Scharbauer family agrees to donate land for stadium

By Jeff Stevens
Staff Writer

Just one obstacle remains in the path of a new sports complex — or make that approximately 57,000 obstacles.

After a Tuesday meeting between city of Midland staff and the Scharbauer family, the only barriers that can derail the project now are Midland voters.

At a 1 p.m. meeting Tuesday, Clarence Scharbauer III agreed to donate 75-100 acres to the city for the express purpose of building a soccer/football stadium and minor league baseball stadium.

According to City Manager Mike McGregor, the property will front Highway 191 to the west of Loop 250.

"The western boundary will be at the Highway 158 overpass and the eastern boundary will be at Clear Springs Restaurant," McGregor said.

Additionally, the property will be rectangular in shape stretching approximately 3,500 feet across and 2,000 feet deep.

McGregor also said the Scharbauer family will execute a letter of intent to donate the land within 60-70 days.

No further action will take place unless Midland citizens vote for the proposal.

A move to build a new sports complex officially kicked off in March with the forming of the Citizens for a New Sports Complex. The group formed to petition the City Council to place a referendum on the November ballot. That referendum would seek to increase Midland sales tax by one-quarter of one cent to fund the stadium.

According to Citizens members, a new football stadium is needed to replace Memorial Stadium. Memorial was built in 1947 and is the homefield for both Midland High School and Midland Lee High School.

The group additionally claims, along with the Midland Rock-

Grateful non-profit groups to search for new homes

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

Here's a study in gratitude and optimism: Losing something dear, being grateful for having had it, and still expecting the best.

"What a gift!" said Alynda Best, executive director of Midland Habitat for Humanity.

The Midland Habitat and four other non-profit organizations in Midland are losing their office space, which is rent free for four of the groups and greatly reduced for the fifth group, following a "business decision" by Bank One to shut down its six-story Bank One Tower.

"They have been a blessing," Ms. Best said of the bank's generosity.

Similarly to representatives of the others, Ms. Best said "I don't know" where Habitat offices will be relocated by July 1 after the Tower suites are closed on June 30.

Some commercial offices there already have relocated, and others are to move.

Non-profit organizations impacted by the bank's decision are the Arts Assembly of Midland, Habitat for Humanity, Special Olympics Texas, and Prevent Blinding Texas, all of which are headquartered in rent-free suites, and the West Texas Division of the National Multiple Sclerosis Society, which received a

Prices too low, too long have oil production sliding rapidly

By John Paul Pitts
Oil Editor

While oil prices have risen in recent months, the effects of oil prices that were too low for too long continue to ripple through the industry.

The biggest toll is on domestic oil production. According to the Monthly Statistical Report of the American Petroleum Institute (API), oil prices have averaged $14 per barrel for the past two months, but are still far below the average price in 1997. This lingering low price, coupled with the impact of earlier prices as low as $10 per barrel, is causing production to slide rapidly.

The API Report, which is watched closely by the industry, reports that U.S. crude oil production has declined to 5.89 million barrels of oil per day, down 6.9 percent from a year ago. Alaskan production, which represents 1.089 barrels of the total, was down almost 10 percent.

According to API, it is only the second time in 25 years that domestic crude oil production dropped a full 7 percent in only four months. A lack of drilling is attributed as part of the reason for the decline. While the U.S. April rig count was 125 working rigs, it is still less than half the number of rigs working last April.

The Permian Basin, which accounts for about half the national rig count, is showing little improvement. According to the Hughes Christensen Rig Count, 62 rigs were working in the Permian Basin last week, and 64 rigs this week, but 113 were active at this time last year.

Oil and gas employment is also showing little improvement. The API says 55,000 jobs have been lost in the oil and gas sector since the end of 1997, and experts say jobs will continue to slip away as more mega mergers take place. The proposed Exxon-Mobil merger is expected to cut 9,000 jobs from a combined work force of about 120,000. Thousands more jobs are at stake as Arco is expected to join BP-Amoco in a three-

New charter has frame, but lacks projected enrollment

By Daniel Arp
Staff Writer

The steel frame for Midland Advantage Charter School already has gone up, but whether it will house the 540 students projected to attend this fall in kindergarten through fifth grade remains to be seen.

As of Tuesday afternoon — as recruitment staff were gearing up for what they hoped would be a major recruitment session that evening — about 100 request-to-attend forms had been received, said Lisa O'Brien, a spokesperson for Advantage Schools, Inc.

"But we expect a huge response today (Tuesday)," she said, adding that in the past week, after sending out mass mailings and airing radio ads, Advantage had received an average of 80 calls per day.

So how did Tuesday night's meeting compare with recruiters' expectations?

A crowd of more than 100 gathered at the YMCA to hear a presentation that mirrored a previous demonstration given in Midland in late April.

Russia to abandon Mir space station

MOSCOW (AP) — In the strongest sign yet that Russia's era of space glory is coming to an end, space officials announced Tuesday that cosmonauts will leave the Mir space station in August and it will remain unmanned.

The 13-year-old Mir saw a series of accidents in 1997, including a fire and a near-fatal space collision, but has been running relatively trouble-free since then.

Its biggest obstacle lately has been financial: The government can no longer come up with the $250 million needed each year to keep the space station up and running.

"We can't keep the station aloft, because we have no money," Sergei Gorbunov, a Russian Space Agency spokesman, said on NTV television Tuesday.

The cash-short government has agreed to finance the Mir only through August, and says it should be discarded then unless private funding is found. Efforts to raise the money have failed.

The Russian Space Agency has been under pressure from its U.S. counterpart NASA to abandon the Mir and concentrate its meager resources on the international space station. Because of Russia's failure to build its segments on time, the first permanent crew isn't expected to be able to move into the international space station until next March, almost two years behind schedule.

A panel of top Russian space officials met Tuesday at the Mission Control Center in Korolyov, outside Moscow, to make their recommendations on the Mir's future.

They decided that the best option would be for the three-man crew to depart in August, leaving it to circle the Earth unmanned until early next year, when it is expected to burn up in the atmosphere, said Vyacheslav Mikhailichenko, a spokesman for space agency.

The decision must still be approved by the government of President Boris Yeltsin.

Space officials had said previously that it would be too dangerous to leave the space station unmanned. Memories of a previous unhappy experience in February 1991, when Soviet ground controllers lost control of the unmanned, 40-ton Salyut-7 space station, stoked fears that the 130-ton Mir could cause havoc on the ground with a fiery return.

Pieces of the Salyut fell on a sparsely populated area in Argentina's Andes mountains near the Chilean border, but caused no injuries or damage.

Mikhailichenko said there was no cause for worry.

"Prior to the crew's departure, they will install and test new equipment allowing ground controllers to ensure a trouble-free flight," he said.

"Even if ... something goes awry, we will have time to send a crew to fix the trouble," he said in a telephone interview.

If there is no money to extend the Mir's flight, its orbit will gradually descend from its present 240 miles above Earth to 125 miles early next year, and ground controllers will send it to burn up in the atmosphere in February or March, Mikhailichenko said.

Space officials have been reluctant to part with the Mir, the last symbol of Russia's onetime might in space.

"This station is unique and it can continue serving Russia for quite a long time," Gorbunov, the space agency chief's spokesman, said. "All cosmonauts agree that it's a great pity to abandon it."

Without the Mir, officials fear, Russia will be left playing second fiddle in the international space station, dominated by the United States.

"Our station is like a thorn in the Americans' side," Gorbunov said. "They want to be the first."

At the Johnson Space Center in Houston, NASA spokesman Rob Navias said the U.S. agency was not involved in the Russian decision to abandon the Mir.

"It's their decision," he said.

Yugoslav minister says NATO forces impeding peace process with attacks

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (AP) — A senior Yugoslav minister accused NATO of trying to torpedo a Kosovo peace plan by intensifying bombings on the eve of talks between Slobodan Milosevic and international envoys, and the army announced Tuesday that a top general had been killed.

The Yugoslav air force deputy chief of staff, Gen. Ljubisa Velickovic, died while inspecting units in "the first line of defense" against NATO air attack, the Army supreme command information service said.

It was unclear whether the death was the result of an attack by NATO, which has been bombing Serb military targets since March 24. The Yugoslav military usually does not report its casualties.

Velickovic, 53, graduated from the Yugoslav military academy and the Soviet general staff academy in Moscow. He previously served as air force commander and deputy defense minister. A state funeral was set for Wednesday in his hometown of Crljenac, 60 miles southeast of Belgrade.

In the Yugoslav capital, Goran Matic, a government minister who is believed close to Milosevic, accused NATO of trying to undermine peace negotiations.

Every time a breakthrough seems near, he said, there is "an intensification of the bombing that turns these diplomatic efforts useless," Matic said.

NATO, for its part, showed no letup in the air bombardment, striking Serb military targets across Kosovo and elsewhere as talks on the Kosovo conflict heated up in Bonn, Germany.

Alliance jets also fired across the border into Albania, hitting government bunkers, injuring a refugee and narrowly missing a group of foreign journalists as fighting raged between Serb and ethnic Albanian guerrillas.

In Germany, Russian special envoy Viktor Chernomyrdin met Tuesday with U.S. Deputy Secretary of State Strobe Talbott and Finland's president to assess prospects for a political settlement after Belgrade announced it had accepted the "principles" of an international peace plan.

Chernomyrdin and Finland's Martti Ahtisaari were expected in Belgrade on Wednesday for more talks with Milosevic on the plan proposed by the G-8 group of major industrialized nations and Russia.

Military officials from more than 30 nations were in Belgium, drafting plans for an international security force in Kosovo that would ensure that ethnic Albanians can return to their homes safely.

The group meeting at NATO's military headquarters — 19 NATO nations and 12 partner countries — will help create a force of 50,000, nearly double the number originally envisioned more than two months ago.

While Yugoslavia has said it accepts the principles of the G-8 plan, it remains unclear whether Belgrade will sign off on Western demands for an armed military force with NATO as its core in Kosovo to police the peace agreement and supervise the return of 850,000 ethnic Albanian refugees.

On Tuesday, the commander of the Kosovo-based Third Army, Col. Gen. Nebojsa Pavkovic, said changes to key elements of the G-8 plan were necessary.

"We have accepted all the G-8 principles — of course with alterations regarding the departure of the army and police troops from Kosovo and the presence of an international peace mission," the independent Beta news agency quoted Pavkovic as saying.

Amid talk of peace, NATO planes launched daylight attacks in Kosovo, including the area around the Albanian border where Kosovo Albanians are trying to open a supply corridor from hideouts in Kosovo.

As NATO jets, some of them American A-10 tank-killer aircraft, were attacking Serb positions just inside Kosovo, they suddenly unleashed ordnance on a line of Albanian military bunkers instead. Western journalists and television crews scampered to escape the bombardment.

Kosovo is a southern province of Serbia, the dominant republic in Yugoslavia. Although Serbs consider it the cradle of their national heartland, 90 percent of its prewar population of 2 million was ethnic Albanian. The NATO bombardment was designed to get Milosevic to end his crackdown on Kosovo's ethnic Albanians.

NATO also acknowledged Tuesday it may have accidentally bombed a residential area in Novi Pazar where Yugoslav media claimed 10 civilians were killed. The alliance maintained that after 31,500 air sorties, mistakes happen but said its campaign has been remarkable in limiting collateral damage.

Alliance officials acknowledged too that intense air attacks have failed to significantly reduce the number of Serb troops in Kosovo or stop the brutal expulsion of ethnic Albanians.

Serb media, meanwhile, reported that the death toll had reached 20 after NATO bombed the southeastern Serbian town of Surdulica on Monday. Serb authorities showed Western journalists what they said was a sanitarium and retirement home hit by NATO missiles.

SEARCH: Non-profits looking for new homes greatly reduced rate and which has a large work space.

"It's an economic business decision that we just had to make," explained Bank One President Joe Andrews, who noted that the bank itself in the 2300 block of Wall Avenue would not be affected by the closing of the Tower. "We will be staying right here and occupying our same location," he said of the bank. "But the Tower as well as the tenants are the only ones who will be impacted. It's just not profitable to keep the (Tower) building open."

Andrews, who noted that the 1960-built Tower is "about 20 to 30 percent occupied," said that the "the bulk of that is occupied by the non-profits.

"I've been in Midland 10 years, and those non-profits have been there that long at least," Andrews said. "So, they have had 10-plus years of free rent, which is fine. We had the space. We're glad we could do it. But we're facing ... a business decision, and we're facing a big air-conditioning issue. "

James Finn, area director of Special Olympics Texas for the Permian Basin-Big Bend area, said that Bank One has "generously housed" the Midland headquarters of the non-profit groups.

He is helping to find new homes, new offices preferably rent free, for the organizations.

"Those who benefit from these organizations will never be able to thank Bank One sufficiently," Finn said. Through the bank's generosity, the free rent and reduced leasing have "saved these organizations thousands of dollars that were instead applied to the implementation of the services for which they exist."

Bank One's gift is "just one example of the dedication this community has shown to its non-profit organizations," Finn said.

"The many such organizations flourishing in Midland despite our troubled economy is further evidence of the great concern our community has for the quality of life of all citizens of this great city," Finn said. "This is true of both private citizens and the businesses, which have abundantly supported the organizations" that are "dedicated to meeting a vast array of needs."

Now, Finn said, "these groups are in a hurry to find new offices by July 1."

Ms. Best expressed faith that Midland Habitat will find new offices and, perhaps, even someday develop a spacious "restore" building for Habitat.

"I think we all are aware that there is a greater force at work," she said. And the good works of that force become "more evident almost on a daily basis."

Meanwhile, Ms. Best said that she will "start looking, of course," for new office space. "I have a wonderful board (of directors)" to help find a new office.

"We really feel lucky that Bank One has supported us ... and allowed us to be in this building all the years," said Linda Bond, executive director of the Arts Assembly of Midland.

"Bank One has been a tremendous help to all of us non-profit organizations," she said. "We don't know how we would have made it without them."

An optimist like Ms. Best, Ms. Bond suggested that the relocation may help spur the Arts Assembly toward reaching of long-term goal of having a central office for those arts organizations that "don't have their own space." Those might include Texas Best, the Permian Basin's Poetry Society of Texas, the Midland Porcelain Art Club, the Midland Opera Theater, and Midland Festival Ballet. Larger organizations, such as the Midland Community Theatre and the Museum of the Southwest, have permanent sites.

Vickey Banks, administrative assistant for Prevent Blindness Texas, said that the service is "still looking for a home like the boll weevil says.

"We just appreciate all the years they (Bank One) have provided (offices) for us," Ms. Banks said. "The money we saved from rent helped provide the services that we have for our clients. We are going to miss this place. They've been good to us."

Lucia Gray, manager of the West Texas Division of the National Multiple Sclerosis Society, said that the society's office has been in the Bank One Tower for several years.

"We haven't been totally rent free," she said, "but we've got a good price on our rent" at the Bank One Tower. The rent was $5.50 a square foot per year, which "was a heck of a deal." The arrangement was made even better when Bank One doubled the space but charged no more money, which would drop the rent to $2.75 square foot.

In many of Midland's office buildings, she noted, the lease rates range from $7 to $15 a square foot.

"I've been looking at space," Ms. Gray said. "Bank One has been wonderful to us. They have been very, very generous. We will find some place. It's just getting from here to there I don't like. We have to keep going on."

LAND: Citizens for a New Sports Complex happy with site

(From 1A)

Hounds, that a replacement is needed for Christensen Stadium as well.

RockHounds General Manager Monty Hoppel has said in the past that Christensen does not meet major league standards for Double A baseball.

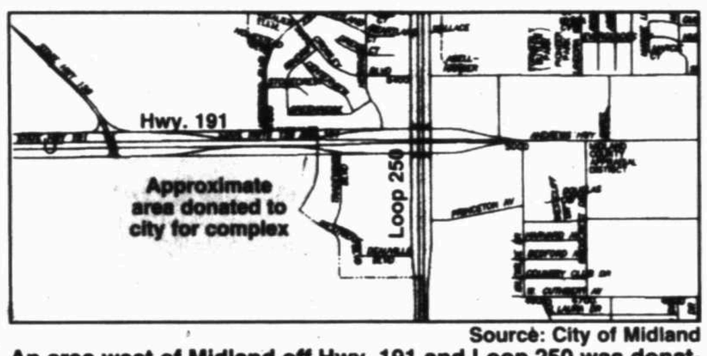
The Citizens for a New Sports Complex need 560 signatures to place the issue on the ballot. Ken Marks, chairman of the group, said that 1,400 signatures have been received.

"We plan to turn those in to the city around the middle of July," Marks said, adding that he feels the location is suitable.

Another Citizens board member, Bill Williams, also feels the site is a good choice.

"As far as getting traffic in and out, that's probably as good a location as we can get," Williams said.

He added, "In many respects, it is very definitely the best location for baseball. It puts them closer to their second largest market, which is Odessa."



Source: City of Midland

An area west of Midland off Hwy. 191 and Loop 250 was donated to the city of Midland by the Scharbauer family. This area measures approximately 3,500 to 4,000 feet east to west and 2,000 feet north to south.

Discussions with the Scharbauer family about the site location began some time last year, according to Mayor Bobby Burns, and became more intense once Midland Air Park was ruled out as a site for the stadium.

"We're very grateful to the Scharbauers for helping Midland become a better city," Burns said.

If voters choose not to increase the sales tax, the property would remain in the ownership of the Scharbauers. However, if the referendum does pass, transfer of the property would occur in December 1999 or January 2000.

McGregor said the donated land would save approximately $700,000 from the $35 million projection to complete the stadium and, "It will speed up the process considerably."

He added that the city has a long-standing relationship with the Scharbauers who have donated land to the city in the past for parks and fire stations.

"They are very community minded," McGregor said.

NEW: Officials not concerned about meeting projections

(From 1A)

Kathy Madigan, director of curriculum for Advantage Schools — which has eight schools currently in operation across the country and 10 more opening this fall — presented what she said was an exciting new opportunity for Midland.

"We have an amazing obligation (and) opportunity to educate your child," she said. "And we will treat you as a customer."

Ms. Madigan said the school, while publicly funded and tuition-free, still was operated by a corporation and needed parents' business to continue to function — unlike a public school district, she argued.

"We have to do our job well, or you're going to say, 'See you later,'" she said.

Staff said they received 65 additional request forms Tuesday night and expect to receive more in the mail as a result of the meeting.

Should 375 more parents not sign up between now and the mid-June cutoff date, Advantage officials say they still are not concerned about meeting projections.

"If we're not completely full by opening day, we're full by the end of the year," said Melinda Wheatley, chairman of the board for Midland Advantage.

Ms. Wheatley added that the Advantage school in San Antonio, of whose board she also is a member, started with lower than projected numbers last year but met them eventually.

"We have a tremendous amount of interest (in Midland)," said Ms. Wheatley. "We've had much greater interest from Midland than we've had in the other cities" in Texas — Houston and Dallas — where schools also will be opening in the fall.

'We have a tremendous amount of interest (in Midland). We've had much greater interest from Midland than we've had in the other cities.'
— Melinda Wheatley, chairman of board for Midland Advantage

Still, the response in Midland — at least at this stage — has not matched the intensity apparent in some areas of the country.

In Jersey City, N.J., for instance, where an Advantage School also is scheduled to open in the fall, response has been "through the roof," recruiters say. The 540 projected enrollment already was eclipsed in early May, necessitating a lottery system to decide who would attend.

Whether a lottery system becomes necessary for Midland, parents who turned in requests will be notified one way or the other after the cutoff date about two weeks from now, said Trish Karpurk, a student recruiter for the company who was in Midland Tuesday. A few days after that, an official registration will take place, Ms. Karpurk said.

Meanwhile, on another front, the school has announced who its new school director will be.

Laurencio Peña, former superintendent of the Premont Independent School District in Texas and current director of the Benito Juarez Charter School in Saginaw, Mich., is slated to relocate to Midland and begin his duties July 1.

"We will definitely make a dent in the education of our youths," said Peña, a Texas native who worked part time as a Spanish teacher at Midland College in the 1970s.

Peña, who also was in Midland for the session Tuesday, is one of seven hires so far for the school, including four general teachers, a foreign language teacher and an instructional assistant.

Staff recruiters will be in town today to conduct more interviews of possible candidates.

Though the board has yet to meet to approve a budget, Ms. Wheatley said she has calls into the other board members — state Rep. Mike Krusee (R-Round Rock) and Ed Jones, a Chase Bank executive who has recently relocated from Midland to Houston — to try to set up a meeting in the Tall City near the end of this month.

The board was awaiting the end of the hectic Legislative session Monday before trying to schedule a meeting, Ms. Wheatley said.

For more information about student registration, parents may call 1 (888) 523-8706. For more information about employment opportunities, applicants may call 1(888) 292-2344, ext. 2580.

OIL: Rig counts, production, jobs continue to shrink way merger and Chevron and Texaco continue in merger talks.

(From 1A)

As the U.S. rig count, jobs and production continue to shrink, crude oil imports were up 1.2 percent in April to 8.6 million barrels per day.

Fadel Gheit, oil analyst for Fahnestock, says the oil industry will continue to shrink. "The economics are too low. All technology is decked. This is an industry where the pendulum always swings too far," said the analyst.

"We once talked about $18 oil as a floor, now it has become a ceiling. The industry is in crisis."

Gheit said the U.S. domestic oil industry was a victim of its own technology. He said the U.S. was being flooded by imports, riding on the back of American oil technology and know-how.

$3 billion welfare-to-work program has handed out little so far

WASHINGTON (AP) — A $3 billion pool of federal money to help the welfare recipients with the toughest problems break into the workforce has barely been tapped as states scramble to find clients who fit the strict rules.

After a year and a half, only about 8 percent of the first year's money has been spent, according to figures obtained by The Associated Press.

"This is depressingly slow considering it started so long ago, but usually once these things start moving, they start moving," said John Twomey, who runs an umbrella group for county boards in New York that distribute the federal money.

Clinton administration officials are asking Congress to change the rules so more people can qualify. The money was targeted toward recipients with histories of substance abuse, poor education and long dependencies on welfare.

The administration also is seeking an additional $1 billion in 2000. But local welfare directors are urging Congress to spend the money elsewhere. And at least one key lawmaker agrees.

"We're certainly not going to put more money into it, because it's not working," said Rep. Nancy Johnson, R-Conn., who chairs the House Ways and Means welfare subcommittee.

Johnson predicted, however, that Congress will change the rules to make it easier for more people to qualify, particularly low-income fathers of children on welfare.

Officials in the states and at the Labor Department, which runs the program, cite several problems, including bureaucratic delays getting it started as well as the eligibility rules.

To participate, most recipients must have spent at least two and a half years on welfare or must be nearing their lifetime limit for benefits. They must also have two out of three other problems: substance abuse, a poor work history and low educational skills — defined as no high school diploma plus poor reading ability.

In some cases that could mean that "If you have a high school diploma but can't read it, we can't serve you," Labor Secretary Alexis Herman said.

Herman wants Congress to ease the eligibility rules, hoping to focus more on absentee dads. "We can't finish the job of welfare reform without doing more to help people who have the hardest time," she said.

The federal program also has run into unexpected competition from local welfare agencies.

President Clinton proposed the program in 1997 hoping to help Americans facing tough new welfare rules to find work. He and others feared those with the toughest problems would be left behind.

But, as it turned out, the new rules and the robust economy helped the welfare rolls drop faster than anyone predicted. That left states with fewer clients and more money to serve them.

Ana Osegueda, a case manager in San Francisco, says she would like to use the program more but most of her clients don't fit the criteria. "It's really hard to find someone checking 'yes' in all those boxes," she said.

It's rare, she said, for a welfare recipient to admit up front to drug or mental health problems. And if someone doesn't qualify, she explained, the agency has plenty of money to send clients to other community-based programs.

Congress gave the Labor Department $3 billion over two years for grants to states and private groups to provide job training, counseling, resume-writing, day care assistance and other help for the most needy welfare recipients.

In October 1997, Labor released just over $1 billion to 44 states, plus the District of Columbia and three territories, that opted to participate. An additional half billion was awarded directly to communities through a competition.

Through March, just $83.5 million of the state money had been spent, serving 38,705 participants. And last October, Labor got an additional $1.5 billion to distribute.

States, which must match every $2 of federal money with $1 in state money, have three years to spend the grants.

There are some success stories. In Philadelphia, some 2,500 are working through the program, thanks in part to an advertising campaign that urges people to ask their caseworkers about the federal assistance.

"Who are you going to count on when you become the dad?"

I didn't know the first thing about babies. That's not a good feeling when you find out you're going to be a dad.

Fortunately, Memorial Hospital has "Something Special" – a program designed especially for new parents – people like me who feel just a little bit overwhelmed with the idea of being such a big part of a little person's life.

We took classes. We went on tours. We met other new parents. And we found out that Memorial Hospital offered us all the help and advice we needed. They were even available after we brought our son home.

I'll never forget the day my son was born – or the people at Memorial Hospital. They're like family to us. The ones we count on whenever we need a helping hand.

Bush emerges from legislative session a winner

Although the Texas legislative session will not go down in history as the most dynamic ever, Gov. George W. Bush was correct to point out a number of major legislative achievements. This session could not be termed a "do-nothing" legislature and as such, Bush has some "talking points" for the start of his presidential campaign.

The Texas Legislature did take some important steps this session. Specifically, it:

- Cut property taxes by $1.35 billion, consumer taxes by $277 million, and business taxes by $229 million.
- Spent $98.1 billion, more than $9 billion higher than the current budget, and a record amount.
- Passed a school finance measure that Speaker Pete Laney called "a major investment in the future of Texas, in our education system."
- Enacted a measure requiring parental notification when minor girls seek abortions.
- Ended "social" promotion of students who can't achieve academically.
- Gave teachers a $3,000 pay raise.
- Deregulated the electric utility industry.
- Lowered to 0.08 the blood-alcohol level for drunken driving.

So when Bush noted in his talk following the close of the legislative session that it had been both "successful and substantial," he was not merely making political hay although it will be passed off that way in some quarters.

Bush is the leading contender for the GOP nomination for president in 2000, and it is only logical that as such, his performance as governor will be one of the yardsticks by which he is gauged as presidential timber. That is as it should be, but Bush is correct in alluding to his accomplishments. It was important to him politically to come out of the legislative session a winner, but it was also important to Texans to get major issues like school finance, lowered taxation and others at least partially resolved.

He accomplished that. Now he can look for even greater political challenges. No doubt they will materialize in coming months.

President Reagan opened door for China

President Clinton has been taking some deserved hits for the leak of sensitive technology to the People's Republic of China — but that hawk of hawks, Ronald Reagan, bears some serious responsibility as well.

We know this because of highly classified documents still in our possession, which were the basis for a series of columns in the 1980s warning Reagan against selling too much to China in a pitch for better relations.

Anderson

Understand that Reagan, for years prior to his presidency, had been a staunch supporter of Taiwan, a country that China regards as a renegade province. This necessarily meant a more aloof position regarding the PRC.

Those ideas were abandoned once he took office, to the chagrin of many conservatives who had supported him.

One of the first tips of the hand came on June 4, 1981, a little more than four months after Reagan came into office. On that day, he issued a "Presidential Directive on Export Control Policy to China."

This policy focused on so-called dual-use exports, items that are ostensibly intended for peaceful purposes but which also can be used by the military.

Last week's Cox report on Chinese spying notes several items that we sold to China for "peaceful" purposes that were later put to military use. This 1981 directive opened up the door that allowed the PRC to begin misusing exports with gusto.

In the directive, Reagan declared that the United States would sell technology to China "at significantly higher technical levels than previously, albeit somewhat below those approved for other friendly non-allied nations."

The directive laid out the formula to govern such sales: two times the level of exports to the then-Soviet Union before its 1979 invasion of Afghanistan (the point at which high-tech exports to the Soviets were banned for a time).

But the "two-times" formula was regarded by the U.S. business community as not only inexact, but too restrictive for the kinds of high-tech goods for which their Chinese customer was clamoring.

A secret debate began at the highest levels of the Reagan administration over the implementation of the directive. It pointed up classic contradictions in Republican policies: the desire to promote American business interests vs. the demands of a Rock-of-Gibraltar defense posture.

The late Commerce Secretary Malcolm Baldrige and Reagan's science adviser, George Keyworth, favored an expansion of this trade. But Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger and his undersecretary for policy, Fred C. Ikle, didn't want to sell the Chinese any technology of potential military value.

The result of the debate, our associate Dale Van Atta uncovered, was a secret presidential memorandum issued on May 6, 1982, signed for the president by his national security adviser, William P. Clark, titled "Export Policy for the People's Republic of China."

"The president expects prompt and full implementation of his more liberal export-control policy, since we do not want to send mixed signals to the Chinese regarding our intent," Clark wrote. And he conceded that the two-times rule had been difficult to apply.

So Clark laid down four rules to clarify the new policy:

- High-tech exports should be "at technical levels significantly above those for the Soviet Union and eastern Europe... (which would) imply the presumption of acceptable national security risk."
- The two-times formula should be interpreted to mean approval for any sale "unless circumstances apply which entail major risks to national security, i.e. exports which would make a direct and demonstrable contribution to Chinese capabilities" in the forbidden military areas.
- If the Pentagon or Central Intelligence Agency recommended denial of an export license, "lower risk substitutes will be suggested, where feasible."
- The licensing process must be speeded up.

Despite the lip-service paid to national security, the implementation of the policy meant that a great deal leaked to the PRC during the Reagan administration. The pro-business forces led by Baldrige won the day, which benefited the Chinese greatly.

Be a Royal Knight for only $100,000

The political fund-raising business is getting more sophisticated all the time. The dinner givers not only ask you to buy a table, but they will now give you a fancy title on their invitations, depending on how much you donate to the person running for office.

Buchwald

Last week Robin Killduff, in charge of the dinner honoring one of the major candidates, called and said, "If you buy a table and also contribute $250,000, you can become Grand Marshal of the dinner and get the No. 1 parking place in the hotel basement."

"That's a little too rich for my blood," I said.

"One hundred thousand dollars will make you a Royal Knight of the Soft Dollar and entitle you to not only having your picture taken with the candidate, but all the chicken a la king you can eat."

"That sounds great, but even $100,000 is a bit more than I can afford."

"Okay. For $50,000 you can be a Stealth Bomber Pilot. This means you may circulate around the ballroom and shake hands with friends at will, and you don't have to return to your seat until the speeches begin. If this is too much for you, we have a category for the chintzy givers. They are known as Founding Fathers. To become a Founding Father all you have to give is $25,000 and put another $25,000 in escrow in case the candidate loses."

I said, "What do I get for that?"

"A seat by the kitchen, a view of the candidate on the TV screen and tap water instead of bottled water. Admittedly, it's not the best seat in the house, but if we gave away the store for $25,000 we'd never be able to afford an election campaign. In politics it is not what you eat, but how much you give to eat that decides where in the room you will sit."

Today in History

Today is Wednesday, June 2, the 153rd day of 1999. There are 212 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:

On June 2, 1924, Congress granted U.S. citizenship to all American Indians.

On this date:

In 1851, Maine became the first state to enact a law prohibiting alcohol.

In 1886, President Cleveland married Frances Folsom in a White House ceremony.

In 1897, responding to rumors that he was dead, Mark Twain, 61, was quoted by the New York Journal as saying from London: "The report of my death was an exaggeration."

In 1941, baseball's "Iron Horse," Lou Gehrig, died in New York of a degenerative disease, amyotrophic lateral sclerosis.

In 1946, the Italian monarchy was abolished in favor of a republic.

In 1953, Queen Elizabeth II of Britain was crowned in Westminster Abbey, 16 months after the death of her father, King George VI.

In 1979, Pope John Paul II arrived in his native Poland on the first visit by a pope to a Communist country.

One year ago: Voters in California passed Proposition 227, which effectively abolished the state's 30-year-old bilingual education program by requiring that all children be taught in English. Monica Lewinsky hired a new defense team, Jacob Stein and Plato Cacheris, replacing William H. Ginsburg as her lead attorney.

It's time for Clinton to get tough with Chinese, Congress

There is a lunatic attempt by out-of-work Cold Warriors in Washington and retrograde Chinese nationalists in Beijing to use the latest Chinese spying scandal and bombing of the Chinese Embassy in Belgrade to put China and the United States on a collision course. It is times like these when you need a president who is ready to get right in the face of both his critics and the Chinese leadership and say the following.

President to the China-bashers in Congress: "Where exactly do you guys think you're going with this? Yes, the Chinese spied on us. Is it serious? You bet it is. Do we need to drastically improve security at our nuclear labs and stop our companies from selling everything that isn't nailed down? You bet we do. But you all seem to be pushing for something more. Let's cut to the bottom line here: Do you want to declare war on China? Is that what you want? Fine, let's do that. Let's take them all on — all 1.3 billion of them. Hey, they're only one-fifth of humanity.

"Oh, that's not what you want? Well then, cut the war dance and get real. Yes, China is a rising power, and over time we may have no choice but to have a Cold War with China. But it is not a confrontation we should be cultivating. China is not the Soviet Union. It's not committed to the universal spread of communism. These are not people who build television sets that blow up when you turn them on. These are serious people. They've had nuclear weapons for 35 years.

"And what if you win your Cold War with China and produce a collapse of the regime there? What do you think happens the morning after? That China is going to become a replica of the United States? That the Dalai Lama will be embraced by Chinese democrats? If this regime collapses, the morning after will be utter chaos. You want chaos in China and Russia at the same time? You think that is going to make America safer? What is it you're trying to trigger here?

"It is possible to be an American patriot, be outraged at the lax security of our nuclear weapons labs, be outraged about China's pervasive spying and still want to foster better relations with Beijing to bring about a stable transition there and a more rule-based regime. You seem to have forgotten that we engaged in sweeping arms-control deals with the Soviet Union at a time when it was patrolling our coasts with nuclear submarines and trying to steal every secret we had. If you can't juggle multiple objectives at the same time, that's your problem. But I am not going to take this country down the lunatic path of destroying relations with China so that you can have a cheap political thrill."

President's message to China's leaders: "OK, boys, you've had your fun now. You've sucked up everything from our nuclear labs. I just want you to know a couple of things. First, we're going to step up our electronic spying on you. In fact, we're going to be bouncing so many microwaves off your Defense Ministry your generals are going to feel like rotisserie chickens.

"Second, I have heard enough about the bombing of your embassy in Belgrade. We both know it was an accident, and if you keep it up, I'm going to close the visa window at our embassy in China. Let's see how many of your young people want to go to Moscow University for an M.B.A.

"Last time I checked you had a $60 billion trade surplus with us. Oh, I'm sure the Russians would be happy to buy your exports and give you rubles. Rubles, yes, they make wonderful wallpaper. You get my drift? So let's cut the bluster and resume a sensible relationship."

Clinton orders probe of entertainment's link to youth violence

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Clinton, brandishing a cartoonish magazine ad for a video game "more fun than shooting your neighbor's cat," ordered a government investigation Tuesday into whether — and how — the entertainment business markets violence to children.

"Our children are being fed a dependable daily dose of violence," Clinton said, that amounts to the typical child witnessing 40,000 play murders and 200,000 dramatized acts of violence by his 18th birthday.

Such a barrage blurs the line between "fantasy and reality violence" for too many young people, the president said.

"I know this stuff sells," Clinton exhorted Hollywood from a lectern in the Rose Garden. "But the time has come to show some restraint, even if it has a short-term impact on the bottom line."

The $1 million, 18-month review by the Justice Department and Federal Trade Commission is the latest initiative from a president grasping for solutions to an increasingly deadly spate of shootings in the nation's schools. Having already introduced new gun controls, Clinton trained on the entertainment industry's business practices the same microscope he focused on cigarette companies, and their juvenile-aimed Joe Camel ads, when he cracked down on teen smoking.

Clinton said federal investigators will "study the extent to which the video game, music and movie markets do actually market violence to children" and whether those industries only laxly restrict sales to minors.

FTC Chairman Robert Pitofsky said his staff will, as in probes of the tobacco and alcohol industries, look into the entertainment companies' internal marketing records even if it takes subpoenas.

"I would hope we could talk to these companies and get voluntary compliance. But certainly if we feel that we can't complete our responsibility here, we're going to turn to compulsory processes," Pitofsky said.

On the dais with Pitofsky, first lady Hillary Rodham Clinton and Attorney General Janet Reno, Clinton held up several colorful video-game ads that he considered offensive.

One showed a souped-up handgun and promised: "More fun than shooting your neighbor's cat." Another pictured comic-book-type warriors lobbing fireballs. "Kill your friends guilt-free," it beckoned.

"If you look at some of these ads, it's hard to argue with a straight face that the games were made for adults in the first place," Clinton said.

"Advertisements have a particular role here. They have the power to egg children on and lure them in."

By ordering the study himself and paying for it with existing funds, Clinton pre-empted a Senate-passed measure introduced by Kansas Republican Sam Brownback. Senate Judiciary Committee Chairman Orrin Hatch released a statement welcoming Clinton and his "newfound interest" to the Republican fold.

The president's Rose Garden announcement came three weeks after he and Mrs. Clinton convened a meeting of movie-industry lobbyist Jack Valenti and five dozen of the nation's leading educators, officials, entertainers and gun makers to brainstorm a national campaign against youth violence.

On Monday, Valenti's spokesman, Rich Taylor, said the Motion Picture Association of America had no comment on the impending FTC study. A separate entertainment industry source, however, suggested Clinton was alienating Hollywood just as it was trying to help his cause.

The WB network recently shelved two violent episodes of "Buffy, the Vampire Slayer," and CBS yanked a bloody new drama series about the mob from its fall lineup after April's high school massacre in Littleton, Colo.

Kennedy family ordered first JFK coffin dumped in the ocean

WASHINGTON (AP) — Loaded with 240 pounds of sand and drilled with holes so it would stay on the ocean floor, the coffin that carried John F. Kennedy's body from Dallas to Washington was dumped at sea in 1966 under orders of the Kennedy family.

Documents released Tuesday by the National Archives showed that despite concerns over whether the casket should destroyed, the government honored the Kennedy family wishes and took pains to ensure that the casket would remain in a watery grave.

The Defense Department even sought the advice of a submarine officer with special training in hydraulics to devise a way to air-drop the coffin at sea.

Kennedy, assassinated in Dallas on Nov. 22, 1963, was buried at Arlington National Cemetery in a mahogany coffin obtained in Washington. The first coffin, made of bronze and lined with brushed satin, had been purchased from Dallas undertaker Vernon Oneal to take the body to Washington. It was replaced because it was damaged.

Its whereabouts had long been a mystery. And Kennedy assassination researchers consider the coffin evidence that should not have been destroyed.

Documents show that the casket was in the basement of the National Archives building in downtown Washington in February 1966 when Robert Kennedy, then a U.S. senator from New York, called the General Services Administration, which oversees government property, and asked for it to be released to the military for destruction.

"I think it belongs to the family and we can get rid of it any way we want to," Kennedy told Lawson Knott, GSA administrator, according to a memo recounting the conversation.

"What I would like to have done is take it to sea," Kennedy told Knott. "I don't think anybody will be upset about the fact that we disposed of it."

Kennedy family spokeswoman Melody Miller said Tuesday that destroying the casket was appropriate and "in keeping with the tradition of President Kennedy's naval service and his love of the sea."

To ensure that the coffin would sink, three 80 pound bags of sand were put inside, metal banding tape was wrapped around it and it was placed inside a pine box that was also wrapped in metal tape, documents said.

Numerous holes were drilled in both the casket and the box "to ensure that no air pockets would develop," according to a memo written by John Steadman, special assistant in the office of the Secretary of Defense.

One last precaution was taken: To keep the 660-pound load from shattering when it hit the water, two parachutes were attached to it.

On Feb. 18, 1966, an Air Force van picked up the casket and transported it to Andrews Air Force Base, where it was loaded onto a C-130 airplane, the documents said. The plane took off at 8:38 a.m. and flew over a calm ocean to a point approximately 131 nautical miles off the Maryland-Delaware coast.

The drop point — in 9,000 feet of water beyond the continental shelf — was chosen because it was away from regularly traveled air and shipping lines in an explosives dumping area.

The pilot descended to 500 feet and at 10 a.m., the plane's tail hatch was opened and the load was pushed out.

"The entire rigged load remained intact and sank sharply, clearly and immediately after the soft impact," wrote Steadman, who was on the plane.

Leaving nothing to chance, the plane circled the drop point for 20 minutes "to ensure that nothing returned to the surface."

Knott had cautioned Kennedy that destroying the coffin might "raise loads of questions" in light of an upcoming book about the assassination. It was unclear whether the casket was covered by a law that mandated that certain items of evidence related to the Kennedy assassination be preserved.

The Justice Department would have to authorize release of the casket, Knott told Kennedy, who had been attorney general before he entered the Senate in 1965.

Kennedy was adamant and said he would call his successor as attorney general, Nicholas Katzenbach. Eight days later, Katzenbach wrote Knott and said the casket had no evidentiary value and didn't need to be preserved.

Appeals court reinstates charge against Hubbell

WASHINGTON (AP) — A federal appeals court reinstated a criminal charge Tuesday alleging that presidential friend Webster Hubbell engaged in a scheme to conceal his and Hillary Rodham Clinton's legal work on a fraudulent Arkansas land deal.

In a 3-0 decision that was a win for Independent Counsel Kenneth Starr, the appeals court rejected Hubbell's argument that one of 15 charges against him should be dismissed as too vague. His trial is to begin Aug. 9.

An 85-paragraph section of the indictment enumerates some 50 alleged lies by Hubbell over a six-year span to regulators from the Resolution Trust Corp. and the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp.

U.S. District Judge James Robertson had ruled that the allegations against Hubbell were not specific enough.

Federal regulators say the land development involved, a 1,050-acre tract south of Little Rock called Castle Grande, was riddled with insider dealing and fictitious sales.

The project was owned by Mrs. Clinton's former Whitewater partner, Jim McDougal, and Hubbell's father-in-law, Seth Ward. Mrs. Clinton has testified repeatedly that she remembers almost nothing of her work on Castle Grande in 1985-86. Her work on the project was disclosed when her missing law firm billing records turned up in the White House family residence in 1996 under still-unexplained circumstances.

Castle Grande cost McDougal's savings and loan close to $4 million. The government eventually took over the failing institution at a cost to taxpayers of $65 million.

Holiday fatalities include Tall City man

By Rick López
Staff Writer

A Midland motorcyclist was among 37 people who died on Texas roadways throughout Memorial Day weekend.

Maurice Eugene Radcliff, 40, died late Monday after his 1983 Kawasaki was rear-ended on U.S. Highway 80.

His death was the last one reported to state troopers during Operation Motorcide: a project that monitors the number of driving deaths that occur over holiday weekends.

This weekend's fatality count began at 6 p.m. Friday and ended at midnight Monday. Radcliff's death was reported at about 11 p.m. Monday.

Department of Public Safety reports indicate that Radcliffe's cycle was struck while turning off the north U.S. 80 service road onto F.M. 1788. Midlander Garry Anderson's vehicle collided with Radcliff's cycle as the motorcyclist made the turn, troopers said.

Radcliff was taken to a local hospital, where he died shortly before midnight. Anderson, 49, suffered minor injuries, but refused treatment at the scene.

DPS officials said citations weren't immediately issued. Radcliff's body was sent to a medical examiner's office in Lubbock, where an autopsy will be performed. The case remains under investigation, troopers said.

Jerry Turn, vice president of the Texas Motorcycle Roadriders Association division in West Texas, said he came close to meeting Radcliff's same deadly fate this weekend.

Turn, of San Angelo, said he was almost killed Monday as he drove to Big Spring for a memorial ceremony involving the Roadriders. Several impatient motorists tried to force him off the road as they weaved their way around slower vehicles.

"They (car drivers) know that you'll get out of their way if they keep coming at you," Turn said. "I could have had a fatality two times yesterday because of

Midland Police Department pleased with 'Wave' results

By Mella McEwen

The Midland Police Department won't complete its "Wave" program until Thursday, but officers are already pleased with the results.

Over the Memorial Day weekend, officers participated in the statewide "Wave" program, designed to get motorists to follow speed limits and use seat belts and child restraints.

"Considering that it was graduation weekend and Memorial Day weekend, we're pleased with the turnout," said Special Operations Lt. Brian Bogart. "We saw the usual number of accidents and driving while intoxicated, but no increase in fatalities. We're pleased that we had a high volume of traffic with fewer casualties."

He said he didn't know if the positive results were due to the increased presence of Midland police officers "or people behaving themselves."

The department received a $10,000 grant from the Texas Department of Transportation to pay overtime to officers working the program.

"It's an annual program the state does with the cities," said Robert Martinez, of TxDOT's traf-

Higher fares won't cancel local residents' vacation plans

By Mella McEwen

Major air carriers implemented the third fare increase of the year over the Memorial Day weekend that, if it holds, will bring the total increase to 11 percent so far in 1999.

But local travel agents said they did not expect the increase to impact Midlanders' travel plans.

Leisure rates were raised 4 percent, a move begun by Continental Airlines, which flies out of Midland International Airport, on Friday. The airline raised rates on its seven-day, 14-day and 21-day fares in domestic markets.

"We continue to see record passenger loads on our flights," said airline spokeswoman Sarah Anthony. "More people are traveling these days and the market is dictating what fares will be so, based on what we see happening in the marketplace, that dictates pretty much what fares will be."

She said her understanding was other airlines were matching the increase, "again because the market is determining fares. Flights are full, an indication more people are traveling than ever before and as we move into the summer months, bookings are very strong."

Indeed, by Monday afternoon the increase had been matched by American Airlines, Northwest Airlines and U.S. Airways.

But Southwest Airlines did not expect to follow suit.

"As far as I know, we're not changing," said Audy Donelson, station manager for Southwest in Midland. "I'd be surprised if we raised fares, and if we did it would be so little no one would notice."

Wendy Ragan, owner-manager of Adventure Travel, observed that "They've had three increases this year and we're not seeing it affect too many people, most are going ahead with travel plans. Every year fares go up. I think airlines are trying to offset higher fuel costs, which is good for us but bad for the rest of the nation. The good news is there are a number of low-fare carriers so if travelers can get with a good travel agent or can locate lower fares, sometimes it will require making a connection from one airline to another at major airports like Dallas or Houston, but if you don't mind the inconvenience, it's worth the savings."

Dee Hamilton, an agent with Envoye Travel, said that "We're getting comments along the lines of 'That's more than last year,' but so many events impacted us last year it's hard to know if this increase will change customers' travel plans. Our leisure travel business is as good or better than it was last year, but business travel is down, but that's the case nationwide."

She added that though airlines have tried to be subtle in their rate increases, "people do notice. If they go every summer to Grandma's house, they can see that increase. Those who don't buy regularly may not notice."

Ms. Ragan suggested that Midlanders planning vacation trips be a little patient.

"Our recommendation is to wait. Traditionally the airlines have a sale in July or August to boost their third quarter business."

Midland Vision 2000 committees fine-tune their focus

By Mella McEwen
Staff Writer

The pieces of the "Midland Vision 2000 and Beyond" project continue to fall into place, as briefings from the nine task forces indicated Tuesday.

"I'm immensely pleased with the progress," said Joan Baskin, chairman of the steering committee, after the committee's monthly meeting.

The chairs of the task forces will present interim reports at the Chamber of Commerce Retreat June 18 at Midland College.

What has interested her, Ms. Baskin said, is finding that there are so many cross-currents. The Youth task force has transportation issues as does the Seniors and Housing task force and Health and Social Services task force. The Education and Youth task forces share issues."

Committee members Tuesday discussed formu-

Education committee members set goals for students' futures

Editor's Note: This is the second installment in a weekly series that examines the Vision 2000 task forces and their chairmen.

By Jennifer Cherry

As chairman of the Midland Vision 2000 and Beyond education committee, Karen Nicholson has this to say: "Education is the answer to society's problems."

Though the group has only met twice, the task force, co-chaired by Becky Ferguson, already has a plan members hope will help them find answers to educational problems.

"The most important thing we can do is educate students," said Ms. Ferguson, president of the Midland Council of Parent Teacher Associations for 1999 to 2000. "How well we do that determines the success of our community."

Mrs. Nicholson and Ms. Ferguson have volunteered for a number of different child-related activities over the years.

Mrs. Nicholson taught mathematics in the Richardson and Austin school systems 13 years before she and her husband moved to Midland. She is the moth-

Finances force an extreme — the dreaded roommate search

I'm a journalist, so obviously, I'm not a whiz with numbers.

Usually, I manage to balance my checkbook without a great deal of difficulty. This week, however, I wrestled with the ill-received mathematical conclusion that my checking account's remaining balance was only $15.21 — for two weeks.

López

Either my math was wrong, or (gasp!) I was spending too much. After recalculating my figures several times that day, the latter proved to be true. Either I'd have to sell a kidney or streamline my expenses.

I checked eBay to see how much a kidney sells for, but apparently, it's against their policy to hawk human parts or remains. Much to my chagrin, the only remaining option was to scrutinize my pile of bills for services I can do without.

Or, I could get a roommate. Imagine paying only half a cable bill, phone bill, light bill but not getting half the service.

I've shared living quarters before, which might explain why I'm so reluctant to go to this extreme. Unforgettable (and regrettable) roommate personalities include:

■ The "perfect" roomie: Volunteers to cook dinner and will wash dishes when he's done. He also doesn't mind yanking the knotted-up, tangled tinsel from the Christmas Tree. In fact, he even takes it down before June.

■ The "Jungle Woman" roomie: Adopts any stray animal she finds in the neighborhood or on her way to work. She has about 10 cats, and none of them know how to use the litter box. Only one of them is spayed or neutered. Just recently, a litter of kittens were born under her bed, but she didn't know until a few days later.

■ The blonde roomie: The 'fridge isn't sacred with her. She'll use up the fresh cucumbers to soother her "puffy" eyes, use all the mayonnaise for a hair treatment and throw out your most expensive beer to make room for her wilted corsage. This one will also use your Buff Puff to clean the barbecue grill.

■ The mooch: Your best CDs will slowly disappear from your room and end up in his car. Usually, this type chooses a roommate that's close to his height and weight, so he can borrow their designer clothes over the weekend.

■ The exhibitionist. Opens all curtains and turns on all the lamps at night, while he prowls around living in his Fruit of the Looms. Then he'll curl up on the loveseat in front of the storm window and watch TV. He dates a girl just like him, who has an obnoxious habit of leaving her bra between the sofa seats.

■ The stingy roomie: Will chew you out for using too much toilet paper, setting the thermostat below 80 in summer and using the vacuum cleaner and TV at the same time. This lad keeps track of how much aspirin is in the container and marks the shampoo bottle each time he uses it.

■ The neurotic: Checks the door at least three times a night to make sure it's locked. Then he checks the stove burners, the ashtray and then the blonde roomie's curling iron. He'll also disinfect the whole house with Lysol several times a day.

Then there's "sad" roomie, who can't manage his own finances or balance his checkbook.

OBITUARIES

Donald Robertson

After a long battle with diabetes, on Monday evening, May 31, 1999, Donald "Don" Robertson went to be with his Lord in Heaven. He leaves behind his beloved wife and children, family and friends.

Services are scheduled for 10:30 a.m. Thursday, June 3, 1999 in Pipkin Chapel with Robert Frazier officiating. Burial will follow in Resthaven Memorial Park. Family visitation will be Wednesday, June 2, 1999 from 6:00 to 8:00 P.M. at Pipkin Funeral Home. Arrangements are under the direction of Pipkin Funeral Home.

Don was born in Midland July 19, 1937 and his family moved to Oklahoma City and returned when he was 13. He finished school in Midland. In 1954-57 he worked at Powell's Laundry. He then was employed at Midland Planning Mill where he was a cabinet maker. He also was co-owner of DeLong's Dairy here in Midland from 1970-1975. He later became the owner of Midland Planning Mill, until he retired in 1993.

He married Mary Sue Long August 1, 1969 in Midland.

He was a member of Midland Suburban Lions Club and of Valley View Baptist Church.

He was preceded in death by his father, Albert Ray Robertson and his mother, Zela Feltes.

He is survived by his wife, Mary Sue Robertson of Midland; one son, Johny Ross Robertson of Midland; one daughter, Donna Sue Robertson of Midland; one brother, Troy Robertson of Midland; one sister, Judy Ruffra of Edmond, Oklahoma; and numerous aunts, uncles, nieces, nephews and other relatives.

A special thanks to Dr. Oliver and staff at the Permian Basin Dialysis Center of Midland.

Honorary pallbearers will be Valley View Baptist Church.

Pallbearers will be James Robertson, Danny Robertson, LeGene Robertson, Jesse Buchanan, Bill Swinney, Kermit Lewis, and Earnest Klatt.

Memorials can be made to a charity of one's choice.

Aurora Rodriguez

Maria Aurora Rodriguez, 84, died Monday, May 31, 1999, at Memorial Hospital and Medical Center. She was born on July 28, 1914 in Seguin Coahuila, Mexico where she was raised and educated. She had lived in Midland since 1973. She was a member of Our Lady Of Guadalupe, and a member of the Cursillistas.

A Rosary has been set for Wednesday, June 2, 1999 at 7:30 p.m. at the Reyes-Garcia Funeral Chapel. Funeral Service will be held on Thursday, June 3 at 10:00 a.m. at Our Lady Of Guadalupe Catholic Church, with Father Jerome Burnett officiating.

Interment will follow at Resthaven Memorial Park. Funeral arrangements are under the direction of Reyes-Garcia Funeral Home.

She is preceded in death by her husband, Jesus S. Rodriguez.

Survivors include four sons, Gabriel Rodriguez of Presidio, Jesus Rodriguez Jr, Silvino Rodriguez and Mario Rodriguez, all of Midland; four daughters, Eva Rodriguez Urias of Ojinaga Chih., Mexico, Maria Dolores Rodriguez, Manuela Dominguez and Juana Robles, all of Midland; a brother, Andres Castillo Rodriguez of Monterrey, Nuevo Leon; 26 grandchildren; and 18 great-grandchildren.

Pallbearers will be Humberto Rodriguez, Juan Zubia, Joe Dominguez, Mario Rodriguez, Francisco Rodriguez and Adan Rodriguez. Honorary pallbearers will be David Zubia, Auden Gamboa, Jesse Dominguez, Andres Rodriguez, Gabriel Rodriguez, Sergio Rodriguez, Adrian Robles, Julio Rodriguez, Alejandro Robles and Noe Rodriguez.

Glen Pool

Memorial services for Glen Lawrence Pool of New Braunfels will be held at New Braunfels Presbyterian Church on Thursday, June 3rd at 4:00 p.m. The Reverend Dr. Ken Peters and the Reverend Fran Shelton will officiate.

Mr. Pool, 76, died at his home on Sunday, May 30, after a lengthy illness. Survivors include his wife, Margaret Ann (Peggy) McDonald Pool of New Braunfels; his daughter, Jean Ann Pool Thurston and husband, James W. Thurston, of Sacramento, CA; his son, John Dallas Pool and wife, Stacy, and his grandchildren, Taylor Cade and Morgan Elizabeth Pool, of Midland.

He was born in Moran (Shackleford County), Texas, to Clara Pritchard Pool and Floyd Council Pool on April 18, 1923. His grandparents were pioneer farmers and ranchers in the Moran area. Mr. and Mrs. Riley B. Pool and Mr. and Mrs. John W. Pritchard. The father of the deceased was a long-time banker and rancher in the Moran area.

Glen graduated from Moran High School in 1940, then attended the University of Texas at Austin prior to entering the Air Corps in 1942. He saw combat duty as a flight engineer in B-24 bombers with the 491st Bomb Group (8th Air Force), flying out of England.

After returning home in 1945, he married his high school sweetheart at First Presbyterian Church in Cisco on January 2, 1946. Mr. Pool then enrolled at Texas College of Mines (now UT-El Paso) and transferred to New Mexico State University at Las Cruces, where he became a member of Sigma Tau, honorary engineering fraternity. He received a BS degree in mechanical engineering at NMSU in 1949, and also earned a ROTC commission in the Air Force.

Mr. Pool began a 34-year career with El Paso Natural Gas Co. in 1949, but his civilian work was interrupted by the Korean Conflict in 1951 when he was called to active duty as an officer in the USAF.

During his career with El Paso Natural Gas Co., the Pools resided at Jal, N.M., Midland and El Paso. During this period Mr. Pool was active in many business and social groups, including a stint as chairman of the Permian Basin Gas Processing Assn. He also served as president of the Jal Country Club. Since retiring in 1983, the Pools have resided at Treasure Island (Lake McQueeney) and at #22 Ridge Drive in New Braunfels.

Mr. Pool was a member of the Baptist Church as a child. Later he was a member of Presbyterian congregations at Jal, Midland, El Paso, and New Braunfels. He was a Lions Club member, and an enthusiastic golfer, hunter, and fisherman, and enjoyed flying his own airplanes. Other hobbies included woodworking, gardening, and the operation of computers.

Memorial gifts may be made to Hospice, New Braunfels, or to the charity of one's choice.

Elmer Sumruld

Elmer H. (Whistle) Sumruld was born March 3, 1915 to Lea County pioneers, William E. and Claudie V. Collum Sumruld at the family homestead they settled in 1907 just northeast of Lovington, New Mexico.

He graduated from Lovington High School in 1933. On June 22, 1938, he married Mildred M. Thurman in Lovington, New Mexico. She died March 23, 1993, after 54 years of marriage. He married R. Jeanette Turney on July 29, 1994 in Lovington, New Mexico.

After graduation, he helped his dad and older brothers in their endeavors. In 1935, he began working for Ham Bishop drilling water wells, test holes and geophysical contracts. During World War II, he was a driller for National Geophysical. The company had a government contract to drill for bauxite (aluminum ore) for the war effort.

Elmer (nicknamed "Whistle" by men on one of the crew he worked on) continued working for geophysical companies taking he and his family to Kansas, Arkansas, Mississippi, Louisiana, Wyoming, Texas and New Mexico.

In 1948, he purchased a seismograph drilling rig and water truck and began Sumruld Drilling Service. He returned to Lovington in 1952 and has resided there since. As a contractor, he drilled seismic holes all over the Permian Basin, Texas, New Mexico, Wyoming and Montana. Because of his reputation for being honest, hard working, skilled, knowledgeable and willing to go the extra mile, he seldom had to seek a contract. He also drilled many test holes and water wells for residents and businesses in Lea County. He retired in 1985.

Elmer was a deacon for over 40 years at Hillcrest Baptist Church and served as Sunday School Superintendent and held other positions in the church.

He enjoyed gardening and caring for his fruit and nut trees. He also enjoyed fishing and hunting with his friends and family.

He was preceded in death by his wife, Mildred Sumruld in 1993; a son, Maurice in 1957; five brothers: George, Jess, Stanley (Bud), Walter, and Leroy Sumruld; his parents, Will and Claudie Sumruld; and four sisters-in-law, Dorothy, Dannie, Gail and Bernice Ashley.

Survivors include his wife, Jeanette Turney Sumruld of Lovington, New Mexico; a daughter, Charlotte and her husband, Garland Frasier of Midland, Texas; a son, Dr. William A. (Bill) Sumruld and his wife, Kay of Lovington, New Mexico; a sister, Mary Beuhler of Pueblo, Colorado; two step-daughters, Janice Janky and husband, Bill of Chocotah, Oklahoma and Joy McGhan and husband, Daryl of Fairbanks, Alaska; a grandson, G. Eric Frasier and wife, Lori of Midland, Texas; a granddaughter, Dana Frasier Mizzles and husband, Steve of Midland, Texas; six great-grandchildren: Kallie, Cole and Dakota Frasier and Sara, Cord and Mark Mizzles, all of Midland, Texas; many step-grandchildren and step-great-grandchildren; and numerous nieces, nephews and other family and beloved friends.

Obituary & Death Notice policy

There is no charge for death notices of residents or former residents of Midland or for those who have Midland relatives. We also publish death notices for residents of the surrounding West Texas area.

Free death notices include date and place of death, service and burial information, funeral home handling arrangements, date and place of birth, brief biography, survivors and memorials. A longer, more detailed obituary is available for a charge. It may include tributes, expanded biography, organizational associations, notes of appreciation, pallbearers, honorary pallbearers and a photo.

Deadline for both free death notices and paid obituaries is 3:30 p.m. and information must be either received from or verified by a funeral home.

FATALITIES: 37 people killed on Texas highways over weekend

this."

Turn said the Roadriders have started a movement for DPS to put more emphasis on motorcycle rules in the test they administer for driver's licenses.

"There's hardly anything in the manual. If there is, it's less than five minutes of instruction," Turn said. "It's usually the motorcyclist who knows the rules, not the car drivers. A lot of them don't know you have to give a motorcycle the same distance you have to give a car. It's (the driver's) bad judgment, and it's not right."

DPS officials estimated that as many as 27 people would die in traffic crashes this weekend. Officials based their figure on last year's statistics, which say 24 people died during that weekend.

"The numbers play like a broken record," said DPS Director Col. Dudley M. Thomas. "Fifty-four percent of those who died perished in alcohol-related wrecks and half of those killed were not wearing safety belts.

"Unfortunately, there are some drivers who just won't play by the rules and end up putting all of our lives and property at risk."

Of the 32 fatal crashes that occurred this weekend:

- 28 of 32 involved single fatalities
- 18 involved one vehicle
- 10 involved two vehicles
- one involved four vehicles
- two involved pedestrians
- one involved a motorcycle

In addition, more than 50 percent of the victims were not wearing seat belts. Sixteen percent of all wrecks were alcohol-related, DPS spokesman Tom Vinger said.

Fatal accidents occurred in 16 counties, including Midland County. Twenty-three people were injured in those accidents; most of whom were in critical condition Monday, Vinger said.

RESULTS: Speed-related crash costs estimated at $24 billion fic safety office in the department's Odessa district office. "We're trying to keep the motorists on the roadways safe."

Bogart agreed. "We're trying to get motorists to slow down and buckle up."

Martinez said that during long holiday weekends, when many Texans are traveling, "they seem excited about where they're going but they need to pay attention and be conscious of speed limits, read pavement markings and road signs, especially when they're coming up on railroad crossings."

Bogart said that after the Memorial Day program is completed, a post-event survey will be done to plan for similar increased traffic enforcement over the Fourth of July holiday and later for the Labor Day holiday.

City of Midland statistics indicate that there were 2,600 accidents in 1998. The National Highway Traffic Safety Administration reported that 3 million were injured in motor vehicle crashes, which killed 40,115 people, in 1993. Speed was a factor in 31 percent of the accidents. Speed-related crash costs are estimated at $24 billion and preventing such crashes could reduce health care costs by about $2 billion annually.

City fined for violating federal act

CARROLLTON (AP) — A North Texas city's efforts to appease its residents has wound up costing it $70,000 in the form of a fine assessed by the federal government.

The city of Carrollton violated the Migratory Bird Treaty Act when it bulldozed trees and brush at Josey Ranch Park, killing over 300 egrets, herons and other migratory birds, while injuring hundreds of others in June 1998.

The city reached its agreement Tuesday with the U.S. Attorney's office in Dallas, officials said.

The city was acting on complaints from residents that the birds were noisy and were unsanitary, but took the action without a permit.

GOALS: Facility upgrades, teacher recruitment top list er of two daughters who completed grade school and high school in Midland Independent School District. Mrs. Nicholson has taught part-time at Midland College, and has served as president of the Midland Council of Parent Teacher Associations. She also was active in the Very Important People in School program for almost 15 years.

She attended Southwest Texas State University and received her degree in teaching at the University of Texas in Austin and has been a member of the Texas Commission of Lawyer Discipline. She and her family have been residents of Midland for 13 years.

Ms. Ferguson is a native of Midland. She received her communications degree at University of Texas in Austin and has been a coordinator for MISD schools, was a television anchor and a radio news anchor. She is the mother two children, ages seven and 11.

The education task force is one of nine that make up Vision 2000.

Facility upgrade, structure management-cross discipline, teacher recruitment, a need for better student guidance, improved communication between parents and children (a cooperative adventure), choice, and safety (prevention and intervention) are the seven goals that the committee has refined from the countless ideas generated in the initial community forum March 4.

At the end of this summer, the task force hopes to have originated three strong visions to submit to the steering committee and the rest of the community, Mrs. Nicholson said.

Facilities and long-range planning have generated the most interest within the task force.

More people need to be properly educated about these topics, Mrs. Nicholson said. For example, she focused on the issue of the need for a new high school.

"Midland High School in not appropriate for the amount of students in it."

Dr. Joseph Baressi, MISD superintendent, agreed. He said there was a need to look at school facilities and that it was important to ensure that students have adequate space and facilities provided to them.

According to Baressi, upgrades in school facilities are needed most in the audio, video and voice areas. He said these up-grades reach much further than "a bunch of new computers."

The task force also saw the need for renovations in junior highs and some elementary schools such as Carver, West and Bunche.

According to Ms. Ferguson, there is a need for more of a community cooperative effort. This need, she added, is based on the idea that all parents, no matter what their income level, want their children to be successful. In order to achieve that, "every child needs a mentor."

Gen. Colin Powell devised a program that met this goal. The program's purpose is to make sure all children have the same opportunities to learn. The education task force believed that by using his method already in existence, children in the community could also reap benefits from the program.

Although teachers and parents are excellent mentors, Ms. Ferguson said she also wanted to see others in the community making an effort.

"You just raise the level of involvement of all people in the community," she said.

She used Big Brothers Big Sisters as an example. She also said that mentoring could take many forms such as making sure a child goes to bed on time or letting a child know that his mentor feels that education is important.

Baressi agreed with those goals as well. He stated that the need was even greater in Midland because of the large number of two-income families. He said it was important that the entire community get involved, even churches.

He said that some analysis of the recurring school violence was that students needed more resources at school, such as more guidance counselors. The Vision 2000 committee echoes the need for teacher appreciation and recognition.

"There is a diminishing pool of teachers," Mrs. Nicholson said. "We need to look at issues of teacher pay and making the community a more attractive place for teachers to come."

According to Mrs. Nicholson, this issue is addressed as "retention quality" by the task force. She said that she knew from her personal teaching experience that money, the community's acceptance of the teacher, and the appreciation that a teacher is shown are main concerns when deciding on a school or school district. Perhaps the most important factor, she said, was the appreciation a teacher is shown by the community.

The school board needs financial resources to stay competitive in teacher and facility resources, Baressi said.

Mrs. Nicholson also mentioned the need to promote alternative student learning.

"We need to realize there are many different kinds of students," Mrs. Nicholson said. "Midland is a very educated community and the assumption is that everyone goes to college."

She said that they need to be sure that there is a variety of education out there. She used the example of college versus technical training or college prep courses versus life courses.

"We don't want to say one alternative is better than the other.

"We want all students to be contributors to the community."

Mrs. Nicholson said it was essential that there be an education system for all children, and Ms. Ferguson said that meant devising an education system that deals with the best interest of all children.

One answer to diversifying educational opportunities might come from a revised Student Assignment System in Midland, Baressi said. Though MISD is in the process of trying to get unitary status to do so, Baressi said a revised cluster system is definitely one of the major issues for the next 10 years.

School shootings and uniforms have not been topics of discussion within the task force, Mrs. Nicholson said, although preventive intervention has been discussed.

"All good teachers intervene is some way," Ms. Nicholson said.

"We have tried to repeat the big picture to members," Ms. Ferguson said, "It is easy to get bogged down."

"We want to remind everyone this is a 10-year plan, so it will change," Mrs. Nicholson said. "This is just a goal-setting task."

One way the task force will research community concerns about education in send out surveys. The surveys will help the task force determine what Midlanders think the role of education is in the community, Mrs. Nicholson said.

"We are not trying to come up with instructions for schools," she said. "We are trying to come up with a vision for what the community wants and what the community can do to make the vision happen."

VISION: Members want to create downtown living areas

lating a survey to help provide focus for some of the task forces, but one group is planning a survey of its own this fall.

Jack Swallow, executive director of the Permian Basin Area Foundation, said the recently formed Midland Homeless Coalition will hit the streets in September to identify the homeless population, the issues confronting them and what their needs are in what he called an "in-the-trenches" survey.

He said the association is comprised of non-profit groups who provide service to the homeless, among them Habitat for Humanity, Christmas in April, Midland Fair Havens and Casa de Amigos.

Midland does have a homeless problem, he said. "Ours is not as visible as you might see in larger urban areas. You don't see them on the streets, on the curbs or over heating vents. But there is a homeless issue in Midland."

He went on to point out that "there are different aspects to homelessness. It might be a single mom, or a person who just lost his job and can't pay the rent. And then there's what may be considered the 'typical' homeless person, who's dealing with a substance abuse problem. We need to get our arms around what needs to be done."

Seniors and Housing task force chair Barbara Tom Jowell said that members are looking at ways to convert unused downtown office buildings into residences not just for senior citizens but for any Midlander.

She said that transportation is a critical need for seniors, and other needs identified include geriatric-trained medical personnel and adult day care facilities and long-term care facilities for low-income senior citizens.

Richard Jolly, chairman of the Transportation task force, agreed that young people and seniors are the two groups with the most critical need for transportation.

He said his task force members are looking at ways to perhaps implement public transportation "on a limited basis. There are some for-profit companies in other parts of the nation that meet this need, and that may work here. Midland had a public transportation service awhile back, and whether or not that's revived in some form is a question we'll look at."

The three major areas of focus for his task force are: Interstate and county roads, particularly building a new highway or expanding the one from Lubbock through Midland and on south into Mexico, and establishing exchanges along Interstate 20 to allow travelers to come into Midland; the airport; and infrastructure in the city of Midland proper.

Midland's youth need ways to get to after-school athletic events, or to facilities such as the Boys and Girls Club, said Shane Stokes, chairman of the Youth task force.

But he told the group that "it all comes down to parenting," adding "I'm afraid that we're going to find that parenting issues lead the list and numbers two and three will be small compared to that."

He said his task force members are looking for ways to make Midland a center for parenting information and said there is a need for more community involvement in schools, and that local organizations and churches need to be more involved with the city's young people.

But "the committee believes there are plenty of activities available, we need to get the young people involved," he said. "We didn't realize that there are a number of things available that young people don't take advantage of. We need to use the programs available, like scouting."

Julia Vaughan, who heads up the Facilities task force, said that her group is looking at five facilities: A sports center, a convention and civic center, a performing arts center, an expo center and a recreational center.

"We weeded out suggestions like theme parks or an Imax theater, because those were things we felt were better left to private, entrepreneurial groups," she explained.

Karen Nicholson, chair of the Education task force, said that her task force has divided education into topics that range from school structure to facilities, teacher recruitment and retention, guidance, school choice, school safety to cooperative ventures.

Ms. Baskin observed that "all of the groups are amazed at the scope each task force has. Some focuses are narrow, and others are pretty broad and need to establish a focus."

As she listened to the progress of the task forces, she noted, "a year ago this was a dream in the noggins of two or three people. To see it develop to where so many people are participating and contributing and care, it gives me hope for the future."

Dollar falls

NEW YORK (AP) — The dollar fell against most major currencies Tuesday as inflation fears roiled U.S. stock and bond markets.

"Today was about selling dollars rather than about buying yen or buying the euro," said Rob Podoresky, a foreign exchange vice president at BankBoston. "It's a dollar trade rather than a currency trade."

In late New York trading, the euro was quoted at $1.0442, up from $1.0418 Friday. U.S. currency markets were closed Monday in observance of Memorial Day. The dollar fell to 120.56 yen from 121.43 yen Friday.

Investors ran from markets Tuesday as the National Association of Purchasing Management reported that its price index jumped to 52.2 in May from 49.9 percent in April, the first time since December 1997 that manufacturers were seeing higher prices for raw materials.

Stocks end mixed

NEW YORK (AP) — Blue-chip stocks closed higher Tuesday as investors put their money into companies whose fortunes rise along with a growing economy. But worries that the economy is expanding too rapidly held the overall market lower for much of the day.

The Dow Jones industrial average rose 36.52 to close at 10,596.26 after being off as much as 150 points earlier in the session.

Broader stock indicators closed lower. The Standard & Poor's 500 fell 7.58 to 1,294.26, and the Nasdaq composite index fell 58.49 to 2,412.03.

Concerns about inflation, which have increased the market's volatility over the past two weeks, were behind Tuesday's declines as well. Stock prices dropped after the National Association of Purchasing Management said the nation's industrial economy expanded for a fourth straight month in May. The report, which gauges the health of the nation's factories, was much stronger than expected.

Crude falls

NEW YORK (Bloomberg) — Crude oil fell almost 4 percent, its third straight decline, after European refineries cut the amount of oil they process into crude because of narrowing profit margins.

Italian refiner ERG SpA said it would trim processing rates at its Priolo refinery in Sicily this month. That follows similar cutbacks by BP Amoco Plc and the Royal Dutch/Shell Group. The reductions come as European refining margins are close to record lows. Europe consumes 22 percent of the world's oil.

"There is no incentive for a refiner to buy crude oil," said Tim Evans, an analyst at Pegasus Econometric Group in New York. "There's no profit margin either."

StarTek USA could bring jobs to Big Spring

By T.E. Jenkins

BIG SPRING — As officials from the Spring City's Moore Development court a Colorado-based software support company, area residents are already lining up for job opportunities.

Moore Development for Big Spring Inc. Executive Director Kent Sharp said Tuesday afternoon that the response from residents in the Big Spring area has been encouraging, making negotiations to bring StarTek USA to Big Spring that much easier.

"You have to show them that your community has the human resources to fill the positions," said Sharp. "That's about nine-tenths of the battle right there. We have to prove to StarTek that we can fill the jobs that they bring to Big Spring, and that our workforce has the skills and education necessary to keep them running indefinitely."

Sharp said the response has already been overwhelming.

"We placed ads in the local newspapers this past Sunday to let people know what's going on, and the response has already been phenomenal," said Sharp. "In less than three days, we've already had more than 350 people call the Texas Workforce Commission, and have set up times to interview with them.

"StarTek has told us that they will need to hire anywhere between 350 and 375 employees right off the bat, and possibly more in the near future. That's a really big boost for the Big Spring economy, if they decide to locate here."

Sharp said StarTek is a technologically advanced, service oriented company, providing computer software support for companies such as Microsoft and America On-Line. He also said the chance for advancement within a company like StarTek is a major plus for not only the local employees, but the Big Spring area workforce as well.

"The training these employees receive will be something they can use in the future, as well," said Sharp. "There's a real need out there for these type of technical support groups, and as they grow, so will the industry. Employees in the industry will have the chance for the type of rapid advancement that takes place within the computer world.

"The company is looking at possibly locating in the old K mart shopping center next to the Big Spring Mall on FM 700. The impact a business like that could have on a city the size of Big Spring is incredible."

Sharp said the quality of people that are interested in employment with StarTek has already shown to be "top-notch."

"Out of the 350 people that we already have signed up with TWC, only about five percent do not already have a high school or equivalent education," said Sharp. "We are really excited about the quick turn-out, as well as the educational background of these people."

According to Sharp, attracting businesses similar to StarTek will help the Spring City further diversify it's heavy oil and agricultural workforce, helping the city weather hard economical times such as those facing residents now.

Residents that sign up for the prospective employer will get the chance to make their personal impact Thursday and Friday, as Moore Development and TWC hold a job fair to help attract StarTek officials.

"The key to bringing StarTek to Big Spring really lies within the work force," said Sharp. "We need everyone who is interested to get out and take a look at what these guys have to offer. We would like to fill every position these guys have with Big Spring residents, but we want people from all over the general area to check it out. That means having Midland, Odessa and even out of state human resources as well."

For more information, or to sign up for this week's job fair, contact the Big Spring TWC office at (915) 267-7437.

Teamsters union negotiates contracts

A Teamster automobile transporter with Local 25 unloads new cars outside the Boch Oldsmobile-Toyota new car dealership Tuesday in Norwood, Mass. Negotiators for the Teamsters union and companies that haul new cars to auto showrooms resumed contract talks meant to avert a strike which could delay delivery of some models.

"We're making progress but it's going to be a late evening," said Teamsters' president James P. Hoffa, who is facing his first major challenge at the bargaining table since March when he was sworn in as head of the union once led by his late father, Jimmy Hoffa.

Attorneys argue Oprah beef libel case in appeals court

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — A lawsuit that a group of Texas cattlemen lost to talk show host Oprah Winfrey should not have been tried in federal court, an attorney for one of the cattlemen argued Tuesday.

The case should have been tried in Texas state court, Joseph F. Coyne Jr., an attorney representing cattleman Paul Engler, told the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals.

Ms. Winfrey did not attend the hearing.

Engler is the only one of a group of cattlemen — three cattle-feeding operations and four ranches — that has appealed a jury's verdict that rejected the $11 million dollar lawsuit against Ms. Winfrey, her production company and a vegetarian activist.

The cattlemen's original suit claims vegetarian activist Howard Lyman violated Texas' "veggie libel" law during the April 16, 1996, edition of "The Oprah Winfrey Show." The plaintiffs argued the television talk show gave viewers the false impression that American beef could spread mad cow disease.

When cattle prices dropped to a 10-year low in the days after the show aired, the plaintiffs blamed Ms. Winfrey.

Even in the wake of the trial, the Texas House defeated an attempt this year to repeal the "veggie libel" law. Lawmakers who wanted the law repealed called it silly.

The arguments Tuesday centered entirely on the procedural question of which court should have heard the case. If the successful, the case would be sent back for retrial in state court.

Coyne said Texas-based Cannon Communications, the owner of the television affiliate that broadcast the show, had been a defendant in the case, therefore allowing the trial to proceed in Texas court.

But Cannon Communications was then dismissed from the lawsuit. The plaintiffs tried to reinstate the company to the lawsuit but a judge refused.

Ms. Winfrey's attorney, Charles Babcock, argued that there is no reason why the case shouldn't have been tried in federal court.

"It's only now that they lost the jury verdict ... that they are coming back and saying the court doesn't have jurisdiction," Babcock said.

Coyne also argued that Ms. Winfrey "knowingly" made false statements and cut important information that would have proved that American beef is safe. Instead, Coyne said, Ms. Winfrey left details in the talk show that dramatized the topic, therefore driving down the price of beef.

"She never disclosed a study that said the beef is purely safe," Coyne told the judges. "Oprah Winfrey said these are boring statements."

Babcock said that statement was "absolutely false" and that the plaintiffs had not proved that there was actual malice.

"There is no evidence any false statements in the broadcast was made knowing it was false," Babcock said.

On her show, Ms. Winfrey simply asked experts the same question — "Can it happen here?" — that news agencies had been asking, Babcock said.

Merrill Lynch shakes up Wall Street with announcement of online trading

NEW YORK (AP) — Grudgingly acknowledging the march of technology, Merrill Lynch & Co., the nation's biggest stock brokerage, shook Wall Street on Tuesday by announcing it will offer discount trading over the Internet.

The decision marks a dramatic change for Merrill Lynch, which has spent decades forging a nationwide network of 14,000 brokers who give investment advice and who earn commissions of hundreds of dollars for placing stock trades. Customers now will be able to trade stocks over the Internet for $29.95 a transaction.

Merrill debated for months whether online trading would undermine its traditional brokerage services. A year ago, Merrill's brokerage chief, John Steffens, was badmouthing online trading as "a serious threat to Americans' financial lives."

The firm was finally swayed by the rapid loss of business to a growing number of online brokers such as Charles Schwab, ETrade and Ameritrade.

"This is probably the most important decision we have made as an organization since the mid-1970s," said David Komansky, Merrill's chairman and chief executive.

Merrill Lynch's Internet strategy, which competitors are likely to follow, reflects the revolutionary impact of the Internet on financial services. More than 7 million Americans are trading online, and more than one-third of individual trades are made online.

"It appeared foolish for us to ignore that part of the market," Komansky said. "So we decided to attack it."

But there are big risks.

Some of Merrill's brokers stand to lose up to 18 percent of their pay as customers bypass their services and trade via the Internet.

Merrill is also charging more than many rivals, some of whom offer trades for as little as $5. And, Merrill is setting another high bar: a minimum of $20,000 to open an account. Some online brokers allow people to open accounts for as little as a few thousand dollars.

Finally, by waiting until December to launch the new service, Merrill will give competitors time to respond with their own products.

Nevertheless, Merrill is preparing for battle.

Executives gave their Internet strategy the code name "Rubicon," the river Julius Caesar crossed on his way to take Rome.

One of Merrill's clear targets: Charles Schwab, which caters to a similar upper-middle-class clientele and also charges $29.95 for online trades. Shares of Charles Schwab dropped $6 to $99.50 Tuesday on the New York Stock Exchange.

"I'm not concerned," said Charles Schwab, chairman and chief executive of the San Francisco-based brokerage. "What they're introducing is the affirmation of what we've been talking about a long time."

Other online brokers also got pounded: Shares of ETrade fell $5.18 3/4 to $39.31 1/4 on the Nasdaq Stock Market, while Ameritrade dipped $9.93 3/4 to $79.75, also on Nasdaq.

Merrill's own stock dropped $8.75, or 10 percent, to $75.25 on the NYSE, though Komansky blamed it on the recent run up in Merrill's stock price and concerns in the market about inflation.

Wall Street's traditional brokerage firms will have to match Merrill.

"Everybody else sure as heck better follow suit or they're going to run the risk of not keeping up with their customers," said Scott Birnbaum, head of financial services for Mercer Management Consulting Inc.

One full-service brokerage firm is already online. Donaldson, Lufkin & Jenrette, which has about 400 brokers, last week spun off its online trading division, DLJ Direct, into a separate company.

Newest toy store hopes customers learn while having fun

By Mella McEwen

Opening early next week in North Park Shopping Center, 4706 N. Midkiff, next to Hobby Lobby, is LEARNING EXPRESS.

McEwen

Owner of the Midland franchise is Mike Sledge, who described the store as carrying innovative toys that are educational and fun.

Inventory includes games and puzzles, science and nature projects, construction and transportation toys, arts and crafts, sports, books, plush animals and more. Popular toys include Thomas the Tank and Brio wooden train sets, Rokenbok construction sets, Blues Clues items, yo-yos and Beanie Babies.

Special services include a customer newsletter, holiday catalog, free gift-wrapping and personalizing, a Frequent Buyer discount card and Learning Express Wish List, a gift registry. Corporate and school buying programs, discounts for teachers and day care providers and fund-raising opportunities for local schools and charities will also be available.

The Massachusetts-based company was founded in 1987 by Sharon DiMinico, who began franchising the concept that year. It has grown to 130 stores in 27 states.

A grand opening celebration will be held June 10-12 with appearances by Harlin the Balloon Man, Greenie the Clown and "Arthur" and a live remote broadcast by KODM-FM. Shoppers can register for two $500 shopping sprees and a complete Thomas the Tank wooden train set and play table.

Hours will be 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Monday through Saturday.

Buy a grill Memorial Day, but not the cookbook?

Chicken brochettes in Persillade is a dish devised by Chef Pilar Sanchez that will be featured on the menu of this week's Napa Valley Wine Auction. The savory skewered chicken is basted with a parsley dressing as it grills.

Did the call of barbecue charm you into buying a grill? Did you expect to find a recipe booklet enclosed only to be disappointed? Here's some help, and some variations on basting with barbecue sauce.

Chicken Brochettes in Persillade is this recipe's stylish label. The taste is just as good if you describe it as savory skewers of chicken, basted with parsley dressing and cooked on the grill.

The recipe, simple but with its own flair, is from Pilar Sanchez, chef de cuisine of Meadowood Napa Valley, St. Helena, Calif. It is one of the offerings at the 19th annual Napa Valley Wine Auction, which raises funds for local charities. The event, scheduled for June 3-6 at the resort, includes feasting and picnics and wine-tasting.

CHICKEN BROCHETTES IN PERSILLADE

Persillade:
2 bunches Italian parsley leaves
8 cloves garlic
1/2 cup olive oil
Chicken:
8 wood skewers (12-inch), soaked in water for 20 minutes
4 pounds boneless and skinless chicken breasts, cut into 2-inch squares
3 tablespoons olive oil
Salt and pepper to taste

Combine all ingredients for Persillade and puree in food processor.

Thread chicken onto skewers. Brush with oil. Oil barbecue grill. Cook chicken over gray ash-covered coals for 3 minutes per side, turning twice. Coat chicken with Persillade on all sides. Continue to cook additional 2 to 3 minutes per side or until done. Serve.

Makes 8 servings.

GO FOR GRILLED VEGES

You don't have to vegetarian to love barbecued and grilled vegetables such as corn, sweet potatoes and eggplants, even asparagus, can form the basis for satisfying meatless meals.

Vegetarians have plenty of tasty, acceptable choices to heap on their plates, given the variety of foods that can be prepared on the grill. Side dishes such as rice and beans, crusty bread and salads can round out meals, with fruit and cookies as easy desserts.

BARBECUED CORN WITH CHILI BUTTER

12 ears corn in their husks
1/2 cup butter or margarine, softened
2 tablespoons hot red pepper sauce
1 teaspoon chili powder
1/2 teaspoon garlic powder

Peel back husks; remove corn silk. Bring husks up and tie with kitchen string. Soak corn in cold water for 30 minutes. Beat together softened butter, pepper sauce, chili and garlic powders until smooth; set aside. Grill corn over medium heat for 25 minutes or until corn is tender, turning often. Remove husks. Serve with reserved butter mixture.

Flavor variations, to blend with 1/2 cup softened butter:

- 3 tablespoons brown mustard and 1 tablespoon horseradish.
- 3 tablespoons minced fresh herbs and 1 tablespoon Worcestershire sauce.
- 2 tablespoons hot red pepper sauce and 1 teaspoon curry powder (for Indian flavor).
- 2 tablespoons hot red pepper sauce, 1 tablespoon soy sauce, and 1/2 teaspoon ground ginger (for Asian flavor).

Makes 12 servings.

Recipe from: Franks RedHot.

GRILLED SWEET POTATOES

2 pounds sweet potatoes, peeled and cut into 1/2-inch slices
1/3 cup Dijon or honey mustard
2 tablespoons olive oil
1 tablespoon minced fresh rosemary leaves or 1 teaspoon dried

Place sweet potatoes and 1 cup water into large microwave-safe dish; cover. Microwave on high 6 minutes or until potatoes are crisp-tender, turning once. (If necessary, cook potatoes in two batches.) Drain well.

Combine mustard, olive oil and rosemary. Grill sweet potato slices on oiled rack over medium-high for 5 minutes or until fork-tender, turning and basting often with mustard mixture.

Recipe from: French's mustard.

ASPARAGUS WITH LEMON VINAIGRETTE

2 teaspoons olive oil
2 teaspoons sugar
3/4 teaspoon freshly ground black pepper
Juice of 1 lemon
Cooking spray
1 pound asparagus (see note)

Whisk the oil, sugar, pepper and lemon juice in a small bowl until well combined. Preheat the grill. Coat a grill rack with cooking spray and place on the grill. Arrange the asparagus spears crosswise on rack. Grill until lightly browned and tender, about 5 minutes, turning with tongs once. Transfer to a serving platter and drizzle the lemon mixture over the asparagus. Serve at once.

Makes 4 servings.

A favorite way to prepare veal chops — a sumptuous cut of meat — involves searing them on the grill and topping them with a fresh tomato-basil salsa. Oak is the best wood for grilling these chops. It is readily available, burns hot and packs a flavoful punch.

WOOD-GRILLED VEAL CHOPS WITH TOMATO-BASIL SALSA

Four 3/4-pound veal rib chops
2 tablespoons extra-virgin olive oil
2 tablespoons fresh lemon juice
1 tablespoon chopped oregano
Kosher salt and freshly ground pepper
Sauce:
2 tomatoes, peeled, seeded and diced
20 basil leaves, slivered
2 garlic cloves, minced
1/2 cup extra-virgin olive oil
2 tablespoons fresh lemon juice
2 teaspoons red wine vinegar
Salt and freshly ground pepper

To prepare the veal: Set the veal chops in a large glass baking dish and add the olive oil, lemon juice and oregano. Season with salt and pepper and turn to coat. Let marinate at room temperature for 30 minutes.

To prepare the sauce: In a glass or ceramic bowl, toss the tomatoes with the basil and the garlic. Add the olive oil, lemon juice and vinegar and toss gently. Season generously with salt and pepper.

Light a grill, preferably using oak for fuel. Grill the chops over a medium-hot fire for 6 to 7 minutes per side for medium; for attractive grill marks,rotate the chops 90 degrees after 3 minutes on each side. Transfer the chops to a platter and let stand for 2 minutes before spooning the sauce on top and serving.

Makes 4 servings.

DEAR ABBY

Fiance's failure to back bride bodes ill for couple's future

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: After reading the letter from "Still Steaming in S.F.," I have to wonder what kind of a man "John" is to have allowed his fiancee to be publicly snubbed at his law partner's dinner party.

Van Buren

"Steaming" should think twice about marrying someone who would do nothing in a situation of this sort, and if she does decide to go through with it, she should exclude the law partner and his wife from the wedding. If she does relent and invite them, the invitation should be addressed to the husband only.

Abby, a marriage should and must come before any business arrangement. If it doesn't, beware the future. It will be filled with similar "snubs" and a husband who sacrifices his life partner's feelings in favor of his working partners'. — BEEN THERE

DEAR BEEN THERE: Although the fiance could have been more sensitive to the treatment "Steaming" was receiving, I'm not sure the incident is a dire preview of her future with the man. The hostess showed appalling bad manners. However, I do not agree that "Steaming" should stoop to the same level by excluding the couple from the guest list, or by improperly addressing their invitation. Read on:

DEAR ABBY: I have the perfect solution for "Steaming in S.F." Of course she must invite that dreadful woman to the wedding! Her husband's career will be the casualty if she doesn't. However, she can get some revenge in a subtle yet satisfying manner if she's having a sit-down dinner at the reception.

At every wedding, there's one table where the hostess seats those guests who just don't seem to fit in with the others. Usually, at least one of the people at this table is a distant relative who never shuts up and has an opinion about everything. Seat "Mrs. X" next to this guest. Maybe she'll even leave early! — NOBODY'S VICTIM ANYMORE, ATLANTA

DEAR NOBODY'S VICTIM: Spoken like a true veteran of the social scene. The name for that table is "Siberia." You're not the only reader who identified with "Steaming in S.F." Read on:

DEAR ABBY: I agree with your advice to "Still Steaming in S.F.," who was publicly snubbed by the wife of her husband's business partner. I had a similar experience.

The social event at which I was snubbed eight years ago was a lovely outdoor wedding shower that was being held for my fiance and me.

The "snubber" fancied herself to be a major mover in local political circles. She was not even on the list of suggested guests we had given the hostess. She was a good friend of the host and hostess, and my fiance was casually acquainted with her.

When he attempted to introduce me to this woman, she was extremely rude and acted as if I were invisible. I was shocked and embarrassed.

I later learned that during my fiance's bachelorhood, this woman had tried repeatedly — but unsuccessfully — to fix him up with her various girlfriends. I now realize that the snub had nothing to do with me — and everything to do with her frustration at failing in her matchmaking efforts. She was being a poor loser. "Steaming" might very well find a similar history between her husband-to-be and the law partner's wife. — SNUBBED AND HAPPY IN ST. PAUL

DEAR SNUBBED AND HAPPY: Indeed she might. It's also possible that the law partner's wife was herself attracted to the woman's fiance. However, that's no excuse. It is the duty of the hostess to make sure all her guests enjoy themselves. Not only did she fail at that, she behaved so badly other guests commented on it. That's hardly a social triumph.

DEAR ABBY: I've read many articles over the years about whether the father or the stepfather should walk the bride down the aisle. I'd like to share my solution with you.

I was raised by my father until the age of 9, and by my stepfather from 9 to 19. Since both men put equal heart and soul into my upbringing, I asked them both to give me away. My stepfather declined, saying it was my father's day.

As my father proudly walked me down the aisle, we stopped, I handed my father my bouquet, turned and hugged and kissed my stepfather, then turned and proceeded to my awaiting groom.

There wasn't a dry eye in the church.

To this day, some 15 years later, friends still tell me it was one of the most touching gestures they have ever witnessed, one that had great symbolism.

Abby, I hope this solution helps someone else who may be wondering how to handle that situation. — B. COATES, GLENDALE, ARIZ.

DEAR B. COATES: Although it's not to be found in any etiquette book, you have provided a beautiful and sensitive solution to a situation in which many brides find themselves. Thank you for sharing it.

Taste testers make quick work of red beans & rice

I have a son-in-law who likes to hunt. And when he gets a deer, I often get some of the meat. This past season he gave me some ground meat and some venison sausage. And what goes better with sausage (especially venison) than red beans and rice?

Anderson

I had a package of the venison sausage left in the freezer, and a box of Tony Chachere's New Orleans Red Beans and Rice, so I cooked them up and drafted some of the kids into being taste-testers (it's usually not difficult — most of them are always ready to eat).

A 7-ounce box of the red beans and rice costs $1.79 and contains enough of the seasoned dried mix to make four servings.

Nutrition information shows that one serving (one-quarter of the mix prepared as directed) contains 100 calories with none of them from fat. (Which really doesn't make complete sense, because directions call for a tablespoon of margarine to be added; wouldn't that mean a quarter of a tablespoon of margarine — or a little less than a teaspoon — per serving? Wouldn't that add fat to the mixture to the tune of somewhere around 25 fat calories? Just asking...)

Label advertising goes like this: "In Louisiana, red beans and rice is usually made on Mondays, but I can eat 'em seven days a week!" — a quote attributed to Tony Chachere, I think.

Then it continues: "Traditional Red Beans and Rice can take hours to cook but with Tony Chachere's Red Beans and Rice you have an easy, practical and delicious meal in only 30 minutes!"

The directions also suggest adding a quarter of a pound of chopped sausage or ham if you want to, but I added a whole pound of venison sausage and let the kids dig in.

My own kid refused to even sample the red beans and rice because, she said, and I quote, "I don't like rice!"

However, three of her friends weren't so picky. I asked them if they wanted to sample the food, and they grabbed bowls and spoons. I told them it was a taste test and I wanted their opinions. Here's what those opinions turned out to be:

(1) The first taster said it was "pretty good," but since he went back for thirds, I figured his comment was an understatement.

(2) The second taster agreed with the first, but he only went back for seconds.

(3) The third polished off what was left (and a four-serving box plus a whole pound of sausage actually makes a lot more than you think) as an evening snack. I think he approved since there were no leftovers.

What did I think? I actually did get to sample a spoonful or two, but I left most of the tasting to the professionals. What I sampled was very tasty, not much spicier than ordinary red beans, and kind of different. I liked it. Don't know if I could eat it "seven days a week" though.

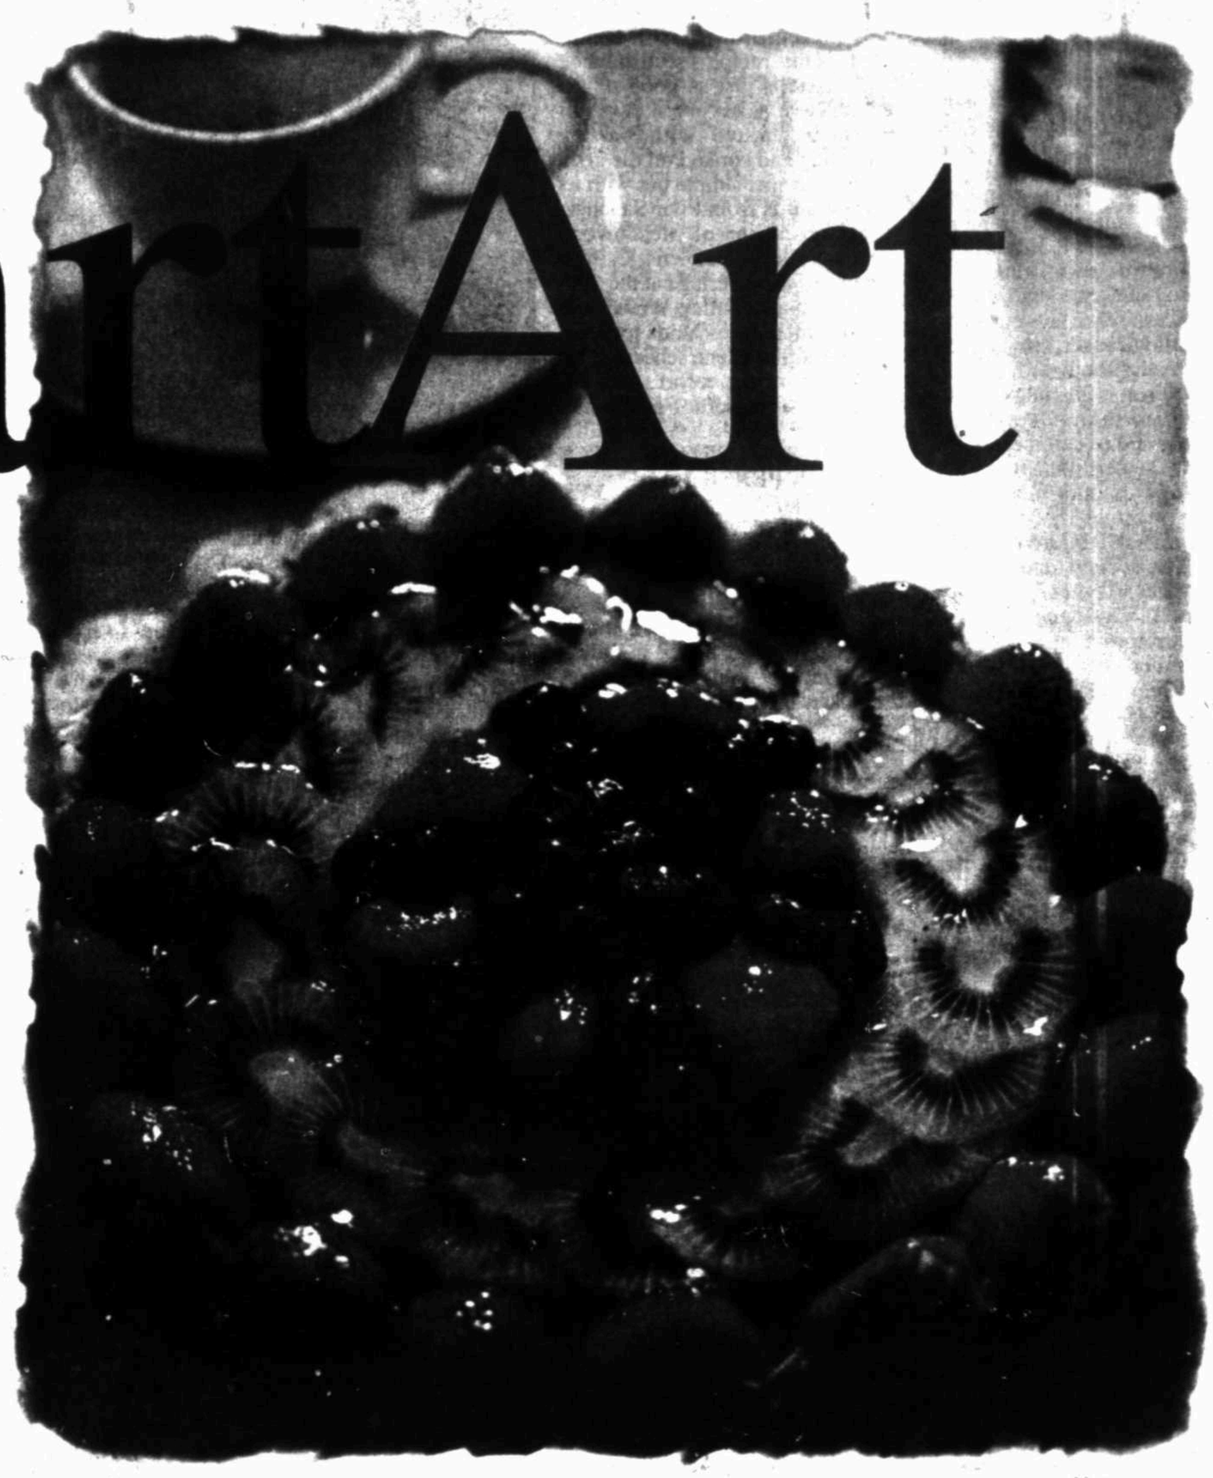
Tart Art



A pastry frame and a custard canvas set up a sweet exhibit of fruit

By Gwen Schoen
The Sacramento Bee

At Caffe Ettore in Sacramento, fruit tarts are a popular dessert, according to owner Ettore Ravazzolo. A Swiss-trained baker, Ravazzolo says that in Europe during the Impressionist era, the types of fruit used for tarts had such a short season that fruit tarts were a rare treat. Fortunately, that isn't true here, where we can find fresh berries and stone fruits year-round.

Ravazzolo's bakery cases are filled with the beautiful pastries of Europe — meringues layered with whipped cream, plump croissants — but the perfect, fruit-glazed tarts steal the exhibit. Ravazzolo considers the colorful tarts one of his signature pastries.

"Customers order them all year," says Ravazzolo. "Sometimes in the winter months or very early spring we have access to fruit that consumers can't find in grocery stores. Because they are so beautiful, fruit tarts are wonderful to serve on holidays and special occasions."

Now is the perfect time to pull out the tart pan and create some culinary art of your own. Don't be discouraged by how difficult these creations appear. They really are quite simple to make when you break the task down to three steps — the crust, the filling and the fruit and glaze. You can make the process even easier by baking the crust and making the filling one day and assembling the tart the following day.

"They are not really so complicated," says Ravazzolo. "You need to know how to make the tart shell. Usually the shell is a sweet pastry similar to a cookie dough or a butter dough. But tarts can also be made with a puff pastry or even a pie crust dough.

"The filling can be a simple pastry cream or custard. Here at the bakery we use a white chocolate pastry cream. It is quite complicated to do at home, but a basic pastry cream can easily be managed with some practice," he says.

"As for the fruit, just about anything you can imagine will work. Certainly all types of berries, kiwi, peaches or apricots would be just fine. One of our most popular combinations is strawberries with kiwi."

Granted, making a tart is time-consuming, but when your work of culinary art is finished, you'll be amazed at the talents you didn't know you possessed.

FRUIT TART

This recipe was provided by Ettore Ravazzolo of Caffe Ettore in Sacramento. He says the best fruits to use for this tart are kiwis, strawberries, raspberries, blueberries or blackberries, mango and papaya.Note: Preparation time includes the 1-hour chill time for the dough or the 30-minute chill time for the unbaked crust.

TART DOUGH:
1/2 cup butter, room temperature
4 tablespoons fine sugar
Zest of 1 lemon
1 whole egg, beaten
2 cups all-purpose flour
1 pinch baking powder

PASTRY CREAM:
5 egg yolks
1/2 cup sugar, divided use
1 teaspoon vanilla
2 cups milk, divided use
2 tablespoons flour
1-1/2 cups whipping cream

Topping:
2 to 3 cups fresh fruit

TART DOUGH: Mix soft butter and sugar in mixer with paddle at low speed until well mixed but not fluffy. Sift flour and baking powder together. Add zest, egg, flour mixture and mix until incorporated. Wrap in plastic and chill for minimum of 1 hour.

Roll out dough on floured surface 1/8 inch thick and in a circle with a 10-inch diameter.

Line an 8-inch greased tart shell with dough and press gently with fingers on side of mold. Prick the bottom of shell with fork and chill for 30 minutes.

Bake at 350 degrees until golden brown, about 15 minutes.

Cool and remove from shell.

PASTRY CREAM: Beat yolks with 1/4 cup of the sugar until fluffy. Stir in vanilla and 1/2 cup of the milk. Sift flour and add to egg mixture and blend all ingredients well. Bring remaining 1-1/2 cups of the milk with the remaining 1/4 cup of the sugar to a boil and pour hot milk slowly over egg mixture while beating rapidly. Return all mixture back into pan and boil for approximately 2 minutes or until thick, stirring constantly to avoid burning on bottom. Remove and pour into bowl, covering with plastic directly on cream to avoid crusting of cream. Refrigerate.

While cream is chilling, whip whipping cream to soft peaks. (You should have 3 cups.) When cream is cold, mix smooth and gently fold in whipped cream. Fill tart shell with cream and top with fresh fruit as desired. Brush tart with an apricot jam that has been strained.

Several good cookbooks that feature recipes for pies and tarts are available. Here are three worth checking out:

Great Pies & Tarts by Carole Walter (Crown Publishing). This book includes a primer for the beginning baker. While there are not a lot of color photos, the book does have some how-to sketches, and each recipe is rated for difficulty.

Perfect Fruit Desserts and Perfect Pies & Tarts, both by Anne Willan (DK Publishing Inc.). As with all DK books, these paperbacks are filled with step-by-step color photographs that show the baker exactly how to manage each step. Each recipe includes a helpful shopping list and tips that offer alternative techniques or ingredients.

Agassi maintains surprising French roll; Davenport loses

By Steve Wilstein
AP Tennis Writer

PARIS — The ever-changing Andre Agassi has a new look every match: a goatee at the start of the French Open, clean-shaven for the second round, a full beard by the quarterfinals.

What hasn't changed is the sweet rhythm he's found in his game, except perhaps to get better and better, and on Tuesday he rode that beat into the semis. It was hardly the most thrilling victory of the day — that belonged to five-time champion Steffi Graf in her 6-1, 6-7 (5-7), 6-3 quarterfinal victory over No. 2 Lindsay Davenport — but it was certainly the most dominant.

Two years ago, Agassi considered retirement. Two weeks ago, he almost pulled out of the French Open.

Now he stands within two victories of what he calls "the greatest thing I could achieve" — winning a Grand Slam title that has escaped the grasp of his rival, Pete Sampras, and that defied the likes of Jimmy Connors and John McEnroe.

Agassi barely broke a sweat as he mercifully put injured qualifier Marcelo Filippini of Uruguay out of his misery 6-2, 6-2, 6-0 in 72 minutes. Playing his most punishing tennis yet this tournament, Agassi yielded only four points in the first four games, nine points in the whole third set.

"He killed me on the court," said Filippini, who hadn't lost a set in the first four rounds. "I had no chance. It's not nice to get booed on center court."

Filippini, ranked No. 140, said a strained abdominal muscle limited his serving motion and hurt him on every backhand. But he admitted that even if he were well Agassi probably still would have destroyed him.

Agassi, who last reached the French semis seven years ago, isn't likely to have it so easy in his next match against Dominik Hrbaty, a blithe 21-year-old Slovakian who beat him in the Lipton Championships in March.

Hrbaty has claimed two big scalps so far in the French: No. 1 Yevgeny Kafelnikov, the 1996 champion, in straight sets in the second round, and former No. 1 Marcelo Rios in four sets in the quarters.

The women's semifinals will feature three players who own a combined total of 11 French Open titles, though the favorite to win it all is the one player who has none — No. 1 Martina Hingis.

Hingis, like Agassi, will be trying to complete a career Grand Slam as she goes into the semis against defending and three-time champion Arantxa Sanchez-Vicario. Hingis breezed past Austrian qualifier Barbara Schwartz 6-2, 6-2, while Sanchez-Vicario beat another Austrian, Sylvia Plischke, 6-2, 6-4.

Graf will meet her longtime rival, Monica Seles, a three-time champ, in the other women's semifinal. Seles beat Conchita Martinez 6-1, 6-4.

Davenport will only be able to watch from the sideline once again. And to hear her complain about the red clay, it sounds as if she doesn't think she'll ever play for the title at Roland Garros.

"I don't like anything about it," she said. "It's just such a different game. It slows everything down. It just is slippery, and I don't like that."

None of the women's semifinalists is a surprise. But when it comes to the men, Agassi surely is.

He quit in the middle of the World Team Cup the week before the French because of a chronic right shoulder injury.

"I was probably a day away from not coming," Agassi said. "Had my shoulder kept me from hitting the ball another day, I would have felt like that would have put too many checks in the wrong column.

Stars stay alive with 4-1 victory

DENVER — It's only fitting that the wild Western Conference finals will be decided by a one-game showdown.

The top-seeded Dallas Stars avoided elimination Tuesday night, scoring three goals in the final period to beat the Colorado Avalanche 4-1 and send the seesaw series back to Texas for a deciding seventh game.

"I don't see any advantage between these two teams," Dallas coach Ken Hitchcock said. "Every game goes down to the last 10 minutes. It's unbelievable. It's up for grabs."

Jamie Langenbrunner scored two goals in the final 20 minutes as the Stars, playing more like the team that won the Presidents' Trophy with the best record in the NHL, pulled away in the third period.

"We just stayed with it," Langenbrunner said. "I was the fortunate one that got the bounce at the end, but we played hard all night and got to live another day."

Game 7 will be Friday night in Dallas, where the Stars are 6-2 in the playoffs — with both losses coming in this series. Colorado is 3-6 at home but 8-1 on the road, including a 7-5 victory in Game 5.

The Avalanche missed an excellent chance to advance to the Stanley Cup finals for the second time in four seasons. The Game 7 winner will advance to face the Eastern Conference champion Buffalo Sabres.

"There's no easy road to the Stanley Cup," Avalanche coach Bob Hartley said. "This round is a classic example. It's going down to the seventh game and we like our chances. We're a good road team, and I think we'll be there."

With the score tied at 1, the third period took on a sudden-death atmosphere, and the Stars applied the pressure when Langenbrunner poked home a rebound on Joe Nieuwendyk's shot from the slot at 6:49.

Langenbrunner, who had 12 goals all season, has eight in the playoffs and three game-winners. His latest prompted Colorado goalie Patrick Roy to throw his stick in disgust as the Stars celebrated in front of him.

"I made a great first save," Roy said. "I think it hit a stick and bounced back under me, and then the stick of Langenbrunner was under me and I could not put my pad on the ice. He just pushed it into the empty net."

After failing to convert a breakaway chance 10 minutes later, Langenbrunner added another goal with a wide-open flip on a power play with 2:45 remaining. Langenbrunner's slap

NL condemns decision to review tape

By Ronald Blum
AP Sports Writer

NEW YORK — Baseball told umpires to keep their eyes on the ball, not the videotape.

Umpire Frank Pulli's decision to view a replay and change a home run to a double in Florida's 5-2 loss to St. Louis was wrong, NL president Len Coleman said Tuesday. Commissioner Bud Selig and AL president Gene Budig immediately echoed that view.

"Use of the video replay is not an acceptable practice," Coleman said. "Part of the beauty of baseball is that it is imperfect. Players make errors. Managers are constantly second-guessed. But the game is played and determined by two teams between the white lines."

Baseball, the NBA, NCAA football and soccer do not allow officials to use replays, while the NHL permits it to determine goals and NCAA basketball allows it in a few specific instances.The NFL had replay from 1986-91 and reinstated it on a limited basis last March after several game-turning calls that replays showed were incorrect.

"Traditionally, baseball has relied on the eyes of the umpires as opposed to any artificial devices for its judgments," Coleman said. "I fully support this policy. Occasionally, however, the umpires too will make mistakes; that is also part of the game."

Floyd claimed his drive Monday was a homer because it bounced off the facade behind the left-field scoreboard in Miami. Second-base umpire Greg Gibson thought the ball hit off the scoreboard and called it a double, but after the Marlins argued, the umpires conferred and Pulli — the crew chief and third-base ump — changed the ruling to a homer.

The Cardinals then protested, and the game was delayed for more than five minutes while Pulli studied replays on a TV camera near the Marlins' dugout. After consulting the replay, Pulli changed the call back to a double.

Coleman said Pulli, who with 28 years is second in seniority among NL umpires, was "acting in good faith" but made a mistake. Coleman did not rule on Florida's written protest. Because the Marlins would have gained only one more run if the play had been ruled a homer, it's unlikely the protest will be upheld.

Floyd, speaking in Miami before Tuesday night's game, agreed with Coleman's decision. He said allowing replays would lead to more arguments.

"You set yourself up for it to happen again, and you're going to have tons of people thrown out of the game. They'll be arguing until they're green in the face," Floyd said. "Most guys make history by hitting two grand slams in a game or something. I make history by hitting a ball that's reviewed on instant replay."

Kent Bottenfield, the winning pitcher in the game, also thought replays were inappropriate.

"I've never cared for it in football," he said. "I'm kind of a traditionalist, and I'd rather not see it in baseball."

Selig backed the decision, saying he was very concerned about the "pace of the game" but didn't want to talk extensively so as not to offend umpires.

Blazers have chance to recover following pair of Spurs' wins

By Bob Baum
AP Sports Writer

PORTLAND, Ore. — The Western Conference finals don't resume until Friday, and the Portland Trail Blazers will need every minute of the layoff to repair their psyche.

"I think it is the toughest loss that we've had all season," Damon Stoudamire said. "But the good thing about this is ... we've got three days to regroup, and then they're going to come into a hostile environment in Portland."

The Blazers couldn't help but be rattled by Monday night's 86-85 loss to San Antonio in Game 2. After all, they didn't trail in that game for 47 minutes and 51 seconds. Then Sean Elliott stood on his tiptoes, his feet barely in bounds, and hit the 3-pointer that gave the Spurs a 2-0 lead in the best-of-7 series.

It seemed to Portland's players that fate just wouldn't let them beat San Antonio. Four times this season the Blazers have taken the Spurs to a tight finish, only to lose.

"It took incredible shots to beat us," Portland coach Mike Dunleavy said. "I'd give (Elliott) 100 bucks to see him make that shot again. It was one of those shots you dream about making ... I told the guys they have nothing to hang their heads about. It's getting harder and harder for this team to beat us."

San Antonio coach Gregg Popovich says the momentum of the miracle comeback from an 18-point third-quarter deficit probably won't last until the weekend.

"If we were coming back and playing tomorrow it would be huge," he said. "But Friday is like 2 1/2 weeks from now. Nobody will even be able to remember this game."

The Spurs won't fly to Portland until Wednesday afternoon, after they've worked out in San Antonio. The Spurs' eight-game playoff winning streak will be tested in the noisy Rose Garden.

Irvin hasn't talked about trade, but is worried over deal

By Jeff Caplan
Fort Worth Star-Telegram

IRVING — The agent for Michael Irvin said yesterday the Dallas Cowboys' all-time leading receiver is concerned about his contract status, but he has made no contact with any NFL teams regarding a possible trade.

Steve Endicott, Irvin's agent, said he is miffed that the Cowboys have yet to offer a contract extension and that his client was used as possible trade bait prior to the NFL draft in April. Endicott said Irvin would endorse a trade if the Cowboys are not planning to offer the 12-year veteran an extension that would keep him with the team for the remainder of his career.

Irvin, who did not attend Tuesday's voluntary workout at Valley Ranch and was unavailable to comment, is entering the final year of his current deal. The Cowboys have already extended the contracts of Troy Aikman and Emmitt Smith to guarantee they will end their careers as Cowboys.

The contract situation "would concern any player," Endicott said. "Michael is not demanding a trade or anything else. Michael knows they talked to some teams about trading him over the winter; that's still stuck there. He said if that's what they want to do, that's fine."

Cowboys owner Jerry Jones said he would not comment on whether he plans to offer Irvin a contract extension. But he added he's not concerned about Irvin not being at the workout Tuesday.

"When you look at the 11 years I have been involved here, the way he competes on the field, it's not a big issue," Jones said.

Endicott also said Irvin is not irked about being de-emphasized in the new offense coach Chan Gailey installed last season.

Sabres aren't content just making finals

By Bill Porter
Associated Press Writer

BUFFALO, N.Y. — The Buffalo Sabres don't care about the trophy they won for making the NHL finals, their first trip since 1975. The bigger one is all that matters.

"It wasn't the Stanley Cup," captain Michael Peca said. "You don't grow up working as a kid to hold the conference trophy over your head."

The Sabres refused to celebrate after eliminating the Toronto Maple Leafs from the playoffs with a 4-2 victory in Game 5 in Toronto Monday night. That earned the Prince of Wales Trophy.

The biggest series will be the one against the winner of the Western Conference final between Dallas and Colorado. That series was tied 3-3 when Dallas won 4-1 Tuesday night. Game 7 will be Friday night in Dallas.

The Sabres have never won a Stanley Cup since they joined the NHL in 1970.

"We want to keep it very levelheaded," said defenseman Jason Woolley, the team's leading scorer in the playoffs.

Woolley started the play that resulted in the game-winning goal by Erik Rasmussen with a pass to Brian Holzinger with just over eight minutes left in the third period.

The Sabres celebrated too soon after they swept Montreal to advance to the Eastern Conference finals last season. They lit cigars. They cranked up the music. They smiled for the cameras. Then Washington knocked them out in six games.

Lesson learned. Had it not been for the horde of media, the locker room Monday night would have been as quiet as a library.

"We're going to the dance and we're not going to stand on the sidelines," Buffalo coach Lindy Ruff said. "I think we still have something to prove."

The only other time Buffalo played for the Stanley Cup was in 1975, when the team lost to hard-hitting Philadelphia in six games. The Sabres split two games with the Stars and Avalanche this season.

Nobody expected the Sabres to have a shot at the Stanley Cup this year, especially after goalie Dominik Hasek, the reigning two-time league MVP, was hurt in February.

Buffalo overcame injuries to key players and a regular-season slump. They made a mockery of the seedings, rising to the top from No. 7 in the Eastern Conference. They made believers of everyone, even their adversaries.

"They were in first place in January, then they had some injuries," Maple Leafs coach Pat Quinn said. "They were probably underestimated by a lot of people because it's Buffalo.

"Look at that team now, they made some changes. They added talented players, and now they are doing things they didn't do before. They finish a lot of checks now."

STARS: Dallas goes home

(From 1C)

shot came after Colorado's Claude Lemieux drew a costly penalty for charging into Dallas goaltender Ed Belfour, who landed hard on his back but finished with 26 saves.

"The third goal was a sigh of relief," Hitchcock said. "I finally got my hands out of my pockets."

Hitchcock exhaled further when Richard Matvichuk, whom the Avalanche have accused of dirty play throughout the series, added his first goal of the playoffs to put the game out of reach with 2:31 left.

The third-period flurry was nothing new for Dallas, which has outscored its opponent 23-9 in the final 20 minutes. The Stars outshot Colorado 15-8 in the last period and 40-27 for the game.

"As much as we didn't want it to happen, Game 6 doesn't matter anymore," said Colorado defenseman Sandis Ozolinsh. "It's what we're going to do in game 7."

Roy finished with 36 saves, but it wasn't enough as Dallas avoided its first three-game losing streak of the season. For the third straight game, the Stars gave up a goal in the final minute of a period.

Lemieux, who had gone eight games without a goal, was drifting in front of the net when he deflected Adam Foote's shot from the right point. The puck dived sharply toward the ice and went between Belfour's legs with just 35 seconds left in the first period.

Colorado's lead could have been bigger, but Ozolinsh hit the left post two minutes before Lemieux's goal. Dallas, which has lost five straight series when trailing three games to two, tied the game 1-1 at 1:55 of the second period when Jere Lehtinen rebounded a shot in the slot and beat Roy over his left shoulder.

COWBOYS: Davis given walking papers

(From 1C)

Irvin, 33, led the team with 74 receptions last year, but caught only one touchdown pass. His 1,057 yards receiving was his second-lowest total of the past eight seasons.

"We've sat down and talked about his future, where we think he is. I think we are all on the same page," Gailey said.

The re-signing of Ernie Mills, who was on pace to set career marks in catches and yards before an injury cut his season short, and the recent free-agent signing of Raghib Ismail, should help Irvin find more space to maneuver in Gailey's favored multiple receiver sets.

The offense "gives the opportunity to those who get open," Gailey said. "We don't force the ball, we let reads dictate where we throw the football."

Cowboys Release Receiver Davis

As expected, the Dallas Cowboys released wide receiver Billy Davis Tuesday to free up room under the salary cap.

Davis, who cleared out his locker weeks ago, became expendable when the Cowboys signed free-agent receiver Ismail and re-signed Mills. Davis' release saves the Cowboys $800,000, leaving the club little more than $1 million under the $57.28 million cap.

"Billy made some great plays for us, I'm sorry to lose him," Jones said. "We had expectations of him being our second receiver. When that didn't work out it was just too much for us with him playing exclusively on special teams."

Tuesday was the first day teams could release roster players or sign unrestricted free agents since April 12.

The Cowboys are left with six receivers: three front-line players in Irvin, Mills and Ismail; little-used backup Jeff Ogden; and two unsigned rookies, fourth-round draft pick Wane McGarity of Texas and sixth-round selection Martay Jenkins of Nebraska-Omaha.

Davis is coming off his most productive season in his four-year NFL career. He finished second on the team with 39 receptions for 691 yards and three touchdowns.

His 17.7-yards-per-catch average ranked him fourth in the NFC and 11th in the NFL. He had just three receptions before last season.

Davis' agent, Jordan Woy, could not be reached to comment on the receiver's prospects for the upcoming season.

"He's a good player; he'll help a team," Jones said.

No Decision On Sanders

It remains possible that the Cowboys could release All-Pro cornerback Deion Sanders if Jones thinks Sanders' surgically repaired big toe would prevent him from contributing this season. Releasing Sanders would free up $6.5 million on the salary cap. However, the Cowboys are more likely to wait in order to evaluate Sanders' progress.

"There is just no change. He's on the roster," Jones said. "I have no comment right now on what we're doing one way or the other. I know what I'd like to do."

TAPE: NL knocks umps

still being determined.

"The players, while not supportive of an extensive use of replay, are not opposed to it for the purposes of determining home runs, foul or fair, above or below the line," said Gene Orza, the union's No. 2 official. "But this is based only on conversations with a few players and we'll have to seek a broader consensus."

There was no immediate reaction from the Major League Umpires Association. Pulli declined comment after Coleman issued his statement.

In the NFL, replays will now be limited to out-of-bounds, goal line and possession calls and is based on a coaches' challenge system.

"It's intended for the crucial, game-deciding play, not the third-and-10 in the first quarter," NFL commissioner Paul Tagliabue said.

OPEN: Agassi needs two wins for crown

(From 1C)

There would have been too many things against me to try to really pull it off."

In a similar vein, Agassi went through a period of self-evaluation a couple of years ago, trying to decide whether he still had the motivation to keep playing.

"I needed to consider what it was I was going to do," he said. "But it wasn't as if I wanted to (retire) or was ready for it. I just kind of realized that things were getting to a point where if I didn't refocus, rededicate, I wouldn't have a choice but to go out in a way that I not only wouldn't be proud of, but I would be going out also at a time that I wasn't ready for.

"I did have to answer that question, but it was never a difficult answer."

Agassi sat out almost all of 1997 as he pondered that question and spent time on an extended honeymoon with actress Brooke Shields after their wedding on April 19 that year. Now, little more than a month after they filed for divorce, and at the age of 29, Agassi appears to have nothing more on his mind than playing tennis.

"I have the opportunity to do something that I haven't done yet, which is always something special," he said. "But even beyond that, I think to accomplish getting to the semifinals now on a surface that has presented many obstacles for me in recent years leaves me to believe in the things that I can do that much more.

"I feel like this has been nothing short of a great chapter in my career. To come back around and actually have a sniff at winning it feels real good."

Boxing series in Midland

The Midland Lite Texas Title Belt Series is coming to Midland June 10 at the Midland Civic Center.

The main event is a 6-round bout as Kathy Williams (6-1-0-3) will defend her Miller Lite Texas Title Belt against Yvonne Trevino (8-4-1-5). The fight is in the women's super flyweight division.

The undercard will feature Midland-Odessa native Humberto Zubia (7-0-0-2) anad Jesse Gutierrez (9-3-0-6) of Castroville. This fight will be an eight round junior welterweight matchup.

Also, Midland's Jorge Trejo will make his professional debut.

Tickets for the event are $10, and they can be purchased at the door or by calling 1-877-BOXING-4.

Homegirls win tournament

ANDREWS — The Homegirls 12-under recreational softball team from Midland won the Andrews Girls Softball Association's Invitational this past weekend.

The Homegirls defeated the Midland Bullets 9-2 in the championship game.

Members of the Homegirls softball team are Nikki Martinez, Abbey Holmquest, Sarah Zarate, Haley McMinn, Malone Sams, Jessica Montoya, Amber Jankowiak, Maira Alvarado, Hallye Goldsen and Sam Equinoines.

Trouble takes soccer cup

LUBBOCK — The Midland Trouble '87 girls soccer team captured the GMAC West Texas Invitational Cup this past weekend, winning the title game 6-1 over the Abilene Dynamics.

Trouble (23-1-2 this season) tied the Amarillo Red Hots (1-1), and defeated San Angelo Orange Crush (2-0), Lubbock Lady Bugs '87 (2-0), Lubbock Cosmos (5-2) and the Amarillo Lady Bugs (1-0) to reach the finals.

The team members are Carianne Arnold, Natasha Dodd, Celeste Dominguez, Samantha Fields, Jessica Fuchs, Kaime Houk, Krista Knight, Rebecca McEwen, Stephanie Mundy, Cortney Norris, Samantha Peterson, Tiffany Richter, Lauren Schneider, Rebecca Ulmo and Sabrina Villa. The coaches are Donny Knight, Joe McEwen and George Ulmo.

Yankees take consolation

ROUND ROCK — The Midland Yankees took home the 13-under consolation title of the Round Rock Tournament this past weekend.

The Yankees defeated the Taylor Starz (11-5), the Dallas Pirates (11-3), the Grapevine Panthers (26-2) and the Round Rock Hot Sticks (8-6).

Josh Wilson had a 2-1 pitching record and Cameron Phillips and Jeraldo Rendon both won. Offensively, Ryan Dupriest had 10 hits including a grand slam, a triple and double and seven singles.

Thomas Minihan had three doubles and a triple; Wilson a triple and three doubles; Rendon two triples and two doubles; Drew Winston five doubles and J.W. Wilson two doubles. Blake Morphew, Phillips, Marc Shatzer and Erik Paulson also had hits.

Rebels named to all-star series

Four products of the Midland Lee baseball program have named to play in the Sun Belt Classic all-star series which will be played on consecutive weekends during the month of June in Oklahoma.

Sophomore Jason Matthews, a shortstop, will be on the Texas roster. The Texas All-Stars will play Oklahoma in a five-game series this weekend in Ardmore.

Junior Collin Gilliam, a standout pitcher, will make the trip to McAlister next weekend. Gilliam will play with the Texas team that takes on teams from Oklahoma, Arizona, Canada, Mississippi and California.

Finally, Matt Winston, an outfielder, and Eric Neatherlin, a third baseman, will play in the senior version of the Sun Belt Classic which will be played in two weeks. Neatherlin will also be a part of the North team in the North-South All-Star Game, which will be played at The Ball Park in Arlington on June 19.

'Hounds fall 9-2, trail by two

Staff Report

The lead in the Texas League West still belongs to only Wichita.

The Wranglers made sure of that with a 9-2 win over the Midland RockHounds in the first of six games between the western division rivals at Lawrence-Dumont Stadium.

Wichita (28-23) stretched its division lead to two games over the RockHounds (26-25). Today, the two teams will play the second game of the series at 7:15 p.m.

The series opener, however, was all Wichita. The Wranglers had 12 hits compared to Midland's six, and while the Wranglers hit the long ball two times, they also showed the ability to manufacture runs. They did so in scoring their first three runs.

Then in the fourth, the Wranglers blew open the game at the Lawrence Dumont launch pad. Anthony Medrano hit a "Lawrence-Dumont Special" to the 312-foot short porch in right field. Felix Martinez later blasted a monster shot which highlighted the inning and made the score 7-0.

Seven runs was more than enough on this night. The Wranglers actually had more runs after the fourth (7) than Midland had hits for the night. Doing the damage on the mound for Wichita were Toby Smith, Jake Chapman and Ryan Brewer.

The RockHounds didn't score until late as T.R. Marcinczyk belted another "Lawrence-Dumont Special." The homer also scored Adam Piatt and ended the scoring for the night. Marcinczyk has nine homers and 36 RBIs this season.

ROCKY ROAD NOTES: Midland starter Jason Anderson gave up nine hits and fell to 1-6 on the season... Chapman (2-0) picked up the win... Today's starters are Midland's Eric DuBose (2-2, 4.42) and Wichita's Enrique Calero (4-2, 3.81)... Josue Espada has a 10-game hitting streak. He is 18-for-39 (.462 average) during that time... Jeff DaVanon lost a five-game hitting streak... Adam Piatt has a seven-game streak... El Paso defeated San Antonio 4-0 to move ahead of Midland in the Texas League Standings. El Paso is 1 1/2 games behind Wichita...

Astros win rain-shortened game

Associated Press

MILWAUKEE — Sean Bergman held off the Milwaukee Brewers and the weather man to preserve his first shutout in four seasons.

Bergman pitched a rain-shortened six-hitter and the Houston Astros defeated Milwaukee 3-0 Tuesday night in a game called in the eighth inning. Tim Bogar doubled home two runs as the Astros snapped a four-game losing streak.

Braves 7, Rockies 2

ATLANTA — John Smoltz returned from the 15-day disabled list and pitched six scoreless innings, leading the Braves over the Rockies.

Expos 10, Diamondbacks 8

MONTREAL — Shane Andrews, activated from the 15-day disabled list before the game, homered twice, doubled and had five RBIs.

Pirates 4, Dodgers 2

PITTSBURGH — Jason Schmidt (5-3), given nine days off between starts after complaining of a dead arm, limited Los Angeles to a run and four hits.

Reds 4, Mets 0

NEW YORK — Pete Harnisch (5-5) extended his shutout string to 16 innings, combining with Scott Sullivan on a seven-hitter as Cincinnati won its fourth straight.

Cardinals 8, Marlins 4

MIAMI — Mark McGwire hit a two-run double and foiled a four-outfielder alignment with his 16th homer — his eighth in 12 games.

■ NL Roundup

Padres 1, Cubs 0

CHICAGO — John Vander Wal homered off Steve Trachsel (2-6) in the fourth as San Diego stopped Chicago's four-game winning streak.

Giants 6, Phillies 5

PHILADELPHIA — Wayne Gomes (1-1) forced in the winning run by walking Bill Mueller in the 12th inning.

Rangers rally for another win

Associated Press

ARLINGTON — Another night, another come-from-behind victory for the Texas Rangers.

Mark McLemore singled to key a three-run rally in the eighth inning, and the Rangers beat the Kansas City Royals 3-1 Tuesday night for their eighth straight victory.

The Rangers' winning streak is their longest since 1989. Kansas City lost its fourth in a row.

Texas won in its final at bat for the fourth straight time. Overall, the Rangers have won eight times in their last at-bat this season and have come from behind to win 14 times.

"We've got a club that doesn't give up," said McLemore. "Every night it's somebody different. It's not just one guy. That's what you have to do if you want a championship caliber team."

The Royals bullpen, which struggled in Monday night's 10-inning, 4-3 loss to the Rangers, faltered again. Reliever Matt Whisenant (1-1) issued a leadoff walk to Lee Stevens and then hit Jon Shave and pinch-hitter Roberto Kelly with pitches, loading the bases with no outs.

Terry Mathews, the fourth Royals pitcher, gave up a single to McLemore that made it 2-1. Rusty Greer followed with an RBI single.

Stevens hit a three-run homer in the ninth inning Monday night to tie the game. But Rangers manager Johnny Oates said Stevens' walk in the eighth Tuesday night also was important.

"It shows what problems a base on balls can cause," Oates said.

The Royals, 1-7 in their current road trip, have 11 blown saves in 19 opportunities this season.

Reliever Jeff Zimmerman (5-0) threw a perfect eighth and John Wetteland pitched the ninth for his major league leading 17th save. Texas' Ivan Rodriguez extended his hitting streak to a career-high 20 games, four short of the club record set by Mickey Rivers in 1980.

Royals starter Jay Witasick limited Texas' powerful lineup to four hits in six innings. He struck out four and walked three.

Kansas City broke up a scoreless game in the fifth against Texas starter Rick Helling when Chad Kreuter drew a one-out walk and scored on Steve Scarsone's two-out double.

Helling gave up three hits in seven innings, struck out two and walked three. Six times during the eight-game winning streak a Rangers starter has pitched into the seventh inning.

"It all starts with starting pitching," Oates said. "That's what it takes to put a streak together. These eight games have been low scoring and the pitching has been very good."

Yankees 11, Indians 5

NEW YORK — Roger Clemens won his 20th straight decision — four short of the major league record — holding baseball's best lineup in check as the Yankees beat the Indians.

Clemens (5-0), who allowed three runs and seven hits in 6 2/3 innings, has not lost in 30 starts since May 29, 1998, when he fell to Cleveland while pitching for Toronto.

The winning streak is the longest ever in the AL, and tied with Rube Marquard and Roy Face for the third best in major league history. Carl Hubbell set the record in 1936-37.

Chuck Knoblauch, Paul O'Neill and Bernie Williams homered for New York. Dave Burba (5-2) gave up five runs and seven hits in four-plus innings.

Red Sox 5, Tigers 4

BOSTON — Brian Daubach homered off Doug Brocail (1-2) to break a 4-all tie in the eighth.

The rookie's fifth homer of the season — Boston's fourth of the game — sent Detroit to its eighth loss in 10 games.

John Wasdin (5-0) gave up a 3-2 lead when Brad Ausmus hit a two-run homer in the seventh on his first pitch. Trot Nixon then homered in the bottom half.

Derek Lowe got the final out for his fourth save. After allowing Ausmus' double, which put runners on second and third, he struck out Damion Easley.

White Sox 6, Blue Jays 2

TORONTO — Frank Thomas went 4-for-5, and Mike Sirotka (3-6) allowed two runs — one earned — and seven hits in eight innings, sending Toronto to its fourth consecutive loss.

Angels 5, Twins 1

ANAHEIM, Calif. — Ken Hill came within one strike of his first shutout since 1996, pitching the Angels over the Twins.

Fate of Straw to be decided by next week

By Ronald Blum
AP Sports Writer

NEW YORK — Darryl Strawberry's future in baseball could be decided within a week, baseball commissioner Bud Selig said Tuesday.

"It's a guess as to what's likely to transpire, and I don't engage in guesses in matters of this kind," union lawyer Gene Orza said.

The 37-year-old New York Yankees outfielder has been suspended since April 24 following his arrest for cocaine possession.

CNN/Sports Illustrated reported Monday "that in the next 48 hours major league baseball will announce Strawberry will be suspended for up to 90 days, retroactive to his April 14 arrest."

The 90th day of his suspension would be July 13, the date of the All-Star game at Boston's Fenway Park.

A report on Strawberry by doctors for owners and the players' association and by lawyers for the commissioner's office and the union will be submitted to Selig by Wednesday.

Strawberry, who served a 90-day suspension in 1995 after testing positive for cocaine, was put on "administrative leave" by Selig. That term is not defined in baseball's rules, but carries the same penalties as a suspension.

Florida sprinter Capel torn between love of football and track

By Eddie Pells
AP Sports Writer

GAINESVILLE, Fla. — John Capel ran the fastest 200-meter time in the United States this year. He is probably only the fourth-best wide receiver on the Florida football team.

It should seem clear where his future lies.

But nobody should forget that at Florida, a fourth-string receiver garners much more day-in, day-out attention than a world-class sprinter.

With the 2000 Olympics taking place in September, the heart of football season, Capel faces a tough decision. Does he stick with coach Steve Spurrier's team, or does he give up a season — maybe more — to try for a spot in the Olympics?

"I've prayed that God will show me the right direction to go," said Capel, who came to UF on a football scholarship. "The only thing I can do is wait. Maybe that's not in my future to run in the Olympics. But if I have a chance to run in the Olympics, I'm pretty sure coach Spurrier won't mind it."

More Sports/8C

This may not have been an issue had the freshman from Brooksville, Fla., not surprised everyone, including himself, and won the 200-meter title at the Southeastern Conference Championships last month in 19.99 seconds. That was the best time recorded by an American this year, and the second-best in the world, behind only Frank Fredericks of Namibia.

That makes Capel one of the runners to watch at the NCAA Championships in Boise, Idaho, where preliminaries in the 200-meter race begin Wednesday. Every bit as intriguing will be the choice he'll face about a six months from now.

"The decisions for him will probably start to come after the bowl game this fall," said Florida track coach Doug Brown. "Helping the Gator football team to a national title has to be a priority for John. Then he can come and help the Gator track team. The challenge for him is: where to go from there. That's something we'll have to assess and talk about after the season."

Spurrier affectionately calls Capel "John, John." and rarely mentions the receiver without saying how much more he would contribute if his hands were better and his pass routes a bit more crisp.

Even with the flaws, Capel had an impact on special teams last season, returning 10 kickoffs for an average of 27.4 yards and eight punts for nearly 10 yards a return. Lining up at receiver, however, Capel was a bigger threat running than catching. He ran 11 times for 80 yards last season, while catching just two balls for 4 yards.

He looks like a sure backup next season. But when juniors Travis Taylor and Darrell Jackson leave, the position could be his to lose.

Of course, Spurrier always replenishes his talent. This spring, he started bragging about redshirt freshman Reche Caldwell, a football-only athlete, who coaches claim ran a 4.31-second 40-yard dash, in the same range as Capel.

That's the kind of feedback that keeps Capel working on the football field, even in the middle of track season.

"I went to about four practices the first couple of weeks" of spring practice, he said. "But then I would go out on the football field by myself. I wasn't trying to make it a big deal by going from one practice to the other, so I would go out on the field every once in a while and would run routes and have footballs shot at me."

Capel is not alone. Dozens of players around the country run track to stay in shape for football. Very few, however, will have to choose one over the other with as much riding on it as Capel.

"Right now, I love both sports," he said. "I love football a lot more than I like track, but I don't seem them conflicting and I don't see it coming to that point."

At least not for a few more months.

Arkansas tracksters aiming for a sweep

By Bert Rosenthal
AP Track Writer

BOISE, Idaho — Track and field teams have a special goal each season — sweep the conference and NCAA titles in cross country, indoors and outdoors.

Winning all six is never easy. But Arkansas, the dominant team the past 25 years under John McDonnell, has accomplished the feat four times. The only other school to do it was UTEP, three times during the 1970s.

This weekend, in the NCAA Outdoor Championships at Boise State, the Razorbacks will be going for No. 5, their first since the 1993-94 season.

"That's special," McDonnell said, "but it's not routine. If it got routine, you wouldn't win."

Routine or not, McDonnell has been perhaps the most successful college track coach in history.

Since becoming the Razorbacks' coach in 1972, McDonnell has won 25 consecutive conference cross country championships since 1974. He has won nine NCAA cross country titles, all since 1985.

He has also won 19 indoor conference crowns the past 20 years, 15 of the past 16 NCAA indoor championships, 17 of the past 18 outdoor conference titles and eight NCAA outdoor crowns, including the past seven.

That's an astounding total of 61 conference titles and 32 NCAA championships. One hundred overall titles isn't far off.

The Razorbacks are heavily favored to stretch their outdoor winning streak to eight — one shy of Southern California's men's record of nine in a row from 1935-43 — in the 78th championships beginning Wednesday.

The women's title figures to be a three-way battle among defending champion Texas; LSU, which had its 11-year winning streak snapped in 1998; and UCLA.

"The NCAA is the final big dance," McDonnell said. "The conference was the minidance. We're ready to dance."

As usual, the Razorbacks are loaded with distance runners and jumpers, led by Seneca Lassiter, the two-time defending champion at 1,500 meters, and Matt Kerr, last year's winner in the 3,000-meter steeplechase.

Although Lassiter has won twice in a row and has run two outstanding times this season — 3 minutes, 37.23 seconds and 3:37.29 — he is expected to be seriously challenged by Pac-10 champion Bernard Lagat of Washington State. Lagat beat Lassiter in the NCAA indoor mile in March.

Kerr faces strong opposition from sophomore Carlos Suarez of UTEP. Even if Lassiter and Kerr don't win their specialties — they should still score highly — Arkansas also has many other potential point producers.

Lassiter also is running the 800, with Sharif Karie in the 1,500 and 5,000, James Karanu in the 800 and 1,500, Mike Power in the 5,000, Andrew Begley in the 10,000, Melvin Lister in the long jump and triple jump, Lavar Miller in the high jump and triple jump, Kenny Evans in the high jump, Sam Glover in the 400 hurdles, D'Marcus Brown in the 110 hurdles and Marcus Clavelle in the shot put.

No other team can match that depth.

The women's team championship came down to the final 1,600 relay last year before Texas ended LSU's record streak. This time, UCLA also figures to be in the mix, with the title to be decided in the sprints, hurdles and relays. The three teams are going against each other heavily in all three.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Wednesday, June 2, 1999:

Always remember what your long-term objectives are. One-to-one relating will help you to better understand what is going on around you. Others might generate a lot of steam and smoke, making you wonder what is driving them. Talks prove to be revealing and informative. As a result, you make strong decisions professionally, emotionally and financially. If you are single, you'll want, and in some way crave, a deep relationship. Unless the situation you choose is extremely physical, fighting could erupt out of nowhere. If attached, refuse to get into a struggle over children, hobbies and/or creative projects.

ARIES (March 21-April 19)
★★★ Frustration causes tempers to flare. You assume a lot of responsibility; this could make you the target of resentment. It goes along with leadership roles. A partner is challenging. He really wants to be closer, but he has a difficult way of expressing his feelings. Tonight: In the limelight.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)
★★★★★ You make a difference because of your abilities to seek out information and to ask the right questions. Moving past rigid thinking makes you a leader. Channel your high energy into a work project. Make time for some personal relaxation, also. Tonight: Play on the Internet.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)
★★★★★ Communication is key to understanding another, and vice versa. Getting down to basics stimulates innovative thinking, but it could also draw some anger from an associate or a loved one. Establish limits, as tough as that may be. Others internalize whatever goes on. Tonight: Whoop it up!

CANCER (June 21-July 22)
★★★★ Pressure builds on the homefront, but you're not in the mood to deal with it. Go in your own direction, socializing and responding to the moment. Be in touch with long-term goals ... then you might be ready for an uncomfortable conversation with a family member. Tonight: Join friends for dinner.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)
★★★★ Work demands attention, despite your desire to talk on the phone, make plans with friends and socialize. Balancing responsibilities with the joys of life challenges you Both can be done if you screen calls. Use your lunch break wisely! Tonight: Off for a game of racquetball or tennis.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)
★★★★★ You are more than ready to risk. Still, be aware of costs and damages before you leap. Creativity surges; you know which way to go and when. If you are single, a relationship could be growing from a flirtation. If attached, agree to disagree! Tonight: A midweek break.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)
★★★ Energy is high. Pace yourself and charge through responsibilities, personal matters and work. If you lose your concentration, you could turn into a virtual terror! Allow time for lengthy breaks. Plan on getting together with a friend for lunch. Tonight: Walk with a family member.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21)
★★★ You could be a bit self-destructive. Recognize what is going on, especially if you suddenly discover that a conversation turns hostile! Humor can help you detach. Schedule meetings. Clear your desk while returning calls. Tonight: A stress-free visit with a friend.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)
★★★★ Expenses ultimately need to be tailored to you. Listen to feedback from a friend. Reconstruct your budget accordingly. There might be something you really want to buy or do; start working and saving for it now. Join friends, network and expand your horizons. Tonight: Indulge a little.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)
★★★★★ Melt barriers, rather than creating them. A power struggle could be more destructive than you think. Still, you come out on top. Relating to (or as) an authority figure could be full of land mines. Use your smile and your positive energy. Tonight: Whatever makes you happy.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)
★★★ Refuse to be cornered into making a decision. Make calls, reach out for others and touch base with those at a distance. Take a risk; grab a new opportunity. Sign up for a class or take a trip. Both will be mind-expanding, which is just what you need. Tonight: Curl up with a book.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)
★★★★★ Get together with friends. Make an important meeting. Keep your long-term goals in mind and refuse to be distracted. Lighten up. Stay in contact with your feelings. A partner or associate might be pushing his luck. Establish boundaries that stick. Don't back off. Tonight: Chatting with a neighbor.

Opening lead: King of ♡ Bridge maxims cover generalities. West would have done better to have disregarded one that is considered a heinous bridge crime.

After North's invitational jump raise of spades, South stretched a little by jumping straight to slam. If all that counts is success, this slam was excellent.

West led the king of hearts, taken by the ace. The ace and king of spades were cashed. And East's heart discard was a major disappointment. As the cards lie, there now was no legitimate play for 12 tricks. However, South was not one to throw in the towel.

Declarer cashed three rounds of clubs, ending in dummy, then ruffed a heart before exiting with a trump to West's queen. East discarded the 13th club on the trump. Reluctant to concede a ruff and sluff, West shifted to the queen of diamonds. Declarer elected to play for split diamond honors rather than Q-J with West. The queen was captured with the king and a diamond was led to the 10. When West followed low, the slam was home.

This was the time to ignore the rubric "Never yield a ruff and sluff," and it was not a matter of guesswork — declarer's hand could be counted out. South had started with five spades, one heart and three clubs, hence four diamonds. A ruff sluff would do declarer no good — there would remain four diamonds in one hand and three in the other. If the jack of diamonds was not in South's hand, the contract was certainly going down. And unless South held both the jack and 10 of diamonds, in which case declarer would have to guess which way to tackle the suit, the slam would probably be defeated after a heart continuation when declarer took the normal finesse through East for the diamond queen.

Clapton to 'bid in secret' for his guitar

LONDON — Bidders vying for some of Eric Clapton's guitars at an auction later this month may find themselves competing against ... Eric Clapton.

Clapton said Tuesday he hadn't realized how difficult it would be to part with 100 of his instruments. As he result, he will be "bidding in secret" for one guitar he realized he just couldn't let go.

"Obviously, I am not going to say which one it is, but it is a guitar that has been around my house for years and I've picked it up in times of great stress like a comfort blanket," he said.

Clapton hopes the June 24 auction at Christie's in New York will raise between $700,000 and $1 million for the Crossroads drug treatment center he founded in Antigua. He has kept about 20 guitars.

"I have kept those that I play virtually every day, and I have made sure I still have what I need," he said.

NEW YORK — Forrest Sawyer, a familiar face on ABC News for 11 years, has left the network.

Sawyer left to pursue other opportunities, said his agent, Arthur Kaminsky.

"For 11 years, he was an important part of ABC News," network spokeswoman Eileen Murphy said Tuesday. "He made the decision that he wants to pursue options elsewhere and we wish him nothing but the best."

Sawyer worked as a reporter and substitute anchor on "Nightline," "World News Tonight" and other shows.

Sawyer's salary may have made him a liability at a network that is cutting staff.

NEW YORK — Livent, the troubled Canadian company that produced "Ragtime" and "Fosse" on Broadway, has agreed to sell most of its assets to SFX Entertainment, the nation's leading producer and promoter of live shows.

Terms of the deal were not disclosed Tuesday, but news reports have speculated that the price could exceed $100 million.

The sale, which is subject to approval by a federal bankruptcy court, includes Livent theaters in New York, Chicago and Toronto as well as rights to such current Livent productions as "Fosse," "Ragtime" and the Toronto production of "The Phantom of the Opera."

SFX already is a powerhouse on the road, not only in staging and promoting concerts and other live entertainment, but in touring Broadway shows.

Livent filed for bankruptcy protection in November after its new owners, including super agent Michael Ovitz, said they discovered accounting fraud by the company's Canadian founders, Garth Drabinsky and Myron Gottlieb.

WAPAKONETA, Ohio — After a six-month countdown, the Neil Armstrong Air & Space Museum reopened Tuesday with more emphasis on the first man to walk on the moon.

The 27-year-old museum, named after the publicity-shy native of this Ohio community, had closed Dec. 1 for a $750,000 remodeling and expansion. The project will be completed next month.

"We decided it was time to update the museum as we were coming into the new century," said museum manager John Zwez. "We needed more room to talk about the space shuttle and the international space station. And there is somewhat more of a focus on Neil and more of a focus on the Cold War and how we got to the moon."

New displays include Russian Sputnik spacecraft, artifacts and flight suits.

Armstrong and Apollo 11 crewmate Buzz Aldrin walked on the moon in 1969.

Armstrong has no active role with the museum.

MODENA, Italy — Luciano Pavarotti performed a duet with Irish boy band Boyzone at a charity concert Tuesday for the children of Kosovo and Guatemala.

The show — whose headliners also included Gloria Estefan, Lionel Richie, B.B. King, Mariah Carey and Ricky Martin — is expected to raise $1.1 million.

Modena is Pavarotti's hometown.

NEW YORK — Bianca Jagger divorced her famous husband two decades ago, but she still has trouble shaking her image as a rock 'n' roll wife.

"I'm on the board of very important organizations," she told The New Yorker magazine. "I think I've paid my dues. I've earned my respect regardless of whether I was married to Mick or the cleaner in the street!"

Ms. Jagger, who has been traveling the world to promote human rights for years, recently visited refugee camps in the Balkans and is a strong supporter of NATO's military action against Serbia.

Miller's late FTs help Pacers tie Knicks in series

By Chris Sheridan
AP Basketball Writer

INDIANAPOLIS — Tweet went the whistle, swish went Reggie Miller, down went the Knicks.

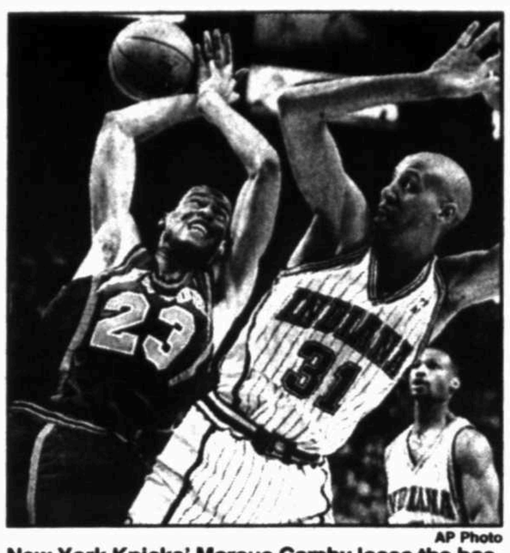
On a night when 40 fouls were called against New York, the last one allowed Miller to beat the Knicks from the free throw line. Miller made two free throws with 2 seconds left and Patrick Ewing barely missed a turnaround jumper at the buzzer, allowing the Indiana Pacers to escape with an 88-86 victory Tuesday night in a thrilling Game 2 that evened the Eastern Conference finals.

"We're very fortunate to be in this position, but I'm happy with the way we gutted it out," Miller said. "No one ever said it was going to be easy, and we're going to have our hands full, but we feel very good about ourselves."

There were 68 fouls and 84 free throws in all, and the Pacers couldn't have asked for a better candidate to attempt the final two.

Miller, the league's leading free throw shooter at 91.5 percent, faked Chris Childs into the air and was bumped as he shot a jumper, sending him to the line for Indiana's 46th and 47th attempts of the night. He calmly made both.

"I just put my hands up, he leaned in. Terrible call," Childs said. "This is a game for the people, the fans and the players — and it wasn't that tonight."



AP Photo

New York Knicks' Marcus Camby loses the basketball as he is defended by Indiana Pacers' Reggie Miller, right, in the second quarter.

Indiana got the victory despite blowing a 17-point lead and losing its starting center to fouls with more than six minutes left. Most impressively, the Pacers overcame an inspired performance from a Knicks team that was undeterred by all the adversity that came its way — everything from the referees' whistles to the Pacers' fans throwing beer and coins at them.

Game 3 in the best-of-7 series will be Saturday at Madison Square Garden.

Cleveland fires coach Fratello

By John Affleck
Associated Press Writer

CLEVELAND — Mike Fratello has been the master of slow-paced, half-court basketball and the "Czar of the Telestrator." He was never the coach of a playoff winner in Cleveland.

Now he's out of a job.

Cavaliers owner Gordon Gund, looking for new blood, more wins and more fans in the arena that bears his name, dumped Fratello a month after the team ended an injury-plagued 22-28 season.

Fratello was fired Tuesday as part of a shakeup in which general manager Wayne Embry stepped aside to be replaced by Jim Paxson, the team's vice president of basketball operations.

More Sports/1D

Fratello still has a year left on his contract, which the Cavs will buy out. His reaction to the news: "I think shocked," Gund said.

"Sometimes from a coaching standpoint, teams need to go in a new direction, to be reenergized by new leadership on the floor," Gund said. "We believe that is true with respect to the Cavs."

During Fratello's six-year tenure, the Cavs compiled a 248-212 record and made the playoffs four times. But Cleveland's playoff record was just 2-12 during that time and the Cavs never made it out of the first round.

Fratello's teams always seemed to be playing hurt, playing slow or both.

When injuries took out stars like Brad Daugherty in his early years, Fratello employed a defensive, use-the-shot-clock style that set records for points allowed and made the most of thin rosters. But some fans got bored in the process.

Things looked better going into last season, as Cleveland featured a young team that had surpassed expectations by reaching the playoffs in 1998.

SERIES: Spurs headed for road

(From 1C)

where the Blazers lost just three times during the regular season and are 5-0 in the playoffs.

Still, Portland must win four out of five, including at least once in the Alamodome, to advance to the finals.

"I don't see why we can't," Greg Anthony said. "We're a real confident basketball team. We're a real talented basketball team."

The Blazers are at least comforted by the fact they weren't run out of the Alamodome. They lost the opener 80-76 and had a chance at the tying shot with six seconds to go. They led Game 2 comfortably most of the way and lost only because of an amazing shot.

The Spurs' grudgingly gave the Blazers credit, but they want a little for themselves, too.

"They played two terrific games," Mario Elie said. "They had a chance to win both games, but people seem to not give us credit."

Nancy Lopez chips onto the green during the HealthSouth Inaugural in Lake Buena Vista, Fla. Perhaps no other athlete deserves to fill a glaring void in an otherwise illustrious career. For Lopez, what might be her last chance starts Thursday in the U.S. Women's Open.

This could be last chance at elusive Open title for Lopez

By Doug Ferguson
AP Golf Writer

WEST POINT, Miss. — Dan Marino has never won a Super Bowl. Greg Norman has never worn a green jacket. John Stockton and Karl Malone may end their careers without an NBA title. Roger Clemens has yet to pitch for a World Series winner.

Nancy Lopez knows the feeling.

Considering all that she has meant to her sport, perhaps no other athlete deserves to fill a glaring void in an otherwise illustrious career.

For Lopez, already a member of the Hall of Fame with 48 victories and three major championships, what might be her last chance starts Thursday in the U.S. Women's Open at a course she calls home.

She played the first official round at Old Waverly Golf Club and returns once a year for corporate outings. She feels positive vibes just driving down the two-lane road and past the Southern plantation-style clubhouse.

"I have to look at it as if this is my best opportunity, the best one I've ever had," Lopez said Tuesday. "It's there for me to take. If it's going to happen, this is the time for it to happen."

It may be her last chance because of the black brace wrapped snugly around her left knee. Lopez first started feeling the pain of arthritis about three months ago, when her legs ached at night and she had trouble walking in the morning.

It may be her last chance because her attitude has never been better. Lopez was among those who waved white flags of surrender last year at Blackwolf Run, a course she despised but was too gracious to say so until months later.

"I feel really good this week," Lopez said after an 18-hole practice round, followed by a 30 minutes' rest. "My confidence level is very high. I'm at a place where I feel comfortable. I love the golf course, and I feel it likes me a little bit, too."

The question is whether Old Waverly loves Lopez enough to reward her with a U.S. Open victory.

At 42, Lopez is trying to juggle the grind of the LPGA tour with the joy of spending time with her three daughters. She always finds enough daylight to sweat under the hot Georgia sun, trying to recapture that magic putting stroke and dreaming about finally winning a U.S. Open.

More often than not, she thinks about the ones that got away. Lopez was 18 years old, not even a freshman at the University of Tulsa, when she matched strokes with her idol, JoAnne Carner, and finished second behind Sandra Palmer in the 1975 Women's Open.

Two years later, before she even had her LPGA tour card, Lopez made a spirited run at three-time Open champion Hollis Stacy but again settled for second. Surely, it was just a matter of time.

"I probably thought that I would have a lot of opportunities to win the Open, and that hopefully I would win a few," Lopez said.

She had a chance in 1985 when she led after 36 holes and was in the final group at Baltusrol in 1985 until a 77 in the final round dropped her into a tie for fourth. In 1989, she closed with a 68 but came up two strokes short and was runner-up again.

"There's got to be some way to win an Open," she said. "You almost think there's a way to figure it out, and there's not. But I keep thinking that I can."

She quit believing for a while. Lopez wanted to win the Open so badly that she put too much pressure on herself and never got the right results. She had only one top-10 finish over the next seven years, but got new life at Pumpkin Ridge in Oregon in 1997.

Just like the first time she set foot on Old Waverly, Lopez fell in love with Pumpkin Ridge. She shot in the 60s all four rounds, the only player in the 53-year history of the Women's Open to do that.

And even that wasn't enough. Her 20-foot birdie putt on the 72nd hold to force a playoff with Alison Nicholas stopped an inch from the heart of the cup. Lopez was in tears, but came away believing she wasn't done quite yet.

"That was like a rebirth," she said. "I was going to have a chance to win another Open."

This may be her last chance.

Imagine Marino, facing fourth-and-goal from the 5 and needing a touchdown to win the Super Bowl. Or Stockton and Malone, setting up the pick-and-roll with the score tied in the final seconds of Game 7 in the NBA Finals. Or Norman, standing over a 20-foot putt on the 18th green at Augusta National on Sunday.

Imagine Lopez, flashing her unforgettable smile and shedding the tears of an Open champion.

"I know my game is there," she said. "I know it can win."

Study shows andro has side effects, won't boost strength

By Brenda C. Coleman
AP Medical Writer

CHICAGO — The dietary supplement used by Mark McGwire does nothing to boost men's strength and instead might promote breast enlargement, heart disease and cancer, a study suggests.

The study, published in Wednesday's Journal of the American Medical Association, compared androstenedione (pronounced an-droh-STEEN-die-ohn) with a dummy pill in 20 men ages 19 to 29 during an eight-week weightlifting program

The supplement, a steroid, is made of a naturally occurring hormone the body uses in tiny amounts to make the male hormone testosterone. Androstenedione supplements contain many times the amount found in the body naturally, and McGwire has said he uses the substance to speed recovery from minor injuries.

In the study, androstenedione had no effect on testosterone levels in the blood, and no difference in strength could be found between the two groups of men, said Douglas King, an exercise biochemist at Iowa State University in Ames who led the research.

But the men who took the supplement — 300 milligrams daily — showed significant declines in levels of the "good" cholesterol that helps prevent heart disease. The androstenedione also raised the men's levels of the female hormone estrogen, King said.

Elevated levels of estrogen in men are known to promote breast enlargement and are also associated with a higher risk of pancreatic and possibly other cancers, he noted.

McGwire, who hit a record 70 home runs last year, had no comment on the findings. A furor erupted last year when The Associated Press reported he used androstenedione.

Major league baseball spokesman Pat Courtney said the league has "some of the leading people in the field, along with the players' association, looking at the issue."

"You just can't hurry," he said. "I'm sure they will take everything into consideration in their findings. We're waiting to hear the results."

The hormonal effect of androstenedione in men is the opposite of what has been reported in women. In a paper 37 years ago, researchers reported that two women who each took 100 milligrams of androstenedione on a single occasion had four- to sevenfold increases in their blood levels of testosterone.

No other medical literature on the topic exists, the researchers said. Experts who were not involved in the new study praised it but said it leaves many questions unanswered.

"It's the most comprehensive study on androstenedione that's ever been done," said Dr. Joel Finkelstein, an endocrinologist at Harvard-affiliated Massachusetts General Hospital. But "what we really need are higher doses and larger groups of men studied."

Finkelstein and a colleague, Dr. Benjamin Leder, are conducting their own study with the support of major league baseball, which is looking at whether to ban the supplement. The NFL, the Olympics and the NCAA already have banned it.

Both researchers said that under standard medical-journal rules, they cannot discuss their findings before they are published. Dr. Charles Yesalis III, a professor of health and human development at Penn State, said testing the drug in athletes might reveal some slight benefit not seen in King's study.

Women believe course is fair

By Doug Ferguson
AP Golf Writer

WEST POINT, Miss. — Meg Mallon probably won't have to wave a white flag in mock surrender at Old Waverly Golf Club.

The 54th U.S. Women's Open figures to be a kinder, gentler championship when it begins Thursday in an area of Mississippi known as the Golden Triangle.

If a drive strays beyond the rough-framed fairways, it might not take a national search party to find it. The course is playing at 6,431 yards to a par of 71, meaning none of the par-5s have been changed to a par-4.

Karrie Webb even complained that one of the par-5s was too short.

"If the course stays the same condition, I could see 10 under winning," Webb said. "If the greens get harder and firmer and rough grows a little bit, you're going to see only a few people under par."

Just one person under par would be an improvement from last year at Blackwolf Run, located in an area of Wisconsin that may as well have been called the Bermuda Triangle.

Defending champion Se Ri Pak and amateur Jenny Chuasiriporn finished 72 holes in 6-over 290, the highest winning score in the Women's Open since Jan Stephenson won at 6 over in 1983. Only 30 players managed to break 300 over 72 holes.

Pak, who went 20 holes in a playoff to win, was asked Tuesday how Old Waverly suited her game.

"Pretty good," she said with a bright smile. "A lot better than last year. Not only me, all players feel the same way, I think."

That wasn't the case last year at Blackwolf Run, the Pete Dye-design that changed from a brute to a beast when the winds kicked up.

Nancy Lopez was in a group with Mallon and Jane Geddes the first two rounds. Mallon hit her first drive in the right rough, hit a tree and eventually walked off with a 9. Geddes took a double-bogey 6. Lopez was shaken.

"My caddie said to me, 'Are you all right?' And I said, 'I need two Valiums, quick!' It was horrible," Lopez said. "I'm trying to keep my emotions, because you know what's in store for you the next 17 holes."

That threesome, with 68 victories and seven major championships among them, didn't hit the same green in regulation until the 14th hole of the second round. Lopez told this to Mallon, who replied, "Hey, we can play."

And out came the white flags as they walked up the 18th fairway, laughing to keep themselves from crying.

The U.S. Open prides itself on being the toughest test of golf, but noone is quite sure what to expect at Old Waverly. The course only opened 11 years ago and has never played host to a championship featuring the best in women's golf.

And no matter how the USGA wants to set up the course, it is at the mercy of Mother Nature. Unseasonably cool nights have kept the Bermuda rough from growing out of control. The fairways are ample and the greens are running smooth.

"The golf course is playing fair," said Dinah Shore champion Dottie Pepper. "This golf course rewards good shots. It's not like if you hit some goofy spins off a mound, you knock it 40 feet coming back for par."

Webb played 18 holes Monday, the first time she has played a full practice round that early in the week, and was asked which holes scared her.

"After playing last year, I don't know if there are any holes like that," Webb said. "Last year, I think the whole 18 holes scared me. It's definitely not as tough as Blackwolf Run, but I don't think any of the players wanted to see it as tough as that."

Low scoring might only play to Webb's advantage. Already a four-time winner this year, she set the LPGA record for 72 holes with a 26-under 262 in the Australian Ladies Masters and won the Titleholders Championship at 17-under 271 last month.

The galleries already are strong, and officials are hopeful to go over 100,000 for the week. The seriousness on their faces is indication that this is a major championship, the biggest event of the year in women's golf.

Walking across the tightly mowed fairways of Old Waverly, and the unusually tame rough, may have been the only thing that lulled players into a false sense of a security.

*CUSTOMER SERVICE

Do You...

consider your self #1 at customer service? Do you know how to make customers happy? Do you go that extra mile to make sure the job gets done? Do you love talking to people on the phone? If you possess these qualifications plus have basic computer skills then read further.

We're looking for a person who can make 60+ outbound calls per day to existing customers. The main focus will be to encourage customers to make payment, thereby continuing their service with our company. This position is mostly customer service/sales.

We would like applicants with a friendly and out-going nature, but aggressive enough to ask for payment. The applicant should have at least 3+ years experience in an office and be able to work on his or her own with light supervision. This is a temporary position with a strong possibility of turning into a permanent position for the right person. The successful applicant will work 40 hours per week, Monday through Friday. You must be able to work from 11AM - 8 PM daily (after training). The hourly rate of pay will be $7.00 - $8.00 per hour depending on experience.

If you really are #1 in customer service and have the skills, attitude and desire for longevity that this job requires, fax your resume to: CUSTOMER SERVICE at 682-3793. Make sure to include daytime and evening phone numbers. (We will contact only those chosen for interviews). No phone calls please.
