Today is election day; Polls are open until 7 p.m.

Polls are open until 7 o'clock this evening as Scurry Countians join the rest of the state and the nation in exercising their right to vote.

Topping every ballot is the presidential race, but citizens in a number of states will also be deciding other key issues. As many as 18 initiatives in 13 states deal with term limits. Eleven states have environmental and wildlife issues on the ballot, and seven states are focusing on tax questions. Most of those would make it more difficult to raise taxes, or create new ones.

Initiatives in California, Missouri, Montana and Oregon would increase the minumum wage. The ballots in six states address gambling, and still others have issues related to school choice and campaign finance.

In California, one proposition would allow doctors to prescribe marijuana to patients.

For Scurry County residents though, the focus is on individual offices. There are contested races for county sheriff, district attorney, county attorney, county clerk and Precinct 3 commissioner on the ballot. Also impacting local residents are a U.S. Senator's race, a race for U.S. Representative and another for State Representative.

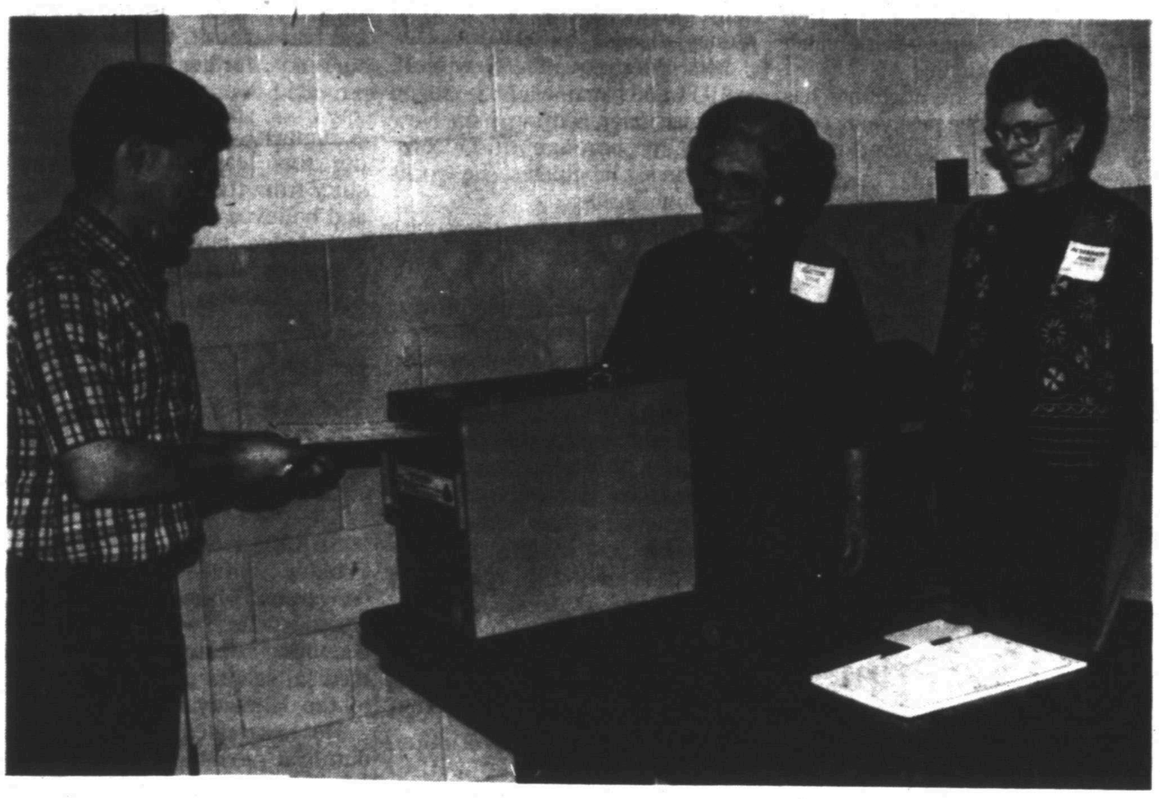

At mid-morning today, election clerks reported a steady stream of voters, but numbers were not indicating a widespread turnout. More than 2,500 people turned out to cast a ballot in the early balloting period.

Those planning to vote this evening should go to one of 11 locations, depending on where they live within the county. Voters should look on their voter registration card for the box marked "Prec. No." That number will tell them which box to vote in.

The boxes and their locations are: 5, Fluvanna Community Center; 6, Union Community Center; 7, county library; 8, SISD Administration Office; 9, Ira Community Center; 10, Towle Park Barn; 11, Dunn Community Center; 12, south side of the coliseum; 13, Hermleigh Community Center; 14, Northeast Community Center; and 15, north side of the coliseum.

THE SDN COLUMN

By Roy McQueen

The feller on Deep Creek says, "The past may be questionable, but the future is spotless."

Vote Today!

Unless there's a tie, and only the advertising guys are hoping for that, the elections of 1996 will soon be history.

Citizens can now get their minds on the important stuff — planning the family Thanksgiving menu and starting the Christmas shopping list.

If you believe some of the candidates and if their opponents are elected, the economy may be too bad to allow for Christmas this year. If Santa makes his rounds on Christmas Eve, I guess we'll know if the right people were elected.

Polls Open Until 7 p.m.!

We like the early voting period, and obviously many others do, too. We do, however, have a problem with massive voter signups.

We've yet to understand the logic of getting disinterested voters signed up and to the polls.

It seems that a person who makes the effort on their own to register is more likely to be an informed voter than a person who is rounded up by political activist in a shopping center.

Campaign financing reform seems to be a popular topic. On the national and state level, incumbents seem to have a decided advantage.

One way to level the playing field is to prohibit campaign contributuons from outside the jurisdication for which the office serves.

For a presidential candidate, we would ban financial contributions from persons outside the United States. A candidate for U.S. Senate could only recieve funds from the home state. And congressional and state lawmakers, likewise, could only get campaign money from the district they want to represent.

But money speaks louder than words, and it's a pretty sure bet that limiting campaign donations is just more political rhetoric.

Still Time to Vote!

During elections, it's always helpful to keep a sense of humor.

We're reminded of the congressional candidate who encountered an unfriendly crowd. Halfway though his pitch, he was pelted with tomatoes and over-ripe fruit.

He was quick on his feet and soon turned the jeers to cheers. "My critics," he said, "may not think I know much about farm problems, but they'll have to admit I've been a big help with farm surplus."

County grand jury hands down eleven indictments

A Scurry County grand jury handed down 11 indictments Monday, including three for aggravated assault against a Mitchell County man.

Justin Glenn Sullivan, 22, of 1305 Chestnut in Colorado City, was indicted for aggravated assault following an Oct. 20 incident in which he is alleged to have intentionally driven his vehicle into the back of another vehicle during a domestic dispute. Three people were in the other vehicle and each indictment alleges intent to harm each one separately. Sullivan has been freed on $30,000 bond — $10,000 on each indictment.

Manuel Sandoval Jr., 23, of 2011 Ave. N was indicted for injury to a child. During a domestic dispute on Oct. 23, Sandoval allegedly drove his vehicle into another vehicle, causing injury to a girl under the age of 14. He is free on $10,000 bond.

Twenty-five-year-old Diane Iglehart was indicted for forgery. Iglehart, of P.O. Box 763, is charged writing a fradulent check in the amount of $250 on Oct. 9. Bond has been set at $5,000.

Scott Allen Maynard, 38, of 2807 Ave. I was indicted for an Aug. 23 offense of possession of a firearm by a felon. Bond was set at $5,000.

Eddie Glenn Mills, 40, and Roy Lunn Star, 39, were each indicted for theft. They are charged with stealing a vehicle from a local business on Oct. 6, stripping it, and selling the parts. Bond was set at $5,000 each.

Starr, who lives at 1000 30th, is being held in the county jail. Mills, of 3011 Ave. N, had not been arrested as of mid-morning Tuesday.

Two men were indicted f[illegible] possession of a controlled substance in a correctional facility — specifically having marijuana in the county jail. Arthur Ramos Garcia, 20, of 515 Newman, Apt. 10 in Sweetwater was charged with an Oct, 29 offense. Ruben Findencio Munoz, 21, of 106 Ave. R was charged with an Aug. 15 offense. Both are in jail on $5,000 bond.

David Michael Whiteley, 44, of Box 354 in Center Point was indicted for an Oct. 11 offense of driving while intoxicated.

Too comfy!

It was strictly a case of laying down on the job.

Snyder 9-1-1 dispatchers Monday afternoon received a call of a man laying face down in an alley in the 4500 Block of College Avenue.

An ambulance and police car responded to the location, only to find a plumber working.

Forgotten duct tape causes jetliner crash

NEW YORK (AP) — Workers polishing a Peruvian jetliner forgot to remove duct tape they had put over crucial sensors, leading to a crash last month that killed all 70 people aboard, NBC News reported.

The Aeroperu Boeing 757 crashed into the Pacific Ocean on Oct. 2 shortly after takeoff from Lima, Peru.

Workers had placed the duct tape over the sensors — which monitor air pressure and help track altitude and airspeed — while polishing the outside of the plane in order to keep polish from getting into the sensor holes, NBC reported Monday.

In Seattle, Liz Verdier, a spokeswoman for Boeing Commercial Airplane Group, said that only the National Transportation Safety Board could comment on the investigation. NTSB spokesman Allen Pollock said today that any word on the crash's cause would have to come from authorities in Lima. The NTSB is only assisting in the investigation, he said.

Minutes after the plane left the Lima airport, pilot Erick Schreiber radioed that his instruments had failed.

"What's happening? What altitude am I at? Why is my ground crash alarm on? Am I over land or sea?" Schreiber asked air traffic controllers.

In the past 10 years, at least 12 Peruvian planes providing commercial service have crashed in Peru.

The Federal Aviation Administration gives Peruvian regulation of aviation only a "conditional" safety rating.

Public viewing begins Wednesday at museum

Public viewing of the Diamond M Museum collection will begin Wednesday in preparation for Friday's auction.

Viewing hours will be from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Wednesday and Thursday and from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. Friday. There will also be a special viewing from 6-9 p.m. Thursday.

The auction will begin at 1 p.m. Friday under the direction of Bentley's.

To be auctioned is much of the collection of the late Mr. and Mrs. C.T. McLaughlin. Among the pieces are Western and European art and bronzes, Currier & Ives lithographs and Eskimo art. Office equipment will also be auctioned.

Mr. McLaughlin was a nationally known oil man, rancher, banker, art collector and philanthropist. He and his wife collected all types of art and originally kept the pieces in their home.

The Diamond M Foundation was established in 1949 and the museum officially opened its doors to the public in 1964.

Much of the collection was moved to Texas Tech University in recent years, and in May of 1994 the board of regents there approved an $864,000 expansion to house the works.

What remains of the collection in Snyder is still considered one of the finest displays of Western Heritage and European artwork in the Southwest.

The museum is located at 909 25th St.

Food drive set Saturday

The annual Scouting For Food drive will be held Saturday.

Girl Scouts, Cub Scouts and Boy Scouts will be distributing food bags on Thursday and Friday. Citizens are asked to put non-perishable foods and canned goods in the bags and place the bags on their porch by 9 a.m. Saturday.

Troop leaders said to ignore the dates printed on the bags since they are incorrect.

Items collected by the Scouts will be donated to the Food Cupboard.

Brandon Kemp wins top prize

The tie-breaker was used to decide first place between Brandon Kemp of 2801 38th and Megan McCormick of 2805 32nd in last week's SDN football contest.

Both contestants missed two games, but Kemp was declared the winner and will receive the first place check of $50. McCormick earns $25 for her effort.

There were 13 people who missed three games, but Chris Maxfield guessed the exact number of points in the Snyder-Plainview game to claim the third place prize of $15.

The others who missed three were Tommy Clayton, Darrell Robertson, Elida Chaves, Cheryl Coward, Ninta Martinez, Rick Rodgers, Joshua Kemp, Jacob Kemp, Billy Bob McMullan, Aamuel Aviles, Frank McCravey and Wayne Ware.

A new contest begins today.

ASK US

Q—If you vote for more than one candidate in a race, how do you know which will be counted?

A—This constitutes an overvote and neither candidate would receive a vote.

Swiss account rumors surprised refugee

NEW YORK (AP) — Greta Beer's hunt for her late father's fortune, missing from a Swiss bank since World War II, is becoming only more traumatic with time.

Switzerland's ambassador cited her case last week as an example of how difficult it will be to search for accounts of European Jews and refugees who put money in Swiss banks for safekeeping during the war.

Swiss bankers found the account of Mrs. Beer's father, said Ambassador Carlo Jagmetti, "but they discovered her uncles had taken everything."

Mrs. Beer was flabbergasted, and a prominent Swiss banker now says the tale may be nothing more than rumor.

No one had given Mrs. Beer evidence showing an uncle or any other relative had access to her father's accounts. What's more, she was outraged to hear her financial history discussed at a Washington news conference, where Jagmetti made his remarks.

"I'm absolutely, terribly upset," a visibly angry Mrs. Beers said Monday. "I find this a slander and a defamation of character."

Her case provides a window on the tangle of emotions, rumor and conflicting agendas that go hand-in-hand with investigations into the missing accounts of Holocaust victims and refugees.

The hunt for the accounts has quickened over the past year, partly due to newly uncovered documents in the National Archives that have given Jews fresh information to reopen their search.

The Swiss banks say they have found about $32 million in unclaimed assets and that about 1,000 claims have been submitted regarding dormant accounts. Jewish groups say $7 billion is missing.

Switzerland and its banks have opened several investigations, and President Clinton said Monday he's ordered an expanded probe of U.S. government records.

If Mrs. Beer's case is a microcosm of the international effort, the revisiting of these 50-year-old claims has gotten off to a rocky start.

Mrs. Beer fled the Nazis in Romania during the war and the communists afterward. Her father, Siegfried Deligdisch, and his brother, Bernard, were partners in a large textile mill.

With the Nazis advancing, her father opened a Swiss bank account, but Mrs. Beer doesn't have records of the account or the bank's name. Deligdisch died of kidney disease in 1940.

Mrs. Beer moved to New York in 1951 and became a U.S. citizen five years later, settling in the New York City borough of Queens. Fluent in six languages, she works as a tour guide.

In the 1960s, after the Swiss government passed a law allowing for the recovery of Jewish accounts, Mrs. Beer, her brother and mother began searching.

Mrs. Beer and her mother, who has since died, went from bank to bank, trying unsuccessfully to find an account under the name of Deligdisch. While Mrs. Beer doesn't know how much would be in the account, her father was successful and wealthy.

The case gained the attention of Sen. Alfonse D'Amato, R-N.Y., after she spoke to his Senate Banking Committee in April.

At the hearing, Hans Baer, a bank chairman and senior official in the Swiss Bankers Association, invited her to Switzerland to search. She flew to Zurich last July for a week.

In a phone interview from Zurich, Baer said he showed Mrs. Beer how Swiss bankers and others were investigating dormant accounts. He suggested Mrs. Beer first raised the possibility her uncle had access to her father's account; she denies the claim.

However, Baer acknowledged that her uncle's involvement appears to be just a rumor and that there has been no official communication with Mrs. Beer about the account.

"No one can make an announcement without contacting her first," Baer said. "That would be contravening Swiss banking law."

Mrs. Beer said her uncle's financial affairs were separate and have "no bearing on my father's account."

In late September, a Swiss banking source told reporters new information had surfaced about the account. Research showed an uncle had access to the account and had taken it, the source said, but no further details were provided.

Jagmetti, the Swiss ambassador, then learned of Mrs. Beer's story from the Bronfman briefing and believed the case was public knowledge, said David Vogelsanger, political affairs director at the Swiss Embassy.

U.S. doctor, wife die during snowstorm in the Himalayas

SEATTLE (AP) — Dr. Philip J. Fialkow moved with care in dangerous places, friends say, whether he was considering becoming dean of a troubled medical school or planning a trip to the Himalayas.

He exercised that caution during a mountain trek in Nepal when a freak snowstorm left him slightly frostbitten. Fialkow sent back most of his guides for a helicopter while he waited in camp with his wife, Helen, and three more men.

All these precautions could not save the Fialkows. The couple and their companions were killed in their tent under a crushing mound of snow as they slept. Rescuers were unsure exactly when they died, but they were last seen alive Oct. 21.

"The personal loss is very great for me," University of Washington President Richard McCormick said Sunday. "During my initial year as president, I relied especially heavily on Phil as a guide, an adviser and simply a supremely wise and thoughtful human being."

Fialkow, dean of the University of Washington medical school, was making his fourth trip to Nepal, an excursion friends said he had planned eagerly for a year. Fialkow's deputy, Dr. John B. Coombs, said the couple, both 62, approached their hikes with the same care a physician would take going into surgery.

"Phil and Helen's passion was travel and learning more about other cultures, and Nepal was a place of great attraction to him," Coombs said.

The Fialkows, who had two grown children, were making a simple trek through the well-traveled low mountain forests on their way to a Tibetan Buddhist monastery.

The couple set out with 12 Nepalese assistants — four sherpas, one cook, two kitchen aides and five porters. Authorities in Nepal said the group was caught by an unusual October storm that dumped up to 9 feet of snow on the trails.

Fialkow was frostbitten after crossing a 20,100-foot mountain pass and asked his guides and porters to go back for a helicopter. Three Nepalese stayed with the couple in their camp, at an altitude of 15,500 feet.

It was unclear whether they were buried in an avalanche or the weight of the snowfall caused their tent to collapse. Maj. Kisendra Shahi, the helicopter pilot who retrieved the bodies, said they were in sleeping clothes, shoeless and lying in a row.

The bodies were dug out Sunday from under 8 feet of snow.

Fialkow was a distinguished researcher who did groundbreaking work on the genetics of cancer tumors and leukemia two years after he joined the university faculty in 1965.

"He did all this by using very, very simple techniques," said Dr. George Stamatoyannopoulis, a fellow geneticist who worked with Fialkow for three decades. "Still his work is being cited in textbooks and monographs today."

Pageant jumps to ABC network

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — And the winner of the Miss America Pageant is ... ABC!

The pageant, a fall television fixture on NBC for 30 years, is moving to ABC.

Miss America organizers are hoping the move will boost the show's ratings, which NBC felt were disappointing this year, according to the pageant head.

"Nothing against NBC in the slightest. It's an opportunity to tap some new creative minds to help us come up with some exciting TV," Leonard Horn, chief executive officer of the Miss America Organization, said Monday.

Horn said ABC, which has been wooing the pageant for years, has more expertise in producing live events than does NBC.

NBC has been televising the event since 1966.

The 1996 telecast drew a 13.1 rating and a 25 share, meaning 12.7 million households tuned in.

Michael Jackson to become dad

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Sorry Billie Jean, the mother of Michael Jackson's child is Debbie Rowe.

Jackson on Monday announced he's going to be a pop, denying a tabloid report that the couple used artificial insemination and that Rowe, the singer's friend for 15 years, was being paid to have the baby.

"I am thrilled that I will soon be a father. ... This is my dream come true," Jackson, 38, said in a statement.

Rowe, 37, will have the child sometime next year, according to the statement, released by Jackson's spokeswoman Christine Holevas. No other details about Rowe were released.

Holevas denied a Sunday report in the London tabloid News of the World that the baby was a product of artificial insemination and that Rowe was being paid $528,000. She called the report "completely false and irresponsible."

Gardeners: check daylength for failures

By JAMES E. WALTERS

PHOENIX (AP) — In ancient times, people became experts on daylength because their lives and crops depended upon it. These days, home gardeners often overlook the phenomenon but need to recheck it when puzzled by failure with flowers or vegetables.

Onions are the classic example of how different varieties respond differently to short-day or long-day hours. However, many other plants also vary in their response. Short-day species include chrysanthemum, poinsettia and corn while long-day examples are cabbage, beets and roses.

So, regardless of where you garden, daylength needs to be considered.

In subtropical Arizona, where I garden, to secure onion bulbs it's necessary to plant short-day types like Granex, Bermuda and Grano in November and long-day types such as Sweet Spanish and Granada from late January to mid-February.

If planted here in the fall, long-day types will develop a large, thick neck rather than a bulb. They need more daylight than is available. But if short-day types are planted in the fall, bulb development starts in February, when daylight ranges from 9 to 12 hours, and continues until they mature in midspring. Long-day bulbs mature around mid-July from the January-February planting.

The system is not perfectly predictable but is accurate enough to pinpoint plants which will do well or poorly under most conditions. For example, refinements include delaying or hastening the flowering of chrysanthemum by covering with black cloth (to shorten the day) or adding incandescent light (to lengthen the day).

Elaborate tables now are available showing the amount of daylight hours for key dates outdoors in various latitudes. This was not always the case. The prehistoric Hohokam Indians built a four-story building using Arizona desert materials. Much of it still stands, preserved as the Casa Grande national monument.

Why it was built is subject to debate. But at certain times of the year, and only then, sunlight floods certain rooms through tiny slits. Most observers believe this was a signal that it was time to plant crops.

Robert Johnson Jr., president of Johnny's Selected Seeds, Foss Hill Rd., Albion, Maine 04910, offered an intriguing look at daylength in a company newsletter some years ago.

"Every place in the world receives about the same number of daylight hours in the course of a year," he said. "It is only the seasonal distribution of daylight that is different."

The number of daylight hours varies according to latitude and time of year except on the equinoxes, March 21 and Sept. 22, when there are about 12 hours of daylight everywhere on Earth.

The farther from the equator, the longer the day from spring through summer.

ing a long and strong suit, but little defense. Most of us, sitting North, would nod knowingly. Don't partners always do that sort of thing? But not Larry Edwards, who died in 1985. When East made a takeout double and West bid four spades, Edwards realized his partner had to be very short in spades. So he raised to five hearts!

And when East contested with five spades, Edwards apparently "sacrificed" in six hearts!

Finally, when East doubled, Edwards redoubled, perhaps with the thought of persuading East to retreat to six spades. However, everyone passed.

Of course, you or I sitting West would have led a diamond, but this West, not being psychic, placed a spade on the table. The declarer, Michael Radin, ruffed and played the heart king. A moment later he drew trumps and claimed.

Fireworks at the table

By Phillip Alder

How do you view fireworks? In Australia, they are illegal. In the Netherlands, all wildlife is driven crazy with fear on New Year's Eve as everyone sets fireworks off at midnight. And in Britain, many people set them off tonight to commemorate the failure of Guy Fawkes and his gang to blow up the Houses of Parliament.

At the bridge table, fireworks usually come from an auction with lots of doubles and a large penalty. This deal, although it features two doubles and a redouble, is remarkable for North's actions. It was in Alan Truscott's book "Doubles and Redoubles" (Random House, 1987).

South began with a four-heart preempt at adverse vulnerability, show-

Woman tries to keep oil boom memories alive

MIDWEST, Wyo. (AP) — It took 60 years, but Pauline Schultz has watched a dream come true.

Of the Salt Creek oil field, early memories are fading. From 1908 to 1925, thousands of people flocked to northeastern Natrona County to drill for light crude trapped in the Cretaceous sands.

With the boom came a proliferation of services, far beyond any found today. The Midwest-Edgerton area had a Penney's store, a music store, a theater, hotel, lodge hall and barber ship. Oil workers paid $1 a month for complete family medical coverage, which was provided by company doctors and nurses. Trains ran regularly to Casper, 47 miles away.

The Salt Creek field has been a source of immense wealth. Through July, it had produced 655 million barrels of oil and 57 billion cubic feet of natural gas, according to Petroleum Information Corp. estimates.

But Salt Creek is emblematic of many Wyoming fields. The oil which once flowed abundantly now comes in dribs and drabs. It's running out and nobody knows for sure how long what's left will last.

Old timers also are declining, just like the great field in which they spent their lives. But age seems merely to have sharpened Schultz's resolve. At 81, she is passionate in her efforts to preserve through stories and artifacts remembrances of Salt Creek.

Walking through the Salt Creek Museum in Midwest, among tools safeguarded from the corruptions of time and walls filled with historic photographs, Schultz rattles off place names and dates as though 70 years passed were merely a day.

There's a model oil derrick, circa 1910, and a map showing locations of the worker camps. Fifteen thousand people once lived in the area. Salt Creek was the first electrified oil field. In November 1925, night football was played for the first time, lit up by oil field power.

Then there was Harry Graham, a district superintendent. In Graham's day, if a child got into trouble, dad got fired.

"I've got a photographic mind," Schultz says. "That's been a godsend to me."

For decades, Schultz has collected items from the oil patch. She seems bred to it. She lived most her life in oil fields. Her father worked in the oil business. In 1859, her great-grandfather was killed in an oil field accident in Titusville, Pa.

And she loves history. She has amassed volumes of information and filled rooms with relics of Salt Creek life. Nearby Teapot Dome and the Shannon field haven't been forgotten, either.

"She's just kind of an amateur pack rat, I guess," said Midwest Clerk-Treasurer Dolly Harrison. "It's just marvelous what she has put together."

But the museum is not only about rusty implements or yellowing pages. It's about making connections. Visitors have traveled long distances, seeking some part of themselves among the records and old grave sites. In one instance, a man traveled from Denmark to see where his grandfather, who was a company horticulturist during the 1920s, had worked.

Two years ago, the town provided larger quarters for the collection. It's now a modest, walk-in museum. There is no charge but donations are accepted.

"I've been talking museums for 60 years," Schultz said. "It's such a dream come true."

Schultz hopes others will carry on her work. The principal criterion is simple: "It has to be somebody who cares," she said. At the moment, she has hopes for some of the local young people.

"I'm the happiest old woman you'll ever meet," she said. "Look forward to getting older. It's really wonderful if you keep your interests up."

Informal Rio Grande crossing may close

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — In the remote Big Bend country, residents and tourists use at least a dozen informal border crossings along the Rio Grande to travel between Texas and Mexico.

But under the border drug crackdown "Operation Hard Line," U.S. Customs wants to close those crossings and limit entry to the area's only official port in Presidio, the San Antonio Express-News reported Monday.

"The law is very specific. It states that you can cross into the United States, whether it is persons or goods, only at a border crossing or a port of entry that has been designated by the secretary of the treasury," said Charles Strong, port director at Presidio.

Violators could be fined up to $5,000 for the first offense and $10,000 a second offense. Criminal prosecution could result in up to a year in prison.

Beth Garcia of Lajitas is well acquainted with the centuries-old tradition of casual, undocumented crossings. When she visits her mother-in-law in Paso Lajitas, Mexico, it's a quick 50-cent boat ride across the Rio Grande with no time lost on Customs or immigration inspections.

Traveling 50 miles to Presidio to cross doesn't make sense, she said.

"It would be a full day to go see them, and they live right across the river," Ms. Garcia said.

Last year, some 16 million pedestrians and 39 million private vehicles passed through formal U.S. Customs inspections entering Texas from Mexico, with about the same number going the other way.

But in the Big Bend area, both tourists and natives often treat the river as an incidental inconvenience, not a regulated international boundary.

Informal border crossings are located from La Linda, just east of the Big Bend National Park, to Porvenir, south of Van Horne.

So far, Customs has done little more than close a bridge used by a mining company at La Linda and warn tour companies in Lajitas against taking tourists into Mexico.

Jose Falcon, mayor of Boquillas del Carmen, a small Mexican community of 200 across from the national park, said closing the informal river crossing at his town would cause instant hardship.

Each week, dozens of park visitors pay $2 for a ride across the Rio Grande in a small flat-bottom boat to Boquillas where they ride burros, buy minerals and relax in Falcon's restaurant.

Musquiz, the nearest city in Mexico, is 145 miles away, and the park provides many of life's necessities to Boquillas.

Mom Becomes Too Amicable Following Daughter's Divorce

by Abigail Van Buren

© 1996 Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: My problem is my mother and my ex-husband. When "Steve" and I divorced two years ago, there were a lot of hard feelings. My mother is aware of this because I was living with her at the time.

Abby, my mother constantly takes Steve's side over mine. She repeatedly "reminds" me how lucky I am that Steve pays child support and has regular visits with our daughter. I agree that I am luckier than most divorced mothers. But when I discuss any problem I might be having with Steve, Mom takes his side and says, "He pulls his own weight."

What I would like Steve to do is to take more responsibility for our daughter. She stays with him two days a week, but you can bet that on one of those days he will have something else to do — like work, a date or a ballgame. Then he asks Mom to baby-sit our daughter and Mom readily agrees. When I ask her to baby-sit for me, she immediately wants to know why. When Steve drops our daughter off at Mom's house, family members tell me that he usually spends up to an hour visiting with her. I think this is strange behavior.

What is this "thing" between my ex-husband and my mom? She didn't think he was so great when we were married. Why the sudden change? Is this my ex's way of staying involved in my life? When I ask Mom about this she gets defensive, or ignores me, or hangs up on me.

CONFUSED DAUGHTER,
METAIRIE, LA.

DEAR CONFUSED: Your mother is walking a tightrope between remaining cordial with your "ex," being loyal to you and being a good grandmother. She may go a little overboard defending Steve, but she may also be playing the "devil's advocate," pointing out his good features so that you will eventually have a civil relationship.

Although Steve is no longer your husband, that doesn't mean he can't be a friend of your mother's. Because you share custody of your child, Steve will always be in your life to some degree. Try to accept it and go on with your life.

DEAR ABBY: I am a male in my mid-30s and have been divorced for nearly two years. For the past year, I have been casually dating. During this period, a friend of mine passed away suddenly. His widow is everything I would ever want in a wife. Our families have participated in many activities together — baseball games, zoo, picnics, movies, etc. Our children get along great. I never intended to fall in love, but I have.

I know I am ready to move on with my life. But I don't know when my friend will be — if ever. How will I know when the time is right? She is truly a diamond, and I don't want to lose her — or our friendship. Please help me.

IN LOVE

DEAR IN LOVE: I wish all the questions I am asked were as easy to answer. Invite her to dinner without the children and tell her how you feel.

DEAR ABBY: I was pleased that you printed the letter about the infant who nearly strangled in her parents' bed. Her mother had taken her into the bed after an exhausting night of crying, and the baby's head slipped into a space between the mattress and the headboard, where she became stuck. That was an important cautionary tale, but I want to correct the impression that this sort of thing is a "freak accident."

In a recent one-year period, the U.S. Consumer Products Safety Commission received reports of almost 100 infants and young children who suffocated on adult beds. Abby, please tell your readers that parents should never put a young child, especially an infant, in their bed to sleep. It is a sweet gesture, but it could have tragic consequences.

Thank you so much for all the good work you do, and for helping keep children safe in their homes.

ANN BROWN, CHAIRMAN,
U.S. CONSUMER PRODUCT
SAFETY COMMISSION,

Panel: property taxes hurt home ownership

DALLAS (AP) — The governor's tax study committee has come up with a final report that says a hybrid of taxes are the best way to lower property taxes, The Dallas Morning News reported today.

The newspaper reported that the 17-member panel concluded that rising property taxes are hindering capital investment and home ownership in Texas and there's "substantial public sentiment" to change it.

"It appears that some combination of alternatives, rather than a single replacement source, may offer the best hope for a solution," the report said.

The report also stated that any tax relief should come along with protections against the rise of property taxes to current levels.

The report is the result of two months of public hearings in 14 cities across the state conducted by a panel appointed by Gov. George W. Bush in April. It will be formally presented to Bush Friday at the final meeting of the Citizens' Committee on Property Tax Relief.

Ray Sullivan, spokesman for the governor, said Bush would not comment on the report until then.

Once Bush gets the report, the next step is for the governor, state leaders, and state legislators to work out a plan, Sullivan said.

The panel was directed to sample public opinion and issue a report before the 1997 Legislature convenes in January.

The report said there was a general agreement that local school property taxes, which usually make up most of a property owner's local property tax bill, needed to be reduced, but not eliminated.

Bush asked the committee to examine three possible tax alternatives: increasing the sales tax, creating a business gross-receipts tax or establishing a business-activity tax.

A gross receipts tax would tax a business' total revenue. A business-activity tax would tax the difference between the sales and costs that a business incurs.

There was no consensus on any of the three, but the panel found that Texans support property tax relief and want guarantees that a change isn't just a ruse for raising taxes.

"It is clear that to have credibility with the public, certain taxpayer guarantees are needed," the report found. "First, the revenues from any new replacement should be directed to be used only for property tax relief. This will prevent any new revenue from becoming an engine for expanded government spending."

The report also found that since the gross receipts tax and the business-activity tax would be applied totally on businesses, it "could result in a boon for homeowners but would add to the overall business tax burden."

Raising a state sales tax would create more of a burden on the poor because it constitutes a greater share of their income.

Although Bush said he would not consider creating a personal income tax, the panel reported it was mentioned most often as an alternative to the three ideas originally outlined by the governor.

Ft. Worth psychiatrist accused of overbilling

FORT WORTH (AP) — A Fort Worth psychiatrist has been accused of billing insurance companies for treatment of up to 125 patients a day, a workload that would be more than 12 times as many as most psychiatrists.

Prosecutors said during the first day of the federal court trial of Dr. Hernan Enrique Burgos that the doctor even billed the insurance companies for seeing patients on days when he was in Italy, San Francisco and New Orleans.

Dr. Myron Weiner, a psychiatry professor at the Unviersity of Texas Southwestern Medical Center at Dallas, testified Monday for the prosecution that most psychiatrists find it "very difficult to treat more than 10 a day,"

The charges accused Burgos, 70, of engaging in an insurance-fraud conspiracy while he was medical director of the Psychiatric Institute of Fort Worth, which closed in 1993 amid a nationwide psychiatric fraud scandal. Burgos has pleaded innocent.

Burgos' attorney told jurors in his opening statement that he will prove his client is a victim of unscrupulous colleagues, who once swiped his signature stamp for their fraudulent use and later tried to implicate him to lessen their sentences.

Prosecutor Ron Eddins said Burgos used clinical assistants, or "scribes" to fill out medical charts for patients he rarely saw.

Burgos, a native of Chile, was a reputable, seasoned psychiatrist whose two sons followed him into medicine, according to defense lawyer Michael Heiskell.

"He was busy with his patients," Heiskell said.

Several top administrators at Psychiatric Institute have pleaded guilty and are scheduled to testify against Burgos, the first person to stand trial in a case that federal investigators have been looking into for five years.

Burgos was medical director of the 190-bed facility for seven years.

He is being tried on 14 counts of insurance fraud, mail fraud and lying to conceal fraud schemes.

Three former patients testified during the first day of the trial that they rarely saw the psychiatrist during their extended stays at the institute in 1991.

Eddins introduced records that indicate that Burgos billed the family's insurer for thousands of dollars in daily psychotherapy sessions.

Heiskell suggested during cross-examination that the former patients were either too troubled, medicated or young to clearly recall details of their hospital stays.

Dr. Gott

By Peter Gott, M.D.

By Peter H. Gott, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT: Your recent column about selling cigarettes to Third World countries in order to decimate those populations was racist toward Asian-Americans. I found it offensive and degrading. You should write a retraction.

DEAR READER: I must admit that I was altogether stunned at the reaction expressed by some readers to the column in question.

Anybody who is a regular reader of my column knows that I occasionally take perverse delight in writing something so outrageous that it becomes satire. Judging from my mail, most readers recognize my position (on selling cigarettes to Asia) for what it was: a spoof, a completely implausible possibility. This was meant to be humorous because of the sheer absurdity of the suggestion. Sell cigarettes to Asians to reverse the trade deficit? Unlikely. Supply tobacco products to the Chinese so they won't attack us? Patently nonsensical.

Yet some readers took these suggestions seriously, when my real purpose was whimsically to address the issue of tobacco-use in the Third World. WE know cigarettes are dangerous; being intelligent, the ASIANS know this, too.

If I am to be criticized, it is not for racism but for a misjudgment in presenting ludicrous conclusions that I believed would amuse my readers. Apparently, such diversions have no place in a medical column such as mine. For this reason, I offer a sincere apology to those readers who were offended and I will be more careful in the future to make my attempts at humor more obvious, as I do in my annual Medical Terms For The Layman.

In summary, I deeply regret any misunderstanding that may have resulted from my column.

Broncos pull off come-from-behind win, 22-21

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — Harvey Williams couldn't shake his sense of dread when the Oakland Raiders scored a go-ahead touchdown with little more than five minutes remaining.

"There's too much time. I thought right when we scored, we've given him too much time," the Raiders running back said.

Williams was right. The "him" he was referring to, of course, was John Elway.

The veteran Denver quarterback led the 33rd game-winning, fourth-quarter drive of his career to rally the Broncos past Oakland 22-21 Monday night.

"He's a great quarterback and he's having the career-year of his life. My hat's off to him. But we still should've won this game," Williams said after the Raiders lost a home game on Monday night for the first time.

They were 8-0 in Oakland and 4-0 in Los Angeles before falling victim to Elway's heroics. The King of the Fourth Quarter connected on a 49-yard touchdown pass to Rod Smith with 4:14 left.

Elway, who had just 108 yards passing heading into the game's final five minutes, finished 16-of-33 for 182 yards and two touchdowns. He also ran for a career-high 70 yards, breaking the personal record of 62 he set last week.

"I'm always relieved," Elway said of his comebacks. "Surprised? No. If there's clicks on the clock left, we have a chance."

The Raiders, trailing 16-7, had a fourth-quarter rally of their own, scoring twice in little more than two minutes to go up 21-16.

Using the no-huddle, Jeff Hostetler drove the Raiders down the field, finishing a 64-yard march with a 15-yard touchdown pass to Derrick Fenner.

Oakland's defense forced a punt, and Hostetler completed two passes to Tim Brown, the last good for a 42-yard TD. Brown was wide open after Denver defensive back Ray Crockett slipped and fell on the play.

The Raiders' lead was short-lived, however.

Starting at their own 27, the Broncos moved to the Oakland 49 on a pair of completions to Anthony Miller and Smith.

Elway threw two incompletions before going for broke on third down. Smith seemed to be running a short slant, but suddenly broke deep and burst past the Raiders' zone coverage, aided by Elway's pump fake.

Safety Lorenzo Lynch, whose first-quarter interception of Elway set up Hostetler's 5-yard TD on a scramble, said he stumbled after Elway's pump-fake and couldn't recover in time to catch up with Smith.

WTC golfers third at New Mexico JC

HOBBS, N.M. — The Western Texas College golf team closed out the fall season by finishing third at the New Mexico Junior College Invitational tournament held on the Ocotillo Country Club course.

The WTC Green team fired a two-day total 600 (304-296) while the WTC White team took fifth with a 617 (309-308).

Midland Junior College won the tournament with a 583, followed by NMJC with 585.

In the medalist race, WTC's Morten Vildhoj was second with a two-under par 142 (72-70). NMJC's J.C. Greico was the medalist with 141 (71-70).

"This has been the best fall we have had since I've been here," said golf coach Milton Ham. "We've got a lot of good experience for our freshmen. Our season goals continue to be to make the national tournament this spring and I am confident we will be there."

Area teams in hoop scrimmages

Basketballs begin bouncing louder tonight as area teams have scrimmages set.

The Snyder Tigers will be at home in a three-way scrimmage with Abilene High and Breckenridge. According to coach Bud Birks, each team will play two quarters, sit out a quarter and play two quarters.

The Buckaroos are coached by Snyder native Kyle Short, who is in his second year as the head coach at Breckenridge.

The action at the Snyder High School gym begins at 4.

First year coach Rick Archer will take his Lady Tigers to Big Spring. The freshmen are scheduled to tip off against the Lady Steers at 4, followed by the JV at 5 and varsity at 7.

Over at Hermleigh, the Lady Cardinals will face Rule at 6 while the Lady Bulldogs from Ira are set to see Highland at 5:30 in Ira.

Rockets roll to 3-point win

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Putting the best possible spin on it, the Houston Rockets' victory over Utah was a great defensive contest.

Looked at another way, by Houston's Charles Barkley, "We didn't play well, but we won. We don't have to play well to win."

Utah's Jeff Hornacek had a similar perspective on the 75-72 loss Monday night in which the Jazz were held to their lowest point total in franchise history.

"They're probably walking around their locker room saying, 'As bad as we played, we came out with a 'W', which is what we would have liked to have said," Hornacek said.

The previous Jazz record for low points was 74, set in a game at New York in 1974 when the Jazz were based in New Orleans.

Karl Malone led Utah with 16 points, but was held without a field goal in the fourth quarter, when the Jazz scored nine points.

Utah led 66-56 early in the fourth quarter, then went cold. The Jazz shot only 3-for-21 in the fourth quarter while the Rockets were almost as bad, going 5-for-13.

"I don't know what happened," said Utah's Antoine Carr, who was 1-of-7 for the game and scoreless in the fourth quarter. "We just went ice-cold in the fourth quarter and couldn't hit anything."

Barkley, who had 33 rebounds Saturday in Phoenix, had 20 rebounds and nine points in his second game of the season.

Hakeem Olajuwon, who scored 23 for Houston, found Barkley on a backdoor cut for a dunk that gave the Rockets a 73-72 lead with 15 seconds left.

Care by specialists improves patient survival

DALLAS (AP) — Elderly stroke patients are more likely to survive if treated by neurologists instead of family physicians — but at a price, a study found.

Death rates during the 90 days after a stroke were 36 percent lower for patients treated by neurologists rather than family practitioners, the study found. The expenses were 34 percent higher.

The neurologists' patients may have benefited from better diagnosis, treatment, prevention and rehabilitation, the researchers said.

One of the study's authors, Dr. David J. Ballard, said the study underscores the importance of giving stroke patients access to more expensive specialists.

"It raises concerns about health-care plan arrangements that would make it difficult for neurologists to participate in the care of patients with stroke," said Ballard, an internist and director of the Center for Clinical Evaluation Sciences at Emory University.

The study was published in the November issue of the American Heart Association journal Stroke. It was funded by the Agency for Health Care Policy and Research, part of the Department of Health and Human Services.

Stroke occurs when a blood vessel to the brain bursts or is blocked by a clot. Deprived of oxygen, nerve cells in the affected area can't function and die within minutes. About 500,000 Americans suffer stroke each year.

The researchers studied 38,612 Medicare patients over 65 treated at hospitals across the United States for strokes caused by blood clots, the most common type.

Among patients discharged from a hospital, 16.1 percent of those in neurologists' care died in the 90 days after a stroke. That compares with 25.3 percent of those in family physicians' care.

Higher costs paralleled the improved survival rates.

The 90-day expenses for patient care (including hospital and doctor charges) averaged $15,919 for patients treated by neurologists and $11,838 for those cared for by family physicians.

Despite neurologists' higher patient-survival rates, "people should not use this paper as a rationale for 'the more we spend the better we do,'" said Dr. Alan L. Hillman, a health economist and director of the Center for Health Policy at the University of Pennsylvania.

The study did not look at patients' conditions after the 90-day period, Hillman noted.

"If all we are doing is buying people who are infirm for a certain period of time and then die, I don't think that's a good use of money," he said.

Patients treated by neurologists were much more likely to be given warfarin, a blood thinner that has been shown to reduce the risk of another stroke.

ValuJet shuffles top management

ATLANTA (AP) — ValuJet Airlines on Monday hired a former head of Continental Airlines to run its daily operations, allowing its top executives to concentrate on bolstering the carrier's finances and its public image.

The moves came five weeks after Atlanta-based ValuJet emerged from a three-month grounding over safety concerns in the wake of the Florida Everglades crash that killed 110 people.

The changes were praised by the airline's flight attendants union, which had demanded that the federal government remove executives Lewis Jordan and Robert Priddy before allowing the carrier to fly again.

D. Joseph Corr will oversee the airline's daily business and hold the titles of president and chief executive.

Priddy, ValuJet's founder and chairman, is stepping back from managing the discount carrier to concentrate on running its holding company, ValuJet Inc.

Jordan, who became ValuJet's public face as it rebounded from the crash, will take over Priddy's duties as ValuJet Airlines chairman. He retains his title as president and chief operating officer of the holding company.

Previously, Priddy held the title of CEO and Jordan was president of the airline.

"It's not a wholesale change in management, but it's a significant change," said airline analyst Aaron Hollander of First Equity Group in Stanford, Conn.

The addition of Corr allows Jordan to spend more time repairing ValuJet's image with the government regulators and with the flying public. ValuJet has resumed limited service, but the May 11 crash remains under investigation.

During the grounding, Jordan dealt with regulators, appeared before Congress and handled media interviews while overseeing the airline's daily business.

"With everything I was trying to coordinate ... you could see I was stretching pretty thin," Jordan said Monday. "We realized through the course of the summer, my role was becoming more important in the world of external affairs."

ValuJet's relations with the government remain critical. The airline cannot expand beyond its current fleet and schedule without regulatory approval.

"They've got a lot of fence mending to do," said airline consultant Morten Beyer of McLean, Va. "That requires time spent in Washington.

"Now he can let Priddy take care of the finances, he can take care of the politics and let Corr run the airline," Beyer said.

The Association of Flight Attendants said the development also is a positive one for fixing troubles within the corporation.

"This is a new day for ValuJet and a chance for all of us to work together for the benefit of the flight attendants and the company," said Susasn Clayton, AFA's local president at ValuJet. "I look forward to working with Mr. Corr."

Jordan, who was president at Continental before joining ValuJet, said he recommended Corr for the job and that Corr will be involved in major business decisions. He described Corr as "very bottom line oriented, very results oriented."

Recently, Corr has headed his own companies, D. Joseph Corr Inc. and AirCorr Inc. He also once held a senior position at Trans World Airlines.

Priddy, ValuJet's largest individual shareholder, will continue working mostly behind the scenes by exploring new ventures for the parent company, whose only holding now is ValuJet Airlines.

Russian workers said on strike

MOSCOW (AP) — Hundreds of thousands of people today joined a one-day nationwide strike called by the country's largest labor union, and tens of thousands marched and rallied across Russia.

The workers — from teachers to miners to defense workers — are protesting unpaid wages, a shortage of jobs and a lack of social guarantees, according to the Federation of Independent Unions of Russia. Overdue wages and social benefits total about $7 billion.

The strike, called two weeks ago, coincided with President Boris Yeltsin's heart bypass surgery today at a clinic outside Moscow.

In Moscow, more than 10,000 people marched to Red Square in the rain. "Give Us Our Money Back," read signs in the crowd.

Although some Communist flags bobbed overhead, many demonstrators said they had no political agenda. Some said they had voted for Yeltsin and were angry at his unfulfilled campaign promises to pay government debts.

Numerous rallies were held, from Yuzhno-Sakhalinsk on the Pacific, to Barnaul in Siberia, Samara on the Volga River, and Bryansk in western Russia. Most, it appeared, were attended by a few hundred to a few thousand people.

Simpson accused by court intern

ARLINGTON, Va. (AP) — An 18-year-old high school senior who works at the courthouse where O.J. Simpson is on trial said she is upset because he is sexually harassing her and asked her out, USA Today reported today.

Spectators and court officials have seen Simpson demonstrate suggestive behavior at least three times toward Amber McGrath, who is paid to work half-days for court administrator Jerrianne Hayslett, the newspaper said.

McGrath, blond and blue-eyed like Simpson's slain ex-wife, said the former football star asked her to his home for a Halloween party last Thursday.

"'So what are you doing tonight?'" she quoted him as saying. "'Why don't you come over to my place and party?'"

She turned him down, telling the paper: "Here he is at the trial involving the death of his ex-wife, who he's supposed to be in love with, and he's hitting on me."

Simpson was acquitted in the 1994 killings of his ex-wife Nicole Brown Simpson and her friend Ronald Goldman. He is now the defendant in a wrongful-death lawsuit filed by families of the victims.

Simpson's interest in the girl has been public, the paper said. Once, the two accidentally bumped and McGrath excused herself. Simpson said, "You can bump into me any time you want."

Another time, as he passed through a courthouse metal detector, Simpson spotted McGrath and groaned: "I want her."

And once, as McGrath was bending over in court, Simpson gestured as if he was going to lift her skirt. Court bailiff Vicky McKown shook her finger at him in a warning, the newspaper said.

Bomb squad called to East Texas

TYLER (AP) — A suspicious package was found today outside the Smith County Republican Party headquarters, and a bomb squad from Fort Hood was en route to East Texas.

The white box, about 2½ feet long, says "Happy Election Day," and has a picture of Oklahoma City's bombed-out Alfred P. Murrah Federal Building, where an April 19, 1995, explosion killed 168 people and injured more than 500.

Tyler law officers have blocked off traffic to the area and have evacuated the south side shopping center where the GOP office is located.

Roads still closed around Salt Creek

All roads leading to a well some nine miles northwest of Clairemont remain closed this morning following a loss of well control around 11:30 a.m. Monday. The Kent County Sheriff's Office closed Highway 208 some eight miles north of Clairemont and the intersection of FM 2320 and FM 1081.

Well #E-313 was being serviced by a work-over unit when oil and gas began to flow up the drill pipe, according to Mobil Production spokesman Ruth Ann Rust of Dallas.

The well is located in Mobil's Salt Creek field.

"There were no injuries or a fire," said Rust, adding that all regulatory agencies were promptly notified of the incident.

International Well Control of Houston has been called in to shut off the well, said Rust.
