periods are reported in July and paid in August.

The city received a payment of $972,488 this month, a 0.43 percent increase from the $968,322 payment for the same period last year.

The city's year-to-date payments for the first six months have totaled $6,174,684, a 1.07 percent increase compared to the $6,109,576 paid for that period last year.

July payments — for taxes collected in May and reported in June — showed a slight increase as well, almost 1 percent. The comparative figures for taxes paid during the first five months of 1992 indicated a 1.19 percent increase from 1991.

At the same time, Midland County's August payment, also based on taxes collected in June and the second quarter, showed a drop from the same period a year earlier.

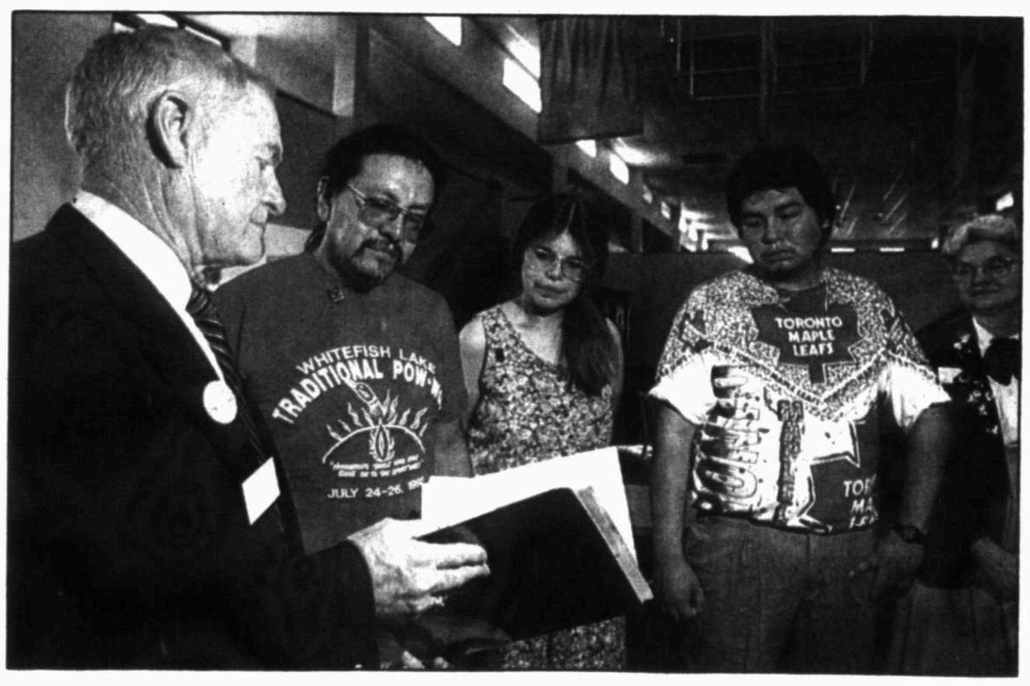

The monthly payment dipped 3.07 percent, from $526,212 last year to $510,065 in 1992.

Year-to-date payments for the first half of this year have totaled $3,464,011, a 5.58 percent decrease from $3,668,889 paid in 1991.

Last month, payments also decreased from $376,637 last year to $363,732 — 3.43 percent less — in 1992. In addition, the January-May total was 6.01 percent down from the same period last year.

Currently, county commissioners are busy trying to complete a reduced budget due by Sept. 1.

Statewide, a total of $157.3 million in August sales tax payments were made to 1,069 cities and 106 counties, a 4.2 percent increase from payments last year.

Disease silicosis should have been eliminated, doctor says

By Jim Morris
Hearst News Service

HOUSTON — A lung-ravaging "dust disease" documented centuries ago has taken a heavy but little-noticed toll on the Gulf Coast and continues to threaten 2 million U.S. workers with disability and early death.

Silicosis is an "occupational obscenity" because it is so preventable, said Dr. Donald Millar, director of the National Institute for Occupational Safety and Health in Atlanta.

"Any time there's a case of silicosis, you know that a preventive measure has broken down somewhere," Millar said. "We're still seeing young people with it. This is a problem that should have been gone."

"We're seeing more of this now than we did 10 years ago," said Dr. Stephen Wiesenfeld, a Midland, Texas, internist who has diagnosed 11 former Odessa sandblasters with silicosis in the past four years. "These (company) owners — my God, you'd think they'd know about the risks. You don't have to be a rocket scientist to figure it out."

'We're seeing more of this (silicosis) now than we did 10 years ago.'

— Dr. Stephen Wiesenfeld, Midland internist

The story of silicosis is one of greed, complacency and lessons unlearned. It is a story of middle-aged men who worked 60 hours a week in places that were inconceivably dusty because they knew no other way to support their families.

It is a story of young Mexican immigrants who were unable to read warning labels and afraid to complain about wretched working conditions. It is a story of women who watched their once-active husbands die slowly, confined to their beds and hooked up to oxygen tanks.

"It's a public health scandal," said Dr. Martin Cherniak, an associate professor of occupational medicine at Yale University.

Texas has more workers at risk of contracting silicosis — 241,694, according to a NIOSH estimate — more than any other state. California is a distant second, with an estimated 145,722.

Among those in greatest danger are sandblasters; hard-rock, metal and coal miners; tunnelers; general laborers and foundry, masonry and pottery workers. NIOSH soon will issue nationwide health-hazard alerts on sandblasting and rock-drilling.

Because of a glaring shortage of data, it is impossible to determine the incidence of silicosis in the United States, Texas or even Houston.

But Dr. Jack Parker, a NIOSH medical officer in Morgantown, W.Va., said that "each case of silicosis is a sentinel event. If you find one case, there are probably 10 more."

Mike Martin, a Houston attorney and a member of the Texas House of Representatives, said that he has more than 600 clients with silicosis and gets "four to five" new cases per week.

Owners spruce up Bush's 'home'

By Bennett Roth
Hearst News Service

HOUSTON — The furniture has been re-upholstered, the walls given a fresh coat of paint and the parking garage a good dusting.

Even in financially troubled times, the owners of the Houstonian Hotel and Conference Center are trying to keep up appearances, especially when their most famous tenant, George Bush, is coming to town next week for the Republican National Convention.

But the major renovations Houstonian officials say are necessary to keep the president's legal residence financially afloat remain on paper – a proposal filed with the federal bankruptcy court where the partnership that owns the hotel sought refuge last February.

While officials had expressed some hope that the hotel would emerge from Chapter 11 bankruptcy by the time of the convention, court documents show that the hotel owners have not been able to reach agreement with their principal creditor, Prudential Insurance. Last week the court appointed a mediator to try to settle the dispute.

In court papers the Houstonian, in part, blames its financial predicament on sluggish business during the Gulf War — the same war which Bush points to as one of his crowning foreign policy achievements.

Xavier J. Lividini, the Houstonian's general manager, acknowledged the facility has foregone made major purchases, such as buying new furniture, for the four-day confab.

Lividini said that no changes are planned for the president's two-bedroom suite, which he has rented since he assumed the vice presidency in 1981. And the normally low-key hotel has not emulated the nearby Ritz Carlton, which recently issued a news release boasting about the exotic cocktails it planned to concoct for the wealthy GOP contributors staying over for the convention.

Nevertheless, the Houstonian remains a tasteful, magnet for the well-to-do as evidence by the chauffeured-driven Lincoln Towne Cars waiting along its circular, wooded drive.

Lividini said the chef is currently whipping up an elephant-shaped cake and the hotel will provide guests, include members of the first family, White House staff members and Secret Service personnel, with little treats.

Lividini also noted the improvements to the spacious Houstonian grounds — including repair of the Astroturf track where Bush often jogs.

Lividini said he has lately fielded numerous media inquiries, and had to turn down a request from a Los Angeles radio station that wanted to broadcast live from the president's suite during the convention.

The general manager also said the staff is not dwelling on the complicated bankruptcy proceedings that have provided fodder for Bush's Democratic opponents eager to paint the president as out of touch with the nation's economic problems.

"The hotel is not concerned with the bankruptcy proceedings. It is concerned with welcoming the Republicans to Houston," he said.

In the court filings, Houstonian officials say to remain competitive they badly need several million dollars to renovate the 297-room facility. Prudential has refused to approve additional financing for the renovation.

The Houstonian officials, in part, blame the Gulf War as contributing to their financial problems. In court papers they say they experienced cash shortfall because of the "disastrous year experienced by the entire hotel leisure industry in the U.S. and elsewhere in 1991."

in the lawsuit.

At one point, in September 1992, the women told Sheriff Bob Brookshire about being sexually harassed and following the complaint, the frequency of sexual harassment increased, the lawsuit stated.

Harassment continued until Sept. 29 when the defendants were "constructively discharged," according to the lawsuit.

Each plaintiff sought millions in damages, according to the lawsuit.

Defense attorneys Richard Bonner of Odessa and Ann Clark Shell could not be reached for comment Tuesday following the settlement.

FUNDS: Painter's budget proposal exceeds limit for almost two months.

The $95,000 includes $50,000 for food, which the court on Tuesday voted to add to the sheriff's budget. The year's projected prisoner-feeding cost is $320,000.

Wright, Brown and Seltzer voted for the funds to pay food vendors.

McCrary voted against the measure, and Mrs. Valencia abstained. McCrary had proposed that $50,000 not be transferred to the sheriff's budget until Painter had complied with the court's request for a "realistic" operating budget.

Wright reasoned that not to grant the transfer would be "detrimental" to food suppliers, whose bills are waiting to be paid.

"He (Painter) didn't comply with the request that Guy (McCrary) asked for," Mrs. Valencia said. "I'm getting tired of his (the sheriff's) complaining. He doesn't want to cooperate with this court. He doesn't know what is going on in his department."

In listing the operating budget items on his $1.27 million budget, Painter acknowledged that several line items — such as clothing, travel and equipment — were considerably higher than the 1992 budget. Painter said his 1992 budget was inadequate in the first place and had been cut last year.

'I do believe that the safety of the citizens should be thought out and should be paramount," Painter said.

The sheriff, however, did not explain the increases in line-item expenses.

"I don't know what the equipment would be," he said of the line item for equipment.

The line item for travel is $36,000 in 1992 and is proposed by the sheriff at $73,000 for 1993. Office supplies went from $22,000 to $39,000; equipment, $18,000 to $90,000; telephone, $39,000 to $53,000; law-enforcement supplies, $18,000 to $39,000, and clothing, $49,000 to $81,000.

"I don't really have specific answers (to the line-item increases)," Painter said. None of his ranking deputies, Chief Deputy Jim Chancellor, Capt. Clayton McKinney, and Capt. Richard Sexton, were with the sheriff on Tuesday to provide input on the sheriff's operating budget.

After the budget-study session, Painter said that his proposed budget increases were due to the cost of jailing prisoners and fighting and investigating crime.

"It's not our fault that crime increases," Painter said. "It's not our fault that people use narcotics more than they ever have. It's not our fault that more people are going to jail more than ever."

Of the judge's reference to any tax increase prompted by the sheriff's proposed budget, Painter said, "If there is any increase in taxes in Midland County, it always falls on the responsibility and the fault of the sheriff."

Painter said that he and his people are "very conscientious" in their "responsibility to the public.

"We try to do everything we possibly can to provide a safe environment for the citizens of Midland County," Painter said. "In order to do that, we work and we work hard."

federal fund expenses.

Revenue for the upcoming year would include $30,369,637 in total state aid, $86,172,100 from county education district (CED) taxes, local taxes, investments and other revenue, $4,705,727 in food service and $2,057,905 in federal funds.

The proposed budget is up almost $9 million from last year.

Business manager Don Furgeson informed the board on MISD's proposed tax rate of 48 cents per $100 valuation, up 4 cents from last year. The total includes 0.338 cents for maintenance and operating costs and 0.142 for debt service.

In other business, director Patricia Maurer reported on the first two years of the Gifted Education Midland (GEM) and Project Think programs. Some board members and members of the audience questioned the fairness of the programs to minority students.

Carol Steele Boyd and Jeannie Hunt gave a progress report on the school district's Effective Parenting Information for Children (EPIC) program.

DUST: Silicosis threatens workers

(From 1B)

idea that sand is dangerous," Martin said. "There are people walking around out there who are sick and don't know it or are sick and don't know why."

Workers in the "dusty trades" have been developing silicosis and dying prematurely of its complications for many years, since antiquity in the case of mining.

They still are. But relatively few in industry, medicine, labor and government realize or acknowledge it.

In a six-month investigation, the Houston Chronicle found that silicosis is often misdiagnosed by doctors, disdained by industry officials and unknown to the very workers who stand the greatest chance of getting it. The disease poses a particular threat to workers on the Gulf Coast, where sandblasting is widespread, and to those in all parts of the country who do not speak or read English.

The Chronicle found that old warnings and medical studies have been ignored, products falsely advertised and government rules flouted, especially with regard to sandblasting, an activity so hazardous that NIOSH recommended its banning in 1974.

Respiratory protection for sand blasters generally is better than it was 20 years ago. But young blasters continue to wear handkerchiefs, disposable masks and other makeshift "respirators" over their mouths, wrongly believing that their lungs are protected against invisible, sharp particles of silicon dioxide, or silica. Those who work near the blasters may have no protection at all.

Unless a dusty-trades worker has a conscientious employer or belongs to a union, he probably will not learn about silicosis until he is diagnosed with it. By then it is too late: The disease can progress even after dust exposure ends, and there is no cure.

Silicosis causes scarring and distortion of the lungs, drastically reducing breathing capacity. It can lead, among other things, to tuberculosis and rheumatoid arthritis. Evidence is mounting that it increases one's chances of developing lung cancer.

By the nature of their jobs, silicosis victims are almost always male. Few have more than a high school education. Most worked long hours under awful conditions.

"That's the thing that really gets me," said NIOSH director Millar. "We have people out there who are doing nothing more than trying to make a living, yet it's costing them their lives."

The Chronicle conducted more than 300 interviews and reviewed thousands of pages of depositions and government, industry and labor documents. Among those interviewed were 20 silicosis victims, who range in age from 26 to 82 and live in seven states.

Some told of working in dust so thick that they couldn't see a few feet in front of them. All suffer from shortness of breath, fatigue and bouts of depression.

The Occupational Safety and Health Administration has had little success enforcing its silica exposure standard in U.S. workplaces. A NIOSH document obtained by the Chronicle shows that the percentage of respirable dust samples violating the standard fell only slightly from 1979 to 1991.

Thirty-six percent of the samples, collected by OSHA, were above the standard in 1979, 31 percent in 1991. During the 1980s, the percentages ranged from 33 to 42.

Sandblasters, laborers and grinders in the painting, railroad equipment, masonry and metal-coatings industries had the highest silica exposures, according to NIOSH. An astounding 86 percent of the samples taken in the coatings industry exceeded the OSHA standard; the average sample was four times the standard.

Unlike cancer and other illnesses that may or may not be work-related, silicosis has only one, irrefutable cause: the inhalation of fine, fractured particles of silica, one of the most abundant minerals on Earth. One does not get silicosis by smoking cigarettes or eating too much fat.

But the Chronicle's investigation indicates that there is still remarkable ignorance of silicosis. Among the major findings: Recent cases of silicosis have occurred in Texas, West Virginia, Pennsylvania, Indiana, Ohio, Alabama, New York and Florida. NIOSH since the early 1970s has found dangerously high silica dust levels in dozens of workplaces, including lignite (coal) surface mines in Texas, foundries and a pottery factory in New Jersey and a brick manufacturing plant in Colorado.

Dr. Ira Gould, a pulmonologist in New York City, said that he has diagnosed 339 men with silicosis in the past 10 years and all but "six or seven" worked in tunnel construction. The men range in age from 36 to 82; most worked on massive water-conveyance tunnels in the New York area, among other projects.

Multiple cases of silicosis have arisen from Spincote Plastic Coatings Inc. of Odessa, Texas; the Unimin Corp.'s silica "flour" plant near Cleburne, Texas, and Texas Mining Co.'s sand stone-crushing plant in Brady, Texas. Multiple cases also have come from five facilities that are now closed: AMF Tuboscope Inc. (Holmes Road plant), Blas-Kote Inc., Todd Shipyards and Berwind Railway Service Co., all in Houston, and Knox Glass Co. in Palestine, Texas.

State in brief

■ Firefighter's widow to receive benefits

ARLINGTON — The Arlington Fire Department's hundreds of hours of research, including the re-enactment of a fatal fire, has helped a woman win $114,000 in federal benefits stemming from her husband's death.

Capt. Ron McAndrew, 43, collapsed in a smoldering house and died Nov. 14, 1990. An autopsy showed he died of a heart attack brought on by chronic heart disease.

The Bureau of Justice Assistance originally rejected Jacque McAndrew's claim, saying her husband's death was caused by a pre-existing condition.

The Fire Department said that a blood test showing McAndrew's carbon-monoxide level was taken later than originally thought and this helped convince federal authorities that the fire contributed to McAndrew's death.

Mrs. McAndrew will soon receive a federal check to supplement the more than $200,000 in city and state benefits.

■ More troops head for maneuvers in gulf

FORT HOOD — Two hundred and sixty soldiers from Texas and Oklahoma on Tuesday deployed for the Persian Gulf as part of training exercise Intrinsic Action.

Maj. Ken Roberts, Fort Hood media relations officer, said the troops left Robert Gray Army Airfield at 6:16 a.m. and 9:45 a.m.

The group included about 50 Fort Sill soldiers who belong to the 15th Transportation Co. in Oklahoma.

The Texas troops are members of the 1st Cavalry Division and the 13th Corps Support Command, Roberts said.

More than 2,400 U.S. troops will take part in desert exercises with their Kuwaiti counterparts this month. Roberts said additional troops will leave Fort Hood this week.

Although described as routine training, officers have said the maneuvers are a warning to Iraq.

■ Burglars take Russian exhibit souvenirs

DALLAS — Security has been beefed up at the Catherine the Great exhibit after burglars stole more than $6,000 worth of souvenirs during the weekend.

"We're certainly taking it seriously, but at the same time, no one certainly tried to get the real stuff," said Rita Cox, spokeswoman for the show on loan from the Hermitage Museum in St. Petersburg.

Police said the reproduction souvenirs stolen between 9 p.m. Sunday and 12:15 a.m. Monday included 12 Faberge charms, two large Faberge eggs and a gold Russian cross.

The burglars also got away with 36 T-shirts, 24 polo shirts and amber stone jewelry.

No arrests have been made, a police spokeswoman said Tuesday.

The exhibit includes a priceless 22-foot red and gold coronation carriage, paintings, gems and manuscripts.

■ Council votes to keep full-time marshal

MOUNT ENTERPRISE — City Council members have voted to keep a full-time city marshal after earlier deciding to scale back the position in order to dispel the town's reputation as a speed trap.

Originally, the council wanted to use a part-time patrol officer that would operate "more as a night watchman" and issue citations on "rare occasions."

But outcry in the East Texas town of 500 caused council members Monday to put David Collins back on full time, with no overtime required. The marshal is responsible for issuing traffic citations as the city's major law enforcement officer.

Mayor Ross King said the council kept Collins full time because citizens don't want speeding near the town's stop light.

Jury convicts chained boy's parents

■ White Settlment couple could receive life in prison for guilty verdict in injury to a child case.

Associated Press

GALVESTON — A White Settlement couple accused in the starvation death of their teenage son were convicted Tuesday of injury to a child.

The jury deliberated about 45 minutes before issuing the verdict shortly after noon in the trial of Jay Hill, 42, and his wife, Linda, 38.

The punishment phase of the trial began Tuesday afternoon. Then State District Judge Bill Burdock sent the jurors home while he prepared the charge. The judge instructed the jury to return today to begin its deliberations on the Hills' fate.

The trial is being held in Galveston because of extensive publicity in the vicinity of White Settlement, a Fort Worth suburb.

The Hills can be sentenced from 5 years to life in prison.

Testimony in the trial ended abruptly Monday after the Hills took the stand to confirm they would not testify.

The Hills were convicted in connection with the death last November of their 13-year-old son, Stephen, who was deprived of food and kept chained in the Hills' travel trailer. Authorities said Stephen weighed 55 pounds at his death, about half the normal weight for his age. They said he looked like a 6-year-old boy in the final stages of a terminal illness.

Tarrant County prosecutor Alan Levy asked that the chain used to confine the boy be considered a deadly weapon. That would require the Hills to serve a full quarter of their sentence before becoming eligible for parole.

Mrs. Hill's attorney, Charles Baldwin, said she was under the stress of living in a small travel trailer with a hyperactive son.

During the trial, which began last week, the Hills' other son, 12-year-old Douglas, testified he believed his parents intended to hurt his brother.

Douglas also testified that his parents chained Stephen to a cabinet door, starved him and beat him with a feather-duster handle.

Several defense witnesses were called to testify, including Marilyn Pregrin, who taught Stephen from 1985 to 1986.

Ms. Pregrin said Stephen was rowdy until he began taking the drug ritalin. Then, he appeared happier and said frequently that "I like myself now," she said.

TEA claims teacher violated no pass-no play rule

If Ms. Preston loses her (teaching) certificate, it would be the first such case under the no pass-no play rule.

AUSTIN (AP) — A Grand Prairie drill team instructor says she was following school district policy in allowing girls who failed courses to practice and travel with the team.

"We haven't violated any law of the state, much less no pass-no play," said Melissa Anne Preston, director of the South Grand Prairie High School Chey-Annes.

She testified Monday at a Texas Education Agency hearing into allegations that she may have violated the state's no pass-no play rule as many as 96 times. The hearing continued Tuesday.

TEA investigators are asking a hearing examiner to recommend to Education Commissioner Lionel "Skip" Meno that Ms. Preston lose her teaching certificate. TEA spokesman Joey Lozano said a final decision by Meno isn't expected for at least three months.

If Ms. Preston loses her certificate, it would be the first such case under the no pass-no play rule, which was part of a landmark 1984 school reform law. The rule prevents students with failing grades from taking part in extracurricular activities.

TEA lawyer Terry Johnson, who filed the petition to have Ms. Preston's certificate revoked, presented evidence that Ms. Preston required three drill team members to attend practices and football games after being notified they had failed classes.

Ms. Preston's lawyers said the practices are not extracurricular because they are taken into account when the students receive their six weeks grades. The girls receive one semester of physical education credit and one of fine arts credit for the class.

Ms. Preston said students who did not meet no pass-no play guidelines were not allowed to perform at football and basketball halftime shows, the Fort Worth Star-Telegram has reported.

About a dozen parents and four members of the Chey-Annes attended Monday's hearing, wearing lapel buttons with a color photo of Ms. Preston and her small white dog. Ms. Preston said she did not know they had planned the trip.

Inmate talks forgiveness before being put to death

HUNTSVILLE (AP) — Curtis Lee Johnson, who shot a man to death in a burglary that netted a camera and $8, forgave his executioners and then was executed early Tuesday.

Johnson, 38, a Dallas laborer with a lengthy criminal record, was given lethal injection for killing Murray Dale Sweat, 25, of Houston, during the 1983 burglary.

Johnson was pronounced dead at 1:16 a.m. EDT. In a final statement he thanked his mother and an aunt "for sticking by me" and said he loved them. "Everyone participating in this is forgiven," he added.

The Texas Court of Criminal Appeals, the state's highest criminal court, rejected Johnson's last appeal Monday. Federal appeals were rejected.

Sweat discovered Johnson and an accomplice in his apartment Sept. 24, 1983. The accomplice, Roy Junior Jones, testified Johnson shot Sweat. A camera and $8 were taken in the burglary.

Johnson and Jones were arrested a week later after holding up a convenience store. Authorities linked the gun to the Sweat killing.

Johnson was on parole for armed robbery when Sweat was shot. His record also included arrests for auto theft, burglary and robbery. He served an earlier two-year prison term for burglary in Taylor County.

Jones, 31, remains in prison serving a 45-year sentence for burglary and robbery.

Johnson became the ninth Texas inmate to be executed this year and the 51st since the state resumed capital punishment in 1982.

Eateries look forward to convention

By Laura Tolley
Associated Press writer

HOUSTON — The legendary Gilley's honky-tonk and its maniacal mechanical bull are long gone, but Republican conventioneers looking for a little Texas fun shouldn't despair.

There's plenty of partying left, and the nightlife here doesn't necessarily mean a trip in the pickup truck to the nearest saloon for a little two-steppin'.

Of course, that's definitely an option.

But anyone who believes this is a just a cowtown full of dusty blue jeans and 10-gallon hats might stop off at Tony's Restaurant, an elegant eatery that has prospered as the gathering spot for Houston's oil-rich society.

This luxurious restaurant, adorned with vibrant red fabric walls and graceful artwork, is considered the place to see and be seen in town. Getting the "right" table here is a sign of social prominence and overdressing is an impossibility.

"I think a lot of times, when people come down here, they don't expect to find a Tony's," says proprietor Tony Vallone.

Business usually is a little slow in August as many of Tony's well-heeled patrons escape the city's stifling heat and humidity, but the restaurant is nearly booked the week of the Aug. 17-20 Republican National Convention.

"We're really doing well with the convention," Vallone says, clasping his hands in gratitude. "We're holding back room for our regulars, but otherwise we're sold out."

There may be a few reservations left in the public dining area, but the wine cellar and bordeaux rooms are taken.

"Most of the private rooms at Tony's have been booked since the day they announced the convention would be here," says restaurant spokeswoman Mary Donna Moceri. "I can't say (who's coming), but I will tell you we will have the creme de la creme of all of them."

Business also will be good at other upscale restaurants including Brennan's, Cafe Annie, The Grotto, Anthony's and La Colombe d'Or. The restaurants also are hosting private parties and receptions for the Republicans.

Many reservations are early because of the evening sessions at the Astrodome, but restaurateurs don't mind.

"It's a boom, absolutely," says Gina Stansbury, manager of La Colombe d'Or. "And it's definitely because of the time of year. Normally, July and August are kind of slow."

La Colombe d'Or, in a 1923 mansion, also is home to the "Oil Barrel Special," a lunch-time four-course meal that costs whatever a barrel of crude oil is going for that day — currently around $21. The restaurant started the offer about six years as oil prices collapsed.

However, dining out here doesn't always result in an empty wallet. Tex-Mex and barbecue — Houston mainstays and two of President Bush's favorites — can be found in abundance and fairly cheaply throughout Houston.

Gilley's, the landmark honky-tonk in nearby Pasadena that was made famous in the movie "Urban Cowboy," burned to the ground two years ago. But drugstore-cowboy wannabes have many places to choose from, including Willie Nelson's NightLife, named after the IRS-troubled singer, Chip Kickers Club and the Rose on Richmond.

ACLU to monitor protests at GOP gathering

Hearst News Service

HOUSTON — Protesters promise pandemonium; police promise protection.

And the American Civil Liberties Union promises ... to watch.

The ACLU of Texas is training protest observers for the Republican National Convention, which starts Monday. Volunteers will attend workshops to learn what to look for during police confrontations.

Suzanne Donovan, executive director of the ACLU of Texas, said the information could be used if lawsuits follow arrests.

"Some of the volunteers have offered to bring video cameras; others will bring still cameras," said Donovan. "People will be taking notes as completely as possible. They will not act as intervenors or conflict resolvers."

More than 50 groups have promised to march or rally during the convention. Some demonstrators, such as AIDS activists, feminists and anti-abortion protesters, have promised civil disobedience.

During the Democratic National Convention in New York, police made 61 arrests in 51 demonstrations.

Houston Police Department spokesman Rick Hartley said he has "no problem" with the ACLU plan.

"Our work has been observed numerous times in the field; it has been observed microscopically in the courts," he said.

Donovan said a National Lawyers Guild attorney conducted one workshop last week and will conduct another on Friday.

She said observers will be sent to an AIDS activists parade on Sunday, to various demonstrations by gay activists, to a Saturday march by a coalition of leftist groups and to monitor the gates of the Astrodome.

Abortion-rights activists have already assigned monitors for expected protests at area abortion clinics, Donovan said.

The ACLU volunteers, she said, will wear white T-shirts with large fluorescent stickers identifying them as observers. They will attempt to stand clear of protesters and police.

"These are average public citizens — folks who want to be involved with the Republican National Convention but who don't want to participate in protests," Donovan said. "They are people genuinely interested in ensuring First Amendment rights."

Anti-abortion protesters face fines up to $10,000

HOUSTON (AP) — Several anti-abortion protesters accused of violating a judge's order to keep their distance from clinics were handed summons Tuesday to appear in court, where they face fines up to $10,000 each.

The summons that were issued to Operation Rescue members stem from a protest Monday in which anti-abortion advocates knelt in prayer across the street from a Planned Parenthood clinic.

Operation Rescue officials have gathered in Houston to stage protests and "rescues" at abortion clinics as well as to urge the Republican Party to keep its anti-abortion platform.

However, a judge issued a temporary restraining order last week that says anti-abortion protesters must stay at least 100 feet from abortion clinic doors and 25 feet from clients until the GOP convention is over on Aug. 20.

Operation Rescue leaders said they will not obey the order because it violates their right to free speech.

Deputies from a local constable's office issued orders to appear in court to five Operation Rescue members Tuesday afternoon as the group was planning to announce a series of nightly rallies. The group said it will not say which clinics it will target on a given day until the night before.

The officers had seven summons, but only issued five because the other two people were not at the press conference.

The Rev. Patrick Mahoney, spokesman for Operation Rescue, denounced the action but he said those issued orders will be in State District Judge Eileen O'Neill's court this morning to fight the temporary restraining order.

"It is a disgrace. ... The state of Texas has declared war on free speech." Mahoney said.

"Why in the world do we have to appear in court for praying in a public forum," he said.

The Operation Rescue members could be held in contempt of the order and issued fines ranging between $250 and $10,000 each.

Planned Parenthood spokeswoman Susan Nenney said attorneys presented evidence to the court that the temporary restraining order had been violated Monday. The evidence included statements from witnesses, photographs and videotapes.

"The plaintiffs must now appear in court to show why they should not be found in contempt of court for their appearance here (Monday) within the temporary restraining order lines," Ms. Nenney said.

■ Bar group votes to endorse abortion rights

SAN FRANCISCO — The policy-making body of the American Bar Association, the nation's largest lawyers' group, voted Tuesday to endorse abortion rights, repealing a 2-year-old policy of neutrality on the issue.

The vote was 276-168 in the House of Delegates.

On Monday, the ABA Assembly, an advisory body open to any member attending the annual convention of the 370,000-member association, voted nearly 2-1 for the same resolution.

The resolution opposes state and federal laws that would restrict abortion.

The policy change allows the ABA to take part in court cases and testify on legislation, including a pending congressional bill that would write into law the 1973 Roe vs. Wade Supreme Court ruling on abortion rights.

The Bush administration opposed the change. Attorney General William P. Barr, in a letter last week, said that by endorsing a woman's right to an abortion the ABA would "endanger the perception that it is an impartial and objective professional organization."

Supporters said the association, which represents half the nation's lawyers, couldn't retain its credibility if it remained mute on one of the leading contemporary legal issues.

■ Child falls out of car window at intersection

LONG BEACH, Calif. — A 1-year-old girl fell out of a car window at a busy intersection, but suffered only a cut on her forehead. Another driver jumped out of her car and carried her to safety.

Yavarie Madrill, 22, said she noticed Jamilet Vizcarra hanging out the door of a car and crying before she fell out as the car turned at an intersection Monday.

The baby tumbled from the car and rolled about four times. Madrill pulled up, grabbed the child and avoided a swerving car and truck as she carried her away from the street.

The girl's father, Severo Vizcarra, 31, drove on several blocks before noticing his daughter was missing. He searched frantically before spotting a small crowd in front of a convenience store. Jamilet was being cradled by Miss Madrill.

The child was treated at a hospital and released.

Police cited Vizcarra for allegedly not having a safety seat and not having her buckled in.

■ Magazines dispute over trademark infringement

NEW YORK — Whose Money is it anyway?

Time Inc., publisher of Money magazine and Money Guide, sued Consumers Digest Inc. on Tuesday over its new magazine called Your Money.

In a lawsuit in Manhattan's federal court, Time said Your Money copies the "letter style" of its Money logo and the "cover format of prior issues of Money magazine."

Time has published Money magazine since 1972 and the related Money Guide since 1982. Your Money debuted last year.

Time asked a judge to order Consumers Digest to change the cover of Your Money and turn over any profits resulting from the alleged trademark infringement.

A receptionist at Consumers Digest offices in Chicago said no one would be available to comment on the lawsuit until Thursday.

Fire forces evacuation of 3,000, injures 76

BOSTON (AP) — Fire sent smoke through the 62-story John Hancock building Tuesday, forcing 3,000 people to evacuate New England's tallest building and knocking out power to fans meant to contain the fumes. Seventy-six people were injured.

The fire started about 11:30 a.m. when an electrical switch on the seventh floor apparently ignited. Smoke quickly spread throughout the building.

"The smoke was so fierce you didn't think you could breathe," said Betsy Wachtel, who works on the 42nd floor.

To make matters worse, the fire knocked out power above the seventh floor, said Larry Gaboury, a vice president with John Hancock. Fans designed to contain the smoke failed, elevators didn't work and firefighters couldn't issue instructions because the public address system was knocked out, said Deputy Fire Chief Paul Christian.

"The smoke should have been kept on that floor," Christian said. "We like to get on the PA to talk to people and comfort them."

Many occupants said they were first warned of the fire by the odor.

"We smelled a terrible smell, like wires burning," said Fran Arcand, who worked on the 53rd floor.

It took 125 firefighters about an hour to evacuate people down the building's two stairways. The fire was confined to the seventh floor and was extinguished within a few hours.

Fire officials said 36 people — including one firefighter, several pregnant women and an infant — were hospitalized for smoke-related injuries. Forty more were treated at the scene.

The flames caused an estimated $750,000 in damage, said Fire Commissioner Martin Pierce.

Pierce said the evacuation went as smoothly as could be expected, but some firefighters called the scene chaotic.

"With a building this size, you have trouble trying to commandeer all the elevators," said firefighter Edward Loder. "People are trying to get out and you're trying to get in."

Gail Ames, who was evacuated from the 42nd floor, said that on the stairs, "There were people who were getting hysterical."

The 790-foot, $158 million building, designed by noted architect I.M. Pei and opened in 1973, made headlines in its early years because windows popped out of their frames, sending glass crashing to the sidewalks below. The problem eventually was solved.

A John Hancock spokesman said late Tuesday the building's lower 35 floors would be closed Wednesday because problems were expected with the elevators serving those floors, although they were unaffected by the fire. The building's top 26 floors would be open as usual.

Publisher tries to make suicide look like murder

CHARLESTON, W.Va. (AP) A publisher distraught over his health and criticism of his newspaper committed suicide after trying to make it look like a robbery by the Ku Klux Klan, which he had challenged, police said Tuesday.

Authorities initially considered homicide in the April 30 death of Warren Duliere, publisher of the monthly West Virginia Advocate. Rumors abounded in Hampshire County that he was killed by someone angry about his stories.

"I believe Mr. Duliere wanted to be known as a controversial individual and believe that he set the stage to cast doubt in people's minds that he took his own life," said state police Cpl. D.B. Burkhart.

Duliere, 60, was found dead in the two-car garage of his Augusta home by his wife, Janet, after she returned home from a shopping trip. His small-caliber revolver was near the body and his truck was parked in the driveway with its motor running.

It appeared at first his home had been robbed. Jewelry was stuffed in pillowcases and other goods were stacked near the door, but nothing was missing, authorities said.

"There was absolutely no ransacking of the interior of the structure," Burkhart said. "No drawers were open. No clothing was strewn about as in a normal burglary. I've investigated more than 1,500 burglaries and breaking and enterings, and you always have that."

He said Duliere made it look like he had left his home and then returned to find it being burglarized.

"KKK" had been written by the publisher on a laundry room wall with a marking pen to "reflect a Klan hit on Mr. Duliere," he said.

Although Duliere spoke out against the Klan, "I don't believe the Klan would go to the trouble of staging this elaborate burglary and give themselves away by writing 'KKK' on the wall," Burkhart said.

A family attorney disagreed with the state police's ruling.

"There are too many unanswered questions and too much evidence of murder to support the police conclusions," said lawyer Mark Moreland. Police wanted to close the case because they didn't have any leads, he added.

Duliere's death had been the talk of nearby Capon Bridge, an Appalachian community of about 200 people 90 miles west of Washington, D.C., in the state's Eastern Panhandle.

The case also attracted attention within the journalism industry. Last month, Editor & Publisher, a newspaper trade magazine, called on journalists to investigate Duliere's death. Sen. Jay Rockefeller, D-W.Va., also had asked the FBI to investigate, but it declined.

Men stand trial on attempted murder at start of L.A. riots

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A judge Tuesday ordered three men to stand trial on attempted murder charges in a truck driver's beating at the start of the city's riots.

Municipal Court Judge Larry Fidler also ordered the trio to stand trial on related charges that included aggravated mayhem and torture. He ruled in the eighth day of a preliminary hearing.

Earlier Tuesday, a prosecutor argued that the beating was malicious attempted murder, but a defense lawyer insisted it was the result of a "tumultuous and confused" situation at a riot flash point.

The April 29 beating of Reginald Denny at an intersection in south-central Los Angeles was captured by helicopter cameras and televised live. It came to symbolize the rioting that followed the acquittals of four police officers on most charges in the March 1991 videotaped beating of motorist Rodney King.

Notice of Effective Tax Rate
1992 Property Tax Rates in Greenwood Ind. School District

This notice concerns 1992 property tax rates for Greenwood Ind. School District. It presents information about three tax rates. Last year's tax rate is the actual rate the taxing unit used to determine property taxes last year. This year's effective tax rate would impose the same total taxes as last year if you compare properties taxed in both years. This year's rollback tax rate is the highest tax rate the taxing unit can set before taxpayers can start tax rollback procedures. In each case these rates are found by dividing the total amount of taxes by the tax base (the total value of taxable property) with adjustments as required by state law. The rates are given per $100 of property value.

Last year's tax rate:
	Last year's operating taxes	$ 550,968.91
	Last year's debt taxes	$ 1,248,994.87
	Last year's total taxes	$ 1,799,963.78
	Last year's tax base	$ 171,142,290.00
	Last year's total tax rate	$ 1.0517 /$100
This Year's effective tax rate:
	Last year's adjusted taxes (after subtracting taxes on lost property)	$ 1,775,296.06
+	This year's adjusted tax base (after subtracting value of new property)	$ 177,083,014.00
=	This year's effective tax rate	$ 1.0025 /$100
x	1.03 = maximum rate unless unit publishes notices and holds hearing	$ 1.032575 /$100
This year's rollback tax rate:
	Last year's adjusted operating taxes (after subtracting taxes on lost property)	$ 543,375.30
+	This year's adjusted tax base	$ 177,083,014.00
=	This year's effective operating rate	$ .306800 /$100
x	1.08 (or add $.08 for schools) = this year's maximum operating rate	$ .386800 /$100
+	This year's debt rate	$ .651000 /$100
=	This year's rollback rate before adjustment	$ 1.03780 /$100
+	Rate to recoup lost revenue	$ .064600 /$100
=	Adjusted rollback rate	$ 1.102400 /$100
=	This year's rollback rate	$ 1.102400 /$100

SCHEDULE A: Unencumbered Fund Balances

The following balances will probably be left in the unit's property tax accounts at the end of the fiscal year. These balances are not encumbered by a corresponding debt obligation.

Type of Property Tax Fund	Balance
Maintenance and Operation	$300,000.00
Interest and Sinking Fund	$ 50,000.00

SCHEDULE B:1992 Debt Service

The unit plans to pay the following amounts for long-term debts that are secured by property taxes. These amounts will be paid from property tax revenues (or additional sales tax revenues, if applicable.)

Description	Principal or Contract Payment to be Paid	Interest to be Paid	Other Amounts to be Paid	Total Payment
1984 Bond Refunding	$645,000.00	123,370.00	$ - - - -	$768,370.00
1992 Bond Refunding	$ 80,000.00	311,280.92	$ - - - -	$391,280.92

	Total required for 1992 debt service	$ 1,159,650.92
-	Amount (if any) paid from funds listed in Schedule A	$ - 0 -
-	Excess collections last year	$ - 0 -
=	Total to be paid from taxes in 1992	$ 1,159,650.92
+	Amount added in anticipation that the unit will collect only 100% of its taxes in 1992	$ - 0 -
=	Total Debt Levy	$ 1,159,650.92

WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 12, 1992

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Your recent efforts at work will pay big dividends. A practical, down-to-earth approach wins the support of those in authority. A change of lifestyle sounds especially appealing in October. Do what you can to safeguard investments. January and February of 1993 are starred for romance. Follow your heart. Children will play a larger role in your personal affairs by next May. You have more influence on them than you realize!

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: auto racer Parnelli Jones, author William Goldman, actor George Hamilton, choreographer Michael Kidd.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Look on opposition as a constructive challenge. There is a new emphasis on cultivating good public relations. It is time to come out of your shell.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Special rewards spring from attending a social mixer. You may want to simplify work procedures. Delegating more responsibilities to young people is fine if you take the time to train them properly.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Have greater faith in yourself and your ideas. Others will respond in a positive way to your enthusiasm. Pin your hopes on a plan that involves friends or family members.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Working quietly and steadily will bring business expansion. Cash flow improves, thanks to a special project. Buy real estate. Someone who is stubborn changes his tune.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Private settings tend to be lucky for you. A hunch related to career or finance is right on target. Your romantic instincts are correct, too. Your home can be a special refuge tonight.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Astute financial and career decisions come easily today. Seek monetary gains through confidential channels. A member of the opposite sex makes a special request.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Gear up for plenty of action and travel! Your popularity rises, thanks to your participation in social-charitable events. You have a lot to celebrate, including good news about a relative.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): A better day for completing projects than launching them. Focus on sharing information with those who need to know. More people begin to confide in you.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Take off your rose-colored glasses and see things as they really are. A wish comes true in a surprising fashion. Do not waste time worrying about things you cannot change.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Refuse to let someone tear down your self-confidence. You know where you are headed and why. Dramatic developments take a love relationship to incredible new heights.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): The spotlight turns in your direction. You enjoy basking in all the marvelous attention! An influential person comes back into your life at precisely the right moment. Throw a spur-of-the-moment party.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Good timing is vital to career success. Make key behind-the-scenes moves. Set up a work schedule and stick with it. A love affair takes a turn for the better; be more affectionate.

TODAY'S CHILDREN are highly independent, determined to live by their own rules. Parents and teachers will bring out the best in these lively youngsters if they teach by example. Born perfectionists, these Leos are their own toughest critics. They agonize over their mistakes and will rarely make the same error twice. As these children mature, their leadership skills will become more apparent. Their direct manner impresses both their peers and their elders. A career in the public eye is highly likely.

There's nary a one of us who, at one point or another, has not been guilty of taking our eye off the ball, to use a sporting analogy. We're indebted to Alan Hiron for this example.

East's jump to three diamonds is a modern convention which puts an idle bid to good use—it asks partner to bid three no trump with a stopper in the enemy suit. South passed to see what would happen, then entered the fray with four spades when it seemed the opponents had found their spot.

West's jack of hearts was taken by dummy's ace. Since East was marked with the king of spades by the desire to play three no trump, declarer continued with the queen of trumps from North—an effort to retain control of the trump suit. East countered by allowing the lady to win.

Declarer cashed the ace of spades, but could not play a third trump—East would win and take two club tricks and at least one heart to defeat the contract. Instead, declarer abandoned trumps in favor of starting on diamonds. East ruffed the second round of the suit, cashed the queen of hearts and, in an effort to reach partner's hand, shifted to the five of clubs.

South followed routinely with the seven of clubs—a decision that will long be etched in the memory. A somewhat surprised West won the trick with the eight and cashed a heart to inflict a one-trick set on a contract which, thanks to the quirks of distribution, was a shoo-in.

Guitarist Garcia's 'exhaustion' scraps 5 Grateful Dead shows

SAN FRANCISCO — Five Grateful Dead shows have been canceled because band leader Jerry Garcia is suffering from exhaustion, a spokesman said.

Garcia

Doctors who examined Garcia, 50, found no specific medical problem but said the performer needed at least a month's rest, band spokesman Dennis McNally said. After a 17-show summer tour with the Dead, the guitarist and singer had toured with the Jerry Garcia Band.

"He's exhausted," McNally said. "He needs rest and a good healthy regime, which he's getting. He's at home. He's not in the hospital."

Canceled are the Aug. 22-23 shows in Veneta, Ore., and the Aug. 25-27 shows at the Shoreline Amphitheatre in Mountain View, Calif.

Also, dates when non-mail-order tickets were to go on sale for the Dead's East Coast tour next month have been postponed until further notice, according to a recording Tuesday on the band's telephone hotline. Tickets for the shows — three each in Landover, Md., and Philadelphia and six each in New York City and Boston — went on sale through the band's mail-order operation last month.

In 1986, Garcia lapsed into a brief diabetic coma following a long tour. At the time, he was hospitalized for treatment of diabetes, an infection for an abscessed tooth and exhaustion.

BANGOR, Maine — Horror writer Stephen King completed five months of federal jury duty without being chosen to sit through a trial, and said he was "a little bit disappointed."

The Bangor resident said the experience didn't provide any material for upcoming books.

King and 20 other jury pool members were dismissed Monday with thanks from U.S. District Judge Morton A. Brody, who noted that some of the potential jurors never were chosen to hear a case.

"I can assure you, it's not personal," Brody said with a smile. The pool members broke into laughter when he said there "may be some oblique reasons" why some weren't chosen.

Brody later invited the author into his chambers to discuss "your particular problem" of why he hadn't been selected for any jury. Afterward, King signed autographs for fellow pool members and chatted with court clerks.

VATICAN CITY — Pope John Paul II, convalescing from intestinal surgery, may take an Alpine vacation that was initially canceled, the Vatican said Tuesday.

"It's up to his doctors," said spokesman Monsignor Piero Pennacchini when asked about reports John Paul may leave soon on a two-week trip.

The pope has been resting at his lakeside retreat in Castel Gandolfo, in the Alban Hills south of Rome, following his discharge from the hospital July 28 after surgery to remove a benign colon tumor.

John Paul had originally planned to vacation in mid-July in Lorenzago, in the Dolomites about 30 miles from Cortina D'Ampezzo.

"We are hoping he can still make the trip," Pennacchini said.

WASHINGTON — House Speaker Tom Foley spent several hours in a hospital emergency room after ingesting pieces of plastic from a TV dinner.

Foley, D-Wash., was treated and released from the hospital Saturday, but on Monday said he still felt poorly.

"It's given me a raging sore throat," he said.

The speaker said he unknowingly ate the pieces of black plastic in a Salisbury steak that he had put into a hamburger bun. He said he was eating the mashed potatoes in the dinner when he noticed the plastic.

Foley said doctors gave him an X-ray and concluded the plastic would likely pass through his system without doing any damage.

NEW YORK — Gregory Hines had just acknowledged his standing ovation at the Sunday matinee of "Jelly's Last Jam" at the Virginia Theater when an object flew out of the mezzanine, striking two people in the audience below.

The two — Sherry Thomas and her daughter, Rasheeda, 13, of Columbia, S.C. — were hit by what turned out to be a stool that a spotlight operator had accidentally kicked.

But at first "it was not clear what had happened, so we turned on the house lights, and a young girl was lying in the aisle," said Pamela Koslow, a producer of the show who is married to Hines.

"Gregory is a very sensitive soul and stops for everything, so he immediately ran into the audience to offer help," Ms. Koslow said. "He took his jacket off and made it into a pillow."

Rasheeda and her mother were treated for bruises at Roosevelt Hospital and released. They were reported to be on their way home Monday.

Economy causes more to go on welfare

■ The number of New Yorkers on welfare hit the one million mark last month.

N.Y. Times News Service

NEW YORK — In the most telling sign of the tremendous human damage New York City's economic woes have caused, the number of New Yorkers on welfare broke the one million mark last month for the first time since the city's fiscal crisis in the 1970s.

In July, the number of recipients climbed to 1,005,210, a 22 percent rise from the 823,691 recipients in January 1990. The increase means that almost one of every seven New Yorkers is on welfare.

Most of the newcomers to the welfare rolls were unskilled workers who have had trouble competing for jobs in the recession, economists and state officials said.

But there were a variety of other factors contributing as well. A new wave of immigrants, a growing numbers of people with AIDS, and more addicts in drug treatment programs have lengthened the welfare lists, city officials said.

And changes in state rules have also made about 1,000 more people eligible for welfare benefits in the city, a tiny though measurable portion of the rise, state officials said.

But the dominant reason for the steady rise in the number of welfare recipients is the sour economy, officials said. That surge, as well as a 15 percent increase in benefits that took effect in 1990, has raised welfare costs in the city from $1.76 billion in 1989 to $2.25 billion in 1991.

These totals include benefits paid to families through Aid to Families With Dependent Children and to individuals through home relief. The figures have not been adjusted for inflation.

The most dramatic rises in the welfare caseloads occurred last summer, which not coincidentally was also the time when the decline in jobs was most severe, economists and state officials said.

In June 1991, the State Social Services Department surveyed a sample of welfare applicants in the city. Most had strong ties to the workplace.

■ More national news/3D

Terrance McGrath, a spokesman for the Social Services Department, said the survey found that 57 percent of the welfare applicants had been employed in the preceding year, earning $280 a week on average. Only about a quarter of those who had lost their jobs had received any unemployment compensation.

An additional 11 percent of those who applied were working but earning very little.

"Almost 60 percent of the applicants reported that they tried to avoid welfare by getting help from family and friends," McGrath said. "But eventually they said they had to apply for assistance because the economy was pinching the people they were getting help from."

A minor factor was a change in state rules that made about 1,000 more people eligible for benefits in the city, McGrath said. The state raised the amount of income a person or family could earn and still qualify for welfare by 15 percent in January 1990.

Mary Jo Bane, the state commissioner of Social Services, said the rising number of welfare cases came as no surprise to the state or the city.

"It's not anything that should make people say that something terrible is going on and that welfare reform isn't working," she said. "Historically, welfare caseloads have followed the economy."

Ms. Bane said the enriched education and training now being offered to welfare recipients would pay off when the economy picks up. Those who have improved their skills will then be poised to enter the job market.

Sheila Jack, a spokeswoman for the city's Human Resources Administration, said the city has tried to make sure that everyone who qualifies for benefits receives them. The agency has reached out to the down and out in public schools and homeless shelters.

But she disputed any notion that the Dinkins administration was trying to recruit more people for welfare, in comparison to the administration of Mayor Edward I. Koch, which was often perceived as more tight-fisted in its distribution of welfare benefits.

"I don't think the increase has to do with the approach, but with economic realities we've had to deal with," Ms. Jack said.

Samuel M. Ehrenhalt, regional commissioner for the Federal Bureau of Labor Statistics, said the recession, which began in the New York metropolitan area in April 1989 and has continued, has made it much more difficult for unskilled workers to land jobs.

At the same time, most workers do not qualify for unemployment insurance for a variety of reasons, including that they did not work enough weeks in the year. They have nowhere else to turn but to welfare, he said. Even some of those who do obtain unemployment compensation run out of benefits before they find work.

"Companies have more of a pool to draw on in hiring," he said. "They'll get the best qualified workers. Workers with the most modest qualifications will be especially disadvantaged in finding work during this kind of period."

Outside of a city welfare office at 260 West 30th Street Tuesday, welfare recipients nonchalantly accepted the news that the welfare rolls exceeded one million; they only expressed surprise that the number was not larger still.

A number of factors aside from the economy have contributed to the adding of 181,519 people to the welfare rolls since January 1990, said Michele Lord, assistant director of health and human services in the mayor's Office of Operations.

The number of people with AIDS who receive welfare and are served by the city's Human Resources Administration has steadily increased in recent years. In a single year, from 1990 to 1991, the number of people with AIDS on the city caseloads rose 30 percent, to 10,041.

Recent surges in immigration have also caused the number of people on welfare to move up, Ms. Lord said. For example, 4,556 Russian refugees qualified for welfare last year.

At City Hall, Dinkins administration officials reacted to news of the millionth welfare recipient with political fervor, quickly blaming 12 years of Republican rule in Washington for the worsening plight of poor people.

"We have not had a war on poverty for the last 12 years," said Leland T. Jones, chief spokesman for Mayor David N. Dinkins. "After so much bad news and so much bad public policy, it's not surprising that the numbers are increasing."

Postal Service expects to make money on olympics

Hearst News Service

WASHINGTON — The U.S. Postal Service, which has come under attack from Congress for sponsoring the Olympic games, said Tuesday it expects to make a $55 million profit from the venture.

Robert Vunder, acting director of the Office of Olympic Marketing, said the profit will be generated by increased use of priority mail and the sale of Olympic commemorative stamps.

"We've done everything we said we would do," Vunder said in an interview. "We're spending less than anticipated and will make more money than we had projected."

The agency has spent $96 million on its sponsorship of the games. Most of the money went for advertising, which Vunder said is responsible for a huge boost in the use of the priority mail service.

Vunder said the Postal Service expects to make $77 million from the sale of 26 commemorative Olympic theme stamps.

The Postal Service's sponsorship of the Olympics came under congressional fire in June after a disclosure that the agency had asked many of its major business customers to attend the summer games as its guests.

The news spurred Sen. David Pryor, D-Ark., to ask the General Accounting Office (GAO), the investigative arm of Congress, to examine what he called the service's "giveaway" deal.

A few days later the House of Representatives unanimously approved a resolution condemning the agency's action as "an excessive and inappropriate expense to the American taxpayer who partially support such services financially."

Pryor's spokesman said Tuesday the GAO is having a difficult time with its review because of confusing accounting procedures used by the Postal Service.

Vunder said the agency spent $440,000 to host 118 big-time mailers who took advantage of the offer to attend the summer Olympics, which started July 26 and ended Sunday night.

Rypien inks

WASHINGTON — Washington Redskins quarterback Mark Rypien, the most valuable player in last year's Super Bowl, signed a new contract Tuesday and will join the team for this weekend's exhibition game in London, the team said.

Terms of the agreement were not disclosed.

Rypien had been holding out during the preseason while seeking $3.7 million a year, a figure that would make him among the NFL's five top-paid quarterbacks.

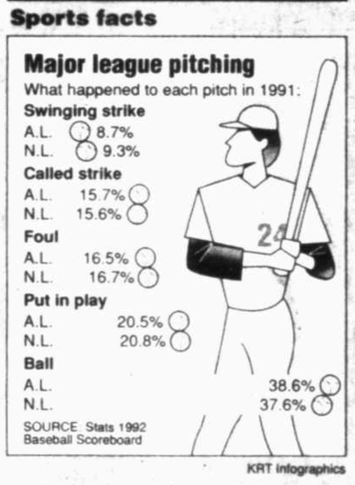

Washington had been offering $12 million over four years. "We're prepared to make Ryp one of the highest paid quarterbacks in the league," Washington general manager Charlie Casserly said Monday.

Looking for negotaion leverage, Rypien, a Canadian citizen, flirted with the Toronto Argonauts of the Canadian Football League, but the Argonauts withdrew their offer last week.

Dallas signee

AUSTIN — Veteran safety James Washington signed a contract Tuesday, reducing the number of Dallas Cowboys holdouts to five.

Washington joined the team for an afternoon workout.

He signed one day after head coach Jimmy Johnson threatened to reduce the roles of any players not in camp by next Monday.

Johnson reinforced the threat by demoting Washington from starting strong safety, where he finished last season, to backup free safety. Robert Williams was moved to starting strong safety.

'Old guys' eye PGA

By Bob Green
AP Golf Writer

ST. LOUIS — If there is a trend on the pro golf tour this year, it may be the revival of the old guys.

"I don't think it's something you should be shocked about. It's no real surprise. I think you're going to see more of it," U.S. Open champion Tom Kite said Tuesday after a practice round for the 74th PGA national championship, which begins Thursday on long, tough Bellerive.

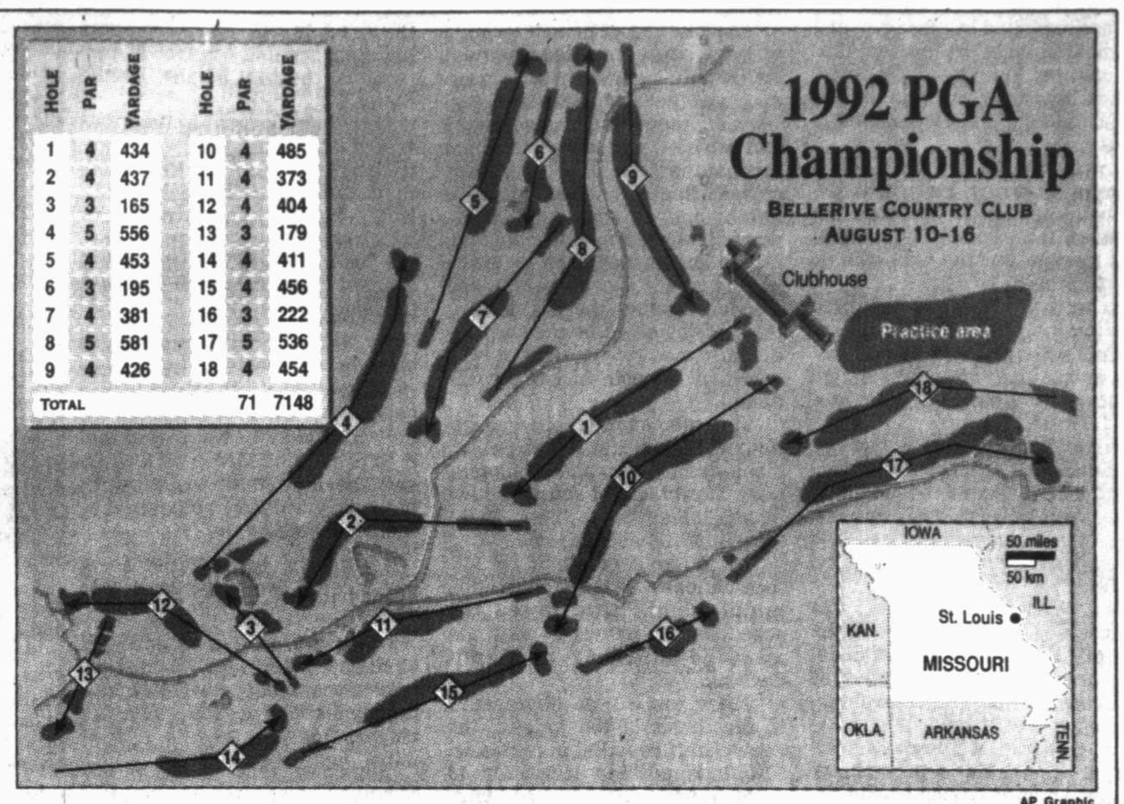

And it would be no great surprise, Kite said, if another member of the over-40 set would win the last of golf's Big Four events of the year.

Five of them have won this year, and all are capable of repeating.

Kite, 42, is the leader of that pack. The game's career money leader, coming off the worst season of his career, won in Atlanta in May and followed with a breakthrough victory in the U.S. Open at Pebble

■ Houston running back out to prove he's a multi-dimensional back.

Associated Press

SAN ANTONIO — Lorenzo White says he's ready to establish a new identity in the Houston Oilers run-and-shoot offense.

He wants to erase the image that he's a I-formation tailback from Michigan State with explosive running skills and no blocking or catching abilities so necessary for the run-and-shoot.

"You hear so much stuff about being a tailback," White said. "My feeling is I want to be a complete back. Everybody labels me as the I tailback.

"People say 'I didn't know you could catch.' I didn't have to catch (at Michigan State). When I was getting the ball 40 times a game there wasn't much chance to catch passes."

Now, however, White is the established superback in the Oilers offense and he has plenty of chances to block and catch.

"I think looking around the league, you've got to be more than a one-dimensional back," he said.

It's been an uphill battle for White since the Oilers made him their first round draft pick in 1988. He spent two seasons with little playing time before taking the starting job in 1990, replacing Mike Rozier.

White missed the entire preseason and first three regular season games last year as a contract holdout. He started slowly but finished with a flourish, averaging 4.2 yards per carry and gaining 465 yards in 13 games.

The Oilers have shown interest in adding more running plays and White thinks it will help production.

"My thing is I'm confident with running the quick traps, and if I get any

A.J. Foyt puts Indy years on auction block

Associated Press

INDIANAPOLIS — A.J. Foyt, no slave to nostalgia, is getting ready for the biggest garage sale in Indy history.

Want to buy the car Foyt drove to a record fourth Indianapolis 500 victory in 1977? It's here. How about the quarter-midget racer he built for his son as a replica of his 1961 Indy winner?

Want a 1984 Ferrari he drove only 8,000 miles? Better have some credit references, though. Foyt turned down $375,000 for the car a few years ago.

Thousands of items, including race cars, trophies, uniforms and equipment, will be auctioned off in a three-day sale starting Thursday at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway.

"I just don't have no room," Foyt said during an auction preview tour Tuesday. "I don't feel like keeping 'em up any more. I've had my fun with 'em for 35 years. Let someone else have some fun."

Even Foyt is amazed at the amount of material that had been stored in his home, at his ranch, in warehouses and at his racing shop in Houston. He already had given much of it away and thrown away a lot more.

Cars and boats are parked in garages in Gasoline Alley. The rest of the mammoth stock of items is stacked in rows beneath the infield Tower Terrace. Anglo American Auto Auctions of Nashville, Tenn., which will handle the sale, said it took nine semitrailers to bring the material to Indianapolis. And that doesn't include the race vehicles.

About 5,000 lots will be auctioned,

Horned Frogs put all-new look on football field in '92

By Mike Cochran
AP Writer

FORT WORTH — Texas Christian opens its football campaign this fall with a new coach, a new playing field, a new scoreboard, a new look and new enthusiasm.

"It's a whole new ballgame," is the trite but true motto of the 1992 Horned Frogs as the curtain rises on the Pat Sullivan era in Purpleville.

The 42-year-old former Heisman Trophy winner from Auburn was chosen last January to succeed the wacky but lovable Jim Wacker, who resigned after a rare winning season and fled to Minnesota.

Wacker's legacy includes 16 returning starters from a team that won seven games but lost as usual to Southwest Conference bullies Texas A&M and Texas.

"We haven't beaten Texas in 24 years or A&M in 19 years," Sullivan said, pointing out that TCU likewise has won but four times in 20 years against Texas Tech and Baylor.

"We've got to learn how to win those ball games. We've got to get the kids playing hard and believing in themselves and give them the confidence to compete."

It sounds simple enough but the Frogs haven't won a SWC title and a Cotton Bowl berth since the 1950s, when they captured four championships.

"TCU's won in the past and there's no reason we can't win in the future," Sullivan said. "It's not going to happen overnight. We've got to build a foundation.

"I think we've got a chance to be a good football team."

Defensive end Tunji Bolden is pinpointed as the premier player on the team but the key is senior quarterback Leon Clay, who says he likes what he's seen of the new regime.

But it is Clay's health, not his attitude, that is a question mark.

Injuries cut short his 1990 and 1991 campaigns, yet he accounted for a staggering 2,244 yards and 27 touchdowns in his last nine games.

"Leon's worked very, very hard this spring and summer in the rehabilitation program, and I look for him to have a full, healthy year," Sullivan said.

"He's our quarterback and our leader and the captain of our team."

With gifted targets Stephen Shipley and Richard Woodley at wide receiver and David Lewis and Kyle McPherson at flanker, TCU's passing game could be awesome.

Sullivan says Mike Noack at tight end and Michael Jackson's adjustment from wideout to running back are two more pleasant offensive surprises.

"And if Kyle McPherson wants to be, he can be as good as there is. He's got the ability."

Veteran tailbacks Curtis Modkins and Derrick Cullors give the Frogs a sound running game but Sullivan says a bigger, stronger offensive line is essential.

To that end, Sullivan and his staff have emphasized physical conditioning as much as anything.

"I don't want to say anything negative, but we were not a very good conditioned team," Sullivan said. "The work ethic was not what I wanted. So we've been very demanding of the players on and off the field.

"They have worked very hard. The most important thing, I think, is they have had fun. They are working toward a goal and having fun doing it."

Sullivan noted that enthusiasm is to be expected with a coaching change, but there are other positive signs that TCU is committed to move to the next level of competition.

Senate hearings unearth boxers' tales of exploitation, corruption

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Fighters often are exploited by managers and promoters, three professional boxers charged Tuesday at the outset of hearings described by a senator as "a requiem for a heavyweight sport."

One by one, Dave Tiberi, Bobby Czyz and James Pritchard described their sport as more big business than boxing — and one that manipulates the men who do the fighting.

"It wasn't long before I realized the total control that managers, promoters, matchmakers and others in position of power in the fight game exercised over boxers," Tiberi said.

James Toney's heavily disputed split-decision victory over Tiberi in a Feb. 8 fight spurred the inquiry — the first such public inquiry since the Kefauver hearings into allegations of corruption in the 1960s.

Sen. William Roth, R-Del., was so incensed by Tiberi's loss in the Atlantic City, N.J. fight that he introduced legislation aimed at bringing a measure of federal regulation to the sport.

At the outset of Tuesday's hearing, Roth said that a preliminary investigation of boxing by the Republican staff of the Senate committee had "found numerous irregularities" in the Toney-Tiberi fight.

"But perhaps even more disturbing than the shoddy treatment accorded Dave Tiberi," Roth said, "were the staff report's preliminary findings regarding the general state of corruption in boxing."

"Exploitation of boxers through onerous and one-sided contract provisions, lack of health insurance and pension plans and conflicts of interest among managers and promoters, as well as frequent mismatches, payoffs, organized crime influence and an ineffective patchwork of state regulation, were all alleged to exist," he said.

"We should not have to watch boxing, or any sporting event, and wonder whether the 'fix' is in ... this hearing could be seen as a requiem for a heavyweight sport," said Sen. Joseph Lieberman, D-Conn.

"The subcommittee has allegations that some of these people, managers, trainers and promoters, take advantage of unsuspecting boxers," Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., the panel's chairman, said,

The Toney-Tiberi fight for the International Boxing Federation middleweight title lasted the scheduled 12 rounds — and was awarded to Toney in a split decision.

"There was a wide discrepancy in the scores of the judges," the Senate staff reported in mid-June.

Roth is pushing legislation to create a non-profit "United States Boxing Commission." He says it would be "totally self-funding, thereby costing the taxpayer nothing."

It's aim, he adds, would be to "establish a national data base to assist state (boxing) commissions."

Larry Hazzard of the New Jersey State Athletic Control Commission said Roth's bill "represents a very progressive and crucial step as it relates to the promotion, maintenance and conduct of professional boxing in the United States."

"For many years, our sport has lacked the substantive structure necessary to provide for maximum uniformity in rules, regulations, policies and procedures which would protect and insure the best interests of the sport's greatest commodity — the boxer," he said.

"I sadly saw how the majority of fighters — depending upon their respective levels of talent — are viewed by their promoters," Tiberi testified. "Some are considered prime ribs, others pork chops and the least talented, scrapple, but rarely are they recognized as human beings."

He said he was offered a rematch with Toney but turned it down.

"The size of the purse continued to climb," Tiberi said. "Soon there were disparaging remarks regarding my decision not to re-enter the ring at this time.

"Somehow, those in the power structure of the boxing industry cannot understand that there is more involved here than money. There is a matter of principle and the critical issues related to the very future of the sport of boxing and, at times, the very life and death of those who enter the ring."

Tricky Manuevers set a new track record over the distance with a time of 19.55 seconds, breaking the old mark of 19.62.

little light or crease where I can square my shoulder it's going to be a big collision for the next person coming through," White said.

Running backs coach Frank Novak likes the sound of White's intentions.

"If Lorenzo, with his size, gets into the secondary one on one, I like his chances," Novak said.

The Oilers have shown an interest in improving their running game, something White has preached since arriving from Michigan State, where he was a non-blocking tailback who got 30 carries per game.

"There's no doubt they've got confident in the passing game but they've got to become confident in the run too," White said.

His most versatile performance was in a 23-20 victory over Dallas with 81 yards rushing and six receptions.

Redskins' Clark charged with theft

ROCKVILLE, Md. (AP) — Washington Redskins wide receiver Gary Clark was charged with theft Tuesday after being arrested while driving a stolen vehicle, authorities said.

Clark, a four-time Pro Bowl selection, was stopped after allegedly speeding Tuesday afternoon while driving on Interstate 270 north of Washington D.C., Maryland state police said.

He was released on his own recognizance and Tuesday night departed with the Redskins for London.

At Dulles International Airport, Clark said he was unaware the vehicle was stolen and that he had paid for it.

Twins steal ninth-inning win from Rangers, 3-2

Associated Press

MINNEAPOLIS — Chuck Knoblauch singled over the head of right fielder Ruben Sierra with two outs in the ninth inning Tuesday night, lifting the Minnesota Twins to a 3-2 victory over the Texas Rangers.

After Edwin Nunez pitched two perfect innings in relief of Nolan Ryan, Kenny Rogers (1-5) began the ninth and allowed Pedro Munoz's pinch-single. Scott Leius forced Munoz while trying to sacrifice and Greg Gagne popped out.

Jeff Russell relieved, Shane Mack extended his hitting streak to 16 games with a single and the runners advanced on a wild pitch before Knoblauch sent a 3-2 pitch down the right-field line. Sierra took a step in, stopped and raced back but couldn't make the catch in the corner.

John Smiley (12-6) pitched a four-hitter, walking two, striking out four and allowing no earned runs in his second complete game.

Ryan, in his first start since being ejected for the only time in his 26-year career, allowed two runs on five hits and four walks in six innings. He struck out seven.

The 45-year-old right-hander, tossed last Thursday by umpire Richie Garcia after hitting Oakland's Willie Wilson with an eighth-inning pitch, went to full counts on nine batters and needed 127 pitches to get through six innings.

American

Indians 3, Red Sox 1

CLEVELAND — Dave Otto, struggling to keep a spot in Cleveland's starting rotation, gave up one run in five innings as the Indians beat the Red Sox.

Cleveland, which has won six of its last eight, dropped the Red Sox eight games below .500 for the first time since Sept. 30, 1987.

Otto (5-8) yielded six hits and three walks in his second start since being recalled from Triple-A Colorado Springs. The left-hander is in danger of losing his job when Scott Scudder returns from the disabled list.

Ted Power pitched 2⅔ scoreless innings, allowing one hit. Derek Lilliquist got the last four outs for his fifth save.

Tigers 5, Yankees 1

DETROIT — Two-run homers by Lou Whitaker and rookie Rico Brogna helped Frank Tanana to his 230th career victory as the Tigers extended their winning streak to five games.

The Yankees' loss, combined with Cleveland's 3-1 victory over Boston, dropped New York into a tie with the Indians for last in the AL East.

Tanana (10-7) hit double figures in victories for the 14th time in 19 seasons. He allowed five hits, walked two and struck out one in 7⅔ innings, leaving after allowing Randy Velarde's fifth homer. John Kiely and Mike Henneman finished.

The winning streak matched Detroit's longest of the season.

Orioles 3, Blue Jays 0

TORONTO — Alan Mills and two relievers combined on Baltimore's American League-leading 11th shutout.

Mills (8-2) won for the first time as a starter, allowing four hits, striking out two and walking three in five innings as the Orioles trimmed the Blue Jays' lead in the AL East to two games. Todd Frohwirth allowed two hits, struck out four and walked one in three innings.

Astro homers sink San Francisco, 6-3

Associated Press

SAN FRANCISCO — Eric Anthony, Eddie Taubensee and Luis Gonzalez each hit home runs as the Houston Astros beat the San Francisco Giants 6-3 Tuesday to snap a five-game losing streak.

The Astros are 5-10 on their 26-game road trip.

Rookie right-hander Brian Williams (4-3) allowed three runs, five hits and struck out a season-high seven in six innings.

Taubensee ended a 3-for-28 slump when he homered on Francisco Oliveras' first pitch with one out in the third inning for a 1-0 Astros lead. It was Taubensee's fourth homer.

Gonzalez led off the fifth with his seventh home run, and the Astros chased Oliveras (0-1) when Ernest Riles doubled with one out in the sixth.

Jim Pena replaced Oliveras and Anthony hit a 3-2 pitch deep into the right-field stands for his 14th homer and a 4-0 lead.

Mets 2, Pirates 0

NEW YORK — Eric Hillman pitched eight strong innings in his first major league start, snapping Pittsburgh's 11-game winning streak and stopping New York's seven-game losing skid.

Hillman (1-0), a 6-foot-10 left-hander, allowed six hits, walked none and struck out four in outdueling Doug Drabek (9-9).

Hillman's bid to become the first Mets pitcher to toss a shutout in his first big-league start since Dick Rusteck on June 10, 1966, ended when the Mets pinch hit for him in the bottom of the eighth inning. The move brought loud boos from the crowd.

Still, on a damp evening in which the Mets honored Hall of Famer Tom Seaver before the game, Hillman pitched like one until John Franco relieved for his 13th save.

Expos 3, Cubs 2

CHICAGO — Delino DeShields' run-scoring single with two out in the 17th inning broke a tie as Montreal beat Chicago for a sixth win in seven games.

Darren Reed led off the 17th with a single against Jeff Robinson (2-2), but Tom Foley then bunted for a third strike attempting a sacrifice. On a hit-and-run play, Reed reached second while Archi Cianfrocco was thrown out by shortstop Rey Sanchez. DeShields then delivered the go-ahead hit.

Bill Sampen (1-4), the fifth Montreal pitcher, recorded his first win since last Sept. 22.

The 17-inning game equaled Montreal's longest since a 2-1 loss to St. Louis on April 25.

National

Dodgers 8, Reds 4

CINCINNATI — Rookie Eric Karros drove in a season-high four runs with two doubles as Los Angeles beat Cincinnati.

Bob Ojeda (6-5) got a four-run cushion in the first inning when Karros hit a bases-loaded double off Tim Belcher (9-11) to score three runs and Dave Hansen doubled in a run. Glenn Braggs prevented additional damage by throwing out Henry Rodriguez, who had walked after Karros' double and tried to score from first on Hansen's bloop hit.

Cardinals 7, Phillies 6

PHILADELPHIA — Tom Pagnozzi's go-ahead RBI double with two out in the ninth inning gave St. Louis a victory against Philadelphia.

The victory snapped the Cardinals' five-game losing streak and was only their fourth win in their last 18 games. The last-place Phillies lost their eighth game in their last nine, including the last three.

Padres 8, Braves 4

ATLANTA — Fred McGriff, Gary Sheffield and Darrin Jackson each hit two-run homers off John Smoltz and the surging Padres beat Atlanta, extending their winning streak to a season-high six games.

The Braves lead the National League West by four games over Cincinnati. The third-place Padres closed to 5½ games of Atlanta.

McGriff and Jackson each drove in three runs and Sheffield also had a pair of doubles.

Bruce Hurst (12-6) won his fourth in a row.

PGA: Five members of plus-40 set have won on tour this year

(From 1C)

Beach in June, the first major-tournament title of his career and the one he needed to confirm his stature in the game.

But he was not alone. Lanny Wadkins, 42, won the Hartford Open, Bruce Lietzke, 41, lost a playoff at Dallas, then won the next week in the Colonial at Fort Worth, and Ben Crenshaw, 40, won the Western Open.

And Ray Floyd, 49, won at Doral, chased Fred Couples to the Masters title and lost a playoff at Dallas.

"Tee to green, I'm playing the best golf of my life," Floyd said. "I can't explain it, but it's there, it's happening, it's a fact."

There may be a variety of reasons.

Floyd, for example, noted a decade ago that while athletes in other sports reach their peaks at younger ages, "a pro golfer's best years should be between the ages of 35 and 40."

"In golf, there isn't the emphasis on speed and agility there is in other sports — you don't have to run and you don't have to jump — and there's a great deal more emphasis on experience."

And Kite offers a couple of other ideas.

"Well, of course, the senior tour has a lot to do with it," he said. "Guys are playing longer because they know they have someplace to go when they're 50."

And that knowledge prompts them "to take better care of themselves than they used to," Kite said.

"They know they're going to be playing longer and they're trying to stay in shape, watch their diets, things like that.

"And don't overlook the fitness trailer," Kite said, referring to traveling exercise facility that has become as much a part of most players' practice routine as the driving range and putting green.

"That's made an enormous difference," he said.

How much difference?

Look at the numbers: Kite and Floyd are third and fifth, respectively, in winnings this year, third and second in scoring average, and ninth and second in all-around.

Another statistic points the finger at Lietzke, runnerup in the PGA a year ago, as a strong contender.

He is first in total driving, an average of driving distance and fairways hit.

"If you're hitting it long and hitting it straight, it's going to be a big, big advantage this week," Kite said. "The golf course is long and the rough is severe, some of the most severe I've seen at a PGA. You have to keep the ball on the short grass to have a chance."

Lietzke does that. The statistics say so. In overall driving, he's the best.

And the No. 2 man in that category? Why, it's Ray Floyd, which prompted Crenshaw to observe:

"Over the long haul, you're not going to win over youth."

Then he flashed a sly smile and added, on behalf of the old guys:

"But we're holding our own."

FOYT: Items include gears, carburetors and crankshafts with each lot ranging from a single item to bins of assorted auto parts and race equipment.

(From 1C)

"There's so much stuff here ... it's unbelievable," said Foyt, 57, whose racing career has been slowed by injuries but still drove at Indy for a record 35th consecutive year last May.

"I can look at my body and see what they've meant to me," said Foyt, who won't say whether he'll be back racing next season. "They mean a lot to me, but not if I can't keep 'em up. The cars are too nice to sit in a barn with three or four inches of dust on 'em."

Almost 300 bidders have registered for the auction, and Anglo American expect hundreds more to show up for the sale.

There will be no minimum bids.

"A lot of people have been bugging me. I just don't want to mess with it," Foyt said of maintaining the massive inventory. "If somebody wants this stuff, fine. If nobody bids on it, they can have it, as far as I'm concerned.

"It's not the money. I don't care if it brings a nickel," he said.

Every imaginable piece of racing equipment will be sold — gears and gaskets, spark plugs and suspensions, crankshafts and carburetors, fuel pumps and fuel tanks, pipes and pistons, tires and tool boxes, oil pans and air cleaners. Eight of Foyt's Indy cars are up for sale, along with race-ready engines, more than a half-dozen personal vehicles — including the limited edition Ferrari — and a 40-foot auto transporter with a machine shop.

Then there are hundreds of wheels. And dozens of trophies, most of them broken, chipped or tarnished. Foyt can't even remember where he won all of them. Some, though, still carry faded inscriptions commemorating victories in such races as the 1965 Daytona Firecracker 500 or of the 1960 U.S. Auto Club Indy car national championship.

"There's just no sense keeping 'em," Foyt said. "I've got too many beautiful trophies at home. These meant a lot at one time. But why do I want to put one up that's broken?"

Losing so much of his racing history won't bother him — yet.

Oilers should have veteran safety when they take on Dallas

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — The Houston Oilers agreed to terms Tuesday with starting free safety Bo Orlando.

Although the deal was not finalized, Orlando was expected in camp Wednesday to seal the deal and begin practice.

The Oilers were getting short at free safety. Mike Dumas and Charles Pharms both were injured in last Saturday's exhibition game with the Detroit Lions.

Dumas hurt an ankle and Pharms has a sore knee. Both are on a day-to-day basis and are expected to return to workouts shortly, the Oilers said.

"Bo is the only experienced free safety we have," defensive backs coach Pat Thomas said. "He did a good job last year. He's been in the pressure situation, and he does a good job of communicating."

The Oilers face a familiar foe, the Dallas Cowboys. The Oilers have faced the Cowboys in two scrimmages and on Saturday will play them in a pre-season game for the second time in less than a month.

"I'm sick of the Cowboys. They probably know our plays better than we do, and we probably know their plays better than they do," Oilers wide receiver Ernest Givins said.

Wide receivers Mario Bailey and Jeff Query, who have been sidelined with hamstring injuries, returned to practice Tuesday.

Defensive tackle Jeff Alm was placed on injured reserve after suffering an ankle injury in the Detroit exhibition game. He also is listed as day-to-day.

The Oilers made two cuts on Monday, waiving guard Greg McKee from Eastern Kentucky and tackle Jackie Rowan from Alabama State.

With the signing of Orlando, five veterans remain unsigned — guard Mike Munchak, defensive back Chris Dishman, wide receiver Curtis Duncan, defensive end William Fuller and defensive end Sean Jones.

American labor costs inch up 0.3 percent, slowest pace in 17 years

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — American labor costs, held back by the weak economy, have risen so far in 1992 at the slowest pace in 17 years, while productivity posted a healthy gain in the spring, the government said Tuesday.

The Labor Department said that unit labor costs for non-farm businesses inched up at an annual rate of just 0.3 percent in the April-June quarter, following a barely perceptible 0.1 percent rate of advance from January through March.

Meanwhile, productivity, defined as output per hour of work, posted a third consecutive healthy gain of 2.3 percent at an annual rate in the spring. That followed rates of 2.5 percent in last year's fourth quarter and a giant 3.8 percent advance from January through March, the best productivity showing in five years.

For the second quarter, the productivity increase was led by a big 4.7 percent rate of advance in manufacturing, reflecting strong gains in production of durable goods, long-lasting items such as cars.

Economists were encouraged by both the pickup in productivity gains and the extremely low increases in unit labor costs, saying the figures should translate into better profits for American companies and continued good news on inflation.

The gains, however, are a direct reflection of the stagnant economy, which has caused widespread layoffs, driven unemployment up to a current level of 7.7 percent and put severe downward pressure on wages.

"Four years of a moribund economy have played a large role in breaking the back of inflation," said Allen Sinai, chief economist of the Boston Co. "We have set the stage for the lowest rates of inflation in 30 years."

Prices slump

NEW YORK — Prices of most energy futures continued to slip Tuesday, led by fears that heating oil stocks are piling up faster than demand.

West Texas Intermediate for delivery in September settled at $20.91 per barrel, down 12 cents, at the New York Mercantile Exchange.

Local crude purchasers such as Scurlock Permian Corp. and Texaco Trading and Transportation lowered their posted price 25 cents to $19.50.

Analysts attributed the decline to anticipation that weekly figures released after the close of trading would show a rise in so-called distillate stocks, which includes heating oil.

The American Petroleum Institute reported that the supply of distillates, which includes home heating oil, rose 3.51 million barrels to 118.13 million barrels in the week ended last Friday.

VA rates cut

WASHINGTON — The Veterans Affairs Department said Tuesday it was cutting the maximum interest on VA mortgages to 7.5 percent, the lowest level in 19 years.

The VA said the rate reduction, the second in less than two months, will take effect Wednesday.

The latest reduction means that the monthly payment on a typical VA loan of $86,000 will now be $602, a savings of $121.26 from the $723.26 that loan would have cost a year ago at the then-prevailing VA rate of 8.5 percent, officials said.

Dollar boosted

NEW YORK — The dollar rose against other major currencies Tuesday after European central banks stepped in to bolster the greenback against the German mark.

The dollar ended the day in New York at 1.4670 marks, up from 1.4630 late Monday.

The dollar rose to 128.00 Japanese yen in late New York trading from late Monday's 127.90.

In late New York trading, the pound was quoted at $1.9275, down from $1.9315 late Monday.

Dow sinks

NEW YORK — Stock prices fell Tuesday following a round of computer-driven selling set off by concerns about Japan's economy and a variety of technical factors.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, which gained 5.40 points in the previous session, closed down 6.48 points at 3,331.10.

Declining issues outnumbered advances by about 6 to 5 on the New York Stock Exchange.

Convenience-store giant to trim 1,800 employees

■ Southland: Layoffs primarily to hit mid-level managers at corporate, division level.

N.Y. Times News Service

DALLAS — Southland Corp., trying to check the flow of red ink, said Tuesday that it will lay off 1,800 employees nationwide, including 250 in the Dallas-Fort Worth.

The company, which operates the 7-Eleven convenience store chain, said the layoffs primarily will hit mid-level managers at the corporate and division level. Workers at 6,382 7-Eleven stores in the United States and Canada — outlets owned by Southland — will not be furloughed, officials said.

Tuesday's layoff announcement is part of a broader restructuring aimed at slashing Southland's costs and improving its financial flexibility.

The company said it also plans to prepay $350 million in bank debt, another move intended to shore up its cash flow.

The restructuring, which resulted in one-time charge of $17.5 million in the second quarter, will save Southland $50 million in operating costs in 1993, the company said.

"We're trying to get leaner and more flexible," said Southland spokeswoman Cecilia Stubbs Norwood.

Southland also reported a net loss of $17.9 million for the three months ended June 30 — the company's third consecutive quarter of red ink. That compared with last year's net profit of $19.6 million for the same period, which included a $13 million gain from the company's debt restructuring.

Revenues in the second quarter totaled $1.98 billion, a decline of 6.8 percent, primarily due to 250 fewer stores operated by the Dallas-based company.

Southland has been shrinking its business since 1987, when it completed its ill-fated leveraged buyout and the convenience-store industry plunged into a brutal downward spiral.

It also has been closing 200 to 300 stores a year, spending money on upgrading existing sites rather than opening new ones.

After it finishes this latest round of layoffs in the next 60 days, Southland will have less than 41,000 workers. About 3,700 are employed in the Fort Worth-Dallas area, including 1,200 in the Dallas corporate office and division operations — where the job cuts will occur.

Since emerging from bankruptcy in March 1991, Southland has focused on refurbishing older stores and tinkering with its merchandising. It has succeeded in moving more inventory at higher margins, but that, alone, wasn't enough to change its fortunes.

"In order to derive the maximum possible benefit from these (merchandising) programs ... we must reduce our costs to levels more consistent with today's operating environment," Clark Matthews, Southland's president and chief executive officer, said in a statement.

The Dallas company imposed smaller rounds of layoffs in 1987, 1988 and 1990, but those cuts largely missed its corporate management. On June 24, however, Matthews announced that three top executives — two corporate executive vice presidents and one senior vice president — had resigned and would not be replaced.

"That was the first signal these guys were serious about cutting their costs," said William Eddleman, an analyst at Harris Securities in Dallas.

Three agencies endorse bill to raise S&L restitution rates

WASHINGTON (AP) — Three government agencies gave general endorsement on Tuesday to a bill designed to improve their ability to collect restitution from people convicted of banking and savings and loan law violations.

Rep. Frank Annunzio, D-Ill., chairman of the House Banking subcommittee on financial institutions supervision and the bill's sponsor, said a recent study indicated that "financial institution criminals have collectively paid less than one cent on the dollar of their court-ordered restitution.

"At a time when the American taxpayers are being asked for billions of dollars in additional funds to bail out financial institutions, I find it truly astonishing that wealthy crooks have been able to pay little or no restitution," he added.

Ira H. Raphaelson, Justice Department special counsel for financial institution fraud, said the restitution collection rate is about 5 percent, rather than 1 percent as the subcommittee's study suggested.

"The major impediment (to a better collection rate) is the complete squandering of the money," he said.

Raphaelson added that "the overwhelming majority of S&L crooks not only squandered the money they stole, but they also frittered away their own money in the process" and were unable to pay restitution.

MIDLAND PARK MALL has a way to help non-profit organizations raise funds.

Beginning this week, the mall will let non-profit groups operate the Mall train, according to Shawna Holiedy with the mall.

She said the organization can commit a certain number of man-hours to operate the train and keep the funds raised through train rides.

The first group to take advantage of this new fund-raiser is the American Diabetes Association, which will operate the train through Friday.

Saturday, the Just Say No program will operate the train for a week.

Other organizations interested may pick up applications at the mall office or contact Holiedy for details.

Also at the mall, MATNEY'S SHOES is expected to open either this weekend or early next week, and TEXAS STATE OPTICAL has begun a remodeling of its location. FAMOUS CORN DOGS has just completed remodeling its store.

Packing school lunches challenging

By Robert Briggs
Associated Press

As a chef — and a parent — I understand how challenging it is to prepare a school lunch.

I send my 8-year-old daughter Ashley off to school with a lunch box full of food, then eagerly anticipate her arrival home to see how well I've done that day.

I've learned that packing the lunch box isn't easy.

First, I'm not there to tell her what she should eat; she makes that decision herself. To complicate matters, my daughter's friends love to trade and share their lunches. So it's a challenge to prepare a nutritious lunch that is SO delicious my daughter will want to eat it herself!

I have come to realize that when I let my daughter help decide what goes into her lunch bag, she's more willing to eat what I've packed.

I am even more successful when I let her prepare some of the foods. This makes her feel more involved, helps teach her some basic food preparation skills and gives us a chance to work together.

Many lunch box foods can be prepared ahead of time. Often when I make a soup or plan a family dinner, I'll make a little extra so that I'll have the option of sending some to school if my daughter decides she likes it. (When sending soup to school for lunch, be sure to pack it in a thermos to keep it hot.)

The following are some recipes my daugher and I have developed together. Have fun!

I have come to realize that when I let my daughter help decide what goes into her lunch bag, she's more willing to eat what I've packed.

ASHLEY'S WHITE BEAN SOUP
½ pound dried white beans
4 cups chicken stock or broth
3 slices bacon, chopped
1 cup minced onion
2 stalks celery, minced
4 cloves garlic, minced
1 bay leaf
1 teaspoon lemon juice
Pepper, to taste
Salt, to taste (optional)
2 tablespoons grated Parmesan cheese

Rinse and pick over the beans, removing any stones or twigs. Soak beans overnight in cold water to cover or quick soak. To quick soak: combine the beans and the 4 cups stock in a large saucepan, bring to a boil, remove from heat, and let stand for 1 hour.

Cook bacon in a saucepot over low heat. Remove and reserve to use as a garnish, if desired. Increase heat to medium. Add onion, celery and garlic to the bacon fat. Saute until translucent. Add beans, stock and bay leaf. Simmer until beans are tender, about 2 hours, adding additional stock or water as needed.

When beans are cooked, remove bay leaf and discard. Puree ¾ cup of the soup in a food processor or blender and return to pot. Adjust consistency with stock or water if necessary. Season with lemon juice, pepper and salt, if desired. Serve garnished with Parmesan cheese and bacon. Makes 6 servings.

COTTAGE CHEESE DIP
2 cups low-fat cottage cheese, or softened low-fat cream cheese thinned slightly with skim milk
2 tablespoons minced onion or chives
2 teaspoons paprika
2 teaspoons lemon juice
4 drops hot pepper sauce, or to taste
1 clove garlic, minced
2 teaspoons Worcestershire sauce
2 sweet gherkins, minced

Combine all ingredients. If a smoother consistency is desired, puree dip in a food processor. Serve with crackers or with raw or blanched vegetables. Makes 2 cups.

LOW-FAT APPLE SALAD DRESSING
1 cup apple juice
1 teaspoon cornstarch
1 teaspoon cold water
⅓ cup apple cider vinegar
½ cup salad oil
¼ teaspoon pepper
1 teaspoon salt (optional)
1 teaspoon sugar

Bring apple juice to a boil. Combine cornstarch and cold water; mix until smooth. Whisk into apple juice. When juice returns to a boil, remove from heat and cool. Add remaining ingredients. Pack in a small container and send along with a salad of assorted greens, cucumbers and cherry tomatoes, or with sliced vegetables for dipping. Makes 2 cups.

Healthier breads are baked locally

By Linda Anderson

Now that most people don't have to work out in the fields all day long or walk for miles to get anywhere (I don't care what your parents told you about walking to school through 14 feet of snow, uphill both ways — it's not true), many of us find ourselves worried more and more about our expanding waistlines. And more and more companies are finding ways to help us along our road to healthier eating.

Anderson

Happy Days-Daylight Donuts in Midland is now offering three kinds of healthy bread — in addition, of course, to the donuts they do so well. These three breads are supposed to be much healthier than ordinary breads available at supermarkets. American Bakels Inc. of Little Rock, Ark., manufactures the flour for the breads, and the local shop bakes the loaves on site.

We got three loaves of the breads — one of each — and checked them out for taste, price and advertising accuracy. Since my kids aren't much for bread that isn't white, the taste-testers were some of my co-workers.

The breads — 6-Grain Bread, 4-Seed Bread and Jogga Bread — all cost $1.95 per loaf.

6-Grain Bread is advertised as having "No sugar, no cholesterol, no shortening. All natural. Excellent source of nutrients and fiber." Nutrition information claims each slice has 138 calories, 4.77 grams protein, 25.70 grams carbohydrates, and 1.72 grams fat. Sounds low-fat to me.

4-Seed Bread's advertising goes like this: "Robust flavor imparted by special blend of seeds." According to its nutrition information, each slice contains 153 calories, 5.58 grams protein, 25.80 grams carbohydrates and 3.14 grams fat — a little higher in fat than the other, but still a low-fat bread.

Jogga Bread is advertised as being "nutritious, attractive and tasty and is proof that healthy food can taste good as well. It contains wheat flour, malted wheat flakes, added bran, toasted soy grits and malt flour." Nutritionally speaking, each slice has 150 calories, 7.30 grams protein, 25.70 grams carbohydrates and 2.57 grams fat. So you can see, all these breads qualify as low-fat.

In the taste test, all the tasters were intrigued by the breads. Some preferred one, some another, but all agreed the breads tasted interesting. They were lighter in texture than some other healthy breads, but at the same time, they definitely were not plain white bread.

I liked them all. I just am not sure which one I prefer. They tasted about the same to me.

DEAR ABBY

Discovering family's past enriches present

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: My sisters and I have just closed our late father's estate, and I hope this message will get through to others who will eventually face the same challenge.

Van Buren

We will talk about knowing as much as possible about our family histories — but do we really know who is in the photo albums or where that old antique copper bedwarmer came from?

We thought we had asked all the right questions and had even written pages of historical interest to the family. What we discovered in the final cleaning of the cupboards were jewels we had no idea existed. (By "jewels" I mean items like the lovely wooden ukulele, circa 1917 — who bought it? Who played it? What fun picturing that scenario!)

Abby, won't you encourage anyone with living parents to poke into the cupboards and closets and pull something out each time they visit? Tell the parents what you "ran across" and build a wonderful conversation, urging them to talk about the items and what sentimental value they have.

It's never too early to begin doing any of these suggested things and adapt them to your own particular situation. Even if you have a parent who is living "in a home" — wouldn't that make for a more inspired visit and provide something concrete to talk about? Just think what memorable thoughts might be left with your parent after your visit is ended.

Something we are doing for our own children is using self-sticking labels on the back of all our framed photos, identifying the people, the places and the year each was taken.

Here's to even more creative ideas for communicating with those you love! — KARIN CONLY, CARLSBAD, CALIF.

DEAR KARIN: I'm all for improved communication between the generations. But no one should make a practice of going through another's belongings unless he first has permission to do so. Every family relationship is different, and some parents might resent the intrusion into their privacy.

DEAR ABBY: Your advice for first cousins to consult with a genetic counselor before marriage was wise, and very important even for second cousins.

My aunt was born with impaired hearing. She married her second cousin, and their child has no hearing at all! We know so much more about genetics today. Abby, please encourage your readers to get genetic counseling before they marry and have children. Much heartache can be avoided. — AWARE IN NEW JERSEY

DEAR AWARE: Thanks, I needed that. I have been inundated with letters from readers who married their first cousins and insist that their children are superbright, accomplished overachievers. And it is possible.

Everyone has desirable and undesirable recessive genes. If the desirable genes from both parties are compounded, the offspring are, indeed, fortunate. But if there are dominant inherited diseases present in the family, it's wise to seek the counseling of a genetics expert, because the consequences can be dire.

"How to Be Popular" is an excellent guide to becoming a better conversationalist and a more attractive person. Clinton counterattacks Bush health care plan

MIAMI (AP) — Bill Clinton counterattacked in the health care debate Tuesday, charging that any tax benefits to consumers from President Bush's proposal would be eaten up immediately by runaway medical costs.

The Democratic presidential nominee, campaigning before Southern state legislators, called Bush's plan a more-of-the-same offering that would not get at what he said was the root of the health care crisis — out-of-control administrative costs.

Clinton was responding to Republican charges that his own plan — which would force employers to provide coverage or pay into a government pool to insure Americans who are not covered — would lead to a huge tax hike and create a bureaucratic nightmare.

"When we ought to be engaged in a debate on a problem that's killing us, it's as if the president were saying, 'The only thing you have to fear is my opponent and new ideas,'" Clinton said.

He accused the president of practicing "fear mongering and blame placing and finger pointing" rather than trying to find a solution on health care.

Clinton said the nation was already moving toward universal coverage and higher taxes by forcing more responsibilities on states.

"Let's quit backing into this and face it up front and do something about it," he said.

Clinton said that under Bush's plan, which would include tax benefits to help uncovered people buy their own health insurance, a family that paid $3,000 a year for health care might get $450 in tax savings.

But Clinton said that with health care costs going up 15 percent a year, the family would just have to turn around and spend the tax savings on higher coverage costs.

He said his plan would require insurance companies to cover Americans in broad-based pools, rather than letting them pick just healthy people, like "25-year-old women who spend two hours a day at the gym, who don't smoke, don't drink, don't eat hamburgers and are going to live forever."

Bush's plan would do nothing toward health insurance reform, Clinton said. "If you give vouchers and you give tax deductions and it goes into the system we've got ... you're still going to have this mind-boggling bureaucratic mess that is the American system of health care."

'If you give vouchers and you give tax deductions and it goes into the system we've got . . . you're still going to have this mind-boggling bureaucratic mess that is the American system of health care.'

—Bill Clinton

The Arkansas governor, addressing the Southern Legislative Conference, spoke on the health care issue shortly after Health and Human Services Secretary Louis Sullivan offered the group a version of the Bush administration's attack against Clinton's plan.

"He's a good fellow; he's just got a heavy load to carry," Clinton said of Sullivan.

Clinton repeated a theme of recent days aimed at blunting what he predicts will be a Republican onslaught at that party's convention in Houston.

He said the Republicans would try to convince Americans that the Democrats "just can't wait to get into power in Washington and take your guns away and trample family values and raise taxes on every poor working person in America."

Noting that some Republicans had ridiculed him for hailing from a small, largely rural state, he appealed to the group's Southern pride.

"Let's show them that there is a new South and we're a lot smarter than they think we are," Clinton said, urging them to force Republicans to respond to "problems we really confront every day."

"We never got anywhere, anywhere, anywhere in our part of the country by being suckerpunched on appeal to our traditional values," Clinton said.

In Miami, Clinton played golf with his brother-in-law, Hugh Rodham, and then was to headline a fund-raising event Tuesday night.

On Wednesday, he was to talk to a teachers union in Pittsburgh and then head to Washington for a meeting with Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin.

One-third of non-smokers breathe workplace smoke

CHICAGO (AP) — Three of 10 nonsmokers who work indoors in California said they breathe other people's tobacco smoke, a survey found.

And since California has more ordinances restricting workplace smoking than other states, nonsmokers' exposure in the rest of the country is likely to be even greater, said John P. Pierce, head of cancer prevention and control at the Cancer Center of the University of California, San Diego.

Pierce and fellow researchers interviewed 7,162 adult, nonsmoking, indoor workers in California in late 1990, after identifying them in a random telephone poll.

The results, published in Wednesday's issue of The Journal of the American Medical Association, provide the first extensive look at nonsmokers' experiences with secondhand smoke in the workplace, Pierce said.

"Overall, 29.2 percent of nonsmokers who worked indoors reported environmental tobacco smoke exposure at the work site," researchers reported.

Even in settings with total smoking bans, 9.3 percent said they had been exposed to smoke on the job within two weeks before being interviewed, the researchers said.

That compared with a 23.2 percent exposure rate for those employed in settings with only a work-area restriction; 46.7 percent for those where smoking restrictions did not apply to the work area; and 51.4 percent for settings without smoking policies.

"These results indicate that adequate protection of nonsmokers from environmental tobacco smoke exposure requires a smoke-free work site," the researchers concluded.

Thomas Lauria, a spokesman for the Tobacco Institute, a Washington-based industry group that disputes reports that environmental smoke is hazardous, dismissed the state government-funded study as "little more than an ill-conceived political document."

Every indoor site has a different ventilation rate, he said, "so there's an almost infinite number of variables that the authors ignore."

'These results indicate that adequate protection of nonsmokers from environmental tobacco smoke exposure requires a smoke-free work site.'

— researchers

"Given that 55 million American adults smoke, the study's broad two-week time span for even a single nonsmoker's exposure to cigarette smoke is wide enough to be meaningless," Lauria said Tuesday.

The American Heart Association said last year that passive smoking kills 53,000 nonsmokers a year by causing cancer, heart disease and related ailments, making it the nation's third leading cause of preventable death.

The association called for treating secondhand smoke as an environmental toxin that should be eliminated from public buildings, places of business and homes.

Similarly, the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency has concluded in a draft report that environmental tobacco smoke causes cancer in nonsmokers.

If approved as drafted, the report would classify secondhand smoke as a Class A carcinogen, like asbestos, said Dave Ryan, an EPA spokesman in Washington.

"The available evidence indicates that bans are accepted by smokers once the bans are implemented," the researchers wrote.

"Although these facts alone will motivate many employers to take further action, we also must work toward establishing local smoking ordinances that require smoke-free work sites to protect the health of nonsmoking workers."

We attempt whenever possible to promote from within. All of our current store managers, middle and upper management started with the company at the entry level. It is possible to move up quickly based on your experience and level of education.

Working in a convenience store is both exciting and challenging. You have to be outgoing and enjoy serving the public, while at the same time be a self-starter, as you receive very little on the job supervision.

If you are considering a career in the retail industry, give Kent Oil your consideration. Please apply at the Kent Oil office Monday-Friday 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. 3314 N. Loop 250 in Midland.
