Floods Spread Death And Destruction In Five States

Flood Belt Widens As Added Rainfall Overflows Streams

Disaster Said to Be Greatest in Section's History; Property Damage Mounts Into Millions

Eighteen Are Dead

Swollen Rivers Continue To Force Residents To Take To Higher Ground; Mississippi Is Up Also

(By Associated Press) KANSAS CITY, Mo., Nov. 19.—Overflowing streams are spreading death and destruction in five states tonight and the mighty Mississippi river itself was out of its banks along the borders of Missouri and Illinois.

Rainfall of unprecedented proportions for this time of year brought Kentucky and Illinois into the flood belt during the day and increased the seriousness of the situation in Missouri, while communities in Eastern Kansas and a portion of Oklahoma were recovering slowly from the most disastrous November flood on record.

Eighteen Known Dead Three deaths in Kentucky, where the Cumberland river was on a rampage, and two more reported in Kansas and another in Illinois brought the total known dead to eighteen.

Property damage already was estimated at more than $10,000,000. Several thousand families were homeless with a cold wave and snow in some places adding to their misery.

Three employees of a coal company were swept to death near Pineville, Ky., when a bridge over Cumberland river was carried away.

700 Forced to Flee Homes Swollen by thirty-six hours of rain the stream invaded the business district of Middleboro and flooded dwellings in the low parts of Both Women Ravished Both women had been ravished. Their night clothes were torn from their bodies.

The bodies were found by Reese when he returned home after work. He found his wife and sister lying face down on the floor.

The murder is believed to have been committed shortly thereafter.

College Degree Worth $92,000

DULUTH, Minn., Nov. 19.—A college degree is worth $92,000—some times. That is what it cost Samuel Vanderfoel Gilbert Saturday when the estate of his uncle, Arthur E. Gilbert, was settled in court. Ten years ago the uncle died leaving stock worth $92,000 to his nephew, providing the young man was graduated from Cornell University before he was 25 years old. Samuel couldn't produce a degree and the shares went to the former Mrs. Arthur Gilbert, now Mrs. George Stone.

Hansen slain in 1927 Hansen was slain in the asserted robbery which occurred November 23, 1927.

Death came for the aged physician quietly while he was unconscious. About his bedside, where they had kept an all night vigil, were his widow, two daughters, Mrs. Caroline Votaw, of Washington D. C., and Mrs. E. E. Remsburg, in whose home he died, and other relatives.

Flames Claim 3 Small Children

TULSA, Okla., Nov. 19.—Three children were burned to death here tonight when they were trapped in their burning home, while their mother, Mrs. Colbert Roberts, left them alone to go to a grocery store.

The dead are: Colbert, Jr., 5 years of age; Loraine, 3; and Jack, sixteen months.

Mrs. Roberts returned to the home a short time after leaving it to find the interior a blazing inferno and efforts by the mother and neighbors to rescue the children proved futile.

European Tempest Blows Into Russia

Tales of Marine Disaster Come From Devastated Regions; Death Toll Is Placed At Two-Score

LONDON, Nov. 19.—The great tempest which devastated portions of property damage on land came from the wake of the storm and additional reports were received of probably loss of life both afloat and ashore.

Takes Large Death Toll The gale took a toll of more than two-score lives and it is possible that this will be nearly doubled when details are received of some of the wrecks on the wave-lashed coast.

The fate of eleven of the crew of the steamer Eltham, wrecked on the coast of Cornwall, remained in doubt tonight.

From Stockholm came a report that a steamer was thrown on the rocks of Hernösand. It is feared all on board were lost.

One man, Frank Piccola, was hit by eleven bullets, and was in a critical condition tonight. Three others who police said were wounded were whisked away in automobiles.

The flareup occurred so suddenly persons on the street said they did not know whether automobiles were used. Police said members of two gangs "assembled from nowhere" and started blasting away with a variety of weapons.

Captain William Carey—He's Either Martyr Or Blunderer, Survivors Say

Whether Capt. William Carey, master of the ill-fated liner Vestria, was a blunderer or a martyr the world may never know and reports from survivors of the sea tragedy are in sharp discord. Some claim the captain did all any captain could have done to save his passengers and crew, while others say his direction of relief was haphazard. At any rate, he lived up to the traditions of the sea and the last man on board the Vestria, sank with his ship.

An appropriation was voted to Hale county for two-thirds of the cost of building 22 miles of grade and drainage structures through the county on Highway 28, from Lamb county to Floyd county. Cost

Radio Officers Testify That Captain Carey Failed To Send SOS Early Enough To Allow Rescue

NEW YORK, Nov. 19.—The records of two commercial wireless telegraph companies produced in court today indicated officers of the steamer Vestria made no report to their superior on land that they were in trouble at sea until after they sent out a general SOS, which was hours after there were definite signs that they were in serious danger.

And on several instances after the ship began to heel, it was shown, they reported "Nothing to communicate" to a sister ship approaching them.

Radio Officials Testify. Officials of the Radio Marine corporation and the Marconi Wireless company occupied the stand for the greater part of the fourth day's session of the federal inquiry into the sinking of the Vestria off the Virginia Capes a week ago today with the loss of more than 170 lives.

Their testimony was to the effect the captain of the ship delayed in sending a SOS until 10 o'clock Monday morning, almost a full day after he had to leave the Vestria to without advice from any source.

Fathers and Sons of Lubbock Gather In Feast Tonight

More Than 1,000 Expected To Take Part In City's Largest Father and Son Affair In Tech Gym

Plans Completed

Adults To Romp With Youngsters In Bringing Back Boyhood Memories; Big Program Prepared

Every Father in Lubbock who can be present at 6:30 o'clock tonight at the Fathers and Sons Jamboree, at the Tech college gymnasium, will long remember the affair as being one that will have made his heart glad if he has no son or sons to take to the gala blow-out set in touch with some member of the committee whose names are given in this article, and an effort will be made to furnish him with some fatherless boy who would like to attend. The names of several of these boys are in possession of the committee.

Tickets are necessary to get in to the Jamboree. A concerted, last-minute drive will be made this morning at selling these tickets, which are priced at only 25 cents per each, father or son, and this will close at noon. It is necessary that a check-up be had on how many are to be expected, in order that the cats committee, chairman of which is Alex McDonald, will know how many fatherless boys to make sandwiches out of.

In addition to the dozen or so men who will conduct this ticket drive, tickets may be purchased at either the Bowen Drug store, City Drug store, Hotel Lubbock Drug store, Hemphill-Wells Co., R. S. Furniture Co., Boy Scout headquarters or Barrier Brothers.

Program Is Announced The complete program, as announced Monday afternoon by W. W. Rix, chairman of that committee, consisted of an evening long—lack memories of boyhood days—a touch of the yesterday.

Assembly is at 6:30 p. m. Muted then by the high school band. "Ice-

Snyder Man Dies Of Gunshot Wound

Alvin Sears Is Claimed By Accident Of Unknown Nature; Companions Are Questioned

ALVIN SEARS, 25, son of E. F. Sears of Snyder, died here Sunday night, as the result of an accidental gunshot wound received last Saturday afternoon near Brownfield.

Young Sears was brought to the Lubbock sanitarium late Saturday afternoon, following the accident, but all efforts at saving his life proved futile. It is said that he picked up a gun, thought to be unloaded, and pointing it at his head, said jokingly to those who were with him that he was going to kill himself, local officers are quoted as saying.

SNYDER, Nov. 19.—The death today of Alvin Sears, 25, was expected to complicate still further efforts of officers to determine whether a gunshot wound Sears received Saturday was accidental or inflicted by another person.

Two companions who were with him at the time he was shot have made no statement. One is a woman.

Train Kills Five Year Old Twin As Mother Looks On

RANGER, Nov. 19.—H. L. Baskin, Jr., one of five year old twin sons of Mr. and Mrs. H. L. Baskin, was injured probably fatally when a Texas and Pacific passenger train crashed into his mother's automobile here today.

The mother, seeing a crash was inevitable, endeavored frantically to unlock the doors to allow the twins to escape. Unsuccessful, she jumped from the car and tried to unlock them from the outside, but the train bore down upon her before she could open them.

Mrs. Baskin and the other son, M. L. Baskin, escaped with minor injuries.

Four Boys Have Father Tonight

Here's the best Father and Son story far:

A non-resident of Lubbock, R. F. Brown, general traveling agent for the North American Life Insurance company, reading of the Fathers and Sons Jamboree for tonight, and knowing that he would be in this city, bought five tickets to the affair Monday afternoon.

Without looking to the general committee for the gala event, Mr. Brown located four fatherless boys, Albert Jones, G. W. Durham, Eugene Knox and Juel Woods, who will be his guests for the Jamboree tonight.

IN THE FLIGHT

THIS HAS HAPPENED
Fate introduces JERRY RAY, a wealthy young man, to AL-LESTER, a poor girl who has been thrown out of her home and is living in a camp. She is sharing with her roommate MYRTLE. Her heart responds to his, and she tells him that she is a poor girl, but she loves him. He tells her that he is a rich man, but he loves her. They are both happy and in love.

Unable to buy a new gown for the party Alister has invited her to, Jerry yields to the temptation to take one from the store—instead of slip it back next morning. At the party LEONTINE LE-BAUDY, who is infatuated with Alister, is responsible for the dress being ruined.

Jerry is in a panic. She confesses to the manager, who re-charges her. She seeks another job, and is surprised one evening when Dan calls on her. He proposes and she tells him love is a delusion and that she intends to marry for money. He leaves after trying to warn her.

Alister phones that he has a surprise for her and takes her to the little summer camp where he gives her orchids and a little box.
NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XXII
Jerry leaned forward and stared with bated breath at the ring Alister had disclosed. She had never seen anything more beautiful. It was a square-cut emerald set in a band of carved jade—green jade.
The clear, deep color of the stone seemed even richer and darker in contrast with the delicate opaqueness of the setting.

"To match your eyes," Alister said, holding it out to her on the palm of his hand. "Only your eyes are more beautiful, Jerry, with their golden lights that set my heart on fire."

Jerry's fingers trembled as she took the ring. She had been called yellow-eyed, green-eyed, cat-eyed, but never golden-eyed or emerald-eyed. She could not help thrilling to flattery so different from any she had ever received before.

"Let me put it on with a wish," Alister said, coming round the table to her. Jerry lifted her left hand, a little ashamed that it had brown spots during her vacation.
Alister seemed to find it satisfactory for he raised it, palm upward to his lips.

After a lingering caress he lowered it and picked up the ring that Jerry had laid on the table.

"If my wish comes true," he said,
slipping it over her third finger,
"you'll get a bracelet to match it;
the jeweler is holding it until . . ."

His words, begun softly, had risen in a swift crescendo until he reached dramatic utterance. He seemed to be carried away by his own emotion for he swept Jerry into his arms and crushed her to him while he covered her face with kisses.

She did not resist. She felt as if she belonged to him. A pang of dismay came to her with the realization that his embrace left her cold.

But she would not let her reaction influence her. Older, wiser, people had said that love comes after marriage. Such fleeting joy as she had known in Dan's arms was no more to be thought of as the foundation for a lasting marriage than a rainbow was a guide to a ship or a fleecy white cloud as a roof for your home!

Some such thoughts were Jerry's but she did not put them into words, not even to herself. It was not necessary. All her adolescent thinking culminated at this moment in a severe discipline of her soul that did not require words.

Jerry had come to the point where nothing but a love so great that it would completely overwhelm her could eradicate the effects of the fallacies she had taken to herself as truths. Such a love she would not suppose to wait a struggle. Dan Harvey's image was thus resolutely out of her mind.

"Jerry, won't you kiss me, won't you say you love me?" Alister was pleading.

Jerry stirred in an effort to move and he released his embrace.

"Jerry, we will be so happy," he went on when she did not speak.
"You will have everything you want. I'll put you where you belong, in a charming little apartment with nothing to do all day but think of me, Jerry, don't hate

England's Newest "War Bird"

Here is a new type of war plane, an all-metal plane, which has just been built for the Royal Air Force of Great Britain.

"Why do you talk to me like that?" she cried. "You know I won't listen to you. But since you've said so much let me tell you that a girl doesn't need to be a million years old to know what those few words you think so little of mean to her."

Alister essayed a smile.
"What a charming little sophis-ticate you are," he taunted her. "But if you know so much about life surely you know what a hell of a mess some girls get themselves into just through those few words."

"Yes," Jerry agreed. "I know.
I've told you I know. That's why I'm not going to marry a poor man. Oh, you might as well know it," she hurried on, stung by his smile. "I'd marry you if you asked me . . . even now, and I'm sure I hate you. But it's a lot easier to be unhappy with money than without it, and no one's happy anyway
. . ."

Alister became deaf to her pleas, abandoned himself utterly to primeval instincts. She sought desperately, frantically, to free herself.
Breath was too precious to waste in calling for help—no one was within hearing distance even if she screamed at the top of her voice.
She knew, but she would try it soon, as a last resort—before her strength failed her entirely.

She heard it before Alister did—coming from down near the beach and growing louder as it approached the house. It was a cheerful whistle, the tune a vagabond's devil-may-care air.

Jerry turned limp, a dead weight in Alister's arms. In the stillness that accompanied his surprise, he too, heard the intruder's gay little tune. And he recognized the whistler.

"You're adorable when you cry," Alister assured her. "So few girls are."

"Do you go around making them cry just to find that?" Jerry asked him caustically.

"No, just to kiss their tears away," he answered, and again Jerry found herself imprisoned in his arms. This time she resisted.
And her resistance fired Alister to greater desire.

Real fear came to Jerry then.

Hose or Lead Pipe

Risky Gas Connections

Flexible connections for gas stoves are dangerous. They are likely at any time to become leaky or disconnected with the danger of resultant injury to health and property.

This is true not only of rubber hose, but also of lead or copper-coated pipe, which bent a time or two, may crack and leak. There is this additional objection to lead or copper-coated pipe, the aperture in the usual lead pipe connection is only one-eighth inch in diameter.
A bend reduces this small diameter. The result is that an insufficient amount of gas reaches the burners. A three-eighth-inch iron pipe connection is the safest and most efficient for the ordinary room heater.

Natural gas, when properly used, not only is the cleanest, most convenient and efficient of fuels, but it also is one of the safest and most economical.

If you are in doubt regarding the safety or efficiency of your gas equipment, call our service department. It is maintained for the free use of our consumers.

Tech Judging Crew Scores Among High Teams In National

Local Team Finishes Fourth In Kansas City Contest; Two Members Are In High Scorers

The Texas Technological college stock judging team, in competition with 15 similar teams from as many agricultural colleges in the United States, at the American Royal Livestock show at Kansas City, Mo., secured two second places in individual judging and finished in fourth place in the general contest, it was learned Monday.

The three teams finishing ahead of Texas Tech were the University of Illinois, Kansas A. and M. and Oklahoma A. and M. Following Tech were Ohio State University, the University of Nebraska, and the Iowa State college. The Tech team, in winning fourth honors, was first in the cattle division, and there were only 50 points difference between them and the first prize winning team.

Return Here Wednesday
Members of the Tech team were: B. M. Carmichael, of Kenna, N. M.; Vaughan Corley, of Wolffville; Curtis A. Grimes, of Acuff; John Burroughs, Carlisle; J. A. Jackson, of Pampa; and Ronald C. Tom, of Stanton. Accompanying professor Ray C. Mowery, associate professor of animal husbandry in the Tech school of agriculture. The team will probably arrive back in Lubbock Wednesday or Thursday. Before going to Kansas City, they were in attendance at the Kansas National Livestock show at Wichita, last week and later this year will more than likely compete at the International Livestock Exposition at Chicago, largest event of its kind in the world.

The following results of the Kansas City show are listed in an Associated Press dispatch yesterday to the Avalanche, in the individual contests:

Cattle: Edward Crawford, Kansas; Curtis Grimes, Texas Technological; Sheep: G. F. Hastings, Purdue; and Harry G. Russell, tied for first, J. A. Jackson, Texas Technological; R. C. Tom, Texas Tech; and Charles A. Belter, Colorado, tied for second.

Of the eight colleges judges taking part in the contest, Curtis Grimes placed sixth and Ronald Tom eighth.

Lubbock To Have Streets Marked

Several sample street markers have been received by the Chamber of Commerce street sign committee, as a preliminary step in selecting the type of markers to be used in this city, when a new system of marking all streets has been worked out by the committee.

Other samples are to arrive and the committee hopes to arrive at a plan whereby all streets in every part of town will be plainly marked, as this is necessary in securing additional city street delivery in sections of the city not now having same.

Supreme Court Frowns On KKK

WASHINGTON, Nov. 19. (AP)—The purpose and activities of the Ku Klux Klan were criticized in severe language by the supreme court today in an opinion sustaining the New York state law prohibiting the Klan and similar oath-bound secret associations to file reports concerning their membership with the secretary of state.

Quoting other judicial decisions and a hearing before congress, the court said it was clear the Klan belonged to that class of societies which made the "secrecy" surrounding its purposes and membership a cloak for acts and conduct inimical to personal rights and public welfare.

Avalanche-Journal Makes Error In Statement

Through an error, Sunday's Avalanche-Journal stated that County Judge-elect Robert Bean had made a talk at the Saturday night meeting of "The Tax Payers," an organization formed to oppose the county-wide road bond issue to be voted on December 1. The statement should have stated that George R. Bean was the one who made the talk.

County Judge-elect Robert R. Bean stated that he has taken no part on either side of the road bond question.

CASES DISPOSED OF

The three cases set for trial this week before Judge Homer L. Pharr, in the Seventy-second district court, were disposed of Monday, and the jury called for the week was dismissed.

The week's docket before this court was disposed of so readily because of the fact that the case of G. H. Smith versus W. S. Hughes was tried and dismissed last Saturday; that of T. E. Covington et al versus W. D. Shaw was settled and dismissed, and that of John L. Scott versus C. C. Lane et al, does not need a jury trial.

COLDS MAY DEVELOP INTO PNEUMONIA

Coughs from colds may lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a medical discovery with two-fold action; it soothes and breaks the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for coughs from colds and bronchial irritations. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the inflamed membranes and stop the irritation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of coughs from colds, bronchitis and minor forms of bronchial irritations, and is especially for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. (adv.)

association, presided at the Monday community than the new Denver railroad.

The night meeting there, and between 40 and 50 voters were present. Rev. I. G. H. Williams, of Lubbock made the opening address, talking on the value of good roads. Mr. Rix was next on the program, giving facts and figures of the project, as outlined in the $2,004,000 bond issue. J. H. Hankins spoke of the importance of good roads as an adjunct to the outlying communities and Texas Technological college, stressing the fact that hundreds of farmers could live at home and attend the college daily, if good roads provided a means of driving to Lubbock.

Charles F. O'Neill spoke on good roads as a great aid to the dairyman and farmer in getting to market with their products, for which ready cash awaits their bringing in. The more trips made by these, the more cash he secures, and the need is to have an all-weather means of travel, from the farm to the market in the larger cities.

Water Is Subsidizing
At Ottawa, Augusta, Winfield, Arkansas City, Neodesha and other places in Kansas hard hit by the floods, the water was rapidly subsidizing and relief work was getting in hand. Churches, schools and lodge halls were concentration places for refugees, and the American Legion and Salvation Army were lending a hand to make them comfortable.

While the crest of the flood had passed from east and north central Refugees in the flooded areas were being cared for by local organizations, but the cold wave and snow coming on the heels of last week's torrential rains made further aid necessary to battle against the threat of disease.

At Quincey, Ill., the Mississippi river had reached flood stage and was pouring through broken levees, inundating thousands of acres of farm land. There were unverified reports that three persons had drowned. The flood from the Mississippi and its tributaries had taken a heavy toll in livestock and damage to farm lands in this area was estimated at $1,000,000.

All Streams On Rampage
The Missouri river was reaching the flood stage across the whole of Missouri and threatened inundation of a large acreage of bottom land in the vicinity of St. Louis. The Grand river and other streams were on a rampage and many rail lines and highways were blocked in the state.

The Woman's Day
Allene Sumner
By Sumner

Princess Mary of England attended a luncheon at which most of the lady guests smoked. King George and Queen Mary's only daughter turned no words in saying that she didn't like it. Smoking has stopped at all social affairs to which any woman member of the royal household is invited. The postscript, "Ladies will not be allowed to smoke," was added to invitations to a charity matinee which Princess Mary was expected to attend.

One wonders if Princess Mary really does have an aversion to the habit, or whether she feels it her duty, in deference to mass opinion, to take such a stand. No considering her bringing up by a conservative mama, she probably is really sincere about it. Still, she did insist on wearing short skirts even when her mama reproved her!

PROUD TO THE LAST

Elizabeth Marbury, one of our first "feminists," author, political leader, literary agent, dramatic producer, is now 71 years old and crippled with rheumatism. For the first time in her life she admits herself sufficiently jobless to philosophize. She says such things as: "I never crab about anything; it's very futile, and," "I attracted all the lame ducks limping around, but never a man that I wanted to marry."

There's a feminine pride to the last, the insistence that it was she who didn't want to marry them. Maybe she's speaking truth, but one has a way of observing that the "lame duck" who finds sympathy and understanding and assistance with a certain woman rushes off to marry some flatter-budged quite sans all those qualities.

"I WANT IT"

There's a dress down in Mexico valued at $22,000, a filmy, cobwebby thing which can be drawn through the proverbial ring. The dress once belonged to the wife of a president of Mexico and has been donated by its present owner to a museum. Here's what's to be seen if they can acquire ownership.

Which is an interesting commentary on the difference in men and women, especially modern men and women. Someone has observed that given enough warmth, enough food, enough tobacco, and a roof that doesn't leak, a man asks for little more. But woman so takes luxuries as her birthright that even $22,000 dresses do not seem hopelessly beyond the ken of a goodly number of them.

SOME SENTIMENT STILL

One hundred and forty-three couples were married in "The Little Brown Church in the Vale" in Nashua, Iowa, last year. The record does not compare, of course, with that of another church rich in tradition, "The Little Church Around the Corner," but, considering its isolation from the beaten track, its not a bad tribute to the power of tradition.

Refreshing, too, for the number of J. P. weddings and the like sometimes almost convince one that sentiment concerning place and circumstances of marriage is an obsolete thing.

THE COMMON COLD

The common cold which plays hob year after year with the great American family is being tracked to its lair. John Hopkins University is hunting 125 families to co-operate. The minute a cold breaks out in any of the 125 families they are to call the cold research department, which will send someone to take data and give relief. Causes of family contagion are to be seized and held up for everyone to see.

Good news this—the common cold probably causes more woe to us than any of the 125 families they are to call the cold research department, which will send someone to take data and give relief. Causes of family contagion are to be seized and held up for everyone to see.

A YEAR OF PROGRESS

IT HAS been just a year since the new Ford was introduced. At this first anniversary, it is interesting to review the record of the months just passed and see what has been accomplished.

Since December 2, 1927, nearly 750,000 new Ford cars have been built. Production has been gradually increased from a few hundred a day to 6000 a day. We expect to make 2,000,000 automobiles in 1929.

These are impressive figures. But they are only that. Figures of themselves are unimportant.

The big thing is that the new Ford has delivered a service beyond all expectations. The promise of a year ago is now an accomplished fact.

New Ford is the expression of an ideal

Our policy has always been to regard ourselves as charged with making the best automobile it is possible to make at a low price. That is our mission. We have done it for more than twenty years. The public expects us to keep on doing it.

That obligation includes good design as well as good materials. We hold it our duty to permit nothing to stand in the way of progress, yet we do not make changes simply for the sake of making them. First, it must be demonstrated that what seems like an improvement in theory is an improvement in practice.

THE new Ford has made a high place for itself because it is built on sound principles. There is nothing of an experiment about it.

The whole effort has been toward simplicity—to give you outstanding service with as little machinery as possible. That is where experience counts. Built into the new Ford is everything we have learned in the making of fifteen million automobiles.

The motor has made a remarkable record

Take the motor. It has made a remarkable record because it combines every essential feature of good performance—power, acceleration, smoothness, speed, reliability, economy and long life.

Not just acceleration. Not just smoothness. Not just speed. But the most of all of these features that can be built into a low-priced car without cutting corners or sacrificing quality anywhere along the line.

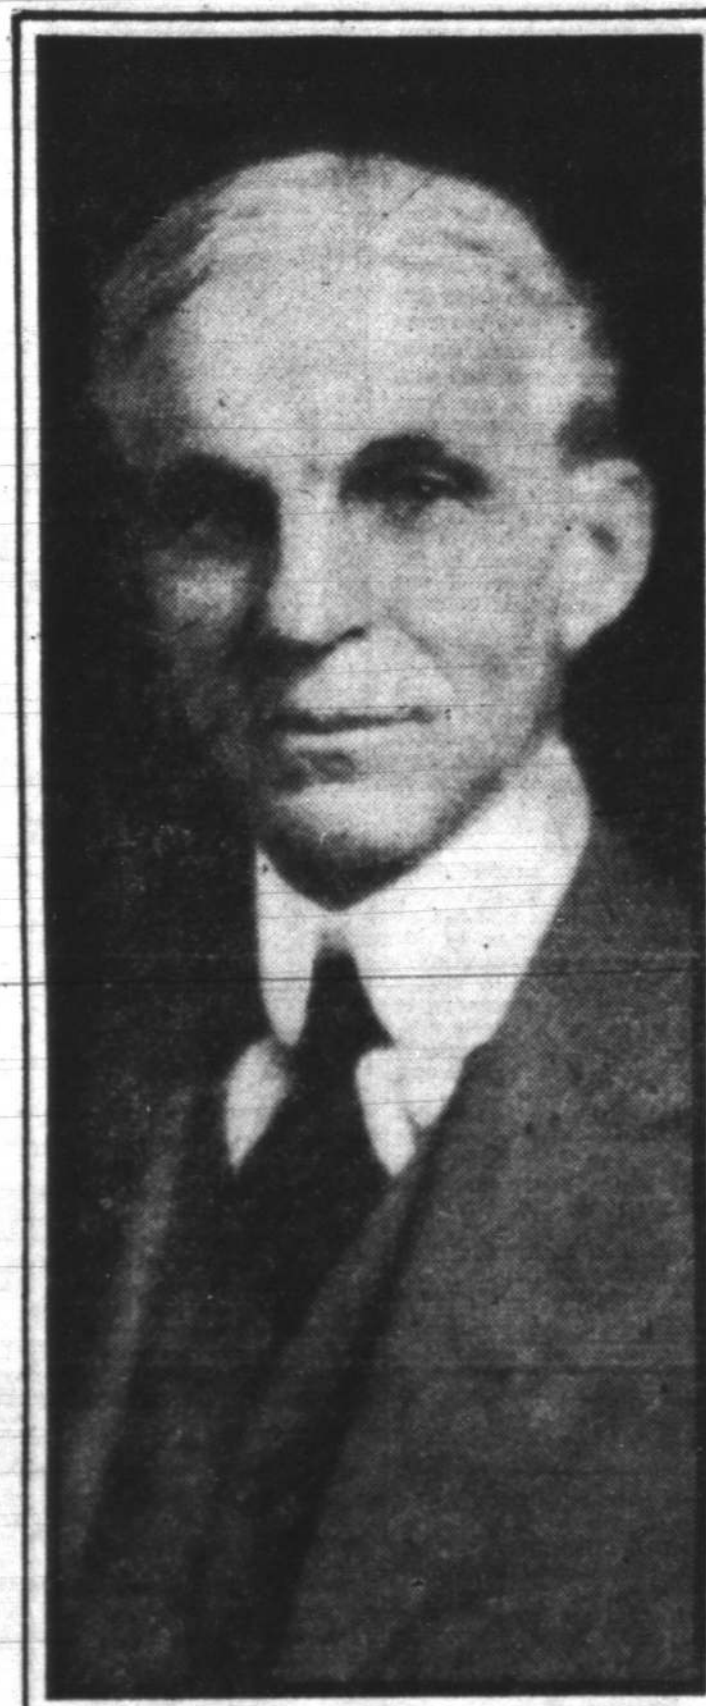

We were building more than a motor when we did this. We were fulfilling the public's trust in us to make the best selection for their use. Had any other type been better, we would have chosen that.

Value of simplicity shown in performance

Daily, in the performance of the new Ford, you can see the value of its sound simplicity of design, its balance, the care with which it is made, and the quality that has been put into it.

It will do 55 to 65 miles an hour, which is fast enough for anyone. You know how quickly it accelerates. You have seen how it climbs the hills on high. If you drive a new Ford you know its economy of operation and low cost of up-keep.

From every part of the world come reports of its reliability and endurance. Many of the new Fords have been driven 50,000 miles in "The new Ford car embodies the best results of our experience in making 15,000,000 automobiles. We consider it our most important contribution to the progress and prosperity of the country, and to the daily welfare of millions of people."

Henry Ford

In a word, the quality of the new Ford goes clear through. Nothing has been done for show. No one part has been given undue prominence at the expense of another.

Constantly making a better automobile

The new Ford was a good car when it was first introduced. We made sure of that before we asked you to buy it. It is a better car today.

Constantly we are finding new and better ways of doing things. As soon as we are sure of them we put them into the car. There is no such thing as a yearly model. Why should there be? As we make improvements, they are so planned that owners of previously built cars may take immediate advantage of them.

EVERYTHING that has been done has been done with one purpose—to bring the benefits of modern, economical transportation to all the people.

Our mission is to make the best automobile that can be made to sell at a low price. In ever-increasing measure, the new Ford is the expression of that ideal.

the past year. Some more than 100,000 miles. There is no telling how far they will go. The average life of the Model T was seven years. We believe this new car will do even better.

THE engine is the heart of the motor car, of course. Yet there are other features almost as important. We refer particularly to the safety of the fully enclosed six-brake system of the new Ford. To its really remarkable smoothness and stability at all speeds and its easy-riding comfort. To the beauty of its lines and colors. To the ease of control. To the Triplex shatter-proof glass windshield. To the electric welding that makes it such a strong and sturdy car.

OVERCOME EVIL WITH GOOD

We fear that too many people of this day and time are forgetful of the Golden Rule. They are rather inclined to do unto others as they do unto you rather than to do unto others as you would have them do unto you. We are not here to be comforted by the world into the shape of its fleeting, beguiling vanities, but to make our minds forms of truth and good, and as far as we can, conform the world to that which is of God and eternity. Be not as soft putty in the hands of the powers of externality, but take of the spirit of Him who reforms, regenerates and regenerates and shape the natural to the spiritual. This we do as we think, love, and do as the Lord taught Beelzebub cannot cast out Beelzebub, which means that evil cannot cast out evil, a common habit and in a Christian land, at that, is to attempt to cast out anger with anger. In so doing, evil increases, anger in himself and others also. Evil cannot be overcome by scolding, reprimanding, cursing, quarreling or rude treatment. In so doing evil is augmented, inflamed and spread abroad. Truth alone can remove falsity, good alone can overcome evil. Just in the degree that one uses evil he is overcome by it, for evil takes possession. Conversely as one uses kindness, forgiveness, pity, compassion, love and what is meant by good and truth, evil is overcome.

Since the World War, nations have awakened to the fact that they are interrelated. Rapid means of communication and travel are making of the continents two hemispheres and one globe. Each nation is seen as a part of a single body. A marvelous unseen power makes a unit of many members. Now it is recognized that the purpose of each member is to do its part well for the good of all. Though the good that is seen is more economic welfare, nevertheless, may become the basis of genuine spiritual good. The Lord turns the selfishness and nationalism of mankind to further the coming of His Kingdom. The external must be put in order for the descent of the spiritual life. In the general recognition of the unity of all nations, international relations is a subject much now before us. The spirit of good will should be enlarged and deepened as it is extended unto all mankind. The jealousy, selfish rivalry and evil feelings between nations must be removed for the establishment of the Lord's Kingdom. This must be done by the individuals of a nation. Each does his part as he wills the same good to others that he wishes for himself and thus overcomes evil with good.

THE CONTROL OF MARKETS

The Farm and Ranch has been a great help in fighting the battles of the people in the matter of market control, and the editor of that farm publication brings a very timely editorial on the control of the market in its issue of last Friday.

It has often been said that a few men control the markets for major farm products, and frequently denied. The charge has been made with the utmost sincerity, but there has been absence of official proof. Now comes the United States government, through the Department of Agriculture, and affirms all that has been said by those who oppose gambling in wheat, cotton or other farm products. In a technical bulletin issued by the Department, the authors of which are J. W. T. Duvel, chief, and G. Wright, consulting grain economist, they not only confirm but strengthen the conclusions reached by the study of the influence of speculation on price trends.

The study made by department economists was confined to grain because through the grain futures administration laws, necessary data was available. Officials of cotton exchanges are not required by law to reveal the extent or nature of transactions in futures, but as the same conditions are maintained in the cotton exchanges, their findings can be applied with equal force.

We quote from this department statement as follows:

Heavy trading in futures by a few leading grain speculators is frequently an important factor in grain price fluctuations. Without the accumulation of long or short lines of millions of bushels by a very few leading speculators, the major swings in price would not be so large.

Farm and Ranch is thus corroborated by the government in its charge that fluctuations in market prices are largely the result of speculation, and that its suggestion to those who seek to stabilize the market, that they look for the source of the trouble and begin their reform there, is sound logic.

These government economists went further in their investigations than that indicated in the above quotation. They traced the ups and downs of the market for wheat on the Chicago Board of Trade and proved conclusively that from two to five men are able to put the market up or down as they see fit, and that it was not necessary for them to trade in more than 1,000,000 to 3,000,000 bushels to influence the rank and file of speculators to follow their lead.

In the opinion of Farm and Ranch a complete enforcement of the Grain Futures Act would almost eliminate speculation in grain and stabilize the market. A similar act would do the same for cotton, and we urge our readers to get in touch with their congressmen and offer such a suggestion. If we could be provided with a monthly statement showing the amount of trading in cotton futures; the number of sales of actual cotton; and other details in the speculative market, the opportunity would be presented to the government to regulate the market price of the staple.

What Kind?—How long can you hold your breath, Miss Woopsey?

Miss Woopsey—Six times—Life.

A Washington Bystander

BY KIRKE L. SIMPSON

The White House.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 19. — As the democrats sit upon the ground and tell sad stories of the disaster of 1928 these post election days, it seems logical to believe that the hand of political destiny is already pointing for them to their next national leader.

The showing of Franklin Roosevelt in what he described as his "elegant horse-race" with Ottinger for the New York gubernatorial throne to be vacated by Al Smith is a significant matter. It seemed almost positive comfort the embattled and embarrased democracy could find amid the ruins that marked for the party the wake of the Hoover cyclone. So far as the Bystander knows, every political commentator takes that view of the situation and has already picked Roosevelt as the next democratic presidential candidate.

Roosevelt Headed Upward.

It was pointed out in this column at the time Roosevelt was drafted, apparently by personal action of Smith himself, for the New York governorship fight that events seemed shaping to push this democratic member of the Roosevelt clan to the front politically. With Smith proclaiming himself out of politics for keeps under his crushing defeat, and with Roosevelt victorious in a state which at the same time decisively denied its five times governor support for his presidential aspirations, the handwriting on the democratic wall is plain to see.

The Bystander recalls that Roosevelt told him at Houston, just after the Smith-Robinson ticket, had been written under Roosevelt's guidance, that in his judgment the woman vote had the answer to the election outcome. It was clear that Roosevelt was none too confident then as to what that outcome would be.

In a number of years of rather close knowledge of his political activities and thought, the Bystander has never known him to be over confident. He plays the game of politics for the sake of the game itself. His is the kind of enthusiasm for political battle that remains undimmed even in defeat. And that characteristic may be an important element of the political future.

Democracy's Prospects.

A mere glance at the 1928 results, weighed down with Hoover majorities unprecedented in size, shows that business of running for president in 1932 against Hoover presumably unanimously acclaimed by his party for a second term will require political courage of a high order. No man who fights with victory as his sole objective could be blamed for refusing to take a chance. Unless the Bystander is utterly mistaken in his man, however, Frank Roosevelt would give little consideration to that in dodging his own course.

It also is to be recalled that the political pendulum has a way of swinging back in "off" years from the ponderous strokes of presidential elections. The bye elections of 1930 will afford a better chance to measure democratic possibilities for 1932 than the disastrous results of 1928. At that time, there is some measure comfort for the democrats in the fact that their senate and house casualties this time by no means measure up to the proportions of their presidential defeat.

FASTING, AS CURE FOR EPILEPSY, IS UNPROVED

BY DR. MORRIS FISHER

Editor Journal of the American Medical Association

And of Hygiene, The Health Magazine

In 1921 the suggestion was first made from a scientific source that starvation as a method of treatment would have beneficial effects in epilepsy.

This disease has been known almost since the beginning of time. It is described in ancient Roman works as the "falling" disease and it was described by Hippocrates as the sacred disease because people in his time believed that it represented a special act of some higher power.

For many centuries men have grasped at every possible hope with a view to controlling its manifestations. Today it is known that the number of convulsions may be controlled by certain drugs, but this is no cure, merely temporary relief.

A Number of Diets.

All sorts of special diets have been tried, including milk diets, vegetarian diets, meat diets, salt-free diets and similar combinations, but again without sufficient scientific evidence to establish any one of them as specifically valuable.

In many cases in which digestive disorders were present, proper attention to diet and bowel action has resulted favorably, as it would result favorably in a person with such conditions who did not have epilepsy.

The starvation method was offered as a specific method and in the seven years that have passed hundreds of persons have fasted from a period of a few days to a period of several weeks in an attempt to test its virtues.

Many investigators have reported a lessened number of convulsions or a reduction in the severity of the convulsions during the fast. However, as a method of cure, the starvation treatment has been disappointing and its result essentially negative.

During the scientific investigation of the method, however, it was found that abstinence from food was associated with the production in the body of a condition called ketosis, associated with the appearance of certain chemical substances in the blood. This condition could be induced by feeding a person a diet which contained large amounts of fat as compared with the amount of sugar taken into the body.

Extensive studies are now being made on the use of such diets, and it is found that they will secure results just as good as can be secured by fasting without the associated general disturbances and mental attitudes that are the accompaniment of starvation. The new diet is called ketogenic diet because of the substances that it produces.

More Black Hand Trouble

SO THINK WE

We think the weatherman handles the weather just about right, though it certainly does not suit many of us.

We think some people made an effort to get local mention out of Will Rogers when they cast their vote for him for president. That is just about all the interest some people take in the election anyway. It is a sacred trust, and the election should be one of serious, manly thought.

We think it is mighty fine to be popular, but when the popular vote does not count, then we can't see that it will get anyone anywhere.

We think that people should be extremely careful in what kind of a scheme they jump onto. Most of them are treacherous.

We think Wednesday will be a big day in Lubbock with six train loads of people who are coming here to celebrate the arrival of the Denver in Lubbock, and in addition to that there will be about five hundred teachers and delegates in the homes of Lubbock people, which will make Lubbock a double host. We are equal to the occasion, however.

We think it won't be long now till the football team will all be ready to settle down to study of their books. We imagine they have quite a hard time getting their minds on their studies when they are continually thinking of Progs and Tigers, and Coyotes, Buffaloes, Wildcats and Westerners and Wildbeasts, and all those kind of wildbeasts.

We think those who have rubber hose connections on their gas heaters should remember that if the gas inspector calls and finds a double cut off on the stove, it may cost you a penalty. You should at once dispose of the cut off on the end of the hose next to the stove. This is the one that is condemned.

We think a great many people talk entirely too much about things that they know nothing about. We believe we have heard the rankest kind of misrepresentations by people on both sides of the road bonds. We do not mean the fellows that have given these issues real honest to goodness study, but that class of people who make such statements and know not what they are talking about.

We think the Roosevelt Dispatch is possibly as right as a fox. That newspaper wants New Mexico to select a bird as an emblem for the state. It has been rather bothered about the kind of bird that they should select, but it has settled it now. It suggests that the state choose that bird who said that Dick Dillon was not a politician. But after all that, a good winner. It is a very unsettled shade by not giving us a name for the bird.

We think a very large crowd of Matador fans will want to journey over to Canyon to see the battle between the Matadors and the Buffaloes, and this is only right, and they should have the close backup of every Lubbock fan. They will no doubt be winners in the contest, and even if they are not, they are good losers. A good loser is a much better man than a good winner. Anyone can say nice things when everything is running smoothly.

We think the high school Westerners have made a mighty fine record in football, and they have actually made it without any great amount of boosting from the Lub-

The Way Of The World

BY GROVE PATTERSON

To find a real civilization George Bernard Shaw says we must turn to the bees and the ants. They live in a civilized country. Even in the ant and bee country it is doubtful, Shaw thinks, whether every insect really knows what it's all about. Probably most of them are just working under orders, like human beings.

Human beings work under all sorts of orders. Most of the instructions come from our instincts. Few have a clear picture of the universe and its workings. Few have even an intelligent theory of the world and life and the plan of existence.

A NEW GLASS WORLD

Pow things more interesting in the industrial realm than the change in glass. In a few years we have seen out glass go almost out of use and all sorts of interesting varieties come into use. Now E. C. Rely, professor of chemistry in Liverpool, England, announces an unbreakable glass. It is not merely non-chatterable, it is non-breakable. It can be molded to any form and turned like a piece of wood.

It is still some time too early to look up the patent office.

UNSEEN STEPS

A young man in a neighboring city a few days ago was a guard in the criminal courts building. Today he is a lawyer and an assistant to the state's attorney. Looks like quick overnight work. Looks like a pull. But we don't see the steps by which men rise. They are often hidden steps. They are toilsomely climbed through the years. This young man had been studying law by nights and had been working at a common job by day. He sensed the capacity of his own mind. He put it to work. He used what he had. He made himself productive—mostly by not being lazy.

DE-BUNKING

A modern movement which ought to have our close attention is the de-bunking movement. There is so much of interesting, snappy, startling, attractive statement that passes for truth. We hear things, say things, believe things that simply aren't so. One reason we believe them is that we like to think they are true. Another reason we believe some things is that we fear they are true, and haven't interest enough to look up the facts.

back people. They have played some of the best games of the season on the Tech gridiron, and we congratulate this aggregation of ball players in putting over such a successful schedule.

We think with the continued building program that is going on in Lubbock, there need be no uneasiness about her dropping far down in the scale of building permits, for Lubbock just keeps on growing.

We think it will be quite a thrill to the Lubbock people to be able to ride a Denver train out of Lubbock and back. They have been waiting for several months on this service, but everything comes to those who wait.

We think the fellows who have the biggest store of experience in stinky with putting out much advice.

We think there have been many laws passed to try to keep people from making a fool of themselves, but it never seems to be enforced.

PUBLIC OPINION

BOND ISSUE ENORMOUSLY LARGE

$2,000,000.00 is one-tenth of the valuation of all the property in our county. The first cost of these roads, the principal of the bonds, the initial mortgage covers 10 percent of all we have. The interest on these bonds by the end of thirty years will much more than the principal.

If this proposition carries we are not only mortgaging 25 percent of all our property, but it will actually cost one-fourth of all real estate and personal property in the county before this debt is liquidated. This does not include one cent to maintain county roads. Are you willing to invest 25 percent of what you are worth now and what you expect to be worth in the next thirty years in roads?

Every dollar of this bond expense, both principal and interest, leaves our county never to return, will not be in circulation at home. People can you pay your taxes under these circumstances and live?

Bad Business

According to the figures of the "Good Roads" boosters themselves, more than $274,000 of this borrowed money will be spent to construct county roads. They admit that these roads will be of an inferior type for they say these will be hard-surfaced while the highways will be paved. How long will these pitifully helpless county roads serve us without maintenance? Ask the people who have observed this type of road to the central and eastern part of the state. Or better still ask our citizens who have experienced this very thing farther east. They will tell you that at the end of three years such roads have invariably been in worse condition than our present dirt roads.

These men will tell you from actual experience that if we undertake the up-keep of these roads it will require an unreasonable cost, an unbearable expense. Are you going to listen to these town boosters who pay very little tax and have no experience or good judgment to share with us and let them rush us into this awfully serious condition that many other counties have already experienced, and from which they are now suffering pitifully?

Unjust

This immense investment is extremely unjust. First, because it purports to build county roads in the east part of the county where the people in the south part, the west half and the north part can never have any part in them, except themselves, their children and grand children to pay the tax for thirty or forty years. Second, because the votes of our sister city have been bargained for at the expense of the citizenship of all other parts of the county.

Political Booses

The philanthropists who are giving so much of their time and talent to promoting this "Good Roads" cause are spending $2,500 of the peoples tax money, hard-earned blood money is a better term, they say to educate the dear people to vote for this bond issue.

They are filling the columns of our daily paper and flooding the county with all kinds of boosting literature. Much of this so-called "facts and figures" are so highly exaggerated and stretched that you can see through them and in other instances they tell only a small part of the truth and leave the much larger part untold.

Listen, this year a few political party boosters met and nominated two candidates for president. But the people studied the proposition for themselves and elected our high-

VALUABLE SEEN AS NECESSARY DESPITE MOTORIZATION OF THE ARMY

(By MAJOR GENERAL H. B. CROSBY, Chief of Cavalry, U. S. Army)

(Herbert Ball Crosby was born at Fairmount, Mass., Dec. 24, 1871. He was graduated from Englewood high school, Chicago, and the United States Military Academy, West Point, N. Y., in 1893. He was a second lieutenant in the cavalry and has been steadily promoted since, being appointed chief of cavalry with the rank of major general in 1926. He served in Cuba during the Spanish-American war and in France during the World War. His home is in Washington, D. C.)

Although increased motorization and mechanization of the army can aid its efficiency, it will never be possible for tanks, armored cars and armored airplanes to completely take the place of the cavalry.

The horse soldier, like the foot soldier, can not be replaced by any machine, as yet developed, nor is it anticipated that any such machine will be developed. So long as there are marshes to cross, rivers to swim, woods to pass through, or mountains to climb, just so long will the cavalryman and the infantryman be necessary. Tanks, tankettes, armored airplanes, smoke projectors, gas and all modern means of warfare in use, or still to be adopted, cannot take the place of the man and the horse. They supplement the efforts of the man and the horse, but they do not replace them.

As to equipment and material, the condition and state of preparation of all regular cavalry units showed improvement during the past year. Newly adopted types of equipment and material are being supplied as promptly as appropriation of funds therefore permit.

The machine gun with which our cavalry is equipped lacks any means for converting it promptly into a weapon against attack aviation. Although for some years the question of a suitable adapter for the machine gun has been a matter of study, so far nothing has been produced to remedy this serious deficiency. Several simple, inexpensive devices are being considered, and it is hoped that during the coming year all cavalry machine guns will be equipped with satisfactory anti-aircraft devices.

Recognizing the necessity for equipping our cavalry with suitable weapons for defense against hostile tanks and armored cars, I have initiated experiments toward the adoption or development of a suitable weapon for the purpose. It is hoped to secure a weapon capable of being carried on a pack animal, so that the mobility of the weapon will approximate that of the cavalry horse. Experiments along this line are now being conducted by the cavalry board.

PARTING

Too fair, I may not call thee mine:
Too dear, I may not see
Yet, Darling, keep for me—
My life to light, my lot to heaven.
One little corner of thy Heaven.

Good-by, dear heart! I go to dwell
A weary way from thee:
Our first kiss is our last farewell;
Yet, Darling, keep for me—
Who wanders outside in the night,
One little corner of thy light.

Payne To Start Basketball Practice Tonight; Fresh Only Team In City That Works Monday
