Four die in shooting spree at D.C. police headquarters

WASHINGTON (AP) — A gunman opened fire inside the District of Columbia's police headquarters Tuesday in a shooting spree that left two FBI agents, a city detective and the gunman himself dead, police said.

It was not immediately clear why the shooting started, but Police Chief Fred Thomas said the gunman had brought a semi-automatic rifle into a squad room located on the third floor of police headquarters.

The three dead officers were assigned to a joint FBI-police task force that works on unsolved murders. Thomas said the gunman and two other people were being interviewed by members of the so-called "cold case squad."

Thomas described the three as "either witnesses or suspects" in cases, but he declined to provide further details. He also would not

"Mr. Clinton better watch out if he comes down here. He'd better have a bodyguard."

Clinton-needs-a-bodyguard quote by Helms stirs uproar

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Jesse Helms, for two decades a combative conservative in the Senate, stirred a storm of controversy with his remark that President Clinton "better have a bodyguard" if he travels to North Carolina.

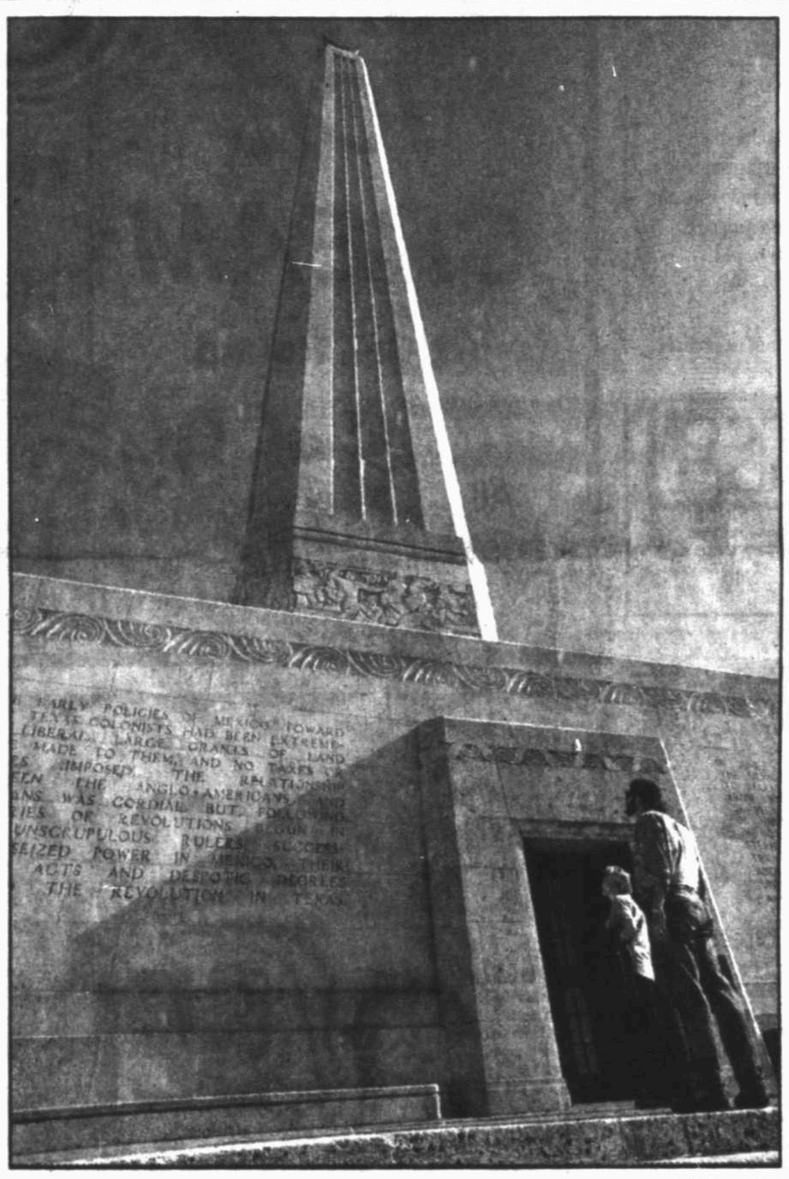

Clinton called Helm's comment "inappropriate" and his chief of staff suggested Republican congressional leaders look elsewhere for a Senate Foreign Relations Committee chairman.

Within 24 hours after making the comment, Helms issued a statement Tuesday declaring that with his words, he had "made a mistake ... which I shall not repeat."

The Republicans are expected to elect the 73-year-old North Carolinian as chairman of the committee for the upcoming Congress.

Helms made the bodyguard remark Monday in an interview

OPEC moves to cap output through 1995

■ Level in theory could sop up existing glut of world oil.

By Philip Shenon
N.Y. Times News Service

JAKARTA, Indonesia — Oil prices reflected little concern among traders Tuesday about a decision by the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries to freeze current production levels through 1995 in hopes of driving up oil prices.

North Sea Brent, a benchmark grade of crude oil, dropped by a penny, to $16.94 a barrel in London, after the announcement. (On the New York Mercantile Exchange, oil contracts for January rose only 26 cents, to close at $17.82 a barrel Tuesday.)

The agreement was reached Tuesday after only a few hours of discussion among oil ministers meeting on the Indonesian resort island of Bali. It will hold oil production among OPEC members to 24.5 million barrels a day in the face of rising world consumption, a level that in theory could sop up the existing glut of world oil.

"I think it will be very good for the market," Iran's oil minister, Gholamreza Aqazadeh, said of the decision to retain the current production limits. "Prices will be stronger than now."

Traders, however, had several reasons not to be worried. Tuesday's announcement, which did not come as a surprise, extends OPEC's existing cap on production for another year, rather than cutting it. And inventories of consuming nations are high.

Buddy Sipes, president of PBPA, said the results could be a positive force on oil prices for the next six months until Iraq is brought back into the market.

Iraq, an OPEC member, also wants to increase its output to more than 3 million barrels a day, the level in 1990 before its invasion of Kuwait, when the United Nations lifts an embargo on its oil exports. Iraq's provisional quota from OPEC is now only 550,000 barrels a day.

Buddy Sipes, president of the Permian Basin Petroleum Association, said the results of the OPEC meeting could be a positive force on oil prices for the next six months until Iraq is brought back into the market.

"When Iraq comes back into the market, somebody will have to move over."

Sipes said OPEC ministers were sticking their heads in the sand and pretending that Iraq did not exist.

He said all OPEC countries were up

Officials call meeting for parents of children with low English skills

Staff Report

Parents of children with limited English proficiency (LEP) are invited to speak about education issues at a 7-9 p.m. community meeting Nov. 30 at Casa de Amigos, 1101 E. Garden Lane.

The Civil Rights Compliance Review representatives of the U.S. Department of Justice will host the meeting. They are seeking public comment on issues concerning children with limited English language skills.

The compliance representatives will be in Midland all week reviewing Midland Independent School District's special language programs, and identifying students who need the programs.

"This is not due to any complaints. Our visit is proactive," said Maria Bates of the Justice Department.

"We will look at how programs are designed, staffed and evaluated."

Former beauty pageant winner Tracy Lippard, 23, could get up to 6½ years in prison.

Jury convicts beauty queen of reduced charges in attack

LEWISBURG, W.Va. (NYT) — For months, the story of the beauty queen accused of attempted murder has fascinated the two Virginias. It seemed, as one lawyer in the case put it, a case of "psycho Barbie doll gone bad."

But the tale that emerged here during a five-day trial that ended Tuesday was more sad than sordid: an articulate, striking woman who had never found a man who cared enough to put her photo in his wallet; a young man who could not settle for one lover at a time; a middle-class couple whose kitchen was invaded by a furious, wounded woman bent on revenge.

In the end Tuesday, jurors hearing the trial of Tracy M. Lippard decided that the crimes she was guilty of were misdemeanors, not felonies. They convicted her of two counts of second-degree attempted murder, which

Poll respondents favor concealed-handgun bill, hands down

Staff Report

More than 74 percent of callers participating in this week's Community Pulse Poll said they are in favor of passage of a concealed weapons bill in the state.

Gov.-elect George W. Bush said last week that once he takes office in January, he will sign into law a bill that will permit qualified citizens to carry concealed handguns.

To qualify, a citizen must not have a prior criminal record or history of mental illness, and also must complete a handgun education and safety course.

Of the 711 callers who participated in the poll, 528 were in favor of such a law; 183 were opposed.

"I'm sick and tired of reading about old ladies who work at convenience stores late at night getting hit over the head, or men getting robbed and stabbed because they're not allowed to protect themselves or their family," Andy Bradshaw said. "We're all open game and something needs to be done about it."

Bill Baker said, "It's just a matter of leveling the playing field. Criminals carry handguns no matter what the law allows. If we can carry them, then at least we can defend ourselves."

Roy Proctor, who identified himself as a real-estate agent, said he would feel a lot safer in his profession being able to carry a weapon to protect himself. Proctor cited instances of deaths of real estate agents in the Dallas and Houston areas. Agents would show a house to someone they believed to be a prospective buyer and they would be gunned down in the process, he said.

Ros Haley, a local community leader, pointed out that Switzerland has always had a peaceful country with gun control in effect.

"Switzerland is one of the smallest nations in the world that has protected itself from the enemy and from crime," Ms. Haley said.

"For years it had the lowest crime rate of any nation because every able-bodied man was required to learn how to handle firearms and give two weeks

Bribery investigation focuses on Italy's premier

ROME (AP) — Premier Silvio Berlusconi, the tycoon who swept to power on the wake of a corruption scandal, was placed under investigation Tuesday in a bribery probe of his media empire.

While basking in the light as host of a U.N. crime conference in Naples, Berlusconi received formal notice he was under the scrutiny of Milan prosecutors. They asked him to appear for questioning.

Focusing the investigation on Berlusconi places him in the company of the thousands of politicians and business leaders implicated in Italy's nearly 3-year-old kickback investigation.

Italians disillusioned by corruption-plagued politics swept Berlusconi's conservative coalition to power in March elections.

While the investigation is sure to intensify criticism from his opponents, Berlusconi said he has no plans to step down, and both of his government's coalition partners are pledging to stand by him.

News reports said the prosecutors were investigating whether his Fininvest media and retailing empire paid bribes to tax inspectors.

Berlusconi said his conscience was clear and stood firm against opposition calls for his resignation. "As I have said many times, I have not committed any crime," he declared.

In a message broadcast to the nation Tuesday evening, Berlusconi said only a vote of no-confidence would induce him to resign.

The news added to an already confused political situation. Berlusconi's Forza Italia movement on Sunday suffered its first defeat at the polls in a local election. And his austerity budget, which has triggered strikes and huge protests, is going before the Senate, where the government lacks a majority.

It also sent the lira and Italian stock market plunging. The lira hit an all-time low against the German mark, the European benchmark currency, trading at 1,035.50, 3.8 lire beyond the previous record. The Milan stock market dropped 2.8 percent. The dollar was at 1,605, up 8.4 lire.

Opposition leaders called for Berlusconi to step down. But his often contentious coalition partners stood by him.

"It's normal that Berlusconi doesn't resign. It can't be any other way," said Northern League leader Umberto Bossi.

Pact's shaky start: clash reports, talks snag

LUANDA, Angola (AP) — A cease-fire to end Angola's 19-year civil war got off to a shaky start Tuesday as government and UNITA rebels battled on, each accusing the other of violating the truce.

But the fighting appeared to subside later Tuesday, a few hours after the truce was to begin at 1 p.m.

The cease-fire is part of a power-sharing deal signed Sunday in Lusaka, Zambia, the third peace agreement between the rebels and the government who have been fighting since Angola's independence from Portugal in 1975.

The last pact failed in 1992 when UNITA, the National Union for the Total Independence of Angola, lost multiparty elections and returned to war.

The treaty signed Sunday gives the rebels four Cabinet posts, six ambassadorships, three provincial governorships, as well as bodyguards for their leaders, U.N. spokesman Joao Albuquerque said Tuesday.

He said it would take at least a year for all the provisions of the peace accord to take effect.

Both state radio and the rebels' Vorgan station announced the cease-fire in their 1 p.m. news bulletins but neither broadcast appeals for their troops to hold fire, as in past truces.

Later, the rebel chief of staff, Gen. Arlindo Pena Ben-Ben, ordered his troops "to cease all offensive movements throughout the country and to hold positions."

Gen. Pedro Neto, air force chief and top government delegate at the Lusaka talks, announced over state radio that the army would also respect the truce.

But tensions were high and both sides warned provocations could led to new fighting.

Seconds after announcing the truce, Vorgan claimed government troops were bombarding the northern city of Uige and the airstrip in nearby Negaje, which the government claimed to have captured last week.

Princess Anne visits S. Africa

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Princess Anne was greeted by singing schoolchildren Tuesday during the first official visit to South Africa by a British royal in 47 years.

The princess later met with President Nelson Mandela at his residence. Describing her as a person who was "doing a remarkable job throughout the world," Mandela said they discussed the plight of South African children.

"We have the problem of the so-called street children, abused children and disabled children and the lack of facilities for them," Mandela said.

Princess Anne, only daughter of Queen Elizabeth II and Prince Philip, earlier went to the black township of Alexandra where she was welcomed by children singing "Mokoti ke di Nako," a traditional wedding song used to welcome visitors and newlyweds.

She toured a day-care center partly supported by the Save the Children's Fund, of which she is president, and a Peace Corps resource center created to help reduce violence.

Alexandra, a poor black township bordering the wealthy suburbs of Johannesburg, has been targeted for more than $285,000 in British aid.

N.Y. Times News Service

ZAGREB, Croatia — Undaunted by a NATO air raid Monday, rebel Serbs backed by tanks and a helicopter closed in on Bihac on Tuesday, pounding Bosnian government forces and leaving several villages burning and hundreds of refugees without shelter, United Nations officials said.

Despite the attack on the Serbian-held Udbina airfield in Croatia on Monday, Bosnian Serb forces fired at least one surface-to-air missile at two British Harrier jets that were on regular NATO patrol near Bosanska Krupa, the officials said.

Both the use of the helicopter gunship Tuesday near Bihac, a violation of the no-flight zone over Bosnia, and the direct attack on NATO jets technically constituted sufficient cause for a further NATO air strike, but none occurred immediately.

But the NATO allies appeared to be preparing for more raids. A senior U.N. official suggested that a further NATO air strike, this time against a Bosnian Serb rather than a Croatian Serb target, was likely today.

"Something is being prepared and I wouldn't go anywhere tomorrow morning," he said.

Croatian officials said the Atlantic alliance had asked Tuesday for renewed permission to fly into Croatian airspace and Croatia had agreed to the request.

Michael Williams, a spokesman for the top U.N. official here, Yashushi Akashi, denied reports that Akashi had turned down a NATO request for an air strike Tuesday.

"NATO will take the lead on this, because the violation of the no-fly zone and the direct attack on its planes are direct challenges to the alliance," he said. "Our concurrence is not in question."

With the situation around Bihac, a Muslim area in northwestern Bosnia, increasingly critical, Defense Secretary William Perry warned Tuesday that further air attacks by the Serbs in Bosnia would be met by a more decisive NATO raid.

Under the shaky and often paralyzing system in force in Bosnia, both U.N. and NATO commanders must agree on any military action.

"If they go in tomorrow or the next day with another bombing attack, then we'll go back and blow up their airplanes," Perry said. At the request of the United Nations, the NATO bombing of Udbina airfield 22 miles southwest of Bihac hit runways but avoided aircraft.

Two people were killed in the NATO raid and four injured, all military personnel manning anti-aircraft artillery and missile systems at Udbina, Williams said Tuesday.

NATO on Tuesday showed film of U.S. Air Force F-15s using 10 laser-guided bombs on targets including a surface-to-air missile at the air base.

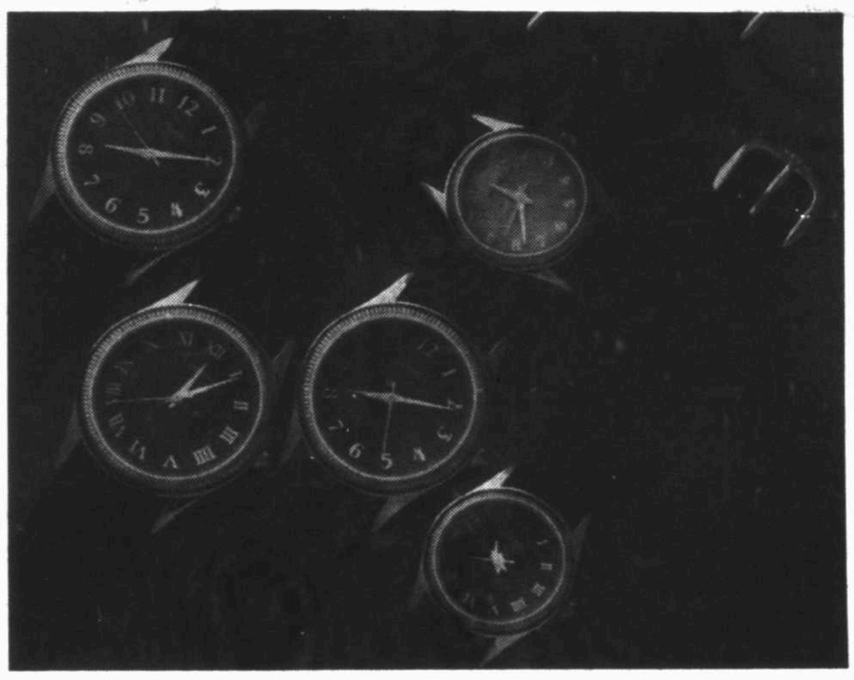

The Bosnian Serb offensive on Bihac, supported by rebel Serbs from the Krajina region of Croatia and some renegade Muslim forces, came in response to an abrupt advance last month by the Muslim-led Bosnian army to the east of Bihac. More than 10,000 Serbian civilians lost their homes to the V Corps of the Bosnian army, and fled west and south into Serbian-held parts of Croatia.

The overwhelming Serbian response against an isolated pocket of Muslims in northwestern Bosnia has again confronted the United Nations and NATO with the difficulties of peacekeeping in the midst of a fully fledged war.

QUOTE: Helms' bodyguard remarks stir storm of controversy with a Raleigh, N.C., newspaper. Helms, who served as a Navy recruiter during World War II, said the president was unpopular among military personnel, thousands of whom live in his state.

"Mr. Clinton better watch out if he comes down here. He'd better have a bodyguard," Helms told The News & Observer.

The Secret Service, charged with protecting the president's physical safety, said it had requested a transcript of the interview. A spokesman, however, said it would be an overstatement to say that Helms is under investigation.

Over his 22 years in the Senate, Helms had perfected the art of making political foes uncomfortable. But his bodyguard remark and an earlier statement questioning Clinton's fitness to serve as commander in chief had even got some fellow Republican senators squirming.

Clinton called Helms' remarks "unwise and inappropriate."

"That is a decision for them to make, not me," Clinton said when asked at a news conference about Helms and his elevation to the key foreign affairs seat in the Congress. "The president oversees the foreign policy of the United States, and the Republicans will decide in whom they will repose their trust and confidence."

White House Chief of Staff Leon Panetta was more blunt. "I think the Republican leadership needs to take a very hard look at whether or not they want somebody with these kind of extreme views to chair one of the most important committees in the Congress of the United States," Panetta told reporters.

Asked Tuesday if Helms was fit to become chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee — as he will in January — Sen. Thad Cochran of Mississippi replied: "Sen. Helms has been an outstanding senator."

The man who will lead the Republican majority in the new Senate trod gingerly. "I didn't see the entire statement," said Bob Dole. "My view is that the president of the United States is welcome to come to any state."

Dole also said, "I think pretty much that Jesse must have said most of this probably in jest."

He shook his head when asked if there had been pressure to remove Helms from his soon-to-be chairmanship, and Sen. Arlen Specter, a moderate from Pennsylvania, said that just as Clinton is rightfully commander-in-chief, Helms is entitled by seniority to become chairman.

Helms said he had been speaking in an informal telephone interview, and had made an offhand remark "in an attempt to emphasize how strongly the American people feel about the nation's declining defense capability. . . ."

". . . Of course, I did not expect to be taken literally when, to emphasize the constant concerns I am hearing, I far too casually suggested that the president might need a bodyguard, or words to that effect," he said.

Democrats were less reserved about the man who for years has forced politically sensitive votes over issues such as public funding for sexually explicit art; public school prayer and race-based measures.

"I think they are extremely unfortunate . . . in very poor taste," said Sen. George Mitchell, retiring as Senate majority leader. Helms' remarks are "really the kind of reckless comments people in public office should not make," he added.

In nearly a quarter-century in the Senate, Helms has been a perpetual critic of foreign policy as conducted by both Republicans and Democrats. He has clashed with secretaries of states, used a senator's prerogative to hold up numerous diplomatic appointments and once referred to "the yo-yos in the State Department."

Last year, debating liberal Democratic Sen. Edward Kennedy about permitting AIDS victims to settle permanently in the United States, he said: "Let me adjust my hearing aid. It could not accommodate the decibels of the senator from Massachusetts. I can't match him in decibels or Jezebels, or anything else apparently."

A former sportswriter and radio journalist, Helms is in the fourth term of a Senate career devoted to combatting communism overseas and liberalism at home with equal fervor, as well as protecting tobacco, textiles and other interests vital to his home state.

Since his most recent election in 1990, he has undergone treatment for Paget's Disease, a calcium buildup that made walking uncomfortable at times. He also had been treated for prostate cancer and undergone heart surgery — an event that prompted him to give up the unfiltered Camel cigarettes he occasionally smoked.

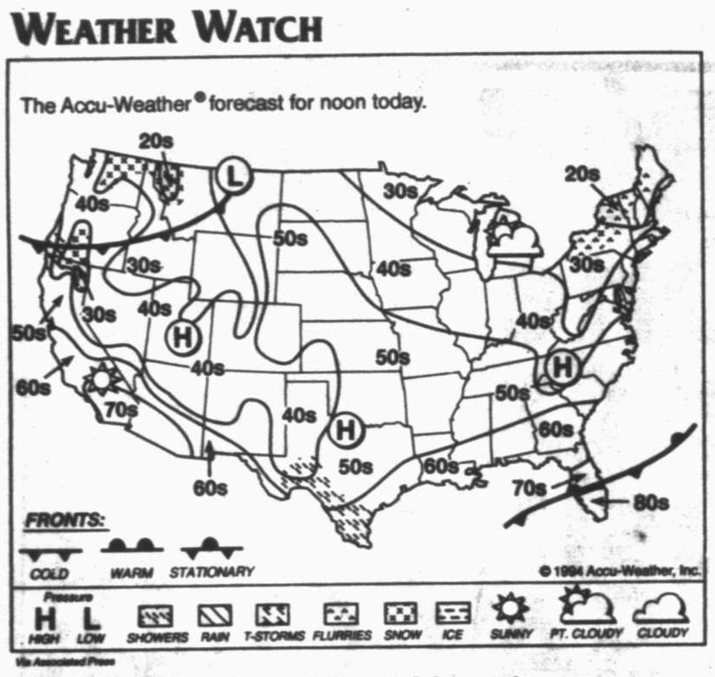

Although he has said he might seek a new term, his decision to claim the chairmanship of the Foreign Relations Committee, rather than the panel on agriculture, with a more direct influence over the economy of his state, has sparked speculation that he may retire.

Ironically, he also conceded he "should have said it better" on Friday when he first stirred controversy over Clinton. In an interview for CNN's Evans and Novak program, he had been asked whether he thinks Clinton is "up to the job" of commander in chief. "No I do not. And neither do people in the armed forces," he replied.

In Raleigh, the executive editor of The News & Observer, Frank Daniels III, issued a statement saying its story "accurately sets out Sen. Helms' position about President Clinton's fitness to be commander-in-chief. We stand by the story."

Rains likely, Mr. Weather says

Staff Report

Today's forecast calls for mostly cloudy skies with a 30 percent chance of rain, a high in the upper 40s, and northeast winds at 5-15 mph, becoming southeast by afternoon. Tonight should be mostly cloudy with a low in the mid-30s, according to the National Weather Service in Midland.

On Thanksgiving Day there should be decreasing cloudiness with a high in the mid-60s.

After an overnight low of 37, Tuesday's high reached 65, compared to the record high for that date of 81 set in 1966. The record low was 22 set in 1988.

STATE

Most of the state was cloudy and cooler Tuesday, and West Texas was under a freeze warning and had a chance of overnight snow flurries, according to the National Weather Service.

Most of West Texas was under cloudy skies. Temperatures were in the 30s and 40s in the panhandle, and in the 70s and 70s elsewhere. Dalhart had the region's low at 32, while Marfa had the high of 72. The South Plains had widely scattered showers.

West Texas should be mostly cloudy today, with highs in the 60s and lows dipping into the 20s.

In South Texas, skies were mostly cloudy with temperatures generally in the 70s. Wednesday should be cloudy with scattered rain. Highs today are expected in the 50s in the Hill Country to near 70 along the lower Texas coast.

North Texas was mostly cloudy, with temperatures in the 50s and 60s. Wichita Falls had the region's low at 52, while several areas had the high of 68. There's a slight chance of rain today in North Texas. Lows should be in the 30s, while highs were expected in the 50s.

NATION

Cold swept through parts of the Pacific Northwest on Tuesday and moved southeast from the Great Lakes to the Northeast, bringing snow with it.

Snow showers fell for the first time this winter in Buffalo and Syracuse, N.Y. Buffalo tied its longest number of days without snow, with its last snowfall recorded April 21. Sault Sainte Marie, Mich., had 2 inches of snow on the ground.

Cold air spilling southeast across the Great Lakes was expected to bring more snow over parts of the Northeast through Tuesday night.

Moderate squalls were forecast along the eastern shores of the Great Lakes.

The Associated Press contributed to this report.

QUEEN: Story was 'more sad than sordid'

means they concluded she had not premeditated her attack on a female rival and her family. Miss Lippard was also convicted of battery, brandishing a pistol, disguising her license plates and carrying a concealed pistol and knife.

Miss Lippard, 23, had been charged with 10 crimes, including three felony counts of attempted murder. Her sentence, to be imposed Jan. 4, could range from probation to 6½ years in prison. She will remain free on $42,000 bond until then.

Miss Lippard, who has honey blonde hair and is 6 feet tall, was a contestant, as Miss Williamsburg, in last year's Miss Virginia pageant, but she finished out of the running.

During the trial, Miss Lippard testified that after her boyfriend missed the Miss Williamsburg pageant where she crowned her successor, she put a loaded pistol in her pocket and went looking for him the next morning. Then, suspecting that he was seeing another woman and wanting revenge, she drove the 275 miles from her home in Newport News, Va., to Lewisburg, where the other woman lived.

"I had laid awake all night, wanting to know the truth," she testified. "Any woman who has ever been two-timed, or three-timed, or whatever knows the feeling."

The boyfriend, Todd L. Scott, 26, testified that he had been dating Miss Lippard in Virginia, had impregnated a woman in West Virginia and had been engaged to a third woman in North Carolina. He has since married the pregnant woman, Melissa Weikle Scott, and they expect a second child in May.

The attack occurred at the home of Mrs. Scott's parents about 4 p.m. on Feb. 27. Miss Lippard feigned car trouble and was let into the kitchen by Rodney and Carlynn Weikle. The county prosecutor, Richard H. Lorensen, said Miss Lippard had hit Weikle twice on the head with a hammer. But Weikle, a former Secret Service agent who is now a teacher, disarmed Miss Lippard and held her until the police arrive.

Miss Lippard, a dentist's daughter, had completed two years of college and had hoped to become a travel agent, she testified. She said that she had armed herself with a 9-millimeter pistol, a butcher knife and a bottle of lighter fluid, believing that nothing she could say would bother Scott, but that she could hurt him by vandalizing his car.

Scott, who works as a supervisor for hazardous materials cleanups, testified that he had met both his wife and Miss Lippard in bars. Lawyers told the jurors he was a "Don Juan," "a gadabout" and "a serial monogamist."

On the witness stand, Scott seemed amused when asked about an entry in Miss Lippard's diary, saying he had awakened her at 3 a.m. to tell her he loved her and that she had asked him to marry her.

"There's things that she might have said, but I just never paid any attention," he said.

The jury of nine women and three men deliberated for nine hours over two days before finding Miss Lippard guilty of the misdemeanor charges.

Miss Lippard wiped her eyes as the verdict was read and said afterward, "I really don't feel like this is a total victory for me because I know I did not come here to harm anybody."

GUN: Residents favor concealed-weapons bill

military duty each year."

On the opposing sides were comments such as this, from an anonymous caller: "I don't go for the old NRA line, 'Guns don't kill people, people kill people.' It's the converse. People with guns kill more people, more often, more effectively and in greater numbers than people without guns.

"And the handgun is the greatest killer of people by far," the caller said. "That's what it was made for. We're either going to have to arm everybody or disarm everybody, and I don't think you can arm everybody because we'd just wipe everybody out."

A local educator said, "My concern is about the availability of handguns and allowing people to carry concealed handguns. With more handguns available and people possessing them, we won't be deterring people, we'll only be making crime more prolific. I am an educator and am already very fearful about the number of weapons on campuses right now."

Simply putting the knowledge in a criminal's head that others might be armed, though, would deter many from crime, according to G.C. Farley.

"Criminals do not like to attack armed citizens," Farley said. "Carrying a pistol would be conducive to calming the (crime) situation."

"It's too bad that it has come down to where Texans need to be armed," R.H. Williams said. "But until the criminals are disarmed, Texans have to protect themselves."

Another caller said Texas should look at Florida and "the fact that crime has dropped and no serious violations have occurred by qualified people with licenses."

On the other side, though, was another anonymous comment: "I think it's inappropriate for us to carry concealed weapons. Particularly with the stipulations placed on it — no criminal record or mental illness history. I think that will be very difficult to enforce, and it can be easily invalidated by people with mental illness who want to carry a handgun."

"It matters not whether a person qualifies to carry a handgun because of no past mental illness or criminal record," another anonymous caller said. "Everyone is capable of murder if provoked."

And another caller said, "All the criminals already have handguns. Might as well let some honest folk defend themselves and have one of their own."

CAP: OPEC moves to freeze oil production

against budget problems, and if they had to reduce volumes it will be very difficult to keep oil prices up.

The question also remains whether OPEC can effectively police the organization's members to prevent them from violating their individual production quotas. The dependence of most members on oil revenue could tempt countries that are short of cash to quietly pump more oil than the freeze allows.

"I hope everybody will agree to the quota without any violations in the next year," Aqazadeh, the Iranian oil minister, said. "This is very important."

Some OPEC members initially supported a three- or six-month extension of the ceiling, but they were influenced by Saudi Arabia, the world's largest oil producer, which proposed that the production cap remain in place for the full year. The current freeze went into effect in September 1993 and was scheduled to expire at the end of 1994.

Saudi Arabia and other OPEC nations once known for their free-spending ways are now short of cash because of the continuing slump in oil prices, and they are anxious to hold down production in 1995 in a bid to force up prices.

If inflation is taken into account, current oil prices are barely higher than they were during the Arab oil embargo of 1973.

The oil minister of the United Arab Emirates, Ahmad Bin Said Badi, said, "the agreement will send a strong signal to the market of OPEC's determination to stabilize the markets and support an improvement of the price."

The OPEC members also agreed today on a compromise candidate from Nigeria to serve as the group's secretary general, or chief administrator, at its headquarters in Vienna. Former Nigerian Oil Minister Rilwano Lukman was chosen after Iran vetoed what otherwise would have been the unanimous choice of Venezuelan Energy Minister Alirio Parra at OPEC's last meeting in June.

Iran had instead proposed Hossein Kazempour Ardebili, its own ambassador to Japan and a former deputy oil minister, for the post. The organization's rules require that the secretary general be chosen unanimously, and Lukman was accepted by all 12 members Tuesday.

OPEC includes Algeria, Gabon, Indonesia, Iran, Iraq, Kuwait, Libya, Nigeria, Qatar, Saudi Arabia, the United Arab Emirates and Venezuela. Other oil producers like Russia, China, the United States and Britain are not members and their outputs are not constrained by Tuesday's announcement.

SPREE: Gunfire erupts in police headquarters identify any of the three. One was wounded and the other was unharmed but in custody, he said.

"As far as we're concerned right now, right now there was a lone gunman," Thomas said. "There were other individuals in the area at the time and we're continuing our investigation to determine if they were connected."

Of the gunman, Thomas said, "We don't know if he committed suicide or (if) he was shot and killed" by officers in the squad room.

He said investigators were reviewing security precautions in the building, which also houses several other city offices.

The dead officers were identified as Sgt. Henry Joseph Daly, 51, supervisor of the cold case squad; Martha Dixon Martinez, 35, and Michael John Miller, 41, both FBI agents assigned to the squad.

Thomas said the gunman "showed up in that room; we believe he had been interviewed before" by metropolitan police.

After the shooting started about 3:30 p.m., Thomas said, other officers dragged Daly and one of the FBI agents from the squad room. A civilian also "managed to crawl from the room despite a gunshot wound to the leg," Thomas said.

Emergency response officers evacuated and sealed the building and set up outside the squad room. A police negotiator talked with someone in the room, though police would only identify him as "a subject."

A half-hour later — an hour after the initial shots were fired — the emergency team broke into the room and found three wounded people — two FBI agents and a civilian. A fourth person was not harmed.

It was not clear which civilian was the gunman. Thomas said the emergency team officers did not fire their weapons.

Tony Daniels, head of the FBI's Washington field office, identified the wounded agent as John David Kuchta. An agent for three years, Kuchta was hospitalized in stable condition.

Police barricaded streets for several blocks around their headquarters, located five blocks from the Capitol. Police share building space with several civilian offices — including the departments of motor vehicles and finance and revenue.

"We will quickly review all of our security procedures and see where we need to make changes," Thomas said. "But because it's a public building . . . it's hard to control access."

The head of the police union complained about security at the headquarters.

"They talk about budget cuts, but they've got no metal detectors down here, no security," said J.C. Stamps, president of the Fraternal Order of Police. "We need more protection just like anyone else and they should see that now."

By sundown, flags outside the police headquarters were lowered to half staff.

Thomas described it as a "hectic and chaotic situation" and said police were still trying to sort out details.

U.S. uncovers big cache of nuclear bomb fuel in ex-Soviet republic

N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — The United States has uncovered a large cache of bomb-grade uranium in Kazakhstan and secretly negotiated to bring it to the United States for safe storage, Clinton administration official disclosed Tuesday night.

Half a ton of highly enriched uranium, enough to make as many as 50 bombs, has been a major worry for administration officials since they learned of its existence. Officials did not disclose whether the material had reached the United States yet.

Administration officials said the nuclear material, located at Ust-Kamenogorsk, was poorly protected and represented a potential source of nuclear material for Third World states and arms traffickers.

An administration official said the matter had been kept so secret that it was given a code name, "Sapphire."

"It was insecure and we wanted to get out of there before anyone was tempted to make a run on it."

A major worry was that the nuclear material from cash-starved Kazakhstan might find its way to Iran and Iraq.

A former Soviet republic, Kazakhstan has agreed to relinquish the nuclear arms it inherited with the breakup of the Soviet Union. It signed the treaty against the spread of nuclear weapons. .

But while Kazakhstan had decided to give up its nuclear arms, it also inherited former Soviet nuclear installations and nuclear stockpiles.

One of those installations was a nuclear fuel fabrication plant at Ust-Kamenogorsk, where the highly enriched uranium was stored. The size of the supply, the lack of advanced controls over the nuclear material and the general breakdown of law and order in the former Soviet Union made the bomb-grade material a major risk.

"It was totally unsecure," an nuclear expert said. "People were afraid that it might get swiped at any moment."

After Kazakhstan acknowledged having the material, the Clinton administration launched a secret effort to try to remove the material. The negotiations were led by William H. Courtney, the U.S. ambassador to Kazakhstan and a former nuclear arms negotiator.

The U.S. goal in the months of secret talks was to arrange for the highly enriched uranium to be shipped out of Kazakhstan to a safe storage site. Under the accord, the material is being sent to the Oak Ridge nuclear facility in Tennessee.

Several U.S. agencies were involved. In addition to the State Department, the Pentagon is helping with the transportation while the Energy Department is taking care of the storage.

Highlighting the importance the United States attaches to the project, Defense Secretary William Perry, Secretary of State Warren Christopher and Energy Secretary Hazel O'Leary are scheduled to hold an unusual joint press conference Wednesday, disclosing the effort.

Reporters were told Tuesday night that the officials would be available Wednesday to "discuss a previously classified project."

While public attention is largely focused on Haiti, Bosnia and other trouble spots, administration officials say that poor control over nuclear materials in the former Soviet Union is one of the major threats to U.S. security.

Over the summer, Western European police seized small quantities of plutonium believed to have come from the former Soviet Union. There have also been seizures of several kilograms of highly enriched uranium within Russia.

Arafat resurrects Fatah Hawks role to defuse militants

GAZA CITY, Gaza Strip (AP) — The young gunmen who fought the Israeli occupation in Yasser Arafat's name were at loose ends for the first months of self-rule, bitter at the perceived lack of reward for their efforts.

But now Arafat has promised the Fatah Hawks a central role in building the Palestinian state in exchange for confronting Islamic activists. So they're armed and back on the streets.

"In the past we've shot at them, they've shot at us and we are willing to do it again," said one, 25-year-old Riyadh Abu Sufein. "I am ready to die."

The Islamic movements warned that they would not be cowed. Islamic activists are suspected of opening fire Tuesday on Jamal Abu Talah, a captain in the Palestinian secret police, wounding him in the legs.

There was no immediate claim of responsibility, but earlier leaflets from Izzedine Al-Qassam, the armed underground of the Islamic Resistance Movement, or Hamas, warned that they would start targeting government employees.

Students at the Islamic University chanted Tuesday that they would continue attacks designed to undermine the PLO-Israel agreement, and a massive rally is planned for Friday.

The Fatah Hawks re-emerged in public Monday, when they fired guns in the air and ran through the crowd with their faces masked at a rally that Arafat termed a show of public support for his rule.

That appearance harked back to their role under the Israeli occupation, when the 500 Hawks from Fatah, the main PLO faction, were often the law in the Gaza Strip. They dwarfed other groups, including Izzedine, believed to have about 100 fighters, and the even smaller Islamic Jihad.

■ U.S. budget deficit shrinks in October

WASHINGTON — The federal budget deficit continues to shrink, the government said Tuesday.

The Treasury Department reported that the new fiscal year began in October with a $32.41 billion deficit, down 28.2 percent from $45.42 billion a year ago.

For the previous fiscal year that ended Sept. 30, the deficit fell to $203.4 billion, down from $255 billion in fiscal 1993. A third straight annual decline in the deficit would make it the first time that has happened in more than 40 years.

The Clinton administration predicts the deficit will drop to below $170 billion in the current fiscal year.

While the October figures were encouraging and were better than analysts predicted, economists said the size of the deficit was held down by outlays in September that normally would have been made in October.

■ Appeals court upholds naval discharge

WASHINGTON — The U.S. Naval Academy does not have to reinstate a top student who was forced to resign after admitting he was gay, a federal appeals court ruled Tuesday.

The 7-3 ruling by the U.S. Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia reversed the finding of a three-judge panel, which had ruled that Joseph C. Steffan should be reinstated.

Steffan was forced out of the Naval Academy in 1987 — just six weeks shy of graduation — after acknowledging he was a homosexual.

The former midshipman, who was honored for "constant dedication to superior performance" before his ouster, was never accused of engaging in homosexual acts. But the full court rejected Steffan's contention that the Navy could not expel him solely on the basis of his statements about his sexual orientation.

■ Rabin gets assurances on aid to Israel

WASHINGTON — Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin rounded up support Tuesday for keeping U.S. aid to his country at $3 billion a year, despite an expected drive to cut spending by the incoming Republican-controlled Congress.

Rabin, winding up a series of meetings with key members of Congress, said he was "confident the United States will continue to assist Israel at the same level."

He said that in his talks with lawmakers he had found "an understanding and readiness to assist us as before."

Rabin said that in talks with President Clinton, Defense Secretary William Perry and others he had also "found the same readiness" to continue a joint program to develop the Arrow short-range anti-missile missile.

In a series of fast-paced meetings on Capitol Hill, Rabin sought to allay concerns that U.S. troops might be drawn into combat if they were sent to the Golan Heights as part of an international force to monitor a peace treaty Israel is trying to work out with Syria.

Rabin offered assurances that no more than 1,000 troops would be requested and said Syria had a good record on keeping its agreements.

■ Murder victim's thumb leads to arrests

KEY WEST, Fla. — The thumb of Manuel Alvarez Solano pointed police to suspects in his slaying, 18 years after his body was discovered.

The sheriff's office Monday said two people have been arrested and a third person is being sought in the shotgun slaying of the Cuban-born drug dealer.

Initially, police had been unable to identify the body and held onto the thumb in hopes it would eventually yield clues. A state crime lab injected some chemicals to raise the ridges on the thumb, and Solano was identified when his prints were found on file at the Immigration and Naturalization Service.

"Back in '76, they didn't have a lot of technology we have now," sheriff's Detective Jay Glover said.

Solano had been part of a gang that imported marijuana into Florida and had quarreled with some of his associates, Glover said.

Clinton vows U.S. support for Ukraine

WASHINGTON (AP) — Welcoming the president of Ukraine on Tuesday, President Clinton expressed the world's relief at the former Soviet republic's decision to give up its nuclear arsenal. Clinton pledged that "America will stand with you to support your independence and territorial integrity."

Ukrainian President Leonid Kuchma responded that his country "hopes to become good and reliable partners with the United States."

After a day of meetings, the two presidents signed agreements laying out areas for future cooperation and focusing on joint space ventures. Officials were to sign two other agreements to encourage private investment in Ukraine.

At a news conference after the signings, Kuchma said they had "opened the way to full-fledged cooperation."

Once seen as the problem child of the countries that emerged from the breakup of the Soviet Union, Ukraine moved into favor when it agreed last week to give up its inherited nuclear arsenal, missiles and bombs that made it the world's third-largest nuclear power.

It was a move with immediate consequences for the former Soviet republic.

President Clinton and Col. Stephen Nash escort Ukraine President Leonid Kuchma as he inspects the troops during a State Arrival ceremony for the Ukraine president Tuesday on the South Lawn of the White House.

"It will permit us to strengthen our military relations with Ukraine, it will open up Ukraine to a new range of business and technological opportunities," Clinton told the news conference. "In addition, we pledge to help defray some of the costs for participation by Ukraine in the Partnership for Peace."

Clinton promised $200 million in new U.S. aid over the next two years. Congress already has approved $700 million, half of which was to help dismantle nuclear missiles.

The president also promised to seek additional aid from European countries and Japan.

He told the news conference that "the agreements we've reached promise to help deliver concrete results: increased security, increased prosperity for Ukrainians and Americans."

In the evening, President and Mrs. Clinton were holding a state dinner for the Ukrainian president and his wife.

During the welcoming ceremony on the White House South Lawn, Clinton said Kuchma "blazed a path ahead on the two most critical issues for the future: economic reform and nuclear weapons."

"You are removing the threat of nuclear weapons and laying the groundwork for an era of peace with your neighbors," he said.

Smith's confession speaks of unrequited love

UNION, S.C. (AP) — Susan Smith, distraught over unrequited love, killed her two young sons because she was suicidal and didn't want them growing up without a mother, according to her handwritten confession released Tuesday.

"My children, Michael and Alex, are with our Heavenly Father now, and I know that they will never be hurt again. As a mom, that means more than words could ever say," she wrote in her Nov 3. statement to police.

Mrs. Smith said she knew her tale that a carjacker had driven off with the boys the night of Oct. 25 would unravel. For nine days, Mrs. Smith and her estranged husband pleaded for return of their sons, ages 3 and 14 months.

"I knew from day one, the truth would prevail, but I was so scared I didn't know what to do. It was very tough emotionally to sit and watch my family hurt like they did," she said.

"It was time to bring a peace of mind to everyone, including myself," she wrote, explaining it "felt like the world was lifted off my shoulders" when she told her story to the sheriff.

Her confession led authorities to her car submerged in John D. Long Lake, with her sons still strapped in their safety seats in the back.

Some of Mrs. Smith's statement, in which she details how she was distraught and planned to kill herself along with the boys, had been widely reported.

She wrote in the two-page statement that she drove around the night of Oct. 25, "emotionally distraught" and suicidal. Mrs. Smith, who was in the process of divorcing boys' father, David, said she felt she could not be a good mother; "but I didn't want my children to grow up without a mom. I felt I had to end our lives to protect us all from any grief or harm."

"I was in love with someone very much, but he didn't love me and never would. . . . I had hurt him very much and I could see why he could never love me."

The statement does not mention the man's name. Her co-worker Tom Findlay has acknowledged he broke off a relationship with Mrs. Smith a week before the boys died. Among other things, Findlay said, he was not ready to be a father.

"When I was at John D. Long Lake, I had never felt so scared and unsure as I did then. I wanted to end my life so bad and was in my car ready to go down that ramp into the water, and I did go part way, but I stopped. I went again and stopped. I then got out of the car and stood by the car a nervous wreck," she wrote.

She said that after she allowed the car, with her children inside, to roll down a boat ramp into the water, "I took off running and screaming "Oh God! Oh God, no!" . . . I wanted to turn around so bad and go back, but I knew it was too late. I was an absolute mental case! I couldn't believe what I had done."

"I am sorry (underlined) for what has happened and I know that I need some help," she wrote.

Circuit Judge John Hayes ordered the confession released Tuesday.

Testimony ends in Heidi Fleiss trial; no names revealed

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Testimony in Heidi Fleiss' pandering trial ended Tuesday without the reputed Hollywood madam taking the witness stand and with the names of her clients still a secret.

The jury was dismissed until Monday, when closing arguments were scheduled.

Fleiss, 28, is accused of running a call girl ring catering to the rich and famous. She was arrested after allegedly arranged prostitutes for four undercover officers posing as businessmen.

The names in Fleiss' black book could still be revealed when she and her father go on trial for money laundering Jan. 25. The federal case will focus on financial dealings, and is more likely to trace individual transactions that may reveal identities.

Defense attorneys claimed Fleiss is the victim of selective prosecution because authorities haven't prosecuted her clients. They also alleged during the trial that Fleiss was entrapped by officers in the sting at the Beverly Hilton Hotel.

During Tuesday's testimony, Officer Steven Takeshita, one of the four undercover officers, acknowledged that he was the one who first mentioned sex to an alleged prostitute during a June 9, 1993, meeting arranged by Fleiss.

Ito rules defense expert doesn't have to testify for prosecution

LOS ANGELES (AP) — In the first substantial ruling for the defense, the judge in the O.J. Simpson case ruled Tuesday that a defense DNA expert doesn't have to testify for the prosecution.

Superior Court Judge Lance Ito quashed a prosecution subpoena of Dr. Edward Blake.

Prosecutors had wanted Blake to testify at a Dec. 15 hearing on the admissibility of genetic evidence, saying Blake has consistently sided in the past with the admissibility of a form of DNA testing called PCR. Such testing has been used in the Simpson case.

Defense attorney Gerald Uelmen argued prosecutors were trying to harass Blake.

"The prosecution is closing ranks and sending a message to the scientific community that you'd better choose up sides," Uelmen said.

Ito rejected defense arguments that prosecutors were trying to annoy Blake or that Blake's testimony for prosecutors would invade Simpson's attorney-client privilege.

In a written ruling, he said prosecutors failed to show they could not obtain Blake's expert opinions from transcripts of his previous testimony in other cases.

In another development, Ito's wife said she never clashed with a key detective in the case when the two of them worked in the same police station.

Capt. Peggy York said she had no disagreements with Detective Mark Fuhrman and never investigated his alleged involvement in a group called Men Against Women within the Los Angeles Police Department.

"I only recall Officer Fuhrman as a productive officer," she wrote in a declaration. "I do not know of any controversy or disagreements with him."

Her comments conflicted with last week's statement by Fuhrman's lawyer, Robert Tourtelot, who said: "They had some disagreements. Mark and she did not see eye to eye." Tourtelot did not return repeated calls to his office Tuesday.

York's statement was among court papers her lawyers filed Monday, hoping to quash a subpoena for her to testify at a hearing to determine possible conflict of interest for Ito if his wife is called to testify in the case. The papers were released Tuesday.

Medical inflation slowed in '93, officials say

■ But Americans still spend almost $1 out of every $7 they make on health care — more than citizens anywhere else.

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Medical inflation last year was the lowest in seven years and among the lowest in more than three decades.

Federal health officials reported Tuesday that Americans spent an average of $3,299 apiece on health care in 1993, or $205 more than the previous year.

The total bill came to $884 billion, or 7.8 percent more than in 1992. That was the slowest rate of increase since 1986 and the third lowest since 1960, according to the Health Care Financing Administration (HCFA).

But Americans still spend almost $1 out of every $7 they make on health care — far more than citizens anywhere else. Health care's share of the gross domestic product rose to 13.9 percent from 13.6 percent in 1992.

Health and Human Services Secretary Donna E. Shalala noted health expenditures still rose 2.4 percentage points faster than the overall economy in 1993 as measured by the GDP.

Bruce C. Vladeck, the HCFA administrator, said the slowdown reflects low inflation in the overall economy more than anything else. "Compared to inflation, we're not doing that much better than we have been in the past," he said.

HCFA actuaries, writing in the Health Care Financing Review, said, "It remains unclear whether the moderation in health spending growth is a temporary lull in the health-care crisis spurred by the threat of government intervention or the beginning of a long-term restructuring of the private health-care system, the full impact of which ... is only beginning to be seen in 1993."

Health expenditures have climbed at double-digit rates during most years since the passage of Medicare and Medicaid in 1965.

Although President Clinton fell short in his mission to overhaul the sprawling U.S. health-care system, some experts argue that far-reaching reform is already well under way, without waiting for Congress or Clinton.

Fifteen percent of Americans lack health insurance. But most are covered by health plans that have adopted some managed-care techniques. Forty-five million people are in full-fledged health maintenance organizations. Hospitals have been merging at a rapid clip and more physicians now accept fees set in advance by government or private insurers.

The HCFA actuaries found that from 1990 to 1993:

■ Growth in costs slowed in every personal health-care category except dental services. The latter grew faster as "concerns over the spread of AIDS increased purchases of supplies" and pushed up prices.

■ The increase in hospital expenditures slowed from 10.7 percent to 6.7 percent.

■ Spending increases for physician bills abated from 10.3 percent to 5.8 percent — the slowest since the early 1960s. The report attributed this "to changes in the Medicare payment system and the expansion of managed care."

■ The jump in retail drug purchases slowed from 14.5 percent to 6.8 percent. Americans bought $49 billion worth of prescription drugs and spent $26 billion on over-the-counter drugs and medical sundries in 1993.

■ The federal government shouldered 32 percent of the nation's health bill, up from 28 percent.

Federal and state spending on Medicaid rose 9.2 percent in 1993, down from 15 percent in 1992 and almost 25 percent in 1991.

The report gave this breakdown of spending of the nation's health dollar:

■ Private health insurance paid 34 cents.

■ Consumers paid 18 cents out of pocket.

■ Medicare paid 17 cents.

■ Medicaid paid 13 cents.

■ Other government programs paid 13 cents.

Imagine Doing This With Your Phone.

Wouldn't it be great if you knew who was calling before you picked up the phone? To be able to screen calls, while the caller doesn't know you know who it is?

Get Caller ID.

Caller ID displays the names and numbers of most incoming calls the moment your phone rings. So you can see who it is before you answer. What's more, if someone calls your answering machine and doesn't leave a message, Caller ID saves their name and number — plus the date and time, too.

Call 1-800-234-BELL.

So call today and order Caller ID for just $6.50 a month. Or you can display the name only or the number only for just $4.95 a month. Either way, Caller ID is definitely worth a look.

GOP: Don't count chickens, just work

Republican governors, flush from their victory in the general election earlier this month, are already looking closely at those among them who might be willing to challenge President Clinton in the presidential election of 1996.

Their optimism is completely predictable in light of the overwhelming Republican sweep on Nov. 8 in which voters handed control of both the U.S. House and Senate to the GOP, as well as stripping the Democrats of the governorship in 11 states. Obviously, Republicans are thinking "strike while the iron is hot." There's no need to fault the Grand Old Party for taking advantage of the momentum in this political realignment, and we won't, but there's also something to be said for the Republicans NOT throwing caution to the wind. What the voters giveth, the voters can taketh away.

There's little doubt that the message for Clinton from the election is that the electorate is unhappy with the direction he has taken the nation during his first two years and that they want a change. How he responds to that mandate during the next two years will largely determine how Americans vote two years down the road. But Clinton is in trouble politically and surely recognizes that fact. His brand of liberalism is obviously not what the voters want.

Now that the electorate has given the Republicans a shot at doing what the Democrats failed to do, it's the GOP — not Bill Clinton — on the hot seat. They can get the GOP and themselves, as individual politicians, off that uncomfortable perch by acting in the nation's best interests — cutting federal spending and waste, working toward really balancing the budget, revamping federal welfare programs, recreating an economic climate in which ordinary Americans can get and keep good jobs and keep their heads above water, devising a realistic health-care program, not another government giveaway boondoggle. The list of work is virtually endless.

The point, however, is that Americans are looking for realistic work that truly benefits them, not pie-in-the-sky or political promises that sound too good to be true and usually are.

As for who Clinton's GOP opponents will be in 1996, it's really much too early for anybody to care. Another adage applies in that regard for the Republicans: Don't count your chickens before they hatch.

The Republicans have been handed a mandate and a golden opportunity. Now they need to roll up their sleeves and go to work.

Our policy on letters

The Reporter-Telegram recognizes the "Letters to the Editor" format as an important forum for citizen opinion and encourages participation of all readers. To that end, we have set as few rules as possible. However, we must have some, and they are:

- Letters must be signed and include a street address and daytime phone number for verification. Letters not including this information will not be considered for publication.
- They should be no more than 350 words in length. While some lengthy letters are published, we reserve the right to edit when necessary due to space limitations. The briefer the letter, the better its chance of publication.
- Only one letter per month per writer can be published.
- Letters will be edited for length, taste and legal reasons and are accepted only on that basis. Letters which are difficult to reduce in length will be returned to the writer to be edited before being re-submitted.
- We do not publish 'open' letters, copies of letters sent to others or multiple signatures.

Because we cannot research and verify all information in letters, by publishing them we neither imply nor guarantee the accuracy of information stated by writers.

Letters should be sent to: The Editor, Midland Reporter-Telegram, P.O. Box 1650, Midland 79702.

Today in History

Today is Wednesday, Nov. 23, the 327th day of 1994. There are 38 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On Nov. 23, 1889, the first jukebox made its debut in San Francisco, at the Palais Royale Saloon. The contraption, devised by Louis Glass, consisted of an Edison tinfoil phonograph with four listening tubes — no loudspeakers — and a coin slot for each tube. A nickel purchased a couple of minutes of music.

On this date:

In 1765, Frederick County, Md., repudiated the British Stamp Act.

In 1804, the 14th president of the United States, Franklin Pierce, was born in Hillsboro, N.H.

In 1903, singer Enrico Caruso made his American debut at the Metropolitan Opera House in New York, appearing in "Rigoletto."

In 1936, the first edition of Life, the picture magazine created by Henry R. Luce, was published.

In 1943, during World War II, U.S. forces seized control of Tarawa and Makin atolls from the Japanese during the Central Pacific offensive in the Gilbert Islands.

In 1945, most wartime rationing of foods in the United States ended.

In 1959, the musical "Fiorello!," with music by Jerry Bock and lyrics by Sheldon Harnick and starring Tom Bosley as New York City Mayor Fiorello La Guardia, opened on Broadway.

In 1971, the People's Republic of China was seated in the U.N. Security Council.

Proposition would make life miserable

WASHINGTON — The victory in California of the movement to deny schooling and medical services to illegal immigrants who are not actually bleeding to death is the first skirmish in the war on unwed welfare mothers.

Safire

That's because both Proposition 187 (punishing some 300,000 alien schoolchildren for the sins of their fathers) and the Gingrich approach to welfare reform (withholding support when unemployed single mothers have additional children) are based on this philosophy: the most cost-effective way to change behavior is to make life unbearable under present behavior.

During the recent resurgence of righteousness, Gov. Pete Wilson of California was described in this space as "the best candidate with the worst issue" and Prop. 187, which he strongly supported, was denounced as a "nativist abomination."

I came to admire him when, as a senator, he exposed the abuse of the franking privilege by incumbents. Early this year I reported Richard Nixon's prediction that a California comeback victory would make Wilson the front-runner for the '96 Republican nomination — and if running-mated with Gov. Christy Whitman of New Jersey, the ticket would win. Visiting Washington last week, Pete Wilson invited me over to screw my head back on properly.

About the nativism charge: he is eager it be understood that he is not anti-immigrant, only anti-illegal immigrant. "One in four Californians are legal immigrants," he says, "and don't need lectures on the contributions of legal immigrants. In fact, they are the most vociferous critics of illegal immigration. . . . The issue is the rule of law."

OK, with a sizeable portion of voting Latinos in favor of curbing their illegal competitors, let's grant that most of the proposition's supporters are neither nativist nor racist. Support from those who resent all immigrants, legal and not, surely came Wilson's way, but it does not mean he shares their prejudices.

About the privacy-intrusion charge, turning teachers into immigration agents: "Teachers don't enroll students," Wilson says, implying it is only the administrators' job and not the teachers' job. He says that school districts everywhere ask for proof of residence, and adds that all applicants to federal jobs must produce verifiable citizenship documents. (He's against national ID cards.)

Maybe he can bolster that defense of 187 in court with regulations against discrimination or intrusion in its enforcement. But no administrative amelioration is likely to alter the requirement that schools have reverse truant officers assigned to root out those sneaky little offspring of illegals trying to cop a freebie education (to which the Supreme Court has ruled they are entitled, and with conservative justices, stare decisis ain't dead yet.)

What's Wilson's purpose in all this? To get budget-cutting Washington to reimburse California $2.5 billion a year for state services to the illegals? To get the Feds to stem the tide of invaders, many of whom sashay in as tourists?

Yes to both, but more: "If it's clear to you that you cannot be employed, and that you and your family are ineligible for services, you will self-deport."

Shakespeare may have had right idea

Where William Shakespeare and I parted company was when he wrote, "The first thing we do, let's kill all the lawyers."

Buchwald

I don't believe that you should kill all the lawyers. I think you should kill only those on the opposing side.

The reason Shakespeare was so embittered was that he had decided to sue Christopher Marlowe for plagiarism, libel and defamation of character. Marlowe claimed to be the author of "Henry VI," which Shakespeare said was a "damnable lie."

The Bard hired Sir F. Lee Bailey, Lord Alan Dershowitz and Lord Robert Shapiro to take the case for 500 ducats per hour plus expenses.

Marlowe hired the firm of Marquis William Kunstler, Sir Marvin Mitchelson and Lord Melvin Belli to defend himself.

Ironically, what enraged Shakespeare was not the legal fees but the expenses his lawyers billed him for.

For example, they had every one of Shakespeare's plays and sonnets Xeroxed 50 times and then bound in a rare goatskin leather book to present to the judge.

The playwright was also billed for dry cleaning of drapes and sofas in Bailey, Dershowitz and Shapiro's offices as well as construction costs for the new marble staircase connecting the firm's 15th and 16th floor.

If this was not enough financial pain, Shakespeare's legal team told him that in order to win their case they would have to hire expert witnesses to prove that Shakespeare had really written everything he claimed.

The leading Shakespeare expert was Prof. Gladney Hall of Oxford, who had written a doctoral thesis on the writer that was required reading at Cambridge.

In Marlowe's defense, his lawyers hired Timothy Bogsteel, professor of romance languages at Cambridge. His textbook was required reading at Oxford.

Each expert charged 12,000 gold sovereigns to testify — fees so outrageous that Marlowe had to sell his farm in Sussex and Shakespeare had to mortgage the Globe Theater.

Other items that cost Shakespeare his shirt (and ruffled collars) were the mock trial the lawyers held in Scotland to find out how to try the case, plus handwriting experts to testify about who wrote "Hamlet" and fees for a coroner in Edinburgh to testify that Marlowe was brain-dead.

When Shakespeare received the bill for these expenses, he went into a rage and screamed, "First, let's kill all the lawyers."

Bailey, Dershowitz and Shapiro all heard him and said: "Don't make any decisions until the verdict is in. If the jury decides in favor of Marlowe, we'll appeal."

"You told me this suit would cost me hardly anything and that I'd win a ton of money if I sued."

"Lawyers always say things they don't mean. Frankly, I believe that we have Marlowe on the ropes."

"Because he knows he can't win?"

"No, because he just got his lawyers' fax bill."

Art Buchwald's column is distributed by the Los Angeles Times Syndicate.

Newspaper should do series on schools

A newspaper serves several purposes in a community, but the predominant one should be to inform. Considering this, I suggest that the paper undertake a series of articles on the local public school system in an attempt to clear up some obvious differences in perception and to help the public get up-to-date on actions and plans. These articles should be of general and widespread interest as most citizens are financial supporters of the schools and are interested in the best educational results.

We sometimes hear of a teacher who is not allocated funds necessary to carry out his duties in what might be considered an efficient manner. In the Sunday paper of Nov. 13, a reader offered that there was not Xerox paper available and consequently, the students spend time copying instead of learning. On the other hand, it is reported that a number of school personnel have personally assigned automobiles as perks, and we all see the new buildings that appear to have spared little. These items may be at the two ends of the spectrum but are not necessarily consistent with the use of funds some may expect in our learning institutions.

I would like to offer one additional suggestion. The paper has one section with the title Sports and Business (or Markets). As we hear complaints that our young people are frequently not equipped to make a living in the business world, would you consider swapping these around so that the business section is more visible? There is nothing wrong with sports in the right setting, and there is more to life than business, but changing the order in the paper may even help to yield some desirable results.

Alcohol provider is responsible for death

Recently a 17-year-old man later accused of driving while intoxicated slammed his car into that of another Midland man, killing the sober and innocent man. The authorities rightly charged the young man with manslaughter and DWI. Great, but my question: "Is this it?" Realistically, it shouldn't be. This is an alcohol-related incident in which the 17-year-old is still a minor.

Shouldn't the individual who supplied him the alcohol be charged for both providing the alcohol to a minor and involuntary manslaughter? After all, this fatality was both a direct and indirect result of the provider's irresponsible actions! Indirectly, because there wouldn't have been a drunken teenager to get behind the wheel of a car without the alcohol he/she provided. Directly, because as an adult (more than likely) he acted horribly irresponsibly by allowing the minor to be in control of a motor vehicle. Did he attempt to restrain the minor? Since he was illegally distributing the alcohol to a minor, did he not have any bargaining power. "If I give you this, I want your keys and you have to stay here until you're sober?" We're dealing with an intoxicated minor who killed an innocent adult! Is it not time to send a clear message out to people who provide alcohol to minors that they are responsible and not immune to prosecution?

The provider killed this man. He just used a loaded teen-ager as his weapon!

MADD makes strides, but more is needed

I don't understand how a person can take the life of another and be out on the street the next day. But that was what happened Friday. A 17-year-old boy charged with being under the influence of alcohol crashed into Robert Currasco and took his life. With our legal system, he was able to pay the amount of $500 and walk. MADD makes great strides legally and emotionally for the victims and their families. But many people fail to see the reasoning behind such harsh punishments for DWI and therefore make it difficult for laws to be passed. The reason is the loss of lives every year, the devastated families and bright futures ended. To show you how abundant DWI's are in Midland, please, just look in Sunday's paper under court records, and you will see all of the DWI offenders that are prosecuted — but prosecuted with just a fine and a slap on the hand. For the DWI manslaughterers, many of them get reduced prison sentences and serve three to five years, if that. A harsh sentence for taking the life of another? I think not!

Robert was a close friend of mine; many times he felt like family. Though I have extreme pain and anger inside about his life being taken from us, I feel we can develop a judicial system that can provide a suitable punishment for this individual and others. Unfortunately, many of you have friends or family that have fallen prey to these murderers and can personally relate to this. Please, for the sake of Robert and others, let's provide MADD and other organizations our support in providing a safe and better society.

It is time for us to take measures and lend our support to take action against these murderers who are taking our loved ones away from us. Help fight the needless killings.

Police files confirm Secret Service knew of plot to kill JFK

Associated Press

The Secret Service was told of a possible plot to shoot President Kennedy from an office building with a rifle at least a week before his assassination, files released by the Miami Police Department confirm.

The right-wing organizer who revealed the alleged plot also told a police informant the day after the Nov. 22, 1963, assassination that Lee Harvey Oswald would never talk about it.

The day after that interview, Nov. 24, Oswald was shot and killed by Jack Ruby in the basement of the Dallas police department.

■ More national news/5B

The Miami police files confirm and add to an account by a retired police intelligence officer, Lt. Everett Kay, who said three years ago that he learned of an assassination plot from informant William Somersett. The FBI and Secret Service would not comment at the time.

A newly released Nov. 15, 1963, memo from Miami detective S.J. Hebert shows the Secret Service was aware of the alleged plot before the assassination.

"Agent Jamison of the Secret Service called to state that he had been requested to contact a William Somersett with reference to information given to the FBI by Somersett, and relayed to the Secret Service," the memo says.

Three days later, Kennedy visited Miami — where his motorcade was canceled — before flying on to Texas. He was shot in Dallas 31 years ago today, and authorities accused Oswald of firing a high-powered rifle from the Texas Book Depository.

Secret Service spokesman Jaime Cagigas in Washington said Monday that he would check on the Miami report, but was not familiar with the case.

"But if we hear that someone is going to go up on a building and take a shot at the president, I guarantee we would check it out," he said.

Somersett, who reported on the activities of white supremacy groups, secretly taped a conversation with Joseph Milteer, a wealthy member of the White Citizens Council in Georgia.

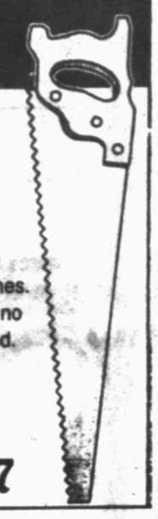

During a meeting in Miami on Nov. 5, 1963, Milteer says Kennedy is a "marked man," according to the police transcript. Kay had played the tape for The Associated Press three years ago.

When Somersett asks how an assassination would be done, the transcript says Milteer replied, "From an office building ... with a high-powered rifle." He explains that it would be easy to take a gun in pieces into an office building. And he dismisses Somersett's concern that an assassination would cause a furor.

"Hell, they'll pick up somebody within hours after, if anything like that would happen ... just to throw the public off," Milteer says.

Although Kay says he rushed the tape to the FBI, the information was never revealed in the Warren Commission Report on the assassination.

Pumpkin theft

LUBBOCK — Lubbock County's sheriff says he has interviewed seven deputies in connection with a pumpkin heist. Sheriff D.L. "Sonny" Keesee said Monday he was interviewing the deputies who were on duty the night of the theft. His investigation is independent of a Texas Rangers inquiry. "So far I have not formally accused anybody of being involved," Keesee said. Department of Public Safety Trooper Daniel Montemayor, 38, already has been charged with misdemeanor criminal trespass and theft. He's accused of trespassing on a Lubbock County farmer's field Oct. 8 and stealing pumpkins. Montemayor allegedly was on duty, in uniform and using his patrol car at the time of the theft. A 14-year DPS veteran, Montemayor has been assigned to administrative duty with pay until the matter is resolved. Should it be determined that a deputy was involved in the episode, "We'll write up a report of the facts and present them to the district attorney," Keesee said.

Reports reveal cause of controlled crash landing

By Gary Shanks
Staff Writer

Loss of power to an engine and a propeller that would not "feather" led to a controlled crash landing of a twin-engine airplane in a field north of Midland earlier this month, according to Federal Aviation Administration reports.

The pilot, Robert Cozby, 45, and his passenger, Larry Bates, were not hurt in the accident that occurred about 1:30 p.m. Nov. 9. The aircraft — a Cessna 421 Golden Eagle — sustained only minimal damage.

The men, both of Midland, walked away from the craft after narrowly missing power lines in the crash landing, according to a Midland police spokesman.

Police were notified of the crash by a pilot who circled the downed plane until rescue and police units could locate the site.

The pilot purposely "belly landed" the craft, which means he landed with the gear up. This is recommended on rough ground because the wheels can sometimes dig in and flip the aircraft, according to a Lubbock FAA spokesman who assisted in the investigation.

"Officers said the pilot did an excellent job in the emergency landing . . . He barely missed power lines, which could have been trouble for him," Midland police Sgt. David Garcia said at the time. "It was a very good job by the pilot to avoid disaster."

Officials with the FAA and the National Transportation Safety Board have not released maintenance reports on the aircraft. Nor have they said why the port (pilot's-left-side) engine failed after the craft took off from the Midland Airpark Airport.

Although this plane ordinarily could be piloted on one engine, the hydraulics system that "feathers" the propeller failed. Feathering means turning the thin edge of the propeller blades forward; otherwise a propeller acts

Council reviews housing plans, sign regulations

■ Proposals to be funded by Community Development Block Grants set aside earlier this year.

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff Writer

The City Council on Tuesday reviewed affordable housing proposals using Community Development Block Grant funds and discussed amending a city ordinance to change sign specifications on Loop 250 and Interstate 20.

The affordable housing proposals are for funds set aside earlier this year by the council for such use. The designated federal CDBG dollars eventually will lead to the construction of 20 to 25 homes, officials said.

"We have a pool of CDBG money of $200,000 . . . for new home construction in low- to moderate-income areas," Assistant City Manager Glen Hackler said.

The city sought proposals to implement an affordable housing program and heard from the Midland Neighborhood Housing Service (NHS) and Habitat for Humanity, both non-profit agencies, and from The Legends, a for-profit Austin-based company.

"We're going to negotiate contracts with Legends and (the Midland) NHS and bring that to the council hopefully Dec. 13," Hackler said.

The proposals essentially are plans on how to subsidize closing costs for qualified home buyers.

Habitat for Humanity's proposal apparently does not meet the criteria required by the U.S. Housing and Urban Development for use of CDBG funds, officials said. But the city will suggest that Habitat for Humanity apply for CDBG funds under a more appropriate designation next year, officials said.

In another discussion Tuesday, the council looked at whether any changes should be made in sign specifications along Loop 250 and Interstate 20 in light of booming retail development.

"A lot of them (developers) are building signs right now so we have to make a decision," Mayor Bobby Burns said.

A public hearing on changing the sign ordinance is scheduled for the Dec. 13 council meeting.

The current ordinance allows signs no taller than 27 feet 9 inches.

The Planning and Zoning Commission recommended increasing that height to 45 feet on the loop and higher on the interstate.

But city staff anticipates making recommendations to the council that sign heights along Loop 250 be increased to 37 feet maximum — or 10 feet higher than the 27-foot overpasses — and 50 feet along Interstate 20.

The proposals — if any — will be open for discussion.

The council also asked the city staff to examine and present information on maximum sign area, how far back from the street a sign should be and number of signs allowed.

Besides discussions on affordable housing and signs, the council took action on a variety of issues:

■ The council gave the go-ahead for city staff to make preparations for issuance of general fund certificates of obligation. Officials estimate $4.9 million in

Church serves pre-holiday dinner

By Tonie Miller-Uzzel
Staff Writer

Thanksgiving is typically a time for sharing and being thankful and that is exactly what members of the Faith Temple Church of God in Christ did Tuesday by hosting a pre-Thanksgiving dinner for the community.

From 11 a.m. to 6 p.m. Tuesday in the Black Women's Federation Building by Washington Park, members of Faith Temple's missions department gave of their time to furnish, prepare and serve a traditional holiday dinner.

Bertha Kenan, president of the mission department and wife of the pastor, the Rev. W.C. Kenan, organized the meal.

By lunchtime more than 150 people had already been served, Ms. Kenan estimated.

She said the dinner was part of the church's outreach into the community.

"We're giving our witness by being here and doing this. By letting the community know we're concerned about them and all of Midland," Mrs. Kenan said.

"Any time there is a need to get out and do it, I do," said Jearod Taylor, one of the church members who volunteered to cook and serve the meal. "It was good to see people happy."

A group from the Midland Association for Retarded Citizens was among the many who were treated to the holiday meal.

Ray Unterbrink, executive director of MARC, said he had "the highest commendation for Pastor Kenan and his congregation."

"Thanksgiving is a time when people like to belong somewhere . . . and having someone demon-

Students get glimpse of Colonial times

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff Writer

"Natural men are held in the hand of God, over the pit of hell," said teacher David Singleton, pinching his fingers together and holding his arm out as if he were God holding a tiny man over the flames of hell.

"The flames gather and flash about them, and would fain lay hold on them and swallow them up," Singleton said, to a classroom full of enraptured junior high school students.

Presenting an imposing figure in black robes and a white wig, Singleton stood on top of a desk (the better to look down on "back sliders") to deliver "Sinners in the Hands of an Angry God," the fire and brimstone sermon of 18th century preacher Jonathan Edwards.

Singleton was one of six English and social studies teachers at Abell Junior High School who donned Colonial garb and assumed a character from the 17th or 18th century. The teachers, on Monday and

Week recognizes farm, urban communities' interdependence

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

National Farm-City Week is being observed this week in recognition of the contributions that agriculture makes in the production of food and fiber and in acknowledging agriculture's interdependence with urban communities.

Farmers' and ranchers' surpluses contribute to the nation's trade balance with exports of goods such as cotton, grain, beef, pork, mohair, wool and lumber.

Agricultural commodities produced in the Midland area include cotton, beef cattle, sheep, goats, hogs, horses, milk, alfalfa, sorghum, pecans, vegetables, honey, wool, mohair and exotic animals, including ostriches and emus.

Agriculture is an "extremely important industry," said Earnest Kiker, agricultural agent for the Texas Agricultural Extension Service for Midland County.

"In many regions of the state, it is the mainstay of the economy. And agriculture supplies the food and fiber that nurtures major metropolitan areas."

While the petroleum industry has the dominant impact on the local economy, agriculture's influence is significant, according to information compiled by Carl Anderson, extension service's cotton-marketing economist, and Brandon Bartek, a graduate assistant at Texas A&M University's Department of Agricultural Economics.

Cotton production is the economic mainstay in neighboring communities such as Stanton, Lamesa, St. Lawrence, Midkiff, Courtney, Tarzan, Patricia, Klondike and Gail.

Ranching exerts a significant force in Midland, which is the headquarters for several major ranching operations. Ranching strongholds in the Midland area include Martin, Dawson, Upton, Reagan, Crane, Andrews, Howard, Ector, Borden and Glasscock counties.

For Midland County, money generated by crops and livestock for 1994 is projected to total more than $14 million, according to the Anderson-Barteck study.

Agricultural cash receipts may total $17.2 million and, once adjusted for inflation, $14 million. The 1987-dollar value was used to determine real dollars in 1994.

Crops and livestock produced $12.3 million on the average for the 1990-93 four-year period in Midland

COUNCIL: Block grant to fund proposals

certificates of obligation will be issued to finance street and drainage improvements, construction of the planned northwest park, completion of the Reyes-Mashburn-Nelms Park, construction of an eastside swimming pool and relocation of an eastside fire sub-station to replace one that is about 50 years old.

The city normally issues about $5 million in certifications of obligation every two years — as debt payments decline — to maintain infrastructure needs, officials said.

The City Council will be asked to approve the proposed issuance at their Jan. 10 meeting. Contingent on approval, the certificates of obligation will be sold in mid-February.

■ The council authorized amending an agreement with the firm Carter and Burgess Inc. for design and engineering services in the development of the northwest park.

The firm had been hired to perform such services for a proposed 24.7 acre park. Since then, the park site has increased to 57 acres.

Cost of the park project is estimated at $1.7 million. Carter and Burgess Inc. will receive 7.5 percent of the cost, but not to exceed $130,000, officials said.

Land for the park, located north of Wadley Avenue, south of the Jal draw and west of Holiday Hill Road, was donated by the Scharbauer family.

■ The council agreed to pay $15,000 to Carter and Burgess Inc. for design and engineering services for a planned hiking/biking trail that will run from DeZavala Elementary School, along the Mulberry Draw to Fairgrounds Road.

The project is being funded by a $160,000 state grant coupled with $40,000 in matching city funds.

■ The council approved plans and specification for a 36-inch sewer line and gave the go-ahead to solicit bids for construction.

The sewer line will run from the water pollution control plant at Garden City Highway and Interstate 20, along the interstate to just west of Rankin Highway.

Officials said the project should be awarded Jan. 11; construction is to take about six months.

A second phase of the project will extend the line to the city's waste water facility near Midland International Airport.

■ The council appropriated $7,000 from the hotel/motel tax fund — designated to promote conventions and tourism — for the city to host the Texas Management Association's annual conference in June 1996. This will be the first time Midland has hosted the conference, expected to attract 700 to 1,000 people.

■ The council approved a contract with Midland County for charges to house people at the jail. The contract calls for the city to pay the county $44 a day for each prisoner detained for the city. That's up from $35 a day for each prisoner previously charged to the city — which amounted to about $125,000 in the last fiscal year.

In addition, the city will pay $22 a day for each prisoner — half the fee — for people detained on city charges along with charges from another jurisdiction. This is a new fee to the city, and costs for the year are unknown, officials said.

The council also made a move to begin negotiations for future jail charges. The contract approved Tuesday will last one year.

■ The council gave second and final approval for a site plan requested by Venture Stores on an 8.3-acre piece of land located on the north side of Loop 250 about 750 feet east of Billingsley Boulevard.

■ The council gave second and final approval to a city-initiated rezoning plan along Lamesa Road to spur interest in retail development. Areas between Scharbauer Drive and Cloverdale Road were rezoned to a local retail classification, which would permit most common stores as well as restaurants, service stations and medical clinics.

GLIMPSE: Junior high teachers dress up

(From 1B)

Tuesday, brought the past to life in a way that left some students stunned into silence.

Singleton said the students recently read the novel "Johnny Tremain" by Esther Forbes. The novel describes the Boston Tea Party revolt through the eyes of teenager Johnny Tremain.

Teacher Marty Cummings spent hours hunched over a sewing machine to make her full-length Colonial dress and bonnet in preparation for her class project on silversmithing. Students attending her classes also designed their own personal characteristic marks or insignias, which silversmiths used to identify their handiwork.

Ms. Cummings said she was impressed with her students' creativity. "They have been designing their marks with stars, flowers, intertwining initials, and trying to copy what the old masters did," she said.

Down the hall, teacher Ed Wilson, garbed in a cleric's black robes and a wig, conducted a session on Colonial laws. A panel of students, wearing masks of various characters — including Louie XIV, Abigail Adams, Thomas Hobbes, John Locke and Benjamin Benneker — answered questions about their philosophies on laws and government.

"It gave students a chance to see people who were influential in forming laws, some which we have even today," Wilson said. He said his robe and wig lent him an air of authority and "set the tone."

"The students seem to enjoy it," he said. "This was something they could really get involved in, instead of just reading a book."

Eighth-grader Byron Simpson said attending the classes during his English and social studies periods was "not like school at all."

He said he liked the fact that all he had to do was show up with a pencil and activities awaited him in each class. "All you have to do is bring a pencil, and they have stuff for you to do," he said.

Another student said he was happy he didn't live in Colonial times. "People were really way too strict," he said.

Other teachers participating in the Colonial activities — which included witch trials — were Bobbie Latham, William Hernandez and Judi Barbier.

Wilson said the eye-catching activities were merely "a preview of what we plan to study next semester."

WEEK: Agriculture affects Midland area

(From 1B)

County. Agricultural cash receipts for the period totaled $14.4 million and, adjusted for inflation, $12.1 million.

The peak year was 1990, when crops and livestock in Midland County generated $15 million.

Cotton represented 38.58 percent, or $5.5 million, of Midland County's four-year agricultural production average of $14.4 million.

Cotton is to bring into Midland County $6.9 million in 1994.

Livestock accounted for 36.4 percent of the four-year average. Livestock is to generate $6 million in 1994 in Midland County.

Horse production, at 13.36 percent, is to generate $2.4 million in 1994.

For the four-year average, pecan production generated $395,750, or 2.75 percent, of agriculture's income. The high year was 1992, when pecans brought Midland producers $500,000.

The vegetable crop averaged $249,000 or 1.73 percent of the overall production.

Statewide, farm assets, including land, buildings, livestock, machinery, crops and livestock and financial assets are estimated at $74 billion, according to Anderson.

The average farm in Texas in 1994 covers 703 acres. In 1950, the average farm size was 435 acres.

Anderson said commercial farms with annual sales of more than $100,000 account for 9 percent of the 185,000 farms in Texas but generate 80 percent of total sales.

"That's not to discount the contribution of small farms," Kiker said. "Small farms are important and provide residents in a rural area with the opportunity to grow crops and raise livestock."

On the average, the U.S. consumer today spends about 11 percent of his income on food, according to Anderson's research. The average food cost in 1960 was 17.5 percent of income.

Kiker said American farmers' and ranchers' "efficiency of food production" in a competitive market provides "consumers with quality food at a reasonable cost."

DINNER: Church hosts pre-holiday meal

strate they care," Unterbrink said.

"Faith Temple Church is helpful all year long, and this is one more demonstration to people who have less," he said.

In addition to serving anyone who came to the clubhouse, food was also delivered to elderly shut-ins and the Permian Basin Shelter for Battered Women and Their Children.

"I think it is, for them, an affirmation of the fact that there are people who do care and are willing to share and think of them this holiday season," said Eleanor Josting, the shelter's executive director.

"They will have a traditional holiday meal just like any other big family," she said.

"Faith Temple Church has the gratitude of the staff and the board of directors for the shelter," Ms. Josting said. "This affirms (for the abused) that there is so much support for victims of domestic violence from not only the service agencies, but also from people and churches."

"For them to care enough to include our clients is wonderful, especially since this is a time for sharing," Ms. Josting said.

Midland pecan growers gear up for tri-county show in December

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

The Midland County Pecan Growers Association is to host the Tri-County Pecan Show and Food Show Dec. 5 and 6 at Kingsway Center, Illinois Avenue and Midkiff Road.

"We think it's going to be a real good show," said Morris Davis, show chairman.

Pecan growers, both commercial and backyard amateur growers, will be showing the best of their crops, Davis said.

Davis estimated that between 120 and 175 pecan fanciers from Midland, Ector, Glasscock, and Upton counties will be entering the event (Upton County decided to enter the event after the Tri-County name was selected).

For each variety of pecan that each grower submits for judging, there must be at least 40 pecans and preferably 42 pecans, Davis said. In each variety, nuts may come from a mix of trees or from a single tree.

While a pecan grower may enter as many varieties as he or she produces, the grower may submit only one entry for each variety.

Varieties include Wichita, Western, Comanche, Cheyenne, Choctaw, Sioux, Mahan, Mohawk, Tejas, Kiowa, and Squirrel's Delight.

Growers many submit several entries of seedlings, hybrids and natives.

Davis said that to be competitive, growers may want to select the heaviest pecans for the show by weighing individual nuts.

Pecan kernels are judged according to their density, texture, fullness, color and taste.

To enter the show, pecan growers may submit entries to one of several judges: Charlie Green at 3915 Cotton Flat Road; Boyd Reece at 2010 Rankin Highway; Howard Scott at 3232 Cimmaron Drive; Claude Reams at 2601 Cessna Drive; Davis at 1300 E. County Road 130, or Art and Marge Shaw, 408 E. County Road 127.

Deadline to enter is 5 p.m. Dec. 3.

Pecans may also be submitted to the Texas Agricultural Extension Service office off East Highway 80 by 4 p.m. Dec. 2.

Dishes using pecans may be entered in the food show.

"There's a lot of good nutrition in pecans," Davis said.

"They are very good and a little fattening, too," said Rita McVey, food show chairwoman.

"Everybody loves them. And we hope to have quite a few people out with a lot of new recipes."

The six food categories are appetizers, breads, cakes, pies, cookies, and candies. Divisions are adult, junior (ages 12 through 17), and youth (ages 6 through 11).

Food entries will be accepted at Kingsway Center's south entrance between 3 p.m. and 5 p.m. Dec. 4 and between 7 a.m. and 9 a.m. on Dec. 5.

Each food entry is to be accompanied by two 3-by-5 cards listing the entrant's name, address, age division, food category and recipe. Recipes must give exact measurements.

Pecans used in the food show do not have to be grown by the exhibitors.

Throughout Midland County, there are between 30,000 and 35,000 pecan trees in commercial orchards and yards, Davis said.

In 1992, Midland County's pecan crop was worth about $500,000 in sales because of the scarcity of pecans and a corresponding rise in price. The following season, the value of pecans dropped to $73,000 because there was a surplus.

This year, West Texas pecan trees and nuts may have suffered damage from the summer's unusually high temperatures of 100 degrees or more and hail.

Budget leaders OK spending cap

AUSTIN (AP) — State budget leaders on Tuesday approved a limit on government spending over the next two-year budget period and outlined funding priorities for the legislative session that begins in January.

The limit, which tracks a constitutional requirement, prohibits legislators from spending tax-generated revenues in excess of the state's growth rate for personal income.

"Texas legislators have always been frugal in spending," said Lt. Gov. Bob Bullock, chairman of the Legislative Budget Board, which adopted the proposal with a unanimous vote.

"We rank 50th in the country in per capita spending. The spending cap adopted today will help ensure that we continue to wisely manage tax dollars sent to us."

Comptroller John Sharp has estimated that personal income in Texas will grow 13.98 percent during the 1996-97 budget cycle.

Based on that estimate, the Legislative Budget Board, which is comprised of House and Senate members, approved a spending cap of $35.57 billion on tax revenues that aren't already dedicated by the Texas Constitution to pay for programs.

The limit is about $4.3 billion above what the government is spending in the current two-year budget period, Bullock said.

"It doesn't mean we have to spend it," Bullock said. "We don't know at this time how much money will be available."

Two years ago the Legislature budgeted $857 million less than it was allowed under the cap, Bullock said.

Bullock and House Speaker Pete Laney said basic services such as education, prisons, health care and highways will top the list of spending priorities during the 1995 Legislature.

"I feel that mainstream Texas and mainstream U.S.A. is a lot more interested in seeing the Legislature fund basic services — education, our prison system, mental health and retardation and our highways — than it is seeing the Legislature create a lot of other new programs at the expense of the basic services," Bullock said.

"I have looked closely at some of the bills being pre-filed and apparently some House members and some senators don't agree with me on that because I do see that quite a few new programs are being suggested in bill form."

Both Bullock and Laney said they haven't yet felt the momentum of an expected push to legalize casino gambling in Texas during the legislative session. The men said they haven't heard any debate that casino gambling would generate substantial revenues for the state.

"I have not seen any revenue stream that it (casino gambling) would bring in that would be a positive," Laney said. "I don't think anything has been given to us on the economic benefits."

Bullock said, "I haven't seen any figures that would indicate it would add much to the budget."

Lloyd Criss, chairman of the Texas Association for Casino Entertainment, said his group has done two studies that show casino gambling would bring $500 million to the state annually while creating 70,000 jobs that pay between $23,000 and $28,000 a year.

"We have made all this information available to the statewide leadership," Criss said. "That's all I can say. Maybe they're busy."

Richards makes her first public appearance since Election Day loss

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Ann Richards said Tuesday she feels "absolutely great" two weeks after losing her re-election bid and is still exploring options for making a living after leaving the Governor's Mansion.

"Whatever I do, it's going to be wonderful," she told reporters at her first public appearance since the Nov. 8 general election, an early Thanksgiving dinner for the needy where she helped serve plates of turkey and trimmings.

The 61-year-old Democratic governor turned thumbs-down to some rumors that have been flying since she lost to Republican George W. Bush, who will be inaugurated Jan. 17. She says she has no plans to head the Democratic National Committee, become U.S. agriculture secretary or oppose Sen. Phil Gramm in 1996 either as president or senator.

"All of the discussions that I'm having really have to do with how I might interface in business and how I might do some things that will help me make a living," she said. "I'm not going to go away."

Whatever she does, Richards says she expects it will be in her home state.

"There are a lot of family constraints and things that would keep me in Texas," she said. "I love Austin and I love Texas. My heart is here, so I'm sure I'll be here."

Asked how she feels, Richards responded, "I feel absolutely great.

"I get up and read the morning newspaper, and I used to, you know, I took those things so personally, that there ought to be something I could do about this or that," she said, "and knowing that I'm no longer responsible ... in a long-range way, it's really a great feeling."

Richards said she feels good about her term in office.

"I had a fabulous, fabulous four years."

Ten years later, girl becomes world's longest-surviving transplant recipient

By Michael Graczyk
Associated Press

HOUSTON (AP) — In November 1984, little 8-month-old Sara Remington received a new heart in what surgeons say was an attempt to extend her life perhaps only by days and a unique operation filled with uncertainty.

"At the time I had some serious misgivings that we'd be open to criticism if we failed," Dr. Denton Cooley of the Texas Heart Institute said Tuesday, recalling the procedure. "We had no precedent. That's the way it is when you're breaking new ground. You have to take those chances and expose your own reputation."

Now, 10 years later, Cooley and fellow surgeons at the renowned Houston institute showed off Sara as the world's longest-surviving pediatric transplant recipient.

"To me, it's a huge relief as well as a reward to see her do so well through the years," Cooley said.

"There was a lot of skepticism, particularly among our own staff, about the potential for the success of this endeavor," added Dr. O. Howard Frazier, the institute's chief of cardiopulmonary transplantation.

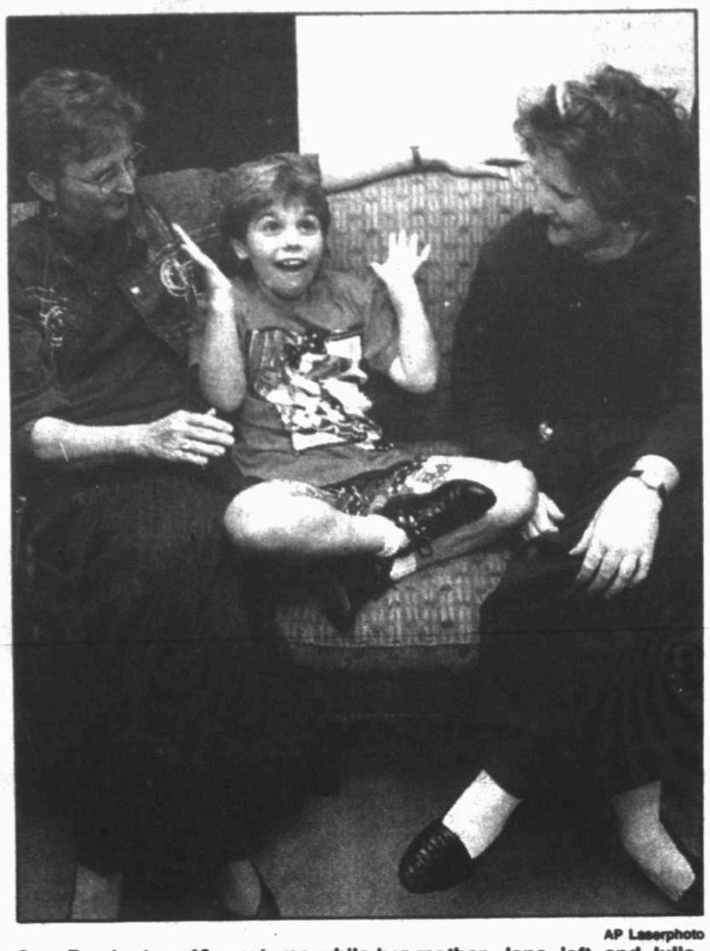

"We were just trying to get this child to live longer. This is the first infant to survive a heart transplant in the world. We were really on the fringe of medicine at that point. It's been very gratifying."

Sara, shy in the presence of several reporters and camera crews, said little Tuesday, quietly referring to her surgeons as "the old geezers" but turned cartwheels in front of them to prove her vigor.

"I don't like to use the word 'experiment' but in a sense it was an experiment," Cooley said of the surgery on Nov. 1, 1984. "Little Sara Remington represents a milestone in the progress of technology of organ transplation."

Cooley and his colleagues said the surgery was possible because of the development of cyclosporine, a drug that suppresses the body's rejection of transplants. There was some fear, however, the drug also would stunt an infant's growth.

"It now seems evident on the basis of this experience here and elsewhere that the growth process can continue with the presence of immuno-suppressive medication," Cooley said. "It's a real important discovery."

Sara, although small for her age, is considered normal along growth curves. Intellectually, she does well in school and is well adjusted, said Dr. Timothy Bricker, chief of pediatric cardiology at Texas Children's Hospital and the physician who has cared for Sara over the past 10 years. She attends elementary school in Alvin, south of Houston, and likes gymnastics, swimming and roller blading.

Her surgery became necessary after she contracted a respiratory infection and had difficulty breathing. Physicians discovered her heart was enlarged, that it was struggling to keep beating and that a transplant could be her only hope.

She was on a respirator for six weeks when the heart of a 3-year-old accident victim became available. Cooley said although the donor heart was a bit large for Sara, the size had a positive effect.

"Forty-eight hours later, she was sitting in my arms, laughing," he said. "This little heart that we put in completely rejuvenated her whole system, all the organs in the body came around. Once she got this pump, she was wide awake, laughing and sitting up."

Since Sara's groundbreaking surgery, there have been 60 pediatric transplant recipients at Texas Children's Hospital, including the latest one on Monday involving a 10-month-old child.

"It is now a much more routine experience for children with a heart abnormality that's untreatable through other medical means," Bricker said.

GOP leaders promise governors more power

■ Sen. Dole also warns that less federal meddling will mean less money.

Associated Press

WILLIAMSBURG, VA. — Republican congressional leaders pledged Tuesday to dramatically shift power from Washington to the states but bluntly warned governors that the price for less federal meddling is less federal money.

"We will get out of the mandate business but we will also get out of the money business," Sen. Bob Packwood of Oregon, in line to be Senate Finance Committee chairman, told a Republican Governors Association meeting.

"If you relieve us of some of the most onerous mandates, we will live with that," said New Jersey Gov. Christine Todd Whitman.

The event served as a remarkable illustration of the Republican Party's resurgence: a handful of leaders of the first GOP congressional majority in 40 years mingling and exchanging ideas with many of the 30 Republican governors and governors-elect who represent the party's best statehouse showing in a quarter-century.

And it was the first time since the election that incoming House Speaker Newt Gingrich, R-Ga., and incoming Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan., have appeared together at a public event, speaking back-to-back and then sitting in on a discussion of what it would take to balance the budget by 2002.

There have been tense moments in their relationship in the past, and undoubtedly will be more ahead. But the two were as chummy as could be Tuesday, showering compliments on each other and pledging to work as a team — and to invite Republican governors to heavily influence their legislative initiatives.

"There is nothing currently in writing that is not open to being better," said Gingrich. "This is all open to negotiation."

The GOP governors were beaming at their newfound numbers and influence, and said their tax-cutting ways should serve as an example to Washington.

"It is a partnership we believe will be not just productive but historic," said Utah Gov. Mike Leavitt, the new RGA chairman.

Not addressed in the Republican promises of cooperation was whether President Clinton would go along with the promises of the GOP congressional leaders. The answer could go a long way in deciding whether Republicans can keep the loyalty of the voters, whom Dole said would be impatient for results.

"If we blow it, we may be denied the opportunity for another 10, 15 or 20 years," said Dole. "But we are not going to blow it."

Both Dole and Gingrich said the Republican rush to shrink the federal government and balance the budget would place every federal program except Social Security under the microscope, and that many were likely to be eliminated outright or cut significantly.

Along the way, they promised states that Washington would lift many regulations, in areas from health care to education to environmental enforcement, that states complain make programs too expensive and less efficient.

And the GOP congressional leaders pledged to pass legislation making it much tougher for Washington to impose mandates on the states, especially without providing the money to pay for them. In a symbolic gesture, Dole said unfunded mandate legislation would be the first introduced in the Senate next year.

Governors of both parties have been demanding such leeway for years — to little avail — and the Republicans underscored their frustration by adopting "The Williamsburg Resolve" listing their gripes with "a government that has defied, and now ignores, virtually every constitutional limit fashioned by the framers to confine its reach."

"We are not colonies of the federal government," California Gov. Pete Wilson complained at one point Tuesday, during a discussion of how his state has been forced to spend billions of dollars to provide services to illegal immigrants even though the borders are federal domain.

In assuring the governors that relief was on the way, Gingrich promised a dramatic revamping of government assistance programs to shift power and control to states and community groups.

"Caring for people is not synonymous with taking care of people," Gingrich said. "We need to reach out a helping hand to every person currently in the welfare system and say to them, 'We will help you climb the ladder of opportunity. But the honest truth is there is no escalator built by redistribution by which you can sit and the government will carry you up. It doesn't exist. It is not possible.'"

An early test of this philosophy — and the ability of Republicans to reach consensus now that they have power — will come on the issue of welfare reform.

Group of religious leaders vow opposition against any school prayer amendment

WASHINGTON (AP) — A group of religious leaders pledged Tuesday to lobby against any proposed school prayer constitutional amendment, saying it would harm people's rights to worship according to their own beliefs.

"We oppose any effort of government to poke its nose into our prayers, especially our children's prayers," Robert W. Tiller of American Baptist Churches USA said at a news conference.

Brent Walker of the Baptist Joint Committee on Public Affairs said the groups will organize to oppose any proposed constitutional amendment on school prayer. House Speaker-to-be Newt Gingrich wants a vote on a school prayer amendment by next July.

The religious leaders said they opposed changing the Constitution's First Amendment protection of religious freedom and ban on government establishment of religion.

"I appeal to Newt Gingrich: This is a wrongheaded, misguided, divisive agenda," said Rabbi David Saperstein of the Union of American Hebrew Congregations.

GM workers have everything but time

By Peter T. Kilborn
N.Y. Times News Service

JANESVILLE, Wis. — If for many workers the American dream is drifting out of reach, the 4,800 General Motors workers here have nailed it down.

They own homes, cars, big-screen televisions, sometimes boats. They have the assurance of a secure pension and good medical care.

Many of these men — and most are men — earn so much that they can comfortably support their families; their wives don't have to work.

But these workers, whether young and building families or older and planning for retirement, say they cannot enjoy what their labors have bought. GM, they say, asks them to put in extraordinary stretches of overtime.

The company requires them to work 10 hours beyond the conventional 40, about twice the average overtime for American factory workers. And the company strongly encourages them to work even more hours voluntarily, so that it can sell more of the Chevrolet Suburbans and GMC medium duty trucks made here.

Products of a labor union culture that promised a good day's work for a good day's pay, these workers can afford to say that there's such a thing as enough work and enough pay.

And that is precisely what they are doing. Indeed, they are so fed up with overtime that 92 percent voted early this month to strike if their union, the United Automobile Workers, agrees to authorize one.

Anger with overtime has erupted at other GM plants; the union went on strike in Flint, Mich., for four days last September. There, the company bowed to the union's demands, and agreed to hire more workers.

People here like Jack Courtney, 50, who fills in for people on breaks, want the same deal. "People don't just want the money," he said. "They want time with their families."

Like most assembly line workers in this city of 52,133 about 75 miles southwest of Milwaukee, Courtney is paid about $18.50 an hour before overtime kicks in; $27.75 with it. He said that his UAW Local 95 here thought it had made a sweet deal in 1986 when it agreed to four 10's — a four-day work week of 10-hour days, with three days off. But the contract also provided for a fifth 10-hour day if the company felt it was needed. Such days were rare at first, but became routine about four years ago.

"Then they went to eight hours on Saturdays," Courtney said as he drank beer at the GM workers' watering hole, Zachow's, on the edge of the plant's grounds. "A lot work Sundays, too. After two or three years of it people are tired."

No one is forced to work beyond the mandatory 50 hours, but the company can make it hard to say no. GM has been losing money in its North American business this year, despite strong sales. Workers do not have to look far beyond Janesville to see the rubble of GM factories that died after other bouts of losses.

Michael Marcks, president of Local 95, explained, "They'll say, 'You know, we've got customers and they need our product. They could go buy product somewhere else.' You can lean on people that way."

Many other companies have moved to heavy overtime. In September and October, the Bureau of Labor Statistics says factory workers put in an average of 4 hours 42 minutes of overtime a week, the most ever registered in the 38 years during which the agency has kept track.

Joe Vadvez, 29, would promptly settle for a regular work week. A floater, like Courtney, he said: "I live a comfortable life. I have my house. I have my car. I have my wife. I got my kids. I got a 2-year-old and a 6-year-old.

"I got my toys, a lot of garage toys. We're saving up to go to Mexico. Forty hours a week is fine for me. If once in a while you get a 50-hour week, that's not bad. But we've got people working double shifts. We need more help in that place."

Marcks said more workers were being injured at the plant because the overtime leaves them tired, and that makes them accident-prone. But James W. Crellin, a GM spokesman in Detroit, said, "We have seen no statistics that would indicate an increase in the severity or frequency of accidents due to increased overtime at out facilities."

General Motors asks people at the busier of its 150 North American plants to work overtime because it is loathe to take on permanent new workers. Marcks said that with the exception of temporary employees, no new workers have been hired in Janesville since 1986.

To stop periodic losses and to streamline the business, General Motors, like thousands of American manufacturers, has been restructuring and cutting its work force even as the economy grows. Almost three years ago, the company said it would eliminate 74,000 jobs; with 244,000 blue- and white-collar workers now, it is just 14,000 short of the goal.

'Forty hours a week is fine for me. If once in a while you get a 50-hour week, that's not bad. But we've got people working double shifts. We need more help in that place.'

— Joe Vadvez, 29, GM worker

University becomes vice squad in fight against cyberspace sex

By Henry Cutter
Associated Press

PITTSBURGH — In a case that has colleges taking another look at their legal responsibilities in cyberspace, Carnegie Mellon University has blocked access to bulletin boards that students can use to call up dirty pictures.

About 300 students protested the move earlier this month as an assault on academic freedom, and a public interest group for computer users suggested Carnegie Mellon overreacted.

"It is censorship," said Declan McCullagh, student body president. "We have obscene books in our library, but the university isn't burning them. The university is burning cyberbooks."

Carnegie Mellon officials said they fear the school can be prosecuted for distributing pornography to minors if it knowingly allows access to the pictures via the Internet to anyone under 18. Most of the school's students are adults, but children as young as elementary-school age also use the university's computer networks.

The dispute started when Martin Rimm, a research associate working on a study of pornography in cyberspace, used Carnegie Mellon computers to collect 917,000 dirty pictures, ranging from simple nudity to pictures of men and women having sex with animals. He tracked how often the pictures had been downloaded, or called up by a computer user — 6.4 million times.

When Rimm took his findings to the administration, Carnegie Mellon could no longer claim ignorance about the material, said Erwin Steinberg, vice provost for education.

"It's a difficult issue, an emotional issue," said William Arms, Carnegie Mellon's vice president for computing services. He received calls from six other schools after the problem came to light. "People want to know which way to go," he said.

The school decided to block access to both written and pictographic pornography. In the face of student opposition, Carnegie Mellon decided not to enforce the block on text. But X-rated pictures remain off limits.

"I have not accessed that material, but I feel that each person has a right to choose what kind of shoes, what kind of ties, what kind of information they want," said Cesar Rios, a graduate student in public management.

Freshman Jessica Rhodes disagreed. "We sort of have to abide by the laws of the state," she said. "There are other ways of getting pornography. If people want pornography that bad, they should go buy it themselves."

Mike Godwin, a lawyer for the Washington-based Electronic Frontier Foundation, said the chances of Carnegie Mellon being held liable for carrying the pictures are extremely slim.

Richard Goldberg, an Allegheny County deputy district attorney, said it would be very difficult to prosecute Carnegie Mellon, for the same reason it is hard to prosecute other kinds of obscenity cases: The prosecutor would have to prove the material has no redeeming social value.

"Then you have the problem of where do you prosecute them? Where is it coming from?" he said.

Goldberg was referring to the question of what community standards should be applied to obscenity-in-cyberspace cases. In 1973, the U.S. Supreme Court ruled that obscenity must be judged by local community standards. But cyberspace crosses such earthly boundaries.

In July, a California couple, Robert and Carleen Thomas, were convicted in federal court in Memphis, Tenn., for sending obscene pictures via interstate telephone lines. Although the verdict might have turned out differently in California, the court in the Bible Belt held that the pictures were obscene by the standards of the local community.

'It is censorship. We have obscene books in our library, but the university isn't burning them. The university is burning cyberbooks.'

— Declan McCullagh, student body president

"As far as I'm concerned, Planned Parenthood is for life."

It began when I was young and needed advice about birth control. You know, I can still remember my first visit. They sensed I was nervous, but their kindness made me feel comfortable and secure. And they offered a wide range of affordable services that covered all my special health care needs.

When I could afford to go somewhere else, I stayed. Planned Parenthood people are sensitive, courteous and as professional as can be. And everything is confidential.

Now that I'm older, I still go to Planned Parenthood for their midlife services, as they're as caring as ever.

Rules to force major change in urban-area gas formulas

N.Y. Times News Service

New federal clean-air rules will force drastic changes in the recipe used for gasoline in most urban areas in the next few weeks, and refiners and distributors are struggling to get supplies of the reformulated gasoline into place.

Some analysts are predicting spot shortages and sudden price surges.

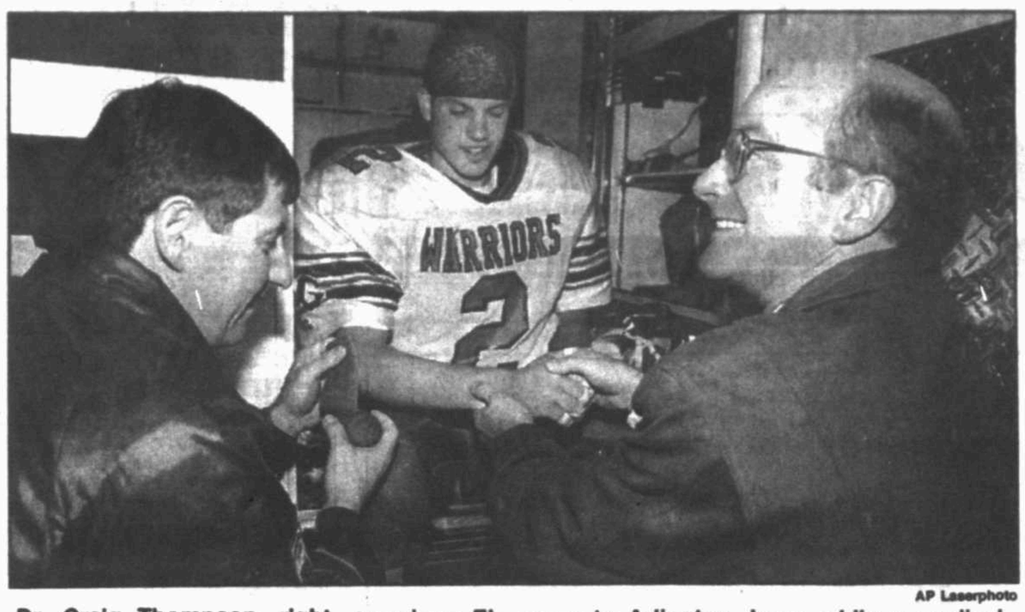

"We're going to have the biggest change in gasoline chemistry ever, even bigger than what we saw when we went to unleaded gas in 1973 and 1974," said William Berman, chief environmental affairs lobbyist of the American Automobile Association.

The new rules will instantly cover about 30 percent of the national gasoline market, nearly 30 million gallons a day, enough to fuel 43 million passenger cars.

By contrast, the last big change, to unleaded fuel, was gradual, with only enough produced at first to supply 1974 model cars.

The areas where the new gasoline will be required are most of the Boston-New York-Washington megalopolis, extending south to Richmond, north to most of coastal Maine and west to much of western Pennsylvania; the Chicago region, including northeastern Indiana and eastern Wisconsin; sections of Kentucky in the Louisville area and near Cincinnati; the Houston and Dallas-Fort Worth areas, and the Los Angeles and San Diego areas.

Distributors must have the new fuel on hand by Dec. 1, and refiners in areas where reformulated gasoline is required must have switched over completely by Jan. 1. In many areas, retailers are already pumping the new fuel, although most preferred to wait as long as possible because the new fuel is more expensive.

Small-town doctor bucks the trend

By Mary Neubauer
Associated Press

STRAWBERRY POINT, Iowa — He calls himself a dinosaur, part of a dying breed, an old fogey, when really, he's just a doctor making a go of his own practice in small-town Iowa.

"You get to feeling like you made a decision nobody else is making," Dr. Craig Thompson says with a laugh. "I think people have called this 'a nonviable practice.' "

Thompson, 41, has been the doctor in Strawberry Point — population 1,400 — since July 17, 1979. A partner has come and gone, but he is sticking with it.

"One evening before I came in here, I was talking with a chest surgeon about my plans to go into private practice. He said, 'Man that takes guts.' I said, 'What are you talking about? You're a chest surgeon.' But he said, 'If I get a problem with heart surgery, I can call in the cardiologist. You're out there on a dirt road by yourself.'

"There are times you feel like that," Thompson said. "But you learn, I guess, that you work with a slightly different team than what you'd work with in a metropolitan area."

The statistics say Thompson shouldn't be in Strawberry Point. The number of doctors in Iowa has been increasing since 1977, but they're not being evenly distributed. The latest numbers from the University of Iowa show that 60 Iowa towns with populations of 2,500 or less lost their family doctor between 1978 and 1993.

Nationwide, about 20 percent of the U.S. population lives in rural areas, but only 9 percent of the nation's physicians practice there.

Thompson says the problem comes down to simple numbers. As the farm crisis of the 1980s drove people from rural Iowa, and eventually 130,000 people from the state, doctors followed them.

"There are nights you do go home and think, 'Am I just incredibly dense?' But you develop bonds with people," he said.

Beer-making renaissance reshapes brewery industry

By Edward A. Gargan
N.Y. Times News Service

ATLANTA — Against a curdled gray Georgian sky, Gregory Kelly hoisted a pint-glass of coppery liquid topped with a dense layer of creamy foam, rotated the glass and carefully sipped the mixture.

"The best beer in the world," he declared, "Red Brick Ale."

With that kind of enthusiasm, it comes as little surprise that Kelly is the president and founder of the Atlanta Brewing Co., the maker of Red Brick Ale.

Kelly's company began brewing beer four months ago in a red brick building here hard by a highway of hurtling commuters. Though it is this city's only microbrewery, the Atlanta startup is part of the nationwide rush to produce high quality, traditionally brewed, "craft" beers.

The first American microbreweries — ones that produce fewer than 15,000 barrels annually — appeared in northern California and the Pacific Northwest more than a decade ago. But this small-scale, beer-making renaissance in the United States has really gained momentum recently.

Today, there are 187 microbreweries in the country, up from 21 in 1985, according to the Institute for Brewing Studies in Boulder, Colo. Nearly two dozen have been started so far this year, including Kelly's Atlanta Brewing.

By the end of this year, microbreweries will have produced just over 1 percent of the beer brewed in America, according to Ben Steiman, executive editor of Beer Marketer's Insights, an industry newsletter. But the craft beers occupy a fast-growing and potentially lucrative niche of the $45 billion beer market.

At a time when consumption of the mainstream brands is gradually declining, demand for the more flavorful microbrews is expected to grow by 30 percent a year or more, estimates Frank C. Walters, director of research for Impact International, a trade newsletter. Some analysts predict that the microbrewed segment could eventually represent as much as 10 percent of the beer market.

After years of trying to ignore the microbreweries, the big beer makers are trying now to join them. The majors are attracted not only by the growth, but also by the premium prices commanded by the specialty beers — up to twice as much as Budweiser or Miller.

So, in recent months, Anheuser-Busch, Miller, Coors and Stroh have all introduced specialty brands with names like Elk Mountain Amber Ale, Killian's Red, Red Wolf, Reserve Amber Ale.

They tout these beers for their richness of flavor as "nutty," "peaty," "malty" and so on. In short, they are responding with new products to a long standing charge of beer-drinking purists — namely, that American mass-market brands like Bud and Miller are bland.

Bagwell signs

HOUSTON — National League MVP Jeff Bagwell and the Houston Astros agreed today to $27.5 million, four-year contract with three option years.

Bagwell

The Astros also hired Tal Smith as team president. Smith, the father of San Diego Padres GM Randy Smith, was fired as Astros' general manager 14 years ago.

Bagwell would have been eligible to become a restricted free agent in two weeks if owner implement their salary cap proposal and grant service time from the strike. But the Astros acted first and signed him to a deal with an average annual value of $6,875,000, the fifth-most in the majors.

"As much as everyone thought I wanted to be in Boston, I really wanted to stay in Houston and have a chance to finish my career here," Bagwell said.

Bagwell, 26, was the unanimous selection as the NL's top player last month, receiving all 28 votes following a year when he set franchise records with 39 home runs, 116 RBIs and 73 extra-base hits. He was second in NL hitting with a .368 average.

Pagel out

IRVING — Injuries keep gumming up the Dallas Cowboys quarterback plans.

Mike Pagel, former Baltimore, Indianapolis, Cleveland and Los Angeles Rams quarterback, wasn't mobile enough to suit the coaches in a workout Tuesday and the Cowboys decided to go with Tom Hodson, who used to play for New England.

Pagel sustained a knee injury in an indoor league game three weeks ago and coaches didn't feel he would be ready to backup Jason Garrett should an injury occur in the Thanksgiving Day game against the Green Bay Packers. Troy Aikman and Rodney Peete are out with injuries.

OSU's Jones quits

STILLWATER, Okla. — Pat Jones resigned as Oklahoma State's football coach Tuesday to let someone else guide a program still trying to recover from NCAA sanctions leveled 5½ years ago.

Jones won 62 games in his 11 years, more than any coach in school history. But the Cowboys had six straight losing seasons and have gone winless in the Big Eight during three of the past four years.

Jones said victories and losses had far less to do with his decision than the need to upgrade facilities and improve funding in order to put the Cowboys on equal footing with other Big Eight schools.

Midland High, Lee girls win

■ Midland High's girls remain undefeated by escaping Lubbock Coronado, 74-70.

By Amy Wolfenbarger
Staff Writer

The Midland High girls lived and almost died by the free throw Tuesday night in a 74-70 victory over Lubbock Coronado.

MHS was whistled for 14 first half fouls which sent the Lady Mustangs to the free throw line 20 times. Coronado, which handed the Lady Dawgs their first loss after an undefeated run in 1994, converted on 13 of those attempts to stay within 39-31 at halftime.

Childress

But when the Lady Mustangs began fouling in the fourth period to stop the clock, MHS hit 8-of-12 including 6-of-8 with 1:20 to go. Amy Alcala, LaKendria Kendrick and Laura Childress each hit a pair from the line to spoil the Coronado comeback plan and keep the Lady Dawgs undefeated with five wins. Coronado fell to 2-3 overall.

Not only did the frequent whistles against MHS keep Coronado on the line, but it kept several key players on the MHS bench with foul trouble. Starters Jamie Rand, Ogonna Merritt and Alcala all served time on the bench. Rand got her fourth with 7:52 left to play in the second quarter. Alcala was slapped with two within a 20-second period in the third to total four and send her to the bench for most of that stanza. Merritt eventually fouled out.

Midland Lee's Farah Fisher dribbles past Lake View's Kristy Rodriquez (33) and Natlie Irin (24) in the Lady Rebels 57-40 win Tuesday night at the Lee gymnasium.

■ The Lady Rebels improve to 4-1 but leave coach Elise Kail hoping for sharper play.

By Terry Williamson
Sports Editor

Midland Lee's Lady Rebels won easily enough, 57-40, over the Class 4A San Angelo Lake View Maidens at the Lee gym Tuesday night, but it wasn't the kind of victory that Lee coach Elise Kail wanted to see from her team.

Kail summed up the game in one l-o-n-g word, "S-l-o-p-p-y."

Still, Lee climbed to 4-1 on the season, but the concern for Kail at the moment is an upcoming Saturday date with Lubbock Monterey. Or is it a re-date?

Lee upset Monterey in the Tall City girls tournament here over the weekend and now has to travel to Lubbock to face the Lady Plainsmen on foreign hardwood at 7:45 p.m. Saturday. Kail wanted a little better showing against Lake View in preparation for that match.

"We weren't moving on defense and we were reaching and making goofy moves like that," Kail said. "We play Monterey again Saturday and I think it's going to be a blood bath up there on their court. They're going to be out to get us."

Even though Kail wasn't too happy with the team's play, the Rebels took control early, racing to a 28-10 lead. Lake View closed the gap a couple of times to 12 points, but never got into single digit territory that might spell an upset.

Lee's early plan was simple enough. Get the ball inside to 6-2 post Krissy Woodard. Woodard then responded with 10 first quarter points on the way to a 20-point night. She hit her first five shots in a row and ended the half with 16

Cowboys believe in Garrett

■ Dallas players are confident Jason Garrett will play better than expected against Green Bay Thursday.

By Denne H. Freeman
AP Sports Writer

IRVING — Jason Garrett is Princeton smart and back-alley tough. Teammates say the Green Bay Packers are in for a big surprise against the Dallas Cowboys third-team quarterback on Thanksgiving Day.

"He'll do a fantastic job," Troy Aikman said. "We're not worried about Jason. He's got good stuff."

"He did a great job against the New York Giants and Phoenix when he had to play last year," fullback Daryl Johnston said. "We feel very confident he can get the job done if everyone else performs. We don't foresee any problems with Jason in there."

"Jason can't throw the ball like Troy but he can do good things and the whole team believes he can get it done," running back Emmitt Smith said.

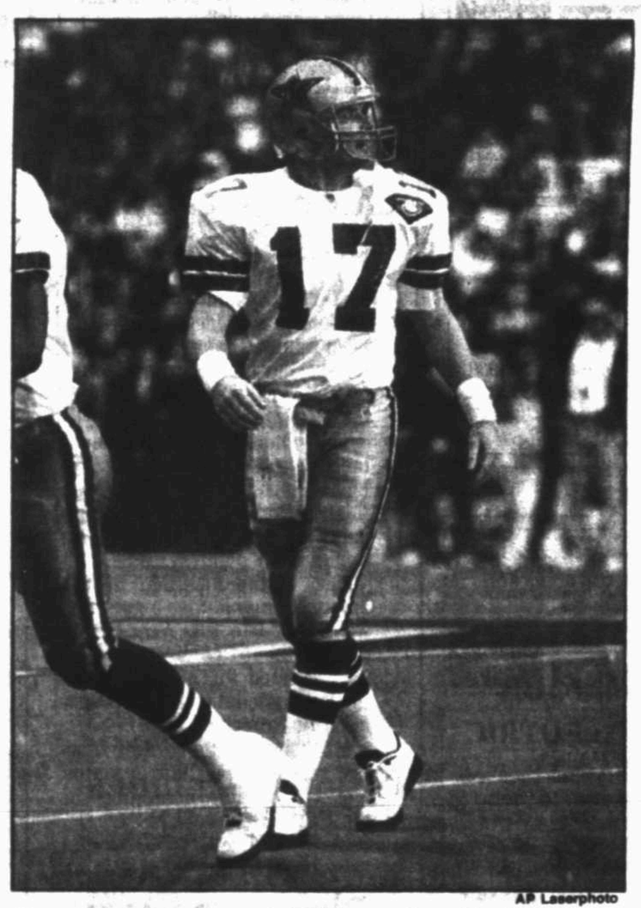

Garrett starts for the Cowboys on Thursday against the Packers because Aikman has a sprained knee and backup Rodney Peete has a strained right thumb.

Garrett has played for five years in three pro leagues. He spent the 1992 season on the Dallas practice squad and moved to the active roster in 1993, replacing Steve Beuerlein.

He won a game against the Giants last year after Aikman left with a pulled hamstring, taking the Cowboys on two touchdown drives. The following week Garrett started in a 20-15 victory over Phoenix.

"It was a good experience for me last year," he said. "I think I learned a lot. What's important is I'll be practicing with the first team this week. That really helps.

Hanspard catapults to SWC honor

By Jean Pagel
Associated Press Writer

LUBBOCK — A sideways catapult seemed to be the best way for Byron Hanspard to get by Houston defenders blocking his 14-yard path to the end zone.

■ SWC Players of the Week

"I was trying to decide whether I wanted to run over them or whether I wanted to jump," the Texas Tech tailback said. "So it happened that I just put my head down and spun."

Hanspard, who rushed for 114 yards on 24 carries, scored that touchdown and another from 5 yards out Saturday in the Red Raiders' 34-0 victory over Houston.

The Associated Press named Hanspard the Southwest Conference Offensive Player of the Week for a performance that also included three receptions for 42 yards.

Defensive honors went to Texas A&M's Ray Mickens, who had two tackles and two broken-up passes as the Aggies beat Texas Christian 34-17.

Mickens thwarted a third-quarter touchdown attempt with an interception in the end zone that could have pulled the Horned Frogs within 24-17 had they scored.

District 4-5A arguably best in state

Just how strong is District 4-5A compared to other districts across the state?

Williamson

That has been a question asked many times over the years, and it's logical that 4-5A fans would like to think the Little Southwest Conference (maybe to become the Little Big 12 with 7 when the SWC folds its tent) is one of the best around.

The only way I can think of to compare districts is in overall state playoff results, and not just who wins a state championship. Midland's Tim McGraw makes a good case that 4-5A is at least one of the best overall districts in the state.

Since three teams from each district started going to the state's run for roses, only five times have three teams from a single district remained alive after only two playoff rounds.

In 1991, it happened twice with District 13-5A teams (Temple, Killeen and Waco) and 4-5A squads (Odessa Permian, Midland Lee and San Angelo) all surviving the first two rounds.

The next two years no district had three survivors after two rounds. This year three districts have turned the trick. District 4-5A (Permian, Lee, Abilene Cooper), District 13-5A (Tyler, Marshall, Lufkin) and District 11-5A (Plano, Plano East, Lake Highlands) are all still alive. So far, it would look like a tie between 4-5A and 13-5A.

However, 4-5A takes another step as the only district to have all three of its league representatives to have survived three rounds when Permian, Lee and San Angelo turned the trick in 1991. And that's as far as it can go in the playoffs since district teams will always meet up again in the fourth round. One has to fall out.

Only three times since the three-team format began have teams from the same district reached the fourth round of the playoffs. Again 4-5A and 13-5A appear. Lee and Permian met in the 1991 quarterfinals while 13-5A's Killeen and Temple squared off in the quarterfinals last year. The only other time that has happened since the three-team move is last year's quarterfinal meeting between Alice and Victoria of District 30-5A.

And this year there is still the possibility of a Cooper-Lee rematch next week, which would give 4-5A another huge boost in state recognition. However, both have opponents who would like to add their name to the teams from the same district quarterfinal listing. Cooper meets Arlington High on Saturday in Arlington while Lee hosts Arlington Lamar on Saturday here at Memorial Stadium. Both Arlington schools are from District 8-5A.

You can carry this even further back than the three team format to the fact that Lee and Permian have faced each other three times in the state quarterfinals. No other district matches that record between two schools. However, no other 4-5A squads have ever met up again, so a Lee-Cooper quarterfinal would be a new experience for the league.

That could have happened last year with both Lee and Cooper surviving two rounds. If both had won in the third round, it would have happened last year. However, a bunch of Farmers from Lewisville turned over the apple cart, spilling Lee in the third round and Cooper the next week in the quarterfinals on the way to a Small School state title. At least, the Small School championship had to go through 4-5A.

You can make a solid argument that 4-5A may be the toughest district in the Lone Star State. And a couple of more victories by 4-5A this season would almost make it a mute point.

Rebs drop hoops contest to Hanks

EL PASO — El Paso Hanks took a 28-9 first-quarter lead and held off 12 Midland Lee three-point goals to sustain a 77-61 win over the Rebels in a Class 5A boys basketball game here Tuesday.

The Rebs dropped their second straight to fall to 1-2 for the season. Hanks remained undefeated at 5-0.

"They jumped on us in the first quarter but other than that it wasn't too bad," said Lee coach Jon House. "The kids stepped off the long bus ride and it took them a while to get going. But that's mostly because of the inexperience."

Once again, the Rebs were without post Mark Holly, who along with wing Shane McCulloch and forward Dushawn Hicks, had the most experience for Lee's squad which returned no starters from 1994. House said he would probably be without Holly, who is out with an injured ankle, until some time after the Thanksgiving holiday.

"As you can see, we had no inside game," House said. "We only had seven two-pointers."

Lee was led by McCulloch, who had four treys, with 18 points. Israel Boyd and Hicks both dumped in 12. Hicks and Craig Sawyer had three three-pointers each for the Rebs while Boyd and Michael Rhoads had one each to add to Lee's total 12.

The Rebels travel to Killeen for a 1 p.m. tournament game on Friday.

Monahans nips Rangers, 80-79

GREENWOOD — Class 4A Monahans outscored 3A Greenwood by a 20-11 margin in the fourth quarter to escape with an 80-79 non-conference basketball victory over Greenwood's scrappy Rangers.

Greenwood's Vincent Servantez hit a three-point shot at the buzzer to bring the Rangers to within one but the lead had escaped earlier in the quarter. Greenwood led 42-40 at the half and 60-60 at the end of three periods.

Monahans had four players in double figures with Randy Moore leading the way with 20 points. Greenwood also had four players in double figures, including a game high 26 points from Edward Kennepohl. Daniel Harris had 20 points while Servantez added 13 and James Settles 10.

Greenwood will play its third consecutive Class 4A opponent next Tuesday in Greenwood when the Rangers host Big Spring.

Packers' loss should make up for Cowboys'

By Dave Goldberg
AP Football Writer

Someone must have figured out that the Packers' loss of Reggie White cancels out the Cowboys' loss of Troy Aikman. Because even without Aikman, Dallas is a 7½-point favorite.

Maybe, though, the Dallas defense will cancel out what passes for a Green Bay offense, and White's loss will make it easier for Jason Garrett to survive.

Add Emmitt Smith and the offensive line to take pressure off Garrett, who will be backed up by Tommy Hodson, and the points-pread seems reasonable.

"We'll still run the table," says Nate Newton, who's having a career year.

There's also the intangible factor.

The Cowboys lost on Turkey Day last year in a game that no one will Lett them forget. They don't want to be embarrassed on national TV again and they want to prove they can win without Aikman.

COWBOYS, 20-10

Buffalo (minus 1½) at Detroit (Thursday)

How to figure the Bills? They lose a couple, they're written off, so they win a big one. Does that mean they lose a little one?

One idea: Keep the ball for 44 minutes and away from Barry Sanders.

BILLS, 27-20

Miami (plus 1) at Jets

How to figure the Jets? They beat good teams on the road, lose to bad ones at home and generally stay around .500. If they win this one, they take the AFC East lead. So ...

DOLPHINS, 17-16

Chicago (plus 3) at Arizona

This is as good as a home game for the Bears — expatriate midwesterners buy up Sun Devil Stadium. Buddy's defense is rolling, but the offense remains a mirage.

CARDINALS, 9-7

Philadelphia (minus 1) at Atlanta

Just when the Eagles looked like they might challenge the Cowboys they managed 13 point in two games. Not against the Atlanta defense.

COWBOYS: Offense to scale down

(From 1C)

I'm confident. I know my limitations and strengths."

Garrett said, "We'll probably scale the offense down a little bit. My strengths are I know the offense and I think I can throw the short stuff with good accuracy. I can run this offense. I just have to remember I'm just one-lith of the team out there and not try to do too much. I realize I can't win the game by myself."

Garrett is from a football family. His father, Jim, is a scout for the Cowboys. Brother Judd has been in the Cowboys training camp the last two years trying out as a running back. Another brother, John, is a scout for the Tampa Bay Bucs.

Coach Barry Switzer said the Cowboys will ditch some of their normal game plan for the Packers.

"He's very intelligent, has a good arm, and knows our offense as well as any quarterback," Switzer said. "Execution won't be a problem. He's too smart to get you beat. He knows his limitations. He knows he doesn't have an arm like Troy or Rodney. We may scale back some."

Green Bay coach Mike Holmgren said Garrett worries him.

"You expect a team to rally behind a guy like that," Holmgren said. "I know he's tough and smart. He has to be considering where he went to school. Of course, you would think it would work out better for us without Aikman and Peete around.

"But you never know."

Twenty years ago the Cowboys had an unheralded quarterback, Clint Longley, who came off the bench on Thanksgiving Day for an injured Roger Staubach and beat Washington.

"It's a chance for me to make a name for myself," Garrett said. "You don't get many chances like this."

Aggies fall to Tulane in Maui Invite

LAHAINA, Hawaii (AP) — Rayshard Allen and LaVeldro Simmons each scored 21 points Tuesday to lead Tulane to a 76-74 victory over Texas A&M in the consolation round of the Maui Invitational.

Tulane (1-1) did not have a field goal over the final seven minutes, going 9-for-16 from the free throw line to hold off Texas A&M, which trailed 73-64 with 1:48 left. The Aggies cut it to 75-74 with 3.9 seconds to play on a banked 3-pointer by freshman guard Kyle Kessel.

Kessel fouled Allen with 1.6 seconds to play and it was called an intentional foul. Allen made one of two free throws and Tulane then was awarded the ball and was able to run out the clock.

Tulane, which lost to No. 13 Michigan 75-73 in the first round, will play No. 11 Indiana for fifth place on Wednesday.

Texas A&M (0-2) lost its opening-round game to Arizona State 103-73, but came out fired up against Tulane.

The Aggies led throughout the first half and were still up 51-48 with 14:07 to play when the Green Wave went on a 10-0 run. Tulane then looked in control until it lost its aggressiveness and settled for the free throws. The Green Wave finished 22-for-41 from the free throw line, just a little poorer than their 18-for-32 effort against Michigan.

Tony McGinnis led Texas A&M with 23 points, while Joe Wilbert had 18.

Tech women fall

LUBBOCK, Texas (AP) — Rhonda Smith scored 38 points, including 10 in the game's final minutes, as No. 13 Washington upset No. 6 Texas Tech 79-75 Tuesday to win the pre-season Women's National Invitation Tournament.

The Huskies (4-0) jumped to an 11-2 lead and didn't trail until just 5:05 remained, when Tabitha Truesdale made two of her 20 points and gave Tech a 69-67 edge.

But Washington regained the lead, 73-71, and kept it with under three minutes to go.

The Lady Raiders (3-1), looking rattled by Washington's full-court pressure, made sloppy passes and missed shots outside. Poor free-throw shooting — 19-of-36 — also took a toll.

It was Tech's first loss to Washington and the first loss at home in 25 games.

Melinda White's layup brought Tech to within 30-27 with 5:20 to go in the half.

But Washington retaliated with eight consecutive points and built its biggest lead of the first period when Smith sank a shot and was fouled with 1.5 seconds remaining. Her free throw made it 45-34 at halftime.

More Sports/6C

Tech went on a 10-point run to close the gap to 54-50 and then, thanks mostly to free throws, tied the game at 61-61 with 8:36 remaining.

Smith, the tournament's most valuable player, grabbed 11 rebounds and remained an open target under the boards to seal Washington's victory.

Connie Robinson had 18 points and Michi Atkins added 17 for Tech. Noel Johnson, usually a strong shooter outside, finished with 3.

Washington's Melissa Wuschnig and Katia Foucade each scored nine.

Maher gets SLC honor

PLANO (AP) — Mitch Maher, who passed for a Southland Conference-record 69 touchdown passes while at North Texas, was selected Tuesday as the SLC Player of the Year.

Maher, a senior who has set or tied 10 UNT records, completed 202-of-319 passes for 2,840 yards and 25 touchdown this season. He had three 300-yard games and a 400-yard game as the Eagles won the conference championship.

Southwest Texas State running back Donald Wilkerson was the offensive Player of the Year, and McNeese State linebacker Vincent Landrum was the defensive player.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By Jeane Dixon

WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 23, 1994

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Love and romance will continue to play a dominant role in your life. Because you are pleasant to work with, you find yourself climbing the ladder of success faster and faster. Be careful to keep in touch with the people you knew when you first started out. Overdue domestic changes will make home life more relaxing. A loved one is persuaded to make a permanent commitment.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: outlaw Billy the Kid, legendary screen villain Boris Karloff, comedian Harpo Marx, Broadway composer Jerry Bock.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Others may be more objective than you are right now. Listen to the advice of an old friend who has your best interests at heart. Your cash flow will soon increase. Romance gets another chance.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Someone promises support that they really do not intend to give. Try your best to establish better lines of communication. You have the skills you need to come out on top. Be persistent.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Postpone travel; you can probably achieve the same results by making phone calls and writing letters. Go ahead and reach out for help. Potential allies are waiting for you to ask. Swallow your pride.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Direct the lion's share of your attention to cementing a deal. Letting up on an artistic or creative venture would be a mistake. Keep spending within reasonable limits.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Your creative talents come to the fore. Deal with criticism in a mature manner. The financial outlook brightens. Powerful influences are at work on your behalf.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Exchanging ideas with your loved ones gives you new hope for the future. Your social life gets a welcome boost following a chance meeting with an attractive member of the opposite sex.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Stop making excuses for others. Instead, help them learn to stand on their own two feet. Discard any feelings of anger. Your mate may be more enthusiastic than usual about your entertainment plans.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Be prepared to accept additional responsibilities. New financial rewards are part of the picture. A hunch will be proved correct. Give others the benefit of the doubt. Romance is in the air!

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Your romantic partner could make you happy by showing up unexpectedly. You need to clear up a financial matter. Welcome suggestions. Your loved one has an idea that proves to be the sensible thing to do.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Give free rein to your creative talents. You are about to be offered a unique opportunity; be certain it is what you really want. Romance keeps you guessing. Take care of your health.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): An unusual plan to increase your cash reserve has a good chance of success. When entertaining for business, keep receipts for tax purposes. Romance beckons from a distance.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): A good day for launching joint ventures and business partnerships. Avoid scattering your forces. Look behind the scenes for the answer to a financial dilemma.

The bidding:

NORTH	EAST	SOUTH	WEST
1◇	Pass	2NT	Pass
3NT	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Nine of ♠

For a military foray to be successful, it is essential that lines of communication and supply be kept open. The same applies to a bridge campaign.

South was not delighted with the jump to two no trump without a true stopper in spades. Any other action, however, was going to result in misdescribing a perfectly balanced 15-pointer. North's raise to game was automatic.

The auction tended to highlight the fact that North-South had length in the minors — South's failure to bid a major at the one-level suggested no four-card suit. Since West would need a lot of help from partner to set up and run hearts, the defender elected instead to lead the shorter major in the hope of finding partner's suit.

The operation was successful, but the patient died. Since the opening lead marked East for spade length and both missing honors, declarer made a good play by rising with dummy's king. East was delighted to capture the monarch with the ace — after all, haven't Sharif and Hirsch on numerous occasions stressed that aces were made to capture kings — and the defense was dead.

Had East taken some time before playing to the first trick, the winning defense would have been easy to spot. East should have allowed the king of spades to win the first trick, encouraging partner by following with the six. Declarer cannot come to nine tricks without diamonds, but as soon as the suit is led West can win with the ace and revert to spades, and four tricks in that suit complete declarer's rout.

Phil Donahue's show redefines weighty on TV talk-show circuit

FORT WORTH — Phil Donahue's show has redefined weighty on the talk show circuit.

The hydraulic lift under the stage at the Fort Worth-Tarrant County Convention Center blew a gasket, dumping 250 gallons of hydraulic fluid.

No one was hurt, but the stage dropped about a foot and began sloping forward, convention center Director Melvin Morgan said Monday.

Donahue's insurance company has tentatively agreed to pay about 20 percent of the $100,000 replacement cost, Morgan said.

MODESTO, Calif. — DNA tests confirmed what Michael Jackson said in song 10 years ago: The kid is not my son.

DNA tests confirm what Michael Jackson said.

Superior Court Judge Glenn Ritchey Jr. threw out a paternity suit Monday brought against Jackson by Michelle Flowers.

Flowers, 31, accused Jackson of fathering her 10-year-old son and sought $20 million a year and a mansion.

Important repair notes: Liza Minnelli, 48, will undergo hip-replacement surgery in January, and Richard Gere,45, chipped a tooth in London while filming a scene on horseback for "First Knight." "It was just a teeny-weeny chip that won't affect his dazzling good looks," his publicist told Entertainment Weekly.

SYDNEY, Australia — George Bush hasn't lost his touch on the tennis court.

George Bush hasn't lost his touch on tennis court.

Bush, 70, teamed with John Newcombe on Monday to defeat the former president's nephew, Walter Stapleton, and former tennis star Tony Roche.

"Mr. Bush played very well and his aggressive serve-volley game was suited to the grass," Newcombe said.

Stapleton, 20, is studying political science at the University of New South Wales in Sydney.

Bush and his wife, Barbara, also attended a private dinner with Prime Minister Paul Keating.

WASHINGTON — Rock 'em, sock 'em Mayor-elect Marion Barry picked a boxing promoter to head his transition team.

"It's not going to be business as usual. We're going to change the face of government," Barry said Monday.

Rock Newman, who manages former heavyweight champion Riddick Bowe, financed a huge drive during the primary campaign in which people were paid to register to vote.

BRANSON, Mo. — The man in black is leaving town and never coming back.

Johnny Cash said he's pulling out after three years of trying to find success in this Ozarks tourist town.

"I have no plans to come back at all," Cash said in Tuesday's Springfield News-Leader. "I don't think I'm doing myself or my fans a favor by being here."

Cash left Branson on Saturday, cutting short an engagement that was supposed to run through Dec. 3 at the Shenandoah South Theatre. His audiences averaged about 300 a show in the 3,000-seat theater during an otherwise stellar year for the country star.

He released a critically acclaimed album, "American Recordings," and played to sell-out crowds from Carnegie Hall to the Montreux Jazz Festival.

(From 1C)

points. In all, Woodard hit 10 of 16 shots from the field, hauled in nine rebounds and had six blocked shots.

But Lee also got 16 points from Jamie Rhoads on an 8 of 12 shooting night and Claire Wright hit 5 of 10 from the field for 13 points, including two huge three-pointers in the first quarter.

"Lake View hurt us some when we had both Wright and Rhoads on the bench," Kail said. "I don't like playing Rhoads at the guard slot because she is such a good shooter, but we're real thin there since we lost Sam Sallier for the year. Sallier cut some nerves in a hand going through a plate glass window recently and we've been told she is out for the season."

Lake View has a nice looking post player in Ashley Stephens. She is only a sophomore and scored 19 points.

"She took the ball to the hoop and put some moves on Krissy a couple of times," Kail said. "I didn't know she was only a sophomore, though."

Now it's on to the "blood bath." And Kail is hoping it won't be "s-l-o-p-p-y."

Drexler snaps Rocket win streak

Associated Press

■ NBA Roundup

HOUSTON — The Rockets' 23-game November winning streak ended when Clyde Drexler returned to the Portland lineup and led the Trail Blazers to a 102-94 victory Tuesday night.

Drexler, who missed two games with a right ankle injury, scored 30 points. Cliff Robinson added 29 points for the Trail Blazers, who lost all four games to the Rockets last season.

Houston, 9-1 this season, got 27 points from Hakeem Olajuwon and 20 from Vernon Maxwell. The loss was the first for the Rockets in the month of November since a 108-99 setback to the Utah Jazz on Nov. 28, 1992.

Last season, the Rockets were 14-0 in November and won their first game in December before experiencing defeat.

On Tuesday night, the Trail Blazers outscored the Rockets 15-9 over the final 5:21 as Houston's shooting went cold. Rockets coach Rudy Tomjanovich was ejected with 1:46 to play after screaming at referee Terry Durham.

Maxwell hit five straight 3-point attempts and scored Houston's last nine points of the second quarter, keeping the Rockets ahead 49-47 at halftime. Kenny Smith was 2-for-2 on 3-pointers in the first half.

Maxwell made it six 3-pointers in a row early in the third quarter, and the Rockets held a 70-63 edge with 3:15 to go in the period. But Portland's 9-2 charge tied it at 72 entering the fourth quarter.

Hornets 102, Warriors 98

CHARLOTTE, N.C. — Hersey Hawkins scored seven of his 18 points in a decisive fourth-quarter stretch, helping Charlotte hold off Golden State.

The Warriors were trying to set a team record for consecutive road victories at the start of the season. Charlotte tried to help by being whistled for four technical fouls, two in the fourth quarter for illegal defense and a third in that period on the bench.

Cavaliers 112, Timberwolves 79

CLEVELAND — Seven Cleveland players were in double figures and the Cavaliers collected 37 points off turnovers while handing Minnesota a setback, the lowly Timberwolves' worst this season.

Mark Price led Cleveland with 17 points, and Tony Campbell had 16. Bobby Phills and Chris Mills scored 15 each.

The Timberwolves, losers in nine of their 10 games, got 14 points, but only three rebounds, from Christian Laettner. Eight of Minnesota losses have been by double-figure margins.

Bucks 116, Celtics 94

HARTFORD, Conn. — Todd Day scored 23 points and Vin Baker added 20 asMilwaukee used a strong second half to cruise to a victory.

Baker, playing at the Hartford Civic Center for the first time since he attended the University of Hartford, scored 14 points in the second half as the Bucks snapped Boston's three-game win streak.

Hawks 102, 76ers 99

ATLANTA — Stacey Augmon scored 23 points, including a short jumper with 11 seconds to play as Atlanta beat Philadelphia to keep the 76ers winless on the road.

The loss was the fourth in a row on the road for the 76ers. The streak is seven going back to last season. Atlanta won for just the third time in 10 games.

Philadelphia led 98-97 after Willie Burton hit a layup for the last of his 22 points with 1:40 to play. Grant Long tied the score with a free throw with 1:17 left and Steve Smith gave the Hawks the lead for good with two free throws with 46 seconds to play after a Philadelphia turnover.

Sonics 104, Nets 97

TACOMA, Wash. — Gary Payton scored 26 points and made consecutive driving layups during a late 6-0 Seattle run that put the SuperSonics ahead for good in a victory over New Jersey.

Shawn Kemp added 22 points and pulled down 17 rebounds for Seattle. He also sealed the victory by making two free throws with 23 seconds left.

The Nets set a franchise record by hitting 11 3-pointers, including three apiece by Chris Morris and Kevin Edwards.

"That's the thing about it. All of a sudden we had to quit pressuring the basketball," MHS coach Jim Raughton said. "We've got to back off, get to play in the half court, then you give the big girl a lot to work with.

Coronado's "Big Girl" was post April Armacost, who poured in 27 points — five coming at the line — to pace the Lady Mustangs rally attempt.

"When you can run up and down the floor, the big girl doesn't enter the game that much," Raughton said. "But the thing is when you get in that situation when you've got a bunch of people sitting on the bench in foul trouble, you say 'Let's get out of this baby.'"

MHS got out of it, although several key players were on the bench, when the Lady Dawgs' depth came through. Junior reserve wing Laura Childress pulled down a team-high tying six rebounds — including two key offensive putbacks on her own shots — and scored 14 points. Junior post Toya Zachery came off the bench for six points while senior starter Marci Swinney dumped in 6-of-8 free throws to keep MHS in it in the third and fourth.

"We were fortunate to win the game," Raughton said. "We got some people in foul trouble (and) had to sit Amy down. You got Ogonna Merritt on the bench with four fouls. You got Jamie Rand on the bench with four fouls. And we had some other girls step up."

The Lady Dawgs jumped out to a 23-16 first-quarter lead on 10 points from Alcala, who finished with a game-high 29 to maintain her current average through the first four games. She also pulled down six rebounds. Childress dumped in two of her five field goals in the MHS' first-quarter run while Rand, Veronica Poage and Zachery added a bucket each. Merritt hit the Lady Dawgs' first three-pointer of the season.

MHS takes the Thanksgiving holiday off before traveling to Pecos for a 5 p.m. contest against the 4A school.

No. 13 Michigan falls to Arizona State

Associated Press

■ Top 25 Roundup

LAHAINA, Hawaii — Bill Frieder got the better of his old employer Tuesday night as Arizona State beat No. 13 Michigan 79-62 in the semifinals of the Maui Invitational.

Frieder coached Michigan from 1981 until being forced to resign just before the 1989 NCAA tournament when he had accepted the job at Arizona State. Steve Fisher was named interim coach and led the Wolverines to the national championship that year and two more title games since.

This was the first time he faced Michigan and it wasn't even close.

The Sun Devils (2-0), who will face the winner of the Maryland-Utah game for the title on Wednesday night, dominated play from a 38-38 halftime tie, starting the half with a 13-0 run.

Michigan (1-1) missed 10 of its first 11 shots in the second half and committed six turnovers as it fell behind 54-40 over the first 7½ minutes. The Wolverines managed just two field goals in the second half that weren't tips, dunks or layups — Jimmy King's driving jumper with 6:31 left and Maurice Taylor's 3-pointer with three seconds left that accounted for the final margin.

No. 11 Indiana 92, Chaminade 79

LAHAINA, Hawaii — Brian Evans tied a school record with eight 3-pointers and scored a career-high 37 points, leading Indiana to a victory over Chaminade in the consolation round of the Maui Invitational.

Alan Henderson dominated inside for the Hoosiers, finishing with 28 points, as they rebounded from a 77-72 opening-round loss to Utah.

Indiana (1-1) will meet the winner of the Tulane-Texas A&M game for fifth place Wednesday.

No. 7 Maryland 90, Utah 78

LAHAINA, Hawaii — Joe Smith matched his career high with 33 points Tuesday night and No. 7 Maryland advanced to the championship game of the Maui Invitational with a 90-78 victory over Utah.

The Terrapins (2-0) will meet Arizona State, a 79-62 semifinal winner over No. 13 Michigan, for the title Wednesday night.

Smith, a 6-foot-10 sophomore center, consistently scored down low and managed to get most of the Utah team in foul trouble.

When the Utes cut it to 73-68 with 7:02 to play, Smith scored 10 the Terrapins' next 12 points.

PGA, new golf tour want to avoid conflict

PONTE VEDRA, Fla. (AP) — The World Golf Tour wants to avoid conflict with the PGA Tour, but existing television contracts and sponsor commitments likely will make that impossible, perhaps for several years.

The two sides met Tuesday for what were described as cordial talks, but it was clear the suddenness of the creation of the World Tour gave the PGA little room to maneuver.

John Montgomery Jr., executive director of the World Tour, said the new venture was willing to cut back from eight tournaments a year to six, and he proposed transferring several tournaments from the PGA Tour to the World Tour to avoid direct competition.

A noble idea, but likely not workable within the existing contracts of the PGA.

"(Next year) is such a short time frame, I just can't see how we can do something in '95," said Edward Moorhouse, the PGA's legal counsel and chairman of the task force which met with World Tour officials. "Even beyond that is very, very difficult," Moorhouse said, noting the PGA has television deals with the other three major networks, plus ESPN and TBS, through 1998.

Moorhouse said he would present the results of Tuesday's session to PGA commissioner Tim Finchem, who was out of town. The commissioner will then make a recommendation to the PGA's tournament policy board during a regularly scheduled meeting in Tampa next week.

Montgomery and representatives of the Fox network, which plans to underwrite the $24 million venture, met for about 2½ hours with a task force of top PGA officials at the organization's national headquarters near Jacksonville.

"I don't really want to say we're competing" with the PGA, Montgomery said before heading to the airport. "That's why we've been focusing on an eight- and now a six-event series. We want to have the opportunity for the best to play the best but also allow them to play their home circuits."

Montgomery said he proposed a 1995 schedule with two tournaments in the United States and one each in Scotland, Spain, Canada and Japan.

He also said four tournaments were planned between May and the PGA Championship in mid-August. The final two would be held later in the year, when there would be no scheduling conflicts with PGA events.

In '96, he said, the World Tour plans to increase to the originally proposed eight tournaments.

Energy prices moved higher Tuesday on the New York Mercantile Exchange, boosted by news that members of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries have agreed to maintain current production levels through the end of 1995.

West Texas Intermediate for January delivery rose 26 cents to close at $17.82 a barrel, just off its high for the day of $17.84 a barrel and above its low for the day of $17.51 a barrel.

Local crude purchasers raised their posted price 25 cents to $16 a barrel.

Natural gas for January delivery rose 6 cents to close at $1.87 per thousand cubic feet.

Brinker stock woes

DALLAS — Shares of stock in Brinker International Inc. fell more than 17 percent Tuesday as the restaurant company warned that its second-quarter profits would fall below the expectations of many analysts.

Debra Smithart, chief financial officer of Dallas-based Brinker, said sales at the company's Chili's restaurants open at least a year are down some 1.8 percent this month and last month, compared to the second quarter of fiscal 1994.

The company said these lower sales trends lead it to expect earnings of about 22 cents to 23 cents per share, compared to a consensus analyst estimate of 25 cents.

However, the company said it sees no change in the outlook for the third and fourth quarters of its fiscal 1995 and fiscal 1996. The company said its expansion plans also remain on track.

The company's stock closed at $17.875, down $3.75, in trading Tuesday on the New York Stock Exchange.

Brinker's restaurants include Chili's, Romano's Macaroni Grill, Grady's American Grill, Spageddies Italian Kitchen, On the Border Cafe and Cozymeal's.

Dollar steady

NEW YORK — The Italian lira plunged Tuesday to a record low against the German mark and the lowest level vs. the dollar since mid-June on news that Italian Premier Silvio Berlusconi was under investigation for alleged bribery.

In late New York dealings, the dollar was quoted at 1,611 lire, up from 1,598 late Monday.

Elsewhere, the dollar finished modestly lower against most other currencies in largely technical dealings ahead of a national holiday in Japan on Wednesday and the Thanksgiving holiday in the United States on Thursday.

The dollar also traded in New York at 1.5544 marks, down from 1.5568 late Monday, and at 98.33 Japanese yen, down from 98.36.

Other late dollar rates in New York, compared with late Monday: 1.3205 Swiss francs, up from 1.3192; 5.3380 French francs, down from 5.3415; and 1.3740 Canadian dollars, up from 1.3708.

Investors dump equities for higher-yielding bonds in 91-point selloff

Associated Press

NEW YORK — Stocks tumbled Tuesday to their worst losses in more than nine months, as investors purged equities in favor of higher-yielding bonds.

The Dow Jones industrial average plunged 91.52 points to 3,677.99, its biggest one-day loss since Feb. 4, the day the Federal Reserve enacted the first of six interest-rate tightenings this year.

The loss put the best-known indicator of the stock market at its weakest level since July 6. The Dow average has fallen more than 167 points or 4.3 percent in the past four trading sessions.

Declining issues swamped advancers by nearly 4 to 1 on the New York Stock Exchange. Volume on the Big Board was 383.26 million shares, up from 250.58 million on Monday.

Behind the selling was a growing consensus that rising rates on fixed-income investments are getting too good to pass up.

"There is concern on the part of some institutions that the interest-rate rise is not yet over, and that rates are at levels which are increasingly attractive alternatives to equities," said Eric Miller, chief strategist at Donaldson, Lufkin & Jenrette Securities.

Analysts also pointed to growing concern that rising interest rates will choke off economic growth and eventually cut into corporate earnings.

"At some point in time, they're going to slow this economy down," Hildegard Zagorski, market analyst at Prudential Securities, said of the rising interest rates.

Waves of computerized selling intensified the move. The Dow average skidded 36 points on sell programs at the open, then trimmed its losses to less that 20 points for most of the day. A powerful surge of sell programs sent the Dow sharply lower in the last hour of trading.

But analysts said that, unlike Monday's session, when the Dow dropped nearly 46 points on technically driven selling, the market fall Tuesday represented selling by large-scale investors like mutual funds.

Bond prices benefited from the migration out of stocks, shooting up dramatically as investors redeployed their investment money in the fixed-income market.

The 30-year bond soared 1 3-16 point, pushing its yield, which falls when prices rise, down to just over 8 percent.

Economically sensitive stocks, those of large manufacturing and retail companies, took the brunt of the selling. "There's a sense that earnings of these companies have reached a peak, and people are selling the stocks as a result," Zagorski said.

Among the 30 Dow components, 17 stocks lost a point or more. The biggest losers were Caterpillar, down 3¼ to 51⅜; IBM, down 3⅛ to 69¾; International Paper, down 2⅞ to 68½; Alcoa, down 2⅝ to 80⅝; and Sears, down 2¼ to 46½.

Sellers cut a wide swath through the market, sending broad-market indexes tumbling as well. The NYSE's composite index fell 4.26 to 246.32. The Standard & Poor's 500-stock index slid 8.21 to 450.08.

The Nasdaq composite index lost 16.53 to741.21. The American Stock Exchange's market value index dropped 5.14 to 436.14.

Technology stocks, which had been good performers and market leaders in recent sessions, fell sharply after Motorola sold new stock at a discount to prevailing market rates. Motorola was the most actively traded on the New York Stock Exchange and fell 2 to 57. The company sold 8 million shares at $58.50 per share.

Overseas stock markets were lower.

The 225-issue Nikkei Stock Average fell 158.73 points, or 0.83 percent, closing at 18,962.99. Frankfurt's DAX index declined 1.45 percent to 2,074.77.

Basin jobless rate declines to 6.4 percent

By Mella McEwen
Staff Writer

Employment in the Permian Basin continues to grow, according to figures released by the Texas Employment Commission Tuesday.

The TEC reported an unemployment rate of 6.4 percent for the Odessa-Midland metropolitan statistical area (MSA) for October, down from 7.1 percent in September and below the 7.3 percent recorded in October 1993.

In the city of Midland, the unemployment rate fell to 5.1 percent from 5.6 percent in September, which is more than a full percentage point below the 6.2 percent seen a year ago.

Also showing improvement was the MSA's civilian labor force, which rose to 119,000 from 117,400 in September, but is below 119,400 of a year earlier.

In Midland, the labor force rose to 49,296 from 48,525, but is below last year's figure of 49,523.

There was better news in total employment, which rose to 111,400 from 109,100 in September and is above the 110,700 reported last year.

Midland's employment rose to 46,772 from 45,784, and is above the 46,447 a year ago.

This leaves a total unemployment of 7,600, down from 8,300 in September and from 8,700 last year.

There were 2,524 Midlanders unemployed in October, down from 2,741 in September and from 3,076 in October 1993.

"The major drop in unemployment makes us believe that the labor force has expanded to absorb new entrants to the labor market, but not enough to handle all job-seekers," said Mark Dermitt, a labor analyst with the TEC's regional office in Midland.

He pointed out that October is one of two months — the other is March — that falls between seasonal times. It follows September's end-of-summer jobs and precedes November's holiday hiring season.

Dermitt said the new-jobs outlook for the year has held firm.

Shoppers may see higher produce prices in wake of storm

HOUSTON (AP) — The severe storm that damaged Florida's farmlands last week also may wreak some havoc on Texas shoppers, who are expected to find some higher produce prices at supermarkets for Thanksgiving.

Wholesalers and grocery chains say prices on some items — including green beans, broccoli, bell peppers and squash — have soared in the days leading up to what is the most intense grocery-buying binge of the year.

However, prices of some Thanksgiving dinner staples, such as celery and radishes, are locked in for advertised specials this week and won't begin to go up until next week, grocers said.

Higher prices already have hit the wholesale market hard.

"Just in general, I would say prices have doubled and tripled," said Steve Effenson, president of First Quality Fruit & Produce, a Houston produce distributor that supplies Fiesta Marts.

Among wholesale prices, a bushel of bell peppers has gone from $12 last week to $22, said Ken Faour Sr., director of food service at grocery distributor Schoenmann Produce Co. The price of broccoli has gone from $8 or $9 a case to $23 a case, not including new delivery charges from California of $3 a box, said one store buyer. A 30-pound case of green beans has gone from $11 to $22.75 a case.

"The quality is barely adequate, and the price is very high," Rick Noeth, vice president of fresh products for Gerland's Food Fair, said.

Anthony's opens second location in Midland

By Mella McEwen

McEwen

Just opened in a portion of the former Wal-Mart store at Midkiff Road and Loop 250 is ANTHONY'S DEPARTMENT STORE, the retailer's second Midland location.

Jay Howell, manager of the new store, said it is larger — 28,000 square feet, as opposed to 23,000 square feet for the store at 1020 Andrews Highway. The new store, he said, is not only larger, but features more updated fixtures and extended lines of merchandise. It employs approximately 35, and the work force should grow to about 40 for the holiday season.

Sam Gutierrez has been named the new manager of the store at 1020 Andrews Highway.

A grand opening for the new Anthony's is scheduled for Dec. 3 and will include cash drawings for the first 200 customers as well as drawings for a trip for two to a Dallas Cowboys football game, an official Cowboys football helmet and other door prizes.

Hours will be 9 a.m. to 8 p.m. Monday through Saturday and noon to 7 p.m. Sunday.

Under new ownership and a new name is YESTERDAY'S NEWS ANTIQUE MALL at 3712-C W. Wall St.

Formerly Lucky Dog Antiques, Yesterday's News was purchased last month by Paul and Tina Howard, who have expanded the location to make space for additional antique dealers as well as those already in place.

The store features 14 separate dealers offering a constantly changing variety of antiques and collectibles including toys, primitives, furniture — from golden oak to classic revival to Victorian to wicker — medical curiosities, estate linens, American dinnerware, art pottery, advertising memorabilia, 50s kitsch, Wedgewood, mid-century Southwest art, costume jewelry, dolls, oil lamps, western, military and kitchen collectibles and more.

Hours are noon to 6 weekdays, 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. on Saturday and noon to 5 p.m. Sunday.

Christmas preparations continue at Midland Park Mall.

New Christmas retailers include COZY SKINS, offering sheepskin products and located next to Claire's; and CANAAN FARMS, selling jellies, jams and preserves, located at the top of the Food Court.

Beginning Friday, a gift wrapping booth is located near the top of the Food Court by D'Or Jewelers. And beginning Monday, children can drop off their letters to Santa at Santa's Letter House, located in front of Dillards East. The Letter House is sponsored by the American Red Cross, who will answer with a "form" letter. Santa will be available in person through Christmas, from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m., 2:30 to 5:30 p.m. and 6 to 9 p.m.

Berg Motors will display cars near the JCPenney court, and shoppers can still register for the Holiday Car Giveaway, sponsored by the mall, Sun Country, Continental Airlines and KGee-100.

This weekend, Junior Achievement will be operating the West Texas Special train as a fundraiser.

NOLAN'S FINE DINING, at Loop 250 and Garfield Street, has opened its newly redecorated dining area.

Owner Larry Nolan said the new decor consists of original memorabilia that, though often one-of-a-kind, is actually for sale. This includes original theater posters, authentic autographed items, soundtrack recordings, magazines and more. All memorabilia is provided by Talk O' The Town, a local antique and gift shop.

TECH: Transition a success

(From 1C)

Perhaps some weighty expectations awaited Hanspard, a 6-0, 185-pound freshman from DeSoto, when he arrived at Tech as the Texas Sports Writers Association's Class 5A Offensive MVP.

Coach Spike Dykes said the transition Hanspard faced out of high school was like being "king of the hill, then trying to climb the hill."

But Dykes sees steady improvement in the player who has accumulated 653 yards rushing — a total breaking the record 613 rushing yards James Gray set in 1986 for Tech freshmen.

"I give God the glory for it," Hanspard said, also crediting his teammates. "I feel that the Lord blessed me to have a wonderful game."

Still he wasn't totally pleased with his cuts and skill eluding tackles.

"I felt like I played a great game, but I don't feel like I played up to my capability," Hanspard said. "I feel like I can do better, run harder. I never think I can't get better."

Hanspard said he doesn't see himself having to fill the void created when Tech leading rusher Byron "Bam" Morris, last year's Doak Walker Award winner, went to the Pittsburgh Steelers.

"His name is Byron Morris, my name is Byron Hanspard," he said. "I do not feel any pressure to come up and try to take his place or to do what he did. The Lord is the one that directed me here, so I don't feel any pressure from anybody to do anything spectacular."

Oilers Slaughter angry

HOUSTON (AP) — Webster Slaughter can't endorse new coach Jeff Fisher's eradication of the run-and-shoot offense from the Houston Oilers' playbook.

Slaughter was so angered when coaches didn't put him into the new two-wide receiver alignment in Monday night's 13-10 loss to the New York Giants, Slaughter went into the game anyway.

On Tuesday, he asked to be released.

"I feel like I'm being brutalized," Slaughter said. "You do the things that you're supposed to do and you should be on the field. When I signed my contract, I did it to help them stay under the salary cap.

"They said if I did my job, it (incentive bonuses) would come back to me at the end. Now they're taking back my playing time."

Slaughter, who started the season recovering from major knee surgery, said he got in for about 20 plays against the Giants but he had to take matters into his own hands and replace Haywood Jeffires.

"He (Jeffires) wasn't surprised because I told him that's what I was going to do on the play before I went in," Slaughter said.

Slaughter gets paid a bonus based on his playing time for the season. In the new offense, he's afraid he won't get his incentives.

"I almost went crazy on the sidelines," Slaughter said. "I'd only have gotten 8-10 plays if I hadn't put myself in the lineup."

Oilers general manager Floyd Reese said he had talked with Slaughter about his release request and denied it.

"The players aren't going to decide who is on this team," Reese said.

Fisher also talked to Slaughter about his playing time.

"He's the third receiver in the game right now," Fisher. "But we have a lot of frustrated people on the sidelines right now."

Slaughter said he wanted to stay with the Oilers. He also wants to play.

"I don't think I can stick around here on the sidelines five more games," he said. "If there are two wide receivers on the field, I feel I should be one of them."

Fisher ditched the run-and-shoot in favor of more tight ends and blocking fullbacks.

Food for ears

If your child has a recurring middle-ear infection, the real culprit could be a food allergy. Take away the food and the infection may clear up. That's what happened in a new study by Talal M. Nsouli, an allergist at Georgetown University School of Medicine in Washington, D. C.

Tests showed about 80 percent of a group of 104 children with recurring ear infections were allergic to a food they commonly ate. When the children were denied the offending food for four months, the ear infections significantly cleared up in 86 percent of the cases. And the clincher: When these youngsters resumed eating the offending food, clogged middle ears showed up again in 95 percent of them within four months.

Worst culprits: milk and wheat. About a third of the kids were allergic to milk and a third to wheat.

Here's how it can happen, explains Dr. Nsouli: The food allergy may cause a swelling of the middle ear, leading to a stagnation of fluids that become overrun with bacteria.

Such middle-ear infections, known as otitis media, strike about two-thirds of children by age 2. Checking for food allergies could prevent surgery and permanent damage, says Dr. Nsouli.

New red-wine facts

If drinking a little red wine does help prevent heart disease, as some researchers claim, does it matter which type red wine? Bordeaux or burgundy? French or American?

No, says researcher Andrew Waterhouse, Ph.D., University of California at Davis. "Any type red wine contains the chemicals that seem to have biological activity," he says. He and colleagues have measured wine and grape constituents and find that red wine and red wine grapes of all kinds have high amounts. The active chemicals called polyphenols are concentrated in the red grape skins and seeds, he says.

Other researchers have insisted that the secret of red wine is resveratrol, a mild anticoagulant, largely found in expensive French wines. But Waterhouse says resveratrol is merely one of numerous biologically active grape chemicals. In test-tube experiments, for example, he finds that chemicals, called catechins, rich in California red wines, retard changes in blood chemistry leading to artery clogging.

Sweet-potato praise

If you want a jolt of beta carotene, the substance that seems to protect against heart disease and cancer, simply eat sweet potatoes.

A medium sweet potato has about 10 mgs of beta carotene or a whopping 16,000 IU (international units.) Next-richest in beta carotene is a medium carrot with about 7 mg.

Unfortunately, Americans are eating fewer sweet potatoes when we should be eating more, says Michael Jacobson, director of the Center for Science in the Public Interest.

In 1910 the average American ate 22 pounds of sweet potatoes a year. Today, it's only 4 pounds a year, he laments.

Sweet potatoes are also virtually fat-free, very low in sodium, and high in vitamin C, folic acid and potassium.

Recent research indicates that high levels of beta carotene in your blood may help protect you from lung cancer, esophageal cancer and possibly colon cancer. People who consistently get lots of beta carotene are also less apt to have a heart attack or stroke and more apt to survive a heart attack or stroke.

Nutrition education

HOUSTON — Low-income Mexican-American children know about safety and hygiene but are not well informed about nutrition.

A study of children aged 4 to 8 showed they understand that behaviors such as playing with scissors or talking to strangers can be unhealthy. But the children are less likely to relate eating sugar-coated cereals or fried foods to poor health.

"Based on the results of this study, we think that offering nutrition education and counseling to the children and their parents may be an effective way to prevent unhealthy eating habits and imporve their general health," said Dr. Norma Olvera-Ezzell, health-promotion research director at Baylor College of Medicine in Houston and the study's project coordinator.

The study is the first to look at such behaviors in specific, low-income, ethnic population.

Rhinoplasty option needs careful consideration

By Dr. Court B. Cutting
Associated Press

Edmond Rostand's Cyrano de Bergerac observes in Act 1: "A great nose indicates a great man — genial, courteous, intellectual, virile, courageous." However, there was little Cyrano could do about his proboscis, even if he wanted to.

Not so these days.

If a teen-ager likes neither the looks nor the length of his or her nose, rhinoplasty — commonly known as a nose job — may be an option. But it's an option for serious discussion first between parents and child, because rhinoplasty does not come cheap. The procedure is considered cosmetic surgery — something usually not covered under normal medical insurance.

But knowing what to expect can help make the process of selecting a doctor, and planning and undergoing surgery, easier for the teen-ager and parents.

The operation alters the shape of the nose by manipulating the cartilages and bones that make up the nose's skeletal framework. The surgeon dissects the skin off this framework, cuts away bone and cartilage and allows the skin to re-drape over the modified nose structure.

There is some pain and discomfort, at least in the first two days of recovery; essentially, the patient has had his or her nose broken and has been left with a swollen face, occasionally black eyes and some difficulty in breathing through the nose.

It is important to select a qualified doctor to perform rhinoplasty. The physician should be a plastic surgeon or in some cases an otolaryngologist, subspecialized in rhinoplasty. Certification by the American Board of Plastic Surgery is another desirable attribute.

Before making a final selection of a surgeon, parents might also want to talk to some of the doctor's patients who have already had the procedure. And a consultation is important in planning rhinoplastic surgery to make be sure that the nose the teen-ager wants is realistic, desirable and attractive.

Doctors may use computer imaging or a sketch on a photograph of the patient's face to illustrate the possibilities available.

To be eligible for a rhinoplasty, the patient generally must be at least 15 years old. At this age, the youngster's face is generally at or near full growth. If the nose is not yet fully developed, the operation may interfere with nasal growth.

Also, having rhinoplasty as a teen-ager rather than an adult can result in an easier adjustment to the new look.

Rhinoplasty is often done on an out-patient basis and the surgeon may employ a number of different technical moves, depending on the nasal structure and the type of correction being made.

The stitches and cast are generally removed about a week after the surgery, at which time the black and blue marks have often faded.

Dr. Court B. Cutting is an associate professor of plastic surgery at New York University Medical School.

Woman battles for normal life

By A.J. Hostetler

ATLANTA (AP) — When Susan Caldwell decided to learn if she carried the gene for Huntington's disease, she also bought a house and got a dog.

She named the dog Lucky, not so much to express her optimism over the testing, but as a "hope for the future."

Susan, a 27-year-old software programmer, is one of almost two dozen people who have undergone genetic testing at the Georgia Mental Health Institute for Huntington's, which causes the deterioration of the brain's neurons and is one of the few genetically linked diseases receptive to a predictive test.

But while the test has about 98 percent accuracy, she refuses to let her positive diagnosis dictate her life.

"I'm not resigned to it," Susan says. "It's frightening. But I'm very aware that a lot of things before then could determine my fate."

Now, she grabs whatever control she can over her health. She doesn't smoke, and she rarely drinks — "I can't spare the neurons," she jokes.

But her ultimate act of gaining control was the decision to find out if she carried the renegade Huntington's gene, which derails the mental and physical functions of its victims — and previously claimed the lives of her uncle and maternal grandfather.

Susan never knew the grandfather, who died of Huntington's at age 54. Apparently, the family didn't then understand the implications of the illness. It took her uncle's mind and then his life, also at age 54, before Susan's mother realized the same disease could strike her family.

In her early 20s, Susan watched her mother fight what appeared to be symptoms of early Huntington's — the odd, puppet-like movements, the behavior changes.

The discovery of a tumor in her mother's brain at first gave Susan a weird sense of relief, but a visit after its removal in November 1991 left her in no doubt. Her mother had Huntington's; Susan, too, was at risk.

"I was struggling with the knowledge that she had the disease, and the knowledge of the 50 percent possibility that I was at risk," she recalls.

AP Laserphoto

Susan Caldwell, who has discovered through genetic testing that she carries the gene for Huntington's Disease, shows off her dog, Lucky, at her home in Smyrna, Ga. Caldwell says she bought her home and adopted Lucky when she made a committment to put down roots and live regardless of what Huntington's may eventually do to her life.

After her mother's official diagnosis in July 1992, Susan learned of a test that could tell her if she were likely to develop Huntington's. She contacted genetic counselor Randi Jones at the Georgia Mental Health Institute, but couldn't bring herself to follow through.

"It was 'life and death' for awhile, then I'd have to drop it," she says. "As much as I thought I wanted to know, I had to break from it." She would schedule appointments with Jones, only to cancel them.

Susan confronted her own mortality. At first, she considered moving out West and living a "no roots" life. She gave up her apartment, packed most of her belongings and cut off many of her friends.

"I just had this overwhelming fear of missing life," she says.

But over a six-month period, something changed. She felt a need to commit to the future, to her future.

New medication helps treat irritating psoriasis

By Julia Helgason
N.Y. Times News Service

DAYTON, Ohio — For the heartbreak of psoriasis, finally there is hope.

Advertising cliches aside, people who have this fairly common skin disorder will tell you it's miserable, irritating and often unsightly.

But now, sufferers can look to a new medication and a newly discovered gene for the first encouraging words in years.

Psoriasis is a noncontagious condition in which the body produces skin cells too rapidly and can't shed them fast enough to prevent formation of thick layers of skin called plaques.

The cause is not known, but the first sign is usually a series of tiny red bumps that grow larger, gradually becoming red plaques with silvery scales. Typically round, they sometimes look like small donuts, other times like rough oyster shells. The patches — rough to the touch — are always symmetrical, like mirror images on either side of the body.

Most of the "heartbreak" comes from heedless people who make rude comments and often shun people with visible symptoms.

"People stare at you. Especially when it's on your hands and face, people stare and shrink back," said psoriasis sufferer Candace Karsch of Dayton. "'Oooo,' they'll say. 'What is that stuff?' And then they act like you've got leprosy."

Insensitive and unkind words and actions often end up adding low self-esteem, emotional distress and psychiatric problems to the list of symptoms, some experts say.

Karsch, who has had psoriasis since age 5, takes the tactless looks in stride. "Anyone who doesn't like the way I look can look the other way," she said.

Some of her early recollections are of her parents applying ointment to her scales, and covering flareups with plastic wrap to keep them from drying out. "Every time I moved, I'd sort of crinkle under my clothes," she said.

When the patches get dry, they crack and bleed, Karsch said. "And your pantyhose can get stuck to your legs. It can be very embarrassing."

In the scalp, psoriasis looks like a bad case of dandruff, she said. On the nose and upper lip, it crusts and looks like you-know-what.

"And no matter where it appears, it flakes off on people's furniture and carpet," she laments.

Psoriasis is not only unbearably embarrassing. "It's messy and time consuming, and it itches," Karsch said.

Standard treatments have included oils and moisturizers, cortisone creams and prescriptions including steroids, coal tars and ultraviolet light.

Beware of hypothermia's symptoms

HOUSTON — If you live in the South, don't think you are safe from the dangerous effects of cold weather.

Hypothermia, a condition resulting from dangerously low body tempertures, can occur even when it is only 50 degrees outside. Hypothermia has been reported even in tropical climates, said Dr. Joseph Varon of Baylor College of Medicine in Houston.

Infants and the elderly are at highest risk.

Babies' bodies lose heat faster because the surface area is larger in proportion to their weight than adults.

In older people, the body gradually loses its cold sensitivity. Elderly people are less likely to detect temperture drops, and they recover more slowly from lowered body temperature. Tranquilizers and alcohol can complicate things.

Early warnig signs of hypothermia include a pale, puffy face; drowsiness; drop in blood pressure, and forgetfulness.

New belief in transmission of hepatitis C revealed

By Dr. Steven Field
Associated Press

Since its discovery five years ago, hepatitis C has been thought of as a virus that is transmitted either through blood transfusions or some kind of skin break, such as a needle stick or tattoo.

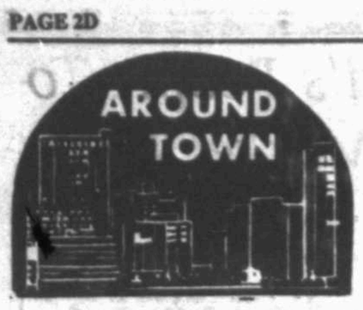

Hepatitis C is one of three major forms of viral hepatitis, all of which cause an inflammation of the liver and may cause symptoms such as fever, vomiting, fatigue, nausea, loss of appetite, muscle and joint pain and jaundice.

Earlier medical studies did not seem to indicate that sexual transmission was likely for the spread of hepatitis C. However, a new study suggests that sexual transmission may be more common than previously thought.

Whether or not this recent data will be supported by subsequent studies is not known. However, for the sex partners and spouses of people with hepatitis C, the study is a reminder to consider the risks and prevention of spreading this difficult-to-treat virus.

Hepatitis A is usually a short-term illness that runs its course and disappears from the body. Hepatitis B and C can incubate without symptoms for months and are frequently diagnosed through medical examinations or blood tests. Each virus can remain in the body for

DEAR ABBY

Time to count blessings as well as calories

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR READERS: By popular demand, here is my traditional Thanksgiving column:

Van Buren

Tomorrow is Thanksgiving Day, so take a few minutes to think about what you have to be thankful for.

How's your health? Not so good? Well, thank God you've lived this long. A lot of people haven't. You're hurting? Thousands — maybe millions — are hurting more. (Have you ever visited a veterans hospital? Or a rehabilitation clinic for crippled children?)

If you awakened this morning and were able to hear the birds sing, use your vocal cords to utter human sounds, walk to the breakfast table on two good legs and read the newspaper with two good eyes, praise the Lord! A lot of people couldn't.

How's your pocketbook? Thin? Well, most of the world is a lot poorer. No pensions. No welfare. No food stamps. No Social Security. In fact, one-third of the people in the world will go to bed hungry tonight.

Are you lonely? The way to have a friend is to be one. If nobody calls you, call someone. Go out of your way to do something nice for somebody. It's a sure cure for the blues.

Are you concerned about your country's future? Hooray! Our system has been saved by such concern. Concern for fair play under the law. Your country may not be a rose garden, but it also is not a patch of weeds.

Freedom rings! Look and listen. You can still worship at the church of your choice, cast a secret ballot, and even criticize your government without fearing a knock on the head or a knock on the door at midnight. And if you want to live under a different system, you are free to go. There are no walls or fences — nothing to keep you here.

As a final thought, I'll repeat my Thanksgiving prayer; perhaps you will want to use it at your table tomorrow:

O, heavenly Father:

We thank thee for food and remember the hungry.

We thank thee for health and remember the sick.

We thank thee for friends and remember the friendless.

We thank thee for freedom and remember the enslaved.

May these remembrances stir us to service.

That thy gifts to us may be used for others. Amen.

Have a wonderful Thanksgiving, and may God bless you and yours. — LOVE, ABBY

An afterthought: Want an instant high? The surest cure for the post-holiday blues is to do something nice for someone. Why not call someone who lives alone and invite him (or her) over for dinner?

Better yet, call and say, "I'm coming to get you, and I'll see that you get home." (Many older people don't drive, and those who do don't like to go out alone after dark.)

Try it. And let me know the results.

P.S. Special greetings to those of you in the military who wrote from remote corners of the world to tell me that you are using my Thanksgiving prayer on this Thanksgiving Day.

TEST: Woman looks to future

(From 1D)

In January 1993, after searching for a new apartment, the self-described "nest-builder" bought a townhouse in suburban Atlanta, complete with a 30-year mortgage. She planted flowers and grass, taking satisfaction from digging in the earth and watching seeds take root.

Finally, she decided she was ready for the testing.

"I had to know, no matter what the test results were," she says.

But then came another delay. In March 1993, researchers announced a breakthrough — they had found the Huntington's gene. A new test — one that could predict with almost certainty — would be available soon in Atlanta.

Susan waited another nine months, but the time simply strengthened her decision.

Before she was allowed to undergo the necessary blood tests in February of this year, she had been required to participate in a process called genetic counseling, which involves helping patients decide whether they want to be tested and then how to cope with the result.

For Huntington's, it also involves extensive neurological and psychological tests, to see if the patient has any symptoms of the disease.

Five weeks after giving two blood samples, on March 17, Susan learned her results. She "cried some," she says, but felt relief that her worst fear — an inconclusive result — didn't come true.

"I don't think the decision to test is right for everyone," she says. "But I had to have an answer. I'm a real black-and-white kind of person."

The deterioration generally starts when the sufferer is in his or her 40s and, so far, Susan doesn't have any symptoms. She sometimes worries and suffers insomnia, but denies being obsessed.

"If I do something clumsy, I'll think about it. ... It'll always be there," she says of knowing she has the gene.

But the waiting is over. Susan doesn't count her days, and she looks forward to her future. She now dates, and worries about her yardwork and plants.

"Life is playing with my dog, cutting my grass, talking with my neighbors," she says. "I'm really lucky. I wouldn't ask for the experience, but I've been fortunate. Life doesn't stop."

SKIN: Treatment brings relief to many

(From 1D)

But every treatment that produced results also had potentially serious side effects, Centerville dermatologist Dr. Gary Palmer said.

Now there's Dovonex, a Vitamin D derivative, distributed by Westwood Squibb. Though Dovonex doesn't work for everyone, it can bring significant relief to many.

In clinical trials, Devonex helped 70 percent to 80 percent of those who used it for at least eight weeks. Ten percent say it cleared the condition up completely.

Psoriasis doesn't always need to be treated. "Some people with light cases can accept it and live with it," Palmer said.

But for those who seek treatment, Dovonex has quickly become the first line of treatment, because there are virtually no serious side effects.

Of adverse effects reported for 300,000 patients worldwide, the worst side effects were itching, burning and irritation. Dovonex may also cause facial dermatitis if inadvertently transferred to the face.

And it costs about the same as strong cortisone creams, Palmer said, $35 to $40 for a 30-gram tube.

Another break, recently announced in the journal Science, is discovery of a gene or genes that may be partly responsible for making some people susceptible to psoriasis.

Children who have one parent with psoriasis have a 10 percent to 25 percent chance of developing the disorder. Children of two parents with psoriasis run a 50 percent chance of having it.

But heredity is probably not the only factor, experts say. And a cure is likely years away, though discovery of the gene is a start.

STUDY: New study shows possibility that hepatitis C may be sexually transmitted

Hepatitis A is usually spread through the fecal-oral route or through contaminated food or water, and hepatitis B is most often spread through sex or, like hepatitis C, through contaminated blood or needles. Sexual transmission of hepatitis C had not previously been considered significant because studies of sexually active populations had not yielded a high incidence of the virus.

However, a study of 154 spouses of people with hepatitis C discovered that over 25 percent of these spouses had hepatitis C antibodies, which is evidence of infection. The finding suggests that hepatitis C can be spread sexually because none of the study participants was a drug user and transmission from elsewhere in a normal household environment is extremely rare. The study also noted that the longer the duration of a marriage, the more likely that transmission will occur.

How exactly hepatitis C is sexually transmitted has not been as carefully studied as the transmission of HIV, the virus that causes AIDS. However, hepatitis C transmission is likely to be very similar to HIV — most likely occurring when infected body fluids penetrate cuts in the skin or breaks in the mucosal linings of the mouth, vagina and anus.

To guard against hepatitis C, condoms are recommended for intercourse. If a couple wants to have children, they should know that the risk of transmission is not extremely high but present. Good communication between partners about the relative risk of transmission should help ease the anxiety of unprotected sex.

Kissing is considered a safe activity, but razors and toothbrushes should not be shared by spouses because of the potential for such instruments to damage mucus membranes and skin.

Spouses of people with hepatitis C are advised to have an annual check-up and blood test to determine if antibodies for the virus are present.

Dr. Steven Field is a clinical assistant-professor of medicine at the New York University School of Medicine.

CONSUMING INTERESTS

Potato Crisps offer low-fat, tasty 'chip'

By Linda Anderson

One of my all-time favorite junk foods — oops, I mean snack foods — is potato chips. I always thought if it looked like a potato chip and was packaged like a potato chip, it probably was a potato chip.

Anderson

I was wrong.

Frito-Lay, the company that makes many of my favorite chips, has recently introduced Baked Lays, which they describe as Potato Crisps. The bag looks like a potato chip bag, is priced like a potato chip bag ($2.89 for a 6-ounce bag) and is located in the potato chip aisle of the supermarket. But inside is something that is not potato chips.

These potato crisps are about the same size and shape as potato chips, but, as the name describes, are baked, not fried. Label advertising claims they are "94 percent fat free."

On the back of the bag is the information that "Finally, Lay's brand brings you that irresistible "Bet You Can't Eat Just One" potato flavor in a low-fat snack. Now, anytime you have the urge to treat yourself to a satisfying snack, you can enjoy all the fun without all the fat with New Baked Lay's brand Potato Crisps.

"How can Baked Lay's Potato Crisps bring you the crispy, crunchy snacking sensation you've come to expect from Lay's brand, and yet be 94 percent fat free? It's because Baked Lay's brand Potato Crisps are oven baked instead of fried. A special baking process creates this delicious, thin and crispy snack that's perfect for any occasion."

See? Now you know.

Nutrition label lists a one-ounce serving as containing 110 calories, with 15 of those calories from fat. However, the ingredients label has dehydrated potatoes listed first — right before modified food starch, sugar and vegetable oil, among other things — so you can tell right away these are not potato chips, they are more like processed potato chips.

In the taste test, the potato crisps were surprisingly tasty. Like I said, they aren't potato chips, but they are made from potatoes. They are thicker than regular chips — one taster said the crisps are "stiff enough to stand up to dips" — and have a distinctly not-fried, dried potato flavor.

But they are OK and they work well with dips, and if you want to cut back on fat but not on snacks, you might want to give Baked Lay's Potato Crisps a try.

Price listed is from a local supermarket. Prices at other locations may vary.

The Midland Reporter-Telegram has an opening on on of its few "Special Allowance" routes. This larger route receives a $50 check each Friday in addition to the regular monthly route profits. The route is between Cotton Flat and Rankin Hwy. - also the Downtown Area.

As with all newspaper distributorships, this opportunity requires a 7 day a week commitment (when you go out of town, you must arrange a substitute for yourself) and it is early morning work.

Newspaper distributorships provide great supplemental income for anyone willing to work early morning hours. These routes require a small deposit.
