No materials from local office were involved in latest request

Texas Rural Legal Aid complied with a Legal Services Corporation demand by turning over more documents Monday for an on-going investigation into whether the Texas agency violated federal law.

Daryl Borquist, LSC spokesman, said the additional documents were received by his office Monday, the deadline set by LSC for receiving additional material. TRLA had already provided some 8,000 documents but was reluctant to pass on more for fear of violating the right of attorney-client confidentiality. Randall Marshall, TRLA attorney in Hereford, said this morning that no materials from the Hereford office were involved in the latest request. "This is a new request from LSC, subsequent to the last monitoring report," said Marshall.

"The bottom line is that our program is in compliance and has followed federal regulations to the letter," Marshall said today. "There is no indication that anything will be done to affect our funding, and we fully expect to continue our operations."

The TRLA attorney pointed out that LSC monitors approximately 200 programs and that TRLA was just one of many agencies that the Legal Services Corporation has the responsibility of checking to see that the program is operated according to federal regulations.

One focus of the comprehensive investigation of TRLA is its spinoff group, the Texas Rural League Foundation. It has been alleged that the TRLF was formed to avoid returning the unspent grant money to the federal treasury.

"We have nothing to do with the foundation here," said Marshall, "but I know that every penny from the foundation goes to provide legal representation for the poor." He added that the month-to-month funding provision earlier this year had no effect on the office, and that TRLA has now received all of its 1986 funds.

U.S. Rep. Larry Combest, Lubbock Republican who has been a longtime critic of TRLA, said Tuesday that it was time TRLA responded to the request for more documents. "The key is what documents were provided. I can't comment on what they did send because I haven't seen them yet."

LSC is a federally-funded entity charged with distributing its money to grantees around the country to provide subsidized legal services for the poor.

President adds to confusion over Iran-Contra deals

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, who says some aspects of the arms-shipment controversy engulfing his administration "are difficult to comprehend," has added to the confusion with seemingly contradictory statements of his own.

He has said the United States initiated contacts with Iran — and that it was the other way around. He said no third country was involved in the arms shipments, then said one was involved, and then gave a version of that involvement that the country in question, Israel, hotly denied.

He said Marine Lt. Col. Oliver North's role in the Iranian arms deals and the diversion of funds to Nicaraguan rebels raised "serious questions of propriety" but he also called North "a national hero" and said, "My only criticism is I wasn't told everything."

At his Nov. 19 news conference, Reagan said in his prepared opening statement, "Eighteen months ago ... this administration began a secret initiative to the Islamic Republic of Iran."

In an interview with Time magazine that was published Sunday, however, the president was quoted as saying, "The Iranians came to us at first. They wanted to talk about a better relationship."

In a statement on Nov. 20, Robert McFarlane, who was the president's national security adviser until last December, appeared to support the president's first version: that the administration, not the Iranians, initiated the contacts.

Speaking of administration efforts to reach so-called moderates in Iran, McFarlane said, "When, in 1985, such elements were identified and validated, I believed it was worthwhile to make contact with them and seek a political dialogue."

On the issue of Israel's involvement, the president's statements have been murky from the beginning.

In response to questions at his news conference, he denied three times that any other country made arms shipments and then issued a clarifying statement later saying, "There was a third country involved in our secret project with Iran."

On Nov. 25, Attorney General Edwin Meese III said "representatives of Israel" received money for U.S. arms from Iran and some of these funds were made available to rebels fighting the Marxist-led government of Nicaragua.

Within hours after Meese's statement, Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir issued a statement in Jerusalem acknowledging Israel shipped U.S. arms to Iran but denying that his government channeled money to the Contras.

In his Time interview, conducted the next day, Reagan said, "Another country was facilitating those sales of weapons systems. They then were overcharging and were apparently putting the money into bank accounts of the leaders of the Contras. It wasn't us funneling money to them. This was another country."

In Tel Aviv, Israeli newspapers and radio reported that Foreign Minister Shimon Peres sharply disputed this account at a closed meeting of his Labor Party on Monday night.

Peres was quoted as saying, "Israel has no connection with the Contras in Nicaragua. That is a complete falsehood."

In his Time interview, Reagan said, "I do not feel betrayed. Lt. Col. North was involved in all our operations. ... He has a fine record. He is a national hero. My only criticism is I wasn't told everything."

In his address from the Oval Office on Tuesday, the president said, "If illegal acts were undertaken, those who did so will be brought to justice. If actions in implementing my policy were taken without my authorization, knowledge or concurrence, this would be exposed, and appropriate corrective steps will be implemented."

"I can appreciate why some of these things are difficult to comprehend," Reagan said in the broadcast speech, "and you're entitled to have your questions answered. And that's why I've pledged to get to the bottom of the matter."

Senate leaders want Watergate type panel for Iran-Contras probe

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate leaders have all but agreed on forming a Watergate-style committee to consolidate congressional investigations into the Iran-Contra crisis that has engulfed the Reagan administration.

Senate Democratic Leader Robert

C. Byrd of West Virginia and Republican Leader Bob Dole of Kansas have had preliminary discussions about the panel and could agree on some details this week.

In addition, President Reagan on Tuesday endorsed such a panel, saying, "I support the idea."

"Senator Dole and I should come to some conclusion as to the number of persons who ought to be on it, whether it should be a seven-man committee or a nine-man committee or an 11-man committee," said Byrd, who as majority leader of the new Senate that convenes Jan. 6 will name the chairman and Democratic members. Dole, the outgoing majority leader, would pick the GOP members.

Byrd, however, declined to discuss who he is considering to be chairman.

"I don't propose to create an instant celebrity by appointing someone today or saying what my decision would be," Byrd said. "The committee will not be created until January. I hope that we can do that on Jan. 6."

Byrd added, "I have in mind some senators and some qualifications, but I don't want to begin to lay those out."

Nonetheless, Byrd conceded senators are lining up in hopes of being picked to serve on what promises to be a high-profile committee.

"I've had a good many senators call me and ask to be on it," Byrd said. Asked how many, Byrd would say only "a considerable number."

Two senators cited as likely choices by various senators and aides are:

—Howell Heflin of Alabama.
—Daniel K. Inouye of Hawaii.

Applications open Thursday for new LoMart operation

LoMart, a Furr's, Inc. discount store, is scheduled to open soon in the Smith Food & Drug building, it was announced Sunday in a full-page ad in The Brand.

The Smith building has been vacant since it closed two weeks ago and the company announced a sell-out to Furr's here and in three other West Texas towns. Smith's informed employees of the closing on Nov. 19 and the store ended operations on Nov. 22.

The ad in The Brand Sunday advised interested persons to apply at the store between 9 a.m. and 5 p.m. this Thursday and Friday for jobs as checkers, clerks and maintenance clerks.

The ad also said the store will offer merchandise such as clothes, sporting goods, small appliances, beer and wine, toys, soft goods, housewares, linens, paper goods, health and beauty aids, automotive supplies and much more.

The closing of Smith's here and at Plainview, Pecos and Fort Stockton shocked employees, who complained of being left without jobs on short notice. In Hereford, the competition between Furr's Save 'N' Gain and Smith's had provided low food prices for local and area consumers.

Other than the advertisement, Furr's made no formal news announcement on the LoMart operation being started here or the target date for the opening. The Furr's spokesman for the new operation was out of the office today.

State

Auto rate hearing begins

AUSTIN (AP) — The State Board of Insurance defends its process of scrutinizing proposed rate hikes, even if Attorney General Jim Mattox says the procedure doesn't give consumers a fair shake.

"In recent years I have not seen the rates set at what I consider to be a reasonable level," Mattox said at a Tuesday news conference.

The problem, he said, is a state board that does not pay sufficient attention to consumers. He said the situation has improved in recent years "but it still has not come to the point where the public can feel confident about the level of rates that is being granted by the state board."

State Board of Insurance Chairman Lyndon Olson responded that consumer interests are "absolutely" represented in rate proceedings. The board was to begin the process of looking at proposed increases today.

The auto insurance industry is pushing a 19.7 percent, or $550 million, annual increase. The board staff supports a 9.8 percent, or $270 million, increase. Mattox said auto rates should be cut by an unspecified amount.

Mattox also complained about the board staff's recommended 17.7 percent, or $380 million, increase in workers' compensation rates. The industry is seeking a 31.3 percent, or $680 million, increase. Mattox said Wednesday those rates should be cut by 9 percent, or $196 million.

Olson was peeved that Mattox criticized the board during a news conference.

"He calls press conferences and he makes all these great pronouncements. I have been on this board for eight years. This board in those years has enjoyed, I hope, at least a fair reputation. We have attempted not to politicize this agency. We have tried to represent the consumer," he said.

Allen arrests dropped last month

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — Fewer illegal aliens were arrested last month in this area of the border because of the high water level in the Rio Grande, the new immigration law and a blockade of an international bridge, border officials say.

Joseph Aubin, a U.S. Border Patrol intelligence agent, said Tuesday 15,553 illegal aliens were arrested last month in the El Paso sector, which stretches from Van Horn to the New Mexico-Arizona state line, compared to 30,786 arrests in October.

The figure also is 22 percent less than the November 1985 figure of 19,808 arrests.

Aubin said arrests traditionally decline in November, but the other factors contributed to last month's drop.

"The river is close to flooding and people are being warned to stay out of it," Aubin said. "It's also been exceptionally cold in November too. No one wants to take off their clothes off and swim in deep water."

The takeover of the Bridge of the Americas two weeks ago by Juarez's National Action Party also contributed to the decline, he said.

"When the bridge is closed, we have to have agents monitoring it," Aubin said.

A sweeping immigration law signed by President Reagan Nov. 6, which included sanctions against employers hiring undocumented workers, also has kept some aliens from attempting to cross the border, he said.

During the National League of Cities conference in San Antonio Tuesday, a panel discussed the problems of immigration on local governments.

A Brownsville attorney told delegates many illegal aliens are left in the streets because of immigration policies in the Rio Grande Valley. She said aliens are restricted to the Rio Grande Valley if they cannot post a $1,000 bond.

Government responsible for education

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — The government that is ultimately responsible for educating the country's youth is spending more on missiles than in classrooms, delegates to the National League of Cities were told.

"It is putting tax cuts and missiles ahead of philosophy," Eugene Lang, president of REFACT Technology Development Corp. in New York, said Tuesday.

"I think the government has the responsibility of every disadvantaged and advantaged kid having the opportunity for quality education, but the cards are stacked against the disadvantaged kids," he said.

Boston Mayor Raymond Flynn was one of three panelists on education who agreed that families are key to education, including counseling on drug and alcohol prevention and teen pregnancy.

But "in the absence of the family not providing this kind of information and support, it is the responsibility of the government to do that," Flynn said.

Lang said adults can encourage students to stay in school to better themselves.

"The answers to these questions, we know what we have to do, but they don't pick up aspirations, dreams from the clear blue sky," Lang said of students.

City leaders ask for less regulation

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Leaders of the nation's cities want Congress to spend billions more to fight homelessness, drugs, AIDS and other urban problems, and to drop costly regulations.

Delegates to the National League of Cities — mayors, council members and city managers from some 1,000 cities and towns — were concluding their annual meeting today with votes on a list of resolutions and new statements of urban policy.

They want more federal help, even as the federal government has been cutting back on aid to state and local governments — and despite talk from some municipal leaders that there is a new realism about the limits of federal aid.

"We've been in a defensive mode and I think it's time to get off that and come up with an offensive, aggressive campaign from the grassroots from all the cities," said Cathy Reynolds, a council member from Denver who is taking over today as president of the League.

She said city leaders want to convince "Congress and the White House that they're going to have to get back in the business of tending to American cities. We need some domestic defense in here."

Two 1988 presidential aspirants, Democratic Sen. Joseph Biden of Delaware and former Senate Republican leader Howard Baker of Tennessee, were addressing the more than 7,000 delegates today.

Among the resolutions was one asking for substantial new federal spending toward a cure and prevention of AIDS. Another asks for at least $1.7 billion in additional aid to local governments to help the homeless, saying this deserves at least as much money as the anti-drug effort enacted by Congress this fall.

Others ask for more money to employ urban youth and ask Congress to ease regulations placed on local governments that require them to spend money to meet federal standards on a wide range of diverse programs, such as water treatment and access for handicapped.

We know where Casey is

(The following column about the late Casey Smith was written by Amarillo Daily News sports writer Lance Lahnert. It is reprinted with permission.)

By LANCE LAHNERT
Amarillo Daily News

Maybe this isn't the correct time, or place, for this. Maybe it is too soon to deal with. But this is written with the utmost respect for grief and sorrow, written not to step over the bounds of good taste, written because it has grabbed me and shaken me.

Casey Smith is gone.

"But we know where he is," said Casey's dad Tuesday evening at Northwest Texas Hospital. "You will never know how much it meant to him when he was named to the Globe-News all-district team last year."

Casey Smith is in heaven.

So yes, he knows how much he meant to his mom, dad, kid sister and the city of Hereford. He knows now when God took him Tuesday evening that it'll be hard for former Whiteface and West Texas State football teammates and coaches to forget him. He knows the hundreds of people that waited since Sunday for him to wake up. He knows how much his WT teammates and coaches cared as they left a rope in his hand.

Casey Smith lived 18 wonderful years.

"He was always ready," said WT offensive line coach Mark Weber, who had grown close to his prize freshman. "I just don't mean on the football field. He was ready mentally, physically and spiritually. I loved him."

Yes, at 18, Casey Smith is in heaven.

He loved to lift weights. He was kind. He loved those Whitefaces. He loved football. He was determined. He was obviously smart, learning the WT blocking system in one fall is remarkable. And a future? Big time.

But before this story turns too sad, we must remember God has a plan. God is never wrong. And to be taken at such a young age, this may sound wrong, but I consider it an honor.

Remember, Casey Smith is in heaven. He knows Jesus died for him handing over the gift of everlasting life. What else is there?

A car accident early Sunday morning near Tulia was the cause of Casey's death. Along with Casey, WT freshman defensive back Anthony Watkins and WT freshman linebacker Brian Lady, a close Hereford buddy, were in the car.

Watkins, the driver, was killed. And Lady is thankfully OK.

The threesome had driven to Abilene to watch "those Whitefaces" Saturday night win a thrilling 9-7 playoff game against Cleburne. They'd planned on staying in Abilene after the game. But were excited and decided to drive on home.

The wreck was a single car accident and forget the thought of drugs or alcohol. These guys were clean. Probably, a case of falling asleep.

No matter, today Lady must live with that accident. No still chore. Lady must go on. But he must believe, as the simple prayer goes, God is good.

And so was Casey Smith.

He had lifted, lifted, lifted and lifted some more weights this past summer in Hereford. He was to be a walk-on at WT. No easy chore. But he made the team. He played a bunch, a rare feat for an offensive lineman at WT, against Howard Payne. In fact, he had earned a scholarship.

"A lot of us would go to the WT games just to see if Casey was going to get into the game," said Hereford senior offensive lineman Keith Anderson. "We all looked up to him. He would kill you in practice, but that's just because he'd want you to get better."

Anderson said this Tuesday afternoon, before Casey died. Anderson was Casey's friend and several of this year's Hereford team were close to Casey, even closer than Anderson.

"He came to most of our games," Anderson said.

Usually, the Monday after a football playoff win things at Hereford High would be buzzing. It wasn't Monday.

"The halls were silent," said Hereford coach Don Cumpton. "This has been tough. We didn't practice Monday. We just talked about it for 45 minutes."

During the meeting Hereford senior quarterback Todd Shire, who Casey had thrown a few blocks for in his time, said, "Coach, what we need is a prayer meeting."

So the Hereford team, five days away from its Texas state quarterfinal game against Wichita Falls Hirschi, just the third time in school history a team had played this far into a season, said to heck with practice. And prayed.

"This is life, football doesn't mean a thing compared to life," Cumpton said.

"I know what I'm thinking," Anderson said. "And that we are going to win this game for Casey. I've dedicated this game to Casey."

I can see it now. It's Saturday afternoon at 1:45 p.m. The Hereford Whitefaces come running into Kimbrough Memorial Stadium. All of a sudden in heaven God gets a tap on the shoulder.

"They look good, don't they?" Casey says. "Hey, there's No. 84, my lifting buddy Casey Daniel. And there's Keith. And Todd, man, wasn't that nice what he said in the lockerroom."

"Oh, and God, in the stands there's Brian. God, he's going to be a good football player. What a friend. Can you please help him smile? And that goes double for my family."

"Oh, and God, this is one heck of a seat. Thanks."

Ann Landers

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I have a problem that I share with approximately 9 million women in the United States. My ex-husband is behind in his child support checks. There are now about 4½ million women in our great country who receive child support, but many wives receive only a fraction of what they should get and some fathers send a mere pittance when they feel like it.

In 1982, the tab for those forgotten kids was $4 billion. (Yes, that's a "b.") Sad to say, the problem has not gotten better. Only 20 percent of dads who are ordered to pay child support do so regularly. Fifty-two percent make sporadic payments, and 28 percent never pay a dime. In Ohio alone, 600,000 children are living in poverty because their fathers refuse to support them.

The children of divorce are not making outrageous demands on the absent father. The average support payment is only 13 percent of his total income.

Here is the good news for wives who have been carrying the burden alone. An organization called ACES (The Association for Children for Enforcement of Support) has been extremely successful. ACES, founded by Geraldine Jensen in Toledo, Ohio, in 1984, knows how to help people win what is their rightful due in court. Seventy percent of our 10,000 members in 22 states are now receiving their support payments regularly.

You, Ann Landers, could help us to help the children by referring people to the organization for help—SINCERELY, SHARON BELTZ, ALLEN COUNTY COORDINATOR, STATE OF OHIO BOARD MEMBER

DEAR SHARON: Thank you for a letter that is sure to mean a great deal to many divorced women in this country. I hope you are prepared for a jillion phone calls and letters because you are sure to be bombarded. The days when a man could skip out on his wife and family and graze in greener pastures are a thing of the past. Hooray and hallelujah!

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I've been following your series of letters from parents whose children do not resemble them in the least and I thought you might enjoy our retort to those who questioned our daughter's looks. My husband has dark brown hair. My hair is red. Emily was born a platinum blond and it appears as if it's going to stay that way. So many people asked about Emily's hair from infancy on that as soon as she could talk, we taught her to answer for herself. People would ask, "Where in the world did you get that pretty hair?" You can imagine their surprise when our 18-month-old confidently answered, "Recessive genes!"—BROOKFIELD, CT.

DEAR BROOK: Beautiful! I roared!

DEAR ANN LANDERS: You must receive a ton of letters every day. I don't see how you can read and answer them all. Please let us readers know how you handle the mail. I'm sure many others would be interested.—SAN CLEMENTE

DEAR SAN: Every letter sent to me is read by me or an assistant. Those letters with self-addressed, stamped envelopes receive personal replies. I cannot read every single letter, but I do see most of them because I select the column material myself. Every word of the column of course, is written by Yours Truly. There are no little ghosts sitting at my typewriter.

Drugs? How much is too much? Is pot OK? Is cocaine too much? If you're on dope or considering it, get Ann Landers' all-new booklet, "The Lowdown on Dope." For each booklet ordered, send $2.00 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope (39 cents postage) to Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11995, Chicago, Illinois 60611.

Close whole-house fan

A whole-house fan is an energy saver for homeowners in west and north Texas during the summer months, but an energy loser during the winter.

"Because the hinged louvers in most whole-house fans don't provide an effective air seal or insulation, heat from the house escapes into the attic," says Dr. Susan Quiring, a housing specialist with the Texas A&M University Agricultural Extension Service.

"Unless you find some way to seal up the fan, you use more heat than you need to an pay higher utility bills," she adds.

Quiring says a simple method for sealing the fan is to go into the attic and cover the fan with fiberglass batts. Then use plastic or heat shrink film to seal over the louvers from inside the house. Kits with plastic for this purpose are available at many discount and hardware stores.

Another alternative, she explains, is to construct a wood frame with several inches of foam insulation and gasket type weatherstripping attached around the edge. Then the frame is mounted with screws or hooks to the ceiling trim around the fan louvers.

The insulating panel will be visible, but if the whole-house fan is located in a hallway, this may not be a problem. The panel can also be painted or covered to make it look better.

The specialist says that an insulated, weatherstripped box to fit over the fan in the attic and seal down on to the wood frame around the housing is another method for closing the fan. However, due to the size of box required, this is a major construction project for many do-it-yourselfers.

The advantages of an attic box are that it's not visible from inside and can be left in the attic during the summer, Quiring remarks.

According to the specialist, whole-house fans were once common in homes built during the 1950's, and are being put in newer homes as an energy-saving feature.

"In dry climates, these fans are quite effective at removing hot air from a home and holding down air conditioning costs," Quiring says. "But it doesn't make much sense to leave the fan uncovered in winter when it will just cause heating costs to go up."

Shaw, Muller serve as hostesses Monday

The Hospital Auxiliary Board met Monday in the recreation room of the La Plata Apartment building with Sadie Shaw and Lille Muller serving as co-hostesses.

During the business meeting, it was announced that $159 had been netted from a recent bake sale.

Also, Shaw reported 198 hours were volunteered by auxiliary members during October. Grace Covington reported that 32 births were recorded in October and a total of 198 births had been recorded at Deaf Smith General Hospital since Jan. 1, 1986.

Jim Bullard, hospital administrator, invited the auxiliary members to attend the hospital Christmas party Dec. 6 at the Knights of Columbus Hall. Supper will be served from 7-9 p.m. with a dance to follow.

Bullard presented pins to the women for the hours they had worked during the past year. He estimated that 4,855 hours had been served.

Recognized as special guests were Bullard, Earlene West of Dimmitt, Nanci and Herb Twitchell and Phillis Morrison.

Christmas ornaments were exchanged by members. They included Nell Culpepper, Karen Barela, Etoile Manning, Olga Harris, Irene Reinart, Helen Brown, Jane White, Mary Williamson, Baxter London, Anna Stindt, Theida Seivers, Shaw, Muller, Alice Gilleland and Mary Lou Spinhrne.

The boss grumps that we all leave home for work each morning, but none of us can recall that fact by the time we get to the office.

About the only thing the new cars can't do is repossess themselves, but you can bet they're working on this problem.

In retrospect, the pilgrims had something to be truly thankful for. Microwaved turkey roll hadn't been invented.

Garage sales are an endangered species now that they're into shop-by-TV programs.

Toy industry criticizes list of '10 worst toys' on market

BOSTON (AP) — A cuddly dragon that spews talcum powder tops a list of 10 dangerous toys that manufacturing officials say is just a product-liability lawyer's gimmick to attract new clients.

Attorney Edward Swartz's 15th annual list of "10 worst toys" also includes plastic scooters, toy guns and crib toys.

"If these toys are really that dangerous, why does he only seek all this publicity at Christmastime?" asked Jodi Levin, a spokeswoman for the Toy Manufacturers of America. "The guy prosecutes product liability cases and I just think it's an excellent way to get new clients."

"He's been hardly an objective critic of the toy industry," said Fisher-Price spokeswoman Carol Blackley. "He makes his living as a personal injury lawyer."

Swartz, who has written two books on toy safety and has prosecuted negligence lawsuits against toy manufacturers, said Monday he releases his list now because it is when most toys are bought.

David Schmeltzer, the federal Consumer Product Safety Commission's director of compliance, said Swartz "does a public service by bringing these matters to public attention. We would appreciate it if he could bring it to our attention earlier rather than this late in the season."

The commission said 123,000 children were treated in emergency rooms last year for toy-related injuries, mostly minor cuts and bruises, and some deaths.

The industry group said toymakers follow federal and voluntary safety standards and that many accidents happen because children aren't properly supervised.

With the rise of Christianity the church banned public baths, and for centuries in the Middle Ages most people stank, according to National Geographic.

The planet Uranus was discovered by British astronomer William Herschel.

Franklin K. Lane of California was a secretary of the interior in President Woodrow Wilson's cabinet.

Heading Swartz's list, released Monday, is Puff the Magic Dragon by Avon Products, which he said can be dangerous to children who inhale the powder that spews from the dragon's nostrils when squeezed.

Avon spokeswoman Bernadette Mansur said the product has been phased out of production as part of annual product changes and the powder it used "is a high-quality mixture of asbestos-free, cosmetic-quality talc and corn starch, and presents no health risks from incidental inhalation."

Also on Swartz's list: —PlaySkool's Tyke Bike, a low plastic scooter for toddlers. Swartz said its height makes it hard for motorists to see it.

PlaySkool spokeswoman Emma Carrasco said the bike has been made for 22 years without a single safety complaint and was not intended to be used on streets or sidewalks.

—Dakin's Circus Clowns Tie-Up, an infant toy that can be stretched across a crib. It carries a warning to remove the cord when the child is able to sit up, but parents don't know when that will happen for the first time, and a child could strangle himself on the cord, Swartz said.

Dakin spokeswoman Cathy Sotir said the strings comply with regulations. "I think he's basically against all crib toys in general," she said.

—Pieces of Body, soft rubber eyeballs and other body parts that Swartz said could be easily swallowed. A spokeswoman for Swartz said the toy package did not list a manufacturer.

—America Ninja Weapon Set by HG Industries, which includes a rigid plastic sword that Swartz said could stab a child's abdomen or injure an eye.

"We don't feel that it's an unsafe toy," said Manny Begleiter, an HG Toys vice president.

—Aladdin's No. 300 Child Guidance System, a set of plastic snap-together bricks without any warnings. Swartz said the parts could be swallowed and choke a child. The package listed Sam-A Toys as the manufacturer but gave no address and the company could not be located.

—Upright Manufacturers' America's Newest Hero Bazooka, which fires a plastic rocket that Swartz said could cause eye injuries. Neither the toy nor its package listed a company address and the company could not be located.

—Fisher-Price's Tag-Along Turtle and Pull-Along Plane, which have 36-inch long cords that Swartz said could strangle a child.

Ms. Blackley, the Fisher-Price spokeswoman, said the company has made such pull toys for years and never received a report of an injury.

—G.M.G. Corp.'s Lovely Baby Doll, which Swartz said has a flammable dress and a small pacifier a child could swallow. No company address was on the doll's label or packaging, and it could not be located.

—Edison Giocattoli's Sharkmatic 13 Shot Cap Gun, which weighs nearly one pound and, Swartz said, could be mistaken for a real weapon. A person who answered the telephone at the New York-based company said the only official able to comment was unavailable.

POLLY'S POINTERS Non-ugly duckling in your kitchen

DEAR POLLY — I love duck, but the few times I've tried to cook it, it comes out so fatty and greasy that my family won't eat it. Is there any way to lessen the fattiness? — HELEN

DEAR HELEN — There are a few tricks you can use to reduce the fattiness of duck. First of all, before putting it in to roast, be sure to prick it all over with a sharp knife. This will allow the fat to drain out the holes in the skin as the duck roasts. Also remove any deposits of fat around the neck and tail openings.

Many cooks find that cooking the duck at a higher rather than lower heat also reduces fattiness. Try roasting the duck for a shorter time at 450 degrees F instead of the 325 to 350 degrees recommended for other poultry.

My favorite trick is to blanch or parboil the duck before roasting it. I bring a large pot of water to a boil, adding a few peppercorns and bay leaves for flavor (you could include onions and garlic if you like), then simmer the duck in the water for 20 to 30 minutes. Then I roast the duck until done.

This is also much faster than traditional roasting — I recently did a five-pound duck that took 30 minutes of parboiling, then about 50 minutes roasting on a covered barbecue grill (parboiling, then roasting in a 350-degree oven would take approximately the same amount of time). By contrast, roasting the duck without parboiling would take about 2½ hours.

The skin was crisp and delicious and, except for some pockets of fat under the legs, the duck was moist but not terribly greasy. My mother pre-cooks duck in a microwave oven before roasting or barbecuing it. Check your microwave cooking guide for instructions.

Whichever method you choose, be sure to determine that the duck is correctly done with a meat thermometer inserted in the thickest part of the thigh meat. About 180 degrees is a good temperature. Take care that the tip of the thermometer is not resting in a deposit of fat or against bone.

I hope you enjoy your next crisp, succulent duck! — POLLY

It began as a night of trading baskets, but when it was all over, it was a blowout, with the Hereford High School varsity boys' basketball team suffering a 64-39 loss to Amarillo High Tuesday night.

Amarillo High beat Hereford in two other contests Tuesday, 59-45 in the junior varsity game and 52-35 in the sophomore game. Tuesday's games were played at the HHS gym.

Season records for the HHS teams are: varsity 2-4, junior varsity 2-1,

The Whiteface varsity team played an even battle against the Sandies in the first quarter. The score was tied four times, including 10-10.

Hereford was led by Kevin Hansen with 12 points and Todd Weaver with nine points. Hansen led in rebounds with seven, and Weaver was the leader in assists with two and in steals with five.

The Whitefaces had their problems against a much taller Amarillo ball club. Although the Whitefaces made 17 of 37 field goal attempts, several shots were blocked by the Sandies.

In the junior varsity game, Jerry McDonald and Jason Bullard each scored 10 points for Hereford and Arturo Martinez had nine points in the 59-45 loss to Amarillo High.

NEA/World Almanac team

Miami trio leads 1986 All-Americans

By Murray Olderman

NEW YORK (NEA) — Elementary Logic 101 dictates that the best college football team for most of 1986, the University of Miami in Coral Gables, Fla., has the best players. Right? Right!

Led by senior quarterback Vinny Testaverde, the Hurricanes placed three players on the 1986 NEA/World Almanac All-America team. Joining him were sophomore wide receiver Michael Irvin, who is Testaverde's favorite target, and senior tackle Jerome Brown, the stanchion of the Miami defense.

Nominations for the nation's oldest existing All-America college football team were provided to Newspaper Enterprise Association and the World Almanac by coaches, scouts and journalists. The first NEA team was chosen in 1917.

Joining Miami, an independent, in contributing more than one player to the 1986 All-America squad were Auburn of the Southeast Conference and Ohio State of the Big Ten. Both schools were represented by two first-team choices.

Two Auburn seniors, running back Brent Fullwood and center Ben Tamburello, were selected to the NEA/World Almanac team along with two Ohio State juniors, wide receiver Cris Carter and linebacker Chris Spielman.

The 1986 All-America team was chosen by experts representing the World Almanac and its 140 co-sponsoring newspapers; and its publisher, NEA, which distributed the results nationwide to more than 600 daily newspapers.

The All-America squad lines up the way most teams play, with two wide receivers, a tight end and a two-man set in the backfield. The defense has an extra lineman because most teams go to a four-man front in passing situations.

The 1986 NEA/World Almanac All-America college football team:

OFFENSE: Quarterback Vinny Testaverde, Miami (Fla.), senior; running back Brent Fullwood, Auburn, senior; running back Paul Palmer, Temple, senior; end Rod Bernstine, Texas A&M, senior.

Tackle John Clay, Missouri, senior; tackle Harris Barton, North Carolina, senior; guard Jeff Bregel, Southern California, senior; guard Steve Trapilo, Boston College, senior; center Ben Tamburello, Auburn, senior.

Linebacker Brian Bosworth, Oklahoma, junior; linebacker Cornelius Bennett, Alabama, senior; linebacker Chris Spielman, Ohio State, junior; linebacker Shane Conlan, Penn State, senior.

Defensive back Thomas Everett, Baylor, senior; defensive back Deion Sanders, Florida State, sophomore; defensive back Garland Rivers, Michigan, senior; defensive back Rod Woodson, Purdue, senior.

Size is a big factor in the 1986 NEA/World Almanac All-America picks.

The defensive line averages 276 pounds, and the offensive line, from tackle to tackle, is a pound heavier at 277.

Hurricane wide receiver Irvin is one of only two sophomores on the '86 All-America squad. The other sophomore is also a Floridian, spectacular cornerback Sanders of Florida State.

The other underclassmen, all juniors, are Ohio State teammates, wide receiver Carter and linebacker Spielman, and linebacker Bosworth of Oklahoma.

This was the year of the linebacker, with the outstanding quartet of Bosworth, Spielman, Alabama's Bennett and Penn State's Conlan closely pressed by, among others, Dave Wyman of Stanford and Johnny Holland of Texas A&M.

Wyman and Holland were named to the NEA/World Almanac second team.

On the second team, Miami also placed center Gregg Rakoczy, whom the pros rate as the best prospect at his position. Other strong Hurricane contenders for All-America honors: RB Alonzo Highsmith and DB Bennie

Blades. The NEA World Almanac All-America college football second team:

OFFENSE: QB Jim Harbaugh, Michigan, and QB Kevin Sweeney, Fresno State (tie); RB DJ Dozier, Penn State; RB Steve Bartalo, Colorado State.

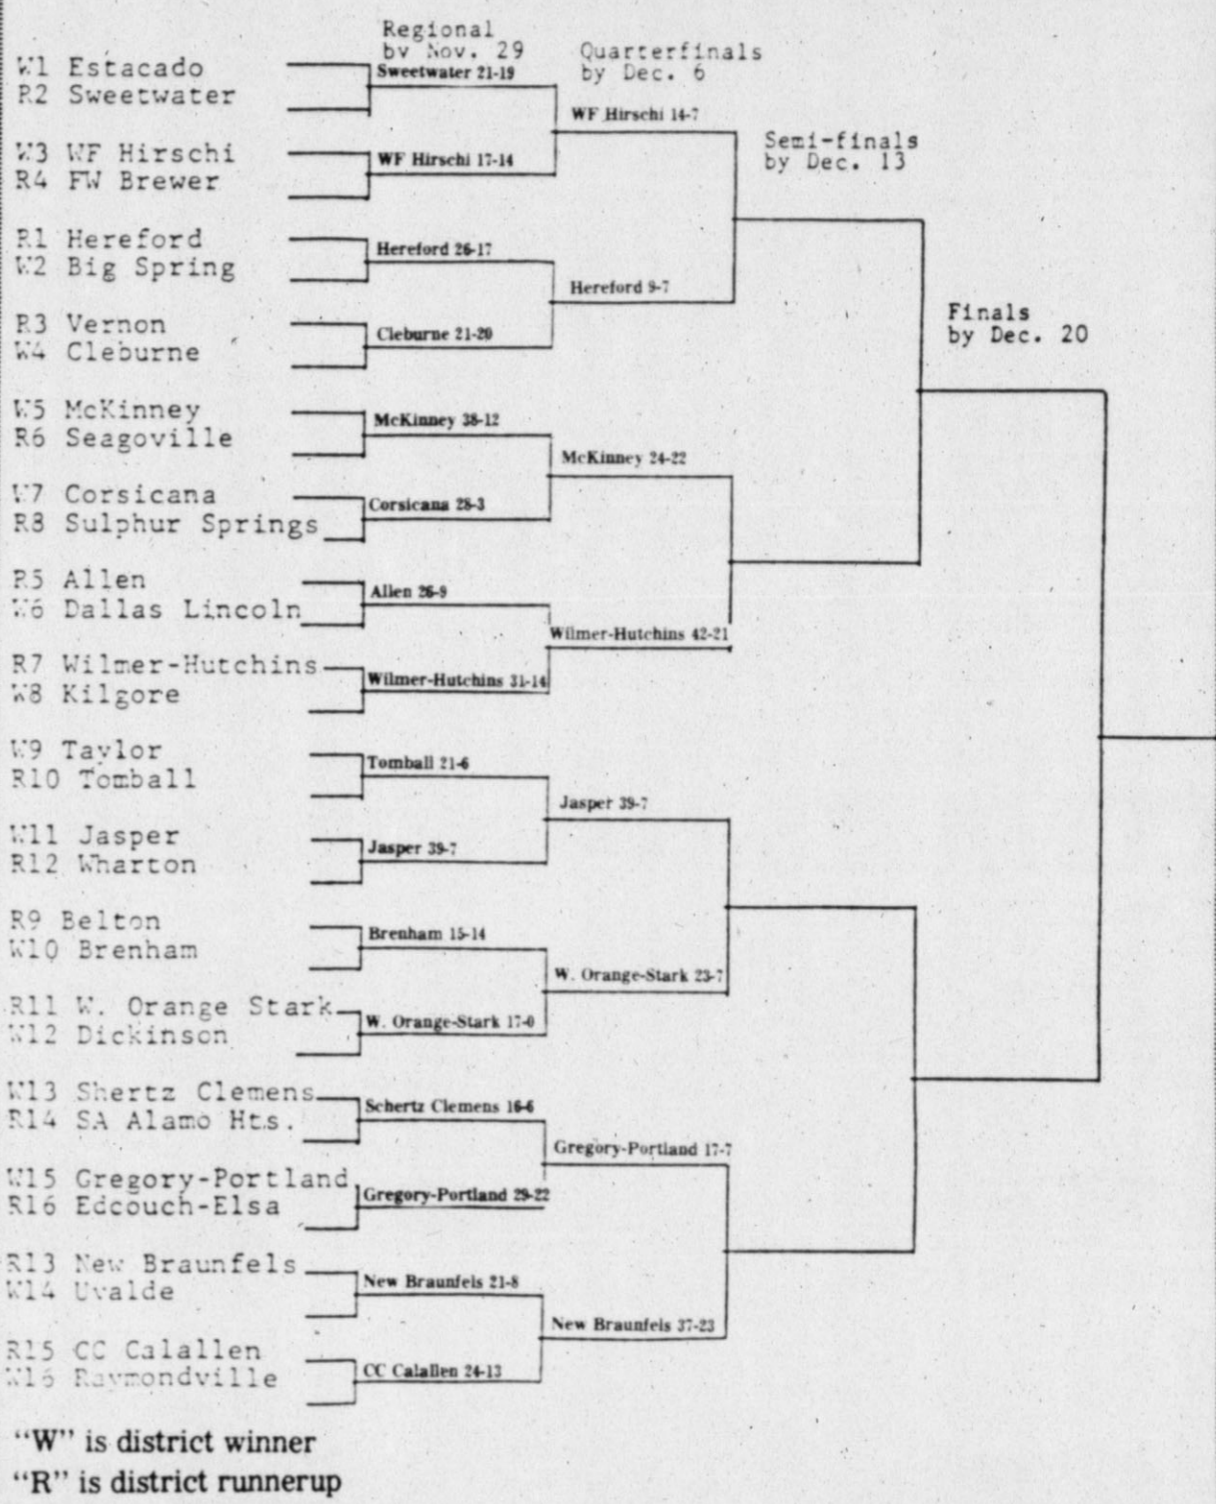

WR Tim Brown, Notre Dame; WR Wendell Davis, LSU; TE Keith Jackson, Oklahoma.

T Randy Dixon, Pittsburgh; T Danny Villa, Arizona State; G Paul Kiser, Wake Forest; G Anthony Phillips, Oklahoma; C Gregg Rakoczy, Miami (Fla.).

K Jeff Jaeger, Washington. DEFENSE: DE Tracy Rucker, Auburn; NG Jerry Ball, SMU; DT Henry Thomas, LSU; DE Tony Woods, Pitt; LB Dave Wyman, Stanford; LB Johnny Holland, Texas A&M; LB Mike Junkin, Duke; LB Terry Maki, Air Force.

DB Mark Moore, Oklahoma State; DB Lou Brock, Southern California; DB Tom Cook, Stanford; DB John Little, Georgia.

Two put on dog during daily routine

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Close your eyes and it's easy to imagine yourself in a horsedrawn carriage: You're moving along at a steady 5 mph and there's an accompanying clip-clop of hooves.

But open your eyes and you'll discover those hooves are actually massive paws. The mode of transportation is a 1965 Jaguar that only seems to be pulled along by Trusty, a 170-pound Great Dane attached to a leash that owner Bill Waltman hangs out the window of his car.

"Some people ask me why I do this," Waltman says with a grin. "I tell them it saves on gas."

Waltman hit upon this method of exercise several years ago as an alternative to walking Trusty, who weighs 5 pounds more than Waltman and had the potential to pull his arm out of joint.

But alongside the car, Trusty heels at a placid pace — a properly genteel companion for Waltman, who smokes a pipe and sips hot tea as he tools along the quiet streets of his Arlington Heights neighborhood.

It's not your typical pet-owner morning outing, particularly when you consider Trusty is bilingual. He follows commands — back, stop, left, right — in English and French.

Teaching Trusty French lived up to the exercise sessions for Waltman, and learning it was "no problem at all" for Trusty, says Waltman, who is chairman of the board of Protection Engineers Inc.

"It took him one day, maybe two days, to learn," he explains. "I'd just alternate — French, English, French, English — and before you know it, he caught on."

So it's "a gauche" (to the left); a droite (right); "en avant" (forward); and "attend" (wait).

Waltman switches to English long enough to tell the dog, "Oh look, Trusty. There's a balloon, and point skyward at a hot-air balloon. It's the only time on this outing that Trusty loses his cool, lunging forward and barking frantically.

"He gets excited over a balloon," Waltman explains, unnecessarily.

Trusty also gets reved up when he spots cowboy hats or beards, both of which he dislikes, his owner says.

"He's death on beards," Waltman notes. "But most of the time, he's extremely calm."

Waltman, who says he is "just a little bit younger than the president," has owned six Great Danes in the past 50 years. Trusty is the second one to exercise alongside the car. For a time, Waltman tried to exercise one of the Danes by tethering him to his bicycle, but that method was less successful than the current method.

"Once on the bike, I said go right. He went right and I went left," Waltman says, smiling sheepishly. "We collapsed, all three of us — the bike, the dog and I."

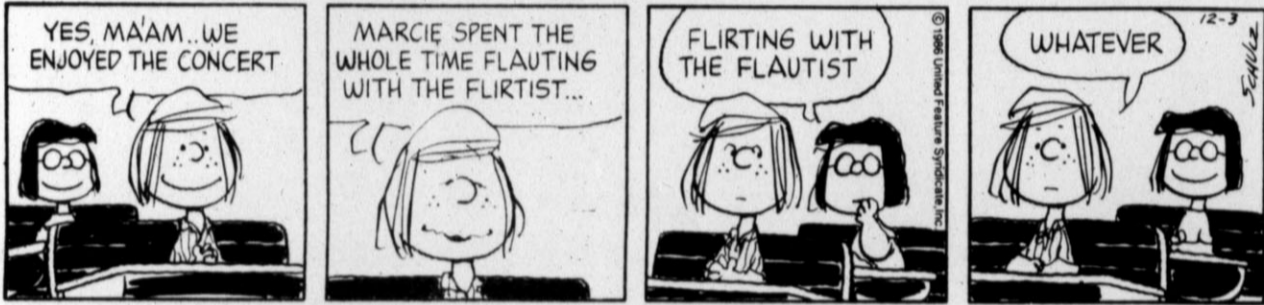

On this particular day, after Trusty's 15 minutes of morning exercise, Waltman invited him inside the Jaguar. Trusty, moist-mouthed and jowls aquiver, wedges his bulk into what seemed, pre-Trusty, to be an ample back seat.

When it's time for a sudden stop or quick turn, Waltman advises, "Tiens-toi!" — the rough equivalent of hold on — and Trusty does.

Use Christmas tree lights safely

In many families using the same Christmas tree decorations year after year is a tradition. When it comes to Christmas tree lights, however, this could be an unsafe practice, says home safety expert Dr. Peggy Owens.

"When you unpack stored tree lights take the time to check each set," she advises. "Inspect the bulbs to make sure they operate and then remove the plug from the socket and inspect the wires."

The Texas A&M University Agricultural Extension Service housing specialist suggests checking the string of lights from one end to the other, looking for cracked insulation or bare and broken wires, especially where the wire enters a light socket.

"If you find cracked insulation, bare wires or cracked sockets, discard the lights, no matter how much you like them," Owens cautions. "They could be a fire hazard."

Also check the plug to make sure the connections are good. She says one way to tell without getting a shock is to plug the set into the add-on connector or a second set of lights and plug that set into the connector of the first set.

The housing specialist explains that all strings of lights are not the same. Lights may be wired in a series or in parallel circuits. If a bulb goes out on a series circuit, all the lights go off. In a two-wire parallel set, the remaining lights continue to burn when one burns out. If you have miniature Christmas tree lights on a parallel circuit, replace any burned out lamps with a bulb of the proper voltage size. Although the other lamps will continue to work if you don't replace burned out bulbs, Owens says they will be subjected to increased electrical power, shortened life and could become a fire hazard in your home.

When you decorate your tree, don't connect more than 200 miniature lights, or more than 50 large lamps together through one string or cord, advises the specialist.

Large lamp sets should not be connected through miniature lamp sets and indoor lights shouldn't be used outdoors.

Use extension cords that are capable of transmitting the current to the lights without overloading the cord, triggering circuit breakers or blowing protective fuses.

A circuit breaker or fuse which blows when you connect the lights is signaling something is electrically wrong, Owens emphasizes. Don't use that string of lights until you know the extent of the problem and can correct it. If you're in doubt, throw the set away.

If you're buying new miniature Christmas tree lights, she suggests looking for certification on the package, such as an Underwriter's Laboratory or "UL" label, that shows the set meets the performance specifications of an independent testing laboratory. These sets will have passed a series of performance tests designed to eliminate hazards.

"Once you put the lights on the tree, safety precautions are still necessary," Owens remarks. "Remember to always turn the lights off when you leave the house."

Benjamin Franklin was credited with the invention of the first swimming fins. Made of wood, they were worn on both hands and feet.

Preparing For Bazaar

Lavon Leon will be selling her ceramic art pieces during the annual Festival of Arts and Crafts Bazaar slated from 9 a.m. until 5 p.m. Saturday at the Hereford Community Center. The bazaar, which is being sponsored by Wesley United Methodist Church, will also feature various Christmas decorations and unique crafts suitable for gift giving. For the convenience of the shopper, there will be a food booth selling chili, frito pies, nachos, sandwiches, cakes and pies. Proceeds will benefit the United Methodist Women.

'Jupiter and Its Moons' opens

"Jupiter and its moons," opens at the Don Harrington Discovery Center, Dec. 23.

During the late summer of 1977, two spacecraft were launched from Earth and directed toward close encounters with Jupiter and its 14 moons. Eighteen months later in March 1979, Voyager 1 passed Jupiter; Voyager 2 followed in July of that same year. The transmissions from these two missions brought us some of the most stunningly beautiful imagery yet to come from deep space as well as massive amounts of new data on the Jovian giant and its multiple satellites.

The exotic discoveries of a new moon, the suspected Jupiter ring, active volcanoes on the moon of Io, and the incredible turbulence surrounding the Great Red Spot added to the excitement of the Voyager project.

On Dec. 23, the Don Harrington

Discovery Center will open "Jupiter And Its Moons, an exhibition from the Smithsonian Institution Traveling Exhibition Service which imparts some of the excitement and information generated by the Voyager missions.

The exhibition presents over 70 color and black and white photographs of Jupiter and its five principal moons, which were donated by the Jet Propulsion Laboratory/NASA in Pasadena, California where Voyager transmissions are still being received. The images are augmented by an informative text written by Dr. Robert Wolfe, a geologist at the National Air and Space Museum, and a scale model of the Voyager spacecraft.

Rita Moreno was born in Humacao, P.R. on Dec. 11, 1931.

Delegates wrangle with issues

By JENNIFER DIXON Associated Press Writer McALLEN, Texas (AP) — Texas Farm Bureau members wrangled with a host of issues facing their troubled industry as they entered the final day of their 53rd annual convention today. Heading the list of controversial matters before the state's largest farm organization is the question of whether it should establish a political action committee. Delegates voted Tuesday in favor of a 10-year plan for the 323,799-member organization that calls for the creation of a PAC. A proposed change in the bylaws to form a PAC was to be considered today. The PAC debate took up more than 90 minutes of Tuesday's session, when the delegates also approved the Texas Farm Bureau's first annual dues increase since 1977. Dues will rise from $10 a year to $14 annually, effective in November 1987. The move to create a PAC for the Texas Farm Bureau would allow farmers to "enter the real world of influencing government in the modern way," a supporter said. "In the past we relied on our rural heritage but we no longer have a rural society in Texas and we must deal with problems facing agriculture in an urban manner," said Billy Huddleston of Snyder, one of hundreds of delegates approving the 10-year plan. Opponents questioned the morality of a PAC and whether it would be used to buy votes. Proponents argued that their troubled industry would continue to suffer at the hands of an urban-controlled Legislature and Congress if agriculture doesn't have a powerful lobby. "We have to play the game the way it's being played," Bob Rush of McLennan County told the 1,150 voting delegates. Royce Phillips of Goliad County said a Texas Farm Bureau PAC would force the Legislature to listen to a "God-fearing people who have been the backbone of this great nation." "We're losing ground through erosion," Phillips said. "We wouldn't allow it on the farm and we shouldn't lose it in this organization." "Farming without modern tools is difficult in the least," he said. "We need this new tool called a PAC. We need this if we are to survive. It will prevent erosion of our rights ... it can prevent erosion of our rights, we can plow ground and we can plant new seeds. And we can assure a harvest when we fulfill a command of Jesus Christ when he commanded us to feed his sheep." Paul Hoffmann of Guadalupe County said a PAC would dilute a farmer's influence with his representative or senator. "You're giving up your right ... to make your wishes known to him," Hoffmann said. "You're losing your power, you're diluted."

Government response to refugees 'a disgrace'

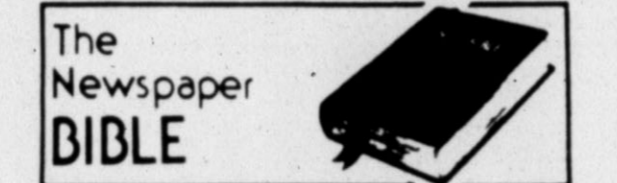

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — The Reagan administration inconsistently fuels a war to overthrow the Nicaraguan government and then boots Nicaraguans fleeing their homeland back to Central America, an immigration attorney says. Linda Yanez of Brownsville also told delegates to the National League of Cities convention Tuesday that the new immigration law will do nothing to keep Mexicans and Central Americans from coming across the border. "I believe that the official government response to the refugee question in the United States probably is going to go down as one of our national disgraces at the level of the internment of the Japanese during World War II and the level of the enslavement of blacks in the South," Ms. Yanez said. "Laws, fences and guns will not make a difference," she said. "The question for them is, 'Do I die down there or risk my life and that of my family to save them?'" Ms. Yanez was among the panelists speaking on the problems of immigration on local governments. Richard Casillas, district director of the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service in San Antonio, warned delegates that they should not try to harbor illegal aliens. "We do not need cities across the world wanting to become so-called sanctuaries," Casillas said. "It is an outright act of cruelty to hold a fake sign of hope."

While saying illegal aliens drain the economy by taking away jobs from Americans and by flooding public assistance agencies, he conceded that the INS is often criticized for tactics used to arrest illegal aliens. "We have been the object of condemnation from private citizens and a handful of elected officials," Casillas said. "We do not need publicly aired, politically motivated condemnation." A new immigration bill, signed recently by President Reagan, allows amnesty for some illegal aliens and penalizes employers who knowingly hire illegal aliens. Hispanic groups have opposed the measure, saying it would discriminate against minorities. Ms. Yanez said immigration policies in the Rio Grande Valley have left countless Central Americans on the streets. The policy, she said, restricts illegal aliens to the Rio Grande Valley if they are unable to post a $1,000 bond. Budget cuts have limited the number of illegal aliens held at a detention center. She said the situation is further complicated by the imminent closing of Casa Oscar Romero, a Catholic Church-sponsored shelter for Central Americans in San Benito. Most of the residents of the shelter have moved out after neighbors complained to city officials. A new proposed site has met with opposition from neighbors. "By us pretending they're not there, they're not going to go away," Ms. Yanez said. Casillas said most illegal aliens who post bond never appear for their detention hearings. He said government agencies should work together to identify illegal aliens, but that city police should not have to arrest them.

Teachers put on show for state appraisers

By SALLY CANTU Associated Press Writer AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas Education Agency's teacher appraisal system is causing teachers to perform a 45-minute "show" instead of their usual classroom behavior to advance on the career ladder, a state legislator said. "The whole concept has gotten askewed with respect to the career ladder in general," said Rep. Bill Haley, D-Center. "The concepts in here are applying toward moving on (the ladder)." Haley, chairman of the House Public Education Committee, and two other committee members discussed the Texas Teachers Appraisal System with state educators Tuesday at the first in a series of meetings evaluating the one-year-old appraisal system. Three more meetings will be held this month across the state by the committee to evaluate the concept of the appraisal system that was part of House Bill 72, Haley said. "Many teachers around the state have shown deep concern that the appraisal instrument has many requirements that are not educationally sound practices," Haley said. The appraisal system requires two certified appraisers to evaluate teachers a minimum of four times a year on classroom teaching performance and growth in the classroom. If a teacher

BEHOLD THE RUIN FROM ONE ROTTEN RUMOR!

The whole population of the city was electrified by these accusations and a great riot followed. Paul was dragged out of the Temple, and immediately the gates were closed behind him. As they were killing him, word reached the commander of the Roman garrison that all Jerusalem was in an uproar. He quickly ordered out his soldiers and officers and ran down among the crowd. When the mob saw the troops coming, they quit beating Paul. The commander arrested him and ordered him bound with double chains. Then he asked the crowd who he was and what he had done. Some shouted one thing and some another. When he couldn't find out anything in all the uproar and confusion, he ordered Paul to be taken to the armory. As they reached the stairs, the mob grew so violent that the soldiers lifted Paul to their shoulders to protect him, and the crowd surged behind shouting, "Away with him, away with him!" As Paul was about to be taken inside, he said to the commander, "May I have a word with you?" "Do you know Greek?" the commander asked, surprised. "Aren't you that Egyptian who led a rebellion a few years ago and took 4,000 members of the Assassins with him into the desert?" "No," Paul replied. "I am a Jew from Tarsus in Cilicia which is no small town. I request permission to talk to these people." The commander agreed. Acts 21:30-39
