Iran's tribunal to investigate charges

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — Iran's international tribunal to investigate spying charges against American hostages will begin work early next year and Nobel Peace Prize-winning Irish statesman Sean MacBride will be invited to take part, Tehran Radio said today.

Foreign Minister Sadegh Ghotbzadeh has said the government was going ahead with plans for an international "grand jury" to investigate "crimes" of the United States and the deposed shah, although the former monarch's departure from the United States has opened the door to a resolution of the U.S.-Iranian crisis.

He also said some of the 50 American hostages held in the occupied U.S. Embassy since Nov. 4 might be released for Christmas. Militants holding them have insisted they would be tried on espionage charges if the shah is not returned to Iran.

Los Angeles radio newsman Alex Paen, who started a Christmas card writing campaign in the United States, delivered a sack of 3,000 cards to the embassy today, the first of many he hopes to take.

The radio quoted Ghotbzadeh as saying MacBride would be invited to sit on the panel, which is to include members of various nationalitites and a number of Iranian "experts and thinkers." MacBride, a one-time Irish Republican Army chief, won the Peace Prize in 1974 for his work in South-West Africa (Namibia) and visited Iran earlier to help mediate the crisis.

Another broadcast said Iran is stopping oil sales to Panama, where the shah has taken refuge on a resort island. But Panama said Sunday that it has not imported oil from Iran since 1973.

The press in Tehran quoted a report from Kermanshah in the west saying about 200 Iraqi mercenaries attacked the Iranian border post of Kuh-e-Kalagh Saturday night with heavy weapons and artillery but were defeated in a two-hour attack. The reports also said Iraqi mercenaries attacked border villages, but casualty details were not given.

Last week the Forekgn Ministry blamed the United States for Iraqi attacks in the southwest border area Friday. Forces of the neighboring country pushed three miles into Iran, then retreated after skirmishing with Revolutionary Guardsmen, the ministry said. Iraqi diplomats in Kuwait denied the report but an Arab League spokesman at the United Nations backed Iran's claim.

There has been no direct reaction from Khomeini on the shah's move to Panama, but the government has characterzed it as a defeat for the United States and a step toward acceptance of Iran's demands.

"We will try to do our best to defuse the crisis. I certainly don't want to have this crisis forever," Ghotbzadeh told The Associated Press Sunday evening. It was his most conciliatory comment to date.

"We take it as the first victory for our determination in this case and obviously the atmosphere is being changed to some extent," the foreign minister continued. "A part of the process of defusing the crisis has presented itself and we hope by that with the other positive steps taken with the United States and the international community we come to resolve this problem."

For the first time Ghotbzadeh made no direct reference to the Iranian government's demand that Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi be returned for trial on charges of mass murder and plunder as the price for the release of the 50 hostages now in their 44th day of captivity in the U.S. Embassy.

He told The Associated Press some of the hostages "possibly" would be released before Christmas and that all those still held by Christmas Day would be visited by foreign observers on the holiday. But he told ABC-TV that a team of international observers would be allowed to visit the captives "before Christmas" and that Roman Catholic and Protestant clergymen would hold Christmas services for them.

The ruling Revolutionary Council in a broadcast statement said the "valiant resistance put up by the heroic Moslem Iranian nation against U.S. imperialist aggression and the wise leadership of the imam (Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini) have forced the U.S. government to retreat, reduce its support of the deposed shah and, accepting defeat, compelled him to flee."

But the council said it "continues to hold America responsible for the shah's crimes and for his escape."

School bus to top agenda

A 71 - passenger bus for the Pampa Independent School District will be discussed in Tuesday's regular meeting of the PISD board of trustee meeting at 5:00 p.m. in the Carver Center.

The board will consider the possible purchase of the bus from the State Board of Control. According to a memo from James Trusty, assistant superintendant of schools to Bob Phillips, school superintendant, $21,500 has been allocated for the vehicle replacement in the 1979 - 80 budget.

The 1978 - 79 audit report will be presented to board members by J. G. Doggett of the Nenstiel and Doggett CPA firm. The body will then consider appointment of the 1979 - 80 auditor.

Also to be considered by the board will be the awarding of bids for library furniture.

Other business will include approval of due bills and invoices and the budget print - out.

The meeting will close with a discussion of personnel and a possible executive session.

Juveniles detained by police

Two juveniles were detained by Pampa Police Department detectives in connection with three robberies and a string of "joy ride" auto thefts.

Two boys — ages 11 and 13 — were believed to be involved in recent burglaries of Birdwell Mobil Home Service located in the old LaVista Theatre and of Vi's Place at 112 E. Craven which was reported Dec. 10, according to Police Chief J. J. Ryzman. A small amount of cash was taken in both burglaries, he said.

The duo was also allegedly involved in the Dec. 13 theft of a 1978 Chevrolet Monte Carlo owned by David Hemphill of 425 N. Nelson. The vehicle was recovered in the 1000 block of E. Albert with a flat right rear tire.

Ryzman said the apprehension of the suspects also clears up the reported thefts of two pickups — also on Dec. 13.

Youth Center expansion recieves $250,000 boost

By MELANIE MILLER
Of The Pampa News

Expansion plans which will double the facilities at the Pampa Youth and Community Center are underway after an announcement this morning of a $250,000 donation by the M.K. Brown Foundation to the center.

Fred Neslage, board president of the center, accepted the donation from Bill Waters, chairman of the M.K. Brown Foundation at a special announcement in the Combs-Worley Building.

The funds will be used for the construction of additional facilities on the south side of the community center. Expansion will include new basketball, volleyball and tennis courts, an indoor jogging area as well as a general purpose area.

Engineering studies have already begun on the center and officials said construction should begin sometime in the early spring.

Neslage also announced that community donations for any funds "over and above" the estimated $250,000 needed at this time for construction will be accepted. Between $85,000 and $100,000 in additional funds will be needed, he said.

He explained that a financial committee is being organized to get "outside help," aid outside of the center's board, in obtaining the funds.

Gene Steel, a member of the center's board, said broad-based community support is needed to obtain the additional funds. He added that individual donations, however small, will help in meeting the construction costs.

Neslage agreed, saying, "I hope the people of the community will rally behind us and help us get the additional funds."

In accepting the Brown Foundation's donation, Neslage expressed the appreciation of the community center's board.

"The center is an asset to our community and is a continuing memorial to Mr. Brown," he said.

Waters replied that the Brown Foundation had been "instrumental in improvements to the community."

"There was a considerable search by board members as to what we could best do," he said. "The Pampa Youth and Community Center is the best and most worthy project to which we could contribute."

The community center was built in 1961. It has undergone three additions since it was built and is currently managed by George Smith, who has been director since 1963.

The facility currently has three racquetball courts, an athletic room, a swimming pool, sauna, whirlpool, recreation room and a health facility for weightlifting and exercising.

OPEC will boost price

CARACAS, Venezuela (AP) — The Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries meets here today to raise its base price for crude oil again but many of the cartel's 13 members have jumped the gun and boosted their prices as much as 33 percent.

World oil prices were about 100 percent above last year's levels as the cartel's oil ministers convened behind tight security in this Venezuelan capital to consider yet another price hike.

"The industrialized countries can pay whatever we ask," Libyan Oil Minister Izzedin al Mabrak told a reporter. "They have shown they can stand a price increase."

Libya, which breached the OPEC ceiling of $23.50 a barrel in October, announced another price increase Sunday. It hiked the price of its high-quality crude oil — prized for its high yield of gasoline — by $3.73 to $30 a barrel retroactive to Nov. 1.

Mabrak also said Libya, which ships nearly half of the 2 million barrels it produces daily to the United States, will reduce production next year, but he did not say how much.

Indonesia also boosted its price by $2 to $25.50 for a 42-gallon barrel. Iran's official Pars news agency said the price of Iranian crude had been raised $5 to $28.50, but Iranian Oil Minister Ali Akbar Moinfar called the report a rumor.

The pre-conference splurge of price hikes was begun last week when a bloc of OPEC moderates, led by Saudi Arabia, bumped their prices up $6 to $24 a barrel. The rise from the current OPEC base price of $18 a barrel represented a 33 percent increase.

The Saudi-led bloc said it raised prices early to head off even greater price increases at the Venezuela conference. In addition to Saudi Arabia, the world's largest oil exporter, the bloc includes Venezuela, the United Arab Emirates and Qatar. Together they account for about half of OPEC's daily output of 30 million barrels.

Mexican government begins "border tightening"

BROWNSVILLE, Texas (AP) — The "border tightening" has begun. And even though few people like to talk about it, it's something the lower Rio Grande Valley has learned to live with.

Each year, the Mexican government reminds its citizens not to bring expensive items and electronic equipment from America into Mexico.

The warnings, put out through government-controlled broadcast stations, are aimed at keeping pesos south of the Rio Grande at a time when shoppers pour into American stores to purchase holiday gifts.

"It's something we live with," said Hector Villarreal, who works for a McAllen travel agency. "They put extra personnel on duty to check a little more thoroughly."

Mexican customs agents appear to judge each case individually, without announcing a set limit or quota, report persons familiar with border crossing practices.

Shoppers cross the international bridges at Reynosa and Matamoros, Mexico, and others fly into the United States from interior cities of Monterrey, Tampico and other locations.

One Matamoros dentist who asked not to be identified said agents at one of two bridges leading into Brownsville told him he could not bring some expensive items into Mexico. He went to the other bridge and said he encountered no problems.

"Normally they don't enforce it during the year, just during the holiday season," said Tony Armendariz, mamager of a women's clothing store in Brownsville.

"We've been in a kind of tight border situation and haven't seen Mexican customers in the quantities that we used to," Armendariz said.

Many Mexican shoppers insist that certain American goods are better-made and less expensive than comparable items in Mexico.

Area businesses depend on Mexican demand for their products. But many merchants shy away from discussing the situation for fear of scaring away business or further squeezes by customs agents.

Officials at the Brownsville and Harlingen chambers of commerce profess ignorance of any annual customs crackdown.

"It's difficult to put in print. When you put it in print, it's misinterpreted," Villarreal said.

How do some Mexicans manage to pass forbidden items through?

"They know their way around," said Villarreal.

"If you can afford it, you can take something back, if you're willing to pay the 'mordida,' the bribe," said a merchant who asked not to be identified.

This year the Mexican government mailed letters to television and radio statons notifying them of increased scrutiny of packages and purchases at all border crossings from November through the first of the year.

Connally's muscle idea would be disastrous

John Connally is a man enamored with power. Any man running for the office of president must have a certain amount of this lust for authority, or he would not seek the office. But John Connally stands out among the pack. He is trying so hard to create a strongman image that he is endorsing foolhardy military adventurism.

In a recent speech before the Washington Press Club Connally outlined his concept of how to achieve a middle East peace. It certainly demonstrated that he is a man unafraid to make a controversial decision. He is unafraid, but we should be afraid if he ever becomes president. His proposals would not only leave the United States with less influence, but they would eliminate whatever insulation we have had from the possibility of being dragged into a Mideast military conflict.

In short, Big John from Texas is proposing that the United States establish a "strong Military presence" in the Middle East. Just so no one would miss this hazardous suggestion, his campaign bought full page ads containing the text of his speech in several newspapers.

Connally's plan includes the proposal that Israel withdraw from captured Arab land, and that the Arabs recognize Israel. These, along with his other suggestions, parallel current U.S. policy. The former Texas governor thinks the reason these positions have not been accepted by those embroiled in the Arab-Israeli conflict is America's lack of commitment. We're not quarreling with what he suggests for the Arabs and the Israelis; what he suggests for us would be a disaster.

Men like Connally understand military power, but do not appreciate the side effects that result from the use of that power. Dispatching troops is not an end in itself. More often than not the presence of a country's military has a negative effect on that nation's influence. Russian military presence in Egypt was never stronger than when Moscow was told to get out. The Syrians sent an army into Lebanon and now they are so tied up in that tangled web they are helpless to determine the course of events.

Is there any doubt that had we sent a peace keeping force to the Middle East years ago, by now both sides would distrust us, nullifying our influence? It was specifically because we did not have troops there that Carter had the leverage to call Israel and Egypt together. Connally says America must act with courage and boldness. His military suggestion is foolhardy.

The former secretary of the Navy says that what he is really concerned about is the Russians and the vulnerability of our Saudi Arabian oil supply. The Soviets would have a propaganda bonanza with a U.S. military base in the Middle East. It would be used to turn the attention of the Arab world away from the serious Russian threat, and to focus it on the only non-Arab troops with a base in the region.

There are no easy answers, especially in foreign policy. The Russian navy is expanding at an alarming rate. With it the Russians can have a military presence without having bases within the territory of another country. To counter this by building an American military installation in the Sinai Desert, as Connally wants to do, would put us on the defensive in the whole region.

John Connally is trying his best to build the image of a strong leader. No doubt his pollsters are telling him that after four years of that jelly mouth from Georgia, Americans want a man of strength. If America does need a leader, it would seem wisdom would be a better quality to look for than a man's ability to ride a white horse and order the troops abroad.

Farmer's reclassified

Some critics of technological progress deplore the impact of modern machines and modern methods upon the agricultural community, citing the decline of farm families from 30 percent of the population in 1920 to a mere 3 percent in 1978.

But agribusiness, the culprit in the eyes of those who lament the American drift away from the soil, is a rank amateur in comparison to the vanishing act perfected by the federal government.

Last year, the Census Bureau and the Department of Agriculture simply changed the definition of a farmer.

Previously, any persons in rural areas selling more than $250 worth of farm products were described as farmers — those on 10 acres or more had to sell a mere $30 worth.

Under the new standard, a farmer must sell $1,000 worth of farm products.

The effect was to wipe out 1.5 million of the 8 million farmers listed in 1977.

Even the most sophisticated equipment and pesticides, which help the United States in feeding the world, have failed to produce such a dramatic trick.

Language barrier

A presidential commission has determined that one of the threats to the nation's security is the woeful inability of Americans to communicate with our overseas friends — or enemies.

A commission study has concluded that we are guilty of a "scandalous incompetence" in foreign tongues.

And it is true that most Americans are scornfully indifferent to any language other than English. As a result, according to the commission, we suffer from an ignorance of foreign customs and thinking.

"The United States," said the commission, "requires far more reliable capacities to communicate with its allies, analyze the behavior of potential adversaries and earn the trust and sympathies of the uncommitted."

The commission recommended new language programs to be financed by $178 million in federal and private funds in the next year.

As this country meets its destiny in the American century, its power has often outgrown its knowledge. In diplomacy, in business, in all affairs of friendship and leadership, it is better not to have to depend on a translator. Language learning is no easy task. But it should be encouraged.

The day Christ was born

By Jim Bishop

(Second in a series of eight)

The Roman emperor, Caesar Augustus, ruled the known world at the time of the marriage of Joseph and Mary. He was concerned that the amount of taxes collected was not commensurate with the number of his subjects. He held a council in Rome, and his advisors told Caesar that he could not levy an equitable tax until he had an accurate idea of the populations of the Roman provinces.

Caesar issued an imperial rescript ordering all subjects, in the winter solstice, to return to the cities of their fathers and there be counted.

Many of the subject peoples chafed when the law was proclaimed. They said that Caesar was not a just king to do this to them. Joseph sought the local tax merchant and asked if women in advanced pregnancy could be excused and he was told that no one could be excused.

They started on the trip south, two young and solemn people with a short and slender jackass who bore the most exalted burden ever to honor an animal. Joseph lifted Mary's spirits by reminding her that, if he paced the trip correctly, she would see Jerusalem at sundown of the fifth day.

Jerusalem. Little parties came up all year long from Jericho and the Salt Sea and the Mountains of Moab and the north country of Samaria and Galilee in a never-ending procession to the great temple of Solomon. It was a spiritual spawning for all Hebrews; a coming home; a communion with God at his appointed house.

This was the winter solstice of the Jewish year 3790. The gaiety of the Feast of Chanukah had ended as Joseph and his wife left Nazareth.

Each night, when the sun was gone and the road obscure, Joseph led the ass a little way off from the road and into a clearing where there was very little brush and few insects. Then he tied the ass, tilted the goatskin and filled the earthen jar with water from it, and sat. There was not much to talk about. Their minds were troubled with momentous events far beyond the scope of their thought.

Mary was big with the unborn child, and awkward, but she managed to prepare the food as appetizingly as possible. There was no meat. Even at home, they never had meat more than once a month. Mostly it was lamb, chopped into cubes and roasted and then set on a plate beside charoseth and other herbs and fruits.

They slept in the open, saving what little money they had for the day of the baby. Sometimes, when there was no moon, Joseph set a lamp on the ground and Mary removed her veil and brushed the long dark hair which hung to her waist. She said that she would like to bathe in the Jordan, and she said it wistfully because she knew that Joseph would say no, and a good wife did not dispute the will of her husband. He said it gently, reminding her that her time was near, that this would be her first-born, and he would not assume the risk of the river. With a gruff tenderness Joseph wet some cloths in the Jordan and brought them to Mary to wash herself.

On the evening of the fourth day they were at Jericho, a few miles above the Salt Sea and within a glance of Mt. Nebo to the east. Joseph wanted to stay at an inn, where they could pay for space on the floor, but Mary begged him not to do it. "This is not an important day," she said. He knew what she meant.

In the morning, Joseph led Mary and the ass into the wilderness. It was twenty miles to Bethany, and, from there, three to the heart of Jerusalem. Towards sunset, Joseph stopped at the top of a rise. The ass stopped. Mary looked up, a tired child with eyes partly conscious of the scene.

"Jerusalem," Joseph said, pointing. Mary looked. The wonderment of what she saw caused her nausea to fade.

It was a thing to see. Jerusalem was a white jewel pronged by the great stone wall around it. Joseph pulled the ass to the side of the road because the pilgrims behind him were shouting. "Jerusalem," he said again. He said it as though it were an earthly anteroom to paradise, as indeed it was.

The sun would be gone in ten minutes and there was much to see because they could not stay in Jerusalem. Their destination, Bethlehem, was still five miles to the south, but Joseph did not mind the night walk if he could stop a moment and drink in all of this and remember it when he was old.

Softly, haltingly, Joseph found his voice and, as he drank in the exquisite and almost fearful beauty, he began to tell the story to his wife -- a story she knew as well as he. He reminded her that he came of the family of David, even though his branch was small and poor. It was David's son Solomon who had built the Great Temple. He had commissioned Hiram, the King of Tyre, to draw the plans and do the engineering. The work was finished in seven years, a miracle of goodness. The temple was 1,600 feet long and 970 feet wide. The bigger the temple got, the more remote Solomon felt from God, and he needed the solace of women, so on the Mount of Offense to the left of the city he had built a palace and placed therein five hundred concubines.

The sin needed washing and, long after Solomon repented, the Jews split into two nations -- Judea and Israel -- and the Babylonians defeated them and reduced the walls of the temple. Now the Jews were the chattels of Roman emperors and the Caesars appointed Herod as king to rule the people.

Herod proclaimed himself a Jew and made daily sacrifices, but he was not even a good hypocrite. Herod married ten times and he was so cruel that Caesar Augustus in Rome said that it was safer to be Herod's pig than Herod's son. This was a sacrilegious joke on the dietary laws, and Joseph did not like to repeat it.

Still he had also done good things for God. He had paid ten thousand workmen to repair the temple and rebuild the walls of Jerusalem.

"Darkness is upon us," said Mary. She had a feeling of foreboding. She wanted to proceed to Bethlehem for no reason other than that she was trembling and the baby was unusually quiet. Joseph stopped in mid-speech. He knew that she would not interrupt him unless there was a reason. Without further conversation, he led the ass westward into the valley.

It was soon night and moonless. Something happened suddenly to Mary and she knew in a moment that this would be the night of the baby. She asked Joseph to stop and he became alarmed and asked if she was unquiet. "No," she said. "I feel no pain -- but we must find an inn. The baby -- with God's help -- will be born tonight."

This is your mother

by ART BUCHWALD

WASHINGTON--"Teddy, this is your mother."

"Yes, Mother."

"What have you been doing lately?"

"I'm running for President. You said I could."

"I said you could run for President, but I didn't expect you to run THAT way."

"What did I do wrong?"

"To begin with, why did you go on the Roger Mudd television show?"

"I thought that would be a good place to explain my political philosophy, articulate the issues of the day and tell the American people why I wanted to be President of the United States."

"Well, why didn't you?"

"I forgot."

"You should have written it on the cuff of your shirt."

"Gosh, Mother, it's hard to remember everything. Besides nobody saw the Roger Mudd show. They were all watching 'Jaws.'"

"They may have all been watching 'Jaws,' but they all THINK they saw the Roger Mudd show, which is just as bad. If everyone who claims to have sen you and Roger Mudd really did, I think the man who runs the Nielsen ratings should be impeached."

"Mother, I'm terribly busy. I have to go out and campaign."

"That's what I'm calling about, Teddy. Why do you have to go out and campaign?"

"Because I'm running for President."

"Are you going to talk about the Shah?"

"I've got to talk about SOMETHING. The Shah's a very bad person."

"We all know that, Teddy. But talking about him now is like talking about lemons and bananas."

"What do you mean by that?"

"The Shah's a lemon, and the Ayatollah is bananas."

"You don't understand, Mother. It's a jungle out there. President Carter is safe in the White House and he's on television every night. If I don't say something provocative, nobody will know I'm running for office."

"I'll know, Teddy."

"It's not enough. I've got to win Iowa, New Hampshire, Massachusetts and Pennsylvania. How do I do it?"

"Why don't you attack the American Medical Assn.?"

"Nobody cares about my National Health Insurance program now. It isn't playing in Des Moines."

"How about inflation? No one likes inflation."

"People go to sleep when I talk about inflation. I told you if I ran for President it wouldn't be easy. I have to go out on a limb if I hope to win the primaries."

"I have a good idea. Why don't you ask Roger Mudd if you can go on his show again?"

"What for?"

"Tell him you just thought of a reason you want to run for President, but ask him to make it a multiple choice question."

"It's too late, Mother. CBS has done me already."

"What about Barbara Walters? She seems like a nice person."

"What could Barbara Walters do for me that Roger Mudd couldn't?"

"Let her come to your home without TV cameras, and allow her to take a Polaroid picture of you as she did with the Shah. In that way she can't hurt you."

"All right, anything you say, Mother. Can I go now?"

"Who's stopping you? I just called to cheer you up."

Letters

I want to express my deep appreciation to Leisure Lodge and their staff for the invitation of families to dine with their residents on December 6th.

Many of the residents are house bound like my Grandmother, Mrs. Ola Worley. She was thrilled that her family could dine with her. The food was well prepared, the tables were decorated beautifully, the food was delicious and attractively served. Our family appreciated the way we were treated by the staff and felt really catered to. This all took a great effort and expense to prepare.

A great big thank you Leisure Lodge. May all of you and your patients have nice holidays.

Once more we, the family of Ola Worley, want to thank you for a lovely evening and your good nursing care.

Jewel thieves grab million in gems

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Fort Worth detectives say this weekend's spectacular $1 million robbery of millionaire W.A. "Tex" Moncrief had been "well planned" and theorized the thieves even had a key to the oilman's fashionable home.

Moncrief and his wife were robbed by a masked, gun-wielding duo Saturday morning. Both were bound with nylon cord and threatened with death while the gunmen ransacked the house, making off with $1 million in cash, silver and jewels.

Moncrief said he was forced to open a safe in a downstair's room while one of the men held a gun on his wife.

Investigations indicate the west side mansion's back door had not been forced, and the Moncriefs said they told police the door almost always is locked.

"This leads us to believe they (the thieves) may have obtained a key," said Detective Capt. Garland Geeslin. "The robbers knew a lot about the Moncriefs and their home. We believe they drove to the neighborhood on one or more occasions to case the house before they entered it."

Investigators said the robbery was the largest in the city's history. The loot included $25,000 in cash, a diamond bracelet and a 28-carat diamond ring.

Moncrief said one of the robbers, a black-clad man wearing a ski mask ordered the couple not to move or he would "blow your ... head off."

"He warned me twice not to try to look at him," Moncrief said. "We're just thankful we weren't killed."

Moncrief, who made most of his fortune through Moncrief Oil Co., told police he saw only two gunmen, but thought he heard a third person enter the house.

Geeslin speculated that at least one other person was involved in the robbery.

"These were professionals," he said. "They knew what they were doing. We don't believe they would have entered the house unless they had left an accomplice outside to warn of any unexpected danger."

Moncrief said it was impossible to gain any description of the intruders, since both were dressed in black and wore gloves and ski masks.

"They weren't nervous and acted like they knew what they were doing," he said. "They were quick, not nervous. It was done very precisely."

After the robbers left, the Moncriefs locked themselves in a bedroom and called police.

Mrs. Moncrief said that while she was bound, she continually thought of the Americans held hostage in Iran. At one point, she said, the gunman told her, "Be good and we won't kill you."

Moncrief and his wife spent Sunday afternoon at Texas Stadium, watching the Dallas Cowboys 35-34 victory over the Washington Redskins.

"I've lived here 25 years, and this is the first time we've ever been robbed, even when we weren't here," Moncrief said.

Geeslin said he knew of no other similar robberies of such magnitude in Fort Worth. Veteran police observers said the closest robbery was the 1952 theft of $240,000 from two Cuban exiles.

Police said robbers who planned to take the Carswell Air Force Base payroll in the late 1950s might have gotten $1 million, but they were killed during a practice run.

Gregg County officials to be replaced by court

LONGVIEW, Texas (AP) — The problem of replacing two Gregg County officials — convicted last Wednesday of racketeering — was in the hands of the county commissioner's court today.

Justice of the Peace Charles Cashell resigned Thursday morning before the State Commission on Judicial Conduct in Austin could act officially on his conviction.

Sheriff Tom Welch resigned on Friday, stressing his innocence but saying the best interests of law enforcement and a restoration of public confidence would be served by his stepping down.

County Judge Henry Atkinson said today's 10 a.m. meeting of the Gregg County Commissioners' Court was "to determine how these officials should be replaced."

"We've not had the opportunity to consider this matter yet, but we will be giving due consideration to ... who will replace (them)," Atkinson said.

Chief Deputy L.R. Blake was named to serve as chief administrative officer of the sheriff's department until the commissioners could name a replacement for Welch, whose term runs through Dec. 31, 1980. Cashell's term still has three years left.

Also convicted were County Commissioner Bill Satterwhite and former sheriff's deputies Jim Cochran and Billy Ray Roach. The jury found the five officials guilty of all counts of facilitating illegal gambling. Welch, Cochran and Satterwhite also were convicted of conspiracy to murder.

Satterwhite, a member of the commission that has the responsibility of replacing the officials, was still in office as of Sunday, despite District Attorney Odis Hill's threat to file suit to have him removed.

"This office will file a suit for removal concerning Mr. Satterwhite based on official misconduct," Hill said Friday.

PAMPA GOLD coats were on hand Sunday morning to welcome the new Safeway food store to Pampa. Mayor Ray Thompson welcomed the store and helped with ribbon cutting ceremonies. Safeway's Regional Manager, Alan Francis said "Safeway is glad to be back in Pampa and there were several factors contributing to the return. There was a real need in the community, the increase in population, and the econmic growth of the town were some of the main reasons." (Staff photo)

About slaying

Attorneys say 19-year-old lying

KERRVILLE, Texas (AP) — Attorneys for a 19-year-old Florida man aren't denying he admitted killing a Brady woman and her daughter. They maintain he was lying about the slayings, hoping to cash in on the impression that he was a professional killer.

Donald Edward Smith's attorneys have been lining up more witnesses to testify today that their client was just trying to con a man he thought was a mobster into hiring him as a "hit man."

After that, defense attorneys say, Smith planned to take whatever money might be given him for a "contract" and use it to return to Rhode Island, where he grew up.

The "mobster" was an undercover officer for a Florida sheriff's department who was trying to break a stolen car ring in the Tampa area.

The state is basing its murder case against Smith largely on several tape recordings officer Al Luis made of conversations in which Smith boasted of killing the women last Aug. 2.

Molly Farr, 55, and Tandy Bennett, 25, were killed with shotgun blasts while they slept in their trailer home on a ranch north of Brady. Robert Shirl Gandy, 40, was found shot to death in another bedroom in the mobile home, but no one has been charged in his death.

Defense attorneys say Smith got his information about the killings from a newspaper he read while staying with his aunt and uncle in Fort Worth.

Saturday, the defense brought in a surprise witness, former Brady resident Marion Jackson, now of Louisville, Ky. Jackson testified that on the morning of the slayings, he took Jack Minica to pick up a car parked on a road near the Farr mobile home.

Jackson said Minica then drove the large blue car to a spot where authorities had said they found Mrs. Farr's abandoned blue car.

He testified Minica then returned to his van and began unloading shotgun shells from his pockets.

Earlier, a sheriff's deputy testified he had tried to serve a subpoena on Minica but has been unable to find him.

Jackson, who said he left Brady because he feared for his life, said he contacted District Attorney Ron Sutton and McCulloch County Sheriff Bill Strickland about his outing with Minica. Prosecutors, however, never called him to testify.

DPS estimates 123 will die during holiday

AUSTIN — The department of Public Safety today estimated that 123 persons would be killed in motor vehicle mishaps during the forthcoming Christmas and New Year holiday periods.

DPS Director Wilson E. Speir estimated that 67 persons would be killed during the Christmas holiday weekend. Both counts are 102 hours long.

He added that the Christmas count starts at 6 p.m. December 21 and continues until midnight December 25, while the New Yeat count starts at 6 p.m. December 28 and continues until midnight January 1.

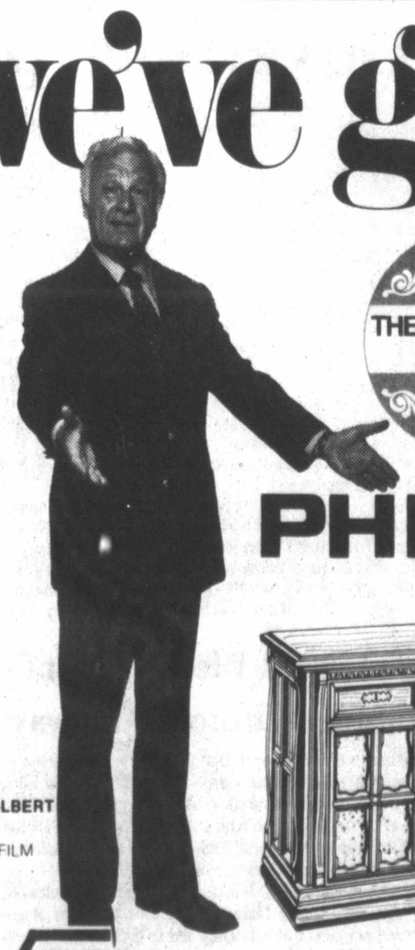

Speir said that statewide traffic deaths are presently runmning about six per cent ahead of the record pace of a year ago. Last year there were 3,980 persons killed statewide in motor vehicle crashes.

At the end of preliminary holiday counts last year, 57 deaths were reported during the Christmas period and 39 during the New Year holidays.

Speir said all available DPS troopers would be on duty.

Write Ayatollah Committee headed by representative

WASHINGTON (AP)- Rep. Bill Archer has announced he is serving as the Texas coordinator for a "Write the Ayatollah Committee."

The Republican from Houston said the drive was designed to inundate the Iranian Embassy in Washingon with letters protesting the holding of American hostages in Tehran.

The committee started at the Kiwanis Club in Ada, Okla.

Archer said any letters received at his congressional office in Houston will be forwarded to the Iranian Embassy here.

He said the letters should be addressed to the Ayatollah Committee in care of his office, 7501 Federal Building, 515 Rusk, Houston, Tx. 77002.

U.S. Attorney Tony Canales of Houston told minority representatives meeting in Washington that there is a remedy when they feel their civil rights have been violated by police.

"You go talk to the United States attorney," he said. "If they don't respond, a little letter to the attorney general will get them off their can."

Canales, the nation's first Mexican-American U.S. attorney, defended the Justice Department's record in prosecution of police brutality cases.

"The Department of Justice has gone forward in cases where it has not been popular to go forward," he said.

Black and Hispanic representatives were meeting with officials from police organizations to discuss how to balance police safety and the use of force.

It's nothing new for Rep. Charles Wilson of Texas to be confused with Rep. Charles Wilson of California.

Last week, however, the problem gained new urgency when reports spread that the House Ethics Committee was nearing a vote on financial misconduct allegations against Wilson of California.

A North Carolina newspaper ran the story with a photo of Wilson of Texas.

The error was caught and the newspaper ran a correction in its next edition.

For those who have not seen photos of both, the lanky and younger Wilson of Lufkin, Texas, bears no resemblance to Wilson of California.

TEXAS

By The Associated Press

The Artic front that brought goosebumps to Texas this weekend chugged south into Mexico today.

But in its wake, winds blustered near 50 mph at Guadalupe Pass, dropping the 13-degree readings to a biting wind chill factor of 30 degrees below zero.

Skies were clear over San Antonio, where sub-h Texas.

The lowest thermometer readings were in the Easouth Texas.

The lowest thermometer readings were in the Eastern Texas.

The lowest thermometer readings were in the Eastern Panhandle and South Plains with temperatures in the five-to ten-above-zero range.

Wintry gusts diminished in West Texas except in the mountain areas and were expected to shift to southwest today with the promise of warmer temperatures.

Winds should diminish over North Texas today and under clear skies temperatures will warm into the upper 40s and low 50s. Much the same temperatures are expected in West Texas although winds will become gusty from the southwest in the Panhandle today.

In South Texas temperatures will be mostly in the 50s as cloudy skies persist over much of that area.

NATIONAL

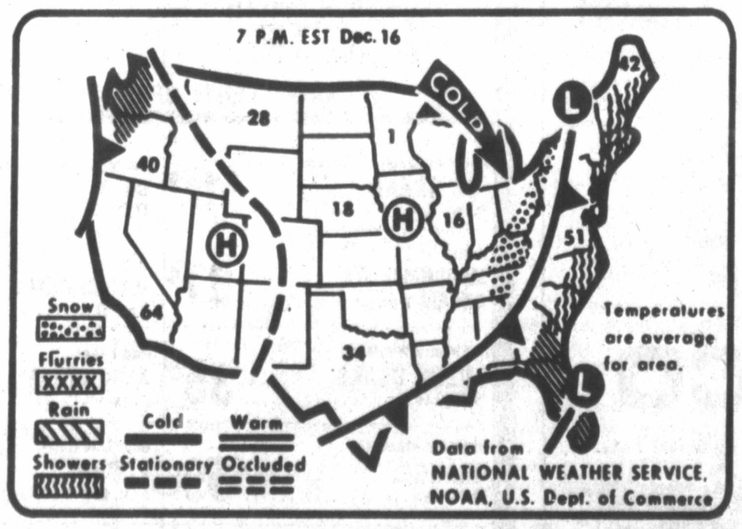

Temperatures over much of the Midwest dropped to the teens early today and kept on dropping while snow fell from the Great Lakes to New England.

Scattered snowstorms were expected today from northeastern Ohio through the lower Great Lakes. Rain was forecast for Washington and Oregon, and temperatures were to be cold from the Mississippi Valley across the Ohio Valley and into the Northeast.

Early today, there were many readings near zero and below from parts of the northern Plains, the upper Mississippi Valley and the western Great Lakes. Rain fell in parts of eastern and southern New England, the Pacific Northwest and Southern California and a heavy snow warning was issued for western Maryland.

Temperatures before dawn ranged from 8 below zero in International Falls, Minn., to 77 in Key West, Fla. Other reports:

Eastern U.S. — Atlanta 39 windy, Boston 49 rain, Cincinnati 18 partly cloudy, Cleveland 18 cloudy, Detroit 8 clear, Miami 71 clear, New York 42 rain, Philadelphia 44 cloudy, Pittsburgh 20 snow, Washington 42 windy.

FAIR SKIES will cover most of the nation today according to the National Weather Service. (AP Laserphoto)

North Texas — Partly cloudy Wednesday. Mostly cloudy with scattered showers Thursday and Friday. Highs Wednesday in the mid and upper 50s. Warming to the mid 60s Thursday and Friday. Lows Wednesday ranging from the mid 30s northwest to the lower 40s southeast, warming to near 40 northwest and lower 50s southeast Friday.

West Texas — Partly cloudy south and generally fair north through Friday. Slow warming trend continuing into midweek. Highs middle 50s to middle 60s mountains and north and mainly 60s south. Lows near 20 mountains and north to around 40 southeast.

South Texas — missing.

Governors protest law

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) — A report prepared for the Coalition of Northeast Governors says federal policy on illegal immigrants fails to take into account the problems of the Northeast.

The report, by Eugene F. Sofer of the coalition's Policy Research Center in Washington, says the presence of illegal immigrants provides a "complex issue" for the region's governors.

The apparent increase in the number of illegal immigrants in the Northeast could create a "permanent underclass" of people with no way out of poverty, the report says.

Citing another report prepared by the Tri-State Regional Planning Commission of New York, New Jersey and Connecticut and based on figures from the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service, Sofer says in his study that those three states are the home of 1.8 million illegal aliens.

About 1.5 million are in New York, 300,000 in New Jersey and 7,000 in Connecticut, the figures show.

While noting that reliable figures on the number of illegal immigrants are unavailable, the Sofer report says settlement patterns for legal immigrants indicate that about two-thirds of illegal aliens will settle in New York, California, New Jersey, Illinois, Texas and Massachusetts.

The report says it is also "likely" that New York, New Jersey and Connecticut receive the bulk of illegal immigrants from the Caribbean.

Requested by New York Gov. Hugh Carey, Sofer's study says the Northeast was able to assimilate European immigrants earlier in this century because they could participate in the political process and take advantage of public services.

"Illegal immigrants can do neither without fear of arrest and deportation," the report says.

Yet they "use social services and, to an unknown degree, represent direct costs to state and local governments in the region," it adds.

No charges filed against wounded Illinois runaway

Charges had not been filed at press time Monday in Carson County against two juvenile runaways from Illinois who allegedly ran a Department of Public Safety roadblock Friday near Conway.

One of the youths, who was shot in the head by a DPS trooper after failing to stop at the roadblock, was listed in satisfactory condition Monday in Northwest Texas Hospital in Amarillo.

The 16-year-old boys, whose names were not released because of their age, reportedly failed to pay for 24 gallons of gasoline at an Alanreed service station. They led DPS troopers on a 60-mile chase down Interstate 40 for approximately 30 minutes, at times reaching speeds of 115 miles per hour.

A roadblock was set up and when the driver failed to stop, the DPS trooper standing directly in the path of the car shot at the car, hitting the youth in the head.

The vehicle driven by the juveniles was allegedly stolen in Illinois as were the license plates. Guns found in the car were reportedly stolen from an Illinois police department.

Trying to catch up to Reagan

WASHINGTON (AP) — The contest for the 1980 Republican presidential nomination, subdued by the Iranian crisis, has settled into a catch-the-leader pursuit — with Ronald Reagan still setting the pace.

Republican candidates are pretty much holding their positions and marking time until the field of nine GOP candidates can be narrowed.

The major and some of the lesser-known GOP candidates are devoting their energies and funds to heavy campaigning in Iowa, New Hampshire and the other early primary and caucus states — most operating under the theory that they need early, strong showings to capture national attention.

Campaigning has been rather low-key to date, with the stalemate at the U.S. Embassy in Tehran, where 50 Americans are being held hostage, casting a pall over the political landscape and temporarily robbing the Republicans of one of their favorite themes — attacks on Carter's conduct of foreign policy.

Republican candidates have voiced general support for Carter's performance in the crisis — without dwelling on the subject.

John Connally, whose $8 million war chest is the largest raised to date by a presidential candidate, has been doing some heavy campaigning — especially in the South.

"The best opportunity is in southern primaries. Reagan's strength is soft in the South," said Eddie Mahe, Connally's chief campaign strategist.

Reagan aides dispute that theory, noting Reagan's easy victory over Connally in last month's Florida GOP straw ballot.

Meanwhile, former CIA Director George Bush of Texas, buoyed by his upset victory last month over Sen. Howard Baker of Tennessee in a Maine straw ballot and his strong showing in the Florida GOP tally several weeks later, is trying to keep that momentum going.

Bush has been stumping hard in Iowa and New Hampshire and also paying close attention to Florida and Maine.

Sen. Howard Baker, R-Tenn., has practically abandoned his job as Senate minority leader to pursue his campaign. He's focusing largely on seven states: Iowa, New Hampshire, Arkansas, Massachusetts, Vermont, Connecticut and Wisconsin — as well as Puerto Rico.

Despite initial setbacks, such as the straw ballot loss to Bush in Maine, Baker feels he still has a good chance of being in the finals.

Rep. John Anderson, R-Ill., whose moderate-to-liberal philosophy and voting record set him apart from the rest of the pack of GOP contenders, is putting most of his energy and limited resources into making a strong showing in New Hampshire.

ON THE LIGHT SIDE

—— Sweetest Houses In Town

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — It was a dieter's nightmare at the third annual New Orleans Gingerbread House Contest.

First, multicolored candies formed a path to the candy-coated cottage fronted by a ginger-snap door studded with gumdrops. Another gingerbread house featured a breadstick fence and a pretzel gate.

A third had a roof of vanilla wafer shingles and walls made of cookies. Outside, a tiny stick stood in the center of a bright orange gumdrop resting on a creamy carpet of white icing which, in turn, sat on a coconut lawn.

And on the stick was a sign that said: "Here's to dentistry."

The prize-winning houses were auctioned off and the proceeds went to a Christmas toy fund.

Bank president killed in one-car accident

HARKER HEIGHTS, Texas (AP) — The president of a Copperas Cove bank was killed in a one-car rollover early Sunday south of Harker Heights.

Michael Carl Sansom, 28, president of Cove State Bank, died when his car overturned on Cedar Knob Road about four miles south of Harker Heights, a small community on the east edge of Killeen, a Bell County sheriff's department spokesman said.

The dispatcher said Sansom was traveling west in a 1980 Chevrolet Corvette and lost control on a curve about 1:55 a.m. Sunday.

Meeting in Caracas

Caracas, Venezuela, might seem like a distant place, but decisions made there this week could soon affect your pocketbook, your travel habits, and even the temperature in your home. Representatives of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC) are scheduled to gather in Caracas today for another meeting on oil prices. As usual, the question is not whether prices will go up, but how much. Some members already are selling their oil for much more than the official OPEC price. OPEC countries also control 85 percent of the world's oil exports and some are considering cutting down their production. That could eventually drive prices up even more.

DO YOU KNOW — How many nations belong to OPEC?

FRIDAY'S ANSWER — Ed "Too Tall" Jones beat Yaqui Meneses to win his first professional bout.

Officials rooting for jobless rate to rise

WASHINGTON (AP) — Over at the Labor Department, some people are rooting for the unemployment rate to rise. That may seem odd for an agency that is supposed to promote jobs, but Washington can be an odd place at budgeting time.

Labor Department officials want more money for federal job-creating programs next year. They figure a jump in the jobless rate — long anticipated by economists who forsee a recession — will convince the White House of the need to increase spending.

So, when the news arrived that the unemployment rate had dropped unexpectedly, there was no hiding the dismay.

"We were hoping the unemployment rate would go up, but damned if it didn't go down," sighed one official, who did not want his name used. It's bad politics to promote unemployment openly.

President Carter will propose his fiscal 1981 budget next month. In advance of that, the president's budget scrooges are looking for places to trim federal spending while government departments argue for more money.

For budget planners at the Labor Department, the early December report that unemployment in November had fallen from 6 percent to 5.8 percent couldn't have come at a worse time.

The president has labeled inflation his top economic concern and has vowed to fight it by keeping a tight rein on federal spending to minimize the budget deficit.

Carter's inflation-fighting policies are designed to slow economic growth. One consequence of that would be higher unemployment.

The latest decline in unemployment, combined with recent reports showing inflation maintaining its 13 percent annual pace, suggests Carter will stay with his inflation-fighting budget strategy.

That choice would appear to have little opposition in the current political climate. Carter is under pressure to do something about inflation, but there have been few loud cries recently about unemployment. Even organized labor, the leading advocate of jobs programs, has labeled inflation its primary concern.

Carter's top economists have not issued a revised 1980 forecast, but most private economists predict a recession for the first half of the year with unemployment rising to nearly 8 percent by the fall.

If the jobless rate starts climbing rapidly, it will be difficult for Carter or Congress, particularly in a presidential election year, to resist the traditional Democratic tonic — increased federal spending to create jobs or a tax cut to stimulate the economy.

The Wassail Bowl

RIDGEFIELD, Conn. (AP) — After that Christmas unpleasantness about the coal scuttle at the London counting house of Scrooge & Marley, old Ebenezer made it up to Bob Cratchit with a fat raise over "a bowl of smoking Bishop."

Sir Roger de Coverley, the swinging country squire in Joseph Addison's "Spectator," said he always allowed "a double quantity of malt to my small beer, and set it a-running for twelve days to everyone that calls for it."

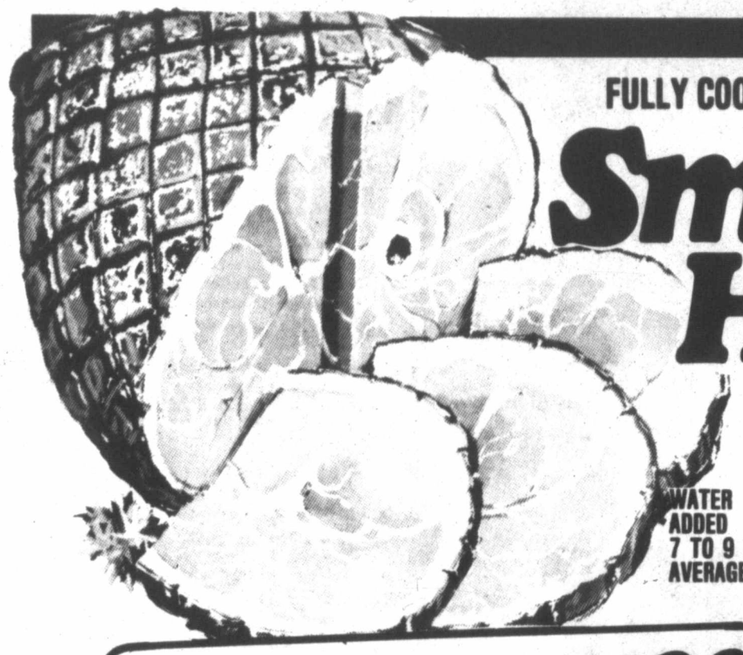

When Washington Irving, in the person of Geoffrey Crayon, Gent., his nom de plue in "The Sketch Book," spent a Christmas at an English manor house, dinner in the great banquet hall got off to a lovely liquid start. "...The butler brought in a huge silver bowl of rare and curious workmanship, which he placed before the squire. Its appearance was hailed with acclamation; being the Wassail Bowl.

Wassail, from the Anglo Saxon wes hal, meaning "be in good health," has long been a part of our Christmas tradition.

In Dickens' day, the poorer classes took their mugs bedecked with ribbons to go "a-wassailing" from door to door, begging a drink or money to buy some. Carolers making their rounds departed from the more pious lyrics to remind the listeners that their whistles needed wetting with the words of a 17th century song:

"Here we come
a'wassailing Among the leaves so green. Here we come a'wandering. So fair to be seen. Love and joy
come to you.
And to you, wassail, too And God bless you and send you
A happy New Year.

For those who want to start the New Year with a Bang, rather than a whimper, the recipe says to mix a pint of cider with a pint of warm ale, sweeten with treacle, grate in some nutmeg and ginger, top off with a tumbler of gin or whisky.

Young people have tough time starting farming

WASHINGTON (AP) — One of the big concerns of those who worry about the future of agriculture is that young people, unless they inherit the family homestead, have an exceedingly tough time getting started in farming.

A new analysis published by the Agriculture Department suggests that, in some respects, it was almost as difficult 40 years ago.

Capital requirements are much larger now because of huge increases in land prices and the machinery, livestock and other items needed to be a fulltime farmer.

But what about the first consideration — finding a farm to buy?

According to the report, the odds against a young person actually finding a farm — aside from all the other factors of financing — have increased only slightly since 1940.

At that time, weighing all factors, a "male rural farm youth" had one chance in 2.5 of finding a farm to buy. In the 1970s, it said, the odds averaged one in 3.1.

The report, "Financing the Entry of Young Farmers," was written by Eddy L. LaDue, associate professor of agricultural economics, Cornell University, Ithaca, N.Y., while he was employed in USDA's Economics, Statistics and Cooperatives Service.

LaDue's report was included in an annual issue of "Agricultural Finance Review" just published by the agency.

In the analysis, LaDue took a much broader look at the problems of young, would-be farmers, including an examination of financing, down payments, interes rates and investment needed to operate.

But, as an omelet first must begin with an egg, so does farming commence with a farm. It is this aspect of the problem confronting young farmers that sometimes is overlooked when economists and politicians talk about the situation.

"Opportunities for potential entrants usually occur when an existing farm operator dies or retires," the report said. "The character of these opportunities depends on the attributes of the business run by the former farm operators.

"For example, available units (farms) will frequently be smaller than average in size, and buildings may be technologically obsolete."

The actual number of farms becoming available has declined with the reduction of the number of farms in the United States over the last four decades.

"However, declining family size has reduced the number of potential entrants to farming more rapidly than the decline in the number of potential farming opportunities," the report said.

LaDue uses census information, records of real estate transfers and other sources to document his figures.

In the decade 1940-49, an average of 154,990 farms a year were available on the market. The potential young farmers — those who turned 20 years of age — averaged 347,021, meaning that a potential of 2.2 young farmers existed for each available farm.

Of the farms available in the 1940s, 89 percent were sold as individual units, some 137,948 farms. LaDue computed that that made the odds of a young person getting a farm one chance in 2.5.

Subsequently, in the 1950s and 1960s, as the number of farms available declined so did the number of potential young farmers and the number of farms sold as individual units.

In the period 1970-79, according to the report, the average number of farms sold each year dropped to 77,332 units. But the potential young farmers also declined to an average of 98,124 annually, or 1.3 for each available farm.

But in the 1970s, the report said, only 41 percent or 31,706 farms a year were sold as individual units. The "probablity of getting a farm" for young persons rose to one chance out of 3.1.

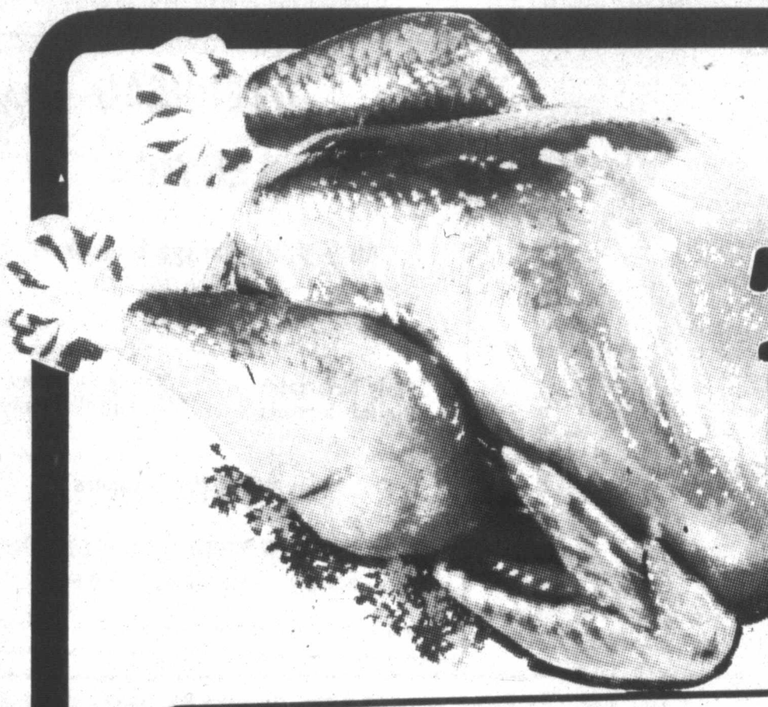

The declining number of potential new farmers — allowing that not all farm youth will want to farm or that some nonfarm people may want to begin — "indicates a reduction in competition among potential entrants" for farms that are available, it said.

"However, this does not mean that it has become easier to find a farm," the report added. "For a long time the competition from existing operators for any available land has been steadily increasing."

Thus, it said, a young person theoretically has the opportunity to bid for a farm that comes up for sale but "in most situations an expanding operator can afford to pay more than a new entrant."

"A new entrant must either find a farm that a nearby operator does not want to buy or compete successfully with an existing operator who has an economic advantage," the report said.

The prospective new farmer also has to compete for land with farm tenants who want to own a piece of the action, it said.

PAMPA'S DWINNA Treadwell arches the ball toward the basket in Saturday night's game with Borger. The Lady Harvesters defeated the visitors, 64-45, for their second win in a row. Pampa hosts Dumas at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday night.

Meyer joins exclusive club

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP sports writer

Last week, Ray Meyer joined a rather exclusive club with his 600th coaching victory.

On Saturday, his 11th-ranked DePaul Blue Demons joined another exclusive club, becoming only the fourth college basketball team to beat the UCLA Bruins at Pauley Pavilion.

And they did it in style, 99-94, behind Teddy Grubbs' 28-point performance and a tough zone defense.

"I think we proved beyond a shadow of a doubt that we can play," said Meyer. "Even if we had lost, at least we would know we could play."

The Blue Demons thus joined Notre Dame, Southern Cal and Oregon as the only visiting teams to win at UCLA's intimidating arena in the 15 years of its existence. Notre Dame has done it three times and Southern Cal and Oregon twice each. The Bruins, meanwhile, have won 221 games there.

The defeat, incidentally, was the second in a row for the seventh-ranked Bruins, who lost at Notre Dame last week. It left UCLA Coach Larry Brown a little disgruntled.

"It really upset me when we started the game that we went out there like we were playing five guys named Joe, not a well-coached, well-disciplined team," said Brown. "I told our team that the season starts tomorrow. If I have to go with our young players, I will. We are basically playing with a young team that has some seniors who haven't played a lick here."

Bobby Knight wasn't too pleased, either, with the performance of his top-ranked Indiana Hoosiers after 69-58 loss to fifth-ranked Kentucky Saturday night.

"Our offense didn't generate the type of scoring opportunities we needed," said Knight, "but that has a lot to do with the way Kentucky plays defense. It was a combination of things. We did not screen effectively to get the medium shots."

The Hoosiers were winning by 13 points at one stage before going scoreless for seven minutes late in the game. During this period, Kentucky was running off a 15-0 burst behind Kyle Macy.

"Macy is always a great guard in any game he plays," said Knight, adding: "Depth is a factor that makes Kentucky a great team."

Kentucky Coach Joe Hall: "Defense was the difference in the game. The players drew applause from the crowd for their defense and that's gratifying."

Elsewhere, No.3 Ohio State beat Holy Cross 79-63; No.6 LSU stopped Maine 103-81; No.8 North Carolina beat Detroit 90-72; No. 10 Syracuse beat Penn State 85-72; No.13 Virginia downed Brigham Young-Hawaii 82-64; No.14 Oregon State routed Portland State 92-71; No.15 St. John's beat Rutgers 75-64; No.16 Georgetown beat Loyola-Marymount 69-63 Saturday night and then whipped Houston 78-75 Sunday night to win the Nike Classic; No.17 Iowa edged Iowa State 67-64; No.18 Brigham Young nipped La Salle 108-106 in triple overtime; No.19 Missouri routed Northern Arizona 112-64 and No.20 Arkansas beat Mississippi 67-59.

Kelvin Ransey, with 20 points, scored in double figures for the 68th straight game to lead Ohio State past Holy Cross. With the score 42-37 in Ohio State's favor early in the second half, the Buckeyes scored 15 straight points, including a three-point play by Ransey to put the game away.

"They gave us a tough time in the first half," Ransey said. "We weren't moving our feet too well. However, we came out a little fired up in the second half. We just went out there and played hard. Going to the zone instead of playing man-to-man defense also helped."

DeWayne Scales and Willie Sims combined for 33 points to lead LSU past Maine as the high-powered Tigers broke the 100-point mark for the third time this season.

"It was a little hard to get up for the game because we knew they didn't have size," said Scales. "I didn't even know they had a school."

North Carolina beat Detroit as James Worthy scored 24 points and collected 16 rebounds and Mike O'Koren scored 21 points.

"Worthy is an outstanding player," said Detroit Coach Willie McCarter. "He totally does his job. He is the guy who goes up and gets it for them."

Louis Orr contributed 19 points and Roosevelt Bouie scored 16 and had 10 rebounds to power Syracuse over Penn State. It was the ninth consecutive loss for Penn State in this series. Lee Raker scored 18 points and Jeff Lamp had 15 to pace Virginia over an outmanned BYU-Hawaii team. Ray Blume's career-high 27 points led Oregon State over Portland State.

Wayne McKoy and Dave Russell each scored 15 points to lead St. John's past Rutgers. The Redmen erased a two-point Rutgers advantage with a 21-6 burst early in the second half.

John Duren scored 17 points as Georgetown defeated Loyola-Marymount in a first-round game of the Nike Cage Classic Saturday night.

Arkansas, SMU remain unbeaten

Arkansas and Southern Methodist remain the only two unbeaten basketball teams in the Southwest Conference forays against intersectional foes while the Texas Aggies own the distinction of being the biggest mystery team.

Both Arkansas and Southern Methodist are 5-0 thanks to the Razorbacks' 67-59 victory over Mississippi Saturday night while the Mustangs were outlasting Texas-Arlington 77-66.

Meanwhile, the preseason favorite Aggies were losing yet a second game in the Cougar Classic at Provo, Utah, 66-61 to Cal-Santa Barbara after dropping a game to LaSalle the night before.

Sophomore center Rudy Woods scored 24 points but high-scoring Vernon Smith was held to six. The Aggies only got 13 points from their guards.

Texas, now 5-1, crushed Biscayne College 88-63 and now has won 33 of 34 games played since the Super Drum opened in Austin. Frosh LaSale Thompson had a game high 20 points.

SMU received a scare when All-SWC forward Brad Branson jammed his hand through a glass door and needed 10 stitches to close the wound on his shooting hand.

Pampa girls avenge loss

Pampa's Lady Harvesters got sweet revenge by thumping Borger, 54-36, Saturday night in Harvester Fieldhouse.

The victory avenged an earlier 54-37 loss to Borger in the Hereford Tournament.

Pampa jumped off to a 13-8 first-quarter advantage and extended that margin to 14 points, 32-18, at intermission.

The Lady Harvesters held the same 14-point bulge going into the final quarter.

Kellye Richardson tossed in 34 points to lead Pampa in scoring. Debbie Albin was next in line with 8.

Top scorer for the losers was Donna Coffer with 10 points. Brooks followed with 8.

The Lady Harvesters will go after their third straight victory Tuesday night on the homecourt against Dumas. Tipoff is 7:30 p.m.

Davis ponders future of Lobo cage coach

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — After taking the weekend to mull over the future of basketball Coach Norm Ellenberger, University of New Mexico President William Davis was expected to announce his decision today.

Davis has the power to fire the flamboyant coach, which is what the university's Athletic Council recommended he do after a day-long meeting Friday to consider Ellenberger's status.

Davis said after receiving the recommendation Friday that he would take it under advisement and make known his decision Monday.

Ellenberger, 47, and his chief recruiter, Manny Goldstein, were suspended by Davis Nov. 30 in the midst of an FBI investigation into possible mail fraud and bribery involving the alleged doctoring of transcripts for a junior college transfer on the UNM basketball squad.

Goldstein resigned Thursday.

Meanwhile, the Albuquerque Journal suggested Sunday in an editorial that Davis and the university's board of regents resign to "help salvage the reputation of the University of New Mexico."

Oiler loss meaningless

HOUSTON (AP) — A difference in philosophies collided in the Astrodome Sunday when the Philadelphia Eagles scored a meaningless 26-20 victory over the Houston Oilers and record-breaking Earl Campbell.

The game did nothing to alter the two teams' position in the National Football League playoff picture. Philadelphia will host Chicago Sunday in the NFC's first round game, and the Oilers will play the loser of tonight's San Diego-Denver game in the AFC wild-card game in the Astrodome.

Houston and Philadelphia's roles as playoff entries was assured before Sunday's game started.

But don't call it a nothing game to Dick Vermeil. He takes pride in winning that final game.

"I am extremely proud of these guy, coming down here today and playing what I had heard other playoff teams say was a nothing football game," Vermeil said. "It gives me a great deal of satisfaction to see the philosophy we've been teaching here start to pay off."

The Oilers, 11-5, did not play to lose, but it was clear Coach Bum Phillips was resting the troops in the second half. Campbell sat out the final two periods after winning the NFL rushing title for the second straight year, establishing one league record and tying two others.

The Oilers clinched a playoff berth in their next-to-last regular season game last year against New Orleans and promptly lost to San Diego 45-21 in the season finale.

That didn't keep the Oilers from advancing to the AFC championship game in 1978 before losing to eventual Super Bowl champion Pittsburgh. Phillips hopes for a repeat.

"I don't think the loss today will affect us," Phillips said. "If you remember, we lost by a bigger margin in our last game last year and damn near went all the way.

"Our guys know what it takes to win this time of year. It all starts over today and we are at home next week playing a team that plays on Monday night and has to travel to our place."

Campbell rushed 37 yards on his final carry of the day shortly before halftime. He finished with 134 yards on 16 carries and won the rushing title with 1,697 yards on an NFL record 368 carries over runnerup Walter Payton of Chicago with 1,610 yards.

Campbell established an NFL record seven consecutive 100-yard performances in one season and tied the records of 11 100-yard games in one season and 19 touchdowns in one season.

It was good news to Campbell but his offensive line may be even more appreciative.

"I took the offensive line out after I made the 1,000 yard mark this season and now I've got another surprise for them," the generous former Heisman Trophy winner said. "I think enough has been said about Earl Campbell and not enough about the guys I work with."

Philadelphia quarterback Ron Jaworski found the Oilers guilty of a sluggish first quarter and gave them swift punishment.

The Eagles took advantage of six first quarter Oiler penalties as Jaworski capped the first scoring drive with a 4-yard run.

Rookie kicker Tony Franklin missed the extra point after Jaworski's touchdown but added field goals of 22 and 41 yards to give the Eagles a 12-10 halftime lead.

Houston's Toni Fritsch kicked a 44 yard field goal and Campbell scored his record tying 19th touchdown on a 6-yard run to rally the Oilers in the second quarter.

Philadelphia, 11-5, kept pace with Houston's improved second half performance with a one yard touchdown run by Leroy Harris and a 4-yard touchdown pass from John Walton to Scott Fitzkee.

Houston scored on Dan Pastorini's seven-yard touchdown pass to Mike Renfro and Fritsch's 37 yard field goal with 4:23 left in the game.

Canadian girls win tournament

FRIONA--Canadian girls were involved in a nip and tuck contest with Friona for the Friona Tournament title, but the Lady Wildcats emerged on top, 34-32, Saturday night.

Alicia Hobby and Melanie Baggett led Canadian scorers with 10 points each.

Silvia Bermea and Theresa Bermea had 8 points each for the losers.

Canadian boys, behind Micha Lewis 20 points, defeated Lockney, 76-48, to capture the consolation crown.

Leading scorer for the losers was Kevin Evans with 18 points.

Don Ishmael and Barry Stephenson added 13 points for Lockney.

Halas Jr. dies

CHICAGO (AP) — George S. Halas Jr., president of the National Football League Chicago Bears, has died from a massive heart attack at his home in Chicago, a family spokesman says. He was 54.

Halas, who died early Sunday, was the son of George Halas Sr., the Bears' owner. He became president of his father's team in 1963 and worked with the Bears for 30 years, mainly in front office capacities, said Ted Harris.

Halas graduated from Loyola University, attended Loyola Academy and served in the U.S. Naval Reserve during World War II. He also served on the board of directors of the Chicago Association of Retarded Children, United Cerebral Palsy and was a trustee of the Pop Warner Football League. He also was a member of the executive committee of the NFL Management Council.

Before becoming president of the club, Halas served as treasurer since 1953.

Halas is survived by his wife, Pat, and two children. Funeral arrangements are pending.

Lakers hold off Spurs rally for 121-119 win

LOS ANGELES (AP) — What started out as a laugher for the Los Angeles Lakers turned out to be anything but that. In the end, they were just happy to win.

The Lakers shocked the San Antonio Spurs in the opening minutes of Sunday night's National Basketball Association game between the teams, taking a startling 18-0 lead and making their first 12 field goal attempts.

A breeze for the Lakers, right? Not so — Los Angeles won 121-119 and the Spurs weren't out of contention until the final seconds, thanks mainly to the efforts of George Gervin, the NBA's leading scorer.

"You can't hold San Antonio down forever because Gervin picks up the tempo sooner or later," said Los Angeles Coach Paul Westhead, whose team now has a 22-10 record. "We clearly came into the game trying to stop Gervin and (Larry) Kenon and did a good job on Kenon, but it's hard to stop Gervin when he's putting in 30-foot finger rolls."

Gervin scored 43 points, 26 of them in the second half, while Kenon was held to 12 points and nine rebounds. Gervin made 20 of his 40 field goal attempts as the Spurs dropped to 16-16.

Meanwhile, for the third straight game, the Lakers had four players score 20 or more points — Jamaal Wilkes and Norm Nixon had 27 each; Kareem Abdul-Jabbar had 23 and Jim Chones had 20.

Wilkes made 12 of his 18 field goal attempts and Chones, who had a game-high 11 rebounds, was nine for 12. Nixon was 10 of 16 and had a game-high nine assists.

After the early blitz by Los Angeles, San Antonio got back in the game quickly. The Spurs were behind by only six points, 38-32, early in the second quarter and weren't out of contention until just two seconds remained.

A pair of free throws by the Lakers' Earvin "Magic" Johnson with six seconds left made it 121-118 but San Antonio rookie guard Mike Evans was fouled in the backcourt with two seconds to go, giving him an opportunity to make two free throws in three attempts.

Evans made the first foul shot, then intentionally missed the next two. The third try missed the rim, automatically giving the Lakers the ball out-of-bounds.

"We were not aware it was a penalty situation at the end," said Evans, who finished with 19 points. "The plan was for Kenon to box out Wilkes and have Gervin move to the basket for the missed free throw."

That's what happened as Gervin followed the miss into the basket as Evans missed the second attempt, but it didn't count because of the penalty situation.

Reserve forward Spencer Haywood didn't see action for the Lakers, whose fans chanted, on a number of occasions, "We want Haywood."

"He didn't play because he has been suffering from a cold and an allergy and has not felt well and has not practiced," said Westhead, referring to Haywood. "My feeling is he didn't practice so he didn't play.

"We played a heck of a game, let's talk about the players who did play. Specifically, Jamaal Wilkes, who consistently got key baskets for us."

Your Birthday

December 18, 1979

Solid achievement can be made this coming year if you're willing to change that which has been unproductive for you. Friends will be eager to help you open up new territory.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) You may have to guard against coming on too strong or making heavy demands on those who are involved in your business today. Be a friend, not a dictator. You'll enjoy the section in your new Astro-Graph Letter which tells you what lies ahead for you in romance. Mail $1 for each to Astro-Graph, Box 489, Radio City Station, N.Y. 10019. Be sure to specify birth date.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Make no major decisions today unless you're certain you have all the facts. There is a strong possibility something important is being overlooked.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Maintain a philosophical, mind-your-own business attitude today to avoid trouble. You could inherit someone else's problem if you stick your nose into the wrong place.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Those you least expect could come to your aid today, so don't feel let down if the ones who should be helping aren't. Things will work out.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) A resentment harbored against another could cause you to make a faulty decision today. It'll be to your disadvantage as much as it is to his or hers.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) If you find yourself forced to share time with one you're not very fond of, it would be to your benefit to turn the other cheek and try to get along.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Just because you might have gotten away with it before, don't try to push your family to the wall today. Treat them like friends and you'll get farther.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) If confusion arises in your work today, chances are it will be due to your having been given faulty information. Go to the original source and check thoroughly.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) You'll be held accountable today for any funds entrusted to you. Make certain your spending is in accord with the wishes of those you represent.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Avoid siding with or hanging around persons who band together as a means to hold sway over others. It's not your style to become enmeshed in petty politics.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Don't base any decisions today on past conclusions. Look for new sources of evidence to understand a present situation.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Financial matters, especially those involving friends, should be avoided today. Strong resentment could grow out of a testy situation that may be neither party's fault.

Bears win big with help from Dallas

By BRUCE LOWITT
AP sports writer

It's Chicago at Philadelphia and...

And we'll find out the rest tonight when the Denver Broncos visit the San Diego Chargers with a National Football League division title at stake. The loser will wind up with the wild card and a trip to Houston. The winner will get the American Conference West title.

The Chicago Bears can thank their lucky stars — or, rather, the blue stars on the silver helmets of the Dallas Cowboys — that they're in the playoffs at all.

Thanks to the NFL's tie-breaking system to determine playoff teams, the Bears not only had to beat St. Louis but had to win big, and needed some help from Dallas. They got it all.

First they routed the Cardinals 42-6 to wipe out Washington's points-scored, points-allowed edge, a 33-point differential. Then they watched the Cowboys beat the Redskins 35-34 in one of the most thrilling NFL games of recent years. Had Chicago scored one less touchdown against the Cards — in faet, one less touchdown the whole season — Washington would have gotten the second wild card and faced the Eagles next Sunday.

Dallas' Roger Staubach threw three touchdown passes, two of them — 26 yards to Ron Springs and 8 yards to Tony Hill — in the closing minutes to wipe out Washington's 34-21 lead and propel the Cowboys to the championship of the National Conference's East Division. Staubach's floater to Hill and Rafael Septien's tie-breaking extra point came with 39 seconds to play.

Two other division champions were crowned Sunday. The Pittsburgh Steelers, already guaranteed their eighth straight playoff appearance, locked up their sixth successive title in the AFC's Central Division by beating Buffalo 28-0. And in the NFC's Central Division, Tampa Bay's once-laughable Buccaneers shook off a "choke" collar, halted a three-game skid and, in a near-monsoon, beat Kansas City 3-0 to nail down first place.

Philadelphia, already assured of a playoff berth, defeated Houston 26-20. The Oilers will host the AFC wild-card game next Sunday at 4 p.m. EST. The Chicago-at-Philadelphia NFC wild-card affair is scheduled to kick off at 12:30 p.m. EST.

The Rams, NFC West champions, bid farewell to Los Angeles (they move to Anaheim next season) by losing 29-14 to New Orleans. Oakland and Cleveland, two other teams that nurtured slender AFC wild-card hopes, saw them dashed, with the Raiders losing to Seattle 29-24 and the Browns falling to Cincinnati 16-12.

Elsewhere, Atlanta beat San Francisco 31-21 with O.J. Simpson playing his final NFL game for the 49ers. New England defeated Minnesota 27-23 and Baltimore blasted the the New York Giants 31-7. On Saturday, the New York Jets beat the AFC East champion Miami Dolphins 27-23 and the Green Bay Packers defeated Detroit 18-13. The Lions and 49ers finished tied for the worst record this year, 2-14, with Detroit getting the No.1 pick in the college draft next April 29 because its opponents won fewer games than San Francisco's.

The usually placid Staubach had seen just about everything in his 11 years in the NFL — but nothing could match the Cowboys' game against Washington.

"We were out of it...then we were in it...then we were out of it...then we were in it. I've never played in a game like that before," said Staubach, who passed for 336 yards against the dazed Redskins. "I can't remember when I've ever gotten so excited in a football game. This beats them all."

The Redskins led 17-0 before Staubach brought the Cowboys back within three points just before halftime, one of the TDs coming on a 26-yard pass to Preston Pearson. "Roger was just great," said Coach Tom Landry. "He held us together when it looked like we were gone. We were fortunate to pull it out, but he's just the kind of guy who can do it. He's been doing it all his career."

Bears 42, Cardinals 6

"We had to go out and win by more than 33 and we did it. I never gave up because...I thought something good was going to happen," said Chicago Coach Neill Armstrong.

Just about the only thing the Cardinals were playing for was rookie Ottis Anderson's chance for the NFL rushing title — but the Bears held him to just 39 yards before he left in the third period.

Anderson finished with 1,605 yards while Walter Payton gained 137 yards and scored three TDs for the Bears to finish with 1,610. But neither of them won the rushing title.

Eagles 26, Oilers 20

Earl Campbell did — for the second successive year — with 1,697 yards following his 134-yard, one TD showing against the Eagles. Quarterback Ron Jaworski ran for Philadelphia's first TD and his backup, John Walton, passed for the game-winner.

Miami girls win consolation title

SHAMROCK-Miami girls won the consolation championship of the Shamrock Tournament Saturday night with a 96-48 victory over Memphis.

Susan Bean paced Miami in scoring with 20 points while Tracy Klansek added 14.

Regina Berry was top scorer for the losers with 17 points.

Miami pulled away from Memphis in the second quarter to lead by 50-34 at intermission.

A&I wins Palm Bowl

McALLEN, Texas (AP) — Texas A&I coach Ron Harms wasn't too happy when he saw cornerback Emmuel Thompson run out of the end zone after making an interception in Saturday's NAIA Division I championship game with Oklahoma Central State.

"I was about to chew him out. I wasn't pleased at all to see him try to run it out," Harms said.

But the Central State players apparently couldn't believe he would try to run it out either, and Thompson ran untouched 106 yards for a touchdown that iced away a 20-14 victory for the Javelinas' seventh national NAIA title.

Central State quarterback Scott Burger marched the Bronchos inside the A&I 10 for what would be the go-ahead touchdown in the third quarter, but threw into a crowd in the end zone.

"When I picked off the pass, I noticed that most of their players were headed to the bench, thinking I was going to down the ball in the end zone," the A&I cornerback said.

"I hesitated just a moment and saw a big hole open up on the left side off the field, so I took off. I knew I could make it at least to the 20, and that's where we'd get the ball any way if I downed it."

Harms quickly decided not to admonish Thompson.

"He hesitated a moment and was ready to drop down, and then he saw it open up, so he took off. That was real heads-up football," said Harms.

Thompson's return was one of four times Central State moved inside the Texas A&I 20 but came up empty handed.

"That interception return really hurt us," said Central State's Steve Tate, the game's leading rusher with 152 yards on 21 carries. "Things just wouldn't click for us when we got down close to the goal line. They made errors, but we made our share, too."

Texas A&I lost six of seven fumbles, but the Javelinas intercepted five Bronco passes.

Texas A&I won national NAIA titles in 1959, 1969-70 and 1974-75-76. Harms was offensive coordinator when the Javelinas won in 1974-75, then took over similar duties at Baylor for three years before being hired last August as head coach at Texas A&I.

"We did not have any idea, by anybody's stretch of imagination, that we would be here. We had 12 lettermen back at the beginning of the season and a lot of young players. Our young players have simply played better than anyone expected them to," Harms said.

The first A&I turnover let Central State move in for an early touchdown on Clifford Chatman's 5-yard run. A&I marched 80 yards for a touchdown in the second quarter, then took the lead on a short drive after Central State fumbled the ensuing kickoff.

The 100-yard interception return nailed down the victory, although Central State got a late touchdown on the board on a 72-yard pass.

Portland slips past Houston

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — Momentum that flung Portland free from a ten-game losing streak earlier in the weekend carried the Trail Blazers to a 123-101 National Basketball Association victory over the Houston Rockets on Sunday.

The Blazers beat Denver 106-98 on Saturday night in Portland. The Blazers play the Nuggets, 11-23, again Wednesday in Denver.

Ron Brewer scored a career-high 33 points Sunday night to lead the Blazers to a their 18th victory in 34 games.

Lionel Hollins and Maurice Lucas left the Blazer bench to score 17 and 16 points respectively. Lucas grabbed 11 rebounds.

Coach Jack Ramsay, whose Blazers have been hampered by injuries, said, "When we get our veteran players healthy, we will be well on our way.

"Ron Brewer played a great game. He had different shots tonight than he did last night. He is just s super player, and I still believe his best years are way ahead of him," Ramsay said.

Portland built a 82-62 lead with 5:51 left in the third quarter. Then Calvin Murphy scored six points and Houston teammates scored six more while the Blazers scored only two, and the Rockets trailed 82-70 with 3:03 left in the period.

Portland opened the final quarter by outscoring Houston 15-6 for a comfortable 103-82 advantage with 7:28 remaining.

"They really worked us over," Houston Coach Del Harris said of the Blazers. "Their defense was awful tough, and they executed so much better than we did. They ran well, too, but most of it was off turnovers. There just is no defense against turnover fast breaks."

Portland converted 23 Houston turnovers into 27 points. The Rockets gained 22 points by taking the ball from the Blazers 20 times.

"We just were careless, and our judgment in passing situations was not good," Harris said. "I don't think you should dwell on our mistakes, though. We didn't beat ourselves. Portland beat us with great play. I guess you could say that we were accomplices, though, in the crime."

Moses Malone led Houston scoring with 25 points, and Murphy finished with 22. Malone had 10 rebounds.

Houston's record dropped to 15-16.

T.R. Dunn, playing both buard and small forward for Portland, finished with 13 points, nine in the final half, and contributed seven rebounds.

1,300 receive shots after disease found

TYLER, Texas (AP) — More than 1,300 hospital employees and discharged patients received hepatitis inoculations this weekend after officials confirmed that two cafeteria employees at Mother Frances Hospital had contracted the infectious disease.

Although no one else has come down with hepatitis, a spokeswoman at the hospital said, officials are trying to ward off spread of the disease by providing injections to anyone would might have been exposed.

The hospital mailed out letters Friday evening to more than 700 patients who had been at the hospital since Dec. 2, the day officials calculate was the earliest the contagious disease might have been contracted by others.

About 500 hospital employees got the injections Friday after laboratory tests confirmed the hepatitis, according to Sister M. Honesta, adminstrator at Mother Frances.

An additional 825 injections of gamma globulin were given at no charge to members of the public who began streaming in when the word got out.

The letters asked patients to relay the warning to visitors who ate in the hospital cafeteria.

Inoculations of patients and hospital visitors — including some persons with limited exposure to the cafeteria — began Friday, Sister Honesta said.

"We're including any who ate (at the hospital cafeteria)," she said. "Someone came who only had a container of milk, but they were here. Yet you can't refuse."

The two infected cafeteria workers were women, both about 40 years old, according to Tom Beck, assistant hospital administrator.

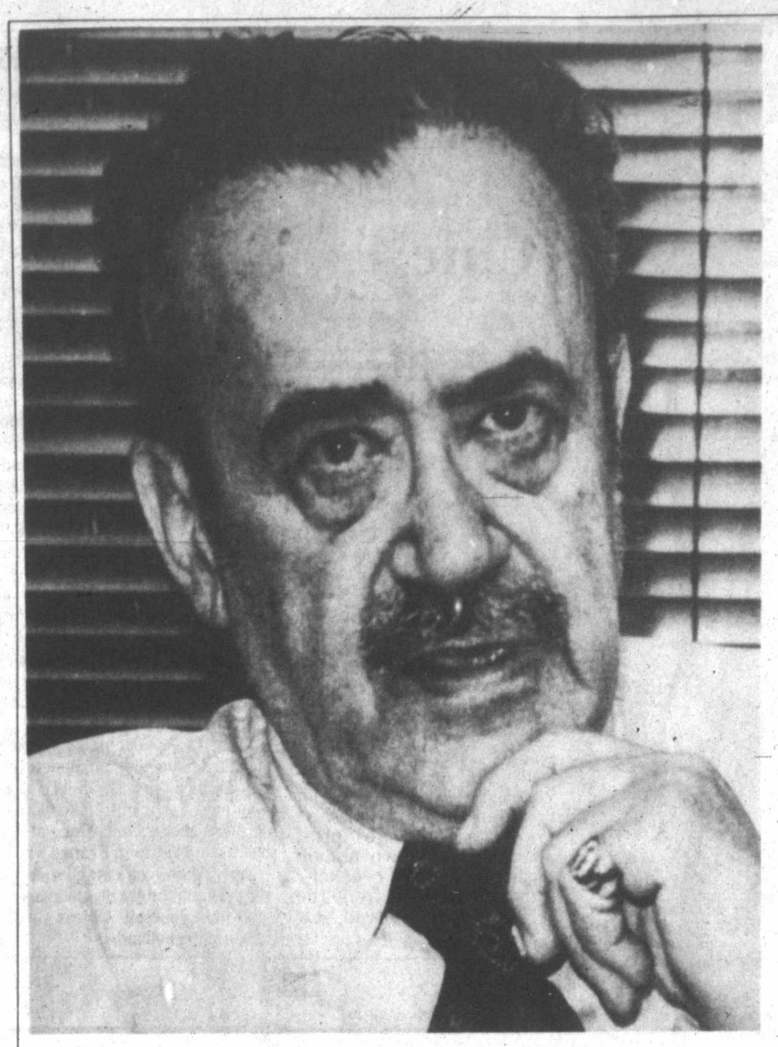

One of the infected cafeteria workers had been hospitalized, Sister Honesta said. The other was being treated on an outpatient basis.

Although there have been no reports of other persons contracting the disease, Beck warned about the infectious potential of hepatitis.

"If you're handling food, you could contaminate food. The virus could be transferred by the hands of an employee and could go to the tray of someone eating food at the hospital," said Beck.

The letters sent by hospital personnel suggested patients contact their personal physicians for advice about a possible gamma globulin injection.

Beck said the hospital would offer the injections at no cost in the emergency room. He added that a vaccination would have a greater effect in combating possible infection if it was administered quickly.

Legal champion of Chicago's gays

CHICAGO (AP) — The magazines in his solemn, wainscoted law office range from the most-recent editions of the corporate guidebook, Fortune, to those of Christopher Street, a slick journal for homosexuals.

Once branded "the fairy lawyer" by less tolerant colleagues, Paul Goldman has been battling on behalf of Chicago's gay community for half a century.

The 73-year-old Goldman smoothes a tuft of gray hair as he sits in his office across from City Hall and talks about the homosexual world, a world through which he moves freely, albeit not as "an intimate at their cocktail parties."

"The entire thing was happenstance. I was involved defending some 150 people after a Chicago bathhouse was raided (in 1929), and the exposure was substantial," said Goldman.

"People labeled me 'the fairy lawyer.' It was a common expression, and they would call my cases 'pansies or fruits.'"

Goldman said he has "argued cases on behalf of homosexuals in almost every state in the country" and has spoken on gay legal issues at seminars "from the East Coast to the West."

But his motivation to join legal battle was the result of more than happenstance. He believes the 1926 suicide of his roommate while in law school at the University of Illinois gave him the courage and compassion to chart an unpopular course.

His roommate swallowed poison. Goldman found the note which told of the roommate's heretofore hidden homosexuality. Goldman was heartbroken.

"I knew nothing about homosexuals, except what I had read in toilets," he recalled. "I never had known one, at least to my knowledge. My roommate's death had a terrific impact on me because I truly loved the boy.

"His family came, and we took him home and buried him....I reflected on the plight of this group and this person whom I had loved so deeply. Since I was a poor boy without any family connections in the law business, I decided that human civil rights — and particularly those of the homosexual — were as attractive a field as any I could pursue."

Goldman worked briefly for several Chicago law firms but soon opened his own practice. Clients came from the ranks of bar and bathhouse operators whose establishments, catering to homosexuals, were the frequent targets of police raids.

"In the early days, such places and their patrons were the subjects of constant harassment," Goldman said. "It seemed the police at that time were notorious in their conduct.

"Homosexuals were not unified, and there was nobody willing to stand up for their rights and seek redress. And the attitudes of the court were reflective of the attitudes of the general public."

Goldman became the legal champion of the Chicago homosexual community. As word of his practice spread, his nucleus of gay clients grew.

In the late 1950s, he was a consultant to the Wolfenden Committee, appointed by the Church of England (Episcopal) to examine the state of homosexuals in Britain. The committee recommended, and eventually saw enacted, the lifting of legal penalties for sexual acts performed by consenting adults.

"After my roomate's death and the load of cases in my own practice, it seemed like a natural progression," Goldman said of his move into public advocacy. "I was at that time becoming rather prominent in what was a sparse field anyway. The committee looked like a good way to further some of the goals I was already working towards."

Goldman also directed efforts against Illinois' anti-sodomy law, which mandated penalties of one to 10 years in prison.

"It was a crime without a victim, but because of that provision, homosexual couples lived in the pale of the penitentiary," Goldman said. "Our desire to change the law was not prompted by the instance of prosecution, but its psychological threat."

Texas police chief shot

JACKSBORO, Texas (AP) — Police Chief Guy Sullivan, who took over his job less than two months ago, was recovering in a hospital today after a bullet exploded into his left shoulder Friday night and shattered, with some segments lodging close to his heart.

Officials said Sunday night that the 32-year-old Sullivan said he was shot with his own gun by a man about 6-foot, in his middle 20s with dark shoulder-length hair and a short beard.

The sheriff told authorities his attacker was wearing blue jeans, tennis shoes and a green Army fatigue shirt.

Sullivan had been waging an active war on illegal drug sales in Jacksboro and on drunken drivers. Authorities speculated Friday night's shooting was connected to Sullivan's vigorous fight against drugs.

The man came to Sullivan's home about 6 p.m. Friday and was let inside where "there were some words exchanged," said Jacksboro Police Sgt. Arthur Reaves.

Then the man picked up Sullivan's .38-caliber revolver, shot him and fled, Reaves added.

Sullivan was transferred to a Wichita Falls hospital, where he had surgery late Saturday. He was moved from the intensive care unit Sunday, but hospital officials said he would undergo further surgery on Wednesday.

He joined the Jacksboro Police Department last February, having previously served on the police force at Bowie.

Jack County officers put out a statewide alert Friday night for a Bowie man, but the alert was canceled several hours later. Officials said reports the man was from Bowie "were erroneous."

Gambling may become big issue with candidates

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Most of the 1980 election talk so far has been about presidential prospects with maybe a little about the Texas Railroad Commission and local races.

Before it's over, however, you may be hearing a lot about horse racing, bingo and Sunday closing laws in the balloting.

The legalization of bingo and raffle games for the benefit of charitable organizations is already guaranteed for the Nov. 4 general election ballot. The proposed state constitution change was sent to the people for a vote by the 1979 Legislature. If approved by voters, local option elections could be held to authorize bingo within a county, in much the same way wet-dry elections are held now.

Already there are indications of statewide opposition to the amendment, particularly from church groups who traditionally oppose gambling in any form. On the other hand, some of its staunchest support may come from other church groups who have traditionally held bingo games in churches for charitable causes.

At a recent meeting of the State Democratic Executive Committee, State Democratic Chairman Billy Goldberg said he had been approached about statewide straw votes on horse racing and Sunday "blue" laws to be presented to the state committee at its March 10 meeting. That is the same time the Democratic policy makers will consider a statewide presidential preference poll at the May 3 party primary.

Gary Mauro, director of the state Democratic headquarters, said it was expected the requests would be made directly to the state committee at the March 10 meeting, instead of presenting petitions. Petitions that would require the committee to order a referendum must contain at least 49,000 names. On the other hand, the state committee can order a straw vote on its own without a petition.

Wayne Thorburn, head of the state Republican headquarters, said his party had not received any requests for similar straw votes. A GOP petition would require about 8,000 signatures. The state Republican party has already ordered a presidential primary at its May 3 primary.

"There is no doubt," said a political figure who did not want his name used, "that horse racing and blue laws on the same ballot with the presidential primary and other races would have an effect.

"For one thing it would influence the Baptists and that would help Jimmy Carter. Wouldn't it?"

Doug McCrary, Calvert banker who is president of the Texas Horse Racing Association, personally doubts if a major effort will be made for another straw vote on parimutuel betting in 1980.

"I would guess we will not go the petition route again," McCrary said. "I believe the Legislature has come around to favoring horse racing and that's what we want for 1981" — the next regular legislative session.

Horse racing can be approved by the Legislature, without Texans having to vote on a constitution change.

Chic sweat-shirts

A RED-HOODED sweatshirt of trapunto-quilted polyester (far left) snaps up the front and at the ankles for $98. Navy blue cotton "emblem" sweatshirt with hood zips up the front. Gold-threaded emblems depict zodiac signs, strategic air command, other insignias and are available in 12 colors for $25. Yellow satin raglan-sleeve sweatshirt with "checker cab" print ($50) has its own pull-on pant with side "checker" stripe ($55). All from the French Jeans Store in New York.

With a touch of France....

By Ellie Grossman

NEW YORK (NEA) — Gimme an S; gimme a W; gimme an E-A-T!

Gimme an S; gimme an H; gimme an I-R-T!

GIMME A SWEATSHIRT! But not one gray and grungy, ptui.

One from The French Jean Store in New York, which gets them from, where else, France, and some from here, but the French ones are hot stuff. De trop, you could say.

Like their football sweatshirt with quilted shoulders for a padded effect, and a contrast stripe on the arms going against your basic white, gray, red or navy, and a V or round neck, in 100 percent cotton (all the French ones are), for $55, which is a heap of l'argent in anybody's language, but what price, toots?

Or the jolly, insouciant, scenic numbers with snow scenes or pheasants (trumpets, confetti, sometimes rhinestones) on natural, gray, red, black, turquoise, purple or mauve backgrounds, for $58.

Or better yet, simple, solid cashmere, mon cher, in beige, navy, black, with drawstring hood and waist, simplement $210, and any jogging in that is at the owner's dementia.

Back to reality, the like-it-or-leave-it stars and stripes patriot who wants to warm up in a cotton poly sweatshirt ($35) made right here in the good ol', can do it in solid green, white, black, gray, blue, plum (or yellow or whatever other color the store has on hand), and say: paint me a turkey walking around on the front, and one in back, trussed up and dormant, as turkeys tend to be on Thanksgiving. Do it with color that won't come off in the wash and over that, in "glitter" that will, but who cares if the back-up color is there? Or gimme, you can say, one of those football jerseys and write my birthdate or Social Security number on it in sequins. The store will do things like that for $14 to $30.

Then, too, you can get crested. That happens by buying your standard hooded or unhooded zippered sweatshirt ($25-40) and then requesting a crest (Apollo II, general's stars — they don't say whose — or one of your initials with an eagle growing around it) to be sewn on. Very classy, that, since all the crests are handsewn for the shop by little old ladies in France who sew crests for regular royalty.

Then again, you can go to a department or chain store, buy one of the eye-smartingly bright sweatshirts they're all showing and smear stuff on it yourself. Unless you'd feel guilty taking work away from little old French ladies ....

DR. LAMB

By Lawrence Lamb, M. D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I have a close relative who has narcolepsy. The doctor decided this after he had had several hospital stays and every conceivable test made on him, including brain waves, spinal taps and the works. I'd like to know something about the disease. The doctor said it wasn't very well known and that they really weren't sure how to treat it but that it was possibly caused by hereditary factors.

DEAR READER — Narcolepsy is an interesting disease. These people fall asleep rather easily. The periods of sleep are quite short, so frequent short episodes of falling asleep are the hallmark of narcolepsy. This is to be distinguished from hypersomnia which means just prolonged excessive sleep. For example, sleeping 14 hours continuously.

Another important aspect of narcolepsy is that patients with this problem often have addtional findings. They may lose control of their muscles and fall to the floor when they start laughing. This isn't a convulsion but really a paralysis of the muscles. They may also have hallucinations just at the time they start to go to sleep.

It's true that we do not know what causes it and some cases are difficult to treat, although a number of medicines are available that do help in many cases. An individual who has such a problem obviously should not be driving an automobile or involved in occupations that require constant attention.

I don't think you need to worry about developing this problem yourself. But because you're interested in sleep, I'm sending you The Health Letter number 10-6, Sleep and Insomnia. Other readers who are interested in sleep problems can send 75 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for this issue. Send your request to me, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I am a 34-year-old man and have a chin and neck of a 60-year-old man. I am a few pounds overweight but no more than 10 or 15, yet my chin and neck look like someone twice my age. My neck is so wrinkled and my jaw has a bulldog look. Are there any exercises I can do to tighten the skin in these areas?

DEAR READER — It's hard to describe it but you can experiment until you see what I mean. Jut your lower jaw out and act like you are clenching it in a stiff position, you can pull on muscles that are underneath the jaw. We call this the platysma muscle. It's not always well developed and there is a lot of individual variation in it. It's really part of the facial muscle that runs under the neck area. You can see cords of muscles stand out in the neck sometimes when you tense them.

You might want to strengthen these muscles and that might help a little bit but I'm doubtful that it will solve your problem. Usually when a person has quite a bit of excess skin, there's only one way to get rid of it and that's a surgical approach.

Boost diet with potassium-rich foods, not pills

Q. I'm on blood pressure medication, and my doctor said to be sure to get enough potassium. I know some fruits contain it, but do vegetables or any other foods? Should I be taking potassium tablets? That seems easier, but I worry about getting too much or too little.

A. If you are like most people, boosting your diet with potassium-rich foods and cutting back on the salt is the safest and best way to handle the potassium depletion caused by such high blood pressure medicines as Hydrodiuril (hydrochlorothiazide) and Hygroton (chlorthalidone).

Potassium preparations make it much easier for you to load your body with too much potassium, and some have other disadvantages as well.

Liquid potassium chloride is sometimes prescribed for people who have become potassium deficient. Its chief drawback seems to be that it tastes awful. Because of that, slow-release tablets have become much more widely used. These products have caused ulcers in some people, and The Medical Letter, an independent and highly respected source on drugs, concludes that "other means of providing potassium supplementation are safer."

Here's a list of foods which pack a good wallop of potassium and only a smidgen of sodium: brazil nuts, dates, pecans, lima beans, bananas, apricots, blackstrap molasses, oranges, winter squash, green peas, peaches, plums, wheat germ, walnuts, oatmeal, almonds, potatoes and peanuts.

If you can include some of these foods with every meal you should do all right. Naturally, though, everyone's needs are individual. If you will be on a potassium-depleting drug for a long time, your doctor may well want to test your blood periodically to see how you are doing.

Q. My daughter-in-law is expecting a baby in a few months. She has been taking a drug called Bendectin that the doctor prescribed for nausea.

We read in one of those supermarket tabloids that this drug causes birth defects and is made by the same company that sold thalidomide in the 1950s.

We are scared to death. It's too late to have an abortion but she is terrified the baby will be abnormal. Please tell us how dangerous Bendectin really is.

A. Nothing aggravates us more than the scare tactics of this kind of journalism. We received many copies of that paper bannering the headline, "Common Drug Causing Deformed Babies".

The article was frightening. Alongside graphic photographs of deformed children the writers claimed there was clear evidence "the drug is a vicious, body-twisting crippler," and that "untold thousands of babies are being born with hideous birth defects."

If these allegations were true, we would all have cause for alarm. In the U.S. 3 million new prescriptions are written each year for Bendectin, an anti-nausea drug containing an antihistamine and vitamin B-6. And during the last 20 years it has been prescribed for approximately 20 million pregnant women around the world.

There is little if any evidence to indicate this drug causes birth defects. A major survey recently completed by the federal Center for Disease Control in Atlanta did not turn up any indication that Bendectin produces abnormalities. The new report, coupled with other research from around the world, establishes to our satisfaction that this medication is not dangerous to the fetus.

Pregnant women should avoid drugs whenever possible, but there are occasions when a medication is necessary. Severe vomiting that could cause dehydration certainly requires doctor-supervised treatment.

Don't trust publications using inflammatory language which plays on people's fears instead of providing accurate, well-researched documentation before they print a scary headline.

Joe Graedon is a pharmocologist, a consultant to the Federal Trade Commission and author of "The People's Pharmacy" (Avon books).

PECAN PIE
NEW HOLIDAY DESSERT RECIPE
CLIP AND SAVE

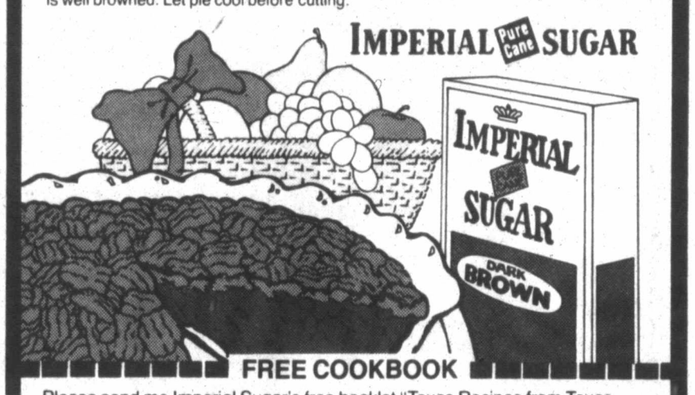

TEXAS PECAN PIE

Crust:
1½ cups all-purpose flour
½ teaspoon salt
⅔ cup shortening
3 tablespoons water

Mix flour and salt together; add shortening and cut into flour with fork or pastry blender. Add water and mix gently with fork in stirring motion. Gather pastry into a ball and place in pie tin. With tips of fingers, spread pastry along bottom and sides of pie tin, shaping a high, fluted edge. Makes one 9" pie shell.

Filling:
1½ cups Imperial Dark Brown Sugar (firmly packed)
½ cup Imperial Granulated Sugar
¼ cup water
2 tablespoons all-purpose flour
½ teaspoon salt
2 eggs
½ cup evaporated milk
1½ cup pecan halves
¾ teaspoon vanilla

Combine first five ingredients in small bowl and mix well. Beat in eggs, one at a time. Add evaporated milk and mix well. Stir in pecan halves and vanilla. Mix well and turn into unbaked 9" pie shell. Cook in preheated 400°F. oven for 10 minutes. Reduce heat to 350°F. and cook an additional 35 to 40 minutes, or until filling is puffed in center and is well browned. Let pie cool before cutting.

DEAR ABBY

By Abigail Van Buren

MY DEAR AUNT ABBY: Since its onset I have been following the debate in your column originated by AMERICA FIRST, who objected to Americans taking in the boat people. After watching an NBC news report on the subject, I feel I must speak my piece.

History shows that immigrants have never been welcomed by the American masses. Any success these "huddled masses" enjoyed was the product of their own hard labor, often conquering insurmountable obstacles every step of the way. But what outstanding contributions these people made to the American lifestyle that AMERICA FIRST now enjoys!

Many of today's enterprises that made America what it is came from the likes of Andrew Carnegie, John D. Rockefeller, Albert Einstein and, may I say, my own grandfather—and your father-in-law—Jay Phillips. All were immigrants, as are the ancestors of most of us, probably including AMERICA FIRST. Indeed, weren't the settlers who came aboard the Mayflower as much boat people as the millions fleeing Southeast Asia today?

It is, as you well know, only due to America opening its doors to immigrants that I am able to sit here at college and write this letter. Why shouldn't the Vietnamese, Thais, Cambodians and Chinese have the same chance our family had? Who can tell what contributions these new immigrants will make to America in the years to come? At least they deserve a chance.

If America is to close its gates, if Americans are to shun the "homeless tempest-tossed" so poignantly described by Emma Lazarus, then we should feel compelled to take the monument to our past generosity, the Statue of Liberty, and tow it out to sea. We don't deserve it!

Love, always,
YOUR NEPHEW, ERIK BERNSTEIN
BOULDER, COLO.

DEAR ABBY: My husband died last March. There are many people who will not have knowledge of this—most of them are past business associates and folks that I barely know—but we have always exchanged cards each Christmas. I have ordered cards with only my name on them, and plan to remember everyone on our list, at least this first year.

Is there a tasteful way to advise them that my husband has died? I certainly don't want to write it on my Christmas card, and yet when they receive a card with only MY name on it they will wonder what happened to George. Some might even think that we are separated or divorced. Please advise me.

NEW WIDOW

DEAR WIDOW: It would save a lot of speculation if you included a brief note with your Christmas cards simply stating that George died last March.

DEAR ABBY: For the past year, my boyfriend (I'll call him Sid) has been receiving erotic (and sometimes obscene) correspondence at his office. Nothing is ever signed. This is supposedly leading up to "a rendezvous the likes of which he's never dreamed possible!"

Well, surprise! We just discovered through handwriting analysis that this garbage is being sent by a girl we both know. She is the girlfriend of one of Sid's best friends. Here's the puzzler: She doesn't seem to be anything like the obviously sick person who is sending this stuff.

After discussing it, Sid and I have decided to let the matter drop without confronting either Sid's friend or the girl. Seeing them socially as we do, we are afraid if we let on that we know, our relationship might become strained and difficult.

We are all around 30, so it can't be just a childish prank. (I am certainly not laughing!) What do you think should be done?

NO NAMES

DEAR NO NAMES: Nothing

Cheerful candles

Christmas candles are cheerful and attractive, but often leave drips of wax stuck to the carpet. To remove, freeze the wax hard with an ice cube, then lift it off with the dull edge of a table knife. Vacuum up the remaining bits.

TWEEN 12 AND 20

By Robert Wallace, Ed. D.

Dr. Wallace: I am 14 and my steady boyfriend is 16. I've been going with him for four months now and we are very much in love.

About two months ago he asked me to have sex with him and I told him no. Since then he asks me almost every day and I still give him the same answer.

I'm really starting to weaken because I'm sure that I will lose him and if I do, I'm afraid no one will ever ask me out. Please help fast. — Nameless, San Diego, Calif.

Nameless: You have no assurance that giving this boy what he wants will keep him yours. It could be he will split after he has made his "conquest."

Besides, the emotional scars and guilt feelings that you will have and the possible risk of pregnancy are not worth it.

Don't sell yourself short. Other boys will ask you out.

Dr. Wallace: I'm 17 and was going with a girl who left me for another guy. I was hurt but started dating another girl whom I have the greatest respect and admiration for.

Now the girl who dumped me is back and she tells me that she loves me and that her leaving me was a mistake. What should I do? — Frank, Newton, N.J.

Frank: Stay with the girl you have the greatest respect and admiration for.

Write to Dr. Robert Wallace, TwEEN 12 and 20, in care of this newspaper. Please enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Hibernating bears burn no protein

VERMILLION, S.D. — Hibernating bears who are asleep for months burn only fat, no protein, and produce no waste products, says Dr. Ralph A. Nelson, University of South Dakota School of Medicine.

Appearing in the new science appreciation film series, "The Search for Solutions", he says that this "most amazing metabolic feat in the animal kingdom" may hold the key to remedies for malnutrition, obesity and kidney failure.

The film series is now being shown in high schools throughout the United States.

Faulkner highlighted in biographical sketch

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A Simon and Schuster short story anthology includes this note in its biographical sketch of William Faulkner:

"At the outbreak of World War I, Faulkner joined the Canadian air force, had two planes shot down under him in France, and was wounded." This experience, the biography continues, gave Faulkner "the new and maturing vision of the returning soldier" and shaped his work.

Now, the good folk of Oxford, Mississippi would recognize that story as one of crazy Bill Faulkner's outrageous lies. He joined the Royal Air Corps, all right, but the war ended before his training did. He never got out of Canada.

Bill Faulkner is remembered by his neighbors in Oxford as a liar, a boozer, an eccentric loner. He is also remembered as a genius, of course, but in Oxford, that's a secondary factor in the reckoning of a man's account, like the color of his eyes. Genius is something he just was; but drinking and carrying on and not paying his bills, those are things he did, which somehow count more in remembering.

All of this is important because Faulkner, more than many artists of this century, was inextricably bound up with his people, his town, his region. "William Faulkner: A Life on Paper," a two-hour special on PBS tonight, understands this, and therein lies its special worth.

The documentary was produced by the Mississippi Authority for Educational Television, with the help of a couple hired hands from Hollywood and Washington.

It begins, appropriately, with an air view of Lafayette (pronounced, by the way, La-FAY-ette) County, Mississippi, which in Faulkner's fiction is known as Yoknapatawpha County. Then to Oxford, Faulkner's "Jefferson."

There is the town square, with the marble memorial to its Confederate dead rising high from its center; there's the Gathright-Reed Drug Store, Sneed's Ace Hardware, the Bank of Oxford. This is precisely where any documentary on the life of William Faulkner belongs; after journeys to Paris, New Orleans and Hollywood, this is precisely where William Faulkner decided that he belonged.

"I discovered that my own little postage stamp of native soil was worth writing about," Faulkner said, "and that by sublimating the actual to the apocryphal, I would have complete liberty to use whatever talent I might have to its absolute top. So, I created a cosmos of my own."

Using interviews with the townspeople and Faulkner's own accounts, the documentary paints a portrait of the withdrawn boy given to extravagant affectations and wild imaginings who became a Nobel laureate and winner of the Pulitzer Prize; "little Billy Faulkner," "arrogant Bill Faulkner," "peculiar Bill Faulkner," whose home was in Oxford, Mississippi.

It is a documentary rich and full and caring, and well worth watching.

WASHINGTON

WASHINGTON (AP) — Three senators are sponsoring a new bill that would give religious and charitable groups a bigger share of the $80.5 million the Chinese government has agreed to pay for American assets seized during Mao Tse-tung's revolution 30 years ago.

Sen. Jacob Javits, R-N.Y., estimated the 45 organizations would receive about $37.5 million instead of $23 million if Congress passes the bill being introduced today by him and Sens. Richard Lugar, R-Ind., and Frank Church, D-Idaho.

The bill would reduce corporate claims against the $80.5 million settlement by any amount a company has written off in taxes and would increase the charities' shares by that amount, Javits said. He argued that the change is necessary because the charities could not write off their losses.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The National Gallery of Art has opened a big show of Persian-Iranian miniatures, painted four centuries ago and planned for showing long before the current Iranian crisis broke out.

Officials at the government-run gallery say the exhibit, planned for years, includes works lent by Britain, France and Sweden but none from the government of Iran.

The show is called "Wonders of the Age: Masterpieces of Early Safavid Painting, 1501-1576." The paintings were done under the patronage of Shah Tahmasp, who was a talented artist himself. Highlights include paintings and manuscript ornaments ordered by the shah to illustrate the "Book of Kings," the Persian national epic written by the poet Firdausi 500 years before.

The National Gallery gave the show little advance publicity.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The president of the National Organization for Women says the Equal Rights Amendment might have been ratified by now if President Carter had put nearly as much effort behind it as he's put behind his re-election efforts.

Carter spent thousands of dollars and sent hundreds of workers into Florida to win a straw vote last October, said Eleanor Smeal. A fraction of that effort could have won the two votes by which the ERA was defeated in the Florida Legislature, she said, adding that she feels strong Carter efforts could have reversed two-vote defeats in North Carolina and Illinois also.

OVERSEAS

LONDON (AP) — Tom Durant spent about $220 to put a carpet in his jewelry workshop nine years ago. When he had the battered carpet pulled up last week it was worth about $68,200.

A firm of bullion dealers burned the carpet in a special furnace and salvaged 150 ounces of gold worth more than $450 an ounce at today's booming bullion price. Fine grains of gold were trapped in the carpet weave, despite daily vacuum cleaning.

Durant, 56, said he was "amazed" by the windfall and plans to put down a new carpet in his workshop at Binton near Stratford-on-Avon. "It's a good investment," he told a reporter.

JAKARTA, Indonesia (AP) — An earthquake jolted the island of Sumatra early today, leaving at least six dead and 375 injured in the southern province of Bengkulu, police reported.

Provincial authorities reported more than 2,500 homes damaged.

The meteorological agency said the quake registered 6 on the Richter scale, a measure of ground motion as recorded by seismographs. Every increase of one number on the scale represents a tenfold increase in magnitude. Thus a reading of 6, classified as capable of causing severe damage, is 10 times stronger than a

THE GATHERING, PART II

Maureen Stapleton heads the cast of the new Christmas season drama, 'The Gathering, Part II,' which will be presented MONDAY, DEC. 17 on NBC-TV.

This sequel to 'The Gathering' co-stars Lawrence Pressman, Gail Strickland, Rebecca Balding and Bruce Davison.

The story begins nearly two years after the death of Kate Thornton's (Stapleton) husband. She has taken over his business. Industrialist Victor Wainwright (Efrem Zimbalist, Jr., pictured with Stapleton) makes a handsome offer for that business, which she refuses. When Wainwright shows a romantic interest in Kate, her suspicious and hostile family closes ranks against the intruder.

SKINFLINT: A COUNTRY CHRISTMAS CAROL

Famed singer-songwriter Hoyt Axton will star as a Scrooge-like banker in 'Skinflint: A Country Christmas Carol,' an original contemporary TV book musical based on Charles Dickens' 'A Christmas Carol.'

Joining Axton in the holiday special, airing TUESDAY, DEC. 18, are Lynn Anderson, Danny Davis and the Nashville Brass, Larry Gatlin, Julie Gregg, Tom T. Hall, Barbara Mandrell (pictured), Martha Raye, the Statler Brothers, Mel Tillis and Dottie West.

In the musical, Cyrus Flint's exclusive concern is the welfare of Flint City Bank, his one and only passion. Currently he is offering a $2,000 first prize in a songwriting and singing contest to promote his bank.
