Subsidized housing not available here to all who need it

EDITOR'S NOTE: Obtaining housing in Midland, whether by buying a home or renting an apartment, is becoming an increasingly complex problem, and one not easily solved. This is the fifth in a seven part series examining the issue.

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Staff Writer

Fred O. Worthey Jr.'s house could never qualify for any kind of assistance.

Not Christmas in April, not the local Commission on Housing, not even anything from Casa de Amigos.

So, Worthey said he's planning to move sometime this summer, possibly to Waco or Tyler.

Worthey, a 71-year-old Army veteran, might be a typical candidate for a subsidized housing project.

He has been in almost every nursing home in Midland "and didn't like any of them. I've been in so many veterans hospitals and I've had my fill of them."

DURING WORLD War II, Worthey was a paratrooper with the Army.

He had planned to make a career of the military, but ill health forced him out.

Reclining on a twin bed in a back room of his house, Worthey said he moved to Midland in 1950 and ran a drilling rig for nine or 10 years before his health forced him to quit that.

He paid $80 for the lot and "built this shack with these two hands," he said, holding out a gnarled right hand.

His four children were raised in that house. Today, light sockets dangle loosely from the ceiling, wood and cardboard substitute for glass panes,and spaces in the wooden slatted walls let in sunlight, wind, heat and cold.

Worthey is paralyzed on one side from a stroke. Until six years ago, his wife took care of him, but she died. Now, other members of the family keep a check, he said.

Reaching up to a shelf above his head, Worthey picked up a medicine bottle and said, "Now all I do is lay around here and eat and take these pills."

THE ONLY TYPE of rental assistance in Midland is at Hillcrest Manor, and that is limited to the elderly and handicapped persons.

The project is a four-story apartment complex with several one-level separate cottages. It opened in August 1977 and has been filled to capacity with a long waiting list kept.

Getting this housing for Midland caused some problems, according to Fred Kester, secretary for the city of Midland Housing Authority which operates the complex.

In July 1974, five persons were appointed to the board of commissioners of the Housing Authority to undertake development of a low-rent housing project for low income elderly or handicapped persons, Kester recalled.

After several months of studying, the board selected a site out of five submitted. This one was at the southeast corner of Big Spring Street and Scharbauer Drive.

But the Department of Housing and Urban Development, which was financing the project, rejected the site selection, saying it was in an area of minority concentration — a violation of HUD's guidelines.

Kester said the city is divided into census tracts, and this corner is the top edge of a tract that extends south and east.

HUD AGREED TO accept a site directly across Big Spring Street from the board's preferred site. But the board fought for what it selected. Just when HUD was beginning to change its mind to move a few feet eastward, the developer lost the option to purchase that land, he said.

The board readvertised for sites, wording it in such a way the developer knew to keep it west of Big Spring Street, according to Kester.

A site at Scharbauer and Pecos streets won approval because of its location and proximity to shopping areas.

Then began an argument between HUD officials and the builder over contract prices.

"The builder and architect had to convince HUD it could not be built for HUD's prices," Kester said.

Final price for the 100-unit Hillcrest Manor was $1,831,044. It was financed by selling bonds to the public under a since-discontinued HUD program.

The four-story building has 64 units, including 22 one-bedroom spaces and 42 efficiencies.

Its 32 cottages include four two-bedroom, 16 efficiencies and 16 one-bedroom units.

To qualify for Hillcrest Manor, a person must be at least 62 years old, and-or handicapped and have a low income.

Social Security determines if a person is physically or mentally handicapped and not capable of earning a living, according to Kester. "They can not be gainfully employed to the point they support themselves."

THE HOUSING AUTHORITY board decided on the maximum level of income allowed, which Kester said "is higher than any other housing authority I've heard of."

The limits are: one person, $7,200; two persons, $8,200; three persons, $9,250, and four persons, $10,250.

These figures were suggested by HUD, based on Midland-area incomes, Kester said.

Rent at Hillcrest is based on the individual's income.

"They pay 22.5 percent of their income to live here," Kester said. Average on all 100 apartments is $46 a month.

Residents still must pay their electricity and telephone bills. But an allowance is made for the electric bill and deducted from the rent.

So, someone paying $46 a month rent could get an allowance of $20 if living in an efficiency, to allow enough money left to pay electricity, Kester figured.

"Most of the people here get around $190 to slightly more than $200 a month to live on," he said.

While designed for low income people, it is not always those with the lowest incomes who make it into the complex, which has a waiting list of about 160 names.

HUD instructs the managers to "keep this place operating in the black, and to do that we must improve revenues," Kester said. "So, we select applicants from the list whose incomes are such that they would pay more than the

TESCO requests hefty increases in electric rates

Texas Electric Service Co. filed a request today for a 16.1 percent systemwide increase in revenues.

The request was filed with the cities served by TESCO — including Midland — and with the Public Utility Commission in Austin. If approved, it would provide an additional $88 million in revenues, according to C. Winston Barclay, TESCO general manager in Midland.

The increase in rates is necessary because of the effect of inflation on Texas Electric's operation, including its program to build new generating plants that use lignite coal and nuclear fuels, Barclay said.

Under the proposed rates, increases for residential customers would vary according to the time of year and amount each customer uses.

A Midlander whose bills range from $30 to $40 a month would see an increase of about $5 per month, according to Barclay.

TESCO has planned the increase to take effect June 21. But in the past, city councils and the PUC have postponed the effective date of proposed hikes to study the request further.

Therefore, Barclay said, the increase probably will not become effective before next fall.

If approved, this would be the third rate increase in three years, Barclay said.

In June 1977 TESCO filed for a 23.6 percent increase, but was granted a 13.2 percent hike which became effective in December 1978. Then, in May 1978, the company filed for a 24.4 percent hike and received an 8.4 percent increase which became effective in October 1978.

In each case, the cities served by TESCO appointed a committee to study the increase and suggest what it felt would be sufficient. Those studies and the hearings before the PUC lengthened the time before the rates became effective, Barclay noted.

The process was costly to TESCO and the cities, Barclay said. "The frequency of having to go back to the PUC is lengthy and expensive. We hope they (cities) realize this and go ahead and give us the adequate rates."

He said there then would be a strong possibility that TESCO would be able to hold off for more than a year on another rate increase request.

"Our goal is to see that our customers continue to have a reliable supply of electricity at reasonable prices," he said.

"To do this, we must continue our program to reduce our dependence on natural gas and oil as fuels to generate electricity."

TESCO no longer can obtain low-cost long-range gas contracts, and the government has required utilities to help the nation conserve oil by using other kinds of fuels to generate electricity, Barclay claimed.

The company already has on hand long-range supplies of lignite and uranium, the two most abundant and most economical fuels available, he said.

"We have made good progress in our program to build generating plants that use these two fuels," Barclay said.

But he held that the company's fuel-changing program has been hit especially hard by inflation since it began 10 years ago.

TESCO's first lignite-fueled plant was completed in 1971-72 at a cost of $130 per kilowatt. Units completed in 1977-78 cost more than twice that amount, Barclay said.

The inflation rate in the construction industry was 12 percent in 1978, said Barclay. "With these kinds of inflation rates affecting construction costs, we estimate it will cost $583 per kilowatt to finish our Forest Grove plant in 1984," the manager said.

He claimed the company's lignite and nuclear generating units will continue to mean lower overall electricity bills for customers.

"The total cost of electricity is made up of two items — base rate and fuel cost," Barclay said.

"By increasing the base rate, we are able to continue building plants that use cheaper lignite and uranium fuels. If we were not building these plants, base rates would be lower. But these lower rates would be more than offset by higher fuel costs, and the result would be a higher total price to the customers."

How to use federal money?

By LANA CUNNINGHAM

Ideas ranging from lights in a park to additional water and sewer lines were suggested as uses for about $612,000 in revenue sharing funds during a public hearing Wednesday in the City Hall Council Chambers.

About a dozen people showed up to voice their suggestions, with City Manager James Brown conducting the hearing.

Harry Clark, chairman of the city of Midland Housing Authority, asked about using the funds for housing rehabilitation.

But Brown said the money had to be used for projects the city normally would pay for out of general funds. Since the city is not involved in housing projects, the rehabilitation probably could not be included.

Patsy Painter, president of the Women's Softball Association, suggested two lighted women's softball fields be constructed in Ulmer Park. She later conceded the group would take two unlighted fields.

Dorothy Crawford pleaded her case for additional water and sewer lines along Garden City Highway, saying there isn't enough water pressure now and more businesses are going in along that road.

"If we had a fire we would be at our own mercy because we don't have an adequate water supply," she said.

Ada Spivey suggested lights be installed along North A Street at Wadley-Barron Park so families could use the park longer in the evenings. She added that the concrete islands in Cuthbert should be trimmed for better traffic flow.

Nuclear waste report slights Odessa water

By RICHARD MASON
Staff Writer

The draft environmental impact statement for a nuclear waste project near Carlsbad, N.M., apparently devotes little attention to water reserves in the area which supply the city of Odessa and does not concern itself with the permanent storage of 'high-level waste."

The project, the Waste Isolation Pilot Plant, will be the largest dumpground for nuclear waste in the United States if it is completed. Planned approval date is 1981, with materials to be stored there beginning in 1985.

The environmental statement, released in April but only obtained Wednesday, defines the project's scope.

The city of Midland owns water rights in western Winkler and eastern Loving Counties in the Delaware Basin. However, the city draws no water from that property at this time.

ACCORDING TO the report, moderately radioactive "transuranic wastes" would be stored about 2,100 feet underground in salt formations beneath the site about 25 miles east of Carlsbad, N.M.

In addition, 1,000 highly radioactive fuel rods from commercial nuclear reactors would be stored in a 20-acre site about 2,700 feet beneath the surface.

According to the report, the government plans to experiment with storage of highly radioactive fission by-products at the site.

Those wastes would be removed when the mine is sealed 30 years after construction is completed. However, the fuel rods, which will be highly radioactive for at least 1,000 years, will remain inside the sealed plant.

CRITICS CONTEND the government has failed to fully investigate the implications of storing radioactive materials underground in southeastern New Mexico.

A spokesman for the Odessa League of Women Voters, which has been following the project, said today she was "very disappointed" over the way the impact statement classified water use in the area.

In previous public hearings, the League asked the government to monitor the site until such time as the radioactive material decomposed to the level of natural background radiation.

The League asked also that a water supply be guaranteed to area residents in the event an accident or leakage at the project pollutes any of

Midlander feared drowned in Devil's River

COMSTOCK — Divers today resumed their attempts to recover the body of a 48-year-old Midlander, who apparently drowned while swimming across the pool-like area of Baker's Crossing on the Devil's River between here and Juno about 5:30 p.m. Wednesday.

The drowning was at the site where four Midlanders drowned in May 1977.

Presumed drowned was Billie R. Tisdale of Route 4, south of Midland.

He was on vacation at the time with his wife, Joan. Tisdale was manager of Western Uniform & Towel Co. in Midland. His wife is an employee of The Reporter-Telegram.

Tisdale was swimming across the river when he faltered and called for help, said Val Verde Chief Deputy Sheriff Joe Roman of Del Rio.

"He got into shallow waters and he called for help," Roman said. "He had swam across the river a couple of times," he said.

An unidentified man swam toward Tisdale, who went under before the man got there, Roman said he was told.

National Park Service Chief Ranger Eldon Kohlman of Comstock said the drowning was at the site where four Midlanders died on a Memorial Day weekend outing on May 28, 1977.

Drowned then were Henry Torres, 32, his two daughters, Jacqueline, 7, and Virginia, 8, and a family friend, Vincent Larez, 24.

A part of the Baker Crossing area of Devil's River is accessible by paying a daily fee. The area is a longtime popular weekend and vacation spot for West Texans.

"It's a popular place where people can get to the river," Kohlman said of the crossing.

The water at Baker's Crossing is about eight to 20 feet deep in places and occasionally has swift currents.

Val Verde Sheriff James R. Koog said today that divers believe they located Tisdale's body Wednesday night in about 14 feet of water, but that darkness and the swift current prevented his recovery.

"It's nothing unusual for people to drown out there," Koog said. "It's real swift waters."

He said 14 persons drowned in bodies of water, including Amistad Lake, in the county last year.

Koog described the Baker's Crossing as a "beautiful place on the river. It has huge pecan and oak trees.

"It's like another world out there. It's beautiful."

The crossing is about 30 miles north of Comstock and about 19 miles south of the small community of Juno.

The wet fork of Devil's River springs up on the Hudspeth River Ranch several miles north of the drowning site and runs into Amistad Lake, which sprawls along the Texas-Mexico border north of Del Rio.

Long waiting list exists

average amount of rent."

HUD's wording on that regulation states, "All social levels of income people," Kester said.

"This means we do not have to take the person at the top of the list. Possibly it is the one who can pay the most," he added.

"We're obligated to keep this place running with rental revenues to pay the operating expenses. We don't take in enough now to make the interest payments on the bonds. HUD pays for that."

Length of the waiting list would seem to show a need for more such housing. But HUD now says only 20 percent of the housing it subsidizes will be reserved for elderly and handicapped persons. Because of this, the Midland City Council has rejected plans for more HUD housing, Kester said.

THAT REJECTION represents only one more clash in the continuing battle between the City Council and HUD.

Before the Hillcrest Manor idea was conceived, Kester said, Midland was scheduled for 300 units of housing to be rehabilitated for low income people.

What upset the council is HUD wanted the houses to be scattered all over the city. The council contended the project should be carried out east of Big Spring Street, "where the need really was," he said.

As a compromise, HUD allowed some of the money from that project to be used for constructing Hillcrest Manor.

In late 1977, a Midland Commission for Local Community Development was set up by Mayor Ernest Angelo Jr. as an alternative to HUD's funds for rehabilitating houses since the city no longer was receiving that money.

THE GROUP OF Midlanders raised about $100,000 — $67,000 short of its goal. That money was used to rehabilitate 36 homes.

Using the same guidelines as the HUD program, qualifying homes had to be owner-occupied and able to be able to comply with the city building code.

By early 1979, funds for the program were depleted.

A Realtor who worked closely with the Housing Commission noted it would take at least four to five years, using $100,000 a year, to rehabilitate all the homes that qualify.

Thus, at least $500,000 more is needed for about another 150 homes.

This still leaves out people like Worthey, whose home never could be brought up to the city building code, according to people who have checked the dwelling.

Hillcrest Manor has been one solution to housing for a certain number of people, however.

But there still remain people, like Worthey, who need better housing, but can neither find it nor afford it.

NEXT: Midland refuses to accept government-subsidized housing, but two nearby cities are making full use of federal funds for housing programs.

Fred O. Worthey Jr. doesn't like nursing homes or veterans' homes, so he stays at his house, built in the early 1950s and badly in need of repairs. Paralyzed on one side, Worthey is not able to make those repairs. (Staff Photo by Mike Kardos)

Report on nuclear waste draws criticism from area the underground aquifers in the region.

ACCORDING TO JUNE Naylor, chairman of the Water and Enviromental Committee for the League, the federal government gave assurances last November that the League's requests would be considered.

However, the report said aquifers in the area are "among the least productive in the United States."

Nonetheless, 41 percent of the water consumed by the city of Odessa last year originated from an aquifer in the general region of the waste plant, according to the League.

Odessa used 2.2 billion gallons of water from wells in Ward County in part of the Delaware Basin, which includes the waste plant site, according to figures supplied by the voters league.

THE CITY OF MIDLAND is on one of the proposed rail transportation routes for materials bound for WIPP.

According to the environmental statement, however, the final routes have not been determined.

Most of the transuranic wastes at the site will come from a storage facility in Idaho.

The Department of Energy is considering obtaining highly radioactive fuel rod assemblies from a location in Illinois, however, and those rods may be shipped through the Midland-Odessa area.

According to one estimate in the environmental statement, the plant would cost $430 million to build and $36 million to operate in each of the next 30 years. The plant would be sealed after 30 years and the wastes left to deteriorate underground.

THE REPORT ESTIMATES that 3,100 new jobs will be created by construction at the facility, dropping to 1,100 afterwards.

The federal government wants to remove more than 17,000 acres of federal land and 1,760 acres of state land from public access or use to construct the site.

The site currently holds 3 percent of the nation's reserves of langbeinite, a substance used for fertilizer, according to the report.

Also currently, oil, gas and potash companies have leases on mineral rights in the region. But if the plant is constructed, drilling and mining in the immediate area would stop to prevent the possibility of an accident, the report indicated.

According to the impact statement, if a hole were drilled into the mining site 100 years after the project was sealed, the drilling crew would receive a dose of radiation 18 times the maximum allowable in any occupation over a one-year period.

While the government plans to locate only about 1.2 million cubic feet of transuranic wastes in the mine at this time, provisions have been included for the eventual storage of 70 million cubic feet of radioactive waste, the report said.

The highly radioactive fuel rods will weigh more than 500 tons, according to previously published information.

Mrs. Naylor said the League will send representatives to a public hearing on the project to be held in Albuquerque, N.M., beginning June 7.

Slight cooling trend expected

Temperatures should be cooling slightly Friday as partly cloudy skies block the sun and bring chances for rain and thunderstorms to the area, according to the weatherman.

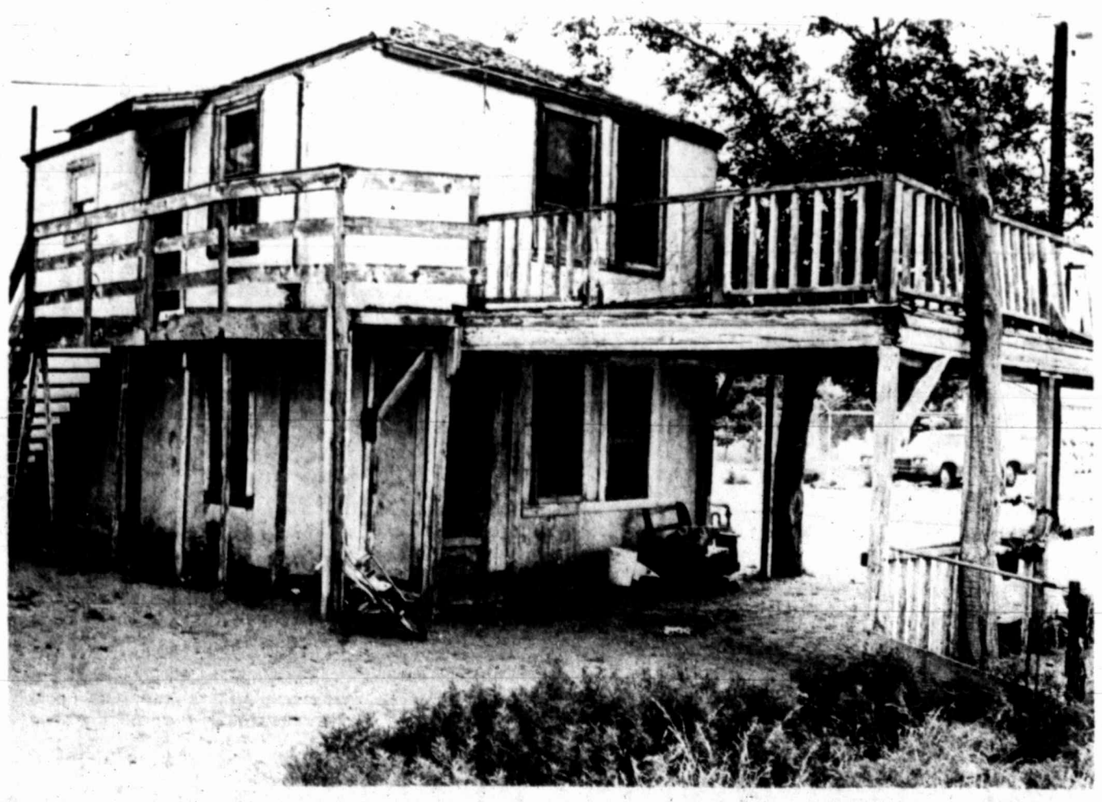

The National Weather Service office at Midland Regional Airport is forecasting an overnight low in the low 60s with winds blowing to 10 to 15 mph.

Friday's high is expected by the weathermen to be in the low 80s.

Record temperatures for the date are an even 100 degrees set in 1946 and a cool 47 degrees in 1932.

Cloudy skies with scattered sprinkles were reported in area towns early today and temperatures remained constant throughout the Basin.

Showers and thundershowers were expected in West Texas today, but most of the state was to have pleasant weather.

More housing ills foreseen

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rising mortgage costs and falling construction rates will plague the housing industry for most of the remainder of this year, say housing experts.

The predictions came in the wake of a report by the Commerce Department Wednesday that housing starts declined 2.1 percent in April.

While the drop was small, Michael Sumichrast, an economist for the National Associaton of Home Builders, said steeper declines are ahead because money for home mortgages is growing scarce.

Sumichrast said savings and loan associations, which provide most of the financing for home building and buying, sustained a net loss of deposits of $1 billion in April as savers looked for more profitable investments elsewhere.

"They're running out of money.... The same thing is continuing in May," he said, noting that the gasoline shortage in California is posing another problem. "Housing needs traffic, and traffic is dropping sharply."

Meanwhile, two economists for the United States League of Savings and Loan Associations predicted that home mortgage loan rates will increase to 11 percent or even higher.

Hearing shares revenue ideas city refuse any federal funds, later recommended money go to pave roads in the south part of Midland and for more playground equipment.

Other suggestions were for public restrooms and drinking fountains in parks.

Brown said $125,000 left from last year's funds are allocated for a senior citizens' center at the current Circle Drive fire station building.

The city manager explained that some cities take the revenue sharing funds and include it in the general operating budget for services and salaries.

Midland, though, has only used it for special projects. With the government considering a cutoff of these funds, other municipal governments may be getting into a bind, he added.

The suggestions made by the public will be included in a list drawn up by the city staff, and the City Council will decide where the funds will be used, Brown said.

Staff recommendations include a new city-county health facility, expansion of City Hall, new municipal court building and remodeling of Central Fire Station for police department offices.

Last year the city had $1,614,000 to spend, but Brown said it was an accumulation of two years of funding plus interest.

Houston pilot escapes from Colombian Indians

RIOHACHA, Colombia (AP) — An American pilot held for ransom by Indians for 17 days escaped and was arrested by Colombian troops. He said he was kept in a goat-killing pen and sometimes dragged into a cactus patch and held at gunpoint.

The pilot, Roy McLemore of Houston, fled Tuesday from the house in the town of Maicao where he was being held, jumped into an army jeep he saw drive down the street and was taken to the army base near Riohacha, about 50 miles west of Maicao.

In the jeep were four Colombian soldiers dressed as civilians who cruised by the house after Dale Everitt, a Houston fire department representative, negotiated with the kidnappers in a Maicao park.

The kidnappers demanded $100,000, but Everitt refused to hand over any money until he saw McLemore alive. The kidnappers finally drew a map of the area where McLemore was held and said he would appear on a street corner.

At least one of the kidnappers was arrested.

McLemore's companion, William Spradley, an 18-year veteran of the Houston fire department, has been under arrest in a Riohacha hospital with a bullet in his back since the two landed in Colombia. Everitt came to Colombia to rescue him.

Officials said charges against both men of illegal entry into Colombia probably would be disposed of today. They said if found guilty they could be fined from $2,500 to $125,000.

McLemore and Spradley claimed they were en route to Venezuela April 29 to pick up drilling bits for remanufacture in the United States when their twin-engine plane developed engine trouble.

They landed on a beach frequently used by smugglers flying marijuana to the United States and said several bandits attacked them and shot Spradley. Indians brought him to the hospital, and the police arrested him and put a guard on him.

McLemore was not heard from until Saturday, when one of the kidnappers called Everitt, who was staying in a hotel in Barranquilla, about 150 miles west of Maicao.

The kidnappers put McLemore on the phone, and he told Everitt he came to Colombia to pick up a load of marijuana. But after his escape he told Houston TV reporter Dana Millikin the kidnappers made him say that because they believed they would have no trouble if the government thought they had kidnapped a drug smuggler.

He told Ms. Millikin he was held in a goat-killing pen, and that each time the kidnappers thought someone was going to rescue him they dragged him into a cactus patch and held him at gunpoint.

McLemore, Everitt and the kidnappers negotiated by telephone again on Sunday and Monday, and the Indians said the pilot would be killed "if something isn't done soon."

Everitt, who did not know McLemore personally, asked a number of questions about the pilot's family and finally was satisfied the Indians really were holding McLemore.

Everitt then set up the meeting in the Maicao park for Tuesday and called the American consul in Barranquilla who put him in touch with the army.

Meanwhile, today's edition of The New York Times quoted Jerry Corbit, chief of the Federal Drug Enforcement Agency's field office in Houston, as saying an investigation has begun into alleged marijuana-smuggling on planes flown by Houston firemen. The Times reported other government sources said a federal grand jury in Houston would call several members of the fire department soon.

MidTran closer to putting vehicles on street

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Staff Writer

Bids on vehicles and radios were opened and reviewed Wednesday when the Advisory Board of MidTran met, according to John Ingram, president of the non-profit corporation's board of directors.

Ingram also noted MidTran now is in a transition phase with the corporation now looking at actually putting the vehicles on the road.

John Schafer, transportation coordinator, had to resign his position recently because of personal reasons, and MidTran will be looking for a replacement.

The seven bids for radios, which will be installed in each vehicle, are being reviewed by people in communications with the city of Midland, Ingram said. And the MidTran board will be reviewing the four bids received for seven light transit vehicles.

A recommendation on the bids will be submitted to the Midland City Council when it meets Tuesday during a regular session in Council Chambers at City Hall. The panel should accept a bid then and put MidTran on its last leg to becoming a reality.

MidTran is a public transportation system designed for Midland's needs and has been in the works for more than a year.

In March, the City Council finally signed a contract with the federal government and accepted funds to get the program off the ground.

Although there was some delay then because of a disagreement over the contract, Ingram said the project was moving ahead faster than most other transportation systems in other cities.

While work so far has been controlled primarily by those associated with MidTran, Ingram said with the acceptance of bids the progress will be more out of their control.

When the vehicles can begin service here will depend upon when the manufacturers selected by the City Council can deliver the vehicles and radios and install the latter.

In the meantime, existing tranportation systems, such as that provided by Midland College or Casa de Amigos, will be coordinated in such a manner as to fit in the new vehicles when they arrive, according to a spokesman for the system.

MidTran has been designed to provide "subscription" and "demand-responsive" service.

Subscription service is designated for employees who will contract with MidTran for transportation to and from work each day.

Demand-responsive is for the general public who need rides to various points in the city. But riders must notify MidTran 24 hours in advance of the need.

Sen. Patman ends filibuster

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — "In my heart and mind I know this bill is right," said Sen. Bill Meier.

"In your heart and mind, you know it's all you can get this session," responded Sen. Bill Patman.

Patman, weary from a day-long filibuster, was on the verge Wednesday of giving up his filibuster to defeat Meier's proposal that would raise the 10 percent ceiling on home loan interest to as much as 12 percent.

He surprised Meier, who had several bitter exchanges with Patman, by giving 30 minutes' notice that he was halting his filibuster.

"Can we start ringing the bell?" asked Meier, Patman, rocking on his feet to ease the weariness in his legs, had indicated as early as 3:45 p.m. he might quit in a few hours. He had sipped ice water and sucked lemons and "honey-candy" for nourishment.

His wife, Carrin, a member of the Democratic National Committee, sat nearby during most of the filibuster.

Patman predicted that passage of the Meier bill would result in skyrocketing prices that "will add to the fuel being fed into the monstrous fire of inflation."

Lenders, he said, "don't want only 12 percent, they want much more. They want 12 percent plus 'points'" — extra interest charges — "they'll be back."

Drop in revenues blamed on weather

BIG SPRING—The Colorado River Municipal Water District is blaming a cold winter and cool spring for a $70,000 drop in water sale revenues over the same period last year, according to a report released by the district.

Water sale revenues dropped despite an increase in rates, according to the report.

The report shows that the district received $2,048,488 in revenues through April, about $70,000 less than revenues accrued by the district through water sales last year.

District officials are blaming a cold winter and cool spring for the decline in water sales, particularly to oil companies which use the water for drilling purposes.

The CRMWD also sells water to the city of Midland.

According to figures in the report, more than $1.5 million was received from municipal sales through April, an increase of 12 percent for the four month period.

Meanwhile, operating expenditures for the district were up $169,770 to $1,082,250, an 18 percent increase. CRMWD blamed increases in electricity, labor and maintenance for the increased costs.

Administrative expenditures, meanwhile, increased 20 percent the report shows.

Billings to cities were 3.2 billion gallons of water, down more than 178 million gallons over last year. Billings to oil companies were down 422 million gallons of water to 1.1 billion.

According to the report, Lake Thomas had 8,900 acre feet of water in reserve while Lake Spence had 106,000 acre feet.

Agricultural access to diesel fuel enhanced by new rule

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Adoption of a special new federal rule will make it easier for agricultural users of diesel fuel to obtain the fuel when it is available, Sen. E.L. Short of Tahoka reported Wednesday.

Short, chairman of the Special Subcommittee on Diesel Fuel Shortages in Agriculture, said he has been notified by Nick Murphy of the Governor's Fuel Allocation Office that a rule adopted May 10 by the Economic Regulatory Administration, U.S. Department of Energy, will allow agricultural users to receive allocations "without the formal application required prior to the rule."

"Any supplier will be required to supply any farmer, upon either oral or written certification by the farmer, the gallons of fuel needed for 100 percent agricultural use," Short said.

Refineries supplying wholesale distributors will, under the new rule, be required to replenish distributors on a gallon-for-gallon basis, thus freeing up the set-aside allocation for non-agricultural use, Short said.

That set-aside allocation amounts to 4 percent of the diesel fuel brought into Texas, Murphy reported earlier this week.

He said that requests for the reserves, however, have been running as much as six times the amount available, with the High Plains and West Texas particularly in need.

Heavy equipment being used for clean-up and reconstruction work necessary as part of the rebuilding from last month's tornado in Wichita Falls is also a critical area, he reported.

Gov. Clements threatens veto of bar bills

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Gov. Bill Clements said Wednesday he would veto any bill to continue the State Bar of Texas that does not require depositing of bar funds in the state treasury.

The Texas Sunset Advisory Commission has recommended bar money be kept in the state treasury. Unless extended by the Legislature, the bar will go out of existence in September.

A Senate-passed measure recreating the bar calls for public members but does not require bar funds be deposited in state coffers.

House members could debate the bill this week.

Free swimming classes planned

Free introduction to swimming and stroke improvement classes will be held for youngsters between 4 and 15 years of age by the city of Midland Parks and Recreation Department in cooperation with the American Red Cross.

Classes are scheduled Monday through Wednesday at the Midland High School pool.

Two classes will be held each day, one from 5:30 p.m. to 6 p.m. and one from 6 p.m. to 6:30 p.m..

"This is an excellent opportunity for children to start swimming lessons early with a chance to have individual attention and help," said Mrs. Glenn Carnett, Red Cross Water Safety Instructor Trainer.

Just 'common sense'

"Environmental dedication must be tempered with common sense."

This was the profound statement voiced last week by Senate Republican Leader Howard Baker of Tennessee, and somehow the message must be gotten across to environmentalists the nation over. If not, America is in for some severe setbacks in its standard of living in the future.

As it now stands, Senator Baker's message apparently hasn't gotten through to most members of the Senate Environment and Public Works Committee.

The committee, on Wednesday of last week, refused to permit completion of the Tellico Dam, a project which, as you will recall, threatens the life of an endangered fish species, the tiny snail darter.

It made its decision based on rules and regulations provided in the Endangered Species Act, the law used to block completion of the multi-million-dollar dam in the first place. The vote was 8-3.

The panel's decision went against a move by Senator Baker to grant the dam an exemption under the law, which prohibits work on federal construction projects which threaten the life of an endangered species.

The senator, however, said he would bring the issue up again on the Senate floor. Rep. John Duncan, R-Tenn., has introduced a similar proposal in the House of Representatives.

Here's hoping that the Baker-Duncan proposals yet will gain approval in both houses of Congress.

The TVA project on the Little Tennessee River has been approximately 90 percent complete for more than two years now. But work was halted because of court rulings in support of environmentalists' claims that closing the floodgates on the dam would wipe out the critical habitat for the snail darter, a three-inch fish listed on the government's endangered species list.

Good Grief! And so what if the snail darters' habitat is destroyed.

And in this connection, Americans generally would be amazed at the tremendous number of little creatures of one kind or another added to the endangered species list in the last two or three years. It is a ridiculous situation, blocking the nation's progress and development in many instances.

The Senate Environment and Public Works Committee presently is working on legislation to extend the life of the Endangered Species Act. It is our opinion that the life of the act should not be extended. Many other groups and organizations across the land reportedly are of like opinion.

Anyway, taxpayers have spent approximately $113 million so far on the 90-percent complete Tellico Dam, completion of which has been held up for two years now because of a tiny fish which very few persons had ever heard of until a couple of years ago.

Efforts have been made to establish a snail darter population in a second nearby river, and although biologists are encouraged by the results, the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service says it will be several more years before it will be known whether the transplant has been successful. Meanwhile, the almost completed multi-million dollar dam must wait and wait and wait.

A Cabinet-level review committee refused in January to exempt the dam from the act which is responsible for holding up its completion. This was when Baker entered the picture.

He disputed that the snail darter is actually endangered, and said, "common sense" says a dam that is 90-percent complete should be finished.

"All I want to do is close the gates on a dam we bought and paid for," Baker said.

He followed this with his "Environmental dedication must be tempered with common sense" declaration.

And this goes far beyond the Tellico Dam project, reaching into highway building, oil well drilling, pipeline construction, industrial expansion, mining, refinery construction, and what-have-you. It very well could be that the nation would have had enough refinery capacity to prevent a gasoline shortage had it not been for environmental dedication NOT tempered with common sense.

ART BUCHWALD

A fantasy for our time offered as public service

Art Buchwald

WASHINGTON — Man and woman cannot live by bread alone. All of us need fantasies to keep us going, particularly when we're trying to fall asleep. Some people have difficulty coming up with a good fantasy, so as a public service I shall provide one which has worked for me for the past two weeks. You are all welcome to steal it.

I am driving along a hghway and I notice that my gas tank is getting close to the "Empty" mark. Up ahead I see a gas station with 16 pumps. It is all lit up in beautiful colors. There is a large sign which says: "Unleaded Gasoline 27 Cents a Gallon — With Free Car Wash."

I pull into the vacant station. A man in a spic and span blue uniform with starched hat rushes out from his office and says, "Welcome, sir. I was afraid I wouldn't have a customer this evening. How may I serve you?"

"I would like a full tank of unleaded gasoline, please."

"Yes, sir," he salutes me smartly. "We have the best that money can buy. Would you like a cup of coffee while I'm filling you up? It's on the house."

"That's very kind of you," I say. "Black with two lumps of sugar."

The attendant gives me a steaming cup of coffee and puts the nozzle into my tank.

"Would you care to use the restroom? We have shaving equipment, hair lotion, combs and cologne if you'd like to freshen up."

"Thank you very much. I might just do that."

"In the meantime," the attendant says, "I'll check your oil, your battery and fill your tires with the correct pressure of air. Is there anything else you would like me to do?"

"I wouldn't be mad if you checked the oil filter," I say.

"I would be delighted, sir."

I go into the washroom and clean up and then return to my car.

The attendant, with a big smile on his face, says, "I took the liberty, sir, of putting your automobile through the car wash so you wouldn't have to wait."

"That's very decent of you," I say.

"I also vacuumed the inside of your car and washed your floor mats for you."

"Why thank you, my good man. Here is a dollar bill for your kindness."

"I'm sorry, sir, but we are not permitted to take tips. We get our satisfaction from making our customers happy. Will this be cash or a charge?"

"Cash. But I only have a $20 bill."

"That's no problem, sir. I'll be glad to make change. Since you have purchased 10 gallons of gasoline, you have the choice of a complete set of dishes or a copper frying pan or a new set of golf clubs."

"I think I'll take the golf clubs."

"Very good, I'll put them in the trunk. We also have a fire engine for your child, or would you prefer a computerized football game?"

"The fire engine will do."

"Here it is. And here are your green stamps. You get a bonus of 30 for purchasing unleaded gasoline."

"I must say you have a very smooth operation here."

"Our job is to sell gas, and if we can induce you to come back, then we feel all the trouble we've gone to will not have been in vain. We're in a very competitive business, and since people can buy unleaded gasoline anywhere, we have to make them believe that we're the best."

We shake hands and I start off on the highway. A few miles down the road I pass another gas station with a large sign: "Free Massage With Purchase of One Quart of Oil."

By this time I am blissfully asleep.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Mafia takeover in Caribbean (?)

By JACK ANDERSON

WASHINGTON — Such is the fearsome power of organized crime in Latin America that it now appears possible the Mob will eventually take over effective control of some small Caribbean countries.

This alarming prospect was confided behind closed doors by Viron Vaky, assistant secretary of state for Latin American affairs, who has been following the ominous developments closely.

Some of those who heard his remarks took precise notes and leaked them to us, feeling that the danger merited public exposure. When reached by our associate Les Whitten, Vaky first huffed that the meeting was off-the-record; then, after much hemming and hawing, he conceded that he had mentioned the Mafia in connection with "a number of little countries" in the Caribbean. But he tried to play down his remarks as mere "speculation."

Indeed, inspection of the participants' detailed notes shows that Vaky seemed more worried about leftist subversion in the area than about the Mob. Whatever the exact order of Vaky's priorities, the briefing could signal a significant change of direction for the Carter administration's Latin American policy. Vaky is a man who usually chooses his words carefully, and is regarded as an influential administration adviser.

Vaky did not identify the countries he had in mind. When asked about the possibility of a Mafia takeover, he said that his briefing remarks were intended to mean only that "something like that conceivably could happen."

In fact, intelligence sources who were surely available to Vaky have confirmed to us that the Mob has achieved dangerous penetration of a number of Caribbean nations.

In Haiti, for example, organized crime has close ties with the government of dictator Claude "Baby Doc" Duvalier. Our sources say narcotics are smuggled through Haitian airfields with the active connivance of corrupt Haitian officials.

In the Bahamas, we were told, the Mob has made inroads into the government and certain banking establishments.

Similar reports have reached us from the British Dependency of the Cayman Islands and from Grenada, though the leftist coup in Grenada last March may have changed the situation there. Mafia influence is traditionally weak in Left-wing regimes.

Jamaica, the Netherlands Antilles and the Dutch-French island of St. Maarten-St. Martin are also mentioned as Mafia targets.

As part of his remarks on leftist subversion, Vaky criticized Costa Rica, Panama and Venezuela for their opposition to right-wing Nicaraguan President Anastasio Somoza. Vaky also used the words "radical," "subversive" and "leftist" more or less interchangeably in his secret briefing.

ALBEBT'S LAMENT: What do former House Speakers do in retirement? Well, Carl Albert, the "little giant" from McAlester, Okla. teaches university classes, collaborates on books, and answers inquiries from people who still think he's their representative in Congress. He gets about half a dozen calls a day from Washington, and "lots of calls" from ex-constituents who still think he has clout. "People forget that I'm a has-been congressman," he told us a bit wistfully.

•

'SUPERVISORY' TAPS: Ma Bell calls it "supervisory observing of business." A less motherly description is "phonetapping." Telephone company service representatives — the people who deal with your complaints about bills or other trouble — have long known that your calls can be monitored by supervisors at any time. The customer, of course, isn't aware of it. Phone company officials insist the tapping is done to make sure customers get proper service. They also insist that there's no way anyone outside the phone company could listen in.

DECEPTIVE AIDS? A strange inertia by federal bureaucrats may be indirectly causing thousands of unwanted pregnancies among women who use over-the-counter contraceptives. In the absence of vigorous government supervision of manufacturers' fulsome advertising claims, consumers can't tell whether the ads are exaggerated, misleading or ambiguous — until it's too late. Medical surveys have shown that over-the-counter products may be only 70 percent effective, yet their makers claim 98 or 99 percent effectiveness. A group of law students working under Prof. John Banzhaf at George Washington University is preparing a legal petition to get the Federal Trade Commission to take action against the deceptive advertising.

WASHINGTON WHIRL: "The government forgot about gasohol, and so did the experts," President Carter told an Iowa audience recently. "And with little acknowledgement or encouragement from Washington, the idea has been spreading." Following the Iowans' lead with all the grace he could muster, Carter announced federal assistance for construction of 100 farm-based alcohol distilleries. There are already 400 service stations selling gasohol in the state.

NICK THIMMESCH

Sen. Jacob Javits at 75 is as energetic as ever

Nick Thimmesch

WASHINGTON — Sen. Jacob Javits is 75 this week. He has served 22 years in the Senate, longer than any New Yorker holding that office. A flock of aspirants for his job wishes he would say whether he'll run in 1980. But Javits loves to heighten the suspense with statements like:

"I will decide by Lincoln's Birthday, 1980. It will be a contemporaneous decision, and I won't even begin to think about it until this fall. The factors will be my health, how I feel, what my state needs, and what the situation is with peace and the condition of our country.

"I'm not leaving aspirants out on a limb. I started my most successful campaign — the time I beat Franklin D. Roosevelt Jr., for New York attorney general — as late as August. Yes, Henry Kissinger tells me he's interested, but he doesn't wish to do anything unless I am out of it."

Javits has always been a bustler. Nowadays he goes around the corner on one wheel at 90 m.p.h., instead of his usual 100. For a Republican his name adorns a remarkable number of laws, partly because he never stops putting in bills.

No senator works harder or has a better mind than Javits. He struggles to keep P.L.O. spokesmen out of the U.S. He pushes President Carter to decide on the new black Rhodesian government which Javits says is better than anything the Marxist guerrillas could do. He defends Taiwan.

The SALT II treaty wearies younger minds, but Javits only sees it as "complicated, but by no means unfamiliar ground." He says the Soviets and the U.S. agree on nuclear arms reductions, and the need to trade, but he is wary of what the Soviets are up to in Africa and the Middle East.

"Still, there is a base for peace now in the Middle East," Javits says. "We are finally seeing the light at the end of the tunnel. Only the irrational are determined to destroy Israel."

For 20 years, Senate Republicans considered him a sort of urban outlander too liberal for them. But now they solicit his expertise. Conservative John Tower recommended him to head the G.O.P.'s committee on economic policy. Javits worked his tail off in the job.

"Republicans finally concluded that I can solve a problem, and that it may not be a liberal solution," Javits notes. "On our economy, we must increase productivity, capital investment, and personal savings — all more profound factors than regulatory reform alone."

A freshman Republican like Minnesota's David Durenberger sees Javits in a different perspective from old-time conservatives. "Most of us look to him for advice," he says "because he is the reliable master of the process. We may not agree with him, but we know we will get an honest answer."

The civil rights and H.E.W. issues which Javits fought for so long are not in vogue now, so Javits can only remark that budget cutters should give equal priority to agriculture and defense. He says he's not comfortable with all budget cutting, particularly when it comes to programs New York City needs.

His instinctive, programmatic liberalism is now out of time and joint. His conservative colleagues respect his persistence, and the way his enormous staff — perhaps the Senate's second largest — keeps grinding it out. It costs the feds about $1.5 million a year to keep this 72-person staff going.

As a youngster, Javits became a Republican because he couldn't stand New York's Tammany corruption. He can blame much of the Great Depression on Woodrow Wilson's economic policies, and has offered stout defenses of Herbert Hoover's idealism and Richard Nixon's civil rights record. Javits has always pushed free enterprise, and Wall Street appreciates it as much as Labor is grateful for his social legislation.

So he is a political blend, a compromise, perhaps, which always satisfied the New York electorate. He never neglected those voters, and he still shuttles to New York to nourish the political roots.

Since Javits has always been so energetic, any sign that he is slowing down would be jumped on by the ambitious. He does not refrain from telling you he still plays tennis and paddle-ball, swims, and never goes a day without exercise.

At 75, he is the fifth oldest in the Senate (Senators Young, Stennis, Randolph and Thurmond being senior), and there is precedent for senators being re-elected at even older ages.

And yet this liberal warrior Javits can muse how many he knew are no longer here — John McClellan ("A wonderful man"); Jim Eastland (an always polite adversary); Clifford Case (so close to Javits); Ed Brooke (in tandem ideologically); and before you know it, Abe Ribicoff.

"These are big losses to a man like myself," Javits says, losing his energy for a moment. "It makes life a lot lonelier for me."

Perjury indictments returned

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — A former school superintendent and a convict have been indicted on perjury charges by a federal grand jury investigating the clemency-for-cash scandal that erupted during former Gov. Ray Blanton's administration.

Named in two indictments returned Wednesday are Homer Snodgrass, 64, of Crump, who was Hardin County school superintendent for 30 years, and William E. Scharff, 33, who is serving a life sentence at Turney Center Prison on a 1975 Knox County murder conviction.

Snodgrass, an unsuccessful Democratic candidate for the state legislature in 1976, is accused of lying April 19 when he told the panel he had not told two men that Blanton spoke to him about a case the grand jury is investigating.

The two men were identified in the indictment as Jackson lawyers David Murray and Henry T. Etheridge. The indictment did not accuse either man of any wrongdoing.

Another count accused Snodgrass of lying when he told the panel he had not told the two men that the ex-governor's father, Leonard, participated in a payoff in the case.

But the indictment did not say that either the former governor or his father knew about the pardon-selling scheme. The ex-governor, who has not been accused of any wrongdoing, appeared before the panel in December.

Another accusation in the three-count Snodgrass indictment accused him of lying when he said $1,500 had not been mentioned during an April 2 conversation with Murray and Etheridge.

Scharff was accused of lying to the grand jury about whether he and Nashville attorney Dale Quillen had talked about getting Scharff's sentence reduced to 10-20 years for $45,000 and having another inmate released for $10,000.

On March 23 — a week after Quillen and five other men were indicted—Scharff said in letters to the FBI and Quillen that he had lied about the lawyers role. The indictment said Scharff told the grand jury April 19 that he never had a conversation with Quillen about getting his sentence reduced.

Blanton was ousted Jan. 17 — two days after he pardoned three persons and commuted the sentences of 49 convicts.

After U.S. Attorney Hal Hardin said he felt Blanton planned to commute the sentences of convicts who were targets of the grand jury probe, Democratic legislative leaders rallied behind Republican Lamar Alexander and he was sworn into office three days ahead of schedule.

The indictments bring to eight the number of persons the grand jury has accused in its investigation of allegations that pardons and commutations were sold during Blanton's administration.

On March 15, the grand jury indicted Quillen; Blanton's former legal counsel, T. Edward Sisk; Charles Benson, an extradition officer in Sisk's office; suspended Highway Patrol Lt. Fred Taylor; William Aubrey Thompson, a Chattanooga nightclub operator and former Hamilton County Democratic committeeman, and J.P. "Speedy" Murrell, Blanton's liaison with the Memphis black community. All pleaded innocent.

Strike continues

DENVER (AP) — More than 30 hours of round-the-clock talks between United Airlines and striking machinists failed to produce an agreement as the strike went into its 48th day today.

The marathon meetings began at 9 a.m. Tuesday and ended Wednesday night. The carrier and union negotiators were scheduled to resume talks today, said a spokesman for federal mediator Robert Harris.

Harris said the talks "have reached a crucial stage." United officials, meanwhile, said they were "discouraged with our failure to reach an agreement."

It is the longest strike in the history of the nation's largest air carrier, which was grounded for 46 days in 1966 by a work stoppage.

United normally carries 130,000 passengers daily. It has canceled all flights through May 26.

Father, 90, still defending 'Diary of Anne Frank'

LONDON (AP) — Otto Frank at the age of 90 says he is still going to court to fight persons who claim his daughter's diary was a fake.

"At this moment there are four trials going on in West Germany, two in Hamburg and two in Frankfurt, over accusations that 'The Diary of Anne Frank' is a fake," the old man told a reporter.

"I fought this charge in 1961 and won but still the accusations are made and I must fight and fight again."

Written when she was in her early teens, Anne Frank's account of eight Jews in hiding together from the Nazis in occupied Holland became an international best-seller after the war, and a successful play and movie were made from it.

Anne and her sister died in the Bergen-Belsen concentration camp in March 1945, three months before Anne's 16th birthday. Their father, the only member of the family to survive the war, came to London from his home in Switzerland to publicize a memorial program at the Theater Royal on June 12, the 50th anniversary of Anne's birth.

"Nazi sympathizers distribute pamphlets and other things saying Anne's diary is a hoax," said Frank. "I have lawyers engaged in these cases, but I have had to go to Hamburg with masses of documents."

He recalled one trial he said was adjourned after the defense counsel said his client was 70 years old and "too tired" to appear. "Then a young man came into the courtroom and actually handed out some of the pamphlets," said Frank.

In another trial, a court in Luebeck ordered experts to check the handwriting of the original manuscript and to compare the manuscript with the published diary.

"The report of the handwriting expert was 36 pages long," said Frank. "The expert checked every letter and said they were all written by Anne, but even that has not been enough to stop the accusations."

Frank was freed from the Auschwitz camp in Poland by the Soviet Army. Anne's diary was found by a cleaning woman after the Nazis raided the hiding place in Amsterdam, at 263 Prinsengracht, and was given to two girls who had helped the hidden group.

The memorial program on June 12 will include musical numbers and readings from the diary. The money raised will go to the Anne Frank Foundation, an educational trust housed in the Amsterdam hiding place, which has become a place of pilgrimage for young people from all over the world.

Veteran frog picker says business isn't what it used to be

SAUK CENTER, Minn. (AP) — The frog picking business just isn't what it used to be — done in by pesticides and too many people. But 70-year-old Gib Hedstrom still is about the best professional frog picker you'll find around these parts.

Hedstrom, who began his frog-picking career at the age of nine, can remember when frogs were plentiful.

"I've seen them when they've layed two or three tons thick in a slough within a hundred feet of the lake," he said. "When we used to frog years ago, when there was plenty of them, we'd try to find those places.

"Once we spotted them, we would just go back there every day. If you'd stick a dip net in there, you'd fill a whole gunnysack," Hedstrom said. "And you could stand there as long as you wanted, if you wanted to dip frogs. You'd just keep right on a dippin', and they'd just keep right on a comin'."

Hedstrom now collects about 2,000 frogs a year for medical research at the University of Minnesota. Most of them come from the area around Westport Lake near Sauk Centre in west-central Minnesota.

When he was nine years old, Hedstrom followed mowers in famers' fields and picked frogs up in the hay meadow. He got to know the frogs' habits. And now, no matter what time of year, he knows where to find frogs.

In the spring, they leave lakes and spread out to look for food, he said. Around harvest time, they search for cover in brush or grass, then start heading back toward the lakes for hibernation. In the winter, they hibernate just under the ice next to shoreline.

Hedstrom used to travel to Canada, Wisconsin, North and South Dakota, Iowa, Kansas and Nebraska to get his frogs when the season was closed in Minnesota.

"A great frog picker who could stay at it from 7 a.m. until 6 p.m. could pick 150 to 300 pounds a day," Hedstrom recalled.

But he found it hard to make a living at frog picking even in the good years, because "in them days, frogs were only worth eight cents a pound."

"The thing that's hurting us right now is the increase in population," he added. "People are doing away with all the marshes, small slough holes, pot holes and wherever there is water. And they're draining everything. There's nothing left for birds, fish or frogs, and frogs got to have water to spawn and pull through."

Other frog-killers are crop pesticides and chemicals.

INFLATION FIGHTING ideas

4 "What Cost Convenience?"

The U.S. Office of Consumer Affairs reminds us that while modern food technology has provided us with many convenience products that can save us time we, as consumers, should consider the "trade-offs." For example, frozen vegetables in a cream sauce offer a time-saving convenience but by taking a few extra minutes of your time, you can eliminate the additional cost of this "service."

In most cases, preparing food from "scratch" will cost you less and you may be serving food with better flavor and at least comparable quality.

If you have the time and the few additional ingredients you'll need to have on hand for cooking dishes from "scratch," you'll find yourself striking a telling blow against inflation.

Cat's place is the hangout for lots of folks in Rankin

You can call him "Cat," because that's who he is even if his name is Ruben Peterson. He runs a service station and gets — as well as gives — more tips on running city government than just about anybody. "Cat" is also a city councilman. And for years, he fried the best catfish in Rankin. (Staff Photo by Ed Todd)

RANKIN — Years ago, when Ruben Peterson finally settled down in Rankin, there weren't many people here.

There's still not. About 1,105.

And Peterson, who's best known as "Cat," drove into town when the universe was young — if you can believe Tommy Owens, who's one of the many friendly chaps who often hangs around Cat's place.

"When 'Cat' came, the moon wasn't that big," Owens said, as he made a circle about the size of a half dollar with his hand, "and there hardly weren't any stars."

The "Cat" got a chuckle out of that.

Well, Rankin probably has changed a lot in those 23 years.

But the "Cat" has stayed constant.

He came here from Brady in 1952, pumped a little gasoline, returned to his home country, and came back to Rankin to stay in 1956.

He pumped more gasoline at the old Sinclair filling station.

Today, he's got his own business — the Exxon station in town.

And business, like his friendship, is so good and bountiful that he's thinking about letting the station take on the qualities of a doctor's office:

"I'M GOING to ration gasoline," he says he tells the town physician, Dr. James Gossett, "charge $7 a gallon per person, and you're going to have to get an appointment."

He was jesting, of course, though fuel may be rationed as prices keep going up, the demand increases and the supply decreases.

"They know what the prices are," Cat said of motorists looking for the cheapest fuel in town, "and they're going to have to take it or leave it."

He's in the same bind himself.

Now, what really made Cat the talk of the town and created conversation in Midland, Odessa, Big Spring and elsewhere was his catfish joint — The Buckland Inn — he operated on the southwest part of town for about four years, beginning in 1965.

He rented out an old shack of a vacant restaurant, fixed it up and converted it to a food-and-beer place.

"We came here, cleaned it out, painted it and worked like hell," Cat said.

ROUSTIN' ABOUT with Ed Todd

The effort paid off.

"He served the best catfish in West Texas — the best food in West Texas," said Owens, who was one of his regulars. "He had the best damned catfish and the coldest beer."

THE CAT AGREED that the food he, his wife Mary and his sister Ruby Burnett cooked was dog-gone good.

"We didn't do any of this 'modern stuff'" in the kitchen, he said. "We just rolled the catfish in cornmeal, salted and peppered it and threw it in that hot grease."

"It was just country-cooked meals," said Owens.

"Oh, I guess that's why they liked it," the Cat said.

For four years, Cat was running both the restaurant and the filling station.

"He didn't need a bed," Owens joked. "He just needed a lantern" in going from work to work.

Cat closed up the kitchen and beer-hall in 1969, and stayed at the station.

"It's just hard operating both, and I could make more money down here than I could up there," he said.

Besides, he had seven children and a wife to support.

Today, there's only two kids still in the roost.

"My tribe is reducing pretty well."

—Edward is a careerman — a drill sergeant — in the U.S. Army. He's stationed at Fort Knox, Ky.

—Barbara Bowens is a schoolteacher in Abilene.

—Charles is a senior at Angelo State University, though he's helping his father pump gasoline this summer.

—Pansy is in nursing school at San Angelo.

—Sylvia is a graduating senior at Rankin.

—Michael is closing out his sophomore year in high school here.

—And Trina, the "baby," is in junior high school.

THOUGH HE no longer runs a catfish-beer place, the Cat does let his filling station transform, at will, into an office, joshing hall, hideaway and into a general "bull" shop.

Cat's place is a hangout, from time to time, for lots of folks, including the county judge, Peggy Garner. And Cat, who gives and receives counsel, is a Rankin city councilman.

Gossett, the joshing doctor who has been practicing medicine here for 27 years, is a good friend of Cat. Fact is, they went into partnership together in 1964 to get the service station, which Cat manages.

"Seriously," Gossett said, "he's one of the nicest guys in Rankin. He's probably got more friends than me or Shorty (Titsworth)."

Cat, who didn't overhear that, said Gossett is just down-to-earth.

"He's an everyday, old country boy," Cat said of the Doc.

Titsworth, a retired welder who also dealt in iron, said he has "quit work." He has been in Rankin about 50 years — as long as Cat and Gossett put together have.

RANKIN SCHOOL Superintendent A.C. Copeland dropped by the station and jawed a bit with Cat and with some of his former students, such as Jim Bob Kelly, Frank Self and Cat's son, Charlie.

They razzed Copeland about his earlier principal days, when he freely swung the paddle to let the students know that discipline was not a dying art and that a sincerely serious paddling might be more effective than stern words spoken sincerely.

Donnie Cole, who ducked in to pay a bill, said he knows "plenty" about Cat but kept quiet.

While the others were joshing and generally "shooting the bull," son Charlie, like helping-hand Rusty Lee, were waiting on customers.

Senate OKs deceptive trade bill

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Business-supported changes in the state's law against deceptive trade practices got a final 28-3 vote from the Senate Wednesday and went to the governor.

The Senate bill, with amendments, was approved by the House 89-40 last Friday.

In its original trip through the Senate the measure sparked 24 hours of filibustering, including one 15-hour stint by Sen. Lloyd Doggett, D-Austin.

Doggett continued to vote against the measure Wednesday night but refused to filibuster again.

"I think it is sterile ... but the House cleaned it up a bit," Doggett said in the brief Senate discussion.

One of the principal House changes would mandate tripling of the first $1,000 in actual damages in a deceptive trade practice lawsuit. If the defendant's conduct was knowingly deceptive, judges and juries could decide whether triple damages would be imposed past the first $1,000.

Union organizer dies

NEW YORK (AP) — A. Philip Randolph began by turning a handful of sleeping car porters into the first black union with an international charter from the American Federation of Labor. Later he helped ban segregation in the armed forces, fought it in the labor movement and organized the gigantic 1963 March on Washington for civil rights.

On Wednesday, he died at the age of 90, and both the labor and civil rights movements lost one of their oldest champions.

"No other living American has done more to seek justice for all the poor, the working classes and the minorities in our society and around the world than has A. Philip Randolph," said civil rights leader Bayard Rustin.

Randolph died at his home on Manhattan's West Side. Rustin said Randolph had been suffering for some time with heart problems and high blood pressure. Randolph's body will be cremated, Rustin said, adding that a memorial service will be held in Harlem in about a month.

"We believe we should take him home," said Rustin. He said Randolph had no known living relatives, but "millions of friends."

Although Randolph began his labor organizing about 1910, it was his 1937 victory in accomplishing the unionization of the Pullman Co. — a battle that had taken 12 years — that brought him to the nation's attention as a new black leader.

He considered himself primarily a writer and editor, but he spent the next three decades as one of the century's major black leaders and one of the founders of the modern civil rights movement.

Born Asa Philip Randolph in Crescent City, Fla., April 15, 1889, the son of an African Methodist Church preacher, Randolph moved north after finishing high school to work as an elevator operator, a porter for Consolidated Edison Co., and a waiter on the Fall River Line.

The Fall River Line discharged him for trying to organize his co-workers. In 1917, he organized a small union of elevator operators and campaigned among motion picture operators and garment trade workers. And in 1925 he began organizing sleeping car porters in Harlem into what became the International Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters.

An advocate of non-violent change, he was an activist nonetheless, leading four marches on Washington between 1957 and 1963 and bringing his demands for equality before five presidents.

One of those presidents, Lyndon B. Johnson, awarded him the Medal of Freedom, this country's top civilian honor, in 1964.

In 1941, Randolph planned a large march to protest exclusion of blacks from defense plants. But the march was canceled after he and other black leaders arranged a meeting with President Franklin D. Roosevelt. Out of that meeting came an executive order and a Fair Employment Practices Committee to enforce it.

One of his major concerns in the post World War II era was the treatment of American blacks in the armed forces. A meeting with President Harry S. Truman resulted in an executive order to end segregation in the military.

Randolph was also instrumental in forcing the AFL-CIO to outlaw racial discrimination when the American Federation of Labor and the Congress of Industrial Organizations merged in 1955. In 1957 he was elected a vice president of the AFL-CIO and later became a member of its executive council.

Randolph was a staunch defender of the civil rights records of Johnson and his predecessor, John F. Kennedy. And Kennedy, for his part, said after the huge 1963 March on Washington, which took place under Randolph's aegis: "The cause of 20 million Negroes has been advanced."

Weicker pulls out of race

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Lowell P. Weicker, R-Conn., gave a campaign and not enough people came.

So he called a news conference in Hartford, Conn., Wednesday and took himself out of the running for the Republican presidential nomination, a prize he originally had pledged to seek in every state primary.

His decision, just two months after his formal announcement, surprised the political world and stunned his staff.

Other seekers of the nomination, including Sen. Robert Dole, R-Kan., began laying plans to lure Weicker supporters to their camps.

"My mind is blown and I'm sitting here in a state of shock," said a Weicker staff member who asked not to be identified by name.

"On Friday the senator had a 20-minute chat with an editor from Texas and sounded like a candidate all the way," he said.

"On Monday he had an appointment in his office with his pollster, Tully Plesser.

"And at 10:20 a.m. today (Wednesday) we were told that he was out."

Wednesday was Weicker's 48th birthday. He ignored that in pulling out of the race.

Police union official views Big Spring politics

BIG SPRING — Richard Kesselus, technical adviser with the International Brotherhood of Police Officers is "taking the political temperature" of the city concerning civil service standards for local police and firefighters.

Local police and firefighters began a petition drive April 11, seeking enough signatures to call for a city-wide referendum on a changeover to civil service.

Kesselus said more than enough signatures had been obtained and the filing for a referendum should be soon.

"We want to stress that we are interested in wiping out the possibility of a strike, and civil service will help," he said. "It will give the city a good set of tools to govern regulations and policies."

Woman sought in stabbing

ODESSA — Police early today continued looking for a Midland woman charged Tuesday with aggravated assault, officials said.

Sharon Ann Scrugg, age unknown, was charged as a result of an investigation into the stabbing of a 25-year-old Odessa woman.

Patricia Ann Gilbreath, who made the complaint against Ms. Scrugg, was stabbed in the chest, back and head after an argument with another woman on April 18, officials said. The incident occurred at Gilbreath's apartment.

The charges were filed in Municipal Court Judge Otis Moore's chambers.

African child murders denied

PARIS (AP) — Premier Henri Maidou of the Central African Empire has issued a denial of charges that up to 100 children were murdered by soldiers of Emperor Bokassa's Imperial Guard.

The denial came in a statement over Radio Bangui, delivered to news organizations in Paris today by the country's national press agency.

Maidou said that some 50 students "all aged over 16" had been arrested during demonstrations in Bangui, the capital, April 18.

They were released April 20 on Bokassa's order, Maidou said.

"It should be noted that certain demonstrators — about 140 — went to the Zaire town of Zongo across the Oubangui River opposite Bangui to escape police controls," Maidou said.

"Informed by the local Zaire authorities, the Central African government invited the children to rejoin their families, which was done," his statement continued.

Hobbs axes bond issue

HOBBS, N.M. — Voters Tuesday shot down a $6 million bond issue earmarked for use in building a new elementary school and in financing renovation and remodeling on other schools by a 61-vote margin.

The defeat marked the first time voters had turned down a bond proposal by the Hobbs Independent School District.

The second issue on the ballot, a $2 million levy, was approved by only three votes.

Approximately $1.02 million collected from the levy will be used for new roofing and insulation at many schools, with about $800,000 going for instructional and maintainence equipment at all schools.

SAVAK men shot in Iran

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — Revolutionary firing squads in the holy city of Mashhad executed two former SAVAK secet police torturers today, the official Pars news agency reported.

It said Gholam Reza Pour-Rahimi, and police Sgt. Akbar Rasadtam were convicted of torture and executed at 2.30 a.m.

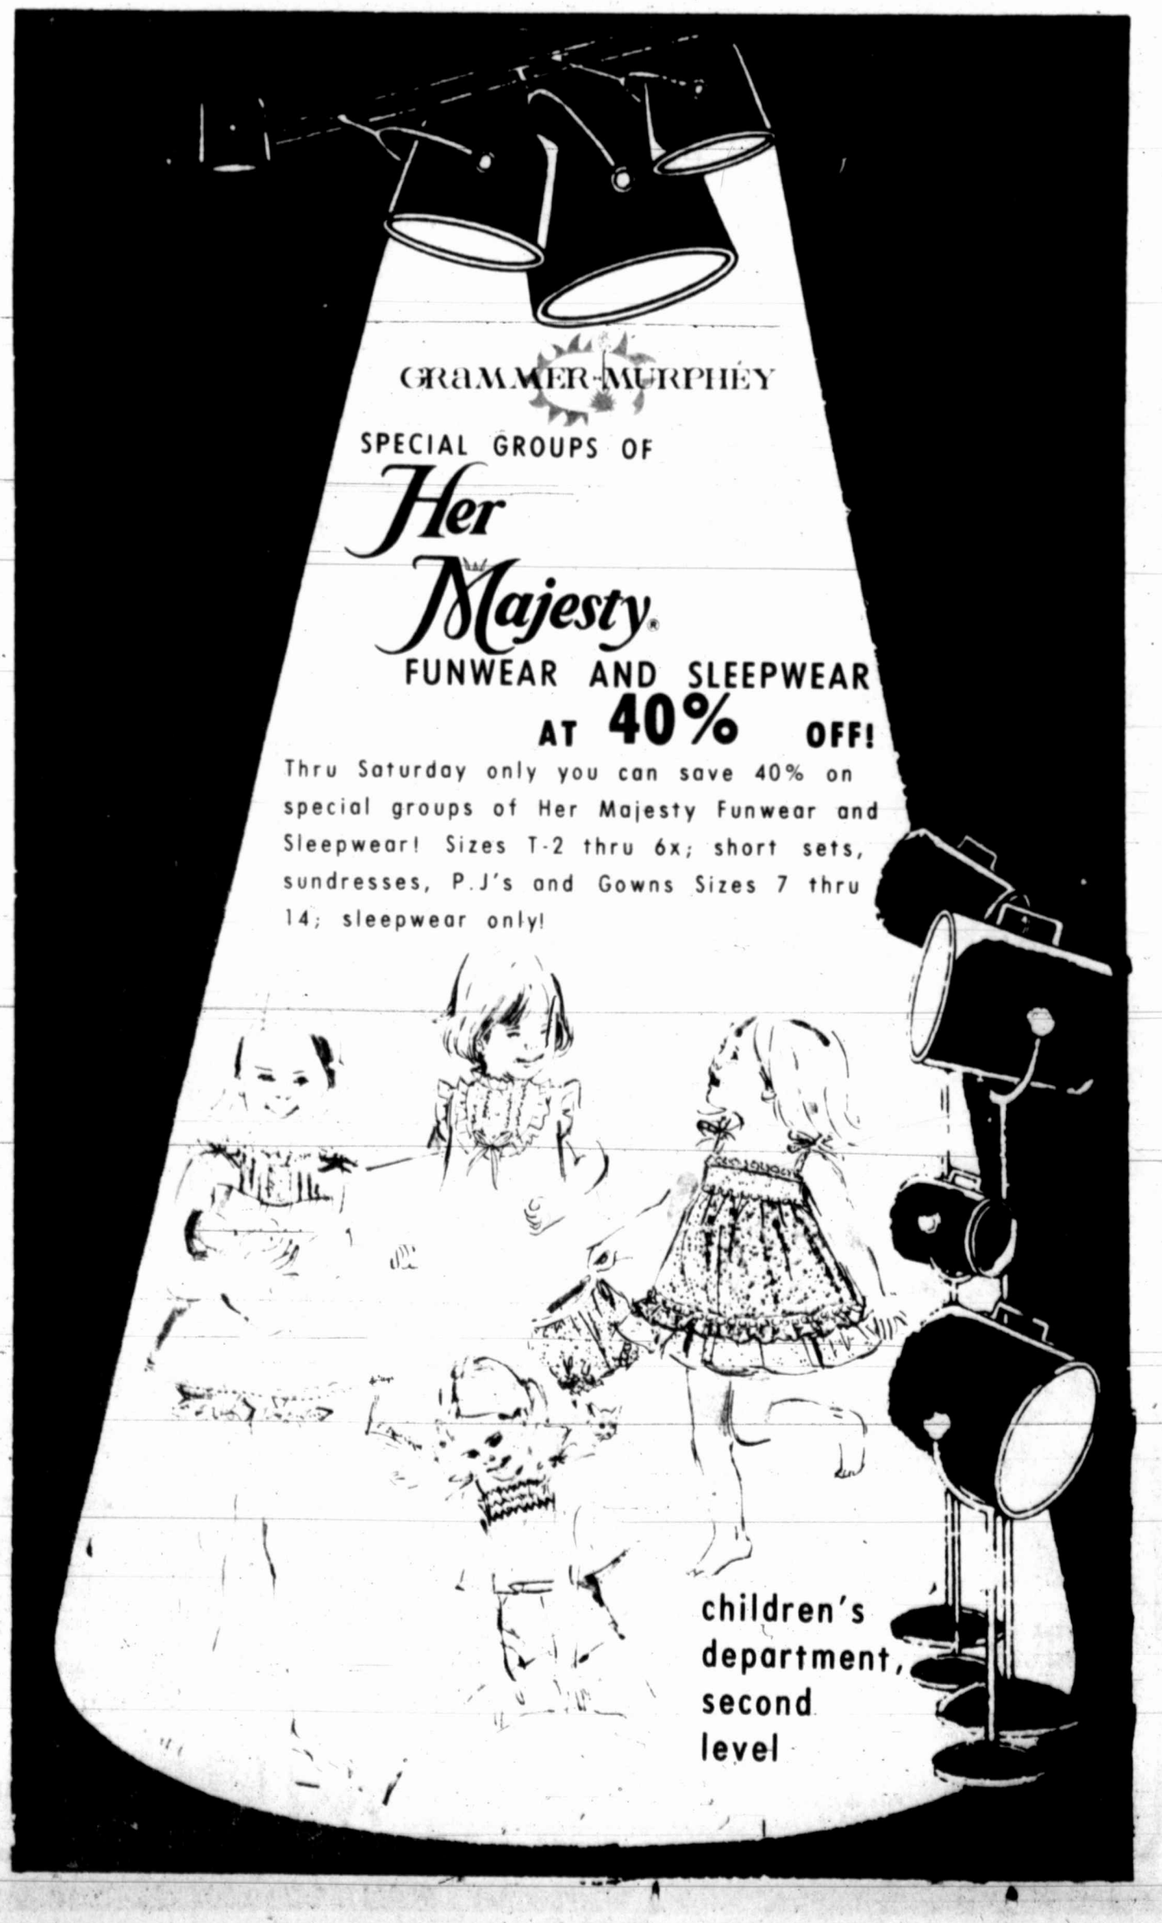

The deaths brought the execution toll to 212 since Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini's forces ousted the regime of Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi four months ago. They also coincided with Khomeini's 79th birthday, announced by the state radio.

'You are not alone with EA'

"God grant me the serenity to accept the things I cannot change,
Courage to change the things I can,
And the wisdom to know the difference."

By PATSY GORDON
Lifestyle Writer

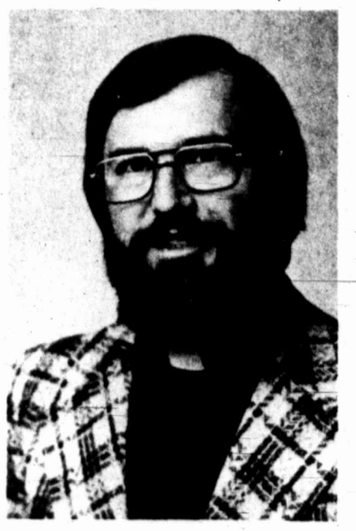

If your life is like a shoe that pinches or if you are just not as happy as you would like to be, there is a Midland group that may be what you need.

Emotions Anonymous is a fellowship of persons who share their experiences, strengths, weaknesses, feelings and hopes with one another to solve their emotional problems and-or to learn to live at peace with unsolved problems.

"We have people looking for a small group where they can share, get acceptance and not feel alone in their problems," said the Rev. David Baker, pastor of Hope Lutheran Church, where EA holds its meetings every Tuesday at 7 p.m.

EA is a spiritual program, said Baker, not a religious one. "People come to EA to learn a new way of life through a 12-step program."

The steps suggest a belief in a power greater than ourselves, "God as we understand him," said Baker. "The program does not attempt to tell us what our Higher Power must be. It can be whatever we choose; for example, human love, a force for good, the group itself, nature, the universe or the traditional God (Deity)."

Rev. David Baker

"Midland," said Baker, "has a lot of stress. Strangers to the city that must cope with new jobs and new schools are looking for a support group."

Baker sees EA as an outreach of his church. "It is part of the ministry at Hope to meet the needs of the whole person."

The program, said Baker, is designed so as not to interfere with any other counseling or therapy. "The program is for people who have problems, but are still in touch with reality. It is not equipped to handle people who are severely handicapped emotionally."

"The people who come to EA are frightened, broken, scared and very fragile," he added. "They are people who hate their jobs, are divorced, widowed or depressed—family oriented type problems."

Baker pointed out that EA is "a real challenge. It provides an opportunity for me to keep my therapeutic skills sharpened.

Baker feels there is a "shortage of mental health care facilities and personnel in the city."

Emotions Anonymous was started July 6, 1971 in St. Paul, Minn. The Midland group was organized two years ago by the Rev. Elmer Burrall, then pastor of Hope Lutheran. It was re-formed in September 1978 by Baker.

Emotions Anonymous is a non-profit organization, supported by the voluntary contributions of its members.

Baker has a BA degree in sociology from Concordia Lutheran College, and did his chaplain residency at St. Lukes Episcopal Hopsital and Texas Children's Hospital and Texas Heart Institute. He was involved in six-months training at the Jung Center in Houston. He was graduated from Lutheran Theological Seminary.

Anyone interested in more information about the local Emotions Anonymous group, can contact Baker at 683-1936.

"You are not alone with EA," said Baker.

...Many Girl Scout patrons are wondering what is in all those cookies, besides rolled oats, sesame seed and cinnamon, that justifies $1.25 a box, said Ava Jane Warren of the Permian Basin Girl Scout Center in Midland.

Contrary to popular belief, it's not sugar and spice that's making all those little girls nice; indirectly, it's the proceeds from the sales that are used to develop a quality program.

Aside from the monetary profits, "we try to foster in the girls a sense of responsibility and organization, by taking orders, through honesty and willpower in delivering them, and finally a sense of accomplisment and pride in their achievements," said Mrs. Warren.

"Of course, these are ideals, and it takes much more than a two-week cookie sale to enhance these values. That's where monetary profit comes in," she added.

"The profits from the shortbreads, chocolate mint and peanut butter sandwiches are three fold. First, 15 cents of every box sold goes into the girls' troop fund. In addition, girls receive incentives from their hard work, and finally, but most important, they earn 'cookie currency', which may be used toward many opportunities within the council, with the most popular being camping activities.

"Here it all ties together, the rest of the profits are set aside for the development of our camps. But why camp? Because we believe that all the activities done year around, the summer offers the girls a unique experience in living in and exploring the world of the out-of-doors. We are constantly changing, adding on and revising. Not just to the physical attractiveness and safety of our camps, but also to the program opportunities. Girls come in all different ages, shapes, colors and interests, and we are trying each year to expand the variety of what we have to offer the girls.

"Several opportunities are offered to girls in the area to participate in camping experiences. Mitre Peak, located in the Davis Mountains, will have sessions lasting from one to six weeks in June and July. Other girls will travel with their troops to Hat-A-Ranch, a working sheep ranch near Bakersfield, for their summer fun.

"Many towns in the 16 counties served by the Permian Basin Girl Scout Council will have their own day camps. As you can see, Girl Scouts in this area can look forward to a wonderful summer."

...A CLASS REUNION for persons that attended Lubbock Senior High School in 1951 has been scheduled for June 23. Members of the 1950 and 1952 classes also are invited to attend the activities.

Persons interested in attending the reunion for the students and faculty of the class of '51 should write: Reunion, 2518 58th St., Lubbock, 79413, or phone 1-806-795-9830 for more information.

...JESSICA HUDDLESTON, graduating senior at Lee High School, was guest of honor at a backyard sundae party at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Evers. She is the daughter of Dr. and Mrs. James Huddleston.

Lisa Evers presented a gift and served 17 guests. The group played ping pong and croquet.

Miss Huddleston will attend Texas A&M University in the fall. She is an honor graduate at Lee and is active in the State Honors Band at Lee. She has lettered in band and academics while at LHS.

...CONVERSATIONAL HEBREW CLASS is being offered on Thursdays from 7:30 p.m. to 9 p.m.

The level of study ranges from beginning to intermediate, and is individually oriented. Biblical Hebrew, as well as Israeli culture and lifestyle, is also included in the program. The classes are held on a continuing basis.

Any interested person may call 683-8897 for further information.

Skippy cartoonist was gifted, famous, but felt he was failure

By BOB LEVEY
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — He never had Charlie Brown's wryness, or Superman's suaveness. For dumpiness, Dagwood Bumstead had him dead to rights. For dopiness, he never came close to Beetle Bailey.

But Skippy was as popular as all of them combined. Maybe more. Arguably, he was one the most popular comic strip character ever to come along.

Not arguably, his end was one of the saddest.

Skippy was a little pen-and-ink boy with a floppy hat, short pants, falling-down socks and a knack for getting into heart-warming kinds of trouble. For 20 years, through the Depression and World War II, Skippy was the featured character of his creator, Percy Crosby. Then, on Dec. 8, 1945, without warning, Skippy disappeared from American newspapers.

A lot of people wondered where he had gone, and why. Many pleaded for his return. Entrepreneurs tried briefly and unsuccessfully to resurrect Skippy.

But Percy Crosby had interred Skippy — and was midway in the long process of interring himself.

Financially rocky, alcoholically overboard, furiously and publicly anti-Roosevelt from the time FDR moved to the White House, Percy Crosby "must have been a deeply unhappy man" in 1945, says his daughter, Joan Crosby Tibbetts. "I'm sure he thought he was a lousy failure, even though he was gifted, world-famous."

In 1948, Percy Crosby attempted suicide in his New York apartment by slashing his wrists. A short time later, he was confined to the mental ward of a veterans' hospital on Long Island. He spent 16 years there, until he died of stomach cancer in 1964, on his 73d birthday.

Crosby had five children by the first two of his three marriages. But from the time he divorced his second wife, none of the children was allowed to know his whereabouts, or even to discuss him. In the late 1950s, according to Tibbets, the children, by then all adults, were told he had died. None, as it turned out, ever saw their father again.

But Joan Tibbetts, now 46, remembers "asking questions. We just kept asking questions." At 15, she "resogved that, when I grow up, I'm going to write a book about my father." As a collge student, she did my "damnedest to find him, or find out about him. I missed him very, very much.

"There is a chocolate and vanilla side of everybody," says Tibbetts, who livesin Reston, Va. "I wanted to see my chocolate side."

It began to reveal itself a week after her father died. Tibbetts was then living in Pleasantville, N.Y. Her husband called her from his New York office one morning to tell her that her long puzzlement was over. Her father's obituary was in that morning's New York Times.

The only Crosby child then living in the New York area, Tibbetts went to Kings Park, the hospital where her father had been confined. She retrieved his personal effects and much of his work, which included hundreds of paintings and thousands of cartoons.

In the 15 years since, Tibbetts has been "obsessed, yes, I guess you could say obsessed" with rehabilitating her father's reputation and resurrecting Skippy.

Doctors who treated Percy Crosby at Kings Park have assured her that "he was not insane," Tibbetts says. "He kept telling everyne he was famous, and they thought he was hallucinating. My father's sin was that he was vitriolic and vocal. The only way to shut him up was to put him away."

The volume and venom of Percy Crosby's voice was first displayed publicly in 1933, at the height of his career.

Crosby was deeply disturbed by Roosevelt's New Deal. He thought it signaled the encroachment of socialism into the democratic traditions. But the rather innocent, nonpolitical Skippy comic strip was not the place to protest. So Crosby bought full-page ads in major newspapers, most of which carried his cartoons, to denounce the president.

"Sure, he was naive," his daughter says. "If you like your bread and butter, you don't do that kind of thing."

He never had Charlie Brown's wryness, or Superman's suaveness. For dumpiness, Dagwood Bumstead had him dead to rights. For dopiness, he never came close to Beatle Bailey.

HOROSCOPE

By CARROLL RIGHTER
(Fri., May 18)

GENERAL TENDENCIES: This is the day to sit back and observe what others are doing and to avoid expressing any critical opinions of those activities which you do not like. By being quiet and getting in tune with those about you, you could make considerable headway.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Take care you do not annoy others in any way today. Elevate your thoughts to that which is inspiring. Steer clear of arguments in any social contact you make.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Showing admiration for bigwigs who have done you many favors is wise and staves off any possible misunderstandings. Be more willing to compromise on some bill instead of flatly refusing to pay it and get good results.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Study well into new situations and don't jump recklessly into anything as yet. Your hunches are not very good now, so don't follow them implicitly — use mature judgement.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Listening carefuly to advice of closest tie can bring about fine results. Know what your obligations are and how best to handle them.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Take time to be kind to a partner who is irritated and needs gentle handling. Don't try to deal with anything of a difficult nature today.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Get right to work on whatever is important and take advice from partners also and this becomes a very productive day. Take time to improve health in some way. Forget the social for now.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Finish tasks before going out for recreation. Relax and be more willing to meet expectations of loved ones and increase mutual happiness. Avoid a known troublemaker.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) If you are considerate of those who dwell with you, you gain their understanding and affection. Not a good day for entertaining.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) You best success today comes from writing, communicating with others on the phone, etc. Regular associates will be very willing to cooperate now. Make the most of this.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Perk up your property with needed repairs. Try to please others more. Be objective if you have problems you need to solve.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Sharpen up your appearance so that you can get out socially later and make a fine impression. Plan how to save more money for possible emergencies later on.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Go to an expert for the advice you need and then use it wisely. A loved one needs help with some problems, so be sure to help where you can. Show you are devoted and thoughtful.

Arrangements topic of club's program

Maria Spencer, president, gave a report on the two Japanese block pine trees donated to the Permian Basin Girl Scout Center at 901 W. Dengar Ave. for the center's courtyard.

Neta Stovall presented a program on "Arrangements, Flowers and Plants For Interior Decorations," which included how to cut and condition flowers for arrangements, whether home grown or commercial.

Home Furnishing News

By Peggy Hodges

One of the things in home decor that young people take to enthusiastically, but their older brothers and sisters (or parents) resist, is the lively mixing of patterns. The trend is a sharp break from one of the older "rules" that you shouldn't have a room too "busy" with color and pattern.

Today's emphasis is often quite different. Our's is a more visual age (partly because of television) and the eye is able to take in much more without confusion. A variety of color and pattern in the same room is entertaining to the eye trained by quick changes on color TV.

You will find appealing rooms today that show a colorful floral pattern on a sofa, with various cushions scattered here and there with different patterns. Draperies or wall hangings may add other patterns, floors or throw rugs still more. And the effect can be harmonious and pleasing (though the grandparents may still shudder a little.)

One tip: even when using a multiplicity of patterns and colors, you will often get more effective results by having one or two colors that repeat to give unity, or an overall motif, such as floral one, dominating.

Color and pattern make a lively show in many of our fine upholstered pieces, sofas, loveseats and chairs, to be mixed or matched as you please. Come in...where new ideas in home interiors go hand-in-hand with such old virtues as quality, craftsmanship and service.

California strawberries make old-fashioned sodas and frappes delectable refreshment for summer.

Strawberries make super sodas

SAN FRANCISCO, CA. — At the turn of the century it was practically a prerequisite that any drugstore worth its place on the corner have a soda fountain featuring a variety of refreshing, frothy concoctions.

The drugstore soda fountain is a uniquely American phenomenon. It was as comfortable and neighborly an experience as chatting around the kitchen table is today. The soda itself is actually a native invention. In 1930, a Philadephia druggist forced fizz into plain drinking water which ultimately revolutionized the world's beverage habits.

Adding flavorings to this new carbonated water was a simple process. These fountain favorites were first called "phosphates." The sweet, fruit flavor of fresh strawberries made these early concoctions irresistible. Their ruby-red color and juicy sweet flavor brighten the morning, add sparkle to lunch and, of course, star at the dessert hour. Strawberries are good for you, too. One cup supplies a full day's requirement for vitamin C as well as providing other important nutrients. They are also a good friend to the calorie watcher. One cup has only about 60 calories.

FOOD

OLD FASHIONED STRAWBERRY SODA

2 pints fresh strawberries, crushed
1 1/4 cups sugar
2 tablespoons lemon juice
Vanilla ice cream
Chilled soda water

In saucepan, combine berries and sugar. Bring to boil; cook, stirring, over medium heat, until sugar has dissolved and mixture thickens slightly, about 5 minutes. Cool; stir in lemon juice; Store in covered container in refrigerator. To make each soda: blend 1/4 cup chilled strawberry sauce with a tablespoonful of ice cream in bottom of tall soda glass. Top with a generous scoop of ice cream; gradually pour in soda water to fill. Serve with spoon and straw.

Makes 3 cups sauce, enough for 12 sodas.

DEAR ABBY

Make a gift of yourself

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: How many times have you heard grown children (usually married) say to their parents, "You are so hard to buy a gift for. We are running out of ideas." Well, this is an open letter to our children:

DEAR CHILDREN:

I wish you would realize that we older parents don't need any more "things."

Do you know what we would consider a really fine present? Just a simple meal in your kitchen with a chance to enjoy some conversation with you and our grandchildren with no one else around.

You invite us to big parties to celebrate birthdays, anniversaries and holidays, but it's always too crowded and noisy for conversation or visiting with the children. And you are too busy being host and hostess to even know we are there.

So instead of trying to find a fancy gift for Mom and Dad, please give us the gift of simple hospitality. We would love it.—THE FOLKS

DEAR FOLKS: I hope your children don't miss this column.

DEAR ABBY: I am about to lose my mind. My father is 83, in fairly good health, retired and living alone in a very nice, modern home. My problem is in getting someone to keep house for him.

Housekeepers quit him one after another. The last one was a very unattractive farm woman in her late 60s. She was a good housekeeper, and I paid her twice what she could get anywhere else, but she quit after one week!

When I asked her why, she said she'd rather not say, but she did agree to clean for him daily if I would stay in the house with her, or if my father would get OUT of the house, but she wouldn't stay alone in the house with him.

Now, Abby, I cannot imagine my father making improper advances to her, or any of these other housekeepers, but what else am I to think?

What would you do if you were in my shoes?—BAFFLED IN BUFFALO

DEAR BAFFLED: Hire a male domestic.

DEAR ABBY: I have a young friend whose wife died after they had been married only five years.

My friend has received numerous verbal requests, and more recently a handwritten one, from his late wife's mother asking that the wedding gifts (china, silver, crystal, etc.) be sent to the late wife's mother now that her daughter is gone.

The mother contends that since her side of the family (and their friends) contributed most of the gifts, they are now rightfuly hers.

Does good etiquette demand that a surviving spouse give the wedding gifts to the relatives of the deceased when a death occurs several years after the wedding?&GENUINELY PUZZLED

DEAR PUZZLED: Wedding gifts are returned only if the marriage is dissolved within one year after it takes place. And then they are returned to the senders.

If a couple has been married for a year or more, and one dies, the wedding gifts become the property of the remaining spouse, unless otherwise specified in a will.

Are you the lonely face in the crowd? Friends make you a winner, and Abby tells you how to win them in her booklet, "How To Be Popular; You're Never Too Young or Too Old." Send $1 with a long, self-addressed, stamped (28 cents) envelope to Abby: 132 Lasky Drive, Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212.

Macbride denies trying for journalist licensing

PARIS (AP) — A UNESCO-sponsored commission on international communications opened a two-day debate today on proposals to protect journalists, following assurances from the commission chairman that there is "no deep, dark UNESCO plot to regiment journalists."

Representatives of 30 international press and broadcasting organizations, mostly from the developing and Socialist countries, were invited to participate in the conference at the Paris headquarters of the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization.

Commission Chairman Sean Macbride of Ireland, winner of both the Nobel and Lenin Peace Prizes, went to great lengths in an interview Wednesday with the Associated Press to reassure critics that his campaign was not a veiled effort to establish international licensing of journalists.

Kissinger calls for Western unity

HOUSTON (AP) — The industrialized nations of the West should unite in an effort to protect themselves from a crisis caused by a sudden interruption in the flow of Arabian crude, said former Secretary of State Henry Kissinger.

He also said the United States should use military force "if any outside power or terrorist group attempts to stop" the flow of oil from the Middle East.

El Salvador leftists seize church

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — Anti-government militants who hold 14 hostages in the French and Venezuelan Embassies have seized their seventh Roman Catholic Church.

Members of the Popular Revolutionary Bloc, El Salavador's strongest anti-government group, occupied the Maria Auxiliadora Church Wednesday night.

Tories call Trudeau liar

OTTAWA (AP) — The Conservative Party called Prime Minister Pierre Elliott Trudeau a liar after the Liberal Party chief said Conservative leader Joe Clark was going back on his campaign pledge to cut 60,000 employees from the public payroll over a three-year period.

With the campaign for the May 22 general election in its final week, Trudeau in a speech Wednesday night at Sault Ste. Marie said the Conservative promise to reduce government spending was based on a 20 percent reduction in the 300,000-person bureaucracy by attrition.

Soviets walk out on speech

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — The Soviet Bloc walked out today when the wife of Ieng Sary, the deputy premier of the deposed Cambodian Communist government, rose to address the fifth U.N. Conference on Trade and Development.

Yugoslavia did not participate in the boycott, but the delegations from Vietnam, Cuba, Angola and Afghanistan left also.

Cuba chief returns to Mexico

COZUMEL, Mexico (AP) — Fidel Castro, who left the Mexican coast 23 years ago to begin his revolution, returns today for the first time since then for talks with President Jose Lopez Portillo. The bearded Cuban president also plans some skin diving.

Lopez Portillo will be accompanied in the talks by his new foreign minister, Jorge Castaneda, who replaced Santiago Roel Garcia in a major Cabinet shakeup on the eve of Castro's arrival.

Castro is expected to discuss increasing the $2 million Cuba exports to Mexico in rum, cigars and nickel and talk about buying Mexican oil, fishing questions and Central American affairs, sources said.

Cuba had a $20 million trade deficit with Mexico last year and wants Mexican goods and materials to develop its island industries.

Lopez portillo will meet with Castro today and Friday and a joint communique will be released.

Castro plans some skin diving Friday morning to look at coral formations in the turquoise waters surrounding Cozumel island, sources said.

After the last round of talks, Castro and Lopez Portillo are to fly to Tulum by helicopter to tour the Mayan archeological ruins, then visit the Xel-Ha lagoon, one of the world's most varied natural aquariums.

From Xel-Ha, Castro and Lopez Portillo will travel by bus to the Caribbean resort of Cancun, famous for its white sand beaches, for a round of private talks before Castro flies home.

Castro was last in Mexico as an exile in 1955-56 and sailed from Tuxpan on the invasion that resulted in the overthrow of Cuban dictator Fulgencio Batista on New Year's Day 1959.

On Wednesday night, Lopez Portillo accepted the resignations of his foreign minister, Interior Minister Jesus Reyes Heroles, and Ricardo Garcia Sainz, his budget and programming minister.

Lopez Portillo named Enrique Olivares Santana interior minister and Miguel de la Madrid budget and programming minister.

Troops near Amin's stronghold

LIRA, Uganda (AP) — Troops extending the new Ugandan government's control across the northern part of the country are 180 miles from deposed dictator Idi Amin's stronghold after capturing this Acholi tribal capital and killing 65 Amin troops.

The capture of Lira by a force of Tanzanian and Ugandan forces left Amin's men with only two district capitals — Gulu, 60 miles to the northwest, and Arua, 120 miles farther on, where the remnants of Amin's army are expected to make their last stand.

There was no word on the progress of a second column advancing toward Gulu. It was at Masindi, 90 miles southwest of Gulu, on May 8.

The whereabouts of Amin, the former army commander who presided over a reign of terror for eight years, remained a mystery. He was reported seen on May 4 in Arua, the capital of his native West Nile district, but there has been no word of him since.

Lira was taken by a force of about 1,000 troops who in a month advanced 120 miles east from Kampala to secure the supply routes from Kenya, then turned to the northwest and during an advance of about 140 miles occupied the district capitals of Mbale and Soroti.

Amin's troops fell back on Lira, where the Christian Acholis had been frequent targets of the Moslem dictator.

"They took over completely," said a man from a nearby village. "If you went into town, they would ask you what you were doing there, why you were coming into their town."

The advancing column took the troops in Lira by surprise, avoiding the highway from Soroti, crossing Lake Kyoga by ferry and then following cow paths cross-country through forests and swamps.

"This is why we can always surprise them," a Tanzanian officer said. "We can move a brigade through places a company couldn't move."

The attack on Lira began at dawn Tuesday, with a 30-minute artillery barrage, followed by a ground push into the town.

Amin's troops panicked and fled, but many were cut down by heavy fire from the attackers' automatic weapons and mortars. The bodies of 65 men were found, and 15 were captured, while three Tanzanian soldiers were killed and two were wounded.

Lira was deserted when the victors enterd the town. Nearly every house and store had been ransacked.

Amin, who deposed President Milton Obote in 1971, delighted Black Africa for years with his defiance of Britain and the United States, his expulsion of the Asian commercial community and his buffoonery. But he went too far when he seized 710 square miles of northern Tanzania last November and claimed it was Ugandan territory.

Tanzanian President Julius Nyerere, one of Black Africa's most respected leaders, sent his army into the disputed area. His troops chased Amin's troops out and then kept on going into southwest Uganda, accompanied by Ugandan exiles who had fled Amin's purges that took an estimated 300,000 lives.

The invaders' advance through southwest Uganda was slow, but when they finally laid siege to Kampala early in April, Amin's army disintegrated. The capital fell on April 11.

Turkish leftists gunned down

ANKARA, Turkey (AP) — Three masked men with machine guns killed seven leftist students and wounded two others, apparently in retaliation for the killing of two rightist youths the day before, police reported.

The three gunmen were believed to be members of a rightist vendetta squad.

It was the heaviest toll in Turkey's continuing warfare between rightists and leftists since 111 persons were killed in December in fighting between leftist and rightist Moslem sects in southeast Turkey.

Also on Wednesday, four rightists were shot and killed in Istanbul, two were killed in Gaziantep and a leftist was murdered in Kayseri.

Officials said the three gunmen entered a coffee house in the slum suburb of Etlik Wednesday night, ordered everyone to lie down on the floor, picked out nine leftist students from the group and shot them.

Six of the students died instantly, and a seventh succumbed in the hospital.

The killers esccaped by car.

Troops were rushed to the neighborhood to prevent leftist reprisals and further bloodshed. Officials said Interior Minister Hasan Fehmi Gunes took charge and remained in Etlik through much of the night.

Since the beginning of 1978, some 1400 Turks have been killed in the leftist-rightist warfare and in attacks on officials and other prominent persons by terrorists of both camps.

Martial law has been in force since December in 13 provinces, including Ankara and Istanbul. It was recently extended to six more provinces in east Turkey. But the bloodshed has not been reduced.

Press curb proposed

CAPE TOWN, South Africa (AP) — South Africa's ruling Nationalist Party unveiled legislation today calling for heavy fines and up to a year's imprisonment for exposing government corruption without permission.

The bill clearly was a reaction to the recent press-exposed scandal showing South Africa's white-minority government used a multimillion-dollar secret fund in an abortive attempt to enhance its posture abroad.

The legislation, called an "anti-rumor mongering" law, drew strong protests even before its details were known. As expected, the anti-Nationalist English-language press blasted the proposed law, but more significantly the pro-government Afrikaans-language press joined in the protests.

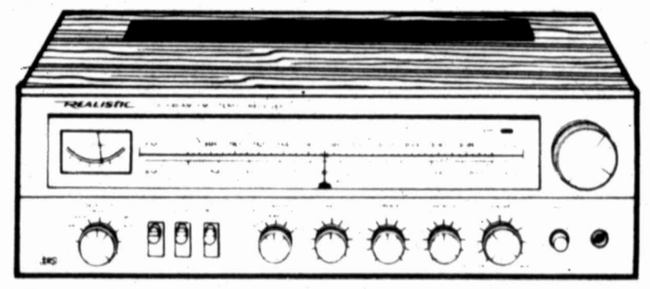

Opposition parties took the unprecedented step of voting against the bill on first reading, but they were far short of enough votes to derail the legislation.

U.S. automakers report sales slump

DETROIT (AP) — Car buyers are turning to smaller, more fuel-efficient models, but the trend is by no means a boom for automakers, industry analysts say.

Total new car sales by five major companies dropped more than 11 percent during the first 10 days of the month compared to the same period in 1978.

The companies delivered 247,983 cars during the period, compared with a near-record 280,095 last year, according to figures and estimates released this week.

Each automaker reported a decline. General Motors Corp. said sales of 145,267 were off 10.5 percent; Ford Motor Co. was down 13.1 percent to 63,510; and Chrysler Corp. dropped 21.4 percent to 30,631.

American Motors Corp., which reports sales monthly, was estimated to have delivered 4,500 cars, down 22 percent from a year ago. Volkswagen of America sold 4,075 Rabbits produced at its Pennsylvania plant.

Early May of 1978 was the second-best ever, analysts noted. But one company analyst termed the industry's sales performance in the 1979 period "a bit stronger than expected."

The small-car market continues to do well as Americans, worried about the availability and rising price of gasoline, shift to smaller, more fuel-efficient autos.

But in contrast to the trend during the oil crunch of 1973, executives and analysts said, the bottom was not falling out of the new or used big-car markets.

"The car-size mix is steady, with small cars running at 54 percent of the industry for the past two months," said Gordon B. Mackenzie, sales vice president at Ford.

"There's no question that imports are strong and small cars are strong," said G.F. McDonald, executive vice president of Manheim Services Inc., of Lancaster, Pa., which operates 13 North American Dealer Exchange auto auctions around the country. "Big cars are not worth what they were worth at this time last year."

GM said small cars accounted for 36 percent of the total, while intermediates made up 35 percent and full-size 29 percent. A year ago, GM said, its small cars accounted for 27 percent of all sales, while mid-size were 35 percent and full-size 37 percent.

At Ford, small car sales are up 34 percent, the company said, while intermediates are off 43 percent and full-size down 31 percent.

Airport bill wins in Senate

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The Senate approved a bill Tuesday prohibiting Houston or Dallas from denying any commercial air carrier access to their public airports unless the denial is in the public interest.

Sen. O.H. Harris' bill was sent to the House on a 26-5 vote.

The bill only applies to cities with a population of over 800,000, and Sen. Bill Meier, D-Euless, said Fort Worth and Dallas oppose it.

The legislation would permit Southwest Airlines, for example, to fly some interstate flights out of Dallas' Love Field, whether Dallas liked it or not.

"The effect is to take away control Dallas has over the airport," said Meier. "It's saying to Dallas that 'we will handle your business on the Senate floor.' "

Southwest has continued to fly out of Love Field, even though other major air carriers switched their operations to the Dallas-Fort Worth regional airport when it was completed in 1973.

An administrative law judge in Washington decided recently Southwest should have tentative permission to fly a route from Midway Airport in Chicago to Love.

Pot prank puzzling

LEWISTON, Idaho (AP) — The grass that sprouted in Lee Vickers' lawn was not the kind you usually find in the front yard of a college president.

But Vickers' wife, Deanna, uprooted the marijuana patch after a knowledgeable passerby spied it growing amidst the Bluegrass, paper birches and shrubbery.

Apparently the pot was planted by pranksters when the Lewis-Clark State College president and his wife put in their lawn about six weeks ago.

"We certainly can't be growing this stuff," Mrs. Vickers said.

Lee High School senior Cheryl Erxleben, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R.L. Erxleben, has received a $1,000 nursing scholarship from the Women's Auxiliary of Midland Memorial Hospital. She plans to attend The University of Texas at San Antonio nursing school.

Creager invited to Golden Plate

William N. "Bill" Creager has been invited to the 1979 Banquet of the Golden Plate weekend June 21-23 in Salt Lake City, Utah.

This year's Midland High School valedictorian has been chosen for the all-expense-paid trip on the basis on being selected as both a Presidential Scholar and a National Merit Scholar.

He will fly to Utah from Washington, D.C., where, as a Presidential Scholar, he will be one of 121 graduating high school seniors visiting the city June 17-20 as guests of the White House and th U.S. Office of Education.

The Utah weekend is sponsored by the American Academy of Achievement, a non-profit organization which seeks to inspire youth to raise their sights and excel through the annual salute at the banquet to a variety of high achievers in several walks of life.

Among those scheduled to be honored at this year's Golden Plate banquet are actor Henry Fonda, Alabama coach "Bear" Bryant, Gov. Dixie Lee Ray of Washington, and Dr. Patrick C. Steptoe, citing for masterminding the world's first "test-tube baby."

Actor Ed Asner will serve as narrator for the event. Judge John J. Sirica and actor Jimmy Stewart are scheduled to present some of the awards.

MC plans course in calligraphy

A new evening short course in Calligraphy will begin June 12 at Midland College, according to James Bramlett, director of the community services department. The course was not listed in the last MC catalog.

"We are fortunate in getting Laird Considine to teach a final course before he leaves the Midland area," Bramlett said. "New students will have three weeks in which to learn the art of italic script writing which is useful for invitations, posters, advertising or even letter writing."

Classes meet from 7 to 9:30 p.m. on Tuesdays and Thursdays and the course fee is $15. Students are urged to pre-register immediately so supplies may be ordered before the first class. Cost for the supplies will be about $15.

Classes are limited to 15 students meeting in room 106 of the Occupational-Technical Building.

Pre-registration may be completed now in room 140 of the Occ-Tech Building between 7 a.m. and 5:30 p.m. Monday through Thursday. The office will remain open during the lunch hour. More information may be obtained by calling 684-7851, extension 147 or 216.

The Women's Auxiliary of Midland Memorial Hospital has awarded a $500 scholarship to Tenna Thomas, daughter of Sherrian Schmelzer of Midland. The Lee High School senior plans to attend Midland College and study nursing.

DR. NEIL SOLOMON

Go slow on booze

Dear Dr. Solomon: As the expected date of delivery of our first child approaches, I find myself holding up fairly well. My husband, however, is becoming a nervous wreck. I enjoy a glass of wine in the evening, but he makes a scene about how I'm harming our unborn child. I know you stress moderation, and it seems to me I'm being very moderate in my use of alcohol. Any advice?—Mrs. I.F.L.

Dear Mrs. L.: Have your husband join you in that glass of wine, and relax. Dr. David A. Blake, an associate professor of gynecology, obstetrics and pharmacology at the Johns Hopkins Hospital, says that moderate drinking does not harm the fetus. By "moderate," he means one glass of wine, one bottle of beer, or one scotch on the rocks a day.

Excessive drinking, on the other hand, is quite another matter. A study done in 1973 indicated that 30 percent of babies whose mothers drank excessively were born with mental deficiencies. The fetal alcohol syndrome also includes some physical abnormalities, such as cleft palate.

The syndrome, based on research, appears to be widespread. From three to five of every 1,000 births show one or more of the symptoms. And one out of every 2,000 babies has a severe form of the fetal alcohol syndrome, of which low intelligence is the most serious symptom.

Dear Dr. Solomon: My husband has been offered a job in a city which is a center for the production of chemicals. Although the salary is very attractive, I'm reluctant to move my family, especially the children, to an area that may pose a health hazard. Is my concern unrealistic?—Faye

Dear Faye: While your concerns are not unwarranted, the answers are not yet clear. The National Cancer Institute (NCI) has compiled some data which suggest, but do not prove, a link between lung cancer and county of residence. The information gathered indicates that the rate of lung cancer tends to be higher in counties in which chemical, petroleum, paper and transportaion industries are located.

Dr. William J. Blot, an NCI health statistician, emphasizes that other environmental factors may influence cancer rates in areas where these industries are located. To clarify this point, researchers are seeking additional information about occupation, tobacco consumption, and other environmental exposures.

Dear Dr. Solomon: Why is it so dangerous to have sickle cell trait?—Mr. E.S.

Dear Mr. E.S.: It is dangerous to have the trait because the trait can be passed down to one's children when they are born just like the color of eyes and the size of body are passed down. In fact, if both parents have the trait, it is possible for their child to be born with the more serious form of the disease known as anemia.

(If you have a medical problem, see your doctor. If you have a medical question, write to Neil Solomon, M.D., 1726 Reisterstown Road, Baltimore, Md. 21208. Dr. Solomon cannot give personal replies but will answer as many questions as possible in his column.)

Sears loses suit on job practices

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sears, Roebuck and Co. has lost an unusual court case that sought to prove the federal government made it impossible for the company to eliminate employment discrimination.

U.S. District Judge June L. Green threw the suit out Tuesday, ruling that Sears, the nation's leading retailer, "failed to present a justifiable case or controversy."

The judge sided with government lawyers who argued that the Sears suit was "a political essay, not a lawsuit."

"Sears must recognize that personnel policies reflecting earlier and more limited national attitudes must be modified to widen employment opportunities for all," the judge wrote. "To be sure, realization of that national policy of genuine equal opportunity for all citizens is a formidable task, but not one beyond the notable skill and competence of Sears."

Sears Chairman Edward R. Telling said in Chicago the company was "disappointed that this court was not willing to require the government to establish priorities and resolve conflicts which we believe are hurting the cause of equal opportunity."

Telling said the company had not yet decided whether to appeal.

"The overwhelming response to our suit throughout the nation represents a clear call to the administration and to Congress to resolve this question: When the majority of Americans are covered by protective statutes, who gets jobs when not all can?" Telling said.

The company filed suit Jan. 24 against 10 federal agencies, contending that government laws, regulations and policies conflicted with each other and made it impossible for the company to meet federal standards for hiring and promoting minorities and women.

The complaint, filed as a class-action case on behalf of all retailers with 15 or more employees, said the government itself created "an unbalanced work force" dominated by white males. The firm also said federal regulations were inconsistent and at times capricious.

The federal Equal Employment Opportunity Commission has accused Sears of discrimination, creating the possibility of a federal suit against the giant retailer.

Sears has had 1,500 discrimination complaints filed against it since 1965. The company, with more than 400,000 employees, says 56.7 percent of its workers are women, 13.9 percent black and 6 percent belong to other racial minorities.

Eleanor Holmes Norton, head of the EEOC, praised the court ruling. "There was never any doubt in the legal community that this suit would be dismissed," she said. "The equal opportunity laws are too serious to be entangled with frivolous litigation."

Judge Green said the conflicts alleged by Sears were "not sufficiently concrete" to satisfy constitutional limits on the power of a federal court to settle disputes.

Entry eased

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti (AP) — Pressured by tourism interests, the Haitian government has rescinded a law requiring Canadians and Americans to have passports to get into the country.

A spokesman said the regulation was requested by the security forces. He said Canadians and Americans now will be required to produce proof of citizenship only.

Child may get back lost voice

BALTIMORE (AP) — Eighteen months after gulping a solution of lye she thought was water, 3-year-old Shanelle Jones still is unable to speak. But doctors hope a rarely used surgical technique will allow the child "to yell and be heard down the hall."

Shanelle's larynx and esophagus were severely burned in the incident but recent operations have helped the child so she can now eat and drink. And Dr. Laurance Hill, a pediatric surgeon who developed a technique in 1973 that has saved Shanelle's esophagus, is hopeful the child will have her voice back in three months.

In the past, a victim of such burns could have died or had to undergo the often-unsuccessful and painful ordeal of having the esophagus and voice box reconstructed.

Shanelle is only the fourth person to undergo the new technique, said Hill. The procedure involves placing a small plastic tube in the esophagus and leaving it there for three weeks. The tube, or stent, prevents the area from closing up and keeps down inflammation, allowing it to heal with less scarring.

Shanelle has a thin plastic thread running through her nose, down through her esophagus into the stomach and out through a hole in her abdomen. She also has a larynx stent, which goes through her windpipe and out an opening in her neck, to keep the vocal chords from growing together when they heal.

Hill said the technique is too new to predict how the patients will fare in 10 or 15 years.

"As the body grows, the esophagus and structure that makes up the upper respiratory tree may not grow," Hill said. "From the injury, they may have lost their potential to grow. We will have to follow these children until they are teenagers to see if, indeed, they are normal."

Shanelle's burns were so bad they affected her heart rate, Hill said. Today, said one therapist, "she roams the entire fifth floor."

A speech therapist has taught the girl sign language so she can communicate.

Westinghouse will pay TVA

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — The Westinghouse Corp. will pay the Tennessee Valley Authority $32 million in cash within the next 30 days as part of a lawsuit settlement, says TVA's chief lawyer.

Attorney Herb Sanger said the cash payment is included in the settlement approved Tuesday by U.S. District Court Judge Robert Merhige Jr. in Richmond, Va.

Westinghouse agreed to an overall $130 million settlement with TVA over uranium Westinghouse was to have supplied for two TVA nuclear plants.

TVA was one of 13 utilities which sued Westinghouse after the firm announced in 1975 that it was reniging on contracts to supply them with uranium.

Westinghouse, in selling nuclear reactors to the utilities in the late 1960s and early 1970s, had agreed to supply them with 80 million tons of uranium for the initial fuel loadings.

The company, however, said it had only 15 million tons of uranium to fill the orders and contended during an 88-day trial last year it could cancel the contracts because of "commercial impracticability."

Westinghouse blamed the situation on the Arab oil embargo and an international cartel of uranium producers which, it said, artificially inflated the cost of the fuel far beyond anything contemplated when the contracts were signed.

Merhige ruled that Westinghouse had illegally breached its contracts. But the judge, saying no one would win with further litigation, urged the utilities to reach settlements before he began hearings on damages.

TVA is one of six utilities with lawsuits totaling $2.5 billion that have now settled with Westinghouse.

Westinghouse will deliver 560,000 pounds of uranium to TVA at the $8.24 price specified in the 1970 contract.

Japanese continue stalling endangered species action

By TERRY A. ANDERSON

TOKYO (AP) — Six years after Japan signed a treaty protecting endangered wildlife, efforts to get the treaty ratified have hit another snag.

The Japanese Foreign Ministry says it has temporarily dropped plans to submit the measure — aimed at cutting down on the flourishing trade here in rare and protected animals — to the Diet, Japan's parliament.

A spokesman said "it appears to be impossible to get it ratified" this session because of opposition from animal traders, importers, furriers and other businesses, and because of the Diet's calendar.

ALTHOUGH the Foreign Ministry, the Ministry of International Trade and Industry and the Environmental Agency all support the treaty, it has had a low priority in the Diet since it was signed in April 1973.

The Foreign Ministry said the "Convention on International Trade and Endangered Species of Wild Fauna and Flora," better known as the Washington Convention, would be sent to the Diet next session.

There are almost no statistics available on the extent of the trade in live rare animals, their furs and skins, and other products such as ivory, in Japan or through Japanese companies. However, the World Wildlife Fund of Japan claims at least 20 major Japanese trading houses are deeply involved, and the International Union for Conservation of Nature and Natural Resources, in Switzerland, cites Japan as one of the most "prolific traders in wildlife."

JAPAN IS the largest buyer of furs from Hong Kong, where there is a large illegal fur trade which authorities are trying to control. Imports include leopard, civet, lynx and cape seal furs — all banned under the Washington Convention. A leopard jacket sells on Tokyo's Ginza for $2,500 to $3,000, a civet jacket for slightly more.

Conservationists also complain that many Japanese zoos — mostly smaller ones — have been illegally importing live endangered animals, and last year a scandal erupted over the Iseshima Zoological Garden in Kobe, which requested that an Indonesian zoo smuggle birds of paradise to it. The Indonesian zoo directer labeled the request "monstrous" and distributed photocopies of the letter to zoo officials and conservation groups around the world.

The controversy led to the discovery that "Iseshima Zoological Garden" was a cover name for an animal trader.

ACCORDING to the World Wildlife Fund, more than 600 birds covered by the Washington Convention have been legally imported into Japan in the past five years, including more than 300 peregrine falcons, 63 golden eagles, and from two to 60 of various other species. Many others were brought in illegally, the fund claims, because of lack of knowledge on the part of customs men.

Other trade banned under the convention includes that in alligator, crocodile, and reptile skins, tortoise shells and ivory — about $26 million worth a year of ivory. Other figures were not available.

"Japan may be the largest trader in endangered species," said Dr. Shinjiro Ikeda, director of the World Wildlife Fund of Japan. "According to a survey in Bangkok, more than 20 Japanese trading houses are involved in the trade — furs, live animals including chimpanzees and alligators."

IKEDA SAID the Japanese government keeps no statistics on such trade, and requires in most cases only an export license from the selling country. However, much of the trade comes through countries that haven't signed the treaty so the export license is no help in controlling sale of endangered species.

Sixty-six countries have signed the convention, but only about 50 have ratified it. Japan is the only major developed nation that has not.

The Japanese Association of Zoological Parks and Aquariums has been pushing for ratification, although some of its 110 members object that the treaty would make rare animals more expensive, according to Dr. Shigeharu Asakura, association president.

ASAKURA says the association requires its members to be shown a license from the endangered animals' native country, not exporting country, before they may buy animals covered by the treaty. But, he said, "some of our members do not observe the rules." In addition, some 100 to 150 zoos and aquariums are not members.

House members report interest in crude firms

By JIM ADAMS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON, D.C. (AP) — With Congress facing tough decisions affecting oil company profits and the rising price of gasoline, 29 House members report they had financial interests in oil and gas firms last year.

Another seven House members report payments for speeches and appearances at oil industry functions.

The oil and gas interests showed up in personal financial reports that all top federal officials, including members of Congress, were required to file this week under the new Ethics in Government Act.

House members' reports were released Tuesday and senators' reports are to be released soon.

Outside Congress, financial reports showed the wealthiest presidential candidate to file a statement is former Texas Gov. John B. Connally with a total income in a 16-month period of $1,299,976.

Dozens of House members reported stockholdings in so many different industries that their votes on a range of bills could influence their personal investments.

A vote affecting a member's public stock is not a conflict of interest under House rules, but members holding oil company stock could make money this year if Congress allows oil company profits to rise.

Congress will have to make that decision on President Carter's plan to decontrol oil prices and let them rise, but to offset the price rise with a "windfall profits" tax against the companies.

One of the congressmen who reported making some of the most last year by speaking to oil industry groups was Rep. John Dingell, D-Mich., who has been a staunch foe of high oil company profits.

Dingell, chairman of the House energy subcommittee, reported getting $5,580 for such appearances. He supports Carter's price decontrols but wants a stiffer "windfall profits" tax imposed on the oil companies.

Rep. David Stockman, R-Mich., a member of Dingell's subcommittee, reported payments from oil industry groups for similar appearances.

Rep. Fortney H. (Pete) Stark, D-Calif., a member of the House Ways and Means Committee which will write the "windfall profits" tax bill, reported oil company stockholdings.

Outside the energy bill-writing committees, Rep. James Cleveland, R-N.H., reported holdings of more than $15,000 each in Standard Oil of California, Mobil Oil, Exxon and Gulf Oil, plus dividends of more than $5,500 from the four companies.

Rep. William Clinger, D-Pa., reported a holding of at least $100,000 in Gulf Oil and smaller holdings in a number of other oil companies.

Rep. S. William Green, R-N.Y., one of the richest men in the House, reported that he and his wife had holdings in such companies as Atlantic Richfield, Clark Oil, Delhi International Oil and Buttes Oil and Gas.

But a number of congressmen with large stockholdings appeared to steer clear of oil company stocks.

Rep. Jonathan B. Bingham, D-N.Y., for example, reported earning $812,000 from holdings in a wide variety of American industries but none in oil or gas.

Meanwhile, Connall was one of only four registered presidential candidates who met Wednesday's deadline for filing financial reports.

Others who filed were former CIA Director George Bush, Sen. Robert Dole, R-Kan., and Senate Minority Leader Howard H. Baker Jr., all with six-digit incomes.

Rep. Philip A. Crane, R-Ill., a candidate for the GOP presidential nomination, did not file but earlier released his 1978 income tax return showing total income of $97,700.

Here is a list of the 29 House members who reported either they or their spouses had financial interests in oil or natural gas last year, and the seven who reported receiving honoraria from oil industry groups:

Carter abandons cabinet proposal

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter has quietly abandoned his ballyhooed proposal to create a new Cabinet-level Department of Natural Resources.

Word of Carter's decision to concede defeat on the issue in advance of congressional consideration did not come in a formal announcement.

Instead, a small group of officials, who asked not to be quoted by name, passed the word to an equally small number of reporters Tuesday evening. This was in sharp contrast to the fanfare that accompanied a March 1 announcement that the reorganization proposal would be forthcoming.

The prospect of a lengthy Senate debate on ratification of the new arms limitation treaty with the Soviet Union may have figured, at least indirectly, in Carter's decision.

One official said in response to a question, "I can tell you that the SALT treaty had no direct bearing on this decision."

However, he quickly added the reorganization proposal would have triggered prolonged debate in the Senate at a time when SALT ratification is given top priority by the president.

This same official reported that soundings on Capitol Hill convinced Carter the natural resources proposal had no chance for congressional approval this year.

"It is my judgment this is dead for the rest of this term," he said.

The reorganization plan, which had been announced by Vice President Walter F. Mondale at a White House news conference, would have renamed the Interior Department and combined it with the Agriculture Department's Forest Service and the Commerce Department's National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration.

Mondale said the proposed department would eliminate overlapping programs, pare 2,000 jobs from the federal payroll and save tens of millions of dollars.

The administration had hoped to submit the proposal in the form of a reorganization plan, to take effect automatically unless vetoed within 60 days by either the Senate or House.

Officials said House leaders accepted that approach.

SMU's Meyer now says, 'it's time to win'

By RICHARD VINCENT
Sports Writer

As far as Ron Meyer is concerned, there's been enough talk.

"Like I told our team," said the fourth-year SMU head football coach Wednesday, "the time to talk has ceased. Now it's time to win."

Of course, it's tough for Meyer not to discuss his team and the much heralded freshman class that he and his staff have recruited.

"We should be a pretty sound football team, barring injury," said the 38-year-old Meyer, who was in Midland to address the Permian Basin Landmen's Association dinner.

But he was also in the Tall City to meet with SMU alumni as part of a project to drum up money for the Mustang war coffers.

He's in the midst of a drive to collect $700,000 for his program. The campaign runs until the end of May, and the confident Meyer said, "I'm sure we'll reach that goal."

And it's going to take big bucks like that to put Mustang football where the former Nevada-Las Vegas head coach and Dallas Cowboy scout wants it, namely mentioned in the same breath with the University of Southern California.

"I think USC would be the best image we could attain to," said Meyer, mentioning many similarities between the two private institutions.

Don't think, however, that Meyer merely wants to imitate. "We could easily surpass them (USC) and I think we can," said Meyer.

That's gaudy talk for a guy whose team went 4-6-1 last season, but there's definitely optimism in the Dallas air, largely because of the recruits, fairly solid returnees including quarterback Mike Ford and wide receiver Emanuel Tolbert and a taste of winning from last year's quick start.

Much has been said of Meyer's recruiting coup and he admits that his fab frosh have already made an impact, mostly as far as advance ticket sales, although they've never donned the red and blue.

Among the best of the gems are Sealy's scorching Eric Dickerson, Houston Kashmere's Stanley Godine and burly Michael Carter of Dallas Jefferson, who has not decided if he will play football or shoot for the Olympics in the shot put--an event he holds the national high school record of 77-feet.

To promote SMU football, the school has come up with an information blitz called "Mustang Mania." The response, according to Meyer, has been tremendous. "It identifies us with the newness of the future," he said.

Currently, 7,500 season tickets have been sold and Meyer said he envisions between 15-20,000 of the ducats to be gone when the campaign opens.

Accomodating the expected throng will be no problem, especially since the Mustangs move into cushy Texas Stadium in Irving. The change, after 30 years at the Cotton Bowl was a "necessity," said Meyer, citing parking and location problems of the Cotton Bowl.

Who was behind the move? "I probably was the culprit if you want to look at it that way," said Meyer. "Economically, it was the thing to do."

The switch has already paid-off. "It was one of the big factors in recruiting the third best class in the country," said Meyer.

So Ron Meyer finds himself with a neat new home field, a stable of sterling recruits and a recently-discovered fervor for SMU football. And since most of the talking is done, that suits him just fine.

Bullets have more lives than a ghetto alley cat

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Even Dick Motta will admit the tenacious Washington Bullets, who are growing accustomed to showing more lives than a ghetto alley cat, probably don't deserve a decisive seventh game at home with the once comfortable San Antonio Spurs.

"I feel good about the seventh game. It's a life that we didn't probably deserve," said the Washington Coach after the defending National Basketball Association champion Bullets upended the Spurs 108-100 here Wednesday night to knot the Eastern Conference finals at 3-.

And the dogged Bullets, who once trailed upstart San Antonio 3-1 in the series, will host the seventh game Friday night on their home court in Landover, Md. In their three years in the NBA, the Spurs have won there only once — 118-97 on May 4 to open this series.

"I'd rather be us than them," added Motta.

FORWARD BOBBY Dandridge, playing out of position at guard when Motta used an oversized, fourth-quarter lineup, and reserve forward Greg Ballard keyed a late flurry that enabled the Bullets to put away the Spurs before a stunned sellout San Antonio crowd of 16,055.

Ballard got nine points and Dandridge had 10 in the final 10 minutes of the game. The Spurs staged a brief third quarter uprising and had tied the Bullets 82-82 two minutes into the fourth quarter.

But Elvin Hayes converted a three-point play with 9:53 remaining to snap the tie and the Bullets had built up a 103-92 margin seven and a half minutes later.

"The Bullets seem to be alive now," said Motta. "The bodies are moving well. We're jumping at the shooters. We're rebounding well. Our passes are a lot crisper."

An enraged San Antonio Coach Doug Moe claimed the Bullets had a little fourth-quarter help from the referees, namely Ed Rush and Joe Gushue.

"The refereeing was too one-sided. Rush and Gushue never made a call for us," ranted Moe. "Every time they (the Bullets) went to the hoop in the fourth quarter, they'd get the foul called. There's not a whole lot we can do about that."

OFFICIATING notwithstanding, the Spurs had the opportunity Sunday in Landover and Wednesday night in their cozy HemisFair Arena to eliminate the Bullets. They lost 107-103 on Sunday.

"They had one game to play with and then one game to put us away. They didn't do either," said Hayes, who finished with 25 points.

"We didn't relax when we got the lead in the series," insisted Spurs captain James Silas. "I don't know if we got tight or tense or what. But we couldn't hit the shots."

The normally hot-handed Spurs shot only 43 percent Wednesday night. George Gervin, averaging 31 points per game in the series, was held to 20.

"We've made it hard on ourselves," understated reserve guard Mike Gale, who had 18 points.

"We have to go up there with the idea of taking it," said Moe. "We'll just have to show them what we're made of."

Only two NBA teams, the 1968 Boston Celtics and the 1970 Los Angeles Lakers, have come back from 3-1 playoff deficits to win a seven-game series.

Janet just another driver

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Janet Guthrie just doesn't get as much attention these days at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway as she did before. And that's fine with her.

All Guthrie ever wanted was to be treated like one of the guys; to be regarded as a race driver, who incidentally was a woman. Three years ago, when she first came here, that was impossible.

Two years ago, when she finally qualified and became the first woman driver in the Indianapolis 500, it wasn't much better.

LAST YEAR, when she felt she had already proved her driving abilities and bolstered that with a credible ninth-place showing, she achieved the acceptance and — more important — the respect of even some of her most vociferous critics.

This year, Janet Guthrie is just another driver.

"I have a real good working relationship with my crew and I really don't think they treat me any differently because I am a woman," the 41-year-old Guthrie said.

"They are just super guys. They are good to work with and the effort is there. We're all still hunting for speed and I think they take seriously what I have to say about the car."

Guthrie's first two years in the Indy 500 were with Rolla Vollstedt's team. She joined Sherman Armstrong's team this year and qualified last Sunday at 185.720 mph for a fifth-row start next to teammate Howdy Holmes, a rookie, in the May 27 race.

THE 185-RANGE laps were especially pleasing to Guthrie, who had had trouble getting increased engine power in the straightaways during practice last week.

"We changed engines, but that didn't take care of it," she said. "But eventually my crew chief found the secret at the last moment. I had only three warmup laps at the higher speed, but I am confident once we get everything together that the car will go at least 188."

How fast does she expect to go when the race begins?

"That depends if I get so I can run comfortably at 188; then I'll plan to charge right from the beginning."

"To be honest," she continued, "I was a little surprised at my speed (in qualifications) because I didn't really have much time to practice Sunday before I qualified. I knew there was more speed in the car and I was very disappointed."

"As I was sitting in that qualifying line I was trying to evaluate what speed I would get. I feel confident if we can get the car balanced, I think we can then go flat out and increase our speed."

GUTHRIE QUALIFIED last year at 190.325 mph, but all speeds are down this year because of the U.S. Auto Club restrictions on manifold pressure. Those changes were a key point in the defection from USAC by many top car owners and drivers, who formed Championship Auto Racing Teams.

"I keep hearing about the way certain groups want to change the rules to equate this or that," said Guthrie, whose car owner is still aligned with USAC, "but I am sure that so long as there are very clever minds engaged in the racing business, and there certainly are, people will find ways to stretch the rules."

"The function of the sanctioning body is to be just a little bit smarter," she said.

"I'm still not convinced that there isn't some cheating on the turbocharger boost limit. I know of a couple of ways to cheat on the 50-inch maximum valve, but neither is being used on my (Lola-Cosworth) car. I'm sure that guys who are real clever and have been around here a long time will jack the pressure up a little. I'm not sure it gains you that much."

Cubs' homestand starts with Travs

Now if the weather will just settle down, the Midland Cubs can enjoy a 10-game homestand starting with a Two-Bit Beer Night Friday against the Arkansas Travelers at Cubs Stadium.

However, Manager Randy Hundley's Bruins, who just concluded a 12-game swing of San Antonio and El Paso, didn't find the road all that bad. Midland came home after posting an 8-4 record and 2 1/2 game lead in the Texas League West Division.

So when the Cubs and St. Louis Cardinals farmhands square off at 7:30 p.m. Friday, it will pit the leaders of the East and West divisions in the Texas League race.

General Manager Bill Rigney, Jr., has scheduled a string of promotions for the homestand. Following Two Bit Beer Night, Saturday will be Midland Cubs windbreaker night with jackets going to the first 1,000 youngsters at the game.

Sunday's 6:30 p.m. game will be Pitch, Hit and Run night with the Midland and Odessa eliminations scheduled before the game.

On Tuesday it will be The Reporter-Telegram Family Night in which families presenting coupons at the ticket window can purchase $3 tickets to admit the entire family. Next Thursday will be Ladies Night with women admitted for $1 while next Friday, in addition to Two Bit Beer Night, it will be Midland Scottish Rite Association Night. Advance tickets may be purchased from MSRA members at $1.50 with the proceeds going to the group's scholarship fund.

May 26 will be Midland National Bank Night with free tickets available all next week at the MNB and Midland Cubs players will appear in the lobby Wednesday, Thursday and Friday.

The Jackson Mets, farm club of the New York Mets, will come into Midland for five games starting May 23. The visit will be the only one of the year to Midland by the East Division clubs.

Ford given rookie honor

Kansas City, Mo. (AP) — One year after he likened the National Basketball Association draft to slavery, Phil Ford, humble and subdued, accepted rookie of the year honors and said, "I was very lucky."

"I played for the best coach in the NBA and the other guys on the team were tremendous," the 6-foot-2 point guard of the Kansas City Kings said at a luncheon Wednesday.

"Considering all that went on last summer, I'd like to thank everybody for being so nice to me."

Ford averaged almost 16 points per game and was fourth in the league with nearly nine assists per game in leading the Kings from last place to first place in the Midwest Division. He was an overwhelming choice of a national panel of writers as the NBA's rookie of the year, announced Wednesday.

But when he was drafted by the Kings last May as the second player in the first round he refused even to meet with team representatives, who had been warned beforehand the two-time North Carolina all-American wanted nothing to do with Kansas City.

"I can work anywhere I want to," Ford said at the time. "Slavery was abolished 100 years ago."

But the Kings, desperate for a ball-handling guard, kept after him. Finally, after considering playing in Italy or becoming an assistant coach at North Carolina, he signed a contract.

"After the first day of practice there was no question in my mind Phil would be accepted by everybody," said Kings Coach Cotton Fitzsimmons, who last week was named NBA Coach of the Year. "We had been in camp three weeks already but Phil was in better shape than anybody. And the first time the fans saw him hustling up and down the court, they fell in love with him."

Ford's popularity with Kansas City fans was instantaneous and reached its zenith in a game against Milwaukee when he scored 26 points and handed out 22 assists to tie Oscar Robertson's franchise record.

"Now I'm very happy the Kings chose me," he said Wednesday.

"Getting drafted by Kansas City has turned out to be a blessing in disguise for me. And winning the rookie award is the biggest honor I've ever won in my life."

Fitzsimmons lavished praise on his star player, calling him "the best point guard playing basketball."

"And if he's the best in this era," Fitzsimmons added, "he's probably the best ever. Phil is one of those rare kind of players who can jump up in the air, spot three guys open, and always give the ball to the guy with the hot hand — or give it to the best shooter."

Fitzsimmons said he recently spoke at a high school sports banquet.

"When you talk to young athletes, you talk about character, leadership, dedication, desire, sportsmanship and the ability to bounce back," Fitzsimmons said. "All I had to do was talk about Phil Ford. He covers all those areas. He has the perfect attitude for an athlete. He made us better players, and he made me a better coach."

Smith heads NAIA tracksters

ABILENE, Texas (AP) — Texas Southern University is the favorite to defend its team championship when the NAIA national track meet opens here today. But Prairie View sprinter Evans Smith may be the star attraction.

White, the defending half-mile champion, won the half mile event at the NAIA, NCAA and AAU indoor meets this year and also captured the event at an American-Russian dual track meet in Fort Worth last march.

Coach Dave Bethany's TSU Tigers won last year's meet here by 25 points over runner-up Adams State of Colordado.

Texas Southern's top entries include defending 200-meter champion Larry Kimbles and last yer's 400-meter winner Fred Taylor.

Other teams expected to contrend for the championship include host Abilene Christian, Jackson State of Mississippi, Prairie View and Pembroke State of North Carolina.

Defending champions return in 12 events, including 1978 double winners Vic White of Eastern Washington and Garry Henry of Pembroke State. Vic White won the triple jump and high jump last year. Henry, Austrialian distance runner, won the 5,000 and 10,000 meter runs.

Other defending champions include pole vaulter Billy Olson, and long jumper Carl Williams, both of ACU, and sprinter Nate Johnson of Hillsdale College in Michigan.

The 28th annual meet will run through Saturday night.

Coefield faces charges

CONCORD, N.C. (AP) — The faculty athletic representative at Barber-Scotia College has accused Basketball Coach Al Coefield of allowing three ineligible students to play on his team last season under assumed names.

In a letter to the National Association of Intercollegiate Athletics, James Batton charged that Anthony Cambrell, Douglas Credle and Rudy Gibbs all played for the Barber-Scotia basketball team this year even though their names were not listed on the team roster.

Batton said in the letter that he first became aware of the situation when Cambrell informed him of the alleged violations in January. Although not on the roster, Cambrell said he had been playing under the name of Reginald Simmons, one of the team's managers whose name was on the roster.

Cambrell also claimed that Credle was playing under the name of Reginald Tuck and that Gibbs was playing as Gregory Lee.

Cambrell said he admitted the violations because Coefield had promised him an athletic scholarship if he made the team.

Since he was a transfer student, Cambrell was ineligible to play, but he told Batton that he played in several games during the first semester under the name Reginald Simmons.

After the fall semester, Cambrell said he received a bill for $600 from the school's business office. Cambrell had assumed that since he made the team, he was on scholarship. However, he said he was informed by Coefield that he was not.

Batton said that he and Coefield met with Cambrell to discuss the matter. At that time, Batton said Coefield told Cambrell that the school was not responsible for his first-semester bill but that he would honor a commitment by awarding him a scholarship for the second semester.

Guidry defeats Detroit's Fidrych

By The Associated Press

Ron Guidry is back in the groove — and Mark Fidrych vows he soon will be, too.

Guidry returned to New York's starting rotation Wednesday night after a brief stint in the Yankees' depleted bullpen and beat the Detroit Tigers 6-2, scattering nine hits and striking out 13.

"I thought I might have some control trouble, but I managed to get back into the same groove as the last couple of times," said Guidry, who pitched for the first time in eight days and made his first start since May 2.

Fidrych, who has been tormented by arm trouble since 1977, started for the Tigers and was raked for six runs in 3 2-3 innings. He gave up a pair of two-run homers to Graig Nettles and a two-run blast to Chris Chambliss.

"The only thing that was encouraging was that there was no pain," said the 24-year-old Fidrych, 0-2. "That's three times out I've felt all right.

"I've just got to to get the ball low. Every fifth day I'll pitch. It'll take a lot to get me out of there. The problems are mechanical. As long as my arm doesn't hurt, I'll be out there pitching.

"I'm too young to give up."

Both Guidry and Fidrych had been looking forward to a pitchers' duel and were disappointed when it didn't materialize.

"He's their No.1 man," said Fidrych, "and it would have felt good to beat No. 1, but he reversed it."

"He did the same thing to the rest of the league that I did — he overpowered them," Guidry said, referring to Fidrych's banner year of 1976 in which the Bird won 19 games and posted a 2.34 earned run average. "But he was nowhere near that tonight."

Nettles, who has 15 RBI in the last five games, said speed was not Fidrych's problem, but control.

"I was impressed with his velocity," said Nettles. "But he was unable to get the ball down. He rarely used to throw the ball above the knees. That'll take time."

The Yankees didn't give him any time Wednesday night.

Nettles slammed a two-run homer into the right-center field bleachers in the first inning. They got four more runs in the fourth when Thurman Munson led off with a single and Nettles followed with his second homer of the game and seventh of the season. After Reggie Jackson struck out, Lou Piniella doubled and Chambliss hit his sixth home run, chasing Fidrych.

Meanwhile, Guidry blanked the Tigers until Steve Kemp's two-run homer in the ninth.

Rangers 8, Twins 4

Jim Kern pitched three scoreless innings in relief of Jon Matlack to record his fifth save of the season for Texas, which moved within 1½ games of the first-place Twins in the American League West.

Al Oliver, Mike Jorgensen and Larvell Blanks drove in two runs each for the Rangers, who broke the game open with five runs in the sixth. Twins shortstop Roy Smalley had two hits, extending his hitting streak to 16 games and putting his major league leading batting average at .410.

Orioles 10, Red Sox 6

Ken Singleton had two doubles and a single and drove in two runs to lead a 15-hit Baltimore attack as the Orioles beat the Red Sox, putting the game away with six runs in the fifth inning.

Home plate umpire Lester Pratt was bowled over by Boston slugger Jim Rice, who interceded as a peacemaker during a dispute in the Boston seventh.

Pratt had called Boston's Rick Burleson out on strikes, the Red Sox shortstop argued the call vehemently and was ejected. Burleson then appeared to bump the umpire. While Boston Manager Don Zimmer grabbed Burleson, Rice raced to the plate to hold off Pratt, but instead the charging Rice knocked the umpire flat on his back.

Rice quickly helped Pratt to his feet and was permitted to remain in the game.

Angels 4, Brewers 3

Dan Ford scored the winning run for California on a throwing error by Sal Bando in the 11th inning.

Earlier, Bando had started a triple play for Milwaukee. With runner on first and second in the Angels' second, Bobby Grich sent a hard grounder to Bando, who stepped on third base for the forceout. Bando threw to Paul Molitor at second for the second out and Molitor's relay to Cecil Cooper at first retired Grich and completed the triple play.

Blue Jays 4, Indians 3

Dave Lemanczyk scattered six hits as Toronto edged Cleveland. Toronto got RBI singles from Rico Carty and Rick Cerone and scored two more runs with the help of errors by Cleveland infielders Duane Kuiper and Andre Thornton.

White Sox 3, A's 1

Chicago scored all its runs in the eighth inning to tag winless Matt Keough with his sixth loss of the season. Jorge Orta's two-run double was the big hit of the inning.

Royals 4, Mariners 3

Clint Hurdle's homer in the ninth provided the winning margin as Kansas City beat Seattle behind the four-hit pitching of Steve Busby.

Martin plans to manage Yanks again

NEW YORK (AP) — Billy Martin says he definitely will be back as manager of the New York Yankees next season, the New York Daily News reported in Thursday's edition.

Yankee owner "George Steinbrenner gave me his word and I believe he is a man of his word," Martin was quoted as saying. "I would have run onto that field two days after I quit if I didn't believe he meant it."

Martin led the Yankees to the world championship in 1977, then quit during the 1978 season after calling Steinbrenner and Yankee outfielder Reggie Jackson liars. Two days later, at a Yankee Old-Timers' Game, Martin was introduced to the crowd as the 1980 New York manager.

In a story written by Dick Young, the Daily News noted Martin has been fired as manager of the Minnesota Twins, Detroit Tigers and Minnesota Twins.

"People say I have a self-destruct mechanism," Martin said. "That's not true. When I can face the owner one-on-one, there's no trouble. It's only when a third man steps in and muddies the waters, then there's trouble."

Asked if Yankee President Al Rosen was getting between Steinbrenner and him, Martin told Young: "I'm not saying that. I'm just saying that I can get along with Mr. Steinbrenner. There are going to be arguments because he sees himself in me, and that makes him mad as hell."

"We're both stubborn, and both dedicated, and both energetic, and both want to win, and both perfectionists, and both demanding. You get two people like that together and there are bound to be sparks flying from time to time."

Young quoted Martin as saying:

"Just let me run the clubhouse. he can run the rest, and we'll win. But I have to be dictator with the players."

Umpires called to meet

By The Associated Press

When the call, "Play ball," is announced this weekend, it will be the regular umpires making the call.

The Associated Press has learned that the umpires will receive a salary hike, increased per diem allowances and travel expenses and in-season vacations under terms of an agreement reached between the umpires and the National and American Leagues.

"I think we have a general understanding on all of the major issues but there are a few small things that have to be resolved," American League President Lee MacPhail said in Chicago Wednesday. "I hope that by the end of the week we'll have a settlement."

One American League umpire — Jim Evans — said in Beaumont, Texas, that he and his colleagues have been summoned to a meeting Friday in Philadelphia. The umpires reportedly have been directed to bring their equipment and their traveling bags to Philadelphia, where they'll go over the details of the settlement.

The 52 umpires have refused to work since before spring training. In their place, the major leagues have used amateur and minor league umpires.

The 26 major league owners met in Chicago Wednesday, basically to receive a report from a committee preparing for negotiations later this year with the Major League Players Association. But the arbitors' walkout also was discussed.

"As far as I know, the clubs are happy with the way we handled the negotiations," MacPhail said.

However, there were reports that several teams, at least one owner and, behind the scenes, Commissioner Bowie Kuhn, expressed their concern with the umpire stalemate to MacPhail and National League President Chub Feeney.

Among others, the Cincinnati Reds, Chicago White Sox and Kansas City Royals have sent letters to their league offices telling of their dissatisfaction with the work of the substitute umpires.

MacPhail and Feeney were to meet with Richie Phillips, the umpires' representative, in New York today to initial the agreement. Phillips will then go to Philadelphia Friday to explain the the settlement to the umpires.

It is expected they will receive their first assignments of the season and perhaps be on the job the next day.

MacPhail said the owners do not have to approve the new contract and that he doesn't plan to call a joint meeting of the owners to discuss the final details.

"We have no problem with this," McPhail said. "We have full authority to do what we think we have to do in this."

It was learned that an extra crew of umpires will be hired to enable the vacation demand to be met and that there will be no recriminations against those who worked during the stoppage.

Terms of the new contract apparently will take effect over a three-year period in various increments.

Honochick is forgotten man behind the mask

NEW YORK (AP) — There were no gold watches, no plaques and no tributes for longtime American League umpire Jim Honochick when he was forced to retire in 1973.

"This is the thing I feel worst about," said Honochick, a soft-spoken bear of a man who was here Wednesday to film a beer commercial. "When you devote 25 years to a business, you would expect the company to give you some sort of recognition.

"But if you came into my house, you would never know what business I was in. I have nothing around to show for my 25 years in the game, unless you count my gold pass that gets me into all the ballparks."

Honochick, sympathetic to the current umpires in their salary dispute with baseball, was just another anonymous ump until he joined former slugger Boog Powell in a Lite Beer commercial that pokes fun at Honochick's alleged foggy eyesight. "Hey, you're Boog Powell," he says, squinting into Powell's face after borrowing the former player's eyeglasses.

The segment filmed Wednesday was a reunion of many of the other commercial stars at the "Lite Alumni Banquet." Comedian Rodney Dangerfield, who gets no respect, is the master of ceremonies for the banquet and, of course, can't get anybody to listen to him.

In the script, Honochick approaches Dangerfield, looks closely at him and concludes: "Hey, you're Boog Powell."

The umpire, used to having the final say, suggested that it might make more sense for him to peer into Dangerfield's puppy dog eyes and say: "Hey, you're not Boog Powell." But on this day, at least, his protest fell on deaf ears.

Honochick, who reached the mandatory retirement age of 55 six years ago, said he had lots of experience with being ignored off the ball field.

"Every year we would ask the American League for a raise, but they would never give us what we asked for," said Honochick, now working in public relations for an Allentown, Pa., bank.

Permian Basin Women schedule tournaments

The Permian Basin Women's Golf Association will sponsor a tournament July 17-19 at Odessa Country Club, Ranchland Hills Country Club and Andrews Country Club, respectively.

There's a $12 entry fee and it should be sent to Iva Fields, 3000 E. 21st St., Odessa.

Astro sale approved by owners

CHICAGO (AP) — The sale of the Houston Astros to a pair of New Yorkers has been approved by National League owners meeting in Chicago.

Under the rules, "yes" votes from at least three-quarters of the league's 12 clubs were needed to approve the sale of the Astros by the Ford Motor Credit Co. to John J. McMullen and David E. LeFevre. No breakdown was released of the vote Wednesday to approve the sale.

The sale includes the National League franchise, the lease on the Houston Astrodome and the entertainment operations in the Astrodome, Astro Hall and the Astro Arena called Astrodomain.

McMullen is owner and sole shareholder of a number of New York-based companies. LeFevre is a New York lawyer.

McMullen confirmed reports that he and LeFevre plan to seek local partners in Houston who will control about 65 percent of the stock in the team. He said he hoped to complete the restructuring by June 15.

McMullen said it was his aim to make the Astros a contender immediately by utilizing talent already on the team and in the Houston minor league system.

"We have a lot of talent. It's my belief that you can't give up that talent if you're going to build a winner," he said.

The drama of the A's continues

MIAMI (AP) — Oakland A's owner Charles O. Finley says it's nearly impossible to move the baseball club to Miami without building a new stadium, but Los Angeles businessman Joel Nelson claims he's not discouraged.

Officials in charge of the stadiums in Miami and Oakland were as skeptical Wednesday as Finey.

"If a major league facility is what we need, we'll just have to turn things around and get it," Nelson, chairman of Associated Financial Management Corp., said in an interview from Los Angeles.

"Often, you have to go through the back door rather than the front. People have told me things were impossible before, and I did them. I plan to do this, too."

Finley told The Fort Lauderdale Sun-Sentinel he spoke to Nelson Wednesday about Nelson's plan to buy the A's, pay off their 8-year stadium lease with the Oakland-Alameda County Coliseum Authority and move them to Miami.

"There's no way to move a major league franchise to Florida and I told him so," Finley said by telephone from his Chicago home.

"Florida doesn't have a major league baseball facility.... When I told him Miami was out, his interest wasn't as keen. I've never met the gentleman and I don't know anything about him."

AFM Corp. is a conglomerate of 25 companies, Bernie Warren, AFM executive vice president, said. Nelson claimed his net worth is more than $20 million.

"He was very pleasant," Finley said. "But he didn't talk like the type of man with that many cattle. And with no stadium, there will be no Miami."

"It will all be done with private money," Nelson said, estimating he'd spend $20-$25 million. "Then we will look at the Orange Bowl as a temporary home and plan to build a domed stadium. The money for the stadium would probably be an additional $25-$30 million.

"My primary intent is to use private funds — not all my own — but I would like to listen to the local people and see if they would offer any assistance," he said, adding he'd meet with Finley in Oakland in about a week.

Pittsburgh's Easler waits to explode

By The Associated Press

First Steve Henderson blew up. Then Chuck Tanner fumed. And, finally, Mike Easler exploded.

Easler, though, did all the damage. His pinch-hit home run, on the 13th-inning's first pitch from Skip Lockwood, sent Pittsburgh rocketing to a 4-3 victory over the New York Mets and wiped out the Pirates' protest, lodged when Henderson was thrown out of the game, then reinstated.

"I was just sitting there on the bench like a time bomb, ready to explode," Easler said after batting for Enrique Romo and giving the Pirates' fifth pitcher of the game the victory with his liner over the right field wall. "I was sitting there watching ... and I knew I was going to be called upon.

"I felt it would take a big hit. Willie Stargell didn't get it (although he had a homer in the seventh inning). Dave Parker didn't get it (although he had an RBI single in the sixth). I felt it was up to me. I was ready five innings before that."

In the 10th inning, with a couple of Mets on base, Henderson was called out on strikes and, in frustration, slammed his bat to the ground. Ron Hutson, the amateur working at home plate during the umpires' dispute, thumbed Henderson. The NL rulebook says throwing equipment brings an automatic fine, but not an automatic ejection, as Hutson thought.

Out came Mets Manager Joe Torre. He explained the rule and the chief of the umpiring crew, minor leaguer Fred Brocklander, backed him up. "The first thing I did was go to Hutson and say, 'Did Henderson say or do anything to you personally other than throw the bat?' He told me that all Henderson did was throw his equipment, so I over-ruled the ejection because he was not aware of the rule."

Out came Tanner, who argued that once out, Henderson shouldn't have been reintstated. His argument fell on deaf ears, so he played the game under protest. "Never, never have I seen a player ejected and come back into play," Tanner said.

And Torre said later: "I think that it's a disgrace that the National League should send umpires out there who don't know the rules of the game."

Giants 8, Astros 4

San Francisco scored four unearned runs in the 10th inning — two on Bill Madlock's tie-breaking single — to beat the Astros.

Larry Herndon singled off Bo McLaughlin and Marc Hill was safe when shortstop Craig Reynolds bobbled his one-out grounder. Rob Andrews forced Hill for the second out but Bill North walked and Madlock singled to right. Terry Whitfield and Jack Clark added RBI singles.

Braves 3, Dodgers 2

Dale Murphy, who followed Jerry Royster's first-inning double with an RBI single, greeted reliever Bob Welch with a bases-loaded single up the middle in the eighth to snap Atlanta's three-game losing spin and the Dodgers' eight-game winning streak.

Andy Messersmith had retired 15 consecutive batters before giving up a single to Mike Lum and walking Gary Matthews and Jeff Burroughs, bringing Welch out of the bullpen.

In the top of the ninth, Steve Garvey singled and tried to score on Dusty Baker's double to right. The throw from Matthews, relayed by second baseman Glenn Hubbard, reached the plate at the same time as Garvey, who knocked catcher Bruce Benedict senseless — but was still tagged out.

Cardinals 2, Expos 0

Ted Simmons' two-run double in the fifth inning gave Bob Forsch all the runs he needed to record his first victory in 12 starts, dating back to last September.

"It's taken a little longer than I had hoped," said Forsch. "It's taken a little longer than everybody had hoped. I felt a little bit tired. I wish we'd had some more runs and I might have finished. I'll take it, though. It was a long time overdue." He needed ninth-inning help from Mark Littell.

Phillies 13, Cubs 0

Steve Carlton pitched six perfect innings and finished with a dazzling three-hitter while Mike Schmidt and Garry Maddox hit homers in the Phils' rout of the Cubs.

Rudy Meoli had a two-run single in the second inning and another two-run hit to cap a five-run third. Del Unser also had a two-run single in the big inning. Maddox's fifth homer was a three-run shot in the seventh and Schmidt's 12th homer was a two-run clout in the eighth.

Reds 7, Padres 0

Cincinnati struck early with five runs in the third inning, Ray Knight and Rick Auerbach driving in two apiece, and Vic Correll hit a two-run homer in the fifth.

Bill Boham pitched five no-hit innings against San Diego, then gave up four hits and was relieved by Pedro Borbon, who finished the shutout.

Smalley doesn't expect to win AL batting title

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. (AP) — Roy Smalley says there are two very good reasons why he won't win the American League batting championship.

"It's really not feasible for a guy who doesn't run any better than me," explains the Minnesota Twins 26-year old shortstop. "And it's hard to go from never hitting .300 before to leading the league," he adds.

But not only is Smalley leading the league in hitting, he's doing it in Rod Carew-fashion with a .410 average, tops in the entire major leagues.

"I've envisioned myself as a good hitter, but never as a league-leader," says Smalley, who is on a 16-game hitting string and leads the A.L. in hits, on-base percentage and slugging percentage.

"Jeez, you've gotta crush the ball all the time just to hit .300 in this league," he says. "A lot of guys hit .400 for a month; you see it all the time with guys winning the Player of the Month awards. I just happen to be doing it the first month of the season."

Smalley, whose highest big league average came last year at .273, is a firm believer in the work-ethic, and the fruits of his labors the past two seasons are starting to pay dividends.

A weight-lifting program added strength to his upper body, resulting in 19 homers last year, highest among all professional shortstops.

This season he already has a team-high nine round-trippers, with 26 runs batted in, 30 runs scored and 55 hits to go with his lofty batting average and dependable defensive play.

The key to success wasn't easy, but now it's unlocking some doors.

Gilbert fires 64 to start Colonial

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — A six-under-par 64 enabled Gibby Gilbert to win the pro-amateur golf tournament to open festivities at the annual $300,000 Colonial National Invitation golf tourament.

Gilbert, a 12-year tour veteran earned $750 with a near flawless 33-31—64 Wednesday over the 7,134-yard Trinity River course, normally one of the toughest on the multi-million dollar circuit.

Along the way, he had seven birdies and one bogey and was a single stroke above the course record.

Bobby Watkins and Grier Jones tuned up with 65s for second place, spliting $1,125, and two others were a stroke back at 66: former champion Gene Littler and Texan Tom Kite.

Fred Shero has answers

NEW YORK (AP) — It may go down on an all-time list of some sort: all-time great doubletalk statements in sports, perhaps.

Coach Fred Shero was asked why his New York Rangers weren't more aggressive physically in Tuesday's second game of their National Hockey League playoff final against the Montreal Canadiens.

"We weren't moving in quickly enough," said Shero. "You can't hit a guy if you're not there."

Who's going to argue with that?

Certainly, no on was going to argue with the fact that the Rangers were outplayed in every department Tuesday night as the Canadiens roared to a comeback 6-2 triumph and tied the best-of-seven series at one victory per team.

By the same token, though, none of the Rangers was willing to admit Montreal had shaken their confidence.

"They haven't," said defenseman Mike McEwen. "They just made us realize they're a really good hockey team. I don't think they can play any better than they played Tuesday, and we played pretty mediocre for a playoff game.

"They threw everything they could at us, and they beat us," said McEwen, "but I'm not even thinking about that game any more. I'm thinking about the next one."

The Canadiens, winners of the last three Stanley Cups and 21 since 1916, meet the Rangers in Game 3 tonight at New York's Madison Square Garden home.

Montreal hopes to employ the same strategy that produced so many scoring chances Tuesday night. In Game 2, Montreal defensemen lured Rangers defensemen into the Canadiens' zone, then fed forwards who had broken behind the New York defense.

"I think it will be a big factor in the games to come — whether we can elude their defensemen around our blue line," said Canadiens left wing Bob Gainey. "Once a defenseman gets beat a couple of times, maybe he backs up a step the next time. And then, as the game progresses and maybe they get behind, he doesn't have the confidence he had before, when he picked off a couple of passes early."

Baseball players get all kinds of fans as Baltimore's Tom Burgmeir recently found out in Boston's Fenway Park. "It is a FOWL situation," according to Burgmeir. (AP Laserphoto)

Where are those Brickyard heroes?

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Where are they all now? Where are those Brickyard heroes of yesteryear? Where are the guys who shined in May's headlines from Indianapolis, only to bob in and out of obscurity the other 11 months of the year?

Few of them ever seem to retire. It's been many years since anyone pulled off the track, threw down his helmet and said, "That's it," the way Sam Hanks did when he won the 1957 Indianapolis 500.

Mostly they just stop coming around.

A handful show up here every year, looking, hoping, scheming for rides, but down on collateral.

Fifty-year-old Lloyd Ruby unleashed a wave of nostalgia Wednesday when he ambled onto the Indianapolis Motor Speedway grounds, supposedly looking for a golfing partner.

"Rube, are you retired or are you going to drive?" he was asked.

"Oh, if there was a good car, I'd drive it," he said.

"You sound like you're retired," someone said.

"I've given up saying I'll retire anymore cuz I've lied so many times," he said.

Jan Opperman, another of those names from Mays gone by, returned to the speedway Wednesday and took a few practice laps, his first since 1976. He was out of racing for many months after suffering a severe head injury in a dirt race.

Bentley Warren, a New England super modified specialist whose career has been hampered in recent years by two serious leg injuries, also wandered in in search of a ride.

Graham McRae, 1973's top rookie here, was also seen Wednesday in Gasoline Alley, looking for a spare car. Since that 1973 Indy start — his only one here — his career has nosedived.

Most of the drivers who have driven herein the last 10 years are still active, and are here prepping cars for the May 27 race. But at the head of the list of drivers who aren't here this year, who have raced here in the last decade, is Mario Andretti, the world Formula I champion.

Jerry Grant, driver of the famed "Mystery Eagle" that nearly won the 1972 race, no longer drives although "I've never said I retired." He now works for a spark plug company as a field representative in racing, and is seen here occasionally.

Cale Yarborough, Donnie Allison and Bobby Allison are all concentrating on stock car racing these days. Yarborough has won the last three national championships.

Here are some others who have driven here in the last 10 years and what they are doing now:

Larry McCoy is here with a sponsor, but no car; Bob Harkey is off flying stunt planes; David Hobbs, Sam Posey and George Follmer are racing sports cars; Mel Kenyon races midgets; Joe Leonard, a two-time national champion and former turbine driver, is still in therapy for a 1974 foot injury suffered in racing.

Rick Muther and Ronnie Bucknum are leading quiet lives away from racing in California; Mike Hiss, who qualified Andretti's car here in last year's big controversy, sells transmissions on the West Coast; Denny Zimmerman, 1972 rookie of the year, is a front end repairman in Connecticutt; Bruce Walkup has a successful auto dealership in Sullivan, Ind.; Greg Weld is one of the country's most successful young businessmen, with a booming wheel business in Kansas City.

Jack Brabham, Denis Hulme, Lee Roy Yarbrough and Bud Tingelstad have all retired and managed to make it stick. Mark Donohue and Sam Sessions were both killed in racing accidents after they had unsuccessfully retired.

Mets nip Caps in extra innings

By The Associated Press

Jody Davis singled home Hubie Brooks with the winning run in the 10th inning Wednesday night as the Jackson Mets beat the Shreveport Captains, 5-4, in Texas League baseball action.

In other Texas League action, Amarillo edged San Antonio, 2-1, and Arkansas beat Tulsa, 7-2. Midland and El Paso were idle. No games were scheduled today, a day set aside by the league for travel.

Brooks singled, moved to second on a sacrifice by Ron McDonald and scored on a close play at home following Davis' single. Davis earlier hit a solo homer in the second for the Mets.

Arkansas scored all seven runs in the first inning, including a two-run single by Gene Roof.

32,000 to greet SuperSonics, Suns

SEATTLE (AP) — Did last Sunday's victory provide the Seattle SuperSonics with the momentum to carry them past the Phoenix Suns a fourth time?

Can the Suns, with center Alvan Adams back in uniform, beat the Sonics in Seattle again?

The answers will come tonight when the Sonics meet the Suns in the Kingdome in the deciding seventh game of their National Basketball Association Western Conference championship series.

The winner will advance to the NBA final series against the winner of the Eastern Conference championship series between the defending champion Washington Bullets and the San Antonio Spurs.

The Sonics announced that more than 32,000 tickets had been sold by noon Wednesday, enabling the game to be televised in the Seattle area.

The Sonics forced a seventh game when they edged the Suns 106-105 in Game 6 last Sunday in Phoenix, tying the series 3-3.

Phoenix lost the first two games of the series before rebounding with three straight victories, including a 99-93 victory in Seattle in Game 5.

It was the Suns' first victory in Seattle in seven tries dating back to March 1977.

Unlike Game 5, this time the Suns will have Adams available. He has been sidelined since suffering a badly sprained ankle in Game 3.

"I'm not sure whether he'll start or not," John MacLeod, the Phoenix coach, said Wednesday. "But there's no doubt about it. He's going to play and he's going to play some minutes."

MacLeod pronounced Adams fit following Wednesday's final full-scale workout before the Suns flew to Seattle.

Both MacLeod and Seattle Coach Lenny Wilkens expected another physical game with so much at stake.

MacLeod said he would like to see a tightly officiated contest.

"I've said all along that their offensive backboards are the key to the series," the Suns coach said. "We simply cannot let them run roughshod on the boards."

Seattle's big front line of center Jack Sikma and forwards Lonnie Shelton and John Johnson, along with wily veteran reserve Paul Silas, have dominated the boards throughout the series.

"Seattle is a physical team," said MacLeod. "They're big and strong and love to bang around inside. When the game is loosely officiated, it definitely works to their advantage."

Although he isn't advertising his strategy, Wilkens may assign Shelton to guard the Suns' high-scoring Walter Davis.

The 6-foot-8, 245-pound Shelton was matched against the 6-6 Davis late in Sunday's game and provided a key to Seattle's fourth-quarter rally.

"Whatever the game situation dictates, that's what we'll do," said Wilkens. "I try to read situations and be in tune with what is happening on the court.

"Lonnie is quick for his size," Wilkens said. "We've had times in our rotation where he winds up on the other team's quick (small) forward."

Larry Hisle awaits shoulder injury report

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — The Milwaukee Brewers awaited a doctor's report today on the condition of outfielder Larry Hisle, who has been kept out of action because of a shoulder injury.

Hisle was examined Wednesday by Dr. Frank Jobe, an orthopedic specialist who has treated many athletes.

Simpson headed for Buffalo

BUFFALO, N.Y. (AP) — Moving from a Super Bowl contender in sunny California to an also-ran team in the Northeast doesn't seem like such a bad deal to Bill Simpson.

"It feels great. I'm very happy — elated about it," said Simpson, who was traded Wednesday by the Los Angeles Rams to the Buffalo Bills for an undisclosed National Football League draft choice.

Simpson played under Bills Coach Chuck Knox and his secondary coaching staff for four seasons before Knox came to Buffalo.

"I really enjoyed playing for Coach Knox here (in Los Angeles), then everybody just packed up and left me," he said in a telephone interview from Los Angeles.

"I know the Bills didn't win a whole lot last season, but they lost so many close ones, otherwise they might have been 8-8. And, they had a very good draft," he noted.

"I've lived out here five years now, and it's been great," Simpson said. "Except, you can't buy any gas."

Simpson, 27, is 6-foot-1, weighs 180 pounds and is beginning his sixth season in the NFL. He has been a starter for the Rams for five seasons and was in the starting lineup for 14 of the Rams' 16 games last year.

In his five years with the Rams, he has had 22 interceptions in regular season play, five of them last year when he also had 61 solo tackles and assisted on 33 more.

In eight playoff games with the Rams, Simpson has had six interceptions. He intercepted two passes in the Rams 34-10 playoff victory over Minnesota last year.

Simpson played college ball at Michigan State with teammate Joe DeLamielleure of the Bills, and won Big 10 football honors his last two seasons.

KERRVILLE — The Memorial Day weekend, May 24 through 28, initiates the eighth season of outdoor music festivals at this beautiful Texas Hill Country resort community.

Opening the season is the oldest and best-established of the four summer music fests here, the eighth annual Kerrville Folk Festival. The festival features five evening concerts by three dozen well-known or fast-rising performers, including Steve Fromholz, Allen Damron, Willis Alan Ramsey,

ENTERTAINMENT

Robert Shaw, Ray Wiley Hubbard, Don Sanders, Milton Carroll, Peter Rowan, Rusty Weir, Townes Van Zandt, John Vandiver, Kurt Van Sickle and many, many more.

Daytime events will include informal sessions at The Ballad Tree as well as New Folk Concerts at the annual Texas State Arts and Crafts Fair which will be under way on the campus of Schreiner College in Kerrville.

Special features of the folk music fest will include the annual Folk Mass and this year's added "Great Texas Harmonica Blow-Off," which will precede the final evening concert on Memorial Day itself.

The Folk Festival, like all other summer music festivals here, is held at the outdoor theater at producer Rod Kennedy's Quiet Valley Ranch, located nine miles south of Kerrville.

Other Kerrville music fests on tap for the summer months include the Kerr Country Fair, featuring three evening concerts, on June 22, 23 and 24; the third annual Kerrville Gospel Jubiless, scheduled July 27 through 29, and the sixth annual Kerrville Bluegrass Festival, Aug. 30 through Sept. 2. Additional information about the four festival weekends may be obtained by writing to Kerrville Festivals, P.O. Box 1466, Kerrville 78028.

American painting on view

FORT WORTH — Almost three centuries of American art are represented in a new exhibition at the Amon Carter Museum in Fort Worth.

The paintings in the show are from the permanent collection of the Worcester Art Museum in Worcester, Mass.

The exhibition is part of a unique experiment between the two art museums. While selections from Worcester are on view in Fort Worth through June 24, some of the Carter's finest examples of 19th Century American art are being exhibited in Worcester.

By exchanging collections during this period, the two institutions are able to bring to their visitors an extremely wide range of American art, spokesmen pointed out.

The Worcester Museum has one of the finest collections of Colonial and Federalist period American art in the nation, and the collection of 19th Century frontier art belonging to the Carter Museum is known throughout the world.

The nucleus of the Worcester Museum's present collection was a group of family portraits by such gifted early American artists as Gilbert Stuart and Chester Harding. The portraits had been given to the museum by Stephen Salisbury III, one of the leaders in the organization of the museum in 1898.

Many of the paintings which traveled to Fort Worth for the exhibition at the Carter represent facets of American art that have rarely, if ever, been seen in this area. Carol Clark, curator of paintings at the Carter Museum, said that the Worcester show gives people in the Southwest an opportunity to see the beginning of American art. It also gives them opportunity to compare the styles and techniques of some of the most accomplished artists who were practicing their craft long before the Declaration of Independence, she pointed out.

Three of America's most highly acclaimed early artists are featured prominently in the exhibition here — Gilbert Stuart, Benjamin West and John Singleton Copley.

Other major artists of the 18th and 19th centuries whose works are on display are Thomas Cole, founder of the Hudson River School and perhaps the single most influential painter in 19th Century America; John Frederick Kensett, Samuel F.B. Morse, Worthington Whittridge and Thomas Eakins.

The exhibition brackets two complete centuries of American art beginning with early colonial portraits by such artists as Joseph Badger, Carles Willson Peale and Thomas Sully, and ending with works by late 19th Century painters such as Childe Hassam, James Abbott McNeill Whistler and Mary Cassatt.

Also featured in the show is Edward Hicks' "Peaceable Kingdom," probably the nation's best-known and best-loved example of folk painting.

The Carter Museum, located on Fort Worth's Camp Bowie Blvd., is open to the public without charge weekdays and Sunday afternoons.

Musicals dominate summer at Fort Worth Casa Manana

FORT WORTH — Casa Manana, Fort Worth's famous theater-in-the-round, will open its 22nd summer season with a production of "Fiddler on the Roof."

The season will be initiated June 18 and will continue for 12 weeks, offering such varied entertainment as five outstanding Broadway musicals plus a play, a concert series and a burlesque production, said Bud Franks, producer and general manager.

The opening attraction, "Fiddler," will feature Mel and Katy Dacus. The performers, well-known to Fort Worth audiences, have been on tour with this production. They will be returning to the Casa Manana stage for the first time in several years.

The second attraction of the season will be "Here It Is — Burlesque!" starring Ann Corio, Morey Amsterdam and Pinky Lee. This is a new package patterned after the very popular "That Was Burlesque" productions presented at Casa Manana in the 1974 and '75 seasons.

Dynamic Ruta Lee, a special darling of Fort Worth audiences, will return to Casa in a new show for her, "The King and I." She will be playing the Welsh schoolteacher Anna in this, her 14th show at Casa Manana. Miss Lee will be on stage for two weeks, from July 16 through July 28.

The perennially-popular musical, "West Side Story, will be presented July 30 through Aug. 4, followed by performances of another enormously popular musical, "South Pacific," scheduled for Aug. 6 through 11.

Singer Pat Boone will star in a special one-week concert series at Casa Manana, beginning Aug. 13 and concluding on Aug. 18. It will be Boone's first engagement at Casa.

The acclaimed musical "Godspell" will continue the season with performances Aug. 20 through Sept 1, and the season will conclude with a new-from-Broadway play, "Same Time Next Year." The play will have a week's run through Sept. 8.

Casa Manana season tickets have gone on sale at the Casa box office, with a 10 per cent discount available to purchasers until June 11. Individual tickets for the various musicals and special events will go on sale to the public June 11.

Additional details on the upcoming summer season and information on season ticket prices may be obtained from Casa Manana, P.O. Box 9054, Fort Worth 76107. The theater's telephone numbers are 817-332-9319 or 817-332-7692.

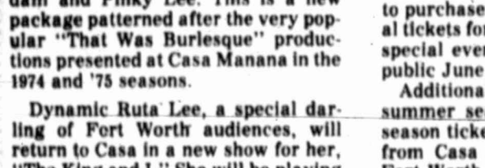

Plays to close

Midland Community Theatre this weekend will close its two current stage attractions.

A special "bonus" production, "Vanities," will have final presentations at 7:30 p.m. today and 8:30 p.m. Friday. The production is presented in Theatre 2, the smaller, more intimate arena theater inside MCT's Theatre Midland at 2000 W. Wadley Ave.

MCT's third major attraction of its current membership season is "Crown Matrimonial," a British import. The drama by Royce Ryton will have concluding performances at 8:30 p.m. Friday and Saturday in Theatre 1, the main auditorium at Theatre Midland.

Seat reservations for "Vanities" and "Crown Matrimonial" should be made through the MCT box office, 682-4111.

The way to learn how to handle money is to handle money.

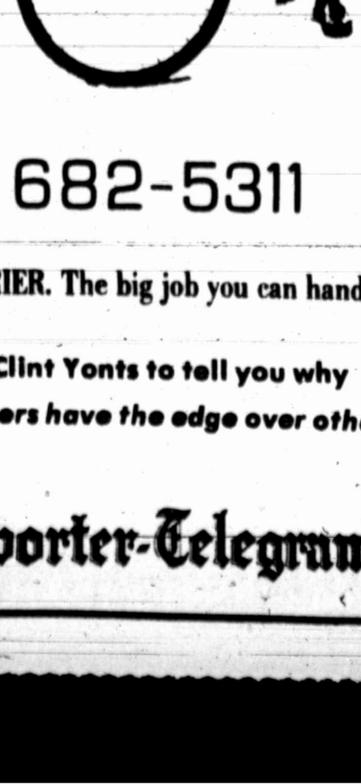

For example, you can learn a lot about handling money being a newspaper carrier. You do your own collecting from your own customers and keep your own cash records. You're on your own. (But not alone! There's help instruction, advice and guidance when you have the need.)

You also can learn a lot about people and the way they behave in various situations. And about yourself and the way you behave in various situations.

Whatever you do later in life, this kind of experience gives you a better start. In fact, seventeen presidents of the United States once were newspaper carriers.

Whether you're planning to be a president, or just want to earn some extra money, we'd like to talk with you about your becoming an R-T carrier. Both boys and girls are discovering a great new life of enjoyment and satisfaction on this very special team.

Why don't you come in?....or call

Lure of Old West weakening lately

By VERN ANDERSON

LOGAN, Utah (AP) — Did Butch Cassidy die in a hail of bullets in Bolivia or with his boots off in the Pacific Northwest? Who cares?

Fewer and fewer people, says the secretary-treasurer of the National Association and Center for Outlaw and Lawman History at Utah State University.

John Stewart says interest in the Old West "is on the downswing now. We don't know how to fully account for it but maybe it's because the youth are more interested in Superman than they are in John Wayne and Tom Mix.

"I don't know. I think that's part of it — the tremendous interest in science fiction," Stewart says.

But if wearing western garb to a disco is as close as most care to get to the Old West today, the trend from gunslinger to starship hasn't affected growing membership in the association.

Not surprisingly, actor Robert Redford — the Sundance Kid on film — is a lifetime member. But so are Nobel Prize-winning author Saul Bellow, Illinois Gov. James Thompson and some 500 others.

Most are serious writers and researchers, and a senior official of Pinkerton's, Inc., is a vice president.

The association was started five years ago by Kerry Boren, who has since left to develop books and film projects on his own.

Boren is convinced the Old West will make a comeback in the public imagination, but not in the shoot 'em up style of the past — "the stereotyped western that people became bored with.

"People are no longer interested in the white hat versus black hat thing," he says. They want a historically accurate picture.

Getting away from outlaw-lawman stereotypes is difficult, Stewart says, because "it's our human tendency to be hero-worshippers."

Billy the Kid, for example, has been portrayed as everything from a bloodthirsty killer to a Robin Hood in boots, Stewart says, but the reality lies somewhere between.

"I would say he was comparable with 100,000 other young bucks in the West that were both brave and fearful and a combination of strength and weakness," he says.

Another cowboy demigod, Buffalo Bill, was in reality, Stewart says, "a huckster of the first water."

And still another, Bat Masterson, was "a failure in one thing after another," Stewart says. "Many found him a very obnoxious guy" who was "kicked out of a couple of towns in Colorado."

But Masterson was helped to immortality as a lawman in part because Theodore Roosevelt got him a job for a New York newspaper, which became "a platform to tell his stories," he says.

Besides collecting old books, manuscripts, diaries and pictures from the Old West, the association publishes a quarterly with sober articles on outlaws and lawmen, showing there was often little difference between the two.

And Butch Cassidy? For those who still care, Boren says Cassidy and the Sundance Kid got out of Bolivia alive and died much later in the United States — Cassidy in an accident and Sundance of old age in the 1950s.

NBC retains low standing

NEW YORK (AP) — It was NBC's plight in a nutshell; the struggling network's highest-rated show, a two-hour "CHiPs" special, 26th in the ratings, six of the week's seven lowest-rated programs.

In fact, NBC's rating for the week of May 13 was the lowest for the network since 1978-79 programming began in September. And though the prime-time season is over, the networks often look to summer reruns to establish potential hits.

ABC, as usual, listed the majority of the A.C. Nielsen Co.'s 10 most-watched shows — seven — and that distribution contributed to a rating for the network of 17.6. CBS was second at 16.7 and NBC third at 12.9 — NBC's first week with a rating lower than 13.

The networks say that means in an average prime-time minute during the week, 17.6 percent of the homes in the country with TV were tuned to ABC.

Quartet to play final series recital

The Thouvenel Quartet, Midland's string quartet-in-residence, is preparing for the final program in its 1978-79 chamber music series.

The program will be at 8 p.m. Sunday in the recital hall of Midland College's Fine Arts Building. Single tickets will be available for purchase at the doors before the start of the concert.

The Thouvenel emsemble was in East Lansing, Mich., this past week to participate in a quartet seminar at Michigan State University. Ten string quartets from Michigan, Indiana, Texas and Tennessee participated in the seminar and had special coaching by members of the famed Juilliard String Quartet.

The participating quartets then performed in public programs this past Saturday and Sunday on the Michigan State University campus.

Members of the Thouvenel ensemble are Sally Chisholm, viola; Michael Rosenbloom and Eugene Purdue, violins, and Jeff Levenson, 'cello.

Folksinger to perform in Odessa

Joshua Tenne, widely-known Jewish folksinger, will be heard in a musical program Monday night in Temple Beth-El in Odessa.

Tenne's program will consist of Hebrew, Yiddish and English songs. Admission to the recital will be $3 per person, and tickets may be reserved by telephoning 683-8893 in Midland. A limited number of tickets will be available at the doors Monday night before the start of the 7:30 p.m. program.

A "Sabra," or native born Israeli, Tenne graduated from an agricultural high school on a kibbutz and served three years in the Israeli army. He attended Queens College in New York City, graduating with a bachelor's degree in economics. He holds a master's degree from Long Island University and has a Cantor's diploma from Herziliah Hebrew Teachers and Cantor's Institute.

Tenne now is an international performer and presents his programs on college and university campuses and in nightclubs in many parts of the world.

Concert's magnitude almost overwhelming

A Review

The Midland-Odessa Symphony and Chorale and a multitude of guest performers maintained a high level of excellence in Tuesday night's concert in Lee High School auditorium.

It was almost too much, this season-closing program, presenting as it did a piano concerto, two large-scale orchestral-choral works, and a short orchestral piece. All this musical magnificence was actually a little ponderous and, in retrospect, it seems rather overpowering. But the concert certainly served well to put an exclamation mark on the symphony season.

The orchestra, under the baton of Dr. Tom Hohstadt, was joined by Rumanian pianist Adrian Stoica in a performance of Frederic Chopin's Concerto No. 1 in E minor.

The performance was entirely creditable, although not what could be described as especially inspired.

The guest artist, whose keyboard technique was solid and generally impeccable, gave a well-thought-out and rather deliberate performance. What he lacked in excitement he compensated for in musicality and pianistic expertise, I believe.

Stoica's reading of the allegro maestoso first movement was well-done, and the romanze-larghetto second movement had grace and elegance. The rondo-vivace third and final movement emerged with clarity but no special brilliance.

Hungarian composer Zoltan Kodaly's "Te Deum," featuring four guest soloists, emerged splendidly and it certainly was one of the high points of the evening.

Soloists for the work included soprano Emilia Simone, mezzo-soprano Luretta Riek, tenor John Gillis and bass Terry Cook. (Cook, incidentally, was a winner in the 1977 National Young Artist Competition of the Midland-Odessa Symphony, and sang with the orchestra in concerts in the spring of '77.)

The Kodaly work has true brilliance and, as been pointed out, combines power with spirituality to provide a deeply moving listening experience.

In a way, it is a shame that the Kodaly had to share billing with the other "big" work of the evening, Tchaikovsky's famous 1812 Overture. The Tchaikovsky is theatrical, massive, quite overwhelming, so that it rather overshadowed the Kodaly.

In its performance here Tuesday night, the 1812 Overture became a bonafide production number, combining the orchestra with a 300-voice choir (made up of the symphony Chorale, the choirs of Odessa's three high schools and Midland's two high schools) under the direction of Dr. Frank Varro, Chorale director.

The sound of cannon fire added to the theatricality of the overture, if not to its musicality. All in all, it was a well-done production, as it was when it was done by the symphony about four years ago. Now, I am hoping we can let this venerable old "warhorse" of a symphonic piece rest for a decade or more!

Opening the concert Tuesday night was the orchestra's presentation of Prokofiev's march from his "The Love For Three Oranges." It was melodic and very pleasant.

Lavin paintings to show

Paintings of oil field scenes by New York artist Robert Lavin will go on view Friday at the Permian Basin Petroleum Museum, located on Interstate 20 near the Rankin Highway in south Midland.

The collection is being exhibited at the museum through the cooperation of the Hanging Tree Gallery of Midland. The show will remain on view through June 4, open to the public during museum hours daily.

Lavin specializes in portraying American industry. For the last few years, much of his work has been related to the oil industry. He has visited rigs in the North Sea, off the coast of Africa, in the Gulf of Mexico and elsewhere, and has toured oil field locations throughout the U.S. and Canada. Several of the paintings in the collection to be exhibited here are Permian Basin scenes.

Lavin's paintings hang in the offices of many oil companies, drilling firms and banks. He has won numerous awards for his work, including five awards from the American Society of Illustrators and an award from the annual Long Island Art Show. Lavin's philosophy is that "there is great beauty in industry and I believe that art for industry should be art of the industry."

Two named to head department

ODESSA — Ector County school trustees appointed two administrators to head a newly formed department of planning, evaluation, research and development at their meeting Tuesday.

Director of the new department designed to streamline management of district programs and personnel is Don Williams, currently assistant director for school services at the Region 14 Education Service Center in Abilene.

Associate director will be Dr. Wayne Milligan, currently director of planning and evaluation at the Abilene center.

The new department was recommended by a consultant hired to study ways to improve the district's administrative organization, Superintendent W.H. Holm said.

James E. Langford was named director of secondary education by the trustees. He currently is superintendent of the Hale Center Independent School District.

Five new principals also were appointed at the meeting to replace two who retired, one who resigned, one who was promoted and one who returned to classroom teaching.

All the new principals currently are employees of the Ector County schools.

Deputy chief of SAC promoted

OFFUTT AIR FORCE BASE, Neb. (AP) — Maj. Gen. George D. Miller, deputy chief of staff for operations at the Strategic Air Command, has been named to an Air Force staff position in Washington, it was announced Wednesday.

Miller will leave SAC by June 4 to become director of plans under the Air Force deputy chief of staff for operations and requirements.

County issues missing persons report for voter registration

More than 7,900 voters in Midland County are missing — and Janeice Builta wants to know where they are.

The voter registration deputy for Midland County has those registration tags on file in the lobby of the tax offices at the courthouse.

The cards were returned following the latest mail out from the tax office, since the postal service cannot forward the cards to a new address.

As a result, the 7,911 Midland countians have been placed on the county's strike list, according to Mrs. Builta.

"If you don't have a yellow voter registration card, you need to get down here and register," she said Wednesday.

According to Mrs. Builta, voter registration will be automatic for the next ten years as long as a citizen remains at the same address.

Every two years, the voter will receive a different colored voter registration card.

However, voters are asked to contact the tax office by letter or in person when they change addresses.

In some instances, particularly in the numerous trailer parks cropping up around the city, the post office has changed the route number, and residents will not receive their cards unless they show up at the tax offices, Mrs. Builta said.

According to the voter registration deputy, the county anticipates mailing out new cards in either October or December. Voters have June, July and August to register any change in address, she said.

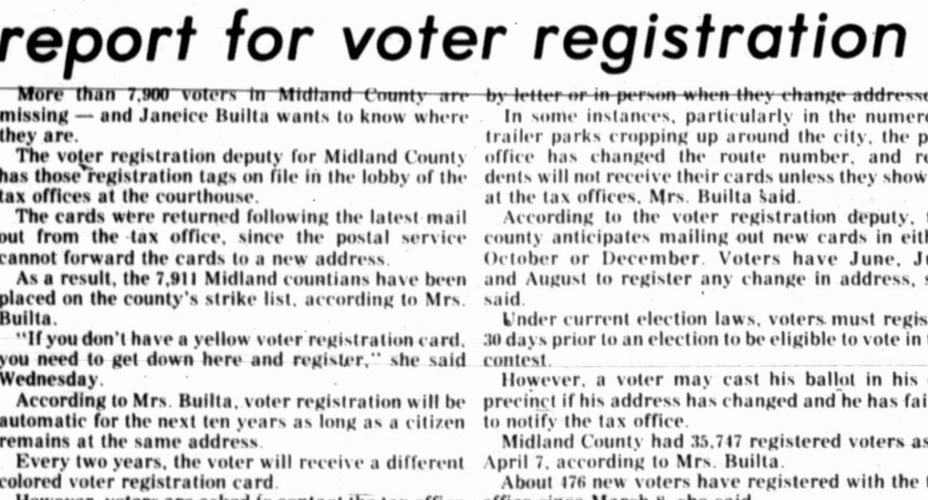

Under current election laws, voters must register 30 days prior to an election to be eligible to vote in the contest.

However, a voter may cast his ballot in his old precinct if his address has changed and he has failed to notify the tax office.

Midland County had 35,747 registered voters as of April 7, according to Mrs. Builta.

About 476 new voters have registered with the tax office since March 8, she said.

Florida House may get fourth run at ERA bill

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — The Florida House may get its fourth chance today to go on record in favor of ratification of the Equal Rights Amendment when a bill containing an ERA provision reaches the floor.

In a surprise move Wednesday, the House approved a proposal to make Florida the 36th state to ratify the ERA, setting the stage for another Senate showdown over the controversial amendment banning sex discrimination.

House members voted 59-49 for a ratification amendment by Rep. Elaine Gordon, D-Miami, which was attached to an obscure Senate-passed bill (SB267) by Sen. Jim Scott, R-Fort Lauderdale. The bill would change the time limit for filing discrimination complaints with a state agency.

Rep. Gordon said she added the measure to Scott's bill at the urging of the Senate ERA sponsor Sen. Jack Gordon, D-Miami Beach.

Because of complicated procedural rules, that maneuver is expected to set up a floor vote on the ERA when the bill returns to the Senate with the House amendment. The Senate has been the traditional stumbling-block for the ERA in Florida, twice rejecting the measure on the floor and this year blocking it in the Rules Committee.

The proposal has been passed three times by the House.

The Equal Rights Amendment, which would outlaw discrimination based on sex, must be ratified by 38 states by June 30, 1982, to become part of the Constitution. The original deadline was March 22, 1979, but was extended by an act of Congress.

The ERA has been approved by 35 states, but five have since rescinded approval. The validity of that move still is in question and the Justice Department has said it is up to Congress to decide. The states that have rescinded approval are South Dakota, Kentucky, Tennessee, Idaho and Nebraska. Kentucky's action was vetoed, however.

Sharon Snyder, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Larry Snyder, has been awarded the $2,600 Noble Foundation Scholarship. The Lee High School senior is a member of the National Honor Society, Rebelettes and the A Cappella choir. Snakeman hits goal, opts for 10 more days

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Peter Snyman achieved his goal of living 40 days and 40 nights in a den of snakes today — and decided to try for 50.

Jack seale, curator of the Hartbeespoort Snake Park where the 25-year-old South African carpenter is pursuing his quest, said Snyman wants to make his record unassailable.

On Sunday, Snyman broke the previous record of 36 days living with 24 highly poisonous snakes and had planned to emerge from the glass cage today.

Eeek! Rat manure business up in air

By RICK HAMPSON

NORTHAMPTON, Mass. (AP) — The rat's reputation as the bum of the animal kingdom has meant ups and downs for Paul Marean's business.

Marean is co-owner of Rat Labs, a rodent supply operation that mostly just sells rats to area colleges. But when Marean noticed that the caged critters produced about 200 pounds of manure a week, Rat Labs came up with a new business angle — rat manure fertilizer.

Marean, 28, and partner Jack Finn, 30, took out a classified ad with the banner "Rat Manure." When customers didn't exactly break down the door, the partners changed the ad to "Composted Manure" and business picked up.

Proponents of the fertilizer say it's just as good as cow or horse manure. For $10, gardeners can fill a pick-up truck with the stuff.

"Some people say 'Rat manure? No thank you!' But if you can get over that, it's just the same as cow manure," Marean said Wednesday.

Finn says rat manure isn't a great fertilizer, but it's fine for building up the mineral and chemical quality of the soil. And it's about as pure as manure gets.

"Unlike cow manure, it doesn't have any seeds in it that might get in your garden," said Finn. "All we feed the rats is Purina Rat Chow and water."

Although the partners would like to make a profit selling fertilizer, "we're really just trying to get rid of all this rat manure," Marean confided.

Hearings scheduled

BIG SPRING — The Howard College Board of Trustees has set June 19 for public hearings on the $2.8 million 1979-80 budget.

Dr. Charles Hays, college president, said he considered the budget "realistic," even though they are having to dip into a reserve fund to balance the budget.

Although five instructors were terminated, Hays said the school is not cutting any of its programs, but the college would "make do" with available personnel. Resignations of three other employees were accepted.

Andrews choir wins honor at festival

ANDREWS — The Andrews High School A Cappella Choir was named the outstanding choir at last week's Sandy Lake Choir Festival in Irving.

The Andrews A Capella Choir received a 1 for performance as did the school's boys' choir and the girls' choir.

Leading the Andrews choir were choir director Tom Adams and assistant director Noble Canida.

"I love Sugar Frosted, and Brown Sugar-Cinnamon's delicious, too. But, then, how can I resist Plain Toasted?"

Texas congressmen's financial disclosure reports released

WASHINGTON (AP)—Texas congressmen have filed financial disclosure statements that show property owned from Georgia timberland to family corporations and from Tandy Corp. stock to grazing land.

U.S. Rep. Jim Collins' report for 1978 listed pine tree timberland in Georgia worth at least $115,000. He owned farms in Dallas and Wilmer counties, in Irving and in Wilmer.

The Dallas Republican had at least $250,000 placed in cash bank deposits. Among the companies in his stock portfolio were American Brands, Bell & Howell, Bulova, Franklin Mint, Polaroid, Republic Steel and F.W. Woolworth.

The financial disclosure reports released Wednesday did not require exact figures. Amounts were listed by classification. Each member receives a $57,500 annual salary for his congressional duties.

U.S. Rep. Ray Roberts, for example, showed that he sold a boat last May for a price between $15,000 and $50,000.

ROBERTS, A DEMOCRAT from McKinney, listed at least $141,500 in outside income. Roberts also drew a $7,844 pension from the U.S. Navy and received $1,700 for two speaking engagements.

The most substantial property Roberts listed was an interest worth at least $50,000 in Roberts Bros. of McKinney.

The state's top earner of honorariums was U.S. Rep. Jim Wright, the House majority leader. The Fort Worth Democrat was $250 below the $25,000 limit placed on the speaking fees.

The honorariums ranged from $100 from Texas Wesleyan College to $2,000 from Touche Ross and Co. of Los Angeles.

For outside income Wright listed at least $5,000 from rental property in his hometown, at least $200 in dividends and $2,500 in capital gains from the sale of Gearhart Owens stock.

His holdings included at least $10,000 in Tandy Corp. and the Western Co.

The only honorarium U.S. Rep. J.J. "Jake" Pickle said he received last year was $1,000 from the Bowling Proprietors Association. The group also picked up round trip expenses for Pickle to deliver his address at its annual convention in Las Vegas.

THE AUSTIN Democrat's property included 37 shares of Aluminum Co. of America, 50 shares of Texas Eastern Inc. and 50 shares of Union Carbide worth at least $3,000.

Pickle said he owned a half interest in 92 acres of grazing land worth at least $15,000 and a one-third interest in 958.5 acres of grazing land worth at least $100,000. The tracts were in Travis County.

U.S. Rep. Jack Hightower said his wife earned $1,744.71 last year as the organist for the First Baptist Church in their hometown of Vernon. The Democrat received $1,000 in fees for speaking to the Celanese Corp. and the Texas Stae Soil and Water Conservation Board.

The sale of livestock brought in $10,897.01 to U.S. Rep. Tom Loeffler last year. The freshman Republican from Hunt also listed $2,289 earned for legal services and $559 from sale of his partnership.

Loeffler said his livestock operation was worth at least $15,000.

U.S. REP. RICHARD White of El Paso said he suffered a net loss on rental property. He listed among his assets hometown real estate worth at least $250,000.

The American Podiatrists Association gave White his only honorarium last year, a fee of $500.

Rental property in his hometown of Mission and an account in the Citizens State Bank of Roma brought in at least $1,100 for U.S. Rep. E. "Kika" de la Garza. His income and property listing was one of the Texas delegation's briefest.

U.S. Rep. Bill Archer of Houston listed at least $27,500 in outside income last year. His property included a 104-acre farm in Washington County, Texas, worth at least $15,000. His home on 184 acres in Loudon County, Va., was valued at a $100,000 minimum.

A freshman congressman from Marlin said he received a $9,395 salary from Wilson Building Material Co. in Clifton last year. U.S. Rep. Marvin Leath listed at least $12,000 in interest from three Waco banks and one in Marlin.

LEATH ALSO SAID he owned at least $15,000 of Marlin Mills Inc.

U.S. Rep. Ron Paul of Lake Jackson returned to the House this year from his medical practice, which brought him $105,900 in professional fees in 1978.

Th Republican said his property included a 40-acre farm and his home worth at least $100,000 each and 10 acres at Oyster Creek carrying at least a $50,000 value.

U.S. Rep. Charles Stenholm's property included 840 acres of farmland, building and equipment worth at least $250,000. He took a $4,025 salary from his Double S Farms Inc. in Stamford last year.

Another asset Stenholm listed in his statement was at least $50,000 in the First National Bank of Stamford, where he received a $5,000 fee as a bank director.

The University of Texas Medical Branch in U.S. Rep. Jack Brooks' district provided the Beaumont Democrat with his only honorarium last year, a $1,000 fee. He placed a value of at least $904,000 on the stock he owns.

Brooks said he received a $30,192 director's fee from the First Bank and Trust Co. of Groves and a similar $26,175 fee from First National Bank of Silsbee.

U.S. Rep. Kent Hance, another freshman Democrat, showed a $39,803 law firm salary from last year and $10,392 from Hays and Hance Cattle. The former state senator from Lubbock received $7,340 in 1978 as his Texas Senate salary.

Among the assets he listed was at least $100,000 in Deaf Smith County land.

Ethics act forcing HEW resignations

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Department of Health, Education and Welfare is losing several of its top officials in a series of resignations speeded up, if not caused by, a tough new government ethics act that takes effect July 1.

HEW Under Secretary Hale Champion became the latest to join the resignation parade when he announced Wednesday he would step down June 30 to return to Harvard University.

Champion, who makes $52,500 a year, said he was leaving because: "I'm broke. I can't afford it anymore." But he added that he was timing his departure to stay clear of the new ethics law.

The most controversial provision of the new law is a two-year prohibition against former federal officials counseling fellow employees in dealings with their former government agencies.

Opponents say that provision makes it nearly impossible for former high level officials to function in jobs with private businesses or concerns that have extensive dealings with the federal government.

Donald Kennedy, commissioner of the Food and Drug Administration and Patricia A. Graham, director of HEW's National Institute of Education, already have announced they will step down in June.

U.S. Commissioner of Education Ernest L. Boyer has planned to leave at the end of the year, but could move his departure up because of concerns about the ethics act.

It was learned that HEW's general counsel, F. Peter Libassi, also intends to leave government before the law takes effect. A department source said Libassi will enter private law practice for "both personal and financial reasons."

Panel probing Roloff home stabbing incident

CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas (AP) — A grand jury foreman says the panel investigating an unreported stabbing incident at one of evangelist Lester Roloff's child care homes "definitely" will seek legal action against the girls allegedly involved in the attack.

But Oscar Reyna said Wednesday that grand jurors would take no action against the fundamentalist preacher for not reporting the incident.

Grand jurors are scheduled to reconvene May 24 and 25 to continue their investigation into the stabbing of former Rebekah resident Misty Hardman of Kansas.

Nueces County Attorney Mike Westergren told the Corpus Christi Caller-Times that the grand jury cannot indict the seven girls, all of whom were minors at the time of July 1 attack, but said the panel could refer the case to juvenile court.

The grand jury may have the option to recommend that the girls be certified to stand trial as adults. But he said, "the likelihood of certification ... would not be in line with previous practice."

Reyna told the newspaper that District Attorney Bill Mobley and his assistant Grant Jones told grand jurors that having knowledge of a crime and not reporting it "is not against the law."

"It's crazy," Reyna told the newspaper.

Mobley and Jones said Wednesday they are not aware of any state law that makes it a crime not to report a crime. Mobley declined to say what he told the grand jury, but Jones said the panel had been advised no state law covered the situation.

Roloff, who earlier asked to appear before the grand jury, is expected to testify May 25.

Reyna said the jurors would begin their deliberations after Roloff's appearance. But he said some legal action "definitely" would result from the investigation.

Westergren said juvenile court action was possible against five of seven girls who allegedly took part in the stabbing. He said four of the five could face adult certification proceedings.

Hospital short of anticipated fiscal budget

ODESSA — Medical Center Hospital is some $42,000 short of the anticipated budget for the current fiscal year, despite a profit of $58,000 for March, hospital board of managers were told Tuesday afternoon.

March was the busiest month of the hospital's fiscal year which began Oct. 1, administrator Sam Glenney said.

Average patient load per day during March was 236.5, Glenney said. The hospital currently has 267 beds.

By comparison, the average number of patients per day during December was 178.2.

The lower than anticipated number of patients from October through December resulted in the budget lag, Glenney said.

Hiring at the hospital was frozen during November and December because of the low patient loads, Glenney said, but with increased hospital usage, the number of employees has increased.

BRIDGE

Bridge needs more than kindly heart

By ALFRED SHEINWOLD

Most people like you if your heart is in the right place, but your bridge partner demands more.

East won the first trick with the king of clubs and led a low heart, Finding a heart in the right place when West won with the ace.

West returned a heart, but South ruffed East's king. Now East could get his ace of trumps but dummy had a heart stopper and East couldn't continue the attack on South's trumps.

MUST LEAD KING

It was correct for East to rely on his strong heart, but he should have led it. If East leads the king of hearts at the second trick he can then lead a low heart to make South ruff.

East leads another heart when he takes the ace of spades, and South must ruff again. Now East has more trumps than South and will eventually take the setting trick with a low trump.

DAILY QUESTION

Partner opens with one spade, and the next player passes. You hold: S-3; H-A10642; D-754; C-8763. What do you say?

ANSWER: Pass. You would respond if partner opened with one of any other suit, but the singleton spade is not an asset when partner bids spades.

Our Used Cars Are Sold With As Much Pride As Our New Cars.

Many people are not aware that on many occasions we spend good money and time on the used cars we sell.

Those trade-in cars that do not meet our standards never appear in our used car department. The newer model trade-ins in fine condition, get a quick check, a lick and some polish...while the good older ones do get fixed up, if we feel they are worth the money.

That's why we offer every used car with pride.
