Lubbock Woman Thought Fatally Hurt In Car Wreck

Broken Steering Gear Caused Car To Flop In Ditch

Miss Bonnie Barrier Suffers Fractured Skull and Is Accorded Only Slight Chance of Life.

JOSEPHUS THOMPSON SLIGHTLY INJURED

Auburn Roadster Overturned Twice On Slaton Road At Outskirts of City About 9 o'Clock.

Miss Bonnie Barrier, of Oklahoma City, is critically injured at the West Texas hospital, and Josephus Thompson, of New York City, is slightly injured as result of an automobile accident which occurred two miles out on the Slaton road at about 9 o'clock last night.

Physicians accorded Miss Barrier but slight chance to live at a late hour last night. Her skull was fractured above her right ear, and parts of the skull bone lacerated the brain. Her scalp was cut completely across her forehead, and laid open half way across the head.

Mr. Thompson suffered a fractured right rib and an abrasion above the left eye.

Steering Gear Cause.

A broken steering wheel caused the accident, Mr. Thompson said. When the wheel broke the car veered and the fender struck a culvert, overturning the car twice. Mr. Thompson said that the steering wheel had broken on two previous occasions without serious accident. The car, an Auburn roadster, was badly damaged, the top being torn completely off, and the fenders and body bent.

Mr. Thompson and Miss Barrier were on their way to Slaton to join friends when the accident happened.

Miss Barrier had been in Lubbock only a short time, and had no relatives here. Efforts were being made at an early hour this morning to locate her mother, believed

Little Coasta Rica Gives Tumultous Greeting

SAN JOSE, Costa Rica, Jan. 7. (AP)—Little Costa Rica today gave Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh one of the most tumultous welcomes of the American good-will flier's Contral American tour.

So eager was the crowd to reach the flier when he landed that Colonel Lindbergh was forced to take the air again three times after landing on the field and it was not until 2:18 p. m., central standard time, that the Spirit of St. Louis came to rest on the sixth lap of the Central American tour.

Before coming to earth, the American aviator flew over the volcano Poas, about fifteen miles from the city.

County Ginnings Near 40,000 Bale Mark, Week-End

Spurt In Cotton Harvest Is Noticeable Following Holidays; 39,342 Count Tabulation Shows.

Farmers over Lubbock county apparently have resumed the cotton harvest in real earnest following a letup during the holidays, and the fleecy staple flowed into all gins in the county during the past week in heavy volume considering lateness of the season for harvest, it was revealed from weekly tabulation of reports from correspondents Saturday night, which showed a total of 39,342 bales for the season.

Every gin in the county showed an appreciable increase over last week's total, ranging from around two score bales into the hundreds. An increase of 1500 bales for the county is shown by the tabulation, or a general average of nearly 50 bales per gin of the 31 in the county.

One estimate, in addition to two rural gins at County Line and New Hope is made, however, as no report of actual count was received from Slaton. This city's

Fourteen Drown In London When River Overflows

High Tides Driven By Gale Swell Thames Into Overflow In Capital Of England.

FOURTEEN DROWNED, MANY THREATENED

Disaster Is Worst of Kind In History of City; Hundreds of Dwellings Are Flooded.

(By Associated Press)

LONDON, Jan. 7. (AP)—High tides driven by a violent gale from the North sea met the flood waters of the upper Thames valley in London early today and wrought the city's worst flood disaster in living memory. Crashing through the protecting wall in two places and overflowing its banks at a number of low spots, the river swept into hundreds of dwellings and drowned fourteen persons, and threatened the lives of thousands.

Tonight police and residents along the swollen Thames watched and guarded against a reccurrance of the destructive overflow, which the authorities assert will remain a threat yet for several days. The subsidence of the gale, however, and the return of the high tide this afternoon without a repetition of the disaster, leads to the belief that such recurrence is hardly likely.

While relief organizations are caring for hundreds of destitute and homeless, and the police are clearing away the wreckage of the flood, no authorative estimate as to property damage has been made, although this undoubtedly will reach staggering figures.

Probably the outstanding loss oc-

Other Prisoners Threaten Slayer

Wave of Feeling Against Hickman Causes Jailer To Strengthen Guard Around Cell.

(By Associated Press)

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 7.—A wave of feeling against William E. Hickman among prisoners in the county jail prompted jailers today to keep the confessed slayer of Marian Parker constantly behind barred cell doors.

The mutterings reached a climax this morning when a photograph of Hickman was suspended from the accused youth's cell door by a string. The head of the photograph had been cut around and a stout cord tied about the neck with a hangman's knot.

Jailers did not attempt to conceal their apprehension for Hickman's safety and plans were in consideration for placing heavier guards about his cell. Prisoners in tank 16, near the tier where Hickman is confined, were responsible for the "hanging" of the photograph.

Defense preparations for Hickman's sanity trial January 25 were at a standstill locally today while Jerome Walsh, chief of counsel, was enruote to the middlewest to obtain depositions in support of Hickman's plea that he was insane at the time of the kidnaping and murder.

"Jelly Bean Bandit" Held for Robbing Wildorado Bank, Changes His Story

Makes New Confessions to Officers at Baird, Saying He Gave False Information In First Statement; Hunt For Other Outlaw Proceeds Unabated

(By Associated Press)

BAIRD, Tex., Jan. 7.—The 17-year-old "jelly bean bandit" arrested at Cross Plains Friday afternoon on suspicion and later connected with the robbery Thursday of the Wildorado State bank, this afternoon in his cell in the Callahan county jail, broke down in the face of persistent questioning from a deputy sheriff and newspaperman and, in tears, changed the statement he made late the previous night insofar as his own identity was concerned.

However, the lad stuck steadfastly to his first narration of the incidents that occurred during actual robbery of the bank.

Meanwhile Callahan and Coleman county officers were beating the brush south and west of Cross Plains in search of the second man involved in the Wildorado robbery. Reports gathered during the day indicated the older man had left the automobile in which he escaped from Cross Plains when his companion was arrested by City Marshal Hamilton. One report was that he had ridden into Coleman late Friday in a laundry truck, riding a motor bus out of Coleman Saturday morning until about five miles from Cross Plains, where the driver let him out.

Additional News Service Secured By Local Papers

Avalanche-Journal Offices Equipped with Automatic Telegraphic Printers; To Furnish More News.

With two automatice printer telegraph machines installed in its editorial offices, scheduled to be placed into operation tomorrow moring, the Morning Avalanche and the Daily Journal announce an increased offering of state, national and world news for "The Newspapers The South Plains Depend Upon."

For by virtue of the speed of these automatic printer machines and through an addition of four hours telegraphic news service by the Associated Press every day, about twice as many news items will be received by the Avalanche and the Journal than have been received per day heretofore.

Telegraphers Eliminated

Instead of the now obsolete method of sending telegraphic news into newspaper offices through a man or woman telegrapher who operates a typewriter, the machines turn out the news, written as if by a typist in a purely automatic fashion thus eliminating the human telegrapher and serving the purpose in a much more efficient and rapid manner.

The latest invention for rapid communication is the automatic printing telegraph machine, which was first used by the Associated Press for the transmission of news.

It has a carrying capacity of 2,400 words an hour and will deliver to member newspapers the greatest volume of state, country and world

INJURED MEN BETTER PHYSICIAN REPORTS

Grand Jury Which Opens On February 13 May Take Part In Investigation, Is Belief Expressed.

When the regularly impaneled Lubbock county grand jury goes into session at the opening of the next term of the 72nd Judicial court, Sheriff H. L. "Bud" Johnston, and his chief deputy, Vernice L. Ford, will invite a complete, official investigation of last Thursday night's shooting when the officers surprised a party of three men near a liquor cache in the southeastern part of the city.

That was the statement issued by Sheriff Johnston last night and marked a new, yet not unexpected angle of the trouble which ended in the death of Bill Richardson, and the wounding of R. B. "Blackie" Lester and Byron Lewis.

Sheriff Makes Statement.

In speaking of the investigation, Sheriff Johnston told the Avalanche-Journal that the trouble occurred only because he was forced to defend himself while upholding the laws of the state of Texas and it was for that reason that he invited a complete probe by constituted authority.

Strike Creates Anxiety at Managua

MANAGUA, Nicaragua, Jan. 7 (AP) The attention of American marines, in the conflict with the rebel general, Augustino Sandino, today was turned to a strike at the port of Corinto, just as the first American wounded arrived after a clash with the rebel forces in the department of Nueva Segovia.

The situation in Corinto had become so serious that Col. Louis Mason Gulick, commander of the American marine forces in Nicaragua, felt it necessary to leave today by airplane for the port.

At Corinto a strike of stevedores, attributed to sympathy with General Sandino, has caused general anxiety since nearly 65 percent of Nicaragua's foreign commerce passes through the port.

TRIAL STARTS

Weave Web of Circumstantial Evidence

GALVESTON, Jan. 7. (AP)—State's attorneys Saturday began weaving a net of circumstantial evidence tending to show that W. S. "Shilo" Scrivener, on trial for robbery by assault, took part in the holdup and robbery of the First National bank of Texas City, Nov. 1.

Witnesses in the first day of testimony declared that Scrivener and a companion had been seen loitering around the bank for several days before the robbery. Other testimony described the actual robbery, in which Miss Elizabeth Lege and Chester M. Griffin, employees of the bank, were forced into the vault while two men scooped up about $6,000 and escaped.

Illinois Senator-Elect Fires Back By Refusing to Submit to Committee

Frank L. Smith Declares He Will Answer All Charges After He Is Seated, Not Until Then; Special Committee Due to Make Report On Matter Monday

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON, Jan. 7.—Denied the oath of office by the senate because of his primary campaign expenditures, Frank L. Smith of Illinois fired back today by refusing to submit himself to the jurisdiction of the special campaign funds committee.

His voice vibrating with emotion, the senator-elect told the committee he must insist first upon "the sovereign rights" of his state to have seated in the senate the "candidate of her choice."

"When that right is granted," he said, "then I shall freely, gladly and unafraid, meet any and all charges respecting my moral or other fitness to continue a member of this distinguished body."

With this declaration by Smith, Senator Reed, democrat, Missouri, the chairman, announced that the committee, which in 1926 inquired exhaustedly into Smith's primary campaign, would make a report to the senate when it reconvenes Monday.

This report is expected to consist statements made by the senator-elect and Attorney General Oscar E. Carstrom of Illinois and John Daily, chairman of the special committee of the Illinois legislature appointed to urge that the senate seat Smith.

Several courses of action are open to the senate. In denying Smith the oath of office last month, 53 to 28 and referring his case to the special committee, it granted him the privilege on the floor and it

Tech Cagers Roll Up 51-23 Victory Over Gassers

Three Tournaments to Clear Way for County Basketball Championship

Breaks Scoring Record For Court Team Sporting Spangles of Black And Scarlet; Hemphill High Score

Much Improved Offense and Sterling Man-for-Man Defense Is Boasted by Tech Combination.

Coach Victor Payne's Scarlet and Black Matadors hit up an offensive stride last evening that excelled the scorings made by the Tech teams in the two previous seasons when this machine rung up a score of 51 to 23 against the Amarillo Gassers here in the last game of the two-game schedule. Payne got his entire squad into action and every member was given a chance to display his wares for the handler. Again the Matadors put up a stubborn defense gainst the Gassers and the visitors were forced to take long range shots when the chance for a basket presented itself.

Hemphill is High

Kennith 'Andy' Hemphill, rangy pivot man of Payne's cagers, led the floor last evening by scoring eight field goals, a total of 16 points of the teams total count. Hunter, leading offensive man of the Friday evening exhibition, was runner up in the scoring feature with a total of 8 points for his quintet. Heater, guard for the Gassers, led his club for their scoring with a total of 5 points.

The Matadors looked better last evening than they have ever shown up before. Coach Payne has worked a smooth passing machine into the squadron and even though many tosses were missed for the basket the flaming cagers are carrying on a much improved offensive and with the man-for-man defense, which Payne has instructed his cagers to use, Texas Tech basketball strength is considerable stronger. With more than a week before the next game, which is with the West Texas State Teachers, on Monday and Tuesday, January 16 and 17, Coach Payne hopes to have his basketeers hitting the basket with more accuracy before tangling with Sam Burton's dreaded cagers.

Rickard Believes Two Ring Champs To Be Discarded

Mandell And Walker Are To Lose Crowns In '28 Is Belief Of Impressario Of Fistiana

NEW YORK, Jan. 7—While Jack Dempsey is the particular pet of his professional fancy, Tex Rickard apprarently thinks rather well of the chances of Gene Tunney to remain in possession of the heavyweight championship for at least another summer.

zIn expressing his opinion about the champions that would be decapitated during 1928 he did not make any mention of the heavyweight title and Mickey Walker to be defeated in the middleweight class.

The New York promoter hasn't paid much attention to the lightweight class, claiming that Mandell and the leading contenders want more money than he can afford to pay them.

Since Walker has been with Jack Kearns, Rickard hasn't given him notice, but if Walker would fight for him he wouldn't let any personal differences interfere with the making of a little money. Kearns, however, refuses to let Walker fight for the Garden corporation.

Billy Wallace is highly regarded by Rickard as a prospective champion in the lightweight class and Jack McVey and George Courtney are his favorites in the middleweight division.

With another heavyweight championship in the making Rickard will not have much time for the little fellows. He admits his intention to comply with the request of Tunney for two contests this summer and if he could find the means of getting Dempsey in one of them the venture would be at least a financial success, although Tunney insists that he can draw the crowd against any opponent.

Since he got into the big championship money Tunney insists that Dempsey's drawing power always has been overestimated and that a heavyweight championship bout always will draw a big crowd regardless of the contestants.

Championship Pace Tells Among Contenders For $10,000 Prizes In Los Angeles Tourney.

WILSHIRE COUNTRY CLUB, LOS ANGELES, Jan. 7. (AP)—A steady, unfaltering championship pace began to tell today in the second round of the $10,000 Los Angeles open as the "big timers" of golf grouped near the top and the lesser lights scattered out over a scoring trail that reached as high as 174 for the first half of the 72-hole event.

Cooper, 1926 winner of this event, jumped into the lead with 142 by his stunning round.

What Salary Did Gehrig Get? It's Sure To Be a Nice Fat, Juicy One

NEW YORK, Jan. 7.—As the time approached last winter to sign Babe Ruth to a new contract, Colonel Jake Ruppert, the dapper and big dough owner of the New York Yankees, was in a chronic condition of nervous sweats.

In the earlier days, the process of getting the Babe's nifty signature on a contract was a rather simple process. The Babe always needed dough and any sum that looked big enough to keep the sheriff and the bookies off his heels was all right by him. Also, in those merry days, the Babe handled his own business affairs and it is a matter of record that he was a poor business man and a terrible handler of his affairs.

Then the Babe took unto himself a manager, a hustling young man who had made out of the Baltimore orphan boy one of the ranking giants of sport literature—Christy Walsh.

The Babe's manager gave the Babe an idea of how much money the colonel had, how valuable he was to the Yanks and to the American League and painted for him the value of getting while the getting is good.

The result was that the Babe walked into Ruppert's office, discussed the weather and the prospects of beer coming back and walked out with a contract that called for $210,000 for three years' work.

The good colonel came out of his sweat with a smile when the Babe crashed through to a new home-run record and helped the Yanks make a new record in winning the American League pennant and the world series.

Without the slightest warning, another sweat descended upon the good colonel. He knew he had a roly-poly German playing first base by the name of Lou Gehrig, but Gehrig was just one of the fellows on the payroll. He didn't cost the Yanks anything when they got him from Columbia University and his $7000 a year was just an item on the payroll.

But suddenly Der Gehrig became the talk of the year. He started smacking home runs, triplets, doubles and singles all over the American League map and he set out in a spirited battle with the Babe for home-run honors. He also did himself well picking up grounders and catching balls at first base.

The duel between Ruth and Gehrig was the outstanding feature of the 1927 season and it put ideas into the head of Der Louie about dough. The Babe went so far as to tell him, like an old fraternity brother, that he was in the big dough and to put the arm heavily on Der Colonel.

It so happens—more sweats for Der Colonel—that Der Gehrig also is managed by Mr. Christy Walsh and his manager is versed by experience in the appraisement of baseball values.

Gehrig visited the office of Der Colonel the other day and signed a three year contract but just how much money he put his name on the dotted line for has not been—and probably will not be—announced.

But there is one sure thing—and that is that with the aid of the Bouncing Bambino and Manager Walsh the heavy hitter probably connected with Der Colonel's bankroll for a long, hard smash.

That's the Way Phil Ball Of Cage League Feels

NEW YORK, Jan. 7.—The Phil Ball of the pro basketball league is Frank Morganweck, manager of the Fort Wayne, Ind., Indians.

Morganweck will trade or sell any cage player on his team. That includes his two stars, Chadwick and Borgeman.

His team has been playing about .500 in the pro contests.

Nulton, superintendent of the naval academy, upon telephoned instructions of Admiral Nulton after he had conferred in Washington with Maj. Gen. Edwin B. INFANT SANS BRAIN CELLS LEFT TO DIE

CHICAGO.—Baby Cullen is dead. This by agreement of its parents and the physician in charge.

An operation might have saved the infant, but it was decided it would be more humane to permit it to die.

NO MORE BOLOGNA IN THIS LOCK-UP

LOCKPORT, N. Y.—Niagara county jail has seen the last of bologna. At least as long as Sheriff James A. Campbell is on the job. The first official act of the new sheriff was to strike bologna off the jail menu.

Sheriff Campbell is also thinking about installing a civilian chef. Unwilling guests of the jail now act in that capacity and it isn't very often that a good culinary artist is "in" long enough to be of any value.

Arbus, a plant growing wild in Cuba and India, is watched for weather forecasts, as its leaves are very sensitive to changes in temperature and humidity.

Yanks Look Good For Future Play

Purchase of Reese and His Side-Kick, Lary, Adds to Chance American Loop Champs Years to Come.

(By NEA Service)

NEW YORK, Jan. 7.—American League owners and managers outside of New York get no thrill when they ponder over the strength of the champion Yankees and consider their chances of beating the great team that Miller Huggins has organized.

The Yanks look like a cinch to repeat in 1928 and they may hold together for several more years. The Yankee owners admit that they own 120 ball players and have strings on perhaps 80 more.

It is the shrewd policy of Huggins to prepare for want in times of plenty that has made the Yankees the outstanding organization in the American league.

Colonel Ruppert, owner of the club, recently paid $125,000 to the Oakland Pacific Coast league club for Lyn Lary and Jimmy Reese, who are said to be the flashiest second base combination in baseball.

With Tony Lazzeri and Mark Koenig doing very well at second base and short, Huggins was asked recently why he wanted to spend $125,000 for two extra players.

"They will not be delivered until 1929 and you can never tell what will happen to even a star ball player in that length of time. If anything happens to Lazzeri or Koenig we'll have a good player to use in their place," Huggins said.

Lubbock, Slaton, and Idalou Placed In One Division, and Two Others To Care for Other Schools Over County

District Meet Will Be H[eld] In Lubbock February [24] and 25, Is Announcement Made Yesterday.

The basketball championship Lubbock county will be determin[ed] by three tournaments to be play[ed] prior to the week of the distri[ct] meet, which will be held in Lubbock on Friday and Saturday, February 24 and 25. Three divisions were made in the county: namely A, B and C. Lubbock, Slaton and Idalou constitute the class A div[ision]; Monroe, Becton, Canyon, Acuff, Shellowater and County Line are listed in class B, and all other schools of the county are in the class C group.

By a vote of the coaches the class C schools will play their tournament in Idalou on Friday and Saturday, February 3 and 4, under the direction of the Idalou high school authorities. The winner of this division will enter in the tournament of class B schools a week later.

"B" Tourney Here

On February 10 and 11 in Lubbock, and under the direction of the Lubbock high school athletic association, the class B tournament will be played. And on the following week the winner of the class B group will enter into the class A meet, which terminates the county championship race.

The Lubbock Westerners, Slaton Tigers, Idalou Wildcats, and champions of the class B tourney will meet in the Texas Tech assembly hall on February 17 and 18 to decide the county laurels.

"Round Robin" Method

All tournaments will be played by the round robin method, that is every team of each division meet every other team of each division and the team with highest percent will be awarded the title. Awards, such as loving cups and medals will be given to the winners of each group, according to Henry E. Frnka, athletic chairman of the county interscholastic executive board.

Since there are not nearly as many girl basketball teams in this county as boys, by a vote of the coaches the girls' championship tournament will be held at the same time the boys' title is decided, Feb. 17 and 18. As in boys, awards will be made to the winner of the girls' division.

Must File Eligibility Lists

In order to have a complete check on every team in the county the coaches must file their eligibility list with Henry E. Frnka one week prior to their tournament. In case a coach does not comply with this ruling his team will be excluded from the tourney.

The following coaches represented their school in the meeting: Odus Mitchell, Slaton; Del Morgan, Lubbock; E. P. Lewis, Becton; R. S. Boker, Estacado; R. E. Lee, Shallowater; Glenn Burgess, Canyon; J. W. Turner, McClung; H. E. Griffith, Woodrow; F. W. Clark, Acuff; H. D. Bentley, Hardy; Jesse B. Leverett, Liberty; L. F. Sweeney, Idalou; Floyd Blankenship, Monroe; and O. C. Horne, Grovesville.

Thirty-five men have already enrolled in the training program being sponsored by the South Plains area council of the Boy Scouts of America, according to announcement made yesterday from scout headquarters.

The program is for the purpose of training scoutmasters, assistant scoutmasters, troop committeemen and council members, and anyone else interested in boys' work.

A central course will be held at Lubbock and a series of shorter courses over this scout area. The location of the short courses will be determined by the number of men available for training, and the facility with which local committees take up the training work.

The central course opens Tuesday night at the First Presbyterian church, 1314 Avenue N, beginning at 7 p. m.

An outstanding part of the program will be scout exhibits, which will be in charge of K. N. Clapp, assistant scoutmaster. The exhibits are to be used to demonstrate camping, outdoor cooking, making of archery tackle and scout handicraft.

Endorsement of the course has been given by the Kiwanis club, Rotary club, Ministerial association and American Legion. Churches are planning to have representatives recruiting today.

The course deals with the essentials of an adequate diet and the nutritive properties of ordinary food materials.

IMMIGRATION BAN

Blanton Would Permit Only Seasonal Labor

WASHINGTON, Jan. 7. (AP)—A prohibition for several years against all immigration except seasonal labor from Canada and Mexico and a material strengthening of existing immigration laws including certain provisions of the LaFollette seaman act was proposed today in a bill by Representative Blanton, democrat, Texas.

Chairman Johnson, of the House immigration commission, announced he would seek to increase by $500,000 the $325,000 appropriation carried in the labor department supply bill for deportation of aliens during the fiscal year beginning next July.

FRENCH NOTE PLEASES

More Hope Seen for New Peace Pact

WASHINGTON, Jan. 7. (AP)—New life was given Franco-American treaty negotiations today by a new French note presented to the state department in reply to Secretary Kellogg's proposals for an arbitration pact between the two countries.

The tone of the note, which at first glance appeared to administration officials as generally satisfactory, did much to relieve the depression caused by yesterday's communication from Paris on the other treaty under discussion with France.

Satisfaction was expressed by official here that although no immediate agreement could be seen the Paris government seemed to accept American ideas as regards the arbitration treaty.

STOCK TRADING

All Saturday Records Broken at N. Y. Exchange

NEW YORK, Jan. 7. (AP) — All Saturday trading records on the New York stock exchange were broken today in a feverish outburst of buying by the statement that President Coolidge saw nothing alarming in the huge volume of brokers' loans. Prices soared $1 to $9 a share in the first hour, but week-end profit taking developed and substantial slices were cut from the early gains before the market closed. Sales totalled 1,672,900 shares.

He belittled the "hue and cry" over brokers' loans and predicted that in the normal course of business, this phase of credit will reach a volume of $5,000,000,000 within 12 months.

curred in the Tate gallery, officially styled the National gallery of British art, where 15,000 Turner drawings are among the damaged or ruined art treasurers. The Turner wing contains, in addition to this vast number of drawings, numerous finished and unfinished paintings by the great artist.

Within a few hundred yards of the stately houses of parliament, and the venerable West Minster Abbey, and across the river within a stone's throw of Lambeth palace, official residence of the archbishops of Canterbury since the days of the Plantagenets, there are dwelling places crowded together where many thousands of London's poorest find shelter. Upon these the flood waters came swiftly in the night.

So sudden was the inrush that the inhabitants hardly had time to put on their miserable semblance of outdoor wear. Plunging into the dark streets, they found them flowing like canals, the murky waters already stealing towards the upper rooms of the dwellings.

Mounted police battered at all doors to arouse sleeping inmates. They stood in their stirrups and reached to the upper windows, helping people out.

COOLIDGE PROBE APPROVED IN HOUSE

WASHINGTON, Jan. 7 (AP).—Investigation of the sinking of the submarine S-4 as proposed by President Coolidge, was approved today by the house which passed the Butler resolution to authorize the president to appoint a special commission to conduct an injury. It was sent to the senate, where a similar resolution has been introduced by a "yea" and "nay" vote.

"The investigation was not only to acquaint the people of the country on the causes of the disaster but to devise means of preventing future disasters," explained Chairman Snell, who is in charge of the measure.

The house approved the proposal after rejecting, 146 to 6, a motion which was interpreted during debate as constituting a challenge that the president and the navy department desired the inquiry for the purpose of "whitewashing" the navy's rescue efforts.

As passed, the resolution would authorize Mr. Coolidge to appoint a special commission of five members, two to be retired naval officers and three from civil life. They would be directed to make a thorough inquiry into the S-4 disaster and also consider means of improving safety devices on submarines. A report on their findings would be submitted to the president not later than next May 15th.

estimate, including three community gins at Posey, Union and McClung, as well as five gins at Slaton, is based on increases at other ginning centers, and is believed conservative, as Slaton recently has been leading in the increase.

300 Bales Here.

The seven gins in the city of Lubbock stepped up the total by over 300 bales during the week, with Slaton being estimated next in order placing ginnings there at an increase of 250 bales. Idalou was third in increase with 187, with Shallowater showing 135.

Correspondents at Hurlwood and Canyon report that approximately 100 bales are yet to be ginned at each place, with Wolffarth predicting 250 additional. On this basis, the county total for the season would reach well beyond 40,000.

Tabulation.

The tabulation, showing last week and the present report, is:

City—	Prev. Rep.	This Week
Lubbock	7133	7444
Slaton	6225	6400

group, which was announced yesterday by the Jury Commission: John F. Bacon, Spencer A. Wells, Henry T. Kimbro and T. R. Prideaux, all of Lubbock; J. H. Teague, W. R. Wilson and H. D. Talley, of Slaton; M. T. Daniels, Wolffarth; G. M. Eubanks, Woodrow; R. O. Moore, Acuff; Jess W. Cannon, Lorenzo; Ward Crim, Monroe; B. F. Hutson, Idalou; Lee Hardin, Carlisle; E. H. Moody, Becton, and Russell Myrick, Shallowater.

District Attorney Durwood H. Bradley was busy yesterday in his continued investigation of the shooting. Mr. Bradley has been working on the case unceasingly since its occurrence and reported last night that his office is compiling the facts in connection with it.

Bradley Has Statements.

Mr. Bradley has taken statements from a number of citizens familiar with the principals in the case and also with their activities and yesterday afternoon, in company with Charles C. Triplett, one of the attorneys representing Lester interviewed the wounded men who are still in the West Texas hospital. What occurred during the interview was not divulged by either Mr. Bradley or Mr. Triplett and Mr. Bradley further declined to comment upon the statements which he had taken or from whom he had received them.

Meanwhile, as the investigation went on the condition of each of the injured men was reported by an attending physician as better than last night.

Lewis' Arm Better.

Lewis, whose badly mangled right arm had become infected, showed a lower temperature, and possibility that the arm would have to be amputated was practically dispelled. The shot took effect in the arm below the elbow, and the force of it drove particles of clothing into the flesh; but now all particles of shot and clothing that can possibly be removed have been taken out. Lewis was conscious and rational yesterday for the first time since he was shot. Constant hypodermic injections of anaesthetics had been necessary to keep him quiet, but yesterday the pain had subsided to a degree that an anaesthetic was unnecessary.

Lester's Eye Improved.

Lester, whose chief injuries are a wounded lower jaw and neck and an inflamed right eye, is not in serious condition. Glass which flew from the shattered windshield was blown into his eye, but after another particle of glass had been removed Friday night the eye showed an improved condition.

Neither of the two, however, is able to leave the hospital and may not be for several days.

Clark Mullican Is To Make Race

Judge Of 99th Court Comes Out As Candidate To Succeed Himself; He Issues Statement To Voters

Colonel Clark M. Mullican, district judge of the 99th judicial district of Texas, has authorized the Avalanche-Journal to announce that he is a candidate to succeed himself as district judge. Judge Mullican was appointed to the bench of the 72nd judicial district court by Governor Pat M. Neff in 1923 to finish the unexpired term of Judge W. R. Spencer, deceased. In 1924 Judge Mullican was elected to succeed himself. After serving about two years of his four year term, he was asked by Governor Dan Moody to resign from the bench of the 72nd district court and accept appointment to the newly created 99th district court comprising Lubbock county alone, designed to take care of the tremendous growth of legal business in this county, which Judge Mullican did. Judge Mullican has served about nine months on the bench of the 99th district court and now seeks election.

With reference to his candidacy Judge Mullican made the following statement:

Statement Is Made

"I feel that two governors of Texas and the people of this county have honored and distinguished me with one of the most important offices in their gift. More responsible than the office of governor is the judiciary, where laws are interpreted and construed, where legal and equitable rights of property, business and labor are determined, and where human rights of life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness are guaranteed to those duly entitled. The governor may give pardon and liberty to those whom he believes worthy, but none save a district court can take life or deprive a citizen of liberty. So great is the power of a district court, so far-reaching its decrees, so responsible its duties, as should cause every citizen, the nation over, to pause and seriously consider the demands of citizenship when he is called upon to elevate a candidate to a distinguished and important a position.

"Now more than ever, should extreme care be exercised. Democracy itself is on trial before the world. The strength of government is being tested by wave after wave of treasonable criminality. The sincerity and justness of our courts are being questioned, because incompetent, unqualified men have deceived their way into the judiciary. It is time partiotic friends of constituted government should pause to think and cease to be swayed and mislead by any other consideration than that of qualification. The intelligence and best thought of this country are soon to be tested by its vote—my admonition is 'Be careful how you vote, and after you have fully investigated me and my record if you do not believe that I am the better qualified candidate for the office I seek, you should not vote for me; if, on the other hand, a fair investigation shows me to be the better qualified candidate for the place, you owe it to your citizenship to vote for me.'

"It is a matter of deepest pride to me that I have so conducted my court as to win the respect of the appellate courts, of so many of the educational, professional, business, agricultural and religious leaders of our county, and of an overwhelming majority of the members of the local bar. Should I not have had the respect and confidence of the Lubbock county bar and of those visiting attorneys who have appeared before my court, I would feel that I was a failure as judge of my court. I submit my labors and my candidacy to those who, alone, have power to reward,—the citizens of Lubbock county; and I refer them to those best fitted to judge of my sincerity, fairness, honesty and legal ability in the administration of the duties of my court,—the attorneys who have appeared before me.

"You may state to the people that owing to a six months term of court ahead of me, I shall not be in position to visit with them and to meet them personally, and until the latter part of June I shall have to leave my campaign in the hands of my friends. In the meantime I urge the closest investigation of my qualifications. In due time I shall make my formal announcement."

Where, Oh Where Is The Suwannee River?

Most Lubbock Folks Just Say 'Far Away'

That good old Suwannee River to which your heart is ever turning is located—

Well, now where is the river anyway, provided there is such a one?

In case your first guess is Tennessee, don't feel discouraged for about nine out of every ten people say Tennessee immediately and the tenth will scratch his cranium, ruminate, hum that little phrase about "Way down upon Suwanee River" and decide that it must be somewhere in the Southern States—Georgia, Alabama, Kentucky, Arkansas or Virginia.

These states were all frequently mentioned this week as people were questioned about the location of the river.

Few of 'Em Know

Finding through offhand questioning of various people met on the streets that few knew the location of this stream, a further investigation was made.

M. H. Duncan, superintendent of city schools was called. "It's in Georgia," he remembered, but was not sure whether it runs into another river or goes on into the Atlantic. Turning to several teachers about the school, he found that no one of them could locate the river.

Dr. Paul W. Horn, president of the Technological college, knows exactly where the river is located—oh yes, there is such a river, told where it rises, reminded the writer of the spelling of the name and told of some of the river's characteristics.

A few of the others questioned knew the location of the river.

Bob Crump, of the Shallowater community, remembers reading an article several years ago in which it was stated that many believe the river is fictionary, having been created by the makers of the Southern ballads, many of which refer to the Suwannee river and of which "Way down upon the Suwannee River" is most universally known.

Searchers Are Stumped

Geography teachers in the schools were not all asked about the location of this river but no one was found who could tell where it is located. One countered with the statement that her territory is the Eastern Hemisphere and that perhaps some teacher of the Western Hemisphere had better be questioned.

A Tech faculty member was sought to determine if he knew the whereabouts of the river. As he was out, the nature of the call was stated to his wife, who declared immediately, "Well, I can tell you where it is. It is in Tennessee."

One bright young man averred that he could "sing the song so plain that you can hear the water lap the banks" but he didn't know the location of the river, which is supposed to be somewhere down South, about as far south as one can go.

Rises in Georgia

And it is. It rises in southern Georgia in the Okefinokee Swamp and flows in a winding, generally south-southwestern course through Florida into the Gulf of Mexico.

This information was gotten from an encyclopedia and from a perusal of a map. In case you have occasion to cross the stream trainmen will remind you and other passengers of the old ballad about the river, so the encyclopedia article elicited.

In Sewanee, Tenn., is located the University of the South, often called Sewanee University, and it is probably for this reason that so many people think the river is located in that state.

The Suwannee river is said to be a very sluggish stream and the famous swamp in which it rises is similar to the Everglades of Florida. The swamp covers about 500,000 acres of land, is inhabited by alligators and moccasins and has several small floating islands in a lake in the eastern part. In some parts there are large trees and dense low vegetation.

In case the spelling of the river used here doesn't seem right, look it up. A dictionary and an encyclopedia agreed that it is "Suwannee" but it was spelled "Suwanee" on two maps.

NEW YORK—The habit of putting a paint brush in her mouth to point it for better work, is held responsible for the death of a girl employed in a radium plant. The girl's job consisted of painting watch dials with luminous pigment.

DAILY MARKETS

COTTONSEED OIL

NEW YORK, Jan. 7. (AP)—The cottonseed oil market was quiet and steady today, active months closing 1 to 2 points higher on local short covering for over the week-end and scattered support in sympathy with the steadiness of lard, grain and crude oil, which combination in turn offset the decline in cotton. Sales 8000 barrels. Prime crude 10.62 1-2; prime summer yellow spot 10.25; January closed 10.25; March 10.27; May 10.50; July 10.72.

NEW ORLEANS COTTON

NEW ORLEANS, Jan. 7. (AP)—Cotton prices drifted aimlessly here today with trading confined mainly to evening up for over the week-end. The general trend of prices was downward, although the market fluctuated within a narrow range. At the lowest, reached in the late trading, March contracts which had fluctuated between 19.24 and 19.31, dropped to 19.17, under realizing or 15 points net lower. The option closed at 19.20 with the general market steady at net declines for the day of 12 to 23 points.

FORT WORTH LIVESTOCK

FORT WORTH, Jan. 7. (AP)—The hog trade here today was steady to weak. The usual nominal condition for Saturday prevailed in the cattle and sheep divisions.

CHICAGO GRAIN

CHICAGO, Jan. 7. (AP)—Wheat and corn showed an upward tendency much of the time today, whereas oats and rye were inclined to sag. Complaints from the west and southwest in regard to the crop outlook for domestic winter wheat attracted general notice. Meanwhile, primary receipts of corn today showed a material falling off compared with a week ago.

Closing quotations on wheat were irregular, 1-8 to 1-4 cent net lower to 1-8 cent advance, corn finished 1-8 to 3-8 cent up, oats 1-8 cent to 3-8 cent off and provisions varying from 12 cent decline to a rise of 7 cents.

For the most part provisions were firmer, sympathizing with an upward turn of the hog market.

NEW YORK COTTON

NEW YORK, Jan. 7. (AP)—Relatively easier Liverpool cables and talk of mill curtailment probably were factors on an end-week reaction in the cotton market today. The price of March contracts eased off to 19.20, or 18 points net lower, and closed at 19.21, the general market closing barely steady at net declines of 17 to 21 points.

The market opened barely steady at a decline of 9 to 12 points in response to relatively easy cables but offerings were light and most losses were recovered quickly on covering and trade buying, part of which was supposed to come from Liverpool. May sold up from 19.38@19.48 on this bulge, but demand tapered off as it approached the 19 1-2 cent level and prices later eased under week-end realizing and liquidation. There also was a little scattered selling for local or southwestern account. May sold off to 19.30 and closing prices were within a point of the lowest.

Business was very quiet, with the market correspondingly sensitive to small orders either way, and the price movement was considered as much due to the usual week-end readjustment of the technical position as to anything in the day's news. Talk of mill curtailment, however, came in for much comment and may have had a tendency to check buying, although it did not inspire any general or aggressive selling.

Life's A Funny Proposition, Says Major Hoople; Too Many Of Us Fail To Look Conditions Right In Face

Philosopher Says Life Not Always As It Seems; Says Too Many Folks Can't Be Unhappy At Right Time

When we are happy we are happy, and when we are sad we are sad. It seems as though we can not locate a medium that will give us comfort and at the same time allow us to continue living. We are in the highest of the heavens or in the lowest of the dales. When we are happy we are awfully happy, and never take time to think of the hours of sadness we know must follow.

Life is a kind of a joke after all—that is most of us treat it as a joke. When sailing is good we can't imagine a storm, and when the storm comes we wonder how it all happened. That is life—it is as it should be.

We Could Use Some Pity

There are times when we let our sympathy go out for others, but we never have time to think of ourselves. Of course, self pity is a mighty bad thing, but some of us could use a little of it to advantage. As long as we have health, food and some comforts of life we forget the bitter things. Maybe this is as it should be.

Some people are forced to bring misery to others. They just can't help it and hold their job. Peace officers, for instance might be classed among the joy killers. Yet if the officer failed to do his duty—arrest and lock criminals in jail we would all suffer. A few days ago we heard an old mother pleading with an officer to do something for her son. He had broken the law and had been arrested and lodged in jail. The officer spoke kindly to the mother, but there was nothing he could do that would bring joy to her.

"Isn't there something we can do to help him?" the mother asked.

"I am afraid not," replied the officer.

"You arrested him, didn't you?" she asked.

"Yes, but I was forced to arrest him. You are not responsible for his crime and I am not. He didn't have to do it and there is no excuse for it."

The weeping mother walked away, and we imagine the officer would have found it a joy to have been able to help her. But he could not.

No doubt the mother will always look upon him as a heartless man—a man who loves human misery, but she will be wrong.

Doctors face similar problems. When a loved one is ill we want the doctor to restore them to health. If they fail we feel that the doctor neglected to do his duty. Generally we are wrong, for there is not a doctor in America who finds it a pleasure to "lose" a patient. Doctors may make mistakes—we all do, but they can't restore all the sick to perfect health.

Even the merchant comes in for his portion of abuse. We ask him for favors he can not grant, and then we get on the "peck." This is not right. The merchant knows his business, and we should be satisfied with the answer he gives us when we ask accomodations.

Preachers are probably cussed and discussed more than any other class of people. We "cuss" them if they do and we "cuss" them if they don't. What is the poor fellow going to do? We still have a few "nuts" who honestly think ministers are in business for the money. Of course we are wrong and if we had the gumption of a road lizzard we would know that we make a monkey of ourselves every time we make such a remark. Ministers as a whole, are educated. We demand this, and probably we are right. A man who is sufficiently educated to hold a $4,000 pulpit could make $10,000 a year at law or in business. They take the $4,000 and give the $6,000 back to us in an effort to keep us from sizzling hereafter. It is noble of them, but we sometimes think they are wasting their breath on a sinful world.

Most of us think of God just twice in life—when we get sick and again when the doctor tells ue we can not "pull the grade." Of course we expect God to do His duty, and so far as we are concerned this means saving us.

School Teachers Have Hard Time

School teachers never get the credit they are due—the money either. It is worth a lot to stay housed up all day with a lot of ignorant kids who think more of games than they do geography and more of movies than they do mathematics. It is up to the teacher to knock the movies out of their heads and instill grammar instead. If the teacher fails we cuss the teacher when as a matter of fact we should raise their salaries and give them loaded billies to force discipline. If the boy fails to learn take it out on the seat of his pants and not on the character of his teacher.

If we might only find a happy medium of normalcy—learn to do right and be happy we would find life worth living. If we might learn to place short-comings and admit failure when we are concerned people would think more of us. We can see the other fellow's short-comings but a hundred microscopes wouldn't locate ours if we were doing the "looking."

When we are happy lets try and not be too happy, and when we are sad let it be remembered that a brighter day will follow. No use going to the "bow-wows" and no use exploding because of excessive joy. Lets take life as a matter of fact—come back to earth and do what is right, and most of our troubles will care for themselves.

Always remove buttons when have your frocks and suits cleaned, if you like to have your buttons stay shiny and new looking.

When Tech Studes Visited In Detroit

BY IRENE CONNER
Special Correspondent

The following briefs describe highlights of the Student Volunteer convention, held recently in Detroit, which seven students and a faculty member from Texas Tech attended:

Anyone wishing information on the price of chili as compared to the quality of the product sold in Michigan will see Mary Hope Westbrook. She traveled all the way to Detroit to pay 35c for a bowl of beans flavored with chili.

While out at the Ford plant Clarence Whitesides got lost and started walking. By the time he got back to the hotel and met the rest of the bunch he had walked by everything in Detroit.

The only thing that the writer could find on the way to Detroit to get a thrill out of was in Chicago when she missed the train. It might sound bad if she had not already reserved a pullman and had her baggage on the train and her ticket checked and everything ready to go. The bright lights were just too much for her and she could not get to the train in time.

Just this little hint! Don't send Dayle Wallace to buy tickets to a show unless you want to sit in the Family Circle. Dayle was told to buy tickets that did not cost too much and he did. Just ask any of them how high up the Family Circle is at the Bonstelle Playhouse.

Margaret Turner went to Detroit as an ardent admirer of S. M. U. and came back an admirer of Texas university.

Warren Huff was not hard to keep up with. All that was necessary to find him was to look up. Head and shoulders above the crowd he was easy to keep up with. He says that the higher up you go the lower the temperature gets.

Jack Maddox has a little speech made up that he wants to deliver the first time some one asks him to on the gentle art of tipping bell boys and pullman porters. He says that it is an art that only the wealthy can enjoy but it is good sport for poor college people.

The only regret that any of the students have is that they could not bring back all the taxi cabs and street cars that they bought while they were in Detroit. They got them paid for all right, but they did not have room in their bags to bring them home.

BECAUSE HENRY FORD saw, realized and cooperated with the ruling, dominating impulse of the human race which is one of continuous upward progress and development; and that this required mobile or flexible transportation for the individual, he has stepped the race up higher and higher and further than any other one man of modern times, in a few years.

A part of the benefits accruing to Mr. Ford is one billion dollars and over—the first man in history to go from the red to a billionaire in 20 years. This cooperation by him with the invariable immutable trend of the race has increased both the selling and intrinsic value of every habitable foot of real estate on the globe and enabled him to buy 4,000,000 acres of rubber growing land, one-half of which he is now developing.

This has stimulated the desire for and willingness to buy the most expensive family cars to a greater degree than it has the lower priced cars.

The same steel that sells for a few cents per ounce in a Ford car will sell as readily for many times that in a Buick or Rolls-Royce. So there is the difference between restricted and unrestricted.

So much for relying on and working for principle—that principle which governs all things and commodities—real estate as well as automotive, which causes two apples and two apples to be four apples and two matches and two matches to be four matches.

Now, there is a greater need and stronger desire for fine homes than ever was for automobiles, and there is an ever-increasing willingness and ability to buy.

The man of value to a community—the constructive man willingly accepts the rapid depreciation which always accompanies the better family cars; and in the records of his estate you will find that he always offset that and other such depreciation by establishing a home in a highly restricted and exclusive addition where values are always steadily increasing.

Lubbock is rapidly becoming a wealthy little city of fine homes. There remains only one tract logically located for 100 foot sites with high restrictions, which has not already been sold out in 50 foot lots.

This only remaining tract is UNIVERSITY PLACE which overlooks the Tech campus, a good number of these 100 foot sites have already been selected.

To those who wish to buy now and build later, we will make unusually attractive terms.

Like cause always produces like effect.

Senator-Elect

may be that he will be invited to appear in the chamber to present a statement.

Then again there may be a resolution to declare his seat vacant without further hearings. The general belief at the capital is that such a resolution would be adopted. That would leave Illinois with but one senator unless Governor Small cancels Smith's credentials and appointed his successor.

Friends of Smith said he would await the action of the committee before deciding upon his future course. It was indicated, however, that he would not resign even if the senate declared his seat vacant and it was not expected that Governor Small would appoint a successor unless he did tender his resignation.

Before Smith appeared, the committee heard Samuel Insull, Chicago Public Utilities official and his personal attorney, Daniel Schuyler, who undertook to purge themselves of contempt charges by disclosing information hitherto withheld concerning contributions of the 1926 Illinois primary campaign.

Insull stated frankly that he had given a total of $137,925 in that campaign, $125,000 of which went to Smith's fund. He added that the $40,000 about which he previously had refused to testify was divided equally between the Small-Lundin faction and the campaign fund of George F. Harding, candidate for treasurer in Cook county.

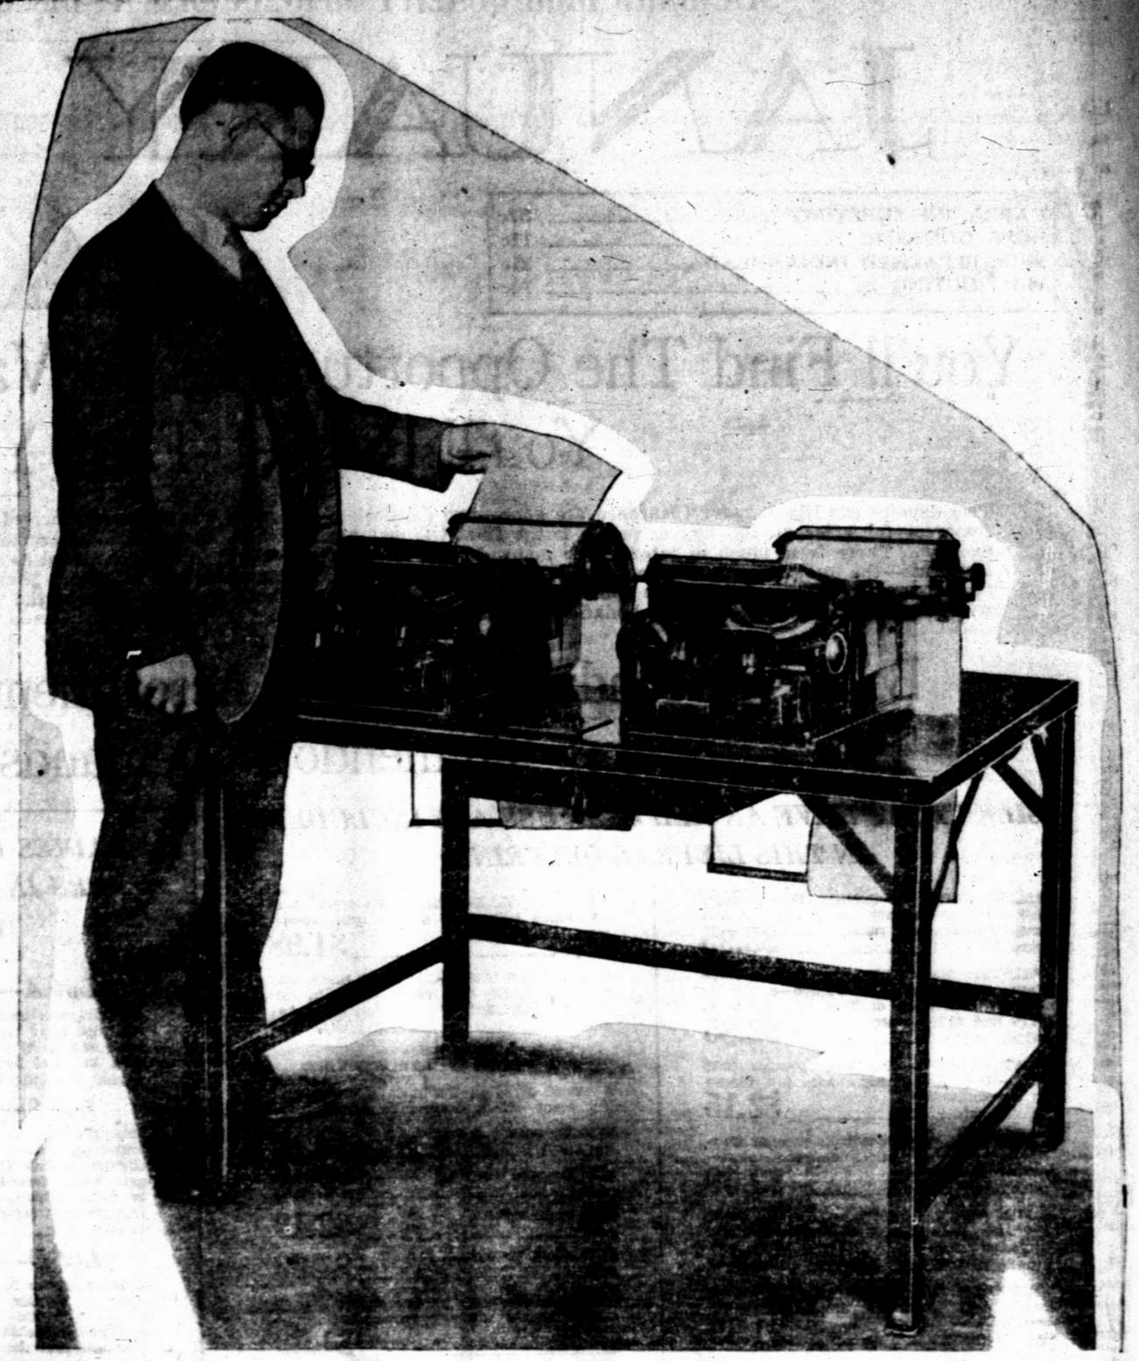
What the New Avalanche-Journal Automatic Telegraphic Printers Look Like



New Printers

news that can be carried over a single circuit. The automatic printer used by the Associated Press is one of the most noteworthy developments in the field of telegraphic transmission in many years.

Sends More Words

A single printer circuit will deliver into a newspaper office a minimum of 16,000 words of news each eight hours. Perfection of the automatic circuit has grown from experiments which the Associated Press began many years ago. From the rather crude mechanism that was used at that time has been developed a machine that resembles a standard typewriter. It is controlled by electrical impulses which are set in motion by an operator at the distant filling point. The impulses form letters which become pages and then rooms of news dispatches from which the newspaper selects many thousands of words to publish for its readers.

One thousand of these machines are now in operation throughout the country.

Since its practicability was proven the use of the automatic printer in distributing the news report of the Associated Press has expanded rapidly. The trunk circuits, or main channels of its wire system which link up the large cities in all parts of the country were equipped first. These circuits which are paralleled by Morse wires, and the upkeep of the automatic equipment carried on by the telegraph operators, keep news communication open between the populous centers at all hours of the day and night.

Service Starts Monday

Adoption of the automatic printer for delivery of Associated Press news dispatches on single, or state, circuits, has gone on systematically and in the past year, the service has been established in the states of Arizona, Florida, Colorado, New Mexico, Indiana, Ohio, Washington, Kansas, Iowa, Missouri, Montana, Oklahoma, North Carolina, South Carolina, Illinois and Wisconsin. In keeping with this progressive movement, the automatic service will become effective on the Texas state circuit which serves the Avalanche and Journal on tomorrow. The printers were installed in the Avalanche-Journal office, and their upkeep will be in charge of trained employes of the Southwestern Bell telephone company.

The copy which the machines turn out is taken on a roll of paper 8 1-2 inches wide and of quantity to last approximately a week without change, attached at the rear of the machine. The copy is of single type, but so individualized as to be restful to the eyes of copy reader and editor, and easily handled by them as well as by the linotype compositor.

The Associated Press is the largest user of automatic printers for the transmission of news. In 1914 the Associated Press established the first successful printer circuit. This was in the Metropolitan area of New York. Two years later it put into operation the first long-distance circuit to function efficiently between New York and Boston. The early equipment was rather crude and complicated, but was rapidly improved until today, it is a compact and relatively small mechanism.

Handles All Types of News

The printer is capable of handling tabulated matter readily. Box scores stock list, and markets are turned out as smoothly and accurately as by typewriter.

Copy for filing on a printer circuit is selected and prepared by Associated Press editors the same as for Morse wires. The transmitter sitting at an electrically operated standard typewriter keyboard perforates a paper tape eleven sixteenths of an inch wide. The perforations are known collectively as the "five unit" code. Combinations of punctures, which are made perpendicularly across the tape and closely together, correspond to letters.

One and two combined make "A"; one, four and five, make "B"; two, three and four make "C"; and one and four "D"; etc. When perforated the tape passes over five small pins in the distributor unit corresponding to punctures, and which move upward to meet the tape as the feed mechanism pushes it forward with each revolution of the transmitting unit.

When the pins meet the tape the points passing through the punctures set up selective impulses or "marking current," which passes to the line. When no punctures are made, the pins are held down and perform no selective function. Where five punctures exist no letter is made because the selective apparatus is stationary. Five small magnets on the left side of the machines at receiving stations take the impulses in synchronism.

On being energized, the magnets push slightly to the right one or more narrow notched bars. This action opens a groove directly under the code bar of the letter selected. As the bar drops into the notch, it is pushed sharply forward by another part of the apparatus moving in unison with the previous operation, and the work of recording the letter is completed. Meanwhile the other code bars are held in position. The whole operation is performed in a fraction of a second but so perfectly is the machine synchronized that no confusion or "piling" of typebars occurs.

Boy Bandit

other and older man in robbing the Wildorado bank.

"Frank Teague is not my name and everything I said last night about myself is a lie," the boy said this afternoon. He has light hair, blue eyes and a childishly innocent expression.

After much questioning today he suddenly burst into tears and started talking "My name is Salmon C. Tate and my home is in Boone, North Carolina—now that's right and I'll tell you how you can find out if you don't believe me. You can wire Raleigh, N. C., that's where my name is recorded. I guess they've got it there as I think they keep the names of all kids born in that county."

Weeping bitterly, the boy said he was not born in Raleigh but in Boone and that "I told 'em last night I didn't have no people but I have' My father and mother are both living. My father is R. F. Tate and our family lives in Boone now, where my father is running an electric power plant for the state," he said.

"How long have you been away from home?"

"Oh, I don't know—four, five or six months I think."

"Were you ever in any trouble before?"

"No."

"Were you ever in jail before?"

"Yes, once. In Boone, N. C., I got a little too much whisky, but I paid a small fine and was released."

The youth then wiped away his tears and began talking as if to friends.

He said that "I lied all around last night, but I'm telling you straight now."

"But I told the truth last night about robbing the bank. It is a wonder we didn't get shot. They shot the back of the car up some while we were leaving. I heard the bullets hitting the car. We had "the old man" (meaning W. E. O'Neal, president of the bank) with us.

"After we robbed the bank the man I knew as Allen told me about there being a $5,000 reward for dead bank bandits in this state. He said a dead bandit was worth $5,000 but a live one wasn't worth a cent. He just worked me into that job. I never was in any other bank robbery and all I want now is to get out of this. I guess my folks will come down here to see me, but I don't know. I sure hope they catch 'Allen.' I don't know what they'll do to me, but I hope they do a plenty to him. He told me he thought he got about fifty dollars out of the bank robbery, but I don't know as I never got any of it. I supposed I would get half—he never said so, but I just supposed I would.

"All I hate about this is my folks knowing it. I wish they wouldn't find it out. I'd feel better if they'd never know it," he added.

As the deputy sheriff and reporter were leaving the cell the boy called to the office, saying, "don't forget to let me change those papers I signed last night because I don't want one story about this in the newspapers and the wrong story in court."

BROWNWOOD—(AP)—A carload of mistletoe was shipped from here to Philadelphia for the holiday season just ended.

Home Economics Home Near Ready

Five Senior Students To Make Homes In Newest Building of Tech Campus, As Part of Course.

Five girls, members of the first senior class of the school of Home Economics of the Tech, are to make their home for the next term in the new practice house which has just been completed. The house is being furnished and decorated under the direction of faculty members in consultation with the girls of the school. The girls of the school have made draperies and other decorative materials for the new home.

The girls who are to live in the house during the coming weeks are Misses Faye Brooks, Ella Mae Lyle, Flov Anglin, Lila Alred and Mrs. Roy Sides. Miss Johnnie McCrery will be faculty supervisor of the home.

Practical application of the theories taught in the lectures will be made by the girls during their sojourn in the home.

The house was constructed at a cost of $20,000 and furnished for $5,000.

It is the plan of the officials to hold a "house warming" in a few weeks to commemorate the opening of the home.

to live at 1004 West First street, Oklahoma City. This address was found on a letter addressed to Miss Barrier, and the only means available for locating her family.

Both Knocked Unconscious.

Miss Barrier has been unconscious since the accident. Mr. Thompson was knocked temporarily unconscious, but regained his senses quickly and hailed a passing car. The occupants of the car notified the Powell undertakers, who brought Miss Barrier to the hospital in an ambulance.

According to Mr. Thompson, he hailed a number of motorists who refused to carry the injured woman to Lubbock, apparently because of the blood streaming from her head.

The car, after turning over, returned to an upright position in the ditch by the side of the road, facing in the exact opposite direction from the way it had been going.

Mr. Thompson said that he was driving between 30 and 35 miles an hour when the wheel broke.

Lubbock Building In Present Year Opens With Rush

Nearly 60 Thousand Dollar Total Hung Up Thus Far Makes City Look To Fine Figure For 1928

Indicating that Lubbock is well established in the steady building class of cities of the state and that this city will climb higher with permits during the coming year, records in the office of City Building Inspector Grover C. Merrill yesterday showed a total of $59,850 in building permits issued during the first five days of 1928. With Lubbock standing twelfth in the state in building permits during the past year, its place will be much higher with the continuance of the present rate of building.

The only addition to the city's business district during the week was a $15,000 brick and tile business building to be erected at 13th and Texas Avenue by D. N. Leaverton. W. D. Green is the owner and the building is to be used for a garage and filling station. Construction will start in the near future.

Eight Residences Added

Eight new modern residences were added to the city's sections during the week. Two additions were made to residences, two remodel jobs were authorized on business buildings, construction of two business houses were granted and two more to be remodeled. The city's new fire station was also issued a permit.

The new fire station to be erected on 19th street between Avenue U and V, is to cost $10,500 and will be built of brick and tile. It will be 40 by 52 in size and will contain five rooms.

D. N. Smith is to erect a 6 room stucco residence in the 1300 block on 7th street. The house will cost $3,000.

J. A. Wilbanks, will make an addition of 2 rooms at a cost of $750 to a house on lot 6, Norton addition.

H. W. Thompson will make an addition of 3 rooms to a house at 19th and Avenue V at a cost of $2500.

Warehouse to be Built

T. P. and G. A. Gibson were granted permit to build a sheet iron warehouse at Fourth street and Avenue O to cost $400. It will be 24 by 116 feet.

J. A. Gunn, contractor, will build a 4-room brick veneer residence for Ray Sawyer at 2107 20th street. It will cost $3,000. He will also erect a 6 room brick veneer residence for ... Stringer at 2105 20th street at a cost of $4,500.

The building of the Jones brothers on lots 1 and 2, block 133, old town will be remodeled by J. J. Clements at a cost of $5,000. The building of McLemore and Bass, on lot 17, block 132, old town, will be remodeled by G. W. Pickle at a cost of $1600.

J. J. Clements will build a 5 room brick veneer residence for J. A. McCelvey in the 2600 block on 19th street. It will cost $6000.

Mrs. Eric Studeman will build a 6 room brick veneer residence at 17th and Avenue W for $6,000. Geo. Duvall will be the contractor.

Permit was also issued during the week to Gertrude Harper for a $1600 3 room frame residence on lots 12 and 2, block 14, McWhorter and Roberts addition.

SLEEP PSYCHOLOGY

One Hour At Time Better Than In Long Period

AUSTIN, Jan. 7 (AP)—The popular adage—oft extolled to youths who sleep late hours—that 'one hour of sleep before midnight is worth two afterwards", like many other popular adages, is not necessarily true, psychologists have found.

What is true, however, is that one hour of sleep at any given time, before midnight or after, is proportionately more beneficial than long sleeping, Dr. Lloyd A. Jeffress, professor of psychology at the University of Texas, says. In other words a man can get more benefit from just one hour's sleep than he could from any one hour of a long stretch of sleeping, after the first hour.

FALLS 250 FEET—LIVES

BLUEFIELD, W. Va.—Ed Franklin of Laeger plunged 250 feet over an embankment and lives to tell about it. He was driving in a fog from Welch to Laeger, his home, when he lost the pavement and whirled to the foot of the cliff below. The auto was demolished, but Franklin suffered nothing more than shock and bruises.

TO BUILD PLANT

QUANAH, Jan. 7.—The West Texas Utilities company has announced its plans for the construction of a $6,000,000 electric power generating plant, which will be built on the banks of Lake Pauline, four miles east of Quanah. Construction of the first unit of the plant will begin about January 15 and is expected to be completed by September of this year.

Three units which ultimately will be erected will add approximately 34,000 horse power to the company's present available generating capacity of 40,000.

Lake Pauline, which impounds three billion gallons of water and covers 610 acres has been acquired by the West Texas Utilities from the estate left by the late William Marsh Rice, founder of Rice institute and builder of Lake Pauline dam. In addition, the utilities company has purchased 400 acres of land adjoining the reservoir.

Rest Easy, Folks, For Heflin Will Protect Farmers

Alabama's Senator Will Be Champion for Cotton; He Has Plan to Keep Speculators Guessing.

BY RODNEY DUTCHER
NEA Service Writer

WASHINGTON, Jan. 7 — Just when the nation was beginning to wonder what had become of the Hon. J. Thomas Heflin, senator from Alabama, he was called before the senate committee investigating an alleged plot to bribe him and three other senators.

Now, if the senate has to listen for the rest of the session to long-winded assaults on the dastardly forgers and unscrupulous newspapermen it has only its own committee to blame. Up to that time, Senator Tom had been almost silent.

The first the correspondent heard from him this session came through a brief statement tacked up in the senate press galleries wherein Senator Tom explained that the republican press and the republican strategists were out boosting Al Smith for the Democratic nomination because he would be such an easy man to beat.

Certain other persons of good repute previously had tried to sell this idea to your correspondent who is quite open-minded about it and always happy to root into a piece of political camouflage, but somehow, when asked just what republicans and republican newspapers had demonstrated an anxiety to see Al nominated, they had never been able to furnish any very convincing evidence.

And so it was with Senator Tom, who had in mind principally those writers who insist that Smith is much the strongest candidate for the nomination. Senator Tom is a good spokesman for that mass of voters, strength far from determined, who opposed Al because of religious bias. For that reason, it may be interesting to record his assertion that Smith hasn't a chance and that he only appears strong just now because the other side hasn't put up its man. Senator Tom is still enthusiastic over Governor Vic Donahey of Ohio.

"Smith reminds me of the first horse race I ever saw," said Heflin. "One horse threw his jockey, and away he went and came in a hundred yards ahead.

"I yelled and cheered, for I was just a lad, until some man near me spoke up and said, 'Son, that don't count.' But the horse, he kept on running around until they had to go out and head him. Smith's like that horse. He doesn't know what it's all about."

At the end of the last session, during which Senator Tom had made so many long and powerful speeches against the pope, he was all fagged out. But the people of the country began to demand that he come and address them, he says, and soon he picked up his second wind and off he was, speaking during the summer in Maryland, Michigan, Ohio, New York, Illinois, Indiana and Iowa. In four speeches, he spoke to 52,000.

Contrary to his expectations, the Catholic heirarchy, which he continued to attack, made no attempt to assassinate him and at the end of every meeting the audience passed a resolution demanding the continuance of the Mexican arms embargo and renewal of the smuggling treaty with Mexico and calling on the president to do all he could to keep us out of war.

The senator suspects that the appointment of Ambassador Morrow and other amicable overtures to Mexico may only be a smokescreen and he will keep on the watch for any skullduggery. He is going to urge congress to define the powers of the president to mobilize the army or to send marines into another country like Nicaragua. One Alabama boy was killed in the Nicaraguan fighting and Senator Tom doesn't like that.

Just now he is proposing legislation to keep cotton out of the hands of the speculator and under control of those concerned with its production, marketing and financing. He believes this would result in considerable relief for the cotton farmer.

Senator Tom is a famous story teller and, as usual, his latest is aimed at an opponent. It appears that John Bankhead of Alabama is planning to run against him when he comes up for re-election in 1930.

"The same reason that kept the negro's horse from winning on the race track has kept and will continue to keep Johnny from going to the senate," said the senator when he heard about it.

"The negro asked his boss when the races would take place at Opelika and he said, 'Ah got a colt ah wants to put on that track. He can outrun greased lightnin' and if ah gets him in de race he'll take all de money out of de grandstand.'

"His boss said: 'Sam, they've got some thoroughbreds on that race track and one of them can run a mile in a minute.'

"Sam rolled his eyes, scratched his head and said:

"'Boss, mah horse could do dat too, warn't but for three things—de longness of de distance, de requirements of de speed and de bigness of de job.'"

Col. E. O. Thompson, Tech Regent, To Accompany Wife, May Peterson, Here; She Sings at College Tomorrow

Home Economics Faculty to Serve Luncheon In Honor of Singer; Students To Extend Welcome.

May Peterson, who is to sing here tomorrow evening as an Artist Course number at the Technological college, is to be accompanied to Lubbock by her husband, Col. Ernest O. Thompson, Amarillo, who is a regent of the Technological college. They are expected in this evening.

During the singer's visit here, she is to be accorded a welcome by Tech students tomorrow evening at the concert, this welcome to come as a part of the evening's program and in the form of a tribute to the singer and her husband. At noon Tuesday, faculty members of the home economics school of the college are to honor the singer with a luncheon in the dining room of the home economics building.

Legion Mascot

May Peterson, who was with the Metropolitan Opera company, was mascot at the American Legion convention in Indianapolis in 1924 and rode the Old Gray Mare through the streets of that city.

The daughter of a Methodist circuit rider and one of nine children, this artist had little opportunity for study to be a singer other than what she received through her own efforts. Her first trip to Florence to study was made on three hundred dollars she had managed to save through giving programs, augmented while there by what she could make giving English lessons, singing in American churches, playing accompaniments and doing other such things that she found to do.

This plan has been tried in the junior department of the school under Mrs. P. T. Callaway and has met with success, Mrs. Heim stated.

—THE— WOMAN'S DAY By Allene Sumner

Did you ever hear of dugong teardrops? Natives of the Malayan island of Komodo prize dugong or sea cow tear-drops above all else, believing that a vial of these tears insures any young man the lady of his choice. They believe that any man carrying this vial can make the most beautiful woman alive forget her husband and come to the sea cow tear-drop owner.

How simple and yet complex the love life of humans would be if such things were true! The human yearning for some automatic manner of gaining a mate finds expression in the legends of all people.

CAN DYE NOW

Remember when no "nice woman" dyed her hair? Hair dyes are used, we now learn, by at least two million people in this country. The sky is the limit these days for humans who aspire to be more beautiful. We do not ask the cause for beauty; we only want results, and people are much happier than when girls wanted to be in the school or church play so they could use rouge and they always looked so nice with it on.

"PRIVATE BATHS"

The American Woman's association, which is building a seven and a half million club house for business and professional women in New York, proudly boasts that there will be a private bath with each of their 1265 bedrooms. The American standard of living calls for this. Homes are now being built with at least more than one bathroom for families just a little above the middle class. Sometimes one wonders if our standard isn't a little ultra.

"SHOULD SAY NOT!"

I know a girl's apartment house opened with a great fanfare of trumpets to meet the housing needs of working girls in that city. Very comfortable rooms were offered very reasonably, but the firm went into bankruptcy. Girls would not rent them because there was only running water in each room and only six bathrooms to a floor. These very girls moan the high cost of living and insist that they simply can't live on what they make.

THAT BEDSPREAD

Aha, "the woman" talked! Have you heard about that knitted bedspread in the White House made by Mrs. Calvin Coolidge over a year ago? On one side was knitted, "Lincoln, 1861-1865." On the other, "Calvin Coolidge, 1923-1929." When asked about it, the First Lady is supposed to have laughed, "I knew what I was doing!" Funny and too bad that nobody noticed that significant bed-spread before."

Accessories Must Always Remain Complementary To The Ensemble, Patou Says

Paris accessories of "excellent taste and distinction:" (1) triple rows of crystals sparkle on a novel tailored hip ornament of criminal velvet; (2) a dark grey antelope sports bag is livened by inserts of lighter grey sharkskin and a matching fastening; (3) for afternoon, plain suede with a hand-hammered silver fastening; (4) the new black-white vanity has graduated stripes; (5) costume jewelry introduces graduated turquoise, set in white gold; (6) twin jewels must be pressed to open this Patou bag with its neat monogram; (7) real gems gleam on spring hat ornaments; (8) an evening envelope purse of rose velvet, gold edged and gold monogrammed, and (9) a stunning sapphire, in the new architectural cut, gleams among tiny diamonds at the waist of milady's evening gown of continental blue velvet.

By JEAN POTOU
For NEA Service

PARIS, Jan. 7.—Accessories worn by women who wish to dress well must above all remain accessories, or complements to her dress. They must never be important to the point of overshadowing the ensemble. They must never be too apparent in volume, coloring or style, for then they have the character of eccentricity.

On the other hand a complement to the toilet of a number of well chosen and valuable accessories—and by valuable I mean of good workmanship as well as of intrinsic value but without undue showings—is to me a sign of really excellent taste and distinction.

Some measure must be observed however in the use of certain materials for accessories which are called upon to complete an ensemble. For example, I think it is a distinct sign of bad taste to wear evening slippers with strass studded heels on the pretext that the gown is embroidered with strass. On the other hand, I have seen women wearing shoes of the same lame as the dress which I found exceedingly stylish. Despite my aversion to anything showy they appeared to be a fitting complement to the ensemble.

Where Many Go Wrong

The bag is another important accessory. Many women go hopelessly wrong in their selection of bags which are to accompany their various ensembles. A too voluminous bag can look just as ridiculous as a diminutive one.

One would think that the imagination of creators must be exhausted by this time, but apparently this is far from being the case. The thing that bag makers are after now is an original and always more practical fastening.

A bag meant to be worn with a morning ensemble or a sports suit is allowed perhaps a little more originality than an afternoon bag. I can well picture some of these completing the ensemble to the extent of reproducing the color scheme of the sweater or some detail of embroidery. The afternoon bag has to be of finer and rarer material and practically devoid of ornamentation to be in good taste. The only fantasy resides in the fastening, which can be made of a semi-precious stone. I have just contrived quite a novel fastening which has two stones at either end on which pressure must be brought to open the bag. To such a bag as this can be added a simple monogram if desired. The very gesture a woman is called upon to make in using such an opening should also be studied and can be quite attractive.

Another Very Vexing Question

The large soft bag is no longer carried, as it is in complete discord with the line of modern dresses. As for evening bags, this a vexing question with most women. As a matter of fact these are slowly being replaced by the more or less valuable and original vanity case, which is much more practical and easy to dispose of when dancing. There are some bags made of old Persian brocades, however, which harmonize well with certain lame gowns and I have sacrificed some of my Persian robes to this end.

Sockings, I consider as quite outside my field, and I mention the subject here at all it must not be taken in the spirit of any criticism whatsoever. I believe, however, that apart from the ordinary stocking, of finest silk of course, but devoid of ornamentation of any sort, I consider those stockings which feature heels of a different color very ugly indeed, whereas I rather like the look of the heel finishing off in a point, which has the advantage of slenderizing the ankle and leg. I am also a partisan to light shades in hose at all times, in harmony of course, with the ensemble.

Miss Esther Brown, Who Is Teacher In Mexico City, Finds Life Gay In Foreign Capital; Work Fascinating

Makes No Attempt to Understand Mexican, Subtle By Nature; Women of Middle Class Dowdy.

"Missionary from the Mexican People to America." This is the title chosen by Miss Esther Brown in humorously explaining why she is so anxious in all her talk of Mexico City to explain the characteristics of Mexican people and to help Americans understand relationships of this country and Mexico.

Miss Brown, who teaches English in the public schools of Mexico City, has been the guest of Mrs. Lowell Munday, 1950 Avenue N, and Miss Ruth Horn, of the Tech campus, during this last week.

She is now in the States for her long vacation, planning to return to her school duties next month. December and January are chosen as the vacation period in Mexico because it is so cold that the children cannot comfortably attend school.

Has No Fire

"It is not nearly so cold there as it is here, but the Mexican has no heating system in his house and he stays warm by sitting in the sunshine or by some other means, thus making it uncomfortable for a child to sit in a school room.

"Beginning in February, school will continue through the summer months," Miss Brown said.

The Mexican of middle class wears scant clothing or cotton material. Americans, such as Miss Brown, find it necessary to wear a coat much of the time indoors, even, during the colder season in Mexico until they become acclimated.

Teaching in Mexico City is a fascinating occupation. There is the gaiety of a foreign capital with its cosmopolitan crowds and, to Miss Brown, the pleasure of learning more of that in which she is most interested as she has been studying for several years as a Spanish teacher.

Others from States

Although Miss Brown is the only one from the United States teaching in the public schools of Mexico, there is a large American colony made up of students in the University, teachers in other schools, representatives of business firms in the States, the legation and some who maintain residences in that city.

Almost everyone who lives there has sufficient wealth to entertain elaborately and there is a certain formality about many of the diplomatic affairs that makes the life very gay and interesting.

"I make no attempt to understand the Mexican child. He is entirely different from the American," Miss Brown avers. The Mexican child is quick to learn, but, as is characteristic of the race, he is subtle and cunning.

Dare Not Explain

"No Mexican will come to you and frankly state what he wants and the nature of his mission. If I should go to a Mexican and tell him exactly why I had come, he would feel sure that there was some

And probably the waiter has been anxiously waiting for this question for thirty minutes.

Children Often Tardy

"The children are not as prompt in arriving at school on time and the teachers are usually tardy, according to American standards, but the school is well ordered and, I should think that everything is done as promptly as in any other Mexican institution.

"I find in talking to people from other countries that America seems to be the one nation in the world which is so insistent on promptness.

"This causes some of the friction and misunderstanding between American and Mexican business men. When one from the States comes to Mexico City and makes an appointment there he is on time and expects his colleague to be on time also. But the Mexican is not prompt and his racial characteristic is such that he cannot understand all this worry about being on time."

The Mexican who travels from one foreign country to another and who is cosmopolitan in habits is not typical of Mexico, according to Miss Brown, for the typical one may be judged by the middle class of the country.

Has No Outlook

The woman in this group has no outlook. She is not educated because she married young, probably when she is about 16, and after that her home and children are her only interests. She has no club life, no socialities, no privileges and no associations. If she goes shopping or to any other place, her husband accompanies her, and unless it is imperative that she go along, he shops without her presence.

She is dowdy in dress, she soon grows fat through lack of exercise and dull because she has no diversions. There is no such thing as a smartly dressed Mexican woman, Miss Brown thinks.

It is easy to buy evening dresses in Mexico City but almost impossible to buy a tailored frock for there is no demand there for the latter. The Mexican woman never wears anything except something fussy and garish and more likely than not she wears an evening dress for her morning shopping.

Watched the Matadors

Miss Brown has been to two bull fights, one in Mexico and one in Spain, and she feels that her "duty is done" there.

"I do not enjoy such amusement although it means a lot to the Mexican and Spaniard. They are interested in the technique of the fighter and in all the hundreds of details of the fighter's skill.

"The American cannot enjoy a sport in which the sides are not evenly matched as in the bull fight, for in this there is no doubt as to the outcome, the matador always wins, pitting his proficiency against the strength of the animal.

More Interest in Sports

"Due to the Y. M. C. A. work which has been in Mexico City for about eight years, there is an increasing interest in sports in that city. It slaps you in the fact it is so evident," this teacher stated.

"I feel my responsibility in maintaining for the Mexican a high ideal of America and of the people here just as I am also feeling responsibility in helping people in the States understand the Mexican and our relations as nations," Miss Brown said.

Miss Brown finds her work profitable in that she is required to teach only in the morning and is thus able to attend the University of Mexico of afternoons and evenings, being enabled to complete work for her masters degree in her favorite subject of Spanish.

BELIEVE IT OR NOT

NEW YORK.—One of Gotham's biggest department stores has made a 1928 resolution. All goods will be tagged to tell the customer what he may expect in the way of service, such as "this will not wear well" and "this is fashionable but fragile." What next!

More than 5,000 miles of nets are set nightly during the herring season in the English channel.

Kid Boots, Fashion's Latest Fad, Are Combination Of Ankle Beauty, Service

Kid boots and how! A wood-brown pair sets off a fur coat at the left; above, the smartness of turned-down tongue and cuff; below, a fur-cuffed pair in black with grained inserts.

High footgear is in again.

"Kid Boots" are the latest gesture Fashion makes to Milady's insistent cry for variety.

It may be they come via Russia. For certainly there is something suggestive of Russian dances in these new high shoes.

It may be they are a refined, reincarnated crystallization of the popular galoshes idea.

The fact remains they are here, smart as can be and making a tremendous hit, especially with the flappers. They afford warmth on cold days and welcome protection when the weather is wet.

Improve Any Ankle

Svelte, beautifully cut from the finest of kids, these high shoes fit to the foot and ankle the way elegloves do, enhancing the trimness of a well-turned ankle, helping to conceal the unattractiveness of a thick one.

Each pair is really a three-in-one. The cuff can be worn high, fastened around with smart little buckled straps, in which case only one color of kid shows.

Or they may be worn with the cuff turned over to reveal another, probably a lighter or contrasting color, and in the third way, they can be worn with the tongue down and the cuff up, which gives them the appearance of being quite a different pair of high shoes. They are as easily slipped into as the snapped galoshes.

They come in browns, with tan or beige-lined cuffs, in all-over tan, in black and blue kid that is that new continental shade that is heralded as "the" blue for spring.

The Color Combinations

Black shoes may take pearl grey lining, or branch out and hit upon scarlet or jungle green or even delicate beige. The blues are apt to take other shades of blue for lining.

The lighter shades, however popular they prove this spring, are not the favorites now that the rich, woody brown ones are. With a luxurious mink coat, these high shoes seem singularly appropriate. There is something youthful about them, something almost collegiate. Yet put black boots on an older woman in a smart black costume, and this new footgear immediately fits into that picture, too.

A version of the high boot that is rich and handsome looking is the fur-cuffed one. These come in various furs and one can order her shoes to match her fur coat. A neat pair of black shoes takes an ermine cuff and comes higher in price than length, acocrdingly.

By next winter there will doubtlessly be other variations. But it is questionable if they will surpass these first kid boots in the fineness of material and skillful fitting.

Beauty! How and Why

THERE ARE TWO CHIEF CAUSES OF HALITOSIS

Halitosis, we are told, means bad breath. Rather an unpleasant subject, yet one that we must consider if we wish to be immaculate. Offensive body odors suggest unclean habits, though uncleanliness may not be the cause. It may be that the afflicted person simply does not know the proper corrective measures.

In the case of an unpleasant breath, the first step toward correction is to determine the cause. There are two people who can help you to do this, the physician and the dentist. Consult them.

Halitosis is often the result of mouth, teeth or throat trouble, but not always is this the case. Sometimes digestive disturbances, or disease in other parts of the body, is responsible for this annoying condition.

Should the cause prove to be decayed or neglected teeth, diseased mouth or tonsils, your physician or dentist will advise you how to proceed. Common sense will tell you to brush your teeth after each meal so as to remove all particles of food from them, and for the purpose of freeing the mouth of harmful bacteria a good antiseptic mouth wash should be used.

If your physician has diagnosed your trouble as involving any of the internal organs, follow his advice in the matter.

'Tis said the most daring scene ever enacted for the movie camera is the scene in the picturization of Sir Rider Haggard's "She," where Betty Bythe steps into the pillar of flame, divested of every earthly raiment, and her form is actually consumed before your very eyes. Here is a rare combination of exquisite beauty and the peak of sensationalism. From out of the mass of mediocre pictures comes the stupendous attraction, "She" which will go down in the annals of motion picture history as a step ahead of anything so far presented. Weird, fantastic settings, yet of wondrous scenic beauty from a background for the love story of the most beautiful woman the world has ever known.

Bud Johnston To Run For Sheriff

Present Incumbent, Sheriff Since 1923, Wants Votes Based Upon His Official Record In Office

H. L. (Bud) Johnston, sheriff of Lubbock county since January 1, 1923, will again be a candidate for the office when Lubbock county voters go to the polls in their primary election on July 28 of this year. Sheriff Johnston's announcement to the voters follows:

"In placing my name before the citizens of Lubbock county and asking for a fourth term as your sheriff I do so with the feeling that my record as a peace officer is established beyond any shadow of a doubt. Since taking the office which I now hold, I have endeavored at all times to uphold the laws of our country to the letter of their content, impartially and without fear or favor. At the same time I have also, at all times, tempered the duties of my office with what I believed was good judgment and common sense and the record which I have made as the head of your sheriff's department does not disclose a single instance where force or arms were unnecessarily used in the upholding of the laws.

"In this connection I also wish to point out that I do not believe in officers exercising the power of the courts and juries in passing upon the guilt or innnocence of prisoners and I am decidedly opposed to rewards for dead prisoners or similar encouragement to officers to assume the duties of judge and jury.

"I respectfully call your attention to the record of Lubbock county in its respect of the law during my administration. Since an officer's duties call for the prevention of crime as well as its repression I feel that the absence of "crime waves" here, despite the constant influx of all types of people into the city and county, should be to the voters the silent witness of an efficient tenure of office.

"I am asking the voters of Lubbock county to return me to the office which it has been my privilege to hold for the past five years and in so doing offer as proof of my ability my record as your sheriff. I do not ask you to make me your sheriff by pleas based upon future promises. I ask for your vote and support based upon my past services with the added promise that if I am re-elected Lubbock county will receive the same efficient, common-sense administration which it has had from me in the past.

"If you feel that I have fulfilled my oath of office, if you feel that I have made Lubbock county a good sheriff, I respectfully solicit your vote and support upon my past, present and future platform of strict law enforcement. Signed,

"H. L. (Bud) JOHNSTON."

Mrs. Fann Out For Treasurer

Candidate for County Post Cites Training as Basis Of Qualification; Makes Public Statement.

Mrs. Virginia Fann, of Lubbock, will be a candidate for county treasurer on July 28th, when democrats of the county hold their regular primary. She makes the following statement to the voters:

"I desire to enter my name as a candidate for county treasurer subject to the Democratic primary.

"I feel that the training I have had in a business college, an Oklahoma State College and West Texas State Teachers College and the experience I have had in teaching, in salesmanship, in clerical and general office work, have qualified me for the office of county treasurer.

"I am prompted to seek this office by a desire to serve the people in the county in which I have lived for several years and at the same time support my family, which has been necessary for me to do since the death of my husband.

"If elected to this office, I promise at all times to faithfully fulfill my duties."

Signed Mrs. Virginia Fann

Lubbock County Boys' Clubs Present Enviable Record

Fine Report For Past Year Shows Lads Are Active

Many Achievements Of '27 Are Brought Out By D. F. Eaton, County Agent, In His Year's Report

Furnishing the state president of the Texas Boys Country clubs, winners in trips to Chicago and Washington, winner of the Texas Farm Journal prize, state winner of the baby beef contest, and the highest point boy in the grain judging contest at the Texas A. and M. short course, members of the Lubbock County Boys clubs added much to their prestige as agricultural workers during the past year. Besides furnishing winners and high point men in practically all of the contests conducted for club members in the state and nation, the clubs had representatives at the Texas A. and M. short course at College Station in the summer, representatives at the state encampment at Dallas and at the national encampment at Chicago.

Under the leadership of D. F. Eaton, county agent, the boys have accomplished much during the past year. Fifteen clubs are now functioning in the county with a county council meeting every month in which the work is planned and presented before the various clubs. Approximately 230 boys have been in the work during the year and at the annual Achievement day program held here, December 17, 150 boys reported completion of their year's work and more than 100 certificates were given out.

Work is Important

The work of the boys, displayed splendidly in every phase of the work, is an important factor in the development of some six communities of the county to a point that they will have constantly local activities and programs improving their agriculture, schools, churches and social conditions.

Besides the work given to the boys by Mr. Eaton, much of theclub work coaching was done by ex-members who are now out of the work, having completed it. Texas Technological college has six students who are former county club members who are making excellent showings in their work there.

In his annual report, which he has just completed, Mr. Eaton said, in writing of the club boys' work, "Their work is the most interesting as well as the most far reaching field of the extension service resulting in direct good in the most effective way."

With another year ahead of them and many more to follow, leading agricultural experts of the county state that the future of the industry is assured with the growth of the club boys work.

Here Are Records

I. J. Thornton of Slaton was selected as the president of the Texas Boys clubs in their meeting at the Dallas fair. He was also winner of the trip to Washington and first place winner in the Texas Farm Journal prize. The national winner is yet unannounced.

Harold Smalley was selected as the state winner in the baby beef contest and won a trip to the national encampment at Chicago.

W. J. Grimes won a gold watch for being high point man in the grain judging contest at the short course in College Station.

Their records in the work during the year gave ample proof of the skill and technique carried out in their work. Earl Pine had a net profit of $315.10 from his five acres of cotton, grossing $464 and having an expense account of $148.90. Jimmie Knight had an unusual profit in theton littre contest. His gross profits were $450, expenses $98.22 and net profit, $352.78. Harold Smalley reported a gross profit of $234.06 in his baby beef work and netted $153.61. John Lewis Vaughn, with a gross profit of $229.90 and expenses of $24.44, made a profit in turkeys during the season while W. J. Grimes made nine tons of milo on five acres, netting him $120.13.

RED CROSS NURSE

Work Of Chapter Reorganized At Pampa

PAMPA, Jan. 7 (AP)—Reorganization of the local Red Cross chapter, with provision for employing a Red Cross nurse for school work, charity cases, and general community social service, has been affected here.

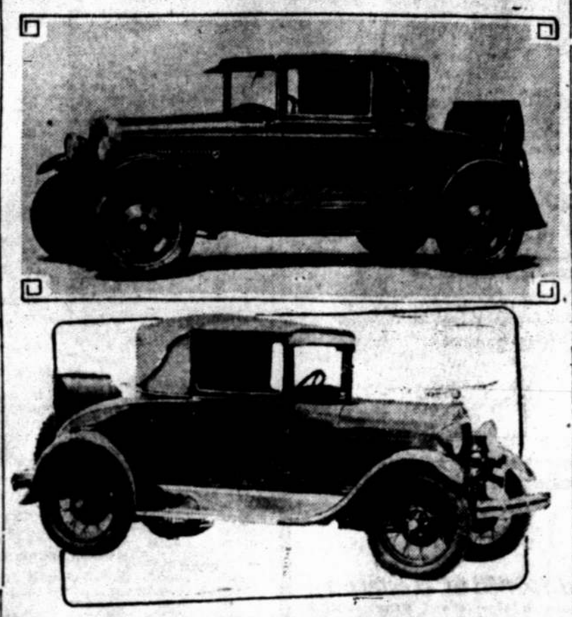
The Rev. Tom W. Brabham, pastor of the First Methodist church, has been appointed chairman of the board of directors.

For the last two months a school nurse has been employed in the Pampa Independent School district making a thorough examination of the pupils. Superintendent R. C. Campbell speaks highly of her work and is in favor of the new chapter.

Regular meetings are to be held and the program for the coming year is gradually forming.

Nearly 10,000 Nebraska farm homes are equipped with running water.

The New Chevrolet—And The Ford



These two sport cabriolets look so much alike, they could easily be confused. But the upper picture is that of the new Chevrolet. The lower one is a Model "A" Ford.

By ISREAL KLEIN

Science Editor, NEA Service

If all the claims about the new Chevrolet and the new Ford are true, these cars will be running neck and neck for supremacy in the automobile sales field of 1928.

Both will be considered by the same prospects, no matter what the difference in price, for both are definitely built for the low price field. What will sell Chevrolet will be each buyer's personal opinion as to its advantages over the Ford, while the accumulated sales of each will tell the tale at the end of the year.

That the new Chevrolet has some advantages over the new Ford is not to be doubted. But at the same time it lacks certain innovations that make the Ford a threatening competitor.

For instance the Ford has four hydraulic shook absorbers, while the Chevrolet builders have satisfied themselves with what are called "reverse checks," or two inverted spring steel bows on each spring, intended to increase spring friction and improve the car's riding qualities.

More Choice in Fords

The new Ford has a multiple disc clutch, against the single plate type of Chevrolet. It has a gasoline guage on the dash, thanks to the tank directly in front. And it has four color options for every one of its five models.

On the other hand the Chevrolet

Better Times In Store for Large Majority In U. S.

"The Average Man" Will Be Better off In 1928, Says Prof. Irving Fisher, Who Sees Hike In Wages

BY RODNEY DUTCHER

NEA Service Writer

(Copyright 1928, NEA Service, Inc.)

WASHINGTON, Jan. 7—The majority of the American people are not any too prosperous, but each year adds a few more to the prosperity class and 1928 should be no exception.

This assertion is made by Professor Irving Fisher of Yale, often regarded as this nation's oustanding political economist.

Because one-half the incomes of the population amount to $110 a year or less, Professor Fisher protests against sweeping claims that our people are prosperous as a whole. As judged by standards set up by such agencies as the United States Bureau of Labor Statistics, he says, the majority of them are poor.

Only a small fraction of the income class, he points out, will ever be put to the test of prosperity, against which President Coolidge recently warned. More than 99 per cent of incomes are less than $9,000 a year.

Prosperous in Comparison

"But the most important point," says Professor Fisher, "is that our people are prosperous when compared with the peoples of other nations. From that standpoint, we are getting along very well.

"We come nearer than anyone else to the standards of income and living set up by the Labor Bureau. And we are making more and more headway.

"Thus, although it is not fair to say that all of us are in this sense prosperous, it is a fact that more of us are becoming prosperous each year."

In an exclusive interview, Professor Fisher admitted that probably a little more unemployment existed than was generally realiz-

Some Drivers Are Expert, They Claim

They "Get By" On Account Of Careful Drivers Who Ever Watch Car Repair, Royalty Avers

In spite of the fact that the state and municipal traffic regulations specify standards of efficiency for the safety features of automobiles, there is a certain type of driver who regards himself as more expert than the other man in handling a car because he can "get by" with inefficient brakes, defective steering and the like. This point is made by W. W. Royalty, president of the South Plains Auto club, who declares that good driving begins with the care a motorist gives to his car.

"The point the smart aleck driver misses when he tells how he 'gets by' with bad brakes, 'for instance, is that he does so because the really good driver gives him a wide berth," says Mr. Royalty. "He does not realize that unless the other man kept his car's safety features in good condition and knew how to use them intelligently that safety would be utterly impossible.

"With traffic as heavy as it is today, only the most foolhardy would think of letting his car get into poor condition.

"It is in recognition of the importance of good brakes and other safety features that the American Automobile association, with which this club is affiliated, conducts periodic tests of car equipment through its local organizations. It has been the experience of these clubs that the motor car owners who take advantage of these tests are good drivers, for in submitting their cars to an examination they reveal that they know good driving begins with good care of the car."

TO ATTEND MEET

Lubbock will be represented at the annual sales convention of the Delco Light company, General Motors subsidiary, for this section of the country, to be held in Dallas on January 12, according to an announcement received here today by D. A. Davis, dealer, who will attend the convention.

TIRE EXPORTS GAIN

Eports of automotive rubber goods from this country to Italy for the first nine months of 1927 increased more than 341 per cent over the same period of 1926. The returns for this period total nearly $4,500,000.

GAS CHEAPER WHERE OIL IS SCARCE

WASHINGTON, Jan. 7—According to the American Automobile association, the gasoline dollar will buy ten gallons of gas in Peoria, Ill., a city located in a territory that produces practically no oil, and will buy only four gallons in Phoenix, Ariz., where oil is plentiful.

It seems the closer to the oil fields the motorists gets, the more he has to pay for his gas.

BILLION FOR ROADS

The United States yearly is spending eight billion dollars for the construction and upkeep of its roads and highways. Of this amount, government expenditure is less than eight per cent, the states supplying the rest out of their own funds.

The first lucifer match was made in 1820.

A BRIEF HISTORY OF A GREAT ACHIEVEMENT

IN THE Spring of 1925 Dodge Brothers undertook an important and gigantic task — which is now complete.

Since its inception in 1914 Dodge Brothers had specialized exclusively in a four-cylinder product. During thirteen years more than two million units of that product were sold to America and to the world.

It is unnecessary here to comment on the singular merits of that famous Four.

It was honored on the battlefields of war, and achieved equal distinction on the highways and byways of peace.

Its long life and complete dependability had become an adage.

Meanwhile, however, times were changing and tastes were changing with them.

While still as important as ever, dependability alone was no longer sufficient.

Greater speed and comfort, more style and luxury were the growing prepossessions of the hour.

Two years ago Dodge Brothers appraised its task and embarked upon a program designed to place it and its Dealer Organization in a position on January 1, 1928, second to none in the industry.

The astonishing results of this great achievement are now known to the world.

It is doubtful if industrial annals can cite, over a similar period, an achievement so outstanding.

A smart, swift, low-priced and immensely popular quality Four has replaced its famous predecessor.

The Senior Six, outstanding in performance, quality and luxurious appointment, has been created.

Graham Brothers Trucks and Motor Coaches (formerly exclusively Fours) have been supplemented by sixes. Fifty new types have been added. The capacities are broadened to range from one-half ton to two-ton, all resulting in the most complete and capable line of work cars known, and with prices ranging from $670 to $4290.

Then Thursday came The Victory—a Six for $1045 and up—the most spectacular engineering achievement of the decade.

These accomplishments, one following the other in steady progression, have now provided Dodge Brothers Dealers throughout the world with the most diversified and comprehensive line of passenger and commercial vehicles ever manufactured and sold by a single organization.

For every need and purse there is now a Dodge Brothers vehicle built dependably and in full recognition of the progressive ideals of today and tomorrow.

Adhering rigidly to the sound and honorable standards of a great past, Dodge Brothers have met the challenge of a still more exacting future.

THE STORY THUS FAR

The story is laid in the Indian territory and along the Kansas border in the '80's, when a fight was being waged by the "Boomers" for the opening of the territory to settlement.

Chief characters are:

TONY HARRISON, orphaned at 13 when his father was murdered in a poker game.

PAWNEE BILL, adventurer, Indian interpreter and showman.

JOE CRAIG, who takes Tony to the Bar K ranch to live;

TITUS MOORE, owner of the Bar K;

RITA MOORE, his little tomboy daughter.

When Tony is 15, Rita and her mother depart for Virginia and the boy learns for the first time how much he cares for the little red-haired, arrogant miss. Titus Moore, owner of a thoroughbred mare, is challenged to a horse race in Caldwell by CLYDE JONES, owner of a remarkable stallion.

Tony rides Fancy, Moore's mare, and wins with her. Under the terms of the bet, Jones loses $5000 and his horse, but Moore refuses to accept the horse.

Titus Moore shrugged in a manner that indicated Clyde Jones was free to give his horse to whom he chose.

But Tony, when he was informed of how matters rested, shot a quick, understanding look at his employer and refused. Into his eyes had leaped at first a gleam of surprised gladness; to be the owner of that magnificent beast, Black Diamond, would be wonderful beyond all imagination. Looking at Colonel Moore, though, he felt somehow that he would be robbing the man of a magnanimous gesture.

"I couldn't think of it," he told the owner of the beaten stallion, and Clyde Jones, half angrily, smote his fist against his open palm.

"Why, this is ridiculous," he argued. "It was a gentleman's bet, and I'm trying to pay it like a gentleman, and you won't let me."

"It ain't any use trying to argue with the colonel," Craig told him with a grin. "I reckon I ought to know; I've worked for him long enough."

Titus Moore nodded. "He's right: I'm sort of stubborn when I make up my mind. Listen here Mr. Jones, don't you think it would be nice to present Tony here with a colt? It seems to me your horse and mine both have qualities that ought to be passed on to another generation."

"They ought to be bred; that's certain," Jones agreed. "In fact, that's what I had in mind when I offered to buy your mare. Since you're so insistent on giving Black Diamond back to me, I'll agree on the condition that their first born goes to Tony," and he thrust forward his hand to seal the bargain.

The colonel generously suggested that Craig and the other hand run off and amuse themselves. "You've got a lot of money in your pockets and it's burning holes. It won't do me any good to tell you to cache it in a bank; I'd be wasting my breath. Before nightfall it'll all be gone, between liquor and roulette. Tony, did you bet anything on the race?"

Tony admitted he had. "A hundred dollars, Colonel."

"Well, I supose I ought to tell you that you're too young to gamble, but I won't. I want you to walk over to the bank with me now. I'm putting one thousand of the five I won in trust for you. It'll be yours with interest, when you're 21."

And to the boy's protestations he raised a silencing hand. "Don't argue, Tony; you earned it."

In a letter that night to Mrs. Moore he wrote, among other things: "And Tony was the perfect gentleman. He could have had the stallion, just by nodding his head, but he was too good a sport. There is good blood in him, Katherine, and you're going to have to let me have my way about him."

Back at the ranch once more, Tony found the weeks slipping by without event. Summer passed and Rita had not come, and he found himself saying it was better that she had not. To see her once more would only revive the thing he was trying to kill; he would be unable to conceal from her the truth and he would be laughed to scorn.

Late in October he heard again from Pawnee Bill. The Cody-Carver show had closed its successful season, and at Omaha Buffalo Bill and Dr. Carver had divided the material. Carver taking his half south for a winter tour.

"And I'm going with him," Pawnee Bill wrote, "taking the Indians along with me. If we have a good winter I'll be right back in the show business in late spring."

"And I'll be with him," Tony told himself.

But the Carver show was doomed. It played to disastrous business throughout the south, and at New Orleans Pawnee Bill and his Indians left it and returned to Pawnee. Tony Harrison heard from him again shortly afterward, this time from Wellington. He expressed himself as somewhat disappointed with his first experience, but not at all pessimistic.

"It's found to pay if it's run right. At present I've got my cattle on my mind again. They're wintering right now at Medicine Lodge, and I'll most likely spend the summer with them and sell in the fall, providing I'm not tempted to go with Bufalo Bill next spring."

He did not appear at the Bar K ranch all winter. Early in the spring of 1884 he wrote that the likelihood of spending that season on tour was small. "Things don't look just right and I've got an investment, in these cattle of mine, that needs watching."

That spring saw a renewal of the activity of David Payne and his Boomers. The murmur against the cattlemen had been growing louder in the border towns of Kansas there were many who lifted their voices in public protest against the interests that were keeping the territory closed to homeseekers.

In May Payne took a party of fifty colonists and tried to establish a settlement in Oklahoma just south of the Cimarron river. They were run out by United States cavalrymen.

"Why?" many of the Boomers asked. "Why are we being run out?"

"Orders," they were told briefly.

"Orders," asked Payne, "to run all white people out of the territory? What do you do when you pass a cattle ranch — close your eyes?"

There was no answer.

Again in June Payne tried it, this time with increased numbers. South of Hunnewell they were met again by cavalrymen and escorted once more across the border.

Reports of these activities drifted to the Bar K ranch and almost invariably put Titus Moore in a bad humor. For him there was only one side to the argument: he was paying his money to the Cherokee Nation for the use of grazing land and what right did Payne have in thinking the cattlemen were wrong? Because the Indians were willing to lease their lands did that mean that every white man who could race in and grab one was entitled to a quarter section for nothing?

"The strip will be the last to be opened, if it comes at all," Joe Craig ventured. "Payne's aiming first at that part they're calling Oklahoma down in the center of the territory. There isn't an Indian on it." He gazed off into the distance and pursed his lips in a soundless whistle. "Boy, I'll sure be sorry when she goes."

"It won't," Titus Moor snapper. "What do you suppose we've got that lobby for down in Washington?"

"As I understand it," Tony Harrison put in, "Payne says the Strip isn't owned by the Cherokees at all. He contends they only own the right to hunt on it and pass over it."

"Yes, but they were promised that right just as long as the rain should fall and the flowers grow. That's what it says in the treaty. If you should ask me, I'd say it was a pretty long time, although during that dry spell we had last summer I thought I could see the end in sight." Titus Moore laughed.

Then they got word of a tragedy. Not long after Payne's attempt to settle south of Hunnewell, he died. Some said he died, others thought differently. He expired suddenly in Wellington while at breakfast. Many of his friends believed he had been poisoned by those who opposed the opening of Oklahoma.

Ugly rumors flew and the Oklahoma Boomers were filled with resentment. William L. Couch, Payne's first lieutenant, took up the torch dropped by the fallen leader and endeavored to hold it high. Public attention suddenly was focused on the opening of the territory, and many felt that Payne's death would hasten it by several years. Border newspapers reminded their readers in editorials that Moses led the Israelites to the edge of Canaan and died just before they went in to possess it.

"So Payne died, with just a glimpse of the Promised Land, after leading his followers through a wilderness of struggle."

When word of Payne's death reached the ranch Titus Moore shook his head. "I'm downright sorry. I had nothing against the man; I just felt he was misguided in his enthusiasm. He was a good man."

"Do you think," Tony asked Craig, "that the Boomers will disorganize?"

"Why? Because Payne's dead? Boy, from the cattlemen's standpoint that the worst thing that could have happened. This talk about being poisoned by some enemies is foolishness. Payne's a—"

"A martyr," Titus Moore supplied.

"That's what I'm trying to say—a martyr. The Boomers'll be more active than ever."

Tony had counted strongly on traveling that summer with Pawnee Bill in a show, but his disappointment was abated with the arrival of Fancy's colt.

It was an awkward, gangling, long-legged thing, black save for a white blaze on his head; but Titus Moore, who knew horses, was emphatic in his pronouncement that Fancy had foaled a colt fully worthy of its mother and sire.

"Of course," he explained, "there's no way of telling with absolute certainty yet; we'll have to be patient and watch, how he develops. But I'm pretty certain that we have here one of those fortunate accidents in breeding that every horse fancier hopes to stumble across before he dies."

They had named him Cherokee. "In two years," the colonel predicted, "you'll be sitting on the fastest thing on four legs, or I miss my guess."

It was a new and lasting joy to Tony Harrison. Almost he was able to forget his misery of the summer before. Rita was but a memory, although it hurt him sometimes even now to think of her. But he found it quite easy not to.

The name of Tom Benton comes forward and Tony Harrison puts himself on record. In the next chapter.

133,000 Miles Is Chrysler's Record

Oklahoma City Owner Says Roadster Still Runs And Looks Good After Grind Of Many Miles

A remarkable record of automobile durability is reported to the Chrysler Sales Corporation from Oklahoma City by the owner of a Chrysler "70" sport roadster which has 133,000 miles on its speedometer although it is only three years old. The car, according to its owner, "still looks good and runs good, and I operate it with the same results as the first year I ran it."

Jack C. Wheeler, the owner, sums up the car's history in this paragraph of a letter to Ferguson H. Olander, Inc., Chrysler distributors at Oklahoma City:

"I have attained a mileage of over 133,000 miles; I am on my tenth set of tires; the roadster is slightly more than three years old; its gasoline consumption averages from 17 to 23 miles per gallon; it was last overhauled early in 1927 at which time it had 108,000 miles to its credit; since then it has been driven 25,000 miles; allowing for everything, it has not cost me more than three cents a mile to operate."

Mr. Wheeler, in this letter, says that he intends to operate his Chrysler until next spring at least, and then will get another Chrysler unless he decides to keep on using the old one.

Body by FISHER

FISHER BODY and Fisher Body alone made it possible for Chevrolet to demonstrate what wonders can be accomplished in beautifying a car of popular price. There is an obstacle which quite literally prevents any car from giving that which only Fisher gives. This obstacle is the stubborn fact that nowhere in the world is there anything even remotely approaching the unrivaled facilities of Fisher Body in the creation either of beauty or of value. For that reason the several new cars with Body by Fisher which are arousing unusual admiration cannot be duplicated or rivaled because Fisher Bodies cannot be duplicated or rivaled. Chevrolet was able to draw upon these unrivaled Fisher Body resources and the result is an exquisiteness of appearance so unusual and so advanced that it places the car absolutely alone and supreme in its class

New High Mark Is Set By Hupmobile

Heavy Demand For New Six Is Reported In Unbroken Volume By Dealers From All Sections

Continued heavy demand for the new Hupmobile 1928 Six has set a new last quarter's record for production and sales, according to R. S. Cole, general sales manager of the Hupp Motor Car corporation.

"In view of the very satisfactory December sales total, following the record sales which made November the best month in the company's history, the last three months of 1927 will go into Hupp annals as the largest last quarter the company has ever known," said Mr. Cole.

"The remarkable reception accorded the new Six shows no signs of slackening. The initial enthusiasm which brought in a volume of orders during November far beyond any previous month we had known, has continued with unbroken force. Even yet, weeks after the new cars were first put on the market, a flood of orders is still pouring in from all parts of the country. Our dealers everywhere are highly enthusiastic over the public's reaction to the appeal of the new car's features and our reports from all sides give cause for high confidence over the prospect for Hupp business during the coming year.

"One of the very gratifying aspects of the record business of the last two months is that it was in marked contrast with the seasonal decline reported in motor car sales generally. It is all the more satisfactory because it was attained in the face of serious handicaps, for we have encountered difficulty in obtaining sufficient materials to meet the heavy demand for the new car and have also to take into account the fact that the factory was closed December 24 for inventory, cutting off time that would have swollen the production record even above the high figures it has reached."

MAKES HEART BEAT AFTER IT STOPPED

CLEVELAND—Putting "life" into a heart that has stopped beating, is the feat performed here by Dr. Pierre Rijlant, a professor of the University of Brussels.

The experiment was made at Western Reserve Medical school. Hearts of animals, just slaughtered, were brought to Dr. Rijlant. From one of these hearts he made a chemical extract. This was injected into the other and the heart which had stopped beating was revived into momentary action.

MOTORISTS, BEWARE!

A ruling by the U. S. supreme court says that a motorist who crosses a railroad crossing, depending on his hearing or signal to escape danger, and takes no further precaution to protect his life and property, does so at his own risk.

Still a Bad Boy

How Is the Tire Tension?

BY ISRAEL KLEIN
Science Editor, NEA Service

Chains take a great deal of punishment, during a winter's usage, but they return a proportionate amount to the car.

On a 30 by 4.40 tire, it has been pointed out, a cross link hits the pavement 660 times in a mile. When the car has gone 100 miles, each cross link has come into contact with hard pavement or ice 66,000 times.

Add to this the strains of braking, starting and pullings, and little more may be expected of them.

In return for this hard usage, the chains take their revenge out of the tires, force the engine to work harder and can rip holes into the fenders.

That is, of course, if the driver is careless about them.

Proper attachment of the chains and careful driving will afford the most possible benefit out of the chains and the least possible harm to tires, engine or other parts of the car.

In the first place, the chains should be put on right. They must be loose enough to allow them to work their way around the tires. If they are tight, they will stay in one position, cutting into the casings and causing tire trouble.

A little play will cause even wear on the tires all around.

The chains, however, must not be too loose, or they'll rattle against the fenders when the car goes at any considerable speed and break easily. Furthermore, constant tapping of a chain on the same spot of the fender will eventually wear a neat hole there.

In the case of the new type of rubber links, on the contrary, the chains must be applied as tight as possible. The tires should be blown to their requisite pressures and then the chains may be applied tightly.

The reason for this is that rubber chains are flat and smooth, and therefore do not need to have free play around the tires. In fact, if applied loosely, they are liable to break easily.

Applied tightly, rubber chains will help lengthen the life of the tires. These may be kept on all winter, no matter what the weather for they are no bother either in driving or in the way of comfort.

With chains on, motorists might think they are free to speed along the worst sorts of highways with utmost safety. The safety may be there, but the wear and tear on the chains and tires won't be.

Tire chain manufacturers say that drivers should not go faster than 25 miles an hour, to get the best out of them. Weather conditions alone should compel motorists to keep within this limit.

"The fact that chains are necessary or advisable," says one maker, "is a warning in itself that high speeds should not be attained and that caution is in order."

Because of the modern hard pavements, it is advisable to keep chains on the tires only when necessary. Chains on dry pavements are harmful to the tires, makes uncomfortable riding, are a strain on the engine and wear out faster.

The exception to this is the case of rubber chains.

Ruth Snyder And Her Paramour To Die During Week

Silent Walls Of Death Cell Have Grim Appearance Where All Is Silence And Ironic Warnings

BY HORTENSE SAUNDERS
NEA Service Writer

OSSINING, N. Y. Jan. 6.—The woman who in gayer days was beautiful "Tommie" Snyder, will enter the Sing Sing prison death chamber the night of January 12, unless executive clemency spares her.

"Silence," placards on each of four otherwise bare walls will command.

Ironic warnings! For the death chamber is the most silent place this side of the tomb. It is silent with an unnatural quietitude that strains at the eardrums and bears down like a terrific weight on the nerves.

Never Laughter

The room thus placarded is one where scores have been put to death, but where no person ever laughs.

Ruth Snyder's farewells already will have been said. She will be attended by one or two prison matrons. She may see as many as 30 faces lined along the walls—guards, witnesses, medical experts, reporters.

The guards will speak if at all, in whispers. No one ever becomes completely hardened to the death chammer's chill procedure—certainly, at least, not when it is a woman who is to die.

Across the room, Ruth Snyder will see a door. It leads to mortuary equipped with five marble slabs.

A Last Prayer

A cleric will break the silence for a few moments, reading the litany of the doomed and pronouncing a last prayer.

Ruth will be strapped to the room's one sinister piece of furniture a moment afterward. The straps go across the shoulders, around the wrist and ankle and below the knee.

The tensest moment of an execution, say veteran prison attendants, is the one before the electric current is switched on. Theoretically, there always is the possibility that someone will burst stage-fashion into the room shouting "Stop! Stop! A reprieve from the governor."

The electric lights throughout Ossining and half a dozen neighboring towns are dimmed when the switch is thrown. They are dimmed once, twice, perhaps a third time.

The brain registers no pain in an electrocution, say the medical experts. If the object of society's discipline were able to meet the death shock with a smile, the smile would remain on the face. Stilling of the mental faculties is instantaneous.

Doctors apply stethoscopes after each application of the current. The body is wheeled to the mortuary.

Among the less emotional spectators, there may be a bit of murmuring. But generally they file out of the death chamber into the bright hallways—

Silently.

LOW COST SCHOOLING

A report recently released shows a total of 185,900 pupils in high and elementary schools. Women teachers were paid eight millions of this sum and male instructors received in excess of one million dollars.

[illegible] however there is no way that our city and schools have of operating all agree that the county administration is something that we cannot [illegible] without. We all agree that [illegible] method of operating the city. We cannot have [illegible] services that we all crave unless [illegible] revenue from which to pay for [illegible] and taxation is the only way [illegible] can get by. True mistakes may [illegible] and some officials may be ex[illegible] but we dare say there cannot be found anywhere a more economical administration than is found in all of our three groups that control the affairs of the county city and schools.

Without the City Commission we could not have the conveniences of the water, sewer, street paving etc., and all of them are necessary if we are to have an up to date city. The same is true of our school. There must be equipment, and teachers, and it takes money, and a great deal of it to furnish these, but without a system of [illegible] that we have there would be a tremendous expense to those who have a number of children to send to the school of the city. If it were not for the system of free schools, where the expense of operation is taken from those who have property and more able to pay, there would be a very large percent of the children of this city who would never learn to read or write, and ignorance would be abroad, and we all know what that means. Take the history of the nations where the population is largely an ignorant class, and you will find that there is more trouble, more uprisings among the people. The government has more trouble in operating its affairs and everything is more or less chaotic.

We are a new city, so to speak. The property owned here at this time is comparatively in the hands of a few people and it is undeveloped. It falls heavily upon many, and makes it rather burdensome, but with an increasing population, and the improvement and development of the country, and the city, there will come more relief in the future. We have many of the conveniences now that a city of fifty thousand people have, and of course these will not have to be made later, and with additional 15,000 or 20,000 people to bear the burden of taxes, there is not going to be the prorata tax that there is now, and we need not become alarmed at the cost of government. We can only take a sensible view of the situation, and if most of us were to sell our property today at an easy sale price, we would realize a very large profit on the original investment. There are of course some people who bought on the top of the market who might not more than "break even", but there is no real need for the average citizen and property owner to "howl". You are enjoying the privileges of living in a live progressive town, and if you are a laboring man you are receiving five or six times as much wages as you did when taxes were 'cheap'.

Had the estimable scientist who predicted this was to be a winterless winter been in our midst and stationed on the north side of the house early Sunday morning we believe he would have revised his forecast without it being suggested to him.

VOLSTEAD IS SATISFIED

Mr. Volstead, author of the prohibition law, expresses entire satisfaction with his offspring. He declares the law was more adequately enforced in 1927 than during the preceding year, and expresses confidence that it will become more and more an effective statute and a part of the tradition of the nation. We are not advised as to what Mr. Volstead bases his opinion on with respect to the effectiveness of enforcement during 1927. He may have information that we are not possessed of, but so far as we are able to learn, if there was any diminution in the liquor supply during the year the fact did not come to our knowledge. The Christmas and New Year's celebrations, according to all reports, were marked by the usual quantity of liquors that have always been considered essential on such occasions. Private homes likewise appeared to have well-stocked cellars, and we are not disposed to think the stocks displayed and served represented a part of the left-over from pre-Volstead days. What indulgence was done, states Mr. Volstead, was by "old-timers" and not the younger generation to whom the taste of liquor is unknown. The gentleman must have remained at home on New Years' Eve and on other occasions when and where the "younger generation" forefathers or he might have withheld that part of his statement. As imbibers, it is generally known that the "young folks" can put it over the "old timers" who have about served their time. This is not said in criticism of the law or its intent. It is simply a statement of fact that every one should know. The law is observed more in the breach than in performance, and it is all because of the tremendous number of people who profess sympathy for the law do not themselves regard it seriously. It is true we haven't the corner saloon: but the bars erected in private homes are innumerable. It is a question as to which is the source of greatest evil.

The Dennison Herald in the above paragraphs has stated a condition that we are sorry to admit is true to a very great extent. We do not believe that the country is at all in as bad condition as it would be with the open saloon, but we will admit it is bad enough.

We believe however that it is not the fault of the law, but it is the attitude that people take in the matter. What we term good citizens, will astonish you sometimes by taking up for the rankest kind of a criminal, and condemn the officers if they sometimes become a bit harsh, and they blame the courts for being too severe in the punishment of boot-leggers. Many officers knowing that many jurors will not back them up in the prosecution of the prohibition violations are rather lax in their efforts to enforce the law. Some officers are determined to go ahead with it anyway, and do the best they can.

We believe there should be some amendments to the law, and one of them is that part whereby whiskey prescriptions are permitted. This is the greatest curse to the nation at this time. If it was used as it was possibly intended it would of course be much better, but it is not. We venture the assertion that 98 percent of the prescriptions written are written when the physician that writes them knows full well that the "patient" does not need it, or at least something else could be used and with better results.

Now someone will rise up and howl about reflection on the name of the physicians who write the prescriptions. We do not believe that they can be held entirely blameless in the matter. We do not say that they write the prescription merely for the money that is in it to them, but we believe it could be truthfully said that if they would get right down to the bottom of the proposition, and say out of their own hearts, and be honest with themselves, that a very large percent of the prescriptions for whiskey written by them are written with a fairly certain knowledge that the "patient" is not going to use it for medicine, and is merely buying it for drinking purposes, and under any other conditions the patient would want to whip the doctor for intimating that he had the "trouble" that he prescribed the whiskey for.

The prescription law is very greatly abused, and for that reason it should be changed some way, so that there could not be so much of it dished out.

SO THINK WE

We think that Lubbock ranked twelfth in the state in building permits for the past year. OPINIONS

DESIRE TO GO FORWARD

Business leaders throughout the country are optimistic as to the outlook for 1928. The economic condition of the country is basicly sound and the employment situation is not marred by any untoward clouds on the horizon. The country as a whole is in good shape, which means that consumers will have money with which to buy goods—necessitating steady operation of various industries.

The agricultural situation, as always, is still a gamble. Farmers everywhere are realizing the importance of making a living at home so far as possible, and this realization on their part has been reflected in recent years through increased earnings.

It is encouraging to be assured that conditions throughout the nation are good, but it is of more importance to know that the situation in this immediate section is apparently much better than it was at this time last year. Temple had a wonderful year in 1927, starting a number of projects that will be finished this year to send 1928 down in the history of the city as a year of great moment.

But we should not be content to let the glories of 1927 be the only bright spots to light up 1928. Other and new enterprises must be launched this year to add to the projects originated last year and to serve as a nest egg for progress in 1929.

All that is required to make the year 1928 a bright page in the history of Temple is will power and a genuine desire to go ahead.

Cities do not grow of themselves. They are built through well studied programs and lots of elbow grease on the part of their citizens.—Temple Telegram.

Every town or city, and every community that is really alive has a definite program mapped out months in advance, of what they expect to undertake for the year. Of course there are many things that come up that are unexpected and things that none of us had thought about that must be taken care of in the matter of improvements, but as we stated above there is always something in mind for the future, and that is necessary. Fact of the business a town that is really alive has a big program ahead at all times.

Lubbock citizens are squarely behind all measures of improvement, and it is one reason that we go steadily ahead on matters of development. For the year just started a municipal auditorium is one of the really important things that should be taken care of.

Permanent roads is another very important thing, and the entire county should be greatly interested in this movement. It will mean that Lubbock county is keeping in line with all other progressive communities, while on the other hand if we permit this proposition to lag we will be counted among the number of counties that are not taking care of the highway program as it should be. There may be differences of opinion as to what the plan will be to make these roads what they should be, but all are of the same opinion that there must be something done.

YOUR HEALTH

DOES INFLUENZA INCREASE TOLL OF TUBERCULOSIS

By DR. MORRIS FISHBEIN
Editor Journal of the American Medical Association and of Hygeia, the Health Magazine

Since the great influenza epidemic of 1918 and 1919, physicians and statisticians have been attempting to determine the extent to which the amount of tuberculosis was increased by the attacks on lung tissue made by influenza.

They also have endeavored to determine the extent to which persons with tuberculosis suffered as compared with the amount suffered by those who did not have that disease.

Complication

A complete survey of the subject recently made by the University of Chicago indicates that influenza, as any other infectious disease, is a serious complication of tuberculosis and that a person who may be recovering from the disease when afflicted with influenza may have his tuberculosis reactivated.

However, there has not been an increase of the death rates from tuberculosis in the years following the influenza epidemic.

The question as to whether persons who are attacked with influenza are rendered more susceptible to infection by tuberculosis is most difficult to determine. Many people are likely to date the beginning of their first signs of tuberclosis to an attack of grip or influenza.

Discounts Disposition

The fact that the number of deaths from tuberculosis has not increased since 1918, but indeed that there was a decline of unusual size since 1919 and 1920, would indicate that the influenza was not important in predisposing persons to infection by tuberculosis.

No doubt, persons who were mildly infected with tuberculosis and who developed influenza suffered much more than did normal persons and, thereby were likely to relate their tuberculosis to the attack of influenza.

On the other hand, the fact that tuberculosis has not increased greatly, but is continuing to decline at a fairly steady rate is good evidence that influenza does not in some peculiar manner make it more easy for a person to become infected with tubercle bacilli.

Our Sunday Morning Sermon

By REV. R. F. DUNN

THE FAMILY, ITS IMPORTANCE

Gen. 18:19.

"For I know him that he will command his children and his household after him, and they shall keep the way of the Lord, to do justice and judgment; that I may bring upon Abraham that which I have spoken of him."

In every institution that is vitally related to the welfare of humanity, there must be some things that are fundamental and essential. A house, that is to stand the stress of storm and rain, must have a solid foundation. Nothing but sircastles, can stand, without a firm foundation.

Some people are like spiders that spin their ephemeral theories, out of their own little selves. They refuse to learn from God, or man. Except, as they may be compelled to learn, in the school of their failures and sad experiences. They arrogate to themselves, a superior wisdom, and despise and flount the infallible Word of God, as useless to them.

They are willing to assume the sacred responsibilities of marriage and parenthood, without the slightest suspicion of their lack of preparation, for the obligations that belong to these relations.

It is hard for us to understand how people of common sense, can assume such relations with no regard for the serious consequences of a failure to meet these obligations.

If one wishes to become a farmer he must have some regard for the conditions of successful farming.

Some are silly enough to think that it takes no knowledge, nor information, to succeed in this business, and wonder why they are so "unlucky" and make such miserable failures.

Sensible people will study the qualifications and conditions of success, in any business, except rearing a family.

Too many take it for granted that our natural intuition, is sufficient to overcome all difficulties we may have in meeting obligations of a home or rearing a family.

It was not so with Abraham, in the responsibilities of his home. For God said of Abraham, "I know him that he will command his children, and his household after him and they shall keep the way of the Lord, to do justice and judgment." He did not presume that he was sufficient to meet the obligations of a husband and father without regard to God's will and wisdom. He commanded his children and his household. This does not mean that he was cruel and tyranical, and rujed with the "big stick". Not one word, recorded in the Bible intimates that Abraham was arbitrary or autocratic, in his bearing toward his household. His relation with his servants must have been such as endeared him to them, as one whom they respected with reverance and love. He had 300 trained servants that were at his command when he defeated the confederated kings of the East, and recovered the captives of Sodom and Gomorrah. Yet with all his power and authority, he was considerate and firm. He had one supreme rule, and that was to conduct his household according to the way of God's justice and judgment.

Failure to command one's household is productive of tragic, if not fatal results. There is no compensation for such failure. Not even strict personal piety will atone for this.

Evils can be measured, only by their fruits; and according to this, terrible consequences follow the failure of parents to command their children.

A melancholly example of the lack of parental control, may be seen in 1 Sam., 3:12-13.

Eli, the high priest and judge in Israel, was a devoutly religious man in his way; but there was one serious fault in his life, that was attended with the most tragic experiences. He had failed to command his children, and his two sons, who became priests, also, were scandalously wicked; and by their shameful conduct and selfish greed, caused the people to forsake the worship of God, and abandon the Tabernacle, the only place, where the people met for divine service.

It is true, Eli remonstrated with his wicked sons, and protested that the report of their conduct was not good; but he failed to "restrain" them. He did not command them, although his authority, as High Priest and judge of the nation, was sufficient to restrain his own sons, and others, as well, from the disgraceful conduct that made the worship of God to be despised and abandoned by the people. He failed to restrain his sons, in their childhood and youth, and had to face the consequences of his failure when the hurt to the cause of God had become irreparable; and his remorse and grief were without remedy.

But Eli is not the only good man that has been made to suffer because of this lack of parental fidelity and loyalty to God. A parent is responsible to God, and

THE GROUCH
By Strickland Gillilan

He spoke with gruffness—often frowned
While speaking to a horse or dog.
When little children were around—
He sat, "a bump upon a log"
And seldom said a single word;
Told not a story or a jest.
Such silence, as you may have heard.
Is friendship's hardest, truest test.

Yet horses whinnied friendlily
At sight of him; the colts would come
And nuzzle him familiarly
In search of sugar-lump or crumb.
Children would clamber 'round about
In perfect trust and understanding,
Their minds devoid of any doubts,
No pledges giving or demanding.
And dogs caressing heads would lay
Upon his knee, and wag their tails
And in their wordless language say
"Here is a love that never fails!"
While shallow human souls who measure
Their fellow-souls by outward seeming
Could never glimpse the hidden treasure
These wiser, humbler ones saw gleaming!

A PLEA FOR YOUTH

Spirit of Youth be with us now
Lest ill we age, and aging snarl
At those who turn from plodding plough
To free a flower from the marl.

Spirit of Youth, our hearts keep young,
Let us share the friendly, hardy play
So each brave chorus that has rung
May echo promise for today.

Slaton Building Total A Record

Permits And Improvements For 1927 Total $730,542, Much Higher Than For Any Other Year

SLATON, Jan. 7.—Building permits and public improvement expenditures in Slaton during 1927 totalled $730,542, records show. The figures are more than double the record of 1926, and are much higher than any other year in the city's history.

Fifty new residences were built. The total also includes brick business buildings, a new telephone system which is hardly completed now, fifteen blocks of street paving, natural gas piping system for the entire city and extensive enlargements in the railroad yards here made by the Santa Fe, giving the Slaton division point facilities much greater efficiency in handling South Plains rail traffic.

Terrell Attacks Speculation On Cotton Exchange

Agriculture Commissioner Discusses Outlook; Urges Farmers Not to Increase Acreage Next Year

By GEORGE B. TERRELL
Commissioner of Agriculture.

AUSTIN, Jan. 7 (AP) —Texas farmers got more money for less cotton in 1927 than they did in 1926, and still better prices are in prospects, if the law of supply and demand controls prices.

Our Corn crop is larger and all feed crops excepts oats have increased over the 1926 production and 73 per cent of the counties have made enough feed to do them. The price of cattle has materially improved, and wool and mohair have brought fair prices. The turkey crop in some sections of the state has been remunerative. Dairy products, pork and poultry products have increased—all adding to the material wealth of the state.

These improved conditions are a fair index to future prosperity.

More Revenue In '27.

The farmers got about $425,000,400 for a 4,250,000 bale cotton crop in 1927, as contrasted to about $336,460,000 for the 1926 crop of 5,609,000 bales, or some $88,460,000 more for the past year's crop.

If the present rate of consumption continues, the world will be three million bales short of enough cotton to supply the mills for the next 12 months. This fact certainly indicates better prices if the lack of supply and demand control prices.

While the prices for cotton have been much better during the past few months than they were one year ago ,with the whole crop 5,000,000 bales less, every indication justified better prices than have ever been received for the present crop.

Speculation Scored.

The short crop caused the price to advance 25 cents at one time during the fall, and no more cotton has been made since that time. There is no apparent reason for the price decline below 20 cents, causing a loss of $25 a bale, except speculation of the cotton exchanges. I have been greatly disappointed in the price of cotton the past few months, as every indication pointed to higher prices, and it is the first time I have been deceived in my judgment about prices, but when gamblers control the market, the law of supply and demand ceases to operate. These exchanges buy, sell and deliver very little actual cotton. They are purely paper transactions,—betting on future prices, but these gambling transactions affect the prices of spot cotton generally to the detriment of cotton producers. All gambling features of these exchanges should be suppressed by law. They will cease to exist when the gambling is stopped, and the price of cotton can then be stabilized.

Cotton prices may probably advance during the next few months, but I do not expect any big advance, because the cotton trade generally, and the operators on the exchanges expect a larger acreage in cotton the coming year, as increased acreage always follows improved prices, and the trade will wait and not stock up on spot cotton until the size of the next crop is indicated by the acreage.

Hits Increased Acreage.

I want to urge all farmers not to increase the cotton acreage over last year's planting if they want increased prices, or even expect to maintain the present prices; for just as sure as the acreage is increased, the price will decline. The only way to get a profitable price for cotton is to reduce production below actual needs of the mills, unless we had an organization financially strong enough to hold any temporary surplus off the market until there was a demand for it strong enough to compel good prices.

The matter of controlling the cotton acreage is largely in the hands of the land owners and they should encourage tenants to plant less cotton and see that enough feed and food crops are planted to supply the farms and town and city population adjacent, and be sure not to increase cotton acreage, even if it becomes necessary to let some of the land "lie out." This will help the land and make it produce better in the future, and insure better prices for what cotton is produced.

We are starting the New Year with more home supplies and home comforts and brighter prospects. We should continue the practice of making the farm self-supporting, and making the cotton crop a surplus crop—produced at less cost, so as to continue the present improved agricultural conditions.

WANT COUNTY AGENT

Pampa Is After Extension Worker Again

PAMPA, Jan. 7 (AP) —The replacement of a county agent in Gray county is one of the feature steps of the Pampa chamber of commerce in its long list of proposed accomplishments during the coming year.

A year of progressive development has just passed and the organization under Manager Scott Barcus, is looking forward to a prosperous and beneficial year. Although an oil center, Pampa is among the greatest wheat shipping centers in the Southwest and the reviving of the Pampa Fair is creating the demand for a county agent. A delegation from the chamber of commerce will appear before the county commissioners at their next meeting an present that request.

The establishing of a municipal airport in Pampa also is being considered.

Other plans to be discussed for the coming year are a more adequate water supply, the bringing of industries to the city, laying out parks and playgrounds, and new roads.

Dodge Brothers' Testing Crew Has Proved Stability Of New Car With Vengeance After Bitter Hardships

Critical Aristocracy Sees Honor At Stake And Tries Hard To Find Weak Spot But To No Avail

Many months before the Victory Six was formally presented to the American public by Dodge Brothers, the new model was quietly introduced to an exclusive group of hard-handed, leather-skinned young men whose jobs center around an aristocratic section of the factory known as "Department 95" or under a more descriptive title of "engineering-experimental." Department 95 is a high class finishing school for debutante ideas in Dodge design and construction.

It is the function of Department 95 to take an inventor's main ambition out somewhere and ruin it, if ruination is possible.

Forty men, picked and chosen, constitute the staff. Half of them have college degrees, though their fingernails belie the fact, and their mates have come up through the ranks of Detroit's vast army of automobile workers. They know motor cars, from front bumpers to tail lights. And they are fully informed as to all the geographical points in North America which present grave hazards to automobiles. A critical, merciless, brainy and fearless lot they are; for their professional reputations depend upon their being hard to please.

Times Have Changed.

Years ago when the automotive industry was young and production small, manufacturers let the public do considerable testing. But today, when millions of dollars, months of time, and an inestimable amount of good will are at stake, every part of a new model must be right; down to the last cotter pin. Any reputable motor car manufacturer would rather throw in a fortune in dollars and much costly time during the preparatory period than to let anything remotely resembling an error creep into his product. Money and time lavishly spent in preparation and perfection, the prominent manufacturers have found, is economically invested in the long run.

And so have arisen, in motor manufacturing centers, the exalted clans of experimental testers; typified by the forty men in Dodge Brothers' Department 95.

New to the public, the Victory Six is old stuff to them. Why, last July, Elmer Kiel, foreman of 95, was trying out the Victory's paces in Rocky Mountain snowbanks, and the car had been in process for more than a year.

Have Been Tested.

Both experimental and actual-production models of the Victory Six were driven more than 1,000,000 miles in temperatures from 18 degrees below zero to 124 degrees above by the men in Department 95 before the public was admitted into the secret that such a car was to be brought out. Everything that could possibly occur to an automobile was made to occur to the Victory Six by Kiel and his 40 testers.

A long distance phone call:

"'Lo, Kiel. This is Stevenson. Guess that double steel wall construction of the body is o. k. I just got hit by a truck when I was coming around a curve at 50. Went off the road and turned over three times. Smashed the fenders all to hell, but the body isn't dented. Broke three fence posts and a telegraph pole. No, I didn't get a scratch."

Would the car have long life? Department 95 found out. Relays of drivers kept the Victory Six going night and day, day and night, so that scientific and practical studies could be made of the effect that 100,000 miles would have.

On the western deserts, the Victory Six was made to perform in the burning sun 200 feet below sea level. Then the same car was driven 14,000 feet into the snow-clad Rockies, all in an attempt by Department 95 to prove that engineers and designers in other divisions of the factory were right—or wrong.

Stood Speed Test.

On the Indianapolis Speedway other testers were tearing around and around like all-possessed; hour after hour and day after day. Not until the Victory Six demonstrated, over and over again, that it would hold nearly 70 mile-per-hour averages for thousand-mile grinds did Department 95 men let up on speed tests and turn to something else.

Strangely, perhaps, the occupation of experimental tester does not come under the heading of extra-hazardous employment. With all their speed, and spills are few; and almost never are the hurts severe. Kiel, who often goes out on the road himself, looked surprised that the question of injuries should even be mentioned.

"When a crash comes," said he, "it generally comes quick, if there's time to duck under the instrument board, you duck, and trust to luck and an all-steel body. If there's no time to duck, you try to relax and use your arms to protect your face. Other than minor scratches and bruises, the preliminary experiments on the Victory Six have caused no casualties."

Just One Casualty.

But yes, there was one casualty that Kiel admits at his own expense. It shows that experts have something in common with duffer motorists.

"Nineteen miles from a filling station, on the Mojave desert, near Oatman, California, two of us ran out of gasoline one day last summer," said he. "We had to hike it."

Department 95 men are habitually serious and thoughtful. But they have their fun, and it takes odd quirks. Long before the sales department christened the new car "The Victory Six," the experimental testers invented one of their own. They needed a name to answer the constant questions that a sworn-to-secrecy tester gets from the public as he drives around the nation on his testing work. And so the new Dodge, to enquirers on the road, was known as the "Scoots." Sometimes it was a French Scoots, sometimes a German Scoots, occasionally an Italian Scoots.

"We met many a wise-guy," said Kiel, "who was thoroughly familiar with a Scoots car. Some of 'em had driven Scoots machines in Europe!"

Down in Mexico is a sad Mexican with a sadder mule, made sad by an anticipated two dollars they failed to get from one of the testing crew. They watched a tester try to cross a river. Deeper and deeper went the car into the stream. Up over the hubs came the water, to the frame, to the floor boards. Finally the car stalled.

No "Pull Out."

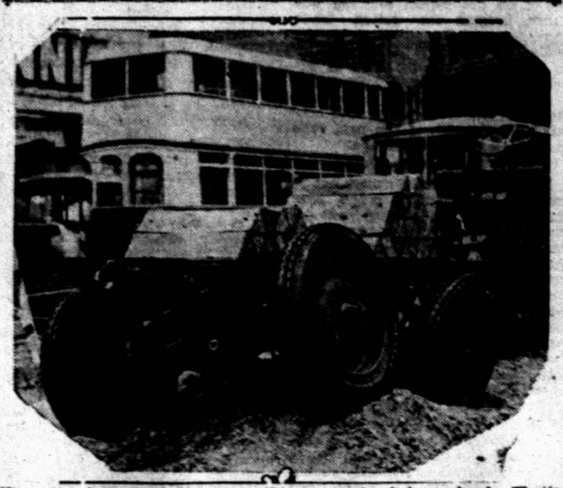
"Pull out?" called the Mexican from the bank as he pointed to his mule. "Pull out?" Two dollars!"

"Where do you get that at?" yelled back the tester, jumping off his seat and, in water nearly to his waist, wiping off the coils. In a jiffy his motor was running and the car plunged across the stream safely to the opposite bank.

It's a life of hardship in Department 95, but there's constant interest and action which attracts the highest type of men. From Detroit to Arizona, 2,600 miles, is a 5-day cruise for a tester when he's in no particular hurry; to the Rockies, to the Coast, to South and North and West and East they go; in summer and winter; by night and by day. Always they seek trouble; if they have no trouble they try to make it.

Because of the testers' hardships and griefs and exceeding pains, the American motorist now-a-days drives his car in all weathers and all seasons confident that the margin of preventable error in construction and design has been reduced to the minimum. And the American motor car manufacturers with enormous capital and valuable good will to protect, have equal confidence that their products, having successfully passed the corps of experimental engineers, will perform in accordance with expectations when placed in the hands of the public.

A Level-Bodied Truck



No matter how rough the going, this tractor-truck keeps level. That's because the axles are jointed to the chassis in such a way that the wheels follow the uneven dips of the roads while the body is unaffected. This was shown recently at the Olympia show of commercial motors in London.

Chevrolet-Ford

has lengthened its wheel base to 107 inches, 3 1-3 inches more than the Ford. It has a deeper and stronger frame, a high and narrow radiator, a thermostat in its cooling system, a combination steering and ignition lock, disc wheels of the same size as those of the Ford, four-wheel brakes supplying 21 square inches more braking surface than those of the Ford, semi-elliptic springs that extend lengthwise over 84 per cent of the wheelbase, an increased steering ratio that makes the gears practically irreversible, a vacuum feed fuel system, a stronger front axle and minor appointments within the car that are not found on the Ford.

More Powerful Engine

The engine of the Chevrolet has also been improved in power and performance. Its power has been increased by one-third its former rating, raising it above 30 horsepower, against the Ford's 24. No claim is made as to speed and mileage, except that it will go five miles an hour faster than the former model. But its two-port exhaust, improvement in the valves and pistons, and a stronger camshaft promise greater efficiency and economy on the part of the new car.

The new Chevrolet engine has been entirely enclosed to produce a quieter and cleaner power plant.

A new crank case cleaning system stops the leakage of engine fumes into the body of the car.

Wide molding and long streamline effects on the body produce a feeling of lowness and speed that is accentuated by the sleek radiator and the horizontal hood.

The lengthened wheel base permits of more room in each body. Chromium plated fittings insure against rust.

Chemistry's Part In Auto Industry Of Great Import

Questions of How and From What Cars Are Made Very Much Affect Factory In Expert's Opinion

DETROIT, Jan. 7—The greatness of chemistry's contribution to the automobile industry was pointed out recently at a meting of the American Chemical society here.

It was summarized by Dr. T. A. Boyd, of the General Motors Research Laboratory, when he pointed out that the two fundamental problems in making any automobile were really chemical problems. These, he said, were "How shall it be made?" and "Of what shall it be made?"

"Although these two problems appear to be separate and distinct," he explained, "there is really an intimate relationship between them They are closely related in that the properties of the materials available for construction have a large influence in determining what the design of any machine shall be, or in setting the limits for its construction."

It was pointed out that the automobile was made possible by three materials—gasoline, rubber and alloy steels.

"The power plant of the automobile has been built around gasoline," said Boyd. "And so the size and form of the engine, as well as the car itself to a large extent, have been determined by those properties that are peculiar to gasoline.

"By putting cushions of air underneath its wheels, rubber has made it possible for the automobile to be driven at reasonable speeds, without shaking both car and passenger to pieces. The rubber tire has influenced the strength and the weight of the car's component parts the gear ratio of its axle, the size of its engine, and many of its other parts as well. In reality, the design of the whole automobile has been affected by rubber.

"The most outstanding contribution made to the automobile by alloy steels is the cutting tools that are used for shaping its multitude of individual parts. Alloy tool steels make a large contribution to the durability and the cheapness of the motor car, because they enable the more than ten thousand pieces of which each automobile consists to be shaped with great rapidity and exactness.

"A most valuable and necessary complement to alloy-tool steels are the abrasives, by means of which automobile parts are ground out of hardest steel with a speed and a precision that is almost unbelievable."

The Bible contains no word of more than six syllables.

War On Noises Is Never Ending Fuss

Modern Auto Designers At Work As Hard To Stop Squeaks As Predecessors To Stop Clatters

Millions of dollars and millions of hours have been spent by the automotive industry during the last few years in the never ceasing war on noises. Over the drafting boards, on the test tracks, in the machine shops, hundreds of men are constantly trying to make motor cars quiet, and to build them so that they stay quiet after long service. Minor squeaks and feeble rattles offer exactly the same challenge to the automobile industry of 1928 as did the loud chug-chugs and the metallic clatters of 1908.

The owner who, twenty years ago, was satisfied with a car that could be heard two blocks away now hustles to a service station if a valve tappet ticks as loudly as a kitchen clock. Everywhere in motordom the demand is for silence. Motorists like to have their cars seen but not heard.

"In developing the Victory Six, the Dodge Brothers' organization considered quietness as one of the main ideals towards which to work as essential as speed, beauty, operating economy, or dependbility," said A. H. Knight, consulting engineer.

"The L-head type of engine was chosen, for one reason, because it is quiet. The designers paid careful attention to each individual engine part to insure permanent quietness throughout many thousands of miles of service and with minimum need of mechanical attention.

"The 52 pound crankshaft is machined all over and is supported on seven bearings having a total length of 10 1-4 inches. Crankpins are 2 1-8 inches in diameter and main bearings 2 3-8 inches, giving a total bearing area of over 41 square inches. Although a crankshaft which is carefully machined all over is in approximate dynamic balance, the Victory crankshaft is tested in specially constructed dynamic balance indicating machines and drilled until in true running balance.

LIFE OF GRADY

South Texas Journalist Is Publisher Of Book

EDINBURG, Jan. 7 (AP)—Gentry Dugat, former editor of the Edinburg Review and at one time a member of the staff of the Dallas News, has written the "Life of Henry W. Grady." The biography, bound in cloth, 150 pages and illustrated, is the first to appear upon the subject in 32 years. The author, who is a newspaper man, soldier and lawyer, has spent several years in research work upon the career of the famous Georgian, who was managing editor of the Atlanta (Ga.) Constitution at the time of his death in December, 1889.

Mr. Dugat is said to have the most complete Grady library in the United States with the exception of the matter held by the late orator's son and daughter in Atlanta, Ga.

Higher Standard For Herefords Is Colbert's Appeal

Recently Elected Head Of Cattle Association Asks Even Better Grade of Cattle Than at Present

(Special To The Avalanche-Journal)

STAMFORD, Jan. 7.—An appeal for building higher new standards in America's Hereford industry, even though the present favorable situation of breeders and producers has caused them to reach the height of present standards, has been made by R. V. Colbert, Stamford, recently elected president of the American Hereford Cattle Breeders association. This was his message to West Texas Chamber of Commerce officials, and to the organization which he heads in his first 1928 address, published in the January issue of the American Hereford Journal:

The future holds promise of material and better returns for American Hereford breeders, according to Colbert. Approximately 20 per cent increase over the average 1926 price was realized last year by Hereford cattle raisers, and since this increase scarcely equalled the comparative price advance in commercial beef cattle production, a still better day is looked to.

In support of this belief, Colbert mentioned the gradual upward trend in purebred prices from the base of 1924, and pointed out that there is not an over-supply in registered breeding stock. He likewise noted that due to extremely low prices of the past few years, the best of Herefords were topped out and that less desirable stock was turned into channels of commercial beef. Proof of this last observance, Colbert said, was shown by the crowded entries in recent Hereford exhibitions and by the narrow margins of the winners in the various classes.

Although Hereford breeders have emerged from the former depression with a much higher average quality of Hereford cattle than the breed has hithertofore enjoyed, Colbert expects that the industry will be taxed to meet demands of the grade as well as the purebred producers within the coming months, and he urges breeders to make no departure from the industry's policy to make each generation of Hereford cattle better than the preceding one.

Sunday Sermon

to society, for the control of his children. No one else has the authority, in the home. If he fails, then the religious and social welfare of the country is made to suffer. If children fail to learn obedience and respect for authority in their home, they will go out potential criminals, and be a menace to the moral and religious welfare of society.

One of the characteristics of this generation is the insubordination of children. This is especially so in the United States of America.

A prominent Englishman, when on a visit in this country, was asked, "What characteristic of the American people impressed him most, answered as follows:

"The most prominent characteristic I have observed is the children are so strict with their parents."

What makes this bit of irony so severe it strikes at an evil that we can not deny; and one that threatens the very foundations of moral and civil government. There is no institution that is more vital to the stability of church and nation, than the home. It is the first in the order of creation, and is a pillar upon which the whole fabric of our christian civilization must rest.

We are confronting a condition of youthful criminality that is appalling. Never before have we known such a large per cent of crime committed by minors, and that of the most horrible and tragic nature. No one can seriously consider the situation that exists in our country today and not feel solicitous about the future of our nation, unless he be a blind, silly optimist, who ignores facts, and shuts his eyes to the blatant evils that threaten every institution of our present social order.

We have chosen two characters from the Bible, whose examples demonstrate to us, the importance of parental control: and the fearful and tragic results of failure to meet the responsibilities of family government and parental discipline. These examples stand before us in striking contrast and admonish us of a danger which we can not afford to ignore.

I know there are many things that go to make the complex life of our present civilization, somewhat different from the times of Abraham, or Eli, but this difference only makes our situation more serious, and the importance of efficient and faithful parental control the more imperatively necessary.

I am sure Abraham had some difficulties, which were peculiar to his time, and we have some advantages he did not have, and there is no excuse for our indifference and failure to command our children. Eli, as God's High Priest, had the Word of God, in his possession. He must have known the examples of the faithful and godly parents who obeyed God, by commanding their children and their household, to keep the way of the Lord, but he allowed his sympathies and parental indulgence to ruin his sons and bring upon his family an everlasting curse; and upon the church of God, an evil that might go on forever to blight the cause of righteousness by the influence set in motion through his ungodly sons.

There are many things in our present day affairs we must consider, that are perilous to the rising generations, and should be avoided with inabating virilance, but we must reserve that for our next message, for it would prolong to an intolerable length, this part of our subject, and, for that reason, we reserve that part of our subject for next Sunday.

Charles Holcomb Out For Sheriff

Once Sheriff And Lubbock Marshal Believes In Law Enforcement; Asks Ladies For Their Support

Charles A. Holcomb, former city marshal and also a former sheriff and tax collector of Lubbock county, will be a candidate for the office of sheriff of Lubbock county, subject to the action of the democratic voters in their primary of July 28th. Mr. Holcomb's statement to the voters follows:

"I was born and raised in Texas. I have been living in Lubbock county seventeen years. I have spent six years as a peace officer.

"I have served the city of Lubbock two years as city marshal and sheriff and tax collector from 1919 until 1923. My record is an open book to one and all. I believe in the enforcement of all the laws, as the statutes so provide. I believe strictly in the enforcement of the prohibition laws. I don't believe in partiality to anyone. Each and every one should have an equal right.

"I believe that I have as much experience as any man in the county as a peace officer and if elected I will do all in my power to enforce the laws.

"I am a married man and have a family and own my own home and if I'm not elected I will continue to live here and I am for the man who is elected. So I especially appeal to the ladies's vote and will appreciate them."

(Signed)
CHARLES A. HOLCOMB.

Better Times

ed, but expressed the belief that 1928 woud be at least as satisfactory a year from the standpoint of business and industry as was 1927.

One of the ways by which a cycle of depression begins, of course, is by a combination of unemployment, lowered purchasing power and decreasing price levels.

Price levels have not been quite stable in the last two years, Professor Fisher agrees, and hence employment has somewhat decreased. But any dangerous repetition of the so-called business cycle has been headed on for the present, he believes, because the beginning of this year found the price level nearer to stabilization with an improved employment situation. The reason:

"We have had, roughly speaking, a stable purchasing power of the dollar, which tends toward stability of prosperity," explains Professor Fisher.

"I am rather optimistic about 1928.

Much Like Last Year

"I shouldn't expect it to be much more prosperous than 1927, but I don't see why it should be much less prosperous.

"It seems to me that the fall of prices already has stopped and that, if anything, we are going in the other direction.

"The Federal Reserve system, which is now preventing any great inflation or deflation, is the bulwark of our prosperity."

Rumors have been kicking around Washington of an impending collapse in the stock market. Of that possibility, Professor Fisher said:

"The fundamental causes affecting the stock market do not, in my opinion, indicate any important recession. We are likely, because of the technical situation, to have a small and sudden setback, but not one of any danger."

Our foreign trade is an important item to our economic well-being, Professor Fisher believes, but not as important to us as it is to other nations.

"Europe, he says, would be much better off if she would eliminate her tariff barriers on the continent—and it would also help if in this country we would reduce our own tariff.

Injured by Tariff

"Some day we're going to work in that direction in order to get foreign markets," Professor Fisher predicted. "In these days of mass production we're seeing the importance of foreign markets. Many industries which want to compete abroad find tariff barriers in their way and also find that they are injured indirectly even by our own tariff.

"The tariff is the continuance of a tradition and a superstition. Our own tariff interferes with our exports because our exports must be equalled by imports."

"Isn't it about time for prices to drift back toward pre-war levels?" I asked Professor Fisher.

"No," he replied. "If we want to avoid trouble we had better stick to the price level we have now. Price levels suddenly dropped in 1920 and 1921; we had a serious period of depression in 1921 and 1922. If that movement had taken the price level all the way back to pre-war, consequences to our industries and our workers might have been appalling."

QUITE EMBARRASSING

WICHITA, Kan.—Imagine a perfectly good fire, a first class fire chief and no apparatus to fight the fire. This experience came to Fire Chief McCall. The chief has an alarm box in his home. One night when fire broke out in a nearby dwelling he arrived considerably ahead of his fire fighters. This was rather embarrassing for the chief, particularly since a crowd had gathered to watch the conflagration.

Modern needles first came into use in 1545.

County Bench Is Sought By Kemp

Slaton Attorney Is To Run For County Judge; Gives Promise Of Business-Like Administration

Dennis E. Kemp, member of the Lubbock County Bar Association for the past five years, will be a candidate for county judge, subject to the action of the democratic primary on July 28th, he told the Avalanche-Journal yesterday. Mr. Kemp, resident of Slaton for five years, made the following announcement to the voters of the county:

"I was born in Bosque county, Texas, 40 years ago and in 1904, after a competitive examination, I was appointed from Bosque county to the United States Naval Academy, at Annapolis, Maryland, from which institution I graduated in 1908, the youngest member of my class.

"I served in the United States Navy as a commissioned officer for eleven and a half years, serving as Chief Engineer of the Battleship Rhode Island, with the rank of Lieutenant-Commander, during the World War.

"Following the war I went to Houston, where I was employed as efficiency engineer by the Humble Oil and Refining company. I moved to Slaton about five years ago, was admitted to the bar and the practice of law in the State of Texas and have been engaged in legal practice there ever since.

"I am a married man and have two children and I am also a member of the Christian church.

"If I am elected as your county judge I have but one pledge and promise to make, that being to see that the county court is conducted in a business-like and impartial manner, using every endeavor to see that all parties obtain each and every right to which they are entitled by law and equity. I consider the Commissioners' Court the most important branch of the county government and will cooperate with the Commissioners in seeing that the county funds are expended economically and to the best interests of the county and tax payers as a whole."
