California Train Robbers Wreck Limited and Loot Cars

THREE CARS OF FAST TRAIN ARE DERAILED

BANDITS ESCAPE

Posses Scour Territory for Undetermined Number Of Desperadoes

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 10. (AP)—The West Coast Limited, Southern Pacific passenger train, was wrecked two miles west of Saugus, Calif., tonight by robbers who entered four coaches and held up the passengers.

The wreck apparently was caused by a loosened rail, one of which had been removed. The engine, baggage car and smoker overturned. Engineer Ball was the only person hurt. He was believed scalded fatally.

Passengers Robbed

The long train jarred to an abrupt stop, passengers said, and several men ran out of the dark, jumped into the coaches and methodically held up every one in the cars.

Among those who lost their valuables was H. C. Pierson, district passenger agent of the company.

In the confusion authorities could not learn how much the robbers had obtained.

Posses of deputy sheriffs and armed citizens were organized and a search of the countryside begun.

Carefully Planned

The victims disagreed as to the number of men in the band.

The desperadoes apparently had planned their robbery carefully, for passengers said it was only an instant after the train ground to a stop that the robbers entered the cars and lined them up at the point of guns.

ELECTION PLEA STIRS BORGER

Petition Asks Vote on City Officials

BORGER, Texas, Nov. 10. (AP)—Turbulent Borger, shaken by 30 days of stringent military rule after a long period of lawlessness, tonight appeared on the eve of another epoch in its troubled political history.

Not because of dislike for new city officials, installed by Governor Dan Moody's agents during Borger's period of martial law, but in protest against their method of selection, a petition will be filed in county court tomorrow, asking for an election of city officials within 20 days.

If the court, as county commissioners, refuse this request, action in mandamus to compel an election will be instituted immediately, attorneys for the petitioners, H. E. Hoover and E. J. Cussens, said tonight.

With the battle cry of "let the people select whoever they wish for city officials," the petitioners expect to have the names of 150 prominent business men of Borger attached to the petition when it is presented.

Borgerites pointed out tonight that ever since the installation of Mayor W. A. Henderson and Commissioner Dyke Collum and Moe Steinberg, there has been an undercurrent of protest against what was termed their "undemocratic" elevation to officialdom. If these men had been elected by popular vote, it was said, their administration would not ever have been questioned.

FORMER CIVIL APPEALS JUDGE HELD IN JAIL

John W. Brady Charged With Fatally Stabbing Young Stenographer

CAN'T RECALL EVENT

Accused Man's Attorney Says Client Shocked Over Affair

AUSTIN, Nov. 10. (AP)—Judge John W. Brady, 59, Austin attorney and formerly a member of the third court of civil appeals, was held in the county jail on a murder charge today, after Miss Lehlia Highsmith, 28, stenographer for the supreme court commission of appeals died of stab wounds, one of which penetrated her heart.

A preliminary hearing for Judge Brady has been set for tomorrow in the court of Justice of the Peace F. R. Tannehill.

Miss Highsmith was cut with a knife soon after she alighted from an automobile in front of her apartment late last night. The knife was described by Sheriff Coley White as "at least 12 inches long."

One Eye-Witness

Sheriff White said that Frank Graham Jr., employed in a local music store, was the only eye-witness to the cutting. The knife was wrested from Judge Brady by F. R. McNaughton who came from the apartment house, according to the sheriff. Brady sustained a cut on one of his fingers.

Miss Highsmith never spoke after receiving the knife wounds and had not regained consciousness when she died an hour later in a hospital, Sheriff White stated. He said she had three knife wounds on her body.

Brady was formerly Travis county attorney having served in that capacity when the state of Texas recovered approximately $3,000,000 from the Waters-Pierce Oil corporation, representing penalties for its alleged violation of the anti-trust laws. He had also served as an assistant attorney general. He received his degree from the University of Texas in 1896.

Refuses Callers

He refused to see visitors in his cell in the county jail, although Mrs. Brady visited him soon after he was arrested. Sam Dickens, his attorney, appealed to Brady's friends to withhold judgment in his case until all the facts were available.

Dickens said Judge Brady had no knowledge of the tragedy, nor of events immediately preceding it, and was shocked when appraised

Wichita and Archer Counties Join In Anniversary-Armistice Rites

Legion Schedules Program Here at 11 o'Clock; Many to Attend Reunion and Celebration at Archer City

Though each county will have distinctive observances and programs, Wichita and Archer counties Monday will center their efforts at honoring the world war dead at Archer City, where Armistice day ceremonies will be merged with the festivities attendant upon Archer City's 50th birthday, its grand home-coming jubilee and its celebration of its paved highway accomplishments.

Thousands of people from Archer, Wichita and neighboring counties are expected to converge upon Archer City Monday. Glowing sunshine and clear skies Sunday dispelled fears of hampered attendances on account of bad weather, and roads were pronounced in such good condition that the necessity of a special train from Wichita Falls, which was planned by KGKO officials, was found wanting. Junior chamber of commerce officials, leading their delegation, will get off on the trip early Monday morning. Joe Lightsey, one of the instigators of a program which that organization plans to stage at the Archer City celebration, announced.

Those unable to attend the Armistice fete at Archer City will find programs here at all schools, and a special American Legion program which is to be staged at the Majestic theater at 11 a. m. This hour, signalizing the moment world war guns were hushed, will be heralded by factory whistle blasts. Traffic will be stopped when the clamor begins, and business will come to a halt for a brief period devoted to the memory of the fallen ones.

Borah Seen At Helm Of 1932 Revolt

By FRASER EDWARDS

WASHINGTON, Nov. 10. (US)—The rift in Republican ranks reached a point today where political Washington was seriously considering Senator Borah, of Idaho, as the leader of a revolt in 1932.

For a declaration of open warfare, rather than an armistice, was much nearer the thoughts of the embattled old guard and the battling insurgents on the tariff bill, which has rent the party in twain.

Surface Indication

Meanwhile, regular Republican leaders took steps to cause Senator Moses of New Hampshire, to make some sort of gesture to mollify the Progressives for his "sons of the wild jackass" epithet.

The Moses outburst, however, is a mild surface indication of the turbulent situation within the Republican party which has found an issue and an expression in the tariff bill. It has been added to the remark of Senator Reed of Pennsylvania about the coalition being worse than Communists and Joe Grundy's crack about "backward states."

It is unlikely that Moses will be removed from his position as chairman of the Republican senatorial campaign committee, despite his wisecrack. He is too well liked by Progressive as well as regular Republican senators. But he probably will say something to soften his reference to the "wild jackasses."

Progressive senators take little stock in the story that Moses went to Chicago to lay the groundwork for a fight on them during the primary campaign. They are inclined to accept at face value Moses' statement that he went out to see his grandchildren.

But the economic warfare between the agricultural West and the industrial East is recognized as a reality by both sides.

BYRNS SEES DEMO CONGRESS IN 1930

WASHINGTON, Nov. 10. (US)—Democratic control of the next congress was predicted by Rep. Joseph W. Byrns, of Tennessee, chairman of the Democratic national congressional committee, in a statement today.

Byrns bases his forecast on further analysis of Democratic gains in the state and local elections last week and on what he believes to be growing dissatisfaction with the Republican administration. He said:

"Certainly, if Senator Moses, chairman of the Republican senatorial campaign committee, continues to call western Republicans 'wild jackasses,' Senator Reed to refer to them as 'Communists,' or Socialists, and we can get Joseph Grundy, the Pennsylvania tariff boss to go on the witness stand again, the independent-minded Republicans in the West are bound to be resentful and Republican prospects won't be helped any.

"The shocking tariff disclosures and the failure of the Republican administration to keep its campaign pledges to the farmers are bound to hurt business and react against the party in power."

Missing Air Mail Pilot Is Found

PHILLIPSBURG, Pa., Nov. 10. (UP)—Exhausted after tramping through dense woods for nearly 24 hours and suffering with a fracture of the left arm, severe bruises and shock, Jack Webster, missing air mail pilot whose plane crashed Saturday in the thick woods near Bellefonte, was in a hospital tonight. He was discovered lying on a country road seven miles from this city, and picked up by a party of motorists.

"My motor 'froze' while I was flying above the clouds," Webster said at the hospital.

"I had no time to plan a landing of any kind, nor to jump with my parachute. When I picked myself up out of the wrecked machine and found I could walk, I immediately started for the outside. It was a hard push and I was at the end of my string when the folks in the automobile found me."

Scenes of Horror Result From Gun Battle in Mexican Political Riot

By GEORGE A. SCHREINER
Universal Service Correspondent

MEXICO CITY, Nov. 10.—The gun as a political argument played its tragic role here again this noon, when a parade of supporters of Jose Vasconcelos, Liberal presidential candidate, passing in front of the headquarters of the national revolutionary party was fired upon by men crowding the narrow headquarters balcony.

The battle which then ensued lasted for 24 minutes before police interfered, and when finally order was restored, three were dead and 14 wounded, not counting the scores of those injured by flying bricks and cobblestones.

The hostilities began when about half of the Vasconcelist parade of about 5,000 had filed past the headquarters of Ortiz Rubio, national revolutionary candidate. The building is located on Juarez avenue, opposite the Alameda, or Central park.

The paraders in the street had contented themselves with singing songs, and that they had no intention of starting troubles was shown by the fact that almost a quarter of them were women. Women predominated in that part of the procession which was fired upon.

The Universal Service correspondent had taken his position in front of the building and had concluded that nothing was going to happen, when three shots were fired from the balcony.

For a moment the music of the bands and the singing subsided and a sea of faces, stricken with consternation, lifted itself toward the balcony.

Then through the stillness four or five more shots rang out in rapid succession—so quickly they

Men May See God's Face in Many Of Nature's Glories, Martin Tells Class

Judge P. A. Martin, teaching the Men's Bible Class of the Floral Heights Methodist church, Sunday delivered the following address to the class:

"The men of Athens, gathered in the Areopagus, were there, as the sacred writer says to hear or to tell some new thing. But they were interested in the greatest subject ever attracted the thought of mankind, the thought of God! I believe it was Daniel Webster who said when asked what was the greatest thought that ever entered his magnificent intellect 'my personal responsibility to God.' It is, and always has been and always will be man's greatest thought.

Sought for God

"Man was created with an intense desire to find God. There was implanted in his bosom a longing for the infinite which found its expression in a thousand different ways. Early in the morning of human history men gazed into the bright light of the noonday and sun and said lo, here is God. They saw the silvery moon, now shining brightly in the sky above and now veiling her face neath the fleecy clouds and said, lo, here is the goddess of the night. They spied out the rolling orbs of light, now known as the planets and named them gods and their poets and philosophers built up around them a mythology that is still the wonder of scholars and sages. According to their intellectual lights, they reared to themselves altars and shrines in honor of their especial deities, ranging all the way from the worship of snakes and crocodiles to the worship of the satars of heaven. As Paul said they were 'feeling after Him if haply they might find Him.' And they were doing this in obedience to a God-given instinct that was universal. The Athenians, in their liberality had a multitude of gods and a multitude of altars at which the worshipper could take his choice, but there was just one that attracted the attention of Paul. This one was inscribed 'to the unknown god.' Upon this inscription he took the text of the great sermon on Mars hill and preached to them the monotheism of Israel and the spiritual nature of God as taught by the Savior himself in the whole course of his ministry and especially to the Samaritan woman at the well. That God is a spirit and those that worship him should worship in spirit and in truth. In Him we live and move and have our very being. All things were made by Him and He giveth to all life, and breath, and all things.

Nature's Wonders

"The Athenians were not ready to accept St. Paul's conception of a God and it is recorded that only a few followed him at Athens. And although this concept has been growing throughout the centuries since that time, the world is far from universally accepting the doctrine today. Men are still feeling after some other sort of a god or setting up idols of their own invention or else ignoring altogether the imminence and omnipresence of the infinite God.

"I sat on the rim of the Grand canyon of Arizona one day last summer and heard a learned scientist tell of the millions of years history written in the geologic formations to be found in that mighty chasm; how mighty mountains had washed down through the canyon and formed the rich valleys below and how in the leaves of ferns and the fossil footprints left in the lower strata proved conclusively the prehistoric existence of a tropical clime and a fertile soil 4,000 feet below; he described the formation of the great cliffs and read to us from the book of nature as only a trained geologist can read it chapter after chapter of geologic history but never once in his learned discussion did he go to the foundation of it all and tell of the omnipotent Creator who made it all 'in the beginning' and painted the colors of the rainbow on those mighty cliffs overlooking the turbid waters of the rushing Colorado.

"A few days later I wandered through the Carlsbad cavern and the guide told me how it had taken more than 50 millions of years for the dripping waters to form the great stalagmite, 'Rock of Ages' there; but he did not tell me of the master hand of an all-wise omnipotent power who at some time made the rugged mountain created the rift in its side and set the dripping waters to work making stalagmites and stalactites more beautiful, more symmetrical and more wonderful than pen or tongue has ever yet been able to describe. Perhaps he did not see the hand of God in it in at all.

"We are accustomed to think of God as a being far away upon a throne, surrounded by the angels, in a place called heaven. We sing songs of a far-away land and a sweet by-and-bye until we think of Him only as an absentee ruler of the universe beyond the haunts of men; as a being unknown and unknowable to the finite mind of man.

"But such is not the teaching of this lesson today. It is the privilege of God's children to see His face in the morning sunlight, the rainbow on a summer sky, the glorious sunset, the springing flowers; to hear His voice in the songs of the birds, the sighing of the winds and in all the works of nature. His Holy Spirit working in the very hearts of men, tells them how to distinguish the right from the wrong, warns them to do the right, reproves them when they do the wrong. His 'still small voice' lashes an awakened conscience into sleeplessness and into repentance, reproving the world for sin, teaching righteousness and inspiring a hope of the world to come.

"And who can doubt the inspiration of the old prophet, living more than six centuries before Christ, when he looked down through the ages, past the manger and the cross, beyond the resurrection and ascension, on down through centuries beyond our own day and saw a golden dawn; the dawn of a day when 'they shall beat their swords into plowshares and their spears into pruning hooks' and 'shall not hurt nor destroy in all my holy mountain; for the earth shall be full of the knowledge of the Lord, as the waters cover the sea.'"

Christian Churches To Hold Joint Services

Congregations of the Highland Heights and First Christian churches of this city will unite next Sunday night, Nov. 17, in the evening service at the former church, which is now nearing completion, according to an announcement made Sunday night by Rev. Patrick Henry and Dr. Floyd Allan Bash, pastors of the two churches.

With the exception of the pews, Reverend Henry announced, the new church of the Highland Heights congregation will be complete in all details by next Sunday morning. Delivery on new pews has been delayed until about Dec. 1, he said. Doctor Bash will preach in the joint service next Sunday night.

On Monday, Nov. 18, a three weeks' revival meeting will start in the new building with Rev. Frederick M. Brook of Waco as the evangelist, it was announced. R. E. Shepherd will have charge of the music during those meetings.

JURIST HELD IN DEATH OF GIRL

John W. Brady Accused of Fatal Stabbing

of the homicide and that he had been charged with murder.

Dickens said that Brady had attended the Texas-Baylor football game and later had been with friends who were drinking.

Dickens said that the only recollection Judge Brady had of the events of last night was that "he had had an encounter with a number of people somewhere."

Graham Silent

Graham, who works part time to pay his way through the university, refused to discuss the case. He referred questioners to County Attorney Roy Archer, who declined to divulge what Graham had told him.

Judge Brady had served on the court of appeals six years, and was elected to the place after he had been appointed by former Gov. W. P. Hobby that existed on the court. He was a friend of former Gov. James E. Ferguson and was attorney for the state banking board during the administration of Gov. M. A. Ferguson. He was one of the attorneys retained by former Governor Ferguson to represent the state in an effort to bring suits to cancel contracts awarded by the highway commission.

He was for many years active in University of Texas affairs, especially in the Ex-Students association.

The grand jury now in session probably will start an investigation tomorrow.

Judge Seems Dazed

Judge Brady was arrested by Policemen A. M. Braswell and B. W. Cotton. He made no effort to leave the scene of the homicide and seemed to be in a dazed condition, they said.

Judge and Mrs. Brady did not have any children of their own. They raised an adopted daughter, now Mrs. Sam F. Pondrom of Dallas.

In his heyday, Judge Brady was considered an orator of unusual ability. Since leaving the bench he had been engaged in the private practice of law.

Doctors Visit Cell

During the day Dr. Joe Wooten and Dr. Goodall Wooten visited Judge Brady in his cell.

McNaughton, who was the first to reach Judge Brady after the stabbing, said he had come downstairs to answer the telephone, and he heard Judge Brady speak to Miss Highsmith as he came through the door.

"They stood on the porch and talked just like any other man and woman quarreling," McNaughton said. "When I heard a scream I ran out on the sidewalk. Judge Brady did not say anything when I took the knife."

Brother Called

A brother, Will Brady, residing in Los Angeles, Calif., was en route here.

A. B. Highsmith, the dead woman's father, resides in Houston, but had gone for a week-end fishing trip on the coast somewhere and had not been located today, according to officers.

WIFE VISITS BRADY IN AUSTIN JAIL

AUSTIN, Nov. 10. (AP)—Mrs. John W. Brady went to the city jail early today on a mission of mercy, accompanied by two Sisters of Charity, with whom she had worked with often in spreading sunshine among unfortunates. She went to tell her husband—John W. Brady—that she would stand by him "through all his trouble."

Judge Brady, long prominent in politics, affairs of the Knights of Columbus, and in University of Texas circles, had been charged with murder after Miss Lehlia Highsmith, a stenographer, had been stabbed to death.

No one but those two sisters know what transpired between man and wife. They have locked in their hearts the picture that they viewed. Probably their lips moved silently in prayer.

Mrs. Brady pledged her help to her husband, who told his attorneys that after drinking with friends following yesterday's football game he had only a hazy recollection of "having an encounter with a number of persons."

He said he was sure he had not committed murder.

Friends filled the Brady home throughout the day, coming in to offer sympathy. The woman with the gray hair and tear-stained face met them bravely.

"Oh, no, I want to be courteous to everyone," she protested when her friends suggested that she should rest and not carry the strain of meeting so many people.

She told friends that she realized it was not John Brady who acted, if it was his hand that struck with the knife—she said he had been crazed with drink and that his brain must have been saturated with poisonous liquor.

"He had a big heart and was charitable," she said.

"After all, there isn't anything I can say," she told newspaper men. "Of course, it is a terrible tragedy and I am upset and heartsick."

It was a problem for police to break the news to Mrs. Brady when they arrested John W. Brady, for many years an honored citizen. They knew that Mrs. Brady had gone with the Sisters of Charity on many of their errands, and they turned to the sisters to perform this act of mercy. They telephoned the sisters and they went quietly to break the news.

DEAD GIRL'S PARENTS LIVE IN HOUSTON

HOUSTON, Nov. 10. (AP)—Miss Lehlia Highsmith, stabbed to death in a car in front of her boarding house at Austin late Saturday night was a daughter of G. B. Highsmith, head of the accounting department of the Humble Oil refinery at Baytown.

Highsmith late Sunday had not been informed of his daughter's death. He had left Saturday for a fishing trip on the coast and efforts to locate him Sunday had failed up to a late hour.

Mrs. Highsmith, step-mother of the dead girl, declined to discuss the incident.

Mrs. Highsmith said that Mr. Highsmith announced that he was going to fish on Little Turtle bayou. Acting on this information a searching party left Baytown early Sunday morning to notify the father but a patrol of Turtle bayou in Brazoria county failed in locating him. Whether he had decided to fish in Turtle bayou in Jefferson county about 30 miles east of Baytown had not been learned Sunday night.

Mrs. Highsmith expressed fear that news of the death of his only child might cause a collapse because of a weak heart. Highsmith was under treatment for several weeks about a year ago when stricken by a heart attack, she said.

Rabbit Breeders To Meet Tuesday Night

Members of the American Rabbit and Cavy Breeders' association of Texas will hold their regular biweekly meeting Tuesday night at 7:30 o'clock in the basement of the courthouse, it was announced Sunday.

A delegation from the recently organized association at Electra will be present at Tuesday night's meeting, according to officials of the local body.

Discussion scheduled for the meeting will include plans for the rabbit show to be held at Byers next Saturday night, Nov. 16, this exhibition having been postponed one week from last Saturday night because of unfavorable weather. Progress in the matter of advocating tariffs on rabbit pelts also will come up at Tuesday night's session, it was said.

Many to Attend Archer Program

celebrations many of the county's founders will attend. The two-day festival, described as Archer county's grand home-coming jubilee and paved highway celebration, will join in commemorating the efforts of the early settlers and the progress later generations have seen. The celebration of the paved highway accomplishments has been especially planned as a memorial to the county's efforts in substituting hard surfaced thoroughfares where cattle trails once wound over the prairie.

The jubilee will get off to a start at 9:30 Monday morning, when a historical parade, its floats typifying each epoch in the county's history, will begin its two-hour march through the city's streets. The parade will be punctuated with Armistcie day observances at 11 a. m. The parade over, visitors will be officially welcomed to the city by Coff C. Conner, marshal of the day, who, with these preliminaries over, will direct the city's guests to the place where a free barbecue will be served. At 1:30 a rodeo will get under way. This will be followed by a football game between Iowa Park and Archer City.

In addition to these activities, stunt airplane fliers will be seen, and carnivals and other attractions may be found.

Monday night a colorful street dance has been arranged.

Tuesday's celebration will likewise open with a historical parade, this time staged by school children. A dinner at noon will be given over to the old timers, who will listen to addresses of their former prairie companions. That afternoon the rodeo will be repeated, and that evening an entertainment program, consisting of songs, dances, and speaking, will be given.

could not be counted. The crowd and the bystanders were not yet able to realize what was happening, but the cries of the wounded paraders soon tore them out of their stunned condition.

Hundreds Trampled On

The resulting panic was frightful. With the head and tail of the parade blocking flight in two directions, and with the low wire fence of the park also an obstacle, hundreds were trampled upon.

Meanwhile, those on the balcony had increased their fire. They were protected by the adobe walls, but the Vasconcellists in the street, only a few of whom had come armed, were exposed to the fire.

The paraders returned only a light fusillade. By this time some of those in the building had mounted to the roof, where they began demolishing the walls, using the bricks to hurl on the paraders. With the paraders and spectators in confusion they had a massed target for their aim.

One man, mortally wounded, fell to the street beside me. Others pitching forward in the same manner caused the shrieking crowd to retreat further into the park.

Signs Catch Fire

By now the canvas signs in front of the headquarters had taken fire. An alarm was sounded and firemen arrived almost simultaneously with the police.

One of the striking features of the riot was that several score policemen, within a few blocks of the scene, took no part in settling the outbreak. Those that finally came were from police headquarters, five blocks away. It took them 20 minutes to arrive.

The delay, it was said, was due to the fact that it was Sunday and the impression existed in police circles that the parade would be without any disorder.

Nation Marks Armistice Day

Vice President Curtis at Soldiers' field, Chicago, and Assistant Secretary Castle of the state department before the Rhode Island American legion at Providence.

The address of the chief executive tomorrow night will climax the observance of the day. It will be delivered at the Washington auditorium under the auspices of the American legion before an audience which is expected to number 18,000 persons. Mr. Hoover's words will be broadcast over a nationwide radio hookup and all of the 12,000 posts of the legion have arranged to listen to the address. The words also will go to 26,000 injured veterans in the hospitals of the country.

During the morning a delegation of the American legion, headed by Maj. O. L. Bodenhamer, national commander, together with representatives of the welfare organizations which served with the military forces in the war, will pay a tribute with exercises and the laying of wreaths upon the tomb of the unknown soldier. At 11 o'clock the two minute silence, observed throughout the world on previous Armistice day anniversaries, will prevail and at Washington a bugler standing beside the unknown soldier's tomb will sound "taps" to end the period of stillness.

At 3 o'clock in the afternoon the memorial service to Wilson will be held at the national cathedral in the Bethlehem chapel at his tomb. Bishop James E. Freeman of Washington will deliver a tribute to the wartime chief executive which will be broadcast by radio over the nation. For the first time Mrs. Wilson, the president's widow, will not be present at this annual service as she is traveling in the orient. Preceding this memorial service at 11 o'clock in the morning, a service of prayer and thanksgiving over the peace among nations will be held at the cathedral.

In the afternoon, an award for his services in behalf of world peace will be given by France to Frank B. Kellogg, former secretary of state and author of the general treaty for the renunciation of war. Ambassador Claudel of France will bestow upon the former secretary the grand cross of the legion of honor, the highest French decoration.

FINNELL ENDS REVIVAL HERE

Evangelist Closes 11-Day Lecture Series

"It takes something more than just sitting around 'thinking about' doing something to make a crop or to reap a harvest for Jesus Christ," declared Evangelist J. L. Finnell Sunday night in his closing sermon at the First Christian church, where he has conducted an 11-days' revival meeting.

Doctor Finnell took from the prophet Jeremiah the following words for his text: "The harvest is past; the summer is ended, and we are not saved." Every situation which an individual faces, every day, every year, is concluded either in victory or in despair, the speaker pointed out, according to the preparation made and the effort put forth for a harvest of success. The excessive unpreparedness seen in our young people today, he continued, is due largely to the lack of a great, all-consuming purpose in each life.

If a person attends a church service in a sincere spirit of worship, the speaker declared, he can not fail to get something good out of any sermon that is given, no matter how poorly it may be composed and delivered. "It's awfully hard to warm up cold biscuits," he continued, "it's so much easier to warm up the raw material. Cold ones can't be warmed up at all unless they are moistened. Church members, and persons who have postponed joining the church, are like that. And once hardened, they're hard to soften."

Dr. Floyd Allan Bash, pastor of the First Christian church; Rev. Patrick Henry, pastor of the Highland Heights Christian church, and Rev. William R. Vivrett, pastor of the First Christian church at Denton, assisted in the service Sunday night. Rev. and Mrs. Vivrett are guests of Rev. and Mrs. Henry.

During the musical service Sunday night, R. E. Shepherd sang "I'm a Child of the King," accompanied by Mrs. Shepherd.

Will Durant Will Give Lecture Here Tuesday

Will Durant, who will appear at the Woman's Forum Tuesday evening as the second general attraction for the year, has a nation-wide reputation as a lecturer, which takes one back to the middle ages when people in all stations of life laid their work aside at the call of knowledge and flocked to hear the great teachers of the day.

During his tour last year he attracted overflow audiences in nearly every large city in every state of the union, the average attendance at each lecture being 1,500. His audiences have been continually surprised that as a result of a certain Gallic wit, the author of the "Story of Philosophy" and "Transition," speaks even better than he writes. Thousands have pronounced his address "Is Progress Real?" the best lecture ever heard in their part of the country. His most recent book is "Mansions of Philosophy."

The attractiveness of Mr. Durant's talks have an additional witness in the fact that "The Story of Philosophy," which was composed of lecture courses given by Dr. Durant at the Labor Temple school, became the best selling non-fiction in America within three weeks after its publication, and is still third on the list as it begins its third year. Tenth on the same list is "Transition" which gives Durant's own story of his adventures in the world of contemporary life and thought.

"The Ten Greatest Thinkers" will be the title of Mr. Durant's subject when he speaks at the forum clubhouse Tuesday, it is announced.

Forum members will be admitted at the door upon presenting their new membership cards. Those who have not paid their 1930 dues may send their checks to Mrs. Bernard Martin, 1512 Buchanan street and receive their cards before the lecture. Mrs. Martin and the membership committee will be in the foyer Tuesday evening for the purpose of taking dues but it is urged that all who can pay their dues before the attraction in order to avoid confusion.

PEEPS AT PEOPLE

By MRS. L. N. CASON

The young girl of this day and time is not often shy as a daisy. In Amarillo recently, one of them ran over a red light and when the cop called her down, she said with an insoulcant yawn that she thought it was green; in fact, she was so billous that everything looked green to her. She was told to "tell it to the judge," and she paid a fine.

We heard a man in Wichita Falls remark the other day that since the early days of the war, a young man had not known what it was to taste the sweetness of a girls lips; all he tasted was lipstick.

But the same man is a lover of flappers and their gallant defender when he hears a derogatory remark made of one whom he knows.

And it is a fact that since the war, lipstick or no lipstick, girls are almost 100 per cent more efficient than before. The war probably made a greater upheaval in the life of young women than in any other strata of the human race.

They have found that there is more in life than just society. Girls have an ambition to accomplish something; to find a niche where they may make good and be regarded as good.

It may be she will marry and let her niche lie empty. But if she has learned how to do some one thing well, if ever a time comes when she is thrown on her own resources, she has the resources in her work. Every girl should be trained to make a living in some congenial way—even if her father is a millionaire.

We have always thought it such a tragedy that both men and women often go through life in a place that does not fit. A sort of square peg in a round hole. If only one might know early in life, the work that would be most congenial.

We know a man in the mercantile business, whose interest lies in archaelogy.

He lives on the Denver not far from the caprock formation. All of his spare time is spent in searching the broken hilly land near his place of business.

In his collection are the teeth of an enormous primitive mammoth; an unknown bone filled with crystallized silica and the hoof, leg and rib of a three toed horse, about two and a half feet high. And when he shows and talks of them, his eyes shine with delight in his treasures.

He works in his store, and digs for bones as a pleasure.

Mrs. Reese Honors Miss Fay Fisher at Luncheon

Complimenting Miss Fay Fisher, popular young bride-elect, Mrs. T. T. T. Reese entertained with a prettily appointed luncheon in the Spanish tea room at the Woman's Forum clubhouse on Saturday.

The bridal motif in the colors of pink and white were artistically carried out in the decoration of the long table at which all the guests were seated with the honoree and hostess. The center piece was a bowl of pink tea roses combined with baby wreath.

Appointments were miniature brides. The feature of the entertainment occurred when the hostess passed decorated cards with pencils attached, to each guest and asked her to write her favorite recipe for the honoree.

The hostess presented her guest of honor with a handsome bowl filled with lovely pink roses.

Those present were Misses Fay Fisher, Thelma Fisher, Helen Grisham, Alice Graham of Graham, Anabel Couper, Mary Jo Kell, Gene Nelson, Mesdames J. A. Fisher, W. M. Priddy, C. N. Cameron, Jouette Bonner, George Collum, P. P. Langford Jr., Ray Arnhold, G. W. Gutzman, M. L. Reid and Mrs. Reese.

Frederick to Decorate For Holiday Season

Special to The Record News.

FREDERICK, Okla., Nov. 10.—In order to induce early holiday trading, directors of the Frederick chamber of commerce decided at a regular meeting to ask that the entire business section of Frederick be wired so that colored globes can be used in lighting all the street. Wires are to be stretched across the streets every 25 feet.

It is also expected that business concerns will procure cedars or other small suitable Christmas trees and place them in the holes in the sidewalk which were made to hold a flag pole. Wiring is also to reach to these trees so that colored globes placed in their branches can be lighted.

Methodist Group Has Interesting Meeting Sunday

A very delightful and instructive program was given by members of the Epworth Young People of the Floral Heights Methodist church Sunday afternoon.

Fred Sehman opened the meeting with a song followed by the Lord's prayer repeated in unison. Miss Emmaline Lewis led the lesson on chapter six in the book, "Going to Jerusalem," and conducted the program.

Dorothy Johnson told how Christianity was first brought to America. "We think of Columbus only as a discoverer," she said, "Yet he thought of himself as one in which the missionary call was the greatest motive in his career."

John Bone related the story of Count Zinzendorf and his religious refugees from Bohemia. A brief sketch of the life of William Carey, the cobbler and his colossal work in India was given by Pheobe Lou Sehman. She told how he had learned 36 of the many languages of India into which he translated all or parts of the Bible.

The Christianizing of China was the theme of Lena Mae Leslie while the work of Robert Moffat and Daniel Livingston were told by Helen Ruth Connaly. William Donnel gave a violin solo.

In the business meeting which followed, it was decided that the losing side in the present contest should entertain the winning side with a party. New members and visitors were introduced and the meeting was closed with the benediction repeated in unison.

TURKEY PRICES DOWN 2 CENTS

Market for No. 1 Birds Here Drops to 18

Prices on turkeys fell off two cents per pound on practically all grades Sunday in fulfillment of predictions made during the past week by leaders of the poultry industry that a hold-over surplus in the East would affect a reduction in 1929 crop prices.

No. 1 hens and toms dropped from 20 cents to 18, old toms were listed at 13 cents, and No. 2 birds at eight cents.

Deliveries Sunday were much heavier than during the preceding several days, it was said. With only three or four more days available for dressing turkeys for freight shipment to the Eastern market, Armour creameries were making an effort Sunday evening to double their force of pickers in order to catch up with deliveries, it was said.

Statisticians Figure Out Length of Married Life

NEW YORK, Nov. 10. (UP)—Insurance statisticians, after months of research, have worked out to one decimal point the period which newly married couples may expect to live together—leaving out the possibility of divorce, fast becoming a major factor.

It was announced today that a man of 33 and a woman of 30 who marry may expect to live together 27.3 years before death, in the normal course, separates them.

A woman's expectation of life at 30 is 38.3 years; that of a man at 35 years is 33.4 years.

Five Acts Divide Headline Honors On Good Vaudeville Bill Here

By W. L. UNDERWOOD
The Record News Staff

Since headline honors in a vaudeville bill presumably are given to the quality of entertainment most effectively presented, award of that distinction this week at the Majestic must pass up each of the five acts, or throw them into a huddle, to give due credit to the degree of variety which the bill attains.

From the tantalizing acrobatics performed by playing cards in the hands of Le Paul to the surprising hand-springs of 260-pound Sonny Lamont, the bill ranges over a vast territory of sense and nonsense with a minimum measure of monotony.

As confessed in the lyric with which her act opened, Lita Grey Chaplin probably differed slightly from advance conceptions which members of the audience may have entertained. The former wife of Charlie Chaplin is not the diminutive wisp of a girl which her much talked-of 21 years seems to have pictured to the public. From the standpoint of stature, it may be conjectured that Charlie did no talking down to his doll-wife. It may be noted also that the act required little more than Lita's appearance, enhanced by gowns and stage settings of gorgeous hues, to stand on its own merits. The "little more" was not lacking, for a contralto voice which clearly outranks most of those heard here in vaudeville features an acceptable group of songs. Roland Becker and Pat Casey accompanists, contribute a pleasing four-hand piano number to the program.

Masters and Grayce in a song and dance skit captioned "Oh Harry!" continue the prevailing vogue in dancing which is more strong than graceful.

Immediate reaction to Swor and Goode's "Two Black Aces" was a mental query of "Where have I heard that drawl before?" The line of patter evolves a greater degree of independence as it progresses, however, and is capped with a soft-shoe glide by the angular member of the pair.

Le Paul opens the bill with a parade of playing cards in which they dazzle even the experts with new phases of now-it-is-and-now-it-ain't. Projection of a full deck into the air and its smooth recovery in flight with one hand is the trick the sharks will try to emulate.

The Lamont family, closing the bill, presents a rapidly moving series of acrobatic feats including new steps on the tight wire, tap dancing, tumbling and miscellaneous clowning.

Ina Claire, renowned legitimate stage actress, in her talking-picture debut, "The Awful Truth," completes the entertainment.

THE WEEPING MUSE

Is Modern Industrialism about to deal the Art of Music the saddest blow of its history?

To blame Machinery as an Instrument of Decadence may seem startling, but it is true that Machinery in the form of Canned Music is elbowing Real Music out of motion picture theatres, thus denying to the masses the cultural influence of a Fine Art.

Surely, if machine-made music displaces the artist in thousands of instances, the incentive for any individual to improve his talent—so necessary in all art—is minimized and music can no longer hold the cultural value that it has possessed. Any art is dependent for its progress upon the number of its enthusiastic executants.

Do you, Mr. Reader, find the pleasure in Mechanical Music that you do in Real Music?

If you believe that Real Music should be saved to the masses who attend Motion Picture Theatres make your opinion known to the manager of your favorite theatre. Very likely he will appreciate your frankness for he wants to please his patrons.

CABBAGES AND KINGS AGAIN

Daily Editorial

SENSATIONS, like troubles, never come singly. For the past fortnight news wires have fairly sagged under the weight of portentous reports.

So many spectacular events have competed for the international limelight that a hundred happenings of usual front page importance hardly had the chance to hold attention.

Now that the stock market is snaffled and submitting to the traces, the elections over, the Fall decision rendered, a new French premier in the saddle and Hiram Bingham spanked, it's opportune to recall that Dikeman was bucked from his winged broncho into Davy Jones' locker, which hasn't since yielded the slightest club of that ill-fated ride in Lindbergh's wake.

The odds against the lone transatlantic flights are heavy enough without loading them with recklessness. The Montana cowboy stacked the deck against himself by an inadequate gas supply, an inferior plane, and a take off without previous weather check-ups.

Had Dikeman waited a little longer, his chances would have been immeasurably increased through the use of a just perfected wireless device, which photo-radios meterological charts to pilots en route, and continuously flashes the course of storm movements.

Even Thomas Alva Edison, whose bask in his own incandescent light was so rudely cut short by the distracting intrusion of bull bellows, must get a tremendous kick out of such a tour de force.

There's no use wasting any further thought on the tariff situation. All the king's horses and men can't put that cracked Humpty back on the wall this session.

THE lobby investigation had hopelessly blockaded immediate passage of the Hawley act, and the steady decline of wheat prices will all the more stiffen agriculture's resistance to a bill in which the farmer reads favoritism to industry, and the voiding of campaign pledges to place the plow on a protective parity with the loom and the triphammer.

The appointment of Mrs. Willebrandt's successor is another important move which scarcely registers on public memory. It's dollars to crullers that you don't even remember his name.

And it's a safe wager that you haven't digested the significance of his statement that, under his administration, prohibition will be enforced with meticulous respect for other statutes, and strictly within constitutional and Volstead act stipulations.

Mr. Lowman, Bishop Cannon and fanaticism, please take notice.

Limitations of space render apology to the distinguished Japanese physician, whose enpassant observations on the possibility of Burbanking future generations, evoked so little enthusiasm from the daily press.

His heartening assurance that selective breeding, assisted by biochemistry, will enable the future to eliminate frail and unfit types, is justified by the proud workings of the Mendelian Law in animal husbandry, poultry raising and grain culture.

Nothing now seems preposterous in the realm of anthropological evolution, after checking the results of the human system's response to gland manipulation and metabolic control.

If these phrases gag your understanding, turn to the encyclopedia and learn what makes your wheels go round.

You wouldn't think of driving a car without knowledge of its motor and transmission. And two-thirds of prevalent illness, confusion, accidents and market losses are simply due to half-cocked intelligence, and neglect to profit by generally available knowledge.

The difference between a Lindbergh and a Dikeman, a successful investor and a shorn lamb, a well man and an invalid, is largely a matter of caution, thoroughness and knowing what it's all about.

Artificial silk is being produced from the pineapple. In Chicago they also get jewels, hooch and trouble out of it.

Sometimes an automobile will not only help you to see this world but the next.

Helpful Automobile Hint: The motor should be well lubricated, but keep the driver dry.

Harry Thaw was sued for $75,000 for biting a night club hostess. Considering the price of a night club sandwich, that looks pretty cheap.

Why Not Pay Them?

NO TRUE PHILOSOPHER, of course, could possibly be disturbed by anything that might develop in connection with college football; so it is hardly surprising to find the eminent Will Durant greeting the recent Carnegie Foundation report with an amused, "Well, what of it?"

Dr. Durant, far from being shocked by the disclosures in that now famous report, remarks that he can see no reason on earth why a college should not pay a star football player.

To begin with, Dr. Durant asserts bluntly that intercollegiate football is quite as apt to teach its participants something as the average course of study in classrooms.

"It is too bad," he says, "that there is a general feeling that those who indulge in college sports are wasting their time, because, really, athletics require quite as much gray matter, and often more, than the most involved academic course.

"When a football player weaves his way through a field of opponents for a touchdown his mind has not been a blank."

Then he takes up the question of paying football players.

"I had a scholarship when I went to college and no one thought there was anything irregular about that," he says. "I received the scholarship because I answered correctly test questions that had been written on paper.

"Now, if a boy plays an unusually good game of football, is there any reason why a college should not assist him through school? I do not believe there is. To what better use could money taken in at a Yale-Army football game be put than to assist players on the team in completing their educations?"

A good deal of ineffectual indignation has been aroused by the Carnegie report; but really, Dr. Durant's suggestion is far from being humorous.

The American colleges have turned football into a big business. In such matters as ballyhoo, gate receipts, crowds and general interest aroused it in no way differs from such a business as, for instance, big league baseball.

That being the case, it is hardly out of the way to suggest that the football players ought to be paid, quite openly, for what they do.

To be sure, it may be said that professionalism of that kind is out of keeping with the whole theory of undergraduate sport. But so are the monster stadiums, the great gate receipts, the skillfully arranged publicity. Football is no longer an undergraduates' diversion; it is a large-scale business venture. Why not treat it as such, openly?

Dr. Durant's proposal is not as far-fetched as it sounds.

Stabilizing Prosperity

THE importance of the group life insurance scheme, which more and more business organizations are adopting for their employes, is shown in figures just issued by B. A. Page, vice president of the Travelers Insurance company, who announces that approximately $80,000,000 will be paid out this year to the families of some 53,000 workers insured under the group plan.

This averages nearly $1,500 per family—a sum that is larger than the estate left by 65 per cent of the country's wage earners. Thus the wages or salary of many individual workers have been projected into the future a year or more beyond death.

The payment of these sums of insurance money not only serves to save many families from suffering; it acts as a strong stabilizer of the country's prosperity. Eighty million dollars is no small contribution to the nation's annual buying power.

The Cost of Congestion

SECRETARY OF COMMERCE LAMONT estimates that traffic congestion in the United States costs the country something like $2,000,000,000 a year.

This sum, as he points out, is practically equal to our annual expenditures for the construction and maintenance of traffic facilities.

An economic loss of this size is something staggering to contemplate. It indicates that traffic congestion is rapidly approaching the point where it will simply throttle our social and economic growth. No problem that we face is much more serious than this one.

Yet, instead of solving it, we are pouring more automobiles on to our highways each year. What the situation may be in five more years—unless something much more drastic than anything yet attempted is done—is a matter for pessimists to think about.

Trans-Pacific Markets

THE GREAT MARKET that lies on the other side of the Pacific ocean is proving repeatedly that it is worth the earnest attention of American exporters. The latest people to find it out are the citizens of Canada.

During the first half of the present year, Canada's exports to Japan reached the impressive total of $22,300,000—nearly $5,000,000 above the figures for the first half of the preceding year. The Canadian wheat growers alone found Japan able to buy more than $13,000,000 worth of their crop.

The United States and Canada will some day draw a great part of their prosperity from the lands beyond the Pacific. Already the territory is proving abundantly worth cultivating.

'EASY' The Love Story of a Modern Girl

By BEATRICE BURTON

CHAPTER XXXV

Ann Marie was neither a sneak nor a snoop.

She knew that she did not want to stand there in the hall-way trying to hear what was being said in Neal's flat. Eaves-dropping was a crime in her opinion. A nasty mean little piffling crime.

And yet she couldn't tear herself away from Neal's door until she knew who was in that room with him!

She looked down at her wrist watch. It was 15 minutes after 7 . . . For 45 minutes, at the very least, someone had been sitting in that room with Neal in the dark. Someone who was murmuring now in that soft flowing voice. A voice so low that Ann Marie couldn't make up her mind whose voice it was.

Perhaps it was the Tillie-girl's voice, or Leota Ingram's—

"Why should I have to be jealous and worried like this?" Ann Marie wondered. "A girl ought to feel sure of a man while she's engaged to him, if she's ever going to feel sure of him."

She took the key that Neal had given her out of her hand-bag. The key to his flat.

"You may want to run in and straighten the place up sometime when I'm not there," he had said to her when he gave it to her.

She made up her mind to use that key now! She would open the door, just as if she had heard nothing inside the room, and walk in!

She all but had the key in the lock when the sound of a bell ringing in her own flat made her jump . . . Someone ringing for her from the vestibule downstairs!

"It must be one of the Goodwins," she thought. No one else in town would be coming to see her.

She dropped Neal's key back into her bag and went into her own flat to answer the house-telephone.

It was Jim Goodwin.

"Have you had your dinner?" he asked, his deep pleasant voice muffled by the telephone. "If you haven't, Janet wants you to come home with us."

"Wait. I'll come downstairs and talk to you," answered Ann Marie and put the receiver back upon its hook.

She did not want him to come upstairs where Neal would probably see him and be jealous and angry with her—and besides how could one let him come up to a place like the flat, with Alice's lingeries decorating all the chairs and the bed unmade and a stack of dirty dishes on the window-sill and another stack of them on the table?

"Let's see—I'll tell him I can't leave Alice," she thought, opening the door. "That's as good an excuse as any."

She stepped out upon the landing, and there, not three feet from her, was Alice herself, just coming out of Neal's studio! Her blonde hair was tousled, her cheeks were flushed and all of the lipstick was gone from her mouth. She had the dreamy soft look of a girl who has just been thoroughly kissed.

Ann Marie could hardly speak. Her throat seemed to have closed.

"So it was you, sitting there in the dark all this time!" she said finally. "You ought to be ashamed of yourself—"

"I'm not!" Alice sang out airily. "If Neal and I want to sit in there and enjoy the dusk I'm sure it's no crime. Don't be so suspicious, Ann Marie!"

Ann Marie went on down the stairs. And on the way down she changed her mind about going to dinner with the Goodwins . . . She would go after all!

Why not? Neal and Alice had a much better time alone than they had when she was with them, she told herself, bitterly.

"I ought to hate them both!" she thought.

But how could she hate them? . . . She loved Neal so much that she knew she would always care for him, no matter what he did. And Alice was her own sister.

"Only tonight I really would like to get away from them, somehow," she said to herself. She wanted to stop thinking about them.

Jim and Janet were standing in the vestibule, waiting for her. Jim big and smiling and quiet in his dark blue overcoat. Janet in a cream-colored suit and hat with a bunch of lilies-of-the-valley pinned on her breast.

"We hear you're wonderful! Miss Hogan says you can draw like sixty!" Janet greeted her in her breathless excited way that would have seemed gushing and insincere in anyone but Janet. "We stopped in at her place to pick you up an hour ago, but you'd left! Can you come with us? We'll get you home early."

Ann Marie nodded eagerly . . . Ah, these were her friends, these two! They truly cared for her and honestly wanted her to be with them. Their friendship was very comforting to her just then.

"Will you wait for me down here?" she asked them. "I can't ask you upstairs. My sister has come to town—and she—she's dressing up there."

The door of her flat stood open, and Neal and Alice were in the kitchenet, opening the papers that were wrapped around the steak.

"Some steak!" Neal was saying. He turned to her, his face lighted up by his quick crooked smile that was the thing she liked best about him. "You going to pan-broil it the way you did that one for me the other night, Ann Marie?"

Ann Marie shook her head.

"I won't have time to," she said. "I'm going out for dinner."

Alice swung around and faced her indignantly. "And leave me here with all this work to do?" she asked.

"I'll help you with the work, if Neal will just get out and give me time to dress," Ann Marie answered.

She saw him give her a puzzled wondering look.

"What's the matter? Are you sore at me about anything?" he asked, his face suddenly very solemn.

"'Sore!?" repeated Ann Marie. "No, I'm not 'sore'."

You didn't get "sore" at a man who had told you he loved you better than anyone else in the world—and then proved it by making love to every other girl who came his way, your own sister included!—it just broke your heart.

"You act as if you're sore," said Neal, and went out.

While her bath tub was filling, Ann Marie pinned some white cloth gardenias on the shoulder of her sleeveless black satin dress. She laid out a pair of pearl gray stockings and her black satin slippers.

"I wish I had something nice to wear," she sighed as she began to help Alice make up the daybed. "I just wish you'd see Jim Goodwin's sister's clothes! She makes me feel like something that came out of a rag bag."

"Jim Goodwin! Has he so much money?" asked Alice. "Why do you go out to dinner with him when you're engaged to Neal—if you don't mind my asking?"

Ann Marie laughed. "Well," she said, "why do you and Neal make love to each other when you're engaged to Johnny Lawler and Neal is engaged to me?—What's the answer to that?"

Alice had the grace to blush. "If Neal and I feel around with each other it doesn't mean anything. It's just horse-play. It really doesn't mean a thing—"

"Well, then, if it doesn't mean anything will you please stop it?" Ann Marie asked gravely, her deep eyes fixed on her sister's shallow ones. "You know you know I worship Neal, Alice."

"You're a fool if you do," said Alice. "He'll never worship you or any other woman. Let me tell you something—If I really worked at it, I could take him away from you just like that!"

And she snapped her fingers to show how easy it would be to do it!

Jim Goodwin had set up a home of his own in an apartment house on Park avenue.

"The family live up in Norwalk—our folks," Janet explained when the car came to a smooth noiseless stop before the huge white stone building, "but Jim has to be on the job here in town, so he keeps this place. I'm here half the time, Jim's suite's on the ground floor—right here."

She waved one of her nervous little hands in its white glove at the window of the first floor. The curtains were drawn and they gleamed like sheets of gold with the lights behind them. Outside there were stone window-boxes with tiny evergreen trees in them.

"I like the first floor. It's really not very noisy—and when you look out of the windows you can see what's going on outside," Janet chattered on as they went up the steps.

A Japanese man servant opened the door to let them in. There was a thick Chinese rug on the floor of the hall. Ann Marie's feet sank into it as if it were a bed of moss.

She gave her reflection a quick glance in the long mirror on one side of the hall . . . It seemed to her that she looked very small and shabby against the rich background of Jim's home.

It was beautiful—this home of his—as not even the Lawlers' great house back home had been.

The carpets were all soft and thick as moss. The lamps were shaded with ivory silk. The deep comfortable chairs were covered with flowered brocade, and the walls were lined with white bookshelves filled with hundreds and hundreds of books.

The guest room, where Janet slept when she was in town, was all soft blue and pale pink and ivory.

"Like the inside of a seashell!" as Ann Marie said breathlessly when she stepped into it.

Her old black cape had never looked more shabby than it did when she laid it down upon the shell-pink silk that covered the bed.

Janet began to take off her cream-colored street suit.

"I'll just hop into a comfortable dress," she said, diving into a clothes closet that smelled of orris-root and coming back into the room with a blue velvet frock in her hands.

She dashed into the bathroom to wash, and Ann Marie drifted back into the room of the Sleepy Hollow chairs and softly-shaded lamps and white book shelves . . . Such a peaceful lovely room!

Somewhere in the apartment a bell rang. There came the sound of feet padding through the hall.

Then the Japanese who had opened the door came into the room, bowing and smiling.

"Please—a gentleman to see you," he said to Ann Marie. "Mr. Farsight."

"Mr. Forsythe?" asked Ann Marie in bewilderment.

The curtains behind the man parted, and Neal stepped into the room.

Now Lucius Z. Zwimp doesn't look very keen,
And he isn't reputed so wise;
He doesn't possess what is called a great bean

He's not much on art or on science and such,
But I think he's smart to the core,
For when a a team gains and then loses as much
He knows what the penalty's for!

III

He went to no college, no sheepskin he won!
Folks never have flattered his brain;
The books of the month he will carefully shun
And deep thinking causes him pain.
Nobody regards him and gasps, "What a mind!"
But their lack of sense I deplore—
For when the team loses 10 yards you will find
He knows what the penalty's for!

IV

He never has won any medals or prize
From Willie Durant or Ed Bok;
He's never been praised as excessively wise
And comes from no scholarly stock.
He says very little and carefully guards
Against using big words galore—
But when an eleven is set fifteen yards
He knows what the penalty's for!

V

He may be a nitwit, as some people say,
He may be as dull as they come;
Folks claim he is lacking in matter called gray
And can't do the easiest sum;
But I give three cheers and proclaim him the while
As a mental behemoth and more—
For when the team gains . . . and then walks back a mile
He knows what the penalty's for!

DAVID BRANCH'S DAILY FILOSOFY

God Is Awfully Good to Me

God is awfully good to me.
As I travel along my way;
When some danger I seem to see,
He quickly drives it all away.

God is awfully good to me.
When men fail to understand;
Never from me does He flee,
But gently leads me by His hand.

God is awfully good to me.
When friends have turned me down,
And I am lost on life's high sea;
It is by Him I am always found.

God is awfully good to me.
That is why I love Him so;
I try to be what He wants me be,
And try to go where He wants me go.

God is awfully good to me,
And He is just as good to you.
Do you His image in others see,
And love and serve them as I try to?

Little Starch in Turnips

The turnip is a hardy biennial of the mustard family and a native of southern Asia. It stores up nourishment in its root the first year so that it will be enabled to develop its seed stock the second year. Man takes advantage of this by utilizing the root as it is stored with these nourishing substances. We know that turnips were one of the principal vegetables used by the Greeks and it is likely that this vegetable furnished them with a good portion of the mineral elements and vitamins of their diet.

There are many varieties of turnips, the principal three being the white, flat turnip, the yellow globe, and the rutabaga or Swedish turnip. The turnip may be used either as a cooked or raw vegetable and the tops may be used as greens. When added to vegetable stews, the turnip gives a sharp, snappy flavor. Before cooking the greens, much attention should be given to extracting the sand and grit from the leaves. It is best to soak them for an hour in a large pan of water and at the end of this time lift out the greens and rinse several times under running water.

The pungency of the turnip is chemically related to the pungency of the radish and cabbage, being a compound of sulphur, and is for this reason gas-producing for most people. During cooking the pungency is somewhat destroyed, especially if the cover is taken off the cooking vessel at least part of the time.

Even though large, turnips do not contain any appreciable amount of starch, the carbohydrates, about 11 per cent of the turnip, consist of glucose, sugar pectose, pentosans, and cellulose.

Turnips are among the richest foods in mineral elements and contain a large amount of potassium, calcium, phosphorus and chlorine. Here are some recipes which you should try:

Turnips, Carrots and Peas

Dice and cook one bunch of small carrots and one bunch of small turnips together. When cooked, add a medium sized can of peas. Add butter when served.

Turnip Shells

Wash and remove the tops from turnips, scoop out the inside leaving a one-half inch case. Boil in hot water for 15 minutes. Fill with ground roast lamb without seasoning. Place Melba toast crumbs on top and place a thin slice of turnip or tomato over this. Place in a hot oven and bake. Occasionally base with the liquid in which the turnips were boiled.

Turnip and Split-pea Soup

Soak split peas over night and in the morning boil over a slow fire until tender. Add the finely chopped tops and roots of several turnips. Boil until the latter are tender, season with salt and serve with a lump of butter in each bowl, with Melba toast croutons.

Turnip Salad

Finely grate small turnips and carrots, mix with small amount of tomato pulp and olive oil, and stuff into tomato shells. Serve garnished with watercress on lettuce or spinach leaves.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Lead Poisoning

Question: J. H. asks—"Do you think it likely that a man who has once had an attack of lead poisoning would have a recurring attack, even though he no longer is exposed to lead in any form in his present work?"

Answer—If you are no longer engaged in an occupation where you are exposed to lead you will probably not have a further attack. It would be a good plan to take a short orange fast followed by the milk diet in order to cleanse your system of any toxins which may remain.

Milk

Question: M. D. F. asks—"For anyone using milk in the diet, would it be permissible to use condensed or evaporated milk instead of the fresh milk when there is doubt as to the purity of the fresh milk?"

Answer—Evaporated milk may be used in the diet in any way that fresh milk may be used, especially in cooking. However, it does not seem suitable for an exclusive milk diet as one cannot drink enough of it to be valuable.

Blepharitis

Question: K. R. asks—"What causes the eyelashes, eyebrows, etc., to fall out and the eyelids to remain more or less inflamed?"

Answer—There is a disease called blepharitis which affects the glands and follicles of the eyelashes with itching and scaling. The usual causes are: Unhygienic surroundings, acidosis, exposure to dust, gas fumes, lack of sleep, lack of cleanliness of the eyes, nasal affections, and the need of glasses. Of course, there are a number of other diseases which may affect the eyelashes in the manner you describe, but I could not determine this without an examination. Only an examination would tell whether the condition is caused by local disease or some systematic affection, as from the thyroid gland, etc.

Eleven Years of Dust

The sun has beaten down—the falling rain—
Upon their dust;
The rvoing winds have called to them in vain
Through blood and rust:
And all their dreams of life and love and song
Are ghosts today,
Dim ghosts that wander where the years are long,
And time is gray.

Eleven years of dust beyond the fight
So faint and far;
Yes, they have earned their silence in the night
That knows no star;
Blow, bugles, till the earth shall reel and rock
And shake in fear.
Sound, drums, until the mountains feel the shock
They will not hear.

They have not heard the larks that sing above
Their guarding loam;
They have not heard the whispered words of love
That called them home;
They have not heard the winds on twilight's beat,
Lost winds and low,
That stopped to tell them of soft arms and sweet
From long ago.

How many golden dreams, dreams true and bold,
Since they have flown;
And moonlight falling on dark hair or gold,
They might have known;
Red roses in the rain—white dawns that came
From starlight's sweep,
They gave all this for steel and shock and flame,
For night—and sleep.

Eleven years of dust—and that is all
Their glory shows;
A white cross leaning where the gray rains fall,
Or drifting snows;
What can it mean to them—storms that are rife,
Warm winds or cold?
Can dust reach out for dreams or love or life,
For fame or gold?

Can dust see sunsets that are flaming red
As twilights drift?
Can dusk see blue skies shining overhead
As gray fogs lift?
Can dust look into starry eyes again
That glow and shine?
Can dust swing in platoons with marching men
From staff or line?

Blow, bugles, rock the world with crashing blare
While temples sway;
Roll, drums, and shake the hills—they will not care
Deep in their clay;
One with the starless shadows, dreamless, mute,
Part of earth's crust,
Can we not pause one moment to salute
Their valiant dust?

DOPE GIVES AGGIES EDGE

Win Would Give Indians Title Chance

The Wichita Falls Junior college Indians left early Sunday morning for Arlington, Texas, where they will play their last conference game on foreign soil against the North Texas Agricultural college. The Aggies outfit is a rival of long standing and a hard battle is almost certain to result from this meeting. The game is unlike any other which either team has engaged in so far this year in that it will be a morning game, scheduled to start at 10:30 o'clock.

Tribe Anxious to Win

The Indians are particularly anxious to throw the young farmers for a setback. Their conference standing is such at this stage of the season that if they win the remaining games on their schedule they will be in on the running for the conference standing.

However, the Indians enter the game at a considerable disadvantage. The doping, if that means anything, gives the North Texas Aggies an 18 point margin over the Indians. A comparison of the scores show that the North Texas Agricultural college eleven defeated the Gainesville Junior college team to the tune of 18 to 0, while the Wichita Falls boys lost to Gainesville by 7 to 6. Also the Baggettmen were hard put to eke out a scoreless tie with the Paris Dragons, and the Farmers triumphed over the same team 6 to 0.

Aggies Have Been Beat

The Aggies, however, have tasted the dregs of defeat. They lost to a conference eleven last week by allowing the Hillsboro aggregation to run up a 14-0 score upon them. The Indians have not tasted conference defeat but once this season and they have a "chance" to win the conference rag.

Exciting Rivalry

There have been some exciting battles between the two schools and the Armistice day battle will be merely a continuation of the rivalry that was begun on the Spudder gridiron back in 1925. In 1925 the Aggies and the Indians tangled in what is reputed to be the most thrilling and spectacular battle ever seen on a Wichita Falls gridiron. The Indians were celebrating their entrance into the conference and were set on making an impressive showing against the East Texans. The teams fought each other to a standstill in the first half, but in the third quarter and fourth quarter the Aggies chalked up two markers before the Indians knew what was going on. Then in a sensational last minute spurt the Indians themselves scored twice and kicked as many goals and suceeded in nosing out the visiting eleven by the very close margin of 14 to 13.

Though the game is five years in history, the memory of it still lives in the minds of the 1929 edition of the Redskin machine and it is a stimulus for them to keep on trying.

Bus Carries Followers

In addition to the armistice crowd which will see the game between the two elevens at Arlington, the Indians have their own cheering, and pep squad following them A large specially chartered bus left this morning at 5:30, bearing some 30 odd members of the Indian noise makers.

Dallas Bowlers In Match Play Here At Spudder Alleys

The Spudder bowling alleys was the scene of intercity bowling competition on Sunday when two picked teams of Dallas invaded the city to take on the Wichita Falls pin topplers.

In the two three-game series which were scheduled between the four teams, Mrs. Baird's Bakery pin topplers jumped into the high lead in both events. The games were played in rotation and the Wichita Falls bowlers secured for themselves second and third places in the contest. Shepp's Bakery of Dallas stood in fourth and last place.

The special matches between the picked teams of two teams from Dallas, one from Oklahoma City, and one from Wichita Falls was called off at the last minute, on account of the bad road condition which prevented the Oklahomans from arriving here.

The rest of the day was spent in double matches between combined teams of Wichita Falls and Dallas. Some high scores were piled up in these contests and a more than usual amount of entertainment was derived from these "jumped up" matches.

After the day had about closed and the Dallasites were preparing to shake the dust of Wichita Falls from their feet, interest flared up again out of some friendly banter and another set was played. And this set proved to be the best of the entire day.

Texan Mortally Wounded After Wife Is Killed

FORT WORTH, Nov. 10. (AP)—A boy of 8 and a girl of 5 hovered today around a bed in a hospital on which their father, W. F. Keriee, 35, automobile mechanic, lay mortally wounded from the same shotgun with which their mother, Mrs. Frankie Keriee, 29, estranged from her husband, had been shot to death as she begged for her life Saturday night.

No charges have been filed and officers indicated they will await outcome of Keriee's wound.

Rock's Line Aces Bid for Horsemen Fame

They've coined a new one out in South Bend for the benefit of Knute Rockne's crack linemen. They call them "The Five Truck Horsemen of Notre Dame."

By WALTER T. BROWN
Associated Press Feature Service Writer

SOUTH BEND, Ind., Nov. 10.—Knute Rockne's chances for a claim to the national championship largely rests upon the brawny shoulders of five bulky linemen.

These "five horsemen"—truck horsemen—have crushed opposing lines, opening holes through which the flashy backs, Savoldi, Elder, Brill, Mullins, Schwartz and Carideo have whirled to headlines and bold faced type.

Particularly strong is the center of Notre Dame's 1929 line, featuring Tim Moynihan at center and Captain Paul Law and Jack Cannon at guards. Ted Twomey and Art McMannon are the first-string tackles.

Law, with his squat 163 pounds, is a paper-weight compared with Moynihan, 195, Cannon, 193, Twomey, 195, and McMannon, 201.

And particularly fortunate is Rockne this year with two and three capable substitutes for each line position.

The Notre Dame linemen outplayed the powerful forwards of the Navy and Carnegie, and made the first line troops of Indiana, Wisconsin and George Tech look helpless.

Rockne has had plunging and shifting backs every year of the 13 he has coached Notre Dame, but never before has he had such an array of hard charging linemen. The famous "four horsemen" galloped through a 10-game schedule undefeated behind a line that was outplayed in several games. That versatile quartet of backs, however, outscored the opposition.

Two bulky lines, the Army's on Nov. 30, and Southern California on Nov. 16, remain to test Rock's rocks. Northwestern on Nov. 23 may give the forwards a battle. In 1924 the Northwestern linesmen decisively outcharged Notre Dame in the first half, but the "horsemen" pulled the game out in the last half.

The conviction is growing here that Rockne has the best team of his coaching career—one that he may not see at its best.

Horned Frogs Take Leadership In Southwest Conference Title Race

By GAYLE TALBOT JR.
Associated Press Sports Editor

DALLAS, Nov. 10.—Events of the week-end left the Southwest conference in a serious muddle, with three teams a step behind Texas Christian university, the pace-maker.

The Horned Frogs took undisputed possession of the leadership by humbling the Rice Institute Owls, 24 to 0, on a muddy gridiron at Fort Worth. It was the seventh consecutive victory for the Frogs this season and left them the only undefeated, untied outfit in the Southwest.

Baylor, Texas university and Southern Methodist managed to wedge themselves into a three-cornered tie for the runner-up position. The Bears and Longhorns battled to a scoreless deadlock at Austin, while the Mustangs were handing the Aggies their third consecutive conference setback, 12 to 7, at College Station.

Muddy Fields Hinder

It was a muddy week-end. Games expected to develop into free scoring affairs between brilliant offensive units became just football games. The big idea was to hold onto the ball and avoid fumbles in the critical territory.

The Arkansas Razorbacks were the one exception. They defied the elements to run up a 52 to 7 count on the Central Oklahoma Teachers. It was the only game of the week that didn't count in the standing.

Of the three conference conflicts, the gruelling, muddy fray at Austin between the Longhorns and Bears was of major importance. They were evenly matched.

Ponies Still in Race

Southern Methodist's victory over the Aggies proved that the Mustangs still are in the race. Weldon Mason, Pony halfback, again supplied the spark that fired the Methodist machine. His 35-yard run for a touchdown after receiving a lateral pass provided the points that decided the issue.

Games scheduled next Saturday should clear up the situation.

The Texas Longhorns, who have wrested two opponents to a draw on consecutive week-ends, will face the rampaging Texas Christian university next Saturday at Austin. Their tilt will be matched in importance by the scrap between Baylor and Southern Methodist university at Dallas.

Frogs' Slate Clean

As the Horned Frogs are the one outfit with a perfect record, their contest with the Steers probably will outweight the Mustang-Bear clash in the minds of conference fans. A victory for the Frogs would establish them overwhelming favorites to capture their first championship.

The Aggies, hopelessly behind, will be favored to mark up their first conference triumph at the expense of the Rice Owls, whom they play at Houston. There is bound to be some team in the circuit whom the Farmers can take, and the Owls seem to be elected.

Arkansas will have a tough opponent in the Centenary Gentlemen. They play at Fayetteville.

Mexican Senator Would Eliminate Some Elections

MEXICO CITY, Nov. 10. (AP)—A bill to amend the constitution so that a provisional president would serve for the full remainder of the term of the president he succeeded has been presented in the chamber of deputies by Deputy Moises A. Calderon of Chiapas.

The author explained to the chamber that election of a new constitutional president to take the place of one who has "disappeared" such as in the present case, subjects the country unnecessarily to repetition of the unsettled conditions that go with an election.

Under Calderon's plan congress immediately would appoint a provisional president to serve out the term of a president who has "disappeared." In case congress were not in session at the time of the disappearance, the permanent congressional commission would appoint a president and interim and call congress into special session to elect a provisional president

MILLER LEADS

Razorback Ball Toter Ousts Baylor Back to Take Lead

DALLAS, Nov. 10. (AP)—Dandy Dick Miller, Arkansas' ace scorer made four touchdowns yesterday in his team's 52 to 7 rout of Oklahoma Teachers and wrested the Southwest conference scoring lead from McElreath of Baylor, whose team was held to a coreless tie by Texas. McElreath and his team mate Wilson, however, remained near the top, in second and third positions respectively in spite of the fact that the day was wasted as far as improving their totals was concerned.

Miller has 11 touchdowns, McElreath nine touchdowns and nine points after touchdown and Wilson 10 touchdowns and one conversion. To date no conference point maker has scored a field goal.

The 10 leaders follow:

Boxing Shows At Chicago and N. Y.

NEW YORK, Nov. 10. (AP)—There's a dull boxing week in prospect for followers of the cauliflowers with only the weekly shows at Madison Square garden and the Chicago coliseum to save it from being a total loss.

At the garden on Friday night, Maxie Rosenbloom, a pugilistic clown, meets James J. Braddock of Jersey City in a 10 rounder. In view of Braddock's poor showing against the retired light heavyweight champion, Tommy Loughran, it is hard to see how he can hope to win over as experienced a performer as Rosenbloom.

Young Zazzarino, junior lightweight from Jersey City, comes back to metropolitan rings on the same program in the 10 round semi-final against Dominick Petrone of Harlem.

Dempsey Presents Show

At the Chicago stadium Friday night, Jack Dempsey will present his third show with Bud Taylor, Terre Haute featherweight, meeting Sanitago Zorilla of Panama in the windup of 10 rounds. In another 10, My Sullivan, St. Paul welterweight contender takes on Vince Dundee of Baltimore.

Benny Bass, Philadelphia junior lightweight, meets Eddie Reed of New York in the feature 10 round bout at the Philadelphia arena tomorrow night.

Sport Loose Ends

By W. G. CHAMBLESS

The Texas university Longhorns are disappointing followers over the state no little here of late. The Longhorns look as if they had about petered out of their early season strength. In the last two starts against the Mustangs and the Bears, respectively, Coach Clyde Littlefield's team has failed to flash that championship form with which they had started off in the early season. They seem to have lost their punch.

Against S. M. U. Saturday a week ago the Longhorns had the ball inside the Pony 10 and 15 yard line no less than eight different times and at this critical stage they simply let their tails curl up and yielded the ball to the Morrison men.

Saturday against the Baylor Bears they did the same thing and again emerged from the game with a scoreless tie. They were roundly outplayed by the Bears during most of what turned out to be a rather drab contest. Time and again the state university boys were held for downs and had to kick. This is emphatically unchampion-like in the Longhorns. They will have to beat that if they expect to repeat their last year performance.

If the Longhorns did not look impressive against the Bears, neither did the Bears look impressive against the Longhorns. Though the Baylorites did show some improvement over their past performance when they bowed to the Centenary Gentlemen and finally out-toughed the Razorbacks by 31 to 20. Albeit we do not like either team to win the conference title. They simply do not merit such a high and mighty name unless they do a powerful lot of picking from here on out.

Glancing over the records of the Mustangs we do not find anything to brag about. True enough the Ponies have a good defensive eleven but their offense attack lacks drive and punch. They are not a scoring machine. To our way of thinking this deficiency is a weakness not associated with a real championship outfit. Most fans think of a championship eleven as one that is an aggressive, scoring machine, one with power, snap and punch. The Mustangs certainly have not displayed these qualities in an impressive way.

Continuing our quest for a championship eleven our glance is attracted to the performance of the T. C. U. Horned Frogs. Now there is a team for you. Everybody's talking about that team. The Frogs have a well balanced team, the offense and the defense seem to co-ordinate with just the precision that makes them a dangerous football team. The powerful T. C. U. line has demonstrated its ability to stiffen and hold in a crisis against the onslaughts of Daniel Baker, Simmons, Texas Tech, North Texas Teachers without permitting a touchdown to any of them, while their backs have rolled up big scores during the games. Only the Texas Aggies have enjoyed the distinction of crossing the Frogs' line this season.

The Frogs are undoubtedly a potent football unit on land and in the air, and gave further demonstration of their versatility Saturday when they took to the mud and water and whipped the Rice Owls in a thoroughly convincing manner.

Making no alibis about it, we felt a tremor of fear for the Pack Saturday out there in that mud battling the Plainview Bulldogs. To put it mildly, they didn't look so hot. At first when the Bulldogs got over for the touchdown, we thought nothing of it but only of how many the Coyotes would roll up just to show up the Bulldogs in revenge. Then as the half wore on and still the Pack had not "chosen" to start their scoring we began to feel the pangs of uneasiness. As the half ended we were frankly amazed. Then the third quarter began and took on the aspects of age and our uneasiness and amazement was turned to gradual chagrin when the Pack finally summoned up enough reserve punch to take the thing on over the goal.

The quarter ended and left us wondering what it was all about. The Pack looked like the boxer who left his punch in the gym. The fourth quarter opened up and then in the stretch the Holtonites seemed to have found their scoring power. Uncorking a relentless driving attack, they marched for three straight markers and partially acquitted themselves of the worst beginning we have yet seen them in. It was a great relief when the third and the fourth touchdowns were reeled off and the score mounted to substantial, though not impressive proportions. The game had been literally snatched from the jaws of the Bulldogs and the reputation of the Coyotes partially, if not wholly, saved from a most disastrous loss. We say disastrous, for a loss at this time would have been a disaster to the Coyote hopes for a runner-up place to the Golden Sandstorm for district honors.

WEST ELEVENS BEAT OFF EAST

Field of Major Teams Is Narrowed Down

By ALAN J. GOULD
Associated Press Sports Editor

EN ROUTE WITH ARMY football team to West Point, N. Y., Nov. 10.—The beaten football forces of the East staged strategic retreats from the sanguinary battlegrounds of the Middle West after a day of gridiron strife featured from coast to coast of a succession of astonishing "breaks" and amazing comebacks.

More than an ordinary share of these thrilling episodes were witnessed by upward of 150,000 spectators as the Army and Harvard fell before Illinois and Michigan in two of the most colorful intersectional games of the season. These two triumphs, coming after Wisconsin had beaten Colgate early in the campaign, and after Chicago had bowled over Princeton, make it a big year for the Big Ten, with Notre Dame and the University of Detroit also crashing through with major contributions to the prestige of the middle western plains.

Contenders Fall

The returns today, as they drifted in to be scanned by the war correspondents along the route, indicated a reduction in the group of major championship contenders. For the most part, however, the title affairs are still far from decided in six of the seven main sectors of conflict, with only about three weeks more of real battle left. Alone among the big teams, Ike Armstrong's University of Utah eleven appears to have nothing much to worry about, having all but clinched the Rocky Mountain conference crown for the third time in four years by beating Colorado college and Dutch Clark, 12 to 3, yesterday.

Notre Dame, Pitt on Top

Nothing in the latest dispatches removed the very distinct impression that Notre Dame and Pittsburgh rank at the very top of the select list of national championship contenders. It took smart work by the Hoosier regulars in the last period to whip Drake, 19 to 7, while Pitt's steam roller flattened Washington and Jefferson, 21 to 0, to make it seven in a row for the partners. These two crack outfits have no let-up in sight, for Notre Dame takes on Southern California at Chicago next Saturday while Pittsburgh meets its home-town foe, Carnegie.

Purdue Pace-setters

Purdue's Boilermakers, pace-setting along now in the Big Ten, concedes nothing to any outfit in the race for national honors. The contending picture also includes Tennessee and Tulane, Utah and Texas Christian, among the teams neither beaten nor tied, with Cornell, California and Detroit and also among the leaders.

Nowhere was the battle any hotter yesterday than in the Middle West where Glasgow and Pape staged a big home-coming party at the expense of Minnesota, while Purdue, Michigan and Illinois enjoyed themselves at the expense of intersectional rivals, the net result was to leave Purdue the only conference team neither beaten nor tied. Iowa removed Minnesota, 9 to 7, and Northwestern overcame Ohio State, 18 to 6, while Purdue was trimming Mississippi, 27 to 7.

More Than She Wants

She: I will marry only a man whose income has at least five noughts.

He: I am your man—mine is all noughts.—Der Lustige Sachse, Leipzig.

The word "SPIT" stops you!....

and so should the danger of spit-tipped cigars. Beware... smoke Cremo—it's certified!

The law is clear on the matter of spitting... every day offenders are brought to court and fined for this offense against public health... yet how often have we seen filthy cigar shops where the man in the window rolls the leaves with dirty fingers... and spits on the ends.

Every tobacco leaf entering the clean, sunny Certified Cremo factories is scientifically treated by United States Government approved methods. And its purity is safeguarded along every step of the way by amazing inventions that foil, wrap and tip the cigars without the danger of spit. Over $7,000,000 was spent in perfecting the method of manufacture used by Certified Cremo.

A suggestion, deliberately made with confidence to smokers of imported cigars: Try a Certified Cremo—made of the choicest, tenderest leaves that the crop affords, all ripe and mellow. Each leaf goes through a slow, expensive maturing process that develops the fullest flavor and mildness. You never realized how good Certified Cremo is—don't let its 5-cent price stand in your way. Your physician will recommend a mild cigar in place of heavy, expensive brands. There isn't a bit of scrap in Certified Cremo... not a trace of floor sweepings. All long filler... all fresh, tender leaves... and topped off with the finest imported wrapper! Crush-proof... immaculate... foil-wrapped... Certified Cremo is the kind of cigar the late Vice-President Marshall undoubtedly had in mind when he said: "What this country needs most is a good 5-cent cigar."

Noted pure food expert, long active in crusades for pure foods and sanitary factories.

"Most diseases enter the body through the mouth... but I emphatically say that no smoker of Cremo ever runs this risk. Because the method of manufacture aims to give Cremo the same standard of purity that pasteurization gives to milk."

I certify Cremo sanitary and clean

Banquet for Farmers Planned at Frederick

Special to The Record News.

FREDERICK, Okla., Nov. 10.—So successful have former gatherings of chamber of commerce members and farmer friends proven that it was decided at a recent meeting of the directors of the local commercial body to hold a banquet some time this month when it is expected that every member will attend. An effort will be made to get the largest dining room in the city, probably that at the First Baptist church.

Date of the meeting was left to Luther M. Wagnon, secretary, who will get a suitable speaker. Review of the past year's activities of the body will be given. A set of 12 directors will be elected for next year from a full list of the membership. Each director will be in charge of a different activity.

California is the leading producer of portland cement, the 1927 census of manufactures reports.

NEW FACTS ON PAUL REVERE

History's Hero Was Dentist, Goldsmith, Etc.

NEW YORK, Nov. 10. (UP)—Paul Revere, for a century and a half, has appeared in the public mind as a rather obscure fellow wearing a three-cornered hat, galloping around waking people up in the middle of the night.

He has, in fact, been deplorably overlooked by historians who dote on the economic manifestations of our nation. These historians, who rather scornfully ignore the schoolbook peak-points of American endeavor, such as Revere's ride to glory, Washington's crossing the Delaware and Franklin's eating a bun, may well stare with wonder now at the new picture of Boston Paul.

Revere Good Dentist

For Paul Revere could do, and did, a lot more significant things than strike up sparks from a village street. He could make the finest set of false teeth in New England; he could cast you a cannon or a church bell; his silverware is still much sought after because of its beauty of design; he was an engraver of the nation's currency; he was a goldsmith and a copper roller; he ran a hardware store and could frame pictures in grand style. He drank his rum by the hogshead and leaned toward gin as a Christmas holiday drink.

E. H. R. Revere, of this city, great grandson of the Boston horseman, today gave the United Press access to hitherto unpublished documents concerning his illustrious ancestor. And the true story of Paul Revere is contained in the stacks of letters, bills, receipts, and other papers.

In fact, the Revere tradition is completely upset. The midnight ride of Paul Revere will dwindle into nothing more than a patriotic gesture, and a new figure—Paul Revere, our country first great industrialist whose iron was in every commercial fire—will take its place on the historical horizon.

Versatility Shown

The man's versatility is demonstrated in this announcement, contained among the New York Revere's papers:

"Paul Revere takes this method of returning his most sincere thanks to the gentlemen and ladies who have employed him in the care of their teeth. He would now inform them and all others, who are so unfortunate as to lose their teeth by accident or otherwise, that he still continues the business of a dentist, and flatters himself that from the experience he has had these ten years (in which time he has fixt some hundreds of teeth) that he can fix them as well as any surgeon-dentist who ever came from London. He fixes them in such a manner that they are not only an ornament, but of real use in speaking and eating; he cleanses the teeth and will wait on any gentleman or lady at their lodgings. He may be spoke with at his shop opposite Dr. Clark's at the north end, where the gold and silversmith's business is carried on in all its branches."

Iron Founder, Too

Revere was a pioner in iron foundry work, casting cannons, bells and other ironware.

His introduction of copper rolling into this country resulted in the establishment of Revere Copper and Brass, Inc., which operates a huge plant at Taunton, Mass.

Revere furnished the copper and bronze fittings for the frigate Constitution.

Among the Revere documents is a receipt from Hunt & Boll for a hogshead of rum—119 gallons at 90 cents a gallon. And on Dec. 12, 1787—apparently with the approaching holidays in mind—Longfellow's hero bought and paid for a case of gin.

Denatured Alcohol Danger Lessened

WASHINGTON, Nov. 10. (UP)—Denatured industrial alcohol should present no danger of "poison liquor" deaths during the holidays, Prohibition Commissioner Doran declared today.

Virtually none of this alcohol now gets into bootleg channels, according to Doran. The bootleggers are making their own alcohol, he said.

Doran refused a certificate of safety to the holiday drinker, however, sometimes wood alcohol, a deadly poison, reaches the bootleg market through error, he pointed out. And hasty manufacture makes much of the illicit distilled liquor dangerous, in his view.

LESTER, LONELY ALLOWED PAL

Lubbock Wife Slayer Given Cell Companion

Special to The Record News.

LUBBOCK, Texas, Nov. 10.—"I don't feel right when I am alone," Clay Lester prisoner in the Lubbock county jail whose trial was recently reset for Dec. 2, said today. As a result of his desire for company, Fred Hayworth of Lubbock has been employed to keep him company.

Lester is in jail charged with murder in connection with the fatal shooting of his estranged wife, Oct. 24, two hours after the wife had filed with the Lubbock county attorney complaint against the prisoner charging aggravated assault.

Lester was refused liberty on bond at a habeas corpus hearing when Lubbock newspapers were denied the right to publish testimony. Later a motion for change of venue was denied as was a motion to quash a special venire of 125 men.

The motion for continuance of the trial has been the only favorable action of the court since Lester was lodged in jail Oct. 24.

Maintaining a calm appearance during the court proceedings, Lester seems to be losing confidence, now that the ordeal is set almost a month away. His request for company was one of the first evidences of this losing hold upon his self.

Lester still shows considerable interest in reading newspapers carrying news of his trial.

"I'm as interested in the case as any spectator," he told newspaper reporters today.

'BEST DRESSER' INDIVIDUALIST

Mrs. Reginald Allwyn Fellowes in New York

NEW YORK, Nov. 10. (US)—A swish of green chiffon, a scent of faint perfume and the "best dressed woman in Europe," the Hon. Mrs. Reginald Allwyn Fellowes of London, entered her apartment in the Ritz today.

She wears her honor with grace and her clothes with individuality.

Mrs. Fellowes does not follow "the dictates of fashion," as to clothes and diet. Never mind about style, individuality in dressing is what counts, she claims. And being individual, she dislikes the present mode of the long dress.

The new long dresses?

Mrs. Fellowes delicate eyebrows went up in surprise. She said:

"But they are not new to me. I wore long dresses before this style started. I think they are very attractive for evening, but certainly not for street wear. I should think that women would find the long street dress really dangerous to wear. She can't get into taxis and on to trains.

"Whether or not the long skirt is becoming depends upon the women wearing it. I dress to please myself. I arrange style to suit myself. Skirts depend on the woman's legs. If she has slim legs she can wear a skirt any length. If her legs are fat, I should advise that she wear a full skirt well covering the knee.

"American women have the best figure and the best legs, I think."

Asked to predict the success of the long skirt which has caused so much controversy, Mrs. Fellows said:

"The evening fashions will last, but the long skirt fashion for the day time will not. Paris sets the style for you American women and they are wearing dresses five inches from the knee. A woman must be individual. She must create her own style and study her own needs."

Airport Notes

Two visitors were reported at the Municipal airport Sunday. The first, Arthur Okley, landed about 1:10 o'clock Sunday afternoon in his Buehl sedan from Ardmore. He remained a short while and took off on the return trip after refueling. W. B. Brice of Bowie landed about 2:30 o'clock Sunday afternoon in his Monocoupe en route to Iowa Park. He continued after refueling.

A total of 17 passengers were reported on both the Braniff and Safeway airlines Sunday, according to C. P. Logan, manager of the Municipal port. Passenger service on both lines was suspended Saturday on account of the bad weather over almost the entire Texas-Oklahoma region. Flying activities in Wichita Falls were also at a standstill Saturday.

R. S. Lasage landed at Staley field about 11:15 Sunday morning in his American Eagle from Graham. Mr. Lasage remained in the city on business for about an hour and took off on the return trip about 12:45 o'clock.

Two ships, one a Kinner powered Bird and the other an OX powered Bird, landed at Staley field about 3:30 o'clock Sunday afternoon from Oklahoma City. The Kinner ship was piloted by J. S. Hoffman and OX plane by A. K. Scott, both of Brooklyn, N. Y., who stopped here to refuel while en route to Los Angeles, Calif., on a transcontinental hop. The two pilots are representatives of the Brooklyn firm which manufactures Bird planes. They intended to spend Sunday night in Sweetwater, they said.

Serious Floods Cause Big Losses in England

CARLISLE, England, Nov. 10. (UP)—Serious floods following a week-end of heavy rain caused a great loss of stock to Cumberland farmers today. The main railroad from Carlisle to Penrith was partly inundated, making it necessary to reroute the London Express. A landslide temporarily blocked the Carlisle to Newcastle line.

Waco Woman Says Husband Is Now In Perfect Health

Two Years of Suffering Ended After Everything Else Fails—Orgatone Turns the Trick

Most everybody in Waco is familiar or knows Mr. C. C. Clarkson who drives a truck line between Waco and Austin and resides at 1412 Speight. While talking with the Orgatone representative Mrs. Clarkson made the following statement for her husband:

"My husband suffered terribly from indigestion and constipation, and his stomach was always upset. He did not hardly have any appetite and what he would eat would sour and ferment on his stomach causing belching spells. Gas would form and he would bloat and have pains and cramps in his stomach. He was not getting the proper nourishment from his food and his entire system was in a run-down condition. And he felt tired and worn out a good deal of the time and did not have a good deal of energy.

"I noticed the advertisement in the paper, and suggested that he try a bottle of Orgatone, and he did. He is now on his second bottle and he can eat anything he pleases without any fear of sour stomach, indigestion and those belching spells. The pains and cramps that used to trouble him in his stomach have disappeared. Orgatone has corrected him of the chronic case of constipation and that tired, worn out feeling has left him. He has more pep and looks a lot better. We both think it is a very fine medicine and I am more than glad to give you this endorsement on Orgatone, and my only wish is that it will help some one else out as it has helped my husband."

An outstanding feature of Armistice day celebration from the standpoint of radio programs will be the broadcasting from station 2LO, in England, of the sensational play, "Journey's End."

Written by an English soldier during his convalescence, and representing his recollection of life in a dugout under no-man's land, the play has created a tremendous impression by the startling realism with which it reproduces the horrors of that situation. It will be given through stations WFAA and WBAP Monday morning by NBC chain from England, beginning at 10 o'clock.

Beginning Monday morning, Nov. 11, Rev. L. S. White, pastor of the First Church of Christ, and singers from that church will conduct a radio revival daily from 10 to 11 a. m., from station KGKO, it was announced Sunday.

Reverend White for some time has been conducting a radio Bible class from the local station from 8:30 to 9:30 a. m. each Sunday.

DANIEL TALKS ON ARMISTICE

Kay Bible Class Pays Tribute to Dan Hardy

Using the appropriate subject of "Armistice Day," for his subject, Roy J. Daniel gave the following address to members of the Kay Bible class Sunday morning at the First Methodist church:

Daniel

"Monday is November the eleventh—Armistice day. On that day at 11 o'clock in the morning, 11 years ago the armistice was signed, bringing to a close the world war—the greatest and costliest war of all history. Now my part in the world war was humble, and is not emblazoned on the pages of history. I was a marine. I was not a "horse" marine. I was a doughboy marine—5th regiment of marines, fourth brigade, second division, A. E. F. in France and army of occupation in Germany. General LaJeune of the marine corps once said, "The time will come when the noblest tradition a man will hand down to his children will be to be able to say, 'I was a member of the fourth brigade of the second division of the A. E. F.'" There is a great esprit de corps among the marines, and they sing a song that goes:

"From the Halls of Montesuma, to the shores of Tripoli,
We have fought our country's battles on land and on the sea.—
If the army and the navy ever gaze on Heaven's scenes
They will find the streets are guarded by United States marines."

"During the world war armed forces gathered on every continent and in practically every country on the face of the earth. You recall that the leading nations of Europe were aligned together and against each other in the triple alliance and the triple entente. The triple alliance was composed of these three nations: Germany, Austro-Hungary and Italy. The triple entente was composed of France, England and Russia. Thus lined up they sought by their treaties and alliances to maintain the balance of power. What resulted was a race in competitive armaments on land and sea that made Europe an armed camp and burdened the nations with enormous tax burdens. In 1914 Europe was a great powderhouse which needed only the striking of a match to start the mighty conflagration. The match was struck in the little Balkan country of Serbia. The expanding Austro-Hungarian empire had reached out and annexed Bosnia thereby blocking Serbia from the sea. On one summer day in 1914, while the heir to the Austrian throne and his wife were in Serajevo, a crazed Serbian youth killed them both. Austria made impossible demands upon little Serbia. Then Austria declared war on Serbia. Russia looked upon herself as the big sister of Serbia and sent word to be of good cheer by setting her Cossacks in motion against Austria. Then Germany demanded of France what she intended to do. Receiving no answer Germany declared war on France and set her armies in motion toward Paris by violating Belgian neutrality. Germany demanded of England what she proposed to do hoping she would remain neutral. But the violation of Belgian neutrality drew England in on the side of France, Italy, claiming her alliance with Germany and Austria was one of defense only, went into the war on the side of the allies. Turkey sided with the central powers. For three years the war waged back and forth on two fronts. Germany destroyed the power of Russia and then the German hordes almost overran Paris. Although Germany was winning on the land, the navy of Great Britain drove her from the seas and took her colonial possessions. Then in desperation Germany began her relentless submarine warfare. The United States had maintained neutrality for three years, but when the German submarines began to sink ships upon the high seas, carrying innocent women and children and noncombatants, then the United States went into the war against Germany. Woodrow Wilson said, 'The time has come when America is privileged to spend her manpower and her might on the side of right.' The arrival of fresh American soldiers in France turned the tide. The Germans were repulsed at Chateau-Thierry, Belleau Wood and at the Marne in their last desperate effort to reach Paris. Then the Hindenberg line was formed and abroken. The German high command saw the hand writing on the wall and asked for an armistice. The armistice was signed and it amounted to a complete capitulation of the central powers. The world went wild with joy at the news."

War on War

"I believe that the hope of every American soldier's heart was that the world war would be a war to end all wars. I believe the returned soldiers caught the spirit of their fallen comrades expressed in the the lines:

"Take up our quarrel with the foe.
To you from falling hands we throw the torch,
Be yours to hold it high.
You must keep faith with us who die
Or we shall not sleep tho' poppies blow
In Flanders' Field."

That foe is war. And we must keep faith with our comrades who died by doing all in our power to bring about a lasting peace in the world. It is our duty to establish and maintain in the world a condition of peace so that the children of those who passed on may have a chance. The Kellogg pact, the visit of Prime Minister MacDonald and the coming of naval conference in London show that the leading nations of the world are sincerely seeking a way for the nations of the earth to find a lasting peace. Sherman was right when he said, 'War is hell.' But the burdening of the peoples of the earth with heavy taxes to enable nations to compete in armaments both on land and sea is just about as bad, and utterly foolish and wasteful. Eighty-two cents of every dollar paid in federal taxes in the United States goes to payment of wars past, present or future. All other expenses of federal government are borne by the remaining 18 cents of the tax dollar.

"In the long ago, Isaiah made a prohpecy that the time would come when the nations would beat their swords into plowshares and their spears into pruning hooks. He foresaw the day when the lion and the lamb would lie down together. The word of God will not be mocked, and that happy day will come true. The way for us to get world peace is to think world peace. The greatest problem before the world at the present time for solution is the problem of the abolition of war. Concerted Christian thought and concerted Christian action upon the problem will solve it."

"Paul in his address to the Athenians explained how to bring about a unity of all nations. He found in Athens that the Athenians had erected altars to every God they had heard anything about. And for fear they had left out some God they had erected an altar to "The Unknown God." Paul said that he came to reveal to them the very God whom they ignorantly worshipped. The true and living God made the Heavens and the earth and all that they contain. Paul explained that the true God did not live in a temple made with human hands, and that He had no need of anything that man had to give Him. The true God is a spirit which is ever near us and present with us. Paul said that in the true God we live and breathe and have our being. The acceptance of the true God by all nations will make them all brothers with the same Heavenly Father."

"Now is the proper time to sign an armistice in the conflict between the human heart and the will of God. The armistice 11 years ago brought peace to a war weary world. An armistice in which we surrender the human heart and the human will to God will bring peace and joy to the human soul such as will last, not just for a thousand years, but through all eternity."

Following Mr. Daniel's address, Oral Jones gave a talk in which he eulogized the late Dan Hardy. Resolutions in memory of Mr. Hardy, drawn up by C. H. Clark, were accepted by members of the class.

Attention of veterans who heard the booming of guns die away in France 11 years ago today might be called to the fact that Clive Brook, one of the foremost and most convincing screen actors today served at the front for a considerable period early in the world war. That fact in itself perhaps reveals little of significance, but when the fact that he served with "The Artists Rifles" is added, it has possibilities. Ex-doughboys who get their quota of war atmosphere nowadays through the talking-screen might build some very interesting plans for the future on that bit of information.

In case the governing heads of the world's nations should find it necessary again to hurl millions of young men into a legalized holocaust which later would be recognized as a regrettable mistake, these ex-doughboys may add some new units to the army. In the front-line service the lay-out would be much improved by the presence of the "Jingoist Jabbers," to do all the hand-to-hand fighting with bayonets. Every platoon of infantry might add a squad known as "Lobbyists' Grenades." Certainly a place could be found for the "Pugilists Automatics," to honor a classification so eminently established by the vocal habits of its personnel. For the delicate task of extending the trenches further toward the enemy, the "Ammunition Makers Spades" could render efficient service by virtue of long experience in extending warfare. These merely by way of Armistice day suggestions.

The committee of Harrison Fisher, Neysa McMein and Howard Chandler Christy who first gave recognition to Clara Bow's beauty when she was a high school junior, and Elinor Glyn of "It" fame have a tremendous responsibility to account for some far day. Those of us who didn't know Clara as a sophomore in high school can only surmise that she was a sweet, modest girl, but she had that appearance when first introduced to movieland. But now look what's happened to our little red-haired girl since Elinor Glyn pointed her bothersome finger at Clara and proclaimed to the world: "She has 'It.'" Clara has had to work out her own ideas as to how "It" should be scattered about the world, and to say the least, she isn't neglecting the medium of her motion pictures. "The Saturday Night Kid" is a telling example—in fact, there's little to it except Clara's "telling" that she has "It," and how! Great helpings of "It" served up at every turn.

There are a few moments in "The Saturday Night Kid," when Clara was pushed out of the foreground, that prove quite interesting. The vocal ode to Ginsberg is downright amusing, and the table-talk presents a good ensemble of modern department store slang. Incidentally, unless Clara appears within the next year or so in a production that calls for the use of at least fair English, it may be definitely concluded that water seeks its level.

Two new picture theaters are to be established on the Champs Elysees, Paris, one seating 2,000 and the other seating 1,000 persons.

This Cities Service Investor Had an Unusual Desire

HE came into our office with two sets of Cities Service Preferred Stock Certificates. With a little smile, he said confidentially: "I wish the price of this stock would go down for awhile."

The cashier stared in surprise. Stockholders usually want to see the price go up.

"These 134 shares," he held up the larger bundle, "I have bought through the past seven years and paid for with my own money. These other 23 shares I have received 'free' I call it, through my reinvestment plan. I hold all this stock as a safe investment for the good income which I reinvest. I never expect to sell it so I don't worry about the price; but if the price drops a little, my 'free' shares accumulate faster. My monthly dividends stay the same and I want them to buy more shares for me as fast as possible so when the time comes for me to start taking the dividends in cash, I'll have a good steady income."

This stockholder is a confirmed income-building investor—one of those who profit most through good investments. You, too, can have a constantly growing income through the Cities Service Investment plan.
