'Wicked' storm pelts East

Wind, rain persist as residents begin cleanup

Associated Press

Lashing winds, snow and rain persisted Saturday along the Atlantic Coast as a nasty northeaster tore seaside homes off their foundations and forced evacuation of thousands of residents.

Pounding surf flooded seaside New Jersey communities for the second day. The sea wall in Sea Bright crumbled in two places, sending water rushing into the town through 50-foot gaps. Some vacation homes were swept off foundations.

The Red Cross kept open more than a dozen shelters, where 5,000 people stayed Friday. Many evacuees returned to flooded neighborhoods to find streets buried under sand and debris.

Winds that reached 80 mph toppled trees in the Philadelphia area Friday. As winds subsided to under 30 mph Saturday, people began to clean up the mess.

Massachusetts and Connecticut endured blizzard conditions Saturday. High tides and winds gusting to 60 mph forced the evacuation of coastal residents. Ferry service to Nantucket and Martha's Vineyard was halted because of rough seas.

"This is one wicked storm," said Bernice Begin, 43, of Bridgeport, Conn., as flood water came within a few feet of her front steps.

"We've got at least one cottage that was swept out to sea," said Mark Barnhart, town manager in Stratford, Conn.

At least 15 deaths since Thursday were blamed on the storm, including victims crushed by roofs collapsing under heavy snow. Tens of thousands were without

Halliburton deal

HOUSTON — Dallas-based Halliburton Co. will purchase Smith International's directional drilling business for $240 million worth of stock. Halliburton is interested in a technology called "measurement-while-drilling," a package of navigational tools that tells the driller where the drill bit is and where it is headed. The directional drilling unit represents about 40 percent of Houston-based Smith's annual revenues. Smith has signed a letter of intent to exchange its $160-million-a-year directional drilling business for Halliburton stock.

Pulitzer divorced

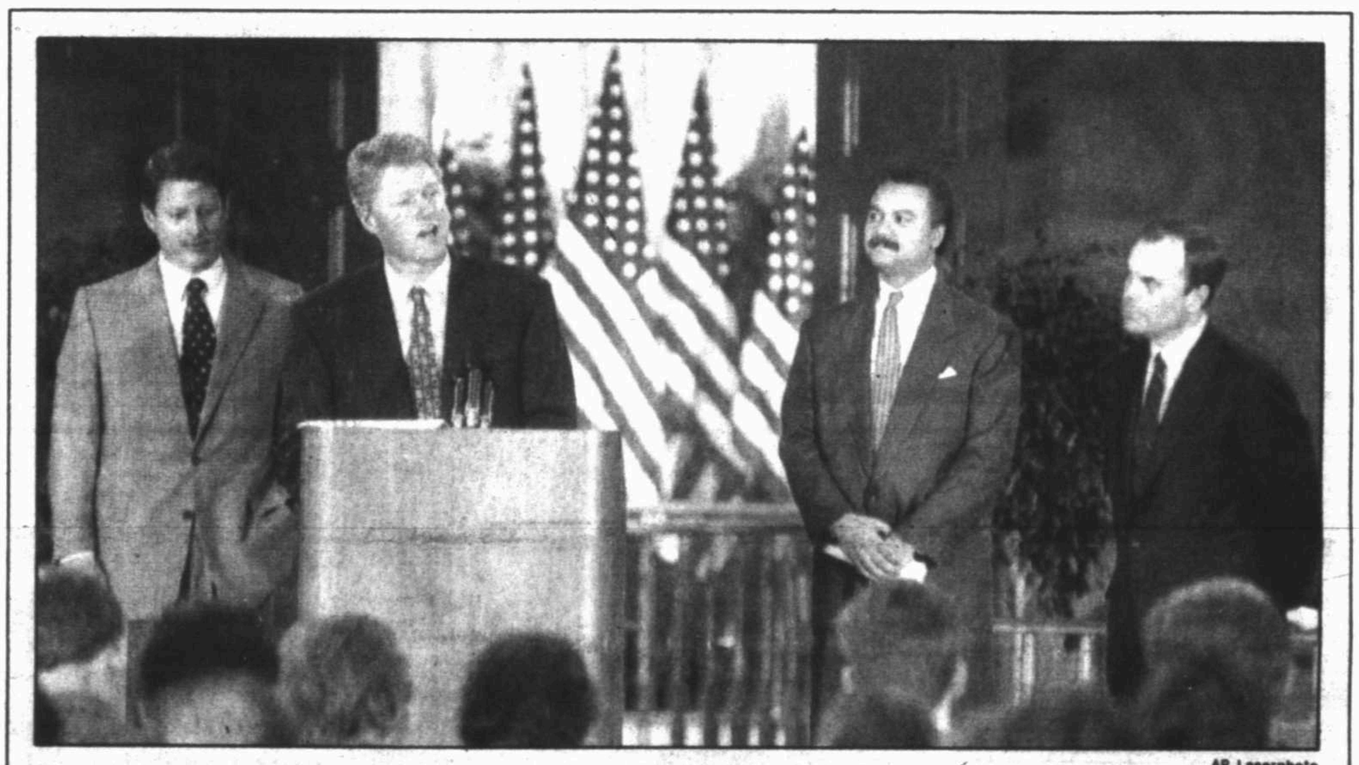

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla. — After eight weeks, Roxanne Pulitzer's marriage to boat racer John Haggin ended with a kiss and a rose. The two arrived separately. Haggin handed Pulitzer a red rose and said: "Hi sweetie, this is for you." The couple kissed on the lips and kissed again after the hearing. Pulitzer told Circuit Judge Gay Broome that her marriage was "irretrievably broken." Haggin blasted his mother, Naoma Haggin, who cut him off from an estimated $200 million fortune after his marriage. "I hope the press, media and my mother are happy now that Roxanne and I are divorced. . . . (I)t is the saddest day of my life."

Clinton's longtime friend to head staff

■ Ron Brown is president-elect's choice to be commerce secretary.

By Stewart M. Powell

Hearst News Service

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. — His eyes welling with tears on his last day as governor of Arkansas, President-elect Bill Clinton Saturday named a trusted childhood friend, Thomas F. "Mack" McLarty, to head his White House staff.

Clinton also named Ronald H. Brown, the chairman of the Democratic National Committee and the director of both the Democratic Convention and the inauguration, to serve as commerce secretary in the incoming administration. Brown, a prominent Washington attorney, is the first black to be named to a high post in the Clinton administration.

Clinton said Brown would make the Commerce Department a "powerhouse."

Brown said the essence of economic strategy would be to bring business, labor and government together into a "new, more effective" partnership that will compete forcefully in overseas markets.

"This will be a team effort," he said, "stretching across

Troops get first food shipment to Somalis

■ Marines on a reconnaissance mission fire on armed Somali vehicles that attacked the helicopters.

Associated Press

MOGADISHU, Somalia — U.S. Marines Saturday delivered the first food of their mercy mission to joyous Somalis, and combat helicopters destroyed three armed Somali vehicles that attacked the aircraft, military officials said.

The exchange of gunfire was the first between Somalis and foreign troops since the U.S.-led force arrived in the starving country Wednesday to protect food shipments from looters and clan gunmen.

To secure their own safety in the lawless capital city, Marines have been confiscating weapons from marauding gunmen. Military officials said they hoped the exchange Saturday would serve as an example to others.

There were Somali casualties, Marine officials said, but it was considered too dangerous to investigate the burned vehicles.

"It's not our responsibility to go and get people wounded on the ground like that," said Col. Fred Peck, spokesman

Coalition reaches agreement in school funding crisis

By John Powers

Reporter-Telegram Austin bureau

AUSTIN — The state Legislature failed to produce a plan for equal distribution of school funding during a special session, but coalitions of education groups and plaintiffs in the case have reached an agreement they can get behind in the regular session in January.

The groups hope to attract enough votes from House Republicans to break a partisan deadlock and approve the necessary constitutional amendment for a school financing plan.

Kent Caperton, an Austin attorney who represents the Small Rural School Finance Coalition, a group of property-rich districts in West Texas, said the groups reached an agreement at 8 p.m. on Dec. 2, the night before the special session adjourned.

Caperton, a Democrat who served in the state Senate from 1981-1991, said he hopes Republicans will realize that what makes the settlement plan different from all other plans proposed is that it would settle the lawsuit.

"If we minimize the partisanship and look at the merits of the plan instead of looking at it as Republicans and Democrats, the chances of it passing are excellent," he said.

Those involved in the negotiations besides Caperton's group were: the 13 districts and individual plaintiffs in the original Edgewood vs. Kirby lawsuit; other districts that intervened in the suit; the Mexican American Legal Defense and Educational Fund, which is

Mall employees are on the look for shoplifters

By Katherine Poteet

Staff writer

And shoplifters.

As the mad rush for getting the perfect gift grinds on, stores are packed with more shoppers than any other time of the year. And, in all the jostling and long lines, shoplifting becomes easier and more alluring.

"We usually have about a 50 percent increase in shoplifting during back-to-school and Christmas," said John Marshall, store manager for Sears, Roebuck & Co. at Midland Park

Princess Anne adds happy ending to unhappy royal year

CRATHIE, Scotland (AP) — A radiant Princess Anne, the only daughter of Queen Elizabeth II, added a joyous chapter to the fractured royal fairy tale Saturday, marrying a navy commander in a small private ceremony.

The event provided a happy ending to what the queen has called a horrible year. Among the few guests were Prince Charles — the heir to the throne — and Prince Andrew, whose own marriages foundered this year.

The vows by Anne, 42, one of the most popular royals, and Tim Laurence, a 37-year-old bachelor, were to stay together "until God shall separate us by death."

It was her second marriage. The ceremony was held at a Presbyterian church just outside the gates of Balmoral Castle. Scotland's national church is more tolerant of divorce than the Oil slick spreads on Spainish coast

N.Y. Times News Service

MUGARDOS, Spain — Next to a pile of oil-drenched rubber slickers, Juan Bonome gazed out across the small harbor of Mugardos, 35 miles northeast of La Coruna on the northwest coast of Spain.

Workers had just finished loading another 14-ton tanker truck with oil skimmed up by cleanup boats. For a week, six to eight trucks a day had hauled away the black goo.

A faint smell of oil permeated the raw mist and oily muck an inch thick oozed around the shoreline and covered much of the beach. A few oil-stained gulls squawked overhead.

Fighting back tears, Bonome said his livelihood had been ruined for the next two years by the Greek tanker Aegean Sea, which ran aground and split in two off La Coruna harbor last week, spilling million of gallons of crude oil along 60 miles of coastline.

"The shellfish are all dead, fishing has been banned, and the inlet will take years to recover," he said.

Like the other idle fishermen silently watching the cleanup, he had planned to cover extra Christmas expenses with shellfish digging and crab and lobster fishing. "I was waiting for the prices to go up a little more, and now there is nothing," he said."

Mugardos is one of several badly hit areas in Ria del Ferrol, an inlet northeast of La Coruna where oil has accumulated. Bonome's family is one of 4,000 that depend on local fish, octopus, clams, cockles and mussels for a living.

Clinton said, "to create a high-wage, high-growth economy, American businesses must pull together, and government must help. The department of Commerce can be a forceful advocate for American interests."

Clinton wiped a tear from his eye after McLarty recalled their childhood "in a special place called Hope" — a reference to their Arkansas hometown that Clinton used frequently during his successful campaign.

"Hope is more than just the name of our hometown," said McLarty, a graduate of the University of Arkansas who serves as vice chairman of Clinton's transition team. "The word 'hope' obviously represents the very essence of the Clinton-Gore administration, putting people first and bringing people together."

Clinton, who met President John F. Kennedy in 1963 under a program in which he and McLarty participated as high school students, embraced his life-long friend several times during the announcement ceremony.

Clinton formally resigned as governor several hours later, ending a meteoric career in which he won election five times and held office a total of 12 years. He told lawmakers at the state capitol that he hoped his rise from Arkansas to the presidency would inspire other Arkansans to "grow up to an unlimited future.".

McLarty is chairman and CEO of the Arkansas Louisiana Gas Co., a Fortune 500 company that is a retail gas utility and a pipeline builder. The new chief of staff is decidedly a Washington outsider who rose to prominence in Arkansas through a family-run automobile and trucking business and went on to top posts in the gas company.

Clinton rejected suggestions that McLarty would be handicapped by his lack of experience in the nation's capital where back biting and bureaucratic warfare are favorite indoor sports.

"The people of America will learn as I have over the years that they can trust Mack McLarty to bring the real concerns of real people to the table," the 46-year-old president-elect said of his friend of more than 40 years. "I trust him to build a team in the White House. He knows how to get things done."

Clinton said that successful White House chiefs of staff are the "honest brokers who sought to manage the flow of information, people and issues in a responsible way and guarantee everybody's genuine input into the White House and to maintain an open and sort of a forward looking culture in the White House."

Clinton and his aides went out of their way to emphasize that McLarty has the mettle to speak for the president, deal effectively with Congress and ride herd over the bright, ambitious appointees being named to the Clinton administration.

"The American people can feel confident that he will make sure that everyone's voice is heard before I make an important decision and that everyone pulls together once the decision is made," Clinton said.

George Stephanopoulos, Clinton's communications director, said McLarty would make sure that the White House staff was "talking," that Clinton had the "full range of views before him" and guarantee that "once the president makes a decision, it is carried out throughout the government."

Mickey Kantor, a former top Clinton aide in the campaign, said that Clinton was purposely naming strong-willed people to top jobs.

"Just because people have strong views doesn't mean they can't work together as a team," Kantor said. "They've been chosen for their ability and willingness to work together as a team."

"As chief of staff, I will do whatever I can to help him organize, manage, facilitate and carry out the duties of president of the United States," McLarty said. "As his friend I will always be straight with him and he knows that."

McLarty has served as the youngest state legislator ever elected here, as state Democratic party chairman and as treasurer for the successful gubernatorial campaigns of both Clinton and David Pryor, now a senator from Arkansas.

The Associated Press contributed to this report.

Clinton hopes Chelsea's time at White House is fun, normal

WASHINGTON (AP) — President-elect Clinton said Saturday he hoped his daughter Chelsea's life in the White House will be both fun and as normal as possible.

Clinton said the 12-year-old was "genuinely interested in what we are about to do. She's genuinely excited about it."

But he added that "just like any other child her age she just doesn't want it to interfere with her being a child, and I'm going to do what I can to see that it doesn't."

"We're going to do the very best we can to give her a childhood that's as normal as possible. It's not easy to be an adolescent in America anywhere under any circumstances today, but I want it to be fun for her," Clinton said.

Clinton and his wife, Hillary, have yet to say whether Chelsea will be sent to private or public school. The president-elect has been a strong supporter of the public school system but is thought to be leaning toward a private school because of security concerns.

WEATHER SUMMARY
Snow accumulation expected

Staff report

The first snow accumulation of the season is in the forecast for tonight and Monday, according to forecasters with the National Weather Service at Midland International Airport.

Mostly cloudy skies are expected today with a 20 percent chance of showers and a high only reaching the mid-40s. Southwest winds from 10-15 mph, should shift to the north in the afternoon, at 10-20 mph and gusty.

Continued cloudy skies are in store for tonight. NWS puts the chance for snow at 30 percent, with an accumulation generally less than an inch. The overnight low should be in the upper 20s.

The chance for snow continues at 30 percent on Monday, with additional accumulation of less than another inch. The high is expected to be only in the upper 30s.

After an overnight low of 43, Saturday's high was 69, just 10 degrees short of the record high for the date of 79, set in 1937. The record low for today was set in 1985, when the mercury dipped to 14.

STATE

West Texas was the sunny area of the state Saturday, while clouds that covered much of the rest of Texas could bring rain, sleet or snow on Sunday.

Cloudy skies over North Texas were accompanied by temperatures in the 50s and 60s. Winds were 10 to 20 mph with gusts over 30 miles an hour.

South Texas also was overcast with some light rain near Del Rio. Winds gusted to about 40 mph near the coast and were in 15 to 25 mph elsewhere. Most of the region enjoyed highs around 70 degrees.

West Texans enjoyed sunny skies except for those in the lower plains, Concho Valley and the Edwards Plateau. Temperatures were generally in the 60s with extremes ranging from 49 at Dalhart to 73 at Wink.

Winds were mostly less than 20 mph except for some gusts of more than 50 mph at Guadalupe Pass.

An arctic cold front is predicted to cross West Texas Sunday, bringing a chance of snow or rain mixed with snow in the Panhandle and part of the Big Bend. Lows are predicted to be in the 20s and 30s.

Showers and thunderstorms are forecast for North Texas and could turn into sleet or snow west Sunday night. Highs Sunday are expected to be between 52 and 65. Lows Sunday night are forecast between 33 in the west to 60 in the southeast.

South Texas can expect mostly cloudy skies through the weekend with a chance of showers and thunderstorms. Highs will be in the 60s and 70s, lows in the 50s and 60s.

NATION

A fierce Atlantic storm battered the Northeast for a third day Saturday and parts of Texas basked in temperatures in the 80s.

Another storm dumped snow over the Rockies.

At midday, snow fell over much of New England, New Jersey, New York and the central Appalachians. Up to 25 inches of snow fell in the mountains of West Virginia and Virginia and 20 to 35 inches in high elevations of western Maryland.

Snowfall during the six hours ending at 1 p.m. EST included 6 inches at Concord, N.H., and 4 inches at Albany, N.Y., and Boston.

Rainfall during the six hours ending at 1 p.m. EST included 1½ inches in Boston.

Snow extended across the Rockies into the upper Plains and the mountains of Arizona. Two inches fell in Gallup, N.M., and Lander, Wyo.

On Friday, the Atlantic storm pounded cities and coastal areas from Virginia to Massachusetts. Up to 6,000 people fled their homes in New Jersey. New York City's La Guardia Airport was shut down by hurricane-force wind gusts of 77 mph.

The storm killed at least 12 people since Thursday.

The Associated Press contributed to this report.

EAST: Whales beach themselves electrical power Saturday.

"It was one of the greatest Northeast storms this century," said Bill Scura, a meteorologist for the National Weather Service in Pomona, N.J.

More than 20 pilot whales apparently disoriented by the storm beached themselves on Cape Cod, Mass. They were caught too close to shore during low tide. Ten of the whales died and four were trapped in the swollen Pamet River and carried into the town of Truro about 30 feet from the post office.

Two of the whales were rescued, said Kathy Shorr of the Center for Coastal Studies.

Fierce wind coming from the northeast shifted slightly northward, creating more snow and less rain than Friday, when up to 4 inches fell on coastal New Jersey.

Snow blew sideways in New York City, driven by winds gusting to 40 mph as thousands of Christmas shoppers reclaimed the streets.

'If you live in California you get earthquakes. If you live in India you expect that one of your kids might get eaten by a tiger. If you live near the ocean, you expect a little salt water.'

— Richard Lovett, Longport, N.J.

"The lights and the decorations in the city are well worth it," said Joyce Ghent of Portland, Conn. She had tickets to the Radio City Music Hall Christmas show and added with a sigh: "We may never get home."

New York's La Guardia Airport reopened shortly after noon, despite steady snow. Planes had been grounded there Friday.

Nearly 27 inches of snow fell in Worcester, Mass., by Saturday night. Parts of New Jersey, Connecticut and upstate New York had more than a foot.

In suburban New York City, at least 5 inches were on the ground in Westchester County. In Rochester, N.Y., hardware store owner Joe Benfante sold all his snow shovels.

"Lots of people broke the one they had, because the snow's so heavy, and a couple people had them stolen off their front porch," he said.

Governors in New Jersey, New York, Connecticut, Massachusetts, Virginia and West Virginia issued disaster declarations on Friday.

Boston's Logan Airport was closed for three hours Saturday. More than half its flights were canceled there and at other airports.

"If you live in California you get earthquakes," said Richard Lovett of Longport, N.J., as he swept water out of his basement. "If you live in India you expect that one of your kids might get eaten by a tiger. If you live near the ocean, you expect a little salt water."

On Friday, the storm submerged streets and destroyed dozens of homes along the shorelines of Long Island and the Brooklyn borough of New York.

'The lights and the decorations in the city (and the Radio City Music Hall Christmas show) are well worth it. . . . We may never get home.'

— Joyce Ghent Portland, Conn.

Mass transit in and out of New York City came to a virtual standstill before most rail lines were reopened Friday night. Some New Jersey trains remained closed Saturday because of floodwater in stations.

Yachts, piers and docks were severely damaged at New York's 79th Street Boat Basin and at City Island in the Bronx.

MISSION: Marines destroy vehicles

for the U.S. forces in Somalia.

The incident came the same day that U.S. Marine armored vehicles, accompanied by scores of press cars, crossed Mogadishu's war-devastated "Green Line" to deliver the first food of the mercy mission.

The delivery of the 20 tons of rice and beans to food kitchens in northern Mogadishu, where food is scarce but there is no danger of starvation, was portrayed as a demonstration that U.S. forces can do what they were sent to Somalia for: keep food flowing to hungry Somalis.

Much like the Marine landing four days ago, the operation was mobbed by photographers, camera crews and journalists weaving in and out of the convoy, fenders crashing, bumpers locking.

"It was like the Indy 500 out there, with the array of trucks, relief food and press," said Paul Mitchell, spokesman for the U.N. World Food Program. "But it was exhilarating to everybody trying to get food to Somalia."

But CARE International spokesman Rick Grant criticized the convoy for delivering only 22 tons of food, a fraction of what CARE normally moves.

"We should be seeing large convoys of 500 to 1,000 tons at a time," Grant said. "It's not really a convoy, it's a convoyette. Twenty tons is less than symbolic."

Still, Mitchell described the operation as a turning point. "It's the first time the United Nations has been able to take a convoy across the Green Line without the threat of getting shot or robbed," he said.

It was a popular show with Somalis.

Chants of "Viva! Viva!" rang out as the Marines passed. A small boy shouted "Thank you" in English. "U.S.A." was scribbled on some walls.

As Somali workers unloaded the 200 sacks from the first truck into a warehouse, Marines reported hearing two gunshots. But the pops came from a residential area, apparently not aimed at the convoy.

"Now we're feeling at peace," said Sharif Mohamed Iman, 55, who works in a small center feeding 150 to 200 people a day.

A co-worker, cook Haliiuro Hosan, 35, said the Marines had made decent Somalis "very grateful, very happy. The Americans are solving our problems."

More than 3,000 Marines have arrived under a United Nations mandate to stop the gangs, which have stolen at least half the shipments of grain meant to curtail famine. At least 300,000 people have died in Somalia as a result of drought, hunger and disease.

In Somalia's interior, where U.S. forces have yet to penetrate, hundreds of people are still dying every day, and 2 million are threatened with starvation.

U.N. spokesmen Ian MacLeod said up to 190 people a day were dying of hunger and disease in Bardera and up to 160 a day in Baidoa — two towns at the center of the devastating famine.

But Marines are proceeding cautiously because of violence.

"The security of our troops is always paramount," the commander of the U.S.-led force, Marine Lt. Gen. Robert Johnston, said Friday in announcing that he was delaying sending troops into the interior.

Defense Secretary Dick Cheney underscored that sentiment, saying movement into Baidoa and the interior must be done "carefully, cautiously, and deliberately to minimize the costs both in terms of American and potentially Somali lives." He spoke on CNN's "Evans and Novak" program.

Saturday's gun battle demonstrated the danger facing the troops.

The Cobra helicopters were on a routine reconnaissance mission when they were fired on by an armored personnel carriers north of the former U.S. Embassy building, where the Marines are staying.

Peck said one M-113 armored vehicle fired a .50-caliber machine gun at the helicopters. The U.S. aircraft returned fire with 20 mm cannon and TOW missiles.

CNN reported that earlier another U.S. combat helicopter was hit by gunfire, its rotors damaged by bullets. According to the report, the helicopter's crew did not return fire because there were too many civilians in the area.

Still, aid officials are imploring the Marines to send their forces to Baidoa, a city of 100,000, where aid groups are being terrorized by gunmen.

A Somali who had taken shelter in a relief agency's compound in Baidoa was shot and killed by looters he had tried to stop from raiding aid supplies, the Los Angeles-based World Vision International said.

"We need protection now," Russ Kerr of World Vision said in a statement from Baidoa. "If they wait five or six more days, we might not have any relief workers left to protect."

Grant, of CARE, said his workers in Baidoa are holed up in a heavily fortified house, guarded by more than a dozen men with AK-47s who must stage a nightly firepower display to keep the bandits at bay.

"It is criminal negligence the Marines aren't there," Grant said.

CARE and World Vision have asked the Marines to at least fly over Baidoa in a show of force.

Meanwhile, two UNICEF workers evacuated Wednesday from the port of Kismayu, 300 miles south of Mogadishu, said at least 60 people were killed there Tuesday night in a frenzy of looting and clan fighting.

In Mogadishu, the level of lawlessness — measured by the volume of gunfire — dropped significantly after Marines arrived, but new threats emerged. Free-lance thieves robbed four relief workers and an Associated Press photographer Saturday near the Green Line, and a mob threw stones and three journalists.

Also a Kenyan sound recorder working for Italian television was shot Friday and robbed outside a Mogadishu mosque, his employer said. He was in satisfactory condition with a leg wound.

The Green Line divides Mogadishu's southern section, controlled by warlord Gen. Mohamed Farrah Aidid, and the north, controlled by his rival Ali Mahdi Mohamed.

The two agreed Friday to stop fighting and have their men out of the capital by today. But it was not clear how much control they really have over the unruly gunmen.

SCHOOL: Groups seek legislators' support representing the plaintiffs; the Equity Center, a coalition of about 270 property-poor districts; the Texas Association of School Administrators; the Texas Association of School Boards; and a dozen education groups that comprise the School Finance Working Group.

That represents a lot of power on all sides of the issue.

But there still is no guarantee the plan would gain 100 votes in the 150-member House, the two-thirds majority required for a constitutional amendment.

Fifty-six of 58 House Republicans opposed an amendment in the special session because it would allow the transfer of local property taxes from rich districts to poor ones.

The Senate approved the amendment by a wide margin.

The coalition agreement would require the sharing of about $400 million in local tax money by rich and poor districts, but would limit the amount that could be recaptured from rich districts, Caperton said. The recapture cap proposed is 2.75 percent of the total of all state and local school funds.

The agreement is similar to the Fair Share amendment and plan proposed by Gov. Ann Richards, Lt. Gov. Bob Bullock and House Speaker Gib Lewis. House Republicans rejected it because it included recapture.

Rep. Tom Craddick, R-Midland, leader of the House Republican Caucus, was not available for comment late Friday.

Caperton said the settlement plan calls for an end to litigation in the 20-year-old court battle for at least two years, and the lawsuit would end if Texas voters approve the constitutional amendment and legislators live up to the terms of the proposal.

The state Supreme Court has given lawmakers until June 1 to approve a plan or it may cut off state funding for all districts, which would cause most schools to close.

Other points of the coalition plan include the following:

■ Elimination of the current County Education Districts that combined the state's 254 counties into 188 financial districts for tax purposes only. Instead, money from rich districts would flow directly to the state.

■ Staying within available state revenues for the next biennium, which includes an increase of $650 million in state aid, but the Legislature would have to find additional money beginning with the 1995-'96 school year.

■ In return for less funding that previously promised by the Legislature, schools could apply for exemptions to some state mandates — such as the 22-to-1 pupil-teacher ratio for kindergarten through the fourth grade — if the mandates would require a local tax increase.

■ No definition of what constitutes equal funding would be included in the coalition plan.

HAPPY: Princess Anne weds navy commander

(From 1A)

Church of England, which does not permit church rites for divorcees.

A pool video released by Buckingham Palace showed Anne, in a sparkling white suit with white blossoms in her hair, and Laurence in his elegant Royal Navy uniform as they emerged from the church.

They were saluted by two kilted bagpipers playing "Mairi's Wedding," a traditional wedding song that begins, "Step we gaily, on we go ..."

The palace would not say whether the newlyweds planned a trip after the wedding. They were expected to join the rest of the royal family for a short celebration at Craigowan Lodge on the Balmoral estate.

The queen, Prince Philip and the queen's 92-year-old mother attended the ceremony, along with Anne's bachelor brother Prince Edward, her aunt Princess Margaret, and her children from her first marriage, Peter, 15, and Zara, 11, who was the bridesmaid.

Buckingham Palace said about 30 relatives and friends of the couple were present, along with several estate workers from the castle.

Two local children, Neil Fraser, 11, and Lorna Grassick, 9, presented the couple with a posy of horseshoes decorated with ribbons and pictures and a good-luck card made by students at the local school. "The princess looked very happy," Lorna said.

About 500 citizens and 150 journalists crowded the roadside hours before the ceremony to catch a glimpse of the arriving royals, but the family swept down from the castle in three fast-moving Range Rovers.

Police barriers were set up to keep the press pack at least 200 yards from the church.

"They weren't very nice to all of us who had been waiting here so long," grumbled Florrie McDonald, a woman in her 60s. "They drove past too quickly. Andrew and Charles were very dour."

It was the first marriage for Laurence, 37, who met Anne during a tour of duty on Royal Yacht Britannia. In 1986, he was appointed an equerry — a personal assistant — to the queen.

Their relationship became known in April 1989 when some affectionate letters from Laurence were stolen from Anne's briefcase and given to newspapers.

The letters were not published, but their tone was described in news reports. Four months later, Anne announced her separation from Mark Phillips, whom she had married in Westminster Abbey in 1973. They divorced this year.

The wedding ended a miserable week. Charles announced a formal separation from Princess Diana on Wednesday, shattering the fairy-tale illusions encouraged by their splendid wedding at St. Paul's Cathedral in 1981.

Princess Diana did not attend the ceremony. She returned to London on Saturday after joining the prince for a formal dinner Friday night as part of the European Community summit in Edinburgh. She had sent best wishes early.

Metropolis holds memorial service for Superman

By Frank Fisher
Associated Press writer

METROPOLIS, Ill. — In a ceremony befitting a man of steel, residents of this Southern Illinois town paid their last respects Saturday to one they call their own: Superman.

But when a charcoal gray casket was opened for 200 fans, Superman was nowhere to be found.

In his place was a note: "Greetings Friends, I'll see you in the comics. Superman."

Metropolis, a sleepy Ohio River town of about 7,000, billed itself as the home of Superman for decades. The city even has a weekly newspaper called The Metropolis Planet, which printed a black stripe in its Nov. 18 edition so residents unhappy with DC Comics' decision to kill the hero could fashion arm bands.

The tongue-in-cheek ceremony was organized by residents trying to raise $130,000 for a 15-foot bronze statue of the crusader.

"We have always been the home of Superman, and we felt like when DC Comics decided to do what they have done, that it was only fitting that his hometown give him a memorial service," said Gary Kidd, president of the statue committee.

A steady trickle of people filed past the closed casket in the Massac County courthouse hallway. The cape Christopher Reeve wore in his first Superman movie covered the coffin. A red rose and a note that read "With Love From Lois" lay on top.

Somber pallbearers wearing black armbands carried the casket into the courtyard and set it before a 10-foot fiberglass replica of the statue. A black-veiled Lois Lane followed the procession.

'We have always been the home of Superman, and we felt like when DC Comics decided to do what they have done, that it was only fitting that his hometown give him a memorial service.'

— resident Gary Kidd

"Some have called him the earth's greatest hero. But we who knew him called him friend," the Rev. Jim Walker said in a eulogy. "For 54 years, Superman had been a pillar of the Metropolis community. His deeds are manifold, his legacy will be boundless."

When the casket was opened, it revealed Superman's green-tinted power crystal, borrowed from the first Superman movie.

So, Superman is missing, but that doesn't surprise his followers. DC Comics already has hinted it may bring the hero back, although it won't say how or when.

"I think he'll be back. He might not have all his super powers, but he'll be back," said Jason Gordon, 15, of Paris, Tenn.

But, as more shoplifters invade stores and shopping malls, stores step up security.

"All the employees of the stores are trained to spot shoplifters," said Jeff Craig, loss preventiohn supervisor for Midland Park Mall. "And, they usually have a refresher course around the holidays. The mall security is mainly in charge of the common mall area. The department stores, such as Dillard's, Sears and JC Penney's, bring in their own security."

Craig said employees are trained to look for suspicious behavior, such as moving quickly from department to department, picking up items without regard to size, refusing customer service or carrying large empty sacks.

"It's pretty easy to spot them unless they are a professional," Craig said. "The professionals have a lot of tricks to hide themselves."

Most stores also have two-way mirrors in dressing rooms, camera surveillance and signs warning customers of the consequences of shoplifting.

"Some of the time, just those signs that spell out what the penalties for shoplifting are, will prevent somebody," Craig said. "But, that's a small percentage."

Once a shoplifter has been identified by a store employee or security person, store policy dictates how the situation is dealt with.

"Mall security is basically there to hold the suspect until the police get there, if that's what the store wants, and to make sure things don't get out of hand," Craig said. "It's up to the different stores as to whether or not they press charges and how they handle it."

Marshall said the Sears department store presses charges against all shoplifters, no matter what the monetary amount.

"Stealing is stealing," he said. "We need to make that clear."

Monetary value does, however, determine the punishment, according to police.

If the value of the stolen items is under $20, the shoplifter faces a $500 fine. For items totaling more than $20 but less than $200, there is a fine of no more than $1,500 and jail time of no more than 180 days. For $200-$750, the fine is no more than $3,000 and imprisonment of no more than a year.

For items totaling between $750-$20,000, which is a third degree felony, the fine can be up to $10,000 and imprisonment can be between two to 10 years.

However, if a person caught shoplifting has two or more convictions of any theft, the offense automatically becomes a third degree felony, no matter what the monetary value, said Midland Police Det. Mike McLain.

McLain said the detectives don't handle a lot of the shoplifting cases.

"We pick up those who have been caught shoplifting and the stores don't catch them," he said. "We don't usually get involved in a case unless security saw a theft on a camera or something and the suspect managed to get out of the store. Then, we are called to get them."

Catching a shoplifter poses special problems to store employees and security.

"Some try to run or destroy the merchandise," said Marshall. "Or they might run into a group and they will all turn on the employee or security person. And, there is always the possibility that they will pull a knife or gun."

Marshall said employees are instructed that if they are threatened with physical harm, they are to leave the suspect alone and give a physical description to the store owner.

"There is nothing in the store that we can't replace," he said. "Nothing in here is worth our employees getting hurt over."

Indonesian quake kills at least 147

JAKARTA, Indonesia (AP) — A major earthquake Saturday leveled hundreds of buildings and sent tidal waves crashing into villages, killing at least 147 people and injuring 88.

Most of the deaths were on the island of Flores, about 1,100 miles east of Jakarta, rescue team spokesman Hendrik Nai said today. Bad communications hampered the task of gathering information from other parts of the beleaguered island, he said.

"The impact of the earthquake was devastating. About 80 percent of the town of Maumere has been destroyed," said Alexs Babys, an official of the town of 40,000 in the Lesser Sunda Islands.

The quake triggered a tidal wave as high as 75 feet that swept away entire villages, Nai said.

Indonesian officials measured the quake at 6.8 on the Richter scale. The U.S. Geological Survey in Menlo Park, Calif., said measured it at 7.5 on the Richter scale.

Sariman, an official at the Maumere geophysics station, said the epicenter was in the Savu Sea, 19 miles southwest of Maumere. Sariman said the quake was felt as far away as Irian Jaya province, 770 miles northeast of Maumere.

"It's like the end of the world," said Embih Ruslan, a meteorological official. Heavy rains and power outages were making rescue work difficult.

"For the time being, we have ordered the people to stay out of their homes and buildings and gather at open fields and other places," Babys said in a telephone interview.

Indonesia is along the Pacific's volcanic "rim of fire" and is hit by many strong temblors each year.

A quake of magnitude 7 on the Richter scale is considered a major earthquake, capable of widespread, heavy damage in populated areas.

By Reid G. Miller

■ Analysis

MOGADISHU, Somalia — America is being asked to play a much bigger role in Somalia than the one envisioned when it sent soldiers to help feed the starving. And the policy implications are enormous.

Should the United States accede to the request of U.N. Secretary-General Boutros Boutros-Ghali and expand the military mission in an effort to rehabilitate and rebuild the shattered East African nation?

If so, what was originally seen as a short-term humanitarian effort could turn into a long and costly commitment that would inevitably involve Washington deeply in Somalia's tangled politics.

President Bush, who sent the troops in, is likely to defer to the incoming administration for an answer to Boutros-Ghali since President-elect Clinton will have to live with the decision.

The United States is no stranger to Somalia, having replaced the former Soviet Union as its chief sponsor 15 years ago when Moscow decided to support neighboring Ethiopia in the Ogaden war.

Dictator Mohamed Siad Barre went to war with Ethiopia in July 1977 over the Ogaden, a vast desert that juts into Somalia like the point of a spear and is largely populated by ethnic Somalis.

Both countries were socialistic and both offered control of the strategic Indian Ocean entrance to the Red Sea.

Since Ethiopia was bigger and richer, Moscow dropped Somalia as a client and gave Ethiopia the military muscle to win the war in 1978. With its influence lost in Ethiopia, Washington fell into the diplomatic embrace of Siad Barre.

It was not a marriage made in heaven.

Siad Barre had already been in power 10 years and was becoming increasingly unpopular as he concentrated the country's wealth in the hands of his family and Marehan sub-clan.

His answer to growing discontent was to become ever more brutally repressive, jailing and killing opponents. In 1989, Congress tired of Siad Barre's human rights abuses and ordered a halt to all but humanitarian aid to Somalia.

Two years later, Siad Barre was run out of the capital, and eventually the country, by one of several clan-based rebel movements.

His ouster brought a new armed struggle among the clans and sub-clans for control of the country and led to the chaos, anarchy and famine that ravage Somalia today.

It is to this mess that the United States returns.

The original mandate given the U.S. military was simply to secure Somalia's major ports and airfields with the help of coalition partners and protect shipments of food and other aid to the desperately needy.

When American Marines came ashore in Mogadishu before dawn on Wednesday, they found the capital quieter than it has been in months. But clan fighting and looting by militiamen and bandits elsewhere has complicated their job.

The Marines' first major task was to escort a truck convoy of food to Baidoa, one of the towns hardest hit by famine in the country's interior and the scene in recent days of repeated outbreaks of violence and looting.

Foreign aid workers had come so under siege that they pleaded Friday for American help.

But that raised the question of whether the Marines would have to fight their way into Baidoa and the convoy, originally scheduled to roll on Saturday, was postponed indefinitely. Some aid agencies were angered by the delay.

Ian MacLeod, spokesman for the United Nations, said a "priority list" of possible tasks for the U.S. forces was being drawn up, with each relief agency having its own wish list.

Among the projects he suggested were the clearing of mines and the laying of pontoon bridges near the central city of Bardera, where about 160 people a day are estimated to be dying of starvation.

He said the lack of a bridge was slowing aid to a major refugee camp and relief workers had not even gotten to a cluster of villages because of fields of land mines.

Ambassadors walk out on Kenyan leader

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — Five Western ambassadors walked out on President Daniel arap Moi at Kenya's independence day celebration Saturday, protesting what the U.S. ambassador said was a "partisan" political rally.

The five were Smith Hempstone of the United States, Bernd Muetzelburg of Germany, Nils Gunnar Revelius of Sweden, Erik Fiil of Denmark and Lawrence Smith of Canada.

Their countries have repeatedly accused Kenya's government of corruption and repression. The United States and Germany are major donors among a group withholding $350 million in aid pending free elections and other reforms.

EC investigates rape reports in Bosnia

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina (AP) — The U.N. commander in Bosnia warned Saturday that food was running short, and European leaders decided to investigate charges that Serbs have raped Muslim women prisoners.

Bosnian radio reported four people killed in rocket fire in Sarajevo, and shelling west of the airport.

An international group of 500 peace activists arrived to show solidarity with Sarajevo's 400,000 residents, under siege by Serb rebels for nearly eight months.

At least 17,000 people have died in the fighting between Muslims, Serbs and Croats in Bosnia, and more than 100,000 are missing. Muslims and Croats voted in February for independence from Serb-dominated Yugoslavia, provoking a rebellion by Bosnian Serbs.

Meeting in Edinburgh, Scotland, leaders of the 12 European Community nations said in a draft communique that former British ambassador to Denmark, Dame Anne Warburton, would head an investigative team to visit detention camps in Bosnia.

Serb fighters, who have seized 70 percent of Bosnia, have been accused of systematically raping Muslim women and girls held in prison camps.

The EC communique made it clear EC leaders do not believe Serb denials.

"Those responsible for these crimes against humanity will be held personally accountable and brought to justice," it read.

In Sarajevo, U.N. officials reiterated that emergency food stocks are almost gone. The city has been without electricity and water for days. Repairs have been hampered by fighting.

"It is worse and worse in Sarajevo," said Gen. Phillipe Morillon, the French commander of U.N. troops in Bosnia.

Fears have risen that Sarajevo, the seat of Bosnia's Muslim-led government, is close to falling to the rebel Serbs. Morillon said that would be a political disaster, but the city's defenders did not have the power to break the siege.

A humanitarian airlift supplying 40 percent of U.N. aid was suspended Dec. 1 after a U.S. plane was fired on. U.N. officials said the airlift would not resume before Tuesday. A U.N. logistics flight did land Saturday afternoon, said U.N. officials in Zagreb, Croatia, where flights are coordinated.

Morillon planned to meet today with military representatives of the three warring factions.

In other developments:

■ Bosnian and Belgrade radio reported fierce clashes in Rajlovac and Zuc on the northern outskirts of Sarajevo, where Muslim-led government forces have been seeking to hold recently captured positions.

■ In northern Bosnia, Serb forces attacked Tesanj and Tuzla, Bosnian radio reported. It said there was fighting around Gradacac. Croatian radio reported a heavy artillery attack on Bihac and the Belgrade-based Tanjug news agency reported clashes north of Zvornik.

■ An Albanian shepherd was killed and another severely injured by fire from Yugoslav border guards, Albanian state television reported. The report said the shepherd's sheep crossed into Yugoslav territory, but he had not crossed the borderline. It said the guards issued no warning.

■ The 52-nation Conference on Security and Cooperation in Europe, meeting in Sweden, discussed the possibility of establishing a court to consider responsibility for war crimes in former Yugoslavia.

Yeltsin, Congress compromises on referendum

MOSCOW (AP) — President Boris Yeltsin reached a compromise with the Russian Congress on Saturday to end an explosive political fight and win a second chance to keep his reformist prime minister.

Hard-line lawmakers immediately assailed the agreement between Yeltsin and a parliamentary delegation led by speaker Ruslan Khasbulatov. But they were soundly outvoted in the 1,041-member Congress of People's Deputies, which has been wracked by 11 days of acrimonious debate.

"This means the people can live in peace. There will be no collision, no coup, no other anti-constitutional actions," Yeltsin said after striking the deal.

The compromise replaces Yeltsin's proposed national referendum on elections with one on a new constitution, and suspends several laws limiting the president's power.

The deal gives the president more maneuvering room while acknowledging the authority of the Congress. It also shunts aside the Congress' most hard-line lawmakers in favor of centrist deputies.

"(Hard-liners) had been trying to seize power in the turmoil, but now power is evading them," Nikolai Travkin, a delegate to the compromise talks, told the parliament.

The president and the Congress, Russia's highest legislative body, plunged into the constitutional fight last week when the Communist majority rejected Yeltsin's choice of Yegor Gaidar as prime minister. They say his reforms are leading Russia to poverty and collapse.

Gaidar, 36, is the steward and symbol of Yeltsin's campaign to dismantle seven decades of Communist central control and create a market economy. He has held the post of acting prime minister without legislative approval.

Yeltsin tried to bypass the lawmakers on Thursday with a direct appeal to the Russian people for a referendum on new parliamentary or presidential elections. The Congress shot back by barring such a vote.

To break the impasse, Yeltsin on Saturday fired a top aide despised by hard-liners — Gennady Burbulis — and held the talks with the parliamentary delegation led by Khasbulatov, who had orchestrated the attacks on Yeltsin.

When the deal was presented to Congress, hard-liners rushed to the podium in protest. But Khasbulatov immediately rammed through a vote on the deal, which passed 541-98, with 67 abstentions.

While Yeltsin and lawmakers clapped, hard-liners stomped angrily through the chamber. Mikhail Astafiev of the Russian Unity faction pulled out a red megaphone and screamed for the right to speak, to no avail.

Yeltsin walked over to Khasbulatov and, in the glare of lights and TV cameras, they shook hands and smiled, to the applause of lawmakers.

"This was a great compromise," said centrist lawmaker Oleg Rumyantsev, the chairman of the commission that has written a draft constitution to be considered in the referendum next year.

"The healthy center constitutes more than half the Congress, and this part won," Travkin declared to the lawmakers. "Good sense has prevailed."

Under the compromise, Yeltsin in consultation with lawmakers must present a list of candidates for prime minister on Monday. The Congress will hold a non-binding vote rating them. Yeltsin must pick his nominee from among the top three vote-getters and submit it for confirmation. If the Congress rejects that nominee, Yeltsin can appoint one of the candidates as acting prime minister until the next Congress session, in April.

Yeltsin is likely to push for Gaidar. Even if the Congress rejects Gaidar as prime minister, Yeltsin said he would still reappoint him in an acting capacity, preserving the radical reforms at least for four more months.

Russian wins Miss World title

SUN CITY, South Africa (AP) — Miss Russia, Julia Kurotchinka, was chosen Miss World on Saturday in an extravaganza at this controversial resort in the African bush.

In a sign of the changing times in her former Communist homeland, the 18-year-old, blue-eyed student said her ambition "is to be a financier" and travel the world.

Judges said it was the closest result in the pageant's 42 years. Ms. Kurotchinka won by one point.

The tallest of the 83 contestants at six feet, Ms. Kurotchinka listed classical music as a hobby.

She was carried in triumph on a gold and zebra skin throne on a litter adorned by golden elephants. The throne was carried by men in African warrior costumes.

Sun City is in Bophuthatswana, a black homeland created under South Africa's apartheid system to segregate blacks on a tribal basis. The resort is surrounded by the poverty and deprivation that dominate the homelands.

Claire Smith, 21, of Britain was second. Francis Gago, 19, of Venezuela came in third, followed by Amy Kleinhans, 24, of South Africa and Ewa Wachowicz, 22, of Poland.

The event was held in the surreal surroundings of the Lost City, an opulent tourist resort designed as the remnants of a mythical lost African civilization.

The new Miss World earlier defended the importance of pageants, which have been under attack in recent years as wasteful and disrespectful of women.

"It's a contest for the help of the whole world because everybody must love women,' she said through a translator.

Event organizers draw a large cast of celebrities, including emcee Billy Dee Williams and co-host Jerry Hall, the fashion model and wife of Rolling Stones singer Mick Jagger. The panel of 12 judges included Ivana Trump, former golf great Gary Player and actress Joan Collins.

The new Miss World receives $63,000, jewelry and travel opportunities that will take her around the world over the next year.

Organizers, while presenting a highly optimistic view of South Africa despite widespread political violence and turbulence, stressed the pageant was primarily a charity to promote the interests of children.

Barred from the Miss World contest for 20 years because of apartheid, South Africa was readmitted last year.

EC summitt reaches budget pact

EDINBURGH, Scotland (AP) — European Community leaders agreed Saturday on a deal intended to keep Denmark and Britain on the road to closer union while laying plans to possibly expand to 15 members.

Officials agreed to begin negotiations next year with three prospective members: Austria, Sweden and Finland. The last additions, Spain and Portugal, joined in 1986.

But the apparent progress toward unifying the bloc was overshadowed by economic issues, which have dominated the two-day meeting.

Late Saturday, EC members endorsed a $37 billion plan to spark their listless economies.

But haggling over the community's budget sent the summit into overtime Saturday, with Spain threatening to block the Danish compromise if the four poorest community nations don't get more subsidies.

European commission, British and Italian officials reported that an agreement was reached late Saturday on the budget of $100.8 billion — from which a special fund would be created for the four poorest EC nations: Spain, Ireland, Greece and Portugal.

The special fund should total $18.94 billion by 1999 — about what Spain had pressed for. Details of the budget were not immediately disclosed.

German government spokesman Dieter Vogel said the leaders adopted a British proposal which would exempt Denmark from provisions on citizenship, defense, a common currency, and police and judicial cooperation in the community's Maastricht treaty on closer union.

"All Danish wishes have been fulfilled," said Danish Prime Minister Poul Schlueter. "It will be accepted at home."

Denmark has promised to hold a referendum on the treaty next year. In June, Danes narrowly rejected the accord, which requires ratification by all 12 countries to take effect.

Vogel said there was no specific deadline for Danish and British ratification of the treaty, but other leaders expressed a wish that the process be completed by 1993.

Eight of the 12 have ratified the document. Germany and the Netherlands were expected to ratify it without problems. Britain decided to postpone ratification until the Danish problem was resolved.

British officials said the Danish deal could hinge on a compromise with Spain, which has threatened to block it if richer community members do not provide Spain, Ireland, Greece and Portugal with more subsidies.

British Prime Minister John Major met privately Saturday with his Spanish counterpart, Felipe Gonzalez, to find a solution.

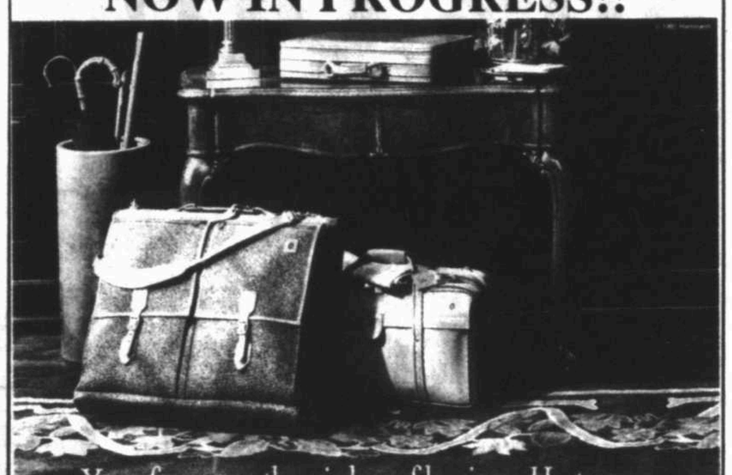

The $37 billion budget plan would funnel money from private and government sources into public works projects, including new rail, road, communications and energy links between eastern and western Europe.

In other developments, the leaders:

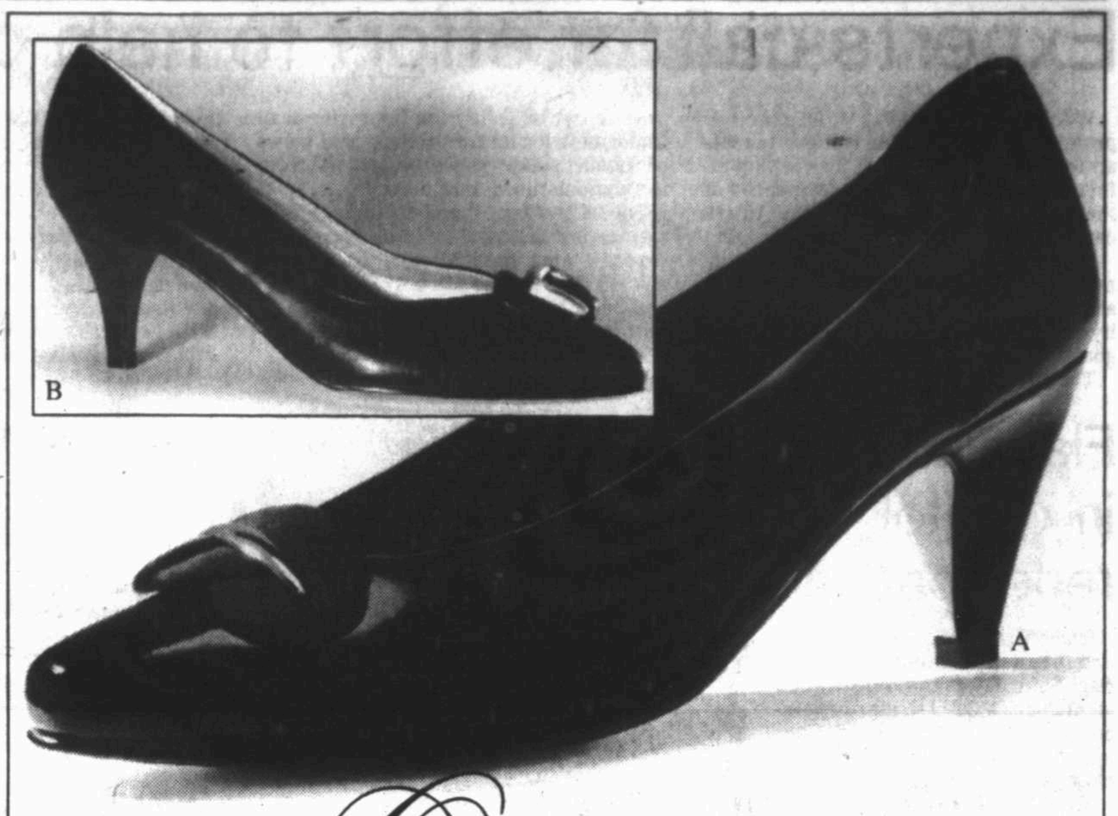

■ Enlarged the mainly consultative European Parliament by 49 seats — for a total of 567 — to reflect German reunification.

Experts call for effort to help poverty in Latin America, U.S.

WASHINGTON (AP) — A panel of prominent Western Hemisphere personalities called Saturday for a sweeping effort to help raise the living standards of the estimated 180 million Latin Americans who live in poverty.

The panel said all hemispheric governments should give "as much priority to alleviating poverty and reducing inequality as they do to promoting growth. These goals go hand-in-hand."

The recommendation was part of a 74-page report issued by the Inter-American Dialogue, a forum for exchanges of views on public policy issues by leaders from throughout the hemisphere.

The 95 Dialogue members include four former presidents: Jimmy Carter of the United States, Raul Alfonsin of Argentina, Nicolas Ardito Barletta of Panama and Julio Maria Sanguinetti of Uruguay. Former U.N. Secretary General Javier Perez de Cuellar serves as a co-chairman.

The report's release apparently was timed to influence the incoming administration of President-elect Clinton but that objective was not stated explicitly.

Alleviation of poverty was one of three main challenges explored in the report, titled "Convergence and Community: The Americas in 1993." The other challenges cited are the need to forge a hemisphere-wide economic community and a democratic political community.

"The gap between rich and poor in Latin America is greater than in any major region of the world," the report said, adding that persistent and gross social inequalities are incompatible with democracy.

It said that about half of Latin America's poor endure abject poverty, "with incomes less than that needed to purchase a minimally adequate diet." In the 1980's alone, when economies throughout the region were in decline, the ranks of Latin America's poverty-stricken rose by 50 million, according to the study.

Sound economic policies are essential in any anti-poverty strategy, the report said, noting that high inflation and low growth reduce wages, destroy jobs and force cuts in social spending.

On trade issues, the report called for ratification by the United States, Canada and Mexico of the North American Free Trade Agreement. It said Latin American and Caribbean governments should negotiate trade liberalization agreements of their own.

Flags banned in capitol rededication

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP) — Police banned Confederate battle flags Saturday at the rededication of Alabama's Capitol, gleaming after a $28.5 million facelift but mired in a dispute over the Rebel banner.

The Capitol was bare of flags, but Gov. Guy Hunt's plan to later put the flag back on top of the building where Jefferson Davis was sworn in as president of the Confederacy prompted a boycott by black groups.

Officers seized a large battle flag from Alan Gilliland, who said he was told it was illegal. It was returned after opening speeches.

Police and Hunt spokesman Terry Abbott said the flag was blocking the view of the podium. Several people carrying small flags on the Capitol lawn were told to leave because the sticks were dangerous, Abbott said.

Alabama's 24 black legislators boycotted the ceremony to protest Hunt's insistence that the flag be returned to display on the dome. The red flag with a blue "X" normally flies beneath the federal and state flags, but all three banners were taken down in the spring for renovation work.

Business leaders who also oppose Hunt say the flag, displayed by the Ku Klux Klan, symbolizes racial oppression.

The Capitol was closed for seven years as workers restored the Greek Revival building.

Perot not invited to summit to avoid 'media circus', aide says

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — Ross Perot's attendance at the economic summit would have created a "media circus," so he was not among the 320 people in 50 states invited by President-elect Clinton, an aide said Saturday.

Clinton did not comment on the exclusion of Perot during a news conference Saturday to announce new Cabinet appointments.

But he did say the purpose of the conference was to get a consensus on major economic challenges.

"I think the American people need to know, after years without hope, that the rank-and-file of our business and labor and other leaders believe we can make it better, and why," he said.

"I'm going to do everything I can to use the enormous talent, knowledge and experience that will be there to get the very best ideas I can, to either reinforce the direction we're going in or find some way to do even better."

Mickey Kantor, who organized the two-day retreat that begins Monday, said a diverse group of businessmen, academics and special interest groups will attend the free-flowing conference chaired by Clinton. Audience participation and radio call-in segments will "bring the American people into this," he said.

But Perot, the independent presidential candidate whose grim assessment of the economy was the focus of his campaign, was not invited. Kantor said Perot agreed that he should not attend.

"If we had Mr. Perot ... all of you would have written only one story for two days and it would have gotten in the way of discussions over the economy and I think Mr. Perot agrees with that," Kantor told reporters.

"I called him and merely said that we weren't going to invite him because it would have turned into a media circus, and he agreed," Kantor said.

"He said if he'd been invited he probably wouldn't have come because he said all of you would have just made a story out of that. He wants president-elect Clinton to succeed and he wants the conference to be successful."

Perot could not be immediately reached for comment.

The Rev. Jesse Jackson, who is a "shadow" senator elected by the District of Columbia to lobby for D.C. statehood, also was excluded from the event because no elected officials were invited.

Kantor said a full list of invitees would be released today, but he gave a sneak preview: John Sculley, chief executive officer of Apple Computers; Bob Solow, Nobel Laureate, MIT; Alan Blinder, a Princeton University professor who specializes in "human capital issues;" Marion Wright Edelman, head of the Children's Defense Fund; John White, author of Perot's plan; Bill Gray, president of the United Negro College Fund; and representatives of several labor and consumer groups.

FBI chief used government jet to go to ballet

WASHINGTON (NYT) — The director of the FBI, already under scrutiny for using government aircraft for private travel, flew on an FBI plane to a performance of the Bolshoi ballet at the Sands Hotel in Atlantic City last month as a guest of the Russian ambassador, bureau officials say.

John Collingwood, a spokesman for the bureau, said Friday that the trip by the director, William S. Sessions, was permitted by bureau regulations but that Sessions had been concerned that it might be perceived as a purely social event.

So, Collingwood said, Sessions cleared the trip in advance with Lawrence S. Eagleburger, the secretary of state; George J. Terwilliger 3rd, the deputy attorney general, and a lawyer for the bureau.

Under the bureau's guidelines, the director is permitted to use government aircraft on private trips as well as business trips for security reasons. When he travels for purely private reasons, he reimburses the government, although the amount is less than the full cost of operating the aircraft and providing a security detail.

Sessions did not reimburse the government for the Atlantic City trip. Sessions's wife, Alice, also went along but paid her travel costs.

Collingwood said Sessions accepted the invitation to the performance on Nov. 27 from Vladimir Lukin, the Russian envoy, because he felt the one-day trip would help the bureau foster cooperative relationships with law-enforcement agencies in the former Soviet Union. The trip was disclosed Thursday by The Los Angeles Times.

Sessions's frequent travels are one of the several issues under review for possible ethics violations by the Justice Department's Office of Professional Responsibility.

Investigators are examining assertions by Ronald Kessler, who is writing a book about the bureau, that Sessions used official government aircraft to visit friends and relatives. Kessler, in a telephone interview, said the Atlantic City trip was another instance in which Sessions was "blind to the need to avoid improprieties."

But Collingwood said that during the visit Sessions met privately with Lukin, holding "very fruitful" discussions on a variety of law-enforcement topics.

As part of the trip, Sessions and his wife received ballet tickets, worth $50, that were paid for by the hotel but apparently given to the Russian ambassador. FBI officials said the tickets would be properly accounted for as a gift from a foreign government.

The Rehabilitation Clinic Of RHMO Is Committed To Your Recovery

Quality rehabilitation care is closer than you think. Although our new hospital is opening just around the corner, The Rehabilitation Clinic of RHMO, located inside The Midlander fitness center, has been providing the community with a broad range of rehabilitation services on an outpatient basis for more than four months.

Just ask Sherry Creel and John Odum. When past treatments Sherry had received for a back injury failed to produce the desired results, she came to see the qualified medical professionals at the outpatient clinic. The convenient location of the clinic enabled John, who recently suffered a stroke, to receive exceptional care without having to leave the area.
Dr. Mark A. Fredrickson diagnosed Sherry and John and developed personalized, comprehensive treatment programs that enabled them to achieve their maximum level of functional independence.

We invite you to stop by and see our 1400 square feet of rehabilitation services. We promise to provide you with the same quality care Sherry and John received--the finest rehabilitation care in the Permian Basin.

Business leaders, goals dominate Clinton economic meeting

By Marcia Stepanek and Stewart M. Powell
Hearst News Service

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. — Business leaders will dominate the guest list at President-elect Clinton's economic conference, the conference organizer said Saturday, but conspicuously missing from the two-day parley will be Jesse Jackson, Ross Perot or any elected politicians.

Mickey Kantor, who handled conference preparations, the 329 Americans attending the two-day conference at their own expense are drawn mainly from the ranks of men and women who run large and small business enterprises across the 50 states.

"They are people (who) roll up their sleeves every day and go out and have to make this economy go for the most part," Kantor told reporters in the first briefing on the long-scheduled conference.

Clinton defended his economic conference later on Saturday, saying that it was "not more show than substance."

The ideas offered at the gathering will "reinforce" the direction of Clinton's proposals or offer "to do it better," Clinton said.

Among the participants are at least 90 representatives from small businesses and representatives of up to 75 different types of industry or enterprise, Kantor said.

Neither Perot, the Texas billionaire who ran a strong third-party campaign for the presidency, nor Jackson, the black political leader who had sought an invitation, were invited. Nor were any homeless or unemployed citizens asked to attend the $150,000 affair where participants pay for their own air fare and hotel rooms.

No elected officials were invited. Kantor said that Jackson was ruled out because he is an "elected official." Jackson was elected by voters in the District of Columbia to serve as a "shadow" U.S. senator, who isn't a member of the Senate but who lobbies Congress for statehood for the district.

Kantor said he had telephoned Perot and told him he was not being invited for fear that Perot's presence might provoke a "media circus." Perot agreed, Kantor said.

Kantor said the nationally-televised conference in which Clinton and his top economic advisers will brainstorm with business leaders, academics and representatives of some special interest groups is designed to give Americans a "realistic view" of the nation's economic challenges and to help educate viewers on Clinton's plan for long-term economic recovery.

The "most important" objective of Clinton's first sustained exposure to the nation since his victory is to enable Americans to see their president-elect and his advisers "connected to" the American people and "working with them in trying to bring change about," Kantor said, in effect confirming that the parley's major mission is public relations.

Kantor said: "One of the things we've lacked in the last few years in this country is letting the country see an honest discussion on issues that are so critical to them and a president of the United States who is fully connected and engaged and listening and trying to take into account these various diverse views."

The summit — originally conceived as a small and candid closed-door policy session aimed at forging a consensus — has blossomed into a public-relations extravaganza.

Clinton will be centerstage for more than 15 hours of nationally-televised presentations and working sessions. Seven groups of 32 people will gather around a table at Little Rock's 52-year-old Robinson Memorial Auditorium over the two-day conference before Clinton summarizes the conclusions at a nationally-televised news conference late Tuesday.

For many business leaders, economic analysts say, just having the conference gives the appearance that Clinton is tackling America's economic problems head-on.

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) — Four years ago, she was preparing for Christmas, a seemingly healthy mother of three. Now Christmas is different.

The 42-year-old nurse was infected with the AIDS virus when she was stabbed by a needle during a 30-minute hospital room struggle with a dying prisoner.

"I count the number of Christmases I have left," she said last week. "I just hope when the time comes, the good Lord decides not to let me die during a holiday because that would ruin that season for the whole family, forever."

The woman, who has asked to remain anonymous and is identified as Jane Doe in court documents, is fighting New York state over damages awarded after prison guards did nothing to help her.

She sued the state for $10 million, claiming that the guards should have helped control the inmate. The state claimed the guards were under no legal obligation to help.

In July, Court of Claims Judge Israel Margolis ordered the state to pay the nurse and her husband $5.4 million.

"This couple is especially aware that every day that passes brings them closer to their last together ... No award will truly make that loss easier to bear," the judge said.

Margolis said guards Timothy O'Connor and Ronald Potempa had a duty to intervene but "refused to take on the responsibilities with which they were charged," Margolis said.

Neither guard has been disciplined. Both have refused comment.

James Flateau, a spokesman for prisons' chief Thomas Coughlin, said guards are told not to assist in medical procedures. "That's what hospitals have big, burly orderlies for. They (guards) are there to prevent escapes and attacks on staff," he said.

Although the medical staff involved testified the inmate was trying to leave and was hitting them, Flateau said the incident was a medical emergency, not a security one.

Asked if Coughlin felt the guards should have helped, his spokesman said: "He thinks it would have been the right thing to do and the common-sense thing to do."

Jane Doe thinks that because they didn't help, they shouldn't be guards.

"That's almost like manslaughter," she said.

The state is disputing the amount of the award.

State Attorney General Robert Abrams said recently that the state was accepting liability and was prepared to pay $3 million. Abrams aides said they would appeal the remaining $2.4 million as excessive.

Abrams has declined to discuss the case because it's pending.

Jane Doe has not seen any of the money. She could get a chunk of the $3 million before the year's end. But because of a state law covering awards for future pain and suffering, the remainder may be paid out over the 5½ years she's expected to live.

Her lawyer, Robert Julian, said that's an unfair "death gamble," noting that if she dies, the payments stop. He's suing to have the entire $5.4 million paid immediately.

It was February 1989, when Jane Doe found out she was HIV positive.

"I remember when they told me ... I remember thinking that I wouldn't see my children grow up and I would never see my grandchildren," she testified earlier this year. "And that I knew what was going to kill me."

Jane Doe has been taking the drug AZT and doesn't yet have AIDS.

But she and her husband of more than 20 years say their sex life has suffered and there are other changes. "We are not as open as we were," she said.

Jane Doe said she often tells her lawyer that she is "going to live to be 90 and be hit by a truck. And hopefully I will. But the reality of it is that I probably won't and that's scary."

Somalians attack, rob photographer

MOGADISHU, Somalia (AP) — Teen-agers with assault rifles on Saturday robbed an Associated Press photographer, and later a mob stoned him and two others. A Kenyan news agency reported that one of its employees was shot and wounded.

One of the attacks appeared to be caused by religious hostility.

There have been concerns that large numbers of Westerners in Somalia because of the U.S.-led famine relief operation would create tension in the Muslim nation. Some religious Somalis had objected to the deployment of U.S. troops.

The Africapix agency said Hassan Ali, an audio recorder, was shot and robbed outside a mosque on Friday while on assignment for Italy's RTI Milan television. It said he was in good condition in a Mogadishu hospital Saturday.

Ali was the first journalist wounded covering the relief effort in Somalia since the Marines landed Wednesday to launch Operation Restore Hope.

AP photographer John Moore, 25, of Irving, was attacked Saturday morning while waiting to photograph the first Marine-escorted food convoy into northern Mogadishu.

He was speaking to a Somali man in a home along the convoy route when three Somalis who appeared to be in their teens entered and pointed AK-47 assault rifles at Moore, his translator and the homeowner.

The teens fled with two cameras.

About two hours later, Moore walked a few hundred yards down the road from the hotel where journalists are staying to take pictures of French soldiers and Marines on patrol.

About 60 Somalis, mainly children and teen-agers, surrounded him and began shouting that he was a Christian, he said. Somalia is a Muslim country.

Moore began walking back to the hotel and was near its gates when he met AP photographers David Brauchli and Hassan Amini. The increasingly belligerent crowd closed in and one person grabbed Brauchli's sunglasses while others tried to steal the photographers' cameras.

As the photographers fled, people in the crowd began hurling rocks at them. One hit Moore in the face, bloodying his lip.

Marines in an armored personnel carrier nearby and French soldiers at a checkpoint were within yards of the incident but did not intervene.

Pentagon spokesman Michael Byers in Washington said that whether the military helps non-Somalia civilians depends on whether they were busy with other matters at the time.

"What it comes down to is that is up to the unit commanders based on the situation at the time," said Byers.

DALLAS (AP) — Former Dallas Cowboy Roger Staubach has pulled himself out of the running for Lloyd Bentsen's U.S. Senate seat.

Staubach

Staubach and Texas Rangers managing general partner George W. Bush were two sports figures considered to fill the veteran Democrat's seat.

DALLAS (AP) — Dallas Mavericks owner Donald Carter on Saturday said he was in no hurry to continue negotiations with holdout first-round draft pick Jim Jackson, who now says he won't play for the team under any circumstances.

Jackson on Friday released a statement saying he has re-enrolled at Ohio State and plans to enter the 1993 NBA draft rather than continue negotiations with Dallas.

He added that he would "not under any circumstances, or at any time, play basketball with the Dallas Mavericks."

Gino Torretta

Torretta college's best

Miami QB first senior to win Heisman since 1987

By Rick Warner
AP Football Writer

NEW YORK — When Gino Torretta was in high school, he told his mother he would win the Heisman Trophy. On Saturday, his prediction came true.

The Miami quarterback, who is 26-1 as a starter, beat out running backs Marshall Faulk of San Diego State and Garrison Hearst of Georgia for the prestigious award.

"This, along with the national championship, are the best things you can do in college football," Torretta said after watching the announcement at the Downtown Athletic Club with Faulk and Hearst.

Torretta knows about national titles. He led Miami to one last year and will win another if the top-ranked Hurricanes beat No. 2 Alabama in the Sugar Bowl on Jan. 1. Torretta also started four games for Miami's national championship team in 1989.

This season was probably his most challenging. Miami had to overcome indictments, injuries, a hurricane and a tough schedule.

"After everything we've been through this season — tough games, people doubting us — we came out undefeated," said Torretta, who cleared another hurdle Saturday morning by flying into the New York area during a snowstorm.

"I accept this award on behalf of my teammates, especially the defense, because they're the reason I'm here."

Torretta, who holds almost every career passing record at "Quarterback U," is Miami's second Heisman winner. Quarterback Vinny Testaverde won the award in 1986.

Faulk finished second, 320 points behind Torretta, and Hearst was third, trailing the winner by 418 points. Faulk was the nation's leading rusher for the second straight season, while Hearst led Division I-A in scoring and was No. 2 in rushing.

Torretta is the first senior to win the Heisman since Notre Dame's Tim Brown in 1987. The four previous winners — Desmond Howard, Ty Detmer, Andre Ware and Barry Sanders — were juniors.

Faulk's second-place finish is the best by a sophomore since Georgia's Herschel Walker was runner-up in 1981. He was considered a co-favorite with Torretta until an injury forced claimed the Class 5A Division I state football championship in one of the most lopsided finals ever.

The Rockets' victory tied the most one-sided state football final in Texas schoolboy history, a 52-0 victory by Jacksboro against Rockdale in the Class 2A title game in 1962.

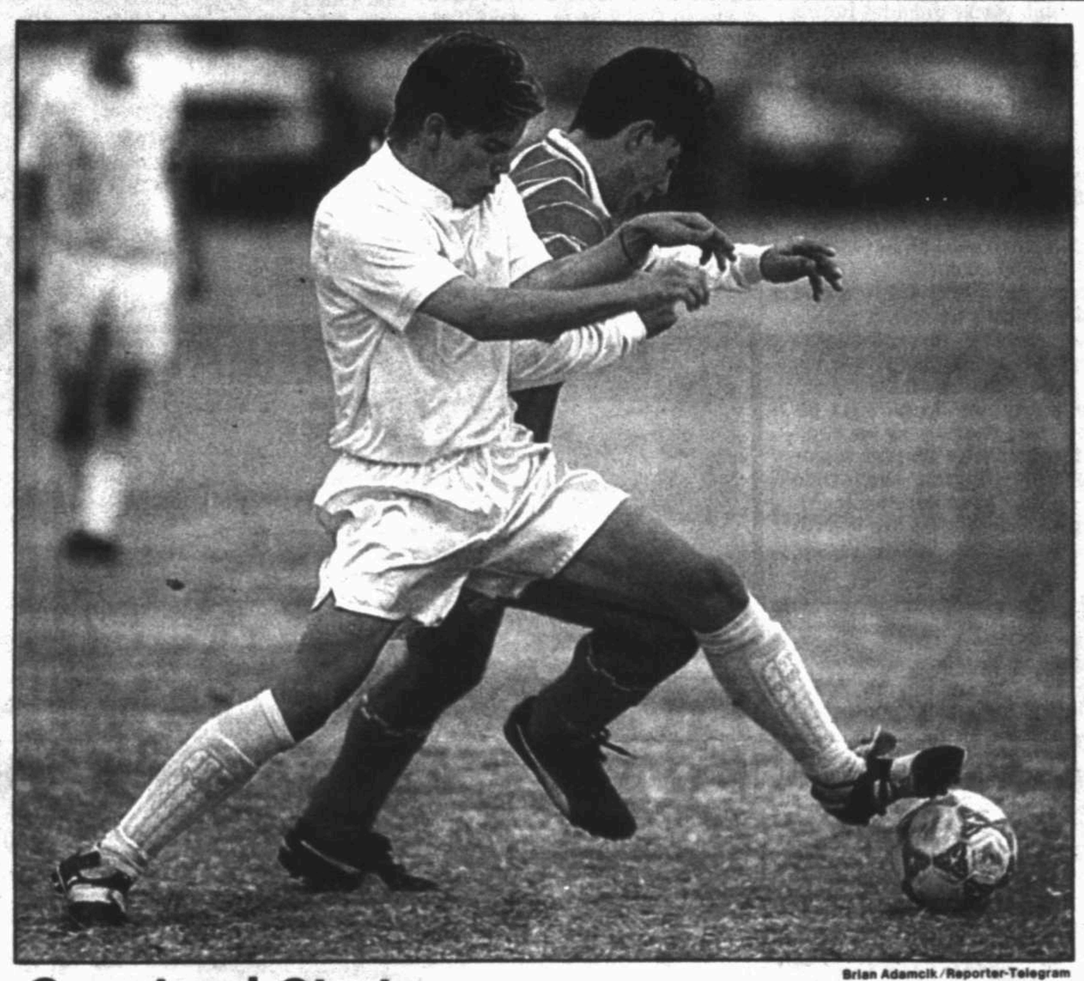

"We've thought all week about playing the perfect ballgame," said Converse Judson coach D.W. Rutledge. "And today we came pretty close. This team's determination is what made the difference."

Judson (13-1), which was making its third trip to the Class 5A finals in the past five years, won its third overall championship, its second on the field.

The Rockets' first title came in a 25-21 victory over Midland Lee in 1983. After losing to Dallas Carter in the 1988 championship game, Judson was awarded the crown when the Cowboys were found to have used an ineligible player.

Euless Trinity (9-6) had never been to the state finals and brought the most losses ever (five) into championship game. The Trojans' defense had not allowed an

Smith could give Dallas NFC East title

By Richard Keil
AP Sports Writer

WASHINGTON — What are the odds the Dallas Cowboys can keep winning on the road against the Washington Redskins, one of the NFL's toughest home teams?

Given Dallas' many weapons and Washington's weaknesses, not bad.

Washington continues recovering from a near-crippling spate of midseason injuries, and has beaten Phoenix and the New York Giants rather easily in the past two weeks. But the Cowboys feature running back Emmitt Smith, who always has bedeviled the Redskins. Washington now is missing a key run-defender.

"We haven't been able to stop him," assistant head coach for defense Richie Petitbon said of Smith. "Not many people have, but we have to come up with something. Otherwise, that opens up their passing game."

Stopping Smith could be the key to the game, because in doing so, the Redskins would also be able to concentrate more on quarterback Troy Aikman, who currently leads the NFC with 2,883 passing yards.

Warriors stop Permian in Tall City final

■ Arlington Martin coasts to a 93-65 win over Mojo while Lee takes third and MHS grabs consolation honors.

By Terry Williamson
Sports editor

Arlington Martin's Warriors skated to a 10-1 record and waltzed to the Tall City Classic basketball championship Saturday night at Chaparral Center with a 93-65 romp over Odessa Permian in the finals.

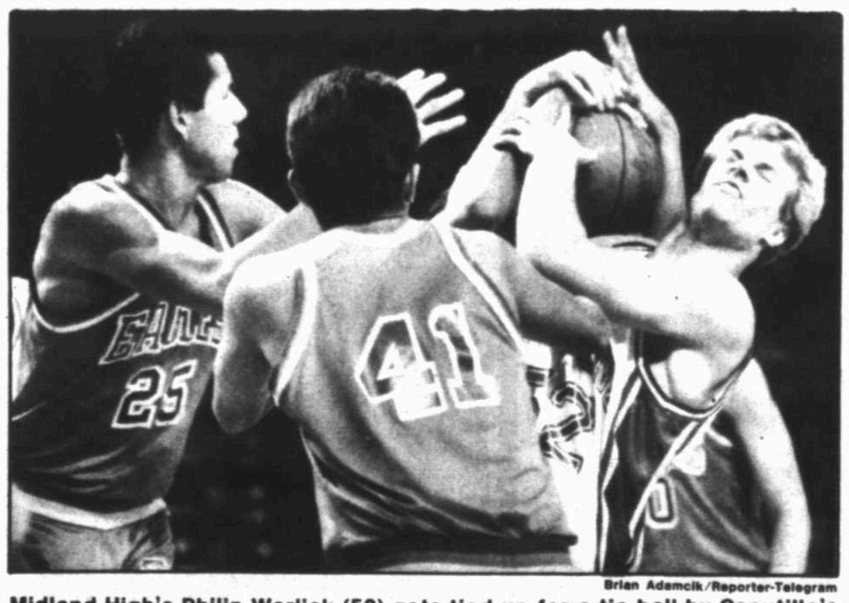

Martin, which has lost only one game to No. 3 nationally ranked Albany, Ga., by a seven-point margin, looks ready to make a playoff assault while spilling the blood of fiesty Amarillo Caprock and Permian on Saturday.

Midland Lee took third place while Midland High captured the consolation title.

But the Warriors still have a little Christmas business to take care of before thinking about district play.

"We have our Christmas tournament in Arlington coming up," noted Martin coach Danny Husband. "It will be a 16-team tournament with three out-of-state teams coming in and we hope we've laid the groundwork for that.

"We hope this tournament made us better. We've steadily gotten better this season."

Midland High's Philip Warlick (52) gets tied up for a tie ball by Canutillo's Joe Portillo (25) and Jose Cuevas during Tall City Classic play Saturday.

Martin, a small team with no player over 6-4, is lightning quick and owns impressive guard D'Juan Baker, who had 23 points against Caprock and 22 against Permian.

The Panthers of Permian were a mild surprise to reach the finals, but handed Lee a loss in the semifinals. Martin was too much for Permian, now 5-5 on the season, but the Panthers did make one stab at stubbing the Warriors' toes, closing a 16-point gap to 59-50 at the end of the third quarter. However, Martin rolled up a 34-point fourth period to put such notions to rest. Tyrone Thomas and Calvin Calicutt each hit 15 points for Permian.

(From 1B)

Lee walked by light and night in its two games, losing a chance to play in the finals with a 63-58 loss to District 4-5A foe Permian before winning third place in a scoring whirlwind that saw the Rebs place five players in double figures in an 86-52 win over Caprock.

David Wilson led the way in the third place game with 20 points, but Martin Lattibeaudiere and Sean Low both canned 17 while Undra Graves hit for 14 and Ryan Tucker for 13 in a score-as-you-will contest.

"We played like we are capable against Caprock," Lee coach Jon House said. "We didn't let them take the three-point shot and we got some easy baskets on defensive turnovers. I thought Wilson played his best defensive game and Lattibeaudiere showed a lot of leadership in the first quarter to set the tone of the game."

But as good as 10-2 Lee was against Caprock, they were as bad against Permian, hitting only 10 of 21 from the charity line.

"We just didn't hit the free throws," House said. "I don't know why we played so poorly against Permian other than the fact we may have been looking past Permian a bit. I didn't put a lot of emphasis on the game and it showed."

Midland High won its consolation title with an easy 62-42 win over Canutillo, but the title actually came in the consolation semifinals when the 8-2 Bulldogs surprised Eastwood 73-63.

To be honest, MHS looked bad in an opening round loss to Caprock Friday, but turned it around Saturday with two impressive victories, which seemed to be sparked by the overall play of Mike Melzer, who had 19 points against Eastwood and 12 against Canutillo.

It could be that the Bulldogs are in transition since both of Saturday's wins came without leading scorer Antwan Goodley, a three-year starter. MHS coach Jack Stephenson was vague as to the reason Goodley was missing from the team and would not confirm if the 6-5 Goodley would be returning to the Bulldog lineup.

"He (Goodley) is sick," Stephenson said. "Let's just leave it at that, but he isn't with the team today and I don't know when he will be back."

Goodley had only two points in the loss to Caprock Friday, but MHS appeared to be much more aggressive Saturday.

Eastwood, now 12-3 after two tournament losses, did win seventh place with a 59-58 win over Riverside. That was an interesting game since the two teams meet in a key District 2-5A contest at Eastwood on Tuesday. Both teams traveled together for the Midland tournament.

It was strange that Eastwood lost a game in which star player Mohammad Hadavi had a career high game of 35 points against Midland High and beat Riverside in a game that Riverside got 31 points from Orlando Olivas.

GINO: Faulk, Hearst finish second, third

(From 1B)

him to miss San Diego State's season finale against Miami.

"I did a lot more things as an individual, but he did a lot for his team," Faulk said of Torretta. "I'd take anything back to have played that (Miami) game. I think that game really turned the voters."

Torretta received 310 first-place votes and 1,400 points in balloting by the media and former Heisman winners. Faulk got 164 first-place votes and 1,080 points, while Hearst received 140 first-place votes and 982 points.

Hearst said Torretta was helped by Miami's success.

"He was one of the best players this year, and he played for the best team," Hearst said.

Faulk said he will return for his junior year. Hearst said he won't decide whether to skip his senior season until Georgia plays Ohio State in the Citrus Bowl on Jan. 1.

Florida State linebacker Marvin Jones was fourth in the voting, matching the highest finish by a defensive player since Pittsburgh's Hugh Green was runner-up in 1980. Notre Dame's Reggie Brooks, who averaged more yards per carry (8.0) than any other runner, was fifth.

Torretta led in four of the six voting regions — the Northeast, Mid-Atlantic, Midwest and Southwest. Faulk carried the Far West and Hearst was the top vote-getter in the South.

Torretta's mother, Connie, attended the ceremony, along with his three brothers. His father, Al, died in 1988.

"I always told him if he'd put his best foot forward, he'd be the best, and today he is the best," she said.

Florida State quarterback Charlie Ward was sixth, followed by Miami linebacker Micheal Barrow, Washington State quarterback Drew Bledsoe, Stanford running back Glyn Milburn and Alabama defensive end Eric Curry. Milburn and Curry tied for ninth with 47 points each.

Torretta wasn't the flashiest player in the country and didn't have the eye-popping statistics of recent Heisman winners. All he's done is win more games than any of Miami's great quarterbacks, including Testaverde, Steve Walsh, Craig Erickson, Bernie Kosar and Jim Kelly.

Since Torretta became the full-time starter in 1991, Miami has gone 23-0. He was 3-1 as a redshirt freshman in 1989, when he filled in for the injured Erickson. The only loss was 24-10 at Florida State.

If Miami beats Alabama, Torretta will become the first player to win the Heisman and a national championship in the same season since Pittsburgh's Tony Dorsett in 1976. He would also be the first quarterback to lead his team to consecutive national titles since Oklahoma's Steve Davis in 1974-75.

"Gino is smart, he makes few mistakes and he probably operates the offense better than anyone I've ever had," Miami coach Dennis Erickson said.

The 6-foot-3, 205-pound Californian looks awkward at times and doesn't have the rifle arm of Kelly or Testaverde. However, he's steady, smart and efficient.

Torretta completed 228 of 402 attempts (56.7 percent) for 3,060 yards and 19 touchdowns this season, and only had seven passes intercepted. He is Miami's career leader in completions (555), attempts (991), passing yards (7,690) and total offense (7,772). And he needs only two touchdown passes against Alabama to become the Hurricanes' all-time leader in that category.

"We have a great quarterback tradition here, and I've been proud to carry it on," said Torretta, who comes from Pinole, Calif., a small town near San Francisco. "Setting all these records is nice, but the most important thing is winning."

Not everyone expected Torretta to become a star at Miami, where his brother Geoff was a backup to Testaverde in his Heisman-winning season.

Prior to his junior year, Torretta had to battle highly touted Bryan Fortay for the starting job. Torretta won the job and Fortay transferred to Rutgers.

"Success didn't come easy, and that's made me appreciate it even more," he said.

Faulk rushed for 1,630 yards and 15 touchdowns, and became only the second player to gain 3,000 yards in his first two years.

Hearst gained 1,547 yards and set a Southeastern Conference record with 21 touchdowns this season. Jones led Florida State with 111 tackles, including three sacks and seven others behind the line of scrimmage.

The MHS Gold squad fell to 0-3, dropping the third-place game to the Midland Freshman, 60-27 despite Robert Underwood's 12-point effort. Underwood also had 13 and Eugene Brown had 9 during the Gold's 55-50 overtime loss Friday to San Angelo.

Temple 38, Amarillo 7

WICHITA FALLS, Texas — Brothers Greg and Gerald Watson combined for 197 yards rushing and three touchdowns as Temple glided into the Class 5A Division II title game with a 38-7 victory over Amarillo.

Temple (14-1) will play the winner of Saturday's game between Houston Yates and San Antonio Holmes at noon on Dec. 19 in Austin's Memorial Stadium.

It will be the second-ranked Wildcats' first championship game appearance since 1979, when they beat Houston Memorial 28-6.

The Wildcats had built a 31-0 third-quarter lead by the time Amarillo (13-2) scored its only points on a 50-yard touchdown pass from Bret Leathers to David Villagomez.

Amarillo, which upset defending "small school" champion Odessa Permian last weekend, gained 351 yards, including 215 passing.

Greg Watson carried the ball only twice, both on reverses, but gained 88 yards. He scored on a 52-yard run in the third quarter.

Gerald, a junior, gained 109 yards on 19 carries and two touchdowns.

He and Delarrius Wilson are the first Temple running backs to each gain more than 1,000 yards since the 1979 state champion tandem of Darrell Weddington and Kenneth Davis, now of the Buffalo Bills.

Temple's Damion Johnson caught six passes for 93 yards, giving him a school-record 41 receptions for the season.

The Shorthorns (14-1), who were in the semis for the fourth straight year, advanced to next weekend's title game against Goldthwaite (13-1-1).

CLASS A
Sudan 15, Riesel 13

SWEETWATER, Texas — Ricky Weaver's 41-yard field goal in the fourth quarter lifted Sudan over Riesel in a Class A semifinal.

Riesel (11-2-1) turned a 12-0 halftime deficit into a 13-12 lead with 11:20 left to play when backup quarterback Roosevelt Roddy scored on a 1-yard sneak. The two-point conversion failed.

Sudan answered quickly, though, moving 32 yards on six plays to set up Weaver's kick with 8:59 to play.

SIX-MAN
Panther Creek 54,
Fort Hancock 26

MONAHANS, Texas — Chad Humphries passed for 243 yards and five touchdowns and ran for two more scores as Panther Creek shocked Fort Hancock for its first six-man state championship.

It was the first defeat in 71 games for Fort Hancock (13-1), which was attempting to win its fifth consecutive state title.

Fort Hancock, which had last lost to Jayton in the 1987 playoffs, was two victories short of the 72-game national record, held by Hudson, Mich.

Fans take all the fun out of winning

Associated Press

It's a longtime trend in the NFL that's in full bloom this season.

No one has fun any more, even if they're winning.

The most recent example is the New Orleans Saints.

The fans ("BOOOOO") were extremely unhappy after last Thursday's 22-14 win over Atlanta that gave them a playoff berth for the fourth time in six years after 20 years without a winning record. But so was the team.

OK, so the Saints dominated the game. But their offense got just five field goals. And they let the Falcons go ahead late in a game that should have been put away early and needed an interception return by Toi Cook to clinch the game.

However ...

They WON!!!!

So this is coach Jim Mora immediately afterward:

"Anybody want to know what we screwed up on today? Who wants to know? Who we didn't block, passes we dropped, why we didn't execute. How they caught balls, how we didn't cover kickoffs, who wants to know that?

"We're only 10-3 and in the playoffs, second team in the NFL to get in the playoffs, but who wants to know about the bad things?

Mora's not the only target — Carl Smith, the offensive coordinator, gets a lot of the heat. And it isn't unique to New Orleans, where fans are upset because the Saints are 0-3 in their previous playoff appearances.

It's there in Buffalo, Denver, New York (with the Giants), Minneapolis, Washington (where Mark Rypien is booed regularly) and Philadelphia, among other cities where teams have been successful recently. After the Giants won the Super Bowl in 1991, a fan called a radio show to criticize the play calling on the goal line in that game.

As Buffalo coach Marv Levy said after a barrage of criticism this year: "Some of these fans would have surrendered the day after Pearl Harbor."

On the other hand, coaches tend to overreact.

Mora, for example, is in a no-win situation.

COWBOYS: Washington usually tough in December

(From 1B)

Redskins, has an average of 5.2 yards per carry and 116 yards per game over that span. The Redskins will face him at a time when injuries on their defensive line leave them particularly vulnerable to the run.

Last week, they held the Giants to 165 total yards, but with tackle Eric Williams out because of an abdominal injury, New York managed to gain 105 yards on the ground.

So the Redskins may do what Denver did last week — the Broncos brought safeties Steve Atwater and Steve Smith to the line, and Emmitt Smith gained just 62 yards.

"I don't own anybody," Smith said. "The last couple of weeks, people have been owning me. We're seeing an extra safety, and that's six or eight people on the line, and it's tougher to run."

But Denver didn't win that game. Aikman started throwing once the run was stuffed and ended up with three touchdown passes in a 31-27 victory.

"One approach we've taken offensively is that we're not going to try to get one player the ball," Dallas coach Jimmy Johnson said. "If we see an eight-man front that takes away Emmitt Smith, we throw the ball. If an opponent wants to double (receiver) Michael (Irvin), we go to (Alvin) Harper."

Of course, Washington's offense finally is showing signs of getting untracked. In the last two games, the Redskins have scored eight touchdowns on offense; in their previous six, they had just two.

One big reason is that the offensive line is far more stable since All-Pro tackle Jim Lachey returned two weeks ago from a knee injury. Quarterback Mark Rypien has more time to throw and the running backs have bigger holes to work with. In the last two weeks, the Redskins have picked up 320 yards on the ground. They'll need that momentum against the NFL's top defense.

"We're starting to get more continuity," Rypien said. "We just hope we can keep it going, but they're tough."

Now, the intangibles. Dallas, for some reason, has had an easy time in Washington in recent seasons, even during years when the Cowboys were horrible. Like 1989, when Dallas won only one game, it happened in Washington. Success hasn't changed the Cowboys — they've still triumphed three of the last four times they've been to RFK Stadium.

But they haven't been there in December in quite awhile, and Washington has a 32-10 record in December under coach Joe Gibbs. They're also usually tough at home, having won 18 of their last 20.

Let's not forget revenge. After Dallas defeated Washington on opening day, Johnson said he had been looking past the Redskins to a matchup the following week with the Giants.

"I'm sure they're not saying that about us now," Rypien said. "If they are, fine, then we'll sneak right by them."

Added running back Earnest Byner: "We're still the Super Bowl champions, and if they want that, they have to take it away from us."

NFL: Cardinals keep Giants off scoreboard in Tempe

(From 1B)

But the Bills killed off four of the game's last six minutes on a drive that ended with Steve Christie's second field goal of the game, a 25-yarder.

Jim Kelly threw for one touchdown and ran for another as the Bills stopped a two-game losing streak while extending Denver's losing streak to four games, all of which the Broncos have played without John Elway.

The Bills (10-4) will clinch a playoff berth if Kansas City, San Diego, Cleveland or Houston lose Sunday. The Broncos dropped to 7-7.

Buffalo's defense, which scored the only touchdown in last season's 10-7 victory over the Broncos in the AFC title game, played well until the second half, sacking the Broncos' quarterback tandem four times.

Denver scored 17 straight points in the third and fourth quarters, with the help of a costly pass interference call against Nate Odomes, an onsides kick and two key receptions by rookie Cedric Tillman.

Odomes' pass interference call gave Denver the ball on the Buffalo 3, and Maddox hit Shannon Sharpe with a 1-yard touchdown pass on fourth down, making it 24-7.

Brad Daluiso then kicked and recovered an onsides kick. The Broncos moved for a 26-yard field goal by David Treadwell, making it 24-10.

Tillman made third- and fourth-down receptions to keep a Denver drive alive that ended with Greg Lewis' going over from the 1, pulling the Broncos to within a touchdown with 6:13 left.

But Denver's Greg Kragen was offsides on a third-and-3 play on Buffalo's next drive, giving the Bills a first down. A 6-yard Andre Reed reverse on a third-and-5, and a 33-yard run by Thurman Thomas put Buffalo in position to kick its final field goal.

Thomas ran 26 times for 120 yards and a touchdown. He also had 39 yards on three receptions. It was Thomas' fourth-straight 100-yard rushing game.

The teams combined for five turnovers in a poorly played scoreless first quarter.

The first half's sixth turnover, a Tyrone Braxton interception, put Denver on the Buffalo 38 early in the second quarter.

The Broncos got as close as the Bills 20, but consecutive sacks by Phil Hansen and Clifford Hicks moved Denver out of field goal range.

Buffalo took over and used a trick play to score the game's first touchdown midway through the quarter.

What looked like a Thomas run to the left turned into a reverse when Thomas handed off to Reed, who headed to the right. Reed then flipped the ball back to Kelly, who found a wide-open Don Beebe for a 64-yard touchdown play.

The Bills went up 14-0 when Kelly scrambled to the right for a 2-yard touchdown and increased the lead to 21-0 after a 16-yard punt by Denver's Daren Parker gave the Bills the ball at the Broncos' 43 with 1:06 left in the half.

Thomas shook off several tacklers as he ran over the middle for the 11-yard touchdown that made it 21-0.

Christie's first field goal, a 29-yarder, was set up by a 42-yard punt return by Hicks and put Buffalo up 24-0.

Cardinals 19, Giants 0

TEMPE, Ariz. — The Phoenix Cardinals ended a pair of long non-shutout streaks and four years of futility against the New York Giants all at the same time.

"I'll tell you what — it's been a long time since we've beaten the New York Giants, and to shut them out on national TV, and play the way we played today, was a good feeling," tackle Luis Sharpe said. "It was good to see them struggle for a change."

Sharpe and the rest of the line helped Johnny Johnson run for two touchdowns — one a 42-yard game-breaker on the first play of the fourth quarter — as Johnson finished with 156 yards on a team-record-tying 36 attempts.

The 220-pound, third-year back continued to ignore the media despite his career day, but Sharpe said Johnson was the key, especially in the second half, when he gained 108 yards on 21 carries.

"He had a great day. He really was running hard, running with a purpose, and I think we opened some holes and made some plays; it was a great team effort," Sharpe said.

The Cardinals (4-10) snapped a four-game losing streak and an eight-game skid in the series. The Giants (5-9) have lost five straight.

The Giants, who beat Phoenix 31-21 on Oct. 11 with a healthy Jeff Hostetler at the controls, had to go with rookie quarterbacks Kent Graham and Dave Brown. But Tim McDonald of the Cardinals said that didn't detract from the best defensive effort in his career.

"It's been a long time since anybody shut out this team," said McDonald, a safety who had a fumble recovery and an interception. "That's all we talked about in the fourth quarter. We wanted to hold onto that shutout."

The Giants not failed to score since San Francisco's 12-0 victory on Nov. 23, 1980. It was the Cardinals' first shutout since a 21-0 win over Buffalo on Nov. 15, 1981.

"Nineteen-eighty-one? I was in high school. I was in the 10th grade in high school," McDonald said.

Johnson scored on a 5-yard run in the second quarter, getting the maximum production out of a sequence which began with Eric Swann's sack of Brown in the end zone for a safety.

Greg Davis kicked a 26-yard field goal in the third quarter and Johnson put the game away when he raced through a huge hole and ran down the left sideline for the score, fending off safety Phillippi Sparks inside the 10.

"Phoenix is not a bad ball team, but we've just got to pull together and work things out. Next year, we'll be there," said Sparks, a rookie from Arizona State.

Johnson's day was a mirror reversal of Rodney Hampton's fortunes. Hampton had a career-high 167 yards in the first meeting of the teams. On Saturday, he had 51 yards in 12 carries.

The Cardinals shackled the Giants with strong pass coverage and good penetration, allowing 70 yards rushing and 131 total to a team which rushed for 260 and gained 399 overall in the victory at The Meadowlands.

"It was like revenge on each play. They talked a lot of junk and said they'd run on us for 200 yards," linebacker Eric Hill said.

"I didn't expect to be able to run against Phoenix as well as we had in the first game," Giants coach Ray Handley said. "We were consistent in the third quarter, but we weren't going to run all over them. We had two pretty good runs for the goal line, but it wasn't enough."

Gamecocks win I-AA championship

Associated Press

Jacksonville State went out on top.

Playing in their final NCAA Division II game before beginning the move to Division I-AA next year, the Gamecocks ran their way to a 17-13 victory over defending champion Pittsburg State in the championship game Saturday.

The Gamecocks' option offense was relentless, piling up 390 yards rushing and controlling the ball for more than 38 minutes. Jacksonville State only threw four passes in the game — none in the second half.

"They controlled the football and kept the ball away from our offense," said Pittsburg State coach Chuck Broyles, whose team had a 25-game winning streak snapped.

However, the victory wasn't assured until Eric King batted away a pass at the goal line with 24 seconds to go.

The Gamecocks (12-1-1) had been to the championship game three times previously and lost each one. Their dismal record in the finals included two shutouts and a 23-6 setback to Pittsburg State (14-1) last year.

"Following the game, I was relieved," said Jacksonville State coach Bill Burgess, who watched his team lose in 1989 and 1991.

"The other two times, it hurt an awful lot after the game, but after all was said and done, No. 2 is a heck of a lot better than No. 3 and on down. When we didn't win in the past, it hurt, but after looking back on all the years, finishing second wasn't all that bad."

In the NCAA Division I-AA semifinals, Marshall downed Delaware 28-7 to earn a berth in the title game against the winner of Saturday night's Youngstown State-Northern Iowa game.

Wisconsin-La Crosse won the Division III title by beating Washington & Jefferson 16-12.

Central State downed Gardner-Webb 19-16 to win the NAIA Division I championship. Findlay beat Benedictine 27-24 and Linfield beat Minot State 47-12 in the NAIA Division II semifinals.

NCAA Division II
Pittsburg State 13

It looked like the Gorillas were going to make Jacksonville State a bridesmaid once again when Harlon Hill Trophy winner Ronald Moore returned the opening kickoff 99 yards for a touchdown.

The Gamecocks didn't panic, though. Led by quarterbacks Chuck Robinson and Corky Gordon and fullbacks Sean Richardson and Terence Bowens, Jacksonville State almost tripled the rushing yards that Pittsburg State had been allowing per game (134.6).

Richardson scored the game-winning touchdown on a 5-yard run with 11:13 remaining in the third quarter on the Gamecocks' first possession of the second half.

NCAA Division III
Wash. & Jeff. 12

In an otherwise even contest, the difference was the kicking game. Both teams scored two touchdowns, but Scott Lautner two extra point tries both failed. The first one was blocked by Norris Thomas, who returned it 86 yards for two points, and the second was blocked by Brett Harper.

Wisconsin-La Crosse (12-0-1) fullback John Janke gained 122 yards on 24 carries and halfback Erik Richards had 93 yards on 17 attempts.

Chris Babirad, who entered the game with 2,367 rushing yards for the season, was held to 107 yards on 25 carries for Washington & Jefferson (11-2).

Division I-AA
Marshall 28, Delaware 7

Marshall (11-3) turned to its ground game and defense to beat Delaware and advance to the I-AA title game for the second straight year. Glenn Pedro rushed for 107 yards to lead the Thundering Herd.

Delaware (11-3) played most of the second half without starting quarterback Bill Vergantino, who had thrown for more than 2,000 yards this season and holds more than 20 school records. Vergantino, who had been suffering from a virus coming into the game, left after a crushing hit on the first play of the second half.

It wasn't immediately known whether Vergantino left because of illness or injury. His replacement, Dale Fry, threw for 56 yards.

NAIA Division I
Central State 19,
Gardner-Webb 16

Leroy Perkins picked up his own fumble and ran 8 yards for a touchdown with 36 seconds remaining to cap a fourth-quarter comeback that gave Central State the NAIA Division I championship.

Central State (12-1) finished the year with a nine-game winning streak thanks to a valiant effort by injured quarterback Henderson Mosley in the fourth period.

Gardner Webb (12-2), which began the season with a 71-21 loss at Central Florida, had a 12-game winning streak snapped. The 16 points represented the fewest total its run-and-shoot offense scored in any game this year.

Mosley, who missed most of the middle two quarters because of a sore right leg, limped back onto the field in the fourth period. He moved the Marauders 80 yards to get to 16-13 on a 13-yard scoring pass to former Oklahoma quarterback Charles Thompson with 7:51 left.

NAIA Div. II Semifinals
Linfield 47, Minot St. 12

Quarterback Shannon Sells ran for three touchdowns and passed for another as Linfield routed Minot State.

Sells carried 11 times for 147 yards and was 8-of-20 passing for 135 yards. He ran for touchdowns of 63 and 66 yards.

His 63-yard run yards on the third play of the game helped the Wildcats build a 22-6 halftime lead. He then directed an offense that gained 493 yards rushing over Minot State (9-3).

Findlay 27, Benedictine, Kan. 24

Balewa Walker's two first-quarter touchdowns gave Findlay a 14-0 lead and the Oilers survived a last-minute missed field goal to beat Benedictine of Kansas.

Benedictine (11-2) missed a chance to tie the score and send the game into overtime when a 46-yard field goal attempt by Mark Gormley hit the left upright halfway up the goal post with 33 seconds to play.

Findlay advanced to the finals with a 11-1 record.

Yeltsin's political actions lack vision

Pity poor Boris Yeltsin.

The Russian populist propelled to the peak of political power during 1991 when Soviet Communism was falling into disfavor as the democratic revolution swept Eastern Europe, appeared to confront an old dilemma late last week for those who have subscribed to totalitarianism. Should a government be directed by a ruling body, such as the Russian Parliament, or by a single individual? The question is as old as government itself.

Frustrated by the rejection of his reformist prime minister by the Congress of People's Deputies, Yeltsin — who has faced increasing challenges by the legislators — railed that the participants constituted "a creeping coup" who wanted to send the country "on the trip to nowhere."

Furthermore, Yeltsin said he could no longer work with Russia's hard-line lawmakers and proposed a nationwide referendum to decide whether he or Congress should run the nation. Yeltsin should be cautious. That almost sounds as though he endorses dictatorial rule. Hasn't Russia suffered enough under dictatorial rule?

One of Yeltsin's chief opponents, parliament speaker Ruslan Khasbulatov, told a news agency that Yeltsin was acting like he had "become God with the final say over the fate of the country."

Russia's latest revolution appears far from over. Struggles for political power are still being waged there and the question of who will hold that power won't be answered for years. One can liken Yeltsin to Maximilien Robespierre in the French Revolution of 1789. Robespierre brought necessary changes to France, but was executed as a tyrant in 1794.

No individual can rule a nation alone, not Yeltsin, not Mikhail Gorbachev, not even Khasbulatov. A dictator is always consumed by power.

Yeltsin has brought important governmental change to Russia, serving through some of that country's most critical years. Now more than anything else, he must support representative government because if Russia is to make a clean break with its authoritarian past the government's decisions must come from representatives of the Russian people.

In turning from the representative form of government, Yeltsin is necessarily supporting mob rule. He told workers at the Leninist Young Communist League Auto Plant, "I ask you to go out and collect signatures for a referendum on the Congress!"

Can a leader attempting to take his nation from a totalitarian form of government to a democratic one convince his opponents of the need for their support if when he confronts a parliamentary vote not to his liking he embraces rule by the masses? We think not.

It's up to Clinton to make New World Order reality

Someone once observed of the Holy Roman Empire that it was neither holy nor Roman nor an empire. George Bush's vaunted New World Order could be deconstructed along similar lines.

New? Not when one traces the centuries-old origins of so many current conflicts. Order? Hardly. The collapse of the Cold War has seen dozens of hot spots erupt, leaving the international community lurching chaotically from one crisis to the next.

As seen from Washington, the world these days is a confusing and confounding place — and this is the moment of America's triumph.

The long, twilight struggle against communism is over, but the world remains a dangerous place. And the United States has been left holding the bag as the Russians and Chinese focus on their domestic problems.

America, the global police officer, is back on the beat, rescuing Kuwait, protecting food shipments to Somalia, contemplating action in Bosnia.

George Bush, for all his foreign-policy successes, left no Bush Doctrine as a comprehensive blueprint to guide future policy makers. Bush proclaimed the New World Order; it's now up to Bill Clinton to make it a reality. If he can.

Poverty cancer requires new form of 'treatment'

Poverty in the world's richest country is like some forms of cancer. There's no permanent cure, just treatments to halt its growth and send it into remission.

As a new administration prepares to take on the trappings and challenges of national leadership, one of its highest priorities will be to prescribe and administer a different treatment for the recurring malignancy. With one-fifth of the children in the United States now living in poverty, the Clinton administration must move beyond the half-hearted diffidence that has characterized anti-poverty efforts during past dozen years.

Welfare reform, of course, must be one of the main ingredients of that anti-poverty medicine. Liberals and conservatives alike agree that the system should be structured in such a way as to encourage recipients to disengage from it and go to work.

The poverty cancer will not go into remission on its own.

Yeltsin, Strauss stand for freedom

WASHINGTON — Nearly 8 million visitors stream into the Smithsonian Institution's Air and Space Museum each year, but in 1989 Boris Yeltsin and his entourage had trouble getting tickets because of national security concerns.

Anderson

One of Yeltsin's traveling companions phoned a friend, Washington superlawyer Robert Strauss, for help. The message was passed to Strauss that Yeltsin was insulted and that America should be more respectful of Yeltsin, then just a political maverick, because he might be someone more important in the future.

"The security people wouldn't let him visit the space center and that's crazy in itself because there are no secrets there," Strauss recalls. "Any spy in the world can go walking in there. I called (White House national security adviser) Brent Scowcroft and said, 'Scowcroft, this is the craziest thing in the world. Straighten it out.'"

Strauss' intervention forged a bond between him and Yeltsin that later paid hefty dividends. But at the time, neither man had an inkling that two years later they would have a rendezvous with history — Yeltsin the unlikely hero and Strauss the unlikely diplomat. "It's interesting how relationships develop," Strauss said. "He and I liked each other and he related well to me."

Ambassador Strauss' real portfolio, the one mattering most to Yeltsin, was his proximity to power — Strauss' ability to interrupt a meeting with Yeltsin and get President Bush or Secretary of State James Baker on the line almost instantly.

It was also the more intangible personal chemistry that allowed both men to tease one other, especially when the topic of conversation turned to the American presidential election. Yeltsin was a strong Bush man.

Though Strauss says that "the jury is still out on whether Russia and the reforms make it or not," he departed Russia revering Yeltsin as a man who has "the guts of a skydiver." In fact, Strauss says that only one thing ever outwardly spooked Yeltsin — his appearance before a joint session of Congress this past June during the first official Russian-American summit.

The Russian president prepared for the summit like it was an audition for the opening of a Broadway play. During several long sessions, Strauss and Yeltsin choreographed the visit down to the last detail, and Yeltsin was always eager to rehearse. One day, for example, a Yeltsin aide called Strauss' office to broadly hint that it would please Yeltsin to receive a dinner invitation from the ambassador. Strauss promptly called Yeltsin through an interpreter to extend the invitation, figuring Yeltsin would furnish a guest list for a dinner the following month.

During the final tutorial, Yeltsin inquired about one more part of the joint session. "What about the question and answer period?" Yeltsin asked.

Strauss regretfully informed Yeltsin that they "had a lot more work to do," and invited himself out to Yeltsin's dacha for one more session. This time he brought videotapes of speeches before joint sessions delivered by President Bush and Vaclav Havel, president of Czechoslovakia.

"When Yeltsin saw those two tapes, all of a sudden his eyes opened and he understood," Strauss recalls. "Now of all the things I told him about this trip — how you handle the press, what do you expect from Congress, what Bush is going to say about this and what you can say about that — none of that impressed him as much as those tapes. He later told President Bush that he played the tape 10 times on the way over (to the United States), and when he walked into the joint session he was right at home." In fact, Yeltsin's address drew 13 standing ovations.

Though the Boris & Bob Show has come to a formal end, Strauss plans to remain an ambassador-without-portfolio for Yeltsin and for the cause of a free and prosperous Russia. But Strauss warns that "the clock is ticking fast."

Corporate giants are no longer 'unfireable'

After years of feeding on strawberries, cream and honey, or tons of money if you'd rather not be poetic about it, corporate executives are suddenly getting fired. Mr. Stempel of General Motors is the most spectacular instance of their new vulnerability. Now Mr. Robinson of American Express is said to be getting the boot.

Baker

Note that I don't dare breathe the names of these boardroom commanders without calling them "Mister." Such is the awe that corporate giants inspire in those bred to think of them as an elite class. "Corporate statesmen," they were called in the Eisenhower years. One was invited to kowtow. Now they get fired.

This is a big development in American firing. Until now, corporate giants were as unfireable as government workers and tenured college professors. Firing a corporate statesman can be done, apparently, only by his board of directors. It is a private operation carried out by a handful of boardroom big shots who have known each other for years.

Whatever the reason for a corporation's board to give the pink slip to its CEO, you can bet your gold fillings it has nothing to do with the reason you'd like to fire the guy.

If, for instance, you owned one of those multitudes of General Motors pickup trucks with the dangerously exposed gasoline tanks, you might enjoy telling Mr. Stempel to clear out his desk and pick up his farewell check at the pay window.

Never mind that those trucks were produced under the administration of Mr. Stempel's predecessor, Mr. Smith, who has since overseen his own retirement on a pension exceeding $1 million a year. You might be sufficiently hot-headed about your dangerous truck to drop the "Mister" and say: "Don't talk a retired Smith to me. What's Stempel done about my truck since taking over? Nothing. Stempel must go."

Boards of directors doubtless wish their companies wouldn't sell you dangerous merchandise. They are not merchants of death, nor heartless, nor totally indifferent to their customers' safety.

Still, if the profit margin is expanding, rather than fire their corporate giant they are more likely to approve his latest application for another pay rise after asking if there isn't something he can do, by the way, about the nasty gasoline-tank situation in his trucks.

How different this is from the traditional method of firing baseball managers and football coaches. Fans of the New York Giants football team, for example, are responding to the team's unsuccessful season by demanding the coach be fired. The sports pages and all history suggest he will be.

In contrast to the indifference a discontented Chevrolet buyer may expect after demanding that General Motors fire its president, a discontented Giants fan demanding Coach Handley's head seems to receive a sympathetic hearing from the authorities.

Actually, of course, all but the most dimwitted fan realizes he is merely acting out the traditional fan's role in a traditional firing ritual. The obvious remedy for an unsuccessful team is to fire the players, or at least the more incompetent among them, and hire better ones.

Sports fans know this. They also know just as surely that team owners will not do so. For one thing, it would cost a great deal of money, which the owners might not have or which they might prefer to spend on Caribbean real estate if they did have it.

Moreover, it usually takes several years to replace losing players with winning players. Fans know this too and so are content to have the coach fired. Team owners, happy to be so easily forgiven for marketing an inferior product, contentedly play their role in the charade by firing the coach.

Hiring a new coach is the economically sound, though athletically absurd, solution for a losing-team problem, since coaches — and, in baseball, managers — work for even less money than mediocre, which is to say unwinning, athletes. The beauty part is that coaches and managers accept the rules of the charade and expect to be fired periodically, just as Mafia men accept, as part of their job, the probability that they will have to spend a percentage of their lives in prison.

The lesson here is that if you hope to fire the people you think need firing you must get a seat on the corporate board or own the team.

WILLIAM SAFIRE

Martha Stewart defines restoration, renovation

I was having some trouble with a leaky copper gutter, and the beams in the basement looked bent out of shape, so I called Martha Stewart.

This author of cookbooks and guides to weddings and other entertainments has a new book out — "New Old House" — dealing with restoration and renovation. Actually, not gutters but leaders are my problem; during Washington's interregnum, the synonymy of renewal was bothering me.

Safire

She writes in the book, after consulting the Random House dictionary: "It is my understanding that a restoration is a pure, line-for-line replication of a space or object, as nearly as possible to its original state. A renovation is a rebuilding of a space or object, with less attention paid to authenticity than to making it new again."

I wanted to hear a less formal differentiation from her own lips. "Restoration is putting things back the way they were," Martha Stewart says. "It's making a house like a museum, the way it was when first built — taking new paint off old paneling, taking it back in time."

"Renovation is making something new again — putting in bathrooms, knocking out walls, making an old house more livable for today."

And what about rehabilitation, remodeling and refurbishment? "You're going to have to work those out for yourself," she said invitingly.

Where did I put that ruler with the bubble in the middle? Here we go:

The noun restoration dates back to the 15th century. In British history, the Restoration (which ended the interregnum) began in 1660 when Charles II returned to England and reestablished the monarchy. George F. Will uses the term to title his new book on Congressional reform, intended to restore respect to Congress. "Term limitation," he concludes, "is a measured, moderate and — let it be said — loving step toward such a restoration." The older renovation dates back to the early 1400s.

The Latin habilitas is the root of "ability"; English picked up the meaning of rehabilitate in 1580, as "to re-establish the privileges of one who has been degraded or attainted." A Scottish register announced, "Our Soverane Lord ... rehabilitattis and restoris the said Robert ... to his gude fame." Thus, rehabilitate is close to "restore to a previous state," while renovate is closer in meaning to renew, or "make new again," but not necessarily to replicate — meaning "copy, reproduce" — the house that used to be. Both are far from remodel, which means to change the floor plan or alter the structure.

Refurbish, a word much mocked when used by Walter H. Annenberg in telling Queen Elizabeth of his plans for the American ambassador's residence, originally meant "to repolish"; now its meaning lies somewhere between redecorate, "to redo the style of interior furnishings," and spruce up, perhaps from spruce leather, a smart item once imported from Prussia.

So what is Martha doing to her house in East Hampton, L.I.? "I'm renovating the inside and restoring the outside," she says, "while working on a new book about homekeeping."

Most bus drivers care about school children

A couple of letters written were very negative toward the Midland Independent School District (MISD) bus drivers in general terms. This is indeed a shame that people concentrate on finding "generalized" criticism of this department in our school system.

The MISD Transportation Department is managed by Christian folks that truly care about every child they transport every day to school. The many, many drivers, monitors and mechanics have this same commitment to our children. They transport school age children who have special needs such as the wheelchair-bound and those with various disabilities that require people who can love and care for their needs in a special way.

These same people do their best to teach your children how to behave on the bus to avoid possible injury. Yet the most simple behavior, that must be taught at home, is brought into confrontation frequently throughout the day on the bus. If your child rides the bus, he should be coached at home to act in a responsible manner. Teaching basic behavioral skills should start at a young age in the home and be ongoing. It should not be turned over to folks that drive a bus or teach in our schools.

The next time you see an MISD bus go by, stop and think a minute before you speak out. Think about the person who accepts the responsibility to transport our children. Think about the near misses they have because a car or pickup runs a red traffic light or does not stop when the bus is flashing its lights and stopped to take on or drop off a child. Think about the times the driver cleans up after your sick child or helps the child blow his nose. Think about the drivers that have given clothing and food to families and children in need. Think about the love, caring and praying these drivers do for your children each day.

Yes, a driver can make a driving error. If you see it, make sure you get the bus number so you can call transportation and give a specific report. About that let's do our best to look for the many, many good deeds these folks do for our children each day. It may surprise you to find the folks at the MISD Transportation Department are the same kind of folks as you and I.

Drunk-driving victims may not enjoy holiday

The holiday season is rapidly approaching, and many victims wonder if they will be able to make it through the next several weeks. In the midst of the world's rejoicing, victims may feel isolated and saddened by their loss. Everywhere we see scenes of family togetherness and sharing, parties, and laughter; but those of us involved with MADD and the tragedies of drunk driving know that these scenes can sometimes symbolize what victims may never feel again — a sense of family unity. A dinner is planned and, all the while, there are glances to the chair that will not be filled. Someone is missing and everyone feels the loss keenly.

Knowing that these feelings of grief and anger are normal and expected can help take the edge off them. Victims are not wallowing in self-pity when they allow themselves to feel whatever emotions may surface during this time. Victims cannot fully participate in the joy of the season because of the void left by the senseless and selfish act of a driver who chose to get behind the wheel impaired.

Victims know more than others how vulnerable and fragile life is and how the harshness of reality can lessen the joy of living.

Remembering and commemorating are, however, insufficient. This season must also serve as a time of recommitment to strengthen the message in regard to the unacceptable costs in terms of lives and property borne by our community as a result of the intoxicated drivers. We are made aware of the disregard for the laws of the state and the orders of its courts by some offenders who repeatedly drive intoxicated. We must respond to violations of our state laws in a way that reinforces their sanctity and helps to enhance the safety of our community.

As this year draws to a close, it is my wish that each of you will have the opportunity to join in the joy of the holidays. Along with that wish let me also join you in remembering those who cannot celebrate and the debt that we owe to them.

Children find meaning of Christmas at Kmart

As a foster home recruiter, I am often requested to coordinate special projects for children in foster care and those families the Department of Protective and Regulatory Services is working. On Dec. 5, I was especially touched by the staff at the Kmart store here in Midland. I have had the privilege of working with a special lady named Melanie who is active with the Good News Committee from the Kmart store. She mentioned a program the Kmart store sponsored which gave 20 needy children a chance to do their own Christmas shopping by giving each child a $20 gift certificate.

On Dec. 5th, 19 children and five adults met at Kmart for what was to be a thrilling morning. We were all treated to a hot breakfast of scrambled eggs, bacon, hash browns and biscuits. Santa Claus then paid the children a visit by bringing them an early Christmas gift. After Santa's visit, store manager, John Carroll, presented each child a gift certificate. All of the children were able to do their shopping before the store officially opened. I was amazed at how carefully each child thought about their choices, trying to purchase the perfect gift for family members. A wonderful time was had by all who attended. What was extremely impressive to me was the care and concern the Kmart employees had for the children, wanting them to have a joyous time! Carroll expressed wanting to make this an annual event!

Especially during the holiday season, it warms my heart to see people who truly care about children and succeed in providing an opportunity for them to look at the world through wishful eyes and seeing even their smallest dreams come true! Thanks Kmart! We look forward to next year!

Bullock defends stand on lottery, education

I don't mind taking criticism for something I've done, but I don't like it at all when I am wrongly blamed because lottery money doesn't go to the public schools.

My record on the lottery is clear and well documented.

Long before I became lieutenant governor, I said that the lottery was a sleazy way of raising government money. I said it was an unstable source of revenue and I would oppose making our schools dependent in any way on such a flaky source of income.

I repeated my statements often while I was running for lieutenant governor and I repeated them again when the Legislature passed the bill letting the people vote on the lottery.

Even before then, as state comptroller, I pointed out that the State of California had made a very serious mistake in dedicating lottery money to schools — because after the newness wore off, the income fell and the schools had to be cut.

And aside from my repeated statements, nobody — absolutely nobody — connected with the lottery bill ever said it would go to the schools. The author of the bill certainly never said it would. I have never seen a newspaper article that said it would. Those who campaigned for it never said it would.

Those who write letters to the editor and call radio talk shows ought to get their facts straight, particularly about something as well documented as my historic opposition to tying the education of our children to a gambling game.

As one of the state's major daily newspapers said editorially last week, "Texans were repeatedly warned before they voted on the lottery ... it's too bad more of you weren't listening."

Lieutenant Governor

Schools are playgrounds for Russian roulette game

We'd never thought of playing Russian Roulette with our child's safety. Yet, everyday we send him to a situation that seems to resemble that dangerous game of chance. We are amazed at the incidents being related to us involving "violent assaults" upon teachers and students at school. Anger and concern we feel regarding the rampant student "peer intimidation" seem to be shared by a growing number of residents. Problems occur when students who do not choose to learn use the educational setting as a haven for violent misconduct.

Our son is among those who have been violently assaulted by other students. Dealing with this eye-opening experience exposed us to sympathetic rhetoric and led us through a maze of referrals to various "persons in charge." Justice and prevention are sometimes delayed or lost in the gridlock of the educational system.

Taxpayers do not seem to be aware of this serious situation dominating schools today. Teachers and students are concerned for their personal safety. Teachers feel unable to defend themselves due to the personal liability issues. Tax dollars are spent on the seemingly excessive, but required, paperwork documenting violent acts. These are warning signs of more serious incidents to come. Meanwhile, we are all distracted by the myriad facade of special programs and test scores. The sheer number of state legislative decisions regarding education today provides an illusion of remedy. A higher level of commitment is required from parents, teachers, and administrators. Commitment leads to action.

Inform your school's PTA president of recent violence you are aware has occurred on your child's campus. Ask what action is being taken to deter future similar incidents. Become a viable member of "Volunteers in Public Schools" to provide more adult supervision needed but not provided by limited school budgets. Inform specific school officials and elected board members that you want them to support principals' and teachers' efforts to provide safe schools. Support school officials who are "proactive" in their efforts to provide more safety. Call state legislators. Pursue issues until you receive satisfaction. Insist on schools that provide educational environments safe for all rather than a breeding ground for juvenile terrorism at a local level.

SPEAKING OUT

Chamber commits to economic health

By Janna R. King and Chuck Cowell

King

Cowell

Janna R. King is president-/chief executive officer of the Midland Chamber of Commerce. Chuck Cowell is the chamber's 1992-'93 chairman.

In a letter published in the Reporter-Telegram on Nov. 22, Edna Walger with the Citizens Against Taxpayer Abuse, expressed concern over city funds allocated to the Midland Chamber of Commerce. Some clarification may assist readers in better understanding the relationships between the City of Midland which contracts with the chamber of commerce for specific services in the area of economic development and promotion of the visitor industry.

First, with regard to Midland Center, the facility was built prior to the construction of any other large convention/meeting facility in the community. Civic and convention centers are built by many communities and derive their name from the fact that they are built by the public to meet community needs for large meeting facilities for community organizations and to attract conventions and meetings with visitors from out-of-town, thereby bringing new revenue into the local economy. The funds which support Midland Center are not paid by the residents of Midland; they are derived solely from the user fee paid by hotel-/motel guests. Communities all over Texas and the nation construct and fund operations of civic/convention facilities from hotel/motel funds.

The City of Midland contracts with the Midland Chamber of Commerce to manage the facility. As a publicly-owned meeting facility it is our goal to minimize the ratio of operating expenses over income. The hotel/motel user fee subsidy of Midland Center in the last several years has been approximately 45 percent. This compares favorably to the level of subsidy in other public convention and meeting facilities in Texas (Abilene 46 percent; Laredo 42 percent; Plano 45 percent; San Angelo 49 percent; Lufkin 47 percent).

An advisory committee consisting of representatives appointed by the chamber and the city meets monthly to guide Midland Center operations. The committee is pleased with the businesslike approach taken by current management. Over the past three years the level of activity at the Midland Center has grown substantially, increasing revenue 70 percent while controlling expenses to an increase of only 20 percent. The Midland Chamber receives $1,000 per month to manage Midland Center. This includes oversight of all administrative areas including personnel, accounting, insurance and regulatory compliance as well as day to day support to management.

The City of Midland also contracts annually with the Midland Chamber to manage the Convention and Visitor's Bureau. Again the source of funding is the hotel/motel user fee paid for by overnight guests. The Convention and Visitor's Bureau in Midland and cities throughout Texas and the country work to attract visitors to their communities and provide services when visitors are in the community. Convention visitors to Midland attract or serviced by the CVB totaled 21,000 during the fiscal year ending Sept. 30, conservatively spending $4.8 million directly with local businesses, stimulating our economy. The Convention and Visitor's Bureau recently initialized programs to increase the tourism impact on our community through the attraction of tour buses to visit our fine museums and to capture travelers from the Big Bend and Carlsbad areas, as well as I-20 traffic.

All funds provided by the city from the user fee on hotel-/motel occupancy to the chamber go directly for these promotional activities of the CVB. The chamber receives no administrative fees for the substantial support provided to the CVB by the chamber. This support is contributed by the chamber, a private, non-profit membership organization, because we are committed to enhancing the Midland economy.

From the prospective of a local taxpayer, we believe our city council should be applauded for marketing Midland to out-of-town visitors using fees paid by out-of-town visitors and doing so with no administrative overhead for essential services like accounting and receptionist services and management functions.

The third contract between the City of Midland and the chamber of commerce is for economic development activities. The program has two active components and the necessary supporting activities: working with existing industry and prospecting for new and expanding industry. Support activities necessary for the smooth operation of existing industry and marketing programs include maintaining significant amounts of data and information on the community to respond promptly and professionally to industries as well as direct mail and telemarketing capabilities to reach them.

Continuity and dependability are two important ingredients of a community's economic development program. With the understanding that such efforts must be stable and sustained long term, through both strong and weak cycles in our national economy, the private sector in Midland has provided support to the Midland Chamber economic development efforts through Forward Midland for the past three to four years. Economic development is a team effort and the chamber economic development department coordinates information, and brings community resources to bear in areas such as utilities, finance, city services, real estate, labor force training, transportation, understanding the costs of doing business here such as worker's compensation, taxes, etcetera, as well as selling Midland's quality of life.

In the past three years, three California companies have relocated to our community, with support from the chamber programs funded by the city and Forward Midland. These companies contribute $6 million to our economy annually through payroll and direct purchases from local companies. The existing industry portion of our program recently assisted with the expansion of TOMCAT, a local manufacturer that has grown from four to 30 employees since 1988. Our existing industry visitation program identified a manufacturer with 60 employees that had identified a lot in San Antonio. By addressing real estate and training concerns, we were able to retain these 60 jobs in our community.

Cities across the country choose to participate in economic development because maintaining and developing employment and tax base is a continuous and competitive process. Businesses attracted and retained pay local property taxes and sales taxes, as do their employees. Businesses targeted as part of economic development efforts bring new revenue into the community through sales around the state, nation or world, strengthening small businesses with local markets. Citizens who are employed are less likely to require social services, publicly subsidized health care or be involved with the criminal justice system.

We are committed to economic development for the economic health of our community and the well being of its citizens. We value the city as a partner in our efforts and believe that funds invested in economic development yield a tremendous return to our community.

Bush deserves Nobel Peace Prize for mercy mission to Somalia

By WILLIAM RANDOLPH HEARST JR.
Editor in Chief, The Hearst Newspapers

NORTH SALEM, N.Y. — President Bush should be nominated for the Nobel Peace Prize for launching the American humanitarian mission to Somalia.

Hearst

Bush demonstrated great courage in going forward with this mission of mercy. The fact that American intervention in Somalia will save thousands of lives there deserves international recognition, such as the Nobel Peace Prize.

The esteemed award, which is presented every Dec. 10 by the Norwegian Nobel Committee in Oslo, honors people who have made significant contributions to peace and human rights. The American humanitarian mission is dramatic evidence that the world's richest country won't stand by silently when thousands of Somalis are dying from lack of food and medicine.

As you would expect, some European critics of the American humanitarian mission were questioning U.S. motives even as our Marines were landing in that remote country to assure safe delivery of food to Somalia's starving masses long held captive to the whims of well-armed thugs and goons.

These critics are from nations that have done little to alleviate the same human suffering that inspired the American people to come to the rescue. I believe these critics are jealous of our generosity. Their ability to complain is exceeded only by their ability to stand by and do nothing in the face of one of the great tragedies of our time.

This year's deserving Nobel Peace Prize winner, Roberta Menchu, was honored last week for her work on behalf of Indian rights in Guatemala and elsewhere. The prize carried a $973,000 cash award. I believe next year's Nobel Peace Prize should go to George Bush.

Under the rules of the Nobel Peace Prize, nominations must come in the form of a letter from either a member of Congress or "a professor of political science, history or philosophy." Nominations should be sent to:

The Norwegian Nobel Committee
Drannensveien 19
0255 Oslo, Norway.

If he is honored a year from now, Bush would be the first American honored by the Nobel Peace Prize since then-Secretary of State Henry Kissinger received the honor in 1973 for negotiating the end to the Vietnam war.

The Nobel committee honored Kissinger for his action that got American troops out of Vietnam. The Nobel committee should honor President Bush next year because he sent American troops to Somalia, not to conquer that distant impoverished country but to help Somalis.

The U.S. role in Somalia is a dramatic reminder that President-elect Bill Clinton will have the daunting responsibility of leading the new world order. As the world's only superpower following the end of the Cold War, the United States will face unprecedented global challenges in the next four years.

One of those challenges will be to complete the Somalia mercy mission in a way that will enable our troops to leave that country in some semblance of order and self-reliance. That's a tall order, given the history of anarchy, chaos and economic deprivation compounded by long-term drought. As I said in my column last week, I believe a U.N. trusteeship over Somalia is the best way to provide that kind of help.

Getting U.N. agreement on such a step could prove elusive.

That's one reason the job of secretary of state is so crucial in the incoming administration.

President-elect Clinton, who has given his full support to President Bush's humanitarian initiative in Somalia, is mulling over his choices for secretary of state and is expected to announce his nominee in the next week or so.

The names that keep coming up in speculation include:

–Warren Christopher, a ranking diplomat in the Carter administration and the director of President-elect Clinton's transition team.

–Gen. Colin Powell, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff; the Los Angeles Times reported last week that Gen. Powell is under "increasingly serious consideration" for the post.

–Sen. Bill Bradley, D-N.J., who has made a reputation for his mastery of international economics.

–Rep. Lee Hamilton, D-Ind., the new chairman of the House Foreign Affairs Committee.

All four have had experience in international relations and could do the job. I think President-elect Clinton is right when he says putting pep in the economy is his top priority. But in close competition for top priority is the new administration's need to carefully manage our nation's role in the world at large.

Barkley leads Phoenix to seventh straight win

Associated Press

MIAMI — Charles Barkley scored 39 points, but almost cost Phoenix the game in the closing seconds before the Suns won their seventh straight, 122-118.

The Suns led 120-117 when Barkley threw away an inbounds pass and then fouled Grant Long, who made the first of two from the line to pull the Heat within two with 16 seconds left in the game.

Long missed the second shot, but on the rebound, the Suns' Tom Chambers fouled Willie Burton, who went to the line with the chance to tie the score.

Burton missed both free throws, however, and Danny Ainge, who scored 23 points for Phoenix, was fouled and hit two from the line for the final margin.

Dan Majerle scored 20 points for the Suns, who completed a five-game, seven-day road trip with an unbeaten record.

The loss was the seventh in eight games for the Heat, who were led by Rony Seikaly with 25 points, including 19 in the second half. Bimbo Coles added 23 points and Glen Rice 22 for Miami.

The Suns' Cedric Ceballos scored 14 points on 7-for-7 shooting from the field in the first quarter, but Miami led 32-30 at the end of the period.

Barkley's 26 first-half points, including 16 in the second quarter, enabled the Suns to lead 62-56 at halftime.

Cavaliers 97, SuperSonics 93

RICHFIELD, Ohio — Mark Price scored seven of his career-high 39 points in the final 71 seconds as the Cleveland Cavaliers ended a four-game losing streak with a defeat of the Seattle SuperSonics.

Consecutive 3-pointers by Price and Craig Ehlo extended the Cavaliers' 87-86 lead to 93-86 with 38 seconds to go. The Sonics left Price open for his shot because they were double-teaming Brad Daugherty, and Ehlo was left open when Price drew coverage on a drive.

The Sonics then were forced to foul, and Price clinched it by sinking four foul shots in the last 11 seconds.

Price made 5 of 7 3-point attempts and 14 of 20 floor shots overall, surpassing his previous career high of 37 points. Ehlo scored 16 points, and Daugherty had his fourth career triple-double with 11 points, 12 rebounds and 11 assists.

Seattle, finishing off a 1-3 road trip, was led by Shawn Kemp with 22 points and 16 rebounds. Ricky Pierce scored 17.

The Sonics trailed 52-41 at halftime, but closed to 70-66 entering the fourth quarter as Kemp had nine points and nine rebounds in the third period.

Knicks 95, Pistons 88

NEW YORK — Patrick Ewing and Charles Smith each scored 21 points, and the New York Knicks overcame poor shooting with a fourth-quarter rally that lifted them to a victory over Detroit, snapping the Pistons' five-game winning streak.

The Knicks, who trailed by 16 in the first half, took the lead for the first time — and for good — with 7:41 left in the game on John Starks' 3-pointer. That capped a 14-4 burst to open the fourth period and wiped out a 72-63 deficit.

The Knicks, after shooting 26 for 65 in the first three quarters, made 11 of 18 in the fourth while holding the Pistons to 5 of 21. Detroit was 31 of 55 in the first three quarters.

Detroit trailed 84-83 with 4:13 left after Dumars' three-point play. But another 3-pointer by Starks started a 6-0 run that made it 90-83 with 2:37 to play.

Joe Dumars led Detroit with 19 points, while Isiah Thomas had 15. Starks and Greg Anthony came off the bench for 13 points apiece for New York, now 10-1 at home after losing for the first time at Madison Square Garden on Thursday night.

Dennis Rodman, who entered the game with a streak of seven consecutive games of at least 20 rebounds, finished with 16. Ewing had 12 rebounds.

Rockets 104, Timberwolves 87

MINNEAPOLIS — Hakeem Olajuwon scored 25 points and Scott Brooks came back to haunt his former Minnesota teammates as the Houston Rockets won their fourth consecutive game.

Chuck Person scored 13 of his 28 points in the third period, helping Minnesota pull to 74-68. Then Brooks, acquired from the Timberwolves during the offseason, sparked an 18-7 run to start the fourth.

First, Brooks fed Olajuwon for a jam. Then, Brooks stole the ball from Micheal Williams and passed to Olajuwon for a fast-break dunk. After Person made a short jumper, Brooks hit a 20-footer, making it 80-70.

Thurl Bailey's 3-point play brought the Timberwolves within 7 points. But Houston's bench, which outscored Minnesota's reserves 32-11, took over. Sleepy Floyd had 8 points and Carl Herrera 4 as the Rockets opened their biggest lead, 92-75, with 5½ minutes to play.

Minnesota closed to 93-83 before Olajuwon scored three baskets to seal Houston's victory.

Christian Laettner added 21 points for the Timberwolves, who never led in losing for the fifth time in six games.

76ers 103, Hawks 96

ATLANTA — Rookie Clarence Weatherspoon had a career-high 16 rebounds and Hersey Hawkins scored 31 points, leading the Philadelphia 76ers over the Atlanta Hawks.

The Sixers, outrebounded in nine of their last 10 games, had a 52-47 advantage over the Hawks thanks to Weatherspoon and 12 rebounds by Andrew Lang.

Philadelphia coach Doug Moe filled the lane with defenders, daring the Hawks to shoot from outside, and the tactic halted Atlanta's three-game winning streak and six-game streak at home.

Dominique Wilkins led Atlanta with 29 points, while Mookie Blaylock had a season high 26, one short of his career high. Kevin Willis had 18 rebounds, but made only 4 of 13 shots and scored 10 points.

Johnny Dawkins added 17 points and nine assists for the 76ers, now 3-4 on the road but only 2-8 at home

Atlanta failed to score 100 points for the first time in 15 games, since a 101-82 loss to Houston Nov. 11.

Six consecutive points by Wilkins closed Atlanta to 98-94 with 51 seconds left, but the 76ers then made five free throws to hold the lead.

The 76ers used a 14-2 run for a 73-59 lead with 4:25 left in the third period. Jeff Hornacek had six points in that surge.

Hornets 109, Nuggets 100

CHARLOTTE, N.C. — Larry Johnson, Kendall Gill and Alonzo Mourning scored 20 points apiece and the Charlotte Hornets held off the Denver Nuggets for a 109-100 victory.

After the Hornets hit 78 percent of their shots in the second quarter to open a 19-point advantage, the Nuggets held Charlotte to 32 percent in the third period and closed to 82-73 on a hook by Dikembe Mutombo with 1:13 left.

LaPhonso Ellis' tap-in midway through the fourth quarter pulled Denver to 86-83 before the Hornets responded with an 8-0 run, the last two points on Johnson's dunk for a 94-83 lead with 4:21 left. That sent the Nuggets to their fourth straight loss and ninth road defeat in 10 games.

Reggie Williams led Denver with 21 points, Ellis had 20 points and 10 rebounds and Todd Lichti 18 points. Mutombo, playing against former Georgetown teammate Mourning, had 13 points and 16 rebounds.

Denver was beating the Hornets on the boards and held a 27-19 lead late in the first quarter. But Mutombo left with his third foul at the start of the second period, enabling Charlotte to go inside on the Nuggets. The Hornets hit 5 of 6 shots in the quarter and took the lead for good on Curry's jumper and Kenny Gattison's dunk for a 35-32 lead.

Bulls 95, Nets 89

CHICAGO — Michael Jordan scored 38 points and the Chicago Bulls snapped the New Jersey's four-game road winning streak with a decision over the Nets.

The loss was only the second in nine games for the Nets, now 6-4 on the road. New Jersey has not won at Chicago Stadium since January 1986.

Trailing 76-74 in the fourth quarter, the Bulls used a 10-0 run for an 84-76 lead with 5:05 left.

Scottie Pippen finished with 15 points for the Bulls, while Rodney McCray scored a season-high 11.

The Nets trailed 61-58 before Morris hit three baskets and Petrovic two 3-pointers in a 12-2 spurt that gave them their largest lead, 70-63 with 3:12 left in the third quarter.

Jordan then scored five of the Bulls next seven points before the end of the quarter, which ended with the Nets ahead 72-70.

The biggest lead of the first half was 38-33 by the Bulls on Jordan's 3-pointer with 6:57 left in the second quarter. The Nets' largest lead of the half was 42-40 when Morris hit a 20-footer at 3:18 of the second period.

The score was tied 50-50 at halftime although the Bulls shot 48 percent compared to the Nets' 39 percent.

Jazz 108, Bucks 82

SALT LAKE CITY — Karl Malone had 27 points and 14 rebounds as the Utah Jazz won for the sixth time in seven games, routing the Milwaukee Bucks.

Frank Brickowski had 19 points and Blue Edwards 18 for the Bucks, who have lost six straight games following a 10-3 start to the season.

John Stockton, questionable for the game due to a virus, had 14 points and nine assists for the Jazz. Larry Krystowiak, playing against the team that traded him to Utah in the offseason, scored 16 points.

Spurs 113, Mavericks 91

DALLAS — The San Antonio Spurs, led by David Robinson's 22 points, broke open a close game in the third quarter to defeat Dallas, the Mavericks' 12th consecutive loss.

The Spurs, winning for just the third time in 10 road games, broke away from the Mavs with a 27-9 run in the first 10 minutes of the second half after leading just 55-53 at halftime.

Dale Ellis hit 5 of 6 shots during the burst and finished with 19 points. San Antonio extended the advantage to 82-62 when J.R. Reid scored inside with 2:07 left in the third period.

The Mavericks, 1-15 for the season, have lost the last 12 games by at least 11 points. They closed within 10 at the start of the fourth period, but never threatened down the stretch.

Derek Harper scored 22 of his 25 points in the first half for Dallas. Rookie Sean Rooks finished with 17 points and a career-high 16 rebounds.

Winfield says he won't be Blue Jay

Associated Press

TORONTO — Dave Winfield confirmed baseball's worst-kept secret on Saturday: He is not returning to the Toronto Blue Jays.

"It would be nice if I had some good news for you or the city of Toronto or myself or whatever," Winfield said at a news conference. "Basically I'm just here to tell you I won't be a Toronto Blue Jay next year.

"All I can say is it's something that I would've wanted. But between probably not enough communication and not being in the same proximity long enough, it didn't work out."

Winfield's job disappeared when the Blue Jays signed Paul Molitor earlier in the week.

And so Winfield, a guiding force in Toronto's first Series championship a mere two months ago, finds himself in the same position as he did last year. Winfield went job-hunting after leaving the California Angels and ended up in Toronto a week before Christmas.

The 20-year major-league veteran was rejuvenated with the Blue Jays, hitting 26 home runs and driving in more than 100 runs (108) for the first time since 1988 while inspiring the usually-sedate crowds at SkyDome.

The presence of Winfield and 21-game winner Jack Morris were seen as major reasons why Toronto beat Oakland in the American League playoffs and Atlanta in the World Series.

However, Winfield isn't about to call it a career just yet.

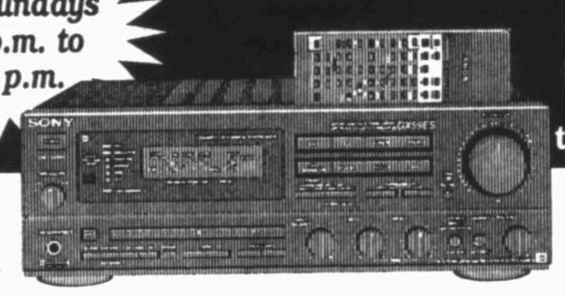

"I mean I'm not worried," said Winfield, who spent most of this season as a designated hitter, playing 26 games in the outfield. "You'll see me play somewhere.

"I really don't want to say, and only because you never want to influence talking to a handful of teams that like you and I don't want to tip the balance any way."

The Blue Jays that take to the field next season will be vastly different from the team that emerged as baseball's best this year. Free-agent pitchers Dave Stieb, David Cone and Jimmy Key are gone, as is outfielder Candy Maldonado. Then there's third baseman Kelly Gruber, traded last week to the California Angels.

Hurley enjoys his homecoming

Jersey boy leads Blue Devils over Rutgers

Associated Press

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — Bobby Hurley hit a 3-point basket and passed to Grant Hill for two alley-oop dunks in a decisive 19-6 run that lifted No. 1 Duke over Rutgers, 88-79.

Duke (4-0) was not overly impressive in winning its 17th straight game, but the combination of Hurley, Grant Hill and Thomas Hill was a little too much for Rutgers (2-3).

Hurley had 16 points and 11 assists in the game at the Meadowlands, where Duke is now 12-1. Grant Hill finished with 26 points, two below his career high, and Thomas Hill had 19.

Duke coach Mike Krzyzewski has traditionally scheduled games in the home towns of his seniors, and having the game here was almost like having it in Hurley's backyard. He grew up in Jersey City — just six miles away — and played for his father at St. Anthony's High School before enrolling at Duke. He has helped the Blue Devils reach the NCAA championship game the past three years, winning the last two.

No. 3 Kentucky 88, No. 9 Louisville 68

LOUISVILLE, Ky. — Jamal Mashburn scored six of his 27 points during a 17-1 run in the second half that propelled No. 3 Kentucky over No. 9 Louisville.

Kentucky (4-0) recorded its third straight win in the heated intrastate rivalry, and now holds a 17-7 edge in the series.

Mashburn started Kentucky's decisive run with a layup off a turnover for a 61-50 lead with 12:45 left in the game. Louisville (1-2) turned the ball over again, resulting in a dunk by Rodrick Rhodes for a 13-point Kentucky advantage.

Gimel Martinez followed with a layup on a goal-tend by Louisville's Clifford Rozier and then hit a 3-pointer from the top of the key for an 18-point margin before a stunned, record crowd of 19,663 at Freedom Hall.

Mashburn came back with a free throw and Rhodes a layup after another turnover before Louisville's Dwayne Morton made one of two free throws.

Kentucky's biggest margin was 27 points, the last time at 85-58 on Travis Ford's two free throws at 3:48.

No. 4 Indiana 97, W. Michigan 58

BLOOMINGTON, Ind. — Calbert Cheaney scored 22 points, including the 2,000th of his career, as No. 4 Indiana crushed Western Michigan to win the 19th annual Indiana Classic.

Only Steve Alford (2,438 points), Don Schlundt (2,192) and Mike Woodson (2,061) have scored more for Indiana than Cheaney.

The host Hoosiers have won the tournament every year.

Indiana's early sloppiness allowed Western Michigan to stay close. But the Hoosiers bore down defensively in the second half and pulled away.

The inside play of Harper Williams, who finished with 17 points and a dozen rebounds, helped Massachusetts twice take 9-point leads in the second half. The final time was 67-58 with 9:33 remaining.

Oklahoma, which had used a 19-1 run in the first half to overcome a sluggish start, rallied in the second half behind its defense and outside shooting.

Flemons leads Raiders, 72-62

Associated Press

LUBBOCK, Texas — Will Flemons scored 16 points and Texas Tech mounted a decisive 12-0 run late in the second half that lifted the Red Raiders to a 72-62 victory over Colorado State Saturday night.

Damon Ashley hit two free throws to break a 52-52 deadlock before Koy Smith sank two 3-pointers and Lenny Holly added a basket and two free throws to give Tech an insurmountable 64-52 lead with 2:33 remaining.

The Red Raiders improved to 5-1 while dropping Colorado State to 4-3.

The Rams, who trailed through the most of the game, pulled into a 52-52 tie on Doug Larson's 10-foot jumper with 7:59 to go before Tech streaked in front.

The Red Raiders used a 14-0 run, during which Colorado State missed 11 field goal attempts, to take a 35-24 halftime lead.

Flemons, who hit seven critical free throws in the final two minutes, was joined in double figures for Tech by Smith with 13 points and Holly with 10.

Keith Bonds scored 12 points to lead the Rams, followed by Tyson Maroney with 11 and Larson with 10.

Houston 92, Ill.-Chicago 66

HOUSTON — Point guard Anthony Goldwire scored 21 points and helped fuel a 17-3 Houston run to start the second half as the Cougars beat the University of Illinois-Chicago at Hofheinz Pavilion.

The Cougars (2-0) took a 42-30 halftime lead behind an early 14-0 run in a sloppily played first half, but the spurt over the first five minutes of the second half proved too much for the Flames (2-2).

Oklahoma State 93, Baylor 75

STILLWATER, Okla. — Bryant Reeves and Von Bennett powered Oklahoma State inside and clutch free-throw shooting down the stretch helped the Cowboys defeat Baylor.

Reeves, who was 10-10 from the field in Oklahoma State's 85-67 victory over Tulsa earlier in the week, sank his first eight shots against Baylor and extended his consecutive field-goal streak to 19 before a miss.

Reeves finished 10-14 from the field for 20 points. Bennett also scored 20 points and Brooks Thompson added 18 for the Cowboys (3-10).

Vanderbilt 95, SMU 86

Arkansas St. 76, Texas Christian 55

JONESBORO, Ark. — Fred Shepherd scored 21 points and grabbed 11 rebounds to power Arkansas State University over Texas Christian University in the championship game of the Runnin' Joe Classic.

The Indians led 37-29 at the half and built the margin to 25 in the second half.

It was the 20th straight Runnin' Joe Classic victory for ASU (3-1).

Jay Cook, who scored 13 points, was named the tournament's Most Valuable Player. Cook had 18 points in an 80-54 victory over Houston Baptist on Friday night.

Slowly but surely, Wilkins is gaining on Auerbach's victory total

By Bill Barnard
AP Basketball Writer

For 26 years, Red Auerbach's career NBA record of 938 coaching victories has stood above the rest, alone and seemingly unassailable.

Five other coaches have passed the 800 mark in pursuit of Auerbach's total. But only one of those, Lenny Wilkens of Cleveland, appears likely to catch the man who led the Boston Celtics to nine championships in 10 years from 1957-66 before retiring from coaching at age 49.

Jack Ramsay, currently No. 2 on the victory list with 864, last coached in 1989, and three others with 800 wins coached in 1991-92, but aren't on the sidelines this season. Dick Motta left Sacramento with 856 victories, Bill Fitch was fired by New Jersey with 845 and Cotton Fitzsimmons stepped aside in Phoenix with 805.

Still coaching, and with no end in sight, is Wilkens, who started the season with 815 wins and can pass Ramsay if the Cavaliers can win 50 games again.

"I never realized how near I was to those records until some people mentioned it to me this summer," Wilkens said. "It's not something I've thought about much. Since I am getting close, it would be nice to see if I can get it."

Wilkens is in his 20th season as an NBA coach; Auerbach retired from coaching after 20 years. Oddly, Auerbach was NBA coach of the year only once and Wilkens has never won it.

"Lenny's a great coach," the Nets' Chuck Daly said. "That's why I picked him for my Olympic staff. His teams are always well prepared. He's always under control, always in the game. His players trust him."

Chris Jackson of Denver and Blue Edwards of Milwaukee look like the early leaders for this season's Most Improved Player award.

Jackson, the third pick overall in the 1990 draft, was written off by many as a shooting guard in a point guard's body. After averaging 29 points per game in two years at LSU, he averaged 12 points on 41.7 percent shooting in his first two seasons with the Nuggets.

Through 15 games, he was Denver's leading scorer with an 18.6 average on 48 percent shooting.

Edwards was overshadowed by the John Stockton-Karl Malone-Jeff Malone show at Utah despite shooting 51.8 percent from the field in three years with the Jazz. Through 17 games, he was leading the Bucks in scoring with a 17.3 average on 55.5 percent shooting.

Mark Price, who threatened the NBA single-season free-throw record with a .947 percentage in 1991-92, made 57 of his first 60 attempts from the line for Cleveland this season.

Brent, a rookie for the Washington Bullets, doesn't get as much playing time as his veteran brother, but he started the season with a 21-for-21 burst.

Christian Laettner's arrival in Minnesota brings to 22 the number of active NBA players who were members of NCAA championship teams.

The list includes Larry Johnson, Stacey Augmon and Greg Anthony from UNLV's 1990 team; Terry Mills, Rumeal Robinson, Loy Vaught and Glen Rice from Michigan's 1989 team; Patrick Ewing, Reggie Williams and David Wingate from Georgetown's 1984 team; and Michael Jordan, Sam Perkins and James Worthy from North Carolina's 1982 team.

The oldest NCAA champion still active is Rodney McCray from the 1980 championship club at Louisville. Isiah Thomas played for Indiana's winning team from 1981.

AN EMMY FOR BEST PERFORMANCE BY A REF?: Earl Strom, who retired in 1990 after 29 years as a pro basketball referee, has found a new career as a broadcaster.

Strom, who did commentary for 25 Los Angeles Clippers games last season, is back to help out with teleasts of the Dallas Mavericks.

"Not only do I know the rules, but I also know when a player or coach is taking advantage of the rules," Strom said. "When I see that, you can bet I'm going to say something about it."

Pig Bowl

Officers of the Midland Police Department and Midland County Sheriff's Department butted heads Saturday in the "1992 Pig Bowl" at Memorial Stadium. The police came out on top 23-13 in the game that raised about $1,200 for Midland Special Olympics. Asked if the game would become an annual event, MPD Sgt. Andy Glasscock said, "Let's us get over this year's game and I'll let you know."

Teachers need appreciation of Hispanic culture

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff writer

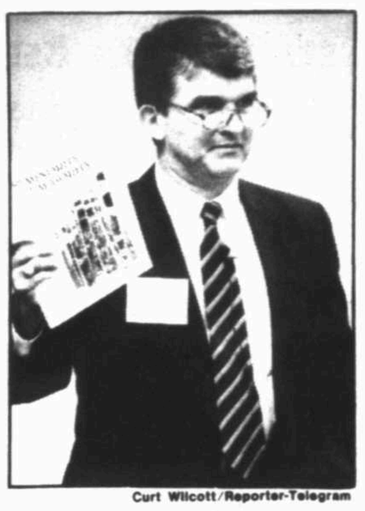

Appreciating Hispanic culture must go beyond "the superficial understanding of celebrating Cinco de Mayo and Enchilada Day in the cafeteria," Joel Vela, Ph.D., told more than 200 educators from across Texas Friday in Midland.

Vela, a teacher at North Lake College in Irving, was the keynote speaker at Region 18 Education Service Center's two-day multicultural education conference.

He described a scene of 20 elementary school pupils lined up in a hallway crying. One child said his teacher had told them to wash their dirty faces, since all the youngsters had ashes on their foreheads from attending mass.

"The teacher did not understand their values," Vela said, noting educators should be aware of the importance of extended families, religion and the patriarchal society of Hispanics.

"If a high school student from the (Texas) Valley is put into a school in Dallas or Houston, what is he giving up? If the emphasis is not there to replace the extended family concept, if the emphasis is not there to replace that which they gave up, they are faced with isolation and a lack of a support mechanism," Vela said. "They may find that support mechanism in gangs."

Likewise, Vela said, if West Texans were placed in East Los Angeles, they would survive. "But where is your comfort level in East L.A.? I guarantee you your

IRS launches effort for delinquent filers

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff writer

Images of the mighty hands of the Internal Revenue Service may incite fear in people who have become delinquent in filing tax returns.

That need not be, according to IRS officials.

The federal agency is extending open arms to such people and promises to work with and not against those re-entering the system.

"We are trying to alleviate the concern that something (bad) is going to happen to them," said Richard Soto, examination group manager for the IRS in Midland.

"I think the public perception is that we are an aggressive organization and we are not willing to work with them," Soto said.

In October, the IRS began a concentrated nationwide effort to attract people who have dropped out of the system to file returns. During the 1990 filing season, more than 6 million individuals and businesses failed to file.

"We're calling this a non-filers strategy. It's a service-wide effort for people who haven't filed tax returns in past years to come back in the system," Soto said.

But, cautions Soto, "This is not an amnesty program so if they own taxes they will have to pay and the penalities."

And the program isn't entirely to benefit the IRS, Soto said.

"We're not just encouraging people who owe us money," he said. The IRS wants wage earners that haven't filed to do so because money may be owed them from the government.

If individuals behind in filing returns don't accept the IRS's invitation, the consequences may not be as kind.

Soto said most people don't file stems from personal reasons such as death, divorce, illness or financial catastrophe.

"Initially they don't file for one of these reason then fear the consequences," he said.

Armando Alferez, office collection representative and taxpayer service representative for the IRS in Midland, expanded on that fear.

The biggest fears are being sent to jail or having their home seized, Alferez said.

That won't be the case "as long as they cooperate by filing the returns and we can go ahead and work with them," he said.

The IRS will work out payment plans such as payroll deductions, he said.

Local residents who want to reenter the system don't need to do anything except file.

For those who need information, tax forms (for as far back as 1980) or other assistance, the Midland branch of the IRS will be available specifically for that purpose every Thursday 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. at the Federal Building, room 115.

Tax information can also be sought by calling 1-800-829-1040; and tax forms are available by calling 1-800-829-3676.

Christmas calls

The Rev. Bernice Wilson takes advantage of Saturday's Merrill Lynch & Co.'s Christmas Calls program to share a smile with a distant relative. This is the ninth year the local office of the investment firm has opened its doors to seniors selected by Community & Senior Services, who are able to call free across the country with the help of 20 company volunteers. The nationally sponsored Merrill Lynch program began in 1980 as a single event in the New York office.

Coalition seeks help to honor AIDS victims

By Darren J. Waggoner
Staff writer

The Permian Basin AIDS Coalition, hoping to provide a merrier Christmas for people living with AIDS in the Permian Basin, is soliciting donations to place red ribbons on a Christmas tree honoring people who have died of AIDS and people suffering from the disease.

"There will be no names on the ribbons. It's a very personal thing," PBAC counselor Billy Charles Cawley said. "The tree is to help people open their hearts and feel compassion, when people pass by it they will see the numbers. They will be affected."

The red ribbons have become synonymous with AIDS awareness across the country, with many celebrities often seen wearing them at entertainment award shows and other events.

Money raised from the project will be used by PBAC to buy Christmas presents and help meet other needs for people with AIDS.

The tree, which sits in the Claydesta Atrium, currently is adorned with only four ribbons.

"As Christmas gets closer I'm praying that more people will participate," Cawley said. "And the amount of people just in Midland and Odessa alone who have died of AIDS could more than fill that tree."

For a minimum donation of $10, people will have the option of placing a ribbon on the tree themselves or PBAC will do it for them.

Cawley believes the actual act of placing the ribbon on the tree helps break down the feeling of denial that many families and friends feel when a loved one dies of AIDS.

—Billy Charles Cawley
PBAC Counselor

"It helps us keep the memory of the person alive," he said.

This is the first year for "Ribbons for AIDS," but Cawley hopes the tree project will branch out and become an annual event.

"I want this to be something the whole community can look forward to," he said. "And hopefully one day we won't have to put up ribbons for AIDS and we can all shut this place down, hand out pink slips and go home."

The tree, which was erected on World AIDS Day, Dec. 1, will be taken down on Christmas.

PBAC currently provides services, including medical and emergency assistance and support, for 118 clients in 17 Permian Basin counties.

Donations, which are tax-deductible, can be sent to: Billy-Charles Cawley, Permian Basin AIDS Coalition, 307 Southeast Loop 338, Odessa, Texas 79762.

Scenes from Somalia rekindle little-boy memories

Like most people who have the means to consume three hearty meals a day, I find it exceedingly difficult to view the photographs depicting the starvation that is ravaging much of Somalia.

You know what I'm talking about.

Ott

You're relaxing at home, perhaps with a ham-and-cheese sandwich in your lap, nonchalantly thumbing through a magazine when, all of sudden, without warning, you come across a package of pictures showing the pitiful little children who are nothing but skin and bones. Their ribs seem to dominate the photographs. Their heads, resting upon their tiny shoulders, appear abnormally large, and their eyes cry out for mercy.

It is as though they are pleading, "Please, won't you help me?"

But all you can do is stare in disbelief.

I have a particular problem with the photographs. A part of me is drawn to them, somehow figuring that if I look at them long enough I will eventually understand why this tragedy is allowed to occur. The other side of me, however, wants to push them away, removing their harsh reality — at least psychologically — from my safe little world where hunger does not exist.

It all seems so unreal. Here I am trying to lose a few "unsightly" pounds because I don't like the way I "look" at my current "weight," while halfway across the world, in some remote African country, millions of people are literally starving to death because they can't get their hands on a few measly crumbs.

It is sheer lunacy.

I'm reminded of that standard lecture we all heard from our parents while growing up. "Clean your plate, young man, because there are starving children in (fill in the blank)." My parents used to say "China," but they just as easily could have said "Somalia."

Either way, it wouldn't have made much difference. As a 7-year-old, I was not capable of comprehending the fact that people were actually going to bed hungry at night. If they wanted something to eat, why didn't they just go to the refrigerator and get it?

I wasn't being mean-spirited; I just didn't know any better.

I assumed everyone had enough to eat.

Still, as I think back to that time in my life, I can remember being exposed to poor people, at least those children in my school who didn't have the basic necessities the rest of us possessed.

One family, in particular, comes to mind. There were three children, two of whom were in my third grade class. One of them, a boy, sat in front of me. It seems like his name was Daniel or Danny or something like that.

But the point is, he was quite poor. His clothes were very old and ragged. They were often dirty, and sometimes had holes in them. He would wear the same plaid shirt over and over. His jeans had iron-on patches on the knees.

At the start of each day, the teacher would ask how many students had their lunch money. Everyone except Danny and his sister would raise their hand. And while the rest of us consumed a hot meal from the cafeteria each noon, they would sit in the corner by themselves and eat whatever food they had stored away in their brown paper sacks. Even then, I knew it couldn't be much. I offered Danny some of my leftovers one day, but he became embarrassed and turned away.

Back in the classroom, from my seat directly behind him, I noticed little "things" would sometimes crawl around in Danny's hair. The rest of us called them "cooties," as in "Danny's got the cooties."

The teacher noticed, too. She took Danny to the school nurse one afternoon. He did not return until the following morning, and when he did, his head had been shaven.

He looked like something from outer space and, being typical third grade boys, we teased him unmercifully, calling him names and chanting tacky slogans. The teacher heard the commotion and took us aside, delivering a stern lecture on the need to have compassion for those less fortunate.

Her words meant little to me at the time. In the eyes of a 9-year-old, a kid is a kid. How much money his family has is of no concern. Poverty is a foreign concept.

But now, as photographs of the starving children in Somalia continue to roll in, I can't help but wonder how many other Dannys there are in America.

LOCAL/AREA REPORTS

■ Freelance investigator goes to trial for perjury

Staff report

A freelance investigator will go to trial Monday on two counts of perjury linked to the January 1990 seizure of $449,950 during a reverse sting operation, court officials said.

Ronald Ray Tucker, a former law enforcement officer, allegedly lied about seizing the money in a sting operation carried out by the Midland County Sheriff's Office on Jan. 9, 1990, in a Midland motel room.

Tucker had sworn that the money was seized in Monahans but later swore that it was seized in Midland.

As a result of those statements, Tucker was indicted for perjury on May 15 of this year.

The trial will begin with jury selection this morning followed by testimony in Judge Pat Baskin's 142nd District Court.

Cedrick Deon Washington of 600 S. Lincoln and friends were at the Odessa College campus, running north and attempting to cross University to go the College Inn Apartments just after midnight Saturday morning, according to witness accounts in the police report.

The car, a blue 1991 Buick Skylark sedan driven by Juan Jose Hernandez Jr. 22, of Odessa, was eastbound on University when it struck Washington.

The teen-ager was transported to Medical Center Hospital, where he was pronounced dead at 12:38 a.m.

Eumar Guillen, 18, of Van Horn died at the scene of the accident, according to Texas Department of Public Safety reports. The 1988 Chevrolet pickup he was driving was traveling at an estimated 68 mph when it reached a sharp left turn in the road.

The truck drove on to the shoulder, Guillen over-corrected and sent the pickup skidding across the highway, into the south ditch and rolling numerous times as it traveled 115 feet up a hillside. Both Guillen and his passenger, 19-year-old Roberto Quintana, also of Van Horn, were ejected from the vehicle.

Quintana was transported to Big Bend Memorial Hospital ir Alpine, where he was in stable condition with lacerations an abrasions late Saturday.

CONFERENCE: Educator speaks on Hispanic culture

comfort level will be at a critical place."

"Kids need this infrastructure," he said.

Vela said belittling students for cultural mores results in the high drop-out rate among Hispanics.

The keynote speaker — who has done extensive research in comparing Hispanic and Anglo perceptions, as well as writing several publications on the subject — noted that the state of Texas spends $24,000 each year per prisoner and only $3,500 or less annually to educate each student.

"You can pay now or you can pay later and we are paying dearly," he said. "If we keep dropping out students, we will continue to import our work force."

Vela said Mexican-Americans "are replicating themselves at a rate where they will more than double their population in 20 years. They are 22-23 percent of the population today. That's changing."

He said schools have become "great socialization agents" by serving students beyond the classroom to provide meals and day care. "And who becomes the discipline agent? The schools."

Describing another instance of culture clash, Vela said a teacher called a mother and said, "Mrs. Gonzalez, Juan is having trouble. He can't read."

"I know," the mother said, "that is why I sent him to school."

Worse than misunderstandings is rejection, according to Vela. "Rejection leads to catastrophe, a loss of language and name changes from Martinez to Martin ... or Flores becomes Flowers."

"The light turns on when they turn 25 or 30 and they end up taking Spanish in college to get it (some essence of their culture) back," he said.

The speaker suggested educators become tri-literate, fluent in English, Spanish and computer language.

"Just do not presume to place your perception on what is good on a youngster and deny them the right of choice. Understand what you are doing when you look at perceptions," he said.

Other speakers at the conference addressing the issue of teaching children of diverse cultures included a second keynote speaker, a professor from California State University Maria Montano-Harmon; Robert Medrano, curriculum director and director of federal programs at Presidio ISD; David Hinojosa, an associate professor in educational administration at Texas A&M University; Luis B. Gonzales, superintendent for Fort Stockton ISD; Ruth Page Ismael Dominguez; Linda Quiroz, a teacher from Blackshear Magnet Elementary School in Ector County ISD; Victor Rodriquez, San Antonio ISD superintendent; and Ben Thomas, Irving ISD school board trustee.

STRATEGY: IRS hopes to reach non-filers

(From 1C)

Soto said the program has been ongoing, it's just more publicized than before.

The IRS, including the Midland office, has already seen an increase in filers.

Delinquent filers include people of all backgrounds, Soto said.

"We've had high earning individuals stop filing returns as minimum wage earners," he said.

State in brief

■ Police arrest 3 of 4 suspects in shooting

DALLAS — Police on Saturday questioned three of four suspects sought in the shooting death of a New York stage actor and the wounding of another during a robbery.

Dallas Sgt. Jerry King said two of the three suspects, boys aged 14 and 16, were being held at the Dallas Juvenile Detention Center.

They were arrested on Friday along with a 17-year-old man in connection with the incident late Thursday. The man was detained at Lew Sterret Criminal Justice Center.

The suspects' names were immediately released.

Robert McAdam Smith, 21, and Perry MacDonald Tutchings, 60, were shot after being robbed in their apartment parking lot.

■ Some residents think mayor went to far

AUSTIN — Attempts by Kerrville's mayor to brighten the city's Christmas celebration may have been well-intentioned, but some Kerrville residents think he may have gone too far.

To replace Christmas decorations destroyed in a warehouse fire Nov. 7, Mayor Joe Herring asked Charles Butt, chairman and president of H.E.B. Grocery Co., and radio commentator Paul Harvey for donations and publicity.

"My intent in writing the letters was to have Christmas decorations this year," Herring said. "I achieved that goal. I just caught flak for it."

Kerrville, home to the first H.E.B. market, received a $15,000 donation from the company and Harvey told of the city's plight on his national radio program Dec. 8.

■ Attorney asks judge to reject indictment

RICHMOND — The attorney for a Vietnamese store clerk charged with murdering an alleged shoplifter is asking a judge to throw out the indictment because no Asians are on the grand jury.

Hung Nguyen, 18, is accused in the July 24 shooting of Eric DeLeon Hicks, 22, of Houston. Nguyen's attorney, Don Bankston, filed the motion to quash the indictment Friday.

The shooting of Hicks, who was black, caused racial tension in far east Fort Bend County and led to picketing and a boycott of the Chevron store where the shooting occurred. Nguyen's sister, who owned the business, eventually sold the store.

Protesters said Nguyen was not justified in shooting Hicks, but Bankston says it was a clear case of self-defense. Nguyen contended that Hicks was trying to shoplift beer and other items and assaulted him before being shot in the back.

ENERGY ANSWERS

EDITOR'S NOTE: Following is information provided by the Texas Energy Extension Service:

Q: Is it more energy-efficient to use my microwave or my conventional oven to cook my Christmas turkey?

A: Before we decide how to bake your turkey, let's talk a little about ovens. The most common ovens are conventional gas and electric ovens that come with ranges or are self-contained units installed separately from the cooktops. The self-cleaning models of conventional gas or electric ovens are more energy-efficient than the standard models because they have more insulation. But if you use the self-containing feature more than about once a month, you'll end up using more energy with the feature than you save from the extra insulation.

There are also two special kinds of ovens available — convection and microwave. Convection ovens are more energy-efficient than standard ovens because the heated air is continuously circulated around the food being cooked. You get more even heat distribution, and the temperatures and cooking times can be decreased. On average, you'll save about a third on energy use in comparison to using a conventional oven.

Next are microwave ovens. Microwaves are high-frequency radio waves to cook food. These radio waves penetrate the food surface and heat water molecules inside. Energy consumption and cooking times for certain foods are generally reduced, especially when cooking small portions and rewarming leftovers. Overall, energy use is reduced by about two-thirds when compared to a conventional oven.

So which oven should you use for your turkey? Probably the conventional, full-sized oven, because turkeys take a relatively long time to cook — even in the microwave. In addition, while the turkey is baking in your conventional oven, you can still use the oven to bake other dishes like greenbean casserole, candied sweet potatoes, or rolls.

But when it comes to warming those tasty Christmas leftovers, the microwave is probably you best choice.

More information about energy efficiency in cooking is available from the Texas Energy Hotline. Call 338-3837 or (915) 362-2066 and ask for free "Appliances" factsheets.

LETTER FROM COLLEGE

Midland College starts finals week to end semester

By H.A. Tuck

This is the week which both students and faculty greet with mixed feelings. It's "Finals Week", that time of anxieties, late nights, and feelings of being overwhelmed . . . and that's just the faculty!

Tuck

But by Thursday night all that has ended. The last grade reports are due in by noon Friday and the semester comes to a close that day.

The 15-member winter class of Associate Degree Nursing students are scheduled to graduate at 7 p.m. Tuesday. The commencement ceremony takes place in the Allison Fine Arts Building auditorium.

This is the program which takes two years to complete and qualifies graduates to sit for the Registered Nurse Examination and, if they are from Midland College, to pass it.

The ADN program at Midland College has had a 100 percent pass rate for its graduates since its inception. The winter class was started three years ago to double the size of the ADN program, so now MC turns out graduates of that program in December and in June of each year.

For a second year, MC employees are ending their fall semester with a helping of "stone soup" and generosity. Their traditional end-of-semester dinner now includes a wonderful beef stew, cornbread, and cake, admission for which is canned goods contributed to the Permian Basin Food Bank.

Until 1991, the Hospitality Committee and the employees staged a huge banquet with wonderful foods. But for the single employees it was a bit of a problem, as well as a health hazard to sample all the wonderfully-rich specialties.

The Stone Soup is less trouble, far healthier, and provides assistance to those in need.

The fall basketball season ended Thursday. After a nice holiday break, the players return in early January. The spring portion begins on Jan. 11 when the Chaps journey to Liberal, Kan., for a single game against Seward County Community College. Then it's back to the almost-normal conference schedule.

MC hosts Clarendon College at Chap Center on Jan. 14, but Clarendon now is just another non-conference game after having dropped from the Western Junior College Athletic Conference late in the summer. Clarendon is honoring its conference commitments, but its games don't count in the WJCAC standings.

After having had a killer schedule of 14 games in November, nine at home, the Chaps played just three games in December. They'll have six in January, just two at home; and finish up in February with six games, four of them at home.

Oh yes, and MC players were selected as the conference's first weekly Offensive and Defensive Players of the Week. Demeitreus Drew got the offensive honors and Terrance Rone took the defensive honors.

Children make the holidays exciting and the MC's Child Development Center provides us with a constant supply of wide-eyed youngsters with whom to share the wonder of Christmas.

Their Christmas Program is slated for 4 p.m. on Thursday in the Allison Fine Arts Building auditorium. We know there will be plenty of parents and grandparents on hand, many of them armed with cameras and videos.

Raymond Yell, one of the college's finest tennis enthusiasts and players, treated himself to a dream weekend with near-courtside tickets for all three days of the Davis Cup Finals between the United States and Switzerland in Fort Worth Dec. 4-6.

Congratulations to Dennis Sever, computer instructor and guru-extraordinaire, who received his Master of Business Administration degree yesterday from UTPB.

And adjunct theatre instructor Rene Brister Chambers has an article in the fall issue of The Drama Theatre Teacher on "Youth Theatre: A Celebration of Life".

If you didn't take advantage of the early registration period for the spring semester, you may pick up a time permit Monday or Tuesday in the Student Services Office, Student Center.

I hope many of you were able to attend yesterday's Open House at the Aviation Maintenance Technology facility at Air Terminal. Program director Bud Stapleton, along with some of the instructors and students, explained the program and the future for those who complete either of the certificate curricula. There are openings for classes starting in January.

If you need more information, call Stapleton this week at (915) 561-3815 for an appointment and tour of the facilities.

Authorities raid dog fighting pit

ARCOLA, Texas (AP) — The Fort Bend County Sheriff's Department has raided a sophisticated dog fighting operation behind a mobile home in the Arcola community, where they discovered a bloody pit and more than 40 chained pit bulls.

Charges of maintaining a premise for dog-fighting — a third-degree felony — are pending against a couple who were out of town when detectives executed a search warrant Friday, investigators said.

Celebrities saddle up for NCHA event

By Patricia Rodriguez
N.Y. Times News Service

The celebrity division has become a big draw for the NCHA event.

FORT WORTH, Texas — Perched atop a cutting horse, practicing for the celebrity division of the National Cutting Horse Association World Championship Futurity, actor Michael Keaton was trying hard not to stick out.

He wore a tan cowboy hat, slightly starched jeans, a brown leather belt, boots and a tan corduroy shirt. And dark sunglasses. Indoors.

All to no avail.

"C'mon, Batman," yelled a trio of children, leaning over the rail as Keaton worked to separate an animal from the herd of cattle. "Look, it's Batman."

Yes, Batman is a cutter.

And so are Tanya Tucker and Lynn Anderson and about eight other stars in sports, music and TV, several of whom practiced Thursday afternoon in the John Justin Arena of the Will Rogers Memorial Coliseum in Fort Worth. The celebrities were preparing for Friday night's Roper Celebrity NCHA Cutting at the Will Rogers Coliseum.

The celebrity division has become a big draw for the NCHA event. The event was expected to nearly sell out, and more than 100 people filtered into the arena Thursday to catch a glimpse of the stars working out.

"She's supposed to be a pretty good cutter," said Jerry Price, of Hawkinsville, Ga., indicating Tucker, "so I came to see if she is."

Another contingent was there to see Keaton, star of "Batman" and "Batman Returns" as well as such films as "Beetlejuice," "Clean and Sober," and "Mr. Mom."

"She's been waiting for this for a month," said Ed Brandt of Fort Worth, holding his daughter Stephanie, 4.

Keaton was all business during his practice session, successfully cutting three head of cattle from the herd. Afterward he obliged a few fans by posing for a couple of snapshots and autographing a few pictures.

Keaton, who has owned a ranch in Montana for several years, says he rarely actually works cattle but does love to ride. A sports enthusiast, he enjoys the intense concentration required to be a successful cutter.

"I'm a very average rider, I think, but sitting on a cutting horse, I kind of got a feel for that early on," said Keaton, 40, who has competed previously in the NCHA event. "It's really extremely challenging."

Keaton was to compete against 10 others, including actors Linda Blair and Barry Corbin, country star Billy Dean, Dallas Cowboy Jay Novacek and Texas Rangers pitcher Kenny Rogers. Last year's celebrity champion, model Christie Brinkley, canceled her appearance because of a scheduling conflict.

The celebrity competition has grown in size and popularity since beginning in 1987, NCHA officials said.

"I think a lot of it has to do with the affinity for what the West is today," said Lyle Eggleston, NCHA media relations director. The sport's relative safety is another factor, he said.

"Cutting is sort of an elite western sport, and although the possibility is there that someone could be injured, I've never seen it happen," he said.

Tucker, who won the Fort Worth event two years ago, is one of the veterans among the celebrity cutters. Now 33, she started cutting at age 14 and has won several celebrity titles.

On Friday, she planned to ride a horse she rode earlier this year in a charity cutting competition in Nashville.

Geologist fascinates junior rockhounds

By Vivienne Heines
Associated Press Writer

KINGSVILLE — The most popular part of geologist Thomas Harr's presentation to schoolchildren is when he gives each child a rock.

Or maybe it's when he gathers them around a table, turns the lights off and shows them how some rocks glow in the dark, or perhaps it's when he passes around rocks and minerals, including fool's gold, and tells them to become rock "detectives" looking for clues.

Actually, it's hard to say which is the most fun for children, who seem eager to soak up every one of Harr's words about a subject as simple as rocks.

"After I do it, a lot of times the kids will run up to me and hug me and say, 'I want to be what you are,'" said Harr, a 36-year-old student at Texas A&I University in Kingsville and director of the Junior Rockhound program. "If we come in the morning, they go out at lunch and come back with 20 rocks for us to identify."

The Junior Rockhound program, which is under the South Texas Minerals Section at Texas A&I, began in 1991 as a hands-on method for introducing area youngsters to the earth sciences. In its first year, Harr and fellow students from A&I visited 160 classrooms in 20 schools from Freer and Falfurrias to Palacios and Falls City.

So far this year, they've visited 11 South Texas schools and spoken to 1,500 students in grades two through five. The program, which has a $24,000 budget, is financed by local and national grants.

"It's real important because earth science is somewhat neglected in South Texas," Harr said. "Science is not hard. Science is fun. Any of them can be a scientist or a geologist. We would encourage them to become a scientist because it's so much fun."

Harr recently visited Harrel Elementary in Kingsville, a campus for kindergarteners through second-graders. To a class of 20 boys and girls, he gave a down-to-earth presentation that included everyday uses for rocks and minerals: talc (talcum powder), graphite (pencil lead) and chalk. "Did you know salt is a rock that you eat?" he asked the students. "Oooohhhhhh!" they exclaimed in unison.

Harr deftly described rocks, explained their uses, drew responses from students and organized the children into a procession around a table. He held a portable ultraviolet light over a group of phosphorescent and fluorescent rocks, then devised an arrangement so all the youngsters could see and touch the rocks in turn.

Teacher Susie Cruz said the students enjoyed the program and learned from it.

"It's great," she said. "They really enjoy science at this level. As they get older, I guess they get intimidated by the word science. But at this age, they're ready for anything." Seven-year-old Michael Castro said his favorites were the glowing rocks. Maybe, he said, he will become a geologist.

"Because it has pretty rocks. They're beautiful," he said.

Rick Burrell, 21, president of the South Texas Minerals Section, said Harr's knack for working with youngsters is demonstrated in the growing number of children who pursue a Junior Rockhound membership by collecting and classifying 20 rocks. "They love it. They just enjoy it so much," Burrell said.

The program, Burrell said, also is successful because it taps into the youngsters' natural enthusiasm for science.

"When I was a kid, there was something about pulling a rock out of the ground. It was so neat-looking — it wasn't something that was man-made. It was something natural," he said. "I've got so many bags full of them at home, it's just ridiculous. But I love it."

Harr said the program is especially appealing to youngsters because rocks are easy and inexpensive to collect.

"In an area like this, where a lot of the kids are underprivileged, rocks are very accessible. It's not like coins or stamps, where you have to go buy something," he said. Club members also train elementary education majors to deliver the presentations, an effort that benefits the budding teachers as well as the geologists, Harr said.

"One of the reasons it works so well is it benefits the students and also the student-teachers, who are given an opportunity to do an exciting project with no pressure," he said. Mari Cantu and Cynthia Morales, both education majors at A&I, said the program — which requires 10 hours of training by the A&I geologists — taught them as much as it taught the second-graders. "It was fascinating. I didn't know anything about rocks," Morales said. "I just hope this program continues because it benefits everybody."

Harr, who was born in Uvalde and graduated from Palacios High School, said he is trying to establish permanent funding for the position. He spends 20 volunteer hours a week on the program.

Harrel Principal Carla Rosa said the program encourages the children to pursue further education — in the field of science and in general.

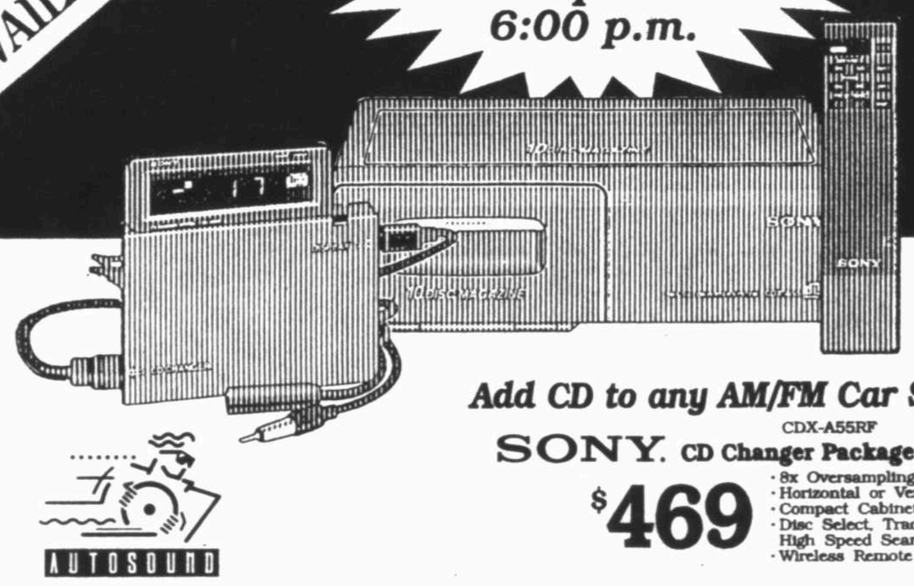

"They use these college-age students, and that serves as a role model. The kids see them and they get excited," Rosa said. "It's a unique method of teaching science — instead of open your books, da-de-da. The value is that it expands their prior knowledge to further explore what the world has to offer."

Amateur sleuth helps track down thieves

AUSTIN (AP) — Determination and a little bit of luck helped turn mild-mannered insurance office employee Rebecca Jackson into a successful amateur sleuth.

The 23-year-old Austin woman cracked the case of her stolen purse and helped capture the crooks in just four days.

Ms. Jackson's purse, containing her checkbook, wallet, credit cards and other valuables, was stolen from her unlocked car on Dec. 5.

Two days later, Kathleen Ables, a clerk in an Austin mall, noticed that a woman trying to pay for $350 worth of merchandise with a check didn't resemble the photo on the driver's license presented for identification.

The clerk reached Ms. Jackson through the home number on the check. Ms. Jackson rushed to the store where Ms. Ables gave her a description of the woman and her companions.

On Dec. 8, she spotted a man and woman who matched Ms. Ables' description waiting for a bus.

Ms. Jackson followed the bus the couple boarded for almost 40 blocks, and then tailed the pair after they got off the bus.

"I whipped around the corner. I was running over curves and stuff, then I waited with my lights off in a parking lot that they cut through," she said.

The couple went into a nearby home, and were joined by another woman who also matched a description given the store clerk.

"That's when I called 911," said Ms. Jackson.

When officers went to the door the next day, they were greeted by a woman wearing the stolen purse over her shoulder. One of the officers turned to Ms. Jackson and said: "Good work."

One of the women faces forgery charges and officers discovered the man is a prison parolee with two outstanding theft warrants. No charges were filed Saturday in the case as the investigation continues.

Man dies when stepfather sits on him for two hours

DALLAS (AP) — A 23-year-old man died when his mother's ex-husband threw him on the floor three times and then sat on him for more than two hours, authorities said.

The death of Jerome Germany was still under investigation Saturday and no murder charges had been filed in the case, which has been ruled a homicide by the Dallas County Medical Examiner's Office.

Germany's mother Virgie Germany, 40, said her 27-year-old ex-husband on Thursday was disciplining her son who had taken a radio from his brother.

"When I got home last night (Thursday), he was sitting on him," said Ms. Germany. "I told him to get up off of him because Jerome's hands had turned white."

Ms. Germany said her ex-husband weighed 165 pounds.

Dallas police have questioned the ex-husband about Germany's death, but have not decided whether to refer the case to a grand jury.

Mystery of dog tag puzzles woman

HOUSTON (AP) — A Houston woman was too young for a beau during the Vietnam War and says she didn't write any letters to anyone serving there who could have considered her a pen pal.

But someone there remembered her.

Jane Dombrowski Fulton, 35, would like to find out who fought in the war while wearing a civilian dog tag with her maiden name and former address around their neck.

Mrs. Fulton said Thursday she can't figure out how her name and address wound up on the dog tag found in a Vietnam market by a veteran who was visiting the country.

The dog tag also has "Viet-Nam 70-71" written on it.

It wasn't a relative because an uncle and cousin who served in Vietnam say they didn't have such a dog tag.

"It couldn't have been a boyfriend, in 1970 I was in seventh grade," said Mrs. Fulton, a secretary in Bellville. "Boy, I have no idea, this really is weird."

Frank Vaughan, of Bakersfield, Calif., found the dog tag while visiting Hue for a personal look back on the horror he experienced in Vietnam 22 years ago.

Vaughan told the Houston Chronicle that he spotted more than a dozen dog tags in a display case at an open market in Hue and bought them for a couple of dollars out of curiosity and his concern for missing soldiers.

Finding dog tags in Vietnam is fairly common because metal scavengers dig them up in former battle zones to sell as scrap metal, he said. In a country where the average worker earns $200 annually, any scrap is worth saving, he said.

Vaughan turned the other tags over to the Defense Intelligence Agency to determine if any of the soldiers are missing in action.

"It's one of those little mysteries," said Vaughan, 44, who served in an Army military intelligence unit during the war. "I wanted to find Jane, hoping she would be associated with some of the other tags."

Vaughan said many soldiers wore the tags of a girlfriend or a wife, so he assumed that was Mrs. Fulton's case. But, after learning Mrs. Fulton's age, he also could not offer a good explanation.

Eugene Dombrowski, Mrs. Fulton's father who lives in New York, said he is convinced that a teacher must have ordered tags to be sent to Vietnam.

"There is something there, and I'll be damned if I know what it is," Dombrowski said.

Don't be the last to find out what's happening.

Carjacking law comes to Texas

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — An 18-year-old man could become one of the first Texans to be tried under the Anti-Car Theft Act of 1992, a recent law that makes carjacking a federal crime.

The act, which was signed into law on Oct. 25, makes it a federal violation to steal a motor vehicle by force and violence, or intimidation, while in possession of a firearm.

Nicholas Arthur Portillo was arrested Wednesday at a New Braunfels-area rest stop on Interstate 35. Two Texas Department of Public Safety troopers spotted him in a vehicle that had been carjacked from an office parking lot in San Antonio.

The 43-year-old owner of the car told police she was walking to her vehicle when a man armed with a gun ordered her to hand over her keys and to get into her car.

She escaped when the car stopped at an intersection.

Portillo appeared Friday before U.S. Magistrate Robert O'Connor, who ordered him held by the U.S. marshal until a bond hearing at 3 p.m. Wednesday.

Maximum punishment upon conviction is 15 years in prison and a $250,000 fine.

A second suspect arrested in the incident, a juvenile, remained jailed in lieu of $50,000 bond. He was charged with aggravated robbery.

Demond Lemont Henderson, 20, was the first person in Texas to be charged under the law.

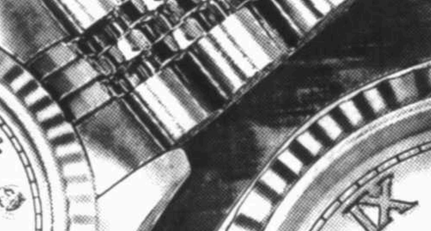

The FBI filed a formal complaint in Henderson's case Tuesday before U.S. Magistrate Alex McGlinchey in Fort Worth.

Henderson is accused of stealing a vehicle at gunpoint after a man returned home. He was arrested later in the night after he and three other men abandoned the vehicle and fled on foot after a police chase.

Judge returns prison control back to Texas

TYLER (AP) — A federal judge has returned control of Texas prisons to the state for the first time in 12 years, saying officials have made giant strides over the past 20 years in improving the 50,000-inmate system.

U.S. District Judge William Wayne Justice on Friday signed a 29-page settlement. He praised prison officials in approving the settlement of a handwritten lawsuit filed two decades ago by a little-known inmate from Austin, David Ruiz.

"Over 20 years ago, a handful of brave prisoners set in motion a process that even defendants' highest officials acknowledged has improved all aspects" of the state's prison system, the judge wrote.

Justice said in his order that he is satisfied that the building tender system, which he had described as "brutal," has been "effectively dismantled."

And he said prison officials have agreed to maintain sufficient staff "in perpetuity," have "significant resources" for services for physically disabled inmates and agreed to other significant reforms.

The system "has remade itself into a professionally operated agency whose goals are to achieve the highest standards of correctional excellence," he continued.

The agreement ironed out between Attorney General Dan Morales and the inmates' attorneys returns to the state control of its prison system for the first time in a dozen years.

Without the settlement, officials said they may have had to build tent cities within prison walls to ease the backlog of 14,000 felons in county jails awaiting transfer to the state facilities.

Lt. Gov. Bob Bullock hailed Justice's decision, saying it will allow the state to quickly begin easing the overcrowding of county jails that have been holding hundreds of prison-bound inmates.

"It will almost immediately allow us to transfer 2,500 inmates out of overcrowded county jails and into state prisons," Bullock said.

William Bennett Turner, a San Francisco lawyer who represented convicts in the suit, said he signed the agreement "because I believe it is fair and reasonable to the prisoner class, and it's probably the best we can do, but I wish it was better."

Turner said he is disappointed because "we ended up allowing them (the state) to put 2,300 more prisoners in their existing facilities,. and we think they already have too many."

Justice took over supervision of the system in 1980 after ruling that it violated the U.S. constitutional ban against cruel and unusual punishment. The ruling was in connection with Ruiz's 1972 lawsuit.

The judge found that the prisons were seriously overcrowded, the medical services inadequate and that tough, "brutal" prisoners known as "building tenders" were allowed to virtually run some units. In his 1980 ruling, the judge put a ceiling on the prison population, causing many county jails holding state prisoners to become overcrowded.

Lawyer intends to knock down disabled barriers

By Denise Gamino
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN — In his nighttime dream world, Chuck Weir can walk again.

Gone are the physical barriers that impede his wheelchair wherever he goes during waking hours — to a movie, to the store, to work.

"Sometimes, I don't see myself as disabled," he says. "In many of the dreams I have, I'm not in a wheelchair. I'm walking."

But as soon as the 33-year-old assistant city attorney for San Antonio wakes up, the barriers are back.

Now, Weir is trying to knock those barriers down through an ambitious courthouse campaign.

Weir is believed to be the most active plaintiff in the country suing companies that allegedly are not complying with the federal Americans with Disabilities Act's guarantees of accessibility. No clearinghouse tracks ADA lawsuits, but disability activists around the country say they haven't heard of anyone filing more lawsuits than Weir.

In the past few weeks, Weir and his Austin lawyer have filed 15 lawsuits in Travis County state district court in an effort to force businesses to renovate and make their properties accessible to people with disabilities. Weir says he may file 100 lawsuits in San Antonio.

"The goal is compliance," Weir says. "If you get that with 25 lawsuits, you don't need to file any others. If it takes more than that (to prod) the business community, we'll try to do that.

"A barrier-free Austin and a barrier-free San Antonio. That's when we'll stop."

The business community says it is making a good-faith effort to comply with the disability law, and criticizes Weir for filing lawsuits before trying to negotiate a solution informally. But disability rights advocates in Texas and around the country applaud Weir's decision to sue such large companies as McDonald's, Taco Bell, Wendy's and Pizza Hut.

"I know it would appear I'm a crusader, but I don't think of it in those terms," says Weir, who was paralyzed in a diving accident in 1982 after graduating from the University of Texas.

Until Weir was contacted by Ginny Agnew, a civil rights lawyer who is married to his uncle, he hadn't thought about suing over the frustrating barriers he encounters every day, he says.

"When she approached me, I was eager. I thought it would be worthwhile," he says. "We're doing this just to help the disabled community out.

"Frankly, I get a little irritated that these companies feel like they can ignore the law, and they do ignore the law."

The federal disability law, signed with much fanfare by President Bush in 1990, required businesses with more than 25 employees to make their services accessible to people with disabilities by Jan. 26, 1992. Businesses with fewer than 10 employees must become accessible by Jan. 26, 1993.

The law doesn't specify what types of renovations and accommodations must be made, but businesses are obligated to make changes that are "readily achievable."

"I don't think the disabled, in light of civil rights laws, should have to continue to face these barriers every day," Weir says. "These businesses are required to comply with the act. For some reason, they think they're above the law. For obvious reasons, it's financial."

So far, Weir has sued Austin Diagnostic Clinic, Taco Bell, McDonald's, Pizza Hut, Popeye's, Dairy Queen, Wyatt's Cafeterias, Wendy's, McMorris Downtown Ford, Circle K, Blockbuster Video, Luby's, Eckerd Drugs, Coco's restaurant and Miller Blueprint Co.

Ms. Agnew says she has reached a settlement with Miller Blueprint, which is making renovations.

The lawsuits say people with disabilities are being denied access to doorways, elevators, restrooms, pay telephones, drinking fountains, serving lines or parking lots.

A representative of the Texas Business Association calls the lawsuits "nothing more than a publicity stunt."

"I think this is kind of an abuse of the (legal) system, what he's doing," says Houston lawyer Jeff Londa, state chairman of the employment relations committee of the Texas Association of Business. "The legal system was not designed to allow someone to sue and collect attorney's fees when they haven't even asked someone to do it (make renovations).

"I don't think the business community is opposed to making those (readily achievable) changes," Londa says. "I can't believe you go sue Eckerd to lower a telephone without talking to them."

Weir says he did not contact the companies in an attempt to reach an informal solution before he sued them because they have known since 1990 that the changes would be required.

"They've been put on notice. It's been in the news. They don't need to be told they need to come into compliance on that," he says. "We're not going to play games anymore."

MISD students excel on math test

Staff report

Midland Independent School District junior high students made a strong showing in the 1992 American Junior High School Mathematics Examination (AJHSME).

Allegra Legrande of Alamo Junior High School and Blake Moran of San Jacinto Junior High School are listed on the National AJHSME Honor Roll. Of the 150,000-plus young people nationwide who participated in the November administration of the test, only 2,683 scored at or above the Midland students.

In Texas, more than 11,000 students from more than 100 schools participate annually in the AJHSME.

Begun in 1985, the AJHSME is a 45-minute drill consisting of 25 lengthy and complex math questions. This testing program is coordinated by the Mathematics and Statistics Department of the University of Nebraska.

Each school's top student is presented an AJHSME pin and gold certificate. Second and third place students receive silver and bronze certificates, respectively. Tie scores are possible.

Amarillo woman recounts experiences with stalker

By Max Albright
Associated Press Writer

AMARILLO — You are being chased. You run. But, suddenly, the person threatening you looms in front of you. You turn and run in the other direction.

Then, you wake up.

But not Deborah B. of Amarillo.

Deborah — not her real name — says that for her the nightmare is real.

According to Deborah, who has documented her story in court records, a man is constantly following, telephoning and threatening her.

She says she feels like she's being hunted, stalked.

"I'm not sure how long I will keep making it to safety," she says.

Deborah's stalker is not an ex-husband or ex-boyfriend. The stalker, Deborah said, is a stranger, a man who worked and perhaps still works for a service company in Amarillo. Deborah said she let the man into her house for a routine service call on Jan. 29.

"Approximately three weeks later, I started getting hang-up calls, off and on all day and night," Deborah said. "Soon, the calls became constant, approximately 25 to 30 calls at home and work. The calls progressed to making animal sounds also, then progressed to obscene sexual calls, then progressed to him having sex with himself."

The stalker started following Deborah as she drove to work, she said.

When she would leave work after dark, he would be waiting in his car with his headlights on, waiting where she would clearly see him; then he would follow.

Alone, she would drive home with the stalker's headlights shining in her rearview mirror.

Deborah said that one time the man barged into her apartment.

"He didn't knock, he just walked in," Deborah said. "My mother and uncle were there. I was in the back room.

"He said 'I haven't seen her for a while; I know she's been working from 12 to 8.'"

Another time, near midnight, the same man drove his car up to Deborah's apartment windows and flashed the headlights. She also has seen the man drive past her apartment repeatedly.

The stalker, Deborah said, has also ordered food delivered to her house.

She has moved to new addresses and changed her telephone number. But somehow, she said, her tormentor always finds her.

"I'm tired of living out of suitcases and not living at all," Deborah said.

Carole McDaniel, who directs the Victim Assistance Program which operates out of the 47th District attorney's office, said people being stalked live in fear — "scared to death." The stalker can park in front of the target's house, and follow the victim, and not break any law, McDaniel said.

Law enforcement's hands are tied, McDaniel said.

Since Deborah started being followed earlier this year, she said she has tried to use the criminal justice system to shake off the stalker.

Deborah continues to call the police, and she obtained a peace bond against the stalker.

She also has cooperated with law-enforcement officials who put a tracer on her telephone, which led to two criminal counts of telephone harassment against the man who Deborah says is stalking her.

Telephone harassment is a Class B misdemeanor punishable by a six-month jail term and a $1,500 fine, said Sonya Letson, the Potter County attorney-elect.

According to the criminal complaint filed with the Potter County clerk, a man telephoned Deborah on June 2 to "harass, annoy, alarm, abuse, torment, and embarrass" and during the call made "a comment, request, suggestion and proposal that was obscene."

The second count charges that the man made "repeated telephone communications in a manner reasonably likely to harass, annoy, alarm, abuse . . "

The telephone harassment trial is to be heard in mid-January in a Potter County court at law.

In such cases, the accused has the right to make an appearance bond, conditioned that the accused will "keep the peace" toward the person bringing the complaint pending a hearing, according to the Texas Code of Criminal Procedure.

At a hearing, the magistrate listens to evidence on whether the complaint is valid. If the magistrate is satisfied that the offense occurred, "he shall make an order that the accused enter into bond in such sum as he may in his discretion require," according to the code.

The man was arrested, brought before the justice of the peace on June 8 and, according to the court file, waived a hearing. Roberts set a peace bond of $5,000.

But, Deborah said, after the peace bond was set, the stalker continued to follow her, call her and threaten her.

On July 2, another Potter County justice of the peace, Jim Tipton, issued a second peace bond complaint warrant against the man.

This time, the man did not waive his hearing, and Tipton set a $7,500 appearance bond.

Deborah said the end result of her search for help was another $5,000 peace bond against her stalker.

"I was upset and disappointed," she said.

House speaker packs bags after 2 decades

AUSTIN (AP) — When freshman Rep. Gib Lewis first came to the Texas House, the two-year state budget totaled less than $8 billion, oil money was gushing and the big fights were over which lawmakers took home the most pork.

Two decades later, lawmakers are writing $60 billion budgets, battling billion-dollar deficits, struggling with courts over schools and prisons, and looking for ways to cut long-entrenched programs.

The Sunday-closing blue law has been repealed, pari-mutuel wagering and lottery are legal, drinking while driving is illegal and high school athletes must pass to play.

Times, and Texas, have changed.

"The biggest issue when I first got here was liquor by the drink," Lewis laughed as he looked back on a 22-year career — including an unprecedented five terms as House speaker.

"We'd consider that child's play now. But it was the real critical issue back in those days. That's where the tough vote came."

The Fort Worth Democrat has been speaker longer than anyone in Texas history.

As leader of the House since 1983, Lewis helped write the bills, forge the compromises and, on occasion, cast the crucial vote as the Legislature sought to cope with a population explosion, oil and real estate busts, judges' orders and growing partisanship.

He cites accomplishments that include the sweeping school reforms of House Bill 72, a statewide water plan, a rural health care plan, overhauling workers compensation, consolidating criminal justice agencies and creating a state "rainy day fund" to cushion future budget shocks.

"I've never been one who blows my own horn. But I go back and see the things I had my fingerprints on," Lewis said.

"I've always tried to play somewhat of a background role. Seventy-five percent of that stuff was created right here in this office, with me and my staff. Then we'd go to a sponsor and we'd push it through and give them support."

He leaves convinced lawmakers are underpaid, under appreciated, overworked.

"I can cuss and discuss and argue. But I'll say that some of the finest people I've ever met are the people I served with. It's amazing we get the quality of people we do with the way we treat them and the way we pay them ($600 a month)," Lewis said.

A native of Oletha in Limestone County, the 56-year-old Lewis attended Sam Houston State Teachers College and Texas Christian University before joining the Air Force.

After the service, he settled in Fort Worth and started his company, Lewis Label Products Inc., which has grown into a multi-million-dollar enterprise.

In the 1960s, he joined the Junior Chamber of Commerce, which elected him president in 1966. Then he won election to the River Oaks City Council in 1969 and, in 1971, to the House.

During his second term, the avid hunter and sportsman was appointed chairman of the Natural Resources Committee. He rose quickly through the ranks.

In 1983, he won his first of five terms as speaker, joining the governor and lieutenant governor as one of the three most powerful people in state government.

Lewis says his early days in the Legislature were, indeed, "the good old days."

"Things have gone from a very leisurely pace to a very fast, neck-breaking pace. The issues have become more complicated," he says.

"You had money you could spend. In those days, the argument was who's going to get more than the other guy ... We may have outfoxed ourselves."

Lewis says one of the most troubling aspects in being a lawmaker today is the problem that bedeviled his final days as speaker — court orders.

Federal judges ruled against the state on prisons and mental health.

The Texas Supreme Court three times has overturned school finance laws, a problem that remains for the 1993 Legislature.

School finance "is a moving target," he says. "You finally get a consensus and then you vote on one (plan) — then the courts overturn it. You think you're doing what should be done. Each time we passed an education bill, I would swear we were home free."

Lewis believes judges have overstepped their bounds as interpreters of law. Their forays into lawmaking rankle.

"Twenty years ago, you would never have dreamed that a district court would be dictating to the Legislature ... Today, if a fellow disagrees with the action of the Legislature, he'll become a plaintiff and file a suit.

HOMES & CLASSIFIED

Lush Fairways

Photography by Curt Wilcott

Water splashes from the sparkling waterfall nestled in the terraced garden of a cool tiled veranda that covers the entire length of the home.

Enjoy spectacular sunrises over a lush golf course amidst the relaxing comfort of the spacious covered patio that is just a hint of the impressive array of amenities revealed in this contemporary classic located in the Greentree Country Club Estates.

Inside, the carefully proportioned design is rich in luxury features. A beautiful stone double fireplace creates a welcoming atmosphere in the foyer, where the warmth of a fireplace hearth greets every entry.

To the right, French doors welcome you into a private study enhanced by the warm wood paneling and built-in library.

Step down into a spacious sunken living area where vaulted ceilings and sunlit windows add openess and light to the design. The leisure setting is offset by a concealed wetbar and the reverse side of the double fireplace.

A periphery view of the golf course is seen through the liberal use of windows throughout every room along the back of the house.

Conveniently placed near the entry for guests, a powder room displays a hint of the orient in elegant wallpapering and an ornate crystal chandelier.

The wide-open kitchen provides an ideal environment for large family gatherings. Family members relax in the spacious morning room while the chef in the family delights in the convenient arrangement of an island work center and abundant counter space. All enjoy a sweeping view of the lush golf course.

The luxury of a sequestered master bedroom adjoins a private exercise room complete with an oversized jacuzzi and shower. Separate closets and vanity areas in the master bath are suitable for today's lifestyle. The master, too, overlooks greens and fairways.

This luxurious 3 bedroom, 3 1/2 bath home boasts of many extra amenities - a private bath in every bedroom; large attic with light; ceiling fans throughout; built-in vacuum; bricked 3-car driveway; automatic sprinkler system and more!

Helen Pogue of Langston Realtors is offering this home for $235,000. For a private showing call 697-5303 or 685-0400.

Make your home attractive to prospective buyers

Norma Pine

You're ready to sell your home. But before placing it on the market, ask yourself this question: Is your home ready for sale?

"Homeowners often miss small but key points about their home that will be obvious to a potential buyer. When you decide to sell your home it is important to first inspect it, room by room, inside and out, from the viewpoint of a potential buyer, says Norma Pine, owner of Chaparral Realtors.

She adds, "By spending just a few minutes and making some vital improvements, your home will be much more attractive to a buyer and, in turn, will be more likely to sell for a higher price."

Chaparral is a member of RELO/The International Relocation Network, headquartered in Chicago. The RELO network is the oldest broker-owned and directed referral service representing independent real estate companies. The RELO network has 3,000 offices in the U.S. and overseas and more than 50,000 sales agents who serve 14,000 communities.

RELO members reported more than $70 billion in total residential sales for 1991, which places the RELO network among the elite leaders in total dollar sales volume, in comparison with the major national real estate franchises. This also makes RELO the largest network of independent real estate brokers in the country with world-wide marketing capabilities.

Potential buyers are turned off by a home with a poor physical appearance, according to Pine. Fix loose railings and cracked or broken steps, repaint peeling or dingy exteriors and keep the lawn and landscaping well-trimmed. The home's "curb appeal," or its appearance from the street, is the first and often the most lasting impression a potential buyer receives, she explains.

The interior must be in good physical condition, as well. Any plumbing problems, from dripping faucets to water stains on walls or ceilings, should be repaired since poor plumbing is one of the strongest deterrents to a home buyer, Pine says. In addition, fix broken appliances, stained sinks, poor flooring, scuffed walls and any other unsightly problems.

Close attention should also be paid to the kitchen and bathrooms, in particular, since potential buyers are often most meticulous about these rooms. "Be prepared for prospective buyers to test everything, including trying lights, switches and faucets; running showers; flushing toilets; testing the stove, oven and garbage disposal; and running the dishwasher full cycle," Pine says.

Bright rooms with a homey atmosphere appeal to buyers, according to Pine, and a thorough cleaning and a few decorating changes will add life to your home. Rejuvenate woodwork and cabinets with a new, medium-colored stain, and brighten walls with a fresh coat of paint. Keep the color scheme consistent on the first floor of the home, avoiding jarring color changes and sticking with light-colored, neutral carpeting, she suggests. Also dry-clean draperies, steam-clean wall-to-wall carpeting and place higher-wattage bulbs in light sockets to give rooms the appearance of being more spacious, Pine adds.

"Just looking at your home from another perspective will give you insight into how to make your home more attractive to potential buyers and will make for a more successful sale, Pine says.

OIL REPORT

Midland Reporter-Telegram

Activity Indicators/4E
Oil & Gas Activity/5-7E

Serving 54 counties in West Texas and New Mexico

BRIEFING

Troubled prices

An overproduction of crude worldwide continued to weaken oil prices this week with futures prices on the New York Mercantile Exchange falling to eight-month lows of $18.84. Late in the week however, several news reports sent prices back over the $19 level and posted prices up to $18.

Natural gas prices showed strength this week, climbing 14 cents in two days to $2.11 per thousand cubic feet on the Merc.

Schlumberger deal

NEW YORK — Raytheon Co. and Schlumberger Ltd. have jointly announced the completion of the sale of Raytheon's seismic business to Schlumberger.

The two companies had announced on July 24 that they had signed agreements for Schlumberger to acquire Seismograph Service Ltd. and GeoQuest Systems Inc. from Raytheon. Terms of the sale were not disclosed.

The acquisitions by Schlumberger were recently approved by the appropriate regulatory authorities.

Seismograph Service provides geophysical exploration services for oil, gas and minerals and has a presence in Europe, Africa, Latin America and the Far East. The company, which employs 1,400 people, currently operates three marine seismic vessels, 12 land seismic crews and data processing centers in 11 countries.

Busy rigs

A former oilfield supply store in Kermit illustrates the hardships suffered by the oil industry since the early 1980s.

Things may be looking up for the industry, however. One positive sign was a jump in the number of rigs drilling during the week ended December 4, according to Baker Hughes Inc.

In the Permian Basin, the company reported 137 rigs at work, up from 129 the previous week and from 134 a year earlier. Lea and Eddy counties in New Mexico showed the most activity, followed by Sterling and Crockett counties in Texas.

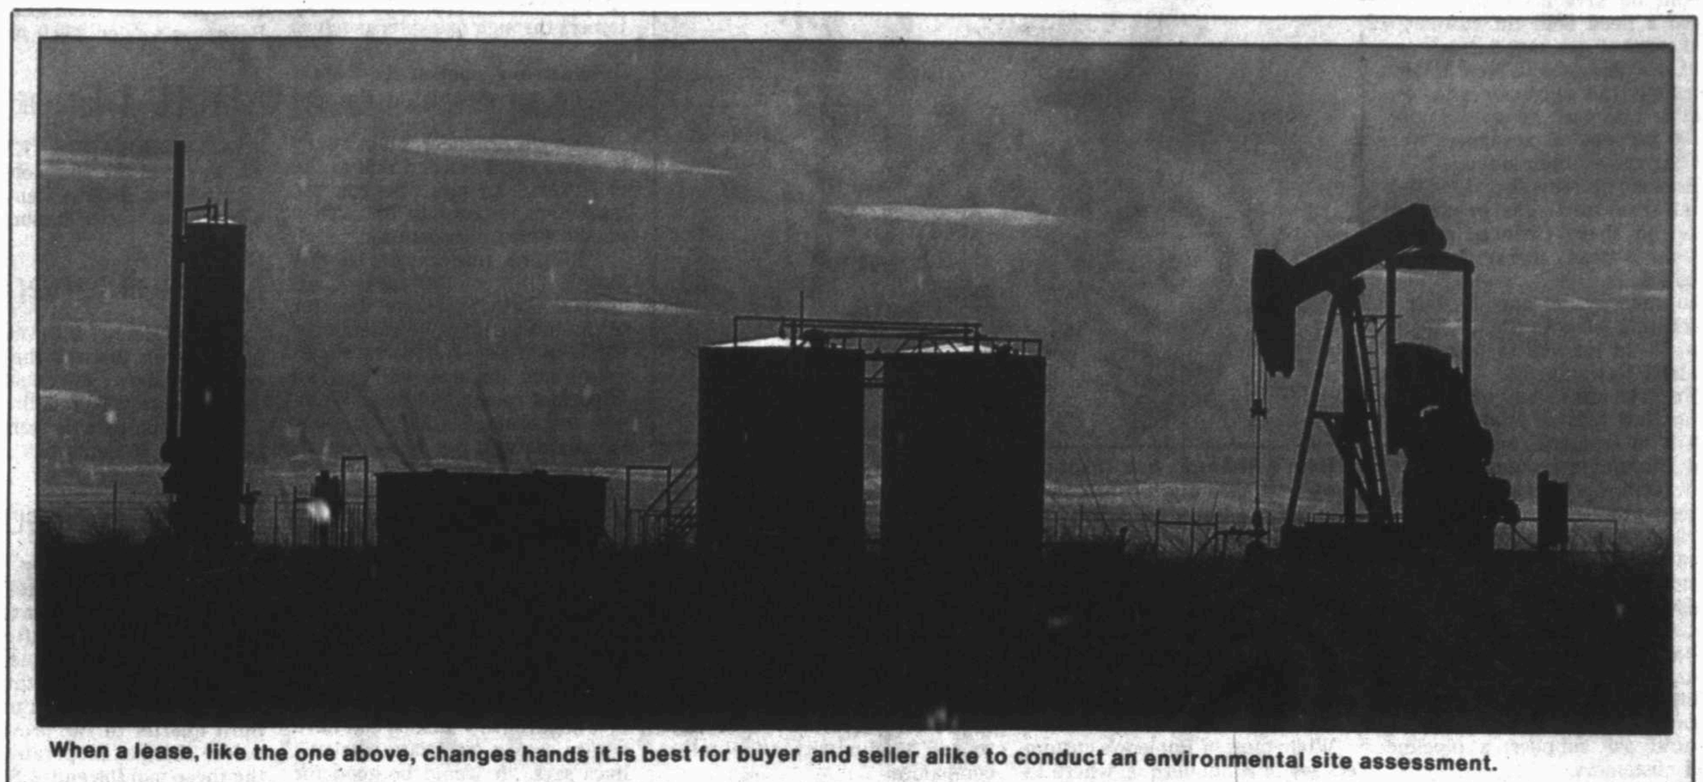

Nationally, the rig count continued above year-ago levels, rising 15 to 914; a year ago the national rig count was 814.

Arch payment

FORT WORTH — Arch Petroleum Inc. announced the sale of a volumetric production payment from its properties in the Keystone Ellenburger Field, payment from its properties in the Keystone Ellenburger Field, Winkler County, Texas to Enron Reserves Acquisition Corp., Houston, Texas.

The volume of the production payment was reported to be 18.8 bcf of natural gas, deliverable over a 5.7-year period beginning December 1, 1992. Sales proceeds in the transaction were $24.3 million.

The company said that it would have about $8 million of cash remaining after it had paid down its line of credit. The borrowing base available under the Company's $25 million revolving line of credit facility is currently being redetermined in conjunction with its year-end reserve evaluation.

When a lease, like the one above, changes hands it is best for buyer and seller alike to conduct an environmental site assessment.

Liability warrants site assessment

■ Selling and buying oil properties creates a need for environmental site assessment.

By Lou Mazzulo

Environmental compliance is a phrase that can conjure up feelings of dread among independent oil producers when purchasing a new property.

There is often the nagging fear that a lurking environmental problem could pop up at any time to cut deeply into the bottom line and make purchased properties uneconomical. An environmental site assessment, however, can alleviate some of those fears.

Numerous federal and state-mandated environmental standards and blanket liability make it almost imperative that oil and gas operators protect themselves from liabilities with such inspections. Environmental assessments are especially needed in today's market where major oil companies are selling off entire fields and marginal wells at a breakneck speed, and buyer and seller need to be informed of environmental liabilities.

Problems such as oil or produced water spills around tank batteries and casing leaks often pose minimal risk to human health or the environment, but stricter regulatory controls mandate operation and maintenance procedures and remediation guidelines that could impact upon the profitability of a producing property.

Environmental regulations, restoration criteria of surface owners (whether they are private land owners or government entities), and the demonstrated impact of oil field activities on surface water, groundwater and soil all create liabilities that can impact the value of oil and gas producing properties.

A pre-acquisition environmental assessment of producing properties identifies potential environmental liabilities, determines which of these liabilities could impact the value (sales or offering price) of the property, and provides a cost estimate of mitigating these identified concerns.

Environmental compliance costs and liabilities continue to play a major role in determining the price of a property. In most cases, however, the estimated environmental liabilities associated with an acquisition will be inconsequential when compared with the total value of the property. But perhaps 10 percent of the time, consideration of environmental assessment of a producing property, initiated either by the seller or potential purchaser, can quantify the environmental liabilities and operating costs.

There are three advantages to conducting an environmental site assessment of a producing property (and they all go to the bottom line).

First, a cost estimate created by an assessment can be used to reduce the price of an acquisition.

Second, environmental liabilities can be identified prior to operation of the property by the buyer, minimizing any exposure for subsequent soil or groundwater restoration.

Third, by developing a sound environmental operation and maintenance program that arises out of an assessment, an operator can further reduce environmental liabilities and associated compliance costs that are either already mandated or will likely be enacted after acquiring the property.

American Central buys Mobil plants

Staff report

American Central Gas Companies, Inc., of Tulsa, Houston and Odessa has recently purchased the Mobil Sandhills and Waddell facilities in Crane County from Mobil Exploration & Production U.S. Inc.

"The purchase of these facilities," according to Weldon Lewis, Vice-President of American Central, "will expand the ability of American Central to serve area producers by offering a sizable, efficient low pressure system into which they can market their natural gas. Two existing American Central plants, Foster in Odessa and Santa Rosa, North of Fort Stockton, will receive the additional six to seven million cubic feet of gas per day the company has contracted for through the purchase. Also, the company is currently laying seventeen (17) miles of 8 5/8" pipeline to enhance our growing systems in Crane, Ward and Pecos Counties."

American Central is a fully-integrated company providing a complete range of services in the acquisition, gathering, treating, processing and marketing of natural gas. Total system throughput and natural gas liquids production averages 200 MMCF/D and 5,000 barrels per day respectively.

GPM Corp. buys system

HOUSTON — GPM Gas Corp. (GPM) has acquired the Dagger Draw gas gathering system in northwestern Eddy County, New Mexico, from Feagan Gathering Company and Axis Gas Corp.

The Dagger Draw system gathers 12.5 million cubic feet of gas per day from the North and South Dagger Draw Fields. The Dagger Draw field has been one of the most active drilling areas in New Mexico over the past several years.

The 32-mile gathering system has been consolidated with an existing 300-mile system that GPM operates in Eddy County. The gas in delivered to a gas processing facility near Artesia, New Mexico, for extraction of natural gas liquids. GPM is operator of the gathering system and processing plant, which are owned by American Liberty Oil Co.

CPM Gas Corp., a wholly owned subsidiary of Phillips Petroleum Company, is headquartered in Houston. The company operates 18 processing facilities.

Gas industry set to up natural gas use

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The natural gas industry is extremely well-positioned to help the Clinton administration achieve its goal of increased natural gas use. American Gas Association Chairman David R. Jones said today.

"Consumption of natural gas has increased more than 20 percent during the past five years and the industry's strong performance clearly demonstrates the reliability of current supply and the ability to meet growing markets at competitive prices," Jones said.

At a news briefing, Jones said that colder weather, a rise in the cogeneration market and gains in market share from other fuels in all market sectors would continue to boost future natural gas demand.

"U.S. natural gas consumption should pass the 20 trillion cubic feet (Tcf) mark in 1992 for the first time since the mid-70's," Jones said, "and should grow to about 20.7 Tcf in 1993."

Jones, who is also president and CEO of Atlanta Gas Light Company, said that while traditional natural gas will remain strong, new markets such as electric generation natural gas vehicles and gas cooling will play a major role in boosting gas demand in the years ahead.

"Natural gas cooling, for example, is not only efficient, but some gas cooling technologies also reduce environmental risks, such as the release of chlorflourocarbons (CFSs), which are believed to cause the atmospheric hole in the ozone layer," Jones said. "Gas cooling will increase the use of off-peak, lower-cost summertime natural gas. It will allow pipelines to more fully use

Is twice as much really that much more

Pitts

Smoke, mirrors and numbers are good devices for making that which is not appear to be — if you don't get caught.

Frank Yates Jr., vice president of Yates Petroleum of Artesia, has accused a Permian Basin newspaper of wrongly using numbers to tell a story that does not exist. The professional mechanical engineer says a story in the Carlsbad Current Argus exaggerated and misrepresented the facts about radiation levels at several playa lakes in New Mexico to make a perfectly safe condition appear hazardous.

The article about the radiation levels at the lakes, which were the center of a recent EPA controversy, "focused more on generating fear than fact," said Yates.

In questioning the science of the newspaper account, Yates said a story in the newspaper had implied the playa lakes at Laguna Quatro near Carlsbad were an environmental danger when it stated that radiation levels at the lakes were twice as high as surrounding areas.

"The only problem is, they never did say what the radiation level of the lakes were," said Yates, in a telephone interview.

He explained that radiation levels at Laguna Quatro, as measured in a radiological assessment, were only 5 millirems (mrems) per year in a worse case scenario. "That's when the lakes are dry and the dust is blowing," said Yates. "But when the lake is full of water the radiation level is only 1 millirem."

How dangerous is that? Five millirems is half as much exposure as you would get from a single chest x-ray, said Yates. And half as much as the EPA's measurement of 10 mrems for a radiation source.

"It is our conclusion that radiation levels at Laguna Quatro presents no threat to human life or wildlife. Indeed, if radiation at the lake is 1 millirem is twice as high as surrounding areas, what does that say for the surrounding area." He noted that as far as radiation Laguna Quatro could be one of the safest placest in the U.S. to live.

How does that compare to normal levels of radiation? Nationwide, says Yates, the average annual radiation levels are 360 millirems per year of which about 80 percent is natural and only 20 percent manmade. Levels across the country range from 60 to 600 mrems, and exposures must exceed 100,000 mrems for radiation damage to occur.

"When the Carlsbad Current Argus said that levels at the lake could be twice as high as normal radiation levels in the area, it implied that there was imminent danger."

Yates said the only sources for the story were a high school biology teacher at Carlsbad and an Albuquerque environmentalist.

To further refute the "twice as high" story, Yates said a 1960 fly-over study by the Atomic Energy Commission showed that the Carlsbad area had radiation levels twice as high as Laguna Quatro and 2.5 times higher than Artesia or Loco Hills, two nearby towns in New Mexico.

"The problem is that we have some people out there saying that any dose of radiation is unsafe. That's just not true."

As for the Current Argus, John Flinn, managing editor, says several attempts were made to contact Yates prior to initial publication, but that the messages were not returned. Yates said he did not return phone calls be-

■ Marketer matches New Mexico producers with New Mexico customers

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — Henry Robledo found his niche after 27 years in the oil and gas industry.

And he says it's a niche that filled a need both for customers and natural gas suppliers.

"I saw the need in New Mexico to supply the consumer with low-cost natural gas," he says. "Eighty to 90 percent of consumers weren't aware of their options."

Robledo also saw that the state's smaller natural gas producers were on shaky financial ground without a steady market for their product.

So three years ago, he left a marketing job with Hondo Oil and Gas Co. in Roswell to launch Industrial Gas Sales Inc.

His goal was to buy natural gas from New Mexico producers and sell it to industrial and commercial consumers around the state. New Mexico is the nation's fourth-largest producer of natural gas.

"Companies from Texas and Colorado were supplying New Mexico customers with out-of-state gas," Robledo says. "That surprised me because of the emphasis here on buying New Mexico. Money was going out of the state."

He says getting started meant earning the trust of a banker, a natural gas supplier, a pipeline and customers.

"I knew all the players from having been in the industry, but it was hard to build trust," Robledo says. "I had to convince a supplier that I would pay him eventually if he gave me the gas on credit. I had to convince the pipeline I could pay its fees. And I had to convince customers that I could be a reliable supplier."

It took a year to lay that groundwork.

In 1989, Robledo had a $10,000 investment, two hard-earned suppliers and two customers. Total sales were about $20,000.

By 1990, he had 25 customers and $1.5 million in sales.

He finished 1991 with 50 customers, $2.4 million in sales and a long list of suppliers.

While most of Robledo's customers are in Albuquerque, where Industrial Gas sales moved in July from Roswell, he also has contracts in Farmington, Santa Fe, Clovis, Portales, Roswell, Dexter, Carlsbad, Santa Teresa, Bayard, Silver City, Gallup and Grants.

Customers include hospitals, universities, school districts, hotels and apartment complexes. It isn't cost effective for a company the size of IGS to serve residential customers, Robledo says.

Companies like Robledo's can compete with local utilities because of deregulation in the oil and gas industry authorized by Congress in 1989.

Deregulation made the pipelines common carriers — any company can use a pipeline by paying a fee. Producers therefore didn't have to sell exclusively to pipeline companies.

"It gave producers and consumers more options," Robledo says.

He says he can save utility customers 10 percent to 18 percent on the cost of natural gas.

IGS uses pipelines into New Mexico owned by El Paso Natural Gas Co., Northwest Pipeline, Transwestern and Gas Company of New Mexico.

Gas Co. spokeswoman Diana Stauffer says the arrangement benefits the utility because it is paid to transport the gas. That fee and a meter fee fall under guidelines set by the state Public Service Commission.

Robledo's suppliers include the Jicarilla Apache Tribe, Armstrong Energy of Roswell, and Robert Bayliss, D.J. Estate and M&G Drilling, all of Farmington, he says.

Robert Armstrong of Armstrong Energy says deregulation has given producers access to more customers through marketers such as IGS.

Armstrong conceivably could sell his gas directly to the end users.

"As a gas producer, I don't have the time to go out and talk to the end users," he says. "So you use marketers to assist in that. They handle those negotiations.

"They're important to the industry."

Alvin Baca, executive director of the Independent Petroleum Association of New Mexico, says marketers like Robledo will play an important role in building a stronger intrastate market for New Mexico natural gas.

"They can respond better than the independents on their own," Baca says. "Producers don't have the ability to go find markets. Someone like Henry can focus his efforts on opening the markets."

Baca says New Mexico uses about 10 percent of the natural gas it produces. Prior to deregulation, interstate markets were more reliable for producers, he says.

"I believe New Mexico can have a very strong intrastate market," Baca says. "It would be good for long-term economic development. Natural gas is an attractive and clean industry."

Robledo says he hopes to convert more industrial users to New Mexico natural gas.

"A lot of big companies and institutions are supplied from out of state," Robledo says. "Those companies got here before I did."

He says he would like to sell New Mexico gas out of state, and own wells and pipelines.

Henry Robledo has turned Industrial Gas Sales from a company with two customers and $25,000 in sales to 50 customers and $2.4 million in sales.

BRIEFS

Union Texas takes accounting charge

HOUSTON — Union Texas Petroleum Holdings, Inc. will take a combined $76 million, one-time, non-cash charge to after tax earnings for the year 1992 due to the adoption of two new accounting rules for income taxes and postretirement benefits.

Petrolite reports rise in net income

ST LOUIS — Petrolite Corp., reported that net income for the fiscal fourth quarter ended October 31 increased 13 percent to $4.7 million, or $0.41 per share, from $4.2 million, or $0.37 per share, the year before. Revenues totaled $79.9 million, compared with $81.2 million.

Mitchell Energy earnings increas

Mitchell Energy & Development Corp.'s third-quarter earnings rose 16 percent over those of the same period last year to $16.3 million, or 35 cents per share. Revenues for the quarter, which ended October 31, amounted to $250.7 million.

In the comparable period a year ago, the company earned $14.1 million, or 30 cents per share, on revenues of $222.2 million.

Edisto Resources suffers net loss

Edisto Resources Corp. has reported a net loss of $7.8 million, or a $0.32 per share loss after preferred dividends, on revenues of $90.4 million for the third quarter of 1992, versus a net loss of $12.2 million, or a $0.70 per share loss after preferred dividends, on revenues of $67.1 million for the same quarter of the previous year.

Net cash provided by three months ended September 30, 1992 was $8.2 million, versus net cash provided by operations of $3.3 million for the third quarter of the previous year. Net cash provided by operations, before changes in operating assets and liabilities, totaled $3.7 million for the three months ended September 30, 1992, versus $1.8 million for the same three month period of 1991.

Railroad Commission lists production

AUSTIN — The Texas Railroad Commission has forecast Texas oil production for December at 1,725,057 barrels per day, based on purchaser nominations, and set gas production allowables for prorated fields in the state to meet market demand of 237,456,300 Mcf (thousand cubic feet).

Commission levies $61,000 in fines

AUSTIN — The Railroad Commission has assessed a total of $61,000 in administrative penalities this week to nine oil and gas operations for violations under Commission well plugging and pollution rules.

IADC calls for conference papers

The International Association of Drilling Contractors has issued a call for papers for its 1993 European Well Control Conference, to be held June 2-4 at Elf Aquitaine headquarters in Paris. The conference will be co-sponsored by IADC members Elf Aquitaine and Sedco Forex. Deadline for abstracts is Feb. 26.

Tidewater to purchase 19 vessels

NEW ORLEANS — McDermott International, Inc. and Tidewater Inc. have signed a letter of intent whereby McDermott will sell 19 vessels to Tidewater for use in Tidewater's international fleet. The purchase includes 15 offshore tugs and four anchor handling/towing supply vessels which range from 1800 to 6140 horsepower. All but two of the vessels are presently located in international markets including Southeast Asia, West Africa and the Middle East. The purchase price was not disclosed.

Dekalb blames loss on asset sales

DEKALB Energy Co. says its recent sale of virtually all of its U.S. oil and gas assets has led to a loss for the third quarter of 1992. The loss on the asset sale - in combination with two non-cash, asset writedowns taken earlier this year - also resulted in a net loss for the nine months ended September 30, 1992. However, reduced interest costs and general and administrative expense are positively impacting operating earnings and cash flow. In addition, the company expects to return profitably in 1993, based on its competitive Canadian position and current pricing and production assumptions.

Energy Ventures net income shrinks

Energy Ventures, Inc. has announced net income of $110,000 for third quarter of 1992 compared with net income of $2,005,000 or $.17 per share for the third quarter of 1991. Revenues were $47,474,000 for the third quarter of 1992 versus $47,688,000 for the third quarter of 1991.

LIABILITY: Eased by assessment

(From 1E)

Sound environmental records and a demonstrated operation and maintenance program might help a seller obtain a price unencumbered by environmental concerns. Furthermore, lending institutions are becoming more cognizant of environmental concerns, and may in some instances require an audit prior to financing a deal.

Environmental site assessments are becoming more common as part of the "due diligence" process when producing property exchanges are transacted. These assessments, or audits, are generally conducted in three phases.

■ PHASE ONE AUDIT — A Phase I audit identifies any environmental concerns that may have the potential to significantly affect the price of a transaction. It can consist of lease record reviews, evaluation of aerial photos, interviews with field production staff, spill reports, and any other research into the status of use of the facility or site. Most, if not all of a Phase I audit can be done in-house.

■ PHASE TWO AUDIT — If potential environmental concerns are identified during Phase I, a Phase II audit, which includes field testing and examination, can be conducted to confirm how much of an affect the environmental concerns will have on the value of the property. During this stage, field testing techniques such as soil vapor surveys, hand auger sampling or groundwater sampling may be conducted. Many larger companies have their own available staff to conduct a Phase II audit, but an independent operator may want the expertise of a qualified environmental consultant to provide a third-party opinion of the environmental impacts, in order to buy more credibility during price negotiations or loan applications.

■ PHASE THREE AUDIT — Typically a Phase III audit will be requested for a transaction. A Phase III audit may involve development of cost estimates to address and remediate demonstrated environmental liabilities. A conceptual design of a soil and groundwater remediation system and its attendant capital and operating costs may also be developed at this stage.

Awareness of potential environmental liabilities can save the independent operator a great deal of money and frustrations in the long run, and need not be a signficant cost burden. Many audits would not even advance past Phase II. A couple of oil field case histories illustrate some typical concerns that were discovered during Phase II audits.

In one case, operator A was offering a large portion of an oil-producing unit for sale, and had an offer tendered by operator B. Since the properties were on federal lands and subject to possible mandated remediation guidelines, operator A decided to run an in-house Phase I audit in order to determine if there were any concerns that might have the potential for litigation by the government.

Operator A also wanted to determine if any identified concerns would adversely affect the asking price of their property. The Phase I audit identified several sites where oil spillage from tank batteries and overflow tanks might have seeped into local underground water sources. An environmental consulting company was called in to conduct a Phase II assessment of the identified sites, and with a minimal expenditure of time and effort was able to render an opinion that the sites did not contain contamination that would endanger the public health.

The assessment consisted of hand-augering into containment pits and a limited amount of soil and shallow groundwater sampling. The local geology of the area figured prominently into the investigation. Although oil spillage into some of the containment pits in the tank batteries was significant, the surface geology of the area was considered to impose natural barriers to the migration of the spilled oil into groundwater. Furthermore, the shallow groundwater in the area was found to be naturally undrinkable, so there was no immediate health threat to local residents.

Geologic barriers also prevent contamination from the soil zone from reaching the deeper, potable groundwater sources in the area. The environmental consulting company recommended the contaminated soil in the containment pits be aerated with a backhoe and let nature biodegrade the spilled hydrocarbons. The need for a Phase III analysis was neither indicated nor recommended by the consultant. The cost of the Phase II assessment, approximately $8,500, was a fraction of the net worth of the property, which was more than $2,500,000, and allowed operator A to present a viable property unincumbered by unknown liabilities.

Not all operations are that "clean." There are some instances where accident or neglect has clearly created problems that need to be mitigated either for the sake of public health or because they pose potential liabilities that could be passed down to unsuspecting buyers. For example, an operator of a gas-condensate well realized a condensate leak from an above-ground storage tank had seeped into the surrounding soil and contaminated shallow groundwater used for local domestic and irrigation purposes. Operation of the well was scheduled to be turned over to another company. Because the well is located close to a major river drainage and on cultivated bottom land, remediation fell under strict state mandates.

Gas outlook study will debut at meeting

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The National Petroleum Council (NPC) will meet on Thursday, December 17, 1992, in Washington, D.C. and will feature remarks by Secretary of Energy James D. Watkins and the conclusion of a two-year study on the outlook for natural gas in the United States.

The meetings agenda will include Council action on the proposed final report of the NPC Committee on Natural gas. This study, which was requested by Secretary Watkins on the potential for expanding natural gas production, distribution, and use, is the most comprehensive natural gas analysis in the 46-year history of the Council. The report will be presented by Committee Chairman Frank H. Richardson, President and Chief Executive Officer, Shell Oil Company, Houston, Texas.

In addition, a progress report on the work of the NPC Committee on Refining will be presented by Committee Chairman Kenneth T. Derr, Chairman of the Board and Chief Executive Officer, Cheveron Corporation, San Francisco, California. This major study, also requested by Secretary Watkins, calls for a review of the factors affecting the petroleum refining industry in the 1990's - specifically, the impact of environmental regulation of refineries and petroleum products.

The meeting will begin at 9:00 a.m. in the Corcoran Ballroom of The Four Seasons Hotel, 2800 Pennsylvania Avenue, N.W., and is open to the public. Persons interested in attending are requested to contact the NPC office in advance to ensure adequate seating. A press conference will be held immediately after the meeting.

The NPC is a federal advisory committee to the Secretary of Energy. From 1946 until the implementation of the U.S. Department of Energy Organization Act of 1977, the NPC served as an advisory body to the Secretary of the Interior. The sole purpose of the Council is to advise, and make recommendations to the Secretary of Energy, at his request, on matters pertaining to oil and natural gas or to the oil and gas industries.

PITTS: Article draws controversy

cause the reporter in question had been confrontational in previous interviews.

Explained Flinn: "The article itself drew no conclusion, and accurately represented the two sides of the NORM issue. The Current-Argus took the necessary measures to confirm the facts amd exress all opinions expressed. While petroleum industry officials may have disagreeded with the comments of some of our sources, they have not proven any of the reporting to be faulty."

Flinn said the Current-Argus stood-by the article and its reporter, in the broad scope of journalism and research that led to the publication of the article.

Without accusing the Current-Argus of being remiss in its reporting or the environmentalists involved as making malicious statements, the issue is that the oil industry is generally perceived as the "evil empire" out to destroy the planet, and that almost any statement made by almost anyone that fosters that view will generally get good press play without too much validation.

In fact some environment. groups have openly called upon environmentalists to stretch the truth, plant scary scenarios and make dramatic statements to capture public attention. Said Stephen Schneider with the National Center for Atmospheric Research: "Each of us has to decide what the right balance is between being honest and being effective."

This is a tactic the oil industry must continually guard against. Yates did well in openly challenging the news accounts and having the facts to back up his challenge. It is a tactic that more in the oil industry need to adopt.

Jones also noted that Order 636 from the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission will greatly affect the natural gas industry, changing long-time relationships between utilities, pipelines, producers and customers. "The challenge in 1993 and beyond," he said, "would be to continue to develop unity within the natural gas industry, with all segments working together as never before to market natural gas and to ensure that customers receive reliable, high quality service."

Pecos field producer gets second zone

A current producer in the Rojo Caballos (Wolfcamp) field of Pecos County has been converted into a dual producer with the addition of production in the Rojo Caballos South (Devonian) field, seven miles southwest of Coyanosa.

EASON PRODUCTION CO. recompleted the No. 1-T McIntyre State "32" for a calculated absolute open flow of 2.087 Mmcfd. Production was natural from perforations 18,104 to 18,378 ft.

The No. 1-C was completed in the Rojo Caballos (Wolfcamp) field in August 1985 for a calculated absolute open flow of 501 Mcfd from perforations 12,186 to 12,196 ft.

The well was originally drilled to 18,564 ft. and plugged back to 18,434 ft. A five inch liner was hung from 17,200 to 18,564 ft.

Formation tops, on ground elevation of 2,777 ft. include the Delaware at 5,310 ft., Wolfcamp at 10,190, Atoka at 16,770, Mississippian at 17,460 and Devonian at 18,100 ft.

Clean-up perforations, remove scales, paraffins and debris with the PerfClean Tool's® powerful shock waves.
Restore the permeability and porosity of your wells by economically treating with the PerfClean Tool. It is a safe and efficient way of cleaning new perforations prior to other stimulation treatments, as well as formation testing, and removal of scales, paraffins and other debris. This lightweight tool has no moving parts and is easily transported to remote or offshore locations.
With the PerfClean® Tool...
• Remove scale from the perforation tunnel and/or wellbore pipe
• Remove skin damage caused by perforating operations and wellbore damage prior to formation testing and/or stimulation
• Lower treating pressures required for stimulation treatments
• Enhance matrix acidizing operations
• Increase effectiveness of chemical treatments
• Increase effectiveness of horizontal well stimulation treatments
Case History 12 '92
Gaines County, Texas: Wolfcamp Formation
Operator called to run the PerfClean tool on a well that had a history of scale and paraffin problems. Production was at 6 bbls of oil, 20 bbls of water/day prior to the PerfClean treatment. The treatment was performed by moving the PerfClean tool through the perforated interval while pumping 190 bbls of an acid/solvent blend at approx. 2.8 bbls/min. Immediately after completing the treatment the operator put the well back on pump.
Following the recovery of the treatment fluid the well produced 60 bbls of oil, 62 bbls of water/day. Forty-five days after the treatment the well stabilized at 100 BBLS OF OIL, 60 bbls of water/day. The operator stated that this single treatment substantially increased the overall production of the lease.

French firm finals study of California field

SANTA FE SPRINGS — Sofregaz a subsidiary of Gaz de France, has completed a comprehensive, five-month study of the Ten Section field, located near Bakersfield, Calif.

The Ten Section field is owned by a group of California investors, including McFarland Energy Inc., the operator of the field. In its report, Sofregaz investigated all the technical aspects of the project, including geology, production history, existing wells and reservoir characteristics.

Michel Dussaud, president of Sofregaz US, concluded that Ten Section is highly suitable for natural gas storage. He stated: "At its ultimate stage of development, Zone 1, which includes the gas cap, could hold 65 BCF of natural gas while the reservoir pressure could be maintained 20 percent below the original pressure. The ultimate working gas capacity could be as high as 40 BCF with 600 MMCF/d of deliverability."

Dussaud also stressed a key advantage to Ten Section over most other reservoirs: its ability to be developed gradually in conjunction with the needs of the market.

Meet Our "Elite"

Lupe Flores receives her "Elite Temp" pin from Fran Hawke, Associate Manager of Temporary Resources.

Congratulations to Lupe Flores who has qualified as an "Elite Temp" for Temporary Resources. Lupe received a Superior rating for her exceptional Data Entry skills. Her supervisor stated that Lupe has far exceeded excellence in every task that she has been given. Her accuracy and experience were exactly what was needed to accomplish the results they were needing.

When not at work, Lupe uses those "phenomenally fast fingers" for crocheting. Her other leisure activities include reading and dancing. Lupe came to Temporary Resources after having worked at the same company for eleven years. Her references from there were positively glowing and Lupe has proven them to be completely true.

Guest speaker S.R. Bereskin will present a paper he co-authored with J.B. Hulen entitled "Devonian Reservoir Rocks of Nevada's Blackburn, Grant Canyon and Bacon Flat Fields: A Magmatic/Meteoric Hydrothermal Origin."

The two write that Devonian carbonate rocks of the Basin and Range province are largely responsible for the current enthusiastic search for hydrocarbons in Nevada.

Cost is $7 per person and reservations should be made by calling 683-1573.

The groundwater contaminant plume from the spill extended more than 300 feet from the well site. Studies of other spills suggested that natural volatilization and biologic metabolism mechanisms effectively restore groundwater and soil after the source of contamination is removed. In this case, it was decided to remove more than 100 cubic yards of contaminated soil and design and install a passive soil-venting system to enhance the natural remediation processes (Phase III). The total cost for soil removal, engineering and installation of the passive system was less than $20,000, much of which went to the cost of soil removal. The only other costs involved in this remediation involve periodic water sampling and analysis, which can be handles relatively inexpensively either in-house or by qualified contractors.

Environmental audits, while an unpleasant concept to many in the oil patch, should not be looked at as a negative factor, but as a way of protecting both the buyer and seller of an oil and gas property, whether it be producing properties or other facilities such as gas processing plants or refineries. Identified concerns can be handled by production and land staff, and in many cases, follow-up may involve only minimal expenditure to insure peace of mind and/or regulatory compliance. The smaller independent operator, who does not have the luxury of an environmental staff as do most of the majors, should not be put off by the "E" word, and can still afford to protect his investment by using qualified consultants.

Poinsettia courtesy La Casa Verde Nursery — Curt Wilcott/Reporter-Telegram

The poinsettia is considered a relatively new tradition, introduced to America in 1825 by Joel Roberts Poinsett of South Carolina who was a diplomat and the first American minister to Mexico, where he first saw the beautiful plant.

Legendary Christmas Traditions

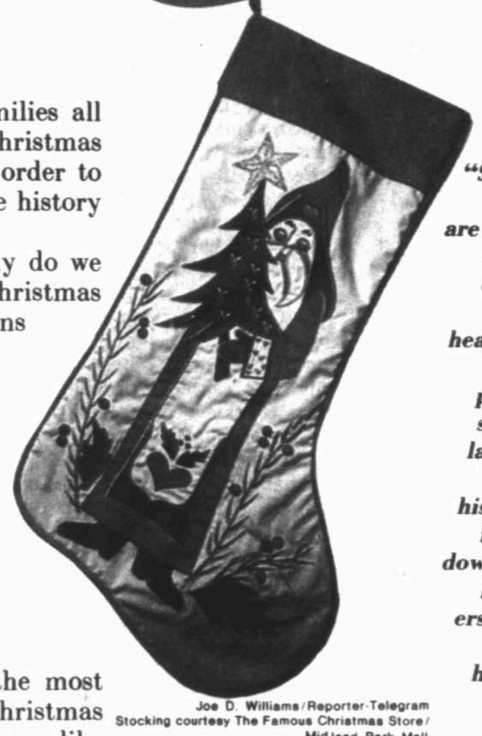

Text by Elizabeth Edwin

As the holiday season approaches each year, families all across the World begin to pull out boxes of Christmas treasures that have been stored in closets or attics in order to decorate their homes. However, not everyone knows the history behind their family traditions.

Where did the idea of Santa Claus come from? Why do we hang stockings by the fireplace? Why do we have a Christmas tree? Why do we kiss under the mistletoe? The questions could go on and on.

Most Christmas traditions are derived from legends that began centuries ago in foreign countries. As families moved to America, they brought their countries' customs and traditions with them. Many of these traditions are simply accepted, unquestioned, and many of their origins are very interesting.

Joe D. Williams/Reporter-Telegram
Stocking courtesy The Famous Christmas Store/ Midland Park Mall

"Stockings hung by the chimney with care" are a Christmas tradition for many families. In early times, stockings were hung by the hearth to dry. According to one legend, this practice comes from a story about St. Nicholas helping a poor man provide dowries for his daughters by throwing three bags of gold down his chimney, which landed in the daughters' stockings. Thus was born the tradition of hanging a stocking for Santa Claus to leave gifts in.

THE POINSETTIA. This time of year, one of the most popular plants is the poinsettia. It is considered the Christmas flower by many, and churches' altars, businesses and homes alike are decorated with them.

While most flowers, herbs and plants associated with Christmas have very ancient beginnings, the poinsettia is considered a New World contribution to the Christmas celebration which stems from Mexico. The flower was introduced to America around 1825 when Joel Roberts Poinsett (thus the name poinsettia) of South Carolina was a diplomat who was the first American minister to Mexico. He was intrigued by these flowers which grew all along the countryside. The Mexicans called them "flame flowers" or "flowers of the Holy Night," because they were used in the Mexican Nativity processions.

Poinsett sent clippings of these flowers home to share with family and friends. About a century later, Paul Ecke began to cultivate and interbred the plants as holiday plants each year. Thus they now come in white, pink and red.

However, there is a legend about this beautiful plant. The story goes, that there was a lonely child who was standing outside the manger where the new-born king lay sleeping. She was sad because she had no gift to bring. An angel hovering above noticed the child and saw her sadness. The angel made a pathway of green, red and white flowers. With a joyful heart, the child gathered the flowers and brought them to the child and a radiance touched her when the holy baby smiled at her.

CHRISTMAS COLORS. Traditionally, red and green are considered "the" Christmas colors. While many contemporary decorations have incorporated numerous fashion colors, red and green still convey thoughts of Christmas in most minds.

According to the World Book Encyclopedia, green represents the continuance of life through the winter and the Christian belief in eternal life through Christ. Red is symbolic of the blood shed by Jesus at His crucifixion.

Nutcrackers courtesy The Famous Christmas Store/ Midland Park Mall — Joe D. Williams/Reporter-Telegram

Nutcrackers serve as a symbol of Christmas due to the popularity of the classic ballet "The Nutcracker."

THE CHRISTMAS TREE. There are many beliefs about the origin of the Christmas tree. One is that it evolved from medieval Germany from the "Paradise Tree," a type of evergreen. Decorated with red apples, this tree was used in a popular play about Adam and Eve. By 1605, many German families used evergreens to decorate their homes. By the early 1800s, the German settlers in the United States used trees for their celebrations.

Today, just about every Christmas celebration throughout the world uses some form of a Christmas tree.

THE NUTCRACKER. The famous classic Christmas ballet "The Nutcracker," by Peter Ilick Tchaikovsky of Russia, is one of the few great classic works written specifically for the holiday. Therefore, the Nutcracker figures have become a popular decorations and a symbols of dreams for the season.

SANTA CLAUS. The legend of Santa Claus as a man who brings gifts to good children at Christmas is believed to have come from St. Nicholas, the Dutch patron saint.

Actually, little is known about the real person named St. Nicholas except that he was a priest and later served as the bishop of Myra. According to legend, he once aided a poor nobleman who had no dowries for his three daughters, and therefore no men would marry them. It is said that St. Nicholas threw three bags of money through an opening in the nobleman's home, which landed in the stockings that were hanging by the fire to dry. As a result, the three daughters had dowries and were married. From this legend comes the idea that St. Nicholas secretly brings gifts, possibly through the chimney, and there are presents left in stockings hanging by the hearth.

Through time, as the English settlers adopted the Dutch legends and festivities associated with St. Nicholas, the English-speaking children spoke the Dutch name for the saint as Sinterklaas. As the children became excited and hurried, the pronunciation sounded more like Santy Claus and eventually became the popular, most commonly used name of Santa Claus.

St. Nicholas was pictured as a tall, thin, stately man who wore bishop's robes and rode a white horse. Then, in 1809, the legend of Santa Claus as we know him today developed from stories by Washington Irving published in the Knickerbocker's History of New York. In Irving's writings, St. Nicholas was said to have magical powers to be able to fly over rooftops in his horse and wagon that was filled with toys.

The legend was added to Dec. 23, 1823, through an anonymous poem, "An Account of a Visit of St. Nicholas," published in the Troy (New York) Sentinel. The famous poem begins "Twas the night before Christmas," and has been credited to American scholar Clement Clarke Moore, but some believe that American land surveyer Henry Livingston may have written it. Here, Santa was described as a stout, jolly man with twinkling eyes who rides in a sleigh pulled by eight reindeer and the annual trip down the chimney was popularized.

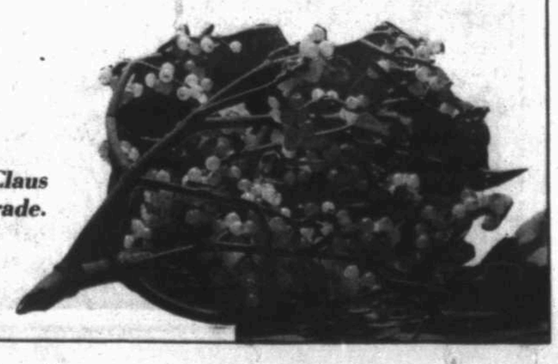

Thomas Nast — an American cartoonist — created the present-day image of Santa Claus as a jolly old elf-like character through the appearance of his drawings published in Harper's Weekly between 1863 and 1886.

Through the works of these Santa "pioneers," a kind and generous bishop, St. Nicholas from the fourth century A.D., was transformed into the Santa Claus of today.

Ladies association has musical meeting

By Marilyn McKnight Harrison

Described as the first "real cold of the year," Friday, Dec. 4, would have been a good day to stay home by the fireplace. However, members and guests of the Midland Country Club Ladies Association who ventured out for the last meeting of the year were glad they did, coming away with high spirits after the uplifting program.

McKnight-Harrison

The ladies were entertained by the Symphony Pops Choir under the direction of Rob Hunt, associate conductor of the Midland-Odessa Symphony and Chorale. The seven-member group sang a selection of Christmas music, ranging from the old familiar to the new. Our personal favorite was a collection of Mexican, Caribbean and South American songs.

The choir is in its fourth year of existence as a performing ensemble of the Chorale. Specializing in the modern pop and jazz genres, it has performed for numerous community and private functions, including the Brown Bag Lunch Series at ClayDesta Atrium and the Museum of the Southwest's Sunday Lawn Concerts.

The Christmas meeting began with a social hour in the club's foyer. Hostesses were Edna (Mrs. William H.) Hibbitts, Joan (Mrs. William W.) Henry and Babs (Mrs. Richard) Sevier.

The luncheon following featured Chicken Breast with Herbed Cranberry Sauce and Strawberry Shortcake for dessert. The tables were festively decorated with roly poly stuffed Santas as centerpieces, green cloths and red napkins.

A large crowd turned out to celebrate the season. Among those present were Sue (Mrs. Nolan) Hirsch, Janice (Mrs. Frank) Kubica, Dee (Mrs. Paul) Morris, Carolyn (Mrs. Larry) Seright, Sally (Mrs. Steve) Melzer and Ginger (Mrs. Jimmy) Floyd.

The members danced to the music of "Night Life" from Lubbock and enjoyed a breakfast buffet served at ten o'clock.

Poinsettias on the individual tables and an ice sculpture of a Christmas tree on the serving table added to the festive decorations already in place at the club.

Orman Hubbard, president, introduced new members, Rhonda and Lynn Durham Jr., Betty and Al Schorre and Gayle and Doc Dodson.

Among others seen at the dance were Sherry and Jerry Hewett, Jeanne and Bill Worley, Phyllis and Jon Short, Joy and Jim Allega and Barbara and Roger Allen.

FOUR-YEAR-OLD Nathan Hicks, son of former Midlanders Rhonda and Randy Hicks, recently won the "Home Alone II" "Scream" Test in the Mid-Cities Area between Dallas and Fort Worth.

For the best imitation of the scream made famous by the young actor MacAulay Culkin in "Home Alone," Nathan was awarded a limosine ride for himself and several friends to a sneak preview of the movie, "Home Alone II," as well as several other prizes.

Nathan's parents performed at both the Midland Community Theatre when they lived here. In addition, Randy authored several of the Mummers scripts.

THE UNIVERSITY GRADUATE Women of Midland celebrated the season with a delightful Christmas party recently at the Plaza Club. Members and their guests were invited for caroling, wassail and Christmas goodies.

The inimitable pianist, Maneeta Heckathorne, who studied at Julillard School of Music and can play anything from classical to boogie, provided background music for the event and also accompanied a sing-along.

The club was all decked out for the holidays, and miniature Christmas trees on the tables added to the festive ambience.

Hostesses were Joyce (Mrs. James) McClaine and Maxine (Mrs. Robert) Hannifin.

Among others spotted at the party were president Shirley Johnston and her husband, Randall; Nova Lynn Campbell with her daughter, Jerrianne Young, Esta and Cary Geron, Jackie and Vance Hendricks, Gretchen and Frank Bell, Frieda Duggan and Linda and Richard Nagy.

CONGRATULATIONS AND BEST WISHES to LaVerne Foster and Coy Watson, who were united in marriage at 2 p.m. Nov. 28 in Midland's First Presbyterian Church. The bride's son, the Rev. Richard Foster of Hutchinson, Kan., officiated, and the Rev. Steve Schorr of Midland assisted.

The groom's niece, Robbie Segars of Hobbs, N.M., and his nephew, C.W. Downey Jr. of Graham, and the bride's sons, Ronnie Foster of Houston and Randy Foster of Midland, were honor attendants.

The Watsons were honored prior to their marriage with a Mexican Fiesta party at the home f Linda and Autry Stephens. Other host couples were Marilyn and Neal Allen, Kathy and Andrew Armstrong, Sue and Ed Brannon, Lou and Win Brown, Denise and Bobby Burns, Mona and Don Craig, Hallie and Dale McCarter, Margaret and John Rhea, Sharon and Gene Smith and Trinka and Nicholas Taylor.

The party decor included colorful centerpieces using violas, cacti, chili peppers and streamers. To complete the theme, the bride was given a fiesta headdress.

LEGENDS: Origin of symbols interesting

(From 1F)

■ MISTLETOE. One legend about mistletoe comes from Norse mythology. It was said that Balder — Norse god of light, peace, virtue and wisdom — was the best loved of all the gods. His mother, Frigga, had a dream that Balder was in trouble and when she awoke, she vowed to protect him. She went throughout the world asking and receiving promises from everything derived from fire, water, air and Earth that they would not harm Balder.

Because Balder was protected, it became a game to throw deadly objects at him, knowing that they would not harm him because of the promises made to his mother.

It was said that all were happy for Balder's safety, except for one evil foe, Loki — a god known for creating discord and mischief. Loki found out that Frigga had overlooked one plant: the mistletoe.

Because mistletoe is a parasite that grows on trees without ever touching the ground, it is therefore not of Earth, and had made no promise to Frigga. Taking a sharp sprig of the plant, Loki created an arrow from a branch of mistletoe and killed Balder.

All were saddened by the loss of Balder, and Frigga made the now remorseful mistletoe promise never to cause harm again. Since that time, mistletoe has become a symbol of peace between enemies and love between friends. Frigga made it a symbol of love and promised to bestow a kiss on all who passed beneath it.

■ CRADLE PLANTS. Although not as well known as the poinsettia in the United States, the cradle plant has important symbolism during the Christmas season.

Through legend, it was said that Joseph gathered grasses — wild thyme, symbolizing strength and activity, and sweet woodruff, a sign of humility — to provide a resting place for Mary, and that is where Jesus was born. The legend goes on to say that the white flowers of Our Lady's bedstraw turned to brilliant gold and burst open when the baby was laid upon them. Sainfoin bloomed to form a wreath of pink flowers around the Christ Child's head.

Outside the stable, the light that had guided the Wise Men broke up into the masses of tiny flowers we now call star-of-Bethlehem.

■ SAND DOLLAR. The sand dollar is considered a religious symbol of Christ and therefore, some chose to include them in their celebration of his birth.

The sand dollar is one of the most unusual of all marine life — particularly when it comes to its structural features and the symbolic nature of its design.

The five slits on the edge of each Sand Dollar represent the five wounds in the body of Christ. There is an Easter Lily design in the center — reminiscent of the Star of Bethlehem. On the back is an outline of a Poinsettia, the Christmas flower. And when the Sand Dollar is broken open, five small, perfect replicas of a dove will be found — five doves of peace.

■ HOLLY. Some believe that the word "holly" is from the word "holy." However, linguists say it actually derives from its Old English name, spelled holegn or holen. But it has long been considered in symbolic association with Christ. The white flowers of holly represent His purity, while the red berries are symbolic of His blood and the leaves His crown of thorns. The bark, which is bitter, is for His sorrow.

According to Irene Chalmers' "The Great American Christmas Almanac," the ancient Druids — long before Christ — believed that holly was sacred, "probably because it was evergreen and therefore favored by the sun. It was considered sacred and believed to be inhabited by spirits, so the Druids brought the holly indoors during the winter to give the spirits warmth and shelter from the elements."

Centuries later, when holly had become a part of the Christmas festivities in the north, legend said that fairies and gnomes who lived in holly trees would come indoors with the cut branches and stay — unobserved — to enjoy the 12 days of Christmas.

■ HANGING THE STOCKING. Legend has it that the first St. Nicholas, a bishop in Asia Minor in the fourth century, heard of a poor man who was about to sell his three daughters into slavery because he could not provide a dowry for them. St. Nicholas saved the daughters, one-by-one, with gifts of gold down the chimney where it fell into a stocking that was hung there to dry. And, so it is that children (and some adults) often find treasures and gifts left in the stocking.

■ ORNAMENTS. Some believe the custom of hanging ornaments on the Christmas tree started in primitive times when food was hung high on trees to keep wild animals from eating it.

But many people believe the custom more accurately comes from medieval times when when evergreen trees were hung with red apples in celebration of Adam and Eve Day, according to "The Great American Christmas Alamnac" by Irena Chalmers.

■ LIGHTING THE TREE. Tree lights also have their share of legends.

A tale, as told in an old manuscript in a Scilian monastery, said that when Christ was born, all creatures — including trees — on Earth went to Bethlehem to give Him gifts. Many trees had plenty to give the child because they could bear fruit, and they continued to push a little fir tree — which had nothing to offer but its evergreen leaves — into the background.

An angel noticed the little tree and its problem, and asked some stars from the sky to come down and rest on the fir's dark boughs. The legend said that when Jesus saw the shining tree, He blessed it and the custom of adorning the Christmas tree with ornaments and lights was born.

■ DOUGH ORNAMENTS. Popular as gifts, dough ornaments also have a tale behind their beginning and the reason they are a part of many Christmas traditions.

It is said that Mrs. Claus had a specialty of baking. One day, a few mischievous elves — who could no longer resist the mouthwatering aroma of her baking — snuck into the kitchen to get a taste.

Well, as the elves stumbled and climbed their way to the cookies and cakes, they accidently knocked a fresh bowl of bread dough off the cabinet. A dough fight ensued, and by the time Mrs. Claus returned, the dough was everywhere.

The elves felt badly about ruining Mrs. Claus' dough and messing up her kitchen, and wanted to make it up to her. Because the dough was no longer of any use for baking, the elves — being elves — made her gifts from the dough. They shaped a bear, a heart, a rocking horse and a reindeer and painted each item especially for her.

From these mischievous elves' escapades has come the charm of dough ornaments and their popularity as gifts.

■ THE NATIVITY. According to some, St. Francis of Assisi was responsible for the popularization of the nativity scene. While it probably existed before him, it was only a decorative item. St. Francis — being a very gentle man — was known for his love of animals and he wanted to bring home to the people the humanity and humility of the Christ Child.

The Church at this time was very rigid, emphasizing that this life was sinful and full of sorrow. St. Francis wanted to add some hope and joy of God's love to this disheartening message. So, in 1223 or 1224, in Greccio, Italy, he constructed a life-sized manger scene with live animals. The gospel was sung around the scene. Church members were touched by the nativity scene and embraced it as a means of making the Christmas message more real.

DEAR ABBY

This tiny baby may need large dose of medical care

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: You really goofed in your reply to "Not Too Tall in Tacoma." Those who were remarking on the "so small" baby may be rude — but they are also right!

Van Buren

I am a family physician and was shocked that Dear Abby did not recognize that an 11-month-old baby weighing only 10 pounds represented extreme failure to thrive, and should be taken immediately to a physician for evaluation. As a general rule, healthy infants double their birth weight in the first four to five months and triple it by one year of age. Their height increases by 50 percent by 1 year of age. Therefore, even the lowest fifth percentile child should weigh about 17 pounds 8 ounces and have a length of about 27 inches by 11 months of age.

I hope that the mother who wrote to you will see this and take her son to a doctor, who can determine the nutritional or medical reason for lack of growth and restore his health. — ELIZABETH BRACKETT, M.D., MINNEAPOLIS

DEAR DR. BRACKETT: Thank you, and many other readers who sent a similar message. It has been many years since I, or the rest of my staff, have been involved with a baby under 12 months of age, and therefore, the "numbers" went unnoticed. Mea culpa.

DEAR ABBY: The letter you published about "Ricardo" and his wife, who was hurt because her husband attended a dinner party to which she was not invited because she did not speak fluent Spanish (the hosts were bilingual and had enjoyed her hospitality), brought to mind a story about the late Will Rogers:

It seems that a society matron gave a big party and invited Will but not his wife. Will went to the party alone and entertained the guests with his witty, humorous stories, after which he sent his hostess a bill for his services!

The society matron complained to Will, saying hers was a social invitation, and he had been invited as a guest. Will responded, "Oh? When I am invited to a SOCIAL affair, my wife is also invited."

Ricardo should learn such loyalty. — J.B. IN PORTLAND

DEAR J.B.: I agree with you. But according to my mail, it is not uncommon in mixed (cross-cultural) marriages for one spouse to socialize without the other. In our culture, a man who cares for his wife's feelings will usually refuse an invitation that does not include her. In mixed marriages, it does not always turn out that way — much to the chagrin of the wife.

DEAR ABBY: You recently printed a letter from a doctor's wife who complained about patient phone calls to his home.

My father was a small-town lawyer who frequently was interrupted at home with non-emergency calls from clients, friends and relatives — usually seeking free legal advice. One neighbor was particularly disruptive, calling two or three times a week.

One evening, my father had come home early from a social engagement to find that this neighbor had called four times during the evening and had left a message for my father to return his call as soon as he came in.

Dad stretched, yawned and set his alarm for 3:30 a.m., and then went to bed. At 3:30 a.m., he got up and returned the call, saying, "I just got home and I am returning your call — I knew it had to be something urgent for you to have telephoned my home so many times. What can I do for you?"

Guess who never called Dad at home again? — SAM'S DAUGHTER (ALSO AN ATTORNEY)

DEAR READERS: Due to your magnanimous response to the offer of PLEASE CALL POLICE banners to benefit the Westside Center for Independent Living, the organization is running a little late in filling orders. (To date, it has processed over 200,000 orders, and there are trays of mail yet to open.) Please be patient. My thanks to all of you!

This is for everyone — teens to seniors — "The Anger in All of Us and How to Deal With It." To order, send a business-sized, self-addressed envelope, plus check or money order for $3.95 ($4.50 in Canada) to: Dear Abby Anger Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054. (Postage is included.)

Midland Community Theatre's production of "A Christmas Carol" was a hit even before it opened Thursday.

"We've already sold 7,000 seats," said Don Bachmann, MCT executive director. Normally at this time of year the theater stages a light comedy, with attendance of about 5,000 to 5,500.

Within a week of opening the box office for "A Christmas Carol," MCT had sold 5,500 seats, Bachmann said.

The rapid sales forced the theater to open up additional performances. Those are now sold out as well.

"Right now we have waiting lists on every performance that are 100 deep," Bachmann said.

The prospects of getting to see the musical seen slim for those who do not already hold reservations or tickets. Yet, there is hope for some, Bachmann said.

"I want to encourage people to come on the nights of performance," he said. "Many times we will set up chairs. We try to accommodate the people as well as we can, and invariably we have no-shows or people who turn in their tickets at the last minute."

Next year, MCT plans to open "A Christmas Carol" the first weekend after Thanksgiving and play to Dec. 23, Bachmann said.

"It's our objective to reestablish 'A Christmas Carol' as an annual Christmas event for the community," Bachmann said. "The principal reason is (that) it's the most demanded show that we've had."

MCT's production is a musical adaptation written by Charles Jones.

"His objective in the writing was to present a festive Christmas tale that was indeed full of glad tidings, joy and hope," Bachmann said.

"The 'Christmas Carol' that we deal with concerns itself principally with the reclamation of the soul of Ebenezer, and he is indeed redeemed through the efforts of the spirits that visit him on Christmas Eve, so the experience is a very uplifting one.

"When people walk away from the version we do, I think they'll feel good about coming to the theater. And that's what we want to do."

Bachmann said musical numbers include traditional Christmas songs that will be highly recognizable, including "God Rest Ye Merry Gentlemen," "Deck the Halls," "Away in a Manager" and "Greensleeves."

The cast includes Michael Trost as Scrooge; Scott Lunsford as Bob Cratchit; Liz Koeninger as Mrs. Cratchit; Jane Burgess as Christmas Past; Bill Kersh as Christmas Present; Ross Padgett as Christmas Future; John Phillips as the ghost of Jacob Marley; and Shane Scribner as Tiny Tim.

The professional staff working on "A Christmas Carol" includes Jan Collerd, choreographer; Paul Fiorella, sets; Mae Dawson, costumes; and Eddie Taylor and Jeff Lander, lighting and special effects.

Story was labor of love for Dickens

By Georgia Todd Temple
Staff writer

He was 31 years old and deeply troubled.

He had thought he had arrived at the zenith of his career, yet those who paid him had indicated his income might be cut. He had spent the summer worrying about his mounting bills, especially the large mortgage on his house.

After being forced to go to work when he was 12 because his father was imprisoned, the taste of poverty still hung tight around him. And now his father and brothers were pleading for loans. Already he was having difficulty supporting his four children, and his wife, Kate, was again expecting.

He had worried himself into October, and his prospects seemed to be at an all-time low.

The year could be 1992. It isn't. Instead, it is 1843. And the "he" is Charles Dickens, one of the best-loved English novelists of the 17th century and author of such books as "Great Expectations," "A Tale of Two Cities" and "David Copperfield."

Yet this same Dickens had written the following words to a friend during the summer of 1843, "The wrong kind of fire is burning in my head, and I don't think I can write: Nevertheless, I am trying."

By early October, he was feeling desperate. He hoped resuming his nightly London walks would spark his creativity. He walked past London's better neighborhoods and toward the tenements along the Thames River. Nothing came to him. Then, as he neared his home, that flash of inspiration he so hoped for hit. What about a Christmas story?

But, Christmas was less than three months away. Whatever he wrote would have to be completed by the end of November to be printed and distributed in time for Christmas. He came upon the idea of adapting a Christmas-goblin story from a chapter in "The Pickwick Papers."

And thus was born one of the most famous of all Christmas stories — "A Christmas Carol."

"Once started on its course, his 'Christmas Carol' ran away with him," wrote Eleanor Farjeon in the introduction to The Oxford Illustrated Dickens Christmas Books. "He wept at it and laughed, and wept again; it so excited him that in the small hours, 'when all sober folks had gone to bed,' he walked London's back streets for 15

Thomas J. Burns tells the background behind "A Christmas Story" in a Reader's Digest article December 1989, entitled "The Second Greatest Christmas Story Ever Told."

"Gradually, in the course of his writing, something surprising happened to Dickens," Burns wrote. "What had begun as a desperate, calculated plan to rescue himself from debt — 'a little scheme,' as he described it — soon began to work a change in the author.

"As he wrote about the kind of Christmas he loved — joyous family parties with clusters of mistletoe hanging from the ceiling; cheerful carols, games, dances and gifts; delicious feasts of roast goose, plum pudding, fresh breads, all enjoyed in front of a blazing yule log — the joy of the season he cherished began to alleviate his depression.

"A 'Christmas Carol' captured his heart and soul. It became a labor of love."

Dickens became so caught up in the story, he even took charge of the design of the book. On Dec. 2 the manuscript was ready to go to the printers. The author's copies were delivered Dec. 17.

"And when, in December, he launched it off his own chest on to his public's," Ms. Farjeon wrote, "he let himself loose like a madman in the keeping of his first Christmas after his first Christmas book. 'Such dinings,' he writes to an American friend, 'such dancings, such conjurings, such blindman's-buffings, such theatre-goings, such kissings-out of old years and kissings-in of new ones, never took part in these parts before.' "

Dickens had no doubt that "A Christmas Carol" would be popular; however, neither he nor his publisher were ready for the response that came.

"The first edition of 6,000 sold out by Christmas Eve, and as the little book's heartwarming message spread, Dickens later recalled, he received 'by every post, all manner of letters about their home sand hearths, and how the 'Carol' is read aloud there, and kept on a very little shelf by itself,' " Ms. Farjeon wrote.

Among those who wrote to Dickens was Lord Francis Jeffrey, an eminent Scottish judge and critic.

"You should be happy yourself," Jeffrey wrote, "for you may be sure you have done more good by this little publication, fostered more kindly feelings, and prompted more positive acts of beneficence than can be traced to all the pulpits and confessionals in Christendom since Christmas 1842."

The importance of "A Christmas Carol" in its own time is easy to overlook from the vantage point of 149 years distance. Dickens was a social commentator and, at heart, a self-proclaimed reformer. His sympathy lay with the downtrodden, for he knew what it was like to be poverty stricken.

"Charles was removed form school at the age of 12 to supplement the family income through work in a shoe blacking factory," wrote Stefan R. Dziemianowicz in "The Hidden Charles Dickens."

"At almost the same time, the rest of his family was thrown into debtor's prison," Dziemianowicz wrote.

"The humiliation of his family, combined with the pain of separation from them affected the sensitive young Dickens profoundly. The sanctity of home and family and the ill effects of wealth on traditional values were to become favorite subjects in his work and, in time, emblems for the age he wrote about."

In "A Christmas Carol," Dickens uses Scrooge's indifference and later repentance to illuminate the horrors of workhouses and prisons.

"So loud this Victorian prophet cried poverty's warning, that men began to erase some of the writing on the wall," writes Ms. Farjeon. "If Dickens's Society loomed larger than life, even he did not exaggerate the ills it countenanced. Among these were the prisons and workhouses of 1843.

" 'They were not to be borne,' he cried, 'they were unbearable!' He made them unbearable to his vast public; what the public can bear no longer is compelled to change. It takes an irresistible force to do this singlehanded. Dickens had it, and it surged through the first of his Christmas Books," she wrote.

The publication in December of 1843 of "A Christmas Carol" provided a landmark in Dickens's literary career.

"The passage of time since that date has proved it not only his finest ghost story, but arguably the most famous of all his works," wrote Peter Haining in "The Complete Ghost Stories of Charles Dickens."

"On top of this it began a tradition amongst publishers — still widely observed today — of issuing a special volume for the Christmas season, in particular one with a ghostly or supernatural theme.

"In announcing the tale of the miser Scrooge and his transformation at the hands of supernatural agencies, Dickens called the work 'A Ghost Story of Christmas' — and as a result of its extraordinary success he went on to publish four more titles for the season, all of which he referred to as 'Christmas Books.' "

Haining, who credits "A Christmas Carol" as the "book which founded the tradition of telling ghost stories at Christmas," points out that in some circles, "A Christmas Carol" also is credited with having invented the idea of white Christmases.

"According to Professor Hubert Lamb of the climatic research unit at East Anglia University, snowy Christmases are actually very infrequent, and the belief in them, 'owes a good deal to Charles Dickens and 'A Christmas Carol.'

"Professor Lamb found the explanation for the belief during research into past weather records, which showed that for the first eight years of Dickens's life there was a white Christmas every year with either snow or white hoar frost," Haining wrote. "Though this may well have left a vivid memory of Christmas weather with Dickens, says the professor, it was very much a freak period."

"The idea of a white Christmas is fairly mythical, you see," Haining quotes Lamb as having said. "Christmas Day and the days either side have a rather good sunshine record. The most characteristic picture is of a rather quiet, sunny period between more disturbed winter weather.' "

Dickens also is credited by J.A. Hammerton in an introduction to a library of Dickens' works published in 1910 with giving "enduring expression" to everything an old English Christmas stood for — "good fellowship and kindness of heart. It attached to it new ideas and gave it a place in literature."

In his own time, Dickens was called by some, the Apostle of Christmas, Burns wrote. "And, at his death in 1870, a poor child in London was heard to ask: Dickens dead? Then will Father Christmas die, too?"

"A Christmas Carol" did not solve Dickens' financial woes. He made enough to scrape by, and as Burns wrote, the novella's tremendous popularity revived Dickens' audience for subsequent novels.

"In the midst of self-doubt and confusion, a man sometimes does his best work," Burns wrote. "From the storm of tribulation comes a gift. For Charles Dickens, a little Christmas novel brought new-found faith in himself and in the redemptive joy of the season."

MCT: Christmas musical is sold out

(From 1G)

The musical director is Jeff Fentem. Stage manager is Jed Barker, who is assisted by Terry Martin, Jody McGilligott and Will Combes.

"When people come and see the show, they are going to see a full stage production," Bachmann said.

Instead of being set in the 1840s when Charles Dickens wrote "A Christmas Carol," MCT's production is set in England in the 1880s.

"We've taken the time frame and moved it to the 1880s. We're in the height of the Victorian era in which most of the social ills of the day were being addressed.

"At that point in time, our Christmas traditions such as the Christmas tree and presents and big turkey dinner had pretty much become accepted. And a good number of these English traditions were adapted from the German. The play is much lighter than the original one."

Weight Loss Mystery Baffles Scientists

WASHINGTON -- Scientists are baffled by a natural food ingredient that caused people to lose weight even though they were instructed not to alter normal eating patterns.

Although other scientists and studies may not agree, a study published in The British Journal of Nutrition found that the ingredient, a natural plant colloid, can cause significant weight loss. Several explanations for the weight loss are suggested, but the most likely according to scientists in a Finnish study, is that colloids seem to decrease the intestinal absorption of calories. However, universal acceptance of this theory will depend on further study.

National Dietary Research, an organization committed to the research and development of nutritional solutions to world-wide health problems, has successfully isolated and incorporated a series of colloids into a unique food tablet called Food Source One.. A significant breakthrough in nutritional weight control, Food Source One provides a scientifically designed method for weight loss. When used as directed, Food Source One replaces high calorie fats with lower calorie nutrients, thereby providing optimum nutrition with a minumum number of fat calories. According to a study in the American Journal of Clinical Nutrition, you do not need to restrict the amount of food you eat to lose weight, just the fat.

Food Source One is unlike any other product on the market and is available immediately because it is not a drug and only contains natural ingredients already known to be safe. Physicians and pharmacists are praising Food Source One as a natural, drug free alternative for confronting obesity.

Opening lead: Ten of ♠

We have frequently written that aces should not be squandered on low cards—their purpose is to capture kings and queens. That is true in the vast majority of cases, but bear in mind that generalities are just that.

The auction was a case of simple addition. With 11 points and a five-card suit, North was not interested in anything more than game. That looked like a cakewalk, since the combined count was at least 27 high-card points.

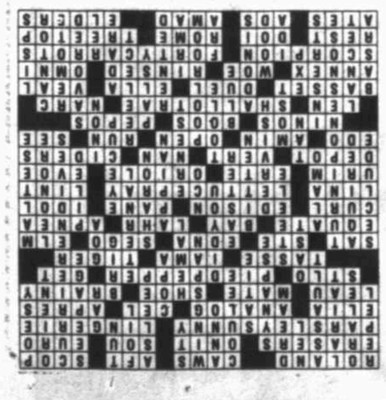

West's ten of spades lead was covered by the jack and queen and ducked by declarer. The spade return went to dummy's king, and a diamond was led to declarer's queen. West took the ace and cleared spades. Although the finesse for the jack of diamonds lost, West had no entry to the two good spades and declarer coasted home.

There is no guarantee the defenders can defeat the contract, but look at what might happen should West smoothly hold up the ace of diamonds, allowing declarer's queen to win. When declarer continues with a diamond, West plays low once more.

Looking at all the hands, it's easy to see that South can collect an overtrick by rising with the king of diamonds, but that is an unlikely play. To protect against jack-third in the West hand, declarer will almost surely finesse, losing to East's jack. East forces out declarer's last spade stopper and, since there's no way to make nine tricks without letting West gain the lead, the contract must go down.

Staff report

Pennies, nickels and dimes add up to dollars and that is what the Museum of the Southwest is asking for in its annual small-gift drive for operating support.

The museum's goal is to raise $35,000 from gifts of $5 or less up to gifts of $999.

Development of exhibitions, care of the Hogan Collection of art and the Bissell and Berry archaeological artifact collections, maintenance of the museum's Turner Mansion, Stables, Fredda Turner Durham Children's Museum and Marian Blakemore Planetarium fall in the category of operations.

The museum has been supported by volunteer work and gifts of Midlanders and other West Texans since it was chartered in 1965.

"Support by the community is essential to the continued success of the museum," and to maintain the high standards of an accredited museum," said Wendell L. Ott, the museum's director.

"A special incentive this year is that, until the end of March, all new gifts and gifts increased from last year's level will be matched by a challenge grant by the Abell-Hanger Foundation."

Museum records show that 56,700 persons came to the museum last fiscal year for exhibitions, Museum School, video Tuesdays, lawn concerts, sky shows and other program and activities. Most of these events were free of charge. Although no admission is charged to the galleries or grounds, a $2 donation is suggested.

While memberships are essential to the museum's funding and volunteer base, they make up only a small percentage of needed funds.

The museum provides educational docented tours for public and private school students and for other groups. Children's Museum exhibitions are designed and built in-house and are planned to include basics from the Texas Essential Elements mandated by the State Board of Education.

Sky shows produced by Mark Hartman, planetarium director, are designed for the grade level of students attending the shows.

Hartman also produces a public sky show, West Texas Skies, a life star talk show about the seasonal changes of the local skies.

Southwestern art and archaeological artifacts form the core of the museum's collections.

For information on how to support the museum with funds, donated goods and services, or by volunteer work, call 683-2882 or 570-7077.

ENTERTAINMENT IN BRIEF

■ Groups schedule Christmas shows

■ The choirs from Midland High School and Midland Freshman High School are combining to present their annual Christmas concert at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday.

"A Season of Carols," which features a collection of traditional Christmas carols, many of which are Robert Shaw arrangements, will be presented at the Midland High School Auditorium. Each musical selection will be introduced with a narration, which places the carol in a unique and meaningful setting.

Admission is $5 for adults and $2.50 for students. For more information call 689-1129.

■ "Carols and Choruses," a program of favorite Christmas carols and choruses from the masterworks of the season will be presented at 7 p.m. today at First Presbyterian Church, 800 W. Texas Ave.

The program, directed by Lester Ackerman, is the final concert in the Fall 1992 Festival Music Series. All concerts are free and open to the public.

Participating in the program will be the Sanctuary Choir, the Agape Ringers Handbell Choir, the Lone Star Brass Quintet as well as soloists, a harpist, organist and chamber orchestra.

The program will include Bach's "For Unto Us a Child is Born," a selection of choruses and arias from the Christmas portion of Handel's "Messiah" and other holiday favorites.

Nursery care will be provided. A reception in Lynn Hall will follow. For more information call 684-7821.

■ St. Luke's United Methodist Church, 3011 W. Kansas Ave., will celebrate the season of Advent with two choral concerts this week in the sanctuary of the church.

The 50-voice Chancel Choir will present a free program of favorite carols arranged by John Rutter at 5 p.m. today. The carols, which are fully orchestrated, will be accompanied by 29 members of the Midland-Odessa Symphony Orchestra. Some of the carols include congregational singing on selected verses. Included on the program are familiar carols such as "O Come, All Ye Faithful," "Joy to the World," "O Come, O Come Emmanuel" and "O Holy Night."

Then at 6:30 p.m. Wednesday the Youth Choir will present a program of Christmas music. This choir is the regular choir for the 8:30 a.m. worship service at St. Luke's UMC and has more than 60 members.

Several youth choir members will be featured as soloists and some of the music will include special instrumental accompaniments including strings and handbells.

The music program at St. Luke's UMC is directed by Bert W. Bostic. The public is invited to attend both concerts.

■ The Music Ministry of First United Methodist Church will sponsor a "Sing-a-Long Messiah" at 4 p.m. Dec. 19.

All Midland area singers are invited. No advance preparation is necessary. Accompaniment will be by members of the Midland-Odessa Symphony.

All those present will join in together to sing the choruses in Handel's masterpiece. Those wishing to listen to the performance are invited to attend and sit in the balcony.

Soloists include Joe Duerksen, Lee Harley, Jane Kisner and Ruthann and George McTyre.

Singers may bring their own scores or borrow one at the door. For more information call the Music Ministry at First UMC, 682-3701.

■ The Lone Star Brass Quintet of the Midland-Odessa Symphony Orchestra will present the third in the 1992 series of Lunch Hour Concerts for Advent and Christmas from 12:05 to 12:35 p.m. Wednesday at First United Methodist Church, Main Street at Ohio Avenue.

The concert series, in its ninth year, is sponsored by the church's Music Ministries, directed by Jane and Brad Kisner.

As is traditional in this series, lunch will be served in the Fellowship Hall at a nominal charge a half hour before and after the concert.

■ "Angels Aware," a Christmas musical, will be presented by the children of Grace Lutheran Church, 3000 Golf Course Road, at 7 p.m. Dec. 20.

The public is invited to attend.

Christmas gala

Midland Community Concerts will present The New Christy Minstrels in a Christmas gala at 8 p.m. Tuesday at Midland Center, Wall Avenue at Main Street. MCC memberships are available. For more information call 694-8008.

■ Author has book due

"Portraits of the Pecos Frontier," a nonfiction book about West Texas by Midland author Patrick Dearen, will be published in February by Texas Tech University Press.

The soft cover book, a follow-up to Dearen's "Castle Gap and the Pecos Frontier" published by Texas Christian University Press in 1988, focuses on the folklore and history of the region and includes profiles of intriguing individuals.

The foreword is by noted western novelist Elmer Kelton of San Angelo.

Advance orders, at $14.95 plus tax and $3.50 shipping, are being taken by Texas Tech University Press, Lubbock, Texas 79409-1037.

Dearen, a former reporter for the Reporter-Telegram and San Angelo Standard Times, is also the author of three novels.

■ Jam session set

The West Texas Jazz Society presents "Jammin' to the Max" at 3:30 p.m. today at Smarty's Blue Max Restaurant & Lounge, south of Highway 80, midway between Midland International Airport and Loop 250.

All jazz lovers are invited. No admission will be charged. Players are invited to bring their instruments and perform.

■ Art exhibit to close

In the exhibit, titled "Beneath the Surface," Geiger uses figurative death masks, anthropomorphic imagery and arbitrary colors to present the viewer with an image which is a distillation of both representational and abstract landscape impressions.

■ Photos on display

"Much of Linroth's photography evokes the expansive beauty of the West Texas plains," said Jim Blischke, co-owner of Pages & Prints.
