MIDTRAN step nearer

By LANA CUNNINGHAM

Midland Transportation, Inc., or MIDTRAN, has taken its first step toward becoming a reality, instead of just a dream on paper.

During a Chamber of Commerce press conference Thursday, it was announced that the task force assigned to study transportation needs of the city has filed with the secretary of state for MIDTRAN to become a non-profit corporation.

According to chamber President Harrell Feldt, who made the announcement, the filing was the final effort of the task force in providing a transportation system to people in Midland.

The City Council also worked closely with the task force, Mayor Ernest Angelo Jr. said, and "today we see the culmination of a second phase—a body that can physically put into place a system of transportation for citizens."

Board of directors for the corporation will consist of Ted Kerr, Allen K. Trobaugh, Thane Akins, Gordon Marcum II, Angelo, Carson Smith, Parker Humes, Raymond Galvin and John Ingram. The board was to meet for the first time today and begin planning how to put the system into operation.

Working with the task force on the plan has been Paul Forney, project engineer with General Motors Transportation Systems.

The plan for Midland calls for a brokerage concept, he said. The system will employ various types of transportation to meet the needs of the citizens, including car pools and van pools. The board will assist employers in setting up pools and coordinate services with all methods available, Forney said.

The system will be available to take people from areas of the city to their businesses at peak hours. During less busy hours, the system will be available to meet the needs of social services and agencies, according to Forney.

Details of the system's operation and funding have not been worked out, Forney said, but that will be the purpose of the board. He estimated about six months would be needed to put the plan into operation.

Midland shows signs of being a successful, burgeoning community, Ingram said. "We are beginning to see the potential in the comment here that 'the sky's the limit.'"

The chamber last summer announced the formation of the task force, headed by Ingram, to look into Midland's transportation problems and needs and to draw up a plan to fulfill those needs.

The GM special team was hired to conduct the study and present a plan to the chamber, and subsequently to the City Council.

The city's approval at the March 14 session gave the task force the final OK to become incorporated, a process which took about six weeks.

Probers seek cause of scaffold collapse

WILLOW ISLAND, W.Va. (AP) — Witnesses said it looked like an apple being peeled, watching a skeleton of scaffolding drop away from the inside of a huge tower and break off a ring of concrete, taking 51 men screaming to their deaths 170 feet below.

George Pepper was 200 feet from the tower when he heard something "that sounded like a big train roaring by."

"The next thing I saw was a pile of dust. All I could see was heads busted up, legs out of socket, arms scattered around. It was just a mangled-up, God-forsaken mess. I'll see that scene the rest of my life," he said.

The accident occurred Thursday as workers prepared to make the 29th of 82 concrete pours on a giant cooling tower being built at a $680 million coal-fired electrical generating plant overlooking the Ohio River here.

Federal inspectors moved in today to investigate reports of faulty scaffolding and the possibility that the huge catwalk on which the men worked was moored in still-wet concrete.

In Washington, a spokesman for the Occupational Safety and Health Administration said 13 inspections of the Pleasants Power Station site since 1973 had revealed "numerous violations both serious and nonserious," but he said he did not know what they were or whether they involved scaffolding.

OSHA spokesman James Foster said the most recent inspection was a year ago and that the operations of Research Cottrell Inc., the Bound Brook, N.J., subcontractor building the tower, had never been inspected.

But Thomas Buontane, director of corporate communications for the company, said the scaffold was inspected daily. He said it was "a complete mystery how this could happen ... It's impossible."

"I heard a loud roar, rumbling and rumbling," said Yales Seils, an asbestos worker. "I looked up and saw the top of the cooling tower fall inside and the scaffolding peel away. You could see the men running ahead of it as it was peeling. It just went faster and faster and overtook them."

Rescuers, using cranes to untangle the debris, found no signs of life among the tons of twisted metal, splintered wooden planks and rope safety net. "If they lived through the fall, they didn't have a chance in that stuff," said one witness.

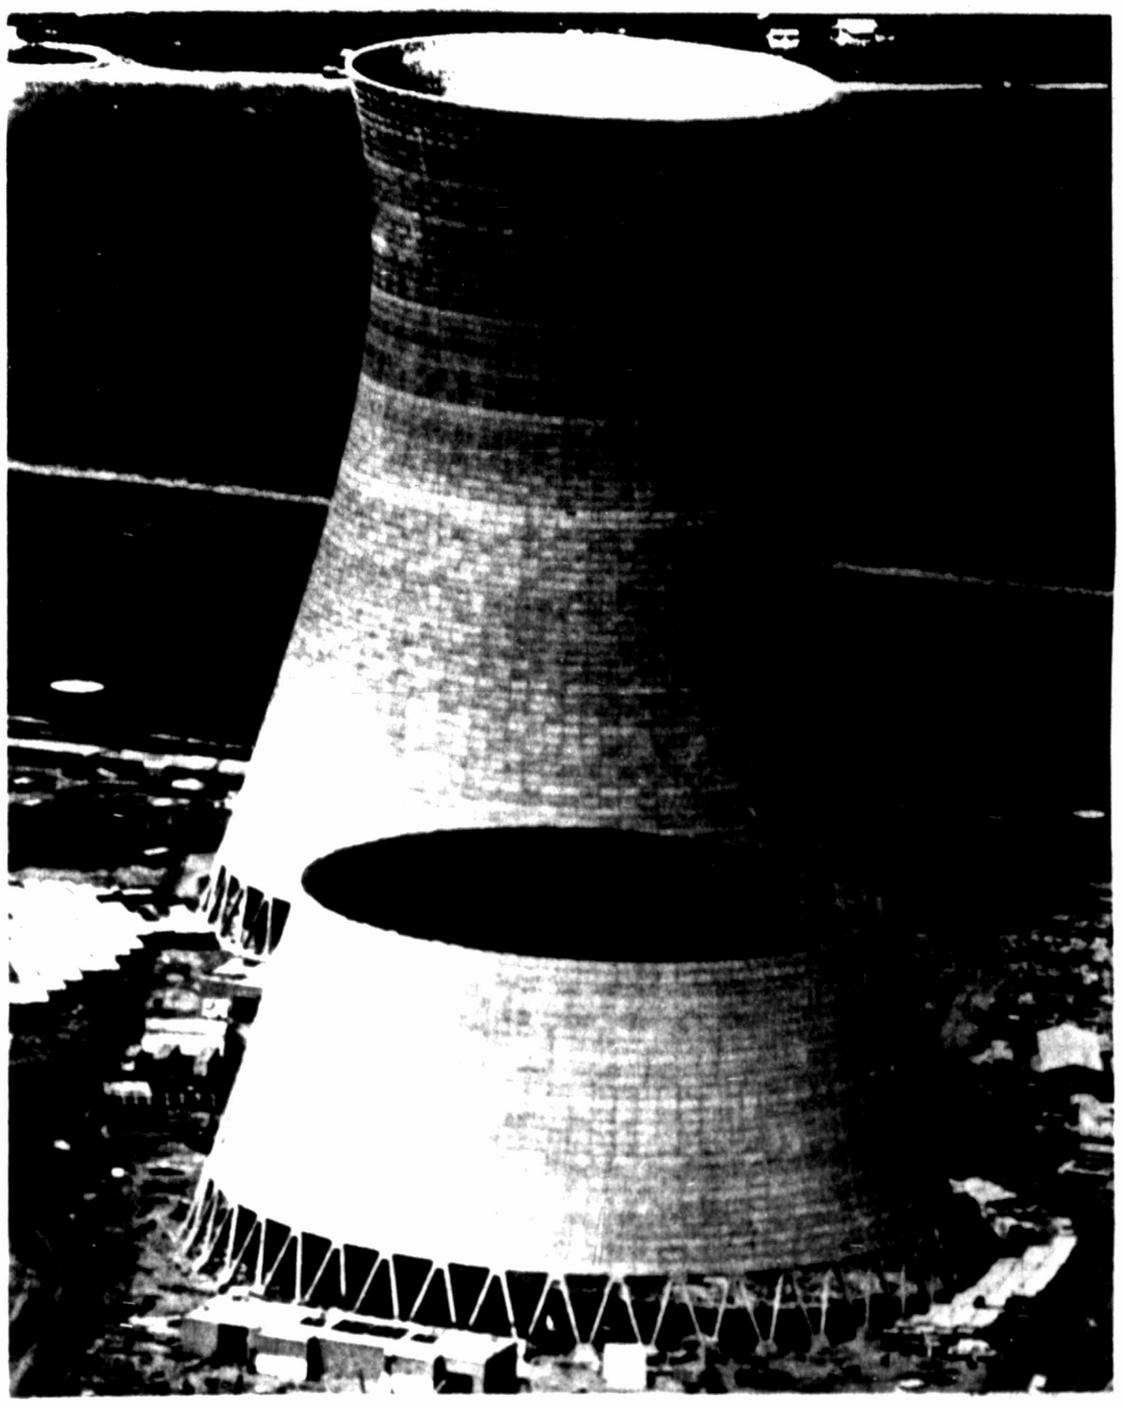

"There wasn't a sound coming from it," said Bill Hess, a 22-year-old laborer. "They were torn up so bad I couldn't tell looking at them if any of my friends had been killed."

The cooling tower is one of two under construction for Monongahela Power Co., which serves 22,000 customers in West Virginia and southeastern Ohio. Workers had poured a four-foot layer of concrete Wednesday and were working on the next layer Thursday when the collapse occurred about 10 a.m., Monongahela spokesman Lyle Corder said.

"As it was being poured today, the 28th (layer) disintegrated and the bolts that were holding the scaffolding pulled loose away from it," he said.

John Peppler, a laborer standing on the ground in the middle of the tower when the disaster occurred, described what happened next.

"The first I heard was concrete falling. I had just sent a basket (bucket of concrete) up. I looked over my left shoulder and I could see it falling. I could see people falling through the air and everything falling."

Few untouched by cooling tower disaster

By LEE BYRD

BELMONT, W.Va. (AP) — Adrian Hays went home early, his face worn by the mountain sun and the worst day's work of his life.

Hays, a volunteer firemen at nearby Belmont, helped dress 51 shattered bodies in plastic Thursday, helped tag each with a number, helped deliver them to the families who were led one at a time into the black-curtained booth to affirm their loss.

"Fifty-one," he whispered. "Fifty-one men in bags. Thank God I can go now."

Slowly, hearse after hearse, be they Cadillacs or panel trucks, inched past the willows on Main Street to the Belmont fire station, just around the corner from a ramshackle City Hall.

Through an open window, the clatter of a typewriter, methodically cranking out death certificates, punctuated the hush.

An older woman stood outside the United Methodist Church and mourned the loss of her favorite grandson, who had only last week given her a birthday gift, a chandelier that she had wanted for years.

Inside was the dead man's wife, in near faint, under the arm of Pastor Amos McVey.

"We knew he was dead when we were called to the armory at Parkersburg and they began reading the list," said the grandmother. "We heard the name of his supervisor, so we knew he was gone, too."

Parkersburg, Belmont, Schultz, Sistersville and St. Marys. Most everyone in these little towns, just on the West Virginia side of the Ohio River, knows one of the men who died when the scaffolding collapsed Thursday in a Monongahela Power Co. cooling tower.

Hour lost is daylight gained

It's close to that time of the year again when clocks throughout most of the nation will be set up an hour for six months of daylight saving time (DST).

Officially, DST begins at 2 a.m. Sunday. By law, it goes into effect on the last Sunday in April and is dislodged in the last Sunday in October.

Not all see much point in setting up the clocks an hour. The logic is that it gives people an extra hour of afternoon-to-evening daylight to work or play.

The sun would "set" an hour earlier in standard time.

"I don't care what you do to the clocks," said amateur astronomer Gene Marshall of Midland, "the sun is going to be on the horizon at a certain time each day."

Marshall, who said he's not fond at all of DST, said he would be pleased just to "go to work an hour earlier" rather than change time. He's an electronics technician at the National Weather Service at Midland Regional

World of TV viewing outlandish, nonsensical

There are those heretics who say that the best on television is re-runs.

Have they no respect for progress or variations on a theme?

Probably. But oftentimes yesterday's left-overs are more appetizing than today's soup.

Even so, viewers can take just so much hash.

In the main, television is a bit drab these days. That's not to say the ubiquitous networks aren't trying. Obviously, they're out to stimulate their viewers more emotionally than intellectually. And that's all right, too, as long as you can tell pea soup from minestrone.

The boob-tube kings, to keep their ratings up, are re-creating on video tape and film some of radio's and comic book's most outlandish and, until the airing, cobwebbish characters. The previews are so "unreal" that they're funny. That's entertainment, folks. The ridiculous has pilfered a sizeable chunk of the airwaves.

That's fine, too, if you don't mind toying with the most improbable and absurd of super-human-type shows for, of all things, prime-time audiences. At one time, prime-time viewers connoted the mature. It's unfortunate that ratings and so-called guidelines to point out the allegedly pornographic, obscene and shocking in films and reading (and "gawking at") matter have tainted "adult" and "mature."

Let there be a world of viewing on TV. If you don't like what's before you, you can always turn the tuner for another channel or flick the switch off and find something else to do. That shouldn't be hard; man is an inventive creature.

Anyway, there's art in the absurd. Look to Monty Python, the ultimate "nonsense" on the tube. That's really using your imagination.

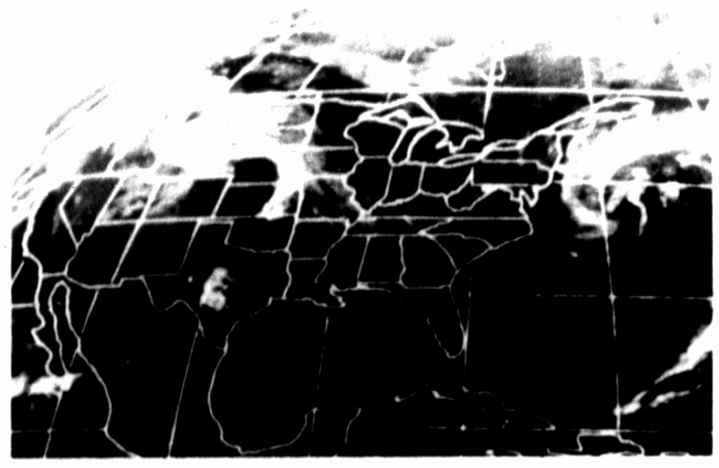

TV. You could liken it to those books and magazines in your library, den, bathroom, bedroom, closet, attic or basement. You could even liken it to your old shortwave radio, which can

Texas area forecasts

Widely scattered thunderstorms were expected across most of the state today.

Forecasters warned of the possibility of severe thunderstorms in Northeast Texas during the afternoon and evening. Forecasts called for fair skies in West Texas and partly cloudy skies over the remainder of the state.

Highs were expected to be mostly in the 80s with a few readings reaching the 90s in the Big Bend area of Southwest Texas.

Amarillo had the only rainfall during the night, but only a trace was reported. Fog was reported early today in the areas around Austin and Victoria.

Early morning temperatures ranged from near 50 in the Panhandle and Northeast Texas to the upper 60s in the Lower Rio Grande Valley. Extremes ranged from 46 at Lufkin to 70 at El Paso.

Candidate hits banking practices

By ED TODD

Harry Ledbetter, a financial analyst and Democratic candidate for state treasurer, in Midland on Thursday charged that State Treasurer Warren G. Harding's depository banking practices "are scandalous."

Ledbetter, 33, said that $200 million of the taxpayers' money is in checking accounts in many of the state's 1,300 banks and is not drawing interest.

And Harding is getting some of his campaign contributions from those banks, he said.

Were that money placed in time accounts, it would draw interest amounting to $500,000 a week, said Ledbetter, a one-time deputy to State Comptroller Bob Bullock.

Ledbetter said Harding's handling of the taxpayers' money is "costly" and is "politically inspired."

Furthermore, Ledbetter said that a limited check into Harding's campaign contributions indicates that 201 banks in Texas have donated to Harding's election campaign.

Of those banks, only 17 are providing check cashing services to the state, he said.

"The remaining 184 banks have held idle state funds in checking accounts totaling $15.7 million with no change in the balances from the previous months."

Ledbetter said one bank's state checking deposits almost doubled following a sizeable contribution to Harding's campaign.

Harding, 57, was appointed treasurer by Gov. Dolph Briscoe following the death of Jesse James, 73, last September. James had held that post since 1941.

The only other candidate seeking the Democratic Party's nomination for treasurer is Charlie Sanderson of San Antonio.

Ledbetter said "data" gathered by his staff shows "clearly why Mr. Harding has continued to waste the taxpayers' money."

He accused the treasurer of getting kick-backs after depositing state money in checking accounts in certain banks.

"One banker told me that his bank had $200,000 of the state's money in a checking account," Ledbetter said. "And during the five years he had worked for the bank, there had never been a check cashed for the state."

In referring to the $15.7 million of state funds in checking accounts in 184 banks, Ledbetter said that amount would have produced for the state $92,000 in interests in "that month." He was referring to the March 10-April 6 period in which the bank deposits were checked.

That $92,000 in "lost" interest is "just the tip of the iceberg," Ledbetter said.

"Expand on this to the remaining 85 percent of Texas banks, and the waste is intolerable," he said.

"Harding does not represent the taxpayers. He represents the bankers who who worked so diligently for his election," Ledbetter said.

Ledbetter said laws passed during the Depression of the 1930s made it mandatory that the state's money be deposited in banks throughout Texas.

But the money should be drawing interest on time deposits and not setting "idle" in checking deposits for bank officials to make money on state funds via interest on loans.

"It's time to stop this foolishness," he said.

Ledbetter said politics has gotten into banking.

And he said should he be the state's next treasurer, he would reorganize the State Banking Board.

"There are no standards to regulate the granting of bank charters," he said. "There are regulations but no guidelines."

And Ledbetter said the State Depository Board "ought to be abolished." He said it is made up of bureaucrats and politicians.

Food, housing push inflation

By MICHAEL DOAN

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rising food and housing costs pushed consumer prices up 0.8 percent in March as inflation continued at a rapid pace, the Labor Department said today.

The March increase would mean an inflation rate of nearly 10 percent if it lasted all year. However, economists are predicting improvement later in the year.

The higher prices last month matched a 0.8 percent increase in January, which had alarmed government economists and was the biggest increase in nine months. Consumer prices rose 0.6 percent in February.

The department said the purchasing power of the average worker rose 0.2 percent in March because of increases in hourly earnings and the number of hours worked.

Food prices rose 1.3 percent last month after climbing 1.2 percent in both January and February. Most of the increase was for meat, fruit and eggs.

Grocery shoppers paid 2.6 percent more for beef in March and 2.9 percent more for pork. Fresh fruit prices went up 4.7 percent, after declining somewhat the month before.

Prices also rose for such foods as poultry, dairy products, cereal and bakery products, sugar and candy and fats and oil products.

Prices on vegetables and coffee, however, declined.

The cost of buying and taking care of the house went up 1 percent in March, a worse performance than the 0.6 percent increase in February and 0.8 percent in January. The price of houses went up 0.8 percent in March, double the February increase, while mortgage interest, home maintenance and fuel costs rose rapidly, the department said.

Clothing prices also rose sharply by 1 percent after declining 1.2 percent in Feburary. The cost of entertainment was up 0.8 percent, about the same as in February.

On a brighter note, the cost of medical care climbed 0.6 percent in March, a smaller rise than in previous months because of smaller increases in fees by doctors and dentists.

Automobiles prices edged up 0.1 percent, while gasoline prices rose 0.3 percent in March, the first increase this year.

Because of declines in food prices at the end of last year, the consumer prices for March were still only 6.5 percent higher than they were a year ago. The department adjusts its price figures to take into account seasonal variations, such as seasonal crop shortages or annual price increases.

The Consumer Price Index for all urban consumers stood at 189.8 in March, indicating that the average product costing $100 in the base period of 1967 cost $189.80 in March.

The department said prices for both categories of measures, all urban consumers and urban wage earners and clerical workers, increased at the same rate, 0.8 percent.

For the first three months of the year, inflation was running at a rate of 9.3 percent, the department said.

Prices for food and beverages were climbing at an annual rate of 15.4 percent and housing were increasing at a 9.9 percent rate.

The reports have prompted administration officials to call inflation the nation's No. 1 economic problem.

In its report on real earnings, the Labor Department said the average worker showed some gains despite the high inflation rate.

The average married worker with three dependents increased his purchasing power, or real spendable earnings, by 6 percent in March. The department attributed the increase to a 0.4 percent rise in average hourly earnings and a 0.8 percent increase in average hours worked per week. Over the year, real spendable earnings, after taxes and Social Security deductions, increased 2.1 percent.

The worsening inflation prompted President Carter on April 11 to announce a ceiling on federal pay increases and a plan to slow the government's contribution to inflation. He also said he would try to persuade unions and businesses to hold down price and wage increases.

Presidential aide Robert S. Strauss, who was named to head the anti-inflation program, said Wednesday he is asking "each American to insure that he makes some contribution to lowering inflation rates this year."

As one step, he asked businessmen to hold down their own pay increases. And Barry Bosworth, director of the president's Council on Wage and Price Stability, said inflation cannot be checked soon unless big labor unions hold back their demands.

Most of the recent price increases have been in food, particularly among meat products.

Consumer food prices went up 1.2 percent in both January and February. If averaged out over the year, that would mean an increase of about 15 percent.

Administration officials are confident food prices will ease but are still expecting an increase of 6 percent to 8 percent for the year.

Recent wholesale price reports have provided a little encouragement. Wholesale food prices rose at an annual rate of 7.2 percent in March, an improvement over the 13.2 percent pace the month before.

Nice weather for weekend

It should be a nice weekend for doing almost anything.

Fair skies and warm temperatures are predicted for Saturday, according to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Air Terminal.

Southwesterly winds should become westerly tonight and decrease to 10 to 15 mph. While there is a 20 percent chance of rain tonight, the weatherman also pointed out this means there is an 80 percent chance it won't rain.

Area towns reported clear skies and warm temperatures.

Chinese humor tickles top American comics

The Washington Post

HONG KONG — Some of America's reigning comedy geniuses have proved to their satisfaction that the Chinese really do have a sense of humor.

The group, including Norman Lear, Carl Reiner, Larry Gelbart, Grant Tinker and Mary Tyler Moore — just returned here from a three-week tour of China — watched students at Shanghai's Futan University conduct English dialogues on a story about China's late, revered Premier Chou En-Lai. The story told how Chou gave his parachute to a little girl who had been in tears during a hazardous airplane trip.

Up stood Reiner and Gelbart, whose most recent collaboration was the film "Oh, God," with George Burns in the title role. They launched into their own ad-lib dialogue. Rendered as if they were two students who hadn't quite gotten the lesson, they had Chou — almost a saint in China these days — in tears and the girl giving him her parachute.

"Why are you crying?" said Reiner in the guise of the child. "You've got the parachute."

African rock art talk today

ALPINE — Sam Grove, director of the Museum of the Southwest in Midland, will present a slide-lecture program on African Rock Art at 7:30 p.m. today in the Art Building at Sul Ross State University.

The program, sponsored by Sul Ross' art department and the Museum of the Big Bend, will deal with Grove's 1974 expedition into the Tassili plateau region of southern Algeria.

Grove and four others on the expedition photographed, mapped, described and sketched copies of the area's pictographs, said Ken Perry, director of the Museum of the Big Bend.

Drawings to be depicted in the show include sun discs, hand prints, cattle herds, battles, hunting expeditions and village scenes.

The pictographs originated 9,000 to 10,000 years ago, Perry said.

And the sun will be setting Sunday at 8:28 p.m. Under "straight" time, it would have ducked under the horizon at 7:28 p.m.

Later on in the summer, the sun will be setting around 9 p.m.

accident that killed his brother-in-law, Emmett Steele.

"Just a rumbling noise, no screams, just a rumble," he said.

"The scaffolding just unraveled from one end to another all the way around the tower. And those men tried to run ahead of it."

"We worked too fast," Johnson said. "They jacked up the forms (for pouring concrete) too fast."

The Occupational Safety and Health Administration is investigating. OSHA said scaffolding specialists had visited the site all along.

"Let me tell you about OSHA," said Roger Miller, a construction worker. "Those damned inspectors come around and ask about hand rails and that's about all. They don't know a thing."

And that's to say this: TV, those books, the radio, even newspapers will be there for your use, misuse or non-use. That's liberty.

TV's not all that bad — or doesn't have to be. But just like anything commercial, TV is out to make a buck off of you one way or the other.

Television, in a sense, is like the local bookstore and newsstand. The selection is broad and varied. It would be foolish to condemn the whole because some—or even most—might "offend" this taste or the other or just be plain bland.

But unlike the library, television doesn't afford you a bookshelf of knowledge at any given moment. That's one joy of the printed word. It's always there to be picked up and read.

That's just not true of TV. You may have to await awhile, months, perhaps, to see a re-run. There's no flipping back. But, then again, how many people re-read a book?

Army chief in trouble for criticism of Carter

WASHINGTON (AP) — Outspoken Maj. Gen. John K. Singlaub was called to account today for the second time in less than a year for publicly criticizing President Carter's policies.

The heavily decorated Singlaub, a combat veteran of three wars, was summoned to the Pentagon from his Atlanta post to explain to Army leaders his blast at Carter's decision not to produce the neutron warhead and his public disagreement with the Carter-backed Panama Canal treaties.

The 56-year-old Singlaub, chief of staff of the Army Forces Command, told ROTC cadets at Georgia Tech on Thursday that Carter's shelving of the neutron warhead was militarily unsound.

"I think the decision not to produce the neutron bomb without some compensating concession from the other side is like throwing your trump card away in a game of bridge," Singlaub said. "I think it's ridiculous."

Singlaub also told the cadets that the Panama Canal treaties, ratified by the Senate after months of intense lobbying by the administration, were unnecessary. He said he was concerned about ties between Panama and Cuba and worried that Panama might put restrictions on use of the canal.

About 11 months ago, Singlaub was ordered home from South Korea by Carter after the general publicly opposed the president's plan to withdraw U.S. ground troops from that country. Singlaub said the plan would lead inevitably to war.

The general, then chief of staff of U.S. forces in Korea, had a 30-minute meeting with Carter and several days later was reassigned to the comparable job at the command headquarters in Atlanta.

The president said at the time that Singlaub "was not being chastised or punished" for the comment, but transferred because his Korean post would have directly involved him in the policy he was criticizing.

"We are now in the process of carrying on this policy," Carter said last May of the Korean withdrawal.

Officer says Webster gun planted

HOUSTON (AP) — The father of a 17-year old Louisiana youth killed by police in February 1977 wants to return to Houston to face the police officers and former assistant district attorney he says scoffed at his attempts to determine how his son died.

John Webster of Shreveport, who waited outside a hearing room one day last June where a county grand jury no-billed a police officer who said he shot Randall Webster in self defense, learned another officer admitted Thursday in federal court to providing a gun police later planted in his dead son's hand.

"I just want to look in the faces of all the detectives and sergeants who scoffed at me and asked 'what the hell are you doing here' when all I wanted to know was how my son died," Webster said Thursday. "Most of all I want to look into the face of Tom Dunn."

Dunn was the assistant district attorney who brought the shooting case before a Harris County grand jury.

Officer William E. Byrd, 24, pleaded guilty to providing the "throw down" gun later found beside Webster's body. His admission was the first public confirmation that a gun had been planted on Webster's body after he was shot by police following a high-speed chase through southeast Houston Feb. 8, 1977.

Meanwhile, The Houston Post reported today that papers signed by Police Chief Harry Caldwell firing three former police officers claim a police sergeant planted a pistol at the scene of a July 1975 police shooting of 18-year-old Billy Keith Joyvies while two other officers looked on.

No officers have been charged with violations of the law in the Joyvies case, but Caldwell said Thursday he would turn the matter over to the district attorney and the Justice Department once his own investigation was completed.

Police told the grand jury that Webster had stolen a van and pulled a gun on them. Two civilian witnesses testified that Webster did not have a gun. Webster also appeared before the grand jury.

"I'd have stood in that hall for a month," said Webster. "I could tell what side I was on. I was the outsider and they (the grand jury) weren't, for the most part, going to believe me."

Dunn, who is no longer with the district attorney's office, said Thursday he had given Webster every courtesy but was in no position to say anything now about the case.

Byrd, who Caldwell said will be fired if he does not resign, waived grand jury action in a plea bargaining agreement with the U.S. attorney's office.

Asst. U.S. Attorney Lupe Salinas said Byrd, who pleaded guilty to concealment of a crime which allegedly involved the deprivation of Webster's civil rights and his resulting death, will be immune from further prosecution in exchange for his testimony in the federal investigation of the incident.

The maximum penalty on charges to which Byrd pleaded guilty is three years in prison and a $500 fine.

Norval W. Holloway Jr., the officer Byrd testified placed the gun in Webster's hand, and Patrolman Danny Mays, who told the grand jury he shot the youth in self-defense, are both still on active duty although Mays has a desk job.

Officer John T. Olin, 27, has been granted immunity from prosecution in return for his cooperation with the federal investigation. Olin and officer James A. Estes, 28, have been relieved of duty in connection with the case.

Caldwell, who was not chief when the shooting occurred, said Thursday he would take disciplinary action against all officers involved in the Webster case as soon the federal investigation is completed.

Caldwell fired Sgt. Walter Plaster and officers John S. White and Clarence Burkett Wednesday in connection with the Joyvies killing.

A country grand jury had no-billed the officers in connection with that shooting, and medical examiners ruled Joyvies' death justifiable homicide.

Joyvies' parents and a girlfriend who was in the car when the youth was shot all said at the time he did not own a gun.

According to the Post, the dismissal papers said after Plaster arrived at the scene of the shooting he searched Joyvies' car and found no weapon or cartridge hulls.

The papers claim White took a pistol from the trunk of his police car and handed it to Plaster who then placed it with several live rounds in the Joyvies vehicle.

Lettuce costing lots of 'lettuce'

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Lettuce costs a lot of lettuce these days — $1 a head or more in some places. Blame heavy rain in California.

After two years drought, this winter's deluge washed away lettuce seeds and drowned plants before they could be harvested, the industry said. All the more tragic because at this time of year, California supplies 90 percent of the nation's lettuce needs.

Growers are worried the high prices will scare customers into buying other salad fixings.

"We're trying to keep the price low enough so the housewife buys lettuce. If it goes up any more, she'll switch to something else," said Jack Baillie, a Salinas Valley vegetable grower.

But lettuce isn't the only thing hurt by the recent flood of rain.

"A lot of acreage will never be planted, so the supply of fresh vegetables may be limited," said Karl Christierson of the Council of California Growers, in a telephone interview Thursday.

The council said prices of cauliflower, celery, broccoli, artichokes and even bok choy, a Chinese vegetable, doubled and in some cases tripled, and are likely to stay that way until early summer.

At this point in the year, state growers supply 90 percent of the nation's cauliflower and artichokes and 75 percent of the broccoli.

"There isn't much lettuce coming out of the state and the quality of lettuce and vegetables is often cruddy," Christierson said.

About 25 rail cars of lettuce would normally be shipped a day, but growers said only three or four cars now move out the state daily.

Farmers are charging $18 to $20.50 for one carton of lettuce, which contains 24 heads, Baillie said. Supermarkets are selling lettuce for between 89 cents and $1 a head, he said, and large artichokes are selling for $1 apiece.

Safeway, the largest supermarket chain in the country, is selling lettuce at 98 cents a head, celery at 78 cents a bunch, cauliflower at 98 cents a pound, broccoli at 88 cents a bunch and small artichokes at 59 cents each. Those prices are two to three times normal.

Benzene ban approaching

WASHINGTON (AP) — Although some critics say the action should have been taken much sooner, the government will soon prohibit the sale of household products that include the suspected cancer causing substance benzene.

The Consumer Products Safety Commission on Thursday ordered a ban on the clear, colorless liquid in many household products. But the action excluded gasoline in which benzene is a prominent ingredient.

The action will not take effect until sometime in the fall because of legal procedures.

The Health Research Group, a Ralph Nader organization that filed a petition a year ago in an attempt to get benzene off the market, has criticized the commission for not acting sooner.

"If the commission had banned benzene at the time of our petition, many people would not have gotten leukemia," said Dr. Sidney Wolfe, director of the consumer group.

Earlier this year the Occupational Safety and Health Administration and the Environmental Protection Agency cited the substance as a threat to public health.

OSHA cited evidence that exposure to benzene can cause cancer, and it announced regulations aimed at tightening industrial safety rules. Implementation of the regulations have been delayed by court litigation, however.

The EPA estimated that some 260 million pounds of benzene is released into the air each year, primarily at gasoline storage areas and by refineries, coke ovens and automobiles.

The ban proposed by the commission would be on consumer products in which benzene is used intentionally as an ingredient. It also could forbid production of substances containing more than 0.1 percent benzene as an unintentional contaminant.

Manpower fund abuse trials shifting to Corpus Christi

BROWNVILLE, Texas (AP) — Attorneys for 19 men indicted in connection with alleged misuse of federal manpower funds are being notified that the trials will be moved to Corpus Christi.

A spokesman for State District Judge Harry Lewis said here Thursday that letters notifying the lawyers of the change of venue were being placed in the mail.

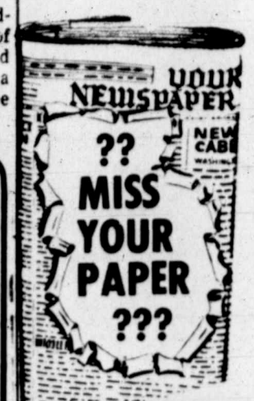

The men were indicted after a court of inquiry here investigated the program and related matters. The rare court of inquiry proceeding received widespread media coverage here.

Those facing trial include Rojelio Perez, suspended executive director of the Governor's Office of Migrant Affairs, Joaquin Rodriguez, suspended GOMA program director, and Fred Galindo, a former Cameron County district attorney. The three men were indicted on witness tampering charges.

Also facing trial are Don and Clarence Gray — Harlingen brothers who controlled much of the federal manpower money allocated here for use in job training programs.

Judges Lewis and Filemon Vela last Friday heard complaints from attorneys seeking to prevent the change of venue to Nueces County. Some of the defendants preferred to be tried here while others sought trial in Houston.

Carter to visit Panama

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter will visit Panama on June 16 and 17 to sign the documents beginning the transfer of the Panama Canal to the Central American nation, the White House said today.

Deputy White House Press Secretary Rex Granum said the president has accepted an invitation by Panamanian leader Omar Torrijos to make the the two-day trip.

Granum, announcing the visit during a press briefing, said its principal purpose "is to sign the protocol confirming the exchange of the documents ratifying the Panama Canal treaties."

The Senate ratified the second of the two pacts last week.

Granum said that unless Congress acts to speed up the effective date of the treaty, "the effective date of this exchange will be March 31, 1979."

Details of the visit remain to be worked out, Granum said.

The mid-June dates push back approximately one-month a trip that had been rumored to be planned for May 12.

Granum, explaining the delay, said: "It's felt more time was needed for planning a very important ceremony."

He said no final decisions had been made on whether any heads of state, other than Carter and Gen. Torrijos, would attend the ceremony.

Under the treaties, the Republic of Panama will gain full control of the American-built canal by the year 2000 and will guarantee its neutrality. After protracted debate, the Senate ratified both pacts by votes of 68-32, one more than the two-thirds majority needed.

Bond set at $15,000

Peace Justice John Biggs today set bond at $15,000 for each of two drug charges filed against Bobby Audrie Brothers, 42, of the 600 block of South Terrell Street. Brothers was charged with possession of marijuana and possession of a controlled substance.

Midland police Thursday night stopped a vehicle at the intersection of Main Street and Industrial Avenue. Upon searching the vehicle, officers reported, they found and confiscated what they believed to be $1,218 worth of marijuana and seconal.

Officers said the car contained approximately 3.5 pounds, divided into 57 baggies, of a substance believed by them to be marijuana, and 324 pills believed to be seconal.

Teen-age travel exposes society to novel culture

By HUGH A. MULLIGAN
AP Special Correspondent

SYDNEY, Australia (AP) — In the great age of exploration a few centuries back, it was considered educational and scientific to bring a noble savage back from the Americas or Down Under and expose him to civilized London or Paris.

Sea captains returning with such trophies were invited to the best salons and drawing rooms, and quite frequently the exotic tourist from afar was passed from one great house to another, where he lived like a royal guest.

Squanto, the Indian brave who befriended the Pilgrim Fathers upon their arrival at Plymouth Rock, had made two such voyages to England. He was lionized there and for five years lived to the manor born. Once he caught a ride back home to the New World with Captain John Smith of Pocahontas fame.

Today one can achieve the same scientific end of exposing a primitive culture to civilized society by traveling to distant lands with teen-agers, although invites to the best houses will rarely result.

As one who has just journeyed some 9,000 miles to the Far East with a pair of teenagers, children of some friends, I can report that the experiment is revealing if not necessarily educational in a sociological way.

First of all, these noble savages have a slavish addiction to noise. Amid all the discordant sounds of the Orient, the clang of temple bells, the horns hooting in the busy harbors, the cries of the street peddlers, American teen-agers abroad never feel secure or at home unless engulfed, surrounded and mesmerized by a curtain of hard rock casette music.

Rather than play the strict guardian or house master, I found it necessary in a number of foreign capitals to pick up the telephone and feign a foreign accent to quell the pandemonium in the adjoining hotel room.

—"Vos is das mad music. Achtung, stop, or I breck down das door mit mein foot, Gott in himmel."

Invariably there followed the pitter-patter of racing sneakers across the carpet and an end to the music.

But every new dining room we entered — in Auckland, Sydney, Hong Kong, Bangkok, Manila, wherever — had to be made aware of an American presence with a ritual wine glass serenade. The urchins would wet a forefinger, run it delicately around the rim of every glass in sight until the rafters throbbed with a high pitched eerie banshee wail that built in resonance like the sound track of a Vincent Price horror film.

Teen-aged America has its own staid standards of what a world class hotel ought to be. I told them that the Orient in Bangkok, an outpost of elegance in the great days of Empire, was one of the most famous hotels in the world, having sheltered on its wide wicker-furnished verandah the likes of Joseph Conrad, Somerset Maugham and Noel Coward.

Whoopers may have banner year

WAYAN, Idaho (AP) — This may be a banner year for whooping cranes brought up under the foster care of their sandhill cousins which nest near here, says a wildlife biologist.

Whooping crane eggs are brought to the Grays Lake National Wildlife Refuge and placed in the nests of the sandhill cranes which treat the relatively rare whoopers like they were their own, says Rod Drewien, a wildlife biologist. And he said this year, if present refuge conditions don't change drastically, the program might have its most successful season.

The eggs are brought to the refuge from Wood Buffalo National Park in Alberta, Canada, and the Patuxent Wildlife Research Center in Laurel, Md., said Drewien, a University of Idaho researcher and one of the founders of the program.

Last summer's drought dried up most of the marsh, resulting in more whooping crane chicks falling victim to coyotes who were able to reach the nesting area. But Drewien said most of the water has come back to the nesting area because of above-normal rainfall, and the cranes are therefore better protected against predators.

The project was begun in 1975 by the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service and the Canadian government. The once-thriving population of wild whooping cranes, now an endangered species, has dwindled to about 70 birds, all concentrated in Canada.

Wildlife officials hope the whooper project in Idaho will establish a second wild flock to provide a margin of safety against extinction should a catastrophe strike the Canadian flock.

Three of the Idaho-raised whoopers have already arrived here from their wintering roosts near Bosque Del Apache National Wildlife Refuge in New Mexico, Drewien said.

He said he wasn't sure about the status of all the cranes raised in the project, but at least six of them are still alive.

Two were killed after flying into fences in Southern California in the past two years, he said, and another was killed after colliding with an unknown object.

Drewien said besides the three whoopers already at Grays Lake, another was sighted in southern Colorado last Friday.

"The others are probably up in this part of the woods," he said.

1,700 acres, former LBJ Ranch, for sale

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — A part of what formerly was the historic LBJ Ranch is for sale.

"This is the one where he's supposed to have taken Walter Cronkite and all the celebrities hunting in his Lincoln," said Austin real estate man Gene Naumann, who's selling the 1,700-acres.

An advertisement in the Wall Street Journal said the property owned by the late President Lyndon B. Johnson is filled with wild fowl, fish, deer and exotic game animals.

The ranch land up for sale is not the part where Lady Bird Johnson lives in the famous sprawling white ranch house. That part of the ranch has been given to the LBJ Park, according to Naumann.

The LBJ Ranch is actually two separate pieces of land. The part now for sale was legally the LBJ Ranch, Naumann said.

"It is the only one they had in their name. The other one was in the corporation's name."

The 1,700 acres now for sale were sold by the Johnsons in 1972 to Tulsa, Okla., developers. The developers sold it to Naumann in 1976. Naumann sold it to the current owners and is now selling it for them.

Laughing gas abuse causing disabling disease in users

By ROBERT GILLETTE
The Los Angeles Times

A small but possibly significant number of the nation's 100,000 practicing dentists habitually inhale their own nitrous oxide or "laughing gas" anesthetic for its intoxicating and relaxing effects.

And some of them, a University of California medical researcher has found, are as a consequence suffering debilitating nerve damage with symptoms that mimic multiple sclerosis, a degenerative disease of the central nervous system.

Dr. Robert B. Layzer, an associate professor of neurology at the UC San Francisco medical school, said in an inteview that six such cases have come to light in the past 17 months in California, Illinois, and Tennessee. He said evidence exists for a number of similar cases and that the malady, never previously described in the world's medical literature, is not rare among dentists and other health professionals with easy access to nitrous oxide.

"I know there are plenty of others," he said. "The question is how many, how big is the problem?"

The broad range of symptoms includes numbness in the fingers and toes and a progressive muscular weakness and loss of coordination. Some of the six patients suffered impotence, loss of bladder control, and difficulty in walking. At least two were forced to suspend their dental practices. All experienced what Layzer described as a "strange electric shock sensation" running along the spine upon tilting the head, a symptom usually associated with multiple sclerosis.

In each case, Layzer said, the patients — five dentists in their early to mid-30s and one 22-year-old hospital technician — have improved slowly, over many months, once they were persuaded to abstain from nitrous oxide.

A colorless, sweet-smelling gas, nitrous oxide was discovered by Joseph Priestly in 1772 and became modern medicine's first anesthetic when Horace Wells, a dental surgeon in New England, began using it in 1844.

Although its use subsided in the 1940s as doctors and dentists realized patients could asphyxiate or suffer brain damage from an insufficient flow of oxygen along with the gas, safer equipment brought a resurgence of nitrous oxide in the 1950s as a dental sedative to relax the patients.

The American Dental Association estimated that about one-third of the nation's 100,000 practicing dentists are equipped to administer it.

In the 134 years of nitrous oxide's medical use, Layzer notes, it has never previusly been linked to nerve damage. He and other authorities emphasize that the damage observed so far occurred only after sustained, habitual use and not from the much smaller doses a dental patient might receive.

"There's no reason to believe that occasional exposure to nitrous oxide mixed with oxygen (as dentists adminster it) might be dangerous," he said.

Although there is a clear association between heavy abuse of nitrous oxide and nerve damage, Layzer said the possibility could not be ruled out that an undetected contaminant in the commercial gas, rather than nitrous oxide itself, was at fault.

(A spokesman for the Food and Drug Administration in Rockville, Md., told the Los Angeles Times that federal regulations require that gases sold for medical inhalation be 98 percent pure. No information was immediately available on the actual purity of commercial nitrous oxide sold in the United States nor on the nature of impurities that could presumably constitute up to 2 percent of the gas.)

The six cases described by Layzer involved young men who typically inhaled nitrous oxide for an hour a day, often while napping in their offices, over periods ranging from a few months to six years.

One of them, a Chicago dentist who used nitrous oxide the longest time, stopped last October and is now able to walk again, although he still suffers symptoms of spinal cord damage.

Although this dentist had described himself to his doctor as a "nitrous abuser" and strongly suspected that the gas was the cause of his disability, other neurologists, noting that no side effects had been reported, diagnosed his illness variously as pernicious anemia and multiple scelerosis.

Layzer was to present a research report today at the 30th annual meeting of the American Academy of Neurology in Los Angeles. Co-authors of the report, who have treated two of the six patients, are Dr. Robert A. Fishman, chairman of the UCSF neurology department and Dr. John A. Schafer, a physician at the U.S. Naval Regional Medical Center in Oakland, Calif.

Ironically, dental organizations have recently become concerned about nitrous oxide as a possible occupational hazard, but the concern has extended only to exposure in the ambient office air as dentists administer it to one patient after another—and not to deliberate and habitual inhalation by dentists.

At the same time, nitrous oxide has emered as one of many substances that children and young adults inhale illicitly as an intoxicant. Police reports indicate that aerosol spray cans are a common source (it is the propellent for some food products). Dental supply firms and hospitals have also reported theft of nitrous oxide cylinders.

State and national dental authorities contacted by The Times offered conflicting views about the extent of nitrous oxide abuse within the profession, with one suggesting that if it exists at all, it occurs only in isolated instances.

"This has never been an issue. This is the first time it has been brought to my attention," Dr. J. Vernon Scott, president of the California Dental Association, said in a telephone conversation Wednesday. "I know literally hundreds of dentists and not one of them has ever mentioned it (the abuse of nitrous oxide by dentists) to me."

"If it is a problem," Scott added, "we certainly want our dentists to know about it. But it must be very minimal."

Scaffolding blamed

ATLANTA (AP) — The failure of a piece of scaffolding is probably to blame for the collapse of a 1,600-square-foot section of an underground parking garage near a new federal building, the project's architect says.

About 30 men working on the street-level plaza covering the top level of the garage escaped injury Thursday when they jumped off the structure after feeling vibrations moments before the collapse. The garage is part of the Richard B. Russell federal complex being constructed in downtown Atlanta.

Architect Bernard Rothschild said the steel and wood scaffolding was supporting molds into which wet concrete was being pumped.

Fighting continues in Kabul despite report of Daoud death

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — More fighting was reported today in Kabul, the capital of Afghanistan, despite broadcast claims that rebel troops led by an air force commander had killed President Mohammed Daoud and his brother while refusing to surrender.

Afghanistan's borders and airports closed, and all commercial communication channels were cut. But Western diplomats in New Delhi said their embassies in Kabul reported about 200 bodies were seen in the streets.

There was no report on the situation in the important military centers of Kandhar and Harat, and one diplomat commented: "To seize Kabul is not to seize Afghanistan. Resistance in the form of guerrilla warfare could continue for months."

The rebels led by Lt. Gen. Dagarwal Abdul Qadir launched the coup Thursday with tanks and jet fighters, ringing key government buildings and capturing the Defense Ministry, the diplomats said.

Fierce fighting raged through the night in sections of the city where two army divisions are based, the sources reported. By sunrise it had subsided somewhat but small-arms fire could still be heard.

Meanwhile, the air force's Soviet Su-7 fighters fired rockets down Darulaman Road in the center of the city toward the Justice Ministry and the headquarters of the army central corps. The informants said the planes encountered heavy anti-aircraft fire, and one plane was shot down.

A heavy pall of smoke hung over the city of 500,000, and no civilians were seen out of doors, the sources said. Rebel troops surrounded some Western embassies and refused to permit diplomats to leave their compounds.

In Washington, the State Department said there are about 1,300 Americans in Kabul, and it had no reports that any of them had been injured.

Diplomats in New Delhi had no concrete information on the fate of the 69-year-old president, who took over the government in a military coup in 1973, or his brother Naeem, 68, who advised him. But the news announced on Radio Afghanistan today declared: "Daoud is gone forever. Daoud has been eliminated forever by the will of the people of Afghanistan." It said he and his brother Naeem were killed resisting arrest.

Unconfirmed reports said the former royal palace in which the president lived had been reduced to rubble by fire from 50 tanks.

A broadcast said the new Military Revolutionary Council abolished the 1977 constitution and ordered top military officers to report to the Defense Ministry and "be punished by military law."

Claiming that the council controlled all military camps and bases, the broadcast said public gatherings were banned, an 8 p.m.-to-dawn curfew was ordered, and all laws would be made by the council.

An Afghan diplomat in New Delhi said Abdul Qadir is about 40 and took part in Daoud's 1973 coup. At that time he commanded an air base.

By EDWARD MAGRI

ROME (AP) — The Red Brigades planned a widespread "terrifying" attack 24 hours after it kidnapped Aldo Moro to "bring the country to its knees," but the leaders of the terrorist army called it off, the conservative newspaper Il Tempo reported today.

Il Tempo said the disclosure came from Cristoforo Piancone, 28, a Red Brigades member who was wounded and captured after the ambush of a prison guard in Turin April 11. He was quoted as saying, in what it called an "exclusive dialogue" from his hospital bed:

"In connection with Moro's kidnapping, 24 hours later we should have carried out a subversive plan aimed at bringing the country to its knees, something terrifying. ... But those at the top level in the organization stopped it because it was felt to be politically inopportune at the time."

Il Tempo said Piancone did not elaborate on the plan. But it said he gave this detailed description of the Red Brigades, Italy's most feared terrorist organization, which kidnapped Moro, the president of the ruling Christian Democratic Party, on March 16.

"We are 1,500 all told, divided in four local squads — one independent from the other, and based in Milan, Genoa, Turin and Rome — 1,500 persons dedicated to a revolutionary cause and for whom death is not an obstacle, committed to killing and aware of the risk of being killed."

The members are recruited from all social classes, but most of them are young workers and students. Training may take several years.

"When one is asked whether he wants to join the Red Brigades, his reply must be satisfactory beyond any doubt, and the organization takes no risks.

"After a period of small actions, car thefts and the like, one goes on to real and true terrorist training for about one year and almost always outside Italy."

Il Tempo said Piancone did not locate the foreign training sites. Other newspaper reports have mentioned Palestinian guerrilla camps, Cuba, Czechoslovakia and Angola. The New York Times reported today that the U.S. government is particularly interested in reports that Czechoslovakia's Communist party provided money, arms and training for the Italian terrorists.

"What you call dens are real and true military barracks to us."

Each member gets $275 a month for food, transport, newspapers and similar expenses, while "the organization" takes care of lodging, clothing and weapons.

"No money from abroad, we get our cash through 'proletarian expropriations,'" holdups, kidnapping for ransom and extortion.

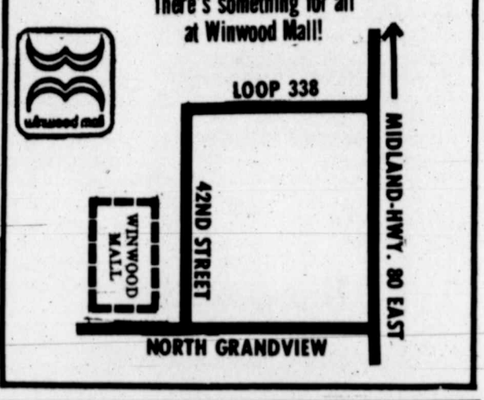

Piancone said Red Brigades members are also outfitted with bulletproof jackets, "but on April 11, I forgot to put mine on and here I am in the hospital."

He was one of the 13 imprisoned terrorists whose freedom the Red Brigades demanded in exchange for Moro's life. Although the kidnappers threatened to kill their captive, the government rejected the demand.

10 in one family die when scaffold falls

By TOM JOURNEY

ST. MARYS, W.Va. (AP) — Lee Steele battled cancer for 10 years. In one day, in just an instant, he lost 10 members of his family.

Four sons — Larry Steele, 32, Ronald Steele, 30, Earnest Steele, 29, Miles Steele, 26.

A brother — Emmett Steele, 61.

Two brothers-in-law, Robert and James Blouir. And three nephews, Steve Blouir, Chester Payne, 19, and Brian Taylor, 18.

All fell to their deaths Thursday when scaffolding inside a 170-foot power plant cooling tower under construction beside the Ohio River collapsed.

"We was very close, me and my sons," Lee Steele, a burly man who professes strong Christian beliefs, said in a telephone interview from his home here.

"I just trust in God. He'll never put more on me than I can bear. He gets me through the rough spots, but it's hard."

A few hours before, he had stood weeping outside a makeshift morgue set up in the nearby Belmont, W.Va., fire station.

"Four boys, I lost four boys," Steele had cried.

Inside were the bodies of 51 workers, including his kin.

Steele, a retired construction laborer, has met tragedy before. A brother fell to his death in a construction accident on a New Jersey bridge in 1960. Steele himself has undergone 20 weeks of radiation treatment for cancer.

Steele has four daughters and, now, one son.

Robert Steele, 35, had been working nearby on the Pleasants Power Station construction site when he heard a roaring sound as the scaffolding and sections of concrete peeled away from the partially constructed tower.

"I knew that they were all up there," he said. "I work right beside them."

Emmett Steele's oldest son, Carlton, also was working near the cooling tower, the incomplete twin of a 428-foot tower built nearby for Monongahela Power Co.

Carlton said he and other family members tried to get his father to quit the high-level iron work and take a job on the ground. "We tried to get him to change with us, but he wouldn't."

Accident baffling

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — The impossible happened. Fifty-one men died. And Research Cottrell, maker of the scaffolding that collapsed with the 51 West Virginia workers aboard, cannot figure out why.

"It's a complete mystery how this can happen because of the type of scaffolding we use ... It's impossible," said Thomas Buontane, a spokesman for Research Cottrell, which was a subcontractor on the Willow Island, W.Va., site.

The scaffolding was inspected daily by Research Cottrell officials at the site, said Buontane. "We have to assume that it was inspected" Thursday before the accident.

The company had constructed 36 similar towers without incident. Judging by past performance, officials of the Bound Brook, N.J., corporation said the accident never should have happened.

"Nothing was done that was different than in the 36 jobs that were successfully completed," said Philip Cocco, a director of corporate communications.

Cocco said corporation President Dennis Carlton-Jones and other company officials were at the scene searching for an explanation.

Company officials declined to speculate on causes. But a spokesman for the International Union of Operating Engineers in Charleston, W.Va., suggested that a form being filled with cement broke, beginning the collapse of the attached scaffolding.

Lyle Corder, a spokesman for the Monongahela Power Co., said the layer of concrete that had been poured Wednesday disintegrated as a new layer was being added and the bolts that were holding the scaffolding pulled loose.

The 428-foot-tall cooling tower was being built for Monongahela, which draws water from the Ohio River to make steam and generate electricity.

Peterson art to be in shows

Midland artist Dorothy Peterson will be represented in two upcoming art shows in the state.

Mrs. Peterson will have a transparent watercolor, "Vota Pan," on exhibition in the Texas Watercolor Society's 20th annual show opening May 7 at the Marian Koogler McNay Art Institute in San Antonio. The Midlander's entry won the Herwecks Award in the annual show, which will continue through May 27 at the McNay.

The artist also has had a drawing accepted for inclusion in an annual drawing and sculpture show at Del-Mar College in Corpus Christi. The exhibition is scheduled to open April 30.

Broadcast spending questioned

WASHINGTON (AP) — The General Accounting Office wants Congress to ask public broadcasters about their spending habits — particularly about their use of federal money to raise private funds.

In questioning the use of federal grants to raise private dollars through auctions and pledge nights, the GAO said the law specifies that Community Service Grants sent out by the Corporation for Public Broadcasting "may be used at the discretion of stations for educational television and radio programming."

But, the GAO asks, "How does the expenditure ... for auctions and pledge nights relate to educational television and radio programming?"

The auditing agency, which monitors spending for Congress, says in a confidential report that the procedure results in federal money subsidizing a station's private fund-raising, which in turn qualifies them for more federal money. The Associated Press has obtained a copy of the document.

Currently, the formula for providing federal grants gives stations $1 of government money for each $2.50 raised by the stations. Some in Congress want to lower the ratio to $1 from Washington for every $2 raised.

The corporation uses 50 percent of its federal funding for the grants, but they may not exceed 50 percent of any station's private support. The grants reached $51.6 million in fiscal 1977.

The GAO is questioning the financing of public broadcasting in a preliminary summary related to President Carter's proposed overhaul legislation for the system. Congress asked for the information because it is now considering Carter's plan, and the GAO report offers questions congressmen should consider. It does not draw conclusions.

The report covers fiscal 1976 because the stations do not have to account for their CPB funding until two years after it is awarded.

The agency also is asking if federal program production grants are being used to buy unneeded equipment or to hire unneeded personnel, a practice that could lead to costly idle production capacity.

The accounting agency is questioning as well the practice of giving the CPB its funds as a lump sum at the start of the year instead of handing out the money out as it is needed. That is the practice with most other federal financing.

The document already has caused the chairmen of the House and Senate communications subcommittees, Rep. Lionel Van Deerlin, D-Calif., and Sen. Ernest F. Hollings, D-S.C., to include in a bill they introduced two weeks ago provisions requiring more accountability by public broadcasters, making the CPB payments quarterly and limiting administrative spending.

The GAO report is limited to five public TV stations that get a large share of the production funding and are major producers of programs for national use. They are WGBH, Boston; WNET, New York; WETA, Washington; KQED, San Francisco; and KCET, Los Angeles.

Just tell the voters what they want to hear. Promise them anything but get their vote.

But who is going to pay for these promises if John Hill is elected Governor?

Whose money is this big-spender going to be spending?

Yours.

Where is this money going to come from?

From higher taxes and new taxes, specifically a State income tax. On you.

But you do have a choice.

You don't have to choose a big spender. Because there is one man who believes that the people of Texas are already overtaxed.

That man is Dolph Briscoe.

You don't have to vote for a governmental activist. Because there is one man who believes in governmental restraint.

That man is Dolph Briscoe.

And you don't have to support a big-government advocate. Because there is one man who believes that government is already too big.

That man is Dolph Briscoe.

Briscoe For Texas
John Hill For Taxes

To assure the future of Texas without a State income tax, let's keep the candidate with the proven record. Let's keep Dolph Briscoe as our Governor.

'Matter of concern'

Harsh reality has dictated many changes in the philosophy President Carter brought to the White House last year.

His campaign pledges of a balanced budget, tax reform and a trimmed-down bureaucracy are among the items relegated to the administration's back burner.

And in a speech earlier this month at Wake Forest University, the President acknowledged that he has been forced to reassess the United States' military strategy.

His new set of defense principles and goals is sharply revised from the perceived "disarmament rhetoric," which has drawn the criticism of some U.S. partners in the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

In the address, which the Soviet Union denounced as saber rattling, the President stressed the growth of the Soviet military power over the past two decades and the increasingly "ominous inclination" to use it. The intervention in local disputes in Africa, the President said, "demands that we maintain adequate responses — diplomatic, economic and military."

The new Carter mood further dims the potential for a treaty to emerge from continuing SALT II negotiations. Senate ratification of an armed reduction pact would be unlikely with Moscow maintaining a role in the Ethiopian-Somalia fracas.

The President's firm refusal to waive "strategic balance" in arms capability makes a SALT agreement even more remote.

The growing Soviet bid for military superiority brings matching apprehension of renewed Soviet adventurism in global political affairs. As former U.S. arms negotiator Paul Nitze said recently, "It is a matter of concern."

The President is properly reluctant to encourage a resumption of the East-West cold war and has reiterated the American desire to cooperate in a drive for common social, scientific and economic goals.

His warning to the Kremlin to exercise arms restraint, however, reaffirms the historic U.S. responsibility to preserve peace throughout the world.

But we must remember also that the Kremlin does not always accept such warnings at face value.

This makes it necessary for the United States to go beyond the boundaries of its usual warnings in getting the strict attention of the Soviets.

This really is what concerns a lot of folks. The Soviet Union has its eye on military superiority, and it isn't likely that a mere tap on the wrist would cause the Soviets very much concern.

But let Uncle Sam express his feelings with a show of might, and the Soviets would sit up and take notice.

Harding is the man

The state treasurer's race this year has generated more conversation and interest than usual.

Three men are seeking nomination for the office in the May 6 Democrat primary. Republicans did not offer a candidate for the treasurer job.

Warren G. Harding of Dallas, who was appointed to fill the unexpired term as state treasurer late last year, gets The Reporter-Telegram's endorsement in this particular race.

He had served for almost three decades as the Dallas County treasurer at the time of his appointment, and his experience there certainly should better qualify him for the state position. He had built a fine record in his Dallas job over the years. He also has made some noteworthy improvements in the state system since moving to Austin.

Uncle Sam shot himself in the leg: What a laugh

By CHARLEY REESE
Sun Belt Syndicate

ORLANDO, Fla. — Yes, there were celebrations in Washington, Panama City, Colon, Havanna, and Moscow. The United States shot itself in the leg.

We plain Americans have a problem when our president jubilantly celebrates as a victory the turning over to a loud-mouthed leftist dictator an American asset as valuable and as strategically important as the Panama Canal.

We shall see how long the celebrations last and what contortions apologists for the give-away go through when Omar Torrijos steps into a phone booth and emerges in his hammer and sickel suit.

I trust you will remember the names of the 68 senators, especially those of Senate Majority Leader Robert Byrd and Senate Minority Leader Howard Baker, the chief architects of this latest act of self-mutilation.

Events have already branded Baker either a fool or a liar. Following Torrijos' boasts that he had planned to invade the Canal Zone if the treaty had been rejected, Baker said if he had known that, he might have voted against the treaty.

Okay, the Los Angeles Times reported that U.S. intelligence knew of Torrijos' plans for a week and that U.S. military forces in the Zone had been placed on alert. That means quite obviously President Carter knew about Torrijos' plans for a week.

And that means either Carter deceived the Senate by keeping it a secret, in which case Baker is a fool, or he informed his Senatorial allies, in which case Baker is now lying. Either one is sufficient reason to retire him to his millionaire's home in Tennessee.

Another deception practiced on the American people by their own government has been the claim during the debate that the Communists opposed this treaty.

The March 29 issue of "Review of the News" reprints two statements written by Panamian Communists and published long before the treaty vote was taken.

One, entitled "Message of People's Party of Panama in Connection with the Carter-Torrijos Treaty," states:

"We, Panamanian Communists, support the treaty signed by Torrijos and Carter inasmuch as it is a vehicle of our country's decolonization and points out the need for strengthening anti-imperialist national unity in order to advance toward complete liberation through the defeat of imperialist oligarchy in all areas and consummate the structual transformations launched in preceeding years. We have taken a step forward. The struggle continues."

In "World Marxist Review," Panamanian Communists wrote: "... in the U.S. Senate there are elements, representing the most reactionary circles of imperialism, who doggedly refuse to recognize the international realities of our day. But there are also forces thinking in realistic terms and capable of seeing the benefits created by detente.

" . . . We Panamanians are doing everything to make political realism predominant among the ruling circles in the U.S.A., as was the case when peace was signed in Vietnam, so that the Senate would approve the new treaty and the House of Representatives would pass the relevant laws under which the new treaty would be embodied in concrete deeds."

The American politicians and State Department officials who claimed Panamanian Communists opposed this treaty and that ratifying it would undercut the Communists are liars.

I don't know about you but I can disagree with an honest man with no sweat but I hate a liar. They knew the Panamanian Communists were backing this treaty just like they knew Fidel Castro was a Communist when they sold that lying murderer to the American people.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Irate Eddie is in 'high dudgeon'

By JACK ANDERSON

WASHINGTON — F. Edward Hebert, the irascible old solon who used to run the House Armed Services Committee, is in high dudgeon over suggestions that the naval hospital named after him be used for some other purpose.

The F. Edward Hebert naval facility, located near the former congressman's hometown of New Orleans, was originally supposed to cost $11.7 million, but the final price tag was in excess of $21 million. It is a classic example of how public officials attempt to immortalize themselves at the public's expense.

Congressional investigators recently discovered the hospital is largely unused. Indeed, less than five patients per day have been admitted since it opened.

Federal authorities are considering a number of alternate uses for the facility. Suggestions have been made to turn it into a psychiatric hospital for prison inmates. Another proposal would convert it into a halfway house for the mentally retarded.

Such talk doesn't set well with Eddie Hebert. "The hospital was built to satisfy the needs of the military in this area and still remains a military necessity," he fumed to one letter-writer. Sinister forces, including a national television network, were behind the move to convert the hospital to something else, he suggested.

He signed his letter: "F. Edward Hebert, Dean Emeritus, Louisiana Congressional Delegation."

FAMILIAR FACE: A familiar face has re-emerged on the South Dakota political scene. He is Frank Denholm, a former Democratic congressman who was retired by the voters in 1974. He recently announced he will run in the Democratic primary this June.

Denholm came to our attention several times during his four-year career on Capitol Hill. In 1972, we discovered he was renting space for his district office in a building that he and his wife owned. Later, we caught him junketing to Venezuela at the expense of the Venezuelan government. After that story appeared, he told a South Dakota audience he had given his permission to run the story because his "personal friend" Jack Anderson had to "find something" on "every member of Congress before election day."

The alleged conversation between Denholm and myself was pure fantasy. Indeed, he had refused to answer questions about his Venezuelan trip.

TROUBLE SPOTS — President Carter's national security adviser, Zbigniew Brzezinski, gave the Cabinet a closed-door briefing last month on the trouble spots he is watching closely. He "is concerned," he said, "with developments in four areas."

In the Middle East, he reported glumly, "Egyptian position is becoming more vulnerable."

He is also worried about the Soviet-Cuban threat to the African Horn. "The basic question," he said, "is how the United States and the Soviets define detente."

He gives high priority to bringing the blacks to power in Rhodesia peacefully. "The main issue here," he said, "is the question of our relationship with moderate black African leaders." Developments in Western Europe also occupy Brzezinski, who is particularly worried about left-wing gains.

POLLUTED POT — For over two years the United States government has been helping Mexico control the production of marijuana by spraying fields with a potentially toxic herbicide called paraquat. As a result, the health of millions of pot smokers in this country may be endangered.

Paraquat kills marijuana plants within two days. But Mexican farmers have been harvesting the crop within hours after helicopters spray the fields. Much of the marijuana that is smuggled into the United States, therefore, is contaminated.

At the request of Sen. Charles Percy, R.-Ill., the White House reluctantly initiated a study to determine if paraquat-tainted pot is hazardous. A White House report, issued in December, downplayed the danger. But we have learned that many of the findings are disputed by new scientific evidence.

The White House document, for example, claimed that the maximum amount of paraquat "likely to be found on plant material is about 500 parts per million." Government scientists, however, have subsequently detected as much as four times that amount in random marijuana samples. The average contamination, they determined, is nearly four times the amount claimed in the December report.

The White House also alleged that the United States was not responsible for the paraquat hazard because the Mexican government had purchased the herbicide in Europe. But we have seen confidential State Department cables that reveal the United States has provided technical assistance for the paraquat program.

A backstage brouhaha has developed at the White House, meanwhile, over whether the U.S. government is responsible for protecting the health of marijuana users.

INSIDE REPORT:

Verdict on Carter: 'Incompetence and indecision'

By ROWLAND EVANS And ROBERT NOVAK

Evans

Novak

SPRINGFIELD, Neb. — Voters of both parties in this farm hamlet have diagnosed what they think ails Jimmy Carter's presidency as follows: incompetence and indecision.

Whether this diagnosis points to terminal political illness, however, is an open question. The President retains a large measure of good will. Thus, although only 16 of our 55 voters rate his presidential performance "good" or "excellent," and 19 say "fair" or "poor," fully one-half say they still have a "favorable" opinion of him as a person.

But the down-to-earth criticism of one retired farmer, a Democrat, hints that time may be running out. "I don't think Carter is big enough for the job." One of 17 Carter voters in our survey of political sentiment here (25 backed Jerry Ford and 13 don't recall or would not say how they voted in 1976), this farmer says he now wishes he had voted for Ford.

Four additional voters who backed the President in 1976 now say they wish they had not, an unusually high defection rate. Only one Ford voter who answered our questionnaire, prepared by Pat Caddell's Cambridge Survey Research, wishes he had voted for Mr. Carter.

On one major issue after another — inflation, farm policy, handling the Soviet Union, defense spending — our scouting expedition produced failing marks for the President on general grounds of incompetence and waffling. The sole exception: his efforts to settle the Arab-Israeli struggle in the Middle East, which gained solid 2-to-1 support.

Behind that praise for Mr. Carter's dealing with the Middle East may lie a lesson for the President: the political importance of follow-through. Ringing doorbells with three Caddell field representatives on a day of rain, snow and frigid winds on the bleak Nebraska prairie, we found high praise for Mr. Carter's consistency in trying to mediate between Arab and Jew. On other issues, he is charged with lacking conviction, receiving less than 50 per cent approval even for "trying" to solve the energy crisis.

The dominant theme was struck by an attractive, 36-yearold waitress. "If the man would just say something and stick to it!" she blurted out. "That would make a difference." She backed Ford in 1976, but only "as the lesser of two evils." A 35-year-old computer maintenance man, whose job is 20 miles east of here in Omaha, agreed. He voted for Mr. Carter and would vote for him again today but called him "too hesitant" on decisions. "There are so many things he said he would do and he hasn't shown that he can do any of them."

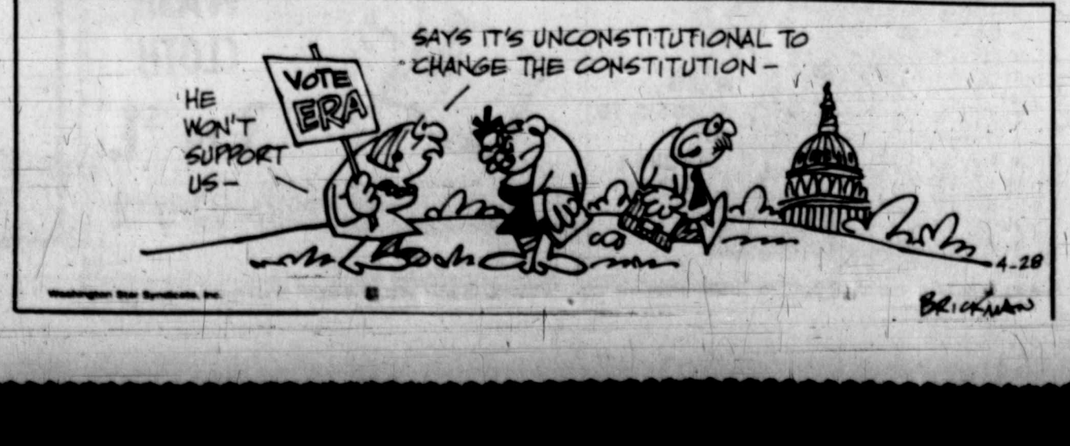

By far the major worry here is inflation, along with other economic problems. Thirty-one of our voters listed inflation as the "most important" issue. Indeed, the prevailing lack of confidence in Mr. Carter bodes ill for his new anti-inflation program and might turn Ambassador Robert Strauss' silvery hair gray. Only 19 voters "generally approve of the way Mr. Carter is trying to handle" the inflation disease (against 31 who disapprove and 5 who do not know). But the President's new anti-inflation program, using Strauss' virtuoso jawbone as his principal weapon, appears singularly unconvincing in Springfield: only 4 voters think it will work, 22 say it will not work and 29 are dubious.

Neither Springfield nor Nebraska as a whole represents majority opinion in the U.S. This is hawkish country, built on a farm economy. Thus, by almost 2-to-1, our respondents "generally disapprove" of Mr. Carter's handling of Moscow. On questions whether he is "too tough" or "too weak" on the Soviets, and whether he is spending "too much" or "too little" on defense, an identical 31 voters say "too weak" and "too little."

As for the farm issue, there was some solace for the President in taking a hard-line position against the "emergency" farm bill defeated in the House 10 days ago under threat of presidential veto. A surprising 24 voters commend him for that, against only 27 who condemn him (the balance unsure). That is a far better mark than he gets on his efforts to cope with the farm situation, and serves to highlight the fact that even here the intractable problem of inflation is overtaking farm prices as an issue. That shift can scarcely be called a political plus for a President who still has not proved his fitness to govern, at least as judged in this small farm community.

Quick action needed for oil exploration

Likening the federal bureaucracy to a surgeon who treats a broken leg while his patient bleeds to death, Texas Railroad Commission Chairman Mack Wallace Thursday called for quick action to expand opportunities to explore for oil and natural gas.

Wallace was in Midland to speak to the Midland Rotary Club at its noon luncheon in the Midland Hilton.

"While we bleed to death on imported foreign crude, they (federal officials) are treating hangnails," Wallace said. He pointed to the recent delay of construction of an electric generating plant to save the Tennessee Snail Darter, which Wallace called "a sophisticated version of an East Texas minnow."

The commissioner, a candidate in the Democratic primary for re-election, called President Jimmy Carter's energy plan a "scheme to raise $40 billion in taxes and to add not one penny for the exploration of oil and gas."

He also attacked the president's emphasis on conservation.

"This nation didn't conserve itself to greatness. It produced itself to greatness.

"The administration has been penetrated by a group of no-growth bureaucrats. They would have us think small," he said.

Wallace said the state should move quickly to tap its vast lignite reserves. "Texas has been twice-blessed, once with oil and once with lignite."

Emphasizing that Texas is a "can-do" state, Wallace said the state now produces 38 percent of the oil consumed in the United States, produces 65 percent of the petrochemical products and is strong in agriculture.

If Texas were not part of the union, he said, it would have the ninth largest gross national product among nations of the world. "I don't advocate seccession," he quipped.

Wallace said Texas isn't understood in the Northeast and Washington, D.C.

There are only two reasons to go to Washington, he said — to ask for a handout or to "fight for your country."

Art exhibit entries taken

Entries in the 12th annual Southwestern Area Art Show will be received this week.

The show, sponsored jointly by Midland Arts Association and the Museum of the Southwest, is scheduled to open in mid-May at the museum. It will continue there through June 18.

Clint Stokes, a professional artist from Dallas, will adjudicate this year's show and will recommend cash awards totaling $1,000, in addition to selecting a winning graphic for the annual purchase award from the Midland branch of the American Association of University Women.

Paintings, ceramics and crafts, sculpture, graphics and photographs will be accepted for entry in the show from artists 16 years of age or above. Each artist may submit three entries produced within the last year and not previously entered in competition in Midland.

Hand-delivered works should be brought to the Museum of the Southwest at 1705 W. Missouri Ave., on Wednesday, Thursday, Friday or Saturday, between 10 a.m. and 5 p.m.

Actor John Wayne waves to a crowd of newsmen gathered at the Orange County, Calif., Airport Thursday. (AP Laserphoto)

The Duke returns home

NEWPORT BEACH, Calif. (AP) — The Duke is home and feeling frisky after a four-week hospital stint in Boston for open-heart surgery.

John Wayne, wearing the wide-brimmed Stetson that has been his movie trademark, trotted eagerly off a private jet at Santa Ana's Orange County Airport on Thursday and told a throng of reporters: "It's sure good to be home."

The 70-year-old actor, who had surgery to replace a ruptured heart valve with a similar valve from a pig, was embraced by his two daughters, Aissa and Melinda, as he hustled off the jet. He was accompanied on the flight by sons Patrick and Michael and a doctor from Boston.

"I've got a close family, thank God," Wayne said, adding that the good wishes from his fans across the country had been so moving that "I want to cry."

During his hospitalization, thousands of letters poured in from around the world. Even President Carter called and told Michael Wayne that his father was "a great national asset."

Wayne said he would almost immediately begin work on a new movie.

"I'm going to go to my house, lie down for a couple of days and then start working on a script."

Nuclear power plant protesters plan ball

PORTSMOUTH, N.H. (AP) — Organizers of mass civil disobedience who usually worry about tear gas and arrests find themselves fretting instead over clam chowder and music for a dance to commemorate — of all things — the occupation of a site for a nuclear power plant.

"We're going to put the conflict in the closet for a night and try to make friends with the people on the other side of the police lines," says Cathy Wolff of the Portsmouth Clamshell Alliance.

The Clamshell organized the occupation of the Seabrook nuclear plant site, which actually began last April 30 and led to 1,414 arrests, with the cases now in various stages in the judicial process.

Another occupation is scheduled for June 24, but on Saturday — the same day anti-nuclear demonstrators in Colorado and South Carolina hold conventional protests — there will be the Clamshell Ball.

"I agree that what we're doing is different but it's also important," says Cheryl Fox, one of the organizers. "We want to do everything we can to create happy vibes between the Clamshell and the police before the June occupation."

The organizers of anti-nuclear protests resurrected talents unused since high school prom days. During the last four weeks, traditional ball committees have been planning the ball.

"We've invited state and local police, the National Guard, the sheriff's deputies, the court clerks, the judges, the county attorneys and everyone else we've met since the last occupation," says Rene Cushing.

Invitations also went to officials of Public Service Co., the plant's builders, and the workers on the construction site.

The food chairman has begun making clam chowder — "New England, naturally, not Manhattan" — for the expected 700 partygoers.

A difficult decision had to be made by the entertainment committee. "We had to determine what kind of music would be enjoyed by everyone from sneakers to hard hats," says Miss Fox. "Blue grass seemed to be the safest bet."

The organizers hope that many police officers attend "but we hope they're coming to dance and not to work," says Cushing.

So a "peacemakers" committee was formed.

TIC holds meet in Odessa today

ODESSA — Members of the Texas Industrial Commission today heard plans for a statewide seminar to make Texans aware of the effects of new air quality standards on industrial growth.

"We hope to clear up a lot of misinterpretations by outlining exactly what the amendments to the Federal Clean Air Act are and then suggesting how Texas cities can continue to enjoy industrial growth within these federal guidelines," said TIC Executive Director James Harwell.

The TIC is meeting today in Odessa.

The seminar is scheduled July 6 at the Austin Coliseum.

Representatives from both the Environmental Protection Agency and the Texas Air Control Board will be at the seminar to answer questions following panel discussions. Case studies of industries who located plants in Texas since the recent rulings will be included on the agenda.

Title of the seminar is "Managing Industrial Growth Under New Air Quality Standards," and is being sponsored by the Industrial Commission in cooperation with various business and industrial development groups.

Preregistration will be accepted through June 23 for $15. Registration at the door is $25. Further information may be obtained from the TIC Community Services Department.

Bike ride Sunday

The Midland Bike-a-thon for the American Diabetes Association will be from 2 to 5 p.m. Sunday.

The 12-mile route will begin at the Mid-Tex parking lot on Andrews Highway and will make a circuit through northwest Midland, said Sam Blanck, chairman of the American Diabetes Association.

Riders in the Bike-a-thon will raise money by asking sponsors to pledge an amount for each mile of the course completed.

Prizes will be awarded to the top money-makers in the Midland area, as well as in the North Texas area. Midland riders also may win a 10-speed bicycle, a $100 savings bond or other prizes.

Entry forms are available at schools, Burger King and Mid-Tex of Midland.

Hospital costs rise

NEW YORK (AP) — Hospital costs continue to climb with the average cost to a patient in January of this year at $183.36 a day, up 10.5 percent from January 1977, says the American Hospital Association.

But the rise is continuing at a slower rate than last year, the association said in a report Thursday. The organization attributed the trend to its new voluntary cost containment program.

The voluntary program has been criticized by officials of the Department of Health, Education and Welfare as merely a public relations campaign, but they did not respond immediately to a request for comment.

Alex McMahon, president of the hospital association, said the group's figures effectively refute the Carter administration's contention that voluntary controls will not work.

The association said the latest statistics show that the rate of increase in spending by community hospitals across the nation dropped from 16.8 percent in January 1977 to 13.5 percent in January 1978.

The total expenditures for 5,785 community hospitals came to some $4.7 billion for January 1978, compared to $4.1 billion the previous January.

The cost to the patient for an average stay of 7.4 days was $1,349.76, up 10.5 percent, the hospital group said.

Castro pledges Cuba will fight against new Ethiopian invasion

Agence France Presse

HAVANA — Cuban President Fidel Castro told visiting Ethiopian leader Col. Mengistu Haile Mariam and a crowd of nearly 1 million Cubans Thursday that Cuba would fight against any new invasion of Ethiopia.

Castro said that peace in Ethiopia is threatened by the Eritrean secessionists, and he advocated a fair political solution that would preserve "the absolute unity, integrity and sovereignty of Ethiopia."

He thus indicated he opposed any kind of independence for the Ethiopian province of Eritrea and said that Cuba "favors peace between Ethiopia and all neighboring countries on the basis of respect for its integrity."

The Cuban leader warned that Cuba "absolutely refuses to discuss with the United States" a withdrawal of Cuban soldiers from Ethiopia "or any other point relating to Cuban solidarity with the just struggles of the African peoples."

The refusal is a matter of principle, he said. He stated that Cuban troops would remain in Ethiopia as long as the two governments decided to keep them there.

Castro said that without help from abroad, the Ethiopian revolution might have been crushed. He denounced the policies of "imperialists and their reactionary allies in the region" and what he called their attempt to "stimulate the secessionists and the territorial ambitions of Somalia."

He also said that Cuba was preparing to send various types of technicians to Ethiopia to join 300 Cuban doctors and auxiliary health personnel already there.

The Ethiopian head of state told the crowd in Revolution Square here that his government was sure to receive "internationalist support" in its fight against the Eritrean secessionists. But he added that "the seriousness of the situation must not be underestimated."

Mengistu accused the Eritrean secessionists of being "agents of imperialism and of Arab reaction." He said that in spite of the current war, his government would continue trying to find a peaceful solution to the Eritrean conflict.

Roberts' City of Faith Hospital approved; court challenge looms

By RON JENKINS
Associated Press Writer

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — An attorney for the Tulsa Hospital Association says he plans a court challenge of a state agency's approval of evangelist Oral Roberts' proposed City of Faith Hospital in south Tulsa.

The three-member Oklahoma Health Planning Commission, in a two-hour hearing Wednesday, unanimously approved Roberts' application to build the $55 million, 27-story facility.

The decision came despite testimony from spokesmen for the Tulsa hospital group who contended their city already had an excess of hospital beds and the proposed hospital would aggravate a health manpower shortage, duplicate existing services and increase hospital costs.

Earl Sneed, Oklahoma City attorney, said he will file an appeal of the commission action in district court on the grounds it was improper under the Administrative Procedures Act of Oklahoma.

"There's no need for this hospital, there's nothing new in the way of medical care except this so-called combination of prayers and healing," Sneed said.

The commission vote came after a solemn and short address by Roberts, who said he was "under obligation to 3 million partner families and their very special health needs. I feel that obligation...in every fiber of my being."

As proposed, the final 777-bed hospital will be part of a medical complex which also will include a 60-story office tower. The commission action sanctioned only the first 294 beds of the hospital.

Further approval will be needed for future expansion.

The hospital is to be funded entirely through donations and will be located on the campus of Oral Roberts University, which was founded by the nationally known evangelist.

Bush: Chinese have no identity

By SUSAN RUTHERFORD

George W. Bush of Midland toured the People's Republic of China when his father, George H. Bush, was head of the U.S. liaison office in Peking.

But, as he told members of the Midland branch of the Association of University Women Thursday in the Commercial Bank Building, the China he knew was cloaked in secrecy.

George W. Bush

He saw a country isolated from the rest of the world by an ever present dictator, Mao Tse-Tung, and he lacked patience with China's technological underdevelopment.

Midlander Bush, educated at Yale and Harvard, told of his father's appointment by Ford as a result of selecting Rockefeller for his running mate. Both his father and Rockefeller were being considered for the vice presidential post, and when the decision was made in Rockefeller's favor, Bush was asked what assignment he was most interested in. His son suggested Russia, but father Bush chose China. In December 1974, he was appointed to replace David K. Bruce in Peking.

"When the United States made their first contact with the Chinese, we were instructed by the Chinese to send our senior negotiator. All the negotiating was actually conducted by Henry Kissinger and Chow En-Lai. Bruce was only window dressing. And my father was only window dressing. At one point, the Minister of Sports was the highest person my father had seen," said the speaker.

Throughout Midlander George Bush's China travels, he never saw anyone hungry, he said. "The Chinese are fed, clothed and housed—but what a high price they've paid for it. The price has been freedom...

"We in the United States are able to feed our people better than in China and house them better, yet with our freedom."

"The Chinese," Bush continued, "all wear the same clothes made out of blue denim. There is no sexuality in dress, no individuality in adults—they all look the same. And they ride bicycles. This makes an interesting microcosm. There is no (consumer) market, no individual demand by consumers. In the U.S., demand induces producers to produce. But in China, there is a handful of elite. They see there is so much cotton and so much blue dye. There is no choice—the people take what they're given."

Besides technological backwardness, isolation and an abundance of propaganda, Bush stressed economic differences. "The average wage is $320 a year. A bicycle, costing $80, is the biggest capital purchase they make."

Nurseries, he said, are run by economic units, either by the rural agricultural community, the factory or the revolutionary street committee. "We would visit the nurseries and a cute little girl would sing. Mom would ask the interpreter, 'Mam, what is the little girl saying.' And the interpreter would say, 'Give us back Taiwan, you Imperialistic dogs.'"

"The Communist party feeds upon itself," he said. "Mao set up a system of self-criticism in which each week you must stand up in front of your peers and those who have ratted on you for not producing enough...and you have to pledge your allegiance again to Mao." He added that wages are based on "skill on the job and political purity."

His parents, he said, never went into any private homes in China. And, on at least one diplomatic occasion, were not invited since the U.S. was without true diplomatic relations with China. This one occasion was the arrival of the leader of Gabon, described by Bush as "a black African country hostile to the U.S."

Teng Hsiao-Ping was there to meet the Gabon chief and George was invited. "I was amazed. I was very close to him (Teng) and I could easily have killed him. There were no guards, no checks, no nothing."

The 800 million Chinese live from cradle to grave for their society, he said. "They have a large military, yet they are unarmed; they could eventually have nuclear weapons, and they are completely without a religious base."

Famed anthropologist's eyes fixed on the past

By BOB CORBETT
Copley News Service

They said Dr. Mary Leakey, the famed anthropologist, was a bear to interview. It turned out that she is a lady, congenial and forthright.

It's true that she's a stickler for the facts. It's Tanzania, not Tanganyika; it's Laetolil, not Olduvai Gorge; it's 3.5 to 3.75 million years ago, not four million years ago.

Leakey is a lady who has her eyes fixed firmly on the past — and with good reason.

For more than 40 years, she, her husband, the late Dr. Louis S. B. Leakey, and one of their sons, Dr. Richard Leakey, have been slowly raising the curtain on the dawn of man.

When Mary Leakey joined her husband's efforts in the mid-1930s, it was generally believed that man's roots stretched back only one million or maybe two million years. Now, the Leakeys and others have pushed that figure back to perhaps 3.75 million years.

Richard Leakey has said the real beginnings of man may have occurred somewhere between four and six million years ago.

Mary Leakey agrees. "We're getting close (to the beginning of man)," she said in a telephone interview from Bethesda, Md.

The recent announcement of the discovery of manlike footprints dating back more than 3.5 million years near Laetolil in Tanzania apparently buoyed her hopes. Like the prints left by Friday for Robinson Crusoe, they hint at life just behind the next hill.

Although she stops just short of saying the prints were made by a hominid (or manlike creature), Leakey did say the shape of the print certainly suggested a hominid origin. More tests will be needed, she said.

Perhaps more important, she said, is that the age of the prints (a point not in question) jibes with teeth and jawbone fragments of a hominid creature found nearby that have also been dated at between 3.5 million to 3.75 million years ago.

They also coincide with earlier discoveries of skulls in Ethiopia by Dr. Carl Johanson of Case Western Reserve University that also date back to the same period of time.

All these dates and finds, Leakey says, argue for a manlike ancestor that preceded Homo erectus, the progenitor of Homo sapiens or modern man, and Homo habilis, an even earlier manlike creature discovered by her late husband.

If it all fits together, Leakey said, Johanson's finds indicate that this early man-ape had a very small brain, still in the process of development. The footprints, the length of the stride, she said, argue for a creature not much more than four feet tall.

There's not much more known than that, she said. Beyond these facts, there is only hope — a hint that an earlier manlike creature than has been known before did exist.

Libraries can provide free wonderlands for children

By LAURA MEYERS
Copley News Service

Nine-year-old Jolene is an inner-city kid who loves theater. She takes in 12 professional plays a year.

Jolene doesn't worry about the price of admission because the plays she attends are free — they're held at the Los Angeles Public Library.

The youngster sits cross-legged on the library floor with her parents each month to partake of the library's Brown Bag Dinner Theater. Families bring homemade suppers to enjoy along with live plays, which have included such popular productions as "A Connecticut Yankee in King Arthur's Court."

The dinner theater is but one of the many ways today's libraries are reaching out to children. Across the country, libraries are introducing kids to reading and information services with book clubs, magic shows, storytelling hours and programs that emphasize that libraries — in fact, learning — can be fun.

"Libraries are communications centers," says Mary Jane Anderson, executive secretary of the Association for Library Service to Children, a division of the American Library Association.

"Children's services in libraries have been designed to convey information through a variety of forms — film, records, books and special programs," Anderson says. "Children come to the library to hear other people's ideas through these media and, at the same time, they have a place where they can share their own ideas."

Like Los Angeles' dinner theater, the arts play an important role in much children's programming. For instance, the Seattle Public Library sponsors the Caravan of the Lively Arts, a troupe that entertains inquisitive kids and then takes the time to talk to the children about their artistic talents.

Magic — the art of illusion — always attracts kids to the Magic Club at a branch library in Chicago. Similar magic, mime and acting clubs are popular in many community libraries.

Children write their own books at the Rockford, Ill., Public Library. Some books are bound with cloth from home, and all are given catalog numbers and shelved in the library, so interested peers may borrow and read them.

Youngsters write book reviews that are duplicated and distributed to other children at the Salt Lake City Public Library.

In this way, the librarian says, they can learn to analyze and appreciate the creative process.

A feature attraction of a Maryland library is another book review group, called CRABs (Children Raving About Books). The CRABs are a special group of 8- to 12-year-olds who meet weekly at Prince George's Memorial County Library's Oxen Hill branch to talk about their favorite stories. Besides book discussions, the kids publish a book list, write plays, stories and riddles, and hold what they call "little concerts."

A children's newsletter, the Pee Wee Press, includes kids' drawings as well as articles on library programs for the children. The newsletter is published by the National City, Calif., Public Library and distributed in all the community's elementary schools.

Of course, many of the kids who automatically head for their local library when school is over for the day enjoy studying in special youth departments that are decorated in bright colors with functional furniture and spill-proof carpets.

Small children can climb over large stuffed animals like the ones at the Tampa Bay, Fla., Public Library, when they're not browsing through favorite picture books. Kids in Baltimore can touch and feel sculpture by contemporary artists especially commissioned for two branch libraries.

Statute protects natural father in child-stealing

By RUTH DANILOFF
Special to The Los Ang

If a divorced husband takes his wife's new car across state lines against her will, the FBI will help her to retrieve it. But if he takes their child — even though she has legal custody — the wife is on her own.

She won't be aided by the FBI or any other law-enforcement agency in finding and recovering the youngster, because a tragic legal loophole specifically exempts natural parents from penalty under the federal kidnaping statute of 1934. Further, "Child-snatching," as the deed has been termed, is considered a low-priority misdemeanor — if a crime at all — in most states, and extradition of the guilty spouse from one state to another is rare.

This is not a new problem. Disgruntled spouses have long bypassed the justice system in custody disputes by grabbing the kids and running across a state line. In fact, officials of Children's Rights, Inc., a Washington-based organization lobbying for an end to the federal loophole, say 68 percent of all "snatches" occur before custody hearings begin. One parent, sensing that the court will grant custody to the other, jumps the gun and steals the child. More than 100,000 such incidents occur each year in this country, according to Children's Rights, though no official records are kept.

Several bills to curtail the practice through federal law have stalled in Congress — as the result of strong opposition from the Justice Department; it does not want the FBI to get bogged down in what it calls "baby-hunting."

The most comprehensive bill, introduced in 1973 by Rep. Charles Bennett, D-Fla., calls for an amendment to the federal kidnaping statute to make parents who abduct their own children liable to either a $1,000 fine or a year in prison. But the bill has been languishing in the House subcommittee on crime ever since, and now, five years later, it stands little chance of ever reaching the floor.

Senate efforts have been more fruitful. Sen. Malcolm Wallop, R-Wyo., offered a successful amendment to the omnibus criminal-code reform bill passed by the Senate last month. Now before the House, the amendment would make child-snatching punishable by up to six months in prison and a $10,000 fine.

In opposing these measures, the Justice Department argues that the federal government has no place in marital squabbles — family infighting properly being the concern of local courts — and that the added responsibilities would strain the already overtaxed FBI.

Since the Wallop amendment provides for a 60-day lag between the time a parent files a missing-person report and the FBI becomes involved with the case, the Justice Department regards this bill as the least drain on its resources, and thus the lesser of two evils.

Yet no one has suggested that FBI agents should pound the pavements hunting stolen babies. What is needed is the FBI's enormous and efficient nationwide information network — the computers, the files and so forth — to help parents track down their children.

In addition, the Justice Department"s opposition falters on the argument that family fights belong in local courts, for it sidesteps the practical issue: If most parents can't even find their stolen children, how can they appeal to local courts? One Baltimore mother has seven custody orders pending in as many states — and yet her ex-husband and child have easily managed to stay one state ahead of her throughout the chase.

Beyond this, however, legislation is needed to act as a deterrent. As divorce has increased in America, so has the incidence of child-snatching.

Misuse causes consumer products mishaps

COLLEGE STATION—Many accidents involving consumer products are not caused by poor product design, but rather by the miuse of otherwise safe products, says Claudia Kerbel, a consumer information specialist.

Among common types of product misuse are improper mixing, overuse, undue haste, lack of maintenance and improper storage.

Ms. Kerbel is with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, The Texas A&M University System.

Improper Mixing

Some products are hazardous if mixed together, the specialist cautions.

For example, chlorine bleach mixed with amonia, toilet bowl cleaners or drain cleaners may release hazardous or lethal vapors.

Although chlorine bleach must be labeled clearly with a warning not to mix it with ammonia or toilet bowl clearners, some people do not read the label or disregard it.

Overuse

Some consumers think that if a small amount is good, then a large amount must be better, Ms. Kerbel explains.

That kind of logic can lead to hazardous situations.

For example, too much acid-type drain cleaner can eat away pipes. And, taking more than a recommended dose of medication can lead to fatal results.

Always follow directions for use and never use more than the recommended amount, she stresses.

Haste

Attempting to race through preliminary steps in order to use a product and get the job done may result in serious injury, the specialist continues.

Serious injury may result from overlooking part of a piece of machinery or climbing on a stepladder without leveling it.

Take time to prepare for a task, she adds.

Lack of Maintenance

Failure to repair broken products and lack of maintenance are frequent contributors to serious injuries, Ms. Kerbel points out.

Tighten loose stair rails, replace broken electrical plugs and discard broken ladders.

Have complex machines, gas appliances and electrical appliances repaired by experts.

Improper Storage

Highly flammable liquids may produce heavier-than-air vapors which can travel along the floor, the specialist warns.

A distant pilot light in a gas furnace or gas water heater or a discarded cigarette can cause ignition.

Therefore, store flammable liquids away from any ignition source.

Store poisons, drugs and other hazardous products in high, locked cabinets to keep them out of children's reach.

Also, keep these products in their original containers and clearly label them to prevent mistaking them for food or beverage, she suggests.

An even bigger pizza pie planned

The Glens Falls pizza maker set a world record for pizza last Oct. 10 when he baked a 40-foot pie. That got him his first listing in the "Guinness Book of World Records."

On Thursday a Saratoga County board of supervisors granted Amato a land use variance for a 25-acre site where he plans to build an 80-foot pie.

He hopes to construct the pizza on Labor Day in the town of Wilton in Northern Saratoga County with the help of 50 other "pizza men."

He estimates that the gigantic masterpiece will cost between $100,000 and $200,000 and weigh in at about 18,000 pounds.

He said he'll build a concrete foundation to support the dough. And to keep his workers from getting their feet burned while they cut the pie up, he says he's ordered asbestos shoes.

Amato said the proceeds of the undertaking — he sells what he cooks — will go to charity. He's contacting sauce and cheese companies to help finance the project.

Witch doctors to do homes

WASHINGTON (AP) — In Sri Lanka, where witch doctors still practice the ancient art of exorcising demons, spells and maladies from their patients, house calls by the practitioners are routine and can even last up to 30 hours, says National Geographic.

The country has a 2,500-year-old rite called Thovil, which involves drums, dance, mime, chants and fire-eating, which witch doctors from Sri Lanka demonstrated in a recent tour of the United States.

The ancient magical arts are also practiced in the tropical forests of Venezuela and northern Brazil, where shamans try to exorcise all forms of sickness from their patients.

In Bangkok, Thailand, faith healers often throw water on their patients to expel the evil spirits, says Geographic.

Checklist for groom

Copley News Service

Here's a last-minute checklist for the groom-to-be:

Arrange your schedule to pick up your wedding clothes at the shop of your formal wear specialist (the other men in the wedding party should do the same). With an expert, check the following:

1. If possible, try it on! Check the waist, trouser length and make certain the trouser bottoms are properly turned under.

2. Are all the buttons in place and do all closures and zippers perform as they should?

Check all your accessories: shirt (with studs, cuff links, color stays), tie, vest, cummerbund, etc. Make certain you know how to adjust them Nothing is worse than keys that jingle at the altar or a pack of cigarettes ruining the line of the jacket.

When you leave on your way to the ceremony, ascertain that all the arrangements for a "newly married" are made:

1. Suitcases, car keys, credit cards, hotel reservations, etc. Remember this is what fathers, friends and best men are for.

2. Take two aspirin. This lowers the temperature, slows the heartbeat, makes you a calmer member of the wedding party!

3. Drive or be driven carefully!

1. Boutonniere on?

2. Deep breaths (only a few!) are relaxing.

4. If you've rented shoes, make sure one is for the left foot and the other for the right.

When you get home, review the following for a poised, assured ceremony (with you looking your best):

1. Line up your clean underwear and appropriate socks. Are you shoes ready? And remember, clean handkerchiefs are a must at all but the dullest weddings.

2. If your garments are on wire hangers or in a box, put them on wooden hangers which will hold the shape best.

3. Arrange with your best man to have wallet and bulky pocket items tucked safely away out of sight.

China 'miracle': women equal in work, wages

By JEANNETTE BRANIN
Copley News Service

As a young girl in China, the daughter of American medical missionaries, Louise Tyrer, was deeply affected by the plight of the people, who suffered from famine, flood, starvation and overpopulation.

She became aware of tbe low-priority of human life in the Oriental structure that existed at that time, 40 years ago. She became aware of the discrimination against the female, as expressed by rejection of girl babies and the total domination of women as symbolized by their bound feet

Tyrer, now a medical doctor specializing in obstetrics and gynecology, told of her return trip to China last year, as vice president for medical affairs for Planned Parenthood-World Population.

"What I saw was a miracle, a miracle that has occurred in the last 40 years," she said in an interview.

"Women are the equal of men in work and pay. Planned parenthood is successful. The emphasis is on prevention, rather than a crisis situation.

"Since the revolution, the government has stated its policies: No sex before marriage, no marriages before age 18, marriages later in life encouraged, and planned parenthood praised."

As a consequence, she said, venereal disease is minimal and out-of-wedlock births are few.

"Premarital sex is not only discouraged, it is just about impossible," said Tyrer.

"There's just no place to have sex outside of the home," she said. "There are no motels, no automobiles, no fields without workers.

The government of the People's Republic of China is totally committed to birth planning, regardless of time and expense, said Tyrer

"Political messages appear everywhere, on signs and banners, over loud speakers and the radio, in movies and plays The only messages that are broadcast in any way are political, and one of the strongest concerns birth planning."

The government also distributes placards for householders to post on their doors which state, "We are using family planning in this household."

Birth planning in China is not a personal decision, said Tyrer. "It is based on these questions: How many more people can this village support? How much more room can be provided in this commune? How many rations would be needed?"

Supervision is such that if a woman gets a packet of birth-control pills to last a month, and does not return for more at the end of the month, a professional takes a packet to her, said Tyrer.

Spanish matron: her life in bullfighting institution

By JACK WILLIAMS
Copley News Service

TIJUANA, Mexico — The luminous brown eyes dance a fast flamenco, and this lady of Spain — Maria del Carmen Vasquez Arruza — conveys with Spanish, English and animated hands the pressures of being the matron of a bullfighting institution.

An institution known as the Arruza family.

A family as inevitably intertwined in the art of bullfighting as the Barrymores were in the stage and the Kennedys in government.

Arruza. In Mexico and Spain — wherever bullfighting is more than an idle indulgence — the name is a legend. Just like Belmonte, Joselito and Manolete.

Mari Carmen, as her friends call her, has always been content to be in the background. Quietly supportive, a devoted wife and mother.

"One suffers too much," she said. "I stopped being an aficionada May 20, 1966, when my husband (Carlos) died."

Carlos Arruza, perhaps the premier Mexican matador ever, married this attractive native of Sevilla, Spain, in 1950. They had five children — including Carlos Jr., 23, and Manolo, 22, who are following with honor and distinction in their father's footsteps.

Arruza was killed at 46 in an automobile accident. He had suffered eight gorings in 26 years as a matador but none was considered serious.

The bull ring is, indeed, as much a part of her as that soft olive skin that belies her 47 years.

But she has learned to turn her head, to ask for God's blessings when her loved ones are risking their lives, and to accept tragedy and triumph with tranquillity.

"I never watch my sons perform," she said "Too much responsibility. Why? Because of the possibility they will not do as well as they can and that they will not please the public.

Seated at her left is Carlos Jr., who performs on horseback, Portuguese style. He is a rejoneador, a good one, practicing a form of toreo at which his father excelled late in his career.

"Carlos would like me to go see him," says his mother. "But I only went once, two years ago in Tlaxcala, Mexico — and he won a tail (the highest award possible).

"I've never seen Manolo and he wants it that way."

Once, Mari Carmen sat in a placo (a box bordering the bullring) and covered her eyes and prayed as Carlos performed.

"God was in charge," she explained.

But while she observes this tradition she often travels with her sons, who live with her on a ranch north of Mexico City.

"The public is not unhappy with either of my sons," she says. "But it demands a lot because they are Arruzas. They have the qualities to come through even if the public demands so much."

Mari Carmen saw their father perform twice — in Seville and Cadiz, Spain — as a matador de toros in a suit of lights. After their marriage, he asked her to remain at home during his corridas.

"I wanted to attend," she said, "but he felt it was better that I stay home and try to help him mentally.

"Some toreros have great art and some know the lidia (the proper way to deal with each bull). Carlos had both — and because of that he could always get a fight out of a bull."

Mari Carmen, who saw her first corrida at 5 in Seville, once tried her hand with a cape in a country tienta (testing of cows) shortly after she married Arruza.

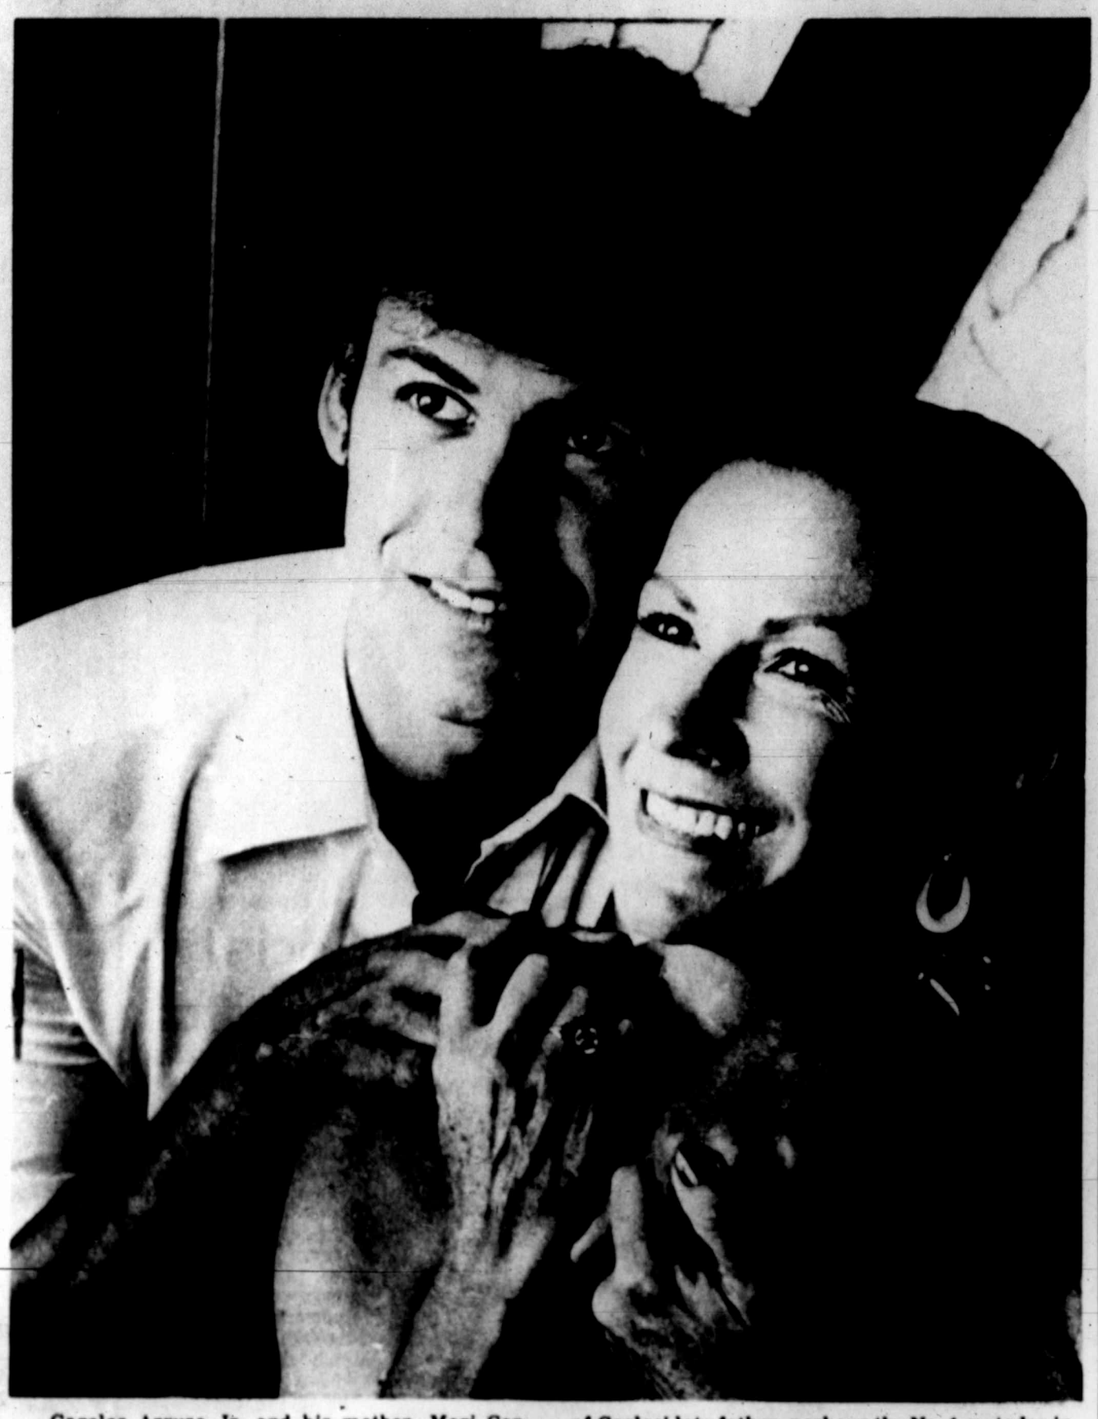

"Carlos fought and he wanted to forever remove from my head the idea of caping an animal.

"So when it came time for me to cape the vaca he guided it right into me and it knocked me down."

It was more difficult to dissuade her sons.

"Manolo showed an interest as early as 4," she recalled. "Carlos Jr. wanted to be an airplane pilot."

His love for horses was apparent, however. And Pedro Louceiro, a Portuguese rejoneador, taught him the art of bullfighting on horseback.

DEAR ABBY

She doesn't want girl-shaped husband

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: My husband is 47. We've been married for 20 years and have a fine family. I have known for many years that he is a transvestite. He enjoys dressing in women's clothing (only in private)—a practice which I tolerate but do not encourage.

He saw a psychologist for two years in an effort to overcome this urge, but decided not to fight it any longer. For the last six months, he's been taking hormones, and he applies hormone cream (10,000 estrogen units per ounce) to his chest area daily. I think he is beginning to develop breasts, but the change is so gradual and subtle that it's hard to tell. Also, the hair on his hands and arms has become finer and thinner.

Abby, I don't want a female-shaped husband. What do you suggest?—HUDSON, MASS., MRS.

DEAR MRS.: From what you tell me, you are going to have a female-shaped husband whether you want one or not, because that's the way things are developing.

You should be aware that you husband is a transsexual who appears to be preparing for a sex-change operation.

I recommend some candid dialogue between you and your husband in order to plan your future—and his.

DEAR ABBY: I answered an "ad" in a magazine for information about joining a flower club. All I wanted was information about the club, but before I knew it, they started sending me all kinds of seeds.

I don't want these seeds and didn't order any, so I just put them aside. (I may have even thrown some away.) Now I am getting letters from this flower club telling me that if I don't send them the money or return the seeds they are going to sue me!

Abby, I am worried sick. Can they sue me? Please help me! I have four children and no money to go to court to fight this thing.—SCARED

DEAR SCARED: Throw their letters in the wastebasket. No one is obligated to pay for—or return—anything that has been sent to him unsolicited.

DEAR ABBY: My sister has a son (I'll call him Jason) who was born out of wedlock. He is 6 years old. About 4 months ago, my sister married a man who refuses to take Jason into his home, although he pays for his support. Jason now lives with our parents and he can't understand why his mommy "visits" him at Granny's but won't take him "home" with her.

My sister hasn't told Jason anything. I think he should be told something. But what? I have a right to ask this question because my mother is in poor health, and now my sister wants me to promise that I will look after Jason in case something happens to our mother.

I am 26, have been self-supporting since I was 17, and plan to be married in August. Please withhold my name.— —CONCERNED

National diet: the link with our killer diseases?

By MARJORIE RICE
Copley News Service

Can a change in the nation's diet reduce the rate of the "killer" diseases such as cancer, arteriosclerosis and diabetes?

We don't know for sure, but can't afford to spend another 20 to 30 years finding out. And in the meantime, it couldn't hurt Americans to cut back on sugar, fat, salt and protein from red-meat sources

Those are two of the most important reasons, according to Dr. Sheldon Margen, for moving ahead on a proposed radical change in the nation's diet, the "Dietary Goals for the United States," published by the Senate Select Committee on Nutrition and Human Needs.

Margen, a physician and professor of human nutrition at the University of California at Berkeley, was the major consultant to the committee, chaired by Sen. George McGovern, D-N.D.

The goals, originally published in January 1977 and revised last December, "probably created more consternation and discussion" about food and nutrition than any other nutrition document in the history of the United States, Margen said.

"The vast majority of nutrition scientists and food technologists in the United States are very much against the dietary goals because they say (the goals) mislead the public into expecting a miracle."

The miracle they refer to is the promise, or even the suggestion, that following the goals would reduce the incidence of the killer diseases, promoting longer life.

"The argument is hot and heavy," Margen said. "(Opponents say) there is no scientific evidence regarding the results of changing diet (on reducing disease). Speaking strictly as a scientist, I have to agree."

But the nation is faced with "a tremendous epidemic of killer diseases," Margen said, and there is enough evidence to link them to diet.

The American diet has changed since pre-Industrial Revolution times from one heavy in grains, fruits and vegetables (complex carbohydrates) and low in animal protein and fat, to one heavy in refined sugars (simple carbohydrates), saturated fats and protein from animal sources.

"What we are saying is this is the best possible guess we have at this time — that these changes in food supply are one of the contributing factors to the epidemic of many of these diseases which are striking our civilization," he added.

For example, by substituting refined sugar for complex carbohydrates we have lost the nutrients other than sugar that occur in those foods, including trace elements and vitamins.

Recent research is demonstrating the importance of trace elements (minerals such as zinc and chromium) in preventing disease, Margen said.

Also, with animal sources accounting for so much more of the diet's protein, there has been an increase in fat and cholesterol consumption, and research, admittedly, incomplete, has linked that to heart disease.

Opponents of the dietary goals say they are a shoot-from-the-hip approach, and they could have disastrous results on segments of the food industry.

What happens, they ask, if research 20 years down the road shows causes other than diet (aging, stress or pollution, for example) for these killer diseases?

By then, opponents say, if the goals are implemented, food industries such as cattle, pork and egg producers may have been irretrievable damaged.

That's a legitimate worry, Margen said, in an interview, and a good argument for more nutrition and health research.

"If you make changes in the (food) system, you'll have disruptions all the way down the chain ... (but) the dietary goals say the ... systems should be concerned with the health of our population," not the health of the food industries.

"I'm not sure the disruption would be that great," he added. Changes in the nation's diet could mean less energy spent on processing food; a shift from "agribusiness" to small farms; and more efficient use of cropland, with fields devoted to grains, fruits and vegetables for direct human consumption, rather than animal feed.

The next important step to go along with more nutrition research, is to educate the public about healthful diets in line with the goals, Margen said.

GENERAL TENDENCIES: This is one of those days when you may want to upset present plans for an illusionary new appeal, but you would be wise not to discard carefully laid plans of the past.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Try not to argue with a long-time friend or you could regret it later. Take the right steps to gain a personal wish. Be patient.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Make an effort to improve your position in your community. Not a good day to ask an influential person for a favor.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Plan time to study a project that could mean increased income in the future. Engage in recreational activities you enjoy.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Try to please an irate associate so that you can carry on with mutual interests more harmoniously. Relax in the evening.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Plan how to complete your chores with fewer interruptions and increased efficiency. Take treatments to improve your appearance.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Your mate is under an emotional strain that you can help to alleviate now. Don't do anything to jeopardize harmony at home.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Be patient with one at home who may be upset since the planets are not favorable at this time. Establish more order around you.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Make sure not to react bitterly to remarks of a careless person and upset present harmony at home. Be more tolerant.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Study your surroundings and make plans for improvement. Don't jeopardize your present security in any way.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) You could be tempted to conclude a present business arrangement and get into something new, but this would be most unwise.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) If you analyze a new enterprise more carefully you will know how to be more successful. Make new friends in the evening.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Don't lose your temper over a situation that displeases you. This would only make matters worse. Sidestep a troublemaker.

Peanut butter eaters dropping off

By MICHAEL GRANT
Copley News Service

As if President Carter didn't have enough on his mind, the National Geographic Society now reports that the annual consumption of peanut butter in this country has declined by 56 million pounds from 1973 through 1976.

That is a shocking figure to the layman, who might have believed 56 million pounds of peanut butter would feed the entire world for 10 years.

In fact, Americans alone ate 822 million pounds in 1976, down from a breathtaking '73 peak of 878 million, and the industry is feeling the crunch

The NGS' quoting industry sources, attributes the decline to three principal developments:

— Peanut butter replaced meat as a source of mealtime protein in 1973, when meat prices were jumping over the moon. Now that meat is cheaper (relatively) again, peanut butter is off the menu and back on the snack list.

— Peanut butter's high cost in calories is more than the contemporary trend to fitness is willing to bear.

— Kids eat the most peanut butter, and there are fewer kids of prime peanut butter-eating age around, because of a decline in the birth rate.

You can still always find, in a vegetarian cookbook, a recipe for a mock chop that incorporates peanut butter, but the majority clearly would prefer a chop of the real McCoy. And peanut butter does lean heavily to the fattening side (it is 40 percent fat), though many calories associated with peanut butter in fact come from crackers, bread and jelly.

Adults might argue the assertion that kids eat the most peanut butter. Nobody dislikes it, particularly in association with chocolate or crackers, and it makes marvelous cookies.

Nevertheless, it is possible to encounter peanut butter in unsavory form, though it takes some ingenuity, as in the Eastern habit of making a cocktail dip from peanut butter and catsup heated together

But the central premise of children as a factor in decreased consumption no doubt is valid for, as NGS quotes a delegate at the recent Peanut Butter Manufacturers and Nut Salters Association convention: "Zero-population growth is hurting the peanut industry."

(The NGS does not note, though it is demonstrably true, that children also contribute the greatest measure of error to peanut butter consumption statistics.

Breaking the rule sometimes pays off

Rules for defensive play are a valuable guide when you have nothing better to go by. Be ready to break any rule, however, when you have a good reason.

Opening lead — ♡ 2

West opened the deuce of hearts, and dummy played the eight. What should East do?

Why ask? East has already played the ten of hearts, and now the defenders can get only three heart tricks.

South takes the jack of hearts and tries the club finesse. East wins and returns a heart. This gives West three heart tricks, but East can never get his last heart.

South is then ready to take the rest. He scores game and rubber with a grateful nod to East.

SHOULD SIT UP

East should sit up when the opening lead is in a suit in which he has four tiny cards and one good card. If East wastes his one good card, he may lose a trick.

If East plays low at the first trick he will still have the ten of hearts to win the trick when West eventually leads the seven of hearts. Then East can cash his last heart to defeat the contract.

East should play the six of hearts at the first trick and should later return the four of hearts to signal his enthusiasm. An alert West would get the idea very quickly.

DAILY QUESTION

Partner bids one spade, and the next player passes. You hold: S-A763; H-8; D-865; C-AQJ92. What do you say?

ANSWER: Bid two clubs and raise to four spades at your next turn. This describes not only your strength but also where you have it. If partner has the right cards, he may be able to reach a slam with little more than a minimum opening bid.

Czech cleaning jobs attain new prestige

PRAGUE Czechoslovakia (AP) — Cleaning women and janitors enjoy new status in Czechoslovakia, where an acute labor shortage makes scrubbing floors profitable.

A Prague evening newspaper recently carried a cartoon showing a manager telling an aide: "Remember, everyone in our office can be replaced — except the cleaning woman."

The shortage of labor — the government estimates there are 550,000 unfilled jobs in this country of 15 million inhabitants — is encouraging many people to moonlight for extra cash.

A young woman with a degree in engineering says she supplements her monthly salary of 2,500 crowns (about $250) by spending an hour each evening cleaning a government office building. Her additional take: 800 crowns a month ($80). The average wage in Czechoslovakia is 2,300 crowns.

The new breed of cleaning people does not dawdle and gossip, but works as fast as possible. Often they are paid by the job, not the hour.

"I was flabbergasted when I saw her the first time," an economist said of his new housecleaner. "A distinguished, elegant lady walked in. First she took off her fur coat, then her jewelry.

"She stacked the rings and the necklace on a desk, donned a smock, covered her hairdo with a kerchief and went to work."

"I could earn the extra money coaching," the instructor says, "but this is such relaxing work."

Would-be doctors often take off a year to do menial jobs in hospitals so that they can have priority among candidates for medical school the following year.

At a Prague institute of technology a third-year student who wanted to interrupt his studies for a year said he was told he could be sure of readmittance only if he spent the year washing dishes in the school's canteen.

The classic European cleaning woman with her bucket and rag has become a revered figure.

A new Czech movie shows the head of a clinic arriving at work, where he is deferentially received by all his subordinates until he descends a staircase being cleaned by a woman of ample proportions.

The self-confident doctor suddenly grows insecure under her baleful stare and obediently wipes his feet on the wet rag before passing her, doffing his hat in greeting.

Some cleaning women moonlight by doing still more janitorial work. One indomitable woman of 68 cleans 17 offices, three apartment buildings, a butcher shop and innumerable homes. She also takes in laundry.

The short woman, who wears her gray hair in a bun, refuses to disclose her income, but could well earn much more than the people she works for. Both she and her husband draw a pension and have recently inherited a house and garden.

Freedom effort renewed

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — An Austin lawyer has rekindled his three-year effort to have Nazi war criminal Rudolph Hess released from Spandau prison in West Berlin.

"Rudolph Hess, we feel, is a man who has been forgotten by history," attorney Merrell Frazer Jr. said Wednesday. "Rudolph Hess was the only man in history indicted, tried, convicted and imprisoned for crimes against peace."

Frazer and Hollywood writer-producer Eugene Logan held a news conference on Hess's 84th birthday. Logan has completed a film script about Hess and flew here to talk with Frazer after seeing him on the NBC "Today Show."

"I have high hopes that if anything will get (Hess) released, it's a film. Because it's something you can see," said Logan.

Although Spandau prison is in the British sector of West Berlin, the prison is controlled by the United States, France, Great Britain and Russia.

DR. NEIL SOLOMON

Gonorrhea spreading

Dear Dr. Solomon: My mother called me up in an absolute panic the other day to tell me that gonorrhea was not only an epidemic by now but had spread to small children—I have three, all under six years old. Is there any truth to this?—Lucy P.

Dear Lucy: Unfortunately, children can sometimes get gonorrhea. An article that appeared in the Journal of the American Medical Association not so long ago said that gonorrhea should be suspected in every child with a discharge from the vagina or urethra—no matter how young—even if it is not known how exposure might have occurred.

The study covered 85 girls and 15 boys, most of them two to seven years old. Reinfection is quite common among girls, it said, and could perhaps be prevented if health departments were more aggressive in identifying and treating other infected children and adults in the child's environment. This would probably mean taking cultures of all members of the household and intimate playmates, as gonorrhea often doesn't have any symptoms.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I'm 63, and I haven't been getting any exercise to speak of during the past 10 or 15 years. Is it too late for me to get going on a physical fitness program? If not, how should I go about it?—Hamilton W.

Dear Hamilton: It is never too late— and certainly not at 63. Nobody should think of himself as old at that age nowadays. But do check with your doctor and see what he recommends. If you have not had a physical recently, he will doubtless want to give you one. When you have his OK, start slowly, with activities like a comfortable walk and then very gradually increase your physical exertion.

Swimming, jogging, tennis, biking and many other sports are good for older people, provided there is no special medical reason to avoid them. But don't rush things—that is how people get into trouble. Think of your fitness rebuilding program as long-range, extending over five or six months.

Physical fitness is for everybody. New Rochelle, N.Y., should be an example for us all. It is launching a program which will involve all of the city's residents from octogenarians and the handicapped to teenagers and the very young. They are doing surveys now, and then they are going to tailor exercise programs to fit the needs of the various groups they find in their 80,000 population.

'Holocaust' takes top ratings places

NEW YORK (AP) — "Holocaust" swept the top three places in the week's ratings race, A. C. Nielsen Co. figures show, and thrust NBC into first place in the network standings for the first time since November.

In contrast, ABC, which had been first in the standings all but four of the 32 weeks this season, was third behind NBC and CBS for the week ending April 23. It was ABC's first last-place finish since last summer.

NBC suffered disastrous ratings on "King," its miniseries in February on the life of the late Dr. Martin Luther King Jr., and had banked on a strong showing by "Holocaust." The network estimated after the miniseries completion that 120 million people had seen all or part of "Holocaust."

That would put the NBC series behind only "Roots," ABC's record-breaking miniseries of January 1977, in total audience. ABC estimated 130 million people saw some of "Roots."

In addition to the last three chapters of "Holocaust," a four-part miniseries on the plight of the Jews in Europe during World War II, NBC listed the fourth most-watched show of the week, "Little House on the Prairie."

The first installment of "Holocaust" was No. 4 in the ratings the week before.

The concluding episode of "Holocaust" was the week's most-watched show, with a rating of 34.9. Nielsen says that means of all the homes in the country with TV, 34.9 percent watched at least part of that installment.

NBC last won the ratings race the week ending Nov. 20, with it's four-part miniseries that included the feature films "The Godfather" and "The Godfather, Part II." Even then, ABC listed the week's to top shows, "Happy Days" and "Laverne and Shirley."

NBC's rating for the week was 21.2. The networks say that means in an average prime time minute, 21.2 percent of the homes in the country with television were tuned to NBC. CBS was second at 16.7, followed by ABC at 16.1.

CBS claimed four of the bottom five spots in the ratings. The network's Wednesday movie, "Posse," was No. 64, followed by "Another Day," ABC's Monday evening baseball, and two more CBS shows, "Maude" and "CBS Reports."

Here are the week's Top 10 programs:

"Holocaust," Part IV, with a 34.9 rating representing 25.4 million homes, "Holocaust" Part II, 32.7 or 23.8 million, "Holocaust" Part III, 30.3 or 22.1 million, and "Little House on the Prairie," 24.8 or 18.1 million, all NBC; "Alice," 24.7 or 18 million, CBS; "Happy Days," 24.4 or 17.8 million, and "Laverne and Shirley," 24.3 or 17.7 million, both ABC; "All in the Family," 24.2 or 17.6 million, and "60 Minutes," 23.3 or 16.9 million, both CBS, and "Three's Company," 22.7 or 16.5 million, ABC.

'I'd like to apply for job'

LOS ANGELES (AP) — To whomever runs ABC and NBC: Now that Harry Reasoner is out as anchor of the evening news and John Chancellor wants to leave anchoring, I'd like to apply for either job.

My qualifications to anchor the news are these:

—My mom says I have a fine voice.

—My dad says anchormen make $500,000 a year, but I will only ask for $100,000.25. You can use the other $399,999.75 to cover the news. Or declare a stock dividend.

I know when you anchor at NBC there is worry about what to do with your legs because the Nightly News set shows your legs. I won't have that problem. I'll wear a lap robe.

If ABC is interested, I, as anchor, will deal with those rumors I can't get along with Barbara Walters. I'll anchor my part of the show from Tahiti, and tell the press we're still good friends.

As regards personal appearances, such as covering Middle East fighting or getting an exclusive interview with Geraldo Rivera, well, we should have no problem with that.

My agent, Everett "Swifty" L'Doze, tells me that personal appearances by an anchorman where news is breaking is good public relations, almost as good as getting a TV Guide cover.

However, he says, almost reluctantly, he will be forced to charge a minimum of $29.95 for each personal appearance, the maximum of $50 to be assessed for coverage of World War III.

As regards my duties prior to actually going on the air to anchor the news, I stand prepared to write my own copy. Here is a sample of some of my work:

—"There was more bad economic news from Washington today ... Irving R. Levine has the story."

—"Meanwhile ..."

—"Trading was light, with industrials mixed."

—"Barbara is on assignment."

I also am willing to talk with the executive producer of the evening news for up to four hours before the show and for two minutes afterwards.

When I am supposed to be away from New York, "in the field," I think they call it, the only thing I will not do is be interviewed by Charles Kuralt. We must draw the line somewhere.

I am told an anchorman's image is almost as important as his substance. So if ABC wants me to convey a hip, mod image, I've just bought a V-neck shirt that shows off my new chest toupee.

If NBC wants me to convey a hip, but responsible image, I will have the chest toupee trimmed to a crew cut and dyed grey.

Finally, please pay no attention to the rumor another network already has auditioned me to be an anchorman, and that the result was a two-minute telethon for lockjaw relief. That simply is not true.

Charges of murder filed in shooting

ODESSA — A 20-year-old Odessa man was in Ector County Jail today in lieu of $100,000 bail after being charged with murder Thursday in the shooting death of Wayne Allen Wallace.

Alvin Chester Willis of Odessa turned himself in to police Thursday, Police Capt. Jack Fillyaw said.

Wallace was dead on arrival early Thursday morning at Medical Center Hospital after receiving two gunshot wounds. Fillyaw said police believe Wallace was shot with a small caliber weapon, but they have not recovered a gun.

Vidal pushing new book

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Says Gore Vidal of the recent Academy Awards: "I was amused by Vanessa Redgrave's playing of Joan of Arc to Paddy Chayefsky's 'Fiddler on the Roof.'"

He's back in town with another book and a knapsack full of wry commentary, with malice towards some and charity for few. Vidal takes a dim view of almost everything except his own books, which he sells with utter conviction that they are the best a reader can buy.

"My publisher often complains that I don't sell my books enough on talk shows; I start talking about other things," the novelist remarked. "So when I went on the Johnny Carson show the other night I announced I was going to give the hard sell. I held up a copy of 'Kalki' and told the audience, 'If you buy this book you will not die. I promise you eternal life.' Now what could be more hard-sell than that?"

"Kalki" is the latest in Vidal's astonishingly varied procession of writings. This time he seems in a black mood, chronicling the imminent demise of this planet as heralded by the Hindu god Kalki, also known as Kelly, a onetime soldier from New Orleans.

This outrageous tale is apparantly headed where most of Vidal's books go — the best seller lists. But will there be a movie?

"I've had one firm 'tentative offer,'" he reported, "which is like saying 'side frontal nudity.' I doubt if I will get any offers from television producers, because they are more interested in stories about a boy, a girl and two cars.

"I think it could make a very fascinating film. But given the choice between a bad movie or no movie, I would choose no movie. I learned my lesson with 'Myra.'"

District 2-A1 Lions meet at Big Spring

Activities will include a golf tournament, a "Las Vegas night," a business meeting, a Lions queen's contest, banquet, a key-member breakfast and a district cabinet meeting.

Robert E. "Bob" Zimmerman, a past Lions International director from Ottawa, Canada, will be the featured speaker in the 7 p.m. Saturday banquet in the Big Spring High School Cafeteria, said Jim Lemons, convention chairman.

Lemons, of Big Spring, is a past district governor.

"He's a powerhouse with the Lions Clubs," Lemons said of Zimmerman, who has logged 28 years of perfect attendance in the Lions Club.

Among honors bestowed upon Zimmerman are the Lions International President's Award, four (club) extension awards, and the Ambassador of Goodwill Award.

Zimmerman is an inspector with the Ontario Liquor Control Board. His wife, Ruby Elizabeth, will be with him at the district convention, Lemons said. Wives of other Lions will also be here, he said.

The Lions' activities were to get under way with a golf tournament at Comanche Trail Park this morning. Teeoff was to be from 10 a.m. to 1:30 p.m.

A "Las Vegas night" to benefit the Texas Lions Camp at Kerrville will be held at 7 p.m. today in the Coors Hospitality Room here. "Play money" will be used in the games, but real money will be donated to the charity. The camp is for crippled and diabetic children.

The Lions will hold a business meeting from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. Saturday in the high school cafeteria. Voting by delegates will be from 1:15 to 2 p.m.

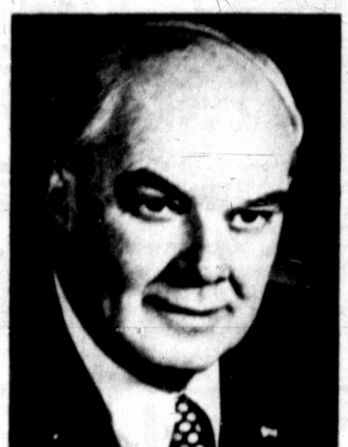

A queen's contest will be held at 3:30 p.m. Saturday in the school's auditorium.

While the men are in the business session, their wives will be having coffee and rolls, viewing a style show and then joining in a book review in the Cactus Room at Howard College.

The banquet begins at 7 p.m. Saturday in the high school cafeteria.

The Midland Lions Clubs, which will be bidding for hosting the 1979 district convention, will treat select Lions to a key-member breakfast at 7 a.m. Sunday in the Howard College Cactus Room. A district cabinet meeting will be held there at 9 a.m.

Sunday activities for the Lions' wives will be at 9 a.m. in the college's Tumbleweed Room.

Robert E. Zimmerman

The Lions' District 2-A1 takes in such cities and towns as Midland, Big Spring, San Angelo, Roscoe, Sweetwater, Loraine, Stanton, Brownwood, Ballinger, Bronte, Robert Lee, Goldthwaite, Llano, Junction, Big Lake, Sterling City and Ozona, said Roy Minear, past district governor from Midland.

Cat limit approved by whisker

CORAL GABLES, Fla. (AP) — There'll soon be a kitty quota in this Miami suburb which has some of the toughest zoning laws in the state.

The city commission Tuesday passed an ordinance limiting families to four adult cats per residence. The vote was 3-2.

Some Coral Gables residents waggishly questioned the language of the ordinance, which outlaws ownership of more than four "carnivorous quadrupeds belonging to the feline family."

Other ordinances in the city included bans against owning more than four dogs or one chicken, duck, snake or goat, building a treehouse, building a chikee (a thatched Indian hut), leaving a garage door open overnight, and parking a pickup truck, camper or boat trailer in a driveway overnight.

WHEN DOUG SPENCER, city water department worker at Lawton, Okla., was called to turn off a fire hydrant late Wednesday, he didn't dream he'd wind up in water up to his stocking cap. The plug began its unscheduled eruption after a car sideswiped it. (AP Laserphoto)

Pedestrian dies under car wheels

GARDEN CITY — A 27-year-old San Angelo man was killed Thursday night in a two-vehicle-pedestrian accident 14 miles south of here.

A Department of Public Safety spokesman today said vehicles driven by Bobby Glenn Jackson of San Angelo and Joe Pat Cockrell of St. Lawrence were occupying both lanes of FM 2401.

According to skid marks, the DPS spokesman said Jackson's vehicle slid 42 feet before striking the pedestrian. He was carried approximately 260 feet on the hood of Jackson's vehicle before being thrown off and struck by Cockrell's vehicle, the spokesman said.

Garden City Peace Justice J. E. Wooten pronounced the man dead at the scene.

Identification of the pedestrian is being withheld pending notification of next of kin.

Youths tell details of mysterious money

WACO, Texas (AP) — Two Texas teenagers who found $500,000 buried on a South Texas ranch gave depositions Thursday to lawyers for the city of Waco, which has put a claim on the mysterious money.

Two suitcases of cash came to light Jan. 31, 1977, after James Dean Bridges and Percy Allen Garcia were stopped in Waco on a traffic violation. They were in a new Thunderbird they had bought in Dallas using a man as intermediary.

Keith Farr, a lawyer representing the city of Waco, notified U.S. District Judge Jack Roberts he would question the two boys in the presence of a court reporter. Their answers will be used in a trial in Roberts' court.

Bridges, who lives in Robstown, and Garcia, an Alice resident, gave the depositions in a Corpus Christi law office.

Roberts must determine who owns the money and how much of it should go to the Internal Revenue Service.

The boys claim they dug up the money on the ranch of Bridges' father, James Edward Hiroms of Corpus Christi. The ranch is near Alice.

Farr told the judge that lawyers would question Hiroms and his wife in Corpus Christi today. Hiroms has denied any knowledge of the money and has not laid a claim to it.

Lawyers for Bridges contend that Waco police had no authority to search the car.

New Rhodesian government plagued by economic, military, political woes

By PETER OSNOS and DAVE OTTAWAY
The Washington Post

SALISBURY, Rhodesia — One month after its creation, Rhodesia's new multi-racial government is beset by major military, political and economic problems as it struggles to find a broad base of support at home and abroad.

Notwithstanding signs of encouragment from South Africa and of growing sympathy in some Western circles, the transitional government still stands very much alone.

There is "tremendous apprehension" among whites, in the words of Prime Minister Ian Smith, about the changes that must come and mounting pressure from blacks to see quick evidence that a new era is dawning.

"To win over the black people, we have to be seen to be making changes. We can't just sing the praises of the (internal) settlement, we have to do something," said the new black cominister of justice, Byron Hove.

It is precisely Hove's outspoken demand for such immediate signs of change as more and higher-ranking black policemen and judges that has upset an already jittery white population.

Smith and his white ministers, whatever their private feeling about the coming of black majority rule, are touring the country pleading with the 260,000 remaining whites to wait the final outcome before "jumping the gun" and leaving.

The black leaders of the transitional government are just as uncertain about the new situation. Still surrounded by white civil servants, secretaries and guards and sitting apart in bare offices, they are groping for ways to illustrate their new authority to the 6.7 million blacks.

Clearly the dilemma of this young, fragile experiment in multiracial cooperation is how to satisfy the country's two fundamentally different populations filled with contrasting fears and hopes. The new ruling Executive Council must also convince skeptical Western and African states that it has a true claim to representing the aspirations of the majority of Rhodesia's people — whites and blacks, including those who belong to the guerrilla alliance, the Patriotic Front.

Moreover, it must do all this while waging a war that by most accounts is going badly and getting worse. "It's bound to," said P.K. Van der Byl, the dapper and hard-liner who is the white cominister of foreign affairs. "Those who don't think they can win an election are making their last big effort," he said.

The military situation is unlikely to provide much relief.

The military situation is exceedingly complicated. Military analysts in constant contact with the troops speak of sharply declining morale among white officers. "Nobody," said one analyst, "wants to be the last white man to die for Zimbabwe." Zimbabwe is the African name for Rhodesia.

In some areas, there is apparently a virtual halt in fighting, in part at least because local commanders have been told not to seek contact with the guerrillas. In part, too, it seems that there are an increasing number of "local arrangements" between the army and guerrillas. The rebels are split into factions which are often as opposed to each other as to the Salisbury government.

While the white-led army is in full flux, a growing number of white farmers are said to be abandoning their homesteads and taking the "chicken run" to South Africa.

Even Allan Svory, a staunch Rhodesian and leader of the tiny white Liberal Party here, has had to close down one of his ranches and buy a house in Salisbury for a white manager of another to give the man and his family a respite from the daily dangers of the countryside.

In fact, Rhodesians say that no prudent white will go outside the main towns unarmed these days for fear of ambush.

It is universally agreed that a cease-fire is essential if this experiment in joint white-black government is to survive until the proposed elections for a black majority government sometime next fall.

The black leaders of the Executive Council, Bishop Abel Muzorewa, Rev. Ndabaningi Sithole and Chief Jeremiah Chirau, express confidence they can pull it off and tell of daily contacts with guerrillas now inside the country to arrange an end to the fighting. Outside observers, mindful of the military slippage, remain doubtful and await the outcome of the call for cease-fire to be convinced.

Just how the Executive Council can hold elections amid the present uncertainties is puzzling. If elections for the formal establishment of a black Zimbabwe government are to be accepted abroad, some means must be found to get the guerrillas out of the bush and to the ballot box. Yet their leaders, who have denounced the internal settlement, have scorned overtures to return.

An Anglo-American proposal intended to bring together all black nationalist leaders for an electon appears to be going nowhere. Private efforts aimed at getting one or both of the Patriotic Front leaders, Joshua Nkomo and Robert Mugabe, back show no sign of success.

Even if no progress is made with the guerrillas, Smith says he and his black colleagues are determined to go ahead with elections and says "any impartial, just observation" by outside observers is welcome.

Smith, who boasts of the economic accomplishments during 12 years of international isolation, also contends that economic problems are the most serious threat to the country, particularly for the rising number of unemployed blacks.

Despite — or because of — economic sanctions, Rhodesia has one of the broadest-based economies in Africa. But the steady exodus of whites and their capital together with the war's drain on manpower and other uncertainties underlies the country's present-day economic crisis.

In its statement Tuesday turning down the Anglo-American proposal for an all-party conference, the Executive Council said:

"We are satisfied that collectively we have obtained the support of the overwhelming majority of the population for the Salisbury (internal) agreement."

Subcommittee votes 8-1 to hold back bill

By RICHARD L. LYONS
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — A House energy subcommittee voted 8 to 1 Thursday to hold hostage the $13 billion Department of Energy authorization bill in a protest aimed at forcing final approval of three agreed-to parts of the energy bill.

House leaders and administration strategists fear that if these three relatively minor energy provisions are passed, Congress may just forget about the two major measures that remain. The energy subcommittee indicated Thursday it would rather run that risk than do nothing.

The remaining measures are the two that President Carter most wants — one raising the price of natural gas, the other taxing up the price of domestic oil, in both cases to discourage consumption.

Meanwhile the Senate Finance Committee gave President Carter another dose of bad energy news when it expressed its opposition, 11 to 6, to imposition of import fees on foreign oil. The resolution that was sent to the full Senate has no legal force, but is an indicator of displeasure to come should Carter follow advice that he impose import duties if Congress fails to enact his proposed tax on domestic crude oil to cut use.

Carter also made no headway trying to round up votes among House conferees to the plan for gradual deregulation of new natural gas approved by a negotiating team last week. Reps. James Corman, D-Calif., Henry Reuss, D-Wis., and Charles Rangel, D-N.Y., were all called to the White House and all told the president not to count on them as of now.

The House subcommittee vote was an outburst of frustration at the long deadlock on Carter's energy package. It was in part an effort to get something enacted to show the public that Congress means business, in part an expression of opposition to closed negotiations on natural gas and in part an effort to cut loose noncontroversial conservation measures in hopes the fiercely controversial natural gas and crude oil tax provisions would then be left to die.

Rep. Toby Moffett, D-Conn., who oppses gas deregulation and the crude oil tax, offered the three energy programs which House-Senate conferees have agreed to but are holding back until they complete work on the entire package as a final amendment to the Energy Department authorization bill.

Those programs encouraging reform of electric utility rate structures to save energy, provisions to order conversion of industries from oil and gas to coal and a collection of programs to encouarge conservation had been drafted by the same subcommittee headed by Rep. John Dingell, D-Mich.

Moffett said it was appropriate that the subcommittee that originally wrote these programs should try to move them toward enactment to show the public and industry that Congress "means business" in the energy field. He was joined by Rep. Clarence Brown, Ohio, senior Replublican on the subcommittee who opposes the gas deregulation plan as too slow.

Dingell ruled Moffett's amendment out of order as not germane to the DOE bill.

The subcommittee then voted not to report the bill to the full Commerce Committee as a mark of protest against treatment of the energy bill.

Rep. Albert Gore Jr., D-Tenn., was the only member to vote for moving the DOE bill. Dingell did at first, but then changed, saying he ought to be with his subcommittee members on something.

Under the budget act, all bills authorizing spending for the next fiscal year must be cleared from committees by May 15. Some way will doubtless be found to move the DOE bill along. But it's another problem area for the energy bill, which has had more than its share in one year on Capital Hill.

The natural gas agreement announced by a negotiating team of the energy conferees last Friday is in trouble. Part of the problem is that House and Senate members and staff haven't been able to agree on some things they thought were settled. There may have to be another bargaining session before the agreement is put to a formal meeting of the conference.

And the votes aren't yet in sight on the House side for approval by their 25 conferees. Corman told Carter he won't vote for the gas agreement until he is assured there will be a crude oil and industrial use tax. Reuss hasn't made a final decision, but said "don't count on me" on gas. Rangel said he will oppose it. If there were no other switches from a vote of House conferees last March, the deregulation plan would be rejected by the House side, 14 to 11.

A ban on presidential imposition of import fees on foreign oil was voted by the Senate last year as part of the energy tax bill, but it also is still in conference with the House. Fees would have the effect of helping push up the price of U.S. oil which Carter wants to do to lessen reliance on imports. The Finance Committee resolution specifically expressed opposition to fees on imported refined petroleum projects alone.

Three plants approved

DENVER (AP) — U.S. Sen. Floyd Haskell, D-Colo., has won committee approval for government-sponsored development of three plants in Colorado to test the commercial feasibility of shale oil.

The measure, opposed by Republicans and lacking support of the Carter administration, would provide $400 million in federal money for the feasibility tests. Haskell's bill recommends that the plants be located near Rifle.

The three plants would produce more than 25,000 barrels of oil a day, Haskell said in a release from his Washington office Thursday. Sale of that oil could more than pay off the government's investment, he said.

After the 12-5 vote by the Senate Energy and Natural Resources Committee on Wednesday, Haskell said that during an eight-year operation of the plants the government could realize an estimated "net return" of $39 million over the cost of construction and operation. Those estimates were prepared by the Congressional Budget Office.

The Haskell bill contains provisions for two test plants that would use mining and surface-retort technology, and the third would use the underground method of retort and surface recovery of the oil.

Gas-oil ratio is 790-1.

Wellsite is 1,320 feet from south and west lines of section 30, block B, CCSD&RGNG survey.

The well is 3/4 mile northwest of other production.

TOM GREEN WELL

President expected to reveal rationing plan

By TOM RAUM

WASHINGTON (AP) — A standby gasoline rationing plan expected to be announced next week by the Carter administration would distribute fuel in a national emergency based on the number of cars a business or family owns, congressional sources say.

Rationing is not being advocated by the administration at this time. However, a 1975 law requires a rationing plan to be on hand in the event of a national energy emergency.

Under the proposal, the more cars an individual, family or business owned, the more coupons that could be obtained. The plan does not spell out how much gasoline would be allotted for each car, other than to say the car's fuel economy would be a factor.

Energy Department officials recently briefed Senate staff members on the plan. A summary copy of the plan was obtained by Associated Press Radio.

Energy Secretary James R. Schlesinger has frequently said the administration views rationing as an unattractive option — one that would be considered only in an emergency or as a last resort.

The Carter plan differs markedly from one submitted by former President Ford in January 1977, shortly before he left office. It would have based gasoline coupon allotments on the number of drivers licenses in a family.

A memo prepared by Max Friedersdorf, director of the Senate Republican Policy Committee, questioned the fairness of the Carter plan.

"If you can afford to own several cars, does that mean you should be allocated more gasoline during a shortage than someone who may be able to afford only one car?" he asked.

His memo also said that persons might buy old junk cars just to enable them to purchase more gasoline. But Friedersdorf conceded cheating could be a problem under the Ford plan, too.

Once Carter's plan is formally submitted, Congress must act on it within 60 days. If he — or a future president — decides to activate the plan, either house of Congress has 15 days in which to disapprove it.

Through a bureaucratic quirk in the Senate, Ford's rationing plan was never formally received on Capitol Hill and the 60-day period never began. Carter withdrew the Ford plan, and the administration has been working on its own version ever since.

In what was billed as a protest vote, the House energy and power subcommittee agreed 8-1 on Thursday to block a $13 billion bill needed to keep the Energy Department functioning during the upcoming fiscal year.

And, the Senate Finance Committee voted 11-6 on Thursday to go on record against presidential imposition of a tariff on oil imports as an alternative to the proposed crude oil tax.

Companies doing best offshore

By J.P. SMITH
The Washington Post

The Interior Department has found that oil companies were producing all the natural gas they could from five of six large offshore fields in the Gulf of Mexico examined in a year-long study.

Interior Secretary Cecil Andrus released the results of the study Thursday. It was undertaken following charges during the 1976-77 natural-gas shortage that major oil companies may have been withholding offshore gas to force up prices.

"We found no evidence in this study that there was any withholding of gas," Andrus said at a news conference Thursday.

Completed by the National Research Council at Andrus' request, the study concluded there was potential to increase gas deliveries from Texaco Inc.'s Tiger Shoal Field. Andrus said that field offered "a significant opportunity to increase production over the next five years."

Andrus said Assistant Interior Secretary Joan Davenport told reporters that the Interior Department's U.S. Geological Survey is working with Texaco to ensure that the oil company moves to increase gas production from the federally leased field.

Davenport said, however, that the Interior Department and Texaco had yet to agree on how much new gas production the company would deliver from the field in the years ahead.

The six fields selected by the NRC for the Interior Department study contain an estimated 17 percent of natural gas reserves on federal lands on the outer continental shelf, and accounted for 16 percent of 1976 gas production from the OCS.

Andrus told reporters the study "cleared the air," stressing the question of withholding "is not an accusation the department is making."

The former Idaho governor, who has become the administration's chief environmental spokesman, said, "We shall continue to monitor (oil company) operations closely on all federal leases."

Cottle gets new gasser

Gus Edwards of Abilene has announced potential test for his No. 9 J. J. Gibson in the Providence (Atoka) field of Cottle County.

The well, four miles southeast of Chalk, was finaled for a calculated, absolute open flow potential of 4,250,000 cubic feet of dry gas per day, through perforations from 6,106 to 6,116 feet.

Location is 2,080 feet from north and 1,050 feet from west lines of section 38, F. P. Knott survey.

Statistics from API show gasoline supply declines

NEW YORK (AP) — Gasoline supplies are declining, but are at about the same level as they were at this time last year, according to the latest weekly supply statistips released by the American Petroleum Institute.

For the week ended April 21, gasoline inventories fell to 255.7 million barrels from 260.2 million barrels a week earlier, and were just slightly below the 256.8 million barreels on hand in the comparable week last year, the industry group said Wednesday.

Supplies of distillate fuel, used mainly for home heating purposes, were 137.6 million barrels in the latest week, compared with 137.2 million barrels in the previous week but were lower than the 145.7 million barrel level of a year ago.

Crude oil imports of 5.2 million barrels daily declined from the 5.6 million barrels imported daily a week earlier but were significantly below the 6.2 million barrels imported daily at this time last year.

Houston area desegregation being considered by judge

HOUSTON (AP) — A federal judge supervising Houston's eight-year-old plan to desegregate its public schools has asked for information about possibile violations of desegregation laws outside the school district's boundaries.

Such information would allow U.S. District Judge Finis Cowan to consider implementing a metropolitan-wide desegregation plan, according to a Justice Department attorney at the federal hearing Thursday.

"Nobody has ever seriously contended any outlying district is guilty. Unless the effort is made, how can I sit here and determine serious constitutional violations," Cowan asked attorneys.

Joseph D. Rich said it would take the Justice Department six to eight months to assess the issue of multi-district desegregation in the Houston area.

"Before metropolitan relief can be requested by this court, constitutional violations have to be established," Rich said.

The multi-district desegregation issue — usually associated with older cities in the North — arose in the hearing when an attorney representing the Houston Teachers Association pointed out that white student population in the district has fallen from 53 to 33 percent since 1970.

"And the trend is continuing," Robert E. Hall said. "We are talking about the rich abandoning the poor. It is naive, based on past history, to expect that white taxpayers will tax themselves to provide quality education for black and brown children attending separate schools.

Houston Independent School District Attorney William Wilde said HISD has never found evidence of discriminatory conduct by neighboring districts.

Federal authorites must demonstrate that school boards purposely intend to perpetuate patterns of segregation in schools before they issue desegregation orders.

The so-called white flight to areas outside the HISD has resulted in increasing numbers of black and Hispanic students concentrated in inner city schools.

Although still physically within the city of Houston, other independent schools districts levy their own school taxes on residents within their boundaries.

Wilde said one of the HISD's most critical problems is the consequences of a court-ordered teacher assignment plan which is resulting in experienced black teachers going to schools in more affluent neighborhoods while inexperienced white teachers tend to end up in largely black and brown schools.

The plan — referred to as the Singleton ratio after U.S. District Judge John V. Singleton — originally established district-wide racial ratios for teachers that would be the same for all schools. The initial ratio was 70 percent white teachers and 30 percent black teachers. It has subsequently been altered to 60 and 40 percent with a 15 percent variance allowed.

Minority community groups have complained their children are being taught by inexperienced staff. HISD says the situation leads to very high rates of teacher turnover.

Ehrlichman goes unnoticed on first day out of prison

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The taxi driver was puzzled. "Who's the celebrity?" he asked, as photographers and reporters surrounded his cab. His passenger, John Ehrlichman, smiled and said nothing.

"What's going on?" asked the young cabbie as he pulled away from San Francisco International Airport Thursday with four passengers.

"You've got John Ehrlichman in here," someone said.

The name did not register and the driver did not ask again. That seemed to suit Ehrlichman just fine. It was his first day out of prison in 18 months and he was exercising the right of a free man not to answer questions.

It was stonewalling of the gentlest sort, the refusal to say anything more substantial than "good morning" and "goodbye" with patience and a smile. Reporters waiting outside the Swift Trail Federal Prison Camp at Safford, Ariz., got the treatment. So did those at the airports in Phoenix and San Francisco.

Ehrlichman was tanned, slimmer than when he began his prison sentence on Oct. 28, 1976. He walked out of Swift Trail gripping a tennis racket — as he did so often at the White House.

He did not say why he came to San Francisco or how long he would stay.

And with a modesty uncharacteristic of a successful novelist, Ehrlichman would not even give the title of the his second effort, due by the end of the year and about a young lawyer who goes to work in the White House and is corrupted.

In all, Ehrlichman hinted strongly he would like to be left alone.

What the cabbie did not seem to know is that he was transporting one of the Big Three of the Watergate cover-up, all of them convicted New Year's Day 1975 of conspiracy to obstruct justice, obstruction of justice and multiple counts of lying under oath. All three got 2½- to 8-year sentences, later reduced to one-to-four.

With Ehrlichman's release, only H.R. Haldeman — the former Nixon chief of staff — remains in prison, and he has a parole hearing scheduled Monday or Tuesday.

By PAUL DOMOWITCH
R-T Sports Writer

AMARILLO—Pitching hasn't exactly been a great source of pride for the Midland Cubs so far this season. In fact, at times, it has been down right embarrasing.

It has been the crazy daughter you lock up in the attic so the neighbors won't see. Only for the Cubs, there was no attic to hide their pitching in. It was out there on that small rise of dirt for all the world to snicker at, and for all the Texas League batsmen to feast on.

BUT THE Cubs had the last laugh Thursday as Randy Martz pitched his first complete game of the young season and Midland rallied behind the 22-year-old righthander for an 8-4 win over the Amarillo Gold Sox. The victory was the first in four days for the Tall City team here. Midland opened up the six-game series with a win last Sunday, but the Sox had taken the next three, battering Midland pitching for 31 runs in the process.

Martz, the Cubs' top draft pick last June, picked up his second victory in three decisions, scattering 11 hits in going the distance for the first time this season.

"He did a heck of a job," Midland manager Jim Saul said of his ace. "Randy kept it down and away against them, and had a real good change of pace pitch going for him.

"HE IS the best we've got, and he has a tremendous future ahead of him, so I didn't want to take any chances with him. Seven innings is all I wanted out of him. But he said he wanted to stay in there, so I let him. And he sure did the job."

Ironically, it was in the seventh that the former South Carolina All-American ran into the biggest trouble of the night, when Amarillo scored a pair of runs to make it 7-4. But Martz told Saul that he wanted to get out of the jam himself and he did. He retired the Sox in order in the eighth and after giving up a leadoff walk in the ninth, he got the next three men out with little difficulty.

"I REALLY was pleased with the way I threw tonight," the personable Martz said after the game. "Especially considering the fact that my shoulder was hurting me real bad. I started to feel it (the pain) in the fifth and sixth. I guess I was throwing too many sliders."

Martz got plenty of assistance from the Midland bats, which came up with only nine hits; but made the most of every one. Kevin Drury, the Cubs designated hitter who's hitting near the .400 mark, had three of those nine

Trevino glances back at Player

"He's gonna be a tough man to beat," Trevino said. "He is the perfect example of determination. He never gives up.

"A lot of us out here, we start playing bad and we're Hollywooding it, back-handing putts and just trying to finish and get off the golf course and go home. And there's little Gary out there grinding away, trying to hole it from the fairway for a 12.

"He never quits on you, no matter what.

"HIS MOTTO is, 'It's never over until the last ball is in the hole.' He just keeps trying, just keeps coming at you. He's tough. And he's tough to beat."

Trevino took advantage of ideal playing conditions and a manicured 7,080-yard Lakewood Country Club course to fire a spectacular, 7-under-par 65 that put him a single shot in front of the field and four ahead of Player.

The little South American didn't make a bogey on his way to a 69. "I'm quite satisfied, " he said. "I didn't hole as many putts as I have been lately, but I'm not complaining. It was a nice round of volf. "

Player came into this event with three consecutive comebacks under his belt and seeking to become only the third man in PGA Tour history to win four consecutive tournaments.

"He's got it going and he's got all the confidence in the world," Trevino said. "They talk about pressure. He doesn't have any pressure, because nobody expects him to win four in a row. He can free-wheel it. He's gonna be a tough man to beat."

TREVINO'S 35-FOOT birdie putt on the final hole lifted him a single stroke ahead of soft-spoken Mark Hayes, who would have had a share of the top spot but for a three-putt bogey on the 18th that left him with a 66.

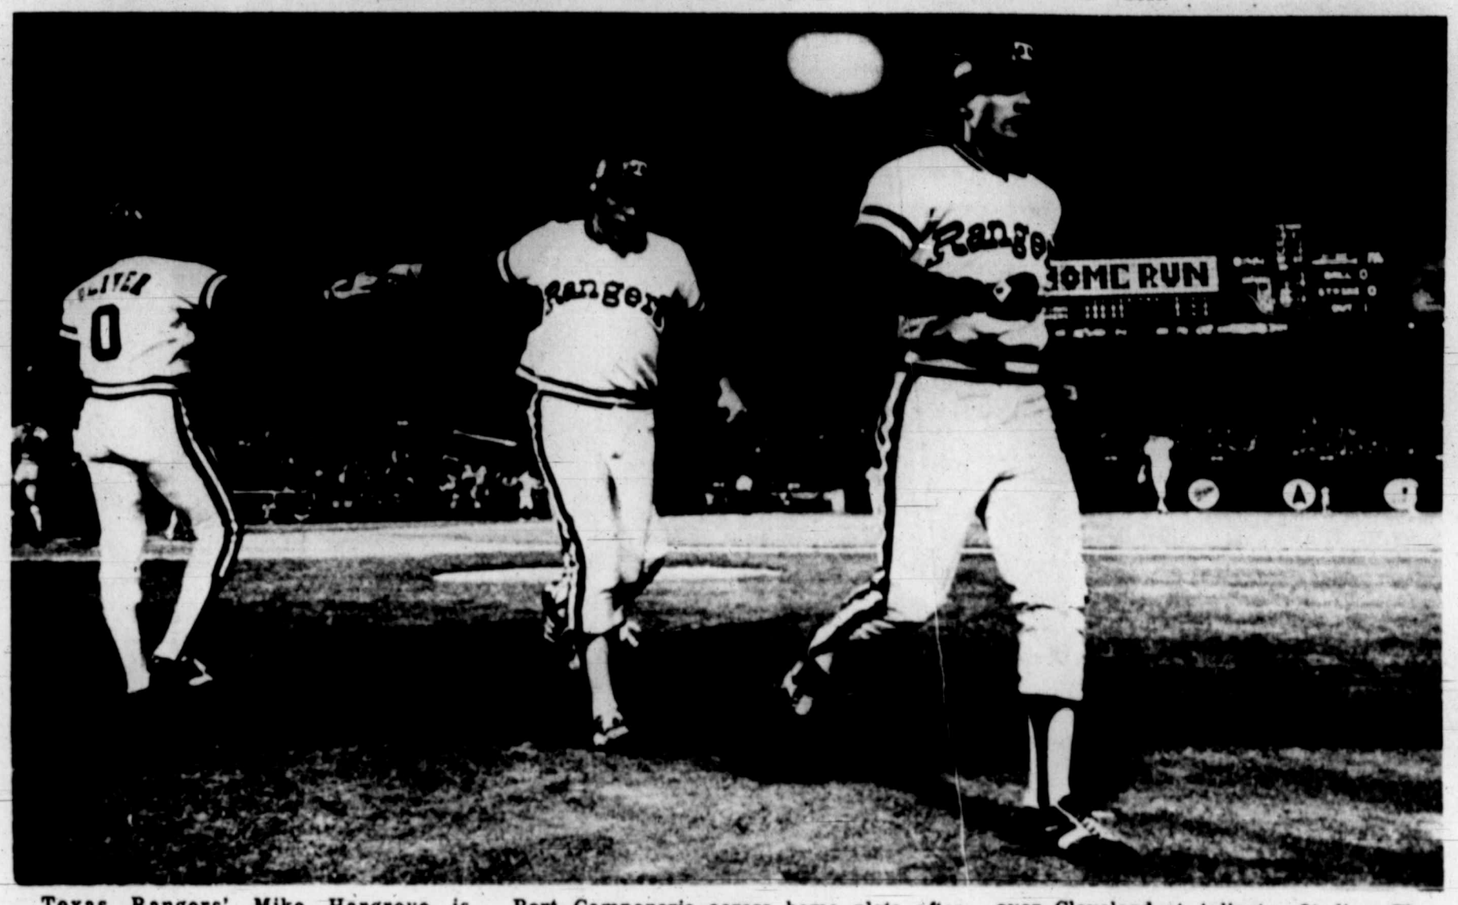

Tied at 67 were Ray Floyd, Bob E. Smith and Homero Blancas, who one-putted 11 times. In the big group at 68 were former New Orleans Open winner Miller Barber and Andy Bean, a runner-up to Player last week in Houston.

Tom Watson took a triple bogey-7 on the first hole and finished with a 73. The two-time winner this season was tied at that figure with defending titlist Jim Simons.

TREVINO MISSED only one green and made his only bogey there. He birdied three of the par 5 holes, all with short putts, hit a sand wedge some 8 feet from the cup and claimed his other birdies on putts of 15, 25, 35 and 45 feet.

"I've never won three in a row, " Trevino noted, "but I won three in four weeks back in '71 and I know what Gary's feeling. It gives you a tremendous amount of confidence.

"He's gonna be tough," Trevino repeated for the third time. "We're good friends, have been for a long time."

Texas Rangers' Mike Hargrove is congratulated by Al Oliver (0) as he chases Bert Campaneris across home plate after hitting his third homer of the season in 3-1 win over Cleveland at Arlington Stadium Thursday night. (AP Laserphoto)

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Hank Pfister experienced what he called "the thrill of my life" at Caesars Palace Thursday.

The 25-year-old Pfister, facing Jimmy Connors for the first time ever, upset the top seed of the $250,000 Alan King Tennis Classic 7-6, 3-6, 6-4 in a second-round match.

I'VE ALWAYS wanted to play him," said Pfister, of Bakersfield, Calif. "I was completely exhausted when the match ended."

The unseeded Pfister won the first set tie-breaker 7-5 after each player broke the other's service once.

Connors broke Pfister's service three times in the second set to offset his losing service twice.

Pfister broke service three times in the final set, including the last game, to win the match.

Pfister was scheduled to face fifth-seeded Roscoe Tanner in a quarter-final match today. Tanner advanced Thursday by eliminating unseeded Wojtek Fibak of Poland 6-1, 4-6, 6-4.

IN OTHER second-round singles matches, fourth-seeded Corrado Barazzutti of Italy defeated unseeded Bob Lutz 6-2, 4-6, 7-6; sixth-seeded Harold Solomon downed Phil Dent of Australia 6-7, 6-1, 6-2; and unseeded John Newcombe of Australia upset eighth-seeded John McEnroe 6-1, 2-6, 6-3.

In other quarter-final matches today, Barazzutti was to face Newcombe, second-seeded Brian Gottfried was to play Solomon and third-seeded Raul Ramirez of Mexico was to meet unseeded Kim Warwick of Australia.

Gottfried, Ramirez and Warwick won second-round matches Wednesday.

Boston clamps down on jammed Fenway

BOSTON (AP) — The city of Boston has clamped down on overcrowding at Fenway Park, where the Boston Red Sox have been packing in customers.

The city's building commissioner, Francis Gens, declared that total capacity will be 36,005, which permits sale of standing room tickets to 2,500 persons.

During Boston's recent homestand, the Red Sox sold 36,388 tickets for a Sunday doubleheader with the Cleveland Indians. It was the second biggest crowd in the team's history.

Gens made his decision after a formal review of the Fenway Park seating plan, provided by the Red Sox. It turned out that the team had 37 fewer seats than the city originally believed —33,505, not 33,542.

Frogs, Arlington play 2-2 deadlock

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — Texas Christian and Texas-Arlington battled to a 2-2 tie Thursday in a curtailed, nine-inning contest staged as a preliminary to a Texas Rangers-Cleveland Indians major league contest.

Danny Rosellini's two-run double in the fifth pulled TCU even with UTA.

The Horned Frogs moved their season record to 17-26-1 while UTA went on the books at 33-24-1.

Brummer's first hit is timely

By The Associated Press

Glenn Brummer waited until just the right moment to get his first base hit of the season. It was a single to center field in the bottom of the 11th inning to boost Arkansas to a 10-9 Texas League baseball victory over Jackson Thursday night.

In other Texas League action, Midland defeated Amarillo, 8-4, Shreveport upended Tulsa, 4-1, and San Antonio edged El Paso 4-2.

BRUMMER'S HIT, his first of the year, came with two outs in the bottom of the 11th. The blow offset two earlier homers by Jackson's Paco Perez. Relief pitcher Ryan Kurosaki got the victory in his first appearance of the season. Dan Smith, now 0-1, took the loss.

John Dean had a single and double to pace Shreveport to a 4-1 victory over Tulsa

It was Shreveport's first victory in four games against Tulsa in the current series. Dennis Davis, now 1-1, picked up the victory and Kevin Meistickle had a save for Shreveport. Tulsa pitcher Kerry Keenan's record dropped to 1-2 with the loss.

Bobby Mitchell had a two-run double in the fourth inning to give San Antonio a 3-2 lead and helped boost them to the eventual 4-2 victory over El Paso.

Bullets enjoy home court edge

BY ASSOCIATED PRESS

The Washington Bullets and Denver Nuggets will both have the home-court advantage tonight as they seek to wrap up their National Basketball Association quarter-final playoff series.

Washington, leading 3-2, plays host to the San Antonio Spurs at the Capital Centre in Landover, Md., where the Bullets have won all three of their games against the Spurs. But that does not prevent Washington Coach Dick Motta from approaching tonight's game warily.

"WE SHOULD be afraid of them," he said. "By now we should know how good they are. One letup and they can beat us."

San Antonio posted its first victory ever over the Bullets Tuesday night by a 116-105 margin to stay alive in this best-of-seven series. Tonight is the Bullets' last chance to end the series at home, because the seventh game, if necessary, would be played in San Antonio on Sunday.

"That puts a great deal of pressure on us," says Motta.

The Nuggets, meanwhile, lead the Milwaukee Bucks 3-1 and will have two chances to end their series at home. The clubs meet at Denver tonight, play a sixth game if necessary in Milwaukee Sunday, then return to Denver for the seventh game, if necessary, next Wednesday.

THE BUCKS know that winning three in a row is not going to be easy.

"We're down 3-1 and we're in trouble," said Milwaukee Coach Don Nelson. "We're not out of it, but it's going to be very difficult."

"We're backed into the wall — or smashed into it," said Marques Johnson, the Bucks' fine rookie forward. "We're just going to have to go out there, play hard and hope for the best."

Milwaukee best came last Sunday, when the club scored 87 points in the second half and shot 66 percent from the field in clobbering the Nuggets 143-112. Denver bounced right back, however, to win easily on Tuesday, building a 90-61 lead in the first three periods before coasting to a 118-104 final.

"We've had four routs in this series," observed Denver

Ernie said 'Let's play two,' Billy always did

TED BATTLES
BATTLE SCENE

Ernie Banks was the sunshine boy who came out to the ball park, scanned the skies and declared, even if it was raining, "It's a beautiful day. Let's play two."

Billy Williams, Ernie's longtime teammate, didn't talk about the weather, he just played in it every day, day after day, whether you could fry an egg on the sidewalk, fish through the ice on Lake Michigan or Wrigley Field was swept by the icey blasts off the tundra. He ignored physical aches and pains and biorythm cycles that might have indicated he shoulda stood in bed.

In fact, Billy showed up ready to play so often that his managers just penciled in his name in a season's worth of lineup cards and then fretted daily over the other eight guys who would start with him.

WILLIAMS DISPLAYED the kind of durability that gave him the National League record for consecutive games played, 1,117. The streak began Sept. 22, 1963 and ended Sept. 2, 1970.

However, don't get the idea that Banks was a shirker. When he said, "let'a play two", he meant it, which is why he holds the National League record for most-year-leading-the-league-in-most-games, a trick he turned six times.

The only guy who played in more consecutive games than Williams was Hall of Famer Lou Gehrig, who snuck into the New York Yankees lineup June 1, 1925, a day when Wally Pipp was feeling poorly, and it took a fatal illness to get him out April 30, 1939, 2130 games later.

STEADY DUTY, certainly didn't effect Williams' performance. He compiled a lifetime batting average of .297 and led the NL in 1972 with a .333 mark and his home run totals ranged from 20 to 42 during his career with the Chicago Cubs.

Williams' long career took him through the era of the experimental College Board of Coaches, something the Cubs employed instead of a manager for a couple of years back in the 1960s.

Although the idea led to the roving coaches that Virtually every major league organization uses nowadays to speed up the developmenty of young talent.

Billy didn't feel the idea at the major league level was too successful. "There were 13 or 14 coaches with one serving as head coach. His tenure lasted only three weeks and when the new man took over he usually had his favorites and they played."

However, it is one reason Williams is back with the Cubs as a batting instructor after being traded to Oakland at the tagend of an illustrious playing career with the Cubs.

"Bob Kennedy was one of the coaches in those days, so when he became general manager of Chicago last year, he invited me to return to the organization as batting coach."

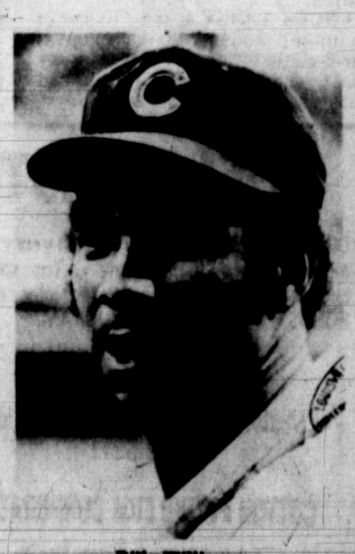

'LEO DUROCHER? I liked him. He pulled a few stunts that got him trouble, like leaving the team for the Boy Scout camp in Wisconsin one summer, but he knew more baseball than most of your managers today. If he had one shortcoming, it was his impatience with young players. When he brought 'em up, he wanted them to do it now. He couldn't wait."

Williams confirms, "Yes, playing with Oakland was every bit the circus you've heard. Everything happened in the clubhouse that was claimed, the bickering, back-biting, fights...they were all true. But in a way, it was good. Players would get on each other over their play on the field and there'd be a fight.

"But they got it out of their systems in the clubhouse. In the dugout, they all pulled together. We didn't score many runs, but we always seemed to get the base hit when we needed it."

Naber savored fleeting glory

TERRY WILLIAMSON

The fleeting sand particles of time seem to always cover the history pages of sports. One's memory has only a limited scope. We are often touched by the competitors' courage and accomplishment for brief periods only to lose the moment forever when another arrives.

This is no more true than in amatuer athletics where the Olympics every four years stuffs our minds with glory and sacrifice of those winners in Greek fashion. The trouble is that in another four years another Greek challenger will find his place in the sun, and probably lose it again in four years. Such is the goal and such is the price. Seek and you might find; win and obtain forgotten glory.

JOHN NABER is one of those winners. He is in his four years of glory, and he knows he is going to be replaced. Naber, for those who have already forgotten, won four gold and one silver medal in 1976 at the Montreal Olympics. He touched us briefly, and that was important. Time may kill the moment, but he touched us, and few others did.

Currently, Naber is trying to give something back to swimming because swimming gave so much to him. He was in Midland Thursday to speak to the kids of the City of Midland Swim Team. This is something he wants to do before another John Naber comes along.

"I KNOW I have until 1980 to give back to swimming what it gave to me," Naber said. "I will be replaced by someone else I'm sure, but that's fine because I have other goals now."

Naber has retired from competitive swimming, but he is in touch with the sport through speaking engagements and commentary work for NBC. He will be one of the expert analyists for NBC during the 1980 Olympics in Moscow.

His full time job, however, is promotion work for Walt Disney Productions, and there his future lies. He knows he could have made more money along the way after his 1976 performance.

AFTER THE Olympics, John returned to the University of Southern California to finish his degree and lead his swimming team to their fourth straight national title. It probably cost him a bundle in advertising contracts and other promotions.

"Bruce Jenner is making a fortune," Naber said. "And I could have made more if I had given up my amatuer status like he did, but going back to USC was important to me. In my freshman year, we (USC) upset Indiana by one point for the national title, and we went on to win three more titles. We never lost a regional or dual meet while I was there. USC meant a lot to me, and I think I owed them that last year. I didn't want to lose my amatuer standing. Jenner lost his, and made a lot of money."

NABER, UNLIKE many of his peers, got a late start in swimming competition, and had very little to do with age group swimming. For him, at least, it proved to be a benefit.

"I lived in Europe from age four to age 11, so when we returned to the States, I was already behind some of the kids. I didn't become interested in competitive swimming until I was a freshman in high school. I'll never forget that first workout. I had to swim a 1,500 yard program, and it took me 2½ hours. I can do that now in 14 minutes. I wasn't that good when I started'" Naber remembered.

His climb to fame had its ups and downs too. Injuries filled his high school days.

"YOU MIGHT say I was an undedicated athlete in high school. My sophomore year I injured some leg ligaments in a skiing accident and in my junior year, I broke a collarbone while diving.

"The summer before I was a senior, I failed to qualify for the 1972 Olympics, but it was at that point that I saw what the national competition was all about, and I wanted to be a part of it. When I was a senior, I broke an American record and won three national titles. That set me on the road to the 1976 Olympics, and at USC I had the opportunity to gain my goal."

After the Olympics, Naber suffered through a depression period like so many that are big winners.

"FOR THREE weeks after the Montreal Olympics, there was no major letdown because of the whirlwind of activity that followed. It was a time to enjoy the fruits of your work.

"The next three weeks, however, proved to be a real letdown. My goal had been obtained, and I found myself aimless with no goals.

"I'm now deeply involved in religion and when I asked, 'God, what do you want me to do now,' I was able to obtain new motivation. God is my motivation now. I just leave everything to Him."

Naber is excited about television commentary, but doesn't expect to do much of it after the 1980 Olympics.

"TV IS a real ego boost when you get to see yourself on that screen while knowing that millions of people are watching. But the important thing to me is presenting swimming to the American public. I hope I can do that well because that is what is important to me right now."

Naber understands the sands of time better than most. If he is lost in the shuffle after 1980, Naber will survive. He's still swimming in the right direction.

Hargrove home run, trickery ruin Waits

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — If a two-run home run wasn't enough Thursday night, Mike Hargrove ruined Rick Wait's whole day with a devious hidden ball maneuver to pick off a napping Paul Dade and help blunt a sixth-inning Cleveland uprising.

Hargrove clubbed a Waits fastball in the fifth inning for his third home run in as many games and Jon Matlack turned in a strong pitching performance as the rejuvenated Texas Rangers edged the Indians 3-1.

A TIRING Matlack had walked Dade to lead off the sixth inning. On a pickoff attempt, Hargrove simply kept the ball in his glove instead of throwing it back to Matlack.

Meanwhile, Texas reserve Claudell Washington distracted Dade by yelling at him as Dade strolled off the bag. Hargrove simply applied the tag as the embarassed Dade stood speechless.

The Indians went on to get three consecutive singles in that inning and scored their only run. Dade would have meant at least one additional run.

"Claudell gets an assist," said Texas Manager Bill Hunter with a smile. "It happened at the most opportune time."

"I just noticed that the time before, when I went to throw the ball back to the pitcher, he (Dade) walked off the bag. I just thought I'd try it the next time," said Hargrove.

"YOU KIND of hate doing it because you hold him up to ridicule," he added. "But you've got to do it if you want to win."

"I was just teasing him. He was grinning, turned around and stepped off the bag," said Washington.

Waits, 1-1, had sailed through the first four innings, surrendering only a single and retiring 12 of 15 Texas batters. He gave up a leadoff triple to Jim Sundberg in the fifth and was nicked for an RBI single by Bert Campaneris, mired in an .073 slump.

"It was just that one pitch," Waits said of Hargrove's homer. "You shouldn't lose a game on one pitch, but that's what happened. I thought I pitched pretty good tonight."

Waits, a former Ranger who had shut out Texas on two hits last week, gave up only five hits and struck out seven in his eight innings.

Two LSU gridders released

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) — Two Louisiana State University football players and one former member of the team are free on bond after being arrested on marijuana charges.

Four persons were arrested in the raid Wednesday of an off-campus apartment shared by Phil J. Triche, 24, and Donald Yesso, 23.

Triche, who played his final season for LSU last year, and Yesso were charged with possession of marijuana with intent to distribute and released on $1,000 bond each.

James Craig Hensley and Gary R. Radecker, both 21 and both members on this year's team, were charged with simple possession and released on $250 bond. Both were found with small amounts of marijuana in their possession, police said.

The stiffer charges against Triche and Yesso resulted from finding four pounds of Columbian marijuana in their apartment, police said. The grass was confiscated.

LSU Coach Charles McClendon said he is not going to take any action or make any comments yet.

Duran decisions tough Viruet

NEW YORK (AP) — Lightweight champion Roberto Duran of Panama made successful his return to Madison Square Garden after an absence of nearly six years, scoring a 10-round unanimous decision over stubborn Adolfo Viruet.

Duran conceded the first two rounds to the left-hander but then controled most of the rest of the non-title fight. He mixed body punches with punches to the head to thoroughly defeat Viruet, whose nose began to bleed profusely in the ninth round.

But Viruet, a New York-born Puerto Rican, refused to go down under the onslaught of a puncher whose fists have created 49 knockdowns in 62 victories against only one loss.

CONTROVERSY surrounded the fight, which matched the unassuming, usually subdued Viruet and a man who admitted that he hated the entire Viruet family. Duran has fought Adolfo's brother Edwin twice and beaten him twice.

After the fight was over and the decision announced, Edwin came into the ring and tried to start a fight with Duran. Duran's trainer, Ray Arcel, was knocked down in the frav.

Referee Arthur Mercante scored the non-title bout seven rounds for Duran, two for Viruet and one even. Judge Tony Castellano scored it 7-3 Duran and Artie Aidella 6-4 Duran.

In his last appearance at the Garden, in November 1972, Duran sustained his only loss, a 10-round decision to Esteben De Jesus. Duran, who weighed 142 pounds, had said before the fight he wanted to once again show New York fight fans the punching power that has made him one of the most feared fighters in boxing.

IT TOOK a $100,000 guarantee, tax-clear, to get Duran back into the Garden. Viruet, 26, the same age as Duran, earned $15,000.

Lady Tara demands stamina and artistry

"It's a stamina course," says Amy Alcott, who entered the opening round of the $75,000 Lady Tara Golf Tournament today seeking her second straight tour victory after disposing of defending Tara champion Hollis Stacy in a playoff at Raleigh, N.C., last week.

THE TOURNAMENT has lured 22 of the top 27 money winners on this year's Ladies Professional Golf Association tour, making it one of the toughest fields so far this season. But leading money winner Nancy Lopez, withdrew from the tournament.

Hill poor Mets own top ERA

With two members of their Big Three, Tom Seaver and Jon Matlack, dealt away, the Mets headed into the 1978 season with a questionable pitching staff and what was supposed to be a better hitting club.

So after 19 games Mets hurlers boast a nifty 2.30 ERA, but the team is batting an anemic .195. Last weekend they were in first place in the National League East, but have since lost four in a row and are in fifth place with a 9-10 record. However, they trail division leader Montreal by only 1½ games.

CHUCK TANNER, the Pittsburgh manager whose Pirates swept a three-game series ending Wednesday night, while getting just five earned runs and 16 hits off the Mets, says: "The Mets have five of the best starters in the league. And just think — we didn't have to face two of their best, Jerry Koosman and Nino Espinosa."

"The Mets' pitching has opened up my eyes. Our division is really going to be something this year."

CRAIG SWAN, a right hander who has failed to live up to his potential in the past, has a 1.24 ERA, best in the league. The ERAs of the other starters are 1.59 for rookie right-hander Mike Bruhert, 1.61 for rightie Pat Zachry, 2.00 for Koosman, a left-hander and lone holdover from the Big Three, and 3.12 for Espinosa.

Espinosa, a 24-year-old right hander, is regarded by many as having the best chance to be the ace of the staff. Pittsburgh's Dave Parker, the National League's defending batting champion, said he was glad he didn't have to face Espinosa in the recent series.

"He's the toughest right handed pitcher in the league for me," said the left-handed slugger. "He keeps the ball low and moves it aorund with good location. He's got a great future ahead of him."

MARDIE CORNEJO, the rookie right-hander, has been a welcome addition to the bullpen, which also includes Skip Lockwood, Butch Metzger, Bob Myrick and Paul Siebert.

"It's a shame to get such excellent pitching and lose," says Mets Manager Joe Torre. "Our hitting has got to bust out one of these days."

"It's amazing that everyone is in a slump at the same time," said Mets batting coach Phil Cavaretta. "Usually it's just a few guys and there's somebody to pick up the slack. But so far nobody has."

Ironically, Flynn, a lifetime .239 hitter who often bails out on curve balls, is the leading regular with a .281 batting mark. No other regular is hitting above .250.

Torre expects some production eventually from his so-called big bats of Willie Montanez, Steve Henderson, Lenny Randle and John Stearns. Heading into tonight's game here with Cincinnati, Montanez was batting .193, Stearns .175, Henderson .167 and Randle .156.

About the only hitter Torre can count on is reserve Ed Kranepool, who batted .448 as a pinch-hitter last year. In three pinch roles this year, Kranepool has three hits and three RBI.

Zachry leads in RBI

By BOR DILLON

With the regular baseball season winding down, Tall City athletes own some impressive credentials.

Midland High's Jimmy Zachry and James Allen have knocked in 47 runs between them in 24 games. Zachry' a junior infielder and pitcher, has 24 RBIs on the year while Allen, a senior catcher and infielder, owns 23.

Lee has more balance than the Purple Pack with no less than eight players batting over .300 while Midland has only two hitting above that average.

Allen not only has knocked in 23 runs, but also leads the city in home runs with six. Teammate Steve Cole, a senior shortstop, has three round-trippers.

Terry Willis has smacked two homers for the Rebs who stand 18-8 on the year compared to the Pack's 11-13 reading.

Lee has pounded out 48 doubles, 18 triples and seven homers in combining for a team batting mark of .331 while MHS has 28 doubles, two triples and 13 homers.

Clements, Calhoun and White, all have three triples for the Rebels.

Midland is hitting .271 as a team on the season.

While Lee only has one player with 20 or more RBIS, the Rebs have six other players that have knocked in 10 or more runs.

Lee entertains Odessa Permian at 2 p.m. Saturday at the Lee diamond while Midland squares off with Odessa High at Fly Field at the same time.

Midland Lee, Big Spring, Cooper and Abilene, all have 3-1 District 5-4A records while just one step bheind behind are the Midland Bulldogs with a 2-2 reading.

Lee and Abilene shared the first half title with 5-2 records and it appears tht that the second half will wind up just as garbled or maybe even more.

consecutive games after a 2-1 Opening Day verdict over the New York Yankees, scattered eight singles in the eight and one-third innings he pitched. Len Barker finished the game in relief.

Shell-shocked Texas pitchers had been pounded for 25 runs in 31 innings before Ferguson Jenkins gunned down Kansas City 4-1 on four hits Tuesday night. Doyle Alexander then followed Wednesday night with a six-hit, 3-0 shutout of the slugging Indians, who have been hitting near .300 lately.

It was the fourth victory in five games for the Rangers, who got off to a miserable 2-9 start.

The Texas pitchers, however, will be tested again this weekend when the potent Boston Red Sox, who swept a three-game series from Texas last week in Boston, arrive.

Future Duran foe practices getting off floor

The Los Angeles Times Syndicate

It's been my experience most guys practice the wrong things in sport. Guys who have trouble making contact spend batting practice trying to hit home runs. Pitchers who have trouble with their control practice big curveballs. Banjo hitters try for the fence instead of the bunt. Basketballers never practice the outlet pass but always jumpers. Linebackers never practice falling on fumbles, they want to throw passes.

So, I was agreeably surprised at the Main St. Gym the other day when I saw a prizefighter stretched out on the rubbing table, prone, with a belt across his legs, practicing sit-ups. My pleased reaction was, "He's practicing getting up!" I had never seen a fighter do this before, although I always felt Floyd Patterson should have put most of his time in on this art. I've known some fighters who should have practiced spitting blood and others who should have practiced breathing through their ears.

BUT THE guy on the rubbing table was not some Palooka from Petaluma. Alexis Arguello does not have a canvas mark on him. He's never had a loose tooth or a nosebleed in his life. He can hear perfectly out of both ears. Pound for pound, Arguello might just be the best fighter in the ring today. Put it this way, it's either Alexis or Roberto Duran. When the two fight, it's going to make Zale-Graziano look like the Sweetheart Waltz.

If Alexis Arguello has to practice sit-ups, his opponents should practice resurrections. Or, at least, wake-ups. They should practice fighting with one eye closed. By the third round, that's going to be useful.

The only trouble with Arguello is, he's something called the super-featherweight champion of the world. This is an unworthy, largely nonexistent, distinction, a division the Marquess of Queenssbury never intended. It used to be called the junior-lightweight championship and anyone who could name any champions of that division over the past 50 years gets the Ring magazine award as the super trivia heavyweight champion of all time.

BOXING IS that way. When it doesn't have enough fighters to go around, it creates new divisons. To compensate for this lack of activity, it creates two jurisdictions. It's the old ploy: When business is bad, double the vice presidents. Alexis Arguello was once the bona fide featherweight champion of the world, a legitimate title in a legitimate divison. He hopes to pass the super-featherweight division sometime this summer and take dead aim on the lighteight title, a venerable and superlegitimate championship, the title of the likes of Joe Gans, Benny Leonard, Ad Wolgast, Tony Canzoneri and Henry Armstrong. There's no asterisk after this title.

Arguello fights the Philippines' Rey Tam, champion of the Orient, this Saturday in a nationally televised fight from the Forum in Inglewood if Tam gets by customs in time. If he gets by this, Alexis will take dead aim on Panama's flamethrower, Roberto Duran.

If he fights Duran, it may be advisable to double his getting-up exercises. It might also be useful if he practices dodging falling safes, clotted blood, rope burns or throwing up between rounds. Duran, you see, is the toughest thing to come out of the Canal Zone since yellow fever.

The seventh was Martz' only major hurdle. He had held Amarillo to just two runs on seven hits over the first six frames, but in the seventh, the Sox got to him.

AMARILLO SHORTSTOP Barry Evans led off the inning by drilling Martz' first pitch over the left field wall. After Tim Derryberry flied out to deep left, Dan Ilertson, Earl Battey and Jim Beswick followed with consecutive base hits to load the bases. Ilertson scored on a sacrifice fly by Tony Castillo, but Martz got Brian Greer, the San Diego Padres No. 1 pick last year, to fly out, and he was out of the jam with only minor damage.

Midland did the majority of their damage early, scoring four runs in the first two innings off of Sox starter John Pickert (0-3). The first of those runs was spiced with a little controversy that had both managers breathing fire in the faces of umpires Larry Pocino and Tom Blackwell.

IT HAPPENED like this: The Cubs Kurt Seibert was on third and Steve Macko on first when Greg Keatley hit a hard one-hopper back at Pickert. Seibert thought the ball had gotten past Pickert, and broke for the plate, but got caught in a run down.

McCovey closes in on coveted 500th homer

By The Associated Press

The Atlanta Braves got the short end of the stick — from the long end of Willie McCovey's bat.

The truest Giant of the San Francisco Giants, McCovey took some hard swings at the Braves Thursday night and knocked them down with a three-run double and a solo homer.

McCovey's big game added up to a 5-3 victory for San Francisco and another step in the slugger's quest for the prestigious 500-homer plateau.

"Five hundred has been on my mind for a few years," said McCovey, whose home run Thursday was the 496th of his career. "It's a nice, round figure. I'd rather have 500 than say, 498. It just reads better."

MCCOVEY'S bases-loaded double capped a first-inning rally that got the Giants off to a fast 3-0 lead. His homer in the sixth gave the Giants a 4-3 advantage and their winning run after the Braves had come back to tie the game.

"I knew the ball would be out of here," McCovey said of his home run to right field in Atlanta Stadium. "In some other park I may have had some doubts. But the ball carries so well in his park."

The contest was the only other National League game played Thursday night. In the American League, the California Angels whipped the Seattle Mariners 5-1; the Minnesota Twins defeated the Oakland A's 6-1; the Toronto Blue Jays downed the Kansas City Royals 8-7 and the Texas Rangers trimmed the Cleveland Indians 3-1.

While McCovey was doing his thing at the plate, another left-hander of note also provided some solid help to the San Francisco cause. Vida Blue scattered seven hits to win his second game in three decisions since coming to the National League from the Oakland A's shortly before the season started.

Blue gave up a two-run homer to Jeff Burroughs in the first inning but the Giants' starter surrendered just six more hits as San Francisco salvaged the final game of a three-game series.

"I was just trying to challenge him," Blue said of the Burroughs' blast. "I should have known better, for he's been hitting the ball awfully well. I'll know better next time."

Angels 5, Mariners 1

Undefeated Frank Tanana fired a four-hitter for his fifth victory to lead California past Seattle. Tanana walked two batters and struck out three.

California took a 1-0 lead in the first inning when Bobby Grich singled and scored on Lyman Bostock's first triple as an Angel. Carney Lansford led off the Angel second with a double and scored on a single by Rance Mulliniks to make it 2-0.

Seattle ruined Tanana's chance his second shutout of the season when Leon Roberts homered in the fourth inning. It was the outfielder's third homer of the season.

Twins 6, A's 1

Right-hander Gary Serum, making his first major league start, pitched a five-hitter and struck out six as Minnesota beat Oakland and snapped the A's eight-game winning streak. At the same time, the victory ended Minnesota's nine-game losing streak.

The Twins took a 2-0 lead off loser Allan Wirth in the second with Willie Norwood's RBI double capping the rally. The Twins added a run in the third on Mike Cubbage's sacrifice fly, two more runs in the sixth on run-scoring singles by Norwood and Roy Smalley and a final run in the seventh on Glenn Adams' run-scoring single.

Serum gave up a home run to Wayne Gross leading off the third for Oakland's only run while winning his second game of the season against no losses.

Blue Jays 8, Royals 7

Willie Upshaw cracked a two-out, two-run double in the ninth inning as Toronto rallied to beat Kansas City. Rico Carty drove in five runs with a pair of home runs for the Blue Jays, who completed a two-game sweep of the Royals while handing them their third straight loss.

With two out in the ninth, pinch-hitters Tommy Hutton and Sam Ewing each slapped singles off reliever Doug Bird to set up Upshaw's game-winning double.

"This is an excellent birthday present," said Upshaw, who turned 21 Thursday night. "I'd say this was my best birthday. I was nervous until the fourth, when I hit a good line drive. It didn't go anywhere, but I felt I was swinging the bat pretty good."

Koch wins Gathercole trophy

By TERRY WILLIAMSON

Gretchen Koch, who was the nation's top 50-meter freestyle swimmer in the 11-12 age group in 1977, was given the prestigious Terry Gathercole trophy Thursday at the City of Midland Swim Team's annual awards banquet at the Petroleum Club.

Miss Koch earned the trophy with 23 points gathered from top ten rankings in the national rankings. In addition to the 50-meter freestyle, Miss Koch placed second in the nation in the 50-yard freestyle and seventh in the 100-yard freestyle. No other swimmer earned a top ten ranking during 1977. In addition to the trophy, Gretchen received a silver cup engraved with each event and ranking.

BRAD SWENDIG, who was unable to attend the banquet due to his swimming commitments at Auburn University, was recognized as the team's only senior national qualifier. Swendig placed 11th in the senior nationals in the 100 backstroke with a time of 59.62 seconds at Mission Viejo, Calif. He was also a qualifier in the 200 backstroke. Swendig will rejoin the COM team in June.

Six swimmers were given awards for being junior national qualifiers. Wendy Williams, who is now at the Naval Academy, was not at the banquet, but was singled out for recording four junior national times in the 100 and 200 backstroke, 200 freestyle and the 800 free relay.

CURT BUTHMAN was a junior national qualifier in the 100 and 200 backstroke races while Heather Dunbar, Brigitte Coon and Koch earned berths along with Williams in the 800 free relay. Sid Glenn was a junior qualifier in the 400 freestyle in the long course meet at Gainesville, Fla. All the others were short course times in Dallas.

Another 35 swimmers were honored with small trophies for posting qualifying times for the Texas Age Group Swimming Championships (TAGS). TAGS is the Texas championship for the Amatuer Athletic Union in the age group bracket. There is competition in both short and long courses.

SWIMMERS TO earn both short and long course qualification in 1977 TAGS were Beth Murrah, Heather Dunbar, Gretchen Koch, Amy Hull, Carrie Mayes, Andrea Freeman, Mike Seay, Emily Murrah, Lori Snook, Jeff Lambeth, Sid Glenn, Curt Buthman and Robin Franke.

COM coaches Doug Ingram, John Jordan and Bill Smith gave six special awards to team members who work deligently and are dedicated to the sport of swimming.

Robert Cochrane gave the President's Award to parent Dr. Charles Lambeth.

Charles Koch issued a special challenge to swimmers and parents to support a fund drive to build a new 50-meter pool adjacent to COM's existing facility, the Mabee Memorial Swim Center located on North A St.

The proposed 50-meter pool would be an enclosed air support structure with a seating capacity of 1,000. The sturcture would also have a swimming deck large enough to support a national size meet.

GUEST SPEAKER for the banquet was John Naber, winner of four gold medals and a silver medal in the 1976 Olympics. Naber said the existing facility in Midland is better than the one he worked in while attending the University of Southern California. He said the 50-meter pool "makes my mouth water" and with that he donated $20 to Koch to start the ball rolling.

Koch said the new pool would be eight-feet deep at the shallowest point and 14-feet deep at the deepest point. "This will certainly be a fast pool," Koch said. "We hope this new pool will be available to other organizations in the community, and it should help us to have workout times at reasonable times so the kids can participate in other endeavors. Maybe the mothers can schedule a real mealtime when the pool is completed."

Cervantes risks title

But in sparring sessions, Cervantes showed signs of problems with a recently operated right hand. In training, the champion kept his right well in check and outside the ring he constantly wore a heavy glove.

"Cervantes has no problem with his hand. He just knocked out his last opponent," said Manager-Trainer Oswaldo Sanches. But observers said the champion's right hand was swollen and Sanches had purchased patented pain-relievers and anti-inflammation creams.

Cervantes 33, completed his fight preparations Friday morning with a one-hour walk around the town, then checked his weight at 140 1-2 pounds — a half pound over the limit. The official weigh-in is scheduled for Saturday morning.

The challenger meanwhile has to shed three pounds to make the 140-pound limit.

"Tongta goes on a 24-hour fast starting from now," said trainer Sanong Rakvanit Friday morning. "He will make the weight tomorrow morning, we are certain."

A stocky 24-year-old southpaw, Tongta is a comparative newcomer to the international ring though ranked No. 1 contender by the World Boing Association. A former Thai-style kick boxing champion, Tongta moved into the international style pro boxing ring 11 months ago and has a record of 7-1.

Rams won't move to Anaheim

LOS ANGELES (AP) —A spokesman for the Los Angeles Rams denied Thursday night that the National Football League team has agreed to move its franchise to Anaheim, but didn't discount the possibility of that happening in the near future.

"I think it's premature," said Jerry Wilcox, Rams' director of public relations, about a Los Angeles Times story that said the team is definitely moving and will sign a 30-year lease to play at Anaheim Stadium starting with the 1980 season. "We're not going to deny that we're not moving there because it's possible that we might, but there has been no agreement yet."

The Times said in its Friday editions that the Rams' move from the Los Angeles Coliseum would involve an $80 million to $100 million project to expand Anaheim Stadium by 30,000 seats and to construct executive and coaching offices as well as a practice facility, all on the grounds or in a nearby area.

The story said that Rams' President Carroll Rosenbloom wouldn't admit that a move was definite, but quoted him as saying, "We have made a lease proposal to them (Anaheim officials)."

Wilcox said he felt a decision on the status of where the Rams play in the future would probably be made within two months, "but probably no earlier than a month from now.

"It's no foregone conclusion. It's a good possibility, there's been a lot of discussion but such a story is really premature.

Punch 'n' Judy stresses Punch

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Cecil Cooper says he's strictly a "Punch and Judy" hitter this year, but so far the Milwaukee Brewers' first baseman has been emphasizing the punch.

"It was just an accident," Cooper said of his bases-loaded home run in the season opening series with Baltimore, when the Brewers tied a major league record with grand slams in three consecutive games.

"I just hit a mistake," Cooper said. "I'm a 'Punch and Judy' hitter now. I probably will be lucky if I hit 10 dingers the whole season."

BUT WHEN Cooper belted his sixth home run of the season in the Brewers' 6-4 victory over Boston Wednesday night, he climbed into a four-way tie for the American League lead with teammates Larry Hisle and Gorman Thomas and the Red Sox' Butch Hobson. Cooper's three hits in four times at bat raised his average to .323.

"I really can't explain the dingers at all," Cooper said. "I'm not trying to hit home runs. I'm just concentrating on making contact, trying to hit singles and doubles like Rod Carew."

The resemblance is striking. While Cooper had hit an even .300 with a career-high 20 homers last season, his 110 strikeouts in 643 times at bat grated on him. His goal is to hit .325 and he figures he can achieve that if he cuts his strikeouts to 70.

Toward that end, he has adopted the deep-crouch batting stance of his friend Carew, the Minnesota Twins' perennial batting champion.

"I talked to Rodney about it, and he told me the key is to stay down on the ball," Cooper said. "I've always been a sucker for a high fastball. Now, with the crouch, the high fastball isn't in the strike zone."

"IT MAKES me see the ball better," he said. "Without the crouch, I was seeing the ball on two different levels and it would throw me off. The farther down I am, the better I see the ball. I think I can get 200 hits this way."

"Cecil has no limitations," Kuenn said. "If he cuts his strikeouts to 70, that's 40 more times that he makes contact. And with 40 more times making contact, he should get 10 to 20 more base hits."

Cooper, who this week had his contract with the Brewers extended through 1984, didn't hit his sixth home run last year until May 20, his 37th game.

"Last year, I was conscious of trying to hit the ball out of the park," Cooper said. "This year, I'd rather hit .320 or .330, maybe get 15 homers by accident, and score a lot of runs. We have a lot of other guys this year who can hit it out of the park. If I can get on base ahead of them, we're going to win a lot of games."

Battle scene: Williams always came to play

about Bill North and Reggie Jackson, Williams said, "Rollie Fingers was the biggest agitator of them all. He was always baiting someone and cooking something up."

Williams, who arrived at Oakland just before the three-time world champions were dismantled by owner Charles O. Finley as a result of his running feud with baseball commissioner Bowie Kuhn and the world in general, said the turmoil that was part of the daily scene in Oakland was only emphasized by his years with the Cubs.

"Chicago was a low-key conservative organization, always free of controversy, so the Oakland situation was unbelievable."

So now, far from the roar of Wrigley Field and the rowdy antics of the infamous Bleacher Bums of 1969, the year that never was, Williams begins a new career, that of helping young players make it from the anonymity of a Whistler, Ala., to the bigs.

And, it wouldn't be too surprising if a Midland Cubs first baseman named Aaron Randall didn't get a little special attention. After all, the kids from Whistler have got to stick together.

Leafs take aim at Canadiens

TORONTO (AP) — As far as Dave "Tiger" Williams is concerned, the Toronto Maple Leafs are headed for a meeting with the Montreal Canadiens in the National Hockey League playoff semifinals.

"You better get to Montreal ahead of time to get a good seat," the left wing said after the Leafs' 5-2 victory over the New York Islanders Thursday night tied their best-of-seven quarter-final series at 3-3.

The Leafs' semifinal opponent would be Montreal if Toronto beats New York in the deciding game Saturday night at Uniondale, N.Y. An Islanders triumph would send them to Boston for a series opener Tuesday night against the Bruins, while Montreal would host the Philadelphia Flyers.

THE ISLANDERS lost star center Bryan Trottier in the opening minutes after he crashed into teammate Billy Harris. Right wing Mike Bossy, who set an NHL record by scoring 53 goals in his rookie season, was lost in the second period when he was checked head-first into the boards by the Leafs' Jerry Butler.

Bossy was carried from the ice on a stretcher. After X-rays at Wellsley hospital, he was released and was in the Islanders' dressing room after the game.

"If it was the seventh game, I would've been back," Bossy said, adding he would be in the lineup Saturday night.

Toronto scored four goals, two on power plays, by 12:53 of the opening session of a chippy game that took over three hours to play.

REFEREE DAVE Newell handed out 86 minutes in penalties, 46 to New York. Any foray into the corners seemed to result in penalties.

"We won the game on pure skill," Williams joked. "Fisticuffs are always going to happen. We're just 19 guys committed to playing our way."

Toronto took a 1-0 lead on a goal by Sittler at 2:49, then Jack Valiquette, Lanny McDonald and Stan Weir followed for a 4-0 bulge.

At that point, Islanders goaltender Glenn Resch was pulled in favor of Billy Smith. Resch was not at fault on any of the first four goals but was lifted to give Smith — making his first playoff appearance this season — some much-needed ice time.

"WE DID give away a couple of gifts early," admitted Arbour.

Pat Boutette gave the Leafs a 5-0 lead with a second-period breakaway. The Islanders got third-period goals from Clark Gillies and Bob Bourne.

Coach Roger Neilson was as optimistic as Williams about a Toronto victory in Game 7.

"We're due for a win in New York," he said. "We've got to play it tough in the first period — we've got to come out hitting."

Both teams have won only on home ice. Toronto has forced two overtimes in New York but has lost both.

Ken Kuhn questions dismissal

CINCINNATI (AP) — Ken Kuhn is no longer a part of the football crowd which had surrounded him since the sixth grade, but he claims he isn't crying about his fate.

However, the former Ohio State University linebacker is questioning the way he was dismissed in 1977 on waivers from the Cincinnati Bengals of the National Football League.

HE CLAIMS he was injured at the time, and on Thursday he had a five-hour session to tell a federal arbitrator why he feels the Bengals should pay him a full year's salary for 1977.

"What happened to me was probably the best thing that could happen," Kuhn concluded afterwards. "As an athlete, you're forced to live a certain lifestyle. At Ohio State, we were taken care of. Then when I was released, I was suddenly introduced to the real world. I had to scratch and scramble to pay the bills."

FIRST Kuhn was employed as a barroom bouncer, then he pumped gas at an all-night filling station.

"But I'm happy right now," Kuhn said. "I'm a working partner, building homes, dealing with common people, not people who are out to nail you.

"However, the hardest thing for me was telling myself, 'Ken, you're probably never going to play football again.'

"Even if I get operated on and get fixed, I'll undoubtedly be blackballed."

Ken spent the arbitration session listening to Bengals representatives claim he was waived because he was "not good enough" to help the team in 1977.

THE BENGALS are convinced Kuhn was cleared medically before he was waived.

A seventh-round draft choice in 1976, Kuhn never played a regular season game for the Bengals. He missed his entire rookie season because of knee surgery folling a pre-training camp injury, and played only three pre-season games last year before he was waived.

The club had offered him a flat settlement of $500 to avoid the legal confrontation, but Kuhn refused and asked for arbitration.

At stake is the $30,000 value of Kuhn's 1977 contract plus any medical expenses incurred.

Kuhn claims there are six to 10 Bengals players who would testify in his behalf, but cannot.

"HOW can they testify?" he said. "How can they testify against their bread and butter?"

He is optimistic about the decision, which could be several months away.

"Whatever they have done to me, I have no malice toward anyone," Kuhn said. "They did whatever they felt was right and proper with the organization, without any compassion toward Ken Kuhn."

TV blackout fight heading for renewal

MIAMI (AP) — The long battle over television blackouts of National Football League games that are sold out in advance headed for a renewal today, with a committee of Congress doing the officiating.

The House subcommittee on communications scheduled a hearing on bills that would restrict the power of the NFL to prohibit local television broadcast of games sold out ahead of time.

FROM 1973 to 1975, Congress banned blackouts of games sold out 72 hours in advance. Since the law expired, the NFL has voluntarily complied with its provisions — apparently to ward off even more restrictive federal legislation.

The subcommittee plans another hearing later in Washington, but opened its deliberations here because the Miami Dolphins present "a good case study," says one staff member.

DOLPHINS owner Joe Robbie is a vigorous opponent of halting blackouts. Robbie says paid attendance for Dolphins games dropped from an NFL record 551,000 in 1973 to 369,000 last year, and season ticket sales fell from 74,961 to 34,838 over the same period.

But over the same span, the Dolphins also cooled as an attraction, fading from two-time Super Bowl champions to a team that missed the NFL playoffs.

Robbie and Tampa Bay Buccaneers owner Hugh Culverhouse were among the invited witnesses, along with lawyer Ellis Rubin, who has waged an anti-blackout campaign since 1970, filing 11 suits in Miami, Los Angeles, New Orleans and Washington.

OF THREE proposals before Congress, even the mildest would reinstate the original law through 1980. That bill was introduced by Rep. Paul Rogers, D-West Palm Beach.

Sen. Robert P. Griffin, R-Mich., has offered a tougher version that would impose a permanent ban and reduce the sellout deadline to 48 hours. Griffin is ranking Republican member of the communications subcommittee in the Senate.

The most stringent bill has been offered jointly in the House and Senate by Rep. John Florio, D-N.J., and Sen. Don Riegle Jr., D-Mich., with support of the Ralph Nader sports consumer group, "Fight to Advance the Nation's Sports" — FANS. That measure proposes a 48-hour deadline, but requires only a 95 percent sellout. And it would reduce the area blacked out to a 30-mile radius instead of 75.

The NFL says ticket sales have suffered because of the ban. Since 1973, the league says, 26 teams lost 185,000 season ticket sales. The figures do not include expansion teams Tampa and Seattle.

SPORTS WITH A LIVING ROOM VIEW

ABC's got itself another Dandy Don for Monday nights, but this one doesn't plan to be a comedian.

"It's not a comedy out there," says Don Drysdale, newest member of the "Monday Night Baseball" team. "These are people working in a profession. I didn't like to be laughed at when I was playing and I'm certainly not going to laugh at anybody.

"The game dictates what you talk about. If something comes up that's comical, that's fine. You get three people in the booth and somebody's gonna say something. But when you start staging something like that, it just doesn't come off."

LAST SEASON ABC, perhaps trying for the chemistry it discovered by using the humorous Don Meredith on "Monday Night Football", used Bob Uecker along with Howard Cosell and Keith Jackson on its baseball package. But this year Uecker has been demoted to the second team and Drysdale, a star pitcher for years with the Dodgers, has taken his place. Drysdale has called games for the California Angels since 1973 and prior to that broadcast Montreal Expos and Texas Rangers games.

Drysdale says no one at ABC has told him what to say or what not to say. In fact, with three people on hand, it's been easier than doing local games.

"I haven't been given any role, per se," he says. "They mentioned that I would analyze the game and do some play-byplay. The Monday night games have actually been easier. There are always two other people to bounce off of. With the Angels, usually there are two of us but sometimes, for a couple of innings, I'm by myself. That can be difficult at times."

DRYSDALE SAYS the toughest thing he's had to learn since switching from the field to the booth has been the proper way to do interviews. Often when broadcasters, or for that matter writers, ask questions, they already know the answers. That doesn't mean they are dumb questions. It just means they want the player to talk about a particular subject, to get some quotes on the matter.

"I always used to get to the point where I felt a ballplayer was gonna look at me and say, 'Hey, you dummy, you know the answer to that as well as I do,'" says Drysdale. "I guess that came from me being on the other end of the question for so long it was hard for me to do the asking."

Drysdale knows his stuff and he's not afraid of a little disagreement in the booth. Last week he and Cosell took differing views of a ball that Cincinnati's George Foster hit during a game with Los Angeles. Cosell said the ball, which fell at the base of the left field wall, was hit too hard for outfielder Dusty Baker to make a play. Drysdale disagreed.

"Howard thought the ball was hit too hard," Drysdale says. "I thought the ball sunk and Baker was fooled on the play. If I was out there pitching I would have expected the ball to be caught. He just didn't play it that well.

"I'M NOT afraid to disagree. There's no need for me to agree with something I don't think is right."

Drysdale also has strong opinions on a couple of controversial areas of baseball.

One is the new beanball rule which states that the first pitcher to throw at a batter doesn't get punished but if the pitcher on the other team retaliates, both he and his manager get thrown out of the game.

"It's a bad rule," he says. "They're trying to put too many things on paper. It's silly. Let the players take care of that. The umpires know what's going on. They don't need any geniuses trying to figure out how to make this a push-button game."

AND ON the subject of high salaries, Drysdale recalls that he and Sandy Koufax held out together one year for what amounted to about a $20,000 raise each. Koufax was coming off a 26-victory season and Drysdale had won 23.

"The Dodgers had never had a $100,000 player and just wanted to keep that barrier," he says. "It was ridiculous. Now you get guys hitting .192 making as much as we did. But times change. I don't begrudge anyone making money while they can. Playing careers don't last that long.

"But I also think the players should sit down and thank their lucky stars they're playing at a time when they can get those salaries."

Stan recalls Rickey days

LODI, Calif. (AP) — As Stan Wasiak recalls it, Branch Rickey told him one day in 1950, "Son, we'd like you to take over one of our clubs."

Now Wasiak is in his 29th consecutive year, a record, as a minor league baseball manager, and he'll record his 2,000th regular season victory any day now.

Only six major league managers have reached 2,000, the last being the Los Angeles Dodgers' Walter Alston, and according to the best records available, only one minor league manager in history won more than 2,000 games.

"It's a mark that kind of snuck up on me," the manager of the Dodgers' team in the Class A California League said after reaching 1,995 early this week.

"The quicker I get there, the better," added the baseball veteran who then will worry just about this year's standings and his attempt to take the Lodi Dodgers to a second straight pennant.

BOWLING BEAT

Ray Sutton beats steady tattoo with 280 and 299

L Ray's 280 included 10 strikes in a row, but as so often can happen to a bowler that plays the corner shot his 11th try went into the gutter.

Later, Sutton, while bowling in the Wednesday Night Oil Star League, rolled a 299 game, leaving a four-pin on his 12th delivery, thus robbing the hottest bowler in the city of a perfecto.

ELEANOR SHELTON paced the women this week with 213-225-201—839 for three games and an 832 for four.

All bowlers are invited to the Midland Bowling Association's annual spring meeting at 7 p.m. May 12 in the First National Room of the First National Bank.

In the City tournament recently completed, Maralo Inc., became the new men's City champion team with a 3,142 score to capture the $300 first place prize money plus trophies.

Ross Graham and Charles Lacy were the doubles champions with a 1,361 total. Don Hopper won the singles with a 728 handicapped total and Don also finished in first place in the all-events with a 2,116 total.

Win Streak is like standing on a cliff

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — The last man to win four straight tournaments on the PGA golf tour knows how Gary Player feels trying to duplicate that feat this weekend in New Orleans.

"It's like standing on a cliff every week, knowing a lot of people are trying to push you off," said Jack Burke Jr., who fashioned a rare necklace of four consecutive triumphs in 1952.

Burke, 54, son of a famous Texas pro, is one of the old-timers shooting for the $400,000 prize pot in the Legends Tournament at the Onion Creek Club.

"YOU HAVE to be lucky, you have to be hot," Jackie said. "So far, Gary has been both those things — and more."

Player, the 42-year-old golfer from Johannesburg, is currently the hottest commodity in professional golf. After rallying from seven shots back on the final day to win the coveted Masters, the gritty South African duplicated the scenario—almost to the letter—in the Tournament of Champions and then last Sunday made up five strokes on the final 10 holes for a victory in the Houston Open.

The question now is: can he make it four?

"Why not?" said Burke. "He has to be high as a kite, brimming with confidence because he is on a putting streak. At the same time, he is trying to cool himself down, trying to make himself forget the last three weeks.

"He has to be under intense pressure. He realizes how much it means to win four in a row. But confidence has a way of loosening the strings. 'Look, I did it the last three weeks,' he is saying to himself. 'What's to keep me from doing it again?'"

THESE ARE joys and agonies that Burke knows from personal experience.

In 1952, he won the Texas Open at San Antonio, a title his late father took six times. The next week he won again at Houston, then at Baton Rouge, La., a fourth time at St. Petersburg, Fla.

The papers were full of big, black headlines extoling the remarkable string.

"The first two tournaments didn't amount to anything," Burke recalled. "I was lucky to win the third. I won in a playoff with Tommy Bolt and P Nary.

Resigned Justice official charges Bell impeded probe

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Justice Department official who investigated illegal FBI activities said Thursday his task force had recommended the prosecution of eight middle-level FBI officials but that Attorney General Griffin Bell undermined the investigation by refusing to press for the indictments.

William Gardner, who resigned the task force post last December after a dispute with Bell, said his task force had recommended in a 336-page report that four former and four then-present FBI officials be indicted. He said Bell objected to that because of the number of FBI personnel targeted by the report.

"The recommended prosecutions involved charges of wiretapping, mail theft, breakins or black bag jobs, perjury and false statements to a government agency," Gardner told the Senate appropriations subcommittee on the Department of Justice.

"The wiretapping, mail theft and black bag jobs began in 1970 and continued until at least November of 1974," he told the subcommittee.

Gardner said officials recommended for indictment included three squad leaders, four special agents in charge of divisions and one assistant director.

STORM ALARM
FROM WEATHERALERT

In late October, the National Weather Service issued its recommended specifications for alarm-equipped weather receivers. A close look at these specifications indicates that the Storm Alarm is the best such radio available at a popular price.

The Storm Alarm meets 10 of 11 recommendations — more than any competitive unit in our price range.

With the publication of these NWS standards, our belief is reinforced that Weatheralert markets the highest quality alarm-equipped eletronic weather products available at a price within reach of virtually every consumer.

Insect sting may kill some allergic persons

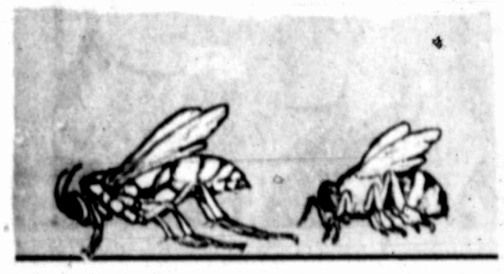

By JOHN BARBOUR
The Associated Press

Chapter Five

Some 50 Americans are killed each year by stings from bees, wasps, yellow jackets, hornets and fire ants, all members of the order Hymenoptera. There may be far more deaths. Some maybe misreported as heart attacks, or convulsions.

In one study of over 200 lethal stings, death followed within the hour in 80 percent of the cases.

Yet so varied is human vulnerability to bee stings that some beekeepers have reported being stung up to 2,000 times a week without unusual discomfort. In one study, beekeepers reported to researchers that they were stung up to an average of 100 times a week, that the stings were worse in the spring when they first encountered the bees after winter's hibernation, that the early stings produced only slight swelling and that after a week they had no reaction at all.

The researchers concluded that the beekeepers had built up an immunity over the years of working with bees, and blood tests proved that, showing that almost all had antibodies against bee venom and extracts of bee bodies.

Only a very small percentage of the population seems to have a high sensitivity to bee venom. But there may be a larger pool in the population with a growing sensitivity. Even a moderate allergy to bee stings can produce hives, diarrhea, stomach cramps, wheezing, difficult breathing, a tightness in the throat, swollen joints, and sometimes faintness.

Another vulnerable group in the population at large is that segment of people with heart conditions. If they are also allergic to bee stings, even mild reactions to the bee venom could trigger a heart attack.

While the allergic person has an especially damaging result from a bee sting, everyone is susceptible to the toxic effects of bee venom, and in large enough concentrations it can kill. Even a normal person will have adverse effects from as many as 30 stings. The venom works against the red blood cells and nerve tissues, and can produce paralysis and bleeding. Massive attacks are highly unusual. Nevertheless, some of the rules a sensitive person must follow to avoid his winged nemesis are useful to the normal person as well.

Bees are drawn to flowers by their bright colors and their sweet smells. So it is unwise to wear bright clothing when working in the garden or mowing the lawn. It is just as unwise to wear sweet smelling colognes or hair dressings or other cosmetics. Light colors are apparently the least attractive, and clothes that are not floppy are the safest.

When stung, remove the stinger as quickly as possible, since it takes about two minutes to get the full dose of venom. Don't garden barefoot, and be cautious when mowing the lawn or trimming hedges lest you uncover a wasp's nest. Garbage cans should be kept covered since food attracts bees. In park areas, stay away from open trash cans, and keep in mind that wasps frequently make their nests in log piles and in fallen trees.

For the allergic person, the only course besides avoidance is skin tests to determine specific allergies, then desensitization shots to produce effective antibodies to the venom.

Usually, the shots continue through the year, since most people lose their protection in less than a year. But some who discontinued the process found they were protected when stung later.

There are also emergency kits available for those who know they are sensitive to bee stings and may not be able to find a doctor soon enough. The kits normally include antihistamine tablets, a tourniquet, an inhaler and a hypodermic syringe with adrenalin. The tourniquet is to stop the spread of the venom when the sting occurs on a limb. Ice can also be applied at the sting site. The antihistamines or cortisone help counter the inflammation. The inhaler reduces spasm in the bronchial tubes. The adrenalin counteracts shocks. But these only buy time. The sting victim should proceed with all haste to the closest doctor.

There are also allergies to other insects. Some people have an exaggerated reaction to mosquito bites, caused by the salivary secretions the insect injects before it draws blood. Some people are allergic to fleas. But by far the most dangerous are the Hymanoptera. In one 10-year study, these creatures killed 229 Americans, against 138 killed in the same 10 years by snakes. The biggest killer was the honey bee — 124, against 69 killed by wasps, 22 by yellow jackets, 10 by hornets, and four by fire ants.

Hobby to visit city

Lt. Gov. William P. Hobby will visit Midland College on Thursday, according to Dr. Al G. Langford, college president.

State Sen. W. E. (Pete) Snelson of Midland will accompany Hobby.

The public is invited to a reception from 2:15 to 3 p.m. in the Student Center, Langford said. "This will be Hobby's first visit to the Midland College campus, although he has been very helpful to Midland College and other Texas community colleges through his office."

Before the reception, Hobby and Snelson will tour the LBJ Educational Forum, the new teaching and research facility located in the Learning Resource Center, and the Fine Arts Building.

'Trotter stabbed

NEW YORK (AP) — Harlem Globetrotters star Meadowlark Lemon has been released from a hospital after being treated for a stab wound allegedly inflicted by his estranged wife.

Lemon, 45, clown prince of the touring basketball team, suffered superficial wounds of the back and was released Wednesday, Bellevue Hospital spokesman James Walsh said.

Willye Lemon, 40, of Fairfield, Conn., pleaded innocent to assault charges at her arraignment in Manhattan's Criminal Court and was released in her own recognizance pending an appearance May 16.

The attack occurred about 5:30 p.m. Tuesday in front of two police officers.

Lemon told police his wife had been driving behind him and ramming her auto into the rear of his car, so he pulled up to a patrol car parked at a corner to ask for help.
