SUPREME COURT FLAYS TEXAS MARTIAL LAW

Sterling Is Criticized For Saying National Guard Necessary

WASHINGTON, Dec. 12. (AP)—Orders issued by Governor Ross S. Sterling of Texas to officers of the State militia to enforce oil proration orders in the East Texas oil field, were set aside today by the Supreme court.

The court sustained a three-judge Federal court, which prohibited enforcement of the governor's orders by martial law.

The opinion written by Chief Justice Hughes, criticized Governor Sterling for declaring it was necessary to call out the national guard because riots and a state of insurrection made the order imperative.

The decision was based on Federal questions in response to arguments of Governor Sterling's attorneys that his action was authorized by state law.

STERLING SILENT

AUSTIN, Dec. 12. (AP)—Governor Ross S. Sterling refused to comment upon the probable effect of the Supreme Court ruling in Washington for martial law in the East Texas oil field to enforce proration orders.

He indicated he would not issue orders immediately to revoke his martial law proclamation.

ORDER TO STAND

AMARILLO, Dec. 12. (AP)—Chairman Terrell of the state railroad commission told Carl Estes, Tyler newspaper publisher here today that the new proration order for the East Texas oil field would stand.

The commission made no statement regarding the conference with Estes, except to state that it was the commission's opinion that he "order should go into effect as signed."

Money Mailed To Mexico Soon Will Be Seized by U. S.

Generous uncles and rich aunts may find themselves in jail or faced with heavy fines after February 1, 1933, if they send money of any kind into Mexico through the mails, a warning from the post office department in Washington has been announced to the local post office.

According to an official notice, mail containing bank notes or coins will be returned for a short period of grace, but after February the money will be confiscated, and addressees will be confronted with the penalties of the customs laws of their respective countries.

Only banks associated with the Bank of Mexico may transmit money into Mexico by mail. The practice of sending American money into the country continues in spite of warnings, and this stringent method has been taken as a final step, it was believed.—Del Rio Evening News.

WINTER STILL CAST'S FURY IN THIS SECTION

West Texas Passes Sixth Day Of Declining Temperatures

Sanderson and vicinity continues to be held in a grip of cold, rainy weather. Late Wednesday afternoon the sun shone for the first time since last Thursday. However, soon after dark clouds appeared and thunder and lightning prevailed for sometime accompanied by hail, sleet and rain.

All this week a considerable drop in temperature has been felt with the thermometer going down to freezing and below several times. Reports from the county north were that ice covered everything and motorists coming into the city report that highways were slippery and frozen. Just when relief from the cold will be cannot be ascertained as the weather has been so changeable. Rain continued thru Thursday and the mercury was away down all during the day. The moisture will be of benefit to the ranchmen if it does not continue to freeze.

No loss in livestock has been reported or learned of by the Times.

INSPECTOR IS KILLED WHEN HIT BY TRAIN

E. L. Hawkins Victim Of Collision On S. P. Curve

E. L. Hawkins, 45, Southern Pacific bridge inspector, was instantly killed Sunday evening at 9:30 when his railway motor car was struck by an east bound freight train three miles west of Del Rio. Hawkins and a companion, R. B. Moss were enroute to Devil's River to inspect the bridge when the railway motor car they were riding was struck by the train.

Rounding a bend, the men discovered the approaching train. Moss leaped from the car just as the collision occurred. Hawkins was found horribly mangled.

Hawkins was assigned to the supervision of construction of Devil's River Bridge under the chief engineer several weeks ago. His home was in Houston and the body was sent there on the 10:30 o'clock train Monday morning from Del Rio.

The freight train which struck the motor car, was in charge of Engineer R. Kuntz, and conductor J. L. Hoover.

Investigation of the accident was conducted by railway officials in Del Rio Monday.

Cavalry To Be Moved To Fort Knox By Truck

Transfer of 546 officers and enlisted men of the First Cavalry from Fort D. A. Russell, Marfa to Fort Knox, Ky., as ordered by the War Department, will be made by 87 motor vehicles from Fort Knox, it was learned at Eighth Corps Area headquarters, Fort Sam Houston, Friday.

A detachment of 18 officers and 127 men will accompany the motor caravan which is expected to reach Fort Russell about Jan. 1. It is estimated that the troop movement will cost about $10,000 for gasoline, oil, camp sites, fuel for cooking and telephone and telegraph. The animals of the First Cavalry will be shipped to Forts Clark, Ringgold, Bliss and Brown since the unit is to be mechanized upon its arrival at Fort Knox. The distance from Fort Russell to Fort Knox is approximately 1,400 miles. The caravan will not move through San Antonio.—San Antonio Express.

NEWTON'S FACE BANK CHARGE IN OKLAHOMA

Uvalde Brothers Are Accused of $4,400 Bank Raid

Willis and Joe Newton, Uvalde, face bank robbery charges in Medford, Oklahoma, according to Associated Press dispatches from that city.

Willis Newton was given a preliminary hearing Friday in Medford and was ordered held without bail. Four State witnesses identified Willis Newton as the man who menaced from 12 to 15 Medford residents and held them captive while the safe of the First National Bank of that city was looted of $4,400 the night of last April 14.

Oklahoma officials are seeking to extradite Joe Newton, brother of Willis, from Texas to face similar charges.—Del Rio Evening News.

Texans Ask Delay In Evacuation Of Fort D. A. Russell

WASHINGTON, Dec. 13.—Senators Tom Connally and Morris Sheppard, of Texas, and Rep. Ewing Thomas of El Paso, Monday urged President Hoover to permit the next administration to decide whether Fort D. A. Russell, Marfa, should be abandoned.

Hoover gave no decision, but said he would refer the matter back to the war department.

It was from an order of that department, providing for abandonment of the fort on January 1, that the congressmen were endeavoring to appeal.

They told Hoover that abandonment of the fort would be an extravagance rather than an economy.

A BIT OF PHILOSOPHY—

By E. V. WHITE, DEAN Texas State College For Women (CIA)

Some people love to hate and hate to love.

One may keep borrowed property so long that he feels he owns it.

Better know that you know that believe that you believe.

Some people spurn acquaintance in the endeavor to be great.

He is no Samaritan who offers aid that is not needed.

A patch in time saves a rip.

Many are brave in the absence of danger.

Don't be fooled by the unctious groans of the pretender.

TERRELL SAYS OIL PRORATION ORDER STANDS

Only Statement Is That "Order Should Go Into Effect"

AMARILLO, Dec. 12. (AP)—Chairman C. V. Terrell of the Texas Railroad Commission told Carl Estes, Tyler publisher, here today that the new proration order in East Texas would stand. The order lowered the field's production to 310,000 barrels, at cut of 15,000 barrels.

Estes, who was sent to Amarillo by the East Texas Chamber of Commerce to ask the railroad commissioners, here for a gas hearing, to reconsider the order, presented his argument to Chairman Terrell and Commissioner Ernest O. Thompson across the breakfast table, immediately after the commission chairman arrived here.

The commissioners gave out no statement regarding their conference with Estes, except to say that it was their opinion that the "order should go into effect as signed."

4 INJUNCTIONS NOW GRANTED

AUSTIN, Dec. 12. (AP)—Four injunctions have been granted in Travis county district courts restraining the Texas Railroad Commission from enforcing its new combination proration plan in the East Texas oil field.

Plaintiffs are Luling Oil & Gas Co., Boone Oil Co., Ebony Oil Co. and Rector & Davidson, all producers in that field.

The commission's orders are alleged to be unreasonable and discriminatory.

Valentine Quake Heard in Europe Sellards Reports

AUSTIN, Dec. 10.—Dr. E. H. Sellards, director of the Bureau of Economic Geology of the University of Texas, discussed two recent Texas earthquakes in an illustrated lecture before the Southwestern Geological Society recently. In his talk, Dr. Sellards pointed out that the first of these two earthquakes had its greatest intensity of the shock at Valentine and was recorded by seismograph determination at 5:45 o'clock in the morning of August 16, 1931. He said that the seismograph determinations as well as surface indications located the earthquake in the Davis Mountains. Movements were easily felt in all parts of Texas.

An earthquake is the result of the breaking of the rocks beneath the surface, Dr. Sellards explained. The earth crust sets up different stresses in the rocks and when the greatest stresses that a rock can bear is reached, the rocks break in two and a fault occurs. This fault, although it displaces the rock formations for only a few feet, sends out shocks that may be recorded over the whole earth's crust. These forces are acting continually and are only evident when the rocks break, Dr. Sellards said.

The earthquake at Valentine did considerable damage in that vicinity. The slipping did not occur in one specific place but occurred in a line running northwest and southwest of Valentine. The town of Valentine is built on unconsolidated river deposits and the severe shock experienced by the inhabitants there was due to the comparatively loose underlying formations that could be easily shaken. The earthquake was a great depth and seismograph stations from Europe recorded the movements. Paris France, and Strassburg Germany, reported the movement.

Mrs. C. F. Haass returned home Wednesday from San Antonio where she was called last Saturday on account of the illness of her granddaughter Marjorie Lee Hoffman. She reports that her granddaughter is better.

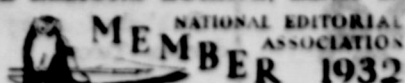

Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Wheeler and son were in town several days this week from their ranch.

"SWING TO THE RIGHT"

The panic is passing. The hard times are practically worn out. The depression is fading away. Light is breaking through the clouds. Scraps of the silver lining are clearly in sight. Proof of radical improvement in business, in industry comes in from every side. It is in the air; it is in the consciousness of men everywhere. The worst is over and prosperity is coming back.

Psychology is a wonderful thing—a tremendous force. When everybody gets into the way of thinking that certain things are to happen, they will happen and that is all there is to it. Just now everybody is making up his mind that the business depression is over, that there is to be a radical change. When that state of mind becomes fixed, prosperity will be back.

Already business men are perking up; timid souls have quit shivering; wage earners are going back on the payrolls; smokestacks are beginning to belch; wheels are beginning to hum; money is coming out from under the rubbish; hope and courage and determination are reviving.

All that is needed now is for everyone to swing to the right. When the way is dark, the road uncertain, the careful, experienced driver will swing to the right. It is a good rule. It has prevented many a crash. And if it is a good rule in driving, it is a good rule in every other activity in life. If everybody will swing to the right and keep moving the road will be kept open; there will be no jam, no crash. The natural current of business, industry, commerce, will find its natural channel. The panic will be over, normal prosperity will be an established fact.

Depression is very largely a state of mind. Cut it out and all will be well.—Times, Hailey, Idaho.

A LONG WAIT

My grandpa notes the world's worn coqs and says we're going to the dogs.

His grand-dad in his house of logs, swore things were going to the dogs.

His dad among the Flemish bogs, vowed things were going to the dogs. The caveman in his queer skin togs said things were going to the dogs.

But this is what I wish to state: The dogs have had an awful wait.—Pacific Cooperative Wool Grower.

CHRISTMAS SEAL—1932

By Nancy Richey Ranson

You cost so little, and you are so small,

But as, you represent enormous wealth

In Happiness and shining hope for all

The thousands who depend on you for health.

A host of children gaze with wistful eyes

From homes where cold and hunger grimly stalk—

Where threat of dread tuberculosis lies—

And ask this right: to live, and laugh, and walk.

Across wide Texas plains you blithely go

In search of hearts that beat in sympathy.

And back the way you came, bright pennies flow

In swift response to your unselfish plea.

(I think that Christ, who ever loved a child,

Has watched you journey forth, and gently smiled).

Turkey shipments, which reduced unemployment before the Thanksgiving season, will soon be resumed for the holiday trade. Even at prevailing low prices turkey money mounted into the hundreds of thousands of dollars during November and will yield as much more in December.

Wichita Falls Window Glass Co., is remodeling and modernizing its plant for handling its increased demand from the Southwest for its product. Established in 1912, it is the only window-glass plant in Texas. Since 1926 it has been running almost steadily with a daily capacity of 13,500 square feet of glass. Daily consumption of gas when operating at capacity is 200,000 cubic feet.

A SHORT SHORT STORY FUGITIVES

BY PAUL HAWK

There was something peculiar about that young man in the apartment next to hers, Betty decided.

That was all she had to do now
for eleven more days—decide things about people. She had already combed her hair until it shone like a new penny. She had already manicured her nails until they were like so many curves of celluloid. Her face—and she had been told this many times was too pretty to need attention. Her blue eyes, just so much sky fringed by long, dark lashes, were expressing violent resentment, for she was bored.

"Why are parents like they are,"
she inquired of herself. Hers, for instance, had ruined some perfectly wonderful plans for the next two weeks just because her father had made an agreement with his business partner twenty years ago
that their children should marry.
Imagine anybody trying to tell people of today whom to marry! The utter foolishness of such a thought made her boil over every time she thought of it. And yet that partner was coming all the way from the West just to bring his son along.
Her father and his friend were to have a reunion, and in the general happiness of the get-together, she and Richard Montague were supposed to stage a childhood romance come of age and marry.

As if she would marry a man who would let his father bring him to the bride of his father's choosing, as if he were still a boy and they were buying a new toy for him.
She could see him; short, glasses,
"mousy"-looking, always saying
"Yes, father."

But her father didn't know his daughter! She, too, knew how to go about getting her way. So she had slipped away, taken this apartment three days ago, and now
was settled for eleven more days.

Church Finance Board we hope to show that every member is systematic giver to the Church.

All are welcome to any or all of the services. We especially solicit those whose denominational choice is not represented in Sanderson to come worship the Lord and serve Him with us.

B. M. Stradley, Pastor.

She had to stay in pretty closely,
for her father probably had men out looking for her despite her note telling him why she left. She felt like throwing things.

As if in answer to her thoughts,
she heard a "slam" and a "bang"
in the next apartment. And that brought the young man to mind
again.

The first time they had met, was soon after she had moved in. She had stepped out into the hall and backed directly into him. He had jumped as if shot. She could see yet the startled look in his brown eyes, a look that changed at once to admiration, however, as he saw her.
He had wavy brown hair, and he was tall and broadshouldered. He had begged her pardon and gone
on into his room.

The next time he had looked at her very wistfully, but had only said "Hello" she had smiled at him.
It was alright, that smile, she defended herself, for they were neighbors. And anyway he was attractive, and she was darned lonely.
He must be too. She wondered why he kept so closely to his room.

Again she heard a "bang." She decided that if another one followed, she would go see what was the matter. It did at once.

She knocked on his door. The sound of restless movement within stopped instantly. She waited several minutes; then she pounded again. The door was opened only wide enough for a crack and a single brown eye to appear.

"Oh!" he said, almost in a gasp.
"I thought I'd like to come and help you tear up your room," Betty told him. "I feel like that too."

"Why, er—Come in, won't you,
he pleaded. "I'm—I'm Dick Smith."

"I'm—er, Betty Brown," said Betty Westerly, "and I'm awfully
bored."

"Well, so am I—that is I was,"
he added. "And I can't get out of this blasted room because—well, I just can't."

Betty wondered about him. "I can't either," she said.

As she slipped into bed that night, Betty didn't think at all about how bored she was. In fact, she didn't think of anything but Dick. She had never imagined before that playing cards with one person all afternoon could be so entertaining. And then he had offered dinner for two sent up, and how good that was!

They continued to lend each other magazines, to discuss books, to play cards, and to eat occasional meals together.

Then, several days later, Dick said, "Let's sneak out to a show tonight."

Betty said, "Oh, let's! But we'll have to be careful. There's somebody I don't want to see."

They sat close together in the show and Betty's more sophisticated side wanted to laugh when she discovered suddenly that they were holding hands—and that she liked it!

It was raining when they went out again. As they started to step from the curb, Betty slipped, seeing at the time a car coming at her that seemed to roar right in her ears.
Dick snatched her to him, just in time for the car to screech by, the brakes locked.

Dick's face looked as if it had been dipped in white wash when they were seated in the taxi.

Betty laughed jerkily. "Dick,
you're so white!"

"Well it's because I—I happen to be in love with you, Betty."

Sometime later, when Betty withdrew to look for lipstick on Dick's collar, Dick said, "I've got something to tell you. My name's not Smith."

"Mine's not Brown either," said Betty.

"I ran away to keep from meeting a girl," said Dick.

"I ran away to keep from meeting a man," said Betty.

They looked at each other again.

"You see my father made some kind of foolish agreement with this girl's father that the girl and I should marry as soon as we were old enough. Naturally I wasn't going to let him pick my wife, and to keep the girl from embarrassment I hid here. It's a wonder the old boy didn't find me—he's a fighter."

"My father made an agreement
breathlessly.

They looked at one another a moment. "Say, what's your real name?"
they demanded of each other in the same breath.

"Mine's Betty Westerly."

"Mine's Dick Montague."

hot jars and seal. Let stand for several weeks before using.

Baked Apple Salad: Pare and core 16 medium sized red cooking

TOMORROW

... and its new ways

What discoveries are around the corner—what things, undreamed of today, will be common-places tomorrow? The past has seen products once rare and unknown become widespread and familiar. The future will see the process repeated.

Advertising is the driving force which brings about these changes in your life. For when a new produce is developed, its distribution is limited until the advertiser tells you about it.
When the product is known, you and all your neighbors form a great potential market, permitting quantity production. Economies in manufacture result—and the article comes within the reach of everybody. It has happened before—and it will happen again in the same way.

Read the advertisements. They are of vital importance to you. Your homes and habits are changed by advertised goods.
What things novel, interesting, modern—will be offered next?
You will find new horizons in the advertising pages of this newspaper.

Six pit type sanitary toilets have been built on farms in Tyler county at costs averaging less than $10 each as a result of a demonstration by the State Health Department and county agent. Many more are planned.

Chickens have brought Mr. and Mrs. Thomas J. Williams of Draw, Lynn county, more than $600 in cash this year from a flock of 269 laying hens. They have been poultry flock demonstrators working with the home demonstration agent for three years, and have made money every year, she says.

DOC TURK GETS NOTICE IN SATURDAY EVENING POST

J. Frank Dobie in a very interesting article in this week's Saturday Evening Post tells of the work of the cow hands in rounding up outlaw steers. He mentions several cowboys, among them being Doc Turk and he tells this on Doc: "Indeed the true brush hand is a brute for punishment. Coolheaded in directing his own skill, at the same time, once he hits a warm personal safety as a dog charging a bear."

"One time while Doc Turk and some other brush poppers were in swimming, their saddle horses standing on the bank, they glimpsed an outlaw steer crossing the open creek bed just below the water hole. Without hesitating a moment, Doc Turk leaped out of the water and stark naked as he was mounted his snorting horse and tore through the brush after the steer. He roped him and tied him down. Scratches and bruises meant no more to him than a gash to a dog when he smells the breath of his prey. They say that on many a cold morning his comrades have literally lifted Doc Turk into the saddle, stiff and 'stove up' from punishment administered by the brush. He knew and his comrades knew that once the chase was started, he would warm up."—Uvalde Leader News.
