Storm Leaves Rubble, Eight Dead

FREDERIC'S DEVASTATION — Workers pull debris from a Pensacola, Fla., supermarket hit by the vicious winds of hurricane Frederic Thursday. The hurricane pushed inland after cutting a 100-mile-wide swatch through the Gulf Coast. It left splintered dwellings, boats and businesses in its wake and at least eight persons dead. Though weakening, the storm was still dumping heavy rains and packing 60 mph winds. Additional photo on Page 14, Sec. A. (AP Laserphoto)

Inspection Set Today By Carter

MOBILE, Ala. (AP) — Hurricane Frederic pushed inland Thursday after cutting a 100-mile-wide swath through the scenic Gulf Coast, leaving behind a rubble of splintered dwellings, boats and businesses and at least eight persons dead.

Some of the more than 400,000 persons who had fled before the hurricane moved ashore late Wednesday picked their way back home only to find their houses in shambles. Thousands of others remained in emergency shelters.

Those killed included a 4-year-old girl who died when a mobile home was overturned in Mobile, a 76-year-old heart attack victim, an oil rig worker who drowned when he fell from a rig tender, and three persons in auto wrecks.

At least two people were missing and presumed drowned — one just off the Louisiana coast and one in Florida.

Disaster Areas Set

President Carter designated 30 counties in Mississippi, Florida and Alabama as major disaster areas, making them eligible for federal aid, and the White House said the president will personally inspect the area by helicopter today.

Carter is scheduled to fly to Mobile this morning, then fly by helicopter along the stricken coast to Pensacola, Fla. The president is expected to spend about two hours in the hurricane area before returning to Washington from Pensacola.

Looting broke out in Mobile and suburban Prichard as Frederic howled northward through southeast Mississippi and into Alabama Thursday afternoon, and the National Guard was called out to aid police.

Though weakening, the storm was still dumping heavy rains and packing winds up to 60 mph, strong enough to knock down power lines as far north as Birmingham, Ala.

Storm Downgraded

At 5 p.m. CDT, in the last advisory on the storm to be issued by the National Hurricane Center in Miami, Frederic, downgraded to a tropical storm, was over extreme northwestern Alabama, moving to the north-northeast at about 15 mph. Forecasters said there was a threat of tornadoes in northeastern Alabama and southeastern Tennessee.

In this historic port city, 100 mph winds uprooted giant oaks, smashed downtown storefronts and pitched the debris into the narrow streets and stately boulevards. Officials said damage costs would certainly mount into the

Aid Sought For School Of Nursing

By RUTHANNE BROCKWAY
Avalanche-Journal Staff

TEXAS TECH'S penniless School of Nursing didn't receive any money Thursday night, but it did win the approval of a local health planning group to apply for a federal grant.

The grant, if approved and funded by the Department of Health, Education and Welfare, would provide $538,947 over a three-year period to establish a nursing program.

Clements Vetoes Funds

During the last legislative session, the nursing school was budgeted to receive state money, but Gov. Bill Clements used his line item veto power to kill those funds.

Since then, Dr. Teddy Langford has had the task of being dean of a nursing school with no money. Her salary and that of a secretary — the only two employees of the nursing school — are paid by Tech's Health Sciences Center.

Without state funds, Dr. Langford said the alternative sources are federal and private foundation grants and individual donations.

Backed Unanimously

The project review advisory group of the South Plains Health Systems, Inc., a health planning agency for the area, gave unanimous approval Thursday to the HEW application.

Technically, the application didn't require approval from the local health agency.

But as one group member noted, "If we fail to give our support to this, the people in Austin and Washington will say, 'Hmmm, the HSC (health systems agency) didn't think it was so hot.'"

State Rep. Froy Salinas recently said the governor had received new information about the nursing school and that the outlook for funding in the next bien-

Freeway System Plan Presented To Council

By SYLVIA TEAGUE
Avalanche-Journal Staff

AFTER HEARING predictions Lubbock may choke on its own traffic unless a freeway system is started soon, the City Council took an initial step towards building a freeway along the Brownfield Highway and the Tech Freeway.

If a freeway is not built, Planning Director Jim Bertram warned the council "traffic volumes at major intersections are going to be totally impossible by the year 2000."

That situation will force city officials to construct overpasses at all major intersections to handle increased traffic, Bertram said.

Additionally, he said the city's current computer system will be inadequate to move the expected number of vehicles smoothly and the council should investigate the purchase of more sophisticated equipment.

Bertram's recommendations to the council were based on a recently completed study of traffic engineering conditions in Lubbock.

The consultant who performed the study told the council last month Lubbock "is far behind" in building a freeway and said a freeway is "critical" for the city to meet future traffic demands.

Two such freeways have been in city plans for approximately a decade, Bertram said, but neither has come close to being built.

Voters Approve Bonds

In 1967 voters approved $10 million in bonds to build an east-west freeway, but the outcry from residents along the 37th and 38th Streets freeway route kept that roadway on the drawing board.

said, but he admitted it probably never will be built because of the cost involved and the residents who would be displaced.

The other freeway shown on city planning maps is one which follows the Tech Freeway and the Brownfield Highway and Bertram recommended specific action for the council to take to determine if such a freeway remains feasible.

Feasibility Study Ureged

Bertram suggested the council urge Texas Tech and highway department officials to complete a feasibility study as soon as possible on rerouting the Tech Freeway around the Tech campus.

Although rerouting the Tech Freeway was promised in exchange for Tech allowing Indiana Avenue to cross the campus, Bertram said Tech officials have indicated they will abide by the results of the feasibility study.

If Tech officials insist on the rerouting or the feasibility study shows the freeway should be rerouted, Bertram said it's unlikely the Brownfield Freeway will become a reality.

Bertram also recommended the council use planning funds from the highway department to commence a feasibility study on rerouting the railroad tracks which parallel the Brownfield Highway, possibly outside Loop 289.

This already has been done in other cities, including Corpus Christi, Bertram said, and federal and state funds may be available to pay for the rerouting.

If the tracks are rerouted, the city would have additional right-of-way for the freeway and interchanges would be less involved.

Thirdly, Bertram suggested the state planning funds be used for a feasibility study of the benefits of converting Lub-

Bible Distribution At School Assailed

By LISA PAIKOWSKI
Avalanche-Journal Staff

A LUBBOCK Independent School District policy allowing the distribution of Gideon bibles to upper-level elementary school students has reignited the controversy over separation of church and state in public schools here.

At issue is a school district policy that allows fifth grade and sixth grade students to voluntarily pick up bibles and testaments distributed to the schools by members of Gideons International.

At least one parent is upset over the practice, which she believes is illegal.

The mother of a Wheelock Elementary School student told The Avalanche-Journal Thursday that she was not aware bible distribution was allowed in the schools until her son came home with one of the red books Wednesday. She said she was concerned about the practice and added that she knew of a child in a lower grade who also had received a bible at the school.

When asked about the practice, Dr. E.C. Leslie, assistant superintendent for administration, said that distribution of the bibles is sanctioned by a school board policy that was established "back before my time."

Leslie said the books are placed at a central location in the schools at a time designated by the principal and an announcement is made to fifth graders and sixth graders that they may pick up a bible if they wish.

Ed Stokes, director of elementary education, said the practice is voluntary, with "no pressure applied or implied."

Although Wheelock principal Charles Johnson was upset that a younger student also had received a bible, the mother called that matter "purely academic," and said the real issue is the legality of distributing religious material in public schools.

"Apparently everybody treats this as everyday business, but bibles in the school are totally foreign to me," said the mother. "I think it's wrong and illegal and it shouldn't be permitted to continue."

She also questioned whether other religious groups are allowed to distribute their materials in the public scools here.

Leslie said the schools have had no such requests by any other group. "We don't have any policy that would allow it," he said. "We'd have to consider it as

Discussions On Overton To Continue

By RAYNIE HARDESTY
Avalanche-Journal Staff

A DECISION to declare the Overton South neighborhood a Design Historic district was postponed Thursday night, despite apparent support for the designation by Planning and Zoning Commission members.

No final decision was reached after three hours of discussion "because of the complexity and magnitude of the issue," said chairman Jim Ratliff. The commission will continue hearing discussion at a 7 p.m. meeting Tuesday in the council chambers.

Commission members told the Overton South crowd and neighboring business owners opposing the designation that a recommendation will be made to the City Council before the council's October meeting.

Overton South property owner Don Tonroy told the commission Thursday that such the Design Historic designation would increase the property values "three fold" and give residents a "real nice neighborhood."

Boundaries Opposed

But Carroll Cobb, a Lubbock attorney representing most businesses along Avenue Q, Broadway, 19th Street and University Avenue, which mark the general boundaries of the proposed district, said the business owners opposed the proposed boundaries more than the historic designation.

He said the proposed boundaries would lead to eventual slum conditions in those commercial zones by prohibiting expansion of neighboring businesses and limiting parking space.

He emphasized that changing the boundaries would allow Lubbock residents and business owners "to gain the best from both worlds."

Also opposing the district were other business owners located in the interior of the Overton South neighborhood and

Oil Spill Fight Given Help By Hurricane

CORPUS CHRISTI (AP) — High tides and waves from Hurricane Frederic have helped a federal task force fighting a Mexican oil spill, the Coast Guard said Thursday.

The tides are dropping tar balls and other oily splotches and debris near the dunes about 40 feet to 60 feet from the shoreline, said Coast Guard Capt. Theotis Wood.

There is no evidence that any oil from the well, which blew out June 3, has washed into the sensitive dune vegetation, Wood said.

National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration scientist Dr. Nancy Maynar said most of the oil is in sand in front of the dunes.

Having oil near the dune line "is very good as far as beach ecology goes, because birds, crabs and other species feed in the intertidal zone, between high and low tide" on the flat beach area.

She said wave action may have helped also to clean up submerged oil offshore. That oil has accumulated in troughs between sand bars offshore and may have been washed ashore, she said.

"It's very definitely a plus in terms of cleanup that this has happened," she said.

Wood said northeast winds from

Misdirected Drug Raid Damages Granted

By KAY BELL
Avalanche-Journal Staff

THREE former Plainview court reporting students were awarded $13,000 in damages Thursday after a federal civil jury decided some of the officers involved in a 1976 drug raid at the trio's residence had acted maliciously and in bad faith.

Former Amarillo police officer Jim Patterson and Bennie Clifton, a member of the now-disbanded Hale County Major Crimes and Narcotics Unit when the March 19, 1976 raid was conducted, were ordered by the panel to pay $5,000 each in punitive damages.

The jury also awarded each of the three plaintiffs, Ted Hooks, Diane Duncan Hooks and Delia Gutierrez, $1,000 in actual damages caused by the actions of the officers.

After considering the actions of each defendant individually, jurors returned at mid-afternoon Thursday and announced they found that Patterson and Clifton had not acted in good faith when they executed a search warrant at the former Plainview residents' home.

The warrant listed the address of the Hookses, who were not married at the time of the incident, and Miss Gutierrez. However, shortly after entering the residence the officers discovered that the person they were seeking as a heroin dealer lived in the apartment below.

The panel also found that Clifton had acted maliciously, capriciously or arbitrarily following the exeuction of the warrant. During the course of the three-day trial, Clifton testified that when he entered the bedroom the Hookses were sharing, he knew that Hooks was not the suspected narcotics dealer.

Clifton also admitted he had tried to pull the covers from Mrs. Hooks, who was in bed and screaming when the officers entered her bedroom about 2:30 a.m. the day of the raid.

However, the actions of the other four defendants, Patterson, former Amarillo police officer Russell Ivy, and Gary Noblett and Gary Gillespie, also members of the defunct Hale County narcotics squad, were not malicious or capricious, the jury decided.

Because of the panel's determination of questionable actions by Patterson and Clifton, the jurors decided both men had caused the plaintiffs to suffer damages. The actions of Ivy, Noblett and Gillespie, however, did not result in any damage to the plaintiffs, according to the jury.

A hearing on several motions and how to divide the payments awarded the Hookses and Miss Gutierrez will be held in federal court in two weeks.

Thursday's decision ended the retrial of the 3 1/2-year case. After the 1976 trial in Canyon, the jury there said the officers had acted out of good faith in conducting the raid, but the first panel could not decide on the officers' behavior once they were inside the apartment.

The trial judge later decided the question on the officers' behavior was not necessary in view of the jury's ruling on the question of good faith.

The Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals in New Orleans, however, ruled the trial judge had erred in choosing to disregard the question on the officers' actions and a new trial was ordered.

The six-member jury began its delib-

Baker Says Chappaquiddick Not Issue For Presidential Race

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Howard H. Baker Jr. said Thursday the Chappaquiddick accident would not be a legitimate issue in the 1980 presidential campaign if Sen. Edward M. Kennedy is the Democratic nominee.

Baker, who is campaigning for the Republican nomination, said that if he and Kennedy are the major party presidential candidates "I would never mention Chappaquiddick."

Baker referred to the incident in July 1969, in which a car driven by Kennedy went off a bridge on Chappaquiddick Island, which is part of Martha's Vineyard, off the Massachusetts coast. Mary Jo Kopechne, who had worked for Robert F. Kennedy, was a passenger in the car and drowned.

"I don't think it is a legitimate issue in a presidential contest," said Baker, when asked what impact Chappaquiddick might have on the 1980 campaign. "I would never mention it," he said.

Baker said a race against Kennedy would be "eminently winnable" with the major issue being whether Kennedy "is in step with what the country wants now."

Would he prefer running against President Carter or Kennedy?

"Who would be easier to beat?" responded Baker. "There's no way to tell."

"The only thing I'm sure of, to my satisfaction, I don't think Jimmy Carter is going to roll over and play dead" if challenged by Kennedy.

"If Sen. Kennedy is going to be the Democratic nominee, he's going to have to take it away from President Carter," he added.

House Republicans also met with reporters on Thursday and gave their views on the possible Kennedy candidacy.

Rep. Newt Gingrich, a Georgian now in his first term in the House, said a Carter-Kennedy battle would be "a mean, cruel, brutal campaign.... Ham Jordan and Jimmy Carter do not plan to go back to Plains, Ga."

House Minority Leader John Rhodes of Arizona said most Republicans think Kennedy would be the more formidable candidate, but "don't underestimate the powers of the president to recoup."

Rep. Bud Shuster of Pennsylvania, chairman of the GOP Policy Committee, quoted "an influential Philadelphia Republican" as saying, "If Kennedy is the nominee we could cut him to pieces." Shuster said the individual, whom he declined to name, cited Kennedy's liberal voting record and personal life.

Asked about his campaign, Baker said his travels through 26 states during the August congressional recess, convinced him that Ronald Reagan remains the clear front-runner for the Republican presidential nomination.

"Obviously, he is not so strong. I don't think I can catch him," said Baker.

While saying he did not think Reagan's age would be political problem for the former California governor, Baker said Reagan might encounter some resistance on the part of Republicans to "a rerun of 1976," a reference to Reagan's close but losing battle against Gerald R. Ford for the nomination.

Reagan would turn 70 shortly after Inauguration Day 1981.

Although both have campaign organizations working hard on their behalf, neither Baker nor Reagan has formally announced his candidacy.

Baker is expected to make a formal announcement this fall, a step he refers to as "a press event." The senator has said repeatedly there is no question that he is running for president.

Cooler, Chance Of Rain Seen Through Saturday

A cold front has pushed its way down across the northern part of Texas, bringing with it much cooler autumn-like temperatures and a slight chance of showers today.

The cooler temperatures are expected to remain in the area at least until Saturday, when a slight warming trend is supposed to begin.

Highs today across the area are expected to reach only into the middle to upper 60s, with nighttime lows dipping into the 50s. The winds should blow from the northeast at 5 to 10 mph.

The National Weather Service indicates that no significant delays in harvesting should occur because of the cooler weather or the potential for showers, even though the cooler air could delay cotton development.

Showers will extend all along the Atlantic seaboard from Georgia to New England as a result of Frederic, which has been downgraded to a tropical storm. The rest of the nation is expected to enjoy seasonally cooler temperatures and mild weather.

Half of Oregon, or about 30 million acres, is thickly forested and the state leads the nation in value of forest products, over $30 billion a year. Production of lumber, furniture, paper and other forest products provides jobs for about 75,000 workers.

United Auto Workers, General Motors At Bargaining Table

DETROIT (AP) — The United Auto Workers union and General Motors Corp. began marathon bargaining on a new company economic proposal Thursday, 30 hours before the union was to strike the nation's largest carmaker.

UAW President Douglas A. Fraser said it was possible the negotiators could take a break for sleep "if the momentum isn't there."

"It would be a shame if we let it get away from us now," he said. "The differences between us look like they can be resolved with some intensivenegotiations. We're just going to stay at the bargaining table."

Fraser said he had spent "a lot of hours" with GM 's chief negotiator, Vice President George B. Morris Jr., in recent days. The subject of their talks was unknown, although union spokesman Don Stillman said later the two had not been negotiating.

Major issues in the talks are protection of retired workers against inflation, more paid time off and wages. Contracts for the 780,000 Big Three autoworkers expire at 11:59 p.m. Friday.

Early in the talks, the company offered 3 percent annual wage increases for the next three years, plus continuation of the present cost-of-living formula.

That formula has added $1.37 an hour to autoworker wages over the last three years, bringing average straight-time pay for GM's UAW members to $9.05 per hour. The formula and wage increases negotiated in 1976 have kept active autoworkers, unlike their retired colleagues, between 5 percent and 6 percent ahead of inflation.

The "paper is still flying," UAW spokesman Howard Lipton said Thursday, indicating progress was being made in the final hours before the 11:59 p.m. Friday deadline.

If no contract can be reached for UAW members at the nation's largest carmaker, the union has said it will strike 46 of GM's 130 installations — 13 assembly plants, a locomotive plant and 32 parts warehouses.

The selective strikes, never before used in national bargaining, would idle 95,350 of GM's 460,000 UAW members nationwide.

The union's traditional strategy has been to pick one company and let the others operate in hopes of bringing sales pressure on the "target" company — GM this time.

Asked if GM would consider a lockout of union employees at plants not struck, spokesmen refer reporters to a statement last Friday by GM Vice President George B. Morris that the company was "keeping our options open."

The last time national bargaining concluded without a strike against the target company was in 1964, at Chrysler Corp. Even so, there were strikes against GM over local issues.

Fraser said many of the major non-economic issues had been settled, but some non-economic issues remained to be negotiated. Union officials have not said what those issues involved.

Pensions have been identified by the union as the key issue in this year's talks. Currently an auto worker with 30 years service retiring early gets $700 a month until Social Security begins at age 62. A worker retiring regularly at 65 with 30 yrears service could get up to $430 a month, plus Social Security.

The three major automakers have 230,000 retired UAW members, and about 140,000 of them are at GM.

Slaton Man Found Guilty By Jury For Possession

A 140th District Court jury Thursday evening was considering punishment for 19-year-old Ernesto Pina, whom they found guilty earlier in the day of possessing heroin on March 9.

The panel took only 26 minutes Thursday afternoon to decide the Slaton man had tried to discard 5.65 grams of 10 percent heroin on the March afternoon Lubbock and Slaton officers executed a search warrant at a Slaton residence.

Testimony indicated that when Lubbock Drug Enforcement Administration agents and Slaton police arrived at the residence, Pina was in the back yard and ran to the fence near the alley where he tossed a bag containing the narcotic.

Defense counsel Byron Chappell called several of the officers to the stand in an attempt to disprove the testimony of the two agents who said they watched Pina throw away the bag. However, the witnesses called by Chappell said that because they were entering and exiting the house throughout the search, they had no way of knowing exactly what the other officers saw.

Chappell asked the jury to return a probated sentence for Pina, who has no previous felony convictions.

Prosecutors Hollis Browning and Jim Bob Darnell argued for a prison term of 12-to-15 years to be assessed by the panel.

AN EDITORIAL:

Ford Study Has Better Ideas

MAYBE IT'S BECAUSE it says essentially the same thing we've been saying since 1973, but we are pleasantly surprised by the rational findings and recommendations made in a study of "Energy: The Next 20 Years."

Our amazement stems from the fact that the report was sponsored by the Ford Foundation, which tends toward a more liberal view of the world of economics and politics than we think generally is justified by reality.

This time, though, 19 of the nation's leading experts in energy economics, law, physics, engineering, geography, health and administration recommend:

—Rapid decontrol of oil and gas prices.

—Conservation.

—Greater flexibility in pollution control laws.

—"Rely primarily on the private sector to develop and deploy new technology."

THAT LAST POINT deserves repeating for emphasis: "Rely primarily on the private sector..."

That's one way of saying that the fastest, cheapest and longest-lasting solution to the energy crisis is for the government to butt out except for providing every encouragement it can to the free enterprise system.

Or, as the report itself says, "most of the positive developments in energy have occurred as much in spite of as because of any specific energy policy measures."

It adds: "Reality One: The world is not running out of energy...With proper policy and planning and a willingness to pay the costs, energy can be produced to meet any reasonable projection of demand, without 'gaps' or physical shortages."

OTHER "REALITIES" outlined in the study are:

—Middle East oil is so valuable that the world will remain dependent on it for a long time, but the risks of "major economic disruption or even war" posed by this dependence can be minimized by developing our own supplies.

—Higher energy costs cannot be avoided but can be contained by letting prices rise to reflect them.

—Environmental effects are serious and hard to manage but what's needed are "flexible programs" so that worthy objectives can be achieved "in the long run."

—Conservation is essential, but economics will take care of that; "with a few notable exceptions it cannot realistically be mandated or managed centrally."

—Serious shocks and surprises are certain, so let's learn to take them in stride.

—There is no simple "technical fix" to the energy challenge.

THE STUDY GROUP proposes that contingency plans be devised to deal with disruptions in world oil markets.

It also recommends that nuclear power and other options be maintained and that work continue to improve the acceptability of coal as an alternate fuel (the U.S. has a 300-year supply of coal, it confirms).

Solar and other research and development policies should be pursued, the study concludes.

"The energy is there to be had, at a cost, in virtually whatever quantities it may be demanded," the study emphasizes. "...Indeed, even 100 years from now there can be plenty of fuel around to power private automobiles..."

And its kicker line: "Oil produced as a result of actions taken after a specified date should be freed from price controls and 'windfall profit' taxes...and we recommend most strongly that Congress not reverse" the process of phasing out domestic price controls "as quickly as possible."

AN EDITORIAL:

Two Is One Too Many To PUC

AT A TIME when deregulation is proving itself as an effective weapon against inflation, the Texas Public Utility Commission seems determined to swim against the tide.

It wants to further limit competition among power companies.

A particular target of the PUC are communities such as Lubbock, where electric rates historically have been cheaper than elsewhere because of competition between investor-owned Southwestern Public Service Co. and municipally owned Lubbock Power and Light.

Service has been better here, too, because of the competition for customers.

IN THE VIEW OF the state bureaucrats, though, it's just bound to be against the public interest for two companies to compete.

Dual power lines represent a wasteful duplication of service, Tom Sweatman, PUC engineer argues.

On orders from the three-man Commission, the PUC staff has instructed electric utilities to "report" by Monday any progress they've made toward eliminating dual service in an area.

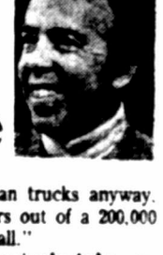
In an effort to discourage competition, the PUC also has authorized a cutoff fee to be collected from customers who exercise their freedom of choice and switch from one electric supplier to another.

Created as an instrument of the consumer protection hysteria of the mid-1970s, the PUC refuses to acknowledge the fact that the best protection for the consumer is not bureaucratic rule-making and meddling.

Consumers benefit when they have more than one place to buy a product or a service; they get better service at a lower price—and it's hard to improve on that combination.

M. STANTON EVANS:

Soviet Trade Weak Link In Our Chain Of Defense



WASHINGTON—As noted in the last previous installment of this column, the story on strategic trade between the United States and the Soviet Union gets worse and worse.

Most attention in this dispute has focused on the Kama River truck plant—the largest such facility in the world—built for Moscow with $1 billion or so of our technology (officials seem confused about the precise amount).

This is so because far more is publicly known about the military uses of Kama River, and the laid-back attitude of U.S. officials about such uses, than is known concerning other transfers of our technology to the Soviets.

Bit by bit, however, other data on this subject are being dragged into the light.

THE EMERGING picture suggests the Department of Commerce, which is supposed to keep a watchful eye on trade abuses, routinely approves of trade deals with the Communists even when the military application of those deals is obvious.

Under the Export Administration Act of 1969, the Secretary of Commerce is required to restrict the sale of goods or technologies abroad "which would make a significant contribution to the military potential of any other nation or nations which would prove detrimental to the national security of the United States."

Critics of existing trade policy say Commerce has made this provision a virtual nullity by interpreting the most flagrant military uses as insignificant.

A STRIKING example appears in an interoffice memo concerning a proposed computer sale to the Soviet ZIL truck plant. This memo, dated in early 1977, states that "a quarter of the 200,000 trucks ZIL produces annually goes to the military, including 100 missile launchers."

Nonetheless, "State and Commerce support approval," on the grounds that we have already licensed exports for the plant, that the military trucks are basically like civilian trucks anyway, and that "100 missile launchers out of a 200,000 vehicle annual production is small."

The mentality behind that episode helps explain the Carter administration's push in Congress to relax our export standards even further—including an attempt to "index" items off the restricted trade list.

A SIMILAR attitude, already reported, has marked the Carter administration's response to revelations that Kama River has been used to turn out engines for military trucks and other military vehicles (including armored personnel carriers and tanks).

The official view of the Carter regime is that such military uses would not be a "diversion" of our technology, since there was never an understanding that the plant would be restricted to civilian purposes.

As already reported here, there is evidence to the contrary in the applications that U.S. firms made to export items to Kama River.

Even without this proof, however, the justification used by the Carter regime—that the U.S. government knew the project might be used for military purposes, but made a conscious decision to accept this—boggles the imagination.

AT THE TIME the Kama River project was launched, in 1971, we were engaged in bloody warfare in Vietnam, where the Communist enemy made extensive use of trucks supplied by the Soviet Union.

Given these indicators of what has been going on inside our government, it is small wonder that the Department of Commerce has tried to cloak the subject of strategic trade with Moscow in a mantle of secrecy.

That is why some of us have been fighting a freedom of information action to get these data before the public, and why we intend to keep on fighting.

'He Still Sees Bunnies'

ROWLAND EVANS AND ROBERT NOVAK:

The Sky's The Limit

NOVAK

WASHINGTON—Behind the turgid drama of the SALT II debate, the Soviet Union has been engaged in intensive underground weapons testing with indications of repeated violations of two test-ban treaties, one limiting the size of weapons tested, the other prohibiting "venting" of radioactive fallout into the atmosphere.

This hyperactive Soviet testing, the most intensive in years, has been overlooked in the vigorous Carter administration effort to ratify the new Strategic Arms Limitation Treaty (SALT II).

But there are growing indications that the Kremlin may be systematically cheating in the rush to complete a vast "data base" for building new and better nuclear explosives before U.S.-Soviet agreement on the comprehensive test-ban treaty (CTB) now being negotiated.

A key issue here is U.S. trust of its Russian negotiating partner, a trust that President Carter's administration had seemed particularly inclined to accept.

Lack of healthy suspicion was the crux of the tragic failure of the U.S. to talk privately to Ludmilla Vlasova, the Soviet ballerina whose husband defected and who might have done so herself if she had had the chance.

Alerting Soviet diplomats here in advance to the fact that the U.S. wanted that private talk made it impossible. She was spirited off to an Aeroflot IL-62 by Soviet secret police.

The Soviets' record of actual and attempted cheating is unambiguous, beyond the ability of Soviet apologists to disprove.

IN THE INFINITELY more important case of Soviet underground weapons testing, trust in Soviet declarations or intentions could lead to graver results.

During 1978, at least three underground tests (among the estimated 27 exploded in the Soviet Union) are believed to have violated the 1974 "threshhold" test-ban treaty with its 150 kiloton ceiling.

In addition, at least 13 of the 1978 tests almost certainly produced illegal "venting"—the escape of poisonous radioactive materials such as crypton and other fission products into the atmosphere.

The three probable violations occurred in August, November and December. Seismic instruments—not on Soviet territory because Moscow rejects on-site inspection—indicated that each of the three tests were well above the 150 kiloton limit.

THIS YEAR, as the Russians continued their most active underground test program in 15 years, a June explosion is believed to have had the force of 225 kilotons and a July shot possibly as high as 400 kilotons. The U.S. has never announced the July test.

Soviet refusal to permit on-site inspection by seismic sensor—and the imprecision of distant seismographs—make it virtually impossible to prove violations.

This is true despite sensitive Swedish seismic instruments that pick up and record most Soviet tests. But Soviet violations of the 1963 treaty can be proved by the empirical evidence of dust particles collected in the atmosphere over Japan, Korea and other areas.

"It is intolerable that the U.S. should permit the Soviets to cheat at the margin without even raising a protest," one specialist told us privately.

YET, NO violation has yet been charged under either the 1974 treaty (which sets the ceiling on explosive power) or the 1963 Limited Test-Ban Treaty (which prohibits venting).

The farthest the Carter administration has ventured is to "raise a question" with Moscow about one of the tests this summer and three of the 1978 tests.

The predictable Soviet response: nyet, and you can't prove we did. Furthermore, Moscow is armed with a strange concession it got from the U.S.: two tests a year may "slightly" exceed the limit.

The data base now being accumulated by the Soviets, with a test program perhaps three times the U.S. and rising, will probably be used to perfect warheads for the new crop of post-SALT II long-range missiles.

THUS, IF THE comprehensive test-ban—a near-total ban on all tests for a period of perhaps five years—is agreed on anytime soon, the Soviets could leapfrog U.S. technology by translating its test data into new types of higher-yield, lower-weight weapons with the U.S. powerless to catch up.

The Soviets have not pyramided their testing program to today's awesome level just for fun. The testing of warheads that violate treaties has its grim purpose: to surpass U.S. weapons technology.

Refusal of the U.S. to challenge Moscow out loud on its presumed violations thus becomes dangerously counter productive.

Worse, it assures the very gains in Soviet weaponry that the President insists will be curbed by SALT II—thus undermining what he regards as his most important mission.

ANDREW TULLY:

In Daze Of Yore

(Repeated by Request)

WASHINGTON—Toiling in this bubble gum factory we use as a capital, a lot of gracefully aging citizens occasionally must look back with amiable nostalgia to a hero of their boyhood named Horatio Alger Jr.

It is sad, then, to learn that Junior is not into it these days.

That ukase was delivered at a picnic the other night by three bright young men, all holding down high-salaried jobs in prestigious Washington law firms.

Alger, I learned from these spokesmen for the Under Thirties, not only was a lousy writer but should be declared a nonperson for preaching that clean living and hard work were the ingredients of success.

WELL, ALL RIGHT. Those guys are relevant and all that, and they are taking over. But their perception is faulty in that it shows no understanding of a boy's mind back in the Bad Old Days.

In that age, hard work and a certain amount of wholesomeness had not yet fallen into disrepute.

To be sure some of Alger's heroes, notably Jed the Poorhouse Boy, seemed a trifle too virtuous to sprouts who skipped school to go swimming at Second Reservoir, but on balance they were inspirational.

Alger did speak highly of a fat bank account and a new house on Elm Street, but he also admonished his readers to love and obey their parents, get straight A's, and render just due to a surprisingly ecumenical God.

MOREOVER, ALGER usually took a dim view of the very rich, especially very rich boys. Alger approved of wealth only if accompanied by humility, good nature, and generosity toward boys like his readers.

It was reassuring to learn that Alger shared your low opinion of the moppet with both pony and bicycle, and the neighborhood's only catcher's mitt.

The Under Thirty gauleiters charge that almost all the poor boys in the Alger books made good not by working hard but by lucky chance. They were, it is alleged, usually befriended by some rich man or kindly widow.

Nevertheless, I must accept the premise that the Alger formula is outdated. Boys today learn quickly that they can get ahead faster by practicing the art of the stratagem, by unearthing the angle.

HARD WORK is the refuge of the outs in a society that has devised a handout for virtually every need. Why pick apples in Virginia when a welfare check beckons?

Alger himself epitomized at least one of the virtues he preached. In his day, writers worked for their dough. Most still do. But gimmickry has invaded the trade.

Today, almost any scribbler with the right connections can get a foundation grant to finance the several years of "thinking" now considered a must for the budding Dickens.

JAY HARRIS:

The Love Affair...

EVEN IN THE midst of the energy crunch, the American love affair with the auto hasn't waned. Changed perhaps, but not weakened.

The car is both a boon and a destructive force for the U.S., its citizens, its way of life...

The auto has revolutionized not only America, but much of the world, in one form or another. Not only has a set of "wheels," even the "ancient" variety, got people from here to there, but the trucking industry has added a whole new dimension to living.

And the mere building and selling and servicing of autos alone has become one of the backbone businesses in the nation, as well as other parts of the world.

In brief, few items in the history of mankind have had so much influence on mankind...

WHEN DID it all start? Where was the first auto made? Who got the first ticket? How many die in traffic mishaps each year?

The Texas Office of Traffic Safety of the State Department of Highways for some time now has been assembling the odds and ends and quirks of things people associated with the auto. Some are hilarious, some are sad, others informative, most all interesting. Today, we would like to share some of them with you.

The idea of motorized transport fascinated but baffled inventors for centuries. Even the Great Isaac Newton couldn't solve the problem.

Sometime in the late 1600's, according to Driveline, the TOT's report, after figuring out the mathematics of the Law of Gravity, Sir Isaac designed a jet-propelled steam carriage.

Unfortunately, it would have required operating speeds in excess of 700 miles an hour, somewhat impractical for the muddy roads of the time. So the idea was shelved.

THE FIRST successful gasoline driven car was built in 1885, it turns out.

Called the Motorwagon, it was build by Karl Freidrich Benz in Germany. It had three wheels and weighed 560 pounds. It's too bad it didn't run on something besides gasoline.

Also in the ancient history department, it should be noted that an estimated 20,000 steam powered autos were sold between 1880 and 1970. As you might suspect, it was the Stanley Brothers, makers of the famed Stanley Steamer, who accounted for about half of those sales.

As one might also suspect, the license plate wasn't far behind when the auto started making its appearance in the larger cities. The world's first car license plates reportedly were introduced by the Paris, France, police. The first such tags in America were in New York State in 1901.

AND WITH the auto and license tags came the need for traffic laws.

The first edict on the books in Texas affecting auto traffic was passed in 1907. It required motor vehicles to have a bell or some other item that would give notice of approach. The cattle probably appreciated that.

And with laws came traffic violators and fines...

There seems to be a dispute of sorts about who got the first traffic ticket. One argument is that it was one Elwood Haynes, an early auto engineer and designer. A bicycle riding policeman ordered him off the streets of Chicago in 1895.

But, if the records are straight, the first speeding ticket actually issued was in 1902, to one T. H. Shevlin of Minnesota, who TOT says was the first of the hot-rodders. He was fined $10 for going over 10 mph.

BUT, THOSE are some of the lighter things associated with "the love affair with the auto..."

Do you have any idea how many vehicles are in America today? Well, more than 140 million, give or take a few million stalled, stored or stolen.

And to compound the problem of getting that rattle fixed, the shocks replaced, the oil changed or a major engine overhaul, there are only 800,000 auto mechanics available. No wonder you had to make an appointment and then wait in line.

Maybe the dentists and mechanics should operate out of the same building.

That's an awful lot of autos running around. And, statisticians say that the average number of riders per car is only 1.6 persons. If that were increased to two persons per car, by car pooling, for instance, the country could save almost five billion gallons of gas a year and 15 million cars would be removed from the rush-hour crush.

AND WHAT OF the dark side of the auto?

Well, in Texas last year one person was killed in a traffic accident every 2 hours and 12 minutes...

One person was injured every 2 minutes and 57 seconds...

And there was a traffic mishap every 74 seconds...

But, there is a more macabre side of it, on a nationwide level. More than 50,000 persons died across the nation...

And traffic accidents have killed more Americans than all our wars combined. The total U.S. casualties in every war since 1775—1,156,000.

The total killed in traffic accidents since 1900 is 2,250,000...

More than 300,000 pedestrian accidents occur nationally each year, with 8,000 of them resulting in fatalities. More than a fourth of the victims are under 15, half over 40. And in Texas, one-sixth of all fatal mishaps involve vehicles striking pedestrians. Most frequent victims are the very young, the elderly, those who have been drinking.

And to cap it all off, the only day in recent years that a person was not killed in a traffic mishap in Texas was Wednesday, Jan. 5, 1977. Drive as though your life depended on it. It does!

...Pass It On

CRIMINALS CONVICTED in jury trials during the summer tend to get lighter sentences than criminals convicted during the winter. Not counting the Christmas holidays. Those traditionally get lighter sentences than criminals convicted during any other time of year. But why the January and February sentences are tougher than the June and July sentences is a mystery.

Solar Dish Completion Expected In November

By JEFF McCASLIN
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Construction of Phase One of the Crosbyton Solar Energy Project, already several weeks behind schedule due to heavy rainfall this year, should be completed for dedication ceremonies by the end of November, according to project coordinator Dr. Travis Simpson of Texas Tech University.

Phase One's 65-foot solar dish — the largest solar collector of its kind ever built — is a scaled-down version of the planned 10 200-foot solar dishes when the final phases of the project is completed.

Dr. Simpson, addressing a solar energy workshop being presented at the Memorial Civic Center this week by The Texas Solar Energy Society, said $4.8 million has been spent on the project already and that construction is 22 days behind schedule.

He said President Carter has been invited to attend dedication day ceremonies which have been tentatively scheduled for Nov. 29, "if we're finished." He said Carter hasn't said whether he will attend or not.

When completed, the five megawatt power plant will supply 28 percent of Crosbyton's electrical needs by late 1982. The 65-foot solar dish is designed to power a steam-driven turbine.

Dr. Simpson said researchers will analyze data from the scaled-down version of the solar collector dish to support requests for future funding by the federal government of the final phase.

"Once completed and operating, electric power from the solar dish won't be any cheaper than conventional power," he said. "But it will be competitive if fuel prices keep going up."

Dr. Simpson pointed out that the Crosbyton project is one of two such solar energy projects being considered for future funding by the Department of Energy, adding that at least 30 Tech faculty members and more than 60 graduate and undergraduate students have been working on the project.

"The cost is exotic, but the concept is cheap," he commented.

The two-day workshop, which is being funded through the governor's Texas Energy and Natural Resources Advisory Council, was designed to help local contractors, engineers and architects plan, size and market solar energy systems.

Also addressing the workshop Thursday was Dr. Gary Vliet of the Center for Energy Studies at the University of Texas at Austin, who said that although solar-powered heating and cooling systems for homes is still not perfected, rising costs for conventional fuels have spawned more intense research in the area.

"Solar energy is becoming more viable as the cost of conventional energy continues to go up," Dr. Vliet said. "However, some solar systems still are not economical at this time."

The systems Vliet was referring to are the solar-powered cooling systems now being developed and monitored as part of an active solar design.

An active solar system, as opposed to a passive system, uses mechanical means such as pumps and pipes to carry heat from solar collectors to storage tanks and then artificially circulates them throughout the living space.

In a passive solar system, the heat from the sun is absorbed and stored by a container placed inside the living space, usually an element of the building such as the floor or wall. Heat is radiated at night back into the living space and no mechanical devices or fluid is required.

Vliet is monitoring a solar energy system for heating and cooling an Austin apartment complex he designed.

He said solar collectors were installed on the roofs of the existing structures and a storage tank for the heated water was placed in a separate building. The heated water from the solar collectors travels through a series of pumps and copper pipes to either heat or cool the air, which is then piped to the living quarters.

"I do not recommend solar cooling right now because it is not economically feasible," he said. "A lot more research needs to be done on solar cooling."

He said that depending on the application, solar cooling would be a viable alternative to conventional means of cooling buildings in about two to three years.

"I don't see the cost of these systems coming down, but their performance will improve and become more feasible as the price of existing fuels continues to rise."

Dr. Vliet advocates integrating both passive and active solar energy systems.

Enter your own permanent numbers in the chart in the bottom right-hand corner. To figure your own permanent numbers, follow these three steps:

Step 1: From the year chart, find the numbers corresponding to your year of birth. For instance, if you were born in 1947, your number for Physical would be 21, Emotional 17, Intellectual 19. Note whether your numbers are preceded by an A or B; this will be used for Step 2.

Step 2: Now find the corresponding number for the month you were born. If your month is February, and your year numbers were preceded by a B, your month numbers would be 8 for Physical, 3 for Emotional and 31 for Intellectual. Enter your own numbers in the figure chart for Step 2.

Step 3: In the figure chart, enter your day of birth three times, one each for Physical (P), Emotional (E) and Intellectual (I). (If you were born on April 3, for instance, place a 3 in each column.)

Add the three columns to derive your permanent biorhythm numbers for your Physical, Emotional and Intellectual cycles. Now you can refer to today's rhythms.

These numbers are yours permanently. Check them each day for your biorhythm reading.

Customer's 'Silent Partner' Scares Teller

NEW YORK (AP) — Banks are tense these days with bank robberies at an all time high in the city, so when a man handed a teller a piece of paper Thursday reading, "This is a bank robbery," the wheels of law enforcement began spinning.

Within seconds, the note passer was pounced on by police responding to the call at a Citibank branch on Park Avenue.

The man protested, "I'm just trying to make a deposit."

It turned out that someone, perhaps a would-be robber who lost his nerve, had written the words on the back of a blank deposit slip.

That cleared up, the man, not identified, made his deposit and left.

Police have recorded 642 bank robberies so far this year, one more than in all of 1977, the previous worst year.

School Officials Re-Examining Safety Measures

By LISA PAIKOWSKI
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Despite the posters and pamphlets, despite the films and public service announcements, despite city and school efforts at promoting safety awareness, a 7-year-old Parsons Elementary student was struck by a car and killed last week as he rode his bicycle to school.

The tragedy prompted city and school safety coordinators to re-examine their safety campaigns, and although they concluded they are already conducting adequate programs, they are still looking for ways to improve them.

Lubbock public schools traditionally launch a safety campaign, chiefly among elementary school students, during the first few weeks of school and several times during the year. In addition, fourth grade physical education teachers are required to teach a concentrated safety unit.

"I feel we have done as much as we could this opening school campaign," said Charles Caraway, director of health, physical education and driver education for the schools. "One of our (the schools') principal responsibilities is for safety in the schools. It's not only our moral, but our legal responsibility."

Still, Caraway has asked the principals in the district for feedback on the safety campaign — "if there are any additional materials, anything we could do to help them do a better job (promoting safety)."

Caraway explained that safety instruction is not an academic subject "and that makes it difficult. But our philosophy is that even though we don't have teachers of safety, all teachers are safety instructors."

Teaching aids available for instruction in safety include films, filmstrips and records, safety bulletins and pamphlets and posters distributed by the Citizens Traffic Commission and the Department of Public Safety.

Caraway said that the DPS booklet "Texas Bicycle Driver Rules" is always given to fourth grade students, because a past survey showed that students usually begin riding bicycles to school when they reach that grade level.

But he said that in view of the younger age of the child struck last week the pamphlets may be handed out to children below the fourth grade level as well.

Caraway said that the school principals "are responsible for making sure the school environment is safe and teachers present safety instruction as needed."

ADELITA CONTESTANTS — These young women will be competing in the Adelita contest at the 1979 Mexican Fiesta opening today at the Lubbock Memorial Civic Center. The contest honors Adelita — a revolutionary heroine who fought during Mexico's battle for independence from Spain. Each Adelita contestant is sponsored by a Lubbock area business and will be judged on talent, personality, knowledge of Mexican history and costume which must reflect the Revolutionary period. The contestants are, from upper left, Diana Ramirez, sponsored by Lugo's La Malinche restaurant; Anita Pena, sponsored by KLFB radio; and lower left, Mary Jane Duran, sponsored by Sepeda Builders; and Maria Valdez, sponsored by Gilbert's Auto Supply. The winner will reign over the fiesta and will receive a scholarship, wardrobe and trip.

He noted that the principals met recently with central office personnel and reported that teachers were, indeed, conducting the required safety instruction.

The safety coordinator said he believes the youngsters take their teachers' safety tips to heart, but "they do a lot of things impulsively. That's why we have accidents. (Victims) acted impulsively — they weren't thinking — or there were circumstances beyond our control."

Caraway added that "we have to educate drivers." He said that although safety awareness is aimed at parents through the school PTAs, many adults do not know some of the safety rules, particularly for bicycle riders.

"A lot of adults ride on the wrong side of the road (bike riders should always stay on the right side of the street — they should not face oncoming traffic). Adults don't know the bike rules and so they give the wrong example to kids. Parents have to take responsibility."

The city is also in the business of promoting safety and since the fatality last week "has attempted to increase (safety) awareness through the media," said Vaughn Hendrie, traffic safety coordinator for the city.

He said he called the local television stations to ask them to continue to run public service announcements concerning safety.

The Citizens Traffic Commission had already discussed bicycle safety early last week and asked that STEP (Selective Traffic Enforcement Program) police officers increase their patrol of school zones.

Hendrie said that "within the resources available" the city is providing an adequate safety program. "We're not going to eliminate accidents," Hendrie said. "There's just so much that can be done as far as education is concerned."

Added Hendrie, "It's still the responsibility of the individual to obey the laws and follow the rules. Our job is to keep reminding them of the rules."

He said that enforcement of bicycle rules had been discussed at the last traffic commission meeting and that the group "encouraged the police department to enforce traffic law on bike riders as well as those in cars."

Hendrie added that while bicycle rider violators are ticketed, it is difficult for police officers to keep an eye on bike riders while attending to the regular flow of traffic.

He said that while young children cannot be ticketed for bicycle violations, he hopes that policemen might be able to "stop and warn a child if they see a dangerous mistake being made, and send the parents a letter pointing out what the kid was doing."

The death of Michael Shane Schwartzkopff last week was the third traffic fatality involving a public school student during school hours in the last 12 years, according to Bill Parker, director of pupil personnel for Lubbock public schools.

He said a number of students have been injured while riding their bikes to school, but "we've been fortunate to have relatively light injuries considering the number of children on the streets."

State Department Opposes New State

WASHINGTON (AP) -The State Department said Thursday it will not recognize the newly proclaimed independent black state of Venda which South Africa has created as part of its black homelands policy.

Department spokesman Hodding Carter said the new state was proclaimed "without reference to the wishes of the people in the area and does not constitute a viable solution" to South Africa's racial problems.

"Therefore, we oppose it," he said.

Venda, located in the northeast corner of South Africa, was declared an independent state on Wednesday. Transkei and Bophuthatswana were accorded similar status in 1976 and 1977, respectively. No country other than South Africa has recognized their existence.

South Africa eventually plans to divide itself into one white and 10 independent black states, with 87 percent of the total territory reserved for South Africa's minority white population.

NOTICE OF TAX INCREASE

The High Plains Underground Water Conservation District No. 1 Directors have unanimously voted to tentatively set the 1979 tax rate at 4.5 cents upon each $100 of assessed valuation. This is a decrease from the 1978 tax rate of 5.0 cents upon each $100 of assessed valuation. Because of increases in county assessed valuations and/or assessment ratios within Lynn, Armstrong, and Lamb Counties, This may result in an actual increase in taxes in three of the fifteen counties served by the Water District. You are therefore notified that the High Plains Underground Water Conservation District No. 1 proposes to increase property taxes in Lynn County by 56 percent, in Armstrong County by 60 percent, and in Lamb County by 31 percent.

A public hearing on these increases will be held on Thursday, September 20, 1979, at 5:15 p.m., at 2930 Avenue Q, Lubbock, Texas.

The High Plains Underground Water Conservation District No. 1 Board of Directors has considered the proposal and unanimously voted in a meeting of the Board as follows:

Melvin Jarboe, Board Vice President
James C. Conkwright, Board Secretary-Treasurer

INVESTORS' GUIDE

By BILL DOYLE

Q. How does a stock broker make a fee, when stock is sold without a commission? I had 170 shares of common stock of a well-known company. About seven months ago, that company offered more shares for sale. I contacted one of the brokerage firms handling the deal and bought 30 more shares. I paid the going market price of that stock. But I didn't pay a commission or any other charge.

A. You didn't, but that company did. Don't fret. The brokerage firm was well compensated for its efforts. The fee a brokerage house gets in a deal such as this is usually a good deal higher than normal stock commissions.

When a company wants to raise more money by selling additional shares of stock, it seldom tries to sell the stock directly to the investing public.

Instead, the company sells the stock to a group of brokerage firms acting as "investment bankers." Those firms then attempt to resell the stock to the public, at a somewhat higher price.

If things go smoothly and all the stock is sold, the firms in the investment banking "syndicate" show a nice profit for their efforts. That, however, is not guaranteed. When an offering such as this does not sell well, the investment bankers have to reduce the price at which they are selling the stock and take a financial bath.

You should see that investment bankers perform an important function in helping companies raise money. When acting as an investment banker, a brokerage firm puts in some extra effort — because its underwriting fee can be two, three or more times as large as regular commissions.

Q. I have $20,000 in cash that the government does not know about. I also have a $5,000 municipal bond. Can I use the cash and the municipal bond to buy high-interest, six-month savings certificates — without getting into trouble with the Internal Revenue Service?

A. You can always sell that municipal bond through any securities brokerage firm or bank and do whatever you want with the money from the sale. The same thing applies to the rest of your money. It's yours to use as you see fit.

What doesn't "fit" here, of course, is your use of the word "cash." I have to take that to mean currency — folding money. Anyone who has that kind of pile is suspect, as far as the IRS is concerned, and loose at the hinges, as far as I am concerned. That money should be put to work, earning more money. Savings certificates are a good choice.

If you put that cash into a savings certificate, the revenooers might learn about that bundle suddenly surfacing. They might not. If they do find out, you had better have a good explanation of where that money came from.

Q. A municipal bond I owned was called for redemption and paid off two years before its scheduled maturity date. I didn't learn about this until I submitted my next interest coupon for payment. That coupon was returned, with the notice that my bond had been called.

As a result, I lost six months' interest, plus a delay of two more months in getting the $5,000 principal of the bond. Didn't the securities dealer through which I bought that bond have a responsibility to inform me that it could be called? If not, how can I protect myself from this happening to other bonds I hold?

A. If you bought that bond when it was first sold to the public, the dealer should have given you an "offering circular" which spelled out all the details of that bond issue — including the possibility that it might be redeemed before maturity through the "call provision."

Once you took possession of the bond, that broker was off the hook. Some brokers do keep track of bond calls and alert customers. That kind of service, however, is above and beyond the call of brokers' duties.

To protect against this happening to your other "bearer" bonds, you'll have to keep tabs on each bond issue. The best way to do that is to read the bond reference manuals you'll find in brokerage offices and many public libraries.

Texas International Pondering TWA Purchase

NEW YORK (AP) — Texas International Airlines, which stunned the airline world and made $46 million by trying to take over National Airlines, disclosed Thursday it is interested in an even bigger carrier — Trans World Airlines.

Texas International, a Houston-based regional carrier, said it began talks with Trans World Corp., TWA's parent company, but that Trans World "indicated no desire to explore further Texas International's interest and no additional discussions are currently planned."

Trans World confirmed the statement, with Chairman Edwin Smart saying the company had "no interest" in selling the airline.

Despite Trans World's rebuff, Texas International said it purchased an unspecified amount of Trans World stock. It refused to say whether it will try to take over Trans World.

Trans World stock, which rose $2.125 Wednesday, added another $2 and was trading at $23.125 by midafternoon Thursday in New York Stock Exchange trading.

Texas International was up 12.5 cents to $11.125 in American Stock Exchange trading by mid-afternoon.

Texas International is a midget in comparison to TWA. It flew 1.6 billion revenue-passenger miles last year, far less than the 27 billion flown by TWA.

N-Plant Accident Film Banned For Filipinos

MANILA (AP) — The government censorship board has banned the American movie "The China Syndrome," the story of a nuclear power plant accident, until a special commission completes hearings on the safety of a proposed nuclear plant in the Philippines.

A board spokesman said the temporary ban was ordered at the request of Gabriel Y. Itchon, president of the government-run National Power Corp. In a letter to the board, the spokesman said, Itchon wrote, "The untimely release of the film may prejudice the dispassionate inquiry being conducted by the commission."

Caller Helps Solve Burglaries

A call to Crime Line Tuesday morning aided Lubbock police in solving as many as 15 soft-drink machine burglaries across the city.

An anonymous caller at 9:40 a.m. Tuesday told police about two men who had two sets of keys that supposedly would unlock all the Coca Cola machines in Lubbock. The informant told police the men were stealing money from soft drink machines on the Texas Tech University campus and throughout the city.

Police took two males, 20 and 22, into custody in connection with the buglaries. After questioning, the men admitted stealing the keys from the Coca Cola-Sprite Bottling Co., located at 6101 Ave. A, and burglarizing as many as 15 machines.

The keys to the machines were recovered from a trash dumpster in a alley behind 2624 E. Cornell.

Reports indicate that Rodney Wilson, a sales representative with the Coca Cola, told police Aug. 24 that the keys has been stolen from a desk drawer in his office at the bottling plant Aug. 22.

The men stole $810.62 from five machines on the Texas Tech campus and 10 machines located in motels throughout the city, reports indicate.

A married couple living in South Lubbock received an offer Wednesday morning which they decided they could refuse.

It was a lettered invitation to join the "Friendship Club," with regular meetings held weekly. The letter stated that the agenda at each meeting would include "several hours of swinging sex."

And it would have been so easy to sign up. No forms to fill out or dues to pay. All the couple was instructed to do, if interested, was to hang out a bright-colored cloth in a window facing the street in front of their house by 9 a.m. Thursday.

The letter also stated that if couples could not attend regular meetings, some members would be free during the day.

While the offer probably would be attractive to some lonely hearts, this couple decided not to join and was a little incensed they got the invitation to begin with. They called police.

The 34-year-old housewife said the letter came in the mail about 11:45 a.m. Wednesday, and the postmark showed it was mailed the day before in Lubbock. The invitation was typed, lacked any names and was signed only "Friendship Club."

The report made Wednesday by the couple was classified by police as 'harassment.' However, a police official said the invitation sent in the mail actually was not a criminal offense.

A Lubbock woman said she was tied, gagged and raped about 1:40 a.m. Thursday by a knife-wielding man wearing a red blanket around his head.

The 23-year-old restaurant employee said she awoke to find the man standing at the end of her bed. The man reportedly told the woman not to move or, "I'll cut you with this (a knife.)"

The woman told police the man turned his back and she attempted to jump out of bed, but that the intruder grabbed her and cut her slightly on the finger.

Reports indicate the man used some of the victim's T-shirts to tie and gag her before raping her. After the assault, police were told, the man grabbed the woman's purse containing $100 and fled through the front door of the southeast Lubbock residence. Police suspect the rapist entered the home through a living room window.

The rapist was described as a white man, between 26 and 35, and about 5 feet 10 inches tall.

In other activity, police shortly after 2 a.m. Thursday arrested an alleged burglar inside a business at 2210 Fourth Street.

Officers, dispatched on an alarm down at the business, said they found the 18-year-old male suspect hiding behind a large box in a storage room. The man, who was thought to have gained entry by climbing through an air conditioner vent on the roof, was taken to the county jail.

Judge To Decide Man's Punishment

Gregory Sanchez has waived his right to have punishment for his attempted murder conviction assessed by the jury. Instead, District Judge Thomas L. Clinton will set the punishment for Sanchez, probably within two weeks.

Sanchez was convicted Wednesday of attempted murder in connection with the April 15 shooting of cab driver Hank Eugene Dubey.

The 17-year-old defendant, of 2124 Ave. V, surrendered to sheriff's deputies five days after the shooting incident, which left Dubey hospitalized with three gunshot wounds.

Dubey, 28, of 1615 29th St. was shot about 10:30 p.m. April 15 after he had stopped his cab about two miles east of Loop 289 on 19th Street at the request of his passenger. Dubey Wednesday identified Sanchez as the passenger that night.

Flights Granted For Airlines

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Civil Aeronautics Board Thursday granted two airlines temporary authority to serve Shannon, Ireland, from U.S. cities to fill a void left by Trans World Airlines' withdrawal from the market.

On Oct. 28, the day TWA is dropping its Shannon flights, the CAB said Trans International Airlines can begin flying scheduled service to Ireland from New York and Newark. On Jan. 1, the carrier can begin serving the Irish city from Boston.

Also on Jan. 1, the board said World Airways can start flying to Shannon from New York, Newark, Chicago and Detroit.

TWA presently is the only U.S. carrier providing scheduled service to Shannon.

Man Charged In Death

A 37-year-old man was in the county jail this morning charged with the July 15 murder of Jesse B. Ramirez, 27, in front of Lorenzo's Gameroom at 4505 E. Fourth St.

After two months of investigation, authorities charged Elias Rangel Jr. of 7504 Ave. H, Lot 88, with the shooting death of Ramirez. The suspect was taken into custody about 11:45 p.m. Tuesday on a perjury charge.

The charge was later changed to murder after Rangel reportedly gave a statement to sheriff's deputy Sonny Keesee and Texas Ranger Joe Hunt concerning the shooting death of Ramirez, of 3111 Itasca St.

Rangel remained in the county jail Thursday and the district attorney's office has recommended a $25,000 bond.

The suspect said he and a friend were at the club about 3 a.m. July 15 when they saw Ramirez, who reportedly had been involved in past disputes with the suspect's family.

Rangel said he was walking back to his pickup truck after seeing Ramirez get a pistol from one of his relatives. Rangel said he was reaching for a shotgun when Ramirez fired a shot at him.

The suspect said that while he held his weapon Ramirez fired two more shots at him. Rangel said he then fired one shot and saw Ramirez fall at the club entrance.

Reports indicate Ramirez was pulled into the club and more gunfire was exchanged between the suspect and club patrons before Rangel drove off.

Ramirez was killed by a single gun shot wound in the right shoulder. The man was pronounced dead at the scene by Justice of the Peace Wayne LeCroy, who ruled the death the county's eighth homicide of the year.

Preliminary reports indicate the suspect walked into the gameroom, quickly circling it inside, then went outside. Ramirez reportedly then stepped out and was shot.

Deputies said the suspect also fired at the plate glass windows before leaving in a light-colored vehicle.

One witness said the door barely had shut behind Ramirez when he heard the first shots fired.

Missing Student Genius Found Alive

EAST LANSING, Mich. (AP) — A 16-year-old student genius missing for nearly a month and feared dead through a mishap in an elaborate intellectual game has been found alive and well, the boy's family said Thursday night.

James Dallas Egbert III, a computer science student from Dayton, Ohio, with an IQ measured at 145, was last seen Aug. 15 at the cafeteria in the Michigan State University dormitory where he lived.

There had been speculation that Egbert's disappearance might have been connected with a bizarre attempt to act out an intellectual game called "Dungeons and Dragons." A tunnel system beneath the campus was searched on the theory that it had been used as a maze.

It was also feared that Egbert died — possibly trapped in the winding tunnels — sometime after his mysterious disappearance.

Former NATO Chief Haig To Speak Here

By JOE GULICK
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Gen. Alexander M. Haig Jr. will be the principal speaker at the annual banquet of the Lubbock Chamber of Commerce at 7 p.m. Sept. 28 in Lubbock Memorial Civic Center. The announcement was made at Thursday's meeting of the chamber board of directors.

Haig, former Supreme Allied Commander of European Operations and the North Atlantic Treaty Organization, follows two other notable chamber banquet speakers. The 1977 banquet featured former President Gerald R. Ford and the 1978 event offered former Secretary of State Henry Kissinger.

Haig will be introduced by U.S. Rep. Kent Hance. Retiring chamber president Tim Hatch will be recognized and incoming chamber officers will be officially recognized.

Haig retired from the military service on June 30, 1979, after a distinguished career which also included service as White House Chief of Staff. Late in August, he was elected to the board of Texas Instruments.

Tickets for the event went on sale Thursday at the Chamber of Commerce for $12.50 each on a first come, first served basis.

The board of directors is planning a reception for Haig before the banquet.

In other action at Thursday's meeting, the directors discussed Secretary of Agriculture Bob Bergland's visit to the area next week. Bergland is coming at the invitation of Rep. Hance to inspect crop damage in the area. The directors made plans to meet with Bergland at a breakfast reception Sept. 20.

The directors also supported the proposed location for the new central station of the U.S. Postal Service. The proposed site, near the intersection of Avenue L and Fourth Street, has met with approval so far from the Postal Service and City Hall, according to Bob Messersmith, chairman of the urban rehabilitation committee. a

The directors decided to check with the members about a possible bus tour to Amarillo to visit a coal-burning electrical generating plant of Southwestern Public Service Company there.

SURPLUS SANCTUARY — The 7,319-square foot chapel which once served Webb Air Force Base at Big Spring has been put on the market by the General Services Administration as surplus government property. The purchaser, who will be selected at the Washington level from buyer applications submitted by Sept. 27 to the GSA Fort Worth officer, also will buy 1.33 acres of land. The building must be used for religious purposes, but it may be moved from the land and the land used for any purpose. Invitations to purchase the former air base property may be obtained from Ray Baldwin, real estate officer at Reese Air Force Base, and may be inspected by contacting Frank Perry, assistant manager of the Big Spring Industrial Park. Soviet Mission In Cuba Baffles Officials

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Carter administration said Thursday it is not trying to get out of the crisis raised by the presence of Soviet troops in Cuba by contending the Russians are part of a training brigade.

But officials within the administration acknowledged that no one really knows the mission of the 2,000 to 3,000 troops, whose presence has become a major issue threatening to defeat ratification of the SALT II treaty.

One knowledgable source, who asked anonymity, said it seemed possible that the Soviet brigade's mission included demonstrating large-scale tactics to Cuban soldiers.

The argument arose on Wednesday when a senior State Department official, lunching with a small group of reporters, mentioned the training mission as one explanation for the presence of the troops.

Reports of the conversation appeared in Thursday morning newspapers. State Department spokesman Hodding Carter insisted that the administration is not trying to float a "trial balloon" with the story, seeing how the public and Congress would react.

But Sen. Henry Jackson, D-Wash., accused the administration of planning to "rationalize" the troop presence, an effort he said "would not hold water."

"If they write it off as a training brigade, it will go over like a lead balloon," Jackson said.

And Senate Republican Leader Howard Baker of Tennessee said he has seen no evidence to suggest the Soviet troops have had any contact with Cuban forces, which would be necessary if the Russians are on a training mission.

Baker also said "time is running out" for President Carter to take a firm stand on the presence of the Soviets in Cuba. Baker, an unannounced candidate for the Republican presidential nomination, said at a news conference that he told the president last week that the Russians are testing him and that he should respond promptly.

The Soviets, on the other hand, have insisted that the troops are advisers and that they have a right to be in Cuba.

Phone Company Changes Phone Numbers

SAN DIEGO (UPI) — It's enough to make a person think that absent-mindedness has set in — you dial what you think is your home phone and you get a wrong number instead.

Not to worry. The fault was not with their memories, but with the mailing room of Pacific Telephone.

As part of a county-wide project intended to improve service, the company changed the phone numbers of some 650 residents in San Diego's Pacific Beach area Wednesday.

There was a problem. The company didn't tell the customers their numbers were being changed.

"It's one giant screw-up," a phone company employee conceded.

"I'll be damned if I know how it happened."

A Pacific Telephone spokesman blamed the mishap on the breakdown of the company's postage machine.

"We were supposed to mail out the final notices telling people their new numbers and about the change, but the letters couldn't be posted.

"A decision was made somewhere down the line to go with the changes anyway."

The spokesman added that phone company employees were working overtime Thursday to mail the notices.

Coast Anglers Sue Clements'Company

HOUSTON (UPI) — A lawyer Thursday filed a class action suit seeking $155 million for Texas shrimp, crab and oyster fishermen from Mexico's national oil company and Dallas-based SEDCO, the drilling firm founded by Gov. William P. Clements and owner of the rig involved in history's worst oil spill.

Joe D. Jamail Jr. said the suit "may bring home our midget governor from Yugoslavia" to answer questions in a deposition for Jamail's response to SEDCO's efforts to limit its liability in the Gulf of Mexico disaster.

Clements, who said the spill was a "big to-do about nothing" after touring Texas' polluted beaches last month, has been in eastern Europe on a trade mission.

Clements' business interests have been placed in a trust, and, although he no longer serves as a SEDCO executive, he has openly discussed details of the Mexican lease arrangement while refusing to pursue legal action against Mexico on behalf of Texas.

SEDCO Tuesday asked U.S. District Judge Robert O'Conor to absolve it of blame for any damages in the June 3 blowout of the IXTOC I rig and said in lieu of that, O'Conor should restrict its liability to $300,000.

Clements repeatedly has said SEDCO received $20 million in an insurance settlement on the rig which was towed far from the Mexican coast and sunk in 8,000 feet of water.

"Isn't that amazing that the major piece of evidence in the hands of the people who would be sued is destroyed?" Jamail said. "But I don't think we're going to let them get away with that. I don't need it (the rig) now. The action speaks for itself. Why do it if you did not have something to hide?"

Named as defendants with SEDCO were PEMEX, the Mexican oil monopoly, and Pemargo, described as the private drilling contractor with whom SEDCO had its lease.

Jamail said the damages sought would be at least $155 million based upon the best figures available for the worth of the seafood harvest.

"Both the Mexican government and SEDCO and Pemex are jointly responsible for what occurred," he said.

SEDCO Action Cited

"This (suit) was occasioned because SEDCO attempted to limit its responsibility and because of the arrogance of the Mexican government through its elected officials. Their absolute denial and refusal to assist in the cleanup forced the people to do something to protect their interests."

Jamail criticized Clements, saying the governor was comfortable in the governor's mansion or "high and dry in Dallas (his hometown) and doesn't have to make a living out in that water."

Attorney General Mark White said Wednesday SEDCO's petition to limit its liabilities would force him to go to court against the drilling company and possibly PEMEX.

"Suspicions" Raised

"They ran when nobody was chasing them," White said of SEDCO. "It appears they must sense something's wrong."

White said the sinking of the rig raised "strong suspicions that their prior acts were merely an attempt to destroy evidence."

SEDCO attorney Stephen C. Mahood said insurance adjusters and Mexican authorities examined the rig before it was sunk.

"It sat there for five weeks," he said. "We were spending $16,000 to $18,000 every day keeping tugs tied up to the vessel and making sure it did not get loose.

"SEDCO didn't destroy any evidence."

Future Traffic Woes Pondered By Council

bock's signal timing system to a more sophisticated digital computer system.

If the study shows Lubbock could expect a 15 to 20 percent improvement in traffic movement. Bertram said the approximately $3 million price tag for a digital computer system "may be a bargain" — particularly if no freeway is built.

Council members were less than enthusiastic about Bertram's recommendations, with Councilwoman Carolyn Jordan commenting, "I don't think we have traffic problems like other cities."

However, Councilman Bill McAlister recommended following Bertram's suggestions. "Let's get on with it," he said.

The council also approved implementing many of the recommendations for short range improvement at the city's major intersections as suggested in the traffic study.

One change which will affect all major intersections is an increase in the clearance times, or the time the yellow caution light remains on.

This will be implemented on a trial basis while city officials attempt to determine whether traffic movement is substantially slowed.

Signal Proposal Okayed

The council also approved the recommendation that traffic signals at 26 intersections be replaced with stop signs and additional signals be studied to see if they are needed.

However, the signals cannot be removed and used elsewhere unless the Federal Highway Administration and state highway department concur.

Another recommendation that 15th and 16th Streets be changed from one-way to two-way will be implemented in stages.

The conversion of 16th Street can be done immediately, but lane markings and signal modifications are needed on 15th Street.

New Dispute Sparked By Bible Gifts

an individual request."

The issue of religion in Lubbock public schools was the subject of hot debate earlier this year when the American Civil Liberties Union requested that the school board ban school-sponsored prayer. The board adopted a pro-prayer policy instead, allowing student-inititated religious activity in the schools.

The policy states that school employees, however, could not "compose, prescribe or place his/her approval upon any particular prayer or form of religious activity."

But Leslie contends allowing the distribution of Gideon bibles in the schools does not violate school board prayer policy because "we're leaving it to the student. They're not having it forced upon them."

Controversy over Gideon bibles in the schools also flared in Dallas earlier this year when the ACLU there threatened to file suit over distribution of religious materials by the Gideons in the Dallas Independent School District. The threat to sue became a moot point in February, however, when the Gideons wrote the school district superintendent that they would no longer make their bibles available in the schools.

Denzil Bailey, president of the Lubbock Gideon group, says he has never received any complaints about Gideon materials in the schools. He said he sees no problem with the practice. "It's a free country. If a child wants a bible, it's there for the asking."

Smog Sweeps L.A. Area

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Scores of people checked into hospitals with respiratory problems Thursday as Southern California choked and wept for the seventh straight day under a dirty yellow blanket of the worst smog in 25 years.

Air qulity officials issued "hazardous" air warnings for six areas — the first time this has ever been done. Hospitals in the hard-hit San Fernando and San Gabriel valleys reported increases of up to 50 percent in the number of patients showing up with chronic lung diseases severely aggravated by the smog. And Friday's pollution was expected to be even worse.

Also for the first time in history, the Air Quality Management District asked all businesses, regardless of the number of employees, to begin voluntary car pooling. However, state highway officials said there was no significant decrease in freeway commuter traffic.

Aggravating the eye-stinging, stale-smelling haze was a raging brush fire near Mount Wilson north of the city, which sent clouds of brown smoke and soot over the entire area.

In addition, temperatures were reaching into the 100s in many sections, high humidity continued to grip the area.

Six-Year Term Given Driver

COLORADO CITY (AP) — The same jury that convicted William Clarence Dixon of involuntary manslaughter in the death of four students killed in a school bus-truck collision assessed a sentence Thursday of six years in prison.

Before State District Judge Weldon Kirk read the verdict, Dixon sat at the defense table, his eyes closed and his hands folded as if in prayer. He showed no emotion when the verdict was read but looked back at his wife, Pam, who was fighting to hold back tears.

Kirk set the date for formal sentencing on Sept. 28.

Dixon has 10 days to apply for a new trial.

Jurors deliberated about four hours Wednesday before convicting Dixon, who was the driver of a truck that struck a bus carrying the boys' and girls' McCaulley High Scool basketball teams to a tournament last December.

The indictment accused him of causing the deaths by failing to stop at a stop sign near Roby where the accident occurred at a rural West Texas intersection.

Welfare Revision Voted By Panel

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House Ways and Means Committee approved a major welfare revision bill Thursday that for the first time would require that a minimum monthly benefit be offered in every state.

The legislation also moves toward a greater federal role in welfare and requires that states offer benefits to two-parent families with children, as long as one parent is jobless. That latter provision is designed to correct a part of current law that gives some couples an incentive to break up their marriages in order to collect welfare benefits for their children.

The bill, a version of the one proposed by President Carter, was accepted on a 21-14 vote. All 11 Republican members who voted opposed the measure, as did Democratic Reps. J.J. Pickle of Texas, James Jones of Oklahoma and Ed Jenkins of Georgia.

Storm Helps Spill Fight

Frederic's storm system should continue to keep the oil moving southward, away from the Texas coast.

Southerly currents have weakened recently, but Wood said that they "don't anticipate reversal at this time."

Wood said helicopter flights and onshore geologists discovered the new patches of film and tarballs on Wednesday.

At least 10 sites were to be checked Thursday to assess the new globs' impact on beach and animal life, said Roger Meacham of the federal team monitoring the world's largest oil spill.

The Environmental Protection Agency plans to start checking Texas oyster beds for oil levels from the spill. Meacham said all seafood headed for market is safe from contamination.

The state highway department trucked 31 loads of bagged oil and debris to a Robstown sanitary landfill Wednesday. The plastic bags had been temporarily stored on Mustang and Padre islands as work crews removed oil from the popular beaches.

The oil has traveled 500 miles from a blown-out Mexican well off the Yucatan Peninsula. Engineers expect to stem the flow sometime next month.

Meacham said two washovers — low-lying areas filled with seawater from high tides — on Padre Island were seen south of Brazos Santiago Pass.

Asked about the recovery rate of area beaches, Dr. Maynard said it was too soon to comment since data was still being analyzed.

Meacham said 140 workers are beach cleaning at Boca Chica near the Mexican border.

The EPA's ocean survey vessel Antelope will return Monday to its regular mission of surveying ocean disposal sites and NOAA's ship, the Researcher, will begin oil spill surveillance activities in American and Mexican waters next week.

FREDERIC'S FOLLY — Winds from Hurricane Frederic ripped a hole in the side of this large building in Mobile, Ala., Thursdzay morning. Streets were flooded and most residents were without power due to the fury of the storm. (AP Laserphoto) millions of dollars, but they would not offer estimates.

Damage Mounts In Coast Storm

Pascagoula, Miss., a shipbuilding city of about 28,000 residents 30 miles to the west, appeared the hardest hit.

"I would say there is not a dwelling, business or any other building in Jackson County that does not have damage ranging from minor to total destruction," said Ken Phillips, director of disaster relief in Pascagoula.

Florida Gov. Bob Graham estimated that damage in the Florida Panhandle area between Panama City and Pensacola would exceed the $95 million in wreckage left by Hurricane David on the East Coast two weeks ago. Mississippi Gov. Cliff Finch put the damage in his state at more than $50 million.

Officials credited the low number of casualities to the fact that hundreds of thousands of people heeded the call to evacuate. In 1969, more than 250 people died when Hurricane Camille stormed ashore near Gulfport, Miss.

Smashes Into Island

Frederic, with 130 mph winds at top strength, smashed ashore at Dauphin Island late Wednesday, cutting two or three channels through the narrow resort islet. It pushed northward along the Alabama-Mississippi line. Though 25 people had refused to leave Dauphin Island, only one was reported injured.

Scattered looting broke out with the dawn, and Mayor A.J. Cooper of Prichard, a suburb of 50,000, instructed police to fire two warning shots at looters, then "shoot to kill."

Restaurant Destroyed

Power was cut off to all 160,000 people in the Mobile area. A power company official estimated that it would take several weeks to restore full service.

The hurricane ripped the cupola from the top of Mobile City Hall, built in the 1800s, and damaged the roof of the Mobile Airport terminal. A DC-3 airplane parked at the airport was blown through a chain-link fence onto a nearby boulevard.

While the hurricane caused widespread problems along the Mississippi, Alabama and Florida Gulf Coasts, it gave a hand to a federal task force fighting the world's largest oil spill on the Texas coast.

High tides and surging waves kicked up by Frederic are lifting tar balls and other bits of crude oil which has spewed from a Mexican oil well high up onto sand dunes, away from feeding areas of intertidal zones.

Many who dared to brave the storm's 130 mph winds and high tides said "never again."

"The floor raised up and the roof tore off, and we started praying," recalled Mrs. Betty Trehern, her voice trembling. I'll never stay through another hurricane, I'll tell you that."

Mrs. Trehern and 15 other members of her family cringed in a small motel room as the hurricane howled outside, tearing the building apart bit by bit.

"Grandpa couldn't be moved because he's 95 years old," said Mrs. Trehern. Also in the TraveLodge room were two infants and the family cat and dog.

By Wednesday morning, only parts of the motel on U.S. 90 were still standing. The Treherns and others staying at the motel mostly were employees or relatives of employees, all seeking overnight refuge from the nastiest hurricane to hit the Gulf Coast since Camille in 1969.

In Gautier, just west of Pascagoula, Marvin and Mary Steele cringed with others in the Jackson County Junior College gymnasium.

"You'd have a moment of rain and then there was a pounding like 'I'm going to rip this wall down!'," said Mrs. Steele, manager of a trading stamp redemption center that was heavily damaged.

"You could hear gravel blowing off the roof and busting the windshields of cars," said her husband. "When a door blew open, it took 10 men to close it."

A.C. Givens rode out Frederic at home with his wife and seven other family members. Never again, he said.

"I'm pushing my luck too much," said Givens, who also waited at home through terrible hurricanes in 1947, Betsy in 1965 and Camille in 1969.

For the next storm, Givens said, "I'm going to get the devil out of the country and get away from those winds."

In the restaurant of the Pascagula motel 30 others spent most of the night hiding under tables, dodging glass shards and other debris.

residents opposing restrictions imposed on home remodeling and repair which would become effective with the designation.

Gene Blackburn told commission members, "I don't need any more big brothers helping me run my business."

Several onwers of property inside the boundaries and near the proposed district voiced concern over a lack of knowledge of the restrictions and ordinances which may be included with the Design Historic designation.

"How can we decide what's good and what's not good if we don't know what the rules are going to be in the final ball game?" Overton South resident Bob Hunter asked, drawing a round of applause from the audience.

Ken Abraham, who owns property at University Avenue and 14th Street, told the commission that "someone is trying to change my property into something I don't want. Let us (business owners) have the same rights and maintain our own property on our own intiative."

But while most businesses areas near the proposed district said the district would hinder commercial progress, members of the Overton South Neighborhood Association (OSNA), as well as representatives from the League of Women Voters and UNIT Neighborhood Association said the district "will make Lubbock progressive."

Roger Loter, chairman of OSNA, said the Overton South area offered valuable aesthetics and a "total picture of Lubbock's history."

Loter said the more than 70-year-old neighborhood "could give Lubbock a heritage many cities have denied their children and grandchildren."

After listening to arguments from both sides, including requests that some property inside the proposed district be omitted from the designation, commission members spoke in favor of the district.

"I am in favor of the district, but not the Swiss Cheese version," said Carolyn Moegle, "but I want to take a closer look at the restrictions."

At the close of the meeting, Ratliff told the audience that the commission would work out details on what historic or architectural landmarks would be designated within the district and restrictions and standards to be imposed if the district is designated. He said special attention would be given to the outlining boundaries, the most controversial issue of Thursday's meeting.

October Proposal Planned

If the commission approves the designation, its recommendation will go before the City Council in October for final approval.

The designation would not prohibit commercial property within the district, but structures would have to meet certain design standards set for the district.

Remodeling on property within the district also would be limited, including the 11 structures proposed as historic landmarks.

The neighborhood also has requested that existing brick streets, ornamental street lights, ornamental fire hydrants, street trees in parkways and WPA signs on curbs be recognized as historical landmarks.

House Stands Firm On Nuclear Carrier

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House, rejecting a veto threat from President Carter, stood firm Thursday in its demand for a fifth nuclear aircraft carrier.

On a 309-96 vote, the House rejected an amendment that would have deleted $2.1 billion for the nuclear carrier from a $41.4 billion military authorization bill and insert instead $1.8 billion for a compromise oil-fueled carrier.

The House voted for the nuclear carrier despite a warning in a letter from Secretary of Defense Harold S. Brown that Carter would likely veto funds for a nuclear carrier, although he would accept an oil-fueled carrier.

School Of Nursing Backed For Federal Fund Grant

nium was optimistic.

However, health systems staff member Judy Atcheson said she talked to the governor's office this week and was told, "The governor has not substantially changed his opinion."

With that in mind, one member asked Dr. Langford why the group should endorse a federal grant for a school that might not receive state money in the next biennium either. Federal funds are normally used to supplement budgets, rather than being the sole source of money.

Dr. Langford said it will be January at the earliest and possibly June 1980 before HEW approves or rejects the request. And she noted it is possible for HEW to approve the program, but not have funds available. In that case, the project would go onto a waiting list for funds. The process could take a year. "At that time, we'll have a better idea of state funding and whether to accept this grant or not," she said.

In addition to funding curriculum planning and equipment for a training lab, the HEW money would also be used for continuing education for nurses in the area.

Dr. Langford said it is difficult to say whether HEW will approve the request. There are other applicants, but the national emphasis on rural area health needs may help Tech's application. On a scale of one to 10, Dr. Langford said of Tech's chances for approval; "Somewhere around five."

YOUNG WELCOMED

YAOUNDE, Cameroon (AP) — Andrew Young arrived Thursday in Cameroon to the warmest welcome yet on his last African tour as U.S. ambassador to the United Nations. Hundreds of persons greeted Young at the port city of Douala, where he and his delegation of businessmen changed planes, and thousands later lined the hilly streets of this interior capital.

Misdirected Drug Raid Damages Granted

erations in the case about 10:30 a.m. Thursday after hearing final arguments.

Plaintiffs' attorney John Mann told the panel, "I don't believe this is the kind of conduct we can afford to tolerate from our government. Has our government gotten so big they can walk around and treat us like this? Tell the government 'no.'"

Mann added that although testimony indicated Mrs. Hooks had been mistaken about which officer had tried to pull the blanket off her the morning they entered her bedroom, the mistaken identity of the officer did not detract from the action.

And, Mann, pointed out to the jury, the court's charge on how to consider evidence states that the panel need not find each officer who participated in the raid guilty of wanton behavior; they are to consider each defendant's actions individually.

The Amarillo attorney also noted that while two of the narcotics agents, who were wearing plainclothes the morning of the raid, said they were preceded by a uniformed Plainview officer carrying the warrant, the uniformed officer testified he was the fourth person to enter the residence.

In asking the jury to award $1,000 in actual damages and $60,000 for each of the five defendants in punitive damages, Mann said the jury should tell the officers, "Don't teach us to fear the law."

Defense counsel Joe Harlan, representing Patterson and Ivy, however pointed out that in the charge, it is noted that officers can use force in executing a search warrant when the officers reasonably believe such force is necessary for their protection.

And Harlan added that negligence of the officers is not to be considered by the panel, according to the charge.

"The mere fact that they could have done more to ensure the search of the proper apartment doesn't mean they acted in bad faith," Harlan said. "The burden of proof is on the plaintiffs. In the charge you are told a peace officer doesn't have to be right 100 percent of the time, he just has to reasonably believe that a suspect is in an apartment and can take such measures he thinks necessary to neutralize the believed harm."

Charles White, who represents the remaining defendants, Noblett, Gillespie and Clifton, reminded the panel of U.S. District Judge Halbert O. Woodward's ruling that the search warrant used by the officers 3 1/2 years ago was valid.

The only way the panel could find the officers acted in bad faith in executing the warrant, White said, was if the jurors determined fraud had been employed in gaining the warrant.

City Council Leaves Tax Valuation Unchanged

By SYLVIA TEAGUE
Avalanche-Journal Staff

The Lubbock City Council approved a $28.4 million general fund budget Thursday and left last year's $1.12 per $100 valuation tax rate unchanged.

At a public hearing on the budget, discussion centered on $25,000 earmarked to hire a person to promote the Civic Center and other city facilities.

Representatives of the hotel-motel association and the restaurant association urged the council not to spend the money and wait to see how operation of the Convention and Tourism Bureau by the Chamber of Commerce next year goes.

Ray Chapman, chairman of the board of the Lubbock Hotel-Motel Association, said the money allocated to hire the promotional person could better be spent by increasing funds to the Convention and Tourism Bureau.

"The money could better be used elsewhere," Chapman said, or the council should "hold up a year and see where we are."

Recently the council decided to turn operation of the Convention and Tourism Bureau over to the Chamber for the coming year and to hire a person to promote city facilities to insure they are adequately used.

Councilman Bill McAlister explained, "It was a feeling on the part of the council we have a duty and responsibility to see the civic center used as much of the time as possible."

Council members did agree not to fill the promotion position until further discussion on what the employees' responsibilities would be.

All council members but Bud Aderton voted in favor of that motion.

Also speaking on the budget was Robert Reithel, manager of employee relations at Johnson Manufacturing, who asked that a bus route be approved to benefit employees of the business.

However council members said they would prefer to eliminate an unprofitable route and substitute the route by Johnson Manufacturing rather than simply adding a new route.

The budget hearing was a marked contrast to hearings on the budget last year, Mayor Dirk West noted. Last year, in the heat of the tax revolt, the council held hearings all day and into the night before adopting a budget.

Council also held a public hearing on the use of $2.7 million federal revenue sharing funds next year.

The only new request to emerge at the hearing was that of Walter Ahrens, executive director of the Lubbock chapter of the Red Cross.

Ahrens asked that more than $53,000 be allocated for the Red Cross to purchase emergency equipment and to "enhance our disaster capability."

However council members questioned allocating the federal funds to such a nonprofit corporation and did not include the Red Cross request in the revenue sharing budget.

Under the revenue sharing budget approved by the council, parks projects in the amount of $519,000 would be funded.

Included in that amount is the replacement of irrigation systems in five city parks, the development of two south Lubbock parks (Jan Jennings and N.B. McCullough), surfacing tennis, volleyball and basketball courts in five parks and drilling wells in Higginbotham and Maxey parks to provide irrigation water.

Nearly $461,000 is earmarked for traffic engineering projects, most of which are improvements suggested in a recently completed study of Lubbock traffic conditions.

Other projects to be funded are a feasibility study on the use of municipal solid waste as a fuel to generate electricity, completion of a new branch library at Quaker Avenue and South Loop 289, and the purchase of 14 more "crime eye" cameras to deter armed robberies.

Council members learned they may have some recourse in solving the water problems of residents in the recently annexed Yellowhouse Canyon Addition.

City Manager Larry Cunningham said the council should set a public hearing for residents to formally present their complaints about the privately owned water system and allow the system owner to defend his performance.

Residents of the neighborhood have said they are forced to go without water for days at a time and when the water is on, the pressure prevents them even from operating an automatic washing machine.

At the public hearing, Cunningham said the council can "find out if the owner is going to take care of the problems."

If the service is not improved, the city would be in a legal position to either take over the system or force the owner to sell it.

Attempts by the city to purchase only the distribution part of the system met with failure when the owner refused to sell a portion of the system.

Cunningham estimated the system is worth about $33,000 for production and distribution facilities and said it would cost the city about $75,000 "to put in a duplicate distribution system."

Council members agreed the hearing should be held at "the earliest possible date," and it will be scheduled either for Sept. 27 or Oct. 11.

Theron Cole, Human Relations Commission chairman, presented five alternatives from the commission on how representation on the Board of City Development can be broadened.

Cole said a resolution adopted by the council in 1965 states BCD nominees should be representative of all geographic areas and industries in the city, but the board includes no representation from North or East Lubbock.

In addition, Cole said small businessmen are excluded from the board in favor of those with "extensive holdings and people of means."

The suggestions from the commission include:

- Separating the membership of the BCD and the Chamber of Commerce board of directors and having the council name members of the BCD.
- Have the chamber and council each appoint a certain number of members to the BCD.
- Determine the percentage of the BCD budget which comes from city taxes and have the council appoint that percentage of the BCD membership.

Cole said this is a good time for the council to consider changing how BCD members are selected because the terms of five members expire in January.

The council took the recommendations under advisement.

Also at the meeting the council:

- Approved an application for $50,000 in unbudgeted Criminal Justice funds for a crime prevention program in Lubbock.
- Approved a $10,000 budget supplement for a stepped-up weed control program now in progress.
- Amended the current food sanitation ordinance to include food processing facilities.
- Designated a portion of the Canyon Lakes as the Estebanico Historical Area.

FBI Informant Testimony Continues

FORT WORTH (AP) — Informant David McCrory testified Thursday he flirted with the idea of buying his way out of mass murder negotiations with oil heir Cullen Davis.

The burly prosecution witness said he took $4,400 to a pivotal August 1978 meeting with Davis and considered turning it over to the millionaire defendant.

"It was just something I thought might get me out of this case," McCrory told the jury in Davis' murder solicitation trial.

"You didn't abandon the plan, you just didn't implement it?" asked a skeptical defense attorney on cross-examination.

"Yes, sir," McCrory replied.

Instead of surrendering the money, McCrory activated an FBI tape recorder concealed beneath his clothing and discussed with Davis the contract murders of his divorce judge and others.

Two days later, after a similar parking lot rendezvous, officers seized the 45-year-old industrialist and charged him with soliciting the murder of Judge Joe Eidson.

Davis insists he was framed.

McCrory, 41, said the $4,400 was the residue of $5,000 Davis gave him in the spring of 1978 to conduct surveillence activities on Judge Eidson and others.

It was in the ensuing months, McCrory contends, that Davis expanded the investigative activities to include the contract killing of 15 persons.

In July 1978, McCrory said, Davis sent him to Las Vegas to "launder" $50,000 in $100 bills. He said he frittered away some of the money gambling and stole $5,000 upon his return.

Defense lawyer Richard Haynes asked McCrory why he considered returning only $4,400 to Davis.

"Cullen didn't know I'd stolen the $5,000. He thought I'd lost it gambling," McCrory said.

McCrory said he told FBI agents just prior to the Aug. 18 meeting he might hand over the $4,400 and simply tell Davis he wanted out.

"I thought maybe if I took the money and gave it back and told him I didn't want to have anything to do with it...he might let me out," he testified.

He said the agents neither encouraged nor discouraged the idea.

"I wasn't told what to say, or what to do, or how to act," McCrory said. "There wasn't any plan...just play it by ear and see what happens."

In a voice dripping with sarcasm, Haynes asked McCrory if he intended to merely tell Davis "here's $4,400 of your money back, Cullen, I want out of the deal."

McCrory said that was correct.

During a recess, Davis told newsmen jokingly: "I guess I'll let him give it back to me and we'll call it square."

Murder Charge Dropped Against Deaf Mute; Education Begins

DALLAS (AP) — When Jerome Fisher was held for the murder of a prostitute, the 28-year-old deaf mute found his world reduced and confused more than ever.

But Thursday life brightened for the uneducated Fisher. After a two-month investigation, a grand jury found it had insufficient evidence for prosecution. And as a result of his legal troubles, Fisher is now enrolled in classes to help him communicate.

Fisher was arrested July 14 for the death of Dorothy Armstrong, whose body was found in a running shower in the Uptown Motel No. 1, a run-down motel in south Dallas. She was fully clothed and had a bedsheet wrapped tightly around her neck. A medical examiner ruled death by strangulation.

Another prostitute present that night and the motel clerk identified Fisher as the man who entered the room with Miss Armstrong. Fisher was seen several blocks away the next night, and after police were alerted by the motel owner, he was jailed in lieu of $25,000 bond.

At a preliminary hearing before state District Judge James B. Zimmerman it quickly became evident that Fisher was unable to communicate, even with interpreters skilled in the use of sign language, lip reading and hand-spelling.

Fisher wept at the hearing in Zimmerman's court when teachers from the Deaf Action Center in Dallas were unable to explain his constitutional rights.

The judge ordered Fisher to start an education program that he could later understand his court proceedings.

Zimmerman reduced Fisher's bond to $5,000 and he was released Aug. 1.

Then, a police report gave Fisher's lawyer, Scott Anderson, his first piece of real evidence other than "alibi witnesses" — family members who said Fisher was home watching television at the time of the slaying.

The report was a rape complaint filed by another prostitute, claiming that an unidentified man whom she picked up threatened to strangle her if she did not have sex with him for free. The alleged incident occurred at the Uptown several nights after Miss Armstrong was murdered.

When shown a number of mug shots by police, the prostitute said her assailant looked like Fisher, but that he was able to speak and hear and drove a luxury automobile.

Armed with this new information, Armstrong got an examining trial before Justice of the Peace W.J. Richburg.

His chief witness was a lanky prostitute whose name was never revealed and who appeared at the examining trial with a jacket over her head.

She had been with the victim that fatal night, she said, and also testified she was present when Miss Armstrong's "last date" picked her up. The man, she said, was not Fisher.

Presented with this, the Dallas County grand jury freed Fisher of criminal charges Wednesday.

Reception Proves Rewarding For Clayton Fund

AUSTIN (AP) — Speaker Bill Clayton's political treasury has swollen by about $100,000 from a single 90-minute reception hosted by and honoring Clayton.

Between 250 and 300 persons showed up at the Headliners Club on Wednesday for the affair, which cost businesses and lobbying organizations $500 and individuals $100.

Clayton's press secretary, George Works, said the take was "about $100,000 — that will be somewhere close to the total."

Works said insurance and utility lobbyist Jack Gullahorn, who was Clayton's executive assistant until last December, sent out the invitations. Clayton's campaign treasurer is Gullahorn's administrative aide, Connie Saathoff, who used to be a secretary in the speaker's office.

Works said tickets to the fundraiser "were offered to members of the lobby, to (trade) associations, to individuals who have been supportive of the speaker in the past." He said tickets also were offered to state university officials — "to some extent, I guess."

As speaker, Clayton has great power over whether bills rise or fall and whether university appropriations are fat or lean.

Works said the money was raised for Clayton's campaign for re-election as state representative from Springlake and for his officeholder accounts.

Texas law allows elected officials to receive and spend money for purposes related to their offices but for which state funds cannot be spent. The donations and expenditures must be reported.

Clayton has reported receiving $25,270 and spending $39,346 for such purposes in 1978, including payments totaling $5,250 to lease an airplane from his own business, Springlake Enterprises Inc. The reported payments also included small monthly salaries to several members of the speaker's official staff as "fees for services." Included were $100 a month each to Works and Ms. Saathoff.

Works said Clayton uses the officeholder account for such things as operating expenses of the mobile office that circulates throughout his district and for traveling to make speeches.

Divorce And Remarriage Painful Experience For Children

United Way of Lubbock

(EDITOR'S NOTE: This is another in a series of articles dealing with the United Way of Lubbock. Except for officials of United Way agencies involved, the names used are fictitious to protect the identities of those served. However, the stories reflect actual case histories here.)

Divorce can be painful enough for the children of the broken home, but sometimes remarriage of the partner in custody can be a shattering experience. Coupled with the birth of a new baby in the second marriage, the child of the first marriage can be devastated by feelings of abandonment and lack of love.

This is a case which would not be unusual to require the counseling of the Family Service Association of Lubbock, a United Way agency.

This year Family Service will receive $48,794 from the 1980 United Way goal of $1,803,752.

According to Margaret Elbow, director of Family Service, the purpose of the organization is to "Strengthen family life through family or individual counseling, financial counseling or family life education. Our aim is to improve the quality of life within the family's own structure system."

In achieving these goals, the counselors at Family Service work very closely with clients in defining problems, assessing their consequences and finding a solution that is workable.

Mrs. Elbow gave a fictional example of what type of problem may be handled by a counselor:

Nine-year-old Sandy was having trouble adjusting to the birth of her new step-brother, who was born 6 months ago with birth defects. Previously, she had gotten along well with her step-mother, Carol, her brother, Jake, and her father, Jim.

However, since the birth of Jimmy, she has been stirring up trouble at school, has rejected Carol, tells everyone her real mother is "coming back" to take her away and blames Jake for the real mother's abandoning them seven years ago.

Also, Carol had to quit her job when the baby was born and the family is experiencing severe financial difficulties. This worries Jim considerably and he is not as devoted to the family now as he was previously. Sandy feels rejected by him also.

In desperation, Jim and Carol sought help from the Family Service Association.

The counselor at Family Service has assessed Sandy's disruptive actions as a feeling of rejection by Carol. Because Carol cannot devote the considerable time to Sandy she used to because of the handicapped baby, Sandy is attempting to fend off the rejection by fantasizing that her real mother is "coming back" and defending herself against blame for her mother's leaving by placing it on Jake.

The counselor set up regular meetings at the Family Service office, requiring several group family meetings, some individual sessions and several creative play sessions with the children.

In addition, the counselor has arranged for Jim and Carol to meet with a financial counselor at the association and to work out a budget for the family.

After four months of counseling, the family met for its termination session with the counselor. Each family member was able to discuss the problem, how they progressed and how they participated in reaching a resolution to the problem. Jim and Carol, however, will continue to see the financial counselor for two to three more months.

In addition to the financial and family counseling services exemplified in Jim's and Carol's story, Family Service also provides family life education and enrichment program for the community. Programs have been prepared on many subjects for presentation to civic and church groups as well as the general public, including topics such as child abuse, family living, marital relationships and death and dying.

Fees for participation in the Family Service Association are on a graduated scale and are based on monthly income and on family size.

Currently, Mrs. Elbow said, the association services 80 to 100 clients with about 200 to 300 visits per month.

Woman Keeps Grandmother's Art Alive

B METRO
Lubbock Avalanche-Journal
Friday, Sept. 14, 1979

PUNKIN CENTER—It takes about four hours to weave a yard of material—with strict stop-clock time put down for time out to tend the children, the housework and any emergency taking Star Shelton from her grandmother's loom.

Then comes the task of putting scissors and needle to handwoven fabric in a special manner creating designer clothing geared to transcend fashion change.

"A handwoven item is an investment for a lifetime; it has to be classic," Mrs. Shelton said, explaining how a little care in design can create a family heirloom.

The classic look will dominate her all-cotton exhibit for the spring fashion show for the Texas Independent Ginners Association annual convention.

Normally, she said, a large Dallas department store presents the show, but an ensemble she made for a Lamesa woman ginner, which took the convention by storm last year, turned attention to the handwoven area.

Wives of ginners will be models for the unique showing.

The two dozen hand-loomed designs will be the latest achievement in Mrs. Shelton's self-taught craft which has evolved into a family avocation.

Her husband, Weldon, carries many buckets of water to fill the old bathtub used for dyeing yarn behind the Shelton farm home.

He helps with the massive job of stirring, draining and refilling dye baths for 15 pounds of yarn at a time.

The Sheltons team up again to warp the loom, a task consuming up to 10 hours, depending on the size of the yarn and the number of hundreds of threads needed for the width of fabric desired.

Actual weaving—working the treadles, throwing the shuttles and manning the beater while creating patterns and texture—is the fun part.

Cutting the fabric, a horror situation for the growing number of weavers around the area, came easy for Mrs. Shelton, who decided early in her craft that weaving was for wearing as well as hanging on the wall.

Stitching double and using masking tape for holding the cutting pattern keeps her on the track.

At first, she made everything her size, in case the items didn't sell at craft fairs. Then, she took note of a lot of smaller women turning away disappointed because nothing was in their size. With wrapped or elastic-waisted skirts and today's loose-fitting tops, she now makes a range of sizes. Too, she now is confident enough of her public to create in sizes.

Doing her own thing in fabric actually is following what the yarn wants to be, rather than a dictated design. There is a difficulty sometimes adapting a yarn and design to a custom order.

Getting the association show is a coup, not only for her, but for all weavers, she feels, and intends to make sure each item—from bathing suit to formal wear—is exactly right in blend of texture and design.

Looms fascinated Mrs. Shelton from childhood. All warped up and weave ready, they were a part of every visit to grandmother's house.

Then, a decade ago, her grandmother died, and, when no one else wanted the looms, or the spinning wheels, Mrs. Shelton took them home. Weaving had no part in her textile degree from Texas Tech, but she wanted the looms she had never seen in operation.

Three years ago, a desire to weave got the best of her and, recovering the looms from storage, she started out. Her teachers were her grandmother's books, and her yarns came from sources advertising in old weaving magazines a quarter of a century old.

By trial and error she progressed through the book lessons to a new craft topping a long line of endeavors for the lover of craft shows.

Being asked to the Kerrville craft festival this summer topped off her craft shows, resulting in a smashing success for the weaver-designer.

Her clothing "from scratch" is one of a kind, like the wardrobe that will go to the ginners annual meeting to show what a modern weaver can do with the old fiber.

Airline To Offer Service To Mexico

Continental Airlines will inaugurate their first service to Mexico on October 1st, according to Tom O'Donnell, Continental's Regional Director. This new flight will originate in Chicago, stop in Denver, Albuquerque, and El Paso then proceed on to Continental's newly awarded cities in Mexico.

From El Paso, the flight will operate three days weekly non-stop to Acapulco, two days weekly non-stop to Puerto Vallarta then on to Manzanillo and two days weekly non-stop to San Jose Del Cabo then on to La Paz.

Passengers from the Lubbock area will connect at El Paso to the Mexico flights by leaving Lubbock at 8:20 a.m. arriving in Acapulco at 3:15 p.m.; Puerto Vallarta at 3:02 p.m. Manzanillo at 3:35 p.m.; San Jose Del Caba at 2:10 p.m. and La Paz at 3 p.m. Return flights from these cities leave in the afternoon and passengers will arive back in Lubbock at 10:40 p.m.

A variety of tour packages to each of these areas is available at the Continental Airline offices and at the local travel agencies. They include short or extended stay packages, inexpensive or deluxe first class, with options for meals, sightseeing tours, deep sea fishing, hunting, scuba diving, para sailing, water skiing, sail boating or just relaxing on white sand beaches.

"Continental is indeed pleased to offer this new one carrier service to these beautiful areas," said O'Donnell. "Prior to October 1st, travel to several of these points required a change at Dallas-Fort Worth, then another change in Mexico City.

The new El Paso gateway will require only a few steps from one Continental gate to board another proud bird to their destination, at less cost." According to O'Donnell, reservations should be made early for the winter months as most Continental-served cities will be booking connections to these trips.

ANN LANDERS

Dear Ann Landers: Our seven-year-old son has been threatening to kill his father and me ever since he was five. He makes these threats when he doesn't get his way, or if he is punished for some wrongdoing.

It doesn't happen very often and seems to come in spurts. For months he will behave fairly well, then suddenly he will become belligerent and say such things as, "I'm going to kill you!" He will then go into detail and describe how. For example: "I'll take the butcher knife and stick it into your stomach." Or, "I'll get a gun and shoot you in the head."

Would you say it's a stage all children go through, or does this suggest a deep-seated problem that needs looking into? — Concerned In Idaho

Dear Idaho: A child of any age who threatens murder should not be ignored. Your son's anger and hostility need to be investigated.

I recommend family counseling at the earliest possible moment. I also suggest that you keep all the knives in a locked drawer, and if you have a gun in the house, it should be well-hidden, also under lock and key.

Dear Ann Landers: Our landlady is a genius at manufacturing excuses to get into our apartment to look around. She usually comes when we are at work. (The man in the next apartment has seen her.) Twice within the last three weeks she has been here to inspect the gas stove and smoke alarm.

The woman has a key, to which she is entitled by law, but she knocks once, then tries to let herself in. We keep the chain on because we aren't always dressed, ready to receive "guests." The chain has prevented some embarrassing moments.

What can be done to curtail her snooping and the all-too-frequent drop-in visits? — Laverne And Shirley

Dear L. and S.: Look at your lease. What does it say? If it doesn't have "entrance by the owner" spelled out, it should. Write the little old lady a letter. Tell her you appreciate her concern for your comfort and security but you'd like some notice before she drops in — preferably 24 hours. You are entitled to this, unless there's an emergency.

Dear Ann Landers: I work in a plush suburban Philadelphia restaurant. Please print this for all people who work like dogs setting up attractive food displays — and I am not talking about cafeterias.

Recently we practically killed ourselves putting together a gorgeous table. Unbelievable care went into the selection of top-grade vegetables and fruits. It was magnificently artistic, and we were truly proud.

A woman sashayed up to the salad bar, tore the celery right out of the centerpiece, ripped off several stalks, threw them helter-skelter on top of the radish roses and placed the heart of the celery on her own plate. She then speared several avocado halves in search of the ones she wanted. By the time she left, the vegetable table looked like a garbage dump. I leave it to you, Ann. Is she a slob? — Appalled In Pa.

Dear Appalled: For want of a better word, I'd say, yes, she's a slob. How do you feel? Better? I hope so.

A no-nonsense approach to how to deal with life's most difficult and most rewarding arrangement. Ann Landers' booklet, "Marriage — What to Expect," will prepare you for better or for worse. Send your request to Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11995, Chicago, Illinois 60611, enclosing 50 cents and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope.

At Wit's End...

By ERMA BOMBECK

I have a friend who has been trying to sell her house for six months and frankly, I'm worried about her.

The other morning, while having coffee, I excused myself to use her bathroom. She threw her body across the door and said, "Do you really have to use this? I mean, you couldn't wait and stop at the service station on the way home, could you?"

"Get hold of yourself, Gloria," I said. "Ever since you listed your home you've developed a clean fetish."

"Are you finished leaning back on that pillow?" she asked, grabbing it and punching it up with her fist.

"See what I mean? You're going crazy with neatness. What happened? We never see a newspaper at your door anymore. We never see garbage cans at your curb. I almost hate to ask, but where are your children?"

"I laundered and stored them until after we move," she said, grabbing the cup and saucer away from my lips and rinsing them under the faucet. "Face it. No one buys a house that looks like it's inhabited."

"That's a dumb thing to say."

"It's true. Take your average model home. The light switches might not work, the walls smell like paste, there is no water, and the doors are hung backwards. No problem. The house will still sell. But if the lids are up on the bathroom commode — forget it!"

"I don't believe that at all."

"It's true. Take this house. Please. It was a model home when we bought it. I'm here to tell you a virgin house is the most beautiful sight in the world. There was even a bowl of waxed fruit on the coffee table. Then we moved in. First, it was a basketball in the foyer, handprints around the light switches, a cardboard box in the utility room to hold the dog, cup dispensers on every wall, a calendar over the stove, notes on the refrigerator, an ironing board in the dining room, a boot in the flower bed, rolled-up newspapers in the spouting, 50-pound bag of fertilizer on the porch, a bread card in the window."

"And the waxed fruit?"

"It's still in the bowl with initials carved into it, along with a brush roller, two marbles and a transistor battery. The illusion is gone."

Just then the realtor came up the drive with a prospective couple. "Quick," yelled Gloria, grabbing her sweater. "Put the coffee pot in the oven, the mail in the freezer and follow me to the basement. Just pray they don't slip on the driveway. I waxed it yesterday."

TO YOUR GOOD HEALTH

BY DR. PAUL G. DONOHUE

Dear Dr. Donohue: Please, what is the latest on vitamin E treatment for warts? I am sure there are many people plagued by these unsightly, bothersome things on the hands. A doctor burned out five on my thumb. Within a year they were back. I have used other compounds, but within two weeks they started growing back. I am desperate. I would even try the black cat in the graveyard remedy if I could remember how it goes. — Mrs. J.M.

Warts are caused by a virus that infects the skin. You can transfer this virus from one wart to another area of your body, where a second will grow.

You are correct on both counts. They are unsightly and many people do have them, about 7-10 percent of the population, or 14 to 20 million in the U.S. alone.

I don't know the latest on vitamin E therapy, but I suppose we can add treatment of warts to the long list of conditions for which that substance is being used. I doubt it will help.

There are many, more conventional remedies, but generally, when there are many "remedies" for any condition, none really is the answer. Freezing with liquid nitrogen, removal with an electric current, and several chemicals, such as trichloroacetic acid or salicylic and lactic acid, all are used. The doctor is the best judge of which treatment is best based on the type of wart and its location.

Take heart. In two out of three cases the warts go away in two years. The "black cat" idea might work, but I'm as much in the dark about the technique as you are. Tom Sawyer favored "spunkwater." Your druggist might be able to make some for you, but it would probably come high and be about as effective as vitamin E.

P.S. Don't take Tom Sawyer or me seriously about "spunkwater," folks.

Dear Dr. Donohue: Please tell me about plain petroleum vaseline. Two of my friends swear by it. They say taking a teaspoon of it every night they prevent coughing and colds in general. Is there any such medicinal value in vaseline taken internally? — Mrs. W.O.

Vaseline is a product of petroleum, a solid form of mineral oil, which is a distillate of crude oil.

It is intended for external use and there are very few products that are "reversible" in use. In this case there is no harm since the vaseline is not absorbed. The only side effect might be a mild laxative action, just as with the mineral oil.

The two dangers from chronic use of either of these preparations (oil or jelly) is lipid pneumonia and interference with the absorption of lipids (fats) and the fat soluble vitamins (A, D and E). Neither the vaseline nor the liquid oil will prevent coughs or colds.

Dear Dr. Donohue: What is a calorie? I'm confused. — M.W.

You and a lot of other people, if my mail is an indicator.

First of all, don't look for a calorie. You'll never see one. They are invisible, like a degree of temperature or a thought. A calorie is just one of man's handy measurements. Nutritionally, it is the amount of potential energy in a given amount of food, whether carbohydrate, fat, or protein. Specifically, one calorie is the amount of food energy needed to raise a kilogram of water one degree centigrade. Thus if you ate and utilized a 100-calorie candy bar you would release enough energy to raise the temperature of a kilogram of water 100 degrees centigrade.

Fats have roughly twice the energy potential of proteins or carbohydrates. A gram of fat produces about nine calories of energy as it is burned by the body, a gram of carbohydrate four, and a gram of protein about the same.

The trouble is that not all calories are used up as energy. So they get stored as body weight — fat. That's why you have to cut down on food (total calories) to lose weight.

CONFIDENTIAL TO — Miss M.C. Unless you have plans to be a nude model you'd probably be best to come to terms with the bellybutton you were born with. Sometimes a weakness in the abdominal wall (layer of muscles) or a hernia may cause undue protrusion. Repair, for whatever reason, would require surgery. Only an examination would tell whether this is your problem.

What about constipation? Many can be relieved of it, both mentally and physically, by reading Dr. Donohue's booklet, "The Way to Stop Constipation." For a copy write to Dr. Donohue, P.O. Box 11210, Chicago, Ill. 60611, enclosing a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope and 35 cents.

Dr. Donohue welcomes reader mail but regrets that, due to the tremendous volume received daily, he is unable to answer individual letters. Readers' questions are incorporated in his column whenever possible.

The final three-notrump contract is very normal although the correct response in current bidding is just two diamonds.

West's six of spades lead is also normal and South's best play is to put his king on East's queen.

South is looking at potential finesses against the king in both red suits. The optimist takes both and if both are successful, he winds up with the rest of the tricks.

The down to earth player operates on the principle of trying to win the rubber and only works on overtricks when the contract is assured. He wants to get nine tricks before East can gain the lead. He sees that he can afford to lose the diamond finesse so he enters duummy with the ace of clubs and takes the diamond finesse. West gets in with the king and leads a heart.

Would you have leftover corn-on-the-cob, this is a tasty way to serve it: Saute one-fourth cup of chopped onion in three tablespoons of butter in a medium-sized skillet until tender. Stir in two cups of corn, cut from cob, and one-half cup of shredded carrot. Cover and cook over low heat about five minutes. Remove cover and stir in one-fourth cup of light cream or half and half. Cook and stir until cream is absorbed, about five minutes. That'll give you three to four sunny servings.

Combat Photo Tips Given

By SANDY COLTON
Associated Press Writer

Miami-based Associated Press photographer Hal Moore, an old hand at Latin-American coverage, covered the war in Nicaragua. I asked him to tell us something about being a war photographer. Here is his report:

First thing you do every morning is put on your bulletproof vest. Then you lace up the Vietnam jungle boots, making sure to tie a double knot in the laces so they won't come untied and trip you up if you have to run for cover.

Then you put on the lightweight, poplin, military-style shirt with epaulets and big pockets. Pants are denim or cotton khaki with roomy pockets. A bush hat and two soft cotton bandanas complete the uniform.

Next you check out the survival gear. In a small canvas fishing bag you make sure you have beef jerky, canteen of water, purification pills, antibiotics, flashlight, wound dressing, compass, maps, waterproof matches, freeze-dried rations for two days, heat tabs, lightweight poncho, insect repellent and toilet articles.

So began my daily routine while on assignment for the AP during the Nicaraguan civil war.

Veteran correspondents who have covered shooting conflicts all over the world agree that Nicaragua was one of most dangerous. Unlike most wars, newsmen were allowed to go almost anywhere they wanted during the fighting.

This meant crossing battle lines several times a day — National Guard checkpoints like the one where Bill Stewart of ABC was executed; Sandinista-rebel roadblocks like the one where AP photo stringer Richard Cross had his rental car riddled by machine-gun fire. It meant the helpless terror of being pinned down by aerial strafing or mortar and rocket fire, ambushes and danger almost every day in order to produce photos of a nation torn apart by civil war.

Over the years, photographers covering the violence in Nicaragua developed special needs and preferences in equipment. One never knew when one would have to spend the night trapped behind a Sandinista barricade or in a house during a mortar or air attack. It paid to be prepared.

In camera gear the emphasis was on lightness and durability. Most news photographers carried two motor-drive, single-lens reflex cameras loaded with black and white film and a third body for color. One full-size thyristor strobe and a pocket-size backup took care of the lighting. Both cameras and strobes should accept rechargeable as well as regular batteries.

Oddly enough, the longer telephoto lenses are rarely needed in combat. The action is usually too close to you. I carry one camera without a motor on a short strap with either an 18mm or 24mm wide angle lens. This is a quick-reaction camera.

A motor-driven camera goes on a long chest strap with lenses ranging from 35mm to 105mm, depending on the situation. A second motor-drive camera goes on a long shoulder strap with a 180mm telephoto lens. I prefer to carry a 2X doubler for the 180 rather than a heavier 300mm lens.

This equipment, plus a 55mm macro lens with extension tube, all fits into a canvas camera bag with backpack-conversion capability. Also in the bag are gaffer tape, emergency-repair tools and spare parts, marker pens, penlight flashlight, and my passport and press credentials. I also carry plenty of ziplock plastic bags to cope with the tropical rains of Central America.

When the situation allows I carry a third shoulder bag with a 500mm telephoto lens, tabletop tripod, extra film, food and water, a changing bag, several towels, a change of clothes and a portable tape recorder.

The idea is to keep the absolutely essential photographic needs in one bag which stayed with me all the time. The survival kit and backup equipment could be cached and picked up later if the situation called for a hasty retreat.

I always carry a reasonable amount of local currency in my wallet plus several hundred dollars in U.S. currency hidden away. It was never a good idea to wear watches or expensive jewelry into combat and I avoided bright-colored clothing without looking too military. Our cars were all taped with AP-PRESS in gaffer tape.

One final item I shouldn't forget, a large, white flag that one of the maids at the Intercontinental Hotel in Managua sewed for me one night out of an old pillow case. Indispensible asset, that flag. It drew fire like a magnet.

Candles Add Decoration To Homes

These handsome candles can be created by you in your own kitchen! As you've probably noticed in stores and gift boutiques, candlemaking has come a long way since those pioneer days when candlelight was used solely for illumination. Candles today are used alone, or combined with floral decorations to add dramatic accents to any home.

After extensive research and development, we can now offer you a concise, thorough guide to home candlemaking that removes the guesswork. And, there are no expensive kits required, no special training needed.

To obtain the Candlemaker, Instructional Guide, 521, send $2.75 (includes first class postage & handling) by check or money order. To obtain our new book, U-Build Patterns for Better Living, picturing more than 600 simple woodworking and handicraft projects, send $1.75 (includes postage). Address all orders to:

Avalanche Journal Pattern Dept. P.O. Box 2383 Van Nuys, California 91409

Handy Tip: If by accident, candle wax should drip onto your carpet, spread a brown grocery bag over the spot, and iron with a low-heat setting. The spot lifts like magic.

Mortar Mix Makes Brick Repairs Easier

By ANDY LANG
Associated Press Writer

It is folly to think you can quickly become a crackerjack bricklayer merely by reading how it is done. But you can do a fairly good job of repairing brickwork which is permitting the entry of water, usually through openings in the mortar joints.

When mortar begins to deteriorate, it starts to chip, crack or flake and leaves gaps in the joints. Water moves into these openings, gets behind the wall or whatever and causes damage. Close those openings with a mortar mix and you can avert almost certain future trouble. While it is possible to make your own mixture, it is better and easier, in such cases, to use a premixed mortar requiring only the addition of water.

The first step is to remove any loose mortar with a hammer and a cold chisel, preferably a bricklayer's chisel if you have one. Use a wire brush or something similar to get rid of the small pieces of old mortar. Hose down the opening and the surrounding bricks.

Apply the mortar mix with a trowel, packing it in well but being careful not to get it on the outside of the brick. Keep a damp cloth ready for instant use if the mortar does get on the brick despite your care. Shape the mortar to match the corresponding joints, using the trowel, a piece of pipe or anything at all that will do the job. If you do even a moderate amount of brickwork, buy a small jointer for this purpose.

That's all there is to it, except that you should wet down the patch every day for a few days unless rain takes care of it for you. This helps to "cure" the repair — that is, to keep it moist so that the patching mixture does not dry out too quickly. Patches that flake and chip after a short period of time are usually the result of too-quick drying.

When a powdery stain, usually white, appears on the surface of brick, it is called efflorescence. The stain is a salt deposit which has been washed to the surface. Before trying to remove it, repair any possible sources of leaks. Usually the efflorescense can be removed by vigorous rubbing with a stiff-bristled brush. When it can't, a chemical treatment is necessary. Locate a brickyard, tell the dealer what your problem is and buy the necessary chemical. Follow the directions carefully, especially those relating to safety precautions.

(Do-it-yourselfers will find much helpful information in Andy Lang's handbook, "Practical Home Repairs," which can be obtained by sending $1.50 to this newspaper at Box 5, Teaneck, N.J. 07666.)

Unsticking Double-Hung Window Requires Removal Of Moldings

By The Associated Press

Q — I have tried everything to unstick the lower portion of a double-hung window, the kind in which both the lower and upper halves move separately. I read that, in such a case, it is necessary to take the sash from the window frame, but no instructions were included on how to do this. Can you give me an idea of how this is done?

A — You have to remove the moldings on the side of the channels in which the window slides up and down. These are called stop moldings. So that they can be used again, pry them up with a putty knife, working very carefully. Once the moldings are removed, the sash can be lifted out. Should it resist, see what is holding it in place and use your common sense on how to loosen it. Very often it is merely hardened paint which can be scraped away. Before replacing the sash, lubricate the channels with paraffin, wax or one of the special lubricating sprays.

Q — A rumbling noise occurs whenever the hot-water faucet is turned on in our kitchen sink, the bathtub or the washing machine. It does not happen when we are running cold water. Do you have any suspicion of what might be causing this?

A — It is probably because the thermostat in the hot-water heater is set too high. Try cutting it down to 140 degrees and seeing what happens. Among other possible causes are rust or sediment in the bottom of the tank and loose hot-water pipes.

Q — I bought some unfinished furniture and did a pretty good job of varnishing it. My wife thought it was a bit too glossy, so I decided to get a satiny finish by using powdered pumice and oil. I followed some instructions I read in a magazine. The finish came out as smooth as glass and I generally am well satisfied with it, but now my wife thinks the finish is a little too dull. Is there some way I can get a little shine on the furniture without it being too glossy?

A — Yes. Buy some powdered rottenstone. Apply it the same way as you did the pumice, using a little oil and rubbing well with a felt pad in the direction of the grain. Do a small section at a time. Every so often, wipe off everything so that you can see clearly whether the finish is the way you want it or whether additional rubbing is necessary. The result should be a satiny rather than a glossy surface.

Q — When I use varnish remover to get an old finish off a piece of furniture, how do I handle the carved molding? I am afraid that using a scraper would damage the carving.

A — You are right. Use steel wool instead. Also, you will find that an old, clean toothbrush is handy for such work.

Q — There is aluminum siding on our house. It has been there for many years and seems to be in good condition, but we would like to change the color of it. Can it be repainted and, if so, will it last as long as or longer than paint on wood?

A — Yes, it can be repainted. Because it is all but impervious to moisture, the aluminum's new coat of pain is likely to last two or three times as long as paint applied to wood.

Q — I am getting ready to put a new finish on some old furniture. I have a must that be done by hand?

A — Your query makes it evident you know what the problem might be. A belt sander usually is used for heavy-duty work, such as the removal of old finishes or for smoothing of rough surfaces. However, if you use a very fine grade of abrasive paper and work very carefully, you will be able to get a good result with a belt sander. Should you not wish to take that extra care and if you do not have an orbital or other finishing sander, then you should use a hand sander.

Q — I do not understand how young people can buy homes these days. Is there something about the situation that I do not know?

A — A survey last year showed that 45 percent of all home-buying families had more than one wage earner. That's one explanation. Another is that, despite the high prices and soaring interest rates, people have discovered that home ownership gives them at least a partial defense against inflation, since most houses appreciate 10 to 15 percent in value every year.

Q — We have some insulation batts between the joists of the floor in the attic, but want to add more. Can the new batts be put down right over the old? And should the vapor barrier of the new batts be face down or face up?

A — These are getting to be the most frequently asked questions. The new layer of batts can be placed over the old. The new insulation should not have a vapor barrier.

Popularity Of Wildlife Art Growing

Today the popularity of wildlife in art needlwork and accessories for the home is growing rapidly. This renewed interest coincides with the back-to-nature trend in decorating. People everywhere are seeking to create a home environment reminiscent of a simpler, more natural time.

During the past decade or two, the quality of wildlife art has improved vastly and so has its value as a sound investment. Be sure to remember, whenever buying art of any type, it's best to buy through a reputable dealer, especially if you plan to spend a great deal of money.

If you'd like to try your hand at creating your own piece of wildlife art, here's a rustic wire art wall hanging that is sure to brighten any decor. It's lovely example of a comtemporary craft.

Ducks in the Marsh kit includes pattern, copper wire and nails, burlap, backing board, nail height gauge, hanging unit and complete directions. The finished wall hanging measures 10 x 12 inches and fits the gleaming frame as shown.

Government Critic Slated For LCC Meet

H. E. "Eddie" Chiles, known for his radio broadcasts proclaiming he's mad at the involvement of government in the day-to-day affairs of private business, will speak at Lubbock Christian College on Oct. 9.

Chiles, chairman of the board and chief executive officer of the Western Company of North America, will address the fall meeting of the LCC board of governors, a support group whose members donate at least $1,000 a year per member to the college.

The Board of Governors, organized last fall, will hear Chiles speak following a 7 p.m. dinner in the Betty Hancock Campus Center.

Chiles began spending $200,000 a year of his company's money blasting the airways with his brand of conservatism in 1977, appealing to the public to reverse the trend toward a welfare state at the ballot box.

Now, his voice is heard on 320 stations in eight states twice daily. Topics misdirected efforts to remedy inflation, the strangulation of the petroleum industry by nonsensical controls and Congress' deficit spending habits.

"The United States has been good to me," Chiles says. "I started out with absolutely nothing and I took advantage of the great opportunity here and now I'm rich. I think this opportunity should be preserved for the coming generation.

"The reason why I started making broadcasts is because I got so mad at the government perverting our economic system, destroying opportunity and creating a socialist state."

Chiles organized and founded the Western Company in 1939 as an oilwell service company in Seagraves, five years after receiving a B.S. in petroleum engineering from the University of Oklahoma.

Chiles served as sales manager of the Reed Roller Bit Company in Houston for five years after graduating from college. In 1939, he started his own oil well acidizing company, which in the West Texas of that era was a relatively unheard of business.

Acidizing is a process by which acid is forced into a well to dissolve flow channels in the formation, thus increasing the flow of oil or gas from the well. Chiles' services were in demand as the nation's economy recovered during the post-depression and war years and the business grew.

The company went public in 1968 and since then, revenues have surged from $23.6 million in 1969 to $215.6 million in 1978.

Branded as the "terror of bureaucrats" and a "champion of the people" by California's Howard Jarvis, Chiles has reaped numerous civic and professional awards over the past four decades.

In addition to serving as a regent at North Texas State University, Chiles serves as director or member of the board on six other businesses, foundations or commissions.

Chiles aphorisms include: "The government should defend our shores, deliver our mail, fire half of the bureaucrats today, the other half tomorrow and leave us alone."

And, "We ought to have a law that when a politician breaks three promises, he is thrown out (of office) like they do at a ball game."

Fair Housing Practices Course For Real Estate Brokers Set

Set for 8-11 a.m. in the Mabee American Heritage Auditorium, the course will cost $10.

Beginning Sept. 1, the Real Estate License Amendment requires that persons seeking licensure in Texas must first complete three classroom hours of instruction in fair housing practices. This instruction is intended to acquaint the applicant with local, state and federal laws regarding housing discrimination, housing credit discrimination and community reinvestment.

The Texas Real Estate Research Center at Texas A&M developed a short training seminar to enable real estate instructors across the state to be equipped to offer this training. Real estate instructors from Lubbock Christian College as well as other senior and junior colleges and universities and from proprietary schools have received this training.

In addition to new license applicants, all agents and brokers licensed in Texas should be aware that effective Sept. 1, the Texas Real Estate Commission has the power to revoke or suspend licenses of any person practicing discrimination. For this reason, persons already active in real estate may wish to consider taking the short course offered by LCC for their own protection.

Those interested in this course may contact the Dean's Office at Lubbock Christian College.

Connecticut Fall Feast Of Foliage

Boating, ballooning, biking or hiking through Connecticut's October landscapes — each provides a new and different perspective on fall foliage viewing.

An especially pleasant excursion aboard the Quinnetukut II cruises the Connecticut River from the Northfield Mountain Riverview Picnic area near Thomaston to Barton Cove and back. The boat sails daily, with cruises leaving every two hours from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. through October. Fare is $4 for adults; $2 for youngsters 3-14. Children under 3 are free.

For more solitary viewing, canoes may be rented from outfitters in Sharon and Falls Village for trips down the Housatonic in northwestern Connecticut. Rental is about $12 a day. The upper reaches of the Housatonic between Connecticut's northern border and the village of Kent wind through some of the state's most spectacular forests.

The leisurely pace astride a 10-speed bike allows plenty of time to contemplate autumn's flamboyant finale, as well as to investigate the picturesque villages with their historic houses, intriguing crafts and antique shops and charming country inns along the route.

To make planning two-wheeler foliage viewing easier, the Pequot Press in Chester, Conn., publishes a 71-page book titled "Short Bike Rides in Connecticut." To obtain a copy, send $2.95 (plus50 cents for handling and mailing) to the Pequot Press, Old Chester Road, Chester, Conn. 06412.

Perhaps the most dramtic view of Connecticut's fall extravaganza can be obtained by "rising above it all" in a hot air balloon. One tour drifts over hillsides ablaze with color near Stonington. Another sweeps majestically along the autumnal Farmington Valley.

Gil Foster conducts balloon ascensions in the Stonington area. Contact Gil Foster, Box 190, Stonington, Conn. 06378. It's $100 for a ride of an hour or so.

Farther inland, Brian Boland takes viewers "up, up and away" from his place in Farmington. The one-hour flight costs $80 per person. Write to Brian Boland, Pine Drive, RFD 2, Burlington, Conn. 06103.

Hiking along one of Connecticut's dozens of marked trails provides a close-up view with plenty of time to savor the subtle hues of the turning leaves. The Connecticut Forest and Park Association at 1010 Main Street in East Hartford 06108, publishes a convenient guide to the state's "Blue Blazed Trails." Price of the 191-page book is $5.50.

For further details about Connecticut's fall (and year-round) attractions, write "Travel," Department of Economic Development, 210 Washington Street, Hartford, Conn. 06106 or call toll-free 1-800-243-1685.

Congress Seeking Thorpe Resolution

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress is seeking to restore the status of the late Jim Thorpe, stripped of his Olympic gold medals 66 years ago, as an amateur athlete.

The Senate approved a resolution on Tuesday urging the International Olympic Committee to reverse a 1913 ruling that Thorpe had become a professional baseball player.

Thorpe, an Indian from Oklahoma, played in a semi-professional East Carolina baseball league in 1910 and 1911 and accepted $60 in expense money.

'Perfect' Autumn Seen In Oklahoma This Year

Because of this year's unusually mild, wet summer, the Oklahoma Tourism and Recreation Department is predicting an especially beautiful fall, perfect for camping, fishing, tennis, golf and all the other outdoor activities available in the state parks and recreation areas.

The gorgeous colors of fall foliage, cooler weather, less crowded lakes and parks and more camping space all add to the joys of hiking, boating and cook-outs.

To assist travelers with planning their Second Summer holiday, the Department has prepared a booklet of 50 tours spread over every section of the state. Each tour lists all the attractions, parks and lakes in the area.

Included in each brochure is a self-addressed envelope for the seven state resorts, each a perfect headquarters for several tours. Vacationers can mail these with a deposit and make their own room reservations for specific dates.

A Second Summer Vacation Package has been designed by the resorts andinclude one night's lodging, breakfast and dinner at a special rate. The basic rate is $29 per person per day for double occupancy, with children age 12 and under $15 per day.

For Second Summer brochures, write Second Summer, Tourism Promotion Division, 500 Will Rogers Building, Oklahoma City 73105.

Fine Pheasant Hunting Found In South Dakota

"Although we don't have those unbelievable concentrations of the 1940s," says Jack Merwin, secretary of the South Dakota Department of Game, Fish and Parks, "more and more sportsmen are reporting the finest pheasant hunting they've had for many years."

Some of the best cover conditions in years have led to improved nesting success and winter survival. The ambitious Pheasant Restoration Program now boasts 14,262 acres planted to nesting cover. In addition, about 66,000 birds have been stocked in good habitat areas. The ringneck is gaining in South Dakota.

The purchase of a small game license in South Dakota ($35 for nonresidents and $8 for residents) allows its purchaser to hunt not only pheasants but also gray partridge, cottontails, squirrels and three species of grouse. By carefully selecting a hunting area, the sportsman can enjoy a mixed bag bonanaza. Conditions this fall point to excellent hunting during the autumn season.

Land Of Enchantment Nearing Its Most Spectacular Season

Throughout the mountains of the Land of Enchantment, at varying elevations, predominant green gives way to gold. So popular is this dazzling display that many communities stage aspencade festivals to accommodate visitors.

Cloudcroft and Ruidoso pull out all the stops with arts and crafts fairs, motorized foliage tours, mule races, parades and dances on Oct. 6-7, while Chama relies on its singular attraction — the Cumbres and Toltec Scenic Railroad — to attract passengers to its environs for rides through the tinted Rockies of northern New Mexico and southern Colorado until mid-October. So popular have these final train rides of the year become that some of them have been booked to capacity since late July.

Red River also has an arts and crafts fair, jeep tours and a square dance jamboree planned for Sept. 28-30. A new event this year is the "Great Pumpkin Carving Contest" open to everyone, with trophies awarded in various age categories. The chairlift will be open for rides to the top of the mountain to provide an overview in all directions of the aspenclad mountains. Jeep and horse rentals will be available, too, for some close contact with isolated, back-country forests and trout fishing lakes.

Information and reservations for all of the aspen events are available through the Chamber of Commerce, Box 868, Red River 87558, phone (505) 754-2366.

DISCOVERY

One of the most popular places to photograph aspens is in the vicinity of Santa Fe Ski Basin, 16 miles northeast of the capital city. There can be found the greatest concentration of aspens anywhere in New Mexico.

When do the leaves turn? That's impossible to predict. But, generally, anywhere from late September to early October. Everything depends on the combination of atmospheric conditions that have been influencing the aspens for months, and the immediate temperatures of September. The brightest colors develop when autumn days are bright and cool and the nights chilly — but not freezing.

Anyone planning on enjoying aspencades for the first time should request, by postcard, a free "New Mexico Travel Packet" from the New Mexico Travel Division C&ID, Bataan Bldg., Santa Fe 87503.

ASPEN GOLD — Autumn in the Colorado Rockies is an ideal time and place to enjoy a vacation at the top of the nation. Indian summer provides warm, sunny days and cool, restful nights.

Aspen Takes Throne In Colorado Ranges

The aspen becomes king of the mountains between mid-September and the first two weeks of October. The shimmering "quakie" colors first crown the higher elevations, and then, as molten gold, slowly flow downward as the month-long season progresses.

Colorado highways take you within close viewing distance and optimum camera range of the largest aspen groves found between 8,000 and 10,000 feet altitude.

The Aspen area, true to its namesake, is one of Colorado's most spectacular autumn amphitheaters. Independence Pass, Maroon Bells, and the ghost town of Ashcroft, all near Aspen, present a dazzling color carnival.

Superb aspen viewing awaits travelers along spectacular Trail Ridge Road, the highest continuous paved highway in the country. It reaches an altitude of 12,183 feet in its meanderings through Rocky Mountain National Park to Grand Lake.

Many Colorado cities and towns usher in autumn with harvest festivals and Octoberfests. Among these are Denver, Vail, Lake City, Manitou Springs, Glenwood Springs, Carbondale, Canon City and Norwood.

Fishing is at its finest in the fall. So take along your fishing tackle as well as plenty of color film to capture Colorado at its best. Fall weather is near perfect with pleasantly warm days and cool, restful nights.

Arkansas Hosts Autumn Festival

Slightly over an hour's drive from Little Rock, through flaming fall colors, is Herber Springs, site of the 14th Annual Ozark Frontier Trail Festival and Craft Show.

The festival is one of the largest and oldest fall folk events in the Ozarks. It will be held on the second weekend in October. Craftspeople from all over Arkansas plus invited guests of the Ozark Foothills Handicraft Guild will demonstrate and sell their wares Oct. 12-14.

Demonstrations at the craft show include basketry, weaving, blacksmithing, sorghum making, wood carving, quilting, pottery and broom making. Craft products demonstrated will be available for purchase directly from the craftspeople.

Former Prosecutor Hired As Judge

By SYLVIA TEAGUE
Avalanche-Journal Staff

A former Municipal Court prosecutor has been hired by the Lubbock City Council to be presiding judge for the court.

Cecil G. Puryear, assistant district counsel for the Small Business Administration in Lubbock, was hired Thursday to replace Drew Littleton who resigned in June to take a job in Brownsville.

A lifetime resident of Lubbock, Puryear, 34, worked as a Municipal Court prosecutor for approximately a year and formerly was employed as assistant Lubbock County attorney.

The Texas Tech University law school graduate will be charged with implementing court of record legislation approved by the legislature earlier this year.

Once the court becomes a court of record, appeals to higher courts will be based on errors in the lower court procedings. Currently, defendants can appeal to county court even if they plead guilty or no contest in Municipal Court. This has created a logjam of appeals in the two county courts and Puryear pledged to work on correcting that situation.

Puryear, who will take office Oct. 15, said the "city and county are going to have to sit down and talk about" the appeals problem in order to find a solution.

Although the court of record legislation became effective Aug. 27, Puryear said the council has "given me some time to work around to a court of record system without having a court of record system right off the bat."

That includes using procedures like those used in county courts, he said.

However, Puryear said some of the informality of Lubbock's Municipal Court is "not all bad."

All some people want when they come to Municipal Court is "someone to listen," he said. "If you do that, you solve a lot of problems."

Puryear said his relationship with other Lubbock attorneys is "fairly good" and feels he will have the support of lawyers who have been the harshest critics of Municipal Court operations.

Packing Sheds Holding To Quick Pace

By JIM STEIERT
A-J Correspondent

HEREFORD — Packing sheds in the Deaf Smith and Castro County areas have virtually wrapped up the 1979 potato and onion harvests, while processing of other fresh vegetables continues and the stage is being set for the fall lettuce harvest.

Sluggish prices have remained throughout the marketing season for potatoes this year, due to a late crop from the West Coast which glutted the market just as local produce came on stream.

Vegetable packing spokesmen indicate harvesting of potatoes this summer has been virtually "for practice only."

More favorable markets greeted local onion growers as they began moving their crop to market in July, but even the onion market began to slide in recent weeks, and some growers eventually opted to plow onions up and take their losses, rather than sell on a poor market.

A.T. Griffin of Griffin & Brand Produce, which has offices in Hereford as well as McAllen, reported that firm has finished its potato harvest, and has only a limited acreage of seed onions remaining.

"We're picking cantaloupe and cucumbers now. We have cantaloupe here and in the Bovina area. The acreage is well-scattered over sandy land, and the melons are being shipped to the Southeast, to avoid California competition," said Griffin.

He estimated that lettuce harvesting here will begin Sept. 20-25, with the crop making reasonably good growth at present after a skip in planting in July.

Albert Maxwell of La Mantia-Cullum Collier & Co., headquartered in Dimmitt, reported that potato harvest for his firm should run another 10 days, while onion harvest has concluded.

"We finished up on onions during the past week, and ended up plowing some of them up. The market finished out real poor and some growers opted to plow them up because of the poor mart outlook," he commented.

Lettuce is also making good growth in the Dimmitt and Hart area where the Castro County firm grows much of its acreage.

"The lettuce looks real good at this time, judging from what we have left after the storm. We lost about 50 percent of our crop here to hail, high winds and driving rain," he said.

Harvesting of carrots is also moving ahead in the Castro County area, and will continue late into the fall.

Yields are listed at 8-10 tons per acre, with some fields offering slightly better yields.

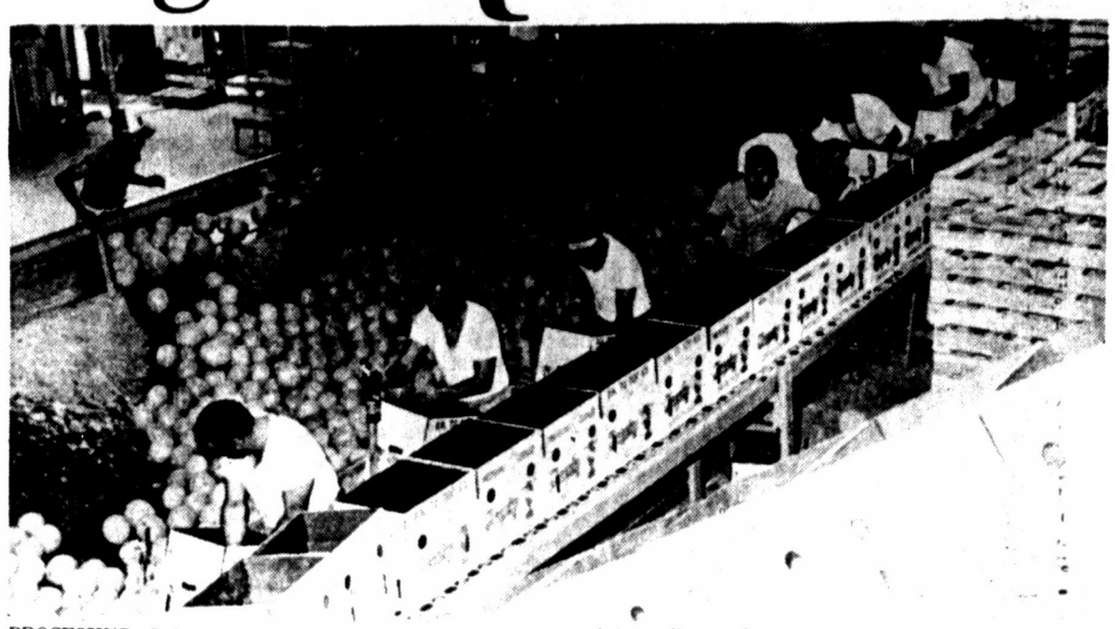
The market for carrots is also sluggish at this time, however, making it a tough go for many produce growers and packers.

"The lettuce market is real high right now, but ours isn't ready to go yet, so it doesn't help us. There's no way to tell what kind of market we'll be looking at for our area crop," Maxwell related.

Harvesting of a major acreage of potatoes will continue well into the fall for H&S Produce Co. of Hart, according to Kent Hill, a spokesman for that Cstro County vegetable growing and packing firm.

H&S raises a major proportion of its potatoes on sandy land south of Olton in Lamb County.

The Hart firm held off on its potato harvesting operations when most area produce sheds were beginning their season in early July. Officials for the firm were hoping for a rise in the potato market.



PROCESSING CANTALOUPES — Workers at Griffin & Brand Produce of Hereford process and pack cantaloupes grown in the Bovina and Hereford areas as the vegetable packing season continues on the High Plains. Cantaloupes are carried into the processing area by conveyors, get a quick bath, and then roll to grading tables prior to tumbling into the packing area, where workers with quick hands rapidly box the field-fresh melons for quick chilling and eventual shipment to points east. (Correspondent Photo by Jim Steiert)

Hill reported that the market has shown only a very slight improvement, and harvesting of Russet variety potatoes grown by that firm is expected to carry over into October.

Hill said hail damage to potatoes from the Aug. 24 storm in the sandhill area utilized by the H&S firm was less severe, although one Hart area packer reported that hard rains washed potatoes out of the beds in his field, and hailstones knocked holes in the vegetables.

Grain Exports Rate Seen Continuing Despite Strikes

WASHINGTON (AP) — Exports of U.S. grain are still expected to flow at a record pace despite strikes at rail and port facilities, new figures by the Agriculture Department indicated Thursday.

Farmers are harvesting record crops of corn and soybeans and a near-record crop of wheat. A strike against the Rock Island railroad and at Great Lakes port facilities at Duluth, Minn., and Superior, Wis., have raised fears that exports will suffer.

But a new "supply and demand" analysis issued by the department's World Food and Agricultural Outlook and Situation Board included no reference to the grain-handling problem nor indicated any change in export prospects from a month ago.

According to sources, who asked not to be identified, senior department officials, including Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland, believe no substantial impact will be felt because of the strikes for at least several more weeks.

The reason, the sources said, is that the huge corn harvest — estimated on Wednesday at a record of 7.27 billion bushels — is later than usual in the main producing areas of the Midwest.

Similar delays face the soybean harvest, estimated at a record 2.17 billion bushels.

Thus, goes the theory, the big harvest cunch will not be felt for another month or so. But if the stoppages continue for another 3 to 8 weeks, exports as well as the internal movements of grain and soybeans will be significantly affected, meaning huge pileups of commodities and a disruption of market prices.

In a related development, a tentative agreement was reached early Thursday between striking grain handlers and one of eight struck grain elevator firms in Duluth and Superior. No details were released.

Corn exports in the year beginning Oct. 1 were projected at around 2.5 billion bushels, the same as a month ago, the report said.

Also unchanged were export figures for 1979 shipments of wheat at 1.4 billion bushels and soybeans, 825 million bushels.

Rice, also with a record harvest this year of 135.3 million hundredweight, was shown at a 1979-80 export level of 83 million CWT, also unchanged from the August analysis.

But the improved harvest prospects, by themselves, have had an impact on prices that farmers can expect over the coming months.

For example, corn prices at the farm are now expected to average $2.40 to $2.70 a bushel over the entire 1979-80 marketing year, down five cents at the top end from last month.

Wheat prices were projected at $3.60 to $3.90 a bushel, compared to last month's range of $3.50 to $4.25.

Soybean price forecasts now are $5.75 to $6.50 a bushel against the projection in August of $6.50 to $7 a bushel.

An exception to the downward price trend was for rice, which showed a decline in harvest prospects from a month ago. Thus, the report said, prices for 1979-80 are expected to range from $8.25 to $9.25 per hundredweight, compared to August's projection of $8 to $9.

'Availability Of Funds' To Be Symposium Topic

Walter W. Minger, senior vice president of Bank of America, will speak on "Availability of Funds" at the second annual National Golden Spur Livestock and Money Symposium on Sept. 21 at Lubbock.

Minger, a native of Buxton, Ore., is head of the bank's worldwide agribusiness relationships in San Francisco and is responsible at the policy level for the bank's extensive agricultural lending activities.

He and other leading personalities in agriculture will address livestock producers, agribusinessmen and financial experts during the symposium.

The symposium is sponsored by the Texas Tech University College of Agricultural Sciences, American National CowBelles, and the American Quarter Horse, National Cattlemen's, National Wool Growers, Ranching Heritage, Texas Cattle Feeders, Texas Sheep and Goat Raisers, and Texas and Southwestern Cattle Raisers associations.

Preceding the symposium will be the National Golden Spur Award, through which the sponsors recognize one person who has "brought distinction to, and made significant contributions to, the livestock or ranching industry."

This year's recipient will be Jay Littleton Taylor, owner and operator of farms and ranches in Texas and New Mexico. Taylor's lifetime career as rancher, businessman and public servant has paralleled the development of the cattle industry for the past half century.

Minger studied agricultural economics at the University of California's Berkeley and Davis campuses and joined the bank following his discharge from the U.S. Navy in 1946. His entire banking career, spanning 33 years, has been with the Bank of America.

He has served as the 1978 chairman of the Executive Committee, Agricultural Bankers Division of the American Bankers Association, and was appointed a member for the 1978-79 term of the U.S. Chamber of Commerce, Food and Agriculture Committee, and the International Investment Subcommittee.

A steak luncheon will be served. The pre-registration fee of $17.50 may be sent to the Ranching Heritage Association, The Museum of Texas Tech University, Lubbock, Texas 79409. The National Golden Spur and Prairie tickets are also $17.50, including a predinner party, steak dinner, entertainment and late dancing. Ranch Day tickets, including a chuckwagon lunch, are $6 for adults and $2.75 for children and for members of the Ranching Heritage Association — which has an open membership — $5 and $2.25.

COTTON GROWERS —

Don't take chances

Ambush
INSECTICIDE
Restricted use pesticide

When bollworms or tobacco budworms infest your cotton fields there's no time for half way control measures. That's why thousands of growers rely on a new insecticide AMBUSH for dependable control.

AMBUSH insecticide is applied only when insect pressure begins to build up. So you must check your fields on a regular basis. As you know, each area will vary by climate, soil type, type cotton seed variety—so check with our representative in your area, he will give you instructions on the best method of application for your particular cotton operation.

Here are some of the important advantages you get with AMBUSH insecticide: effective control of budworms and bollworms, healthier plants, earlier maturity and bigger yields. Don't delay, order your supply today.

Chemicals, Techniques Spotlighted

By KATHLEEN HARRIS
Avalanche-Journal Farm Writer

"Withdrawing all herbicides from the market would result in a $13 million loss to farmers and the need for an additional 128 million acres to maintain current crop production levels," Dr. John Abernathy, Texas Agricultural Experiment Station weed scientist, said here Thursday.

Abernathy spoke to about 250 agribusinessmen, chemical dealers and educators at the 27th annual Agricultural Chemical Conference at the Civic Center.

There are many new ideas in equipment and chemicals on the market this year, according to the scientist. One of the most promising, he said, is rope applicators.

Abernathy cited a test on silverleaf nightshade (white weed) using rope applicators saturated with one part Roundup and two parts water.

"Eleven days after the application," he noted, "the weeds were dead. The cost was $4 to $6 per acre."

Other methods for weed control that are either in use or being studied are chemical-filled canvas water bags dragged across the crop, roller applicators that create a foam by rubbing carpet with canvas, and spot sprayers.

Switching from weed problems to the matter of insects, Dr. James Leser, area entomologist, said last year's U. S. bollworm infestation caused a $16 to $20 million loss with $10 million spent to control the problem.

The scientist said a projected $30 to $40 million could have been lost if no control program had been initiated.

Scouting is the key to pest management, he said, but many farmers don't get out and check for the devastating cotton fleahoppers and bollworms until it is too late.

"Striving for early boll set and not using too much nitrogen can help control insect populations, along with proper irrigation scheduling, natural control and scouting," he said.

On the topic of integrated pest management, Dr. Ray Frisbie of College Station, executive project manager of the extension pest management program, discussed the role of universities in pest management research while Dr. Stan Nemec, a private consulting entomologist, addressed the problems and complexities of IPM.

In afternoon sessions, the institutional and commercial viewpoints of soil testing were discussed by Dr. Dale Pennington of Lubbock, area soil chemist, and Don Ankerman of Fort Lauderdale, Fla., part owner of A&L Labs.

Dr. Art Onken, soil and fertilizer scientist, talked about the institutional and commercial viewpoints of petiole analysis and foliar feeding with Alan Elengyel of Phoenix, owner of Elengyel's Agricultural Consulting Service.

Disease Threatens Iowa Beans

CHICAGO (Reuters) — The Iowa soybean crop could be reduced up to 5 percent by brown spot disease, according to Dr. Robert Nyvall, extension plant pathologist at Iowa State University.

Based on the U.S. Department of Agriculture's August estimate of production for the state of 301,550,000 bushels, that would mean a loss of up to 15,077,500 bushels, making the state's output slightly less than its 1978 production of 286,900,000 bushels.

Nyvall said between 50 and 60 percent of Iowa's acreage is infected to some degree by the fungus infection, which is flourishing because of unusually wet weather during August. Yield losses can range up to about 40 percent, he said.

The most severe cases, he said, are in central Iowa where fields often yield 45 to 50 bushels an acre. The USDA was estimating average yields in the state this year of 37 bushels, compared with 38 in 1978 and 35.5 in 1977.

Brown spot is a common disease, Nyvall said, but it is normally not severe in Iowa, which usually has dry Augusts. The infection causes premature defoliation of the plants which stops pods from filling as they should, the result is small, lightweight beans.

PLAINS AGRICULTURE

By DUANE HOWELL

MANY IN THE COTTON INDUSTRY were surprised at the U. S. Department of Agriculture's national crop estimate this week of 14,245,000 bales, up from about 13.7 million a month ago.

They were particularly befuddled by the Texas projection, which soared 400,000 bales from a month earlier and now stands at 5.6 million bales. An upward swing had not been unexpected, but the size of the increase was a major surprise.

The USDA cut the standing Texas acreage estimate by 200,000 to a new upland total of 6.9 million. Most of the reduction was in a 180,000-acre cut on the High Plains, apparently reflecting the USDA's estimate of the acreage actually destroyed by last month's hailstorms. The other 20,000-acre cut was in the Low Plains.

Some observers wondered whether the non-damaged crop on the High Plains indeed had improved enough to justify an increase of 175,000 bales from what had appeared to be an already healthy projection a month earlier in the districts of 1-North and 1-South.

THE USDA'S HIGH PLAINS ESTIMATE, which would put the area crop at an all-time high, is achievable, some veteran observers agree. But they beheve it would take exceptionally good weather for the rest of September and through October.

With "normal" weather until frost, all that can reasonably be expected at this point, there are doubts that the estimate can be attained. Bad weather, some observers believe, could mean the USDA would have to over-compensate by adjusting downward from a base that may have been too high going into September.

In late August, private estimates had indicated cotton on 358,000 acres had been severely damaged or destroyed by hail. This acreage was included in an overall damage estimate which at the time had totaled 688,000 acres.

Subsequent reports and hail in early September resulted in these estimates being increased to an overall total of around 720,000 acres damaged, including almost 375,000 in the severe to destroyed category.

The USDA estimate is based on conditions as of about Sept. 1. And the department's acreage reduction for the High Plains is almost exactly half of the hail-hit acreage which had been grouped in private estimates as of late August into the broad category of severely damaged to destroyed.

THE OFFICIAL STANDING ACREAGE estimate for 1-N and 1-S of 3,920,000 acres, some veteran observers believe, may be on the high side.

(Baleage and acreage figures in 1-S were transposed in Thursday's column. The official 1-S estimate projected a 1-S crop of 2,700,000 bales off 3,190,000 acres for an average yield of 406 pounds an acre.)

A private estimate which has been fairly reliable in the past had pegged the 25-county High Plains crop at 2,914,200 bales off 3,730,200 standing acres, an average yield of 375 pounds per acre.

The baleage estimate was up from the previous month's forecast of 2,756,700 but the standing acreage assessment was reduced by a bulging 337,000. The 25-county area is not directly comparable with the 1-N, 1-S region, but the differences in the government estimates and the private assessments are very wide, even taking into account the geographic variations.

In retrospect, it now would appear that the 25-county estimate — compiled just prior to release of the government forecast — may have been low. However, it also seems doubtful to many students of the crop that it was or is low by a margin of a whopping 500,000 bales, the rough level indicated by the USDA estimate.

This still basically is a late crop, despite remarkable progress on the non-damaged acreage during August. And, with the crop just now entering the peak period of fiber development, somewhere between the range of 2.9 million to 3.4 million bales would appear to be a more realistic assessment of its potential.

THE USDA'S NATIONAL ESTIMATE was higher than the top end of the range of projections heard prior to the report. A survey by Balfour, MacLaine, Inc., had pegged the crop at 13.6 million bales. Estimates in the survey of merchants, mills and shippers ranged from a low of 12.8 million to a high of 14.1 million bales.

Cotton Inc. had the crop estimated at 14.055 million bales. A survey of state extension cotton specialists placed the crop at 13.347 million bales. This survey had the Texas crop at 4.888 million bales, well below most private assessments, off 6.8 million standing acres for an average yield of 345 pounds per acre.

Most projections on the Texas crop had appeared to range from about 5.1 million to 5.4 million bales, with a cluster of opinions around 5.2 million to 5.3 million bales.

The High Plains and the Low Plains accounted for a combined 355,000 bales of the USDA's increase in the Texas estimate from the August forecast. The Low Plains estimate was hiked 180,000 bales to what is believed to be a record high for that area of 1,080,000 bales.

COTTON FUTURES CLOSED DOWN 125 to 137 points in the two front months Thursday on the heels of the USDA's bearish crop estimate.

Some late commission house short covering and speculative buying lifted prices from extreme lows, floor brokers said. Volume was estimated at an active 8,850 lots, but much of the trading was centered in spurts at the opening and close.

Sources said the cotton crop for the most part escaped the wrath of Hurricane Frederic. Cooler temperatures on the High Plains, where Lubbock recorded above-average readings in early September, were being watched.

Temperatures at Lubbock for the first seven days of September averaged 89.7 degrees for the maximum and 66.0 degrees for the minimum, according to National Weather Service data. These compared with normals for the period of 87.1 and 61.6 degrees.

Livestock Futures Mart Surges Back From Prior Day Declines

By Reuters

CHICAGO — Cattle futures closed 50 to 137 points higher led by October and December Thursday on the Chicago Mercantile Exchange. Sales totaled 30,020 cars. Prices were higher from the start with October up the limit level of 50 after a limit loss Wednesday.

Aggressive local and commission house buying was touched off ahead of an expected constructive cattle on feed report today. The light pace of slaughter and fresh gains in beef at noon were added incentives. Prices were lifted to near previous highs.

Wholesale beef was unchanged to up 1 at 104 to 105¼ cents a pound, f.o.b. river points. Cash cattle were steady to up 50 cents with the best top $70 per hundredweight. Omaha's top was $69. Slaughter was 112,000 head. About 4,950 head are expected today at the major markets.

Feeder cattle futures closed 40 to 120 points higher led by October. Volume was 3,085 lots. The market was up 132 in September after a brief loss of 35 in August.

The market rebounded after Wednesday's limit decline on spillover support from the live cattle pit on the prospect of a constructive cattle on feed report. Strength in cash feeder cattle and beef were also positive influences.

Deliveries total 85 thus far. Cash feeder cattle were steady to up $3 with the best top $130 per hundredweight at San Antonio. Receipts at the major terminals today are expected to be 2,525 head.

Hog futures closed 65 lower to 62 higher on 8,724 lots. Distant December was off the most with April and June up the most. Prices were up 90 to off 70.

The market reacted after bulging to the highest since March on mixed local and commission house buying. Traders noted mostly higher cash hogs despite increased arrivals. Reaction was traced to profit taking after two limit advances.

Wholesale hams were up 2 at 68 to 72 cnets a pound, f.o.b. river. Cash hogs were up 50 to off 25 cents with the best top $40.75 per hundredweight. Kill was 112,000 head. The markets today are expecting about 25,500 head.

Pork belly (bacon) futures closed 10 to 65 lower with February under the most pressure. Sales totaled 8,361 cars. The market reacted after two limit advances and an early gain of 135 to the highest since May. July was down 120.

Profit taking was attributed to heavy pace of hog slaughter and prospects of another sizable Saturday kill. Much of the early buying spilled over them the cattle pits.

Cattle Raisers To Expand Membership

FORT WORTH (Special) — The Texas and Southwestern Cattle Raisers Association will extend membership to livestock and ranch-oriented businesses for the first time in its 102-year history, says John B. Armstrong, president.

"We feel that cattlemen and their agribusiness partners can deal more effectively with mutual problems and goals by pooling their resources and efforts," he said. "TSCRA is in its second century of service to cattlemen and with the enthusiasm, growth potential and clout 'allied industry' membership will provide, this association can do an even better job."

The new membership will cost $250 a year and is tax deductible.

The mainstream of TSCRA allied industry membership is expected to come from animal health product suppliers, feed and grain dealers, commodity firms, automobile dealerships, equipment distributors, agricultural chemical companies and lending institutions at a local, state and national level, he said.

Grain Futures

CHICAGO (AP) — Grain and soybean futures rose sharply Thursday in the wake of a lower-than-expected government estimate of this year's U.S. soybean crop and the Soviet grain crop.

Wheat, corn, oats and soybeans opened higher and maintained increasing gains throughout the trading session, with bullish sentiments buoyed by sharply higher silver futures.

But the main factor was the Agriculture Department's crop report after the close Wednesday. The department cut its estimate of Soviet grain production this year to 180 million metric tons, some 10 to 20 million tons less than expected by floor traders.

The department also projected a 2.17 billion bushel U.S. soybean harvest this fall, less than expected by traders. Trade reports of a substantial vegetable oil purchase by India also encouraged buying, analysts said.

The department lowered its estimate of total world grain production, due in part to crop problems in the Soviet Union and India which could not be offset completely by this year's blockbuster U.S. crops.

Meeting With Lubbock Officials Turns Into Gripe Session

By SYLVIA TEAGUE
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Progress on getting an overpass or underpass built at East 34th Street and Quirt Avenue has been satisfactory so far, about 40 East Lubbock residents agreed Wednesday night, but they said city officials haven't been doing such a good job in solving other neighborhood problems.

However, the meeting became a forum for an airing of gripes about other problems as well.

Lubbock Digest publisher T.J. Patterson, who organized this and two prior meetings on the intersection, said the citizen involvement had produced some action from city officials.

In reviewing what has been done on the intersection, Bertram told the group Lubbock voters approved a bond issue in May 1977 which included $574,000 to improve the intersection.

However, the railroad companies which own the tracks and right of way at the intersection resisted the city's suggestion for another "at-grade crossing," insisting instead on an overpass.

About the same time negotiations bogged down with the railroad companies, Bertram said the state highway department offered to give the city $60,000 to install crossing bars and flashing lights at the crossing.

However, residents who attended the initial meeting in May firmly rejected the suggestion that the crossing devices be installed, saying it might delay city action on an overpass or underpass.

Most recently, Bertram said, the city council approved $10,000 to perform a feasibility study on construction of an interchange like that sought by the neighbors which is expected to cost approximately $3 million.

It will take at least a month to select an engineering firm to do the study, Bertram said, and then the study will take about three months to complete.

Those attending the meeting urged the council to be "flexible" in evaluating the study, and West said the council could accept or reject all or part of the study.

West and McAlister said they are hopeful this study will show the need for such an overpass or underpass so the state might bear some of the construction costs.

Without state funds, West said a bond issue might be required to pay for the construction and in light of the recent taxpayers revolt predicted bond issues would not have much success at the polls.

"I think you'd get your brains beat out on anything right now," West said. "The timing's poor.

Because the city staff would be writing specifications for the study, McAlister said he is hopeful the overall transportion needs of the neighborhood can be examined in the study and possibly influence the highway department's decision on funding the project.

Approval Expected Soon For McHenry

WASHINGTON (AP) — Donald F. McHenry appeared briefly Thursday at a hearing of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, which is considering his nomination as U.S. ambassador to the United Nations.

Only the committee chairman, Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho, was present for the hearing on McHenry's nomination. The session lasted less than 10 minutes.

The committee is expected to recommend the nomination be approved. Senate confirmation was expected soon afterward.

Church told McHenry, 42, he was "exceedingly well qualified to take over, based on your previous experience."

McHenry was deputy to Andrew Young, who resigned in the controversy over his meeting with a representative of the Palestine Liberation Organization. There was no mention of Young or the controversy at the hearing.

John Adams and Thomas Jefferson, the second and third presidents of the United States, died in 1826.

Vessels' Lore On Display At Canyon

CANYON (Special) — The archeological finds from three Spanish ships sunk off the coast of Texas in 1554 will be displayed from Sunday until Nov. 6 at the Panhandle Plains Historical Museum.

"Treasure, people, ships and dreams" is the name given to the 16th century antiquities and historical data being displayed around the state in conjunction with the Texas Antiquities Committee and individual museums.

In April of 1554, four ships set sail for Spain. They were the Santa Maria de Yciar, San Esteban, Espiritu Santo and the San Andres.

A severe storm forced the ships off course and all but the San Andres were grounded against the South Texas coast which at the time was known as Costa de Madalena.

Some of the artifacts to be displayed at the Panhandle Plains Historical Museum from the wreckage of the ships include the oldest known astrolabe (a navigation center) dated from 1545, a crossbow, a cannon, a coin display, shipboard tools and passengers' personal relics.

Heartline

(Heartline is a service for senior citizens. Its purpose is to answer questions and solve problems — fast. If you have a question or a problem not answered in these columns, write Heartline, 114 East Dayton Street, West Alexandria, Ohio 45381. You will receive a prompt reply, but you must include a stamped, self-addressed envelope. The most useful replies will be printed in this column.)

HEARTLINE: One of our friends was in a tough spot as he was just starting as an insurance agent and he had to go to school to take the course. He has a family, was working parttime and he wanted us to give him a loan. He did very well in payments for the first 20 months. Then things sort of fell apart, and he started paying a lesser amount each month. We agreed that he would have to pay us interest. Well, he has not yet paid us back the full amount nor the interest and is now going to the bank for a loan. We are wondering what will happen next, as he owes us this money and interest. We will appreeiate any advice — L.P.

We can only advise that you obtain the services of an attorney (or Legal Aid if you can not afford to pay much), especially if you see that your friend is not going to pay you back. We assume that you have a contract or some legal document that he has signed obligating him to pay the amount back with interest. If not, your chances may be slim in court, if court becomes a necessary course to take.

We advise our readers to exercise caution when loaning money to friends, associates, or even relatives. Quite often, winning in court does not always mean that you will be paid what you have loaned.

Again we wish to point out that Heartline does not give legal advice or attempt to solve problems of a legal nature. We do, from time to time, give a general answer in our column, but we can not give individual legal counsel.

HEARTLINE: My mother is 90 years old, on SSI and in a care home. She still has some furniture in her house and wants to dispose of it. Are the children allowed to sell it? Or, may we divide it between ourselves? Or, must it be turned over to the Welfare Department? — C.H.

In most states, the administrators of Supplemental Security Income (SSI) will not lay claim to a few pieces of furniture, or even several pieces of used or inexpensive furniture. If the furniture is considered to be rare antiques and quite valuable, however, that is another matter. If you are referring to old or new furniture of little value, it is unlikely it would have any affect on your mother's SSI. To be sure, notify the county Welfare office and your local Social Security Office of your intent to sell it or to divide it among her children.

HEARTLINE: I have written to the VA three times during the last three months. They won't answer me. I fought in World War II and gave an arm for my country. The least they can do is answer my letter. What do you suggest I do? — R.W.

We checked into your problem. We find that in each case you included your name and address but no serial number or claim number.

The VA, like most other agencies, does its filing by serial or claim number. If you do not include your number in your letter, then they have no idea who you are. Considering the hundreds of thousands of files they maintain, this does not seem unusual. So, try writing them again, and this time include your serial or claim number. You'll get an answer.

EXXON SUIT

PITTSBURGH (AP) — A suit alleging Exxon Nuclear Co. reneged on an agreement to deliver uranium for use in nuclear power production has been filed in federal court. The suit was filed by Duquesne Light Co. and members of the Central Area Power Coordination Group. A spokesman for Exxon Nuclear said Thursday that he expected the suit to be withdrawn if negotiations scheduled for this month were successful.

Mustangs Control Tempo To Whip Dunbar 16-0

By CHUCK McDONALD
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

Somehow, it just didn't seem fair.

Those nasty 'ol Coronado Mustangs just wouldn't let Dubar have the ball in the second half Thursday night at Lowrey Field. And you don't need Howard Cosell's big vocabulary to know that you just can't score without the football.

In fact, Dunbar didn't score — not a single point as they dropped a 16-0 decision to Coronado in Lubbock's first inter-city match of the year.

But it wasn't until the third quarter when the Mustangs broke the game open. The first half had ended in a 0-0 deadlock and neither team looked impressive. But good gosh, that third quarter was something else.

The Mustangs scored on drives of 67 and 91 yards, the first resulting in a 26-yard Ricky Melvin field-goal and the second a 30-yard TD pass from Alan Harp to John Lord, in the third frame to take a 10-0 lead.

If that's not enough, the Mustangs had 10 first downs while allowing the Panthers no first downs and no yards gained. In fact, the total Dunbar offense in the third period was minus-11 yards.

The Panthers only snapped the ball eight times in the third quarter and twice it was to punt. And things didn't get any better for them in the fourth period. But at the intermission it was still anybody's ballgame — as the 0-0 score indicated.

"We just weren't putting everything together in the first half," said Coronado boss Jack Quarles. "We were moving the ball but we couldn't put it in. But we're a young team — and we came around in the second half."

Coronado, which finished with 316 total yards, had only 98 in the first half. The Panthers, who have yet to score a point in two outings, ended with 74 total yards — 67 of those came in the first half.

The big ground gainer for the Mustangs was Lance Washam who had 12 carries for 66 yards — all but seven of those yards coming in the second half. Noel Medrano also had 12 totes for 50 yards.

But there were so many people carrying the ball for Coronado that it was hard to keep up with the fresh faces and numbers. Ten players carried the ball for the Coronado unit that gained 234 yards on the ground.

"We have a lot of people fighting for positions," said Quarles. "And so we let them all play, we let them all have a shot at it.

Quarterback Alan Harp put the ball in the air 13 times Thursday night, completing six. The biggie was the touchdown to Lord, who had four receptions for 60 yards.

There was nothing fancy about the Coronado offense in the second half — the Mustangs just went out and ran the ball right up the middle. Washam broke for a couple of big gainers early in the third period and that set the tone for the rest of the contest.

"They (Dunbar) had taken the middle away from us late in the first half," said Quarles. "So we made some adjustments at the half. We had our fullback run a slightly different route and we sent the halfback out in front of him to block on the linebackers."

Fabian Garcia was the leading rusher for DHS, picking up 31 yards on 12 carries. Quarterback James Nelson attempted nine passes, completing one for 21 yards.

"Coronado was just a better team than we were tonight," said a tight-lipped Jefferson after the contest. "I guess they just wore us down."

The Mustangs last score of the night came early in the fourth period when they got their fourth interception of the night and ground out 75 yards before Noel Medrano crashed over from the 2-yard line. Dane Boyles, who finished with 41 yards on only six carries, keyed the drive with two big runs.

Tech Knows How New Mexico Feels

CHANCES ARE, THERE IS at least one sportswriter sitting in Albuquerque at this very moment predicting the University of New Mexico's big upset of Texas Tech Saturday.

Boy, is that guy in for a little surprise!

What he doesn't know is that one week ago at this very moment, I was that one sportswriter in Lubbock predicting Tech's big upset victory over the University of Southern California. Remember that emotional skyrocket? It fizzled out after entering the stratosphere.

There are several similarities between the Tech-New Mexico matchup and last week's Tech-Southern Cal clash. The only difference is that the similarities are working in reverse.

Last week, Tech had everything to gain by knocking off USC. This week, New Mexico is the team that stands to benefit greatly with an upset victory.

Last week, Tech was emotionally as high for a game as a college football team can get — because the Red Raiders had their sights set on dumping the No. 1 team in the country. This week New Mexico will be higher than that proverbial kite for Tech. A win in Lubbock means just as much, if not more, than a win in Fort Collins or Provo or Cheyenne.

IN MANY WAYS, ESPECIALLY incentive-wise, Tech is to UNM what USC was to Tech. And the Lobos make it a point to come out with both barrels blazing against the Red Raiders.

A victory is a victory in any athletic endeavor and New Mexico already has two of those precious items under their belts. The Lobos flattened Louisiana Tech and Oregon State.

Now I'm not trying to take anything away from New Mexico, but I think they'll find out Saturday that Tech is a much better football team than those first two opponents were.

My upset prediction didn't come true last week, but I saw one heck of a Tech team give their all against the Trojans. And the Trojans will tell you they were glad to get out of town with a victory and all in one piece.

Tech's defense caught my eye last week and I expect that hard-charging unit to be the key in Saturday's contest. I don't expect New Mexico quarterback Brad Wright to pass for any 400-plus yards and I don't expect the Lobos to score more than 14 points.

Hey, you sportswriter in Albuquerque. If you haven't caught my drift yet, take it from a guy who knows what he's talking about. There won't be any upsets Saturday evening at Jones Stadium. You can take that advice to the bank. Texas Tech by 10 points.

All Southwest Conference squads, with the exception of Texas, will be in action this Saturday. Last week, I picked three of five games correctly. I guess my crystal ball wasn't as clear as I had hoped.

But don't fret. I made the necessary adjustments and feel safe to say that I'll bat a perfect 1.000 this time around. Just hang on to your hats!

TEXAS A&M AT BAYLOR

The Aggies still have to be smarting from that one-point loss to Brigham Young last week. Baylor did win, but not without a struggle against little Lamar.

But this is Southwest Conference action now, so you can throw away any pertinent facts or statistics you may have. They don't mean a thing.

I say the Aggies have more talent and talent is usually what wins football games. Therefore, A&M should come out on top. The Aggies by six.

TEXAS CHRISTIAN AT SOUTHERN METHODIST

There will be a long prayer before this game gets underway.

F.A. Dry's dislike for SMU head coach Ron Meyer could give the Frogs a slight emotional edge. But again, an overabundance of talent wins out in the end.

Ol' nice guy Meyer won't be doing Dry any favors when he lets Eric Dickerson and Craig James out of the stable. Mustang Mania by a baker's dozen.

FLORIDA AT HOUSTON

Bill Yeoman's Cougars seem to have difficulties with those teams from east of the Mississippi. Last year it was Memphis State that shocked the Coogs the first week out of the blocks, 17-3.

I hope the Houston players don't start slapping hands Saturday until the final gun sounds. The Cougars by seven points.

TULANE AT RICE

I thought Tulane's football fortunes were on the downswing after several miserable seasons, but the Green Wave showed new life last Saturday by knocking off Stanford.

It's not easy to go against Rice. Ray Alborn is a great coach and he's worked hard to turn another dying program around. Maybe it will end up a draw.

Sorry. There will be no deadlocks here. The Owls will go into the game with something they haven't had in years past — a running game. It won't help that much. Tulane by three.

COLORADO STATE AT ARKANSAS

Head coach Lou Holtz will be able to perform magic tricks at halftime to entertain his Razorbacks. That's how bad I think Colorado State is.

Arkansas will be a little rusty the first time out, but it won't take them long to build up a comfortable lead against the Rams, 33-17 losers to Arizona two weeks ago.

There's no magic involved in the final score. How about the Hogs by about 21?

DICK JENNINGS PROUDLY DISPLAYS WORLD SENIORS TROPHY.

Lubbock Golfer Attains Senior Golfers' Dream

By CHUCK McDONALD
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

Golf for Lubbock lawyer Dick Jennings is a deadly serious business.

For that reason Jennings, long regarded as one of the top golfers in West Texas, hasn't been too active in local partnership tournaments the last couple of years.

Jennings has had more important things on his mind. Namely competing in the World Senior Golf Championships tournament at the Broadmoor Country Club in Colorado Springs.

Jennings made the trip to Colorado during the last week in August for the week-long tournament and came back with dual honors. Not only did the Lubbockite claim the low-medalist honors for the third time in five years, but he also walked away with his first tournament championship.

Under the tourney format, all of the golfers played two qualifying rounds to narrow the field to just 32 golfers. Jennings led the entire field with an even-par score of 75-69 — 144. That gained him medalist honors. Then the top 32 players began match play competition.

Jennings waltzed five rounds of dual matches to claim the prestigious victory. And for a flatlander from Lubbock, the victory at 8,000 feet was no easy accomplishment.

"It's quite an adjustment," he said. "The first year I went up there it was pretty rough. Like they say in those Coors commercials — 'it's not flat land beer,' well it's definitely not flat-land golf."

The 1979 tourney was the 17th annual extravaganza at Broadmoor, and Jennings' dual victory as both the low medalist and the match play champion was a first in the history of the tournament.

"In match play," explained Jennings, "all you need is one bad round and you're out of it. That's why it has been so hard for the medalist to win the tournament."

Jennings should know. Twice the Lubbock golfer has claimed the low-medalist title only to be elimiated in match play, although he did win the championship consolation flight in 1976. But an even bigger thrill lies ahead for Jennings.

Next year, by virtue of his victory in '79, he'll be able to compete on the United States team during the international cup competition at the same tourney.

Team competition is also held during the same week at the tournament. Jennings said the tournament was founded to promote international goodwill.

"Teams come from all over the world to compete," he said. "There are an awful lot of good golfers up there, and we have a lot of fun.

"But at the same time," he added. "Everybody's dead serious about their golf. And that's how I like to compete."

The captain of the U.S. team for the last two years has been ex-president Gerald Ford, who will be on the team again next year. Naturally Jennings is excited about playing with the ex-president.

"I haven't even been able to get close to him in the past," he said. "He's always got 10-12 security men around him. The only people that really get to talk with him are the U.S. team, and the people they're playing against."

Jennings, a 1-3 handicap golfer, should be quite an addition to the U.S. team. More so than the ex-president, who's a 12-14 handicapper.

"I think I'm a better golfer than he is," says Jennings with a laugh. "But then he was a lot better president than me."

Coach Kelley, Mats Know Spoiler Role

By CHUCK McDONALD
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

Estacado coach Louis Kelley isn't just blowing smoke when he says that the underdog is always capable of knocking off the favorite in any football game.

He ought to know because his Matadors pulled a major upset just one week ago when they surprised heavily-favored Plainview last weekend. Tonight it is the Matadors' turn to play the favorite's role when they face the Lubbock High Westerners at 8 o'clock at Lowrey Field.

But the Estacado-Lubbock contest will only be the second game in a unique double-header at Lowrey today. At 4 p.m. Monterey will host Wichita Falls Rider in the opening contest. Once those two teams have cleared the field, the second game will get underway.

"Anybody can get beat," said Kelley. "Heck, we proved that last week. But we're not going to lay down now. We know that Lubbock High is a better team than they showed against Borger last week."

The Westerners fell to Borger 21-7 last Thursday and that, says LHS coach Army Salinas, didn't help the Westerner program.

"We're trying to build some enthusiasm here," said Salinas at Wednesday's press conference at the 50-Yard Line Restaurant. "But it's hard to build that feeling when you lose.

"Enthusiasm is something that can't be taught," he added. "It has to be caught."

Kelley is just hoping that his Matadors don't get caught napping in the early going tonight.

"Whoever can score first should have a lot of momentum," said Kelley. "I hope we play as well as we did last week, but it's always a hard-fought game when we play Lubbock High."

Last year when the two teams met, the Matadors trounced the Westerners 27-0. But Kelley said the game was closer than the score indicated.

"We got four turnovers and cashed them in for touchdowns," he said. "The furthest we ever had to drive was about 30 yards."

Even if the Westerners don't hand over the gifts against the Mats tonight, they're going to have their hands full. Estacado has four running backs that could all see considerable action in Kelvin White, George Irvin, Alvin Davis and Stacy Burrell.

Salinas, who viewed the Estacado-Plainview game, is well aware of the capabilities of the Matador backfield.

"I was impressed with the people that they had come in there late in the game at running back," said the LHS coach.

One such youngster was George Irvin, who came at tailback in the final period and scored the Mats go-ahead touchdown. Irvin carried the ball only three times against Plainview but Kelley said that the senior should see more action tonight.

Another Estacado back who could see more playing time is fullback Alvin Davis, who'll start in place of Burrell — although both will play considerably. Burrell started for the Matadors last week.

Estacado is currently ranked No. 2 in the state in three AAA polls — AP, UPI and the Harris poll.

The high ranking also gives all of Estacado's opponents something to shoot for — and Kelley knows it.

"They (Lubbock High) will be trying to knock us off," said Kelley. "But we want to maintain our momentum from last week."

MONTEREY—WICHITA RIDER

James Odom "feels good" about Monterey's 35-7 win over Canyon last week. And maybe that's why the MHS head coach sounds so optimistic about the Plainsmen's chances against Wichita Falls Rider.

"I think we've got a much better team (than the one that lost to Rider 17-0 last year)," commented Odom. "Now all we have to do is continue to improve."

The key to beating Rider, which opened the season with a 14-10 win over Abilene High, is "ball control and elimination of mistakes", according to Odom.

"Against Canyon we controlled the ball," pointed out Odom. "But we made too many mistakes. We can't afford to have the penalties against Rider like we did against Canyon."

Last week, the Plainsmen were indeed plagued with penalties, particularly offensive holding. MHS was flagged nine times for 101 yards.

Gone from Rider is quarterback Maurice Knight who ran and passed the Plainsmen silly in last year's encounter. Although his departure will be missed — and not by Monterey — Odom says Rider is still "extremely strong in the key positions."

Injuries Force Dockery To Change Tech Lineup

Senior Mark Johnson will start in place of sophomore Mark Olbert at tailback and junior Don Earl will replace Alan Swann at right cornerback when the Texas Tech Red Raiders host the University of New Mexico Lobos at 7:30 p.m. Saturday at Jones Stadium.

Olbert suffered a back injury during last week's Southern California contest. He is expected to return to duty next week.

Earl, a 5-8, 175-pounder from Stamford, took over for Swann last week during the USC game. Swann reinjured a knee that had undergone surgery in April.

Swann's knee injury is not as bad as Tech coaches had feared it would be and there is a chance the sophomore from Odessa Permian could be ready for action in three weeks.

The Red Raiders this week also lost junior offensive tackle Mark Gesch for the season. Gesch underwent surgery for a back problem and will be red-shirted.

The remainder of Tech's starting units will be the same players who started the Southern Cal game.

Joining Earl in the defensive backfield will be senior Willie Stephens at cornerback and junior Ted Watts at free safety. Flowers or Randle will go at strong safety.

Senior Bill Adams will be handling the kicking duties and sophomore Maury Buford, the nation's leading punter after one week, will be punting.

Title Game Rematch Set Tonight

By ERIC GALE
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

Preseason expectations gave way to either re-enforced optimism or first-game depression following the opening week of high school football in eastern New Mexico.

Clovis, Lovington, Portales, Tatum and Texico High Schools all will try to double their winnings tonight while Hobbs, Eunice and Jal seek initial dividends.

Clovis, the state's Class AAAA champion last year, will meet Albuquerque Cibola, the team it defeated 29-3 in the 1978 title game, in Clovis.

The Wildcats thumped Los Alamos 28-3 and rolled up 291 yards of total-offense last week, but Coach Eric Roanhaus envisions no cherry-picking against Cibola.

"We don't think Cibola is as strong as last year," Roanhaus said, "but they're a good school. They have a real good defense and we'll have to play well to win."

Portales humbled Muleshoe all-state quarterback Dean Northcutt and won 7-2 in its opener. Northcutt, who defeated the Rams almost single-handedly last season, was held to 17 yards rushing and completed only one pass in eight attempts.

Coach Tommy Gruber, victorious in his head-coaching debut at Portales, hopes to maintain a perfect record at Goddard, which lost to Roswell 35-0 in its season-opener.

"I've got to give a lot of credit to our kids," Gruber said. "We showed some unity and played strictly a team effort. We needed it bad ... we needed to beat a team of Muleshoe's caliber to give us confidence in our new system and in ourselves."

Coach Kerry Scott, of Tatum, termed his Coyotes' 44-6 victory over Vaughn a "pretty good opening-day performance."

"We did a good job," Scott added. "Before the game, I thought the defense was a question mark, but the defense looked quite a bit stronger than I expected. I'm glad, but I worry about it, too. It was not a real test."

Scott hopes that tonight's game at home against Carrizozo will be a more accurate barometer of his team's abilities. That may not be the case.

"Carrizozo didn't look real good in the scrimmage we saw them play with Vaughn," Scott said. "They're still adapting to a new system and this will be their first game. That will give us an advantage right there."

The Texico Wolverines paid little heed to Coach Paul Topliff's prediction that the season-opener with Mountainair would likely be low-scoring. Texico, which trailed 14-0 in the first period, scored 43 unanswered points en route to a lop-sided victory in which the Wolverine offense totalled 485 yards.

"We were real happy with it because I thought that we might possibly get beat," Topliff said. "Mountainair's a big team — one of the top three Class A teams in the state — and I didn't know how we'd handle their size."

Topliff ranked defending state champion Hagerman, and then his own Wolverines, as New Mexico's finest Class A outfits, respectively.

Lubbock's Christ the King, which visits Texico tonight, defeated the Wolverines 9-7 last season, one of only two defeats suffered by Topliff's state runners-up in '78.

"King is what I call a tough son of a gun," Topliff said. "They're a Texas school, and they play better ball in Texas; I don't care what people in New Mexico say. We've got to stop their running game, because their backs are awesome. Our kids are anxious."

Lovington stung Dexter 41-7 last week, and is at home to Jal, which fell to NMMI 32-7 in its first game.

Jal coach David Fouts indicated that his Panthers did not perform as poorly as the score would suggest, while Lovington's Hugh Clardy feels that his team's play was honestly represented by the scoreboard.

"We used everybody on our squad," Clardy said, "and the defense looked super. We expected this kind of performance and yet it was a morale-builder for us. We wanted to score more but we had to hold it down by playing a lot of people."

"Lovington will be another toughie for us," Fouts said, of his Class AAA opponent. Jal is a AA school.

"They think they'll be able to compete for the Class AAA crown. We were hit by four TD passes last week, so we'll have to improve on that."

Eunice, defending Class AA titlist, was strangled by Seagraves 40-6. Coach Ed Davis hopes to avoid a similar fate against another Texas school, Van Horn, at home tonight.

"Seagraves is a top-notch club," Davis said. "They did everything well. Van Horn has a lot of speed, and they are a bigger school than Seagraves, but I wouldn't compare anybody to Seagraves. They're in a class all their own."

Hobbs was shut out by Artesia 7-0 last week, and hosts Big Spring tonight.

"I was as disappointed as I've ever been," said Hobbs coach Jim Cromartie, of his opener. "I thought we were at the point where we'd go out and play up to our capabilities regardless of the competition and pressure. We'll have to make some adjustments in our offense against Big Spring: in our pass defense, in our blocking up front, in everything we do."

Win Not Enough For Hale Center Coach

By RUSS PARSONS
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

Even though his Owls took Bovina apart 29-0 last Friday night, Hale Center coach Skip Humphries wasn't at all pleased.

"We looked terrible," he said. "We just didn't do anything right. Of course they (Bovina) didn't help. They were pretty weak. They were real poor.

"If we had been playing the kind of game we're capable of there's no telling what the score would have been. But we only had one scrimmage. You could classify this as our second scrimmage really, and it looked like it."

Those are harsh words, but Humphries no doubt thinks he needed to say them. The Owls take on Kress, a 43-8 victor over Class B power Silverton.

"It should be a heck of a ballgame," Humphries said. "Shoot, I guess so. They've got some good football players, not just offensively either. We're gonna have all we want with them."

Humphries said mental errors were what "killed" Hale Center last weekend. "We had 220 yards in penalties last week," he said. "Physically I think we can play. Mental errors are what kill us.

"I'll tell you what, If we make the same mental errors this week we might be embarrassed."

Kress coach Al Mitts sees the contest somewhat differently. "They pulled out just real quick last week," he said of the Owls. "They've got pretty tough running backs and a pretty tough line. To me, they look about as tough as a boot."

Of his Kangaroos, Mitts said, "We were pretty pleased last week, partially with the offense and partially with the defense. Offensively we played a real fine game. Defensively we had some problems with people knowing their techniques.

"If we don't correct taht it'll be a slaughter," he said. "They'll kill us."

In a reversal of the normal situation, Class A O'Donnell is hoping to be able to stay on the field with high-flying Klondike of Class B.

"They've got a big team," says first-year O'Donnell coach Merle Kilpatrick. "They're real big, they've got some speed and experience, too.

"Oh gosh," he said, sounding somewhat faint of heart, "I don't know what we're going to do. We are really going to be outweighed across the front and a lot of those people we've got down in the trenches are inexperienced."

Klondike coach Mickey Finley, hot off a 42-0 drubbing of Borden County (O'Donnell lost to Class B Wilson 6-0) says it's not really all that bad.

"They say they're overweight but I don't know," Finley said. "Our nose man only weighs 140 pounds and our defensive ends are 155 and 170. Our tackles are big boys, they're both in the 230s."

Kilpatrick says his offensive line weighs an average of 162 each. What is he going to do against such an obstacle?

"We're just going to get after them the best we can," he said. "Our kids'll get after them. They may be intimidated by the size a little at first.

"We've been working on aggressiveness. They're going to have to stay low. If we can open a few little holes through that line the backs will have some room to run."

He'd better hope his Dragons have better luck than Borden County did. Defensive lineman James Martin (a mere 230) had 20 tackles for Klondike in that game, 15 of them solo. Backing him up, Marty Trevino and Lonnie Ferguson had 14 each.

Last year one of the things that turned Muleshoe into district champions was a win over Floydada in a non-conference game. Whirlwind head coach L.G. Wilson says his FHS troops don't want revenge.

"We'd like to forget about last year," he said. "When you talk about revenge you're talking about losing and we don't like to talk about losing."

There wasn't much talk of losing around Whirlwind country this week. Floydada took apart Dimmitt 40-6.

"That was a real good offensive showing," Wilson said. "Defense-wise it wasn't quite as good as we wanted but we kind of expected that. We're kind of young and inexperienced.

"Heck, we're playing seven people both ways. Usually I like to two-platoon as much as I can before district so we can get everybody some playing time but this year we just can't. I think that will hurt us once we get on down into the season."

Last week the Mules lost 7-2 to New Mexico Class AAA Portales but coach Mike Wartes isn't upset. "We're young and we're inexperienced but we're getting better," he said.

"We feel like we're improving every day. We had a chance to win it (the Portales game). We had the ball on the goal-line and just didn't get it in. We're not that dissatisfied with our performance."

Indeed, Wilson says his scouts were very impressed with the Mules.

"They looked quick and aggressive," Wilson said. "Maybe they don't have the power they did last year but I think they're a little bit quicker.

"Plus they've got that (linebacker Sam) Whalin on defense and that (quarterback Mike) Northcutt kid on offense. That's a good nucleus of leaders."

Wartes was even more impressed with the Whirlwinds.

"We think they look awful strong," he said. "That Mac Collins and that quarterback (Troy Marquis). . . That guy can really throw the football. He's as good as we've seen.

Yastrzemski Waited Long Time For Hit

BOSTON (AP) — Carl Yastrzemski, the son of a Long Island potato farmer, nestled into his niche in baseball's pantheon Thursday, among the other hard-hitting heroes who are part of the sport's lore.

The City of Boston honored the Boston Red Sox star and the kudos continued to wash over the 40-year-old slugger whose Polish name — once a unpronounceable mystery to fans — is now in the statistical company of such elite as Cobb, Speaker, Lajoie, Anson, Wagner, Mays, Musial and Aaron.

At 9:39 p.m. Wednesday, Yaz bounced a single into right field off New York Yankee right-hander Jim Beattie — a native New Englander from South Portland, Maine — for his 3,000th hit.

"I grew up idolizing Yastrzemski," said the pitcher, who was six years old when Yaz broke in with Boston in 1961.

As has been trumpeted for weeks, Yastrzemski — who never has had 200 hits in one of his 19 American League seasons — is the first in AL history to couple 3,000 with at least 400 homers.

"Your next milestone is Cooperstown," said league secretary Bob Holbrook, alluding to eventual election to the Hall of Fame.

He thanked God for giving him a superb body. But it was Yaz himself who honed it, enabling him to play 2,850 games so far — more than all but four of the other 14 players who achieved 3,000 hits.

Fans thanked Yaz for their memories and Yastrzemski thanked the fans. He had been a gracious host this week. Family and friends had come to Boston waiting for the big moment and Yaz had wined and dined them.

After picking up one hefty dinner tab, Yaz cracked that hit No. 3,000 was "the most expensive of my career."

And despite a pressurized hitting slump as he struggled to reach the elusive goal, Yaz retained his composure.

He was patient with the pack of reporters and photographers, saying after a hitless Tuesday, "I came over to talk to you guys just to find out what you could possibly ask me."

And Wednesday afternoon, under immense pressure before the big hit, Yaz recorded a public service message for the Navy, to be heard by faraway sailors at Christmas time.

First, however, he ad-libbed a couple of good-humored bawdy versions that doubtless would please the men at sea, but will henceforth be heard only by the Navy brass.

It's nineteen years since he was dubbed "the new Ted Williams." And Yaz reached his milestone with a sigh of relief — and a sense of humor.

Ann Meyers Fails NBA Test

By The Associated Press

Ann Meyers won't be in uniform but Bill Walton, Larry Bird and Magic Johnson will when the 22 National Basketball Association teams open their preseason training camps this weekend.

Miss Meyers, trying to become the first woman to play in the NBA, failed to survive the Indiana Pacers' rookie camp earlier this week. The Pacers were among several clubs to hold special workouts for rookies and free agent hopefuls prior to the veterans' reporting date.

Miss Myers got the bad news from Bobby Leonard, the Pacers' coach and general manager, Wednesday night.

"If she was six inches bigger and 40 pounds heavier, it would have been a different story," Leonard said of the 5-foot-9, 140-pound Meyers, a former UCLA All-American and sister of Dave Meyers of the Milwaukee Bucks.

But as it is, Meyers won't be among the players reporting to the Pacers' regular preseason camp, which opens Friday. It hasn't been determined what her role will be with the team, which signed her to a $50,000 guaranteed contract, but she may work as a radio or television commentator.

The Pacers are among 17 NBA teams who will open their preseason camps Friday. By Monday all clubs will be holding two-a-day workouts in prepaation for the start of the exhibition schedule next Thursday. The regular season begins Oct. 12.

Walton, Bird and Johnson are three new faces NBA officials are counting on to give the league a boost this season.

Walton, the 6-foot-11 center who led Portland to the NBA title in 1977 and was the league's most valuable player the following season, signed a $1 million a year contract with San Diego as a free agent in May. He missed all last season because of a foot injury.

Bird and Johnson are the most publicized of the rookie crop. Bird, a 6-9 forward, led Indiana State to an unbeaten regular season while Johnson, a 6-8 guard, helped Michigan State to the NCAA championship. Indiana State's only loss of the season came in the NCAA finals against Michigan State.

Bird was drafted by Boston a year ago as a junior and signed with the Celtics in June following prolonged negotiations. Johnson was the top pick in the June 25 college draft, signing with the Los Angeles Lakers.

Ironically, the two teams that met in the playoff finals will be the last two to open their training camps — the champion Seattle SuperSonics welcoming veterans on Sunday and the runner-up Washington Bullets starting practice on Monday.

Saints Sign Yepremian

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — The New Orleans Saints today signed record-setting placekicker Gary Yepremian to a contract for the 1979 National Football League season and placed No. 1 draft choice Russell Erxleben on the injured reserve list.

The designation means Erxleben, drafted to both punt and placekick for the Saints, will miss at least the next four games. Spokesman Greg Suits said Yepremian will handle kickoffs and field goals, while wide receiver Wes Chandler will do the punting for New Orleans.

If Yepremian is successful on his next extra point attempt, he will break a NFL record for consecutive successful conversions. While with Miami, he tied the consecutive mark of 16 held jointly by Kansas City's Jan Stenerud and Cleveland's Don Cekroft. Yepremian, 35, was released by Miami this year after nine seasons with the Dolphins. He was replaced by rookie Uwe von Schamaan from Oklahoma.

Yepremian and the Saints began talking on Tuesday because Erxleben pulled a muscle in his kicking leg prior to last week's game against Green Bay.

Watson Withdraws From Cup

WHITE SULPHUR SPRINGS, W.Va. (AP) — European and American golfers differ in their opinions as to what effect the loss of Tom Watson will have in the Ryder Cup golf matches, which begin Friday.

Watson will be replaced by Mark Hayes, the first alternate for the U.S. team, which was selected by performance in PGA tournaments over the past year.

The United States' non-playing captain, Billy Casper, said that Hayes would not play in either Friday morning's best-ball matches or the afternoon's foursomes to give him practice time on the course.

Spanish golfer Severiano Ballesteros, who will be paired with countryman Antonio Garrido in the best-ball matches, said the loss of Watson would have to hurt the Americans.

"He is the greatest golfer right now," Ballesteros, the British Open champion, said. "This gives us a better chance to win."

Peter Oosterhuis, a British golfer who has a 12-6-3 individual record in five previous Ryder Cup's, agreed with Ballesteros.

"We have to be happy he's not going to be here."

Tech Volleyballers Compete In Tourney

The Texas Tech University women's volleyball will be without two starters when it participates in the Mean Green Invitational beginning today at 1:30 p.m. against Southwest Missouri State.

Coach Janice Hudson reported that starters Valerie Earl and Christy Cotton, who suffered minor leg and foot injuries, respectively last Friday, will be replaced by Rhonda Farley and Christa White.

Tech, 5-1, will be joined in its pool by Oklahoma and Texas A&M, both of which will meet the Raiders later today. Also entered are Texas-Arlington, Lamar, Sam Houston State, Tulane, Texas Woman's U., and Nebraska.

LCC Splits Duel

The Lubbock Christian College volleyball team split a double-dual meet with San Angelo State and Eastern New Mexico here Thursday night.

LCC lost to San Angelo 6-15, 10-15 and then beat ENMU 15-7, 15-9. San Angelo, defending national champion, topped ENMU 15-7, 15-6 to run its record to 7-0. ENMU fell to 0-5.

LCC, 4-3, hosts a double-dual Tuesday against West Texas State and Hardin-Simmons beginning at 6 p.m.

Expos Edge Cubs, Keep Streak Alive

By The Associated Press

Pinch-hitter Rusty Staub drilled in a pair of ninth-inning runs with a bad hop single that lifted Montreal to a 4-3 victory over the Chicago Cubs Thursday night, strengthening the Expos' first-place lead in the National League East.

The Cubs summoned reliever Bruce Sutter, and he issued an intentional walk to Larry Parrish, filling the bases. Rodney Scott grounded to shortstop, forcing Carter at the plate, but Staub, hitting for pitcher Bill Atkinson, 2-0, rapped a bouncer to first baseman Larry Biittner. Staub's grounder hit a seam in the infield allowing the winning run to score.

The Cubs had taken a 3-2 lead in the sixth on an infield single by Reuschel. Larry Biittner drove in the Cubs' other two runs with a pair of singles.

Montreal scored two runs in the fourth on consecutive doubles by Dave Cash and Andre Dawson and a triple by Carter.

Plainview Whips Tascosa

AMARILLO (Special) — Plainview evened its won-loss record to 1-1 Thursday night by trouncing winless Tascosa 35-15.

Michael Mosley opened the scoring rampage for the Bulldogs by rambling 30 yards early in the first quarter to put Plainview up 7-0.

The Bulldogs, who dropped out of the Top 10 polls across the state after dropping their opener to Estacado last week, 13-7, managed a 21-0 halftime lead after Ervin Davis bulled over from 3 yards out and Oscar Mosley rocketed to a 20-yard TD run.

Plainview added two more scores in the third period one on a 9-yard run and the other on a 70-yard interception return by Michael Black.

Wade Hunt had a 70-yard kickoff return and Mark Smack scored from the 1-yard line in the third and fourth periods, respectively, for Tascosa.

Next Friday, Plainview travels to Midland to meet the Lee Rebels.

The Winning Ways Of PENN STATE'S JOE PATERNO
What makes Joe's team run? Joe. Learn about this fabulous coach in this week's FAMILY WEEKLY. Paterno is street-wise, a heritage from his Brooklyn background, and to be street-wise in any big town means having common sense. Common sense is only one of Joe's survival-equipment tools. A love for football and the joy of teaching it are other assets. Penn State's prospects this season are good: running and defense should continue to be excellent, and Paterno's winning ways should continue.

Mixed Mart Dips Again

NEW YORK (AP) — A flurry of takeover news took Wall Street's mind off the interest rate spiral Thursday as an indecisive stock market finished with a small loss.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials fell .51 to 870.73. Advances held about even with declines, and New York Stock Exchange volume fell to 35.24 million shares from 39.35 million Wednesday.

Analysts said the prime lending rate could hit 13½ percent soon following Chase Manhattan Bank's announcement of a record 13 percent. Fears that interest rates would continue to climb also were sparked by the Federal Reserve's report, issued after the market close, of a sharp $2.7 billion gain in the nation's money supply.

Trans World Corp., parent of Trans World Airlines and Thursday's NYSE volume leader, rose 3⅜ to 24¾. Texas International Airlines said it bought an unspecified number of Trans World shares and held talks with the larger airline's owner.

New York (AP) — Thursday's national prices for New York Stock Exchange issues as of NYSE close. Prices and volume consolidated for securities also traded on other markets.

Hope 'Just Another Foreign Tourist' In China

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Bob Hope's "Road to China" will give Americans a good look at China — and the Chinese a first look at the comedian with the ski nose.

Hope, just back from a month's stay in the People's Republic of China, where he taped a three-hour TV special, said he found himself just another foreign tourist to the man on the street.

It didn't take long for some to get to know him, however. It's hard to escape notice when you take a stroll with Big Bird. And his shows in Peking and Shanghai had people clamoring for tickets.

The special airs on NBC Sunday evening at 7 CDT, and it also will be broadcast later in China. It's the first American entertainment show made there since the two countries resumed diplomatic relations.

Hope brought along Mikhail Baryshnikov, Crystal Gayle, Shields and Yarnell, Peaches and Herb, and, of course, Big Bird. They visited at the Great Wall, the Temple of Heaven, the Capital Theatre, the Shanghai circus, the Puppet Theater, the Forbidden City, and the Yu Gardens, where Hope's wife, Dolores, sang for the show.

China is represented by three comedians, an 8-year-old pingpong champion, performers from the Peking Opera, clowns from the circus and the world's only trained panda bears.

Hope, a man known nearly everywhere else in the world, said he first encountered blank stares when he visited the Soviet Union in 1959. "You walk down the street and are reconciled that no one will recognize you. Then one fellow'll point and say 'Boob Hoope.' He'd seen one of my movies somewhere."

Hope, who had worked constantly since his return editing 40 hours of tape into the three-hour special, took some time off at his spacious home in Toluca Lake to talk about the show. The night before he'd looked at the first 90 minutes of the special.

"The main thing we wanted to do was show as much of China and the Chinese people as possible," the entertainer said. "We've got to have the American entertainers, but what's great about China is that you can see Peaches and Herb in the Temple of Heaven.

"When Baryshnikov teaches a ballet class you see the faces. They cheer, and they haven't got a lot to cheer about. When they find out you're there for fun and to entertain, everything changes. Their faces light up."

Hope said his relations with the Chinese were good, although certain areas were off limits for his wit. "I couldn't do anything political," he said. "I said I had one Mao-Tai (a powerful local drink) and my head felt like the Gang of Four. They said that was political. Then I said I felt like my head was going through a cultural revolution. That was also political."

He said he was allowed to refer to America's own Gang of Four — "Mork and Mindy" and "Laverne and Shirley."

As always, Hope tailored his humor to suit the locale. In overcrowded Shanghai, Hope quipped that a woman fainted on the street and didn't fall down for 10 blocks. He said the laundry in his hotel was the greatest in the world: "They washed and ironed my pajamas — and I was still in them."

After Hope's return, China's minister of culture wrote to the Chinese ambassador in Washington. "He told him to thank Mr. Hope for his letter," the entertainer said. "He said to thank me for my thoughts and said the show would bring much friendship between the two countries. But for me to check the monologue for anything that would break that friendship. He was just like an NBC censor.

"But I don't think there'll be any trouble. The monologue was oiginally 40 minutes. I've got it down to 23 minutes and we'll cut it to 10 minutes for the show. I certainly have enough without using anything they don't want me to.

"We put a lot of efort into it," Hope said of the show. "We were there four weeks. I did my special in Russia in only six days. This is the most expensive show I've ever done. It's cost $1.5 million so far. I don't think we'll lose any money. I think every country will be interested in it."

Former Dancer Turns To Directing

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Joan Tewkesbury says she sees it as a natural progression, to go from dancing to directing.

Her own progression has taken her from dancing to choreography to writing to directing. Her latest film, and her first for television, "The Tenth Month," airs Sunday evening on CBS.

"In dancing, you work so much in space," she says. "You become sensitive to putting people in environments. You become a choreographer, then you feel the need for people to speak. Your next need is directing.

"I had danced in 'West Side Story' and then with 'Peter Pan' I got out of dancing. I felt there had to be more to life than moving your eyeballs on cue. I wanted some way of extending my voice."

Miss Tewkesbury credits director Robert Altman with helping her make the breakthrough. "I'd always been intimidated by all the hardware. Then I learned I didn't have to work the camera. That's the job of the cameraman."

She was a script supervisor on Altman's "McCabe and Mrs. Miller," then wrote "Nashville" and "Thieves Like Us." She wrote and directed "Old Boyfriends."

Carol Burnett stars in "The Tenth Month," which Joan adapted from a book by Laura Z. Hobson and directed partly on location in New York.

Miss Burnett plays a successful magazine writer who becomes pregnant and decides to adopt her own child as a single parent. At the same time, her pregnancy puts a strain on her affair with a married man — who is not the father.

The 2 1/2-hour film also stars Keith Michell, Dina Merrill, Melissa Converse, Christina Raines, Del Hinkley and Yvonne Wilder.

Dina Merrill originally had an option on the book, which Miss Hobson wrote about 10 years ago. "Laura's books have been very good vehicles for women," Ms. Tewkesbury says. "Dina wasn't able to put all the pieces together. It's like working a jigsaw puzzle and making all the pieces fit. Dina plays Carol's best friend in the film.

"Dina and Carol became good friends when they did 'A Wedding' for Altman. Some of that just spills over into this film. They make a nice team. Dina has style and Carol can pull it all together and has dignity."

Many of the outdoor scenes were filmed in Spanish Harlem in New York, where the major problem was to prevent Miss Burnett from being mobbed by her fans. The word spread fast whenever she was spotted.

"The Tenth Month" actually is Miss Tewkesbury's second piece for television. She says she'd written a screenplay for ABC on the life of photographer Margaret Bourke-White, but the project fell through.

Miss Tewkesbury, who danced with Miss Wilder in "West Side Story," says she thinks there's a series idea in Miss Wilder's role as Mrs. Figueroa. Mrs. Figueroa is a kind-hearted Puerto Rican landlady who takes Miss Burnett in during her pregnancy.

The first thing Miss Tewkesbury did with the book was to bring it up to date for the television movie. "A central theme was the assassinations of the 1960s, but we changed that to the abortion issue. Laura agreed with that and Carol also felt strongly it should be modernized."

Miss Tewkesbury is working on the screenplay of "Living Well Is the Best Revenge," adapted from the book by Calvin Tomkins.

"It's about a family in 1922 and it could be a feature film or it could be a miniseries," she says. "It has great scale. It's like a soap opera."

Heist Movies Give Filmmaker Second Chance

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — No longer a boy wonder at the age of 42, filmmaker Noel Black finds his career has been born again in a town that rarely affords a second chance.

Black was among a phalanx of young filmmakers who crashed the local scene in the late 1960s when it appeared that youth would take over the movie business. That didn't happen, and the hopefuls aged quickly as they found studio doors closed to them.

Now comes "A Man, a Woman, and a Bank," which Avco Embassy is releasing this month. It's another heist movie but done with such skill that Noel Black is hot again. Producer Martin Ranshoff saw the film and immediately signed Black to direct Shirley MacLaine and Anthony Hopkins in "Consenting Adults."

I have followed Black's career ever since he made the remarkable 1965 short "Skaterdater," a paean to the then-exploding fad of skateboarding. His fresh-faced optimism hasn't changed in good times and bad. His orangy hair is thinning a bit and he admits that he is now described as "youngish," and not as the boy wonder.

Black was a product of the UCLA film school, but at a time "when there were no Francis Coppolas ('The Godfather'), George Lucases ('Star Wars') or Colin Higginses ('Foul Play') to show what film school graduates could do. Also, all of the guilds and unions had longer apprenticeship periods and were harder to get into than they are now."

Two earlier UCLA grads, Denis and Terry Sanders, had made their way into the industry with a short film, so Black figured he would "assault the Bastille" by the same method. He and partner Marshal Bakler (now in charge of ABC series development) raised $17,000 to make the 18-minute film. United Artists bought it for $50,000.

Black didn't begrudge United Artists the hundreds of thousands earned by the short. He won a contract from ABC to film two more shorts about American youths, then was picked by 20th Century-Fox to direct a feature starring Tuesday Weld and Anthony Perkins, "Pretty Poison."

Fox removed the film from release when it failed to attract business, then movie critics made "Pretty Poison" a cause. It was re-released, again to underwhelming patronage, but became an instant cult movie.

"The gold-plated nail in my career coffin was pounded when I accepted a dreadful project that never should have been made," Black recalled with a sigh. "I reasoned that it was better to stay active than to wait for a project that I believed in. That was a mistake."

Black followed the mistake with another ("Jennifer on My Mind") which he describes as "one of the 14 unsuccessful drug pictures of 1970." That was the year the studios tried to follow the acid bandwagon of "Easy Rider."

All at once Noel Black was a boy failure, and for five years he devoted himself to writing scripts, raising his two children and organizing retrospective tributes to veteran film makers for the Directors Guild — "so I could tell myself I was still in show business.

"Finally in 1976 I decided to get back in through episodic television," he said. "The idea of doing it scared me, because I had started in the film business at the top, with my own feature."

Black began directing episodes of "Kojak," "McCloud," "Switch" and "Quincy" and found the experience worthwhile: "In television you shoot nine (script) pages a day, 12 or 13 if you're under the gun. Doing three pages a day is not so tough after that." He also made a film for public television and shot network pilots, including "Mulligan's Stew."

A friend at Avco Embassy told him about a script Donald Sutherland had brought to the company about the $4 million heist of a bank vault by a pair of computer experts. Within two months Black was directing Sutherland, Brooke Adams and director-actor Paul Mazursky ("An Unmarried Woman") in "A Man, a Woman and a Bank." Despite locations in Vancouver and Macao, he delivered the finished product exactly on budget: $3.4 million.

Alaskan Editor Receives Lovejoy Award

WATERVILLE, Maine (AP) — Katherine W. Fanning, editor and publisher of the Pulitzer Prize-winning Anchorage (Alaska) Daily News, has been given the 1979 Elijah Parish Lovejoy Award, Colby College announced Thursday.

Mrs. Fanning will be honored Nov. 15 at an evening convocation at the college.

Her newspaper won the 1976 Pulitzer for public service for its 15-article series on the growth of the Teamsters union into a powerful force in Alaska's politics and economy.

Reporters for the News, with a circulation of 16,500, interviewed more than 100 people and traveled more than 3,000 miles in tracing the growth of the Teamsters local.

The Lovejoy award was established by Colby in 1952 in memory of the 1826 alumnus who is regarded as America's first martyr to press freedom. A Maine native, Lovejoy was killed in 1837 in Alton, Ill., while defending his press against a pro-slavery mob.

The Precision Haircut Explained Precisely.
Because your head is unique, the way your hair grows is equally unique. Really quite different from every one else's.
Precision haircutting is a technique for cutting the hair in harmony with the way it grows. Your hair eventually grows out but it doesn't lose its shape with a precision haircut. Consequently your haircut will look as good after five days as it does after five minutes. And because the hair falls naturally into place you won't have to keep fussing with it. Usually a shake of the head does it.
At Command Performance we shampoo, precision-cut and blow dry your hair for fourteen dollars, whether you're a gal or a guy. And no appointments are ever necessary.
We also offer permanent waves, coloring, frosting and conditioning. But we really shine with precision. And so will you.

JEAN SHEPARD...
Says Brown issue forgotten

Country Music Singer Says Radio Changed Music

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Outspoken Jean Shepard says she loves the Grand Ole Opry but still thinks the revered country music show is not the place for an entertainer like James Brown.

Brown, the "King of Soul," sang on the Opry as a guest last March. Miss Shepard, a performer on the Opry since 1955, refused to appear on the same show with him.

"I did not feel the Grand Ole Opry was the place for James Brown," Miss Shepard says. "Those country music fans did not want to hear James Brown.

"It floored me," says Miss Shepard, whose 24 years on the Opry rank as the longest among female singers. "I felt embarrassed over the whole situation. But he's a great artist and I admire him for what he's done.

"I don't like to rehash it," she says. "I love the Grand Ole Opry. The whole thing's forgotten."

The Brown appearance marks one of several controversies involving Miss Shepard, 45. Because of her outspoken nature, she's sort of country music's equivalent to Jane Fonda.

"When people ask me a question, I don't know how they can expect me not to give them a straight answer."

In that light, she's no fan of nationally televised Country Music Association awards show each October.

"It's not on the up-and-up," she says. "I could prove it if I had to." For example, she says, people like secretaries vote for categories they really know little about.

On another topic, she says there are some country music radio stations that do not play true country music.

"They play stuff by Tom Jones and Mac Davis," she says. "It's not genuine country music. I'm not knocking these artists, but Tom Jones can't sing a country song like George Jones.

"The next year or year and a half will be very critical for country music," Miss Shepard says. "This is because radio stations have changed country music. My view is that country music as we know it is about to go down the drain."

She blames station managers and program directors.

"They say there's no demand for certain country music artists, but there is. But there's definitely a market for good country music. The crowds at my concerts during the past year or two have been bigger."

Manson Prosecutor Slated For Texas Tech Appearance

Cultism is a subject most people find intriguing and a little frightening. Vincent Bugliosi will be speaking on "Cult Mentality" on Sept. 27 at 8:15 p.m. in the Texas Tech University Center Theatre.

He is best known as prosecuting attorney for the Tate-LaBianca murder trial involving Charles Manson and his "family."

The frightening spread of cultism, dangers of cult phenomena and the strange case of Jonestown in Guyana are just some of the subjects Bugliosi will cover. He also will discuss his experience in the Manson trial, the techniques Manson used to control his "family" and the methods other cult leaders use to program their followers. Bugliosi will speak of his current work which includes investigation into Robert Kennedy's assassination and his efforts to reopen files based on evidence of a second assassin.

"Helter Skelter", which he co-authored with Curt Gentry, spent a year on the best seller list and was then turned into a top-rated television special.

Bugliosi has become one of the nation's most requested speakers. This will be his second engagement at Texas Tech.

Texas Tech Greeks Host Conference

Texas Tech's Interfraternity Council and Panhellenic will host the 1979 Texas Greek Conference, Oct. 11-13, at Greek Circle in Lubbock.

More than 200 people from Oklahoma, New Mexico and Texas are expected to attend seminars, lunches and social activities planned for the three-day convention. Programs for advisers, sorority and fraternity members, as well as pledges, will be conducted.

Vermont Schooner Vacationer's Dream

BURLINGTON, Vt. (AP) — For anyone who has dreamed over the Sunday paper's travel section while lounging near the pool at the Happy Pine Trees Motor Inn — your ship has come in.

Since last year, Kempton and Nancy Webb have been running a business that is their antidote for the conventional vacation: a week on Lake Champlain aboard the schooner Richard Robbins.

If their vacation was part of a college course synopsis, it might read: Week-long session on two-masted schooner condensing following courses: History of Lake Champlain; Practical Sailing — A Study for the Landlubber and Salt, and The Nautical Gourmet. Fee: !265. Prerequisite: None.

In fact, Webb, who is head of the geography department at Columbia University, has taught college courses on the 58-foot deck, covering the rich and little-known history of New England's largest lake.

They also get a snug bunk and the privilege of reading or snoozing on deck while the crew runs around pulling on wet ropes. In most cases, even the rankest landlubber is unable to just sit and watch.

In fact, the nautical lingo and easy-going ways of the four-member crew are contagious. Within a day, the passengers have been transformed from accountants, nurses and parents, into a cross between the chorus line of "H.M.S. Pinafore" and the cast of an Errol Flynn pirate movie.

Self-conscious in their newly purchased sailing gear, the passengers watched the weeks' groceries being loaded on board from a dock in Burlington on a recent Monday morning.

A seemingly endless stream of cardboard boxes filled with cans, boxes and sheafs of fresh greens were brought aboard by the captain, Douglas Greason, and Michael Mulhern, the first mate.

The mess cook, Patty Fontaine, was at work in the galley, stoking the large cast iron cookstove when not stowing the supplies in various cubbyholes.

"The galley did have a kerosene stove, but I didn't like the smell of it," Webb explained. "We had to sacrifice two bunks to make room for the firewood, but I think it was worth it."

The schooner has no planned route during its week-long excursion: it goes with the wind and the yawl boat is only used occasionally.

"The whole operation is very energy-efficient," said Webb. "We use very little diesel fuel in the smaller boat, and some of the passengers even take buses here in the first place."

Webb and his wife, who is an assistant professor of social work at Fordham University, bought the 77-year-old schooner last year, and plunged into making it the heart of a successful business.

They got the idea after seeing schooners-for-hire in Maine. There were none on Lake Champlain, which Webb calls "one of New England's best kept secrets," so they began looking for one and ended up as officers of their own company: The Champlain [illegible] Co.

An experienced sailor of [illegible] boats, Webb said, "I don't pretend to know how to sail this," pointing to the schooner, "but we have a crew of expert young people doing that."

The Webbs run the business from their summer home in Vergennes, and while their first season wasn't an overwhelming success, this summer was booked almost solid. And they are optimistic that business will continue to improve.

"It's a vacation that has some value," Webb said. "It's something that will stay with you longer than a week at a beach resort."

Publishing Company Negotiating Sale

NEW YORK (AP) — Book publisher Macmillan Inc., which previously agreed to be acquired by toymaker Mattel Inc., said Thursday that it had received a $335 million proposal from American Broadcasting Cos.

Macmillan, a major publisher that also owns the Brentano's bookstore chain and Berlitz language schools, said it received an ABC offer of stock and debentures worth $25 for each MacMillan share of common stock.

A Macmillan announcement said the company "accepted" the proposal, but Macmillan spokesman James Palmer later said that meant the proposal was received, not approved by the publisher. He said he did not know whether the Mattel proposal was still alive, but that negotiations would be held with ABC.

Mattel, the maker of Barbie Dolls and owner of circuses and ice shows, announced its deal with Macmillan Aug. 30, agreeing to pay $329 million in cash and securities, or $24.50 per share.

In Hawthorne, Calif., Mattel vice president Spencer Boise said Mattel had "no reaction at this time."

Pulitzer Prize Winner Gets Promotion

NEW YORK (AP) — Peter R. Kann, a Pulitzer Prize-winning reporter, has been appointed associate publisher of the Wall Street Journal, it was announced Thursday.

Kann, 36, won a Pulitzer Prize in 1972 for distinguished international reporting for his coverage of the India-Pakistan war, when he was a correspondent for the Journal. His appointment was announced by Warren H. Phillips, chairman of Dow Jones & Co., the newspaper's publisher.

"Ray Shaw, president of Dow Jones, and I are delegating to him the authority to act on our behalf in working with the Journal's news and sales department heads and staffs in the continuing efforts to strengthen the paper," Phillips said.

The Journal's production and distribution departments will continue to report to William L. Dunn, vice president and general manager, the announcement said.

Kann was editor and publisher of the Asian Wall Street Journal, a daily business newspaper printed in Hong Kong, from the newspaper's founding in 1976 until early this year, when he returned to the United States as an assistant to Phillips.

He joined the Wall Street Journal as a reporter in 1964, serving in its Pittsburgh and Los Angeles bureaus before being assigned to Asia in 1967 to cover the Vietnam War.

He later represented Dow Jones in its relationships with the Far Eastern Economic Review and the South China Morning Post, in which Dow Jones holds ownership interests.

WILMINGTON, Del. — Phil Milford, 39, a Wilmington News-Journal reporter was listed in stable condition Thursday after being shot accidentally in a court building here. He was shot Wednesday when an heirloom pistol a woman was carrying in her shoulder bag fired accidently when the bag struck a doorway.
