THREATENS ALL OKLAHOMA WITH MARTIAL LAW

'I'LL BREAK KLAN POWER,' WALTON NOW DECLARES

Grand Dragon Hurls Defiance at Governor In Statement

SITUATION BITTER

Walton Promises Pardon To Those Shooting When Attacked

By The Associated Press.

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla., Sept. 7.—The entire state of Oklahoma was threatened with martial law today by Governor J. C. Walton co-incident with a challenge thrown to him that he would never be able "to break the power of the Ku Klux Klan in Oklahoma."

Charging that the drive being conducted by the executive in Tulsa county against mob floggers was inspired by Walton's desire to make himself "a national figure," N. W. Jewett, grand dragon of the Oklahoma realm of the klan, declared that the governor "would like to drop the iron that has grown too hot for him to hold right now if he could."

Jack Walton cares nothing for the men that have been whipped; his fight is on the klan," Jewett asserted.

Voicing his unshaken determination to "restore the supremacy of the law in this state," the governor said:

"I realize that the conflict with the with the lawless element and lawless spirit of the large groups of Oklahoma's citizens is a desperate one; that my enemies will use every weapon at their command, including the press, where they can command it, grand juries and other agencies, to defeat the purpose of this administration."

Grand Dragon Attacks.

In a bitter attack on the executive, Grand Dragon Jewett charged, "Jack Walton entered the kitchen of the klan, but he never got any further and that is one of the principal causes of his fight on the klan." Jewett alleged that Walton had been "obligated" in the klan at the capital by Minor Merriweather, formerly a kleagle at Muskogee, adding "that is as far as he ever got." The Oklahoma City organization rejected the governor, Jewett charged.

Answering allegation from the governor's office that only the klan has been found responsible for Tulsa county floggings, Jewett declared that klan repudiated the few "weaklings" of its membership who had become involved in masked violence. "The klan has ever advocated enforcement of the law," he said.

In line with governor Walton's advice to citizens to arm and "shoot to kill" when attacked by mobs, state police commissions were issued today to several Comanche county farmers, according to Aldrich Blake, the governor's counsellor.

"Persons who have been threatened by mob violence will be given commissions to protect themselves," said Blake.

A full pardon to any person convicted for shooting members of mobs has been promised by Governor Walton.

State Moves To Remedy Cotton Labor Shortage

By The Associated Press.

AUSTIN, Texas, Sept. 7.—Labor Commissioner Joseph S. Myers will this week go to Dallas and Fort Worth to make a detailed survey of harvest labor needs in north and central Texas. He is taking steps to divert cotton pickers from fields in south Texas, as fast as the cotton is picked out, to avert a labor shortage in the principal cotton sections of central and north Texas.

Demand for pickers is so general, Mr. Myers said, that up to this time there has been no definite movement of harvest labor. When laborers are rounded up in the cities to be sent to fields, it is only a question of getting to the city limits and going to work, he said. Later, and during the coming week, there will be a large demand for pickers in the northwest section of the state, it said.

FOUR PRINCIPAL POINTS SETTLED STATES PINCHOT

Participants on Both Sides Now Believe Agreement Near

By The Associated Press.

HARRISBURG, Pa., Sept. 7.—Complete agreement upon the main points at issue between anthracite operators and miners upon the basis of Governor Pinchot's peace proposals, was reached here today. Joint negotiations to make the agreement effective in a new wage contract and to clear up outstanding difference of lesser importance between the two sides were called for 7 o'clock tonight.

All participants in the negotiations believe that a settlement will be effected and that the anthracite mines, now shut down by union order will be re-opened within ten days. Governor Pinchot, discussing the still unsettled points, declared there is "no point of dispute remaining between the two sides which is in any way likely to justify a continuation of the strike."

The miners and operators representatives adjourned at 11:04 tonight after having been in session since 7 o'clock this evening to met again at 11 a. m. tomorrow without having come to any agreement. Governor Pinchot, in a statement, said excellent progress had been made and "both sides were showing a strong disposition to reach an agreement."

The discussion has dealt principally with matters not covered by the four points of the settlement terms, Governor Pinchot said. "Excellent progress has been made toward a final agreement. Both sides are showing a strong disposition to reach an agreement as rapidly as the questions at issue will permit."

Much of the session was devoted to consideration of the demand for increased earnings for mine laborers.

"ALL LOOK ALIKE TO ME," SAYS HODGINS

"I want it distinctly understood that I shall see that any boy or bunch of boys who disturb the peace or otherwise violate the law will be locked up and made to pay a fine no matter who they are. I am informed a young man who resisted arrest last night said he couldn't be taken to jail because of 'who he was'."

This statement was made by Police Chief Hodgins Friday following the encounter about 2 o'clock Friday morning between a patrolman and two nightwatchmen with about 20 boys, when one of their number was resisting being taken to the police station by the officers. The quarrel was interrupted by officers.

Other boys crowded around the police officers and blocked their path to the city jail. After much argument the boy under arrest was released to his companions.

Chief Hodgins Friday was trying to find out the name of the boy who resisted the officer. Chief Hodgins said Friday, the right one, if arrested, will be charged with disturbing the peace and resisting an officer.

A. R. Salmon, cafe proprietor, says the trouble did not start in his place of business, as was stated yesterday morning, but began on the outside. "We do not permit that sort of thing in our restaurant" he said. "The best of order is maintained there."

Weeks Cannot Stop Martial Law In Tulsa

By The Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 7.—Secretary Weeks in a telegram sent today to Representative Howard, of Oklahoma, declared that in "declaration by the governor of a state of martial law or that an insurrection against the government of the state exists is a matter in which the war department can not intervene."

"The national guard of a state when not in the service of the United States," the secretary of war's telegram continued, "not subject to the orders of the war department, but is exclusively under the control of the authorities of the state. I find nothing in the federal constitution or statutes that would warrant intervention by the secretary of war in the premises."

The message was sent in reply to one from Representative Howard, requesting the war department to investigate the use of Oklahoma national guard units in the enforcements of Governor Walton's proclamation of martial law in Tulsa county. "The secretary's telegram was sent after he had obtained an opinion in the matter from Major General Betzel, judge advocate.

No Moderation—Walton.

By The Associated Press.

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla., Sept 7. No moderation of martial law in Tulsa county is contemplated; on the contrary, if any new order is issued in the situation it likely will be the promulgation of military rule throughout the state, Governor Walton declared here today in a formal statement to the press.

The governor declared that the extent to which legal agencies of the state have been broken down is appalling and that the numerous acts of mob violence that have not been punished is "utterly amazing," he added that he is determined to restore the supremacy of the law in Oklahoma "without which the state cannot maintain its place in the forefront on the American commonwealths."

SUCKED INTO PIPE MAN IS DROWNED

Special to The Record News.

ELECTRA, Texas, Sept. 7.—D. M. Carter, 55 years old, was drowned about noon today at the Waggoner refinery reservoir on Beaver creek under unusual circumstances. Carter was working on a water pipe line and went down in six feet of water to put a bucket over the eight inch pipe line in order that he might repair the line.

The supposition is that the suction of the water pipe caused him to lose his footing and that the intake drew him to the mouth of the pipe. His right leg was drawn into the pipe, and it was necessary to reverse the pump to get him out. He was dead when his body was brought to the surface.

Mr. Carter is survived by his widow and three children. He was well known here, and formerly operated the X-Ray dairy at this place.

STATE CHIEF OF DRY LEAGUERS IS STRUCK DOWN

Mystery Is Connected With Assault By Man Who Paid Fine

By The Associated Press.

DALLAS, Sept. 7.—Rev. Atticus Webb, president of the Anti-Saloon league in Texas, and a prohibition worker of national repute, was beaten up by a man this evening.

The Rev. Webb was attacked as he was leaving his office building.

Shortly after the attack, a man gave his name A. D. Carey, walked into police headquarters and paid a fine of $5 for fighting.

While the league president waited in the corridor of the district attorney's office with his head bandaged up charges of aggravated assault were filed against A. D. Carey and his wife, Mrs. A. D. Carey of Fort Worth in Judge W. N. Coombs' county court at law.

"I just hit a man," he explained.

His efforts in behalf of prohibition law enforcements and against a band of bootleggers may have actuated the attack, Mr. Webb said later.

The prohibition campaigner's left eye was discolored, his right cheek bruised, his head cut and his ribs bruised. After being felled by the first blow, he was struk down on each attempt to arise, he said. His assailant then fled, he concluded.

ANTI-KLANSMEN PUT UP REWARD

By The Associated Press.

CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas, Sept. 7.—Anti-klansmen of Nueces, San Patricio, and Jim Wells counties are raising a fund, which is expected to reach nearly $5,000 as a reward to be offered for the return of the Rev. J. T. Renfro, of Sinton, who has been missing since August 22. The Rev. Renfro was a national lecturer for the ku klux klan, and had made many enemies during his various tours over the state in the interests of the klan.

The reward is being made up, it is understood here, on account of a rumor that has been circulated that some person from this section had followed the Sinton pastor to San Antonio, and had either slain or kidnapped him. Anti-klansmen are of the opinion that the Rev. Renfro has not been killed, and are offering the reward, it is said, in an attempt to disprove any connection with the case. In case, however, that it is found that he has been killed, it is said that the fund will be offered as a reward for the apprehension of his slayer.

PROPOSALS FOR GREECO-ITALIAN MUDDLE MADE

Council of Ambassadors Send Note to Greek Government

DEMANDS MODIFIED

Allied Delegates Unanimously Endorse Text Of Document

By The Associated Press.

PARIS, Sept. 7.—The council of ambassadors sent a note to the Greek government today embodying proposals for settlement of the Greco-Italian controversy. The proposals somewhat modify the demands made upon Greece by Premier Mussolini. While they have not been officially disclosed, it is understood they contain the following terms:

First—The Greek fleet to pay honors to the Italian naval squadron at Piraeus, which shall be accompanied by a British and French warship; the Greek fleet saluting the interallied flags with 21 guns; the interallied ships to enter port without saluting.

Second—A memorial service to be held in the Catholic church, attended by all the members of the Greek. During the services, the ships in the harbor will fly their flags at half mast.

Third—Military honors to be paid when the bodies of the victims are placed on board ship.

Fourth—Greece to deposit the sum of 50,000,000 lire as a guarantee for the payment she may be called upon to make.

Fifth—An international commission presided over by a Japanese shall control the Greek investigation.

The text, which was sent to the Greek government at Athens, received the unanimous endorsement of the allied representatives, but beyond saying: "The council has reached an important, perhaps decisive, stage in settlement of the conflict," no information with an official stamp was available.

Baron Avezzenno, the Italian ambassador, made no pretence of hiding his satisfaction as he left the meeting this afternoon. He told the Italian correspondent that the decision would likely find favor in Rome. Questioned as to what welcome the note would receive in Athens, the ambassador replied that it was not for him to say. But the general impression among the other members of the council was that Greece will obey the instructions which it can do without loss of prestige as would have been the case had the ultimatum been accepted.

It is understood that the council decided to appoint a committee to investigate the murder of the Italian members of the commission, which will be headed by a Japanese. The question of indemnity, it is understood, would be held in abeyance, until this report is made to the ambassador's council, providing that Greece maintains its offer to deposit 50,000,000 lire as security for paying the amount the council fixes.

Pink Underwear Bought By Pastor Who Disappeared?

SAN ANTONIO, Texas, Sept. 7. Pink silk underwear and a check for $5.45 which was returned marked "insufficient funds" today were listed as clues by police in the mysterious disappearance of Rev. J. T. Renfro, a Baptist preached from Sinton, Texas. Renfro disappeared while in this city a few days ago.

The check was given a haberdashery when the Rev. Renfro purchased the pink underwear. Following the purchase of the underwear the pastor sold his automobile which was standing outside, to M. F. Huber, one of the clerks employed in the establishment.

While the search for the missing pastor has shifted to North Texas his wife, on a visit to relatives in Gadston, Ala., has wired the ministerial union here to forward information regarding his disappearance. Reports received from Corpus Christi where Renfro made headquarters state that the account of a memorial hospital, for which he was raising funds, are in perfect order.

Renfro's disappearance occurred while he was resting in this city It first became known when the police found three handbags on the bank of the San Antonio river and notified his relatives at Sinton. He has been missing three weeks.

FAIR LEADERS MAKE PROGRESS

Oklahoma Shows Co-Operative Spirit

By FRED REASER
Staff Correspondent

DUNCAN, Okla. Sept. 7.—The Texas-Oklahoma fair is being sold to this section of Oklahoma by a Wichita delegation which is telling the whole world what is going to happen at that city the week of October 1 to 7.

In return, Oklahoma towns visited on the trip are reciprocating with a spirit of co-operation which the fair leaders believe is going to result in one of the largest exhibitions attempted in this section of Oklahoma and Texas.

Oklahoma cities and towns visited Friday after the caravan left Wichita Falls early in the morning were Randlett, Temple, Marlow and Duncan. At each of these places a singing concert was given by the Wichitans and speeches made by R. E. Shepherd and W. S. Curlee. Each of these cities pledged their support to the fair and all promised large delegations would be in attendance.

Friday noon the trippers were given a banquet by the Duncan chamber of commerce which went over in due and approved form, with plenty to eat and every accessory necessary for such an occasion provided for. Frank Fuqua, president of the Duncan chamber of commerce, gave the address of welcome. W. S. Curlee of Wichita Falls responded. R. E. Shepherd in a talk on co-operation enumerated the numerous things northwest Texas and Oklahoma had in common, urging a continued joint spirit of enterprise between the two sections. I. A. Morton, secretary of the Duncan chamber of commerce was toastmaster.

At Duncan this afternoon during a ball game between Duncan and Bristow, the umpire called the game long enough between the fourth and fifth innings for Shepherd to address the ball game crowd and tell them about the Texas-Oklahoma fair.

After the Duncan banquet the caravan treked on to Marlow to meet members of civic organizations and chamber of commerce. A good part of the afternoon was spent in visiting the Marlow exhibitions.

The trippers returned to Duncan to spend the night and expect to arrive in Wichita Falls about noon Saturday.

At Marlow this evening another wonderful feed awaited the Wichita Falls crowd. They were the guests of the fair association at a sumptous feast, the hour being 6:30 o'clock. Following the dinner the Wichita Falls Falls crowd paraded the streets for an hour singing.

With the fair at Marlowe in full swing the visitors saw much to interest them. Two thousand dollars in prizes for agricultural exhibits and lixe livestock are being offered. As the streets are filled with concessions and entertainment of various kinds it gives the town a very gala appearance. Tonight the Wichita Falls trippers were entertained with a dance at the Marlowe country club until almost midnight.

The singing of the Wichita Falls crowd was a hit at both Duncan and Marlowe and R. E. Shepherd has distinguished himself as a soloist, his favorite number being "Yes, We Have No Bananas."

The Wichita Falls men are delighted with the reception they have received.

INDICT POLICE IN FLOG PROBE

Port Arthur Affair Involves Many Officials—Chief Disappears

By The Associated Press.

BEAUMONT, Texas, Sept. 7.—Indictments returned in the court of District Judge E. A. McDowell included four city officials of Port Arthur and are the outgrowth of two flogging parties held in the county early in August. Seven were taken in charge by Captain Roy Nichols of the Texas ranger force. Two other warrants are to be served. According to Captain Nichols one of these warrants is for Chief of Police W. W. Covington, who has not been located up to a late hour tonight. It was said that he was seen driving towards Houston last night. Captain Nichols seemed to be under the impression that Covington is not trying to avoid arrest.

Fred White assistant city attorney; M. E. Bailey, assistant chief of police; W. L. Pool, policeman, Ernest Broadwsy, J. H. Davis, L. E. Byrns, C. B. Whittington and H. E. McBride were arrested and made bonds in the sum of $500 with the exception of the last named, who was required to make $3,000 bond. All of the men are charged with being principal or accomplices in the flogging of Clay and Carl Dunn at Port Arthur on August 17, with the exception of McBride, whose indictment in in connection with the flogging of A. A. King on August 9. King said he found himself minus $300.

The flogging of Carl and Clay Dunn brothers, attracted wide attention. Clay Dunn has been detained at the Port Arthur city jail following the killing of Detective B. A Harris. It was thought that he might give some evidence valuable to the state. Carl Dunn came to his brothers' rescue and when he appeared at the jail and offered to make bond, Clay Dunn was released on his own recognizance. As they stepped from the jail door, they were seized and taken to the country and beaten. Carl Dunn lost several teeth and was otherwise bruised. Both men were laid up for several days.

The King episode did not become public until today. He said that a party of men had taken him into the woods, slashed his groin and sand paper him thereabouts and then poured iodine over the wounds.

Rangers To Clean All Texas Towns If Officers Don't

By The Associated Press.

DALLAS, Texas, Sept. 7.—Texas rangers will direct clean up drives in every county in the state where officials are negiligent and where law enforcement is at a low ebb, Adjutant General Thomas D. Barton, active head of the ranger force, declared today.

"We've got our hook in at San Antonio and it's going to stay there indefinitely," he said. "As the ranger force is made up of only 50 men, 15 of whom stay on the border all the time, it is easy to see that until we finish in Bexar, chances of similar crusades elsewhere are slim."

General Barton stopped off in Dallas while on his way to Amarillo.

He and his men immediately removed the injured, they were carri: to Plain Dealing and railroad station converted into a hospital. U.S. GOVERNMENT INDICTS TEXAS OIL PROMOTERS

Butler Perryman Center Of Sensational Charges Involving Millions

Authorities Declare All Companies Involved Are Insolvent

By The Associated Press.

HOUSTON, Sept. 7.—Alleged promotion schemes involving consolidation of eleven oil companies capitalized at many millions of dollars were revealed here this evening in the second of three indictments brought against oil operators by the federal grand jury. With the arrest of the last man named in the indictment, details of the charges which the men face were made public.

Butler Perryman, Houston oil promoter, is the central figure in what the government alleges to be a gigantic swindle of small investors over the country.

Companies Named.

The government charges that the Blue Bird Oil corporation, capitalized at $5,000,000 under a Delaware charter, and the Big Gusher Oil company, with a capitalization of $10,000,000, and also chartered in Delaware, were the instruments used by Perryman to inaugurate and carry on a huge stock selling scheme, glittering promises of dividends were made to lure investors.

Many letters and circulars, alleged to have been sent through the mails bearing Perryman's signature, are attached to the indictment.

The companies which it is charged Perryman secured control for purposes of promoting, include:

Blue Bird Oil corporation, chartered in Delaware, capital $5,000,000, evidenced by 50,000,000 shares with a par value of 10 cents each, 40,000,000 of which has been previously issued to J. A. Whitten and J. H. West, and about 47,000,000 of which were owned by West, Whitten and Henry C. Hoffman.

Big Gusher Oil company, incorporated in Delaware, capital $10,000,000 par value of stock 10 cents; 10,000,000 shares alleged to have been issued to the Bankers' Bond and Mortgage company, which it charged, was owned principally by Henry C. Hoffman. Majority of stock alleged to have been owned by Hoffman and the Bankers' Bond and Mortgage company.

Union National Oil company, incorporated in Delaware, capital $1,000,000, par value of stock 10 cents.

Ranger Comanche Oil company, Delaware corporation, capital $1,000,000, par value 10 cents.

Postal Oil association, joint stock company, said to have been organized by Butler Perryman; amount of capital and par value of stock unknown to the grand jury.

Houston Oil and Refining company, joint stock association, capital $1,000,000, par value of stock $1. Alexander W. Perryman alleged to have owned 300,000 shares of the stock.

International Oil association, charter unknown, capital $1,000,000, par value $10. Said to have been organized by Edwin O. Gleen, L. L. Mahan and L. B. Hancock, who were its trustees. Amount of stock issued and ownership unknown.

First National Oil company, Texas corporation, capital $350,000, par value of stock one cent. Of 35,000,000 shares issued 34,980,000 are alleged to have been made out to Leg C. Hamblet, and it is charged that he and Robert C. Russell and R. D. Hamblet retained 3,000,000 shares.

Turnbow Production company, Delaware corporation, capital $3,000,000, par valug $1. Full stock capitalization issued and 2,005,000 shares retained by Turnbow, it is alleged.

Some of the companies named in the indictment had certain assets left, the grand jury declares, but other had "practically ceased operating and all of them were insolvent were operating at a profit."

"Merely Sold Stock."

It is also charged that "each and all purported to be incorporated and organized for the purpose of mining and selling oil, but have been operating more largely to sell stock."

In the indictment, Perryman is alleged to have purchased 47,000,000 shares of stock in the Blue Bird company for $100,000, giving in payment two promissory notes for $33,333.33, and one promissory note for $20,333.34, all due two years after date and a small amount of personal property, representing the difference between the $100,000 purchase price and the three notes.

By The Associated Press.

AUSTIN, Texas, Sept. 7.—Amory pay amounting to $104,567 was given Texas National Guard units for the three months, Aphil, May and June, according to records of the adjutant general's department. The pay was for amory drills alone, and did not cover later encammments.

CRUSOE NOT A GOOD EXAMPLE

Worked Because He Had Nothing Else To Do Says Socialist

BERLIN, Sept. 7.—Old Robinson Crusoe is in ill repute in Saxony. In a lecture to his class in the Leipzig public school, Professor Reichart cited Crusoe as an example of what persistency would accomplish, pointing out that he was not afraid to work a little overtime now and then when occasion demanded.

"Germany today," said the professor, "cut off from the world as we are, might be compared with Crusoe on his island. But we must not despair. We must keep up our hopes and our faith in the future. Crusoe accomplished things. He did not cease work one minute when the shadow of the sun dial came around to the hour of noon or 6 o'clock.

"We Germans should not be afraid to work overtime now that bad times are upon us. Remember Crusoe, and bear in mind also our mothers at home in the kitchens, who in the summer often labor from sun rise until long after dark. If we follow these leads we shall be able in the end to hold together."

The day after the lecture the professor received a letter from a socialist member of the school board taking him to task for his talk, which the socialist considered an attack upon the eight-hour principle.

The sum of $25,000 was left to the Marion park commission "to be applied in the creation of some permanent improvement to be determined by the commission and to be erected in any one of the three parks in Marion."

All the residue of the estate is left to Mr. Harding's three sisters, Mrs. Caroline Votaw of Washington; Mrs. Charity M. Remsberg of Santa Anna, California, and Miss Abigail Harding of Marion, and to his brother, George T. Harding, Jr., of Columbus, "share and share alike," and "in the event that my sister or brother should survive me, but should leave children, such children shall receive their parents' share."

COLUMBUS BEAUTY KEEPS HER CROWN

By The Associated Press.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Sept. 7.—Miss Catherine Campbell (Miss Columbus,) retained her crown as (Miss America) for the second straight year tonight.

Close contenders were Miss Brooklyn, Miss Coney Island, Miss St. Louis and Miss Philadelphia, who were runners-up in the order named.

The decision was given by a board of judges composed of leading artists of the country. There was keen rivalry among the contenders with Miss St. Louis (Miss Charlotte Nash), and Miss Philadelphia, (Miss Marion Green) sharing greatest honors in the popularity so far as the applause from the big auditorium was concerned.

The recrowned queen is only 17 years and is a real outdoors girl. She swims, shoots, rides and takes a healthy interest in outside activities generally. She graduated from the East high school, Columbus, at the head of her class, last year.

City Cousins.

From the Los Angeles Times.

There's a whole lot said about the country cousins going to the city, but sometimes the shoe is on the other foot as was the case recently when a Covina man came to Los Angeles to pick up a relative from Chicago. As he motored toward home the city girl suddenly sniffed and asked:

"What is that odor from those fields?"

"That's fertilizer."

"For the land's sake!"

"Certainly, ma'am."

CLOCHE AND TURBAN SHAPES FALL FAVORITES

Illustrating The Whims and Fancies of Latest Styles

Small hats are usually favored for early spring and fall. The cloche and turban shapes are prime favorites for this fall and are shown in a variety of styles. The turban is a rather trying shape for some women and should never be worn by a thin person, especially if she is past her first youth. It emphasizes lines and thinness, and has no kindly shade to soften the face. The cloche is more generally wearable, and for the woman who has lost her youthful freshness that makes any hat becoming, it may have a facing of some becoming color.

Of the four hats illustrated, two are cloches and two turbans. On the left a cloche of beige felt is faced and edged with black. This color promises to retain its popularity. On the right another cloche is shown, this time of heavy black panne velvet, having a wide band trim of green silk ribbon and green and black wings on either side.

The turban shape in the middle is a smart traveling chapeau. It is a French hat and looks it, and is draped with a red and white silk scarf of Oriental design.

The turban below is in the ever smart black and white color scheme. It has tiny white ostrich tips covering it and a knot of black moire ribbon completes the trimming.

Chinese Motif

Will the procession of the new and original sweater designs ever stop? From a simple sports garment or one intended for a sort of removable lining for a coat, it has developed into a "thing of beauty and a joy forever."

The one pictured would certainly be a "joy forever" to the high school or college girl, for it combines usefulness and beauty in an unusual degree. It is a hand knit affair of silver gloss. It has the effect of being double breasted and fastens across the chest with oriental beads which are substituted for buttons. A wide front panel, narrow band cuffs which extend beyond the sleeves like a tab and turnover collar are all embroidered with a Chinese motif. It is a garment quite dressy enough for any occasion and yet retains the smart sports look that all knitted garments have. That is their charm, in fact.

If it is not too early to suggest such a thing with vacations barely over, such a sweater would make a Christmas and one which any young lady (or old, for that matter) would sincerely appreciate.

Cop Slaps Lawyer In Dallas Court When Questioned

DALLAS, Sept. 7.—Patrolman L. Roberts today slapped T. F. Monroe, local attorney, in the face after Roberts had called Monroe from the court room where the patrolman was testifying.

Roberts became angered at questions asked him in the case of a woman who he had charged had attempted to run him down in an automobile.

He testified to commandeering an automobile and giving chase after throwing his club at the woman. Officer Lewis testified that, on a motorcycle, he chased the speeding car that he kept a record of the speed and when his machine was flying along at 50 miles an hour, he took his eyes off the speedometer as the woman's car was pulling away from him.

The jury decided the woman was guilty, but could not agree on the fine to impose and the case was continued.

Patrolman Roberts was asked by Monroe as to the weight and length of the club he had thrown at the woman.

"Never weighed it, and don't carry around a tape measure to measure the length of clubs."

"About how long was it? this long, that long or that long?" Monroe measured off different lengths with his hands.

"Now, answer that if you have any sense."

"I have about as much sense as you have," Roberts answered.

After answering a few more questions as to whether he had drawn his pistol and told the woman he would shoot her, he was excused from the stand.

Later, policemen, newspaper and court attaches separated the two men before more than one blow could be struck.

100 FOREIGNERS REPORTED DEAD

Few of 200 Guests At Grand Hotel of Yokohama Escaped

By The Associated Press.

LONDON, Sept. 7.—With communication between the devastated districts of Tokio and the southern Japanese ports of Kobe and Osaka partly restored by airplanes and road transport along the Takaido route and with the pick of Japan's well trained army divisions, which have been converging on the ruined capital since Sunday, exerting discipline to restore order among the hundreds of thousands of homeless, news from Japan begins to give some definite idea of the loss of foreign life.

There are approximately 100 foreigners dead or reported missing. Half of whom are British, but the Japanese government representatives here are still uninformed as to the number of Japanese who perished through the earthquake fire and deluge. The foreign office tonight issued its first official list of the British killed and injured. The list, an incomplete one, comprises 30 British subjects who are reported on good authority to have lost their lives, most of them killed in Yokohama, which reports continue to indicate, suffered far more than Tokio.

It seems fairly certain that the loss of life among American residents in Tokio and Yokohama was small but no reports have been received concerning the fate of tourists. From 500 to 1,000 American globe trotters are usually to be found in Yokohama hotel any day during the summer months, waiting from homeward-bounds or to start on tours through Japan. On Saturday the Yokohama shops remain open to accommodate curio buyers, and the hotels clubs and the wide Bund fronting on the harbor would be crowded with visitors, who, not familiar with the narrow streets and not knowing the location of the few parks and open streets in the city, had little chance to escape injury unless after the quake they sought refuge on ships in the harbor before the fires and explosions started.

The world-wide nature of the unprecedented relief efforts attracts attention, the United States leading in subscriptions and speed with which ships have been despatched to Japan. Other nations, from soviet Russia to South Africa are contributing generously.

PEKING, Sept. 6—Matheson, who reached Kobe today, said that the foreign residential section of Yokohama was nothing but a mass of charred ruins and bodies.

"Of 200 guests in the Grand hotel," said Matheson, "few were able to make their escape when the earth tremors began to rock the buildings. Many of the foreigners were lunching at the United club. This building collapsed and virtually every person in it lost his life.

"The Oriental palace literally sank into the earth and the guests had no chance for their lives. The majority of the houses on the bluff collapsed with the first tremendous shocks. Frantic appeals were heard from the ruins in every direction but only in a few instances was it possible to render assistance.

"On the bluff overlooking the court and Cherrymount hotels seemed to have been lifted from their foundations and hurled into the ruins below."

It is reported that E. Hamilton Holmes, British consul general at Yokohama is dead, and that Prince Matsukata, who had been listed as dead, is alive.

FIRST STEP IN CLAIM ON RIVER

Map Is Forwarded Showing Various Lands Applied For

Special to The Record News.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Sept. 7.—The first step for the issuance of oil and gas leases and the settlement of claims of 160 applicants in the Red river oil district, bordering on Oklahoma and Texas was taken by the department of the interior today.

It consisted of forwarding a copy of a map showing the conflicting claims of various applicants with instructions to each one of them to show cause why their application should be considered the preferred one. The map as completed by the general land office shows a maze of claims on the more valuable part of the area consisting of a 15-mile stretch along the river where oil is being produced.

Authority for the settlement of these claims and the issuance of oil and gas leases were placed in the hands of the secretary of interior by an act of congress passed March 4 1923.

When the supreme court meets in October it will finally dispose of the Red river area controversy by the acting upon the report of the commissioners who recently marked the boundary. On the exact fixing of the state boundary the receivership is to terminated and the lands turned over to the secretary of the interior for operation pending the final disposition of the lands and proceeds to the applicant.

The Red river controvery, by reason of its complications and its receivership, has been one of the largest and most tedious cases that has come before the United States supreme court. After the full settlement of the present controversies, the entire south half of Red river along the Oklahoma-Texas boundary is to be thrown open under the general oil and gas leasing law.

Elephants Galore With Animal Show

Three herds of performing elephants or exactly 75,567 pounds of pachyderms are featured with the Carl Hagenbeck-Wallace, which comes to Wichita Falls for afternoon and night performances and grand free street parade at 11 o'clock in the morning on Saturday Sept. 15. It will be the first big show to visit us this year.

During the winter months the elephants was taught the latest dances by their trainers, Bert Noyes and Miss Alma Wood, and in "Trilby," a little elephant of but 4,900 pounds, Miss Wood claims to have the champion shimmy dancer of the white tops. "Trilby" is able to follow the music of Professor Don Montgomery's band, just like a human, and is said to be more proficient in the terpsichorean art, than many of us plain, everyday folks.

Trainer Noyes had a difficult task in breaking in an act in which "Lovena," a prize tiger rides on the back of "Rosie," as the two animals are natural enemies, and their enemity goes back thousands of years. Six months training, twice daily, was necessary before the elephant would allow the tiger to mount her back, and even now she is not pleased about having the cat animal ride around the steel arena in a howdah.

The three herds of elephants are not only worked in the rings, but they must assist in putting up the big top, and also aid in getting the heavy wagons, especially the cook house, electric light plant, stake and chain, pole and canvas, and the other heavy loads on and off the lot. Without the elephant it would be a difficult task to move a big circus, such as the Hagenbeck-Wallace, in the rainy weather, as one or two of these big animals are able to move a wagon, hub-deep in mud, when 16 horses would be unable to move it an inch.

Both species of elephants, Asiatic and African, are carried by the Hagenbeck-Wallace circus, and all of them appear in the street parade, which is more than a mile in length.

HEAVY RAINS IN SOME SECTIONS

West and Central Texas Have Storms and Cloudbursts

By The Associated Press.

DALLAS, Texas, Sept. 7.—Bringing farm work to a standstill and putting creeks on a rampage, western and central Texas received rains varying from a near water spout to heavy rains last night and today, according to reports.

The heaviest rains were in central Texas, where upward of five inches has fallen in the past few days, including a cloudburst last night and early today in the immediate section of Lockhart. Caldwell county, which sent creeks out of banks and many small bridges have been swept away. The San Marcos river was reported rising rapidly at Pentress, following heavy down pours in the upper valley of the San Marcos and Blanco rivers. Work in the oil fields around Lockhart and Luling has been temporarily shut down. Travis and other counties reported drenching rains.

A number of places in West Texas received beneficial rains. Menard, Paintrock and Christoval reported good rains, which at a late hour today were reported sweeping west of San Angelo, northwestward toward Iron and Sterling City. Rains in this region during the past week have been sufficient, but still there are spotted areas needing moisture.

NEFF WILL HAVE HIS FINAL FLING

School and Prison Affairs To Engage Legislative Session

AUSTIN, Sept. 7.—Texas financial, school and prison affairs are shaping toward an inevitable session of the Texas state legislature next December or January, according to growing belief of political observers.

At such a session Governor Neff will have his final fling at writing into the Texas statutes measures he has advocated. He will have his final round with the legislature which in most matters urged by him two and one-half years as governor, has been hostile to enactment of his demands.

The darkening financial condition of the state, involving virtual loss of credit, heavy discount on state salary warrants, high prices, forced by lack of cash, will be the leading cause of a legislative call, it is admitted. If school appropriations are held by courts to be unconstitutional, a demand for a session to give any legal aid will be greater. If the appropriations are upheld and paid out, then the state deficiency, now over $9,000,000, will be increased to approximately $7,500,000 to $9,000,000 and banks will likely take the drastic steps which were narrowly averted September 1, of refusing to grant even the costly boon of a six per cent discount, and will only advance money up to 75 per cent of the warrants, on notes with warrants attached as security, and at 8 per cent interest.

For the present, banks are continuing to discount warrants, but have given no assurance as to how long they will do this.

Superintendent of Education S. M. N. Marrs has not demanded prior warranting of the $3,500,000 school appropriation, but will make use of the entire amount between next December and March 31, he has indicated.

The legislature will be called upon to deal with both phases of the financial situation—new taxes, and easing up the pressure caused by the heaviest deficiency in recent years, it is generally conceded.

The prison commission is nearly $1,000,000 in debt, and with the largest prison population in its history, hundreds of men being held idle at the main prison for lack of available work.

The prison system is farming about 35,000 acres of land, of which 49,000, according to the prison commision, is subject to overflow, and on which the system has repeatedly lost its entire crop from such overflow.

The topographic survey, to plan for storing of Brazos river water above the system, will await the tortuous details of local campaigns for creation of districts, voting bonds, and local construction. With the reclamation and flood control going at the maximum speed, it is admitted by engineers that nothing can be done in time to benefit to the smallest degree the prison farms during the next crop year.

Besides the major problem, there accumulates a volume of needed special legislation and minor general matters during a period of eight to nine months. Governor Neff avoided a special session of the legislature during the second year of his first term; but he had another general session ahead, and he escaped a special session only by turning a deaf ear to urgings from many parts of the state.

His calling a sesion next December or January may deprive politicians and candidates for his office of campaign materials. He will likely resubmit tax subjects, and will renew his request for a law to permit juries to remove county officers and officials who "wilfully fail or refuse" to perform their duties.

Electra
NEWS AND PERSONALS

Vital statistics submitted by Ed C. Wilson, registrar for the month of August shows that there was a total of 36 births in Electra and four deaths; a ratio of four to one. Of the births, 22 were girls and 14 boys.

Chris Scheurer, Jesse Cox and Russell Faught made up a hunting party into Wheeler and Hemphill counties after prairie chicken. They reported the limit. They stated that they were stopped by the game warden who demanded to be shown their licenses and said that he counted their birds to see that they had not shot more than the limit.

Open season for prairie chickens in four counties of the state along with opening of dove season all over the state was the occasion of numerous hunting parties from Electra going after the birds. All reported prairie chicken as plentiful in Wheeler and Hemphill counties and a fair amount of doves are reported around here but not so many as last year.

A party made up of Russell Schurer, John Marriott, J. K. Freese of Electra and P. A. Menke of Wichita Falls reported excellent luck. They reported killing 55 birds in three days, which was five less than the limit.

Another party composed of W. L. Hill, Andy Bratton, T. E. Edwards and W. A. Watley of Wichita Falls made the trip to Wheeler and Hemphill counties. They hunted just one day but brought back 15 birds.

Otto Schlaffke, Gene Marriott, and Ben Eckelkamp formed a third party to Wheeler county. They only bagged six birds. One of these was brought back to Electra alive.

T. H. McFall, along with E. W. Barr reported the limit on doves the first of the week.

Another party of six reported plenty of doves. In this party were Mr. and Mrs. Roy Miller, Mr. and Mrs. George D. Ezelle, Mr. and Mrs. C. J. Hawley, Mr. and Mrs. Homer Jones, Mr. and Mrs. R. N. Richardson, Mr. and Mrs. H. G. Bratton; Mrs. McDannald and daughter. This party went to Rock Crossing on Beaver Creek and reported excellent fishing as well as hunting.

The new Electra Golf club is practically completed and already a large number of golf enthusiasts have been enjoying the new course.

The new club is located on the Magnolia Petroleum lease about two miles northeast of Electra. It was laid out by A. I. Kendall, professional from the Wichita Falls Country club. The work of constructing the course has been under the supervision of the executive committee consisting of E. R Brown as chairman, Hugh Seay and E. M. Friend.

Although all of the work is not completed, enough has been accomplished so that the members can now play. The Electra Golf club, according to Mr. Kendall, is admirably situated to provide numerous hazards and plenty of sport. He believes that the local club has a bright future ahead. The course at present consists of nine holes, although there sufficient available to make it into a regular 18 hole course if desired. A small creek runs through the center and a large water tank is located near by; both are considered by the experienced golfers as "sporty" hazards.

A small club house is being considered by the officers for the accomodation of the members which will be provided with shower baths and lockers for both men and women.

All of the members have been enthusiastic about the new enterprise. And as the work has neared completion, the number of players has increased daily. One day recently there were over 100 members playing.

The club was organized with 60 charter members; The membership will be limited to 120. B. W. Tipton is president, Fred. C. Barron is vice president and Reuben R. B. Cook is secretary and treasurer

Preparations are progressing for the opening of school here Monday. Invitations have been extended by Superintendent Dinsmore to meet and welcome the new teachers at the high school Saturday morning. It is expected that the Electra school board, the Parent-Teachers association and other city organizations will attend in a body or they will have some representative to meet the teachers.

Any one who is desirous of renting rooms or boarding the teachers should attend this meeting according to Superintendent Dinsmore. The Mother's club has made arrangements to have four or five cars at the high school for the aid and assistance of the teachers.

George F. LeBus and E. M. Friend have started work on their new brick building which will occupy the corner just across the street from the First Methodist church. The new building will be the future home of the L. and F. Chevrolet Co.

Besides being local agent for the Chevrolet, they will have a modernly equipped filling station. They plan to carry a complete line of automobile accessories and tires.

Contract for the new buiding calls for completion not later than November first. The L. and F. Chevrolet Co. has been incorporated for $25,000. E. M. Friend will be manager and Homer Grizzel will be in charge of the service department.

J. H. Harris, owner of the Harris Dry Goods Co., has completed arrangements to build a $10,000 brick building on the northwest corner of Main and Bryan streets. Plans have been made to start the work on the new building in the very near future.

This new building will have a frontage of 50 feet on Main street with a depth of 65 feet. It will provide locations for two stores. At a later date, it is Mr. Harris' intention to construct three more building adjoining. Plans call for the completion of this building on or before November 15.

Mrs. Jere B. Barnes was hostess to the Tuesday Afternoon Bridge Club to several tables of guests. The house was prettily decorated and bridge was enjoyed throughout the afternoon. JAPAN'S NEED.

Japan—proud, independent, energetic Japan—sits with bowed head in the face of an overwhelming disaster, which has left more than a million of those who survived the earthquake and fire which devastated the central regions of the empire in dire need. The need is for food, clothing and shelter.

The American Red Cross—nurse of the world—is rushing supplies to the stricken nation. These supplies should reach their objective today. And food stuffs are coming from other sources. In fact the whole of Europe will answer the call in Japan's hour of need.

And as is always the case, everyone will be given an opportunity to do something. Already the call has come to Wichita county through the Red Cross and the Salvation Army, and the head of the American Federation of Labor has asked that all of the crafts assist in relieving the suffering across the seas.

In whatever light Japan might be viewed in other days, Japan now stands before the world as a nation in distress and the world old cry of the needy will be answered. Thousands upon thousands of human beings are hungering for food. And they will be fed by the nations of the earth.

WORLD FACES COTTON FAMINE.

And now it is admitted by the wise men of the textile industry the world over, that the manufacturers and wearers of cotton fabrics are facing a famine of raw cotton. Indeed, they say with a crop no larger than that now figured or indicated by government figures, added to the carry-over of 2,500,000 bales, the world will be confronted with a supply of not much over 13,000,000 bales.

As a matter of note the market editor of the New York Times insists that if the world consumes as much American cotton during the present season as it did in the season ending August 1, there would be a genuine cotton famine by the summer of 1924 unless prices were advanced sufficiently to adequately check consumption.

Japan is a large exporter of raw silk. Misfortune has come to the Nipponese silk growers. More than 49,000 bales of raw silk were stored in Yokohama when the greatest disaster over chronicled in the far east, came upon the people of the island empire. All the raw silk in the warehouses of the doomed Japanese city was consumed by fire or ruined by the tidal waves which inundated this famous seaport of Japan.

Millions of bales of raw silk stored elsewhere in the districts devastated by quake and fire and water were totally destroyed. As a matter of course this will have a marked effect upon the price of silk goods and heavy advances are certain to come. Japan has been taking a million bales of American cotton and no doubt will continue to buy American cotton, but a disastrous blow has been dealt to the textile industries of the kingdom which will have its effects upon the prices the world over.

Speaking of cotton again, a crop of 11,000,000 bales this year as the trade sees it, means an aggressive bull market and a heavy rise of clothing costs. It is conceded that the world is consuming about the same amount of cotton as before the coming of the world war and the cotton producing states of America are still the source of almost two-thirds of the staple.

Those who are familiar with the cotton industry declare the world's cotton situation is alarming. First, American crops have dropped below their former high productive figures and the textile world has been using up its reserve. Second, Egypt, which is second on the list as a producer of cotton, is also producing famine crops. The crop of 1923 is reported 30 per cent less in volume than that of 1922. Third, Russia has been eliminated as a producer and exporter of the staple. Fourth, China's production is sufficient for home needs.

Warehouses of the world are bare. Cotton reserves have melted away. There is a minimum supply perhaps for a maximum demand and the garment buyers of the world are reminded that very high priced cotton calls for very high priced cotton goods. There should be money in cotton this year.

A KANSAS INDIAN.

Kansas republicans of the old guard are rallying around the standard of Senator Charles Curtis as their presidential hope next year. He is the nearest to an all American candidate mentioned thus far in the campaign. Senator Curtis is an Indian, his mother was a member of the Kaw tribe and he lived with his mother's people in early boyhood.

It is a long jump from a Kaw wigwam to the senate of the United States but Curtis made it in the long ago. He isn't a hundred per cent American. He is a five hundred per cent American and the only thing that prevents him from being a thousand per cent is that his father was a white man which reduces his batting average, politically speaking, from a thousand to five hundred.

Senator Robert L. Owen of Oklahoma is part Cherokee. He was the favorite son of Oklahoma at San Francisco—but even with the powerful backing of William Jennings Bryan, Senator Owen never received the vote of a single delegate from an outside state.

England controls the crude rubber supply of the world through the ownership of rubber plantations by British corporations but the world's export of tires is now distributed as follows: France 40 per cent, United States 25 per cent, England 12 per cent, Italy 7 per cent, Germany 5 per cent and all others 11 per cent. John Bull, as a trader, must have lost his cunning.

General Alvardo Obregon is the man of the hour as well as a man of destiny. Mexico is coming into her own.

One Place Where America Can Participate in Foreign Affairs Without Hesitation As to Consequences

THE BRIGHT SHAWL

"In reality," Charles replied, "I fence very awkwardly. But you have often seen me: I havent any need to tell you that."

"That can never be established without experience," the Spaniard asserted. "I should have to feel your wrist against mine. If you will be patient, if you will wait for me, I'll risk a public humiliation."

Charles Abbott said evenly: "I'd be very glad to fence with you, of course."

When De Vaca flawlessly appointed, returned, Charles rose steadily, and strapped on his mask, tightened the leather of the plastron. A murmur or subdued amusement followed their walking out together on to an unoccupied strip—De Vaca was a celebrated swordsman.

The foils struck together, there was a conventional pass and parry, and from that moment Charles Abbott lost control of his steel. At a touch from De Vaca's scarcely perceptible, his foil rose or fell, swept to one side or the other; a lunge would end in the button describing a whole arc, and pointing either to the matting or the ceiling.

The laughter from the chairs grew louder, more unguarded. De Vaca began to make points, touches, wherever he chose—with a remarkably timed twist he tore the cloth heart from Charles' wadding; he indicated, as though he were a teacher with a pointer, anatomical facts and regions; De Vaca seemed to be calling Charles' attention, by sharp premonitory taps, to what he might have been saying. Then Charles grasped what, he was certain, was the purpose of the attack. It was the result of a cold effort, a set determination to destroy what courage he had.

"If I collapse," Charles told himself, "it will be for eternity."

Any sense of time was disintegrated in a physical agony which required all his wasting being to combat. But, even worse than that far more destructive, was the assault upon his mind. If he crumbled . . . he thought of himself as dust, his brain a dry powder in his skull. Soon, Charles felt, he would fall into unreckoned depths of corrupt shadows, among the obscene figures of the hideous lost.

The sweat streaming into his mouth turned thick and salt—blood, from his nose. There was a tumult in his head; his fencing now was the mere waving of a reed.

Sharply, incomprehensibly, it was over. Dropping forward upon his knees, he saw De Vaca, with his mask on his arm, frowning.

"Now," Charles Abbott thought luxuriously, "I can faint and be damned to them."

The cloud of darkness which flowed over him was empty of the vileness of fear; rather, like the beneficience of night, it was an utterly peaceful remission of the flesh.

CHAPTER XVI.
Charles' Ambition.

Charles' physical exhaustion, the weariness of his mind, continued in a settled inssitude through the following day. He was to see Andres Escobar, give him what information he had from La Clavel, the next morning at the baths of the Campos Elliseos; and meanwhile he scarcely stirred from the San Felipe. He had changed appreciably during his stay in Havana; even his physiognomy was different—how, he couldn't say, but he was aware that his expression had, well, hardened. The cure which had been the principally hoped-for result of Cuba was complete. In spite of his collapse in the fencing school, he was more compacity strong than ever before. It occurred to him that now, he might be described as a man.

The schooling of the past week, together with the stiffening of his spirit, had bred a new practicality in him, superior, he felt, to any sheer heroics.

In this, he recognized, his mind was different from the Escobar's, from the blind fervor of the many Cuban patriots he knew. When it was possible, men of the widest possible activities talked to him of their plans.

In short, Charles Abbott felt that he might become a power; and this he coolly set himself to bring about. His heritage was that of success.

La Clavel noticed a marked difference in him, but proclaimed that it was no more than an increase in his natural propensity for high-mindedness. It fatigued her, she declared, to be with him, made her dizzy to gaze up at his altitude of mind.

He was seated in her room, the hairdresser was sweating in the attempt to produce an effect she was describing to him with phrases as stinging as the whip of foils, while Charles watched her with a degree of annoyance. Her humors where he was concerned, were unpredictable; and lately she had found a special delight in attacks on his dignity. She said and did things—an air of innocence hiding her malice—indecently ribald that shook his firmest efforts to appear, to be, unconcerned.

At last, in a volatile rage, she dismissed the servant with his tongs and premature and crimping leads, and swore to Charles Abbott that she was going to Argentine by the first boat that offered passage.

"I am sick of Cuba, and I've forgotten that I am an artist, and that is bad. You are wrapped up in this liberty, and that is very well for you, an ordinary person. But me, I am not an ordinary person: I am La Clavel. I am more valuable to the world than pumpkins or republics." She seized the castanets lying on her dressing table—in answer to their irritable rythmic clinking she projected, for an instant, a vision of all desire.

There was an indefinite stir at the door, a short knock, and he moved to the window as Santacilla entered unceremoniously.

The Spaniard, a model of politeness of consideration, listened to La Clavel's determination to go to South America. It was an excellent plan, he agreed; they would welcome her rapturously in Buenos Ayres.

"But what will our young American do?" he demanded. "How will he live without his delight? But perhaps he is going to the Argentine with you. He will have a busy time, and a batful of challenges there, where beauty is appreciated to the full."

Charles said, with an appearance of sullenness, that he hadn't been invited to go further south: and Santacilla replied that as a matter of fact, it might be necessary for him to remain, perhaps forever, in Havana. He spoke cheerfully, but a vague quality of his bearing, his voice, was disturbing, mocking. His words had the air of an underlying meaning different from their sound.

An uneasiness, as well, was communicated to La Clavel; she watched Santacilla with an indirect puzzled gaze.

Charles too had a sense of impending danger, a premonition of clashing sound, of discord.

And, whatever, developed, he must meet it, subdue and conquer it. Ceaza y Santacilla, he saw, was not visibly armed; but, probably, he would carry a Small pistol. The one his father had given him was in Charles' pocket.

The difficulty was that, in the event of a disturbance, no matter what the outcome here might happen to be, the dancer and he would bear the weight of any Spanish fury. And it was no part of his intention to be cut in half by bullets behind a fortress wall.

He could only delay, discover as soon as possible what was behind Santacilla's deceiving patience and good humor. Upon that he would have to act without hesitation and with no chance of failure. La Clavel said, "I know you so well, Ceaza, what it is; what is it you are saying and saying without speaking of? It seems as though you were threatening me, and that, you best should realize is useless!"

His flickering eyes rested first on her and then upon Charles Abbott. "You will never get to South America now," he asserted; "for you are a conspirator against your king. Since you have shown such a love of Cuban soil you are to become a part of it,—forever."

CHAPTER XVII.
"It Is Not in My Star."

Charles Abbott, now standing by the door, shot in the belt which secured it, and by a fortunate, a chance twist, broke off the handle. Santacilla, undisturbed, remained seated, smiling while his fingers played with the plaited loop of his cane.

"This infatuation," he indicated them with a wave, "while it convinced Havana, never entirely satisfied me. I have been watching you, Jobaba has been listening for days. You were very cunning, but in the end you failed, you were neither skilful nor patient enough. Yet, at the last, all that you heard were fairy tales."

La Clavel faced him calmly, but Charles saw, she was pale. He was revolving a hundred impractical schemes; they had only one end, the death of Santacilla but how that was to be brought about with safety to Cuba evaded him.

"I am not a traitor in the way you mean," she declared; "what your conceit never allowed you to note was that in Spain and here, I have always detested you; and what I did was the result of that. I struck at you and not our country, for the court and church and army are no longer our strength—if we still have any except the knife and cord—but our weakness.

"Fools," he asserted, unmoved.

"And now you are the fool," she added.

More Truth Than Poetry

By James J. Montague

THE LOAFER

To town young Jasper Johnson came,
Intent to make a splash,
To earn no end of ringing fame
And goodly piles of cash.
"Work never made no hit with me,"
Observed this callow oaf,
"I'll toil two years, or mebbe three,
And then I'm going to loaf.

The day that Jasper came to town
To carry out this course,
He got a job, and held it down,
By working like a horse.
When other eyes were on the clock,
He kept the books and learned the stock,
And never looked around.

Quite soon he made the shining pile
On which his heart was set,
And grimly said "I'll rest a while,
And then I'll loaf, you bet."
The years went by, and still he bent
Above his task each day,
And all his evening hours were spent
In making business pay.

At night he often used to dream
Of where he meant to spend
His loafing days—the silver stream,
The cottage at the bend.
But when, to join the caravan,
Poor Jasper got the call,
And answered it, the poor old man
Had never loafed at all.

WHAT TODAY MEANS

By MARY BLAKE

VIRGO

This day starts out well, and is really excellent for all important matters. After the noon hour, the aspects become adverse and you must be cautious in crossing streets or risking any kind of danger. Wide differences are apt to occur in friendly and domestic relationships, and, it is advisable to suppress haste and a domineering attitude.

A child born today will be joyous in disposition, but should be well nurtured.

You are impetuous if today is your birthday, and governed almost by impulse and intuition. Of course, you do not appreciate this fact—impulsive people never do—as their minds always find reasons for their actions, but usually after actions have commenced and have a great headway.

Your mind, however, is usually alert, and you will never be at a loss to explain your own to yourself, if not to others.

You have a brilliant imagination, one that sees, hears and feels, and with your talent for expression you should have some success as a writer. Your mind is too impatient, however, to be profoundly analytical.

You have the money sense in a degree which is surprising in one so temperamental. You are a born gambler, but you estimate the odds with excellent foresight, and you should win a great deal more than you lose.

You are kind, generous and sympathetic, from the most idealistic motives. You cannot bear to see suffering; in fact, your perceptive sympathy makes all the misery you see your own sensation, and you must do something to alleviate it.

Emotionally, you are responsive, and at moments you have a passionate nature which passes all credence. You attract the opposite sex, and you like to be attracted by them. But to be forewarned, you are not the matrimonial type. You are a little too anxious at all times to have every new love develop into a serious affair. You try to imagine yourself married to anyone who seems to be attracted by you. You have a way of conveying this to your victims without the use of words, which immediately scares them off.

Successful people born on this day are:

Robert C. Lowry, president of the Western Union.

Raphael Pumpelly, geologist and author.

Emile Poulsson, kindergartner.

BROKE GOVERNOR'S HOLDINGS IN TRUST

By The Associated Press.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Sept. 7.—Creditors of Governor Warren T. McCray, meeting here this afternoon, voted to accept his proposal to operate his holding under a trust agreement. The governor's financial affairs recently became so involved that he considered it necessary that they be put in the hands of a creditor's committee. This committee was named this afternoon. It is composed of John Moorman of Knox; O. T. Kiser, Indianapolis; Joseph Vannatta, LaFayette, Henry Barr, Princeton; and W. A. Arnold of Kokomo.

FRIGHTENED MULE KILLS A WACO BOY

By The Associated Press.

WACO, Texas, Sept. 7.—Senon Phillip Jr., aged 15, had his neck broken and died almost instantly Friday afternoon when he was knocked down by the hoof of a mule, the team becoming frightened and running away, the wagon, loaded with cotton seed, passing over the boy and crushing him.

The accident occurred on the farm of Dr. Ralph Steiner, former state health officer, 12 miles below Waco. Something went wrong with the harness and the boy alighted to repair it, when one of the mules reared up and began pawing, the blow felling the boy.

IRRIGATION

By A. M. McPHERSON
Consulting Engineer
Kahn Bldg., Eighth and Indiana

Into what sized farms should the surplus lands on the irrigation project be divided?

SILAGE CROPS.

The preservation of green stuffs in the form of silage depends primarily upon the exclusion of air. If air is excluded almost any green plant can be preserved in the form of silage.

A slight fermentation generally takes place in silage which renders most plants more digestible. Vegetation that is not eaten by cattle in the fields are consumed with relish in the form of silage.

This does not mean of course that all feeds are better preserved by siloing for such is not the case, but it does mean that siloing will preserve in an edible and appetizing form many feeds that would not otherwise be available. To illustrate this point: In certain cases, Russian thistles, a most obnoxious weed has been successfully siloed and afterward eaten by cattle with great eagerness. The Russian thistle in any other form is not eaten by stock except in most extreme cases.

The commonest silage crop is corn. The grain sorghums are also used to a considerable extent.

The corn is cut at various stages in its development, but the best period is at the time the grain has become glazed. Then the feed values are high and the stalks and leaves are yet green enough to make a succulent feed.

The corn is shredded, or more commonly chopped, by special machines and conveyed into the silo by blowing or mechanical conveyors.

When in the silo it must be packed thoroughly, generally by men tramping it, to exclude the air. The more air that is excluded the better the silage. Of course, the silo itself must be air tight.

TEXANS WILL SEE HORSE SOLDIERS IN BIG MOBILIZATION

WASHINGTON, D. C., Sept. 7.—Texas is soon to see a monster mobilization of the horse soldiers of Uncle Sam.

The concentration of the First cavalry division in the vicinity of the Big Bend cattle district, under command of Major General R. L. Howze, from September 25 to October 6, will be the largest assembly of cavalry troops since the civil war and the heaviest mobilization which has ever been massed on the Mexican border. The Second cavalry brigade will be under the command of Brig. Gen. Joseph E. Castner, while the First brigade will be commanded by Col. Walter C. Short.

On October 3 a special military problem will be demonstrated 12 miles south of Marfa, while on the 5th a general review will be held of all troops one mile east of Marfa. Polo matches, baseball games, boxing matches and other athletic contests will take up considerable of the time which will include a cowboy roundup and a rodeo. In addition to a number of Washington officials and army officers, all of the foreign military attaches have been invited to attend the maneuvers, which will be the most pretentious which the cavalry division has held in years.

WITH THE WOMEN OF TODAY

Miss Laura Harlan

Miss Laura Harlan, daughter of the late associate justice, has been retained in the White House as Mrs. Coolidge's social secretary. She acted in that capacity for Mrs. Harding. Miss Harlan is very well known in Washington social circles.

FEMINISM IN SOUTH AMERICA

"There is an unmistakable woman movement in South America," writes Carrie Chapman Catt in The Woman Citizen, "but it is in that state of individual effort which preceded the organized demand for various rights before 1848 in the United States. Women are admitted to universities in most of the South American countries, and women's colleges exist, although not of high standards of curricula. Girls go to the United States, France or England to take degrees, and governments assist girls to education along special lines in foreign countries in order to improve the quality of home teaching. Young women study law and a few practice it. There are several women physicians in each country, and we found women journalists everywhere, although limited in the character of work done. Curious invasions of old-time customs are seen such as street car conductors and women hotel staffs in Chile and women bank clerks in Panama. The Y. W. C. A. has branches in all the countries we visited and has led out in several directions quite new in South America."

RECEIVE STRIKE FUND

Thousands of women and girls were thrown out of employment in factories by the French occupation of the Ruhr district, but ignore domestic service offered them because they receive strike funds from Berlin and local municipalities amounting to more than wages in homes. It is as difficult to obtain housemaids in Germany as in this country.

The Agricultural department reports that American women used 20,000,000 pounds of face powder last year. This is an average of about eight ounces for each woman.

BREAD AND SUGAR RATIONED IN BERLIN

Sugar is being rationed out in Berlin. No person is permitted to have more than two pounds a month. Milk and bread also are on Berlin's ration list.

BREAD HIGH IN PARIS

The price of bread in Paris and the Seine department is the highest that has been, known since the siege of Paris in 1870. Bread is the chief foodstuff of the French population.

FROM SHEER SIMPLICITY TO SOPHISTICATION!

Plain Lines For Youth In Negligee and Dance Frock

The apricot colored negligee shown on the left of the illustration would be a charming addition to the trunk of the college girl or bride. Cording on the collar, sleeves and hem is in a robbins egg blue, an attractive color combination.

The little dance frock on the right would delight any young girl. It is fashioned entirely of ribbon and lace insertion. The ribbon is a shell pink and the lace is white. It is made on very simple lines needing no adornment but the materials from which it is made.

The costume in the center is far more sophisticated than either of the others. It is black velvet with collar, cuffs and bottom of the jacket of red fox fur. The jacket is heavily embroidered in green and red beads and banding of the same trims the edge of the skirt. The jacket fastens to the side and the skirt has a slight drape in front that recalls the peg top of days gone by. No very young person should attempt to wear such a suit as it is better suited to the more mature.

Knapp Head.

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla., Sept. 7.—Dr. Bradford Knapp, head of the agricultural department of the University of Arkansas, tonight was elected president of the Oklahoma A. and M. college at Stillwater.

Dr. Knapp was chosen for the position after an all-day meeting of the state board of agriculture.

THE HABIT OF HAPPINESS.

Men love happy women, be they short or tall, fat or thin, beautiful or homely, have them happy, me say.

So many men are married to unhappy women that nowadays a woman who even looks happy attracts a man.

Cheerful women, are always popular and vivacious and buoyant people are welcome in most any crowd.

Happy people are in demand, in business, in social and domestic life.

And happy girls have more beaux than they have time for, happy wives have more devotion from their husband than gloomy wives.

Happiness lies within us all and it is up to us to bring it to the surface.

So in the scheme of life it is awfully worth while to try to be happy—yes, in spite of everything.

Movie Land

Miss Carmelita Geraghty is not a stranger around the picture studios, as her father is Thomas Geraghty, supervising director for Lasky's. As you might guess from the name, Mr. Geraghty is Irish but Carmelita's mother is Spanish and related to Benjamin DeCrasseres, poet, essayist and satirist.

This Span-Irish combination would be hard to beat and it is no wonder that Miss Carmelita, the "Baby Star" as she has been called is making a name for herself in pictures.

She plays a society ingenue role in Cosmopolitan's coming production of "The Daughter of Mother McGinn," and also has a part in Mary Pickford's new picture, "Rosita." She is now appearing in Maurice Tournaur's production, "Jealous Fools."

TOM MOORE PLAYS OPPOSITE VIOLA DANA.

Tom Moore, one of the most sought after leading men on the west coast plays opposite Viola Dana in Rita Weiman story "Roughed Lips." Malcom McGregor, Huntly Gordon, Cyril Chadwick and Edna Flugrath, Miss Dana's sister, support the dainty Metro star in "The Social Code" another Weiman story. The cast which aids Miss Dana in her picturization of Kate Jordan's story "In Search of a Thrill" includes Warner Baxter, Rosemary Theby, Robert Schable, Mable Van Buren, Templar Saxe, Billy Elmer, and Leo White.

ALL CLAIM BUSTER.

This business of "local boy makes good" means covering a lot of ground, Buster Keaton finds. The frozen-faced comedian, now appearing before the camera in his first five-reel feature film for Metro release, "The Three Ages," recently received five clippings from newspapers in Michigan, Arizona and Kansas, each claiming Buster as a local product.

"It doesn't seem possible," commented Keaton.

ZONAGALE

With Russell Gore Writes On In Collaboration

FRIED POTATOES

The weeping mother said:

"We thought she was getting well. She was ever so much better. Why, she was downstairs and ate a plateful of fried potatoes the night she died."

Then she went on wondering why God had afflicted her. She had always done her best, she had tried to do her duty to her family; they had always paid their pew rent. And yet here she was, chastened in the death of this beautiful child of seven. What justice was there in that? What justice was there in the universe? Could it be possible that there was a God.

That mother's argument is doubtless duplicated every day, all round the world. One stays too long in the water, contracts pneumonia and others wonder why God sees fit for him to die. A baby eats ice cream that has stood all night in a freezer, and the babies' illness and death become mysteries of the ways of providence. A man driving fast, turns out to avoid a disabled car, and collides with a third car approaching on the wrong side of the road. Once more God has "seen fit to call home" some of the occupants of the two cars.

It is astonishing how this kind of "arguments survives." Survives, too, for the less obvious catastrophies—losses which can not be traced to their sources. In the middle ages epidemics were "acts of God," just as accidents are now so dubbed by coroners' juries. In a corner's jury one can forgive it, but not in a human heart faced with a solemn experience and merely instead trying to shift a responsibility.

In a wise book by Professor Josiah Royce there is a chause set in italics. It is in a chapter called "The Problem of Job" in "Studies of Good and Evil" and it is this:

"When you suffer, your sufferings are God's sufferings. Not his external work, not his external penalty, not the fruit of his neglect, but identically his own personal woe."

This makes another thing of sorrow. And it harmonizes with the rest of our sense of God. Not the old sense of the God of fear, but the God of Love. Not God in some far-off heaven, but God near, in us and through us, "closer than breathing." Not then, the afflicter, but the sorrower, with us. And so we will say, not that one is "removed, in the providence of God," but that God and his children suffer together, and triumph together over suffering.

TEXT BOOKS COST $1.70 PER CHILD

AUSTIN, Texas, Sept. 7.—Free text books furnished in Texas schools have cost the taxpayers of Texas $1.70 per year for each school child, according to figures compiled by S. M. N. Marrs, state superintendent of education.

Mr. Marrs outlines plans by which surplus of books bought last year under contracts which expired when the book commission attempted to make new contracts, but the new contracts were held void in federal court, will be distributed, so as to cause as little shortage as possible in schools this year. Only where books cannot be furnished from other schools, will school districts find it necessary to buy the texts, out of local maintenance funds.

Mr. Marrs recommended that where no surplus could be found, that school boards then purchase necessary books from publishers, and pay for them out of local maintenance funds. This will prevent parents having to buy the books for pupils, he pointed out. Books may be purchased by the individual patrons however, if they desire. The plan suggested, Mr. Marrs stated, deals only with purchase of essential "basal" texts.

These books are: World Geographies, Rhetoric, Essentials of Arithmetic; Physics, Agriculture and Graves Muscular writing system.

Companies or book depositories, Mr. Marrs stated, will deliver these books to school boards on payment of the contract purchase price printed on the books.

One publisher announced his books will have the new contract prices printed in them, rather than the old prices.

WILL INVESTIGATE WHISKEY PERMITS

AUSTIN, Tex., Sept. 7.—Comptroller Lon A. Smith has gone to Houston to make a detailed inspection into the handling by drug stores of permits to dispense whiskey, and of prescription-writing by doctors in South Texas towns. Mr. Smith stated that several complaints have been received, charging violations of the Dean law and of regulations of his department. Permits will be revoked after hearing, wherever evidence sustains the charges, he said.

Comptroller Smith stated that appropriations were made by the legislature, becoming available September 1, to permit inspections under such charges, and that wrongful practices will be investigated.

MAY USE PLANES IN MINE RESCUE

By The Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 7.—The adaptability of airplanes as aids to mine rescue work is being tested by the Department of the Interior near Birmingham, Alabama, where a landing field has been located, and trial flights of ships are being made carrying trained men of the Bureau of Mines, equipped with oxygen breathing apparatus, to help in imaginary mine disasters. Other fields are to be located at mining towns within reasonable flying range of Birmingham, the mine rescue station.

The bureau maintains ten railway cars and seven auto trucks equipped for mine-rescue purposes, but it often requires considerable time to send these mobile units to remote mining camps where they are needed in emergencies. It is hoped to demonstrate the value of the air route in supplementing the work of these cars, especially in reaching the camps where fields are available.

Convicted of Assault.

VERNON, Texas, Sept. 7.—The jury in the case of W. T. Langston, charged in district coure here with assault on the person of his 14-year-old stepdaughter, returned a verdict of guilty at 9 o'clock last night, and fixed the punishment at 5 years in the state penitentiary.

Two full days of court were occupied by the trial. A large number of witnesses were examined. The indictment alleges that the criminal attack was made here last April.

The case of Joe Collins, charged with rape on the person of his own daughter, is being tried today.

WOMAN WAS SAVED FROM OPERATION

Mrs. Morris Was So Weak Before Taking Stella Vitae She Couldn't Sit Up

"I was taken to the hospital for an operation but was too weak to stand it, so they took me back home and I recovered my health and strength by taking Stella Vitae," said Mrs. W. O. Morris, 424 Hopkins St., Waco, Texas.

"When my baby was born I suffered agony and had to stay in bed for a long time. An operation was necessary—at least that was what they said. But when they examined me they said it might prove fatal as I was in no condition to stand it.

"I began taking Stella Vitae and gradually my strength returned. I gained five pounds and the operation was never necessary. I got along fine and although that was 10 years ago I have never had any return of my trouble."

Stella Vitae may be obtained from any druggist and the purchase price will be refunded if it fails to bring relief.—Adv.

Women to attract must Radiate Health!

BEAUTY is the magnet which draws all eyes—and back of beauty—Health—working silently. Red blood tingling through the veins;—the glow of youth in the cheeks;—the spring of eagerness, of vim, of vitality in the walk;—the ever graceful air, unrestrained by care or worry.—All the charms of beauty. All the works of health.

Men are fascinated by the charms of beauty. Women gaze with envy, secretly jealous, perhaps—wondering—hoping—praying for that attractiveness that is not theirs.

But why the wondering—the hoping—the praying for that craved-for attractiveness—that beauty. Good looks is the barometer of one's condition. Good health radiates beauty. S. S. S. purifies the blood—creates new red blood cells—rids the system of impurities which make beauty and attractiveness impossible. As women to attract must radiate health so must they keep their systems free from impurities and their red blood cells ever increasing. S. S. S. does both.

S. S. S., since 1826, has been ridding the system of impurities—pimples, blackheads, boils, eczema and rheumatism—building red blood cells—aiding women to be attractive by radiating health. S. S. S. is made of carefully selected herbs and barks, scientifically prepared and proportioned. All good drug stores carry S. S. S. It is more economical to purchase the large size bottle.

JAPAN'S NEED.

Japan—proud, independent, energetic Japan—sits with bowed head in the face of an overwhelming disaster, which has left more than a million of those who survived the earthquake and fire which devastated the central regions of the empire in dire need. The need is for food, clothing and shelter.

The American Red Cross—nurse of the world—is rushing supplies to the stricken nation. These supplies should reach their objective today. And food stuffs are coming from other sources. In fact the whole of Europe will answer the call in Japan's hour of need.

And as is always the case, everyone will be given an opportunity to do something. Already the call has come to Wichita county through the Red Cross and the Salvation Army, and the head of the American Federation of Labor has asked that all of the crafts assist in relieving the suffering across the seas.

In whatever light Japan might be viewed in other days, Japan now stands before the world as a nation in distress and the world old cry of the needy will be answered. Thousands upon thousands of human beings are hungering for food. And they will be fed by the nations of the earth.

WORLD FACES COTTON FAMINE.

And now it is admitted by the wise men of the textile industry the world over, that the manufacturers and wearers of cotton fabrics are facing a famine of raw cotton. Indeed, they say with a crop no larger than that now figured or indicated by government figures, added to the carry-over of 2,500,000 bales, the world will be confronted with a supply of not much over 13,000,000 bales.

As a matter of note the market editor of the New York Times insists that if the world consumes as much American cotton during the present season as it did in the season ending August 1, there would be a genuine cotton famine by the summer of 1924 unless prices were advanced sufficiently to adequately check consumption.

Japan is a large exporter of raw silk. Misfortune has come to the Nipponese silk growers. More than 49,000 bales of raw silk were stored in Yokohama when the greatest disaster ever chronicled in the far east, came upon the people of the island empire. All the raw silk in the warehouses of the doomed Japanese city was consumed by fire or ruined by the tidal waves which inundated this famous seaport of Japan.

Millions of bales of raw silk stored elsewhere in the districts devastated by quake and fire and water were totally destroyed. As a matter of course this will have a marked effect upon the price of silk goods and heavy advances are certain to come. Japan has been taking a million bales of American cotton and no doubt will continue to buy American cotton, but a disastrous blow has been dealt to the textile industries of the kingdom which will have its effects upon the prices the world over.

Speaking of cotton again, a crop of 11,000,000 bales this year as the trade sees it, means an aggressive bull market and a heavy rise of clothing costs. It is conceded that the world is consuming about the same amount of cotton as before the coming of the world war and the cotton producing states of America are still the source of almost two-thirds of the staple.

Those who are familiar with the cotton industry declare the world's cotton situation is alarming. First, American crops have dropped below their former high productive figures and the textile world has been using up its reserve. Second, Egypt, which is second on the list as a producer of cotton, is also producing famine crops. The crop of 1923 is reported 30 per cent less in volume than that of 1922. Third, Russia has been eliminated as a producer and exporter of the staple. Fourth, China's production is sufficient for home needs.

Warehouses of the world are bare. Cotton reserves have melted away. There is a minimum supply perhaps for a maximum demand and the garment buyers of the world are reminded that very high priced cotton calls for very high priced cotton goods. There should be money in cotton this year.

A KANSAS INDIAN.

Kansas republicans of the old guard are rallying around the standard of Senator Charles Curtis as their presidential hope next year. He is the nearest to an all American candidate mentioned thus far in the campaign. Senator Curtis is an Indian, his mother was a member of the Kaw tribe and he lived with his mother's people in early boyhood.

It is a long jump from a Kaw wigwam to the senate of the United States but Curtis made it in the long ago. He isn't a hundred per cent American. He is a five hundred per cent American and the only thing that prevents him from being a thousand per cent is that his father was a white man which reduces his batting average, politically speaking, from a thousand to five hundred.

Senator Robert L. Owen of Oklahoma is part Cherokee. He was the favorite son of Oklahoma at San Francisco—but even with the powerful backing of William Jennings Bryan, Senator Owen never received the vote of a single delegate from an outside state.

England controls the crude rubber supply of the world through the ownership of rubber plantations by British corporations but the world's export of tires is now distributed as follows: France 40 per cent, United States 25 per cent, England 12 per cent, Italy 7 per cent, Germany 5 per cent and all others 11 per cent. John Bull, as a trader, must have lost his cunning.

General Alvardo Obregon is the man of the hour as well as a man of destiny. Mexico is coming into her own.

One Place Where America Can Participate in Foreign Affairs Without Hesitation As to Consequences

THE BRIGHT SHAWL

"In reality," Charles replied, "I fence very awkwardly. But you have often seen me: I havent any need to tell you that."

"That can never be established without experience," the Spaniard asserted. "I should have to feel your wrist against mine. If you will be patient, if you will wait for me, I'll risk a public humiliation."

Charles Abbott said evenly: "I'd be very glad to fence with you, of course."

When De Vaca flawlessly appointed, returned, Charles rose steadily, and strapped on his mask, tightened the leather of the plastron. A murmur or subdued amusement followed their walking out together on to an unoccupied strip—De Vaca was a celebrated swordsman.

The foils struck together, there was a conventional pass and parry, and from that moment Charles Abbott lost control of his steel. At a touch from De Vaca's scarcely perceptible, his foil rose or fell, swept to one side or the other; a lunge would end in the button describing a whole arc, and pointing either to the matting or the ceiling.

The laughter from the chairs grew louder, more unguarded. De Vaca began to make points, touches, wherever he chose—with a remarkably timed twist he tore the cloth heart from Charles' wadding; he indicated, as though he were a teacher with a pointer, anatomical facts and regions; De Vaca seemed to be calling Charles' attention, by sharp premonitory taps, to what he might have been saying. Then Charles grasped what, he was certain, was the purpose of the attack. It was the result of a cold effort, a set determination to destroy what courage he had.

"If I collapse," Charles told himself, "it will be for eternity."

Any sense of time was disintegrated in a physical agony which required all his wasting being to combat. But, even worse than that far more destructive, was the assault upon his mind. If he crumbled . . . he thought of himself as dust, his brain a dry powder in his skull. Soon, Charles felt, he would fall into unreckoned depths of corrupt shadows, among the obscene figures of the hideous lost.

The sweat streaming into his mouth turned thick and salt—blood, from his nose. There was a tumult in his head; his fencing now was the mere waving of a reed.

Sharply, incomprehensibly, it was over. Dropping forward upon his knees, he saw De Vaca, with his mask on his arm, frowning.

"Now," Charles Abbott thought luxuriously, "I can faint and be damned to them."

The cloud of darkness which flowed over him was empty of the vileness of fear; rather, like the beneficience of night, it was an utterly peaceful remission of the flesh.

CHAPTER XVI.
Charles' Ambition.

Charles' physical exhaustion, the weariness of his mind, continued in a settled lassitude through the following day. He was to see Andres Escobar, give him what information he had from La Clavel, the next morning at the baths of the Campos Elliseos; and meanwhile he scarcely stirred from the San Felipe. He had changed appreciably during his stay in Havana; even his physiognomy was different—how, he couldn't say, but he was aware that his expression had, well, hardened. The cure which had been the principally hoped-for result of Cuba was complete. In spite of his collapse in the fencing school, he was more compacity strong than ever before. It occurred to him that now, he might be described as a man.

The schooling of the past week, together with the stiffening of his spirit, had bred a new practicality in him, superior, he felt, to any sheer heroics.

In this, he recognized, his mind was different from the Escobar's, from the blind fervor of the many Cuban patriots he knew. When it was possible, men of the widest possible activities talked to him of their plans.

In short, Charles Abbott felt, that he might become a power: and this he coolly set himself to bring about. His heritage was that of success.

La Clavel noticed a marked difference in him, but proclaimed that it was no more than an increase in his natural propensity for high-mindedness. It fatigued her, she declared, to be with him, made her dizzy to gaze up at his altitude of mind.

He was seated in her room, the hairdresser was sweating in the attempt to produce an effect she was describing to him with phrases as stinging as the whip of foils, while Charles watched her with a degree of annoyance. Her humors where he was concerned, were unpredictable; and lately she had found a special delight in attacks on his dignity. She said and did things—an air of innocence hiding her malice—indecently ribald that shook his firmest efforts to appear, to be, unconcerned.

At last, in a volatile rage, she dismissed the servant with his tongs and prunatum and crimping leads, and arose to Charles Abbott that she must sail to Argentine by the first boat that offered passage.

"I am sick of Cuba, and I've forgotten that I am an artist, and that is bad. You are wrapped up in this liberty, and that is very well for you, an ordinary person. But me, I am not an ordinary person; I am La Clavel. I am more valuable to the world than pumpkins or republics. She seized the castanets lying on her dressing table—in answer to their irritable rythmic clinking she projected, for an instant, a vision of all desire.

There was an indefinite stir at the door, a short knock, and he moved to the window as Santacilla entered unceremoniously.

The Spaniard, a model of politeness of consideration, listened to La Clavel's determination to go to South America. It was an excellent plan, he agreed: they would welcome her rapturously in Buenos Ayres.

"But what will our young American do?" he demanded. "How will he live without his delight? But perhaps he is going to the Argentine with you. He will have a busy time, and a handful of challenges there, where beauty is appreciated to the full."

Charles said, with an appearance of sullenness, that he hadn't been invited to go further south: and Santacilla replied that as a matter of fact, it might be necessary for him to remain, perhaps forever, in Havana. He spoke cheerfully, but a vague quality of his bearing, his voice, was disturbing, mocking. His words had the air of an underlying meaning different from their sound.

An uneasiness, as well, was communicated to La Clavel; she watched Santacilla with an indirect puzzled gaze.

Charles too had a sense of impending danger, a premonition of clashing sound, of discord.

And, whatever, developed, he must meet it, subdue and conquer it. Ceaza y Santacilla, he saw, was not visibly armed; but, probably, he would carry a Small pistol. The one his father had given him was in Charles' pocket.

The difficulty was that, in the event of a disturbance, no matter what the outcome here might happen to be, the dancer and he would bear the weight of any Spanish fury. And it was no part of his intention to be cut in half by bullets behind a fortress wall.

He could only delay, discover as soon as possible what was behind Santacilla's deceiving patience and good humor. Upon that he would have to act without hesitation and with no chance of failure. La Clavel said, "I know you so well, Ceaza, what it is; what is it you are saying and saying without speaking of? It seems as though you were threatening me, and that, you best should realize is useless!"

His flickering eyes rested first on her and then upon Charles Abbott. "You will never get to South America now," he asserted; "for you are a conspirator against your king. Since you have shown such a love of Cuban soil you are to become a part of it,—forever."

CHAPTER XVII.
"It Is Not in My Star."

Charles Abbott, now standing by the door, shot in the bolt which secured it, and by a fortunate, a chance twist, broke off the handle. Santacilla, undisturbed, remained seated, smiling while his fingers played with the plaited loop of his cane.

"This infatuation," he indicated them with a wave, "while it convinced Havana, never entirely satisfied me. I have been watching you, Jobaba has been listening for days. You were very cunning, but in the end you failed, you were neither skilful nor patient enough. Yet,at the last, all that you heard were fairy tales."

La Clavel faced him calmly, but Charles saw, she was pale. He was revolving a hundred impractical schemes; they had only one end, the death of Santacilla but how that was to be brought about with safety to Cuba eluded him.

"I am not a traitor in the way you mean," she declared: "what your conceit never allowed you to note was that in Spain and here, I have always detested you; and what I did was the result of that. I struck at you and not our country, for the court and church and army are no longer our strength—if we still have any except the knife and cord—but our weakness.

"Fools," he asserted, unmoved.

"And now you are the fool," she added.

More Truth Than Poetry

By James J. Montague

THE LOAFER

To town young Jasper Johnson came,
Intent to make a splash,
To earn no end of ringing fame
And goodly piles of cash.
"Work never made no hit with me,"
Observed this callow oaf.
"I'll toil two years, or mebbe three,
And then I'm going to loaf.

The day that Jasper came to town
To carry out this course,
He got a job, and held it down,
By working like a horse.
When other eyes were on the clock,
He kept the books and learned the stock,
And never looked around.

Quite soon he made the shining pile
On which his heart was set,
And grimly said "I'll rest a while,
And then I'll loaf, you bet."
The years went by, and still he bent
Above his task each day,
And all his evening hours were spent
In making business pay.

At night he often used to dream
Of where he meant to spend
His loafing days—the silver stream,
The cottage at the bend.
But when, to join the caravan,
Poor Jasper got the call,
And answered it, the poor old man
Had never loafed at all.

WHAT TODAY MEANS

By MARY BLAKE

VIRGO

This day starts out well, and is really excellent for all important matters. After the noon hour, the aspects become adverse and you must be cautious in crossing streets or risking any kind of danger. Wide differences are apt to occur in friendly and domestic relationships, and it is advisable to suppress haste and a domineering attitude.

A child born today will be joyous in disposition, but should be well nurtured.

You are impetuous if today is your birthday, and governed almost by impulse and intuition. Of course, you do not appreciate this fact—impulsive people never do—as their minds always find reasons for their actions, but usually after actions have commenced and have a great headway.

Your mind, however, is usually slept, and you will never be at a loss to explain your own to yourself, it not to others.

You have a brilliant imagination, one that sees, hears and feels, and with your talent for expression you should have some success as a writer. Your mind is too impatient, however, to be profoundly analytical.

You have the money sense in a degree which is surprising in one so temperamental. You are a born gambler, but you estimate the odds with excellent foresight, and you should win a great deal more than you lose.

You are kind, generous and sympathetic, from the most idealistic motives. You cannot bear to see suffering; in fact, your perceptive sympathy makes all the misery you see your own sensation, and you must do something to alleviate it.

Emotionally, you are responsive, and at moments you have a passionate nature which passes all credence. You attract the opposite sex, and you like to be attracted by them. But to be forewarned, you are not the matrimonial type. You are a little too anxious at all times to have every new love develop into a serious affair. You try to imagine yourself married to anyone who seems to be attracted by you. You have a way of conveying this to your victims without the use of words, which immediately scares them off.

Successful people born on this day are:

Raphael Pumpelly, geologist and author.

Emile Poulsson, kindergartner.

FRIGHTENED MULE KILLS A WACO BOY

By The Associated Press.

WACO, Texas, Sept. 7.—Senon Phillip Jr., aged 15, had his neck broken and died almost instantly Friday afternoon when he was knocked down by the hoof of a mule, the team becoming frightened and running away, the wagon, loaded with cotton seed, passing over the boy and crushing him.

The accident occurred on the farm of Dr. Ralph Steiner, former state health officer, 12 miles below Waco. Something went wrong with the harness and the boy alighted to repair it, when one of the mules reared up and began pawing, the blow felling the boy.

IRRIGATION

By A. M. McPHERSON
Consulting Engineer
Kahn Bldg., Eighth and Indiana

Into what sized farms should the surplus lands on the irrigation project be divided?

SILAGE CROPS.

The preservation of green stuffs in the form of silage depends primarily upon the exclusion of air. If air is excluded almost any green plant can be preserved in the form of silage.

A slight fermentation generally takes place in silage which renders most plants more digestible. Vegetation that is not eaten by cattle in the fields are consumed with relish in the form of silage.

This does not mean of course that all feeds are better preserved by siloing for such is not the case, but it does mean that siloing will preserve in an edible and appetizing form many feeds that would not otherwise be available. To illustrate this point: In certain cases, Russian thistles, a most obnoxious weed has been successfully siloed and afterward eaten by cattle with great eagerness. The Russian thistle in any other form is not eaten by stock except in most extreme cases.

The commonest silage crop is corn. The grain sorghums are also used to a considerable extent.

The corn is cut at various stages in its development, but the best period is at the time the grain has become glazed. Then the feed values are high and the stalks and leaves are yet green enough to make a succulent feed.

The corn is shredded, or more commonly chopped, by special machines and conveyed into the silo by blowing or mechanical conveyors.

When in the silo it must be packed thoroughly, generally by men tramping it, to exclude the air. The more air that is excluded the better the silage. Of course, the silo itself must be air tight.

TEXANS WILL SEE HORSE SOLDIERS IN BIG MOBILIZATION

WASHINGTON, D. C., Sept. 7.—Texas is soon to see a monster mobilization of the horse soldiers of Uncle Sam.

The concentration of the First cavalry division in the vicinity of the Big Bend cattle district, under command of Major General R. L. Howze from September 25 to October 6, will be the largest assembly of cavalry troops since the civil war and the heaviest mobilization which has ever been massed on the Mexican border. The Second cavalry brigade will be under the command of Brig. Gen. Joseph E. Castner, while the First brigade will be commanded by Col. Walter C. Short.

On October 3 a special military problem will be demonstrated 12 miles south of Marfa, while on the 5th a general review will be held of all troops one mile east of Marfa. Polo matches, baseball games, boxing matches and other athletic contests will take up considerable of the time which will include a cowboy roundup and a rodeo. In addition to a number of Washington officials and army officers, all of the foreign military attaches have been invited to attend the maneuvers, which will be the most pretentious which the cavalry division has held in years.

FROM SHEER SIMPLICITY TO SOPHISTICATION!

Plain Lines For Youth In Negligee and Dance Frock

The apricot colored negligee shown on the left of the illustration would be a charming addition to the trunk of the college girl or bride. Cording on the collar, sleeves and hem is in a robbins egg blue, an attractive color combination.

The little dance frock on the right would delight any young girl. It is fashioned entirely of ribbon and lace insertion. The ribbon is a shell pink and the lace is white. It is made on very simple lines needing no adornment but the materials from which it is made.

The costume in the center is far more sophisticated than either of the others. It is black velvet with collar, cuffs and bottom of the jacket of red fox fur. The jacket is heavily embroidered in green and red beads and banding of the same trims the edge of the skirt. The jacket fastens to the side and the skirt has a slight drape in front that recalls the peg top of days gone by. No very young person should attempt to wear such a suit as it is better suited to the more mature.

Miss Laura Harlan, daughter of the late associate justice, has been retained in the White House as Mrs. Coolidge's social secretary. She acted in that capacity for Mrs. Harding. Miss Harlan is very well known in Washington social circles.

FEMINISM IN SOUTH AMERICA

"There is an unmistakable woman movement in South America," writes Carrie Chapman Catt in The Woman Citizen, "but it is in that state of individual effort which preceded the organized demand for various rights before 1848 in the United States. Women are admitted to universities in most of the South American countries, and women's colleges exist, although not of high standards of curricula. Girls go to the United States, France or England to take degrees, and governments assist girls to education along special lines in foreign countries in order to improve the quality of home teaching. Young women study law and a few practice it. There are several women physicians in each country, and we found women journalists everywhere, although limited in the character of work done. Curious invasions of old-time customs are seen such as street car conductors and women hotel staffs in Chile and women bank clerks in Panama. The Y. W. C. A. has branches in all the countries we visited and has led out in several directions quite new in South America."

RECEIVE STRIKE FUND

Thousands of women and girls were thrown out of employment in factories by the French occupation of the Ruhr district, but ignore domestic service offered them because they receive strike funds from Berlin and local municipalities amounting to more than wages in homes. It is as difficult to obtain housemaids in Germany as in this country.

The Agricultural department reports that American women used 20,000,000 pounds of face powder last year. This is an average of about eight ounces for each woman.

BREAD AND SUGAR RATIONED IN BERLIN

Sugar is being rationed out in Berlin. No person is permitted to have more than two pounds a month. Milk and bread also are on Berlin's ration list.

The price of bread in Paris and the Seine department is the highest that has been known since the siege of Paris in 1870. Bread is the chief foodstuff of the French population.

THE HABIT OF HAPPINESS.

Men love happy women, be they short or tall, fat or thin, beautiful or homely, have them nappy, me say.

So many men are married to unhappy women that nowadays a woman who even looks happy attracts a man.

Cheerful women, are always popular and vivacious and buoyant people are welcome in most any crowd.

Happy people are in demand, in business, in social and domestic life.

And happy girls have more beaux than they have time for, happy wives have more devotion from their husband than gloomy wives.

Happiness lies within us all and it is up to us to bring it to the surface.

So in the scheme of life it is awfully worth while to try to be happy—yes, in spite of everything.

Miss Carmelita Geraghty is not a stranger around the picture studios, as her father is Thomas Geraghty, supervising director for Lasky's. As you might guess from the name, Mr. Geraghty is Irish but Carmelita's mother is Spanish and related to Benjamin DeCrasseres, poet, essayist and satirist.

This Span-Irish combination would be hard to beat and it is no wonder that Miss Carmelita, the "Baby Star" as she has been called is making a name for herself in pictures.

She plays a society ingenue role in Cosmopolitan's coming production of "The Daughter of Mother McGinn," and also has a part in Mary Pickford's new picture, "Rosita." She is now appearing in Maurice Tournaur's production, "Jealous Fools."

"It doesn't seem possible," commented Keaton.

ZONAGALE

With Russell Gore Writes On In Collaboration

FRIED POTATOES

The weeping mother said:

"We thought she was getting well. She was ever so much better. Why, she was downstairs and ate a plateful of fried potatoes the night she died."

Then she went on wondering why God had afflicted her. She had always done her best, she had tried to do her duty to her family; they had always paid their pew rent. And yet here she was, chastened in the death of this beautiful child of seven. What justice was there in that? What justice was there in the universe? Could it be possible that there was a God.

That mother's argument is doubtless duplicated every day, all round the world. One stays too long in the water, contracts pneumonia and others wonder why God sees fit for him to die. A baby eats ice cream that has stood all night in a freezer, and the babies' illness and death become mysteries of the ways of providence. A man driving fast, turns out to avoid a disabled car, and collides with a third car approaching on the wrong side of the road. Once more God has "seen fit to call home" some of the occupants of the two cars.

It is astonishing how this kind of "arguments survives." Survives, too, for the less obvious catastrophies—losses which can not be traced to their sources. In the middle ages epidemics were "acts of God," just as accidents are now so dubbed by coroners' juries. In a corner's jury one can forgive it, but not in a human heart faced with a solemn experience and merely instead trying to shift a responsibility.

In a wise book by Professor Josiah Royce there is a chause set in italics. It is in a chapter called "The Problem of Job" in "Studies of Good and Evil" and it is this:

"When you suffer, your sufferings are God's sufferings. Not his external penalty, not the fruit of his neglect, but identically his own personal woe."

This makes another thing of sorrow. And it harmonizes with the rest of our sense of God. Not the old sense of the God of fear, but the God of Love. Not God in some far-off heaven, but God near, in us and through us, "closer than breathing." Not then, the afflicter, but the sorrower, with us. And so we will say, not that one is "removed, in the providence of God" but that God and his children suffer together, and triumph together over suffering.

TEXT BOOKS COST $1.70 PER CHILD

AUSTIN, Texas, Sept. 7.—Free text books furnished in Texas schools have cost the taxpayers of Texas $1.70 per year for each school child, according to figures compiled by S. M. N. Marrs, state superintendent of education.

Mr. Marrs outlines plans by which surplus of books bought last year under contracts which expired when the book commission attempted to make new contracts, but the new contracts were held void in federal court, will be distributed, so as to cause as little shortage as possible in schools this year. Only where books cannot be furnished from other schools, will school districts find it necessary to buy the texts, out of local maintenance funds.

Mr. Marrs recommended that where no surplus could be found, that school boards then purchase necessary books from publishers, and pay for them out of local maintenance funds. This will prevent parents having to buy the books for pupils, he pointed out. Books may be purchased by the individual patrons however, if they desire. The plan suggested, Mr. Marrs stated, deals only with purchase of essential "basal" texts.

These books are: World Geographies, Rhetoric, Essentials of Arithmetic; Physics, Agriculture and Graves Muscular writing system.

Companies or book depositories, Mr. Marrs stated, will deliver these books to school boards on payment of the contract purchase price printed on the books.

One publisher announced his books will have the new contract prices printed in them, rather than the old prices.

WILL INVESTIGATE WHISKEY PERMITS

AUSTIN, Tex., Sept. 7.—Comptroller Lon A. Smith has gone to Houston to make a detailed inspection into the handling by drug stores of permits to dispense whiskey, and of prescription-writing by doctors in South Texas towns. Mr. Smith stated that several complaints have been received, charging violations of the Dean law and of regulations of his department. Permits will be revoked after hearing, wherever evidence sustains the charges, he said.

Comptroller Smith stated that appropriations were made by the legislature, becoming available September 1, to permit inspections under such charges, and that wrongful practices will be investigated.

MAY USE PLANES IN MINE RESCUE

By The Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 7.—The adaptability of airplanes as aids to mine rescue work is being tested by the Department of the Interior near Birmingham, Alabama, where a landing field has been located, and trial flights of ships are being made carrying trained men of the Bureau of Mines, equipped with oxygen breathing apparatus, to help in imaginary mine disasters. Other fields are to be located at mining towns within reasonable flying range of Birmingham, the mine rescue station.

The bureau maintains ten railway cars and seven auto trucks equipped for mine-rescue purposes, but it often requires considerable time to send these mobile units to remote mining camps where they are needed in emergencies. It is hoped to demonstrate the value of the air route in supplementing the work of these cars, especially in reaching the camps where fields are available.

Convicted of Assault.

VERNON, Texas, Sept. 7.—The jury in the case of W. T. Langston, charged in district court here with assault on the person of his 14-year-old stepdaughter, returned a verdict of guilty at 9 o'clock last night, and fixed the punishment at 5 years in the state penitentiary.

Two full days of court were occupied by the trial. A large number of witnesses were examined. The indictment alleges that the criminal attack was made here last April.

The case of Joe Collins, charged with rape on the person of his own daughter, is being tried today.

WOMAN WAS SAVED FROM OPERATION

Mrs. Morris Was So Weak Before Taking Stella Vitae She Couldn't Sit Up

"I was taken to the hospital for an operation but was too weak to stand it, so they took me back home and I recovered my health and strength by taking Stella Vitae," said Mrs. W. O. Morris, 424 Hopkins St., Waco, Texas.

"When my baby was born I suffered agony and had to stay in bed for a long time. An operation was necessary—at least that was what they said. But when they examined me they said it might prove fatal as I was in no condition to stand it.

"I began taking Stella Vitae and gradually my strength returned. I gained five pounds and the operation was never necessary. I got along fine and although that was 10 years ago I have never had any return of my trouble."

Stella Vitae may be obtained from any druggist and the purchase price will be refunded if it fails to bring relief.—Adv.

Women to attract must Radiate Health!

BEAUTY is the magnet which draws all eyes—and back of beauty—Health—working silently. Red blood tingling through the veins;—the glow of youth in the cheeks;—the spring of eagerness, of vim, of vitality in the walk;—the ever graceful air, unrestrained by care or worry.—All the charms of beauty. All the works of health.

Men are fascinated by the charms of beauty. Women gaze with envy, secretly jealous, perhaps—wondering—hoping—praying for that attractiveness that is not theirs.

But why the wondering—the hoping—the praying for that craved-for attractiveness—that beauty. Good looks is the barometer of one's condition. Good health radiates beauty. S. S. S. purifies the blood—creates new red blood cells—rids the system of impurities which make beauty and attractiveness impossible. As women to attract must radiate health so must they keep their systems free from impurities and their red blood cells ever increasing. S. S. S. does both.

S. S. S., since 1826, has been ridding the system of impurities—pimples, blackheads, boils, eczema and rheumatism—building red blood cells—aiding women to be attractive by radiating health. S. S. S. is made of carefully selected herbs and barks, scientifically prepared and proportioned. All good drug stores carry S. S. S. It is more economical to purchase the large size bottle.

Spuds Take Opener In Tenth Frame, 3 to 2

BISCHOFF POUNDS OUT TWO HOMERS; HOOK COTTER WINS GAME WITH TIMELY SINGLE

Hitting of Spudder Receiver Too Much For Beaumont Twirler and Carlson Wins Hurling Duel For Twentieth Victory of Season.

The Spudders celebrated the opening of the last series with the Beaumont Exporters by trimming the visitors 3 to 2 in a fast 10-inning fray. George Bischoff, with a couple of homers to his credit and a perfect record at the bat, carried off the big end of the laurels, but to Hook Cotter went the credit for pounding in the winning run, when he sent a clean single to left in the tenth after two were out, scoring Bescher from second.

The game was Carlsons 20th victory of the season, and was well deserved, the Spudder twirler showing a brand of pitching that held the visitors to two runs. He found Caldera a formidable opponent, though, and the Beaumont moundsman made the ball hard for the Spuds to find. Caldera allowed eight hits, but was unable to stop the slugging of Bischoff, and the little Spudder catcher managed to park the ball twice and to draw a couple of walks.

An unusual small crowd saw the game, which was one of the fastest played at the local park this season. Less than three hundred spectators were in the stands.

Demaggio Hits.

Demaggio started the fireworks by slamming out a single to left on the first ball pitched, and for a time it looked as though the visitors would draw first blood, but he failed to go farther than second base. After reaching the keystone sack on Turgeon's safe bunt through the box, he watched Allen Kirkman, and Black go out in flys to the outfield.

The Spudders were robbed of a counter in their half of the first frame, when Bescher attempted to steal third after smashing a fast double along the third base line. Had he been content to stay on second, it is entirely possible that he would have scored the run which would have prevented the tie, but his attempted steal made an easy out.

In the second frame Huber hit safely, and went to second on Bischoff's wild throw to first. He stole third, but Carlson tightened and the Exporters were unable to force the run across the rubber. The Spudders failed to threaten, but in the third made their first count.

Bischoff Gets Homer.

Bischoff, who has hit perfect ball in the last three games, uncorked a wallop on his first trip to bat that sent the horsehide sailing over the left field wall for a score, giving the Spudders a lead which he doubled in the fifth inning by duplicating the home run trick. His next two trips to the plate resulted in walks.

Strong started the Exporters on their way in the seventh frame, when he doubled against the left field fence. He scored on Hubber's single. The Beaumont crew knotted the count, when they annexed another in the eighth, as the result of three safe hits. Turgeon opened the attack with a single, taking second when Allen went out at first. Kirkman sent him across with a wallop to left field, but Black's double failed to score Kirkman and Carlson faned Strong.

The ninth failed to break the tie and it was up to Bob Bescher to start the Spuds toward a win in the 10th with a clean single to right. After Coombs was out Locker went in for Weiss and failed to connect. Tanner walked, sending Bescher to second, and Cotter accounted for the winning run with a single to center field.

KENTUCKY'S PRIDE VS. ENGLISH DERBY WINNER

Zev's Race Against Papyrus Will Be Race Of the Century

America's turf followers soon will have an opportunity to witnessing the "race of the century."

If present plans do not miscarry, Papyrus, winner of the famous English derby will meet America's best three-year-old at Belmont park, Oct. 20, for a $100,000 purse.

At the present writing Zev, the brown son of The Finn and Miss Kearney, carrying the colors of the Rancocas stable, seems to be the outstanding three-year-old of the 1923 season but a special trial race will be held to pick the American entry in the international derby.

It is stated that the owners of America's best three-year-olds have consented to have them participate in the trial race. The entries for this are expected to include besides Zev, H. T. Wilson, Jr.'s, Wilderness, Harry Whitney's Flagstaff, J. S. Cosden's Dunlin and Martin Preakness at Pimlico, Zev bids fair and Admiral Cary T. Grayson's My Own.

It is a bit early to predict the winner of the national trial race but most every race follower and fan would like to see the Rancocas colt match speed with the British winner.

With the Kentucky derby, the Withers, Paumonok, the Belmont and and rainbow stakes won and its only setback the defeat in the Preakness at Pimlico, Zev bid fair to win place in the hearts of the racing fans equal to that held by those famous campaigners Man 'o War and Exterminator, only to have the dope upset when the colt step on a stone during training at Belmont park causing the horse to be withdrawn from the tracks.

At present the brown colt is in training at Saratoga and according to Sam Hildreth, his trainer, "he's doing fine."

Papyrus, coming to the United States as the leading three-year-old of the English turf, is the son of the American bred sire, Tracery, bred by Major August Belmont, one of the moving spirits in arranging the present international race, at his nursery stud in Kentucky. Papyrus's dam, Miss Matty, is a daughter of Marcovil, a son of Marco.

The pedigree reads:

Papyrus, by Tracery-Miss Matty, by Marcovil, son of Marco, from Simonath, by St. Simon from Philomath, by Philamon, by Solon, from Chrysalis, by Lecturer, from Winged, by Artillery, from Queen Bee, by Artillery.

Tracery, which was the son of the great Rock Sand was sold by Major Belmont to Senor Unze of Rrgentina a few years ago for the record price of $265,000,000.

Above, Papyrus, English Derby winner, and, below, Zev, winner of the Kentucky classic

Big Fight Sale Already $800,000

By The Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Sept 7.—The advance sale of tickets for the Firpo-Dempsey championship fight at the Polo Grounds next Friday night has amounted to approximately $800,000 so far, Tex Rickard revealed today. The promoter declared it exceeded the advance sale for any previous title match he has promoted, including the Dempsey-Carpentier fight, which established a record "gate" of $1,000,000 two years ago.

In the event of a sell-out for the Dempsey-Firpo match, Rickard said, the total receipts will reach $1,200,000. The seating capacity of the Polo Grounds will be about 80,000.

NO HIT GAME WON BY EHMKE

Second of Kind in City Played in One Week

By The Associated Press.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 7.—Howard Ehmke, of the Boston Red Sox, received credit for the second no-hit, no-run game pitched in this city during the week, when he shut out the Athletics today, 4 to 0. The game was similar to the performance of Sam Jones of the New York Yankees last Tuesday in that one man walked and one reached first on an error.

In the sixth inning Bryan Harris, who opposed Ehmke on the mound, had a chance to spoil his rival's record but was out on a long drive for not touching first base. Then in the eighth, when it seemed that Ehmke would surely reach his goal, Welch hit a liner to left. Menosky reached the ball but fumbled it, sufficiently for Welch to reach first.

At first it was recorded as a single but before the inning was concluded the official scorer ruled that Menosky had committed an error and Ehmke's record was safe.

WILDCAT TESTS HOLD INTEREST

No. 1 Ancell Swabbed 15 Barrels and Will Be Drilled In

Drilling inactivity in and around Electra continues is the key note of the oil situation. Considerable interest has been evinced by operators watching several very interesting wildcat tests which are now drilling around here.

Probably the most important of these is the Ancell No. 1 which swabbed 15 barrels of oil the middle of the week. Efforts will be made to drill this well in immediately and indications are that a good well will yet be brought in. This well is located in section 10, block 7, H. & T. C. R. R. survey on the Ancell ranch. The closest production is seven miles on the Waggoner ranch. It was first reported that the test was good for 75 barrels; but this proved to be erroneous as only the top of the sand was touched. In attempting to drill the well in last week, the derrick was burned in a fire. The owners are optimistic that a good well will yet be developed here and in that event should provide sufficient incentive for further drilling even at the present price of crude.

The Wolf Hill test located about 7 1-2 miles northwest of Electra was drilling at 1264 the middle of the week. This is a wildcat test which is being drilled by Byrnes and Co., of Fort Worth and is known as the Corder No. 1.

Dallas and Wichita Falls men are contemplating drilling another wildcat in the vicinity of the Wolf Hill test, about a couple of miles northwest.

START ON BETTER STATISTIC TRIP

WASHINGTON, D. C., Sept. 17.—W. C. Hill, petroleum economist of the Bureau Mines, Department of the Interior, is now on a tour for the purpose of conferring with petroleum refiners in the central, western and southwestern states relative to the collection of statistics regarding the production and consumption of gasoline, kerosene, lubricating oils, gas and fuel oils, etc.

The object of Mr. Hill's trip is to receive suggestions from refiners as to possible improvements in the method of preparation of these monthly statistical reports, as to the incorporation of new features, and as to means for obtaining more prompt publication. His itinerary includes Chicago, St. Louis, Kansas City, Denver, Salt Lake City, San Francisco, Los Angeles and various California towns, El Paso, San Antonio, Houston, Waco, Fort Worth, Dallas, Burkburnett, Wichita Falls, Tulsa, Bartlesville, Ardmore, Oklahoma City, Enid and Grandfiled, Oklahoma; Shreveport, Baton Rouge and New Orleans. Mr. Hill expects to return to Washington about November 1.

CAMPION WINS HIS FREIGHT RATE CASE

WASHINGTON, D. C., Sept. 7.—The Interstate Commerce Commission in the case of J. F. Campion, Tulsa petroleum dealer vs. the Santa Fe and other railroads found that rates on kerosene distillate, in tank car loads, from Wichita Falls to Drumright, Okla., was unreasonable and Campion was awarded reparation of $712.23, with interest.

A rate of 67 cents per hundred pounds was charged for the shipment by the railroads. The comuission decided that 22.5 cents was the rate that should have been charged.

The commission also ordered reparation paid to the Apache Cotton Oil and Manufacturing Company of Chickasha for overcharge on cotton seed, in carloads, from certain points in Arkansas and Louisiana. The commission gave railroads until October 20 to establish new rates from 48 stations in Arkansas and 5 stations in the northeastern portion of Louisiana. The rates prescribed run from 12.5 cents single line and 14.5 cents joint line for distances of 80 miles up to a 30 cent rate on both single and joint line for distances of 700 miles.

May Establish University In Lincoln Honor

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Sept. 7.—A university for everybody, rich and poor, open day and night, seven days a week, this is the ideal before the incorporators of the Abraham Lincoln university now being founded by the citizens of Lincoln's home town.

At meetings already held to further the idea of a national university for everybody, labor leaders and capitalists sat side by side. Among the men aiding in fostering the Lincoln university are former Senator Lawrence Y. Sherman, republican national committeeman for Illinois; John H. Walker, president of the Illinois Federation of Labor, Jewish rabbis, Protestant ministers and Catholic priests.

A fund of $100,000 is to be raised this year, according to E. E. Hagler, chairman of the university committee, and it is planned to open the institution in September, 1924.

The ideals of the university will be Lincoln's ideals, Senator Sherman said, and its founders hope to make it a selfhelp institution where anybody who wants to learn, regardless of his bank account, can study night and day and Sunday, if he cannot come at other times.

"In the classroom there is to be an honest search for truth," he declared. "The final word has not been said on morals, politics and economics. A teacher may agitate against existing institutions as much as he likes, provided only that he does not advocate reform by bloodshed and other forms of violence.

"When the country is at peace there is no part of our system which will not be the better for an exchange of ideals and free criticism freely and sincerely given. We want to instill individuality of thought and personality in the students."

An example of the interpretation of Lincolnian ideals by his fellow townsmen was evidenced at one of the meetings, attended by 200 citizens, when someone proposed that the policy of the new university be support the government against "its enemies." The meeting promptly vetoed a proposition so phrased.

"The form of our present government is not the last word," Dr. Hagler replied. "The American political institution must be elastic. We do not want to stand firmly for things as they are and deny the need of progress."

When the question of calling the institution a Christian university came up, some non-Christians on the committee objected. The policy finally adopted was to make the university Christian in the ethical sense, for the school itself will be strictly non-denominational, the committee has promised.

The ultimate hope of the founders is to make Abraham Lincoln university a national university, according to Dr. Hagler, but for the present the project and the finances of the proposed school will be furthered and supported by Springfield citizens.

MOLASSES AIDED BY RATE RULING

WASHINGTON, Sept. 7.—Impetus to the blackstrap molasses industry in Texas is expected to be lent by the recent decision of the Interstate Commerce Commission holding that freight rates on blackstrap molasses, in tank cars, from Houston, Galveston and Sugarland, Texas, to Medicine Lodge, Kansas, should be established and maintained, on the basis of the value declared in writing by the shipper.

Blackstrap molasses is used largely in the manufacture of cattle feed and much such feed is manufactured at Medicine Lodge. It is expected that permission will be sought and obtained for a similar ruling on blackstrap from Texas points to other centers manufacturing cattle feed.

Up To Railroads

James R. Howard.

The fate of American railroads now is being decided, declares James R. Howard, president of the National Turnsportation Institute. Whether the rails will dictate their own destiny or have it dictated to them depends on how the roads meet the present increasing demands for service, declares Howard.

Londoners Call Up Hello Girls To Get Dope On Weather

By The Associated Press.

LONDON.—Pity the poor English telephone girls! They are supposed to be able to tell people what the weather will be like. In this, their newest duty, perhaps they will receive a high or two of sympathy from the operators of switchboards in America who for many years bore the suffering of having subscribers ring up to ask 'What time is it, please? My clock has stopped.

Not long ago the post office, which owns all the telephones in Great Britain, arranged with the air ministry to supply each exchange with daily forecasts of the weather in its vicinity. The first month this information was available to subscribers 10,172 persons called up to find out if it was going to rain. Of course it usually was, the way of British weather being a wet one. In London most of the inquiries were made on Fridays and Saturdays. This was taken to mean that the only time people really care about climate over here is when they are set for an outing. The rest of the time they cannot be bothered, let the fogs fall where they may.

Besides it is cheaper not to care. The post office is not giving away tips on the weather for the mere fun of it. Those who get such information from "Central" must pay twopence, the cost of a regular city call.

1923 Income Tax Collected Shows A Marked Decrease

By BASCOM N. TIMMONS.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Sept. 3.—Uncle Sam has finished figuring up how much he extracted from his nephews and nieces in income profit and miscellaneous taxes for the fiscal year which ended June 30, 1923, and he made the figures public today.

And, Uncle, who hasn't been able to reduce the cost of running the government plant to any large extent finds that his nephews and nieces have no trouble whatever in paying less taxes.

The government collected 18 percent less taxes in the fiscal year just ended than in the fiscal year 1922, the figures in dollars being $3,197,451,083 in 1922 and $2,621,745,227.57 in 1923.

All but a few collection districts showed a decrease in collections. The exceptions which showed increases were Idaho, 1 per cent; New Hampshire, 37 per cent; New Jersey, 5 per cent; First New York district, 5 per cent; North Carolina, 5 per cent and Philippine Islands, 110 per cent. The largest decrease was in West Virginia where collections for 1923 were 45 per cent less than for 1922.

The first Texas district, with headquarters at Dallas, showed a decrease of [illegible] per cent, collecting $16,450,277.00 in 1923 as against $24,488,533.36 1922.

Oklahoma acreased 29 per cent, collecting $13,079,180.66 in 1923 compared with $18,402,452.77 1923.

Of other states adjoining Texas, Louisiana showed a decrease of 28 per cent; Arkansas 18 per cent and New Mexico 17 per cent.

Of internal revenue receipts from Texas which for the two districts totaled $34,634,081.93,—$2,578,068.50 was for income and profit taxes and $8,255,413.43 for miscellaneous taxes.

How taxes paid the federal government has shrunk is shown by a comparison of 1923 with the years of 1921 and 1922. The taxes collected from income and profit in Texas in 1923 were nearly more than half those of 1921. In 1921 income and profit taxes collected in Texas amounted to $82,190,451.75; in 1922 $34,978,009.92.

A peculiar feature of the collection of internal revenue receipts in the nation is that the only object on which there was increase in the amount of tax paid to the government was tobacco, opium for smoking purposes, future deliveries on sale of produce, automobiles, tires, firearms, hunting and Bowie knives, cigar holders, automatic slot machines, livery booths, playing cards, sculpture, jewelry, club dues and oleo-margarine.

The big losses were on income and profit taxes, sales of revenue stamps, transportation of freight, express and passengers; telegraph, telephone and radio messages; transportation of oil by pipe-line; chewing gum, on which the tax was removed; articles made of fur, on which the tax was removed; toilet soaps, on which the tax was removed; non-alcoholic beverages and theatre admissions.

CHARGE 200 BURNED TO DEATH BY VILLA

MEXICO CITY.—The shooting and burning alive of 200 prisoners by the late bandit leader Francisco Villa in Chihuahua after the battle of San Andres de la Sierra on Sept. 6, 1913, is related in a letter from one of the survivors published by Excelsior.

The 200 were about equally divided between wounded and uninjured, according to the story, and many of them, still alive after falling before the fire of the execution squads, were thrown screaming on the great pyre of oil-soaked timber which had been prepared and set ablaze.

Among the victims were several women camp followers, with their children, who had dared to scream curses at Villa for sacrificing their men.

The story of this survivor of General Felix Terraza's forces is equaled by other anecdotes of the fate meted out to Villistas captured by the federals, one of which narrates how more than a score of bandits were bound and thrown into a dry well, there to perish miserably of suffocation after debris had been tumbled down the well to silence their cries.

In yesterday's evening paper a grocery ad appeared requesting the public to compare their prices with PIGGLY WIGGLY prices. (We hope that everybody did, as the comparison made them look foolish.) The newspaper should not have accepted the copy at all, it being considered unethical by most newspapers, but this happened to get by the management of this newspaper.

We are very busy running our own business and taking care of the seemingly never ending crowds of new customers, and are willing to let the public decide as to the prices, quality, and cleanliness of our stores.

PIGGLY WIGGLY stores are, and will always be the trail blazers of greater values for the dollar in the finest of food stuffs and are stepping stones to a better living at less cost. And in spite of all knockers and commercial scandal mongers and hot dog howlers, PIGGLY WIGGLY will continue to lower prices, better the values, and still show a substantial but legitimate and reasonable profit on its investment.

GENERALLY FIRM TONE ON STOCKS

Some Irregularities—Revival Of Interest In Railroads

Market Features

Total stock sales 514,000 shares.
Twenty industrials averaged 92.84, net loss .16.
High 1923, 105.38; low 86.91.
Twenty railroads averaged 79.93; net gain .38.
High 1923, 90.63; low 76.78.

By The Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Sept. 6.—Price movement in today's stock market were irregular and generally inconclusive but the list as a whole exhibited a firm tone. Trading was largely a professional affair, with pool operations again evident in a number of specialties.

Revival of speculative interest in the railroad shares, which were reactionary yesterday on reports of a decrease in net income in July compared with June, was one of the day's features. Southern railway was particularly active on reports that the net earnings of the first eight months would cover the fixed charges and the preferred dividends for the entire year, the stock closing 1 5-8 points higher at 24 1-8.

Marked strength was shown by a number of specialties. Du Pont was pushed up more than three points to 140 7-8 but fell back later 138 3-8, buying being attributed to speculative expectation of a partial distribution to stockholders of the general Motors stock held by the company and of an increased demand for artificial silk products manufactured by the company as a result of the Japanese disaster.

U. S. steel common, Baldwin Studebaker, American can, and Bethlehem steel closed fractionally lower. Houston oil advanced 2 1-4 points, but most of the other shares in that group were heavy.

Some of the outstanding strong spots were Liggett & Myers up 3 3-4; General electric up 3 7-8 and Chicago Pneumatic tool, Manhattan electrical Supply, Woolworth and Postum Cereal, up 2 to 3 1-2 points.

Davison Chemical flopped back 3 1-4 points to 47, and Jones Brothers Tea dropped about 3 points.

Call money opened at 5 per cent but softened to 4 1-2 before the close. Time money continued on a 5 1-2 per cent basis for all maturities. The commercial paper market remained quiet and firm.

The feature of the foreign exchange market was a drop in German marks to 1 3-4 cents a million followed by a mysterious jump to 4 1-2 cents. The gain was not maintained. Demand sterling sold nearly a cent higher at $4.52 5-8, and Italian lire improved nearly six points to 4.31 1-2 cents. French and Belgian francs gained slightly. The Japanese rate was slightly reactionary on decoration of a 30 day moratorium in the stricken area.

MONEY At Work

Brief But Important Lessons in Finance, Markets, Stocks, Bonds and Investments.

The big advantage of a stock dividend to the investor is market ability.

Suppose a brick of cheese was selling for $1. There are only a few people who would care to buy a whole brick. More would buy a half, and probably still more a quarter.

Although no more cheese is made by cutting up the brick, the two halves or four quarters may be sold for more than the whole brick alone. Perhaps 30 cents would be paid for each quarter because of this larger demand for the smaller article.

The same principle applies to a stock dividend, which, as was explained here yesterday, is nothing more than splitting up stock into smaller shares. An investor will not make anything in a stock dividend unless he sells. If many stockholders sell, the stock may even go down.

Think it over before buying in anticipation of a stock dividend.

Fort Worth Livestock.

FORT WORTH, Sept. 7.—Regardless of the fact that receipts Friday were of very moderate proportions the cattle market was minus its usual briskness, and it was late in the day before the last of the supply had been sent over the scales. Receipts were estimated at 2,500 head of cattle and 1,500 calves.

All classes of butcher cattle cleared at rates that were around steady. Fairly good cows cleared at $3.00@3.75, cutters brought $2.00@2.65, and canners ranged around $1.50@1.75. Bulls sold within a general range of $2.50 at $3.50, with some making $3.75@4.00.

Choice light calves sold at $6.75@7.00 without peddling, and the good kinds went at $6.00@6.50.

Salesmen had to accept a decline for hogs, the market being very slow and generally 10 to 25 cents down with around 1,500 head booked. Buyers claim around 1,500 head booked. The best carload here sold at $9.15 and $9.10 was paid for wagon hogs. Most of the crop was taken at a spread of $8.75 to $9.00.

Fully steady prices were received for the few pig consignments that were on sale. The good kinds again sold freely at a range of $6.50 to $7.

Sheep faced another downward revision, the loss amounting to fully 25 cents. Good wethers topped at $7.25, the last week's close the market has right around $1.00.

COTTON ADVANCE IS CONTINUING

NEW YORK, Sept. 7.—There was a further advance in the cotton market which carried the price of October contracts up to 26.75 early this afternoon, or 65 points above yesterday's closing quotations and 263 points above the price ruling just before the publication of the government's crop report last week. The rapidity of the upward movement appeared to create more reactionary sentiment above the 26 1-2 cent level, however, and there were reactions later in the day under rather heavy realizing. October closed at 26.54, with the general market closing steady at net advances of 15 to 44 points.

The market opened steady at an advance of 2 to 4 points on December and later deliveries but two points lower on October and sold off a few points right after the call under realizing and southern hedging. These early offerings were very well absorbed by fresh buying believed to be for both trade and speculative account, and the market soon turned upward. The firmer ruling of the later cables from Liverpool encouraged the demand while the wet weather reported in eastern belt sections increased the fear of further reduction in crop estimates. Aside from that the buying was stimulated by numerous reports that the spot basis was advancing in the south and the readiness with which early offerings had been absorbed, naturally added to the confidence of buyers.

December sold up to 26.60 and January up to 26.32, with active months generally showing net advances of 47 to 65 points during the early afternoon. The buying movement then slackened and there were reactions of about 30 points which were checked by the execution of scale-down buying orders in the late trading.

Port receipts today 18,395. U. S. port stock 241,320. Exports 1,563, making 343,085 so far this season.

Marks Still Drop.

By The Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Sept. 7.—German marks continued their rapid course toward the vanishing point in today's foreign exchange market, being quoted at 1 3-4 cents a million, or 57,150,000 marks to the American dollar. Before the war when marks were worth 23.8 cents each, the marks that could be purchased for one dollar today would have cost $13,601,700.

The German reichsbank statement, now 14 days late, showed a weekly increase in circulation of 157,563,858,807,000 marks on August 23, or more than double the outstanding note circulation just one week before.

Expect Jap Loan.

By The Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Sept. 7.—Local bankers expect the Japanese government to float a reconstruction in the London and New York markets within the next three months. Japan's credit standing is excellent and it is not expected that any difficulty will be experienced in disposing of the issue to the British and American people.

WHEAT SCORES NEW ADVANCE

Was Largely Due to Lower Estimates of 1923 Canadian

By The Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Sept. 7.—Wheat scored a material advance in price today, largely as a result of lower estimates of the 1923 Canadian yield. Closing quotations were unsettled, 7-8 to 1 3-8 cents net higher, September 1.03 and December 106 3-4 to 106 7-8. Corn finished 3-8 to 3-4 cent up, oats at 1-4@3-8 to 1-2 cents gain, and provisions showing a rise, varying.

Cool weather delaying the maturity of the corn crop had a bullish effect on corn and oats. May delivery of corn reached the highest price yet this season.

Better export business helped to lift the provision market.

Cottonseed Active.

NEW YORK, Sept. 7.—Influenced again by advances in cotton and lard, the cotton seed oil market was fairly active and firmer. Crude oil was stronger and speculative buying carried late months to new highs for the season, where they met liberal realising sales. Last prices were five to twenty points net higher. TWO ELECTRA MEN ARE SENTENCED

ELECTRA, Sept. 7.— Two of the local men arrested in the recent wholesale thefts of automobiles have been tried in Vernon and found guilty. Pete Ellison received a sentence of four years and Finnie Carroll receiving a five year sentence. Both men pleaded guilty to the charge. Officers Shook and Macey of this city, were in Vernon the first part of the week in the capacity of witnesses. The case against the other two men will not be tried until the next session of court.

Rain Aided Cotton.

The recent rains have done much to add growth to the cotton in this district. Very little of the cotton has yet bolled out. Some concern is felt, however that the rains may cause it to mature so late in the year that it is likely to be caught by the first frosts. Old timers considered September 20th as about the point from which cotton can safely mature

TEACHERS' MEET CLOSED AT NOON

700 Teachers From Five Counties Attended—Here Next Year

The teachers institute which has been attended by 700 teachers from five counties and began last Monday morning closed at noon Friday after hearing reports from the committee of resolutions and selecting Wichita Falls for the 1924 meeting.

The institute fee will next year be $1.50 instead of $1. The removal of the office of county superintendent from politics and placing such an office in the hands of a board similar to that which chooses a city superintendent, was one of the resolutions adopted. A resolution indorsing Lee Clark, formerly city school superintendent here and now at Gainesville, as president of the next state teachers' association was also adopted. The people of Wichita Falls, the Parent-Teachers' association, the labor council and the chamber of commerce, were voted thanks for courtesies extended the teachers during the institute.

The concluding address of the institute was by T. O. Borden of the state department of education who emphasized the value of teachers organizing in institutes.

Each woman was given 500 tickets to be sold which she will distribute among the members of her organization.

Lutherans Meet.

The panhandle conference convened for its annual fall session here in the St. Paul's Lutheran church at 9 o'clock Friday morning with about 25 Lutheran pastors of the panhandle present.

The Rev. P. J. Klend of Onley read a doctrinal paper discussing the causes for divorce according to Holy Scripture. The paper proved interesting, showing it was carefully prepared. All agreed unanimously with the essayist and subscribed to the doctrine of Scripture as interpreted by the Lutheran church in its writings, the divorce should be granted only for desertion or unfaithfulness to the marriage vows.

Old Home Town Stuff

THINGS YOU SAY, DO AND SEE AND SOME YOU DON'T

Town Stuff might as well start it as anybody else so "Do Your Christmas Shopping Early."

The Texas-Oklahoma fair trade-trippers will not tell us everything they did when they get back.

Atticus Webb, who has been known literally as a "boom fighter" in Texas a number of years ran into a fist fighter at Dallas yesterday.

"Pussyfoot" Johnson, another Anti-Saloon league official, got an eye knocked out while telling the corn specialists they would go blind from drinking the stuff.

The cases of Atticus and "Pussyfoot" made us cry out with that French woman about to be guillotined "Liberty, liberty! What crimes are committed in thy name!"

Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Stuckey and Mr. and Mrs. J. Warren Sparks have returned from Colorado.

So now women's hosiery are quoted at $100 the pair. Another excellent reason for so many bachelors and oh yes divorces.

Several teachers are taking examinations for higher certificates in Justice Gibbs' court, under the direction of J. C. Mathis of the Wichita city schools.

Town Stuff has received the following reasons on the subject "Why Methuselah Lived So Long":

He didn't have to drive or dodge automobiles.

He didn't ruin his eyesight because there were no flappers.

He didn't have to be driven to suicide because there were no jellybeans to make him think his sex was becoming decadent.

He didn't have to chose between gasoline and corn whiskey and wood alcohol when he wanted a hard drink.

He never entered politics.

There were no railway crossings.

He let his beard grow out and no barber had a chance to talk him to death.

Nobody wore hose and he didn't have to try to rustle a few $100 pairs of stockings for his women folks.

Corn flake ad says "why run like corn best." There are possibly some who will disagree.

The football press agents are getting busy.

School starts Monday.

LOAN FUND GREAT AID TO STUDENTS

ABILENE, Texas, Sept. 7.—Some fifty young men and women, students of Simmons College, are enabled each year to complete their school work through the use of the Loan Funds available to worthy young people at this institution. The first donation to the Loan Funds was made about 15 years ago by J. B. Ashburn of Jones county, who gave $500; this was the beginning of several gifts made in memory of loved ones.

Friends of "Charlie" Taylor began a fund a year or so ago in his name, which has already reached about $1,500. The boy evangelist takes an offering in each one of his meetings, donated to the fund.

The greatest interest in the Simmons Loan funds came following the sudden death of Miss Rosabel Breedlove, a famous and much loved campus figure. She was preceptress of Smith Hall for a time, and later head librarian for many years. Her father, a pioneer West Texas lawyer had much to do with the founding of the college. Miss Breedlove was a great friend of poor worthy young people struggling through school. It was found at her sudden death in 1922 that she had made application for a $25,000 insurance policy dedicated to this purpose, and had already been accepted as a good subject. The first premium had not been paid through a delay on the part of friends who had promised to help her carry the policy. The senior class of that year started a fund with $1,000 in her memory. Women of the First Baptist church of this city took up the work, and with assistance of churches through the west have kept 12 or 15 girls in school each year. The plan is to make the fund ultimately $25,000.

SWEET POTATO SYRUP IS THE LATEST DELICACY

WASHINGTON, Sept. 7.—A table and cooking syrup made from sweet potatoes is the latest addition to the culinary art made by the department of agriculture.

Through experiments conducted at a small plant in Georgia over a period of several years, department chemists were able to produce a syrup which, it is said, has possibilities not only for table and cooking purposes, but also in making candies, such as taffies, kisses and caramels. The rather dark color might preclude its use in general baking, though it would be valuable in such dark products as ginger snaps and cookies.

The cost of production as determined in the small plant used by the department is 64c a gallon, but government chemists believe this figure can be lowered by quantity production.

CITY WAS HEALTHY DURING AUGUST

A decrease in the number of contagious diseases in Wichita Falls during the month of August is reported by Dr. A. H. Douglass city health officer, who says only five such cases were prevalent

There were three cases of small pox and one each of diphtheria and scarlet fever. The health department released 12 old cases from quarantine. There were 240 food establishments and 26 dairies inspected during the month.

Of products condemned were 60 pounds of meat, 75 of fruit, 35 of flour and 10 quarts of milk.

Cells To Become Schools In New Education Plan

COLUMBUS, Ohio, Sept. 7.—Born in the mind of Chaplain T. O. Reed of the Ohio penitentiary as he watched men brood in their cells during idle time, an idea which those who are fostering it declare has been hailed as "the greatest step forward in prison work in years," shortly will be put into execution in penitentiaries of the country.

The project has been named the Intra-Wall Correspondence Schools, and its object is to provide means whereby convicts in their cells may obtain an education in whatever they wish.

Chaplain Reed has operated such a school in the Ohio penitentiary for 14 months. The students number 1,000 out of a population of 2,500.

Now, with the aid of Napoleon Hill of New York, publisher of a monthly magazine, the Intra-Wall Schools are being established in the federal prison at Atlanta, Ga., and a budget of $1,500,000 has been set to extend the work to every penitentiary in the United States.

According to Mr. Hill, the greatest employers of labor in the United States have endorsed the plan and have assured him that every man turned out by the Intra-Wall School and vouched for by its officers will be given a position in the work for which he has fitted himself as soon as prison gates close behind him.

They also have assured him, declared Mr. Hill, that nothing will be made known of the graduate's past life, and that he will take his place on equal terms with all other employes.

"What we want to do," said Mr. Hill, "is to meet mentally these men who are shut off from the outside world. We're going to prove to them that they have something to look forward to, then put in their hands the tools with which they can carve out their future."

Wardens and chaplains of penitentiaries in every section of the country have agreed to support the schools, and governors of 45 states have endorsed them. Mr. Hill has agreed to donate $2,500 to each school as it is founded. National headquarters of the system will be established here, with Chalpain Reed as director.

As soon as the Atlanta school is functioning a third will be established in the Fort Leavenworth, Kan., prison, and after that two states will be taken at a time.

An administration building to cost $100,000 is planned for Columbus.

The method is the same as that of recognized correspondence schools. At the Ohio penitentiary, the lessons have been turned out on a hand press by the prisoners. The idea has taken such hold there, according to Chaplain Reed, that it is not unusual to hear men calling to each other from their cells, "I got 95 in arithmetic today—boy, I beat you."

Secretary of the Treasury A. W. Mellon, who has just returned from Europe where he has made a study of the situation there, advises the United States to remain out of the reparations muddle. After his conference with Coolidge, Secretary Mellon announced that he would remain in the Coolidge cabinet.

Traffic Committee Of Texas C. of C. To Meet Sept. 11

By The Associated Press.

AUSTIN, Texas, Sept. 7.—The question of proposed amendments to the federal commerce act authorizing the Interstate Commerce Commission to regulate lake, river, canal and intracoastal traffic, will be one of the principal topics considered at a meeting of the traffic committee of the Texas Chamber of Commerce here next Tuesday, September 11. Notice of the meeting has just been received here from E. A. Leffingwell, chairman of the committee.

Press reports from Washington declare a movement has been inaugurated to amend the commerce act with respect to lake and river traffic. Chairman Leffingwell said, "The traffic committee probably will determine what stand it will take on the question.

Work of the consolidated classification committee will be considered at the meeting, also. Other topics scheduled for action and discussion follow:

Readjustment of freight rates on textile machinery.

Abolishment of standing rate committees of chamber.

Increased rating on canned pickles.
