Means' Tales Against Daugherty a "Tissue Of Lies," He Admits

Star Witness Repudiates Confession and Declares Wheeler Forced Him To Make Them in First Place

By The Associated Press.

COLUMBUS, Ohio, Sept. 21. — Repudiation as a "tissue of lies" of all that he told the senate committee in its investigation of the administration of Harry M. Daugherty as attorney general has been made in a signed statement by Gaston B. Means, former department of justice agent and star witness for the Daugherty investigation, according to a copy of the statement made public at his home here today by Mr. Daugherty.

The Means statement was incorporated in a letter sent by Mr. Daugherty to John W. Davis, the democratic nominee for president, in which the former attorney general takes the presidential candidate to task for statements which Daugherty's letter says Davis has made in the course of addresses over the country "suggesting improper conduct by me in my official capacity."

The letter was dated September 10.

"Tissue of Lies"

United States Senator Burton K. Wheeler of Montana, prosecutor of the Daugherty committee, now vice-presidential candidate on the LaFollette ticket, is charged in the Means statement with having "put this tissue of lies" into the mouth of Means "and the majority of other witnesses."

"These witnesses and myself were persuaded to make these false statements," continues the Means statement, "by Senator Wheeler under threats of indictment in some cases and by promises of gain and aid in others.

"The testimony given before the Wheeler committee by Roxie Stinson, R. O. Momand, myself and the majority of the other witnesses was nothing but a tissue of lies put in the mouths of these witnesses by Senator Wheeler, primarily to confound and discredit the department of ustice and the administration," he Means statement declares.

The Means statement was made in Washington on September 11, according to Mr. Daugherty, who said it was given to him voluntarily. According to the former attorney general, Means is now in seclusion, preparing additional data concerning his former false testimony. Mr. Daugherty himself left his Columbus home today without announcing his destination.

In his letter to Mr. Davis, Mr. Daugherty wrote:

Statements Retracted.

"No lawyer, much less one of your recognized ability, would under any circumstances tolerate the character of the estimony with which the Wheeler committee burdened its records.

"One of these witnesses (Remus) shortly after your Senatrist speech in which you made reference to his testimony, published a full retraction and repudiated his testimony before the committee.

"The whole contemptible conspiracy of fraud and deceit will be laid bare in due season. When that time comes, you and the country will be astounded by the revelations, even though two of the members of the senate committee now are seeking high political places in the nation."

The former department of justice agent, in his statement, says he testified as he did before the Wheeler committee for only one reason. That was, his statement said, because on the day before he was to take the stand, friends of the then attorney general told him that "Mr. Daugherty said I could go to hell."

Prize Cow Is Family Pet In Crowell Home

Special to The Record News.

CROWELL, Sept. 21.—N. J. Roberts of this place is the owner of a registered Jersey cow, Tillie May Beauty, which has netted her owner more than $5 per month for a year, besides furnishing a family of five people with all the butter and milk they could use. Mr. Roberts himself raised the cow, which is well known all over this portion of the state. A number of cattlemen have urged Mr. Roberts to exhibit the cow at the Dallas fair and other fairs, but since the animal is a family institution, he has steadfastly refused to show her at any of the exhibitions.

The cow, at her best production periods, produces about 49 quarts of milk per day.

Third Death By Poison To Draw Official Probe

By The Associated Press.

MOUNT VERNON, Ill., Sept. 21. —The circumstances of a third death was ordered investigated today by State's Attorney Thompson, following the finding of the picture of a girl in the home of the Rev. Lawrence M. Hight, of Ina, 12 miles south of here, who is being held on a charge of murder in connection with the death of his wife, Anna, and Wilford Swettin, whose deaths are believed to have been caused by poison. Poison of the same kind has been found in the stomachs of the two.

The girl, whose picture was found in the minister's home, died, according to the story told the state authorities by the clergyman three years ago, of ptomaine poisoning. He told the state's attorney the girl lived in Centerville, Illinois, and was a high school student, but he did not remember her name. Rev. Hight, it was said, once had charge of a congregation in Centerville.

U. S. MAY PARTICIPATE.

Will Get Invitation to Act in League Arms Conference.

By The Associated Press.

GENEVA, Sept. 21.—The United States, Germany and Russia will undoubtedly be invited to participate in the work of the league of nations commission which will prepare the agenda of the international conference for the reduction of armaments to be held in June next year at Geneva. Indeed, it is frankly admitted that the conference in question, on which so many vital things hinge, could scarcely be accounted a success unless all three of these countries, which are not yet members of the league, are present—the United States for naval matters particularly and both Germany and Russia for naval, land and air armaments.

COOLIDGE SAYS FULL LIBERTIES MEAN FREEDOM

Urges Civil, Political And Religious Freedom For Nation

ADDRESSES MEETING

President Expounds Views Of Government to Church Delegation Sunday

By The Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 21. — The essence of freedom, President Coolidge told an audience of delegates to the Holy Name society convention here today, is civil, political and religious liberty, "as solemnly declared in the fundamental law of the land."

"Our constitution," he declared, "guarantees it fully, completely and adequately."

Mr. Coolidge then emphasized that the constitution also provides "no religious test shall ever be required as a qualification to any offices of public trust under the United States."

Is American Ideal.

"I do not say that we, as citizens, have always held ourselves to a proper observance of these standards toward each other," he continued, "but we have nevertheless established them and declared our duty to be obedient to them. This is an American ideal or ordered liberty under the law. It calls for rigid discipline.

The president went into a thorough expression of his theory of American government in the address. The government, he said, was the result "of an effort to establish institutions under which the people as a whole should have the largest possible advantages."

"Class and privilege were outlawed" he asserted, "freedom and opportunity were guaranteed. America is not going to abandon its principles or desert its ideals."

The principle which the Holy Name societies represents, the president declared is the "main support" of these ideals. Reverence for God is the foundation of American institutions, he said, and "unnumbered organizations of which your own is one, exist for its promotion."

Liberty Means Property.

The right of individual liberty, he went on, carries with it under the American government the right of individual property, and in this connection he declared "socialism and communism cannot be reconciled with the principles which our institutions represent."

The president kept closely to his theme without any direct reference to political questions. He mentioned the immigration law as a reminder of the "high estimation in which our opportunity are held by other peoples."

Out of obedience to the constitution and service under the government, the president declared "the people of our country have secured the greatest success that was ever before experienced in human history."

"The evidence of this," he said, "is all about us in our wealth, our educational facilities, our charities, our religious institutions and in the moral influence which we exert on the world. Most of all, it is apparent in the unexampled place which is held by the people, who toil. Our inhabitants are especially free to promote their own welfare. They are unburdened by militarism. They are not called upon to support any imperialistic designs. Every mother can rest in the assurance that her children will find here a land of devotion, prosperity and peace.

Refers to Heroes.

"The tall shaft near which we are gathered and yonder stately memorial remind us that our standards of manhood are revealed in the adoration which we pay to Washington, and Lincoln. They are unrivaled and unsurpassed. Above all else they are Americans. The institutions of our country stand justified both in reason and in experience. I am aware that they will continue to be assailed. But I know they wil clontinue to stand. We may perish but they will endure. They are founded on the Rock of Ages."

The president gave particular stress to the liberties, civil, political and religious, allowed under the constitution. A proper maintenance of these made it "important to understand the foundation upon which they were built and claims by which they justified the sovereign rights and royal estate of every American citizen."

"The foundation of our independence and our government," he continued, "rests upon our basic religious convictions. Back of the authority of our laws is the authority of the Supreme Judge of the world, to whom we still appeal for their final justification."

14-Year-Old Boy Admits Slaying Aunt With Axe

By The Associated Press.

COLUMBIA, S. C., Sept. 21.—Asbury Wessinger, 14-year-old boy, confessed to officers today that he fatally wounded his aunt, Mrs. Lina Wessinger, and seriously injured her three small children with an axe late yesterday.

The boy's confession, made to several officers, put an end to a search by hundreds of armed men for a negro who was at first reported to have made the attack. Asbury gave the alarm himself and told a story of having been frightened away from his aunt's home by a tall black negro.

Mrs. Wessinger died last night at a local hospital. The three children were found in the house, each showing axe wounds. Newman, aged six and Rufus, aged four, are in a critical condition today but it is believed that Aislee, one year old, will recover.

Candidates In Central States Over Week-End

By The Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Sept. 21.—Campaign oratory in which denunciation of opposing candidates and parties made up the principal part was unloosed over the week-end by the leading contenders for national political plums. John W. Davis, democratic nominee for president, General Dawes, republican nominee for vice-president and Senator Wheeler, vice-presidential nominee on the independent ticket all spoke before large audiences in various parts of the central states.

Wheeler Vitriolic.

Perhaps the most vigorous address was that delivered in Chicago last night by Senator Wheeler, in which he roundly assailed General Dawes. The connection of the latter with the Lorimer bank failure and his "minute men organization," claimed to be a threat against organized labor, came in for especial rebuke.

At South Bend, Ind., Mr. Davis was met enthusiastically and challenged the republican party's record for the past four years. He declared that the country recently had been traveling the road of privilege, a road leading to high tariff behind which the favored few might prosper at the expense of the many, and pledged a change if he were elected.

Dawes on Road.

Speeding across Iowa and Illinois, Charles G. Dawes gave a number of addresses, the principal ones being at Galena, Ill., and Dubuque, Iowa. He devoted much of his time to the constitution, although he rapped his opponents as "political pee wits" and "issue straddling demagogues."

5 Men Trapped By Explosion In Utah Coal Mine

By The Associated Press.

SALT LAKE CITY, Utah, Sept. 21.—Five men are reported to be entombed in the Rains mine of the Carbon Fuel company, at Rains, near Castlegate, about 100 miles south of here, as the result of an explosion at 6 o'clock tonight.

Although more than 200 men are employed in the mine, only five drill men, who were cutting out work for Monday were on shift when the explosion occurred, according to meagre reports from the mine.

The explosion is said to have occurred in the second left entryway which caved in, leaving the main way and main entry clear.

Rescue crew from five camps and Spring canyon, in which the mine is situated, are being sent to the scene.

It is expected the entombed men will be reached before 9 o'clock unless gas or other cave-ins hamper the work.

FLIERS REACH TUCSON, ARIZ., SUNDAY NOON

Planes Make Uneventful Hop From El Paso On Way To Coast

SAN DIEGO NEXT STOP

Airmen Given Blankets And Dinner by Admiring Arizona Crowds

By The Associated Press.

TUCSON, Ariz., Sept. 21.—Uncle Sam's round-the-world fliers completed another lap in their long journey today, landing at the Tucson aviation field at 1:18 o'clock, mountain time, after an uneventful flight from El Paso.

Thousands of persons were massed around the field when the big planes, flying in close triangular formation, appeared over the rugged mountains, circled twice, then landed at two-minute intervals.

Tucson will no doubt be remembered by the world fliers as one place where they were not stormed by enthusiastic crowds when they clambered from their machines.

Crowd Held Back

A guard of U. S. cavalry, assisted by national guardsmen and sheriff's deputies kept the crowd at a such a distance from the planes that the pilots and their mechanics had the field practically to themselves. They taxied their planes into position, stepped from them and then walked to a point where the guards were keeping even official committee away from the ropes.

A varied program awaited them here. Immediately after leaving the fields they were guests at a luncheon given by local reserve companies of fliers. During the afternoon the fliers visited the United States veterans bureau hospital here. A public reception was held for them in a local hotel. Later the fliers and mechanics devoted an hour to going over their planes.

Presented With Blankets

This evening the fliers were presented with blankets at a public meeting held at the University of Arizona, the gifts of various Arizona cities.

Governor G. W. P. Hunt, who had planned to welcome the fliers to Arizona, suffered an acute attack of appendicitis in Phoenix yesterday. In his place he sent Secretary H. S. McClusky and George E. Berie, of the state highway department.

Lieut. C. R. Moffatt, advance man, said the fliers would probably be unable to accept the invitation of Phoenix to fly over that city, the former home of the late Frankie Lake, American world war ace, on their trip to San Diego tomorrow.

Wales Leaves For Canada Ranch Praising Yankee Hospitality

By The Associated Press.

SYOSETT, N. Y., Sept. 21.—The Prince of Wales, accompanied by his staff, left his vacation home here tonight to board a special train which will take him direct to his ranch in the province of Alberta, Canada.

Just before boarding his train, the prince issued the following statement:

"I am leaving the United States tonight with very real regret; this is not only the end of a thoroughly enjoyable three weeks, which I shall never forget, but it also involves saying good-bye to a host of friends, who, ever since I landed in their midst, have done everything in their power to make me welcome. Your president and all his fellow citizens with whom I have come in contact, have united in offering me the right hand of good fellowship, very many others, whom I have never met, have taken the trouble to write to me kind words which have touched me deeply.

"It has not been possible for me to answer such letters as fully as I should wish, but I am glad to have this chance of telling the writers collectively how I value their good wishes. Many of them have sent me such cordial invitations to districts of the United States which I have not yet seen, but I hope more than ever it may be possible me some day, when time and circumstances permit, to make an extensive tour of this great country.

The route of the prince's special train was altered again today so that it travelled to Springfield, Mass. It was due in that city at 1:40 o'clock Monday morning whence it was to be routed to White Waver Junction, Vermont, to St. John's, Que.

The prince's train is due to arrive at Calgary, Alberta, at 8 p. m. Thursday. The only stop at which the party is expected to leave the train will be that in Winnipeg, Wednesday. From Calgary the party will motor to High River, 39 miles awa

Hamon's Widow and "Other Woman" On Tortuous Love Shoals Again

By an ironical coincidence, both Mrs. George Hamon Rohrer (left), widow of Jake Hamon, slain Oklahoma oil magnate and political boss, and Hamon's slayer, Clara Smith Hamon Gorman (right) are airing their latest love troubles at the same time. Mrs. Rohrer has just obtained a divorce for the second time from Rohrer, Chicago art collector, charging cruelty. The other woman, Clara Smith, charges the same thing, cruelty, in her suit against Gorman, film director.

Davis Back In East Confident of Heavy Demo Vote In Fall

Declares Country Is Ready To Turn from Discredited Republican Administration

By The Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Sept. 21.—Returning here tonight from a five thousand mile campaign through the west, John W. Davis, the democratic presidential nominee, declared that "all signs point to a sweeping democratic victory in the coming election."

"I return to the east confident of success," he said, "privilege has won its last battle. We are laying our cause before the American people and they are responding nobly.

Silent Vote to Count.

Mr. Davis said that everywhere he went in the west all those with whom he talked brought the same message—"that the great silent vote, that vote which has turned every election in the past when the American people came to a cross road, has made up its mind this year to turn to the democratic party as the only possible avenue of relief."

"The people fully realize," he said, "that the choice lies only between continuing the present discredited republican regime or installing the democratic administration in its stead."

Asserting that in all the states he had visited—West Virginia, Indiana Illinois, Wyoming, Iowa, Nebraska Colorado, Kansas and Missouri—he had found the democratic party installed and undivided. Mr. Davis said its members were working together in an "absolute unity of purpose and with an interest I have never seen surpassed in any campaign.

Same Story Everywhere.

"Everywhere that I have been I have heard the same story," he added "and it has come to me from men regardless of previous party affiliation—it is that of dissatisfaction with the service rendered—or rather denied, by the government during the last three and a half years.

"The farmer resents the deception that was attempted by the republican party in placing an utterly artificial tariff duty on his products; he resents the artificial increase in the price of all the things he buys; and he is convinced that there is no sincerity on the part of the republican party to take any steps in his interest.

"The laboring man is no longer deceived by the cry of republican prosperity and feels keenly the rising cost of living.

Tea Pot Ranges.

"The exposures of corruption in Washington made a far deeper impression on the public mind and the moral sense of the country than the orders of the republican party are willing to admit. They have not been forgotten and will not be forgiven.

"I found, moreover, that in the middlewest—contrary to the impression which prevails in some quarters—the people were deeply interested in the foreign policy of the government and entirely out of sympathy with the timid and evasive course which the present administration has pursued."

Griffin Trial Now Entering Final Stages

Special to The Record News.

GRAHAM, Sept. 21.—With the defendant himself out of the picture so far as being a witness is concerned, the trial of Herbert Griffin, confessed slayer of Hugh Reilly, Jr., enters tomorrow morning on its closing stages. There still remains considerable testimony, both direct and rebuttal, but with Griffin himself and the principal witnesses already examined, it is not expected that the concluding stories to be heard from the witness stand will be as important as have those already presented.

Mrs. Griffin to Testify

Mrs. Griffin, wife of the defendant, is scheduled to face the jury Monday morning when court is convened by Judge H. R. Wilson. The remaining defense witnesses will follow her, rebuttal testimony will then be presented and arguments of counsel given. A verdict, probably will not be reached until late in the week.

The high light of the trial thus far came Saturday when Griffin himself took the stand in his own defense and narrated those events leading up to the meeting of himself and Reilly early one summer afternoon—a meeting which ended with Reilly stretched on the ground, mortally wounded, and Griffin fleeing from the scene in search of assistance. He related in detail the dispute over the fence that was being put up between ranches owned by the two men and told of the conversation he and Reilly had had relative to the boundary lines.

He was on the stand most of the day and, after direct examination at the hands of his own attorneys underwent a greulling cross-examination from state's counsel.

BRECKENRIDGE, Sept. 21.—More than 200 citizens of Breckenridge are homeless tonight and being cared for by the Red Cross and Salvation Army as a result of a cloudburst here at noon today which caused Gonzales creek to go over its banks and inundate the lower portions of the city.

COTTON VARIES IN LAST WEEK'S TRADE

By The Associated Press.

NEW ORLEANS, Sept. 21.—The cotton market during the past week has been a two-sided affair, with frequent and wide fluctuations with ample opportunities for trading on both sides of the account. In the early days of the week the general trend of prices was downward due to the wave of selling which followed the last government report, issued September 8, and which did not finally culminate until Tuesday, when December contracts traded as low as 20.82, or 106 points below the closing level at the end of the preceding week.

The selling early in the week was both speculative and hedge selling. The placing of hedges is commoner in large volume at this period of the season when the crop is moving freely and large sales are daily reported by southern markets for spot cotton.

Domestic Trouble Causes Shooting Of Man At Quanah

Special to The Record News.

QUANAH, Texas, Sept. 20.—H. E. Henry of Altus, Oklahoma, is in the Ball sanitarium seriously wounded as a result of a shooting north of Quanah on the Texas side of the toll bridge across Red River late Saturday night, and Bill O'Hare of this city is at liberty on a $2,500 bond, under charge of assault with attempt to murder.

The altercation is said to have followed a pursuit of Henry and O'Hare's wife by O'Hare from Quanah north to the river where O'Hare succeeded in reaching the two and getting a shot at Henry. O'Hare had only left his wife for a few minutes when he saw Henry enter her small car and drive off, crossing into Oklahoma, according to reports made of the affair. He followed in a service car. When Mrs. O'Hare saw her husband in the waiting car she jumped and escaped the shot, which entered Henry's right breast and came out below his left shoulder blade.

Henry was brought to town and taken to the hospital, and O'Hare arrested. His bond was fixed at $2,500.

O'Hare and his wife have had trouble before, it is said. About three years ago he was arrested at Electra for shooting at another, presumably over domestic troubles.

$2,000,000 To Be Turned Back By Institutions

By The Associated Press.

AUSTIN, Texas, Sept. 21.—Unexpended balances of over $2,000,000 in appropriations of state departments and institutions are to be returned to the treasury automatically, according to Comptroller Lon A. Smith. Mr. Smith's department has just completed a report on the amount which each department has spent in the last two years and the amount remaining unexpended on September 1.

The various state departments have a total unexpended balance of $306,194; the eleemosynary institutions, $938,968; educational institutions, $754,468; judiciary, $34,479; miscellaneous appropriations, $727,648.

He Economizes.

Comptroller Smith's own department is returning to the treasury about $10,000 out of a biennial appropriation of $136,467, a result which he said was due to rigid economy.

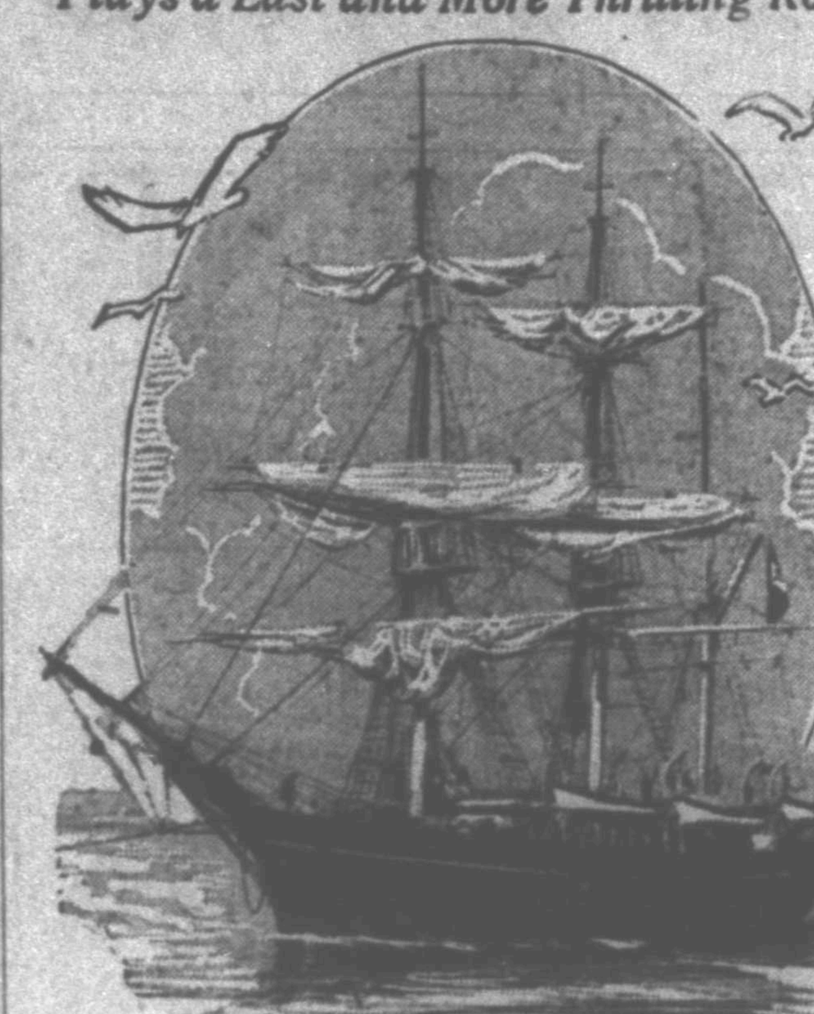

Governor Neff has spent only about half of his office appropriation of $15,286, according to the comptroller's report. In addition $5,000 was given for maintenance of the governor's mansion and grounds of which $3,927 has been expended.

The largest unexpended appropriation is that of the reclamation department, which has used only $26,550 of an appropriation of $130,000.

The adjutant general has the largest appropriation of the state departments. Out of his appropriation of $339,480, he has expended $298,543. The live stock sanitary commission comes next with an appropriation of $264,500 of which $230,346 has been expended. The board of control will return about $18,000 out of an appropriation of $170,810. The attorney general has saved about $10,000 out of an appropriation of $94,280. The banking department was given $177,432 and has expended $163,220. The health department returns about $10,000 out of an appropriation of $156,467. Of an appropriation of $200,000, the board of water engineers has expended $192,938.

Old Whaling Vessel Quits Films, But Plays a Last and More Thrilling Role

A story more melodramatic than any of the many in which it figured in a long period in the movies, developed when the whaler "Wanderer" set out from New Bedford, Mass., on a final whaling trip. It is now pounding to pieces on ledges outside of Vineyard Sound, Mass., and the crew, which abandoned it, cannot be found.

Texas Rangers' First History Being Written

By The Associated Press.

AUSTIN, Texas, Sept. 21.—Living as a commissioned state ranger on the frontiers of Texas, Prof. W. P. Webb, adjunct professor of history at the University of Texas, has gathered data for the first complete history of the Texas ranger force. He has returned to the university to put the finishing touches on his work, a contract for which has been signed with an eastern publishing house.

On the Mexican border is to be found the true Texas ranger in all his original character and atmosphere, said Professor Webb.

Almost As Wild.

"The Rio Grande is just as much the frontier today as were other sections of the state in Indian days," he explained. "The life of the rangers there along the border is as interesting as it was in the old day and almost as wild in a way. It is on the southern border that the ranger retains his original nature, now known to most persons only in fiction. He still is a frontiersman of the border.

"The Texas ranger force, organized in 1836 is the oldest state police force in the United States, ranking in length of service with the Canadian mounted police. I first became interested in writing the history of Texas rangers several years ago when an investigation into the ranger force was started. I found that no complete history of this romantic and courageous force of men had ever been written. As a final touch to the mass of material already collected, I went down to the border to live for a brief space the life of the ranger."

The adjutant general's department arranged for Mr. Webb to live with the rangers on the trip, thus enabling him to gather at first hand much new data.

As the number of pensioners has decreased, the pension, which is collected by a five-cent state law, increases, it having grown from $22 to $35 during the administration of Comptroller Smith.

WANTS TO WIN CUP

Trophy To Be Awarded State Getting Out Heaviest Vote In Fall.

By The Associated Press.

AUSTIN, Sept. 21.—"The loving cup for Texas," is the latest slogan of the Texas League of Women Voters, according to the president, Mrs. Helen Moore of Texas City.

The cup of sterling silver is to be awarded by the national board at the end of the campaign "to get out the vote." The recipient will be the state league which shows by official report the largest percentage of increase in the vote of 1924 over that cast in 1920, according to Mrs. Moore.

"The object of the campaign is to increase the number of voters 25 per cent," she stated. "In other words, it is a crusade to restore majority rule in the country.

MONEY AT WORK

Brief but Important Lessons in Finance, Markets, Stocks, Bonds and Investments.

Training and instructing new employees is expensive.

* * *

Experienced employees are of more values than new ones because new workmen must be trained. During the period of instruction new employees do not produce at a normal rate, and, furthermore, the time of others is devoted to their instruction. In addition to the amount produced, old employees are more dependable, the quality of work is generally superior, and they fit better in the organization.

Labor turnover is a borrowed term to describe ratio between the number of employees hired and the average number of employees. As stock turnover describes the relation between sales and the amount of stock carried, so labor turnover is applied to personnel.

Reduced labor turnover means lowered costs. Employees contented with their surroundings, pay and supervision are generally efficient. Money spent to keep employees contented is wisely expended; otherwise, it will have to be spent training new employees who may leave as soon as they become really useful.

STATE SCHOOL FUNDS SENT OUT BY MARRS

Special to The Record News.

AUSTIN, Sept. 21—Superintendent of Education S. M. N. Marrs Saturday completed sending out the $2,625,000 distributed as a $2 per capita apportionment to schools, to all counties and districts which have completed the required steps to get their money. Only 244 independent districts out of the 900 in the state had complied with all regulations and were ready to receive their first apportionment during the first month of the school year, Superintendent Marrs announced. Eleven county superintendents have not filed last year's treasurer's statements, he said; and 37 districts have not sent in these required reports.

Correct this sentence: "He is unusually bright for his age," said the mother.

Big Family In State House If Butte Wins Out

By The Associated Press.

AUSTIN, Texas, Sept. 21. — The Texas white house will see one of the largest families it has ever housed if Dr. George C. Butte, republican nominee, is elected governor of Texas.

Dr. and Mrs. Butte have five children, one of them, George M. Butte, the second child, will not be able to enter the governor's mansion at the beginning of the term should his father be elected, as he is now a student at Pembroke college, Oxford, England.

Felix L. Butte, 23, the oldest child, is a student in the medical college of the University of Texas at Galveston. Woodfin L. Butte, 15, is a sophomore in the University of Texas. The two youngest children are girls, Catherine and Pauline, aged 11 and seven. They are attending Austin public schools.

Music and intellectual pursuits hold the major interest of the family. Dr. Butte himself plays the piano and cello, while all the other members of the family, including the young girls, play the piano. Woodfin, the youngest son, is an expert on the clarinet and George and Felix play the violin.

HE'S PLAIN GEORGE DESPITE HIS TITLES

By The Associated Press.

AUSTIN, Texas, Sept. 21.—"Call me George," said Dr. George C. Butte, republican candidate for governor, in explaining that he had dropped the academic title of "doctor" now that he has severed his official connection with the University of Texas. He explained he had received his various titles as follows:

"Doctor of laws — granted many years ago by Heidelberg university and earned by three years work in legal research in German and French universities.

"Dean—A distinction conferred by the board of regents of the University of Texas upon the retirement of Judge John C. Townes from that position as head of the law school two years ago.

"Major—Not honorary but earned. I volunteered for service in the army during the world war and was commissioned captain. In six months I was promoted to the rank of major."

TROOPS AT CONVENTION.

Mineral Wells Arranging Unique Display for C. of C. Meeting.

MINERAL WELLS, Texas, Sept. 21.—The Mineral Wells Chamber of Commerce is planning to have four troops of the Texas National Guard cavalry, including the cavalry band and medical detachment and two batteries of field artillery at Mineral Wells for the seventh annual convention of the West Texas Chamber of Commerce, to be held here next May.

These troops are stationed at Fort Worth, Dallas, Mineral Wells, Weatherford, and Jacksboro. Ray Leeman, manager of the local Chamber of Commerce, has had a conference with Lloyd E. Hill, and Col. Hill is very much pleased with the plan. Most of these troops could go to Mineral Wells overland.

SHE LENDS AID TO STATE LEGISLATORS

By The Associated Press.

AUSTIN, Texas, Sept. 21.—Information and material on various legislative questions, bills and other matters of interest to Texas solons are now being furnished newly elected members of the thirty-ninth legislature by the legislative reference division of the state library, according to Miss Octavia F. Rogan, legislative reference librarian.

The purpose of the legislature reference division of the state library, which was created in 1909, is to render the day's work of the legislator less arduous and to expedite legislation by furnishing information on subjects under consideration, Miss Rogan said.

Legislators may use this library at any time, whether they are at their homes or in Austin, much of the work being done through the mail.

What is the Great Secret of

KARNAK

—its power to make you feel well again?

What is the great secret of Karnak? What is it that gives this famous remedy of the noted M. Pierre Andre, the power to make so many suffering people well and happy again—to bring back the joy of splendid health to those who have been struggling hopelessly to provide for the family when they neither feel nor look equal to the task?

This wonderful secret is really contained in one rare herb, which, as M. Andre says, makes Karnak the greatest medicine the world has ever known and enables it to bring relief never before accomplished!

For years scientists knew and recognized eight of the valuable ingredients contained in Karnak for their remarkable soothing and healing effect on the diseased stomach, liver and kidneys, but it remained for M. Andre to blend three medicinal properties with an additional rare, health-building herb. As a result Karnak contains every root, bark and herb that is essential in restoring the health, strength and energy of youth.

Is there any wonder that local people, as well as thousands throughout the country, are daily reporting that all their distressing symptoms of indigestion, dyspepsia, stomach, liver and kidney disorders quickly disappear after taking Karnak and they feel fine and fit again?

Try this great medicine yourself! Notice the quick difference in the way you eat, sleep, look and feel—the remarkable improvement in your health, strength and energy. The cost is small and you will be completely satisfied; otherwise the Karnak agent will refund your money without even questioning you.

Karnak is sold in Wichita Falls by the Ben. F. Smith Drug Co., and in Burkburnett by the Burkburnett Pharmacy.—Adv.

Kemp Library Is One of 4 Similar Gifts in State

By The Associated Press.

AUSTIN, Texas, Sept. 21.—Texas has six county free libraries, 31 Carnegie library buildings, including branches, and four others that were gifts of individuals, according to a bulletin of the state library association. A fifth gift will be available next January.

The four gifts are the Rosenberg library at Galveston, Gates Memorial at Port Arthur, Nicholas P. Sims at Waxahachie and the Kemp public library at Wichita Falls.

The Sims library, like the Rosenberg library, is an endowed institution. Nicholas P. Sims, the founder, who died in 1920, left about $65,000 to found and maintain it. The building alone cost $28,000.

The Gates Memorial library was given to the people of Port Arthur by Mrs. Dellora Gates in memory of her husband, John W. Gates, and of her son. The building cost $100,000. The city maintains it.

The Kemp library building is the proceeds of a gift of $30,000 made by John A. Kemp, Wichita Falls banker. It is maintained by city tax funds.

The fifth gift is that of the late Captain W. C. Tyrrell who purchased a church, which was too small for its congregation, for $70,000 and deeded it to the city of Beaumont to be remodeled for library purposes.

HORN RIMS IN ENGLAND

Britishers Assume Yankee Ways With Big Spectacles.

By The Associated Press.

LONDON, Sept. 21.—The British are beginning to take up horn-rimmed spectacles after turning up their noses at them for years. Until recently anyone seen wearing such spectacles along the pavements of London was taken instantly to be an American, unless there was overwhelming evidence to the contrary.

Indeed no cartoonist in Britain, or on the Continent either for that matter, could bring himself to draw a caricature of the homo Americano without encasing half the face in a pair of "those dreadful American spectacles" adding a corpulent cigar and a straw hat with jagged edges.

Yet, walking along the Strand for five minutes the other night a stroller counted a dozen pairs of eyes looking out from behind the berated horn-rimmed spectacles and one of these twelve strollers was an American. Anyone who knows the various home grown accents when he hears them could tell that all were subjects of his majesty, George V.

Thus is the Americanization — which some here insist is the vulgarization—of England carried forward another step, cocktails, ice cream, Hollywood movies and even chewing gum have found a place in London—not easily but sowly and surely and now comes the horn-rim.

Producing Texas Cotton Crop To Cost 26c Per Lb.

By the Associated Press.

AUSTIN, Texas, Sept. 21. — The cost of producing the Texas cotton crop this year is about 26 cents a pound on an estimated production of 4,125,000 bales, according to a statement published today by George B. Terrell, commissioner of agriculture. The estimate of the cost is conservative, Mr. Terrell said, and the actual cost probably will run above this when full reports are available.

The attempt to gather reports on the cost of producing cotton is somewhat of an innovation as the federal government attempted to estimate costs only one year and other states have not yet attempted it, Mr. Terrell said.

The figure of 26 cents was arrived at after digesting reports from 103 counties.

The price of cotton should advance as soon as actual production is known because the federal government has overestimated the crop for the last three years, Mr. Terrell said.

Cotton Best In Northern Parts

By The Associated Press.

AUSTIN, Texas, Sept. 21.—Better cotton in west and northwest Texas than in other sections of the state is looked for, it was announced today by R. L. Robinson, dirt farmer and practical cotton grower who has been investigating conditions in this section of the state as a representative of the state labor department. The yield will be above the average, Mr. Robinson's report states. Cotton pickers in this section of the state are receiving $1.50 per 100 pounds with accommodations furnished.

Mr. Robinson through conferences with county agents and officers of farm organizations, commercial clubs and through personal observation, was enabled to make a definite estimate of the needs of each county visited and will make an effort to supply needs through the labor department's free employment service, State Labor Commissioner Joseph S. Myers said.

Texas Progresses In Market Ass'n

Special to The Record News.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 21.—Texas is one of the states which has shown a greater increase in co-operative marketing of farm products than states in many other sections. A statement of the federal department of agriculture made today is to the effect that the southern states have shown greater growth in the matter of co-operative marketing since 1915 than other states where this system has been established longer. The large volume of business transacted by the cotton, rice and tobacco associations is given as explanation of this rapid growth.

184 Associations.

At this time there are 184 co-operative marketing associations in Texas, which have reported to the federal department of agriculture. It is probable there are others which have not reported, but no very large number.

In the year 1922, the last for which figures have been obtained, these associations did a volume of business amounting to $12,304,000. This is exclusive of the cotton associations which are the largest of all which have been organized in Texas.

43 In Cotton.

Of the co-operative associations operating in the state and reporting to Washington, 43 deal in cotton; 8 in dairy products; 2 in forage crops; 54 in fruits and vegetables; 17 in grains; 4 in livestock; 2 in nuts; 31 in miscellaneous buying, and there are 10 co-operative stores.

TEXAS IN LINE FOR POLITICAL ROW UNTIL NOV.

Dr. Butte and His Supporters To Make Heroic Fight For Governor

By HUGH NUGENT FITZGERALD
Record News Staff.

Grand old Texas, politically speaking, is to be given a mild shaking until the November days come if the republican leaders and campaigners have their bearings and they think they have. Dr. George C. Butte, a very elegant gentleman who smokes a pipe face upward and not downward, is the republican nominee for governor. He is going to make a speaking campaign that will carry him to every section of the state, and he hopes to make a most creditable showing on election day.

Two years ago the republican nominees received less than one hundred thousand votes. This year they are hoping to poll a hundred and seventy-five thousand votes for their candidate for governor. This is what they say in private conference. When it comes to public consumption in the newspapers they are hopeful, they say, of placing a republican in the office of governor as the successor of Pat Morris Neff.

Creager In It.

Colonel Creager and Col. Talbot and their lieutenants will direct the campaign from the city of Dallas. They say they are going to re-elect Harry M. Wurzbach to congress and they hope to win two additional congressional districts and send Julius Real to the state senate from the San Antonio district.

Two years ago and four years ago the black and tan republicans did not take kindly to the Creager or lily white republicans. Now the leaders of the dominant faction say that the nomination of Dr. Butte should be particularly soothing to the so-called black and tans as Dr. Butte is anti-klan and has been anti-klan ever since the invisible organization made its appearance under the skies of Texas.

Col. Thomas B. Love in the remote past democratic national committeeman, has bolted the nomination of Mrs. Miriam A. Ferguson. He has returned from the Davis mountains, he has found himself, so to speak, he is supporting Dr. Butte for governor and he is telling those who are in sympathy with him that Dr. Butte will defeat Mrs. Ferguson in the November election. Colonel Love predicted the nomination of William Gibbs McAdoo by the Madison Square Garden convention. McAdoo was cast out. Colonel Love predicted the nomination of Judge Felix D. Robertson by a majority of 100,000 in the run-off election. Robertson was cast out by a majority of 100,000. Now the colonel in his famous role of political prophet predicts the defeat of Mrs. Miriam A. Ferguson by what he calls a handsome majority.

Minus Hanger Et Al.

His old allies William A. Hanger, Judge Cato Sells and Judge John Mathias are not with him in the final campaign. Senator Hanger and the former Indian commissioner are giving their unqualified support to Mrs. Ferguson while Judge Mathias was one of the first to board the Ferguson band wagon and to pledge support to the run-off nominees of the democratic party.

"Wild Bill" McLean of Fort Worth who has been the attorney for Senator Earle B. Mayfield for two years or more in the numerous election contests and injunction proceedings of the latter, is another Mrs. Ferguson booster with the explanation that he takes his democracy straight and always supports democratic nominees.

In the McKinley-Bryan campaign in 1896 the city of Dallas gave McKinley a majority. Now the backers of Butte are hoping that the city of Dallas will give the law professor a majority in November.

Robbins Circus Coming in From Kansas Friday

The unloading of the Robbins Brothers circus on next Friday upon the Ft. Worth & Denver railway tracks will be a very interesting sight. It is one of the remarkable exhibitions of the facility with which an organization of men enables the management to erect a complete tented city, housing five hundred employees and furnishing accommodations for an audience of ten thousand or more.

The circus uses tractors and a herd of working elephants in unloading. The other animals are either led or driven in their cages to the grounds, while a complete hotel is put up for the workers. The "cook house" of a circus is a remarkable institution, to say nothing of the work of feeding the animals of the field and forest.

The Robbins train of cars will arrive shortly after six o'clock in the morning and immediately the process of unloading will take place.

According to reports, cotton was not damaged to any great extent. This rain will be good for those who have planted small grain. Some who have sown wheat report a good stand. All the lakes and tanks were filled to overflowing. This is the first time that one rain has filled the lakes around Rule in a number of years. From reports over the country the rain seems to be general.

State Press In Dallas News O.K.'s Views Held By Record News Editor

A recent editorial in The Record News in which some comment was made on "sex stuff" has come to the attention of S. P., otherwise known as State Press in the Dallas News. S. P. comments thusly:

The Cavewoman

Wichita Falls Record News: Yale university archeologists, digging for the Cromagnon prehistoric man in France, have uncovered the skeleton of a giant caveman, with a flint knife sticking in his ribs. Whereupon it is promptly announced that the giant probably got the knife in a fight over a woman. Thus it goes, "sex stuff" is everything. Old Cromagnon's fight may have been over a plug of tobacco, an old-fashioned glass of beer, or any one of a dozen other things equally as good. But, to get the "thrill," you have to put a woman in the case.

The reason is that from time immemorial, perhaps anterior to that, there have been women to contend with and over. If the women could be gotten rid of for a generation or two, the men might get along with one another better. Archeologists, and their cousins, the geologists, have discovered that the caveman had his domestic difficulties just as the Long Island millionaires of today have. The caveman was not necessarily a great hulking fellow with brutal strength and a head like a wedge. Sometimes he was a runty little rascal, with muscles like pansy roots and courage like a canary bird's. In that case he didn't drag his wife around by the hair, as his wife stunned him with her cavewoman fist and pitched him outside to regain consciousness in the rain. He didn't drag her to his cave, from her father's grotto, in the first place. More likely she sneaked up while he was fishing for topwaters in a sequestered stream and proposed to him with a rock in her hand. The women of antiquity were different. It is a fact indeed that only after the invention of etiquette did men become the heads of their houses. When it became a sign of ill-breeding for a woman to assault and batter her husband the practice abated. Today it is unocommon for the wife to beat her husband, not that she doesn't want to or that she ought not to, but that the neighbors would say to one another that she was not their social equal. A woman can stand a lot of things, but she can't stand to be rated as ignorant of good manners. This characteristic foible in woman's nature saves many a married man from a home-made thrashing.

Yankee Movies To Invade Paris

By The Associated Press.

PARIS, Sept. 21.—Paris is to have an American movie theatre such as the old world has not yet seen, Jules Mastbaum, who was the Prince of Wales partner at baccarat at Deauville recently without for a long time knowing who the young man was, said just before he sailed aboard the steamer Majestic the other day that he and his English and French associates have completed the financial arrangements and would soon begin the construction of a huge motion picture theatre to seat about 3,000 persons.

An American architect has just reached here after a trip through the United States to get ideas and is working on plans for the theatre, which will have smoking and lounge rooms, broad aisles, comfortable seats and the newest equipment which ought to startle Paris, for war impoverished Europe has had no time or money to build anything in the movie line that compares with the picture houses of Los Angeles, San Francisco, New York, Philadelphia and other American cities.

A good deal of American money will go into the project. Mastbaum has associated with him Captain Benjamin Hicks, who built the Plaza and Carlton theatres in London and Benjamin Blumenthal, who operates many continental theatres, while in addition a group of Frenchmen are interested.

PUG IN GRAND OPERA.

London Producer to Have Plenty Of Action on Stage Soon.

By The Associated Press.

LONDON, Sept. 21.—Londoners who have just finished reading a novel by Queen Marie of Rumania, syndicated in the daily newspapers and who have grown accustomed to hearing of motion picture offers to ex-royalties sojourning in England after revolutions have toppled them from their thrones, will presently have a new thrill.

A prize fighter has been engaged to aid in staging grand opera. The producer of an operatic piece in which a fight is done to music found himself in difficulties in trying to dovetail the action which the score, it being essential with the music.

Finally, after a dramatic critic at the performance found fault with the manner in which the Welch tenor middleweight landed a straight left on the jaw of the Australian bass heavyweight, the producer called in a professional fighter. He already reports great progress with the opera singer-fighter and promises that the next performance will be a knockout.

By The Associated Press.

PARIS, Sept. 21.—The American cowboys and cowgirls who as members of a rodeo troupe have been displaying their skill at the Buffalo velodrome, near Paris, for the past ten days, have proved a great success, both from financial and other viewpoints. The huge velodrome was packed every day at both matinee and evening performances and the receipts were over 2,000,000 francs, in which the performers shared with 25 per cent of the gross receipts after the million mark was reached.

CASTLE IS FOR SALE

Original Home of Saxon Kings To Go On Block Near Berlin

By The Associated Press.

BERLIN, Sept. 21.—The original home of the Saxon kings, Wettin castle, on the Saale river, is about to go under the hammer after being the residence of royalty since the eleventh century. King Frederick August III and his family surrendered claim to the property under agreement with Saxony, after the establishment of a republic.

Two bidders are seeking the historic palace which stands on a high hill overlooking the village of Wettin. One is the German Warriors association, which desires to convert the palace into a home for war invalids, and the other, Wettin village, which wants the building for a school house.

YOUNG VIOLINIST RETURNS

Toscha Seidel In Berlin After Tour Through Australia.

By The Associated Press.

BERLIN, Sept. 21.—Toscha Seidel, the young violinst, well known in America, who has just returned from a tour of Australia, New Zealand and the South Sea Islands, won such favor in one of the smaller islands by his music that he had great difficulty in rejecting the swarthy daughter of a lamented king and refusing to become the ruler of the tribesmen, who regarded him as a miracle worker.

Seidel was the first violinist ever to play for the tribe and was regarded as a messenger direct from heaven. The tribe showered him with gifts of spears, furs, loin cloths and war trophies.

WORLD'S LARGEST DIAMONDS NOW HELD IN LONDON

By The Associated Press.

LONDON, Sept. 21.—London can lay claim at present to holding the three largest cut diamonds in the world. Besides the amous Cullinan stones in the British state regalia—one in the Sceptre and the other in King George's crown—the celebrated Tata Jubilee diamond is occasionally seen here these days at exceptionally brilliant assemblies.

This jewel is owned by Sir Dorabji Tata, Indian captain of industry, one of the richest men in the world. The stone was found by a Kaffir at the Jagersfontein mine, Orange river colony, thirty years ago. In the rough state is weighed 971 1-2 carats, but, like the Cullinan stones owing to a flaw it had to be cut in two—the largest portion forming in perfect brilliant weighing 239 carats which Lady Tate, now on a visit here, sometimes wears.

The Tata diamond was exhibited at the Paris exhibition in 1900, when a price of 300,000 pounds was placed on it. Its value has steadily enhanced since then, and some experts declare it the most beautiful diamond that ever left the cutter's hands.

Rumor has it that negotiations are afoot for its sale to an American, in which event, considering its steady increase in value, it will in all probability fetch the largest sum ever paid for a precious stone.

WOOLENS IN BIG DEMAND.

Serges Prove Popular for Dress Along Paris Boulevards.

By The Associated Press.

PARIS, Sept. 21.—Kashai supple serge in fine wools is the material most in demand for women's fall clothing. For outdoor wear there is a new warm woolen cloth resembling in appearance Ottoman silk, with its thick rib and same pattern as is obtainable in Lyons silk. Another fine material is wool-backed velvet with a handsome silvery sheen, made in rich shades of almond, green, deep pink, chestnut and gray.

Although all these materials are costly in the extreme, the demand for them is so extensive that manufacturers' stocks are already exhausted, with the season hardly begun, ah dtailors and dressmakers cannot get any guarantee of delivery.

U. S. REPORT HURTS COTTON.

Senator Declares Estimates Put Price of Staple Down.

By The Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 21.—Complaint has been made to the department of agriculture that its report of cotton crop estimates has unjustly depressed the market, Senator Harris, democrat, Georgia, announced today.

"Cotton has dropped $40 a bale without any reason," he said. "In the state of Georgia, the crop deterioration was twice as great as the department's report and I have reason to believe that this condition exists throughout the belt.

"Such practices on the part of speculators," he declared, "will force the passage at the next session of congress of the Caraway bill, which would make it a penal offense to trade on the exchange in cotton futures without the actual delivery of cotton."

Monarchist Club In Berlin Draws Round of Protests

By The Associated Press.

BERLIN, Sept. 21.—The announcement of the organization of a woman's society called Queen Louise Circle, the purpose of which are the same as those of the men's "Steel Helmets" organization, has raised many protests in liberal newspapers here.

The "Steel Helmets" are nationalists, pledged to support monarchical ideals and a militaristic regime. The "Queen Louise Circle" is seeking the same ends. It already has several local circles in Berlin and other large cities, and is working to extend the society throughout Germany.

Emmi Riese, in an article in the Vossische Zeitung, says Germans are already too widely split by various political organizations and urges women to avoid the mistakes that the men made in forming rival groups and fostering a war-like spirit. She says that German mothers should not join organizations which encourage their children to be militant and pleads for the political effort of the women to oppose this spirit, and to promulgate the concept that all men and women are brothers and sisters, and should live in peace.

Princess Shocks Loyal Subjects

By The Associated Press.

BERLIN, Sept. 21.—Princess Hermine, wife of former emperor William although registered in Bdde-Baden as Kaiserin, is shocking society in that historic resort by her democracy. She has several times gone to the homes of Joseph Schwartz and other famous musicians and listened to them sing or play, to the horror of the survivors of the old regime, who insist she should "command" those artists to visit her.

In a recent interview, the princess displayed great interest in the plays of Gerhard Hauptmann, which are decidedly socialistic, and even in the plays of Ernst Toller, a communist who was arrested because of his activity with the late Dr. Karl Liebnecht and Rosa Luxemburg in the communist revolution, and who has just been released from prison. She also expressed dissatisfaction over the demonstrations against Tollers' play Hinkemann, saying that the public should listen to all sides in controversies as to how society should be organized to meet modern demands.

According to the princess she suffered so much during the long illness of her first husband, Prince Schoenaich, and through her loneliness after his death, that she sympathized with the ex-kaiser, who was in exile, and married him because she felt both needed companionship.

EATING A FINE ART IN FRANCE

By The Associated Press.

PARIS, Sept. 21.—The interest shown in eating as a fine art at last year's autumn salon has encouraged the committee to give increased attention to that department this year. The high prize of the eighth art, have been invented to take their place beside the painters and sculptors in what is to be known as the Regional Gastronomic section. This section, which, with architecture and decoration will form the city's art division of the salon, will be made up of eight departments.

The first will be a regional dining room, where 160 luncheons will be served daily, illustrating special dishes for which the various districts are celebrated; the second will be a model kitchen for such a dining room; the third will be a railroad station lunch room, where rapid and plain, but perfect, luncheons will be served, showing the possibility of railway lunch counters dispensing good local dishes; the fourth, a model grill for such lunch counter; the fifth will have all the pastry specialities from the provinces, with every method of making tea; the sixth will be a model inn, with every kind of wine and France's old time four o'clock snack, in which tea formed no part; the seventh, a model cellar, with wine library, and eighth, architectural drawings and models of hotels, inns, restaurants and kitchens.

Weston, world war veteran of Cedar Rapids, Iowa, who had gone to the hospital for stomach treatment, it was announced.

MANY CARS ON ROAD.

Count at Nocona Shows Heavy Traffic on Way to Wichita.

Special to The Record News.

NOCONA, Texas, Sept. 21.—According to J. A. W. McGrew, of Nocona, who made the count one day recently, nearly 1,000 people, included in 231 passenger cars, 3 trucks, 4 wagons and 1 buggy passed on the H-5 highway route leading through Nocona on to Wichita Falls.

Saying nothing of the patience of the one who kept tab on the travel, this speaks well for one day's passing.

Great improvements have been made on this route in the last few months and the road is in excellent condition, considering it as a dirt road only.

Tourists Drawn By Scenery In Foard County

Special to the Record News.

CROWELL, Sept. 21.—An increasing number of tourists are being turned through Foard county as a result of advertisement by word-of-mouth of some of the scenic beauty which is to be observed in the western portion of the county along the Lee highway route. Tourists coming from the west are profuse in their admiration of the scenery which lies in the small range of hills to the west of Crowell, and many of the tourists coming from the east are beginning to inquire their way to "Yamparika Hills," by which name the range is known.

A movement is under way to establish a free camp grounds at a spot in the middle of the range where a beautiful scene is offered in connection with an abundance of cold, sweet water. It is thought that this park will have been established by the time the tourists season of next spring and summer reaches its height.

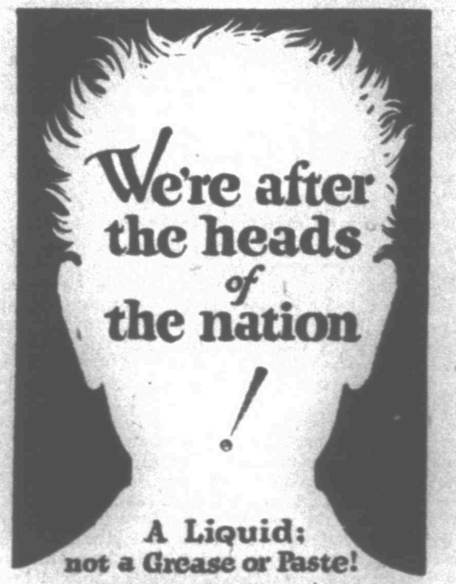

The hills lie about eight miles west of Crowell, and the highway winding through their cool heights forms a picture that is indeed pelasing to the tourist. In the midst of the range, only about fifty feet from the side of the highway, is a beautiful spring, called Sloan Springs, after the old settler Robert M. Sloan, who first made the place accessible. The place has always been a favorite picnicing ground and camping place for pleasure-seekers, and the tourists are beginning to find the advantages of the place. The hills are thickly wooded with cedar.

REMEMBER THE POOR—If I have withheld the poor from their desire, or have caused the eyes of the widow to fail; or have eaten my morsel myself alone, and the fatherless hath not eaten thereof: if I have seen any perish for want of clothing, or any poor without covering: then let mine arm fall from my shoulder blade, and mine arm be broken from the bone—Job

A BLACK EYE FOR MELLON.

Senator James Couzens of Michigan is a stormy petrol of republican politics. He was Henry Ford's first partner. They remained together for years. Then they came to the parting of the ways and on his retirement from the firm Couzens carried with him thirty-three million dollars.

He is easily Detroit's most popular citizen. His first invasion of politics was when he was elected mayor of Detroit when he put over a proposition for his city to become the owner of its public utilities, including the transportation system. Couzens had a knock-down and drag out fight. He is a bull dog and never let go his grip until the city became the guardian of the trolly lines and other going concerns which are semi-public in their nature.

Couzens was mayor of Detroit when Governor Grosbeck named him as senator to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Truman H. Newberry. Couzens accepted. He calls himself a republican. He was not long in grabbing the center of the stage. First he declared that prohibition had not been a blooming success although he is a total abstainer.

This made the drys at home furious. Then he locked horns with Andrew W. Mellon and it was a finish fight between the multimillionaire of Michigan and the multimillionaire of Pennsylvania. Couzens fought the Mellon plan of taxation. He demanded a searching investigation of the treasury department, including the department handling the income tax and all other taxes which are levied and handled by the secretary of the treasury and his agents.

Mellon is a republican. He is the strong right of the president. Couzens is a republican. He is his own right arm. When he announced as a candidate for re-election, this man who has a fortune of thirty-three million dollars declared that he could not go all the way with Calvin Coolidge, that he did not endorse all the policies of Calvin Coolidge and in the near future as in the past he declared he would follow his own convictions and let his conscience be his guide.

Calvin Coolidge did not care to have Couzens returned to the senate. Andrew W. Mellon hoped that he would remain at home. Michigan drys, headed by the Anti-Saloon League, denounced Couzens. All the Coolidge republicans in Michigan declared against Couzens. Publicity agents said that the former partner of Henry Ford had a rocky road to travel before he would get back to the senate.

Henry Ford was begged to make the race by the republican leaders who hated Couzens, but Henry declined to sit in and buy chips. Finally the chief justice of the supreme court of Michigan, a very learned and very dignified fossil of the law with a vast amount of pomposity was induced to take the field against Couzens. He was promised an easy victory.

It must have been an exciting campaign. Michigan cast almost eight hundred thousand votes in the republican primary. Outside of the city of Detroit and the county of Wayne the learned fossil of the law had a majority of twenty thousand over Couzens. Then they began to count the votes in the city of Detroit and the county of Wayne and when they had finished the count Couzens led the learned fossil of the law fifty-three thousand and now he is the duly certified republican nominee for United States senator in and for the state of Michigan.

It was a stupendous victory for Couzens; it was a black eye for the president and Andrew Mellon and the Michigan drys.

HAVE YOU BEEN TOLD.

That General Charles G. Dawes said in 1923: "It is on the open shop question that these men of affairs who bear the scars of many industrial disputes would have the next presidential campaign fought and they would have the republican party declare itself on one principle which, while it would not be a subject for legislation, is clear cut and affords no compromise middle ground opinion.

That Vance McCormick of Pennsylvania says, "You can't get away from the fact that the La Follette candidacy is a republican split and this talk about La Follette cutting into the Davis strength is bunk."

That President Coolidge, in a message transmitted through C. Bascom Slemp to Joseph Branin of New York, says the president has repeatedly stated that he is not a member of the ku klux klan and is not in sympathy with its aims and purposes.

That in the same message President Coolidge gave his approval to the efforts of American jews to rebuild Palestine.

That Governor John G. Blaine of Wisconsin, La Follette leader, was renominated on the republican ticket by 70,000 majority and that the next high man will run as a straight republican until the ballots hve been counted in November.

That Senator John W. Harreld of Oklahoma called at the White House to say that Coolidge and Dawes will carry Oklahoma by a large plurality and that he looks for the republicans to have two senators from his state on and after 1925.

That William L. Garcelon of Boston has started out to organize the thousands of deaf and dumb voters in America for Coolidge and Dawes because Mrs. Coolidge was a teacher in a deaf and dumb school before she married the man of destiny known as Cautious Cal.

WHAT TODAY MEANS TO YOU

By MARY BLAKE.

LIBRA

Today's planetary aspects are of a negative character, and favor only customary efforts along usual lines. In the evening, the vibrations indicate a strong tendency to differences of opinion, arguments and dissension. It is well to make every effort to maintain an "even keel," as the signs portend that if this is not done, an association held as very dear may be broken up, or a friendship of long standing shattered.

A child born today will be subject to the ordinary ailments of infancy, but with proper care and supervision, will outgrow all its infantile weaknesses, and develop into a healthy and vigorous maturity. Its character will not be very determined; its disposition more selfish than considerate; its menality normal. This child will present the difficulties that are so common in this world, and so hard to remedy. The period of character building cannot begin too soon, an deven in babyhood it must not be indulged and must be denied those little things which are usually given so readily for quieting effect. The ability to say "no" must be inculcated into its mind at a very early age, and it must be taught to practice habits of self denial.

If today is your birthday, you are conscientiously courageous, and more than anxious to do the right thing at the right time. In your efforts, however, you are seriously handicapped by an unreliable memory, and a forgetfulness which nullifies your most carefully thought-out-plans. You are fully conscious of the defect, but fail to take the necessary steps of a remedial nature.

No human being was ever born with a good memory. Every strong, reliant, always responsive memory had to be developed. It is the result of painstaking effort, and like most habits, both bad and good, grows and in time requires no conscious effort.

A good memory calls for a good forgettery. You must concentrate upon important, essential information and keep out all rubbish, all impediments from your mind.

Successful people born on this date are: James Bowdoin, philanthropist and statesman; Marshall P. Wilder, merchant and pomologist; Joseph Seligman, banker; Theodore Winthrop, author and soldier; Wm. W. Belknap, soldier and secretary of war; Stephen D. Lee, soldier.

SUB ROSA

By MIMI.

Looking Backwards.

Whence come these thoughts that open up old scars, and make our hearts ache even in the midst of pleasures? Whence come these regrets—these sighs over the long ago—these tears of anguish for some loved one now passed away?

The philosophers tell us, "Never look backwards—keep ever onward"—and the theologues remind us gently of Lot's wife, and the pillar of salt.

Regrets for the past do hamper progress, because they keep the mind divided. Dwelling on the past destroys the benefits and pleasures of the day.

Thoughts of the past seem to come into our heads involuntarily — the perfume of a rose—a baby shoe—the picture of a bride in a book—a piece of ribbon—an old shawl—all these things, when seen, connect themselves with something in our minds, and we cannot keep ourselves from thinking of them, even if they bring tears to our eyes.

The common sense thing to do about it, I think, is not to dwell on unpleasant things. To get busy thinking about something else.

Every one in the world has regrets and if every one stood still and mourned over them, this good old world would not have progressed very far.

So the best thing for us to do is to get the most good we can out of today and to make those around us happy.

More Truth Than Poetry

By James J. Montague

TO MARS

It grieved us, when you sailed right by,
(For we'd looked forward to our meeting)
And faded in the eastern sky
Without a single word of greeting.
'Twas quite presumptuous, we're aware,
And yet we hoped, somehow or other,
That you perhaps with us might share
The wisdom of an elder brother.

For instance, you could shed much light
On rum, and how your folk employ it
To keep the weak from getting tight,
And let strong men, like me, enjoy it.
We'd like to know just what you do
To check the spread of syncopation,
And how your parents manage to
Hold down your rising generation.

And even more we wonder how
Our nearest planetary neighbors
Can gather wealth to loaf enow,
Without the most fatiguing labors.
We hoped that through the radio,
Before in yonder sky you faded,
That you at least would let us know
How work may be eradicated.

But you are gone, without a word
Of hope from your grim-visaged sages;
No helping had you ever stirred
To lift our burdens through the ages.
No more we'll watch at eve and dawn
To see your coming and your going,
Good by, old chap, we're glad you're gone,
Your kind of star is not worth knowing!

THE FAMILIAR SPIRIT.

The idea of the familiar spirit has long been used among romancers. It is a spirit whose principal business it seems to be to annoy us, although it sometimes has comforting qualifications. The idea arises out of the fact that those who enjoy things keenly are, by the same token, qualified to suffer keenly.

The country parson speaks of those who suffer extremely by going into an untidy room and says that there are those who experience as much pain in having a tooth filled as others do in losing a limb.

A Frenchman, some time ago, committed suicide for the reason that he was unable to endure being bitten by fleas.

Some persons are so sensitive that they suffer the most excruciating torture from things that would leave others untouched. Often a man is praised for heroism who is simply imperturable. It is often the custom for those who suffer intensely to look with envy upon the quiescence of those who suffer nothing but they fail to realize that their ability to suffer is also their ability to enjoy.

A French writer says that we often think of idleness as one of the beatitudes of heaven while we ought to think of it as one of the miseries of hell. Most of us would rather do anything than to sit still and think of nothing. We are, at such times, annoyed by our familiar spirit who keeps at us as industriously as the vulture kept at the liver of Prometheus.

It is our familiar spirit that will not let us chew our cud, or ruminate. If we do not have our faculties employed, they turn upon us and torment us.

One escape from the familiar spirit is sleep, as most of us know the pains of wakefulness. It is a fortunate man who is able to sleep when he will. The Duke of Wellington had this capacity. At one time he was told that the guns would not be ready for two hours. "Then," said he, "we had better have a little sleep." He sat down in a trench, leaned his head against its side and was fast asleep in a minute. But it is not everyone us who can so escape the familiar spirit. We must keep hard at work or play or it will be at us and stick pins in us.

GLEANINGS FROM THE BOOK OF LIFE

BY CLARK KINNAIRD

SOMETHING ABOUT LITERATURE

When Madame Roland was upon the scaffold she asked for pen and paper, to note the peculiar thoughts that hovered about her on the last journey.

Goethe thought it was a pity the request was refused, "for it a tranquil mind thoughts rise up at the close of life hitherto unthinkable; like blessed inward voices, alighting in glory on the summits of the past."

Literature, Goethe observed, is a fragment of fragments; the least of what happened and was spoken has been written; and of the things that have been written, very few have been preserved.

"And yet with all the fragmentary nature of literature, we find thousand-fold repetition; which shows how limited is man's mind and destiny."

Goethe contended that it is not language itself which is correct or forcible or elegant, but the mind that is embodied in it; and so it is not for a man to determine whether he will give his calculations or speeches or poems any desired qualities; the question is whether nature has given him the intellectual or moral qualities which fit him for the work—the intellectual power of observation and insight, the moral power of repelling the evil spirits that might hinder him from paying respect to truth."

The most original authors of modern times are so, not because they produce what is new, Goethe observed, but only because they are able to say things the like of which seems never to have been said before.

"Thus the best sign of originality lies in taking up a subject and then developing it so fully as to make every one confess that he would hardly have found so much in it."

"We must remember," wrote Goethe, "that there are many men who, without being productive, are anxious to say something important, and the results are most curious."

HOW IT STARTED

THE THERMOMETER

One of the adjuncts of modern life which is taken for granted as a necessary detail in the household, is the thermometer. There is the wall thermometer, and where there are children, the clinical themometer holds a particularly important place. Many a mother has said, "I would not be without it for a day." For there is nothing so reassuring, after an ominous sneeze or baby fretfulness than to find the mercury registering normal!

In addition to the household thermometer, there are other varieties—those used for scientific purposes, for instance. But all hark back to one common origin, the invention by Galileo in about 1593 of a primitive open air thermoscope which he used to study freezing mixtures and record atmospheric temperatures.

Upon that foundation came development and improvement, involving the great names of science for another few hundred years. The thermometer in use today came with the invention, by Christian, of the centigrade system in 1743.

UNCOMMON SENSE

By JOHN BLAKE.

EXPRESSION.

Men have learned to dispense with their hands.

But they will never learn to dispense with speech.

The dog is highly intelligent as an animal.

Never was there an owner of a good dog who did not believe that the creature could reason.

He can be taught remarkable tricks, and he uses judgment in tracking game, and in outwitting other dogs.

But because he cannot express himself, he is doomed to be a beast forever.

Monkeys talk continuously, but they never say anything. And because they cannot communicate, the bright monkeys can not teach the dull ones anything.

Among human beings it is those who are able to express themselves who become the leaders and the teachers, and the real uplifters of the race.

There may be here and there a mute inglorious Milton who cannot tell the world the noble thoughts that are surging in his soul, but as a rule most men of genius learn to express themselves very early.

And because they learn to express themselves, their brains are the common property of all the race, through all time.

A very successful artist told me the other day that he had a harder time learning to draw than most of the pupils who went to art school with him.

"My fingers seemed all thumbs," he said. "There were dozens of fellows in the class who got the knack of drawing quicker than I did. But I had better ideas than they did, and I had to get them out of me. So I stuck at it until I learned to draw, and now I am fairly prosperous."

By "fairly prosperous" this man meant that he was making about twice as much money as is paid to the president of the United States.

Even the mediocre mind will improve by learning the art of expression, whether it is spoken or written, or at the point of the artist's pencil.

One never knows what is in his own brain till he gets it out in some satisfactory and understandable fashion.

Expression is a difficult business. Written or spoken it requires time and thought and practice.

But the ability to master expression is the highest gift of God to man, and no matter how hard it is, it is the duty of every person born on the earth to study it and work at it, and keep trying to conquer it until every thought in his mind that he wants to make known can be communicated to others.

ASYLUM SAVES MONEY.

Does Not Spend All of Funds Allowed for Use in Last Two Years.

The Northwest Texas hospital for the insane located here has expended only $111,343 of its $157,910 appropriation for the last two years, according to a report of Comptroller Lon A. Smith. The unexpended balance, together with the totals from all the other state institutions which did not go over the regular allotment, revert automatically to the state treasury.

Over $2,000,000 in all will be turned back in this manner, it is said.

The Man Who Postpones the Wedding Day Until He Can Afford to Marry Not Only Shows Good Sense but Real Devotion to the Girl Whom He Is Thus Protecting From the Sordidness of Poverty.

A nice young man and a nice young woman are in love with each other, but, unfortunately, the young man is not making a salary that seems to him to justify matrimony and he wants to put off the wedding day until he is in a beter financial position.

He tells the girl that his sense of what is fair to her will not let him take her out of a good home and dump her in a poor one. Also that it has been his observation that love airplanes out of the window in those cases where the wolf camps on the doorstep, and the man is always anxious and harried by debt, and the woman is too hard worked and tired to care how she looks, and sheer nerves keep both of them snapping at each other.

The young woman does not agree with this view of the subject. She wants to be married at once. She says that she thinks that if the young man is really in love with her, he would grab her up and rush with her to the altar without stopping to consider such a paltry thing as how they were to live.

And they both ask me to referee their little sparring match.

I think the man is dead right in taking a good, long look ahead, before he leaps into the sea of matrimony. I think he not only shows good, hard horse sense in wanting to wait until he can afford to marry, but that he proves his devotion to the girl in not being willing to drag her down into poverty.

It's all very well for a girl who has had three square meals every day of her life and a charge account at the best stores to assume a high and romantic attitude, and scorn mere money, and declare that she is willing to live on bread and cheese and kisses with the man she loves.

She has never tried it. She doesn't know that bread and cheese soon palls upon the appetite of those accustomed to filet mignon and lobster Newburg. Still less is she aware that those who are doomed to live just on bread and cheese and kisses soon drop the kisses off of the menu. Yet such is the sordid truth.

It is a pity that there is a price tag on love, but, alas and alack, there is. Matrimony must pay the luxury tax, and only those can hope to enjoy it who can afford it.

No matter how much a young couple may be in love with each other, they have got to come down out of the clouds when they get married and live in a hard and practical world, in which they must reckon with the landlord and settle with the butcher and baker. And their ability to keep on being in love with each other depends to a large extent on their being able to do this.

No ideal home has the bill collector perpetually battering on the door. No man who cannot make a living remains a godling long in his wife's eyes. No woman who is slatternly and overworked, and who lacks the time and the strength to take any pains with her personal appearance, looks like the angel of his dreams to her husband. No one who is worried over trying to make ends meet on an insufficient income wastes any time speculating as to the temperature of the affections of the partner of his or her bosom.

Before we can be romantic we have got to be comfortable. Before we can love we have to be well fed. Nature settled that business when it made our stomach three or four times as big as our hearts.

This is why marrying on a shoestring is such a hazardous venture. The glamour of romance that made a youth and maiden feel that they asked nothing else of fate but just the privilege of being together soon fades away, and then their happiness depends upon their being able to have the things and do the things they have been accustomed to having and doing all their lives.

If this is impossible; if they, who have been used to living in beautiful and artistic surroundings must live in cheap and ugly lodgings; if they, who have always dressed well, must go shabby; if they, who have always gone to theatres and concerts and parties, are too poor to afford any amusement, then they would be more than human if each did not blame the other for having dragged him or her into the wretched folly of an unsuitable marriage.

For a man to marry before he can afford it nearly always means that he dooms himself to stay at the bottom of the ladder. He cannot climb with the weight of a family on his back. He cannot save when the daily living takes every cent that he can possibly earn. He dare not risk his wife's and his children's bread by trying to better his fortunes.

A man is a fool who marries before he has got securely on his feet, and a woman shows that her selfishness is greater than her love if she urges him to sacrifice his future to her desire to possess him a little sooner. She also brings upon herself the misery of knowing that she is a handicap to her husband, as well as having to endure all the hardships of a poor man's wife.

There is nothing truer than the old proverb about marrying in haste and repenting in leisure. There are plenty of chances in matrimony without taking a chance on starving to death. The successful homes are those that have under them a good, strong financial plank. They are founded on sense and reason, and in them no haggard man lies awake wondering how he is to find the money for the rent, and no pale mother weeps because she cannot give her children the advantages she had.

So my earnest advice to every young couple is not to marry until they have the price of a wedding ring. Those that are bought on the installment plan are almost always pawned in the divorce court.

SCOURING PLANT FOR TEXAS

Baughman Says State Loses By Not Having Them

AUSTIN, Sept. 21.—A plan to establish three or more wool scouring plants in Texas, through co-operation of wool growers, chambers of commerce and business men, to stop what was declared an important economic loss for the wool industry, was outlined Saturday by Charles E. Baughman, commissioner of markets and warehouses.

Such scouring plants would permit the shipment of wool in a semi-refined state, save the expense of transporting the dirt and grease the scouring would remove from the swool, and open the way for allied industries to use the grease from wool.

¶ Riders In the Fog ¶

I thanked heaven for that same fog which they were cursing. It promised me one little chance for life. With these men beyond sight in the gray obscurity, I had only Karmany with whom to deal, provided I should dispose of him in time to flee before they should come to his aid. Once out on that mountain side, I could avoid their observations easily enough now where 15 minutes ago I would have made an easy target for those rifles which they carried on their saddles.

I saw that even with the help of the fog which had come up here as if for the purpose of giving me its protection. I must act quickly and carefully if I wanted to save Barbara from that impending marriage.

The worst feature of my position lay in the fact that the slightest movement on my part would start such a creaking of floor boards that Karmany would know my presence at once. I could only crouch here and bide his coming and then—

That was the question: what to do then. He was on the first floor now, crossing the living room. I could heart his heavy tread and the scrape of his big spurs on the boards as he drew nearer to the stairs. I happened to glance at Boxer; he was drawing back his lips so that his teeth showed. He, too, was ready.

My mind was quite made up. I trained the pistol on the door through which he must enter and waited for him to come on up, with my finger on the trigger.

It is an unpleasant moment to look back on, for when I recall it, the feeling which was upon me then returns; and it was an ugly sensation. I do not ever want to endure it again. It brought a sort of sickness with it, a nasty qualm which gripped me but did not weaken me. You see I had the knowledge—so recently gained from the man's own lips—of what had taken place in the downstairs room; and the knowledge of what lay ahead of Barbara if I failed to come through this alive. And I was not thinking of myself at all, as I cast my eyes along that blued-steel barrel waiting the moment when I was to turn executioner.

Karmany started up the stairs.

At last he reached the top landing and came toward the doorway. Two steps and there he stood before me. I had the little half-moon of a head at the end of the revolver outlined against his chest; and my finger was touching the trigger. Just a fraction on an ounce more pressure and the not do it. It was the same with me as it had been when I had Sudgen helpless on the bridge.

My plans had gone wrong because I had failed to reckon with myself. Gauging my own actions by the acts which I had heard these men describing I had determined on a deed which one of them might have done readily enough, but which no decent man could perform. I had run afoul of the shred of difference between my own breed and that breed which can kill in cold blood, and the error came very near being my undoing a moment later.

Karmany halted, and his eyes widened as he saw me with that leveled pistol. Then his hand moved—

"If you stir," I said, "I'll kill you."

He remained frozen into immobility. The twitching of his fingers had stopped.

"Come over to the wall," I bade him.

He obeyed in silence. His coarse face was absolutely emotionless except for the eyes, which had narrowed and showed that he was thinking quickly as he watched me. When I had him facing the wall beside the bed I bade him raise his arms until his hands were over his head; and then I rose. My limbs were cramped from long crouching; it took me some moments to restore the circulation. When I had done this I came up beside him.

CHAPTER XX

A Knockout.

His revolver hung low in the holster beside his right thigh. I shifted my own weapon into my left hand about to reach down and pluck his from the sheath. And as I did this, he whirled upon me.

How he had followed my actions—unless it was by reasoning them out in their sequence—I do not know; possibly he had been able to watch me out of the side of his eyes as he stood there. But at any rate he caught me in that instant when my own gun was changing hand, and as he whirled he struck the weapon from my grasp. It dropped with a loud clatter to the floor.

In the same instant I gripped him by the wrists, and we wrestled in silence. A moment passed; I saw that he was getting the best of me. Slowly he was bearing me down, and presently I felt by back upon the bed; his great bulk hung over me. Then suddenly he tore his right hand free. I saw his eyes widen and the light of fierce joy spring into them as his arms swept toward his pistol holster And then as I was giving up all hope. I got a glimpse of a white bulk that hurled itself between us, and Boxer had him by the wrist.

I heard the crunch of Boxer's teeth and saw the blood on his white muzzle and Karmeny's weight went from me as he rolled to one side, striking the old dog with his free fist. He might as well have battered the house for all the effect his blows had.

I was out from under him now and groping for the weapon; and as my fingers closed on it, voices sounded outside. Two of the men were returning from the horses. I pulled the heavy single-action gun out from the holster and brought it down on that kinky head with a good free swing to give force to the blow. Karmany rolled over on his side; his big body on the bed, his spurred boots trailing on the floor.

The men whom I had heard were right under the window now. "I'm goin' to call him," one said and then, "Oh, Whitey!"

"I tell yo'," the other growled, "he's asleep already, and all you'll get is a cussing."

"What was it I heard then?" demanded the one who had called.

"Search me," the other answered. "Mebbe 'twas his boots he dropped. Come on, there's a deck of cards on the cliff there; I'll play yo' seven up to see who gets ol' Joe's gun.

They departed to gamble for the dead outlaw's pistol. I bent over Karmany, and could find no sign of life about him. With Boxer at my heels I stole downstairs.

I think that if I had come on Jim Lathrop then it would have gone hard with him, in spite of his gray hairs. But I came on no man as I ran down the mountain-side through the fog.

How often I fell in the desperation of my haste as I made that race to Lathrop's house, I do not know; I remember the warm blood oozing over my face from half a dozen cuts; and once I came to my senses after pitching over a ledge with old Boxer standing over me. I can recall the cold gray fog drifting by me as I plunged on; the swift glimpse of rocks and trees that seemed to spring out at me through the drab wreaths and leap back again into the mists; the sting of thorny branches lashing my cheeks and the terrible, increasing punishment that comes with lack of breath; yet all those things are vague impressions and to this day the torture of suspense stands out sharp in my mind compared to them.

That suspense was like a heavy burden on my back weighing me down; it was like the ordeal in those bad dreams where one strives to run and finds that he can barely move his limbs. It overpowered every other sensation and allowed me to think of nothing else. It aroused a score of pictures in my mind in every one of which I saw myself at Lathrop's house too late; in every one beheld that marriage taking place while I was still far away. And every ugly passion that I owned grew with those visions to a deadly intensity.

And all those passions merged into a blind hatred of one man. I hardly thought of Sugden, and Karmany lay forgotten in that upper room where I had left him for dead. I wanted to get my hands on our old neighbor who had sold his daughter, as if would not sell a horse, without a single thought of what suffering must lie in store for them.

Of all the revelations which had come to me since my arrival at my boyhood home this was the most incredible; it stood out even beyond my father's murder, monstrous in its cold-bloodedness. It seemed to me sometimes, as I plunged on down the winding trail, that I must awake to find it untrue. Jim Lathrop had always been keen beyond most men when it came to money, and a dodger when it came to facing any unpleasant issue; I had known him to do many a tricky thing in his dealings with the other ranchers when his schooner used to carry tan-bark to the market. But with all of that he had been a kind man where his own people were concerned, and his affection for Barbara had been beyond any doubt in those old days. All of which made my hatred toward him more bitter, now that he had shown this unexpected change.

I reached the bottom of the hill and passed Manuel's house; there was no sign of life about the place. The sled-road was empty of travelers, but I saw the tricks of Sudgen's black horse before me, fresher than any of them, and I knew the man had ridden hard. I passed his gate, and no man showed to intercept me. I staggered onward, all but spent, and harken for some noise of riders before me, but the roaring of the breakers in their endless struggle with the rocks was the only sound that reached my ears, save the whisling of my own breath.

I do not know what to tell you as to my intentions when I reached Lathrop's house. I believe that I had none tangible enough to tell, except to get there and take such action as I should find awaiting me. I was desperate enough to accept any plan and too desperate to conceive a single one. Once or twice I did try to think along the lines of what to do, but at these times Barbara's face came before me; and when I saw her eyes, with that shadow in them like the memory of tears, I ceased my attempt and centered all my energies on hurrying.

And so I reached the house at last. It was an old-fashioned Spanish-California architecture, and rambled over quite a bit of ground, with a half-court in the rear. In front the thick walls were overhung by a growth of flowering vines and climbing roses which all but covered the narrow windows, hiding all things behind the little panes. The door was made of heavy planks with great hinges of strap iron and a mighty latch. All of which things have some bearing on the affair which took place here later in the day.

CHAPTER XXI

More Suspense

Sugden had plenty of time, with his long start and his fast riding; nervously figured, to have married Barbara and ridden away again. The thought made me raise the latch after one thump on knocker and fling open the great front door. I stepped into the living room and Jim Lathrop turned in his chair to face me.

I saw that I had come in on him while he was busy writing; and the paper was a printed form. I stepped up beside him with no word of greeting, not even a nod, and looked closer; he had laid down his pen just after filling out a blank portion with the words, "Barbara Lathrop, spinster." It was the marriage certificate of his daughter.

"Brad" he cried, "What's this now?" And his eyes widened as they went over me. I must have been a sight to startle any man, at that.

"Where's Barbara?" I demanded, and I had to moisten my tongue to make the words come.

"Now, Brad—" he was beginning when I raised my hand in a gesture which made the words die on his lips.

"Well, then, she's in her room," he answered slowly. "And she ain't feeling very well. And now, what's more,"—he seemed to have found courage by this time—"she can't see anybody just now. She's"—he cleared his throat and went on with a sort of desperation that was apparent to me—"getting' ready for—"

"She's not married then?" I interrupted.

"Not yet," he replied complacently, and I saw him glance swiftly out of the window as one who expects some one at any moment.

"Nor will be, then," I told him, "to this man." I pointed to Sugden's name on the certificate.

He rose deliberately from his chair and now there was about him something like dignity; a faint color had come into his cheek, and there was a gleam in his small eyes. "I am an old man," he said quietly, "and you are in my house. You have not got the right to talk that way to me in here. But it is for your own sake I am telling you to go now, Sugden has been here, and he went back for witnesses, and when he comes with the others."

"I do not need you to tell me of the trouble that has come here," I reminded him bitterly, "and I do not need to tell you what I am going to tell you now," I reached into my pocket and laid the newspaper clipping and the vest pocket diary before him. "But I want you to read these, just the same."

And when he had done with the clipping, I opened the notebook for him to two or three of the more potent items. By this time he had sunk into his chair.

Billy Whiskers

By FRANCES TREGO MONTGOMERY.

Yesterday Billy Whiskers went to the picture show and tried to help the goat in the picture by butting the dog that was attacking him.

Bang! went Billy's head against the canvas, and rip! went his horns through it, leaving the corners trailing and with two large holes in it where his horns had pierced it clear through. For a moment his horns stuck and he could not pull his head out, but only for a moment. Then he gave his head a twist and out they came. But he thought someone was holding a sheet up so he could not get at the dog. He drew back and with a mighty spring forward he jammed clear through the canvas, leaving a great hole behind him.

Of course by this time there was great excitement in the audience. People laughed and children cried with fright, while Billy faced the most surprised group you ever saw, for he had landed in the midst of four or five men who were behind the scenes quietly eating their lunches while the picture was being run off.

Of course it was rather astounding to have a billy-goat land in their midst right through the screen. And he based so much like the billy in the picture that for a second they felt the picture goat had come to life and was running away from the bulldog.

After Billy landed, he stood still for a moment or two to get his bearings. Then coming to and seeing a nice red apple, a sandwich or two and several doughnuts that the men had dropped in their excitement, he proceeded to eat them up one after the other as fast as he could.

"Here, you big good-for-nothing creature!" called one of the men. "You stop eating my lunch!"

"And mine, too," cried another, while a third grabbed him by the horns and tried to drag him away from the pile of doughnuts he had just begun to eat. But to no purpose. Billy simply spread his legs apart and went on eating those doughnuts. This made the men angry, and they all pitched on Billy, pulling and twisting his stubby little tail. At last they dragged him from the room and pushed him out into a little back yard, where they left him to himself.

"Ha! Ha!" laughed Billy. "I played a pretty good joke on those men, and I got a good luncheon besides. Whoever made those doughnuts knows how to cook, I can tell you! I never ate better, and I have eaten lots of them before.

"Oh, you have, have you?" whinnied a tiny Shetland pony Billy had not noticed before from the other side of the yard.

"Yes, I have. But how did you come here?" said Billy Whiskers.

"I live here most of the time. I should think that is a question I should ask you, not you me."

"You are quite right. And as I have taken an instantaneous liking to you, I will answer. Otherwise I would tell you to mind your own business. But before I recount how I came here, I wish you would tell me how old you are, for in size you are the smallest animal that resembles a horse I ever saw, and yet your voice sounds too old to belong to a baby horse. Besides you are too well proportioned to be a colt for they are all legs."

(Tomorrow the Shetland pony tells Billy all about himself.)

Color Cut-Out

"Mother, what's—that noise?" Betty Cut-out stopped in the doorway of the living room, as she dashed into the house after school.

It's a surprise for you, Betty, smiled Mrs. Cut-out.

Then Betty saw some one sitting over in the corner of the room. "Aunt Kitty!" cried Betty, and run to throw her arms around her aunt's neck. "Now I know what I heard upstairs. It's my new little cousin that I've never seen, the one that's named Nelda, after mother."

Her aunt smiled. "The new little cousin is a bit naughty now. She's crying a 'mad' cry, because she doesn't like being left alone. You may go up and look at her, though, if you wish, Betty."

Up the stairs Betty hopped, thinking how much fun it would be to have a baby to play with for her aunt would stay a whole week.

The baby has golden hair and a pale blue dress. Cut her out and mount her on lightweight cardboard. Tomorrow there'll be more about her.

The Bashful Growing Boy.

One Mother Says:

As my sons grew into young manhood I had the same desire to kiss and pet them that I had when they were younger. But I made it a point to restrain myself. I know young boys do not want to be petted, especially if any one else is present. They are just as affectionate as ever, but any display of affection must be made discreetly, to please them.

Senators Increase Lead, Giants Beaten, Dodgers Win

TIGERS HIT YANKS AS BROWNS BOW AGAIN BEFORE WASHINGTON

Brooklyn Now Half a Game Behind Giants By Reason of 2 to 1 Victory Over Pittsburgh

NEW YORK, Sept. 21.—The Washington Senators increased their lead in the American league race to two full games today by defeating St. Louis, 6 to 4, while the second place Yankees were dropping their third straight game to Detroit, 4 to 3. By winning four of their remaining six games, the Senators will still be in a tie for first place should New York win all her remaining games.

Washington moves into Chicago Monday for a three game series, while New York drops down to Cleveland.

In the National league, Sunday's games further complicated things. Chicago invaded the Polo grounds and behind Tony Kaufman's superb burling blanked the Giants 3 to 0. In the meantime Brooklyn was taking a hard fought 2 to 1 victory from Pittsburgh, thereby moving into second place one-half a game behind the Giants.

DETROIT, Sept. 21.—A wild pitch by Beall, who had relieved Hoyt in the sixth inning, resulted in a 4 to 3 victory for the Tigers today and game them straight wins over New York.

LANHAM TO BE RANKING MEMBER

Special to The Record News.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 21.—Congressman Fritz G. Lanham of Fort Worth will become the ranking member of the house committee on public buildings and grounds in the next congress, which will place him in line for the chairmanship of that committee, if the next house should be democratic.

Frank Clark of Florida was chairman of the committee under the last Democratic administration and has been the ranking democratic member since. Next to him has been Frank Park of Georgia. Both of these members have been defeated for renomination, and will not be in the next house. This leaves Mr. Lanham in a position to be chairman of that committee, if he desires the place.

World Series to Open Oct. 4 In American League City Winning Out

FIVE LEADERS PLAN DETAILS

Giants, Yankees, Senators Dodgers and Pirates Represented

By The Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Sept. 21—The world's series will open on Saturday, Oct. 4, in the American league city, winning the pennant unless results in either league necessitate a play off. This was definitely decided today at a meeting of the club owners of the five leading teams with Commissioner Kenesaw Mountain Landis.

The first, second and sixth games will be played in the American league city and the third fourth and fifth in the National league city.

Games will be played on consecutive days, the teams traveling at night. If a seventh game is necessary the owners of the two contending teams will meet and toss a coin to determine in which city the deciding contest will be held.

All world series games will start at 2 o'clock eastern standard time.

Will Have Play Off

If either league race ends in a tie the president of the league in which the tie exists will call the owners of the tied teams together to arrange for a series of three games to determine the winner. In the event this is necessary the dates for the world series will have to be changed.

New York and Washington in the American league and Brooklyn, New York and Pittsburgh of the National league were represented at the meeting.

Detroit was not represented owing to the fact that the Tigers are virtually out of the running.

The schedule of the prices for the annual classic was made out and other details preliminary to the big series were discussed.

More Babies For T-O Fair Show

More better babies!

A whole week of them—at the Texas-Oklahoma fair better baby show.

All of the local Red Cross workers, including volunteers and a number of baby specialists are working on the plans for the baby week, and babies from six months to four years will be registered ever day this week and the first day of the fair.

Cups for Winners.

Handsome sterling cups will be presented by the fair association to the best babies of all—the boy or girl who lead the 100 per cent class. When babies are regisered the mothers will be told the hour and the day when they are to be examined. Last year there were a number of babies who scored heavily in the examinations, and the judges were at a loss for a time to decide the winners.

A nursery will be run in connection with the Red Cross department of the baby show. There will be little books and toys for the children to play with during the wait for the examination.

Every mother of a baby within the ages of the show is given a cordial invitation to register the baby for the better baby show and health conference.

BIG SIDE SHOW AT KENNEDY CARNIVAL

With the Con T. Kennedy shows who will appear at the Texas-Oklahoma fair, September 29-October 5, inclusive, is one of the biggest side shows ever carried with an amusement company. This is run by Pat Murphy, a veteran side show man and is replete with all the freaks and curios that have entertained the populace since the days of Nero.

As one wanders up and down the enclosure you will wonder how it is possible to corral such a collection. You turn from the platform of Barnes Nelson who drawe your picture with his feet to listen to the Yuma Yuma trio who play jazz music on one string violin bits of gas pipe or anything else that comes handy even ordinary hand saws. The glass eater by the way is a versatile personage. He tears paper into intricate designs, draws cartoons of the onlookers meanwhile lunching on an incandescent light globe in much the same manner an average mortal enjoys an ice cream cone. Then there is the lady with the second sight to whom the past and future is but an open book and so on down the entire list of oddities fill it seems the entire world has been combed for novelties.

IT'S A PITCHING YEAR; WHAT OF WORLD'S SERIES?

Will Hurlers Equal Feats of Old Stars in Annual Classic?

By NORMAN E. BROWN

Whatever else may be said of the waning 1924 baseball season it is an accepted fact that pitchers once more came into their own after long years of suffering at the expense of the free swingers and the lively ball.

Regardless of the ruthless slaughter of pitchers during the regular big league seasons the matter of pitching always has been of prime importance in the annual fall classic that followed. This year, therefore, the question will draw more time, attention and thought.

Pitchers have usually drawn the major portion of the spotlight in the world's series clashes.

The wonderful feat of Christy Mathewson in pitching three shut-out games for the Giants in 1905 still stands unequaled, of course.

The next year the series between the Cubs and White Sox furnished enough brilliant pitching to feed fans for another year.

"Big Ed" went into the box Oct. 11, that year, and fanned just 12 of the National leaguers. He also hung up one of the few two-hit games on record.

Not to be outdone Ed Ruelbach, pitching against Walsh, allowed but one hit—a single by Donohue. In direct contrast to Walsh's control Ruelbach walked six men and fanned but three.

The very next day Mordecai Brown went in for the Cubs and held the Sox crew to two hits.

And in practically every series since then at least one pitcher has won undying fame.

From Oblivion to Fame

It was two years ago, for instance, that Jack Scott climaxed his remarkable comeback by going into the third game against the Yankees and shutting them out on four hits.

Here are some of the other interesting pitching feats of past series:

Jack Coombs entered the hall of fame in the 1910 series when he won three victories in one series. Christy Mathewson, Babe Adams and Stanley Coveleskie are the only other men to accomplish this.

Adams hung up his three in 1909 against the Tigers.

Jack Coombs beat the Giants, with Christy Mathewson pitching in the 1911 series, winning 3 to 2 in 11 innings.

Eddie Plank held the Giants to two hits for Athletics in 1913 and won 3 to 1.

Bill James of the Braves held Athletics to two hits in 1914 series.

Coveleskie turned defeat into victory for Cleveland against the Dodgers in 1920 by winning three games.

Waite Hoyt, Giant castoff, won two of the three games he pitched for the Yanks against McGraw's men in 1922.

Some Other Records

Big Bill Dineen struck out 28 batters in the series of 1903 for the Red Sox.

Chief Bender won a total of six victories in four series, 1905-10-12-13.

He was in the 1911 series also, and allowed a total of 21 passes in the five series.

Babe Ruth pitched a total of 29 innings in world's series classics without permitting a run.

Jack Coombs never lost a world's series game, winning five without meeting a defeat in the series of 1911 and 1910.

COLOR PROBLEM NOW TROUBLESOME IN PARIS

By The Associated Press.

PARIS, Sept. 21.—The color problem, always regarded as a peculiar American institution, has suddenly loomed large in Paris and the government has hurriedly created a special department to supervise the African natives, blacks and Moroccoans, who number 200,000 in the capital, as compared with 3,000 twenty years ago.

The great concern is not over the criminal element among the negroes and yellow tribesmen, but with the ignorant desert-raised natives who have been attracted to Paris by tales of pleasures and who frequently run wild. They are without money and uneducated, accustomed to the rough living that passed muster in the desert, but which shocks Parisians.

BUILDING BOOM IN RULE.

Seven New Buildings Go Up On Main Street in Past Year.

Special to The Record News.

RULE, Sept. 21.—The past twelve months Rule has enjoyed one of the best building booms since it was made a town. There has been about seven bricks built on Main street, including a city water works costing $50,000; a new high school building costing over $60,000 with steam heating equipment. The Rule compress and warehouse, which cost over $100,000 was completed this fall. Over 100 homes have been built in Rule the past year, and seven are under construction now, these are of the modern type. Rule is situated in one of the best farming sections of West Texas, it has a sandy loam north of the town and a black waxy loam on the north side of the town, insuring crops under all conditions.

DODGERS TURN ON PITTSBURGH

Regain Second Place In National League With 2 to 1 Win

BROOKLYN, Sept. 21.—Brooklyn regained second place and advanced to within half a game of the Giants today by defeating Pittsburgh in a 10 inning battle 2 to 1. It was the farewell game of the Pirates here.

Burleigh Grimes kept the Pirates from scoring until the ninth, when Traynor's single and Macauville's double with most out tied the score. Pfeffer led the game in the tenth, when High opened with a single. Mitchell busted for a sacrifice on the third strike. Wheat was purposely passed. Moore made a phenomenal running catch of Fournier's long fly which was deep enough to allow High to reach third from where he scored on Brown's single over Wright's head.

SOCIAL REFORM TOO PREVALENT, KAY DECLARES

Judge Asserts "Reds" Have Too Prominent A Place Now

Declaring that there was too much social reform in the world today and that "reds" were acquiring too prominent a following, Judge John C. Kay in his Bible class address Sunday morning urged a more intense application of Christian principles to every day education.

His address was as follows:

"The lesson this morning is a social lesson. That word social has got to where it means too much. I had a letter from my old friend Judge Hall, of Amarillo, in which he thinks, according to the letter, that spiritual and the supernatural part of religion is being neglected. In fact, Judge Hall says, great humorist that he is, that the modern church is trying to save the world with soap, soup, sanitation, sandwiches and sunshine. There is too much of social talk in the world. That word means, when applied to any effort, that we can do something, that we can do everything, for ourselves. It means too much in a good deal of modern theology.

Simply "Reds"

You know, a lot of people think they are this, that, and the other, when they are just simply reds, that's all. A man may hold what he thinks is a doctrine, or what he thinks is a philosophy, and he may have worked out what he thinks is a system, when his only trouble is that he is just a red.

Now, the Protestant religious, your thought and mine, has sometimes been too much, (and I know I am wading out where it is pretty deep now), has sometimes been too much a religion of the intellect.

King David said that you cannot by searching find out God. In other words, it is beyond human intellect to discover Him by our own efforts, unaided. I say, sometimes the Protestant religion has been too much of a religion of the head. That was the doctrine of Martin Luther. It was the great, great doctrine of Jean Calvin, to work by mental processes the plan, and most the philosophy of salvation.

My religion is supernatural. If the power of God is not above you, and above me,—if it is not above and beyond the power of my mental processes, then there is no need of church or preacher, and all you need is Judge Hall's sandwiches, soap and sunshine.

I have said that a great many men are reds who do not know it. What is the doctrine of the modern red? He has got a social doctrine. The first and most fundamental plank in his platform is that humanity has got no institution now that he can use in his business. That they must destroy, tear down and tear away every institution now in existence which has been built by civilization. Now, what does that include? It includes the church. They are not against the church because it is a church. They are not against the church because it is everything in their way, but they are against it because it is one trouble in their path. They are against,—and there are some of them teaching in the universities in the United States today,—against marriage. And, I have got the books of the great professors right in my house, from some of the biggest institutions of this country, telling you that marriage may be just an experiment for an ignorant and backward people.

Red and Ignorant

Now, that kind of a man is a red and does not know it. They are against the family. They say that the state ought to take charge of all the children. It looks to me like the state has got more business now than it can properly attend to, and has had for some time. They say that the courts are a relic of barbarism, and they say that representative government is no government. Now, all these are called social doctrines, but they are not social doctrines, and I want to fix you, this morning, so you will know a "red" when you meet him in the road.

A fellow up here is writing a book about free love. A fellow writing a book debating on whether we ought to have families at all or not. I will not strike any nearer home, but there are some professors that could be reached with a much shorter range gun than these that I have mentioned.

Then, what is a proper social effort, if these things are not? There is but one way to build civilization; there is but one way to build a government.

Henry a Revolutionist

Now, Patrick Henry was a revolutionist, but not a red. I want you to make that distinction. Patrick Henry, Jefferson and George Washington were revolutionists, but they were not reds. What do they say? Patrick Henry said the only light we have to guide our feet is experience, but, the red would destroy and discard all experience, and that is the difference between a common revolutionist and a red.

"I say, the only way to build a civilization, the only way to build a government, is what Tennyson calls, a "Broadening down slowly, from precedent to precedent;" to add a little here, and a little there, and a little yonder, and to grasp and hold as vital each and every lesson taught by experience.

Now, did the Savior look at it that way when He went out here to heal that leper? He was talking to the people about Moses, and about the law of Moses, and about everything that was good in Moses away back about 2,000 years before that. He believed in experience. He believed in history. He believed in the teaching and example of great men. He did not come to cast aside all experience and all the information in the world and begin anew.

What are some of the things they want to do under the guise of social reform? I wish I had time to talk to you a moment about this child labor bill. That is going to come as a constitutional amendment.

What about this better babies campaign? Here's some of our folks at Washington want to turn over God Almighty's business to a bureau. And, here's some good old ladies, that never yet fondled their own baby on their knees, leping around over this country lecturing on birth control.

There are some social efforts that are misplaced. Now, the reason I say that is that more than half of the things that go on in the world are not the business of humanity, but that of God. I cannot do anything about the weather, and a thousand other things that we cannot control.

Too much social reform. Why do I say that? Because all these reforms are directed to the human intellect, and not one of them to the human heart. It may be that there exists some need of some of these things, but it is the hearts, and not the heads, of our people, that must be saved, if they are ever saved.

People get too much excited sometimes about education. It is important. It is vitally important, but, it is not important if it is purely an intellectual education. If a boy or girl goes down here to college and comes back with a brightened head and a darkened heart, there is no education.

You know, it has always been a very queer thing to me. I am a worshipper, myself, at the shrine of intellect, and I think there is nobody in town admires a big brain, a magnificent education, a powerful understanding—I think there is nobody in town admires that more than I do, and, yet, the Savior, when He went out to teach the common people, went and go tentmakers, and fishermen, and tax collectors, and folks like that. Did he take them because they were ignorant? No! He took them because He believed that they had the right kind of hearts in them, and that is the reason.

Now, I think if you have got a heart that waits on and listens to a tender conscience, you are educated. I do not care how many social reforms you have had; how many strange books you have read; how many great philosophers that you have listened to; but, if you do not respect and worship the things of the heart and the soul, then you are not educated, I think that is true.

Now, I do not understand all of the plan of the Savior. I do not understand all that is in the Bible. My intellect, such as it is, is unable to grasp even the hem of His garment, I can only lift my eyes and my heart in wonder and admiration at His miraculous and supernatural power to save sinful men.

WANT RESERVATIONS FOR VALLEY TOUR COMPLETED MONDAY

All Wichitans who expect to make the tour of inspection of the Wichita Valley irrigation lands next Wednesday as guests of W. P. Ferguson are asked to make reservations not later than Monday noon at the chamber of commerce rooms. It will be necessary to know approximately how many must be accommodated on the trip and for this reason the reservations are important.

Interest in the tour continues to grow, it is reported, and a large delegation is expected to leave here next Wednesday to travel through the section now irrigated or under contemplation of irrigation.

A telephone call to the chamber of commerce rooms this morning will suffice.

WEMBLY AN EXPENSE.

Big Exposition Goes in Hole; Will Have Official Inquiry.

By The Associated Press.

LONDON, Sept. 21.—Although the British empire exhibition at Wembley has been a big success from the point of view of exploiting the resources of the empire's far-flung dominions, its authorities face an enormous deficit and the show's finances are expected to be the subject of a government inquiry as soon as parliament reassembles.

The government has already guaranteed 600,000 pounds, and the treasury officials are determined to make a searching investigation of the way the exhibition has been conducted before releasing any of this sum.

Those who have been watching the show say it is only too apparent that large sums of money must be lost and that a call for at least 10 shillings in the pound will be made on all who guaranteed the financing of the project. Such a call would cost the Duke of Devonshire alone 200,000 pounds.

Although the aggregate losses cannot yet be estimated the treasury officials are talking about a deficit in the millions of pounds, and in authoritative circles it is declared no attempt will be made to carry the exhibition another year, as was suggested earlier.

KENNEL ENTRIES CONTINUE.

Dog Show Entry Lists Held Open Monday; Many More Expected.

Entries for the Kennel Club's show to be held in connection with the T-O fair will be received through today, it has been announced by officials of the club. Entries were to have closed at midnight Saturday, but because of the interest shown it was decided to hold open for another day.

Nearly 200 dogs have been entered already, it is reported, and more are understood to be on the way. Some are coming from as far away as Denver, while many have been registered from Houston, Dallas, Fort Worth and other points in Texas.

DECISIONS ON FERGUSON SUIT BEING WATCHED

Effort to Bar Woman's Name Takes National Significance

Special to The Record News.

AUSTIN, Texas, Sept. 21. — Mrs. Miriam Ferguson's nomination for governor will take on greater national significance if the injunction suit of Charles M. Dickson against her, to be started in Travis county district court Monday, should exclude her name from the ballot, according to those who are closely observing the political tangle.

If decided against her, that suit might go to the United States supreme court and be the one under which would be determined for all time, by the final tribunal, whether a woman may be a state's chief executive.

Would Be Important.

The Ferguson suit, starting at Austin, would thus have a higher and broader significance, and would go into history as a more profound and epochal step in American jurisprudence than even the Dred Scott decision.

The immediate effect of the court decision may be almost the equivalent of saying who shall be the governor of Texas. The ultimate effect of the Travis county court's decision, whether upheld or reversed in appellate courts, would be to test out and determine whether or not a woman may be governor of Texas. And if it goes to federal court, it will bring a decision whether or not a woman may be governor of any state.

If the injunction should be dismissed for any of the reasons which will be placed by the state's attorney general, representing the secretary of state and election boards—that the applicant for an injunction can show no personal injury, etc.,—or if it is denied, the likelihood of Mrs. Ferguson's name going on the general election ballot as the democratic nominee, in a state where that nomination has heretofore been equivalent to election, would be greatly increased, if not made a certainty.

Would Write Names.

But if a temporary injunction is granted, irrespective of the later outcome of the suit, it appears the democratic party can have no nominee on the general election ballot, and the only way to vote for a democrat for governor would be to write the candidate's name into the ballot.

This, it is said would be the situation, because an injunction to prevent Mrs. Ferguson's name from being printed on the ballot, would leave no means for the election of another nominee.

The law authorizing the executive committee to fill vacancies on the ticket, specifies that it may choose nominees only "in case of death or declination of the nominee."

Lawyers here say that if the court holds Mrs. Ferguson ineligible as the nominee, she could not "resign" the nomination. Republican leaders, who are claiming victory over Mrs. Ferguson even if her name is on the ballot, are known to regard their chances of electing Dr. George C. Butte of Austin, republican nominee, as extremely bright and promising, if the democrats were forced to the expediency of writing in a candidate's name on the ballot.

Senators Form Davis Club In National Capital

Special to The Record News.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 21. — The "Davis Congressional Colleagues' club" is the latest campaign organization to be formed in Washington. It consists of present and former senators and representatives who served with John W. Davis when he was a member of congress.

Senator Morris Sheppard has accepted an invitation to membership in the club, and is an enthusiastic supporter of the democratic nominee for president. Mr. Sheppard served in the house with Mr. Davis in the 62nd congress before his election to the senate, and was at that time an ardent admirer of the present nominee.

Mr. Sheppard says that Mr. Davis during his congressional service, achieved marked distinction by his work on the judiciary committee of the house of representatives, where his outstanding legal ability brought him rapidly to the front as a leader.

Irrigation

By A. M. McPHERSON

WATER.

What Is Meant When We Speak of a Gravity Irrigation Project.

A gentleman wants to know if our irrigation project here is a gravity system. It is.

All of the canals carry water by gravity flow alone. Gravity causes the water to flow out through the gates of the diversion dam into the canal. The diversion reservoir is in turn supplied with water from Lake Kemp which flows out and down the river channel by the force of gravity alone.

As a general rule irrigation projects are wholly water by gravity flow. There are some notable exceptions such as the Southside Minidoka project in Idaho where 55,000 acres are irrigated by pumping water in several lifts. Then there are the propects in the Rio Grande valley in south Texas.

A few irrigation projects are supplied with water from flowing wells but these are comparatively rare.

Pumping water to irrigate land either from a well ditch river or reservoir is as a general thing too costly unless power is very cheap or the crops raised are of great value.

The first cost of installing pump to irrigate land is often much less than the cost of supplying it with water from a gravity system. It is the cost of pumping the water and tear on the machinery and the depreciation that makes pumping so costly.

Many people do not realise the amount of water it takes to irrigate an acre of land because in irrigation the unit spoken of is the acre foot while in pumping the gallon is generally the unit.

When it is realized that to lift three acre feet of water means pumping about one million gallons then the cost of pumping is better understood.

Wu Will Lead Troops Personally

By The Associated Press.

TIENTSIN, Sept. 21.—The crack third division of the army of General Wu Pie Fu passing through Tientsin today has given justification to the assumption that General Wu, the military leader of the central (Peking) government, intends to take personal command of the Shanhaikwan front and to open soon an offensive campaign against the Machurian forces led by General Chang Tso Lin, the war lord of the north.

Railroad traffic along the line between Tientsin and Shanhaikwan, on the Chihli-Manchurian border, is becoming heavily congested with foreigners fleeing the threatened areas to Tientsin. A rescue ship is being sent.

General Chang's airplanes again bombarded Chinwangtao, on the coast of Chihli province south of Shanhaikwan, yesterday and today.

The Peking-Tientsin Times predicts that unless the Chihli forces secure an immediate and decisive victory over Chang, the war will last throughout the winter, and suffering will exceed that of the floods of last winter, since the hostilities will cut off food supplies from any outlying districts.

GIRL DROWNED WHEN SHE IS PINNED DOWN BY OVERTURNED CAR

By The Associated Press.

AUSTIN, Texas, Sept. 21.—Miss Matty Lundgren, 24, of Austin, was drowned in a ditch at side of the Manor road, seven miles from here tonight during a torrential rain, and John Larson and Lillie Gustafson, also of Austin, narrowly escaped drowning, when the car in which they were returning from a visit to Miss Lundgren's parents near Elgin, turned upside down in the ditch, which had been flooded by the heavy rains. The car stood for an hour in a line of mired automobiles and the accident came when Larson attempted to pull around a car to open the road, according to his statement.

Texas Blanketed By Heavy Rains With Central Portion Hardest Hit

By The Associated Press.

DALLAS, Texas, Sept. 21.—Texas apparently was covered by a blanket of rain this afternoon, with the hardest showers being reported in central and southwestern Texas. The showers seemed to taper off as the northeastern and coastal borders were reached.

Austin reported the heaviest rain and the largest crop damage. Reports from the capital declared that a two inch rain fell early tonight and that crops in Travis county were damaged more than $100,000, the latter estimate being made by Walter E. Davis, county agent.

Rains at Waco.

Waco reported rain of seventy-seven hundredths of an inch, causing more damage than the rains of last week. Marlin, a town nearby, was also visited by a heavy rain, and other nearby towns received light showers.

Texarkana, in the extreme northeastern edge of the state reported a half inch rain with no crop damage, while Shreveport, La., close to the Texas border, farther south, reported a rain of thirty-two hundredths of an inch and no crop damage.

Beaumont did not receive rain, while Galveston reported the lightest sort of shower. Wichita Falls to the north, reported heavy rains in several portions of Clay and Wichita counties while just a light rain fell in Wichita Falls early in the day. There was a slight damage to open cotton in that territory, the report said.

Corpus Christi reported light scattered showers in adjacent territory but that no rain fell in the city. The showers reported were too light to damage crops, it was said.

Slight Fall at Dallas.

Rain of one-tenth of an inch fell in Dallas shortly after noon, putting the soils of the county in splendid shape for the fall planting, reports here said.

Fort Worth, 30 miles to the west did not receive the rain, but reported brisk winds approaching gales, but that no damage was done. Houston reported that no rain fell in either Houston or Harris county.

A definite report has not been received as to the damage done by the cloudburst that visited Breckenridge during the afternoon when four inches of rain fell within two hours and caused Gonzales creek to go out of bounds. Scores of Breckenridge citizens were reported to have been driven from their homes by the rising water.

Heavy showers fell in many parts of southwest Texas this afternoon but no reports of crop damage had been received tonight. Several communities in Bexar county report a downpour, but no rain fell in San Antonio. At New Braunfels, in Comal county, there was a heavy rain late in the afternoon.

Many States Return to Death Penalty After Once Abolishing It; Find Gallows Are Needed

By The Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Sept. —Is the death penalty a deterrent to murder and a protection to society?

Much argument over this is likely to enliven the legislature at Springfield in the winter. The question becomes acute as a result of the decision in the Leopold-Loeb case.

It is the old attempt to abolish capital punishment in Illinois. It is timely for the ordinary citizen to study up on the subject. The experience of other states affords one approach.

In the last ten years five states abolished the death penalty and then restored it. The general reason was that crime had increased.

Arizona abolished the gallows as maximum penalty for murder in 1916 and restored it in 1918.

Two Years For Missouri.

Missouri abolished the death penalty in 1917 and restored it in 1919. The homicide rate had increased from 91 for each million population to 103.

Oregon abolished capital punishment in 1914 and restored it in 1921.

Washington took the death penalty off in 1913 and put it back in 1919, largely due to deeds of violence by the "wobblies."

Tennessee abandoned capital punishment in 1915 and reestablished it in 1917.

Sentimentalists, humanitarians and others who oppose the death penalty argue the increase in crime that impelled these states to put the gibbet back into the list of penalties was due to the war. It does not alter the fact that after the try-out sentiment in those five states changed and the death penalty was regarded as a protection of the social interests.

At least three other states abolished and restored capital punishment years before the war and the crime wave that trailed it.

Iowa in 1872 abandoned the death penalty. But six years later that state restored it. In a bulletin in 1917 the Massachusetts Civic Alliance said: "Murder in Iowa increased very rapidly from 1872 to 1876, until, for this reason the death penalty was restored."

Back In Four Years.

Colorado abolished capital punishment in 1896 but, as a result of a lynching outbreak in 1900, restored it in 1901.

Vermont repealed the death penalty in 1911 except that a jury could give a verdict "with capital punishment." The law, however, was supposed to be a complete repeal of capital punishment. The result, so the Civic Alliance bulletin sets forth, was this: In the first year after the repeal there were twenty murders in the little state. But after a jury gave a verdict "with capital punishment" in the Kent case and sent Kent to the gallows, the crime wave "subsided almost entirely."

"This illustration of the marked effect of the hanging of one man on that state," says the Civic Alliance, "was so great the Vermont legislature in 1913 restored full capital punishment by an overwhelming majority."

In Rhode Island, which eliminated the death penalty in 1852, murder increased and violence among "lifers" in the state prison became so grave capital punishment was partly restored in 1883—for murder by a life convict within the prison.

Thus some of the states appear to have learned from actual experience the death penalty was a service to society and possessed value as a deterrent.

Chicago Larns Lesson.

The mere presence of capital punishment in the criminal code, of course, is not sufficient in itself. Inevitability of punishment always is a far greater deterrent of crime than is severity of a threatened penalty. When combined they are the greatest discouragement of crime.

Chicago saw this a few years ago. The crime commission pointed out that April 1, 1920, there were 135 persons awaiting trial for murder in Chicago, and all except 31 were put on bond, many committing other crimes.

Four judges in the civil courts volunteered to sit in the criminal court until the docket was cleared. In the trial of these cases 12 were sentenced to hang and 12 to the penitentiary.

The effect on murders and robberies was electrical. The murder rate was cut in half. Where there were 330 murders in Chicago in 1919, there were 190 in 1921. The burglary and robbery rate fell off. Where the police in 1919 received 15,000 criminal complaints, in 1921 they received 10,500, a reduction of one-third.

Michigan Leads.

In eight states capital punishment has been abolished. Michigan was the first, back in 1847—its last hanging was in 1837. Wisconsin repealed the death penalty in 1853, Maine in 1878, Kansas in 1907, Minnesota in 1911, North Dakota and South Dakota in 1915, Rhode Island in 1852, although it still applies to "lifters" who kill inside state's prison. California abolished capital punishment in 1921 for persons under 18 years of age. The Philipine Islands repealed the death penalty.

The homicide figures of the United States census afford some illuminating comparisons. They include murder manslaughter, justifiable homicide and incendiarism. Massachusetts which has an absolute death penalty for murder in the first degree, has a rate of only 2.1 a 100,000, as compared with a rate of 5.5 in Michigan, which has no capital punishment. Kansas, without capital punishment, has a rate of 4.7, while Nebraska, which has a conditional death penalty, has a rate of 4.1.

Rivera to Make Drive on Moors

By The Associated Press.

MADRID, Sept. — Dictator Primo De Rivera will launch an offensive this week with one hundred thousand men against the Moors, who have him cooped up in Tetuan, 50 miles behind the line. The city was the Spanish fort one week ago.

The situation in Tetuan remains grave. The attitude of the Angora tribe between Tetuan and Ceuta remains doubtful. Part of the tribe are openly fighting the Spaniards and other parts remaining sullenly quiet.

Tetuans Advance.

South of Tetuan the Moors have advanced far beyond El Alba, which the Spaniards evacuated Wednesday. The Spanish garrison at Sheshaven is surrounded by Moors, and the whole 50 miles between Sheshaven and Tetuan is occupied by rebel patriots.

Madrid is filled with rumors about the European powers, which are said to be behind Abdel Krim's seemingly irresistible campaign against the Spanish army. The Mauser rifles used by the Moors, occasionally found on the battlefields, are exactly the same as those used and manufactured by Germany and given to the Turks in the war. Many other articles used by the Moors are of the type the Turks used in the war, all manufactured in Germany. It is declared the Spaniards find themselves in the face of a powerful Turkish-German intrigue.

British Give Aid.

It is also asserted the British—after supporting Spain in Morocco for ten years—now have given assurances of moral and financial support to Abdel Krim if he can drive the Spaniards out and establish a Moroccan Riff republic.

This, according to Spanish comment, means England is willing to see the Spaniards or the Moors, whichever seems to be winning, in order to be sure France does not advance further towards the coast opposite Gibraltar.

WASHINGTON IN TURMOIL WHILE SENATORS WIN

Whole City Up In Air; Sure Pennant Will Perch With Stan Harris

By The Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 21.—Washington, which for years has repressed all its emotion, whether the occasion was an inauguration, a visit from a foreign ruler, congressional fireworks, scandals, or any of the usual events of a nation's capital, has been completely robbed of its poise—figuratively thrown on its ear, and by a baseball team.

Enthusiasm Mounds

With Clark Griffith's American league club hanging around first place, the enthusiasm of the city has mounted to unprecedented heights. Baseball fans, who have undergone years of disappointment are in a delirious state. Senators who remained here for a more or less dull summer, congressmen, and all of the varied people who go to make up a capital city have been drawn into the one-all-absorbing topic —a pennant and a world series in Washington. President Coolidge, even, hopes Washington will be successful.

Last spring the word went out from the experts that the team wouldn't amount to much this year, and the prediction seemed in a fair way of being borne out. But one morning, the city found its downtrodden representatives on the top of the heap. And every day they have remained there has increased the enthusiasm, until now the most hardened pessimist is absolutely certain that nothing can stop Manager Harris' club.

Papers Draw Crowds

Newspapers, giving play-by-play account of games are surrounded each day by thousands who cheer wildly or groan as the fortunes of the Americans rise and fall.

Hundreds of loud speaker radio sets in cigar stores and other places give fans a running account of each game in which Washington takes part.

Washington fans are rushing to buy world series tickets and nothing can convince them that they won't be able to use them. Subscriptions are now being taken up for Walter Johnson, the pitching mainstay; there is talk of a monument for him, and one member of congress has announced an intention to have his birthday made a legal holiday in the District of Columbia. The other players are heroes, too, in direct proportion to their years here, and whether the team is winning or losing.
