Diamond M Museum...

Art collection to be auctioned

Collectors from across the country are expected to be in Snyder on Friday for the deaccessioning of the Diamond M Museum collection.

The auction will begin at 1 p.m. Friday under the direction of Bentley's.

Among the pieces are Western and European art and bronzes, Currier & Ives lithographs and Eskimo art. The office equipment will also be auctioned.

The museum was opened for viewing Wednesday, and will be open from 6 until 9 this evening and from 9 a.m. until time for the auction to begin on Friday.

Officially opened to the public in April of 1964, the museum originated as a place to house the growing private collection of Mr. and Mrs. C.T. McLaughlin.

Mr. McLaughlin was a nationally known oil man, rancher, banker, art collector and philanthropist. He and his wife collected all types of art and kept the pieces in their home.

In 1949, the McLaughlins established the Diamond M Foundation to develop and support a museum to house their collection, as well as to offer financial assistance in charitable and philanthropic activities.

As time went on, the collection continued to grow, and in June of 1969, a large gallery was added to the second floor on the east side of the building. In succeeding years, the second floor became entirely devoted to art work, as were several rooms on the first floor.

Mrs. McLaughlin died in 1971, followed four years later by her husband. The Foundation's board of trustees carried on the work.

Much of the collection was moved to Texas Tech University, and in May of 1994 the board of regents there approved an $864,000 expansion to house the work.

READYING FOR THE AUCTION - Neil C. Bentley, auctioneer for the auction of the Diamond M Museum of Fine Art, readies some of the items for the event. The auction will take place Friday at 1 p.m. with extended viewing hours set for tonight from 6-9. (Staff Photo by Jo Ann Nunley)

THE SDN COLUMN

By Roy McQueen

The feller on Deep Creek says, "We don't live in a fanasty world. If we did, our brother-in-law wouldn't be here."

In 1995, when Sara McDonald was doing a summer intern at the Snyder Daily News, we suspected that someone raising their voice might cause the SMU journalism student to burst into tears.

Sara, a 1993 graduate of Snyder High School and daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jack McDonald, was soft-spoken and reserved that summer.

Now she's experiencing a work environment where yelling is practically routine.

A senior broadcast major at SMU, Sara is spending this semester as an intern for CNN in Washington, D.C.

The SMU "Washington Semester" is conducted in cooperation with American University. She attends day-long seminar classes Mondays through Wednesdays. Her professor is Sean Kelley who spent 40 years with Voice of America.

Thursdays, Fridays and weekends are spent helping prepare for four popular CNN news shows — Capital Gang on Saturday and Sunday, Cross Fire and Rival Forces.

Sara works behind the scenes doing research for panel members. "I read five newspapers daily, clip articles and make research packets."

Despite getting to work up close with people like Lynne Cheney, Robert Novak, Rowland Evans and John Sununu, Sara's highlight so far has been meeting New York Rep. Susan Molinari when she was a guest on Cross Fire.

"I've been an admirer of Susan Molinari ever since I heard her give the keynote address at the Republican National Convention last summer."

Sara said guests recieve the same research as panelists on the news shows, except when the guest is considered an expert in a particular field to be discussed.

Sara hasn't had much time for Washington sight-seeing, but she has been able to go behind-the-scenes and see both the Capitol and Pentagon from a reporter's perspective.

On the eve of the presidential election, Sara says she believes the national news media was fair in its campaign coverage. "And I'm saying this through Republican eyes," the Snyder native said.

"If you're a good political reporter, the Republicans will think you favor the Democrats and the Democrats will think you favor the Republicans."

The SMU honor student returns to the Dallas campus next spring for her final semester where she'll polish her honors thesis: media coverage of the presidential campaign.

Sara one day would like to return to work in the "very fast-paced" capital. She's been there long enough that she already refers to the nation's capital as "DeeCee." That's West Texan for D.C.

Storms bring rain, lightning

Powerful thunderstorms rocked Scurry County Wednesday evening, producing a powerful lightning display and dropping up to an inch and a half of rain in some areas.

The lightning damaged two transformers owned by Texas Electric and caused some 337 customers to be without electricity for a while.

A TU supervisor this morning said eight primary fuses and eight transformer fuses were blown and two transformers were damaged.

The first call came in at 7:38 p.m., according to John Miller, service planner, who said power was restored to about half of the 337 affected customers within an hour. Most of the others were receiving electricity by 11 p.m.

TU continued to field a few calls about power outages in the oil patch early this morning, he said.

Power losses disrupted Snyder Cablevision and KSNY radio station for a period of time, and local police officers were kept busy responding to burglar alarms accidentally going off.

During the height of the storm, the weather bureau issued a severe thunderstorm warning for the county, and in particular the Snyder area.

Snyder received 1.1 inches, according to the gauge at the water plant. The much-needed downpour left the city with 14.54 inches for the year.

Hermleigh reported 1.5 inches and residents in Dunn reported 1.4. Farmer's Co-op Gin received 1.1, as did Camp Springs, while Paymaster Gin reported nine-tenths and Inadale Gin recorded four-tenths. Loyd Mountain reported one inch.

Lake officials at Lake J.B. Thomas reported receiving seven-tenths. Fluvanna got just a sprinkle, according to residents.

Food drive set Saturday

Girl Scouts, Cub Scouts and Boy Scouts will begin distributing food bags today for Saturday's annual Scouting for Food drive.

Bag distribution will continue Friday.

Citizens are asked to put non-perishable foods and canned goods in the bags and place the bags on their porch by 9 a.m. Saturday.

Items collected by the Scouts will be donated to the Food Cupboard.

Troop leaders said to ignore the dates printed on the bags since they are incorrect.

Taylor household growing...

Another quint comes home

A third Taylor quintuplet is now home and a fourth may leave the hospital this weekend.

Kenedy Michele arrived home Wednesday from St. Mary Hospital in Lubbock, joining Jacob Dee and Zachary Dameron. Actually, Jacob and Zachary made the trip to pick up their sister.

"I don't know what we're going to do when the others come home," smiled their mom, Deshonna, referring to a mini-van already full of babies in infant car seats. Karen Westmoreland assisted on the trip.

The Taylors will try to figure that out before the weekend, when Jonah Patrick is due to be released from the hospital.

The smallest and last-born child, Aleksi Ann, will remain in the neonatal intensive care unit for a few more weeks. Doctors are saying Aleksi should be released around the first of December and definitely will be home in time for Christmas, based on the way she is doing now.

The quints were born Sept. 21 and the first wasn't originally expected to come home until Thanksgiving. However, since the qunits have had no major problems, the time frame was able to be moved up. It helps, too, that Deshonna is a nurse, and the quints' father, Brent, worked as an EMT for several years.

"Reality sunk in Wednesday night, or should I say Thursday morning," said Brent. "Deshonna and I were up from 12:30 to 4 taking care of Jacob, Zachary and Kenedy. They didn't want to sleep. To borrow a line, you might call us sleepless in Snyder."

The Taylors also have one other child, four-year-old Joshua.

Mars Surveyor blasts off

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — The Mars Global Surveyor rocketed away today on a 435 million-mile, 10-month journey to the Red Planet, the first step in a decade-long exploration effort by NASA to determine whether there was ever life on Mars.

The Delta rocket carrying the spacecraft blasted off precisely at 50 seconds past noon, one day after strong wind scuttled the first launch attempt. Today, the weather was perfect.

The Global Surveyor replaces a Mars probe that mysteriously disappeared three years ago. It should reach Mars in September 1997 and, after six months of easing into a mapping orbit, begin scrutinizing the Martian surface and atmosphere.

"It's the beginning of a long sequence of missions ultimately whose goal must be to determine whether or not life was ever on Mars or even perhaps exists now," said Wesley Huntress Jr., NASA space science chief.

The Global Surveyor is the first of 10 U.S. spacecraft to be sent to Mars over the next decade. It is the long-awaited successor to NASA's last Mars probe, the Mars Observer, which never reached its destination for reasons still unknown.

NASA expects to launch a pair of relatively inexpensive spacecraft to Mars every 26 months through 2005, including a robotic mission to return Martian soil and rocks to Earth that should settle the is-there-life-on-Mars debate.

The Global Surveyor, made mostly from leftover parts from the Mars Observer, will scout for future landing spots as it scans the Martian surface and atmosphere from a 235-mile-high orbit. Its Capping efforts continue on well

Attempts to cap an oil well blowout in Mobil's Salt Creek field were continuing this morning as workers with International Well Control Services Inc., were beginning to try and cut the well casing prior to capping the well.

"They've got a machine out there with a 160-foot boom on it with a special cutting tool," said Kent County Sheriff Charles Alderman. "They are continuing to spray the well with water as the cutting process is going on."

Alderman said it would still be a few hours before the well is actually capped.

The well has continued to expel oil and gas since mid-morning Monday and is located some nine miles northwest of Clairemont.

Two houses near the site in the Salt Creek field have been evacuated as have two deer camps in that area. The closest home was two miles away and the other one was five miles away from the blowout. Some 14 people in all have been moved from the site, said Alderman.

All roads leading to the site still remain closed. The Kent County Sheriff's Office closed Highway 208 some eight miles north of Clairemont and the intersection of FM 2320 and FM 1081.

Well #-313 was being serviced by a work-over unit when oil and gas began to flow up the drill pipe.

There have been no injuries due to the blowout.

County meeting continues Friday

Canvassing of ballots from Tuesday's election and the consideration of ambulance chassis bids will be the only items of consideration for the commissioners court when it meets Friday at 10 a.m.

The meeting will be a continuation of Monday's meeting in which the court recessed in order for EMS director Perry Westmoreland to study the ambulance bids.

Monday, Westmoreland expressed some disappointment in the three bids that were submitted and said they were some $6,000 higher than he had anticipated.

Bids ranged from $47,371 to $53,725 to remount an ambulance module on a 1997 chassis.

Road ahead for Proposition 215 is riddled with questions

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — As celebratory marijuana smoke curled from pipes and joints at the headquarters of Proposition 215, uncertainty swirled around the future of California's newly approved medical marijuana law.

Although the law allows doctors to prescribe marijuana for medical reasons, there is no mechanism for patients to legally obtain it. And the measure is at odds with U.S. drug laws.

"We still have a federal law that says marijuana has no medical value, and that it is against the law to grow it, distribute it and prescribe it as medicine," said retired Army Gen. Barry McCaffrey, President Clinton's drug czar. "That's a law. Not my law. That's the U.S. Congress' law."

McCaffrey said Wednesday he planned to meet with Attorney General Janet Reno and other officials to discuss how the initiative, approved by California voters 56 percent to 44 percent Tuesday, affects federal drug enforcement efforts.

The measure legalizes the cultivation, possession and use of marijuana for health reasons. Users hailed the initiative as a compassionate way of helping ease the pain and suffering of people with AIDS, cancer and other terminal illnesses.

The controversy didn't bother Dennis Peron, one of the leaders behind the measure, who was still savoring the victory Wednesday.

"People have smoked pot as medicine for thousands of years," he said. "It's like we've taken the wisdom of the past and brought it to the future."

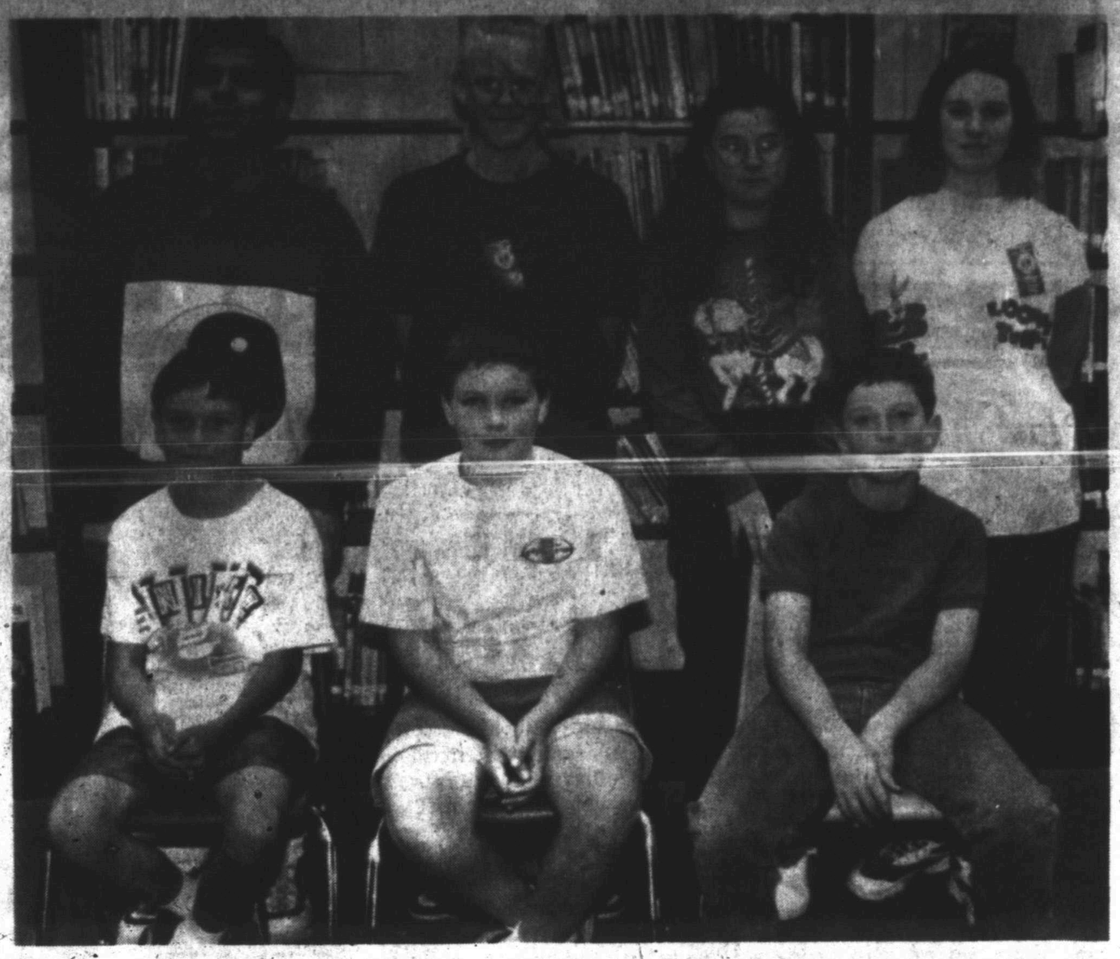

Steve Kubby of Squaw Valley, diagnosed with abdominal cancer 20 years ago, said he already has a doctor's verbal permission to use marijuana.

"I told my wife Monday night that this is the last night I'll have to break the law to get my medicine," said Kubby, 49.

The law technically went into effect Wednesday, but because marijuana is still illegal to sell, obtaining it is still against the law.

"You can talk to your doctor today," said Dave Fratello, spokesman for the Yes on 215 campaign. "But I can't tell you where to get it. I can only tell you you're not subject to prosecution if it's prescribed."

California Attorney General Dan Lungren, an outspoken opponent of the initiative, called for a meeting of all the state's sheriffs, district attorneys and police chiefs to discuss the ramifications of the measure on law enforcement.

CBS hiring Robert Shapiro as O.J. trial commentator

NEW YORK (AP) — CBS News is hiring former O.J. Simpson attorney Robert Shapiro as a commentator for Simpson's civil trial — and that's not sitting well with some in the news division.

CBS's on-air legal consultant, Laurie Levenson, has questioned the ethics of hiring Shapiro, according to TV Guide.

"Both sides in this case have a real credibility problem," Levenson told the magazine. "You have to ask if any of the attorneys who worked for the prosecution or the defense in this case have any business being paid to comment on the civil trial. It's really a question of what is ethical."

Shapiro put together Simpson's criminal defense team and is believed by some to have doubted his client's innocence.

The magazine said Levenson threatened to resign over Shapiro's hiring. CBS News President Andrew Heyward said there was no such threat; Levenson was not immediately available for comment.

Heyward said he can understand the questions about Shapiro, who will do occasional commentary on the case for CBS. But he disagreed with the critics.

"There's no question that anybody involved in the original case is potentially a controversial character," he said. "The standard for me is, can we contribute to the public understanding of the story and the issues involved and obviously I'm confident that all our contributors meet that test."

Man tries to find someone to hurt wife

BOSTON (AP) — Pretending to be a 21-year-old woman, a man went online to hire someone to rape and sexually mutilate his wife.

But the person Harold Clarkson connected with happened to be a Massachusetts state trooper responsible for searching online services for criminals, police said.

"He spent 10 or 15 minutes in a public chat room recruiting someone to kidnap and torture his wife, so I took him in a private room and led him to believe I might help him," Lt. Andrew Palombo said Wednesday.

It was that computer connection that led to Clarkson's arrest Tuesday.

The 50-year-old machinist from Rutland, Vt., logged onto America Online last month as "Trudy21," and said he was looking to hire some to kidnap his "sister," beat her with a baseball bat, rape her with a champagne bottle and commit other sex acts.

Clarkson said he was looking for someone from the Northeast to do the job.

He provided Palombo with his wife's name, their home address, her work address and a description of her car. He made arrangements with Palombo to perform the acts in the coming weeks, Palombo said.

Meanwhile, Massachusetts authorities contacted AOL and traced "Trudy21" to Clarkson.

Another trooper contacted him and set up a meeting place in Rutland, where Clarkson was arrested and charged with solicitation to incite a felony to kidnap and torture his wife, Palombo said.

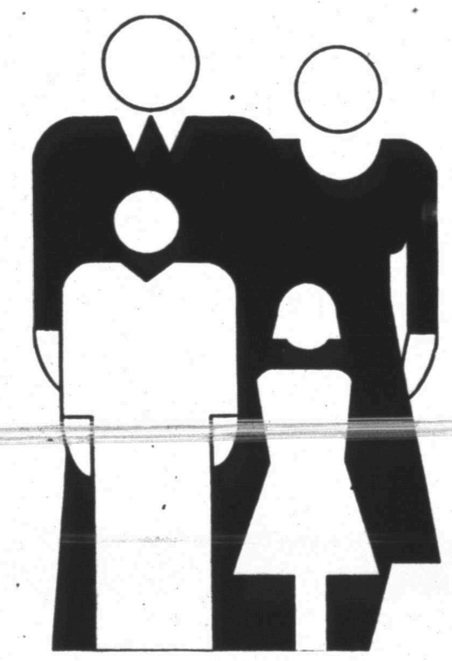

Clarkson was being held without bail.

When asked about motive, "Trudy said she wanted essentially to repay her sister for what she had done to her when she was young," said Robert Sikellis, the state attorney general's chief of special investigations.

Police nationwide have been monitoring the Internet and other information services for online criminals, especially since the killing in Lenoir, N.C., of Sharon Lopatka, 35, who told a man on the Internet that she wanted to be sexually tortured, investigators said.

We've got that hometown spirit and we're passing it around!

'Parrot in the Oven...' wins first children's book award

NEW YORK (AP) — A Mexican-American writer who thanked his sisters for teaching him to read won the first National Book Award for a children's book with "Parrot in the Oven: Mi Vida."

Victor Martinez of San Francisco earned the honor Wednesday night for his autobiographical tale. For the first time in its 46-year history, the National Book Foundation honored a book for young people as a separate category.

Martinez, 42, said he appreciated the recognition given to children's literature because children are "very hungry for things. They all don't want to play Nintendo games."

One of 12 children, he credited his sisters for giving him a love of reading.

"I read more when I was 14 years old than I do now," he said.

Andrea Barrett won the 1996 National Book Award in fiction for her "Ship Fever and Other Stories," a collection of eight stories set in the 1840s in a quarantine island off Canada.

Barrett, 41, of Rochester, N.Y., captured the prize with her fifth book. "I feel enormously lucky about it," she said. "I've had quite a quiet publishing career."

James Carroll of Boston won the nonfiction prize for his "An American Requiem: God, My Father, and the War That Came Between Us." The book, which covers the height of the Vietnam War, is the 53-year-old Boston Globe columnist's first nonfiction effort.

"The war took my capacity to be a priest away," said the former Catholic priest and Boston University chaplain.

Hayden Carruth won for poetry with "Scrambled Eggs & Whiskey: Poems 1991-1995." Carruth, 75, of Munnsville, N.Y., couldn't attend the ceremony because of poor health.

The winners, who each received a $10,000 check and a crystal sculpture, were selected by independent judges.

Stargazers make tortillas

Stargazers Family and Community Education Club met in September for its regular monthly meeting with Pauline Broyles presiding.

Eleven members answered roll call by naming a favorite recipe to trade at the next meeting, and the thought for the day "It's not fair for me to make decisions without at least talking to my brothers."

Mary Ann Juarez gave a program on making flour tortillas. She used Harina Preparada flower mix, adding enough water to make a soft dough. She advised kneading the dough 40 times. She had each member make a tortilla.

President Broyles read the hint for the day, "To unclog drains, pour one cup boiling vinegar down drain, cover tightly a few minutes and flush with cold water. Or, use ½ cup vinegar and ¼ cup soda, cover a few minutes, flush with cold water."

Juarez was hostess for the meeting and Ruby Gregory received the hostess gift.

Successful subtle suit steps

By Phillip Alder

Some suit combinations are easy to handle; others more deceptive. After having a quick look at today's club suit, decide how you would play in four spades after a trump lead.

With the other three suits solid, only clubs present a problem. At first glance, it looks obvious to win with dummy's spade nine and lead the club jack, working to ruff a club in the dummy. However, with best defense, you go down. West wins this club trick and the next, returning trumps both times. You get no ruff in the dummy and lose four club tricks.

This line "wastes" one of the valuable top three clubs. See the difference if you cross to the heart ace at trick two and lead a club toward dummy's jack.

If West goes in with the queen and exits with a spade, win in the dummy and lead the club jack. In a moment your nine and 10 of clubs will combine to drive out East's king. You lose only three club tricks because one of West's club honors collects only low cards.

So let's suppose West plays low at trick three. East takes dummy's club jack with the king and returns a trump to dummy's jack. Now you have two winning plays: Lead the club three to your six. Or after playing the club three to your 10, you win the next trump in hand and exit with the club six, bringing down West's ace. (You didn't come this far to lead the nine, playing to pin the eight, did you?)

It's an unusual version of leading up to an honor, rather than starting with that honor (here, dummy's jack).

District 2-4A Preview

By Brent Taylor
Sports Editor

Going into the final week of the season, the only thing for sure is Frenship will be in the playoffs and will be the large school representative from District 2-4A. Plainview is the largest school, but the only place the Bulldogs will be going is to the gym to get ready for basketball.

Levelland, Estacado and Snyder will be looking for the two spots in the small school bracket. For the Tigers to make the postseason party, they must defeat Levelland by 10 points and hope Estacado beats Frenship.

The last week will be interesting.

Levelland (6-3, 3-1) at Snyder (4-5, 2-2)

Last Week: Snyder defeated Plainview, 24-17 (2 OT)
Levelland lost to Frenship, 16-13 (OT)

The Tigers are in a must-win situation for the second week in a row to have a chance at the playoffs. A Snyder win by itself does not guarantee a playoff spot, without some help.

Levelland comes to Tiger Stadium with the number one defense in the area, allowing only 190.8 yards a game. On offense, they are sixth, right behind Snyder, gaining 262.7.

Snyder must stop senior running back Sesar Cardiel, who is sixth in the area in rushing with 966 yards. Cardiel is second in scoring with 90 points.

Estacado (6-3, 3-1) at Frenship (6-3, 4-0)

Last Week: Estacado defeated Lamesa, 54-0
Frenship defeated Levelland, 16-13 (OT)

The motativation for Frenship will be to win this matchup and take the district title outright. Estacado will also be wanting to do the same to force a tie for first.

Frenship comes in as the top offensive team in the area with 361.1 yards and the third-ranked defensive team, allowing 249.7. Estacado is third on offense with 336.6 and second in defense, giving up 244.

Plainview (1-8, 0-4) at Lamesa (1-8, 0-4)

Last Week: Plainview lost to Snyder, 24-17 (2OT)
Lamesa lost to Estacado, 54-0

This is for pride. Both teams will be looking to close out on a positive note with a win.

Plainview is getting back some of the players it lost early in the year to injuries and should not have a problem taking its first district win since moving back into 4-A.

Webber leads Bullets to 10-point win over Spurs

LANDOVER, Md. (AP) — This time, the sneaker was on the other foot.

The Washington Bullets, crippled by injuries each of the last eight seasons, caught the San Antonio Spurs in a similar plight Wednesday night.

The Bullets showed no pity, using 22 points and a career-high 21 rebounds by Chris Webber for a 96-86 victory. Juwan Howard, who had 22 points and 12 rebounds, said the injury-riddled Spurs looked like the Bullets of old.

"They were shorthanded, but they still went out and played their best," Howard noted. "It kind of reminded me of a team I'm very familiar with. But you can't take any team lightly in this league."

The Spurs, playing their second road game in as many nights, trailed by only three points entering the final period. But San Antonio ran out of energy and scored only seven points over the next six minutes.

The Bullets used a pair of 3-pointers by Tracy Murray and one apiece by Jaren Jackson and Chris Whitney to go up 82-74. Then, after Murray missed a 3-point attempt, Webber stuffed in the loose ball to give Washington a 10-point cushion with 5:03 remaining.

The Spurs never cut their deficit to less than six points the rest of the way.

"With David Robinson, Will Perdue and Chuck Person gone, we were still in position to win this thing," San Antonio coach Bob Hill said. "But we can't afford to not stay organized and not get our people where they're supposed to be. That's what happened — we got out of sync, went out on our own and the Bullets got away from us."

Webber played a big part in that. Frustrated over his performance in the Bullets' first two games, the 6-foot-10 center took out his anger on the Spurs.

Webber started the season with one rebound at Orlando, and Washington followed that game with a loss at home against Cleveland. As far as Webber was concerned, enough was enough.

Pistons rout Dallas

AUBURN HILLS, Mich. (AP) — When the Detroit Pistons lost Allan Houston to free agency during the summer and then struggled offensively, people started asking if they had anyone who could pick up the load in the backcourt.

Doug Collins wasn't asking. He knows who could do it.

"I believe in Lindsey Hunter and soon, so will everyone else," Collins said after Wednesday night's 103-84 rout of Dallas. "Lindsey's already doing a lot of the things that Allan did for us last year."

Hunter scored 16 points against the Mavericks after replacing an injured Grant Hill in the starting lineup. Eleven of those points came in the third quarter, helping the Pistons take control of the game.

"Not having Grant, we lose so much that guys really have to step up," Hunter said. 'We did that tonight."

Hunter was supposed to replace Isiah Thomas as the Pistons' point guard, but struggled badly in that role for three seasons. This year, he is strictly expected to score.

"Lindsey plays a lot better when he doesn't have to handle the ball, so I'm not going to burden him with making him run the offense," Collins said. "That's why Joe Dumars and Grant handle the ball the majority of the time."

Hunter's field-goal average has never been high, so it is an adjustment for him to shoot more often. He was 2-for-7 in the first half before his big third quarter.

"I just have to come out and shoot whenever I am open," he said. "If I miss 10 straight shots and get open again, I have to take the 11th shot."

Hunter also showed some defense, holding Jason Kidd to two points in the final three quarters.

"They are an explosive team, so we didn't want to outscore them, we wanted to stop them," Hunter said. "I wanted to make Jason earn his points by scoring them over the top, not by driving to the basket."

Kidd, who finished with 12 points, said his team needed someone to have a stretch like Hunter's in the third. Dallas missed eight of nine 3-point attempts in that quarter.

The Mavericks, coming off a tough loss to Toronto, collapsed in the fourth quarter, trailing by as many as 28.

Injuries aside, number 1-3 are heavy favorites

By The Associated Press

At No. 1 Florida, Danny Wuerffel starts on Saturday, but his blockers are banged up.

At No. 2 Ohio State, backup Joe Germaine is the likely starter for injured quarterback Stanley Jackson.

And at No. 3 Florida State, quarterback Thad Busby is out with a fractured wrist and Dan Kendra is set to start.

With injuries popping up to key players around the country, coaches could be worried about their team's chances in crucial games down the stretch.

Steve Spurrier, John Cooper and Bobby Bowden don't seem to be among them, probably because of Saturday's opposition.

The Gators (8-0), Buckeyes (8-0) and Seminoles (7-0) are on the road against conference doormats. Florida is at Vanderbilt (2-6, 0-5 SEC); Ohio State is at Illinois (2-6, 1-4 Big Ten), and Florida State plays Wake Forest (2-6, 0-5 ACC), at Orlando, Fla.

Gators center Jeff Mitchell is out for the season with a broken ankle and left tackle Mo Collins has one week left on his suspension. Wyley Ritch starts for Mitchell, but Spurrier says backup guard Corey Yarbrough could also see time at center.

"Our freshman linemen have to continue to get better if we're going to continue on and have that real big year," Florida's Spurrier said. "We're not a set team. We're a team that has to keep improving or we'll be in trouble."

The Commodores are the team in trouble Saturday as a healthy Wuerffel should have another field day.

With or without Jackson, the Buckeyes shouldn't miss a beat with Germaine. He's 33-of-58 for 567 yards and nine TDs and leads the Big Ten is passing efficiency.

Jackson sprained his left ankle early in the Buckeyes' 45-0 win over Minnesota and his playing status might not be determined until game time.

"Stan has been our starting quarterback," Ohio State's Cooper said. "If he's healthy and can practice, he'll start."

Even with Busby out, Bowden says Kendra is ready even though the redshirt freshman has attempted only 31 passes.

"He's much further along than I thought he'd be," Florida State's Bowden said. "His mechanics are excellent, and it's a matter of learning the coverages and responding to that."

What do ex-presidents and failed candidates do next?

WASHINGTON (AP) — Build houses for the poor. Teach U.S. foreign policy. Become a diplomat. Go on a speaking tour. And don't forget, there's always that presidential library or those long-awaited memoirs.

That's what some ex-presidents and White House wannabes have done after their jobs of running the country or a campaign were history.

Here's President Clinton, musing on his after-Oval Office life: "I will never seek office again — unless I go home and run for the school board some day," he said with a chuckle. He's got another four years to plan.

His vanquished Republican challenger Bob Dole is thinking about his future right now. "I'm going to sit back for a few days, and then I'm going to start standing up for what I think is right for America."

Among former presidents and failed candidates, a notable few over the years have boasted distinguished careers beyond the White House — when they weren't too busy improving their golf games.

—William Howard Taft was one of the most successful ex-presidents, becoming chief justice of the Supreme Court after he failed to win re-election in 1912. Historians say he was a better justice than president.

—Sixth President John Quincy Adams spent 17 years in the House of Representatives after he was defeated for re-election in 1828.

—Jimmy Carter, defeated in 1980 largely for his failed foreign policy amid the Iranian hostage crisis, was a contender for the 1996 Nobel Peace Prize for his globe-trotting peace efforts. The former president has been busy with the Carter Center, established in 1982 to promote democracy and resolve civil strife, and with groups such as Habitat for Humanity, building houses worldwide, including in his native Georgia and in poorest Africa.

—Gerald Ford also has attached himself to charitable organizations, including the Betty Ford Center, the Gerald R. Ford Foundation and the American Cancer Society. Ford annually hosts the American Enterprise Institute's World Forum in Vail, Colo., and wrote 1987's "Humor and the Presidency." Ford, who finished President Nixon's 1972 term, also serves on several corporate boards and the Board of Regents at Pepperdine University.

—George Bush, defeated for re-election in 1992, has remained a very private citizen, although he made a couple of campaign appearances with Dole this year. Mainly, he's been chipping away at his memoirs and traveling the world to speak, often visiting foreign leaders for private chats. Bush has overseen the construction of his presidential library at Texas A&M University and serves on the board of the Canadian corporation, Barrick Gold. He's chairman of Eisenhower Exchange Fellowships and honorary chairman of the Points of Light Foundation, which he founded. He and his wife, Barbara, raised more than $10 million for local and national charities in 1995.

—Herbert Hoover, a Republican who was blamed for the Depression and lost re-election to the White House in 1932, was given a role in Democratic President Truman's administration.

—Even Richard Nixon, who resigned his second term in 1974 in disgrace over Watergate, enjoyed a renaissance as a respected elder statesman before his death in 1994. His legacy includes 10 books — the first on the crises of his life and the last on America's challenges in the next century.

Several presidential also-rans haven't done too shabbily either.

—Former Massachusetts Gov. Michael Dukakis, the Democratic nominee in 1988, is teaching political science at Boston's Northeastern University.

—Former Sen. George McGovern, who lost his presidential bid in 1972 and mounted a brief campaign in 1984, taught American foreign policy on college campuses before retiring. He remains a political icon.

—Former Vice President Walter Mondale, defeated in 1984 by former President Reagan, has been ambassador to Japan since 1993.

—Barry Goldwater, who represented Arizona in the Senate for 12 years before running for president, returned to the Senate for 18 years after his 1964 presidential defeat. He's a conservative Republican legend.

—Perpetual loser William Jennings Bryan, defeated twice for the Senate and four times for the White House, carved out a place in history with his 1896 "Cross of Gold" speech and his role in the turn-of-the-century Scopes trial, in which he testified against teaching evolution.

—Legendary House Speaker Henry Clay, who was thwarted three times in bids for the presidency, remained a strong leader and an influential mediator who, many historians believe, staved off the Civil War for years.

Suspect identified in stabbing incident

Charges of aggravated assault have been filed in connection with the Tuesday morning stabbing of a Scurry County man.

Police said they have identified a 21-year-old female as the person who allegedly stabbed Rosendo Alonso in the right upper chest area shortly before 5 a.m. Tuesday.

The suspect has not been arrested, police said.

Police said the two individuals had been arguing when the female apparently stabbed Alonso with a kitchen steak knife.

Alonzo, 27, was held for observation at Cogdell Memorial Hospital and has since been released.

The case will likely go before a Scurry County grand jury.

Suspected shoplifter jailed by law officers

One person was arrested for Class C theft and evading arrest after a shoplifting incident at Wal-Mart shortly after noon Wednesday.

Officers arrested a 25-year-old male at 12:26 p.m. in the 3700 block of Avenue V after he ran when confronted by security personnel at Wal-Mart. He was charged with Class C theft and evading arrest.

An offense report for theft was submitted at noon in reference to property being taken from a residence in the 9700 block of East Highway 180.

At 3:47 p.m., officers were notified of a fight involving several juveniles at the Travis Gym.

A Class A theft report was submitted at 4:06 p.m. in reference to a student taking a band instrument from West Elementary. The instrument was recovered and returned to the school.

A minor accident was reported at 6:48 p.m. in the 1900 block of 35th Street. Involved were a 1993 Chevrolet pickup driven by Christopher Michael Huddleston of 2304 41st St. and a 1995 Ford driven by Nancy Ann Steelman.

A report for Class C assault was submitted at 9:23 p.m. from the Eastridge Apartments.

DPS troopers investigated a one-vehicle accident today at 3:53 a.m., some two miles northwest of Snyder on Highway 84. Involved was a 1995 Kenworth truck tractor driven by Theresa Lopez Williams of Port Orchard, Wash.

DPS trooper Pat Alexander said Williams told him that she tried to dodge some coyotes that were crossing the highway and lost control of one of the piggyback trailers. The vehicle is owned by Metro Freight Systems of Washington. No injuries were reported.

Texas voters react to Clinton's victory

DALLAS (AP) — The day after President Clinton coasted to victory, some Texans who backed Republican Bob Dole predicted that he may end his second term disgraced by ethics investigations.

But Texas Democrats proclaimed that Clinton's re-election will lead to prolonged prosperity in the Lone Star State and continued welfare and Medicare reform. They said Dole, who carried Texas but lost the big prize, made too much of Clinton's character and shared too little about his own message.

"I believe Texas won yesterday in spite of itself," 34-year-old Dallas construction worker Jim Douglas said Wednesday. "Clinton cares about people. If he didn't he wouldn't have come down here so many times, knowing that he probably wouldn't win. When he sees to it that Medicare is saved and welfare is reformed, people will see that he's a good president."

Lifelong Republican Harry Williams, who owns a hardware store in Irving, said he expects the Whitewater scandal and alleged breaches of privacy in connection with FBI files obtained by the White House will result in the president's impeachment.

"I wonder if anyone even realizes how much detriment electing Bill Clinton will cause this country," Williams, 54, said. "The investigations into these ethics allegations are going to blow up this term ... That's going to be an embarrassment to the nation."

David Alloman, 41, of Arlington echoed Williams' concerns.

"The scope of the breaches is not clear yet, but I think Clinton's in big trouble," said Alloman, a social worker who voted for Dole.

Janet Sherman, a 33-year-old elementary school teacher in Arlington, said she voted for Clinton because of his stance on education.

"This is the first time I've ever voted Democratic," Sherman said. "I felt I had no choice. It seemed clear that one candidate favored education and the other did not."

Texas Christian University political science professor Joanne Green said Dole's victory in Texas reflects the state's values.

"When Dole came here he told people they could trust him," Green said. "In Texas that struck a note with Republicans. Of course Republicans are much more likely to believe allegations against Clinton ... they're looking through partisan-colored glasses."

Exit polls across the nation showed that in most states even voters who said they didn't trust Clinton still voted for him.

Gonzales antique store owner Lillian Hibdon said Dole relied too heavily on trying to convince voters that Clinton couldn't be trusted.

"Dole never told us why we should vote for him," she said. "He only told us why we shouldn't vote for Clinton. I don't think that is the message we wanted."

Green said voters in Texas generally mimicked the rest of the nation in their satisfaction with Clinton's four years in office. That kept Clinton close in a traditionally Republican state like Texas.

"I think what we saw is an overwhelming support of the status quo in all of the elections," Green said. "That's what gave Clinton a chance."

Two little girls found dead in attic

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP) — Donna Jones, a struggling mother living with her two young girls in a tiny camper, was poor but happy when she met a 30-year-old unemployed painter in a park two weeks ago.

Howard Steven Ault befriended her and her daughters, 11-year-old DeAnne Emerald Mu'min and Alicia Sybilla Jones, 7. What Jones didn't know, however, was that Ault had been convicted twice of sexual battery against children.

The girls, half-sisters, later disappeared and were found dead Wednesday in Ault's attic after a two-day search, police said.

"She was vulnerable," said Sylvia Cole, Jones' friend. "When you're homeless, anybody who offers you help you take it."

When the girls didn't come home from school on Monday, Jones went looking for them at Ault's house, about three miles from the park.

"He said he didn't have her kids and hadn't seen the kids," Jones' cousin, Sherette Adderley, told The Miami Herald.

But Jones gave Ault's name to police anyway, and during their investigation officers learned that he was a suspect in an unrelated sexual battery case against another young girl. He was jailed and confessed to killing DeAnne and Alicia, police said.

Ault had lured the girls to his home, sexually assaulted and strangled them, and hid the bodies in his attic, investigators said.

Ault was charged with murder, sexual battery and kidnapping. Details of his past crimes and prison sentences were not immediately available.

"We interviewed him in the jail and he told us that he murdered the kids," said Oakland Park Police Detective Bill Cox. "Then he took us to the house and showed us where the bodies were."

That ended an exhaustive two-day search in neighborhood canals, wooded areas and a lake. Police also knocked on doors of homes around Fort Lauderdale, handed out fliers and put information on the Internet.

Jones said her family had been struggling, but they were happy in the small trailer equipped with a television, stove and small refrigerator. They had been living in the park off and on for 14 months — when Jones could afford the $18-a-night camping fee.

"I moved there because it's closer to school," she said. The school is about a mile away, in suburban Oakland Park.

In the working-class neighborhood where Ault had lived in a triplex for the past month, residents were outraged that a sex offender could be allowed to live among them.

"Something like this should never have happened," Ann Gnozzo said. "How could this guy still be out here? What is the system doing?"

Cole said she felt pangs of guilt.

"I felt I should have done something more — let them sleep on my floor," Cole said.

Panda born at Beijing Zoo

BEIJING (AP) — Dong Dong, a panda at the Beijing Zoo, has given birth after being artificially inseminated, zoo officials said today.

The cub — named Qian Jin, or Thousand Gold — weighed 4.2 ounces at birth on Oct. 4 and now weighs 3 pounds, 5 ounces.

The zoo apparently delayed announcing the birth until the cub's survival was considered likely.

Dear Abby

DEAR ABBY: After reading the letter from "Roger From Walnut Creek, Calif.," I was so furious I had to respond.

In Roger's opinion, "99 percent" of female runners wear sports attire that leaves little to the imagination in the hopes of attracting the attention of men.

I am a female runner who lives in Texas where the summers are extremely hot and humid. Running with heavy clothing is not only uncomfortable, it's also dangerous because there is no chance for the skin to breathe. I run anywhere from 4 to 6 miles, and in the summer this is often sheer torture. However, I and other female athletes continue to train in order to maintain health and fitness.

To suggest that we run in skimpy attire because we are seeking attention from men is just plain ignorant. There are a number of ways to get attention from men without putting oneself through a grueling workout in suffocating heat. Women receive catcalls and wolf whistles whether they wear shorts or baggy sweats. Most women find this "attention" childish, immature and often downright scary.

I feel sure Roger is not a runner. If I am wrong, I'd like to invite him to come to Texas next July and run 5 miles with me. I will wear my so-called skimpy outfit and he can wear his sweats. We'll see who collapses first. My guess is it will be Mr. Big Mouth.

THERESA SIBLEY,
FORT WORTH, TEXAS

DEAR THERESA: Roger's letter rankled other female runners, who were quick to point out that their sportswear can affect the quality of their performance. Read on:

DEAR ABBY: I'm responding to "Roger From Walnut Creek, Calif.," who thinks women runners wear tight clothes so that men will look at them.

Abby, Roger needs therapy! I run every day with several other women, and we wear exercise clothing. The form-fitting lycra/spandex material allows for greater range of motion and the breathable fabric keeps the athlete drier, which adds to comfort. Greater comfort, better performance. What we are focused on is comfort and performance, not attracting attention from men.

Please tell Roger that women have better things to do than collecting catcalls from strangers. Maybe he should get out of his easy chair and try a little exercise himself. On second thought, we're better off if guys like Roger stay inside!

JUDY B., PORTLAND, ORE.

DEAR ABBY: This is also in response to "R.H.G. in Elm Grove, Wis.," who wrote to say that her mother would not wear hearing aids because she thought they would make her look old.

She has things turned around. It's being hard of hearing that makes people think you're old. Don't fool yourself; they will figure out quickly that you are hard of hearing, or worse yet, they'll think you're senile because you respond incorrectly to questions.

Since I often didn't answer questions or enter conversations, many thought I was a snob. The truth was I hadn't heard them.

Thirty years ago when I got my first hearing aids, they changed my life. My whole world became a beautiful place full of sounds. I laughed and talked more — and I became an active participant in what was going on around me.

So, to your readers I say: Hurry to your phone and call for an appointment with an otolaryngologist. (That's a doctor who specializes in ear, nose and throat problems.) You will never be sorry.

AN 83-YEAR-OLD GREAT-GRANDMOTHER WHO IS GLAD TO BE HEARING HER GREAT-GRANDCHILDREN, INDIO, CALIF.

DEAR GREAT-GRANDMOTHER: Now that people are living longer and enjoying their golden years more, your advice should be sweet music to many.

DEAR ABBY: My youngest daughter, "Martha," is 18 and has moved back home after two months on her own. I never knew how much I valued my privacy until my husband and I had a chance to spend time alone. Now my life has been turned upside down.

Don't misunderstand me. I love Martha with all my heart and would be devastated if any harm came to her. But she uses my perfume every day because she doesn't want to buy her own and "borrows" my clothes at will. Every night I have to retrieve my belongings from her room.

If I talk to my husband about our daughter, he defends her. If I confront Martha, she runs to Daddy. The tension around here is causing friction between my husband and me.

The other night, Martha came home at 1:30 a.m. and proceeded to fix herself a snack in the kitchen, waking me up. The next morning at 5:30 a.m., I turned on the stereo, turned on the lights and made so much noise that nobody in the house could sleep. My husband thinks I have lost my mind, but I'm determined that my daughter is going to have a dose of her own medicine.

This girl pays no rent and brings home $200 a week. The only thing we ask of her in the way of housework is that she keep her bathroom clean. We insist that she contribute $25 per week for food and purchase all of her personal items. So far, she has paid on time, but she is starting to run out of supplies in her bathroom, and I'm sure they'll appear on our grocery list on Friday.

How am I going to keep peace in my home? Am I being petty, as my husband says? This could destroy my marriage if it continues. Please help me.

HELL ON THE HOME FRONT IN FLORIDA

DEAR HELL ON THE HOME FRONT: Since your daughter was away from home for only two months before returning, I have to wonder how you coped before she left. However, since she is employed, you are doing the right thing to charge her for food and insist that she purchase her own personal items. It will help ease her into the financial realities of being on her own.

Difficult economic conditions are keeping many adult children in their parents' home. But remember, it is your home. A grown child lives with you by privilege, not by right.

If the friction continues, you and your husband might consider subsidizing her in an apartment of her own. The continued success of your marriage could depend on it.

***

DEAR ABBY: I just finished reading the letter from "Alone in Ann Arbor, Mich.," who wants to save sex until after marriage, but was being pressured by men who wouldn't see her anymore unless she had sex with them. They wanted to take a "test drive" before they made a bigger commitment.

Well, I am a 27-year-old male virgin and I don't understand why more people can't grasp the logic that sex before marriage is not a good idea, not just because of AIDS or questions of morality, but because of wanting to have a relationship that will last in the long run.

No lasting relationship can be based on how good the sex is, because one day the sex is going to slow down or even run out. What you're left with after that had better be pretty solid, or you may as well start shopping for a divorce lawyer while you're shopping for the ring. I know that if I can say I want to marry someone and, in effect, spend the rest of my life with her without ever having had sex with her, the sex is only going to make that relationship better.

Has no one else seen the correlation between the increase in premarital sex and the increase of divorce in the past 20 years? I'd bet my life that there's a direct relationship between the two. It seems to me that the problem is that people think love should be based on sex, when it's actually the other way around.

I congratulate "Alone in Ann Arbor" and every other person who, for whatever reason, has the determination and wisdom to abstain from sex until they're married.

NO NAME, GREENVILLE, S.C.

DEAR NO NAME: And I congratulate you on your clear-headed thinking.

Dole will draw comfortable pension, retirement income

WASHINGTON (AP) — Bob Dole won't have trouble making ends meet as he moves from 35 years of public service into involuntary retirement.

Even though he frequently invoked his humble Kansas origins as he campaigned for president, the former Senate majority leader and his wife Elizabeth have amassed a multi-million-dollar cushion.

Dole has not said yet what he plans to do in the future.

Clearly, he plans to take some time to just sort things out.

"He expects to still maintain a role in public life," campaign spokesman Nelson Warfield said Wednesday. But asked just what Dole might do, Warfield replied, "All I would say is, stay tuned."

Last week, Dole said in an interview with David Frost that he might do some work with the disabled if he lost the election.

Dole's right arm is paralyzed as a result of a World War II injury and he only has partial use of his left arm. Throughout his congressional career, he has championed the rights of the disabled.

At 73, Dole would have no problem taking it easy for a while if he wants, even making lucrative speeches here and there.

He's a year younger than former President Bush, who has seemed to enjoy the freedom that comes from being out of office and out of the news.

For a man whose family survived the Depression by moving into the basement of their home in Russell, Kan., and renting out the rest of the house, Dole and Elizabeth Dole have done quite well for themselves.

In fact, Mrs. Dole, 60, is due to resume her $200,000-a-year job as president of the American Red Cross in January. She has been on an unpaid leave during the campaign.

Dole became eligible for a $107,000-a-year pension when he resigned from the Senate last June 11 to campaign full time. During his campaign, he has given his monthly checks to charities.

Dole also receives an $18,300-a-year pension from the Army, largely due to his World War II injuries in Italy.

The Doles have combined assets of about $4 million, much of it from smart investments and careful savings.

During his three decades in Congress, Dole — a former chairman of the Senate Finance Committee — took in $1.7 million in honoraria, more than any other member of Congress.

Until 1991, senators could pocket their speech fees.

Dole put much of his into a retirement account.

More recently, both Doles have given much of their speaking fees to charity.

Dole, as a private citizen, is no longer required to do so and his aides have not disclosed Dole's future intentions in terms of speaking fees.

Dole also qualifies for Social Security benefits. These are paid when an individual reaches age 70 — regardless of whether he or she is still working. However, Dole so far has elected not to apply for these benefits, based on his tax returns through 1995.

The U.S. ex-president getting the highest pension is Gerald Ford, who was House Republican leader before his three years as vice president and then president. He gets roughly $240,000 a year in combined White House and congressional pensions.

The two Doles keep their finances separate, but file joint tax returns. That has allowed Dole to take advantage of several tax shelters set up by Mrs. Dole.

She, too, has enjoyed a lucrative speaking career.

During her five years as head of the Red Cross, she has earned more than $1 million in honoraria, giving $500,000 to charities and putting $300,000 into a special retirement account.

The Doles own three homes: a two-bedroom apartment in the Watergate, which Dole bought in 1972 for $46,900; a condo apartment on the 12th floor of the Sea View Hotel in Bal Harbor, Fla., which they purchased for $150,000 from agribusiness executive Dwayne Andreas; and Dole's childhood home in Russell.

U.S. voter turnout near historic low

WASHINGTON (AP) — You have to go back to 1824 to find a voter turnout lower than this year's. More than half of America's eligible voters sat out the Bill Clinton-Bob Dole contest.

The numbers aren't final yet, but Curtis Gans, director of the Committee for Study of the American Electorate, said he expects the turnout to be 48.8 percent of those eligible.

In 1992, when Ross Perot's candidacy added spice to the Bill Clinton-George Bush race, 55 percent of those eligible voted.

The number of ballots cast in 1996 stood at 92.7 million out of 196.5 million of voting age — or 47 percent. But Gans said substantial numbers of absentee ballots not yet counted in Washington and Oregon would raise the final percentage.

The 1924 turnout that elected Calvin Coolidge was 48.9 percent. The lowest was in 1824, when Andrew Jackson drew just 26.9 percent among "free white male" voters — the highest tally of five candidates. The House ended up electing John Quincy Adams.

Robert Y. Shapiro, a political science professor at Columbia University, said Clinton's lead in the polls held down this year's turnout.

"The presidential election was essentially a done deal," he said.

Shapiro says voters in 1992 were upset about the state of the economy and turned against Bush.

While Perot's presence in that race stirred voter interest, it may have had something to do with people staying away on Tuesday, Shapiro said.

"This go-round, voters were turned off by him," he added.

"He laid the groundwork for a third party, but I think that Perot was perceived as tired, worn and less effective."

West Virginians voted in far larger percentages than the national average, but the turnout, at just under 64 percent, fell below what some had predicted.

Forrest Maltzman, an assistant professor of political science at George Washington University, said voter turnout goes down when people think they know the outcome.

"A lot of people thought they knew exactly what was going to happen and that it was not worth bothering to vote," he said.

Ricki Seidman, executive director of Rock the Vote, which aims to get young people to vote, said money wasn't spent to bring more voters out but only to reach those people who were likely to vote.

"This is not encouraging for the future of our democracy," she said. "This election ... cannot be said to determine America's common political ideas and ideals."

J.P. Monroe, a professor of political science at the University of Miami, said the low turnout is a concern.

"Here you have half the eligible voters electing the most important political official in the country," he said. "That carries tremendous implications. When more and more people don't participate, you cease to be a democracy."

Death row inmate's conviction reversed

AUSTIN (AP) — A man tried three times for the 1977 mutilation and killing of his neighbor has had his conviction — and death sentence — overturned for the second time.

The Texas Court of Criminal Appeals cited prosecutorial misconduct in its 5-3 vote Wednesday to reverse Kerry Max Cook's murder conviction in the slaying of secretary Linda Jo Edwards.

"This case exposes what the public fears, that prosecutors do, sometimes, break the law in trying to convict a citizen," said Paul Nugent, Cook's lawyer.

David Dobbs, chief felony prosecutor in Smith County, said he would ask the court to reconsider. Cook will remain on death row until Dobbs' motion is heard.

No decision has been made on a fourth trial, but Dobbs said it would be difficult to retry Cook without using testimony that the appeals panel barred.

"Not being able to retry the case would be an unthinkable position in terms of the way we feel about his guilt and the magnitude of this offense," Dobbs said.

Ms. Edwards, 21, was beaten in the head with a plaster statue, stabbed repeatedly with scissors and a knife and sexually mutilated. At the time, Cook was an unemployed bartender living in her Tyler apartment complex.

Cook, now 39, was convicted in 1978 and spent 13 years on death row before the appeals panel overturned his conviction in 1991 over the improper use of a psychiatrist's testimony during the penalty phase of his trial.

Your Birthday

Friday, Nov. 8, 1996

In the year ahead, you might enter into several different kinds of partnership arrangements. Strong associations could be rewarding, but weak alliances may only drain your resources.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Today, it will be important to try to see things as they are and not as you would like them to be. Optimism will be an asset, though. Astro-Graph predictions for the year ahead make wonderful Christmas stocking stuffers for all signs of the zodiac. Mail $2 for each and SASE to Astro-Graph, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 1758, Murray Hill Station, New York, NY 10156. Make sure to state your zodiac sign.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Today, the most expensive activities will be the least fun. Try to enjoy yourself in ways that won't drain your budget.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Opportunity will abound today, but there is also the possibility that you may take things for granted and fail to exploit them properly.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Make an effort to avoid repeating past mistakes today. Just because you got away with something previously doesn't mean you'll be as lucky this time.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Today, avoid involvement with friends who have extra spending money. You might be embarrassed if you can't match their extravagance.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) If you fail use your own judgment today, an associate will make decisions for you, and you might not like them.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Actions, not words, will matter most to others today. You should not discuss your intentions unless you're sure you can get the job done.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Usually you're a conservative and prudent person, but if you let your guard down today, you may throw caution to the winds.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Neither you nor your mate should make important decisions today without consulting the other first. A joint decision will be best.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Unless you really know what you're talking about, do not give instructions to others today. If something goes wrong, you'll be held accountable.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Today you might be careless with your resources. This attitude could cause problems in the future. You will wonder why your funds have run out.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Common sense and logic will work for you today when your four-leaf clover or rabbit's foot won't. Try not to push your luck.

Swelling accompanies cellulitis

By Peter H. Gott, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I just spent a week in the hospital with cellulitis of the leg. Just what is this and what is my prognosis? All I was told was that I had an infection.

DEAR READER: Cellulitis is a bacterial infection of the deeper tissues: not only the skin, but the subcutaneous areas. It is marked by swelling, pain and redness. Intravenous antibiotics are usually necessary.

These infections can occur with no warning. Without treatment, they can progress to involve the bloodstream or the lymph system. Once cured, there are no medical consequences.

DEAR READER: In October, my husband had what his doctor called a "light" stroke that has left him with several problems, including depression, sleepiness, unsteady gait, and fatigue. He was always a joyful person. What can I do to help him?

DEAR READER: A stroke, which can result from either bleeding into the brain or a blood clot, causes death of nerve tissue and is diagnosed with MRI or CT scans. Symptoms depend on what part of the brain is affected and the extent of the damage.

Unsteady gait and fatigue are common consequences of stroke. Also, many such patients suffer depression.

Short of being supportive and loving, there isn't much you can do to improve the situation. However, there is much that the doctor can offer. For example, your husband should be enrolled in a stroke-rehabilitation program, in which occupational therapists and physical therapists will help him to regain strength and coordination.

Also, if he had a blood clot that caused his stroke, your husband should be taking an aspirin a day to prevent another stroke.

Finally, the doctor may consider prescribing anti-depressant medication, such as Zoloft, Prozac and others, to help your husband cope with what is clearly a difficult situation.

I've found that rehab following a stroke is almost always effective. This is hard work, no doubt, but muscles and nerves can be trained to compensate for the nerve damage. In addition, stroke patients' attitudes and moods usually improve because SOMEONE is doing SOMETHING and the improvement itself has therapeutic value.

Ask your husband's doctor to coordinate the needed resources to address the problems stemming from the stroke.

To give you more information, I am sending you a copy of my Health Report "Stroke." Other readers who would like a copy should send $2 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to my attention at P.O. Box 2017, Murray Hill Station, New York, NY 10156. Be sure to mention the title.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I'm a 27-year-old male with a painful right knee and foot. This problem started at about the time that I developed a slight discharge from my penis, which is too embarrassing for me to see a doctor. Help! I'm too young to get arthritis!

DEAR READER: In a sexually active male, the combination of urethritis (a penile discharge) and arthritis suggests the possibility of Reiter's syndrome. While it's true that the disease can often be a consequence of a bowel infection (with a variety of bacteria), a common form is also sexually transmitted, especially from a chlamydia infection.

Reiter's syndrome is often associated with conjunctivitis (irritated eyes), tendon inflammation and small, painless ulcers in the mouth and on the penis.

The diagnosis is made by a special blood test called the HLA-B27 tissue antigen, indicating that Reiter's syndrome may be due to a genetic predisposition in conjunction with the infection. Treatment includes antibiotics, anti-inflammatory drugs (ibuprofen and others) and — in severe cases — cortisone injections into the affected tissues.

I'm sorry that you are too embarrassed to seek medical attention. This is unwise because you need testing (including cultures of the discharge); if untreated, Reiter's syndrome can lead to chronic joint pain and deformities, which can be severe.

If you don't feel comfortable seeing your family doctor, I urge you to be examined by a physician in a sexually transmitted disease clinic. Also, remember that your sex partners should similarly be tested.

To give you more information, I am sending you a copy of my Health Report "Where to Find Sex Information." Other readers who would like a copy should send $2 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to P.O. Box 2017, Murray Hill Station, New York, NY 10156. Be sure to mention the title.

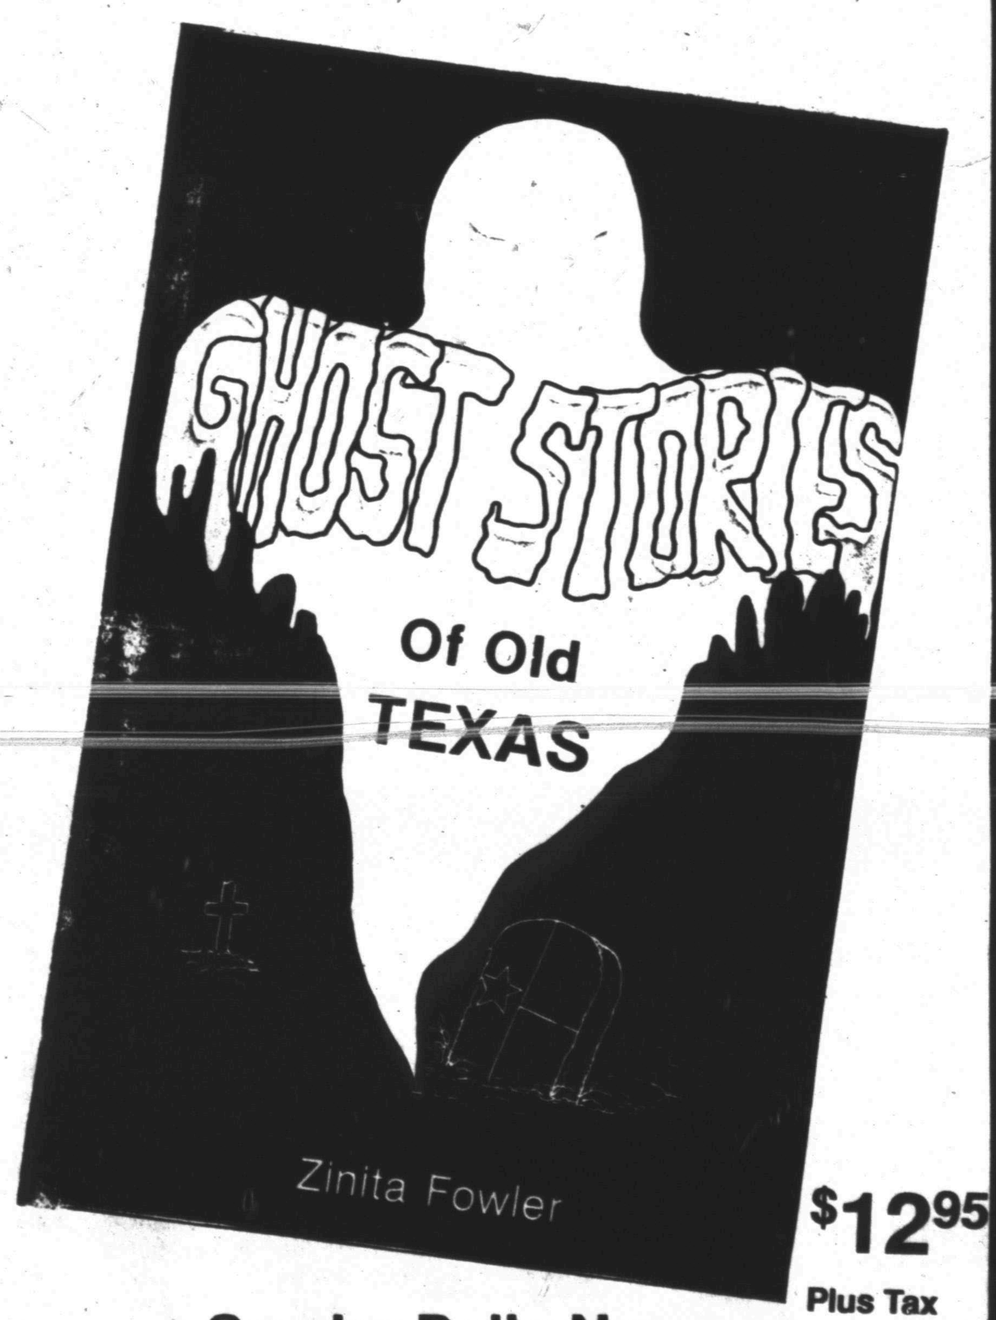

DEAR DR. GOTT: Has Zostrix been on the market long enough to determine any long-term use side effects? Is there any harm in mixing Naprosyn with this substance?

DEAR READER: Zostrix (purified capsaicin, a substance derived from peppers) is applied as a cream to relieve the pain of arthritis and neuralgia (nerve pain). It is entirely safe; there are no side effects, even from chronic use. It can be used safely with anti-inflammatory pills, such as Naprosyn and others.

Zostrix's manufacturer cautions that this prescription cream should not be applied too thickly, to irritated skin or to areas where it could enter the eyes.

Waldholtz gets more than 3-year term

WASHINGTON (AP) — Joseph Waldholtz drew more than three years in prison today for fraud in connection with the campaign of his former wife, Rep. Edith Greene, R-Utah.

U.S. District Judge Norma Holloway Johnson said the 37-month sentence was made stiffer because Waldholtz continued to write bad checks and used heroin since pleading guilty last June.

The government had asked only for 33 months, the maximum under federal sentencing guidelines. "You continued on your illicit course," Johnson told Waldholtz, explaining the longer sentence.

His former wife sobbed and twisted a handkerchief in her hands during the proceeding. Greene, who has resumed using her maiden name following the couple's divorce last summer, did not run for reelection.

"This is a very sad day for me," she said afterward. "It is the end of my marriage, the loss of a father to my daughter."

She said she felt the need to be there because it "closed a chapter in my life."

Waldholtz sounded contrite as he stood before the judge.

"This past year has been a nightmare," he said, expressing regret to his wife, his family and friends.

"I am responsible for everything alone," Waldholtz said, adding that his conduct "is something that will haunt me the rest of my life."

Perry, Christopher won't be in new cabinet

WASHINGTON (AP) — Preparing for a second term, President Clinton's administration is rapidly changing, beginning with the departure of two of its pillars: Secretary of State Warren Christopher and Defense Secretary William Perry.

One senior administration official said Christopher was expected to go to the White House today to announce he will leave the nation's top diplomatic post by Jan. 20, Inauguration Day.

Clinton's object is to pump new vigor into his administration as it begins a second and final four years.

And as the breadth of the possible changes became clear Wednesday, the rumor mill and the news leaks were operating full time.

Commerce Secretary Mickey Kantor was portrayed as ready to resign but was said to be available for another top-level job, perhaps the attorney general's post if Janet Reno could be persuaded to step aside, no matter how reluctantly.

Energy Secretary Hazel O'Leary, out of favor at the White House, also was said to be leaving.

Transportation Secretary Federico Pena, criticized for mishandling the ValuJet airliner crash, and Housing Secretary Henry Cisneros, the focus of investigation involving payments he made to a former mistress, also were likely to go, administration officials said.

Chicago Mayor Richard Daley's brother, Bill, is a possible successor to Pena.

Clinton returned in triumph from the campaign trail Wednesday afternoon, telling his assembled Cabinet, agency heads and hundreds of other political appointees that their efforts had made the difference between victory and defeat.

"You have accomplished a phenomenal amount in the last four years," Clinton told his loyalists, spreading out by the hundreds on the South Lawn.

Chief of Staff Leon Panetta told the president the crowd contained not only those who had made victory possible but "the designers, the engineers who will build your bridge to the future."

But even Panetta is expected to leave soon.

Petition drive underway to get medicinal marijuana on ballot

SAN MARCOS (AP) — A petition drive has been launched to get a medicinal marijuana initiative on the ballot for next May's city election at San Marcos.

The drive was started on election day by Harvey Ginsburg, a Southwest Texas State University psychology professor who was arrested on marijuana charges two years ago.

Ginsburg said he did not know how many signatures were collected on Tuesday when the drive began, but says they need 1,600 signatures to force a vote on the issue.

"We made very significant progress in getting the number of signatures we need in one day," he said. "Most of the people were incredibly positive."

The drive began with volunteers stationed at each of the 12 voting locations.

The Rev. Jim Love, pastor of Westover Baptist Church, was not happy about the volunteers attempting to get signatures at his church, one of the polling places.

Ginsburg said a confrontation developed when Love realized people were gathering up signatures on a measure to ease up on marijuana users outside the church.

"I thought we had a say in what happens on our church property, but I guess we don't," Love said. "We are a church that stands on biblical principles, and here we have a poll being taken to basically legalize marijuana right outside our front door."

Obituaries

Travis Stokes

1923-1996

Travis H. Stokes, long-time Ira area resident, died at 8:26 p.m. Wednesday, Nov. 6, in Cogdell Memorial Hospital after a sudden illness.

Aggressive drivers cause more deaths, new report reveals

ARLINGTON, Va. (AP) — Aggressive driving cases involving death or injury are on a record pace in 1996, USA Today reported today, citing a study obtained in advance.

Incidents of violent highway behavior have increased 51 percent from 1990 through 1995 and could hit a high of 18,000 if this year's pace holds, the paper said.

It cites a study by the AAA Foundation for Traffic Safety to be released this month.

"What used to be just two people screaming at each other is now one person losing it and pulling the trigger," the paper quotes security expert Lou Mizell as saying.

Mizell, who conducted the study, reviewed news and police reports to find 10,037 violent clashes since 1990 that resulted in 218 deaths and 12,610 injuries, the paper said.

The study found the weapons of choice were guns, knives, clubs and tire irons, but that pepper spray, eggs and vehicles themselves also were used in attacks.

The paper said transportation and police officials advise motorists to avoid eye contact and stay away from hostile drivers.

Mars

mapping mission should begin in March 1998 and last 687 days, or a full Martian year.

Total mission cost: $230 million, one-fourth the cost of the much more elaborate Mars Observer program.

The Mars Pathfinder will follow on Dec. 2 and, if all goes well, land on the planet on July 4, 1997, two months ahead of Global Surveyor's arrival.

Mars was a scientific hot spot long before NASA announced in August that a meteorite from the Red Planet contained supposed evidence of primitive life. That discovery and a similar one by British scientists just last week have intensified interest in all things Martian.

As for sending humans, that will have to wait until at least the second decade of the next century, Huntress said. Money will be the determining factor.

"The first step is to first understand what it is that Mars has," he said. "Where is the water and what are other resources that might exist on this planet?"

Police chief says officer's shooting wasn't justified

GRAND PRAIRIE (AP) — A police officer who shot and killed a 52-year-old mentally ill man last month was unjustified in using deadly force, his department has determined.

Officer Blake Hubbard faces discipline or dismissal by the Grand Prairie Police Department and could face criminal indictment from a Dallas County grand jury that met Wednesday to consider evidence.

Defense attorney John Read, who represents Hubbard, said he believes grand jurors have decided to indict the officer on a murder charge. An announcement on the grand jury decision is expected Friday.

Grand Prairie Police Chief Harry L. Crum said Wednesday that Hubbard was unjustified in shooting Joe Lee Calloway on Oct. 7.
