Midland's George W. hits campaign trail

George W. Bush, the Texas governor who is perceived by many of his Midland supporters as a sterling person and the consummate politician gaining statesmanship status, this week formally announced his candidacy for the Republican Party nomination in 2000, for president of the United States.

"He will make a strong president," surmised John Bizilo, former principal of Midland's Sam Houston Elementary School. Forty-two years ago, Bizilo paddled young Bush, then a 10-year-old fourth-grader, for sort of misbehaving.

In his boyhood, young Bush was a leader, Bizilo, 80, said Monday. "He was very enthusiastic and eager. He was a little old bantam-rooster type. He had a lot of enthusiasm."

■ Bush says he wouldn't impose anti-abortion "litmus test" on Supreme Court nominees/2A

And that spirit, Bizilo recalled, apparently prodded the young Bush in the spring of 1957 to paint his face sort of like Elvis Presley.

"At that time, Elvis Presley was popular, and he (Bush) painted sideburns on his face, a goatee and a moustache," Bizilo recalled. "He had big, old sideburns like old Elvis."

After the admonishment and paddling, Bizilo said Bush's parents, George H.W. and Barbara Bush, "didn't say anything about it."

At the time of the paddling, the Bushes were co-chairmen of Sam Houston Elementary School's Parent-Teacher Association, Bizilo said.

Of the younger Bush's leadership as president, "a lot will depend on the advisers he gets," Bizilo said. "He will listen."

In testing his then-prospective candidacy in New England this week, Bush, 52, reportedly said that he, "would do nothing to disgrace" the presidency.

To that, Judge Barbara Culver Clack of Midland proclaimed a hearty "Hallelujah and amen!

"I think it is wonderful that he is actively campaigning," said Judge Culver, who is a former Midland County judge, Texas District Court judge and Texas Supreme Court justice. "And I think the American people are going to be delighted when they get to know him" and his

Vandals destroy, take supplies for Cub Scout camp

By Matt Josefy

The Boy Scouts of America were prepared for everything associated with the recent weeklong day camp, except the theft of materials from a locked, on-site trailer.

Reyes-Mashburn-Nelms Park was the host of this year's Chaparral District weeklong camp that has a second session scheduled for next week.

A park employee first reported damage to new bathrooms at the park.

Significant damage was done; three toilets, two urinals, two sinks and a ceiling exhaust fan were "destroyed by breaking," according to the police report.

Officers called to the park also noticed the vandalism to the 18-wheeler that contained the Scouts' camp supplies. Police think the trailer was broken into some time early Saturday morning.

BB guns and archery equipment, highlights of the camp for the 8- to 10-year-olds, were taken. Items that were missing when inventory was checked included a circular saw, a drill, 10 new Daisy BB guns, seven children's compound bows, six long bows, 15 hammers, 10 staple guns and other assorted items valued at $1,200 to $1,600. In addition, craft materials were scattered and mixed throughout the trailer. More than 120 pounds of plaster was broken open, and 300 bags of beads were destroyed.

According to Roy Loris, senior district executive for the local Scouts, "It will take more than six hours a day for the rest of the week for our 10 volunteers to sort out the craft materials."

Sales tax rebate drops sharply from June 1998

By Mella McEwen
Staff Writer

Sales tax revenues received by the city of Midland this month were sharply lower than a year ago.

But City Manager Mike McGregor said the city has taken the decline into account.

The State Comptroller's Office sent the city $771,708, down 20.9 percent or $203,862 from June 1998. The revenue is based on April sales.

Year-to-date sales tax revenues for the fiscal year 1998-99 are down 6.4 percent or $629,042 below last year's total. Year-to-date, the city has received $9.2 million.

"Sales tax revenues have been declining at 5 to 6 percent a month over the past year," McGregor said. "I can't tell you why they were down this time."

He said the city has "factored in a substantial decline in sales tax revenues for next year's budget," which goes into effect Oct. 1. For the city budget to be affected, he said, there would have to be six or seven months of sharp declines in sales tax revenues.

Marvin Wynn, Midland Chamber of Commerce president and chief executive officer, said "the fact that it was down that much this month and up slightly the previous month is still not telling anything. It's the year-to-date totals that begin to tell the story."

Obviously, he said, "sales tax collections are down compared to last year." He noted that until this year, Midland had seen increases in sales tax revenues each year for 13 to 15 years.

Even though energy prices have risen sharply, "activity associated with drilling is not back to where it had been," he said.

JC Penney Manager Don Lewis agreed that "no one's convinced me prices are high enough to turn

New Big Spring junior high completed

By T.E. Jenkins
Big Spring Correspondent

BIG SPRING — Big Spring Independent School District board members gave the newly constructed junior high school a thumbs up last week as the group approved the recent completion of the building's interior.

The project was finished after nearly a full year of delays in the construction of the $10.2 million school.

BSISD Assistant Business Manager Ron Plumlee said it's a great relief to see the project finally come to a close, but the end product was certainly worth the wait.

"You'll just have to see it to believe it," Plumlee said. "It really is a state-of-the-art new building. ... It looks more like a college campus than a junior high."

Features include an internal-media system that will allow Big Spring Junior High School administrators to broadcast to more than 60 television sets all over the school's 150,000-square-foot campus, as well as a phone system that will allow teachers to reach the main office from the classroom in the event of an emergency.

Principal Bill Tarleton echoed Plumlee's reaction to the building, saying it is certainly something for Big Spring to be proud of.

"They've done such a beautiful job putting this thing together," Tarleton said. "There is just enough new technology, as well as the things that are proven to work, to make this place a state-of-the-art facility.

"I hope everyone will come out July 18 for the school's first open house. They will start tours of the building at 2 p.m., and it's just something you have to see to believe."

Tarleton said the new building mixes technology with history, giving the facility a very prestigious air.

An open house is planned next month for the new Big Spring Junior High School. The old school, Runnels Junior High, is being abandoned after 80 years.

Graves murder case likely to go to jury today

By Rick López
Staff Writer

ODESSA — After a weeklong trial, an Ector County jury is expected to begin its deliberation today in the Cynthia Jolynn Graves case.

Ms. Graves, 23, is charged with capital murder in connection with the Nov. 19, 1995, beating death of her 2-year-old son, Bradon Graves.

She now lives with her parents in Stanton and works for a Midland pipe company.

Monday's proceedings started with long debates over autopsy findings and ended with testimony from a young woman who claims she was zealously harassed by Ms. Graves.

Three doctors — including a state rebuttal witness — gave their own opinions of an autopsy report prepared by the initial medical examiner.

Two of them said their conclusions agree with the defense team's theory that Bradon was killed by the defendant's ex-boyfriend: Carlos Cain Hinojos.

Prosecutors claim Ms. Graves beat her son at her ex-boyfriend's apartment to lure him back from another woman's home. Defense attorneys contend Hinojos abused the child while Ms. Graves was at work.

According to testimony, Hinojos took Bradon to the hospital at around 10 p.m. He was limp, unconscious and covered in bruises, workers said.

Bradon died the next morning after several life-saving attempts failed.

Dr. William Rohr, a Collin County medical examiner, testified Monday that most of the bruises found on Bradon were "medical marks" from IV drips, EKG pads and other medical equipment.

But more than 26 "non-medical" marks could not be accounted for, Rohr testified. Some bruises, Rohr said, indicated that someone must have grabbed the child from behind and held him tightly.

Other injuries found on Bradon included a 1-inch rip to his lower intestine and a rib fracture that was briefly mentioned in the autopsy. Rohr said the degree of healing on those wounds indicate the child was abused within hours of his death.

His theory corroborates testimony from three defense witnesses, who said they saw Bradon the day before his beating and didn't notice any visible injuries or unusual conditions. In addition, Ms. Graves testified that her son was romping around her living room before she left for work that afternoon.

"Sometimes, people just flat-out lie," District Attorney John Smith told Rohr.

"Yes. That's when you need a good pathologist," he replied.

Rohr said Monday was the first time he has testified in Texas as a defense witness but has done so twice in other states.

BUSH: Texas governor hits campaign trail for presidency wife, Laura Welch Bush. "He has been explaining his 'compassionate conservatism.' It's a good concept. And if they (the citizenry) will just listen to him, I think they will be impressed."

Midland Mayor Bobby Burns said, "I feel very confident that George W. has the capabilities of being a great president."

Former Midland Mayor G. Thane Akins, who, like Bush, failed to win a congressional race years ago, said Bush "certainly has done a great job with the state of Texas as governor. He certainly will make us a fine president. I can't think of a better training ground for being president of the United States than being governor of Texas."

'Fire in the belly'

Joseph I. O'Neill III, a Midland oilman who has been Bush's friend from their childhood in the 1950s in Midland, characterized Bush as "very energetic and the hardest working man I know.

"He's got the fire in the belly," said the plain-spoken O'Neill, 54. "That's what you need in a guy who wants to be a politician. He's smart enough to be president.

"He's got the heart and the brains, and the stomach and the legs. He's looking good right now."

O'Neill and his wife, the former Jan Donnelly, are fast friends with George and Laura Bush.

The younger Bush "can walk into a room full of strangers and just be able to talk to everybody there, sincerely talk," O'Neill said. "That's the beautiful thing about it. It's just not noise."

And Bush, his wife and their daughters, Jenna and Barbara, who are named after their grandmothers — former first lady Barbara Bush and Midlander Jenna Welch — "are a great family," O'Neill said. "In this day and age, they would be a great image they need up there (in the nation's capital)."

Bush has "got his heart" in politics, O'Neill said. "He and Laura are a heck of a team. The two of them are going to be a heck of a team for us" at the national level. "Laura has turned out to be an incredible first lady of Texas."

Bush and Laura Welch, then a librarian, were introduced to each other through the O'Neill couple and other close friends when Bush returned to Midland in 1975 to explore the oil business.

"He has been very dear and sweet to me," Jenna Welch recently said of her son-in-law. "And so, I should be proud of him. He is his own man. That's very true."

Her daughter and Bush were married in 1977, Mrs. Welch said.

Laura Bush as rudder

"Laura is a wonderful rudder for George Bush," said Midlander Lou Brown, who is past president of the Texas Federation of Republican Women and past third vice president of the National Federation of Republican Women. "I can't imagine not supporting him," Mrs. Brown said. "He is primed" for the presidency. "He really cares about people."

Bush, she said, "mirrors his mother's personality more than his father's." Barbara Bush is more outgoing than her more reserved husband, she said.

"Barbara Bush ... is a people person and ... intellectual."

From his father, former President Bush, he "learned to consider all facets of every aspect of every situation before voicing opinions," Mrs. Brown said. "He learned to put in place the very best people he could find to advise him."

Her husband, rancher Win Brown, said he has known "'Little George' and Laura for a long, long time. (Bush) doesn't take an attitude of 'better than thou.' He is on the same level as everyone. He considers everyone equal."

And from his background as a Texas Air National Guard jet fighter pilot, Bush "knows the military, not like this draft dodger we have in there now," Brown said.

"He has matured quite a bit," Brown said. "He's more outgoing, more forceful, has more off-the-cuff comments than his dad. I had rather have someone to go ahead and speak their mind, which 'Little George' will.

"As the campaign escalates, you will see him getting stronger and stronger on his stands," Brown said.

Midland geologist Kelly Beal, 44, figured that in Bush "what you see is what you get. You get a good man. He is a good honest man."

Midland petroleum engineer S. Javaid Anwar said he is impressed with the way Bush "runs the state of Texas ... conservatively, more compassionately, especially his emphasis on education, the future of our kids, emphasis on our coming generation. I like his dad, too."

In Austin, Bush "surrounds himself with a lot of good people," Anwar said. "He may not have experience in foreign affairs, but he surrounds himself with the right people" and is broadening the base of the Republican Party. "At least he has an idea about the oil and gas business. A lot of the other candidates have no idea about the oil-and-gas business and the risks and the rewards, how risky this business is."

Bush is 'positive'

Midland attorney Nicholas "Nick" Taylor viewed Bush as a "very positive person who tends to bring people together.

"I think that we've had the best relationship with Mexico that I've seen," Taylor said. "He is very positive for business. He is trying to create a good atmosphere for business," such as high-tech jobs.

"He has managed to keep taxes down (and has) helped to curb excess litigation," Taylor said. "He is creating a wonderful atmosphere in Texas, and if he could do what he did in Texas in the whole United States, he is going to have a great administration."

Mrs. Bush "is a good person and she also has very good moral character. "I am so optimistic about the two of them."

Bush has a penchant to "appoint people with good motives, with plenty of energy and brains and integrity, and the courage to make improvements," Taylor said.

Tom Sloan, a Midland stockbroker and former Midland City Council member, said, "I think George's mother ... in my opinion, is the driving force in the whole group. He is very much like his mother. She (Barbara) is a lady, a true description of a lady, and so is George's wife (Laura).

"It's just a nice family," Sloan said. "And I'm just ready for something a little refreshing in there (the presidency) so we don't have people smoking their cigars."

As president, Bush "at least will listen to us," Sloan said. "I'm not saying that I agree with everything he thinks and does because I don't. I feel like I can tell him that, and he will listen to me.

"If he doesn't agree with you, he will tell you," Sloan said. "He won't lie to you. He's going to be honest about it."

CAMP: Next session will go on

(From 1A)

Council Boy Scouts of America, found the vandalism "disappointing. When individuals, whoever they might be, break in and decide to throw stuff around and take what they want, it's pretty low and aggravating. But it's not going to stop us."

Mike Gillian, general manager of Rocky Ford, had donated the use of the trailer to the Scouts. In the past, they had hauled supplies back and forth each day.

Gillian intended his donation to be "labor-saving and beneficial to the program, to have equipment out there (at Mashburn Park). The alternative (of transporting supplies each day) is taking a whole lot from the volunteers and those involved in the program."

The trailer itself is generally considered safe, and commercial customers use the on-sight storage option year-round.

Pam Young, Boy Scout coordinator and past director of the camp, was "very disappointed. It's a shame that equipment cannot be left in a locked storage unit and be left untouched."

For next week's camp, the group is looking for a smaller vehicle to transport their supplies despite the inconvenience. The next session of the camp is scheduled to go on as planned with more than 120 Cub Scouts.

Ed Pins, this year's camp director, was "pretty angry and in shock." The theft was "a cold hard dose of reality and is tragic because we had a great week last week with another week coming up."

He promised "we will do everything we can to make sure their day camp isn't ruined by somebody else's stupidity."

He said they had "considered what might happen, but didn't see any signs to tip us off about possible activity. There's no graffiti out there."

Cub Scout Justin Free went out to see the trailer with his mother, Mona Free. Seeing the damage, he was "upset, because my friends that are going next week won't be able to have as much fun as me. My friend Daniel won't be able to get his BB belt loop because the guns are gone."

Ms. Free, den leader of Pack 67, said she was "very disappointed in the fact that somebody who saw that it was Cub Scouts couldn't have the decency not to do it."

"This makes me realize we need to try to reach even more children so that they won't do this kind of thing when they're older. People need to realize this community is not as innocent as they want it to be."

Bush says abortion issue won't be test for justices

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

Republican presidential candidate George W. Bush, who this week said he would not apply the anti-abortion "litmus test" to any Supreme Court appointments, has the wherewithal to become "great president," Midland Mayor Bobby Burns said on Monday.

Burns, who, like the Texas governor, takes a pro-life stance, said he agrees "with him totally. I am very much pro-life. I think abortion is wrong."

However, to "have that (stance) as a total, deciding factor (in appointing a justice) is probably not appropriate," Burns said. "You've got to look at the entire package. It's certainly a significant factor to weigh. I agree totally with the governor in that not being a 'litmus test' at all.

"I believe that we've got to look at the entire package to see how the person believes and (would) rule on a lot of different subjects."

Whether nor not Bush, 52, gets elected president in 2000 or has occasion to appoint Supreme Court justices is academic for now.

"There have been presidents who never got to appoint anybody" to the Supreme Court," said Joseph I. O'Neill III, a 54-year-old Midland oilman, community leader, and Bush friend from childhood, "You never know."

O'Neill, who is a Roman Catholic by faith, said, "You know how I stand on abortion. That (abortion) is not even a political issue with me; it's a moral one."

It was in 1973 when the U.S. Supreme Court, in a 7-2 decision based on the Roe vs. Wade case, legalized abortion by declaring illegal an 1857 Texas statute that held abortion illegal except in cases where the mother's life was in danger of being lost.

The late Supreme Court justice, Harry Andrew Blackmun, wrote the court's majority opinion, which established "parameters of the abortion debate for decades to come," according to the West's Encyclopedia of American Law.

The case's Jane Roe was Norma McCorvey, an ex-carnival barker, who in 1969 became pregnant for the third time. Depressed, out of work and without means, she sought an abortion by falsely claiming she had been raped. Lacking proof, her ruse failed. She found an illegal abortion clinic, including dirty instruments and dried blood on the floor, but it had been closed by police.

She was 23 in 1970 when her case to legalize abortion was filed in Dallas against Dallas County District Attorney Henry Wade. In June of that year, she gave birth to a child, who was "put up for adoption," according to the law encyclopedia.

In 1989, Ms. McCorvey publicly allied herself with the pro-choice abortion-rights movements.

But in 1995, she declared herself "pro-life" following a spiritual conversion. "I think I have always been pro-life," the law encyclopedia quotes her. "I just didn't know it."

Ms. McCorvey is to tell "Her Amazing Conversion Story" at 7 p.m. Friday at Midland Center under sponsorship of La Promesa (The Promise) Foundation.

Leonard Oswald, La Promesa president, noted that Supreme Court presidential appointments are "very, very important.

"Because of who was on the bench at the time, we made two big mistakes," Oswald said in citing the early 1960s Supreme Court decision that banned compulsory prayer in public schools and the 1970s Roe vs. Wade decision that legalized abortion. Those rulings "had major repercussions," he said.

G. Thane Akins, who was Midland's mayor in the early-to-mid-1980s, is a Bush-for-president supporter and a pro-life advocate.

"Every president, if they are intelligent like George, is going to surround himself with good people that will advise him," Akins said. "There's no way for one person to know all the potential candidates for (federal) District judges and Supreme Court judges (justices), and circuit-court judges and all those that you (as president) are responsible for. So, he has to depend upon good people to make recommendations of good people."

Republican presidential candidate George W. Bush said this week that he would not apply the anti-abortion "litmus test" to any Supreme Court appointments.

South Korean warships sink North Korean boat in standoff

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — South Korean warships sank one North Korean boat and badly damaged another in an exchange of gunfire today, South Korea's Defense Ministry said. The 10-minute clash was a dangerous escalation of their high-seas confrontation.

The sunken ship was believed to be a torpedo boat, and a northern patrol boat appeared to be sinking after being raked by South Korean fire, said Col. Hwang Dong-kyu, a spokesman for the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

Brig. Gen. Cha Young-koo said fighting erupted after South Korean patrol boats twice tried to chase two northern patrol boats away. When one of the southern boats tried to ram a northern torpedo boat, the North Korean vessel opened fire, he said.

Hwang said seven South Korean sailors were injured when their ships, a frigate and a patrol boat, were hit by northern fire. The two ships were not disabled.

It was not clear how many of the eight South Korean ships took part in the exchange in contested waters of the Yellow Sea.

The shooting came only 40 minutes before generals from the U.S.-led U.N. Command and North Korea sat down in the village of Panmunjom for talks aimed at ending the confrontation, in its eighth day.

TRIAL: Jurors expected to begin deliberation in case today suspects Bradon was hurt while Hinojos baby-sat him. His abdominal injuries were caused with the same force of a high-speed car wreck, Crockett said.

(From 1A)

Rebuttal witness Dr. Sparks Veasey, a Galveston County medical examiner, said a blood clot found in the child's brain showed the boy was obviously a victim of abuse.

The wound "was not something that happened two, four or six hours before he died. It happened several days before he was brought into the hospital," said Veasey, a former Odessan.

He disapproved of the other doctors' attempts to put a date on Bradon's intestine and rib injuries. Veasey chose to base his theory on his own experiences, he said.

"It's just a professional disagreement," Veasey said.

At the root of the defense theory is a verbal statement Hinojos gave to police after Bradon died.

Hinojos told police the child seemed fine until he put him to bed. He woke up once and asked for a glass of water. Moments later, Hinojos found the boy unconscious and sprawled in bed.

In his interrogation, when asked about the boy's bruises, Hinojos admitted to police that he once pinched the child's ear for cussing and spanked him that day for being "unusually unruly."

Former police detective Shane Calender testified Monday that Hinojos denied molesting the boy but said he'd seen the boy stick objects up his rectum.

Last week, Hinojos pleaded guilty to a less-severe offense and took a plea deal for 10 years in prison. The day Bradon died, Hinojos was charged with sexual assault of a child, but when a pathologist didn't find evidence of rape, the charges were dropped.

Ms. Graves has testified that she continued dating Hinojos after her son died because authorities dropped the rape charge. Within the next two years, they had two children together and continued to date each other, Ms. Graves said.

But last fall, Ms. Graves found out Hinojos was holding back information about the case. She believes he killed her child and hasn't had contact with him since their breakup, she testified Thursday.

On Monday, state rebuttal witness Brandi Evans testified that she and Hinojos had been seeing each other between November 1996 and June 7. They moved in with each other the day after they met, she said.

Ms. Evans said she met the defendant on a few occasions but claimed Hinojos didn't have a commitment to her anymore.

"She was in our lives everyday," Ms. Evans said.

"So wherever Cain was, she (Ms. Graves) came in?" asked prosecutor Linda Deadrick.

"Yes," Ms. Evans replied.

In December 1996, the couple had a get-together at their home but didn't invite Ms. Graves. That night, she called and left threatening messages on their answering machine.

"You could hear a baby screaming in the background ... she (Ms. Graves) said she was going to kill herself. She said she needed Cain," Ms. Evans said.

She also refuted Ms. Graves' claims that her relationship with Hinojos ended last year. On Nov. 18 — the day before the couple were indicted — Ms. Evans saw Ms. Graves' car parked outside Hinojos' apartment most of the day.

Ms. Evans and Hinojos were not dating at that time, she said.

By spring, Ms. Evans and Hinojos had reconciled and were getting more phone threats from Ms. Graves, she said. Their Caller ID unit showed the calls were made from Ms. Graves' workplace and her parents' house.

She said the last time she saw Ms. Graves and Hinojos together was April 29. They were talking to each other at a karate center where Ms. Evans has tanning sessions, she said.

Defense rebuttal witness Danny Smith, the defendant's employer, denied Ms. Graves was anywhere else than his office Nov. 18. That day, she spent many hours preparing the office's payroll, Smith said.

Both the state and defense rested their case at about 4 p.m.

The trial will resume this morning in the 358th District Court of Judge Bill McCoy. Smith is not seeking the death penalty.

NATO forces uncover evidence of atrocities, Serbs flee in convoy

PRISTINA, Yugoslavia (AP) — Ducking at the sound of gunfire, patrolling cautiously to avoid the ire of Serbs, thousands of NATO peacekeepers spread out Monday across Kosovo. Some uncovered grim evidence of atrocities as they tightened their control of the province.

Serb forces complying with the pullout ordered by NATO to end the 78-day air war mixed in with civilians fleeing in columns up to 500 vehicles long. Some ethnic Albanian homes were set ablaze by Serb troops leaving Kosovo.

Aiming to bring a measure of stability to the province shattered by war and a long history of ethnic hatred, NATO and U.S. forces sought to downplay the impasse over about 200 Russian soldiers occupying the Pristina airfield where the allies planned to establish headquarters.

NATO lead commander Lt. Gen. Michael Jackson insisted the airfield wasn't crucial to occupying forces though the White House said Defense Secretary William Cohen and Secretary of State Madeleine Albright will meet their Russian counterparts in Helsinki, Finland, within days.

Kosovo's Serbs fear that the majority ethnic Albanians will take bloody revenge on them for years of oppression and for reported atrocities. The West, meanwhile, fears that a Russian zone will lead to the partition of Kosovo.

Refugees who began streaming out of Kosovo after the NATO bombing campaign began March 24 told of Serb slaughter and the massacre of innocent victims.

The accounts could not be independently confirmed at the time, and one of the peacekeepers' grueling tasks will be to investigate what happened. On Monday, they gingerly probed the town cemetery in Kacanik, where the stench of decayed flesh hung heavy over a mass grave believed to contain 81 bodies.

British Capt. Andy Reeds said war crimes investigators would be called in to examine the site, 30 miles south of Pristina.

Peacekeepers continued to pour into the battered Serbian province from neighboring Macedonia and Albania, and officials said about 15,000 allied troops had entered Kosovo by Monday.

A convoy of 1,200 U.S. Marines began crossing just south of Kacanik at first light, and U.S. forces took over the area, including the site of the graves, from the British troops.

One group of Marines on the main road to Pristina took up combat position behind their vehicles when they heard gunfire coming from houses a quarter-mile away.

"We were all a little edgy going in," said Cpl. Will Rapier, 20, of Paintsville, Ky., with the 3rd Battalion, 8th Marines. "We just hope to get this thing over so we can all go home."

Despite the tensions, Monday's troop movements went off without a repeat of Sunday's pair of fatal confrontations, when soldiers shot a Serb in Pristina and German forces killed one man and wounded another after the men fired at them from a car in the city of Prizren.

On Monday, Serb citizens poured out of Prizren, Kosovo's second-largest city, taunted by ethnic Albanians who erupted into a wild victory celebration.

German soldiers disarmed several members of the Kosovo Liberation Army, the ethnic Albanian guerrilla group, as they tried to seize wounded Serb soldiers at the main Prizren hospital.

The KLA is supposed to demilitarize under the Kosovo peace agreement, but the group boldly set up an office in Pristina on Monday.

The private news agency Beta reported Monday that three Serbs were killed by men wearing KLA armbands in a suburb of Pristina. The Serb-run Media Center said it had a report of five people killed in the same suburb but did not have details.

Serb says tribunal arrested wrong man

THE HAGUE, Netherlands (AP) — A Bosnian Serb accused of torturing and killing detainees in a prison camp in Bosnia demanded to be freed Monday, saying the Yugoslav war crimes tribunal has the wrong man.

Dragan Kolundzija's lawyer told the tribunal his client's name is spelled differently than in the indictment under which he was detained. He also said the place and date of Kolundzija's birth do not correspond with those in the arrest warrant.

Judge Richard May scheduled a hearing for June 24, when the prosecution will have to prove Kolundzija is the man named in the indictment.

The prosecutor admitted Monday that the name of the accused and birth date had been incorrectly stated in the indictment, but maintained the indictment was justified.

"Who are you going to count on when you become the dad?"

I didn't know the first thing about babies. That's not a good feeling when you find out you're going to be a dad.
Fortunately, Memorial Hospital has "Something Special" – a program designed especially for new parents – people like me who feel just a little bit overwhelmed with the idea of being such a big part of a little person's life.
We took classes. We went on tours. We met other new parents. And we found out that Memorial Hospital offered us all the help and advice we needed. They were even available after we brought our son home.
I'll never forget the day my son was born – or the people at Memorial Hospital. They're like family to us. The ones we count on whenever we need a helping hand.
Count On Us. For Life.

The Stay Cool Guarantee rides again

D&D guarantees you'll sleep cool tonight

Every summer, the West Texas sun comes blazing into town, with the apparent goal of taking out as many air conditioners as possible. Should yours be a victim this summer, call the posse from D & D Plumbing—they guarantee you'll sleep in cool comfort tonight.

If they can't fix your air conditioner, they'll put you up at the air-conditioned Hampton Inn—at their expense.

The huge stock of parts D & D's technicians carry on their trucks means they can fix just about any brand of air conditioner in one trip, getting you back to cool comfort quickly. Since they started the Stay Cool guarantee three years ago, they've only sent a couple of people each year to the Hampton. That means you'll probably be cool at your own home tonight.

Here's all you have to do to qualify for the guarantee: live in Midland County and call them by 4:30 p.m. Monday through Friday.

If the time has come to replace your old unit, D & D has a special offer on Trane's ultra-efficient XL 1800. If you buy one before July 31, you'll get a free 10-year warranty on both parts and labor. Most warranties cover only the compressor and coils for 10 years.

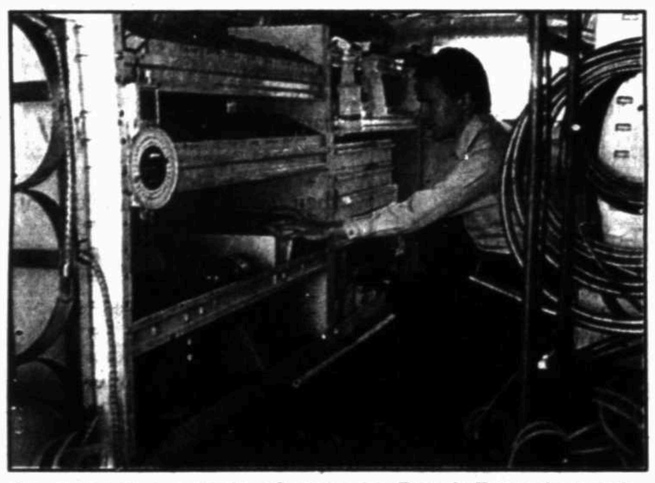
The XL 1800's SEER (Seasonal Energy Efficiency Rating) of 18 is the most efficient rating available today. That means no unit can save you more on your energy costs. And, when coupled with the variable speed Trane XV 80 furnace, it delivers the quietest, most comfortable environment possible.

That's because the variable speed fan can constantly circulate air in the home at a fraction of the cost of a unit that cycles on and off. This will virtually eliminate hot and cold spots in various rooms. Most air conditioners wait for the air in your home to warm up as much as five degrees before starting up. Continuous circulation does away with those variations, and uses less energy while doing it.

The XL 1800 still uses reliable, efficient R-22 refrigerant. This is still used by 99.5 percent of all residential units, and it will continue to be produced until phased out by law in 2020, which will be after most units in use today have been replaced. While it eventually will be outlawed, there has been no final agreement on what refrigerant will replace R-22. D & D's David Rotan says, "Trane will convert to alternate refrigerants only after long-term tests prove their suitability."

Don't let the summer heat run you out of town. Call D & D Plumbing to the rescue.

D & D Plumbing, Heating and Air Conditioning (plumbing license M-14772 and air conditioning license TACL B009344E) is owned by brothers David, Dwain and Derek Rotan, the third generation of hometown service technicians. They offer complete plumbing and air conditioning service on all brands, while they sell and service Trane equipment. 24-hour emergency service is available. Call 687-1011.



An extensive supply of parts on Derek Rotan's truck (pictured) as well as the other technicians' trucks, means D & D can guarantee you'll sleep in cool comfort tonight.

Get the most out of your highly appreciated assets with a Charitable Remainder Trust

Do you own highly appreciated assets, such as stocks, real estate or a closely held business? If you do, a Charitable Remainder Trust (CRT) may play a crucial role in your estate plan, helping you to achieve any or all of the following objectives:

- Diversify a highly appreciated asset without incurring immediate capital gains tax on the sale
- Create a potentially lifelong income stream
- Receive an income tax deduction (living trust only)
- Reduce your estate tax liability
- Provide for a charity of your choice

Daniel Watts

The Charitable Remainder Trust: Through a Charitable Remainder Trust, you can contribute highly appreciated assets to charity while you (or another non-charitable beneficiary) have the right to an income stream from those assets for a predetermined period—your lifetime, the combination of your lifetime and another person's, or a term of years not to exceed 20 years. When the income obligation terminates, the remainder of the trust assets pass to charity.

Tax Benefits: Because a CRT is a tax-exempt entity, assets sold within the trust are not subject to capital gains tax at the time they are sold. While capital gains tax may be imposed at a later date on distributions from the trust, the ability to defer these taxes allows the full value of the assets to be reinvested to immediately work for your benefit. Thus, you are able to convert the full value of assets that may formerly have provided you with little or no income into a significant income stream.

When you contribute assets to a CRT during your lifetime, you may be entitled to a charitable income tax deduction based upon the present value of the remainder interest, which passes to charity after the income interest terminates. This deduction cannot exceed a certain percentage of your adjusted gross income, but may be carried forward five years after the initial years of your contribution. Therefore, you may receive the benefit of an income tax deduction for up to six years. Further, because of the gift tax charitable deduction, your lifetime transfer of an asset to charity is not subject to federal gift taxes.

Contributing highly appreciated assets to a CRT also reduces your estate by removing both the asset and all future appreciation on that asset. This may save you considerable estate taxes.

Protecting Your Heirs: Suppose you are concerned about providing for your heirs as well as your favorite charity. You can replace all or part of the value of the property transferred to the CRT with an asset replacement strategy like this:

- Establish an asset replacement trust—in essence, an irrevocable life insurance trust (ILIT).
- Make annual gifts to the trust. You can use some of the income stream from the CRT and the income tax savings from the charitable income tax deduction for this purpose. If the trust is drafted with particular provisions, the gifts may qualify for the annual gift tax exclusion or they may count toward one's applicable exclusion amount (the total estate and gift tax exemption is $650,000 in 1999).
- The trustee may then use the gifts to purchase life insurance on your life, or a second-to-the policy on you and your spouse The trustee is both policy owner and beneficiary.
- Life insurance proceeds received by the trustee on behalf of the trust's beneficiaries are not subject to income taxes and are not included in your gross estate at death. Thus using the CRT and the asset replacement trust, you may be able to contribute significantly greater assets to charity and actually pass on more of your wealth to your beneficiaries!

Estate planning can help you preserve the assets you have carefully accumulated. Bear in mind that these strategies are subject to the complex laws and regulations governing estate and gift tax, income tax and private foundations. To be effective, an estate plan should be designed and implemented by specialists. As with all such matters, you should consult with your attorney and tax advisor to help devise a plan appropriate for you.

Selecting a trustee for your CRT is an equally important decision. The trustee may be responsible for investing and reinvesting trust assets, making periodic accountings and filings to trust beneficiaries and appropriate tax authorities, and numerous other administrative functions. By utilizing a professional trustee, you may receive the benefit of ongoing relationship management, objectivity and proper trust administrative services.

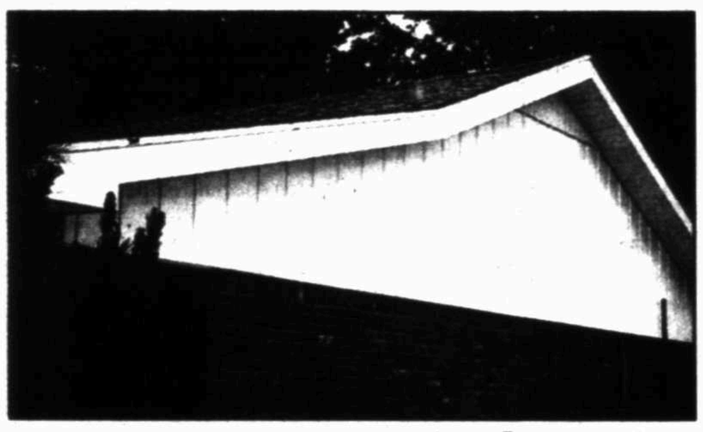
Seniors: Save on siding, insulated windows

Why keep worrying about painting and re painting your home's exterior? Why keep letting leaky windows rob you in the form of high electric bills? Lifetime Siding has a special offer for seniors who want to relax.

Lifetime's owner, Neil Letkeman, offers seniors a 15 percent discount on steel or vinyl siding as well as insulated vinyl windows. Siding and windows come with a lifetime warranty on parts and a 15 year warranty on labor. This offer is available because Lifetime crews use screws in critical areas, which hold siding much more securely than nails.

Siding can permanently improve your home's curb appeal, adding value. Installing insulation behind the siding can reduce heating and cooling costs.

Windows are responsible for 70 percent of the heating and cooling lost by your home. If dust comes in around the sill, if your windows are drafty, or if they're just hard to operate, have Lifetime install vinyl windows (they tilt in for easy cleaning) and immediately feel the difference.



Vinyl siding and insulated windows can mean you'll never have to paint your home's exterior again. Call Lifetime at 580-8125 for a free estimate.

Lifetime Siding has been in the Permian Basin for over 10 years. They specialize in steel and vinyl siding, as well as storm doors and windows, plus patio covers, carports and metal roofs. Call 580-8125 for a free estimate. Call for a list of references.

Money Matters.

One critical area of family and wealth management we cant afford to put off is estate planning--the process of preserving for your family, friends or charities the majority of the wealth you've worked for all these years. Free! Get a one-time blood pressure check at Sera-Tec

Now you have a new reason to make that first visit to the Sera-Tec Plasma Center. Right now, they're offering a free one-time blood pressure check to anyone. While you're having them check your blood pressure for free, it'll be a great opportunity to ask them about all the ways you can earn money while donating life-giving plasma. You can take a tour of their sparkling-clean facilities and meet the friendly staff.

"You can take home cash the first time and every time you donate," says manager Chris Bowers. In fact, new donors can earn up to $100 by bringing in the coupon on this page and donating four times within 14 days. That's a bonus of $40. Regular donors can earn up to $140 per month, which many use toward vacations, appliances or other special purchases. Sera-Tec pays you because they understand that your time is valuable.

If you bring a friend, such as a co-worker, neighbor or family member, you'll get a five dollar "Buddy Bonus" the second time they donate. There is also the weekly drawing for an extra $100. Anyone who donates twice in a week is eligible.

You may ask: What exactly is plasma, why do they want it, and how do I go about donating?

Plasma is the clear, yellowish fluid portion of the blood which nutrients, red cells and everything else rides to get where they need to go inside your body. Because it's liquid, your body replenishes it quickly, allowing you to donate plasma much more often than whole blood.

From your donated plasma, pharmaceutical companies like Bayer extract life-saving elements. Plasma provides antihemophilic factor concentrate, helpful in prevention and home-treatment of hemophilia A or B bleeding episodes. It is a source of albumin and plasma protein, which help patients who have suffered shock, trauma, surgery or severe burns. Immune globulins are used to treat people who have been exposed to rabies, Hepatitis B, rubella, tetanus, chicken pox and certain other viruses.

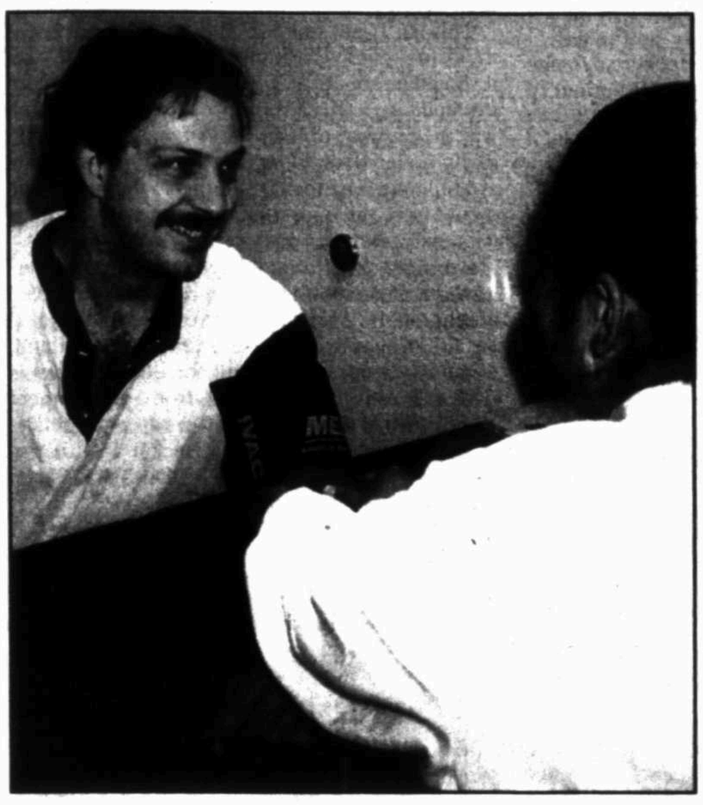
"You can take home cash the first time and every time you donate."

Chris Bowers, Manager
Sera Tec

First-time donors undergo a complete physical and blood test, plus answer a series of health and lifestyle questions. Potential donors are tested for a variety of diseases including HIV, various strains of Hepatitis and others. All this determines if the donor's plasma supply is likely to be clean. Only after successfully completing the screening process is a person allowed to donate. More limited screening is done before each subsequent donation.

Sera-Tec also announces new, longer Saturday hours. They are now open until 5:00 p.m., for the greater convenience of donors who can't easily go by on weekdays.

Sera-Tec Plasma Center is located in Northland Shopping Center at A and Scharbauer. Hours are 9-7 Tuesday and Thursday, 9-5:30 Wednesday and Friday, 9-1 Monday and 9-5 Saturday, closed Sunday. The phone number is 570-6093. Sera-Tec also has a facility at 1413 E. 8th in Odessa.



Need your blood pressure checked? Get it done free (one time only) at Sera-Tec Plasma Center. While you're there, find out how you can earn cash by donating plasma.

Jib's flavorful chopped beef sandwich does Paris

Earl's wife, Effie, was skeptical. "You guys are serious? You got us round-trip tickets to Paris for $189.00 each? Where are the tickets?"

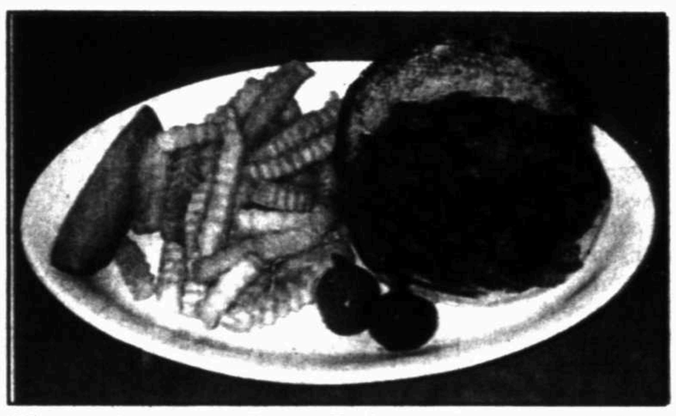
Earl looked at his pal, Slim, while taking a bite of his Jib's chopped beef sandwich. "I think they're on the front row."

"No," Effie protested, "Where are the little pieces of paper the tickets are printed on?"

"Earl, she's asking for the little pieces of paper the tickets are printed on," Slim pointed out.

"Well, it's probably more like cardboard—that's what they usually print tickets on, so they don't tear up too easily. Have you ever noticed how lean and tender the chopped beef is here at Jib's? And how they pile it on the bun? And their rich special-recipe barbecue sauce—man, they smother the meat with it. And you get any side order of your choice—it comes with golden French fries, or you can get that cool, tangy potato salad or Cole slaw, or any other delicious side you want."

Before Effie could protest Earl's attempt to change the subject, Slim's wife, Sally Sue walked in carrying a manila envelope. "Hey, guys," she said. "The reason I'm late is that I stopped by the house on the way here and picked up this package that came in the mail. It's addressed to Slim, and it's from an outfit called 'Big Mama's Big Discount Travel Club.' I haven't opened it yet."



Who needs to go to Rome, Paris or other places in East Texas, when you've got Jib's delicious chopped beef sandwiches so close to home? Stop by Jib's and enjoy some flavorful barbecue today.

Effie turned to Earl. "Big Mama's? Where did you find this deal?"

Earl took a big swallow of his Fruitopia. "Well, they had this really cool web site, and all these exotic destinations like Paris, Rome, Athens, Palestine and Cleveland. We figured ya'll wouldn't want to go to Cleveland."

"Yeah, Earl's not as dumb as he looks," Slim said, helpfully.

"I don't know," said Effie, "Cleveland is where we went on our honeymoon."

By this time, Sally Sue was seated in front of the tender chopped beef sandwich Slim had ordered for her, and she had opened the package.

"Wow, these look like….. bus tickets," Sally Sue announced.

"How d'ya like that," Earl said. "That company thinks you can take a bus to France!"

"Actually, guys, you CAN take a bus to this destination. This is not Paris, France," Sally Sue said.

Effie shook her head. "Let me guess. You guys paid $189.00 for round trip bus tickets to Paris, Texas, didn't you?"

"That's what they did," Sally Sue nodded. "In fact, ALL these destinations on the price sheet…Rome, Athens, Palestine, even Cleveland, are in Texas."

Earl gave Slim a panicked look, then said, "How about another round of chopped beef sandwiches? I'll pay!"

Serbs make fiery retreat from Kosovo

PEC, Yugoslavia (AP) — After a final spree of burning, shooting and alleged rapes, Yugoslav forces withdrew from Kosovo's border region with Albania on Monday, their country's flag flying high, whooping and giving parting mock salutes to a citizenry devastated by war.

"We are finishing up," a Serb officer said, turning journalists back a few yards from the smoking flames of a newly torched home in Pec's gutted old ethnic Albanian neighborhood.

"Greater Albania," proclaimed a sign written in Serbian, stuck next to a burning brick house on a heavily used rebel route toward Albania.

As they withdrew, Serbs set alight buildings on both sides of the two-lane road between Djakovica and Pec, often within a few hundred feet of the armored convoys of newly arrived NATO forces.

After celebrating the NATO troops' arrival on Sunday, the remaining population of the gutted city of Djakovica marked the exit of Serb troops Monday. They celebrated their newfound freedom, wheeling around on rickety bikes through streets strangely empty of cars.

Small crowds went on looting sprees, pillaging food, alcohol and furnishings from what had been a Serb-only store and the hotel headquarters of Serb security forces. Broken glass littered the street in front of the hotels, left by looters who had tried to carry away crates of beer on bikes.

Looters said the goods were originally stolen by Serbs from the city's ethnic Albanians.

Djakovica was among the hardest-hit cities in Kosovo's fighting, targeted well before the NATO bombing started March 24. International organizations have yet to put together a tally of the city's dead; a cemetery worker, speaking on condition his name not be used, said he buried as many as 200 people, slain in mass killings of up to 70 at a time.

Free to move about now, residents desperately sought word of 1,000 men taken away by Serb forces on May 7-10.

Djakovica's people said Serb paramilitary troops went on a rampage Saturday, after the peace deal and two days before their withdrawal. Masked fighters burned buildings and raped several women, said Binakaj Azgon, who said his daughter was among the women taken away.

In contrast to Sunday's exultant welcome for the NATO troops, only a few Serb civilians turned out Monday to clap and cheer the retreating Yugoslav forces.

The Serb forces pulled out in convoys of more than 100 vehicles — dilapidated tanks, buses, armored personnel carriers plastered with porn photographs, private vehicles piled with luggage. Troops in cowboy hats and bandanas careened through Djakovica in open Jeeps, whooping and giving a mocking tip of the index finger to a people who largely ignored them.

Fill out survey to help shape Midland's future

Have you ever said to yourself, "Wouldn't it be great if Midland had a _____?"

Fill in the blank, of course. That's the novel aspect of a survey being conducted by Midland Vision 2000. Joan Baskin, chairman of Midland Vision 2000's steering committee, said the goal is to gain more input from Midland residents on what they think are the most vital issues for Midland during the next decade.

The survey will be printed in the June 20 edition of the Reporter-Telegram and will include questions about new facilities and services that could improve the quality of life and the economy in Midland.

Midlanders involved in the Citizens Forum effort have already proposed a number of priorities to be considered and most carry a large pricetag. The major projects suggested thus far have included more parks, community centers, publicly owned recreational facilities, an IMAX theater, a new or expanded branch library, health and medical facilities, social services agencies, a performing arts center, extensive renovations and expansions to Midland Center, a new convention center, a new high school, a new stadium, a new sports complex, an all-purpose exposition center, etc.

"We can't do all of them at once," noted Mrs. Baskin. "Perhaps we can do them in increments."

Of course, there are many other possibilities that could be mentioned and that is exactly what the Midland Vision 2000 steering committee is looking for from Midlanders.

Mrs. Baskin added, "We're trying to get a sense of what the individual citizen feels is vital to our future. This is going to be a tool for the committees to use."

So Midlanders should do some serious thinking about what this community needs to serve the populace during the next 10 years. On June 20, they should clip the survey out of the Reporter-Telegram, complete it and return it to Midland Vision 2000.

In that way, they can take an active role in determining the future in Midland. That is truly exciting!

Russian troops make peace plan worse

Adding Russian troops to the mix of Kosovo peacekeepers makes the latest peace plan more acceptable to Slobodan Milosevic. Aside from that point ... giving the Russians a role makes the peace plan worse.

After failing to protect ethnic Albanians in Kosovo, NATO is pledging to protect refugees returning home. The refugees won't go back unless they feel safe, however, and because Russia has been so supportive of Milosevic, the sight of armed Russians will not make refugees forget the threat of armed Serbs. ...

President Clinton has committed 7,000 American troops to a NATO peacekeeping force of nearly 50,000, to be deployed if Serbs withdraw from Kosovo. ...

No one knows how long NATO forces would have to stay in Kosovo. NATO has no way of making Milosevic pay for the ethnic Albanians his troops killed. NATO can't even stop Milosevic from claiming victory ...

Unfortunately, NATO also can't make peace quickly without giving Russia a role.

Today in History

Today is Tuesday, June 15, the 166th day of 1999. There are 199 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:

On June 15, 1215, King John put his seal to Magna Carta ("the Great Charter") at Runnymede, England, granting his barons more liberty.

On this date:

In 1775, the Second Continental Congress voted unanimously to appoint George Washington head of the Continental Army.

In 1836, Arkansas became the 25th state.

In 1844, Charles Goodyear received a patent for his process to strengthen rubber.

One year ago: NATO fighter jets staged a show of force meant to pressure Yugoslav forces to end their attacks on ethnic Albanians in Kosovo province. The Supreme Court ruled unanimously that state prison inmates are protected by the Americans with Disabilities Act.

Lyrics, poem offer clues for the clueless

Following the Columbine High School shootings, many people wondered why the clues given by Eric Harris and Dylan Klebold were not acted on and why someone didn't try to redirect their anger. Not only did the young men frequently speak of their hate, Harris recorded it on his personal Web page.

Thomas

Last week I wrote about a Calvert County, Maryland, high school senior who walked out of commencement when the audience spontaneously began reciting The Lord's Prayer. A graduating senior, Julie Schenk, had sought and was granted permission by the school principal to lead an invocation. She knew that the courts have allowed student-initiated prayer under certain conditions. The principal approved but later withdrew permission when another student, Nick Becker, brought the American Civil Liberties Union (ACLU) into the matter. A compromise allowed for a "moment of reflection."

When that moment arrived, audience-initiated prayer followed. Becker walked out and was prevented from returning to the ceremony because of a school rule that forbids reentry into assemblies. He received his diploma later.

Becker is being portrayed in some quarters as a modern-day Thomas Paine and a martyr to the First Amendment. But a visit to his Web page reveals a disturbing anger.

Here's one of his little ditties. It's called "My Dad Can Go to Hell."

I'm gonna speak, I'm gonna yell
My f---ing dad can go to hell,
You find it such a f---ing shock,
your mind's closed with a master lock
Yeah I know it's pretty sick
it's a joke you fascist pr--k
what would uncle Stevie think?
or all those other sheltered dinks?

What a touching Father's Day sentiment.

Elsewhere on his Web page, Becker says that the notoriety he's received since walking out of commencement is making him "bigger than Jesus" in whom he doesn't believe. He says: "I am not an atheist. I definitely do not believe in a God who sits in the clouds and judges us right or wrong and decides whether we receive eternal pleasure or never-ending damnation. I have not ruled out the possibility of an Alpha God who created the universe, a sort of living force behind the Big Bang."

Contrast this attitude with that of Darrell Scott, the father of Rachael Scott, who was one of those killed at Columbine. Testifying May 27 before a House subcommittee, Scott read a poem he composed following his daughter's murder:

Your laws ignore our deepest needs,
Your words are empty air.
You've stripped away our heritage,
You've outlawed simple prayer.
Now gunshots fill our classrooms.
And precious children die,
You seek for answers everywhere,
And ask the question, "why?"
You regulate restrictive laws,
Through legislative creed.
And yet you fail to understand,
That God is what we need!

Compare Nick Becker's song lyric and Darrell Scott's poem and ask yourself which attitude better promotes the general welfare of our children and nation.

This isn't, and shouldn't be, about government imposing religious faith (or non-faith) on anyone. It should be about the ability of individuals, including students, to freely exercise their beliefs, which was the purpose of the First Amendment as originally understood. Congress would make no law establishing a national religion, so that everyone would have the widest latitude to freely exercise whatever faith they may or may not possess.

But in modern times, the government has determined that the public square is to remain naked of religion. So a single student can impose his will on 4,000 people in Calvert County, Maryland. What about the rights of all the others? Why is God the only idea banned from government schools, while the demons that produce the beliefs of a Harris, a Klebold and a Becker are tolerated, protected, even promoted? Does this make sense? Only to the clueless.

Rainbow Room thanks generous Midlanders

On June 1, 1998, Midland citizens were issued a wonderful challenge. This challenge consisted of helping busy caseworkers working with abused or neglected community children. The Midland Rainbow Room, in partnership with the Junior League of Midland Inc., the Texas Department of Protective and Regulatory Service and the Midland Community Partners Board, has been established to accept this challenge and meet this great need.

The Midland Rainbow Room is an in-house emergency resource center that distributes new items, such as clothing, diapers and formula, to clients of Child Protective Services. All of the items in the Rainbow Room are donated by the citizens of Midland. In the last year, we were able to help 289 children by distributing $4,143.63 worth of items.

I want to personally thank everyone who has donated to the Midland Rainbow Room and made our first year a successful one. If our community can help one abused or neglected child have a better, brighter day and ultimately a brighter future, then we have been a good friend and a good neighbor ... and that's what Midland is all about!

Story helped nonprofit in search for new office

We at Prevent Blindness Texas want to express our deepest appreciation to the Midland Reporter-Telegram and to Ed Todd for his story concerning the plight of our losing our rent-free office space. Unfortunately, the needs of our community increase during times of economic decline and probably all nonprofit organizations are affected.

We have had some positive response from the article and hope to have suitable office space soon. We want to again thank Bank One for their many years of generosity and thank the wonderful people of the Permian Basin and our dedicated Board of Directors for helping us to continue our "fight for sight."

Good Samaritans made highway mishap safer

On Friday, May 21, my handicapped son and I had just left Guy's Restaurant in Stanton, where we had eaten supper with my daughter who lives in Midland. We were headed back to Big Spring when a tire on my car blew out.

We were a mile or so from the restaurant when this happened. It was about 7 p.m. and naturally I was very upset, but I did have my cell phone. The only people I thought to call were our friends, the Clay Ingrams who live about 15 miles from where we were stranded. Beth said she would get Clay there as quickly as possible.

About that time a UPS truck, that was headed back to Midland, pulled up behind me and offered help. The driver called the Martin County Sheriff's Office in Stanton and they called the Highway Patrol. They and Clay Ingram arrived to help about the same time. One of the nice patrolmen got down on his knees and put the jack under the frame and changed to the donut tire.

The UPS driver went on his way, but I failed to get his name. Whoever you are, thanks again. You made me feel much safer as the big trucks were zipping by so fast. Clay Ingram followed us on into Big Spring to ensure our safe arrival. To each of you again, we say a special thank-you!

Moratorium on pesticides would have many benefits

Wouldn't it be nice if we could declare the entire city of Midland a poison-free zone? Instead of spraying insecticides willy-nilly every time we see an insect, what if we just decided to try something else first, such as beneficial insects, organic deterrents (garlic-pepper teas are good) or (gasp!) a wait-and-see attitude?

Could it be that the birds that die from eating the poisoned bugs — and I see dead birds almost daily — would eat the live insects, and thus save us the trouble and expense of treating our yards? Just think of the other benefits we'd gain — like reduction of groundwater contamination, less worry about what residues we're exposing our children to, and fewer dead birds in our yards.

This kind of thing isn't entirely without precedent, although I must admit I know of no citywide moratorium on the use of harmful insecticides, but individuals throughout the city have made the decision for pesticide-free yards and gardens for years.

I am one of them. I'll admit I was a skeptic at first, but I decided to give it a try, and if it didn't work, well, I hadn't thrown out the Diazonon. Well, guess what! The yard is about as good as it ever was, and the vegetable garden is better. I haven't had a squash bug in years. Tomato worms? They're delicacies for birds. I don't have to worry about what kinds of residue might be on the vegetables we eat and give away, and I don't have to worry about whether I'm impoverishing our earth by killing the singers of our loveliest songs.

Just think. A poison-free Midland. Wouldn't it be nice!

Time-crunch relief would help families

Family values. You'll hear that phrase a lot as the election campaign heats up, but much of the chatter will be off the mark.

Cokie Roberts and Steven V. Roberts

Candidates will insist that preserving families requires more prayer, fewer abortions, less drug use, greater respect for authority.

Those are all estimable goals. But in practical terms, the most important "family value" for many Americans is time. No household has enough of it. That's what folks really talk about around their kitchen tables, and the politicians who would be president should be talking about it, too.

As President Clinton told the graduating class at Grambling State recently, being a parent "will be the most important work you'll ever do." And society should be helping parents cope with the "enormous stress" caused by the competing pressures of work and home.

A new study by the president's Council of Economic Advisors documents just how serious the "time crunch" has become. Over the last 30 years, parents have lost an average of 22 hours every week to spend with their kids. By the time children reach 18, that's more than two extra years their parents are away from home.

You can do a lot in 22 hours. Go to a game. Supervise homework. Talk to a teacher. Perhaps most useful of all, just hang out. Be available when kids -- particularly teenagers -- want to talk. At the very least, more time at work means any parent is less patient when she or he finally gets home.

The reasons behind the "time crunch" are by no means all bad, and the single biggest cause is the progress women have made in the workplace. In 1969, 38 percent of married mothers worked for pay; by 1996 that was up to 68 percent. Discrimination is declining and pay is rising, making it more attractive for women to join the labor force.

But in most cases, women work because they have to, not because they're making a "lifestyle" choice. The hours men work, and the wages they earn, have stayed flat. Any increase in a family's living standard usually comes from the wife's paycheck.

The other main cause of the "time crunch" is the explosion of single-parent households, up from 13 percent of all families three decades ago to 30 percent today. Most are headed by women, and these mothers face a double whammy — less income, and less time, to spend on their kids than parents with partners.

The use of flex-time is up sharply, from 15 percent of all full-time workers in 1991 to 28 percent in 1997, and the reason is simple. It works. Employers are finding that less harried employees are more productive and more loyal, and the concept should be broadened.

One promising proposal: Allow workers to take overtime pay in the form of time instead of cash. Another good idea: expand the Family and Medical Leave Act, which now permits 12 weeks of unpaid leave for family emergencies. Twenty-four hours a year for parent-teacher conferences, or medical visits, could be a great stress reliever.

So let's hear it from the candidates. How would they help parents cope with the time crunch?

Cokie Roberts and Steven V. Roberts' column is distributed by Unite[illegible] Features Syndicate.

the wells back on."

He said sales at his store mirrored tax revenues. But, he said, "we've planned for a decrease in sales and reduced our inventory, so we're managing well."

Dawn Martin, store team leader at Mervyn's California, said the energy economy has impacted sales at her store, "but we've been able to maintain sales. It's been a pretty good year."

She said she's confident Mervyn's will see strong back-to-school sales and strong holiday sales.

"We're already getting back-to-school inventory and holiday inventory," she said. "And people are buying them."

A sales associate at the locally owned Ginny's Closet, frequented largely by women between the ages of 35 and 70, said the store has felt the decline in the energy industry but has been doing fairly well. She attributed the success to a wide variety of merchandise.

Odessa also reported a sharp drop in sales tax revenues received this month. The $825,284 received is 16.8 percent below the $991,786 received last year.

The Comptroller's Office reported that June sales rebates were down slightly compared to a year earlier, but total payments to cities and counties for the first six months of the year are running 7.1 percent ahead of the same period last year.

BIG SPRING: Board gives approval

"The guys that put this together really did a first-class job," Tarleton said.

Tarleton, who is no stranger to the children who will step through the doors for the first time this fall, added that although this is a very exciting time for him and his staff, there is still a very somber note for them.

"Leaving the old Runnels building behind hasn't been easy for a lot of us," Tarleton said. "There's a lot of history there, and I know we will miss it."

Tarleton was referring to the Runnels Junior High School building, which will be empty this fall for the first time in almost 80 years.

"A lot of people right here in Big Spring went to Runnels," Tarleton said. "It really is a piece of this town's history, but it is time to move on. We're looking forward to using this beautiful new building and all of the facilities it provides."

Even the Runnels mascot, the Yearlings, has seen its final day in the West Texas sun.

"We're officially the Big Spring Junior High Steers now," Tarleton said as he showed off the school's new gym facilities, emblazoned with the new logo. "I guess it almost seems kind of strange."

The fate of the Runnels building is up in the air, Plumlee said.

Top court to decide on religious school use of taxpayer money

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court said Monday it will decide whether computers and other instructional materials paid for with taxpayer money can be used by religious schools, a case one expert called the most important church-state dispute to reach the court in two decades.

The court's parochial-aid decision in a Louisiana case could affect the national debate over school vouchers — financial help from the government for families whose children attend religious and other private schools. Expected sometime in 2000, the ruling also may determine the scope of federal efforts to connect every American classroom to the Internet.

A New Orleans-based federal appeals court struck down a federal program last year by ruling that providing educational materials other than textbooks for religiously affiliated elementary and secondary schools violates the constitutionally required separation of government and religion.

The same program, which makes federal money available through local school districts, was upheld by a San Francisco-based federal appeals court.

The Rev. Barry Lynn of Americans United for Separation of Church and State said the 14-year-old Louisiana case "is likely to be the most important church-state lawsuit to come before the Supreme Court in over two decades." He said it "forces the court to face squarely the question of direct taxpayer aid for religious schools."

Lawyers for parents of children in religiously affiliated schools in Louisiana said the case "involves the vital interests of American schoolchildren in obtaining access to modern technological equipment and materials.'

"Millions of students nationwide, including over a million attending religiously affiliated schools, receive benefits under the program," those lawyers told the court in the appeal granted review Monday.

Overall, the federal government provides about 7 percent of the money states spend on education. That percentage is significantly higher in poorer states.

The federal program at issue is authorized by the Elementary and Secondary Education Act of 1965, which gives public schools money for special services and instructional equipment. Public school districts are required to share the equipment in a "secular, neutral and nonideological" way with students enrolled in private schools within their boundaries.

More than 70 percent of the students who benefit from the program attend public schools, but many of the rest attend religiously affiliated schools.

In Jefferson Parish, La., 41 of 46 private schools participating in the federal program are religiously affiliated.

Three Jefferson Parish taxpayers sued federal, state and local officials in 1985. Their lawsuit said the federal program was unlawful under the Constitution's First Amendment ban on an "establishment of religion." Parents of children in religiously affiliated schools intervened in the case to defend the program.

A federal judge upheld the parochial aid in 1997 but the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals reversed that ruling last August.

Resident uncovers spending scandal by small-town officials

CHINCOTEAGUE, Va. (AP) — Charlie Kambarn wanted to find out what his town leaders did during an official trip to Florida, so he spent $1,300 of his own money following the paper trail.

As a result of what he found, the mayor was suspended, the town manager resigned and the police chief was fired.

The three men, it turned out, had skipped most of a hurricane conference in Florida and run up big bar and restaurant tabs at taxpayer expense.

The officials went to Orlando for the conference in March but later acknowledged playing hooky. Mayor Harry S. Thornton, Town Manager T. Stewart Baker and Police Chief Willis Dize drove a rental car six hours south to Key West to visit a friend.

Trinity seeks new leadership for school

Trustees and head of school agree he should step down; director of admissions assumes interim role

By Daniel Arp
Staff Writer

For reasons officials have declined to discuss, last month the Trinity School Board of Trustees and then-Head of School Mickey Landry agreed that the school should seek new leadership.

In a letter dated June 11, addressed to Trinity "parents and friends," Paul Latham, president of the board, wrote that on May 20 Landry and trustees "mutually decided" Landry should step down.

"To preserve the dignity and decorum warranted by the impending graduation ceremonies, it was further decided to postpone the announcement of this decision until after the Memorial Day weekend, an interim Head could be formally engaged, and all graduation exercises were complete," Latham wrote.

In a telephone interview on Monday, Latham declined to go into particulars, deferring to the contents of his letter.

"I don't know what his plans are right now. I think they're up in the air," Latham said. "You'd have to ask him."

Landry did not return phone calls on Monday.

Meanwhile, an interim head of school has been selected and has accepted the post. Rhonda Durham, formerly a trustee and a teacher at Trinity and director of admissions for the past two years, will be taking the reins for the 1999-2000 school year.

"We felt like she has a great working knowledge of the school and people in the school," Latham said.

"It is our goal to make the transition and leadership of the school as successful as possible," said Ms. Durham in a written statement on Monday, adding that it was an "honor and privilege" for her to serve in her interim role.

"We will be here throughout the summer months and always look forward to assisting anyone who is interested in learning about our school," she wrote.

Latham said a search committee will seek out a new head of school and shoot for a new hire to take over by fall 2000.

"It's difficult to say how long it will take," Latham said. "I would think that Rhonda would be here for this coming school year and our hope would be to hire a new head of school (at the end of that year)."

Landry had served as head of Trinity since June 1997, after the retirement of Peggy Simmons, who had run the school for more than 13 years.

Plucked from a list of candidates, Landry moved here from Littleton, N.H., where he had overseen the White Mountain School — a small private boarding school — for four years. Previously, Landry had been head of a larger private school in New Orleans.

In a March 1997 interview, Landry told the Reporter-Telegram that Trinity's "certain air of insistence on excellence inside and outside the classroom really sold me on coming to Midland."

And the search process must have seemed like an exhaustive and meticulous one to Landry at the time.

"It was quite a lengthy list (of desired attributes) the search agent read," Landry

Mystery gravestone

Gracie Lula Damron's 105-year-old grave is graced by kindness

In the peacefulness of Midland County's Fairview Cemetery, the 105-year-old grave of Gracie Lula Damron has a sweet wholeness to it, a renewal, a kind spirit.

Someone cared.

The inconspicuous stone marker, broken, chipped, but mended, rises about 18 inches above the sod. It bears the etching of a dove in flight, the baby's name, date of her birth, and death: Dec. 10, 1893, and July 16, 1894.

There's nothing more apparent, not even the sentimental epitaph so common to children's tombstones a century or more ago:

Budded on Earth
To Bloom in Heaven

The tombstone wasn't always where it has belonged since 1894. It was vandalized, stolen, and discarded sometime ago as if it were nothing of worth or value.

Susan Bradshaw cared. She cared for the memory of somebody else's cherished loved one more than a century ago.

On a Sunday morning about six weeks ago, Ms. Bradshaw, who has a background in geoscience, was taking a walk near an empty field close to her home and Loop 250 North, which is across town from the cemetery.

"I saw this stone just laying there," Ms. Bradshaw recalled. "I saw the name on it.

"My heart just went out when I saw the name," she said, and knew that she could "not leave it there."

So, she carried the heavy stone, about the size of a Webster's collegiate dictionary, home and pondered: "What do I do with it now?"

She heeded a friend's advice and headed for the Midland County Public Library in search of something, perhaps cemetery or genealogical records, to determine the marker's cemetery of origin and to return the stone to its grave.

Ms. Bradshaw found the damaged stone in a field near Loop 250 North and brought it to Sandra Wegner, director of Midland County Public Library. Using the library's book on cemetery records, Mrs. Wegner determined where the gravestone belonged.

Siblings currently home from study in Europe

Talking with a friend at the grocery store just the other day, Marla Chisholm mentioned that all her children were currently home.

"You mean," asked the friend, "they're all in the same country?"

Mrs. Chisholm laughs, but there is evident pride in her daughter about Erin, a student at Dartmouth University, who just returned from 10 weeks in Prague, the capital of the Czech Republic, and son Cameron, who lived for six months in Slovakia.

Cameron returned in February after graduating from his Slovakian school in December. He then graduated with his class at Midland High last month. Since Erin returned, the siblings have compared notes about their neighboring countries, which were joined as Czechoslovakia until 1993.

They follow in the footsteps of their father, Duncan, who was a foreign exchange student in Colombia.

Asked what stood out about their experiences, they said, in unison, "the food," which is dominated by pork.

There is little processed food there, explained Cameron, who lived with a family in the central Slovakian town of Prievidza. He said that most Slovakians have their own gardens and keep livestock, even in the cities.

Erin, who traveled to Prague with a group from Dartmouth's geography department as part of a foreign study program, went to study the city's transformation from communism to democracy.

Greenwood junior high student wins national essay contest on school violence

Greenwood eighth-grader Kyle Maskell knows what he'd do to help curb the youth violence issue: Citing the Constitution, he thinks youths should not be protected because of their age when they commit violent acts such as the school shootings that occurred in April in Littleton, Colo.

His letter, written in government class at Greenwood's Brooks Middle School, was selected among 11,000 as one of the winners in the RespecTeen Speak for Yourself national letter-writing contest. Maskell's letter was sent to U.S. Rep. Lamar Smith, a Republican from San Antonio who represents a portion of Midland County.

"Nowhere in the Constitution of the United States does it say that the rights listed are only for adults," Maskell wrote. "Murder is no small crime and we shouldn't treat it that way no matter who commits it. My suggestion to you is that if a juvenile commits murder he or she should be tried as an adult. Parsons has refused since 1995 to pay taxes, citing his membership in the separatist organization, Ms. Rylander said.

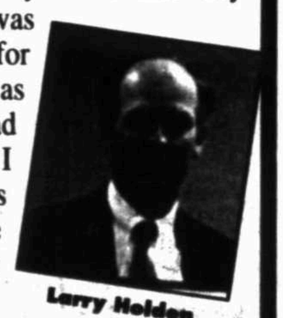
CASA DE AMIGOS
35th Anniversary



Larry Holden

Shortly after moving to Midland in 1991, I met Jim Henry at a United Way breakfast and was asked to join the Board at Casa. This was the first such invitation I received, and it has been special for several reasons. I found it much easier to make a difference as a volunteer in Midland than in other larger cities I had previously lived in. As I now prepare to move to Dallas, I realize that Midland was the first city in which I obtained as much personal gratification from my community service involvement as from my professional accomplishments. A major reason for this is Casa.

Casa is special because of its mission, its staff and the clients it serves. I consider myself to be a fiscal conservative with the heart of social liberal when it comes to helping people help themselves. Casa was practicing compassionate conservatism long before the term became fashionable. I recall Casa teaching entire families how to read and write because parents could no longer help children with homework because they themselves had not completed even a grade school education. I remember the long term welfare recipient who was able to build a very productive career with a large independent oil company because of the skills and self confidence she gained at Casa. I recall the battered husband with small children who had been contemplating suicide until he came to Casa for help.

None of this would be possible without the dedicated efforts of Lael Cordes-Pitts and her staff who are public service professionals with a sincere and constant interest and enthusiasm in helping the less fortunate. We also have a very generous community who I know will someday provide the endowment and long term financial security that Casa desperately needs.

GRAVE: Librarian 'felt like Sherlock Holmes' as she found name in records

(From 1B)

Sandra Wegner, the county librarian, located Gracie Lula's grave "right away" in "the first book she pulled out" from the library's genealogy stack," Ms. Bradshaw said. "She looked in the old cemetery book first, and it was right there."

Ms. Wegner found Gracie Lula's name and grave location by block and lot in the book, "Graves in Original Section (of) Fairview Cemetery, Midland, Texas," and also in the more recent "Cemetery Records of Fairview Cemetery," 1885-1989, compiled by Juanita Butler Hancock.

In the latter book is the parenthetical notation, "broken stone," next to Gracie Lula's name.

The original cemetery is a 10-acre graveyard dating to 1885 north of what is downtown Midland. The cemetery has been expanded to more than 42 acres and to an estimated 25,000-grave capacity.

"Actually, when I first saw the stone, I pictured an elderly woman," Ms. Bradshaw said.

She had envisioned "Lula as a lady who had lived a very long life and passed away" and not as a baby who had lived only seven months and a week after birth.

The stone had been broken where Gracie Lula's date of death was etched, and the date was not discernible.

"It never occurred to me that the stone was that old," Ms. Bradshaw said. "It's over 100 years old, and it certainly didn't occur to me that that would be a baby."

In the 1800s, "a lot of children died of different maladies that we would not have any great problem with today," said Ms. Wegner.

The librarian said that she "felt like Sherlock Holmes" in solving the mystery. "It took me about two seconds to figure out where that tombstone came from."

And Mrs. Wegner said she found "rather touching" Ms. Bradshaw's desire to find the tombstone's proper home and her "civic-minded" bent.

In a sense, Ms. Bradshaw corrected the wrongs, the vandalism and thievery, of another.

"Genealogical societies and historical societies, as well as the keepers of the cemetery, fight the battle against vandalism," Ms. Wegner said.

Architect Richard Schwope, Midland County facilities manager and planning director and who oversees the cemetery, noted that the Halloween season is the most acute time for vandalism to the cemetery.

In considering the marker, Mrs. Wegner suggested that "this (cemetery) is the only place in the world" where Gracie Lula's name appears other than, perhaps, the family Bible. "It is before death certificates (in Texas) ... and they did not have birth certificates in the 1800s."

The family name "Damron," however, does appear in the 1984 book, "The Pioneer History of Midland County, Texas, 1880-1926," published by the Midland County Historical Society. And Damron family names are listed in the more recent cemetery registry. According to the "Pioneer History" book, Robert Edward "Tony" Damron moved to Midland in 1888 from Spanish Fort, Texas.

In 1909, a fledgling but short-lived community called "Damron City" was developed southeast of Midland near the Midkiff community. The town site included a two-story hotel, a school, houses and a newspaper, "The Damron Times," Tyson Midkiff, recalled at age 87 in 1985.

The town's developers, W.S. Willis and Lavern Kershner, had purchased land from Tony Damron. But the town never flourished, possibly because of the "awful drought" of 1909 and 1910, Midkiff said, and the promoters went broke.

Damron City is remote and no more.

But Gracie Lula Damron has come into Ms. Bradshaw's life.

"Someone lost someone that they loved" 105 years ago, "and they bought a headstone to mark that grave," Ms. Bradshaw said at Gracie Lula's grave. "And there is only one place in the entire world where that headstone belongs, and that's on that grave."

field," she said, explaining that with the government relaxing regulations, "women are taking over the field and transforming it from a patriarchal, hands-off field to a more personal one where they meet the people instead of just processing paper."

She said Prague is "a beautiful, magical city. There's castles everywhere, a river through the middle of town. You can see it grow from a medieval town out into suburbs. There are even hypermarts in the suburbs. It's amazing to see it transform from a medieval city to a modern, global city."

Before the two nations became Czechoslovakia, she said, "The Czech Republic was more industrialized and Slovakia was more agricultural. They needed each other and worked well together. The Czechs are more global and westernized, but both want to join the European Union."

Her brother agreed that "Slovakia is lower in socioeconomic class, and so the Slovaks are jealous and the Czechs feel a little more superior."

Of the Slovaks, Cameron said, "They idolize America." The most popular television shows include "Dallas," "Alf," "The Love Boat" and "Step By Step." "They have an idealized idea of what American society is."

He said that he was the first American many Slovaks had met, and when they learned he was from Texas, "they expected me to wear a cowboy hat and boots. And when they heard my father was in the oil business, I got called 'J.R. Ewing' a lot, and 'Walker, Texas Ranger.'"

He was living in Slovakia during the United States' most recent attacks on Iraq in late December. "In America we have a warped view of ourselves as being protectors," he said. "In Europe, we're seen sometimes as bullies."

Erin said that the Czechs are very proud that they have an open-air policy with NATO, allowing NATO war planes to fly over the country as they attack Kosovo.

The experience made her more interested in world affairs, "especially after my time in Prague and seeing how dynamic the changes are there," she said.

Cameron said he has been interested in world affairs, but the family's adoption of Alex, a youth from Russia, in 1997 really spurred his interest. "It showed me there was more to the world than my own backyard."

He plans to build a career in international relations and will attend Emory University in Atlanta this fall and hopes to get involved with its Jimmy Carter Center later in his college career.

Erin said she has two goals: Studying marketing consultation and studying the cultural interests and trends in the United States, and to become a geography professor, especially human geography — anthropology, culture and history.

Cameron admitted that returning to the United States was tough. While he missed his family and friends, he had mixed emotions about leaving the other set of friends and family he had established in Slovakia.

Agreed Erin, "I love my family and the United States, but I wasn't through yet."

"Neither was I," said Cameron.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Tuesday, June 15, 1999:

Ideas are abundant both within and around you, especially about making money and increasing your own marketability. Be open to outside suggestions, but never underestimate who you are and what you have to offer. Be careful when it comes to taking risks, especially involving a child or loved one. If you are single, sort through options carefully. You do have a lot of admirers! Develop a good friendship as well as a love relationship. If attached, allow your partner or mate to have a greater role in your life. Become a team, financially as well as emotionally. CANCER is full of inspiration.

ARIES (March 21-April 19)
★★★ Stick to the fundamentals. Have a discussion with a family member. Honor security first. You could easily become frustrated and lose your temper. Getting angry helps no one, not even you! Find words to convey your frustration. Tonight: Lounge around the house.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)
★★★★★ Make use of your communication skills. Sharing ideas and respecting each other's opinions are instrumental in making positive changes. Sort through work demands; discern what is absolutely necessary and what isn't. You could get frustrated with a co-worker. Tonight: On the phone.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)
★★★ Your possessive side emerges. You might not be sure about which way to go. Keep a high profile. Refuse to be intimidated by another in a money matter. This person wants to do things his way, but you could be uncomfortable with the risk. Be careful with your commitments. Tonight: Pay bills.

CANCER (June 21-July 22)
★★★★★ You're amazing, and everyone knows it! Examine your long-term desires when dealing with a family member who could be a bit aggressive and pushy. You know how to handle his energy. Tonight: Whatever makes you smile.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)
★★★ The answers lie within. Think through a decision rather than acting on it. Refuse to be pushed. Take your time and do the needed research. Your sense of humor emerges if you don't overreact to another's curiosity. Pace yourself. Don't be coerced to act before you are ready. Tonight: Take a night off.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)
★★★★ Be careful about spending. Halt unnecessary extravagance. Your sense of humor comes out with a friend. Discussions are animated, lively and directed. Brainstorm, exchange news — even swap a joke or two. Your sense of direction emerges. Tonight: Where the crowds are.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)
★★★★ You can only push so far and so hard. Even you, the zodiac's diplomat, could lose your temper. Be more aware of work, image and demands. Have discussions with others, but don't feel you need to take their word literally. Take a break at lunch and do something just for you. Tonight: In the limelight!

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21)
★★★★★ Listen to news. Seek alternatives and new sources of information. You might not have the complete story. As you attempt to come to terms with another's opinions, you could feel frustrated. There might be another solution. Pull back, don't blowup. Answers come forth. Tonight: Try a new restaurant.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)
★★★★★ Determine what is important to a partner. You might need to pull and tug in order to get the information you are seeking. Another doesn't mean to be coy, he just wants to be sure that you are receptive to his ideas. A friend makes demands that you can't meet right now. Tonight: With the gang.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)
★★★ Follow a different drummer; veer off the beaten path. Examine another's ideas, though you might not be comfortable with them. Pressure from a boss or a higher-up could be a bit disconcerting. You feel you're being pulled in several directions. Decide what you want to respond to. Tonight: Out and about.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)
★★★★ Emphasis is on work and accomplishment. Though a lot comes across your desk, you can handle it. Still, information from a distance could spin you in several different directions. Understand your limitations. Tonight: Try a stress-buster.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)
★★★★ You may feel torn between two alternatives or courses of action and may be unsure about which way to go. Tap into your imagination, allow more spontaneity into your life. Take time for a child or a new friendship. A demanding partner or associate could irritate you. Tonight: Put on your dancing shoes.

To the members of the club, it seemed as if Trump Coup Tommy's bridge game was improving. While still not considered a threat unless trumps broke badly, he could no longer be taken for a patsy. And when trumps did not split, Tommy was deadly. Here is an example of his peculiar ability.

North's one no-trump response was a one-round force in North-South's methods, and the jump to three spades was invitational. North had an easy raise to four spades.

West led the two of diamonds to the queen and ace. Tommy immediately fired back the jack of hearts. West grabbed the ace and reverted to a diamond, taken by the king. East returned a club to Tommy's ace, and Tommy crossed to the ace of spades and made the key play of ruffing a diamond. When East showed out on the king of spades, Tommy's early heart play and foresight in ruffing the diamond produced a just reward.

A heart to the king was followed by a heart ruff in the closed hand, reducing Tommy's trump length to that of West. The defenders' anguish was completed when Tommy cashed the king of clubs and exited with a low club. West was forced to win the queen and lead away from the J-9 of trumps into Tommy's Q-10 tenace. Tommy lost only one trick in each suit except for trumps.

Crowds get to see Jennifer Lopez — twice

NEW YORK — Her hit album "On the 6" is named for a New York City subway train, but it was by foot and by car that Jennifer Lopez put herself on display for adoring crowds at the Puerto Rican Day Parade.

The actress-singer strolled up Fifth Avenue for about 10 blocks of the parade Sunday before she ducked onto a side street to escape hordes of clamoring photographers. Fans watching from behind police barricades shouted "Jennifer!" and cheered as she waved and made her hasty exit.

Jennifer Lopez rode in the Puerto Rican Day Parade in New York City.

Later in the afternoon, Ms. Lopez returned to the parade — this time in a top-down convertible where she looked a little more relaxed. A line of police officers flanked the car to keep photographers away.

Ms. Lopez, who starred in the movie "Selena," was born in the Bronx. She named her album for the No. 6 subway train, which runs from her old neighborhood into Manhattan.

NONGOMA, South Africa — President Nelson Mandela leaves office a richer man — six cows, a bull and five calves richer.

Mandela also received a shield, a spear and a leopard skin Saturday from Goodwill Zwelithini, the king of the Zulus.

A brass band and traditional Zulu dancers entertained more than 500 guests outside the king's palace in the KwaZulu-Natal province while Mandela and Zwelithini met inside.

Mandela retires Wednesday, when his hand-picked successor Thabo Mbeki is inaugurated.

MANILA, Philippines — Geri Halliwell began her first tour Monday as a U.N. Population Fund goodwill ambassador by promoting contraceptives in the Philippines, where the dominant Catholic church considers artificial birth control a taboo.

The first stop for the former Ginger Spice was a clinic run by Marie Stopes International, a charity promoting contraceptive use and reproductive health.

"I believe that everybody deserves to have control of their lives and that means having control over your fertility, that means being able to have protection against disease and unwanted pregnancies," Ms. Halliwell said. "It's everybody's fundamental right."

Since leaving the Spice Girls last year, Halliwell has made a solo album, "Schizophonic."

NEW YORK — Mrs. Brady is coming to morning television.

Florence Henderson, the actress who played Carol Brady in the 1970s situation comedy "The Brady Bunch," will be a co-host of "Later Today," the NBC News show that's set to premiere this fall, an NBC executive who asked not to be identified said Monday.

She'll be paired with Jodi Applegate of NBC News and Asha Blake, former anchor at KNBC-TV, the network's Los Angeles affiliate, the executive said.

Henderson played a widowed mom with three daughters who married an architect with three sons on "The Brady Bunch." The comedy ran on ABC from 1969-1974 and became something of a camp classic and the subject of two 1990s movie spoofs.

She replayed the role twice in two short-lived series, during 1977 and 1990.

Henderson also has a history in morning TV: she was a "Today girl" in 1959 when Dave Garroway was the host, contributing interviews and features to the program.

"Later Today," as the title suggests, is set to follow "Today" in NBC's morning schedule and will be modeled after the lighter fare in that show's last hour.

NBC News had no comment on the report.

EAST LANSING, Mich. — This time, it was Magic Johnson's turn to cheer at Michigan State University.

The former Spartan and retired NBA great watched from a private box at the school's Breslin Center on Saturday as his son, Andre, received his diploma from Everett High School.

Johnson graduated from Everett before going on to Michigan State and leading the Spartans to the 1979 NCAA championship.

When Andre's name was read, his father leapt to his feet, clapped and shouted. Johnson was also celebrating the recovery of his father, Earvin Johnson Sr., from a stroke last week.

ESSAY: Program encourages junior high students to write concerns to representatives solution to this problem."

Smith said Maskell's letter was not unlike many others he has received since the recent outbreak of school shootings.

"Kyle expressed himself very well about a growing concern throughout the 21st Congressional District — juvenile crime," Smith said. "His letter is representative of those I have received from high school students from Midland and elsewhere in the district recently that were the basis for my recent statement to the House Judiciary Committee during a hearing on youth crime. Kyle's letter is proof that well-expressed opinions stand out and make a difference."

Maskell thinks everyone is capable of violence but most people are sensible enough to control their anger and other emotions that produce violent outbreaks. Still, he said, he and his friends are, for good reasons, concerned.

"It could happen anywhere," Maskell said. "Who knows what could happen? Out here where we live, it's not as much of a concern, but it still could happen."

Maskell concluded his letter to Smith by reiterating his call for harsher punishment for juvenile offenders and expressed what he would do in his community to heighten awareness.

"I feel very strongly about the punishment for juvenile crime," Maskell wrote. "I think that if a juvenile is man enough to commit murder, he should also be man enough to accept the consequences. These consequences should not be taken lightly.

"Here in my community I can help out by expressing my opinions to my friends, family and other adults. I will let them know how strongly I feel about this problem and perhaps they will agree with me. I will also let teenagers know that if they commit such a horrible crime it will affect them for the rest of their life and it will also be hard for them to find a career with this on their permanent record. With your help and mine, we can make this a better world."

The RespecTeen Speak for Yourself Curriculum is distributed to seventh- and eighth-grade social studies teachers across the nation every year. As part of the curriculum, students are encouraged to write letters to their congressional representatives about issues important to them. Copies of the letters are sent to the program's sponsor, the Lutheran Brotherhood, and are judged by a panel of educators based on quality and clarity of thought, argument, supporting data, expression, sincerity and originality.

More than 110,000 letters have been written in the 11-year history of the program and nearly 2,200 have been designated as district winners in that time.

Kyle will receive a certificate and a $50 savings bond in recognition of his winning letter.

DEAR ABBY

Best friend's late birthday gift is whole lot of spite

DEAR ABBY: I have never written you before, but I have a big problem.

My best friend of 26 years got drunk at my 50th birthday party. I begged and pleaded with her, asked her for her keys, and offered to have her spend the night at my house — or let me drive her home. The only alternative was to get physical and forcibly take her keys. That wasn't an option.

Van Buren

My friend is 61 years old and a great-grandmother. She got a DUI that night. She blames the DUI on me! I offered to loan her $2,000 for the lawyer because we have been friends for such a long time. One day I was her best friend and received a beautiful birthday card and gifts. The next day I was the world's biggest heel.

My friend reads your column. Please comment on this. I decided not to talk to her anymore because I feel betrayed. This isn't the first time she has gotten drunk and driven her car. It's just the first time she got caught. I am very hurt. — BEST-FRIENDLESS

DEAR BEST-FRIENDLESS: There is a term for your former best friend's behavior. It's called "displaced anger." What it means is that your friend is unable to direct her anger at what happened where it belongs — at herself for her foolish judgment and refusal to admit she has a problem with alcohol. Therefore she is aiming it at you. For the sake of a 26-year friendship, I hope she recognizes the unfairness of her actions. Right now it's easier for her to blame you than to blame herself. You have my sympathy.

DEAR ABBY: This has been bothering me for many months. I am a senior citizen member of a musical group that presents a major concert during the holiday season.

Many of our members have sons, daughters and grandchildren. Sometimes not one family member will come to the concert. They are all "too busy."

Yet Grandma and Grandpa are expected to attend ALL sports events, glee club performances, pageants, cheerleading contests — nursery school through college graduations, etc. Believe me, some of those events are boring, too. But Grandma and Grandpa sit through them proudly.

My question to all is, "Is sitting through a concert too much of a sacrifice?" — HURT IN CONNECTICUT

DEAR HURT: In the interest of family solidarity, it shouldn't be. Everybody needs positive strokes at one time or another.

DEAR ABBY: I have been living with my fiance for more than three years. My parents are upset and show their disapproval when they send us letters or cards on various occasions.

They address the mail to us as "Mr. and Mrs. John Doe, C.L." The letters mean "common law." The postman has asked what the letters represent. I answered, "It's a joke between mother and me."

How can I get my parents to stop using the letters on correspondence and greeting cards? — UNHAPPY PEGGY, FULTONDALE, ALA.

DEAR UNHAPPY PEGGY: Get married!

Houston Astros general manager Gerry Hunsicker reports Monday in Houston that Astros manager Larry Dierker will have brain surgery to remove a blood vessel mass.

Dierker to undergo brain surgery

By Michael A. Lutz
AP Sports Writer

HOUSTON — Houston Astros manager Larry Dierker will have brain surgery to remove a blood vessel mass that caused his seizure during a game at the Astrodome.

Dierker, 52, will be operated on Tuesday at Methodist Hospital, Astros general manager Gerry Hunsicker said today.

Dierker was taken there after he collapsed and shook violently during the eighth inning of Sunday's game against the San Diego Padres. Tests concluded there was no tumor, Hunsicker said.

"I talked with Larry this morning, and he was coherent and very positive and encouraged," Hunsicker said. "He was kind of joking around, but he said the last couple of days he had severe headaches and that was unusual for him."

Dierker told Hunsicker he didn't remember anything after the second inning of Sunday's game. Dierker didn't even recall Derek Bell's sixth-inning grand slam, which put the Astros ahead 4-1.

"Larry said he was sorry he missed the grand slam," Hunsicker said.

On Sunday, Hunsicker described the collapse as a grand mal seizure, which can be associated with epilepsy. The condition is called arteriovenous malformation, a collection of blood vessels about 1 1/2 inches in diameter.

This is a condition in which people are born with malformed, sometimes tangled, arteries or veins in the brain. Over time they can become dilated, so that the enlarged vessels either pressure neural tissue or even burst and bleed into the brain.

Astros Win/4C

Doctors told Hunsicker the mass was located in a less critical part of the brain and could have been there for possibly two years. It was unknown what caused it to move when it did.

Hunsicker said he was told by doctors that on a scale of 1 to 5 — with 1 the least serious — Dierker's condition is 1.

"But everything is unpredictable at this point," the general manager said. "Until they go in and do the surgery we don't really know."

It's uncertain how long Dierker will be away from the team. Matt Galante, Houston's bench coach, was appointed interim manager Sunday.

"At this point, that's the least thing on my mind," Hunsicker said. "All we can do now is take the lead from the doctors that his prognosis is excellent, but there's no way we can put a timetable on his return."

Astros owner Drayton McLane said Sunday night that Dierker had a milder seizure three years ago in San Diego when he was an Astros broadcaster. Hunsicker said Monday that Dierker did not have a seizure earlier.

Dierker's seizure came during a game that began with former Astros pitcher J.R. Richard throwing out the ceremonial first pitch. Richard had a career-ending stroke and collapsed

COUNTDOWN TO NBA CHAMPIONSHIP

Finals on verge of reaching San Antonio

Little animosity exists between Spurs ,Knicks

By Chris Sheridan
AP Basketball Writer

SAN ANTONIO — Not a single silver-and-black-clad heckler awaited the New York Knicks as they arrived in town Monday for the NBA Finals. Not a single harsh word was spoken by the San Antonio Spurs.

Rivalry? Not even close. Enemies? Not at all.

This NBA Finals, at least for now, is a meeting of cordial strangers.

"We don't bash anybody. That's not the Spurs. We're nice guys," San Antonio's Steve Kerr said. "We love New York. Good guys vs. good guys, I think."

The atmosphere of mutual praise and respect lingered for another day as both teams continued to prepare for the start of the series Wednesday night.

The Knicks arrived in a city smattered with black-and-pink "Go Spurs Go" signs, and if they looked out the windows of their bus from the airport, they would have seen a good percentage of the cars with some kind of supportive message to the Spurs hand-painted on their windows.

Spurs fever is a feel-good type of thing, with no discernible Knick-bashing souring the mood.

One of the New York tabloids couldn't help itself from taking a few shots at the Spurs, their city and their cheerleaders — calling them 16 big-haired ladies in silver-and-pink Jetsons costumes — but the animosity was far from genuine.

It's just a fact of these finals: There isn't really that much history or bad blood between the two teams.

"Nothing I can think of," David Robinson said. "I can't remember any fights, no real bad attitudes. But they always played us real tough."

San Antonio and New York did not play each other during this lockout-shortened season, so this will be the first meeting between the teams since March 31, 1998 — a game the Spurs won by 17 points at Madison Square Garden in large part because of injuries to Patrick Ewing and Chris Dudley.

"They were real small then, real small, and they had a real tough time handling our inside

Popovich has done things in his own way

By Kelley Shannon
AP Sports Writer

SAN ANTONIO — This was supposed to be a good day for the San Antonio Spurs. It was December 1996 and David Robinson was returning from an injury.

Leave it to Gregg Popovich to kill the mood.

Popovich, the general manager, fired coach Bob Hill before that night's game in Phoenix. He appointed himself coach, and it was hardly a popular decision.

"It was made with a lot of thought and a lot of counsel and a lot of heartache," Popovich explained at the time, admitting the scenario looked "quite self-serving."

Popovich was never one to let on that he worried what others thought of him. The same holds true today.

As San Antonio heads into the NBA Finals on Wednesday against the New York Knicks, Popovich is doing his job in typical no-nonsense fashion. Sometimes brash, always disciplined, he is leading the Spurs further in the playoffs than they've ever gone before.

"Pop has stayed on us," guard Mario Elie said. "Pop just wants us to get better every day, and he's been doing a good job."

The way the Spurs marched into the championship series — losing only one game to Minnesota in the first round then sweeping the Los Angeles Lakers and Portland Trail Blazers — demonstrated Popovich's workmanlike approach.

Popovich got his early basketball experience in the military, playing at the Air Force Academy. Appropriately, he was team captain. While serving a five-year military commitment afterward he toured Eastern Europe and the Soviet Union as part of the U.S. Armed Forces team.

Popovich later was an assistant coach at Air Force before becoming head coach at Pomona-Pitzer in Claremont, Calif. He worked as an assistant in the NBA under Larry Brown at San Antonio and Don Nelson at Golden State.

Like Nelson, now coach and general manager of the Dallas Mavericks, Popovich still

Hull says he'll return before end of Stars' quest for NHL crown

By Alan Robinson
AP Sports Writer

BUFFALO, N.Y. — There's something wrong with Brett Hull's groin. There's nothing wrong with his head. Really.

Says who? Says Hull, who laughed off suggestions Monday that he hurt his head on the same play in Game 3 of the Stanley Cup finals against Buffalo on which he reinjured his groin.

Hull, who hurt the groin twice previously this season, is doubtful for Game 4 Tuesday, but could return as early as Game 5 on Thursday in Dallas.

"Right now, it's minute to minute," Hull said Monday, talking to reporters as he worked a crossword puzzle.

As the media fired questions at the eighth-leading scorer in NHL playoff history, he responded with a few of his own as he filled in the crossword.

Q: "Who is Judith Martin's alter ego?"
A: "Miss Manners."
Q: "What golfer and former NFL quarterback share the last name?"
A: "Snead."
Q: "How did the groin feel while skating today?"
A: "I don't know, I never skated."
Q: "Did you get your bell rung on that play and, if you did, have you had any repercussions?"
A: "No, you couldn't hurt this head."

Dallas Stars coach Ken Hitchcock chats with reporters before the team's practice in Buffalo Monday. The Stars lead the Buffalo Sabres 2-1.

Sabres desperately need to break out of their offensive funk

By Alan Robinson
AP Sports Writer

BUFFALO, N.Y. — The Buffalo Sabres' scorers should be well rested for Game 4 of the Stanley Cup finals against the Dallas Stars on Tuesday night. After all, they've been on vacation for a week.

Since they sneaked into Dallas and won 3-2 in Game 1, the Sabres have three goals in two games — and, as a result, two losses. Their offense has been like Randy Johnson's fastball: It's there, but you can't see it.

Memo to Miroslav Satan, Curtis Brown, Michael Peca, Stu Barnes and crew: You might want to try scoring a goal or two on Tuesday. If not, that trip to Dallas on Thursday for Game 5 might be the last of a very, very long season.

"We know what they're saying, that if we don't go out and win tomorrow, it's probably over," Brown said Monday as the Sabres plotted ways to combat a Stars defense as oppressive as Dallas' heat and just as stifling.

The Stars allowed an NHL-low 168 goals during the season. But they've elevated the intensity and tenacity of their neutral-zone trap, backchecking and shot-blocking to a new level of distracting effectiveness in the playoffs.

The strategy is simple. As Stars coach Ken Hitchcock said, "When there's a lot of pressure, your hands become like stone and it's hard to make plays."

The Sabres' frustration clearly grew as they got off only 12 shots in their 2-1 loss in Game 3. So much so that coach Lindy Ruff is aware how the performance deflated a city still discouraged by the ego-deflating disappointment of four Super Bowl losses in four seasons by the Bills.

"It was a big downer," Ruff said. "The whole city was pumped up, and it was a bit of a letdown."

In Game 3, Dallas actually

Lakers hotly pursuing Jackson

By Ken Peters
AP Sports Writer

LOS ANGELES — Phil Jackson, back from a fishing trip to Alaska, has to decide if he's heading to Los Angeles and the Lakers.

The Lakers reportedly are offering Jackson a four-year, $24 million contract to become their coach. Lakers executive vice present Jerry West and general manager Mitch Kupchak spoke with Jackson by telephone Monday.

"It was our first actual contact with him," team spokesman John Black said. "The conversation went very well. There is no deal done, but we're hopeful that we can get something done."

Black said that Lakers owner Jerry Buss, West and Kupchak "like him very much and we hope to come to an agreement with him."

Jackson already was scheduled to be in Los Angeles, but stumping for a presidential candidate rather than for a job. He was slated to be in town Wednesday and Thursday campaigning for Bill Bradley, a former NBA star.

guys," Robinson recalled. "We got pretty much anything we wanted, I remember."

This time the Knicks find themselves in similar straits because of the season-ending injury Ewing suffered in the conference finals and the uncertain status of whether Larry Johnson will be able to play with a sprained knee. Johnson and the team's doctors will make a game-time decision Wednesday as to whether he'll play, the Knicks said.

Containing Robinson and Tim Duncan, an already difficult task, would be even more burdensome without Johnson.

"The thing Duncan and Robinson can do is cause so much foul trouble. The depth factor inside is critical for us," Knicks coach Jeff Van Gundy said after the team practiced in New York before flying to San Antonio.

The coach and the Knicks players again refused to say if they'll depart from the common NBA strategy and use single-coverage rather than double-teams against Duncan and Robinson in the low post. Clearly, though, they'll have to find some way to limit the damage the two big men can inflict.

Spurs coach Gregg Popovich said he expects to see a mix of single- and double-coverage. In the past, a few teams have actually had success using single coverage, although Popovich was giving no clues as to the secrets of stopping his Twin Towers.

"No way I'll tell you that," he said. "I can't remember. Bad memory."

Those who have been following the Knicks for the past decade can recall one bad memory when it comes to dealing with the Spurs.

Back on Feb. 21, 1990, New York traded second-year guard Rod Strickland to the Spurs for Maurice Cheeks, who was at the end of his career. Cheeks played only one more season, while Strickland has been among the league's assists leaders ever since. In fact, it can be argued that the Knicks haven't had a playmaker as talented as Strickland ever since they traded him.

But not all the dealmaking between the teams was so lopsided toward the Spurs.

On Feb. 8, 1996, New York sent Charles Smith and his injury-ravaged knee to San Antonio along with Monty Williams for Brad Lohaus and J.R. Reid. It turned out to be a key trade for the Knicks since they were able to clear Smith's salary off their salary cap, which gave them room to sign free agents Allan Houston and Chris Childs the next summer.

Smith's injury ended his career. Those fleecings may have created some rivalries among the teams' front office personnel, but it has nothing to do with the current players.

There is, however, one interesting subplot among Latrell Sprewell of the Knicks and Jerome Kersey of the Spurs. When both played for Golden State, they had a fight at practice in which Sprewell went after Kersey with a two-by-four.

"It's ironic that each round I keep running into old teammates," said Sprewell, who faced ex-Warriors Tim Hardaway of Miami and Chris Mullin of Indiana in the first and third rounds.

CUP: Series has been low scoring blocked more shots (19) than Buffalo put on Ed Belfour, who might have enjoyed the quietest night of any goaltender in recent Stanley Cup history despite facing eight Buffalo power plays.

(From 1C)

Joe Juneau said of the Sabres' postgame feelings of frustration, "It's hard. You're mad. But it's still the first team to win four games, and we have to correct what has to be corrected. If we win Game 4, everybody will change their minds again."

In an effort to rekindle his offense, Ruff gave extra shifts in Game 3 to Satan, his slumping 40-goal scorer. Satan managed his first two shots of the series but still didn't score, and Ruff admits to a growing impatience with his big gun.

As a result, Ruff probably will move Juneau onto the Satan-Curtis Brown line to add speed and a goal-scoring touch. He also plans to make faster line changes so the Stars' effective No. 2 line, led by Joe Nieuwendyk, who had both Dallas goals in Game 3, faces different defenders on the same shift.

"We're stressing a lot shorter shifts, so maybe for 15 seconds they'll see Curtis Brown, maybe for 30 seconds they'll see Michael Peca," Ruff said.

The Sabres probably won't see Dallas sharpshooter Brett Hull, who had two goals in the first two games before reinjuring his groin early in Game 3. Hull says there is a chance he can play, but Hitchcock lists him as doubtful.

"I don't think there's any doubt in anybody's mind that he's not a player for tomorrow night," Hitchcock said. "I don't think there is enough soreness out of the area yet. You might do a lot more further damage if you do put him in."

There also is no doubt in the Sabres' minds they must attack Game 4 with a much different approach than they did Game 4 of the Eastern Conference finals a year ago. They trailed Washington 2-1, yet responded with one of their poorest efforts of the season and lost 2-0, and went on to lose the series in six games.

Similarly, the Stars also were up 2-1 to Colorado in the Western Conference finals several weeks ago, only to lose 3-2. Hitchcock hopes they have short memories.

"I don't think we made enough physical and mental sacrifices to win that game," Hitchcock said. "I think we know the sacrifices we have to make if we want to win Game 4."

HULL: Star likely to sit out game 4

(From 1C)

spot on the line?"

A: "Well, that is about the next best thing to that defensive right winger as you can put there, a defenseman, right?"

Hull, of course, was making fun of his own reputation for being a scorer, and only a scorer, for most of his career. But he apparently wasn't kidding when he suggested he might play Tuesday, even if his coach downplayed that possibility.

"I still think he's doubtful," said Stars coach Ken Hitchcock, who doesn't want to risk losing Hull for the rest of the series by rushing him back.

There is no doubt Hull is one of the NHL's most quotable and colorful players, which creates a curious yet respectable relationship with his coach. Like most coaches, Hitchcock loves Hull's scoring touch — Hull has 586 regular-season goals — but worries anytime he sees a microphone near Hull's mouth.

"I had a player like him in the minors, (the Penguins') Rob Brown who used to drive me crazy morning, noon and night," Hitchcock said. "We are very good friends now, even though he plays in the league. We learned a relationship of give and take. It's the same thing with Brett Hull. You never know what bomb he'll drop on you. He's a very opinionated person.

"Sometimes, he'll look at me and wink and say, 'I just dropped a bomb on you.' It's never dull when there are guys like Brett. He always has an opinion, and sometimes he'll just throw something up against the wall and see what sticks. And we have to go in and clean up the mess."

The Stars can only hope Hull's absence doesn't wreck an offense that hasn't been explosive but has been efficient throughout the playoffs.

Jackalopes sign three players

ODESSA — The Odessa Jackalopes have signed three players, including associate captain Rick Girhiny, for the 1999-2000 Western Professional Hockey League season.

The club has signed forward John Bossio and defenseman Cam Law.

Girhiny is an original Jackalope. The 26-year-old from Niagara Falls, Ontario had nine goals and 23 assists last year.

Bossio, a 1998 graduate of Northern Michigan University, played last year in the Italian professional league where he scored 50 points in 48 games.

Law comes from the University of Western Ontario, where he scored 55 points in 104 games.

Texas stars fall twice

McALISTER, Okla. — The Texas All-Stars lost games to Arizona and Mississippi here Monday in the Sun Belt Classic All-Star Baseball Tournament.

Texas lost a tough game to Arizona 12-11 when Arizona scored five runs in the top of the seventh after two were out to take the win. Coahoma's Delvin White took the loss when a two-out error by Texas opened the flood gates.

Midland High's Laynce Nix was 3-for-5 at the plate with two RBIs and a run scored. Cotey-Joe Cswaykus scored a run.

Texas fell to Mississippi 9-1, but both Midlanders had good outings. Nix was 1-for-2 and Cswaykus was 1-for-2 and scored Texas' only run.

Texas plays Georgia at 11:30 a.m. today. Texas is now 2-3 in the series.

COACH: Popovich survives turmoil holds both jobs with the Spurs. He says it's a big help to have a strong staff on both the coaching and management sides.

(From 1C)

"You have to be able to delegate and trust people and let them do their jobs. My staff allows me to do that," Popovich said. "It's run pretty smoothly for us."

Popovich hints he might not always want both titles.

"Maybe over time it's something you wouldn't want to do anymore just because no matter what, it does take up a lot of your concentration," he said. "So I think in time I might want to get rid of that responsibility and enjoy life a little bit more, maybe."

Spurs chairman Peter Holt has been negotiating an extension on Popovich's three-year contract, which ends after next season. Popovich is paid $1.1 million this season and $1.2 million next season, the San Antonio Express-News reported.

Popovich struggled through a public relations nightmare after firing Hill, then led the Spurs to the franchise's worst record that season (20-62). He redeemed himself in the summer of 1997 when the Spurs won the NBA Draft lottery.

Tim Duncan was the top prize. With the 7-footer from Wake Forest on board and Robinson recuperating, the Spurs were on the mend and on the way toward winning again.

In the 1997-98 season, the Spurs went 56-26 and set the league record for best turnaround in a season. San Antonio advanced to the Western Conference semifinals before getting ousted by Utah.

This season, Popovich added playoff-tested veterans Elie, Steve Kerr and Jerome Kersey to the mix. After a 6-8 start and speculation that Popovich might be fired, the Spurs went on a tear in March and finished the rest of the regular season 31-5.

"Even the superstars, Pop gets on both of them, Tim and Dave. ... We accept it and just move on and try to do better," Elie said. "Nobody talks back to Pop. He's in charge."

In return, Popovich has nothing but praise for his players.

"There are a lot of people who could take this group to the finals," he said. "It's a hell of a group of guys."

Hot Chili scorches Rangers

Associated Press

NEW YORK — Chili Davis spent the last week chilling out on an interleague vacation.

He made the most of his return Monday night, homering and driving in four runs in the New York Yankees' 8-2 win over the Texas Rangers on Monday night.

"I think the days off helped me," Davis said. "I felt stronger and more refreshed than before the trip."

Davis was mostly a spectator last week with the Yankees playing without the designated hitter in National League parks. His only opportunities came as a pinch-hitter and he went 1-for-4.

Every Yankees rally seemed to find Davis, who had 11 men on base in his five at-bats.

"I wasn't worried about timing," Davis said. "I was more concerned with aggressiveness. I had been in chill mode the last week and when you hit you don't want to be in chill mode. I may have been too aggressive a couple of times, but I don't think it affected me too much."

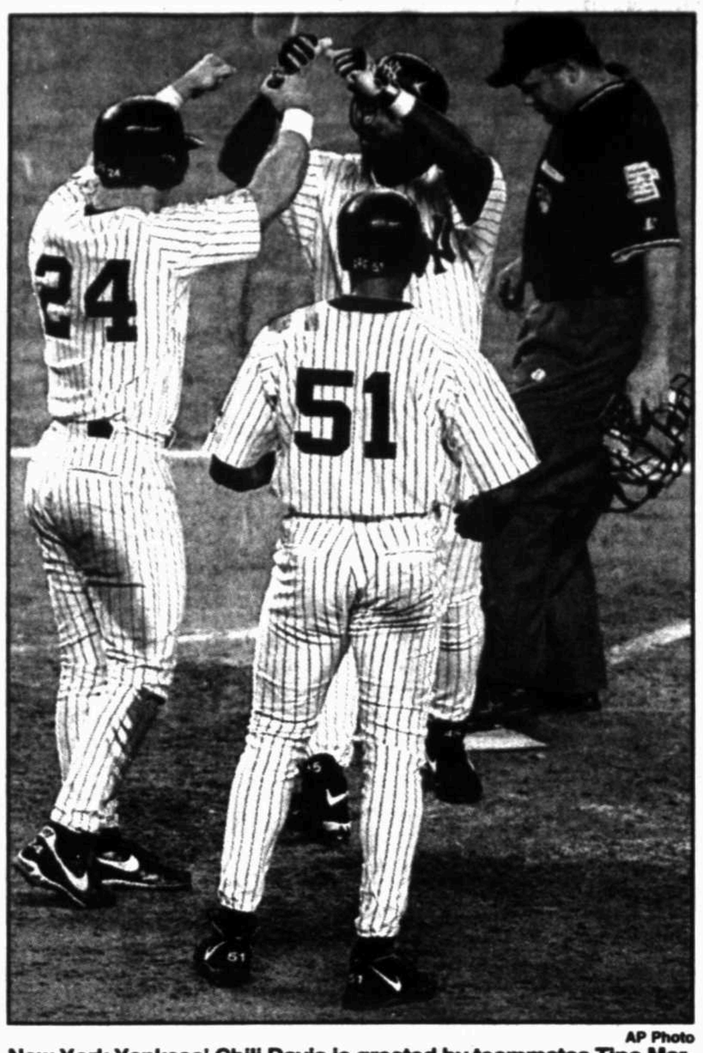
He struck out with the bases loaded in the first inning, but got a second chance in the third inning.

Tino Martinez started the two-out burst with a walk. Bernie Williams then hit a hard grounder that bounced off Mark Clark (3-6) and appeared headed to center. Shortstop Royce Clayton made a diving stop behind second, but his flip to second baseman Mark McLemore was wide of the bag and Williams reached on a single.

That brought up Davis, who hadn't homered since May 16. He hit a towering shot off Mark Clark (3-6) into the right-field seats for his 10th homer and a 4-0 lead.

"The big play was the force we didn't get at second base," Texas manager Johnny Oates said. "If we make that play, Chili doesn't hit a three-run homer. He doesn't bat. Of course we still have to get Chili out and we didn't do that."

The Rangers never seem to get the big out or the big hit when they play New York. The Yankees have won 16 of the last 20 games against Texas, including a three-game sweep in last year's playoffs.



AP Photo

New York Yankees' Chili Davis is greeted by teammates Tino Martinez (24) and Bernie Williams (51) after they scored on Davis' three-run homer against the Texas Rangers.

The Rangers, who scored one run against the Yankees in the playoffs, were shut down again by New York. Hideki Irabu (3-3) allowed two runs and five hits in seven innings, allowing only a two-run homer to Juan Gonzalez.

Irabu equaled his longest outing of the season, even pitching two innings after a 49-minute rain delay.

"It's nice to be able to go out and throw my style and get a win," Irabu said through a translator. "I feel confident right now and I am challenging hitters."

Leading 4-0, the Yankees scored four runs off Clark in the fifth, immediately following the delay. Derek Jeter started the rally with a single, his second hit of the game.

Jeter has at least two hits in seven consecutive games, the longest multihit streak in the majors since Gonzalez last September. Jeter's run began last Monday, one day after his 57-game streak of reaching base safely ended.

Davis and Jorge Posada added RBI singles and Scott Brosius made it 8-0 with a two-run single.

"My last three starts I've made good pitches, I've made bad pitches and they've hit them all," said Clark, whose 8.38 ERA is the highest in the AL. "It's a game of peaks and valleys and right now I'm in the valley."

Irabu got out of jams in the first two innings. With a runner on third and one out in the first, Rusty Greer fouled off three tough two-strike pitches before Irabu threw a splitter by him. Irabu got out of the inning by getting Gonzalez to ground out to third.

With runners on first and second and no outs in the second, Irabu struck out Todd Zeile and got Lee Stevens to bounce into a double play.

"I really like what I am seeing from him," Yankees manager Joe Torre said.

Pitching leads 'Hounds to win

Staff Report

EL PASO — The Midland RockHounds dealt El Paso a major blow at Cohen Stadium Monday night in the Diablos' quest to capture the first half Texas League West Division title.

The RockHounds defeated El Paso 6-2. The loss hurt El Paso since West leading Wichita fell to San Antonio 3-2, leaving the Diablos two games behind the Wranglers with four games left to play.

The winner of the first half West title moves into the playoffs at the end of the season.

Kevin Gregg went five innings to pick up his first Double-A victory, but he had great support from the bullpen as Andy Kimball hurled three shutout innings while Jeff D'Amico hurled a scoreless ninth. With the win, Midland stayed alive in the first half race, but will be eliminated by either a Wichita win or an El Paso win in the next four days.

El Paso took a 2-0 lead off of Gregg in the second inning on a Rod Barajas homer and a run scoring hit by Julius Matos.

But Midland took the lead for good at 3-2 in the fourth without getting the ball out of the infield. Justin Bowles bunted in a run with the bases loaded, Jose Castro was hit by a pitch for an RBI with the bases loaded and Josue Espada walked with the bases loaded.

The RockHounds added three unearned runs in the fifth for the final margin. Tim Garland had an RBI double and Willie Morales singled in two runs on a controversial play. His ball, hit down the third base line, hit the third base umpire, but the ball was called fair, allowing two runs to score.

The series is now even at 1-1 with four to play. These same two teams come to Midland Saturday to begin the second half race.

Inspired Astros hammer Braves

Associated Press

HOUSTON — Larry Dierker was missing from the Houston Astros dugout. His No. 49 jersey, however, was hanging there for inspiration.

With Dierker scheduled for brain surgery early Tuesday and bench coach Matt Galante filling in, the Astros won their fourth in a row Monday night, beating the Atlanta Braves 10-4.

Craig Biggio hit three doubles, Derek Bell drove in three runs and Jeff Bagwell hit his 21st homer for Houston. The Astros sent Atlanta to its fourth straight loss in a matchup of NL division leaders.

More Sports/8C

"The rest of this season is for him," Biggio said. "We put his jersey in the dugout and we'll keep putting it there until he's back. Larry has done a lot of good for a lot of people."

Biggio and Bagwell were among members of the Astros' organization that visited Dierker in the hospital earlier in the day.

Dierker collapsed in the dugout in the eighth inning of Sunday's game with the San Diego Padres. A mass of malformed blood vessels in his brain caused his seizure.

"Seeing him in the hospital helped us big time," Galante said. "Seeing him up and being able to talk to Dierker made us all feel better."

SURGERY: Dierker facing procedure

(From 1C)

while working out in the Astrodome on July 30, 1980. Richard fell along the first-base line, just a few feet from where Dierker collapsed.

Jeff Bagwell was at bat when Dierker collapsed.

"I was getting ready to step in, and the umpire said, 'Hold on,'" Bagwell said. "I looked around, and everybody was running to the dugout. Larry had collapsed. He couldn't talk. He was shaking violently. He was shaking the whole time.

"It was shocking. We're all stunned."

A crowd of 39,773, anticipating a three-game sweep of the Padres, was silent as players gathered around the dugout where Dierker fell. Some prayed. Jose Lima cried.

The Padres watched with equal horror.

"They couldn't get him under control, and they had to fight to hold him down," said Padres pitching coach Dave Smith, a former Astro and one of Dierker's golfing buddies.

"I was concerned (Saturday) that something was not quite right. Usually, he's upbeat and laughing but for some reason he was kind of quiet."

Paramedics in an ambulance rushed to the dugout from center field. Dierker's wife, Judy, left the stands and went to the dugout.

"It hurts to sit and see that happening. Talk about a knot in the stomach — there was an emptiness inside," Padres manager Bruce Bochy said. "I talked to him on Friday and he said he was working out."

The game was suspended with the Astros ahead 4-1. It will be resumed July 23 when the Padres return to Houston.

Dierker has been Houston's manager since Oct. 4, 1996, and led the Astros to consecutive NL Central titles. He was voted NL Manager of the Year last season.

Houston has been plagued by health problems this year. First base coach Jose Cruz left the team May 10 for treatment for an irregular heart beat, and hitting coach Tom McCraw left six days later for treatment for prostate cancer. Cruz is expected back later this month.

All-Star outfielder Moises Alou tore his anterior cruciate ligament in his left knee when he fell off a treadmill in mid-February and will miss most of the season. And third baseman Ken Caminiti, a former NL MVP, has been on the disabled list since May 22 because of a strained right calf muscle.

"We've had a terrible year, even with some other coaches going down," Galante said. "But I think these guys will bounce back and might even play a little harder. We'll play each game one by one for Larry. I hope when he comes back, we'll have an even bigger lead."

"Encourage your children to read the newspaper every day. Someone once said we should read the Bible in one hand and our newspaper in the other. The way things are today, it is important to see the connection."

Blue chips up

NEW YORK (AP) — Stocks closed mixed Monday as a bond market rally pushed blue chips higher, but poor-performing Internet shares carried the Nasdaq composite index lower.

The Dow Jones industrial average rose 72.02 to 10,563.33 after having dropped 309 points last week.

The Standard & Poor's 500 index rose 0.36 to 1,294.00, while the technology-dominated Nasdaq fell 49.57 to 2,398.31.

The Dow's rise was its first in five sessions, and came as investors, perhaps less worried about interest rates than they were last week, picked up economically-sensitive stocks such as General Electric, which rose 2 13/32 to 103 3/4, and DuPont, up 2 7/8 to 70 3/16.

Stock investors were heartened by the first rally in the bond market in two weeks. Bonds rose after the Bank of Japan intervened in the global currency markets by buying dollars to slow the advance of the yen.

The stronger dollar in turn made U.S. Treasury bonds more attractive to overseas investors and triggered buying that reduced the yield in the benchmark 30-year bond from Friday's 6.16 percent to 6.10 percent.

Meanwhile, comments by Fed Vice Chairwoman Alice Rivlin helped ease concerns that the Fed will increase interest rates at its June 29-30 meeting of its Open Market Committee. Rivlin said inflation worries in the United States are exaggerated.

Fed Chairman Alan Greenspan was silent about the Fed's interest rate policy during an appearance before Congress. His remarks had no effect on trading.

The financial markets have been focused on rates since the Fed warned May 18 it was leaning toward an increase to prevent the strong economy from driving up inflation. The stock market was rattled by the prospect of higher borrowing costs eroding corporate profits.

NYSE volume totaled 667.30 million shares as of 4 p.m., vs. 687.73 million Friday.

The NYSE composite index rose 0.10 to 619.60 , and the American Stock Exchange composite index fell 3.13 to 762.69.

The Russell 2000 index of smaller companies fell 6.48 at 431.53

Overseas, Japan's Nikkei stock average fell 0.06 percent. Germany's DAX index was up 0.32 percent, Britain's FT-SE 100 was up 1.3 percent, and France's CAC-40 was down 0.39 percent.

Dollar rises

NEW YORK (AP) — The dollar jumped higher against the yen Monday as the Bank of Japan — in a surprise move — defended its attempts at economic recovery by buying billions of dollars and flooding the market with yen.

The dollar's recovery against the yen helped it rise against the euro and other major European currencies. The stock market's rebound also helped underpin the U.S. currency.

Greenspan: Productivity no cure-all

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States cannot rely on rising productivity to keep inflation under control forever, Federal Reserve Chairman Alan Greenspan said Monday — a sign to some analysts that the Fed may raise interest rates to slow the red-hot economy and keep inflation at bay.

Greenspan, opening a three-day congressional summit on high technology, credited American investment in productivity-enhancing equipment, such as microprocessors, satellites and high-speed communications lines, for the nation's productivity boom.

Those productivity gains have fueled America's remarkable economic growth and helped keep inflation low, he said.

Productivity — the amount of output per hour of work — has been growing at an annual rate of around 2 percent since 1995, double the annual gains of the previous two decades, Greenspan told the congressional Joint Economic Committee.

But Greenspan cautioned that these productivity gains can't go on forever.

"The growth of productivity cannot increase indefinitely," he said. "While there appears to be considerable expectation in the business community, and possibly Wall Street, that the productivity acceleration has not yet peaked, experience does advise caution."

Greenspan didn't say what action, if any, the Federal Reserve would take at the end of month on interest rates. But some private economists believe his remarks could be setting the stage for the Fed to raise interest rates at its next meeting on June 29 and 30. Many believe Greenspan will be more blunt about the prospects of a rate hike in a Thursday congressional appearance.

"He's setting up why the Fed will tighten if the consumer price index number is bad or disconcerting," said Stan Shipley, an economist with Merrill Lynch. "It's clear that they are concerned and may want to tighten."

Shipley and other economists said the government's report on the rate of inflation in May — scheduled to be released Wednesday — will be a big influence on the Fed's decision-making at the end of the month. In April, consumer prices surged 0.7 percent, touching off inflation fears. Analysts expect a 0.2 percent rise in consumer prices for last month but that may not be enough to quell those fears.

"He does not want to be alarmist. But pointing out that productivity gains are not assured, implies the possibility of higher inflation," said Wells Fargo & Co. economist Sung Won Sohn.

"Chairman Greenspan is putting some cold water on the theory of some economists that you can have your cake and eat it too because of continuing productivity gains in the future," Sohn said.

Productivity is considered the crucial element for raising living standards because it allows employers to pay their workers more without triggering inflationary pressures by having to raise the cost of products.

David Jones, chief economist at Aubrey G. Lanston & Co. in New York, and other economists said with growing signs of a rebound in Japan and other countries that have been in recessions, Greenspan is signaling that U.S. interest rates will need to be increased to slow the U.S. economy and keep inflation under control.

Last month, the Fed changed its policy bias to lean in favor of raising interest rates. Financial markets have grown increasingly worried that the Fed will soon start raising them.

The Fed hasn't raised U.S. interest rates in more than four years. Last fall, it enacted three rate reductions in a successful effort to keep global economic turmoil from disrupting the U.S. economy.

Also Monday, the Commerce Department reported that inventories at American businesses rose 0.2 percent in April as sales edged down 0.1 percent.

Too big a buildup in inventories can force manufacturers to cut production as businesses struggle to reduce the backlog of unsold goods. However, even with the modest April rise, current inventory levels are lean in relation to sales as American consumers continue spending freely.

Greenspan, who in 1996 worried that investors' "irrational exuberance" may have pushed stock prices too high, reminded the committee that he has cautioned a number of times about the dangers in believing that the world has entered some new economic era because of breakthroughs in technology.

"History is strewn with projections of technology that have fallen wide of the mark," Greenspan said.

Transformation nearly completed for former Midland American Bank

Midland American Bank is in the process of completing its name change to Bank United. Signs have gone up at the branch at Louisiana Avenue and A Street and are being installed at Wadley Avenue and Midland Drive.

The change will be complete, said bank president John Grist, with the changing of the sign on top of the bank's downtown building at Texas Avenue and Big Spring Street.

"The bank was sold effective Feb. 12 to Bank United of Houston, and for a period of time we operated as 'Midland American Bank, a division of Bank United,'" said Grist. "We determined that to coordinate advertising and marketing, we should change our name to Bank United."

Bank United has branches in Houston, Dallas-Fort Worth, San Antonio, Austin and now Midland.

The bank's acquisition hasn't led to any changes in the way it has operated, and neither will the new name, Grist said. He said customers' checks printed with "Midland American Bank" will be honored. Loan documents already name Bank United as the lending bank, and checks and deposit products will be changed to the new name as supplies are replenished, he said.

At the time of the merger announcement, Grist explained that Midland American's board of directors decided to seek a merger partner to provide for the bank's continued growth, but didn't want one that already had a presence in Midland. For its part, Bank United was looking to expand in Texas, said Barry Burkholder, president and chief executive of Bank United.

He said his bank brings to Midland larger amounts of capital for lending and new products, including a credit card, and a presence in home equity lending and small business lending.

Midland American Bank's fourth branch is at Cuthbert Avenue and Andrews Highway; there is also a branch in Stanton.

Bank of America president glad to come to Midland

By Mella McEwen
Staff Writer

A recent three-day conference in Dallas reminded Larry Burrow why he likes West Texas.

"The congestion, the turmoil, the unfriendliness," he said. "Dallas is a nice place to visit. ..."

Burrow has made his home in West Texas the last three years, serving Bank of America as senior executive in Lubbock, and recently accepted the post of president of Bank of America, Midland.

He said that when he was asked to come to Midland, he jumped at the chance.

"It's a challenging opportunity," he said. "Midland-Odessa is such a dynamic and challenging environment."

His bank has long been involved with the energy industry and remains committed to the industry, despite the recent price woes it has suffered.

Burrows said that Bank of America is committed to helping communities diversify their economic bases and will do so in Midland even though most key energy indicators show prices are on the rebound.

"This is something I'll look at over the next six to 12 months as I involve myself in community endeavors, to see what's available to Midland, not to replace the energy industry, but to build on those strengths."

He added that he's already been invited to and accepted several civic appointments.

His bank is the product of the recent merger between NationsBank and Bank of America, giving the corporation a presence from coast to coast.

Despite its coast-to-coast presence, the 35-year banking industry veteran believes in the personal touch. In fact, he refers to the bank's customers as clients, because "a customer is someone buying a product. A client is someone who interacts with you on different levels to seek direction and advice in purchasing financial products."

"Banking has been, is, and will always be a people business. We may find ways, like online banking, to refine services, but to be successful, a bank has to be personal. We can enhance services through automation and faster, more efficient delivery systems, but you won't see the day banks will be without loan officers or tellers."

The Texas banking industry has also learned its lessons from the tumultuous times it suffered in the 1980s, he said.

"One of the most significant lessons, I'd say, would be to stay with banking fundamentals, to not be speculative and to focus on the client's ability to perform under any circumstances. We all enjoy booms, but any prudent student of economics knows that they don't last indefinitely."

He predicts that as Congress works to modernize the nation's banking system from the regulations put in place during the Great Depression, "we will continue to change in many ways, as we expand our abilities to offer new products and services and provide delivery systems to efficiently provide those new services."

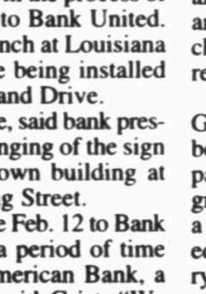
Burrow, a Kansas native raised in Corpus Christi, said he and his wife are looking forward to making their home in Midland.

INVESTOR'S GUIDE

Making sense of all the different stock fund flavors

By Eric Tyson

Q: Can you please explain the jargon for stock funds. One fund is called a small-cap growth fund, while another says it has a large-cap value strategy. What do these terms mean?



Tyson

A: Stock funds and the stocks that they invest in usually are pigeonholed into particular categories based on the types of stocks they focus on. Categorizing stock funds often is tidier in theory than in practice, though, because some funds invest in an eclectic mix of stocks.

Don't get bogged down in the names of funds — funds sometimes have misleading names and don't necessarily do what their names imply. What matters are the investment strategies of the fund and the fund's typical investments.

The first dimension on which a stock fund's stock selection differs is based on the size of the companies — small, medium and large — in which the fund invests. The categories with stocks are defined by the total market value (capitalization) of a company's outstanding stock.

Small-company stocks, for example, are usually defined as stocks of companies that have total market capitalization of less than $1 billion. Medium-capitalization stocks have market values between $1 billion and $5 billion. Large-capitalization stocks are those of companies with market values greater than $5 billion. These dollar amounts are somewhat arbitrary.

Historically, smaller companies pay lower dividends. They have more-volatile share prices but tend to produce slightly higher total returns. Larger companies' stocks tend to pay greater dividends and on average are less volatile and produce slightly lower total returns than small-company stocks. Medium-sized companies, as you may suspect, fall between the two. So investors looking for income as well as appreciation from their stock-market investments can focus more on larger-company stocks.

Stock fund managers and their funds are further categorized by those who invest in growth or value stocks. Growth stocks are companies that are experiencing rapidly expanding revenues and profits. These companies tend to reinvest most of their earnings in the company to fuel future expansion; thus, these stocks pay low dividends. Microsoft, for example, pays no dividends and reinvests most of its profits back into its business.

Value stocks are priced cheaply in relation to the company's assets, profits and potential profits. It's possible that such a company is a growth company, but that's unlikely because growth companies' stock prices tend to sell at a premium compared with what the company's assets are worth.

Stocks and the companies that issue them are also divvied up based upon the location of their main operations and headquarters. Funds that specialize in U.S. stocks are not surprisingly called U.S. stock funds; those focusing overseas are typically called international or overseas funds.

Putting together two or three of these major classifications, you can start to appreciate all those silly and lengthy names mutual funds give to their stock funds. You can have funds that focus on large-company value stocks or small-company growth stocks. These categories can be further subdivided into more fund types by adding in U.S., international and worldwide funds. So you can have international stock funds focusing on small-company stocks or growth stocks.

You can diversify into different types of stocks by purchasing several stock funds, each focusing on a different type of stock. Two potential advantages result from doing so. First, not all of your money is riding in one stock fund and with one fund manager. Second, each of the different fund managers can look at and track particular stock-investing possibilities.

Fullerton knocks out Aggies from CWS, 4-2

OMAHA, Neb. — Matt Sorensen was willing to throw more pitches, if only the Texas A&M batters would have let him.

David Bacani homered and doubled and Sorensen pitched into the ninth without walking a batter as Cal State-Fullerton beat Texas A&M 4-2 on Monday night, eliminating the Aggies from the College World Series. Sorensen (12-0), a right-hander, threw 8 1/3 innings to outduel Texas A&M lefty Matt Ward (8-1) in a showdown of unbeaten pitchers.

"I just took the same approach, just letting my pitches dance a little bit and do my thing," Sorensen said.

Sorensen limited the Aggies to three hits after allowing five in the first two innings. He threw 64 pitches in the first three innings, then threw 48 from the fourth through eighth and six in the ninth.

It wasn't that Sorensen was getting stronger. The way he saw it, the Aggies (52-18) were hurting themselves by not being more patient.

"I was surprised they were swinging and not taking strikes," he said. "I think they changed their approach. If they would have struck with what they did in the first two innings, letting me really work into the count."

The third-seeded Titans (50-13) will play another elimination game today against Florida State (54-13), which lost to Stanford in Monday's first game.

Sorensen, who struck out three, lasted until Texas A&M threatened in the bottom of the ninth. The Aggies, wearing their hats backward as they stood on the top step of the dugout, started with Sean Heaney's one-out single to left and Greg Porter's double to the gap in left-center.

That's when hard-throwing closer Kirk Saarloos replaced Sorensen. Saarloos got Dell Lindsey to foul out to first on three sliders and struck out Chad Hudson swinging on a full-count changeup that missed the strike zone.

"I knew I had a base open when I got to the 3-2 pitch, so nothing's hurt too much by walking him," Saarloos said. "If he would have taken it, it would have been a ball. Luckily, he swung through and we get to play tomorrow."

Texas A&M coach Mark Johnson thought his team would survive.

"It looked like vintage Aggies," Johnson. "We had two men on in scoring positions, but the clock runs out and the bell tolls sometimes."

Bacani hit a home run leading off the third to tie the game at 2-2 and Fullerton went ahead for good in a strange fifth inning.

It began with Bacani's double to right. Reed Johnson moved him over with a bunt toward third. Lindsey fielded it and threw to first on a close play, but umpire Ken Couch ruled Johnson safe.

As first baseman John Scheschuk began walking toward the mound, thinking Couch granted his request for a timeout, first-base coach Mike Kirby waved his arms and urged Johnson to run.

"I thought we had him out right there," Scheschuk said. "I turned around and asked him (Couch) about it. Obviously, I disagreed with the call. I called for a timeout. I guess he didn't hear me."

Bacani made a move for home, but sprinted back to third when Scheschuk held the ball. Meanwhile, Johnson raced to second behind Scheschuk. The play eventually was ruled a double for Johnson.

Spencer Oborn drove in Bacani and Johnson with a single to left to give the Titans a 4-2 lead. Ward lasted 6 2/3 innings, allowed eight hits, four earned runs with two walks and two strikeouts.

Texas A&M led 1-0 in the first when Shawn Schumacher reached on a fielder's choice, moved to second on a single by Daylan Holt, took third on an error by Bacani and scored on a sacrifice fly by Scheschuk.

Fullerton tied it in the top of the second. Ryan Owens singled and moved to second on a single by Shawn Norris. After a double steal, Owens came in on a sacrifice by Craig Patterson.

Friendly advice helps Tryba win St. Jude's

By Frank Baker
Associated Press Writer

MEMPHIS, Tenn. — A friend's advice may have been worth $450,000 to Ted Tryba.

Tryba, who won the St. Jude Classic by two strokes Monday, was in a group of six one shot off the lead heading into the final round, which had been delayed a day because of heavy rain Sunday.

He was practicing his putting before going onto the course when his friend grabbed him by the shoulders and told him: "Take your time out there — any time I felt a little rushed or I felt uncomfortable to just take a step back."

Clinging to a one-stroke lead at the tee on the 528-yard, par-5 16th hole, Tryba recalled the advice and stepped back from the ball. He then stepped up and smacked a perfect drive.

"I think it really helped me there because I hit probably the best tee shot of the week there," Tryba said.

From 234 yards out he hit a 4-iron about 8 feet from the pin, then sank an eagle putt to go to 19-under. He stayed there and collected the $450,000 winner's check for his second PGA Tour victory.

"This was a nice one to win because you didn't just back in. You went out and shot 66 and just grabbed it. It felt great," Tryba said.

Tryba's 265 total was two shots better than Tim Herron and Tom Lehman. Jose Maria Olazabal, whose closing 62 was the best of the week, and Kevin Wentworth were three back at 16-under.

Ted Tryba, of Orlando, Fla., celebrates winning the rain-delayed St. Jude Classic with a 19-under-par 265, Monday in Memphis, Tenn. Sunday rains forced play Monday.

Hal Sutton, the third-round leader along with Tryba, Herron and Lehman, was alone in the lead at 17-under Monday after a birdie on No. 10, but double bogeyed No. 12 and bogeyed No. 13 to drop out of contention. His par-71 put him at 14-under, tied for sixth in a group that included Paul Azinger.

David Frost, who tied a PGA Tour and St. Jude record by shooting a 16-under 126 that gave him a four-stroke lead after two rounds, ballooned to a 74 on Saturday and shot a final-round 72 to finish at 12-under. Defending champion Nick Price finished at 8-under.

Herron, who shot 68, said he couldn't make the shots he needed to get past Tryba, his playing partner.

"I didn't really let it happen like I did the first three rounds," he said. "I was starting to force it. I knew I had to make some birdies."

Lehman, weakened by a stuffy head and sore throat since Friday, was at 15-under at the turn but bogeyed No. 10 and never recovered.

The Tournament Players Club at Southwind played significantly longer Monday than any of the previous four days, thanks to the rain that arrived about 1 p.m. Sunday and a steady breeze. The players agreed workers did a fantastic job getting the course in shape in less than 24 hours.

"It played tougher," Lehman said. "You're talking a four- or five-club difference into some of those holes."

The 32-year-old Tryba is a three-time All-American at Ohio State whose first PGA Tour victory was the 1995 Anheuser-Busch Golf Classic. He has struggled since tying for second at the Nissan Open in February.

He finished 72nd at the next tournament, missed three cuts, then injured his ribs repairing an irrigation system at his home in Orlando, Fla. He missed three of the next four cuts and finished 74th at last week's Memorial Tournament.

Unsure of his game entering St. Jude, he now heads into the U.S. Open brimming with confidence.

"I've never gone into there playing well at all," said Tryba, who missed the cut at his last two Opens. "I feel confident that I can go in there and at least have a chance to compete."

Open should wake up sleepy town of Pinehurst

By Estes Thompson
Associated Press Writer

PINEHURST, N.C. — The quaint village of Pinehurst is spiffed up, its store shelves are stocked and merchants are waiting anxiously for the nation's premier golfing event to begin this week.

The U.S. Open will bring thousands of people to this sedate golfing and retirement community of 7,000, where "usually, they roll up the sidewalks at 5 p.m.," according to Ginny Whiting, co-owner of a coffee and ice cream shop on the village square.

That will all change during one dizzying week, when an anticipated 40,000 people a day will throng the winding, normally quiet streets to watch the world's best golfers play. The main event is Thursday through Sunday, but practice rounds start Monday.

Merchants behind the counters of the cafes, clothing and golf collectible shops — even the state liquor store clerks — are ready, but unsure what to expect.

"We really don't know," Mrs. Whiting said.

Caleb Miles, chief executive of the Moore County tourist bureau, predicts some businesses will profit immediately. Others will bask in the afterglow: business meetings, more tournaments at the county's 42 golf courses, new residents and more tourists in a community where 60 percent of the tourist trade already is tied directly to golf, Miles said.

The county expects to reap $40 million in revenue from the Open. The total impact for the state is estimated at $180 million, including hotel rooms and meals sold in places as far away as Winston-Salem, Raleigh, Lumberton and Asheboro.

The area has hosted big events before, but none of the Open's magnitude. The U.S. Womens Open was held at Pineneedles Lodge and Golf Club in 1996; the 1994 U.S. Senior Open was at Pinehurst Inc.'s famous No. 2 course, site of this week's U.S. Open; the PGA Tour Championship was held here in 1991 and 1992.

Big business will be prominently represented among the spectators who watch Tiger Woods and four-time winner Jack Nicklaus battle on No. 2, designed in 1900 by legendary golf course architect Donald Ross.

"I don't think you'll find an event anywhere where corporate America is represented like it is here," said Miles, who also is president of the North Carolina Golf Marketing Alliance, which promotes the state's $1.3 billion golfing industry.

He said 50 corporate sponsors will have tents that will fill up each day with corporate presidents and vice presidents. Those movers and shakers may make business decisions that benefit North Carolina and the Moore County towns of Aberdeen, Southern Pines and Pinehurst, he said. The county is about 70 miles southwest of Raleigh.

"If you don't get the immediate short-term benefit, and some people won't, you have to look at the long term," he said.

A green chain-link fence has been erected around No. 2 for crowd control, and some merchants fear it also could keep people from their shops.

"They're going to want to see the village," said Richard Mattocks, a salesman at a men's clothing shop.

In the past, tournament watchers could wander a couple of blocks through a pine forest to the shops. The fence, however, is a standard Open feature.

Without a doubt, the Open will throw Pinehurst off its slow pace.

Parking will be tight, but planners hope the gallery won't be driving the twisty lanes. Spectators to the sold-out tournament will park at two huge lots outside town and ride to the course on air-conditioned shuttle buses.

Some residents will be out of town this week, by design. About a thousand people are renting their homes to spectators and players.

At the tiny liquor store just off the village square, clerk Donnie Oldham was busy stocking shelves. The corporate sponsor hospitality tents along the course and parties elsewhere will mean more business, he said.

"Some of our regular customers are buying a week ahead and plan to stay home with plenty of booze and plenty of food and watch it on TV," Oldham said.

Hotels and motels in the village all are booked by the Open for sponsors and officials. A housing brochure has fine print under the Pinehurst listings advising customers to look elsewhere if they don't already have accommodations here.

"We are full," said Andy Hofmann, whose family owns the Pine Crest Inn on a quiet, shady lane near the square.

The inn was owned by Ross until his death in 1948. Ross lived in a house on a No. 2 fairway. A Ross portrait hangs behind the front counter of the 40-room inn. In the bar, a sign reads: "If you drink, don't drive. Don't even putt." The inn's brochure shows people chipping golf balls in the lobby during happy hour.

Hofmann said the Pinecrest's rooms are assigned by the Open, so she knows business will be good. To accommodate the extra business, the inn plans to open bars on the front verandah and in the side yard.

The Open is big, she said. "You can feel it."

U.S. women's soccer team has good vibe

By Barry Wilner
AP Sports Writer

MARTINSVILLE, N.J. — No cliques. No petulance. No outright hostility.

Could this really be a U.S. national soccer team?

Certainly. The American women, who not only are a favorite to win the World Cup tournament they open on Saturday against Denmark, but they're one big happy family.

From 1991, when the United States won the initial World Cup, into the 1995 tournament in which it placed third, then through the gold medal performance at the Atlanta Olympics, the women have been the tightest of groups. That fellowship has been a key element in the team's overwhelming success, something the men never have matched — on the field or off.

"It's an environment to express yourself," said Mia Hamm, the game's best player and career goal-scoring leader. "There is never a time you feel you are by yourself or alone. It's a powerful feeling of camaraderie.

"Chemistry is not something you flick on with a switch like a light. It has to be nurtured. It's not like, 'OK, today is team chemistry day.' It's more like, 'We're going to set up an environment for you and it's what you make of it. We will not force it on you. Make of it what you can, or don't.' "

Almost to a woman, the players make the most of it. The core of the squad that will take the field Saturday at Giants Stadium has been together nearly a decade. Hamm, Michelle Akers, Julie Foudy, Kristine Lilly, Tiffeny Milbrett, Joy Fawcett, Tisha Venturini and Carla Overbeck all have well over 100 international appearances. Brandi Chastain, Briana Scurry and Shannon MacMillan are closing in on the century mark.

That kind of experience is a daunting weapon for any team. As Brazil defender Elane said of the Americans, "Their great players have been together longer than many women have been playing football."

Such experience is important only if the lessons learned by the veterans are shared with the youngsters. That's where the U.S. women excel. Any of the kids on the squad readily will volunteer that they were quickly accepted by the older players.

"The veterans who molded the team let the people coming in know they have got to fit into the chemistry they've worked so hard to create," said Danielle Fotopoulos, the college career goals leader at Florida and now a substitute for the national team. "Plus, they make everything fun for us. Practice is fun. We hang out together and have fun.

"It can be very intimidating coming into any new team, especially one with the success rate the U.S. has had. You don't know where you will fit in or the personalities on the team. If these were not cool people who cared, it could be a nightmare. Instead, it's so special."

Each of the women alternate roommates when the team travels. That means most of the veterans have roomed with most of the younger, newer players.

During practice, coach Tony DiCicco is conscious of putting together a mix of youth and experience, whether it be for 4-on-4 minigames, or for full scrimmages. Unlike the men's national team, which self-destructed during last year's World Cup in France, there never has been a single report of discord among the women's team members.

"I guess there is a bond there in the female game," Lilly said. "We enjoy each other. We've all been in positions where we were the new player coming in. It can be difficult to reach out to players. But we all do a great job of opening doors."

Ankle won't keep Novotna from Wimbledon

By Amy Westfeldt
Associated Press Writer

NEWARK, N.J. — Jana Novotna on Monday said she's recovered enough from a painful ankle sprain to defend her Wimbledon singles title next week.

"I have to just be prepared ... to struggle and to fight," Novotna said.

The 30-year-old Czech star won't defend her Eastbourne championship this week to avoid re-injuring the right ankle she sprained when she collided with her partner, Natasha Zvereva, in the French Open doubles quarterfinals. She said she will play doubles at Eastbourne to get grasscourt preparation.

"My goal, ultimately, after my sprain back in Paris, was to be able to play at Wimbledon," Novotna said in a telephone conference call Monday. "Now my aim is to get better every day."

Novotna was taken off the court in Paris in a wheelchair after she and Zvereva both went to cover the same ball and collided. Novotna twisted her ankle when she stepped on Zvereva's foot. She said an MRI found a partial tear in one of her ligaments, but that the damage wasn't great enough to keep her from Wimbledon.

Novotna didn't play for eight days and underwent 10 to 12 days of "intense therapy" after the June 2 injury.

Novotna was seeded fifth for the June 21 tournament in rankings that came out Monday. She called the women's tournament a "very open Wimbledon," but gave particular praise to French Open champion Steffi Graf, who upset top-ranked Martina Hingis in the finals.

"I think we all pretty much know who has the best shot to win Wimbledon this year," Novotna said. "Look at the French Open."
